

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, May 7, 1985

The House met at 12 o'clock noon. Mr. Robert F. Wagner, minister, Eastern Hills Church of Christ, Marshall, TX, offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, the Creator and Sustainer of the Universe, we are grateful we live in a free land and to a large extent in a time of peace. We pray this great Nation of ours will always enjoy freedom and practice justice and righteousness. May we each have a sense of the responsibility that is ours, according to the trust placed in our hands and endeavor to act as to be an influence for good that peace may prevail throughout the world enabling men the liberty to pursue happiness. God grant each Member of this Congress wisdom, courage, and fidelity in the performance of their duty and bless their efforts as they formulate legislation affecting the lives of all of us.

In the precious name of Jesus Christ we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. STRANG. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. STRANG. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 241, nays 164, answered "present" 2, not voting 27, as follows:

DISPENSING WITH CALL OF PRIVATE CALENDAR

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the Private Calendar be dispensed with today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

MINISTER ROBERT F. WAGNER

(Mr. SAM B. HALL, JR., asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAM B. HALL, JR. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to commend the minister of my church, the Eastern Hills Church in Marshall, TX, Robert F. Wagner, for his inspirational and timely prayer which opened today's session. In addition, I want to thank Chaplain Ford for his assistance and courtesy in arranging for Robert Wagner to deliver the prayer.

As many of my colleagues know, I will soon be leaving this body to become a Federal district judge for the eastern district of Texas. Having my minister with me at this time is especially rewarding, and we both share in the excitement and honor of his appearance before the House today.

Robert Wagner has served as a minister of the Gospel for some 27 years. He began preaching in Bainbridge, GA, and his ministry brought him to the Eastern Hills Church of Christ in Marshall some 4 years ago.

He is married to the former Cenia Mae Groom, and they have two sons and two grandchildren. In addition to his ministry, Robert Wagner worked for the Department of Commerce for the State of Florida for 25 years. He also served with the U.S. Air Force from 1942 to 1945.

Again, it is a privilege to welcome Robert Wagner to Washington, DC. We are very proud of him.

OFFICIAL OBJECTORS FOR THE PRIVATE CALENDAR ON THE REPUBLICAN SIDE, 99TH CONGRESS

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to announce the official objectors for the Private Calendar on the Republican side for the 99th Congress.

Our official objectors will be the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SEN-SENRENNER], the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BROWN], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DEWINE].

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1157, MARITIME PROGRAMS AUTHORIZATION, FISCAL YEAR 1986

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 99-65) on the resolution (H. Res. 157), providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1157) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1986 for certain maritime programs of the Department of Transportation and the Federal Maritime Commission, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1784, PANAMA CANAL COMMISSION AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEAR 1986

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 99-66) on the resolution (H. Res. 158), providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1784) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1986 for the operation and maintenance of the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE HONORABLE HAROLD C. OSTERTAG

(Mr. HORTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, as the dean of the New York Republican delegation, it is with great regret and a deep sense of loss that I announce the passing on Thursday, May 2, of a close friend and former colleague—Harold C. Ostertag.

Harold represented the people of New York's 39th and 37th Congressional Districts for nearly 15 years. His dedication to his congressional duties and his constituents served to inspire many Members of the New York congressional delegation. He established a tradition of excellence which was ably upheld by his successor, now retired, Barber Conable, and which I am certain will be upheld by newly elected Representative FRED ECKERT.

Harold was born in Attica, NY, on June 22, 1896. He attended Attica High School and later graduated from Chamberlain Military Institute in Perry, NY. In 1915, at the age of 19, he enlisted in the Army and served in France with the 55th Pioneer Infantry in the American Expeditionary Forces in France. His political career began in 1932 when he was elected to the New York State Assembly where he served until 1950.

While in the assembly, he pioneered the effort to improve and strengthen cooperation between local, State, and Federal Government bodies. This effort led him to create the Council of State Governments and to seek the position of chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Interstate Cooperation. These positions further convinced him of the importance of intergovernmental relations.

Harold continued this work when he came to Congress in 1951. He served as a member of the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and played a major role in my early interest in the work of the Commission.

Harold was also widely recognized for his work in the Defense and Independent Offices Appropriations Subcommittees. He worked long and hard to ensure that American tax dollars were spent wisely and effectively.

I had the privilege of serving with Harold Ostertag during the 88th Congress and believe that it is a tribute to his foresight and ability that his influence remains today. He was committed to ensuring a cost-effective Federal Government. An ideal we hear much of today.

Recently, another vision of Harold's was fulfilled—the expansion of military facilities in upstate New York. Harold was a strong advocate of the merits of New York as a site for military installations and he strongly encouraged the New York delegation to aggressively seek military contracts. This year, after nearly 10 years of discussion and negotiation, the Army and the New York congressional delegation, announced that Fort Drum will be the home of the 10th Mountain Division.

In closing, Nancy and I would like to express our sincere condolences to Harold's wife Grace. Harold was an outstanding Congressman and a good friend. He will be sorely missed by all of us who knew him.

Mr. ECKERT of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HORTON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ECKERT of New York. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, Harold C. Ostertag preceded Barber Conable for 14 years as the Representative of the Rochester and western New York State area congressional district. He was an expert on national defense matters in Congress as a member of the Defense Appropriations Committee, and he was an early supporter of our Nation's space program as a member of the Independent Offices Appropriations Subcommittee.

Congressman Ostertag was warmly regarded by his colleagues in Congress and by the people that he represented.

Mr. Ostertag held elective public office for 32 years, first being elected to the New York State Assembly in 1932 and serving there for 18 years before his election to the Congress. It was in the State Assembly that he developed an active interest in intergovernmental relations as chairman of the Joint Committee on Interstate Cooperation and as a member of the Board of Managers of the Council of State Governments. He continued that interest here in the House of Representatives. He was also a delegate to three Republican National Conventions from 1952 through 1960.

Harold Ostertag as born in Attica, NY, in 1896, and lived there most of his life until his retirement from Congress. He served with the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I, took a leading role in veterans' affairs after the war and had a career in railroading with the New York Central Railroad.

I remember, as a youngster, still early in high school, the courtesies that he extended to me, and I feel privileged to follow in his path.

His wife, Grace, survives, and we extend to her our condolences.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the life, character and public service of the late Honorable Harold C. Oster-tag.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Ms. FIEDLER. Mr. Speaker, on April 30, 1985, on rollcall vote No. 84, on House Concurrent Resolution 130, I voted "yea." My vote was not registered by the voting machine.

I ask unanimous consent that these remarks be inserted in the permanent RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN SERVICEMEN ON THE 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF VICTORY IN EUROPE

(Mr. MONTGOMERY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow will mark the 40th anniversary of victory in Europe.

In countries throughout Europe this week, flags are being flown, parades and other ceremonies are being held to celebrate the liberation of Europe from Hitler's oppression.

I think it is only fitting that we in this country also pay tribute to the American servicemen who helped restore freedom to those who suffered under the Nazis.

I have asked Congressman Bob GARCIA to call up a resolution honoring the 4 million American servicemen who marched through Europe with our allies to end this sad chapter in world history.

I think it is important to remember those who died in this effort, as well as those veterans who will be very much a part of ceremonies in Europe and in this country tomorrow.

I hope you will join in support of the resolution.

DANIEL ORTEGA'S LOYALTIES AND INTENTIONS

(Mr. BROOMFIELD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, Daniel Ortega's shopping tour through the Communist capitals of Europe must be a revelation to those who argued a few days ago that his ties to the Soviets were exaggerated.

You can't help but be impressed with the warm reception he received from his Marxist hosts. But knowing how the Soviets operate makes you wonder what elaborate strings were attached to those fancy aid packages.

If history is any guide, we will see the quid pro quo emerge gradually in ways that no patriotic American nor our allies will appreciate.

Will we see the introduction of Soviet missiles just a few hundred miles from our borders as a result of this trip? Or, will it be the long-awaited arrival of Soviet Migs on our doorstep? Or, the accelerated transition of Nicaragua to a full-fledged, Cuban-style, Soviet client state?

It makes you wonder what surprises Ortega and Gorbachev are cooking up for us. But it should, once and for all, remove any doubts about Ortega's real loyalties and intentions.

ASHLEY BORNE: MISSING CHILD

(Mr. TAUZIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, my wife, Gayle, was born and raised in a small corner of America that is probably recognized by very few Americans. It is a small place called Choupic, LA. In Choupic, LA, news of the national tragedy of missing children has become a personal and community tragedy for Choupic and the Lannie Borne family.

Last Tuesday, this girl, Ashley, the 13-year-old daughter of Lannie Borne and his wife Beverly disappeared from home, with no word, no message, no evidence or why or where she has gone, no word at all of what may become of her.

She is 13 years old, and she was last seen in a light green 1982 Delta 88 Oldsmobile, license plates Louisiana 391X920. She is 5 feet 1 inch tall, 115 pounds, blue eyes, with freckles and light brown hair. She was last seen wearing a pink sweater, blue jeans, and Nike tennis shoes.

Her mother and father are frantically seeking help to locate her. So far, no one has provided a single clue as to her whereabouts.

So the national tragedy of missing children has struck close to home in Choupic, LA. We all pray that Ashley is safe and that someone will soon help us find her and report her whereabouts either to my office or to the local authorities in Lafourche Parish in Louisiana.

THE SANDINISTA REGIME IN NICARAGUA

(Mr. LAGOMARSINO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, less than 2 weeks ago, this House voted to reject aid to the Contras, which would have helped to continue pressure on Managua to moderate its behavior in Central America.

We now know that not only is the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua not moderating its behavior, it is also increasing its ties with the Soviet Union in what only can be considered a direct slap in the face of those in the Congress who seemed to be conciliatory toward the Nicaraguan Government.

Furthermore, we have new reports of direct Sandinista involvement in subversive activities in Honduras. Those reports describe the efforts of Sandinista agents to smuggle arms into Honduras and help recruit and train Honduran guerrilla units.

Last week, I reported on the capture of documents in El Salvador which describes the close cooperation between the Salvadoran guerrillas and the regime in Managua, and this week we have a new report of the defection of a top Salvadoran guerrilla leader who acknowledges the direct support of the Cuban and Nicaraguan Governments for the guerrillas in El Salvador.

It is time to recognize that the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua is not going to be a constructive participant in the peace process in Central America. We must expect that the Sandinistas will continue to press their advantage at every opportunity and we must support those who are in a position to frustrate those efforts. It is not too late to salvage support for the Contras, and I urge my colleagues who rejected aid to the Contras to reconsider their position.

AID TO SENIOR CITIZENS

(Mrs. COLLINS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, senior citizens are a vocal group when it comes to complaining about cuts in Social Security and Medicare. They believed President Reagan when he said Social Security would be cut only "over my dead body," and they voted for him by a 61- to 39-percent margin.

Well, Mr. Reagan is still very much alive, but his Republican-controlled Senate is still talking about a freeze on Social Security cost-of-living increases, which older Americans say they can't do without.

They should have known this administration couldn't be counted on to keep their campaign promises. It's too bad the senior citizens didn't realize that last November.

But despite their election day loyalty to Reagan, senior citizens can rest assured that the Democratic Party always fights for their best interests.

THE QUALIFICATIONS FOR RAISING CATS

(Mr. STRANG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STRANG. Mr. Speaker, we have recently encountered a proposal to furnish sandboxes to Members of Congress, that they may entertain themselves while others get on with the business of government. It would appear, Mr. Speaker, that one who aspires to be a leader of men and women and who would offer sandboxes as tokens of leadership, has rather more qualified himself for the raising of cats than for the leading of men and women.

THE SPACE ACTIVITIES OF NONLAUNCHING COUNTRIES

(Mr. NELSON of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, the United States is the world leader in civilian space activities, but a recent report shows we cannot afford to stand still. The report is entitled "Space Activities of the Non-Launching Countries," prepared by Patricia Humphlett of the Congressional Research Service, Report No. 85-72 SPR.

As its title states, the report covers only those countries that do not have their own launch capabilities and have to rely on other nations to put a satellite in orbit.

Most of these nations are involved in weather or communication satellite activities. For example, the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization, Intelsat, has 109 members, all of whom have made an investment in the system.

There are two important things to realize about this:

First, these countries obtain real benefits from space.

Second, the small countries are joining together, to pool resources for space programs.

If the United States were to stand still, we would relinquish our world leadership in space.

In order to continue to lead the world, the United States must have a vigorous, well-funded civilian space program.

PLAYING INTO THE HANDS OF REVISIONIST HISTORIANS

(Mr. MRAZEK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MRAZEK. Mr. Speaker, recently a poll was conducted which suggested that fully 40 percent of those Americans surveyed did not know which side we were supporting during the Vietnam war. This is obviously hard to believe for those of us who lived through those traumatic times.

Now, President Reagan has managed to rewrite the history of what was certainly the most cataclysmic time in modern world history. While rewriting history, he has also trivialized it. While in Germany, President Reagan made it manifestly clear that in his view, Adolf Hitler himself was the evil, and that in a sense the German people were just as much victims of Hitler as free world forces that fought nazism at such great cost.

Well, it was not kids or Hollywood actors who crowded by the hundreds of thousands into the huge outdoor stadium at Nuremburg, and screamed "Heil Hitler" until their voices gave out. It was not impressionable kids who proclaimed themselves the "master race," and who, along with Japan, came so close to conquering the world.

For a new generation of Americans who cannot even remember Vietnam, it is a terrible mistake to suggest that millions of Allied soldiers gave their lives fighting one evil man named Adolf Hitler. Adolf Hitler did not personally run the death camps, and he did not conduct the "medical" experiments on children, and he did not destroy the village of Lidice or commit the Malmedy atrocity. He did not level the Warsaw ghetto, and he did not personally kill over 20 million allied soldiers who died fighting the Nazi armies.

Nazism was not one man; to suggest that this is true plays right into the hands of revisionist historians who are already making the case that the Holocaust itself never took place.

USDA OPERATING LOANS ARE AT RECORD LEVELS

(Mr. LATTA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Speaker, in February, the House of Representatives took up the supplemental appropriation for emergency farm credit. At that time, the legislation included a provision to set up a brandnew program within the Small Business Administration to assist hard-pressed farmers in restructuring their debt and to provide needed assistance in planning this year's crops.

During the somewhat heated debate, I stated we did not need a costly new program to do this job; that we should use an ongoing program especially designed for farmers; namely, the Farmers Home Administration, for this purpose.

I am pleased to report to the House that I received word this morning from the Secretary of Agriculture that the U.S. Department of Agriculture operating loans to finance 1985 crops are running at record levels. With only a little more than half of this fiscal year gone, the USDA's Farmers Home Administration has already reached a record operating loan level of $2.6 billion without a new program.

This record reflects two things, and let me mention them. The administration and particularly Secretary Block, are making good on their commitment to make sufficient credit available for hard-pressed farmers for this year's production.

Second, this fact proves that the people inside and outside this Chamber, clamoring for yet another new, costly program last February were just plain wrong.

THE STAKES ARE TOO HIGH FOR THE ADMINISTRATION TO TURN ITS BACK ON THE TRADE DEFICIT

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, the events of last Sunday concerning the President's visit to Bitburg Cemetery may overshadow the economic summit in Bonn, but the outcome of that meeting in Bonn could have a long-term impact on our Nation. One shortcoming of that meeting has particularly alarmed me, and that is the failure of the President and his colleagues to set a starting date on a new round of multilateral trade negotiations.

Today, Americans are facing a record $123 billion trade deficit. This staggering imbalance is threatening our economy and is also crippling our Nation's agricultural and industrial exports. Two weeks ago, Fiat-Allis, the largest private industry in my hometown of Springfield, IL, announced that it will close in July, and with that closing eliminate 800 jobs.

During the first quarter of 1985, our economy grew at a sluggish 1.3-percent annual rate. Just yesterday Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige announced that the growth in our economy will fall far short of the administration's earlier estimates.

The stakes are too high for the administration to turn its back on our trade deficit, and to turn its back on trade negotiations with our trading partners. If we must abandon the multilateral approach, so be it. By whatever means are necessary, the United States must seek a consistent trade policy from those who expect the United States to practice free trade, but who themselves refuse to.

At a recent town meeting in my district, a constituent asked me whether our recent actions concerning trade with Japan was just publicity. Our response to the failure of the economic summit at Bonn will answer his question.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT PLUS PHASE-IN

(Mr. SAXTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, seldom a day goes by that I am not approached by different groups asking for special consideration under the next year's budget.

This kind of solicitation could easily lead one to believe that the American public has mild concern for the spending problems we face.

Recently, the constituents in New Jersey's 13th District put things into proper perspective. In response to a questionnaire circulated by my office, an overwhelming majority said they wanted this Congress to pass a balanced budget amendment.

While we may disagree over spending priorities, I hope we do not lose sight of the average taxpayer's concerns.

I urge action on a balanced budget amendment during the 99th Congress.

In addition, I call attention to legislation I have introduced with fellow colleagues which will provide a phase-in mechanism. This will enable us to reach a balanced budget through a systematic reduction over 5 years.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WILL NOT BE FOOLED

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago, this House, reflecting the overwhelming sentiment of the American people rejected Ronald Reagan's request to provide $14 million in aid to the Contras. But now there are signs that the House may reverse itself and support such aid. Why? Because of Daniel Ortega's trip to the Soviet Union.

As badly timed as that trip was, it should not distract us from the facts: It should not lead us to provide assistance, however camouflaged, to a group of armed terrorists who have pledged, according to one Contra commander, that: "Come the counterrevolution, there will be a massacre in Nicaragua. There will be bodies from the border to Managua."

For 4 years this administration has waged all-out war against Nicaragua's economy. U.S.-financed Contras have mined Nicaraguan ports, have blown up oil storage facilities, assassinated coffee workers, and burned their crops.

The President has blocked multilateral aid to Nicaragua while cutting its sugar quota and denying it wheat credits. Now, after 4 years of orchestrated war, Mr. Ortega does the inevitable and seeks even more aid from the Russians. The Reagan administration cries out in feigned shock: "We told you so."

What hypocrisy. The American people will not be fooled; let us not be.

STATE DEPARTMENT AUTHORIZATION POSTPONED AGAIN

(Mr. KOLBE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, last week on two occasions this House deferred action on the State Department authorization. On both occasions, the leadership of the majority party rose to tell us in very sad tones that they were doing so because of the dilatory and obstructionist tactics of the minority party in this body. The State Department authorization was important, we were told, and the minority party was responsible for blocking action on it.

Mr. Speaker, we did not regard our action as obstructionist tactics. We believed then—as we do now—that a very important constitutional issue faced this House. But we also understood that the State Department authorization is an important issue. We have come to this body this week prepared to carry on the business of this House. Now, today, we are told that the State Department authorization has been postponed yet again, and deferred yet again for another week.

Why, Mr. Speaker? If the State Department authorization was important last week, why is it not important this week? Let us stop kidding ourselves, Mr. Speaker. The majority party in this body has a responsibility to move this body toward the business of getting a budget passed for our Nation. I urge them to do so.

SAYING AND DOING— CONFLICTING MESSAGES

(Mrs. BOXER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, we can only hope that the message of Bitburg will be a warning to every citizen of the world who cares about the human race that we must never allow the world to forget the Holocaust, the SS, Hitler, and the death camps.

But there is another lesson in Bitburg—the lesson of hypocrisy. The lesson of saying one thing and doing another, saying beautiful words, quoting Anne Frank but still standing near the remains of the SS who caused her suffering and death.

But we have seen hypocrisy before from this administration saying they are for families and children but standing by while millions of children move into poverty; saying they are for deficit reduction but asking for huge increases in military spending; saying they are for the elderly and then breaking a solemn promise never to cut Social Security.

Saying and doing: Bitburg is the worst example of conflicting messages, but certainly not the only example.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE POLISH CONSTITUTION OF 1791

(Mrs. BENTLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, last Thursday, May 3 marked the anniversary of the Polish Constitution of 1791. One of the most important holidays, it observes the adoption of the Constitution through which Poland was transformed into a modern state.

The Constitution was adopted at a critical time in Polish history. In 1772, the first treaty of partition was signed at St. Petersburg between Prussia, Russia, and Austria. As a result, these three seized large sections of Polish territory.

Although Poland was to be dependent on the three partitioners, they evidently meant to make it a serviceable dependent. The overall shock of the first partition had a certain salutary effect on national mentality. Facing possible annihilation, all forces in Poland united behind the new Constitution, which was greatly influenced by the liberal movements in America, England, and France. The towns got full administrative and judicial autonomy, as well as a certain amount of parliamentary representation. Possession of land and access to office in the state and in church were thrown open to the townsmen. This date is not mentioned today in Poland, but is observed by the many Polish communities in the free world, especially the United States.

SOVIET CITIZENS OF AMERICAN EMBASSY IN MOSCOW ARE UNACCEPTABLE SECURITY RISKS

(Mr. COURTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minutes and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, between 1982 and 1984 it was discovered that typewriters in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow were bugged. It was discovered also that a number of Soviet citizens who worked in the U.S. Embassy were, in fact, employees of the KGB.

I have an amendment to the State Department bill which I urge all my colleagues to support. Basically, what it will do will be to fire 200 Russians who work now inside our Embassy in Moscow and our consulate in Leningrad. These Soviet citizens are an unacceptable security risk to the United States. They create a very heavy counterintelligence burden on the United States.

There is no reason why we should have in the U.S. Embassy, in the area where sensitive information is dealt with, citizens of the Soviet Union who probably work for the KGB.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support my amendment.

HOUSE SHOULD TAKE ANOTHER LOOK AT HUMANITARIAN AID TO NICARAGUAN RESISTANCE FORCES

(Mr. McCURDY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McCURDY. Mr. Speaker, like many of my colleagues, I was frustrated by the lack of options which led to the defeat 2 weeks ago of a proposal to provide humanitarian aid to the resistance forces in Nicaragua.

I believe recent events have shown that it was a mistake to completely reject such aid, and I think this House should take another look at the issue.

Accordingly, tomorrow I am introducing a joint resolution—which may be considered as a resolution or as an amendment to upcoming legislation—that would release the $14 million fenced last year, but limit its use to humanitarian aid. The funds would be distributed through the Agency for International Development, and any use for military or other lethal purposes is specifically forbidden.

Second, it urges the President to vigorously pursue diplomatic and economic steps, in concert with the OAS and other free world nations, to implement the Contradora objectives and to pressure the Government of Nicaragua to begin talks with the resistance forces. It also urges the President to resume bilateral discussions between the United States and Nicaragua.

The President is required to report to the Congress every 90 days and, if he determines that negotiations and other steps have failed to resolve the conflict, he may—after consultation with the Congress—request a joint resolution providing additional assistance for the resistance forces. Such request would be considered on an expedited basis.

I believe this resolution, and a similar one in the Senate, offer the best hope of filling a dangerous hole in American foreign policy. I urge my colleagues' support.

THE PREVENTION OF FUTURE HOLOCAUSTS

(Mr. RITTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RITTER. Mr. Speaker, this past week the world has been witness to the events of the Holocaust, and the world has had the opportunity to reflect on those events. Our responsibility is to never forget, indeed to remember the Holocaust. Our responsibility is also to prevent future holocausts from occurring.

The common thread that has run through the holocausts of the 20th century is totalitarian tyranny. That thread was evident in Nazi Germany, that thread was evident in Soviet Russia during the enforced famine against the people of the Ukraine, and that thread was evident in the fabric of repression in Pol Pot's Cambodia.

Mr. Speaker, we have a responsibility to support the forces of pluralism and of democracy and those who would struggle against totalitarian tyranny. We have an obligation to support those who would struggle against totalitarian tyranny here in our own hemisphere on the mainland of the Americas.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Congress to revisit the aid package to those fighting for democracy in Nicaragua.

CENTRAL AMERICA: A DOSE OF REALITY

(Mr. GONZALEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, I pointed out the fact that the United States is a member of the Organization of American States, the OAS. It is a fact, a reality, that the Rio Treaty, both in its original form and in its later amendments, commits our country to the peaceful settlement of disputes. The treaty obligations of the United States, as expressed in the Rio Treaty and its revisions, make it an unequivocal duty to avoid acts of aggression. Any country that commits an act of aggression clearly violates the terms of the treaty.

Aggression is defined thusly, in the Rio Treaty:

The sending by or on behalf of a State of armed bands, groups, irregulars, or mercenaries, which carry out acts of armed force against another State.

This is an exact definition of the Contra forces, and of our support for them.

When the House debates the business of aid to the Contras, it is a reality, a fact that we must remember, that no matter what we may think of the Government of Nicaragua, our treaty obligations clearly call for us to seek negotiation of our differences and to avoid acts of war. And there is no evading the fact that our support of the Contra forces, and the acts that they have committed, fall within the definition of acts of war, acts of aggression, acts that our Government has solemnly pledged not to undertake.

We have to be sober and mature in our judgment. Some will say, "so what?" about any violation of international law. But those same voices rise in great outcry if some other country violates such law. We cannot have it both ways. We cannot call one country lawless, if we ourselves were the first to violate the law. In the case of Nicaragua, we are in no position to call that Government lawless. President Reagan knows that we are in clear violation of international law, and that is why, among other things, he denies that the World Court even has the right to examine the case of Nicaragua—even though in other cases, the United States has used the World Court to great advantage. It is no light thing to ignore law, even law so fragile as international law.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NELSON of Florida). Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate has been concluded on all motions to suspend the rules.

AUTHORIZATION FOR THE BUREAU OF THE MINT, 1986

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2148) to authorize appropriations for the Bureau of the Mint for fiscal year 1986, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2148

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 5132(a)(2) of title 31, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Not more than $47,692,000 may be appropriated to the Secretary for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, to pay costs of the mints and assay offices."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HILER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO].

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2148 authorizes not more than $47,692,000 for the Bureau of the Mint. I know that many Members believe that we should put a freeze on Government spending. Those Members will be pleased to know that this authorization is $66,000 less than the House authorized in fiscal 1985.

The authorization includes a decrease of $250,000 from the authorization requested by the mint. The mint proposed to spend that amount on architectural and engineering studies related to the use of space at the Philadelphia Mint.

The study was supposedly required to determine how to best use the space now unused as a result of the closing of the casting and rolling facility. That closing occurred because it was allegedly cheaper to purchase, rather than manufacture, coinage strip. Now the mint proposes to spend half a million dollars to plan what to do with the space. The mint's own personnel are the experts on the coinage process, and no outsiders can approach them in the expertise they possess in mint operations. To use expensive contractors who are unfamiliar with coinage is a waste of the taxpayers' money.

The authorization includes an increase of $988,000 to restore the administration's proposed 5-percent cut for the salaries of the mint's employees. Such a cut is completely unwarranted and unfair. Most of the mint's employees are blue collar or clerical workers in the lower grades of the Federal pay scale. These employees would be least able to afford any pay cut at all.

H.R. 2148 does not require that the mint restore the funds for the proposed pay cut. It does restore them to the authorization so that, if the pay cut is not approved, the Appropriations Committee will be able to appropriate the funds without any need for the authorization to be amended.

The bill, as reported by the Banking Committee, deletes the mint's request for an unlimited authorization for fiscal year 1987. This enables Congress to maintain necessary control over mint spending and activities in fiscal year 1987 and future years.

I am firmly opposed to an authorization longer than 1 year in duration. A 1-year authorization provides the Congress and the Banking Committee with the opportunity to oversee and monitor the operation of this important agency.

It is important that the United States maintain control over its coinage. Security over the coinage process is vital to protect the integrity of our money. We cannot risk having coins of the realm made outside the realm. My concern was heightened earlier this year when the mint received a number of foreign bids on a solicitation to supply the Denver Mint with coin blanks.

During the consideration of H.R. 2148, the Consumer Affairs Subcommittee adopted an amendment I offered requiring the use of American metals, equipment, and services in the manufacture of our coins. On April 30, Mint Director Donna Pope wrote to me stating that the coin blank solicitation was being withdrawn. The letter stated that coin blanks will continue to be manufactured in the security of the Denver Mint.

In light of this positive action on the part of the Treasury, I withdrew my amendment. I do not believe that we now need codify a ban on foreign purchases. However, if it appears that the mint moves toward a continued erosion of American source contracting, I will not hesitate to reintroduce legislation to assure that our coins are truly American coins. As long as I am chairman of the subcommittee, our coins will never be labeled "made in Taiwan."

The U.S. Mint is the greatest mint in the world. Our coins are recognized worldwide. The quality and integrity of our coinage must be zealously guarded. This authorization assures that the mint will be funded at the level necessary to do so, without any unnecessary expenditures.

At this time I would like to pay tribute to the ranking minority member of the Coinage Subcommittee, the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. JOHN HILER, and to the ranking minority member of the full committee, the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. CHALMERS WYLIE, and to all the members of our committee for their genuine support and dedication to the coinage system of the United States. They have loyally supported my efforts as chairman, and as far as I am concerned, they have made my job much easier. I want to pay tribute to them today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join Chairman ANNUNZIO in support of H.R. 2148, which would authorize appropriations of $47.692 million for the expenses and salaries of the U.S. Mint.

Although this authorization is $738,000 above the administration's original request of $46.954 million, I believe that it is reasonable. The higher figure we are considering today reflects two policy changes which the Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee decided should be made in the administration's request.

First, the subcommittee eliminated the administration's proposed 5-percent reduction in salaries of mint personnel and replaced it with a pay freeze. In our view, the inclusion of a pay cut is not realistic. Recent action on the budget indicates that Congress is very unlikely to approve a 5-percent reduction in the pay of Federal workers, and the administration has indicated to the other body's leadership that a pay freeze will be sought.

Second, the subcommittee rejected the mint's request for an additional $275,000 in appropriated funds for architectural and engineering plans for utilization of available space at the Philadelphia Mint. Although I do not object to this project on its merits, I do believe that at a time when our Nation is facing extraordinarily large budget deficits, we all have to tighten our belts a bit. And if the mint decides that this project is essential, it can go ahead with it. The authorization permits the mint the flexibility to use its appropriated funds as it sees fit.

Two additional proposals related to the operations of the U.S. Mint were considered during consideration of the bill at the subcommittee and committee levels. The Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee reported a mint authorization bill that contained restrictions on the mint's procurement of metals, other materials, services, and equipment from foreign sources. Although I am generally an advocate of free trade, I do believe that we must take care not to jeopardize the security of our coinage system.

The awarding of contracts to foreign concerns for the blanking of coins could pose such a risk. While I am convinced that the bill as originally passed out of the subcommittee contained language that would have given the Treasury sufficient flexibility to buy foreign if there was no substantially equivalent U.S. product or if the domestic price was not reasonable, I am pleased that the Treasury Department under its new leadership has decided to withdraw its current solicitation for bids on coin blanks in particular and to take another look at the implications of seeking private sources of coin blanks rather than continuing to do its own blanking, in light of the probability that a foreign source would have the lowest price. While savings could be attained from private-source blanking, if those savings are at the expense of domestically produced coins, I am not sure the savings would be worth it.

As a result of Treasury's decision on this matter, the Banking Committee dropped the proposed restrictions on the mint's procurement practices from the authorization.

The Banking Committee also considered an amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE] to provide for the minting of a copper penny rather than the zinc penny we now have. Prior to 1981, the penny was a copper coin. Because of the run-up in the price of copper, the mint changed the penny to a copper-clad zinc coin at a large savings to the American people. Because the price of copper has now fallen, the gentleman from Arizona believes that going back to a copper coin would assist the copper mines and workers who are currently out of work.

Although this proposal encountered some resistance during the markup, I appreciate the concerns expressed by the gentleman from Arizona. This is an issue that both Chairman ANNUNZIO and I believe should be revisited in the future.

Although the mint is now an effectively managed agency under the direction of Donna Pope, there remains a need for constant and close congressional oversight of its operations. As ranking Republican on the Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee, I intend to continue to work closely with Chairman ANNUNZIO to ensure that the mint continues to be not only a cost-effective agency, but also one which operates in the best interests of the Nation it serves.

I might also add that I appreciated the cooperation which Chairman ANNUNZIO displayed not only to myself, but to the Republican members of the subcommittee and the full committee and look forward to working with the chairman in the future on oversight of the mint and in future authorizations.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would like the gentleman to yield for two purposes. No 1, it is my understanding that the authorization we have before us does indeed meet the freeze test; in other words, that the amount we would be authorizing in this bill is below the appropriation level for last year; is that correct?

Mr. HILER. That is correct. The authorized amount for fiscal year 1986 would be some $66,000 less than the appropriated amount had been in the continuing resolution passed last year for fiscal year 1985.

Mr. WALKER. So that we can assure our colleagues as we pass this authorization that those who have been in support of the freeze up until now in other authorizations are indeed supporting the same concept here.

Mr. HILER. That is correct. Mr. WALKER. I would also ask the gentleman to yield further. I was just doing a head count here on the floor a little bit ago and discovered that there are somewhere between 7 and 10 people on the floor for this debate.

I point that out only because recently the Democratic Congressional Committee has been mailing into some of our districts suggesting that there are times when there are some serious activities on the floor, and other times when there are not serious activities and it is a waste of money when they point out that there is not serious activity.

I simply think that it is important for the American people to understand when they do not have the cameras panning the floor during the regular sessions of this body that they understand that there are not very many people here during some of these debates, either, despite the fact that the gentleman has helped bring a bill to the floor that is about a $47 million bill and we would have to wonder why some people do not regard that as serious business.

Mr. HILER. Well, I would like to think that the House recognizes that the chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] and myself, would not bring a bill to the floor unless it was going to meet the guidelines that all 435 Members would subscribe to and I hope it shows confidence in us.

Mr. WALKER. I think that must be the case. I am sure the gentleman has defined it perfectly.

I thank the gentleman for yielding. ● Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I join Chairman ANNUNZIO and Congressman HILER in their support of H.R. 2148, legislation that authorizes appropriations for the U.S. Mint for fiscal year 1986. I also would like to commend the chairman of the Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee for the outstanding work he has done in the oversight of the U.S. Mint and its operations. Mr. HILER deserves mention for his excellent contributions in making this a good bill.

The mint is one agency of the Government which is effectively and efficiently managed. Under the direction of Donna Pope, who I am proud to say is a fellow Ohioan, the mint has enjoyed considerable success in recent years. I think we would all agree that among the most significant of the mint's achievements is its recent deposit of $818 million in the general fund of the Treasury. This $818 million consisted of profits earned from seigniorage and sales of numismatic items. Not many Government agencies can claim to earn a profit. Nor can many Government agencies boast that they actually contribute to reducing the deficit, rather than to increasing it.

Another of the mint's recent accomplishments is the successful completion of the Olympic Coin Program. A total of 3.3 million Olympic coins have been shipped from the mint to purchasers. As a result of the mint's efforts, more than $71.9 million has been turned over to the U.S. Olympic Committee and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, in support of a very worthy cause.

In light of the outstanding recent successes of the U.S. Mint, particularly its laudable practice of enriching the Treasury's coffers, I believe that the authorization request before us today is a reasonable one. I recognize that the authorization adopted by the Banking Committee does exceed the President's request by $738,000. For the most part, this reflects the opinion of both the subcommittee and the committee that mint salaries should be frozen, rather than reduced by 5 percent as proposed by the administration. Even so, the authorization request of $47,692 million that is before us today is still $66,000 less than the fiscal year 1985 appropriation for the mint as contained in last year's continuing resolution.

The U.S. Mint is a Government agency we can all be proud of. Under the outstanding management of Donna Pope, it is working hard to produce the highest quality coinage at the lowest possible cost to the taxpayer. Beyond performing its basic function in an exemplary fashion, the mint has made some very special contributions to the Olympics Program and to the reduction of the deficit. These are contributions that we all can appreciate, and the agency making them deserves our strongest support. ●

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH].

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding.

If I can answer the question of our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the Members that are on the floor here are what we call the watchdogs of the Treasury, so I think the American people are well served.

I want to congratulate the ranking member of our subcommittee, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HILER] for his marvelous job in crafting this legislation. He is truly gifted in this regard and we are fortunate to have him as the ranking member of our committee.

I also want to especially express my appreciation to our subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] for his eternal vigilance and diligence in this area. The U.S. Mint is responsive to the needs and concerns of the American public because he is in charge. I do not know of any man in Congress that is as well informed as the gentleman from Illinois when it comes to these important issues and is as conscientious and as diligent.

That is why we do not have to have all 435 Members here, because we have confidence in you and we have confidence that the job is going to be done right. We thank you for that and also our wonderful staff.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2148, which would authorize funding for the U.S. Mint for fiscal 1986. The cost of this authorization, is below the 1985 authorization level. This is a fiscally responsible bill.

I want to commend the ranking minority member of our subcommittee, Mr. HILER, for his efforts in crafting this legislation. And I especially want to express my appreciation to the subcommittee chairman, Mr. ANNUNZIO, for his eternal diligence in ensuring that the U.S. Mint is responsive to the needs and concerns of the American public.

On one issue in particular I want to associate myself with the chairman's position, and that is on the procurement of equipment and materials, especially coin blanks, by the mint. Most certainly, we have an obligation to protect American jobs and industries which can provide supplies to the mint at a reasonable cost.

Foreign sourcing of coin blanks is a troubling prospect on several counts. One, of course, is security. A second is quality control. But third, and most important, is the thought that the United States, a country with a $130 billion trade deficit, might actually begin importing its own coinage. As the chairman has said, the coin of the realm should not be produced outside of the realm. As far as I am concerned, this should be a guiding principle.

It is my understanding that the issue of sourcing of coin blanks has been resolved by Treasury's agreeing to drop its solicitation. There is some question in my mind as to whether or not private firms, in the United States or outside, should be doing a job the mint has been doing for years—and is perfectly capable of doing. I am pleased that since Treasury is under new leadership it has decided to revisit this entire issue.

Again, I strongly support this legislation, and urge my colleagues to do likewise.

There is one other issue I think we want to touch on which is somewhat relevant, and that is the issue of changing of our currency. For that, too, I want to thank our chairman and ranking member because no other issue is going to, I think, disturb the House as much as that particular issue if it is not properly handled.

So many times we go back to our districts and people say "I did not realize you were even considering this law on Capitol Hill, and now it is a law and we have to live with it." This issue of the change of the currency is one of those sleeping issues and for that we are confident and thankful to our chairman and to our ranking member that this issue is going to be resolved and is going to be guarded.

Again I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for their diligence in this regard and in this matter. Because of you, those of us in Congress can have faith and confidence that the job will be done right.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Will my good friend from Wisconsin yield?

Mr. ROTH. I am happy to yield.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. I appreciate the gentleman yielding. I want to express my deep appreciation to the gentleman, TOBY RORH from Wisconsin, for all of the kind remarks and for his active participation in this committee. Without the support of all of the committee members we would not be able to do the job. I know I could not do the job by myself.

Under the Constitution, the Congress of the United States is given the authority to protect the currency and the coinage system of the United States. We are obligated. That is our responsibility. And as a committee we have been trying to do that job and I think we have done a good job.

I would also like to make this point for the RECORD. The mint produces for the Treasury of the United States, close to $500 million a year in profit from the sale of coins to the public. So for the taxpayers we not only want to protect the mint's integrity but we want to protect that source of revenue to the Treasury. And as we all know, the revenue is badly needed today because of the rising deficits in our budgets.

So, again, I thank the gentleman for his support. I am looking forward to his help on the counterfeit currency problem. We will have hearings in about a month and when those hearings begin I know the gentleman will take a very active part, along with the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. JOHN HILER.

Mr. ROTH. I thank our chairman for his graciousness and insight, and I yield back to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HILER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2148, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize appropriations for the Bureau of the Mint for fiscal year 1986."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1869, REPEAL OF CONTEMPORANEOUS RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 1869) to repeal the contemporaneous recordkeeping requirements added by the Tax Reform Act of 1984, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 99-87)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1869) to repeal the contemporaneous recordkeeping requirements added by the Tax Reform Act of 1984, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

SECTION 1. REPEAL OF CONTEMPORANEOUS RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS, ETC.

(a) CONTEMPORANEOUS RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.—Subsection (d) of section 274 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to substantiation requirements for certain deductions and credits) is amended by striking out "adequate contemporaneous records" and inserting in lieu thereof "adequate records or by sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement", and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall be applied and administered as if the word

"contemporaneous" had not been added to such subsection (d).

(b) PROVISIONS RELATING TO RETURN PREPARERS AND NEGLIGENCE PENALTY.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 179(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 are hereby repealed, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall be applied and administered as if such paragraphs (and the amendments made by such paragraphs) had not been enacted.

(c) REPEAL OF REGULATIONS.—Regulations issued before the date of the enactment of this Act to carry out the amendments made by paragraphs (1)(C), (2), and (3) of section 179(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 shall have no force and effect.

SEC. 2. SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENTS NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN VEHICLES WITH LITTLE PERSONAL USE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 274 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to substantiation required) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "This subsection shall not apply to any qualified nonpersonal use vehicle (as defined in subsection (i))."

(b) QUALIFIED NONPERSONAL USE VEHICLE DEFINED.—Section 274 of such Code is amended by redesignating subsection (i) as subsection (j) and by inserting after subsection (h) the following new subsection:
 "(i) QUALIFIED NONPERSONAL USE VEHICLE.—For purposes of subsection (d), the term 'qualified nonpersonal use vehicle' means any vehicle which, by reason of its nature, is not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes."

SEC. 3. EXEMPTION FROM REQUIRED INCOME TAX WITHHOLDING FOR CERTAIN FRINGE BENEFITS.

Section 3402 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to income tax collected at source) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:
 "(s) EXEMPTION FROM WITHHOLDING FOR ANY VEHICLE FRINGE BENEFIT.—

"(1) EMPLOYER ELECTION NOT TO WITHHOLD.—The employer may elect not to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter with respect to any vehicle fringe benefit provided to any employee if such employee is notified by the employer of such election (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe). The preceding sentence shall not apply to any vehicle fringe benefit unless the amount of such benefit is included by the employer on a statement timely furnished under section 6051.

"(2) EMPLOYER MUST FURNISH W-2.—Any vehicle fringe benefit shall be treated as wages from which amounts are required to be deducted and withheld under this chapter for purposes of section 6051.

"(3) VEHICLE FRINGE BENEFIT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'vehicle fringe benefit' means any fringe benefit—

"(A) which constitutes wages (as defined in section 3401), and
 "(B) which consists of providing a high-way motor vehicle for the use of the employee."

SEC. 4. REDUCTION IN LIMITATIONS ON INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT AND DEPRECIATION FOR LUXURY AUTOMOBILES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(1) INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT.—Paragraph (1) of section 280F(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to investment tax credit) is amended by striking out "$1,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$675".

(2) DEPRECIATION.—Paragraph (2) of section 280F(a) of such Code (relating to depreciation) is amended—

(A) by striking out "$4,000" in subparagraph (A)(i) and inserting in lieu thereof "$3,200", and

(B) by striking out "$6,000" each place it appears in subparagraphs (A)(ii) and (B)(ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "$4,800".

(b) 4-YEAR DEFERRAL OF INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.—

(1) ADJUSTMENT AFTER 1988.—Subparagraph (A) of section 280F(d)(7) of such Code (relating to automobile price inflation adjustment) is amended by striking out "passenger automobile" and inserting in lieu thereof "passenger automobile placed in service after 1988".

(2) 1987 BASE PERIOD.—Subclause (III) of section 280F(d)(7)(B)(i) of such Code is amended by striking out "1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

(3) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Clause (i) of section 280F(d)(7)(B) of such Code is amended by striking out the last sentence.

SEC. 5. NEW REGULATIONS.

Not later than October 1, 1985, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of this Act which shall fully reflect such provisions.

SEC. 6. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) REPEALS.—The amendment and repeals made by subsections (a) and (b) of section 1 shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 179(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984.

(b) RESTORATION OF PRIOR LAW FOR 1985.—For taxable years beginning in 1985, section 274(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall apply as it read before the amendments made by section 179(b)(1) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984.

(c) EXCEPTION FROM SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENTS FOR QUALIFIED NONPERSONAL USE VEHICLES.—The amendments made by section 2 shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1985.

(d) WITHHOLDING AMENDMENT.—The amendment made by section 3 shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

(e) REDUCTION IN LIMITATIONS ON INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT AND DEPRECIATION.—

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by section 4 shall apply to—

(A) property placed in service after April 2, 1985, in taxable years ending after such date, and

(B) property leased after April 2, 1985, in taxable years ending after such date.

(2) The amendments made by section 4 shall not apply to any property—

(A) acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, but only if the property is placed in service before August 1, 1985, or

(B) of which the taxpayer is the lessee, but only if the lease is pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, and only if the taxpayer first uses such property under the lease before August 1, 1985.

And the Senate agree to the same. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill and agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1869) to repeal the contemporaneous recordkeeping requirements added by the Tax Reform Act of 1984, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The difference between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

STATEMENT OF MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE

I. EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

A. Repeal of Requirement That Certain Records Must Be Contemporaneous (secs. 1 (a) and (c) and 2(a) of the House bill and secs. 1 (a) and (c))

1. Repeal of "contemporaneous" requirement

Present law

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 (the 1984 Act) amended Code section 274(d) to require that taxpayers must maintain "adequate contemporaneous records" to substantiate deductions and credits for business use of automobiles and other listed property.

House bill

The House bill repeals the word "contemporaneous," effective as if it had never been enacted.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

2. Alternate substantiation method

Present law and background

Prior to the 1984 Act, taxpayers were required under section 274(d) to substantiate deductions for travel away from home (including meals and lodging), for items with respect to entertainment, amusement, or recreation activities of facilities, and for business gifts by adequate records or by sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement. In the case of an expense or item subject to substantiation under section 274(d), that provision required substantiation as to (1) the amount of such expense or other item, (2) the time and place of the travel, entertainment, amusement, recreation, or use of the facility, or the date and description of the gift, (3) the business purpose of the expense or other item, and (4) the business relationship to the taxpayer of persons entertained, using the facility, or receiving the gift. Prior to the 1984 Act, local travel (i.e., travel not away from home) was not subject to the section 274(d) substantiation standards.

Section 179(b) of the 1984 Act deleted from section 274(d) the alternate substantiation method of sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement. The 1984 Act also applied the section 274(d) substantiation requirements to deductions or credits claimed for use of listed property (as defined in sec. 280F(d)(4)). The categories of listed property include automobiles (whether used for local travel or travel away from home), other means of transportation, computers, etc.

House bill

The House bill provides that, as an alternative to maintaining adequate records, taxpayers may substantiate deductions and credits under section 274(d) by sufficient written evidence corroborating their own statement.

The committee report also requires that certain information concerning mileage and business use of vehicles, as well as similar information concerning business use of other listed property, must be requested on tax returns.

The House bill is effective on January 1, 1986. For 1985, the substantiation rules in effect prior to the 1984 Act would apply.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is similar to the House bill in that it provides for an alternate substantiation method. However, the Senate amendment does not require that the evidence must be written in order to qualify as sufficient under the alternate substantiation standard. The Senate amendment is effective January 1, 1985.

The Senate amendment does not specifically require that questions regarding the business use of automobiles and other listed property be asked on tax returns.

Conference agreement

Substantiation standards

In general

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment as to the substantiation standards under section 274(d). Thus, section 274(d) is amended to require that a taxpayer must have adequate records or sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement to support credits or deductions for expenditures subject to the section 274(d) substantiation rules. As under pre-1984 Act law, section 274(d) as amended by the bill requires the taxpayer to substantiate (1) the amount of the expense or item subject to section 274(d), (2) the time and place of the travel, entertainment, amusement, recreation, or use of the facility or property, or the date and description of the gift, (3) the business purpose of the expense or other item, and (4) the business relationship to the taxpayer of persons entertained, using the facility or property, or receiving the gift.

The conferees believe that a taxpayer's uncorroborated statement as to the business use of an automobile or other listed property does not alone have sufficient probative value to warrant consideration by the Internal Revenue Service or the courts. Consequently, the conferees adopt for this purpose the standard of prior law applicable to travel away from home and business entertainment (sec. 274(d)) that requires taxpayers to provide either adequate records or sufficient evidence corroborating their own statements in order to support a deduction or credit under section 274(d). The more general substantiation standards applicable under section 162,¹ which have been interpreted to permit in certain circumstances uncorroborated statements by taxpayers to support business deductions not subject to section 274(d) or other special rules, are to have no application to deductions or credits with respect to local travel, computers, and other listed property first required (under this bill) to meet the section 274(d) substantiation standards beginning January 1, 1986, just as they are to have no application with respect to expenditures with respect to travel away from home, etc., which continue to be subject to section 274(d) substantiation standards.

The conference agreement does not include the provision of the House bill that would require that the sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement be written. The conferees believe that oral evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement, such as oral testimony from a disinterested, unrelated party describing the taxpayer's activities, may be of sufficient probative value that it should not be automatically excluded from consideration under section 274(d).

The conferees emphasize, however, that different types of evidence have different degrees of probative value. The conferees believe that oral evidence alone has considerably less probative value than written evidence. In addition, the conferees believe that the probative value of written evidence is greater the closer in time it relates to the expenditure. Thus, written evidence arising at or near the time of the expenditure, absent unusual circumstances, has much more probative value than evidence created years later, such as written evidence first prepared for audit or court.

The conferees specifically approve the types of substantiation that were required under prior law, and consider the longstanding Treasury regulations on recordkeeping issued under section 274(d)² prior to the 1984 Act to reflect accurately their intent as to the substantiation that taxpayers are required to maintain.³ While taxpayers may

¹ Under general tax law principles, the courts have held that a taxpayer bears the burden of proving both the eligibility of any expenditure claimed as a deduction or credit and also the amount of any such eligible expenditure, including the expenses of using a car in the taxpayer's trade or business. See, e.g., Interstate Transit Lines v. Comm'r, 319 U.S. 590, 593 (1943); Comm'r v. Heintinger, 320 U.S. 467 (1943); Gaines v. Comm'r, 35 T.C.M. 1415 (1976).

² See Teas. Reg. sec. 1.274-5.

³ Prior law provided that adequate records or sufficient evidence may take the following forms:

- a. Account books
- b. Diaries
- c. Logs
- d. Documentary evidence (receipts, paid bills)
- e. Trip sheets
- f. Expense reports
- g. Statements of witnesses

h. If the employee is required to make an adequate accounting to the employer and the reimbursement equals expenses, the employee is not required to report the expenses and reimbursement on his or her tax return. (A reimbursement would equal reimbursement expenses where the reimbursement is determined pursuant to data on the type of automobile and its availability for personal purposes, and on a reasonable allocation of local operating and fixed costs.)

choose to keep logs on the use of their automobiles, and while such evidence generally has more probative value than evidence developed later, the Treasury is specifically prohibited from requiring that taxpayers keep daily contemporaneous logs of their use of automobiles.

The conferees expect the Internal Revenue Service and the courts to continue to weigh carefully the probative value of these, as well as all other, forms of evidence. The Service and the courts continue to have the ability to discount or reject totally evidence that has limited or no probative value (such as documents actually created much later than they purport to have been created). As noted above, section 274(d) requires that the records or evidence (whatever their particular form) most substantiate not just the amount of the expense, but also the time and place of the travel, entertainment, amusement, recreation, or use of the facility or property, or the date and description of the gift; the business purpose of the expense or other item; and the business relationship to the taxpayer of persons entertained, using the facility or property, or receiving the gift.

Although the conferees intend that the principles of these regulations fully apply to deductions and credits claimed for local travel and the use of other listed property under section 274(d), the conferees also recognize that these principles will need to be carefully applied to local travel and listed property not previously subject to section 274(d). This will need to be done because the nature of making these expenditures generally differs from the nature of making the types of expenditures that had been required to meet the section 274(d) substantiation standards prior to the 1984 Act, such as travel away from home and business meals. For example, deductions associated with local travel may be for annual amounts for items such as depreciation and insurance, rather than a series of discrete expenditures for meals or hotels. Also, expenses for travel away from home often involve a third party, such as an airline, train, or hotel, that provides a receipt for the taxpayer of the date and amount of the expenditure and the destination or location. Similarly, expenses for business meals generally occur in restaurants, which provide a similar receipt. While these receipts do not, of course, encompass all of the elements of the substantiation requirements under section 274(d),⁴ they do aid taxpayers in their recordkeeping. Similar third party involvement generally is not available for local travel or the use of computers. Similarly, expenses for travel away from home or for business meals do not generally occur with the same frequency as individual local travel trips. Because the bill repeals the 1984 Act requirement of contemporaneous records, taxpayers are not required to maintain trip-by-trip logs and records encompassing each element of the substantiation standards of section 274(d) to justify a deduction or credit.

Consequently, the conferees recognize that some adjustment generally will need to be made in order to apply these principles to the specific factual circumstances surrounding expenditures for local travel and use of listed property not previously subject to section 274(d) rules. The conferees believe that the courts and the Treasury can make these required adjustments without sacrificing these principles, and without reverting to the section 162 standards (including the *Cohan*⁵ rule), which the conferees have determined are inadequate and unacceptable for purposes of section 274(d). In several cases previously decided under section 274(d), it is not clear that the courts had rejected the Cohan rule; the conferees believe that the courts must clearly and explicitly reject the Cohan rule for expenditures required to meet the substantiation requirements of section 274(d).

WRITTEN POLICY STATEMENTS

The conferees intend that the two types of written policy statements satisfying the conditions described below, if initiated and kept by an employer to implement a policy of no personal use (or no personal use except for commuting) of a vehicle provided by the employer, qualify as sufficient evidence corroborating the taxpayer's own statement⁶ and therefore will satisfy the employer's substantiation requirements under section 274(d). Therefore, the employer need not keep a separate set of records for purposes of the employer's substantiation requirements under section 274(d) with respect to use of a vehicle satisfying these written policy statement rules. A written policy statement adopted by a government unit as to employee use of its vehicles would be eligible for these exceptions to the section 274(d) substantiation rules. Thus, a resolution of a city council or a provision of state law or the state constitution would qualify as a written policy statement, so long as the conditions described below are met.

The first type of written policy statement that will satisfy the employer's substantiation requirements under section 274(d) is a policy that prohibits personal use by the employee. In order to be eligible for this special rule, all of the following conditions must be met.

(1) The vehicle is owned or leased by the employer and is provided to one or more employees for use in connection with the employer's trade or business;

(2) When the vehicle is not being used for such business purposes, it is kept on the employer's business premises (or temporarily located elsewhere, e.g., for repair);

(3) Under the employer's written policy, no employee may use the vehicle for personal purposes, other than de minimis personal use (such as a stop for lunch between two business deliveries);

(4) The employer reasonably believes that no employee uses the vehicle, other than de minimis use, for any personal purpose;

(5) No employee using the vehicle lives at the employer's business premises; and

(6) There must be evidence that would enable the Internal Revenue Service to determine whether the use of the vehicle met the five preceding conditions.

The second type of written policy statement that will satisfy the employer's substantiation requirements under section 274(d) is a policy that prohibits personal use by the employee, except for commuting. In order to be eligible for this rule, all of the following conditions must be met—

(1) The vehicle is owned or leased by the employer and is provided to one or more employees for use in connection with the employer's trade or business and is used in the employer's trade or business;

(2) For bona fide noncompensatory business reasons, the employer requires the employee to commute to and/or from work in the vehicle;

(3) The employer establishes a written policy under which the employee may not use the vehicle for personal purposes, other than commuting or de minimis personal use (such as a stop for a personal errand between a business delivery and the employee's home);

(4) The employer reasonably believes that, except for de minimis use, the employee does not use the vehicle for any personal purpose other than commuting;

(5) The employer accounts for the commuting use by including an appropriate amount (specified in Treasury regulations) in the employee's gross income;⁷ and

(6) There must be evidence that would enable the Internal Revenue Service to determine whether the use of the vehicle met the five preceding conditions.

This second type of written policy statement is not available if the employee using the vehicle for commuting is an officer or one-percent owner of the employer.⁸

Tax return questions

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill as to information to be requested on tax returns about business use of vehicles and other listed property.

The conferees want to ensure that taxpayers claim only the deductions and credits to which they are entitled, but without being unduly burdened by unnecessarily complex recordkeeping requirements. At the same time, the conferees believe that taxpayers should provide sufficient information on their returns so that the Internal Revenue Service can make a preliminary evaluation of the appropriateness of the taxpayer's claimed deductions. Previously, the Internal Revenue Service found it difficult to make such a preliminary evaluation without auditing the taxpayer, which can also be a significant burden on the taxpayer.

Therefore, the conferees intend that individual taxpayers (whether employees or self-employed) claiming deductions or credits for business use of an automobile or other listed property subject to the substantiation standards of section 274(d) are to provide on their returns the substance of the information (generally on appropriate existing tax forms) called for by all the questions as set forth in the House report on the bill.⁹ Corporate taxpayers, as well as all other taxpayers and entities, claiming such deductions or credits also are to be asked to supply such information on the forms or schedules they are required to file.

The conferees have carefully considered the fact that furnishing additional tax return information, although involving only a limited number of questions, requires some additional effort by taxpayers. However, the conferees note that computations involved with respect to vehicles (such as mileage and percentage of business use) normally would be made by taxpayers in the process of determining the proper amount of deductions and credits to claim, and that other information can be obtained through "yes" or "no" questions. Accordingly, to achieve better compliance and more accurate computations, the conference agreement directs the Internal Revenue Service to obtain this information on appropriate tax forms or schedules, notwithstanding any otherwise applicable paperwork reduction considerations.

The conferees intend that employees give this return information to their employers with respect to employer-provided vehicles. Generally, the employer would report this information on its tax return, since the employer is claiming the tax deductions or credits for use of the vehicle. An employer which provides more than five cars to its employees, however, would not have to include all this information on the employer's return; instead, such an employer must obtain this information from its employees, must so indicate on its return, and must retain the information received. The Internal Revenue Service could then examine on audit the information that the employees had provided to the employer. An employer may rely on such a statement from its employee (unless the employer knows or has reason to know it is false) to determine the credits and deductions to which the employer is entitled and to determine the amount, if any, which must be included in employee's income and wages by the employer because of the employee's commuting or other personal use of the employer-provided car.

Effective dates

The modification to the substantiation standards of section 274(d) that provides that taxpayers must substantiate deductions or credits subject to that provision by adequate records or sufficient evidence corroborating their own statement is effective January 1, 1985.

Use of listed property that was not subject to section 274(d) substantiation rules prior to the 1984 Act (such as local travel in an automobile or use of computers) is subject to the section 274(d) substantiation requirements effective January 1, 1986.¹⁰ For 1985, service, use of other vehicles and after-work use, whether the taxpayer has evidence to support the business use claimed on the return, and whether or not the evidence is written. In the case of other listed property subject to the section 274(d) rules, information should be requested in connection with appropriate tax forms or schedules as to type of property (e.g., yacht, computer, airplane, etc.), percentage of business use, whether the taxpayer has written evidence to support the business use claimed on the return, and whether or not the evidence is written. Under the conference agreement, the Internal Revenue Service is not required to request on returns the specific question relating to computers set forth as question 2 on page 10 of the committee report on the House Bill.

¹⁰This January 1, 1986 effective date applies only to the extent that use of listed property was first made subject to the substantiation standards of section 274(d) by the 1984 Act. Deductions for ex-

use of such listed property is not subject to the special substantiation standards under section 274(d).

The tax return information (described above) must be requested on returns for taxable years beginning in 1985 (i.e., in the case of most individuals, returns which must be filed by April 15, 1986.)

3. Repeal of regulations

Present law

The Internal Revenue Service has issued temporary regulations implementing the recordkeeping provisions of section 179(b) of the 1984 Act.

House bill

The House bill repeals all Treasury regulations (temporary or proposed) issued prior to the enactment of this House bill that carry out the amendments made by section 179(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984. Thus, such regulations issued to implement the changes to section 274(d) made by that act, particularly the inclusion in that section of the word "contemporaneous," are revoked.¹¹ In addition, any regulations relating to the return preparer provision and the special negligence penalty (described above) are revoked.¹² These revoked regulations are to have no force and effect whatsoever.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment. Thus, the conference agreement provides that regulations issued to carry out the amendments made by paragraphs (1)(C), (2), and (3) of section 179(b) of the 1984 Act shall have no force and effect.

B. Repeal of Provisions Relating to Return Preparers (sec. 1(b) of the House bill and sec. 1(c) of the Senate amendment)

Present law

Return preparers must advise taxpayers of the substantiation requirements under section 274(d) and obtain written confirmation that those requirements have been met (Code section 6695(b)).

House bill

The House bill repeals this provision, effective as if it had never been enacted.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

penses or items that were subject to the section 274(d) substantiation standards prior to the 1984 Act (such as use of an automobile for travel away from home or use of a yacht that is an entertainment, recreation, or amusement facility) remain subject to the section 274(d) substantiation standards for all taxable years ending after December 31, 1982.

¹¹Also, the provisions of the temporary regulations that prohibit an employer from including the entire value of the use of an automobile in the income of certain employees are revoked. Thus, an employer is permitted to charge the entire value of an employer-provided car to an employee as income and wages (for income tax, FICA, FUTA, and RRTA withholding purposes). The employer may then reimburse the employee for the business use of the car, or the employee may claim a deduction on the employee's income tax return for the business use of the car.

¹²The bill only revokes such regulations (issued prior to enactment) carrying out such amendments made by sections 179(b)(1)(C), (2), and (3) of the 1984 Act. Thus, the bill does not revoke any other regulations, such as regulations issued under sections 61 and 132 (relating to valuation).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

C. Repeal of Special Negligence Penalty (sec. 1(b) of the House bill and sec. 1(c) of the Senate amendment)

Present law

A special no-fault negligence penalty (Code sec. 6653(h)) applies to the portion of any understatement of tax attributable to failure to meet the substantiation requirements to section 274(d).

House bill

The House bill repeals this special negligence penalty, effective as if it had never been enacted.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment. The conference agreement provides that the Internal Revenue Code shall be applied and administered as if this special negligence penalty had never been enacted.

The conferees believe that repealing this special negligence penalty is needed to restore to the Internal Revenue Service and the courts discretion not to impose the negligence penalty for minor, inadvertent recordkeeping or computational errors. The conferees emphasize, however, that the regular negligence and fraud penalties will continue to be applicable if a taxpayer claims tax benefits that cannot be supported. The conferees are concerned that these regular negligence and fraud penalties have not been applied by the Internal Revenue Service or the courts in a substantial number of instances where their application would be fully justified.

In one Tax Court case, for example, the taxpayer had kept detailed mileage records, required by his employer for reimbursement purposes, that indicated that his business use was approximately five percent of total use. On his tax return, the taxpayer claimed 70 percent business use, with no records to justify this claim. The Tax Court properly allowed only five percent business use. The Court did not, however, impose a negligence or fraud penalty. The conferees believe that, in a case like this one, the regular negligence penalty should certainly be imposed, and that careful consideration should be given to imposing the civil fraud penalty.

In another Tax Court Case, the taxpayer had kept detailed records so that he could be reimbursed by his employer, but claimed on his tax return approximately 35,000 miles of business use beyond what his records demonstrated, without any justification. No negligence penalty was imposed. In another case, the taxpayer produced a diary purporting to justify the claimed deductions. The Tax Court called the diary a "fabrication" and said that the taxpayer "was not telling the truth." The Court still permitted him a deduction, and did not impose the regular negligence or civil fraud penalty. Finally, another taxpayer apparently claimed a deduction for business mileage that exceeded the total mileage shown on his odometer, but the Tax Court did not impose a negligence or civil fraud penalty.

These cases indicate that the regular negligence and civil fraud penalties are not being administered by either the Internal Revenue Service or the courts in the manner that the Congress intended when it initially enacted these penalties. While minor, inadvertent recordkeeping or computational errors should not lead to the imposition of a substantial penalty, the conferees believe that it is vital to the integrity of the tax system that honest taxpayers know that others who claim tax benefits far in excess of what can be justified will be subject to the negligence and fraud penalties.

D. Exceptions From Section 274(d) Rules and Exclusion From Income for Certain Vehicles (sec. 2(b) of the House bill and sec. 2 of the Senate amendment)

Present law

Substantiation rules

Temporary Treasury regulations provided that, except for vehicles used for commuting, vehicles of a type ordinarily not susceptible to personal use do not constitute listed property to which the section 274(d) substantiation requirements apply. The regulations cited, as examples of such vehicles that are not susceptible to personal use, trucks specially designed for specific business purposes (such as refrigerated delivery trucks), special-purposes farm vehicles (such as tractors and combines), cement mixers, and forklifts.

Income inclusion

The fair market value of an employer-provided fringe benefit, such as personal use by an employee of an employer-provided vehicle, is included in the employee's gross income, and in wages for purposes of withholding and FICA, FUTA, and RRTA taxes, unless excluded under a specific statutory provision of the Code (secs. 61(a)(1), 3121(a), 3231(e), 3306(b), 3401(a)).

House bill

Substantiation rules

The House bill exempts from the section 274(d) substantiation rules (as modified by the bill) any vehicle that, by reason of its nature, is not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes. This provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1985; thus, for 1985 the pre-1984 Act substantiation rules continue to apply with respect to such vehicles.

The committee report on the House bill lists the following vehicles as examples of vehicles exempted under the bill from the section 274(d) substantiation rules: (a) clearly marked police and fire vehicles (as described in the report); (b) delivery trucks with seating only for the driver, or only for the driver plus a folding jump seat; (c) flat-bed trucks; (d) any vehicle designed to carry cargo with a loaded gross vehicle weight over 14,000 pounds; (e) passenger buses used as such with a capacity of at least 20 passengers; (f) ambulances used as such or hearses used as such; (g) bucket trucks ("cherry pickers"); (h) cranes and derricks; (i) forklifts; (j) cement mixers; (k) dump trucks (including garbage trucks); (l) refrigerated trucks; (m) tractors; and (n) combines.

The report on the House bill also states that the committee recognizes that it may not have developed an exhaustive list of vehicles not susceptible to personal use. Therefore, the report states, the committee intends that the Internal Revenue Service is to expand this list through either regulations or revenue rulings to include any vehicles not included in the listing in the report that are appropriate for listing because by their nature it is highly unlikely that they will be used more than a very minimal amount for personal purposes.

The report also states that the committee did not generally exempt from the section 274(d) substantiation rules all pickup trucks and vans, because these vehicles can easily be used for personal purposes. Some taxpayers purchase these vehicles as substitutes for passenger sedans, and use them predominantly (or entirely) for personal purposes. On the other hand, however, the committee report recognized that this is not applicable to all vans. For example, a van that has only a front bench for seating, in which permanent shelving¹³ has been installed, that constantly carries merchandise, and that has been specially painted with advertising or the company's name, is a vehicle not susceptible to personal use.

Income inclusion

The committee report on the House bill states that it is appropriate for Treasury regulations to provide that under certain conditions all use by an employee of any employer-provided vehicle that is exempted under the House bill from the section 274(d) substantiation rules (see above) is excluded, as a working condition fringe benefit (sec. 132(a)(3)),¹⁴ from the employee's gross income, and from wages (and, where appropriate, from the benefit base) for purposes of FICA, FUTA, and RRTA taxes. Such exclusions pursuant to Treasury regulations are to be effective as of January 1, 1985.

Substantiation rules

The Senate amendment provides that the following vehicles are exempt from the section 274(d) substantiation rules (as modified by the amendment), and that any commuting or other personal use of such exempted vehicles is excluded from the user's gross income, and from wages (and, where appropriate, from the benefit base) for purposes of FICA, FUTA, and RRTA taxes, effective January 1, 1985:

(a) Vehicles required to be used as an integral part of the trade or business of an individual or of the employer (such as calling on customers or clients, making deliveries, or visiting job sites), so long as use in the trade or business is at least 75 percent of the vehicle's total use;

(b) Vehicles used by an employee for commuting, where the commuting is for a bona fide business purpose, where the employer does not permit the employee to make other personal use of the vehicle (other than de minimis use), and where use in the trade or business of the employer is at least 75 percent of total use; and

(c) Vehicles used by a governmental unit for police or other law enforcement purposes and vehicles used as an ambulance.

Income inclusion

The Senate amendment provides that any commuting or other personal use of such exempted vehicles (described above) is excluded from the user's gross income, and from wages (and, where appropriate, from the benefit base) for purposes of FICA, FUTA, and RRTA taxes, effective January 1, 1985.

¹³ It is intended that this shelving fill most of the cargo area.

¹⁴ Absent such a special exclusion, commuting use (or other personal use) by an employee of an employer-provided vehicle could not qualify as a working condition fringe benefit because the costs of commuting to and from work (or of other personal use of a vehicle) are nondeductible pursuant to Code section 262. See, e.g., Fausner v. Comm'r, 413 U.S. 838 (1973).

ITC and depreciation caps

The Senate amendment provides that police and law enforcement vehicles and ambulances placed in service after June 18, 1984 are exempt from the investment tax credit and depreciation limitations set forth in section 280F.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with the following modifications.

The conferees intend that school buses (as defined in Code section 4221(d)(7)(C)), qualified specialized utility repair trucks, and qualified moving vans, in addition to the list above (items (a) through (n) in the description of the House bill), are also to be examples of vehicles that, by reason of their nature, are not likely to be used more than a de minimis amount for personal purposes.

The term "qualified specialized utility repair trucks" means trucks (not including vans or pickup trucks) specifically designed and used to carry heavy tools, testing equipment, or parts where (1) the shelves, racks, or other permanent interior construction which has been installed to carry and store such heavy items is such that it is unlikely that the truck will be used more than a very minimal amount for personal purposes¹⁵ and (2) the employer requires the employee to drive the truck home in order to be able to respond in emergency situations for purposes of restoring or maintaining electricity, gas, telephone, water, sewer, or steam utility services.

The term "qualified moving vans" means vans used by professional moving companies in the trade or business of moving household or business goods where no personal use of the van is allowed other than for travel to and from a move site (or for de minimis use), where personal use for travel to and from a move site is an irregular practice (i.e., not more than five times a month on average), and where personal use is limited to situations in which it is more convenient to the employer, because of the location of the employee's residence, for the van not to be returned to the employer's business location.

Also, the conferees agreed that the Treasury Department has authority to issue regulations exempting from the section 274(d) substantiation rules, and from inclusion in income and wages, officially authorized uses of unmarked vehicles by law enforcement officers. To qualify for this exemption, the personal use must be authorized by the Federal, State, county, or local governmental agency or department that owns or leases the vehicle and employs the officer, and must be for law-enforcement functions such as undercover work or reporting directly from home to a stakeout or surveillance site, or to an emergency situation. Use of an unmarked vehicle for vacation or recreation trips cannot qualify as an authorized use. The term "law enforcement officer" means an individual who is employed on a full-time basis by a governmental unit that is responsible for the prevention or investigation of crime involving injury to persons or property, who is authorized by law to carry firearms and execute search warrants and also to make arrests (other than merely a citizen arrest), and who regularly carries firearms (except when it is not possible to do this because of the requirements of undercover work). The term "law enforcement officer" does not include Internal Revenue Service special agents.

¹⁵ An example of this would be permanent shelving that fills most of the cargo area.

The conference agreement also provides that if, for example, a municipal government ordinance requires that police officers driving clearly marked police cars who are on duty at all times must take the vehicle home when the employee is not on his or her regular shift, and prohibits any personal use (except for this commuting use) of the vehicle outside the city (i.e., outside the limit of the officer's arrest powers), then all use of the vehicle could be considered in such regulations as an excludable working condition fringe.

E. Withholding Election (sec. 3 of the House bill)

Present law

As authorized under the 1984 Act, temporary Treasury regulations have provided for withholding (or payment) of income and employment taxes with respect to taxable noncash fringe benefits, such as an employee's personal use of an employer-provided vehicle, on a quarterly basis (Code sec. 3501(b)).

House bill

The House bill provides that an employer may elect not to deduct and withhold income taxes with respect to the noncash fringe benefit attributable to an employee's personal use of a highway motor vehicle provided by the employer. An employer making this election must so notify the employee (at such time and in such manner as provided in Treasury regulations) and must include the fair market value of the benefit on the Form W-2 furnished to the employee. An electing employer must still withhold social security (or railroad retirement) taxes. This provision is effective as of January 1, 1985.

The committee report on the House bill states that the committee intends that the regulations are to be revised to allow an employer to elect, for income and employment tax purposes, to treat taxable fringe benefits (including personal use of employer-provided automobiles) as paid on a pay period, quarterly, semi-annual, or annual basis.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

F. Limitations on Investment Tax Credit and Depreciation for Automobiles (sec. 4 of the House bill)

Present law

The 1984 Act generally imposed limitations on the amount of investment tax credit and annual depreciation deductions that are allowed for an automobile placed in service or leased by the taxpayer after June 18, 1984.

For an automobile placed in service in 1984, (1) the investment tax credit is limited to $1,000; (2) depreciation in the first taxable year the automobile is placed in service is limited to $4,000; and (3) depreciation in any subsequent taxable year is limited to $6,000. For years after 1984, the limits are adjusted for inflation, as measured by the percentage growth of the automobile component of the Consumer Price Index for all Urban Consumers between October of the preceding year and October, 1983. The adjusted limits for any year apply only to automobiles placed in service in that year.

House bill

The limits on the amount of investment tax credit and annual depreciation deductions that may be claimed with respect to an automobile are reduced as follows under the House bill: (1) the investment tax credit is limited to $675; (2) depreciation in the first taxable year the automobile is placed in service is limited to $3,600 and (3) depreciation in any subsequent taxable year is limited to $5,400. For years after 1985, the reduced limits are indexed for inflation, as measured by the percentage growth of the automobile component of the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers between October of the preceding year and October, 1984. Adjustments for inflation are otherwise determined as under present law. The committee report states that the committee intends that the Secretary of the Treasury prescribe all limits adjusted for inflation.

The reduced limits are generally effective for property placed in service or leased by the taxpayer after April 2, 1985. However, property acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, is not subject to the reduced limits if it is placed in service before August 1, 1985; and property of which the taxpayer is the lessee pursuant to a binding contract in effect on April 1, 1985, and at all times thereafter, is not subject to the reduced limits if the taxpayer first uses the property under the lease before August 1, 1985.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with three modifications: (1) depreciation in the first taxable year is limited to $3,200; (2) depreciation in any subsequent taxable year is limited to $4,800; and (3) the reduced limits on the investment credit and depreciation are indexed for inflation until 1989. For automobiles placed in service in any year after 1988, the reduced limits are adjusted for the percentage increase of the automobile component of the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers between October of the preceding year and October, 1987. The conferees made these changes to the House bill to ensure that the conference agreement is revenue neutral.

G. New Regulations (sec. 5 of the House bill)

Present law

The Treasury Department has the authority to issue regulations under the Internal Revenue Code.

House bill

The House bill requires that the Treasury Department issue regulations to carry out the provisions of the House bill not later than October 1, 1985.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill. Because the conferees have delayed applicability of the section 274(d) substantiation rules to local travel, computers, etc., until January 1, 1986, the conferees believe that requiring regulations to be issued by October 1, 1985, will provide taxpayers with sufficient time to prepare to meet these requirements.

UNITED STATES-ISRAEL FREE TRADE AREA IMPLEMENTATION ACT OF 1985

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2268) to approve and implement the Free Trade Area Agreement between the United States and Israel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill, H.R. 2268, presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Agreement, signed on April 22, provides for the elimination of duties on all products traded between the two countries by January 1, 1995. It also limits Israel's use of nontariff trade restrictions and contains a commitment by Israel to eliminate its export subsidies on industrial goods and processed agricultural products.

This is the first free trade area entered into by the United States with any country. It is consistent with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and contains strict rules of origin to ensure that only products of the United States and Israel receive the benefits of duty free treatment.

Title IV of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 authorized the agreement with Israel and contains most of the provisions of U.S. law necessary for its administration. The main purpose of H.R. 2268 is to approve the agreement and provide authority the President presently does not have to proclaim the reductions and elimination of U.S. duties necessary to create the free trade area within 10 years. Under this bill, no reduction in current tariff protection can take place prior to duty elimination on January 1, 1995, on the articles which the U.S. International Trade Commission found to be most import sensitive. Any duty reductions on these items prior to that date would require Congress to grant further legislative authority.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Ways and Means has conducted a thorough review of the agreement and its implementation. U.S. exporters will benefit from elimination of high tariffs and the European preferential advantage in the Israeli market. Only 10 percent of U.S. imports from Israel currently dutiable will be affected, and existing import relief and unfair trade practice remedies will remain in place to protect domestic industries.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of H.R. 2268.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want first of all to offer congratulations to our distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, my colleague from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] who expeditiously moved this legislation along.

I want to salute simultaneously the distinguished gentleman from Florida who is our chairman of the Trade Subcommittee, and to congratulate all of the members of the committee for what is in my estimation a very forward looking, forward moving development in the area of trade.

At a time when, unfortunately, there are rumblings of protectionism worldwide and when there are indications that some nations have not yet understood the importance to consumers and to world commerce and man's material welfare, of free trade, this pioneering initiative is a giant step forward, even though the dollar volume that is involved in trade between Israel and the United States may be, relatively speaking, inconsequential. It is this kind of example, this kind of commitment, that I would hope, as we discuss further trade issues, we might be able to see replicated time and time again. I think it is important also for Americans to realize that from the standpoint of what is already duty-free coming into the United States from Israel it is about 90 percent of Israeli exports; whereas our duty-free exports to the State of Israel constitute only about 35 to 40 percent.

This is something that in the trade area is not one-sided, it is beneficial to this country as it will prove to be beneficial to the State of Israel.

I would urge all of our colleagues to support this resolution. It represents a significant bipartisan effort in the direction of not only improved economic conditions but I think amity and comity throughout the world.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just merely would like to compliment both gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI and Mr. CRANE], and say that I am in strong support of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I offer my support of this legislation designed to approve the Free Trade Area Agreement between our country and Israel. This effort is a step in the right direction in promoting free trade around the world. This agreement is long overdue, and I encourage my colleagues to support this important legislation.

This act approves and implements the agreement on the establishment of a free trade area between the United States and Israel. The act before us would strengthen economic relations between the United States and Israel for the mutual benefit of both countries. It would also foster the growth of free trade between our two great nations through the removal of trade barriers. This effort is clearly mutually beneficial to the economic well-being of our two countries.

Given America's strong support of Israel and the economic difficulties that small country has experienced, it is clearly in America's interest to help the economy of that nation. We should also remember that by helping Israel we are also helping ourselves. Many U.S. products exported to Israel will also enter under reduced tariffs. Current projections reveal that the United States will, in the long run, benefit greatly from this new program.

This free trade area approach in our dealings with Israel is a pilot case which can be used with other nations. I commend the administration for its support of this effort and for its commitment to encouraging free trade with other nations around the world.

I call upon my colleagues to offer their support of this worthwhile legislation.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Florida, Mr. SAM GIBBONS, who has done an outstanding job not only on this legislation but on other legislation that has been before him as well.

Mr. GIBBONS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman; I appreciate those kind remarks, and I hope I deserve them. I will try to deserve them, anyway.

Mr. Speaker, this is an important piece of legislation, not because of any precedent that it sets, but because of the very nature of it.

As Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI pointed out, this is the first time that any nation has entered into a free trade arrangement with the United States of America. If you look at it from an Israeli point of view it is really a big step. Most of their goods already enter the United States free of duty. In fact, the percentage of Israeli goods that enter this country subject to any duty are only one-half of 1 percent of all the goods that we import. But if you look at it from an Israeli point of view, what is happening on their side, massive changes will take place. Their economy will for the first time have to compete head on with the American economy. Their economy is conducted by 3½ million people in a very hostile environment, and it will have to make certain disciplinary changes that would be very tough for any economy to take.

Most of their economy has been protected from American competition by very high tariff barriers and it is to the wisdom of the leaders in Israel that I wish to pay tribute. They had to decide what was best for Israel and it is tough medicine.

Our competition in their economy will be very tough for them. In most of their industry, most of their agriculture has been protected for generations behind high tariff barriers. They are going to give up many of their subsidy programs that have allowed them to direct their courses of action and their products coming into our market will be subject to all the countervailing and any dumping provisions of our law.

So it is historic moment for both countries, much more historic for Israel than it is for the United States. I do not want anyone to think that this is just something that we are doing for Israel. During the preliminary negotiations on this package, I met with many of the Arab leaders, and I assured each one of them that if they wanted to enter into this kind of arrangement with the United States, I could not assure them of success, but I would introduce legislation for them and let them come in here and see what they can do trying to persuade the American Congress and the American economy that they were entitled to that same kind of duty free treatment.

So far I have not had any takers on that offer, but the offer still stands. I hope that we can build through this legislation a greater working arrangement with the people of this area of the world, particularly with Israel.

Perhaps it will lead to better working relationships with its neighbors out of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to commend certain portions of American industry and agriculture which will be challenged by this. We know that the Israelis are fierce competitors and are good producers of certain products. It took courage on the part of some American industries to agree to what has been agreed to here. But this is a historic moment.

Mr. Speaker, I want to pay tribute to the bipartisan nature of this legislation. It is supported equally by both parties in this Congress and by the White House. It is truly one of those things which we have all come together on.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate having been allowed to play a part in that coming-together.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MOORE], a great statesman on our committee and one of the most hard-working Members and senior Member of his delegation.

Mr. MOORE. I thank our distinguished ranking member of the Trade Subcommittee for this time.

Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, I think it is important that we understand what we are doing here and why. There are two reasons. The first reason is, of course, we are trying to help a good friend and ally, Israel. Israel is having a very difficult time, economically speaking. This action will help her help herself by expanding her economy in the area of free trade.

If a country is strong economically she can have a strong defense, she can take care of herself better, and there will be, perhaps, less aid needed from the United States in years to come. This is also a good way to reward a good friend and ally, a very strong democracy in a part of the world that always seems to be in some sort of chaos. There is one steady partner there, and that is Israel.

But there is a second reason. It also helps the United States and helps us in a very great way.

Right now our greatest trade competitor besides Japan; is the European Economic Community. They have had this arrangement with Israel now for a decade, which means anything made or grown in the European Economic Community can be sold more competitively than we can sell it to Israel.

So what we are doing here is finally giving the United States and our own producers the same benefits that the Europeans have been having for a decade in dealing with Israel.

We have been running the greatest trade deficit in the history of this country. This is a way to begin to reverse that. We have a positive balance of trade with Israel. This gives us the opportunity to open up new trade areas with them, sell them new products we cannot sell now because we do not have this agreement we are now implementing through this bill.

So I conclude by saying to my colleagues, there are two great reasons for supporting this legislation: First, it helps a good friend and ally; and second, it helps us.

We do not lose anything by this. We all gain. I believe it is most important that we pass it.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. I yield to my good friend the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, although the substance of this particular piece of legislation is important, I also want to underscore the process by which we arrived here today, and that I want to extend my compliments to the full committee chairman, Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, and the subcommittee chairman, Mr. GIBBONS, along with the ranking members from my side of the aisle in that this end product is important for its substance, but I would commend it to the rest of my colleagues to examine the way in which we arrived at this position, because the process I think sometimes is as important as the substance.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I want to highlight one aspect of the free trade area H.R. 2268 would implement because it is of extreme importance to many of my constituents. That, Mr. Speaker, is the treatment of import-sensitive commodities under this bill.

Under H.R. 2268, duties on products designated by the International Trade Commission as import-sensitive are frozen until 1995. It is understood that Presidential efforts to eliminate or modify duties on these products before 1995 require the President to first obtain the International Trade Commission's advice on whether these products remain import sensitive; as part of the Commission's reexamina-tion of these products' sensitivity, the Commission must give the affected industries an opportunity to present information on their status. Further, the President must secure from the Congress new authority to reduce duties before he can actually do so on these particular products during the 5 years preceding January 1, 1995.

Mr. Speaker, this approach to the International Trade Commission's handling of import-sensitive items is extremely important to my constituents. It is consistent with certain understandings I developed with former Ambassador William Brock last year, and its inclusion in the implementation of this free trade area with Israel is one of several reasons I find the H.R. 2268 to be acceptable.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to my hard-working and distinguished, knowledgeable colleague from the great State of Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL].

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important epochal agreement. It has been described well by previous speakers, and I endorse each of their statements as being important in describing what the agreement is going to do and what the reasons for putting the agreement forth in the first place were, and what the benefits are going to be to both of the countries involved.

I think what is more important is to talk a little bit about the process. The agreement did not spring full-blown from the head of the committee yesterday and suddenly appear on the Suspension Calendar. It has been years in negotiation between the two governments.

Last year, the Committee on Ways and Means, the Trade Subcommittee, began holding hearings. We included a trip to Israel. We consulted among ourselves, we passed a trade bill last fall which was signed by the President. As a result of that bill, the President and the executive department produced a negotiated agreement signed by both countries, and finally that agreement is being ratified by the bill that is before us today.

Under the procedures of the Trade Act of 1974 that bill is unamendable. For that reason, partly, the committee put it on the suspense calendar, because it could not be amended in any case, and we could avoid some hours of debate which are unnecessary because the bill has universal acclamation in both countries.

I think one of the most important reasons why we passed this bill was because the European Community had executed prior to our agreement a free trade agreement with the State of Israel, and had we not done this and laid this bill before us, American goods would have been at a disadvantage to European goods in the Israeli market; which is not a large market, but it is a sophisticated, high-grade market.

One other point I would like to make is that Israel is not a low-wage competitor. It is a highly industrialized state that pays relatively high wages in competition with the rest of the world, and it is one with which we trade to our mutual advantage without a great deal of bitterness, without a great deal of grievance on either side.

I hope the bill will be promptly passed.

Mr. Speaker, the agreement that we are implementing today, through passage of H.R. 2268, is the first of its kind that the United States has undertaken. It establishes a free trade zone between the United States and the State of Israel and, when fully in effect, will eliminate nontariff barriers and duties on all products traded between our two countries. The agreement is the result of months of negotiations between the two governments, with the close consultation of the Congress, and promises to be a model for trade expansion and facilitation now and in the future.

All commercial trade between the United States and Israel will be covered by the agreement. Many products traded between the two countries already enjoy duty-free treatment under the generalized system of preferences [GSP] because rates of duty are currently bound at zero as a result of earlier multilateral agreements. In 1982, the base year for this negotiation, about 90 percent of Israeli imports were duty free and about 35 percent of U.S. exports to Israel were also free of duties.

Therefore, the part of the negotiation involving tariff reductions covered only a fraction of overall trade, with the United States having the most to gain when all products become duty free. Still, there were some products on both sides which were felt to be potentially sensitive. Duty-free treatment for these products will be phased in under three separate staging arrangements until January 1, 1995.

The agreement also addresses some important nontariff issues. For example, Israel will give up any existing subsidy practices within 6 years and will not implement new ones. Furthermore, the conditions under which future Government help may be given to infant industries or because of balance-of-payments reasons are severely limited. The agreement provides for strict rules-of-origin requirements and prohibits restrictive import licensing schemes. However, import restrictions other than customs duties may be maintained for agriculture policy consideration, such as to enforce domestic price supports. Finally, the agreement establishes preferential Government procurement guidelines between the two countries by lowering from $156,000 to $50,000 the threshold for waiving "Buy America" restrictions.

This historic agreement reinforces the longstanding bilateral relationship and mutual friendship between the United States and Israel. It brings commercial trade between us to the highest possible level of preferential treatment.

Prior to this agreement, the European Community had forged ahead of us with a free trade agreement with Israel and as a result would have had an advantage in that market when its agreement was fully effective. Now we will be on equal footing in technical terms with the EC, and because of our traditional close ties with Israel the U.S. position should be further enhanced in practice.

I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this bill and the agreement it implements. I hope it will serve as an example for other such trade liberalizing efforts on either a bilateral or multilateral basis, in the future. It is a step forward at a time when there is shortsightedness and tremendous pressure to move backward.

Mr. Speaker, I urge unanimous approval of H.R. 2268.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I now yield such time as he may consume to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCHULZE], who also has invested much time and labor on behalf of this legislation.

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, at a time when the world's commitment to free trade is undergoing a period of testing and many countries are waiving in their resolve to move forward toward the goal of a free global marketplace, I believe that our support today for a United States-Israeli Free Trade Agreement will again underscore America's commitment to free trade principles. Indeed, it is my hope that this historic agreement will serve as an example of the mutual benefits which nations can derive from unrestricted trade. By removing the last vestiges of trade barriers, the United States and Israel stand to share in the economic progress that flows from a free and fair exchange of goods across national borders. As U.S. exports find new markets in Israel, Americans will find new opportunities in export-related jobs and help reduce the widening U.S. trade deficit. Likewise, Israel will continue to develop markets for its products in the United States and benefit from expanded economic ties to the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the United States-Israeli Free Trade Agreement as a model for future agreements with our trading partners. As the first comprehensive, reciprocal Free Trade Agreement concluded by the United States, I believe it will prove to be an unparalleled success and should set the stage for further bilateral agreements. Israel and the United States have from their inception served as enviable examples, of freedom and democracy in a world where these ideals are continually threatened. By taking the unprecedented step toward a Free Trade Agreement, our two nations can also show the world that free trade benefits everyone and likewise serves as an example to those countries who are tempted to forestall the growth of an open world market. I am proud therefore to have participated in the development of this agreement and look forward to working on similar agreements in the near future.

I would also like to commend the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GIBSONS] and the chairman of the full committee [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] for their efforts in this direction.

Mr. Speaker, may I further state that this agreement goes far beyond the paper and the efforts that are made between Israel and the United States. In my opinion, the world order of trade is not functioning as it should and this historic document we work on today could be a landmark piece of legislation, setting the tone for agreements between other nations, and eventually supplanting the world order of trade as we know it today.

We know we are under attack by nations dumping and using our relatively open market as a way of lessening their domestic unemployment. If we are successful in this type of agreement and use this as a base upon which to build, we can open the world markets and have a freer world trading order and bring more prosperity, not only to the U.S. market, but share that prosperity with the rest of the world.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to my good friend and mentor, the distinguished gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the distinguished committee chairman and the subcommittee chairman, the ranking minority members, particularly the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE] for bringing this measure to the floor at this time, a time when Israel sorely needs some help with their economy.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2268, legislation to approve and implement the Free Trade Area Agreement between the United States and Israel. The United States and Israel approved this agreement on April 22, 1985, and under the terms of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984, that agreement must be approved by Congress. H.R. 2268 provides that congressional approval.

Under the terms of the agreement reached between the two nations, rates of duties on products traded between the United States and Israel will be eliminated by January 1, 1995, thus establishing a bilateral free trade area as permitted under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Mr. Speaker, as the ranking Republican on the Foreign Affairs Committee Subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East, I have had the opportunity to follow closely the difficult steps that Israel is taking to get its troubled economy back on track. These are not easy undertakings, from either an economic or political perspective. However, the Israeli Government, labor, and the business sector have worked together to implement wage and price freezes, budget cuts, subsidy reductions, and strict budgetary guidelines concerning expenditures. Within this context, the establishment of a free trade area will be a significant approach to aid Israel's economy. For the United States, the relatively high tariff on close to one-half of American exports and the competitive disadvantage that the United States faces vis-a-vis the duty-free entry of European Community products will be eliminated.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 2268, so that we may profit from the expanded market opportunities between the United States and Israel that this measure will permit.

● Mr. McGRATH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2268, legislation which approves and implements a free trade arrangement between the United States and Israel.

Some concern has been voiced about the impact the agreement may have on certain American industries. I want to assure my colleagues that the Ways and Means Committee has carefully considered this aspect. I am convinced that the United States stands to gain much more from free access to the Israeli marketplace than any possible disadvantage certain U.S. manufacturers may face. For example, approximately 90 percent of Israeli goods already enter our country duty free, whereas close to one-half of American products encounter tariffs in Israel.

An important component of this agreement is the parity it will provide U.S. manufacturers. Israel has entered into a free trade arrangement with the European Community. Since nearly 70 percent of U.S. industrial exports to Israel compete directly with goods from these EC nations, H.R. 2268 will assure even footing for domestic manufacturers.

When then Ambassador Brock and Ariel Sharon signed the free trade agreement on April 22, the President noted that in his discussions with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres last fall, the free trade area legislation was agreed to be "instrumental in helping Israel put its economy back on the foundation of vigorous, self-sustaining growth."

In negotiating this country's first reciprocal free trade agreement, I believe we have conveyed a clear message to our trading partners that unlimited access to the U.S. market is possible with a positive attitude toward trade negotiations, such as Israel has maintained.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2268 and yield back the balance of my time.●

● Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2268, to approve and implement the Free Trade Area Agreement between the United States and Israel. I was pleased when the authorization legislation received such overwhelming support last year and I am optimistic about the chances of success for this legislation.

The primary purpose of this act is to strengthen and develop economic relations between the United States and Israel through the establishment of a free trade zone. I want to emphasize that the United States and Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act is mutually advantageous. The agreement will bolster trade relations and provide each country with significant economic benefits.

Not only is this legislation beneficial from an economic standpoint, but it is good foreign policy as well. Israel—the only democracy in the Middle East—is a vital ally to the United States. We are all aware of the severity of Israel's exports necessary to ensure her economic growth and well-being.

It is worth noting that the European Community will have lifted all trade duties with Israel by 1989. The United States will be at a distinct trade disadvantage if we do not follow suit. I am convinced that the establishment of the Free Trade Area Agreement between the United States and Israel will have an immediate positive effect on the economies of both nations.

In sum, this legislation will give a boost to the economies of both countries while making a significant contribution to the preservation of democracy in the Middle East. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important legislative initiative.●

● Mr. LUKEN. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to lend my support to H.R. 2268, the United States-Israel Free Trade Area Implementation Act.

I strongly believe that a free trade area with Israel will be in the economic and security interests of both the United States and Israel. Such an agreement will allow U.S. exporters to maintain and even increase their current 20-percent share of the Israeli import market, thereby generating additional jobs for Americans.

A free trade area also will be of immense value to Israel by ensuring the kind of duty-free access to the U.S. market that Israel needs in order to increase her exports and restructure her economy. A free trade area also will help Israel continue to develop her high technology industry, in which she holds a comparative advantage.

Israel is America's closest ally in the Middle East, sharing our commitment to freedom and democracy, and American opposition to Soviet expansion. An economically strong Israel is better able to defend itself and thus protect both its own and U.S. interests.

This historic agreement, the first of its kind with any nation, will provide American exporters with duty-free access to an $8 billion market in which they are currently disadvantaged because of high duties and a tariff disparity resulting from a trade agreement between the European Economic Community and Israel.

The establishment of a free trade area between the United States and Israel will be instrumental in reaffirming and strengthening the common bonds we share with our only democratic ally in the Middle East, Israel.●

● Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in enthusiastic support of H.R. 2268, legislation to establish a free trade zone between the United States and Israel, which commits both our governments to phase out duties on all products in bilateral trade within 10 years.

Last year, Mr. Speaker, I was pleased to vote for H.R. 5377, a bill which gave the President the authority to negotiate a free trade agreement with Israel. Last month, April 22, 1985, the President signed a free trade agreement with Israel, and this legislation, when approved by this House and the Senate, will enact the free trade area into law.

I am pleased to support this legislation for two major reasons. First, Israel is our most loyal ally in the Middle East, and our two countries commit a great deal of our resources to mutually beneficial trade. Yet, about one-half of U.S. goods are subject to Israeli tariffs, and though about 90 percent of Israeli products currently enter the United States duty-free, Israel will soon be graduated out of its current trade status under the new revision of the Generalized System of Preferences. It is clear that the respective economies of our two countries will benefit from passage of this legislation.

In addition to helping our good friend and trusted ally, I would hope that passage of this historic legislation would help relieve the pressure now felt by our allies from those who would advocate protectionist trade policies. This United States-Israel agreement is the first free trade agreement entered into the United States, and I hope that it is not the last. Free trade bolsters the economies of all nations involved, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that both we and our trading partners are able to improve our economies, and our working relationships as a whole, through increased trade.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for this important and timely legislation.●

● Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, I fully support H.R. 2268, legislation to implement a free trade area agreement with the Government of Israel. It has been a year and a half since President Reagan and former Prime Minister Shamir agreed to begin negotiations on this precedent-setting proposal. The Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 authorized the President to conclude an agreement with Israel providing for the reduction or elimination of tariffs and nontariff barriers. In my view his negotiators have negotiated well for us. The agreement is a landmark in the history of U.S. trade policy and should be approved by this body without delay.

I am especially heartened to have an opportunity to vote on this bill because it will put the United States back in a position of leading the further expansion of world trade. Recently we have heard a high degree of inward-looking sentiment. I continue to believe it is a mistake for us to focus on protecting industries that can only be competitive at the expense of the taxpayers and consumers through quotas, tariffs, and subsidies.

The acceleration of our economic growth and that of the world depends on a continued reduction in tariff barriers. The law of comparative advantage tells us that economic welfare will be enhanced if each nation specializes in the production of items that it can produce, in relative terms, most efficiently. Restating this basic principle is a reminder of all that the United States and Israel have to gain from a free trade area.

In passing H.R. 2268 we will be eliminating uncertainty and allowing entrepreneurs producing for international trade to invest in plants and equipment and know that their efforts will not prove fruitless due to an unexpected trade barrier. Efficiency, quality, and price will be the main determinants of success in an environment with more jobs and more opportunities for everyone. Expanded economic activity will not occur without adjustments in certain less competitive sectors, but it is the Israelis' who have the most to lose in this respect. The risks to our economy are relatively small by comparison.

For example, about 90 percent of Israeli exports to the United States already enter the United States on a duty-free basis while 40 percent of U.S. exports to Israel are still covered by relatively high tariffs. The United States has a $400 million trade surplus with Israel even excluding military purchases. In cases where products were determined to be especially sensitive, duty-free treatment will be phased in, under three separate staging arrangements. Therefore, the part of the negotiation involving tariff reductions covered only a fraction of overall trade, with the United States having the most to gain when all products become duty-free.

Israel, on the other hand, is facing a severe economic crisis which includes the burden of high defense expenditures, a huge foreign debt and a crippling rate of inflation. Yet the people of Israel are prepared to face the unregulated competition of some of America's most accomplished traders. For Israel to embark on this experiment takes a great deal of courage that should be recognized.

The United States achieved significant concessions on a number of troublesome nontariff issues as well. The Israelis pledged to phase out all subsidy programs over the next 6 years. Market protections for infant industries or for balance of payments purposes are strictly limited by the agreement. Also U.S. exporters will no longer have to face burdensome import licensing requirements when doing business in Israel.

In short, a United States-Israel Free Trade Area will further the economic and political goals of both nations. Israel is America's closest ally in the Middle East, sharing our commitment to freedom and democracy and our opposition to Soviet encroachments in the area. Israeli consumers have already proven their preference for American exports. Through this bill, Israel will be able to increase its own exports, strengthen its economy, and decrease its dependence on foreign aid. In agreeing to accept this challenge in mutual cooperation, Israel joins the United States in setting an example the economic benefits of which will not go unnoticed by other forward-looking nations with which we trade. ●

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLEMAN of Texas). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2268.

The question was taken.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

COMMENDING PRESIDENT DUARTE AND PARTICIPATING ORGANIZATIONS ON RECENT VACCINATION CAMPAIGN IN EL SALVADOR

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speakers, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 145) to commend President Jose Napoleon Duarte and the participating international humanitarian organizations for their compassion, vision, and leadership in carrying out the recent vaccination campaign in El Salvador, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. Res. 145

Whereas President Jose Napoleon Duarte has served the people of El Salvador with dedication, honor, and distinction during turbulent political times since his democratic election to office in 1984;

Whereas El Salvador's children, if unprotected, would be highly vulnerable to horrible, crippling diseases such as pertussis, tetanus, diphtheria, measles, and polio;

Whereas less than 20 percent of children in the developing world are immunized against these diseases and as a result 5,000,000 children die and an additional 5,000,000 are mentally or physically disabled each year;

Whereas in El Salvador, a comprehensive effort to immunize that nation's children has not occurred since 1975, thereby leaving a generation of children, approximately 900,000, exposed to life-threatening but preventable diseases;

Whereas beginning in February 1985, President Jose Napoleon Duarte initiated and coordinated a thorough, well-organized, and effective immunization program in El Salvador on three separate days (February 3, March 3, and April 21, 1985), thereby immunizing and protecting the lives of more than 300,000 Salvadoran children, with more to be inoculated during a comprehensive follow up campaign;

Whereas several organizations and agencies such as the United Nations Children's Fund, United States Agency for International Development, the Roman Catholic Church, Project Hope, the International Committee of the Red Cross, the International Rotary, the Pan-American Health Organization, and others, lent their financial support, expertise, and technical assistance, thereby contributing to the success of the vaccination campaign;

Whereas on each of those three days, this humanitarian project resulted in a near cease-fire so that more than 18,000 Salvadoran volunteers and medical staff could safely participate in the immunization program which took place at more than 2,000 sites throughout the country;

Whereas the United Nations Children's Fund, and the many other organizations leading the fight to save children, have embarked upon a campaign to immunize all the world's children by 1990; and

Whereas President Duarte's successful project in El Salvador will serve as a model for similarly constructed programs throughout the developing world so that the goal of worldwide child immunization may be achieved: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That on the occasion of his May 1985 visit to the United States, the House of Representatives applauds President Jose Napoleon Duarte and the Government of El Salvador and expresses its deep appreciation for his effective leadership in the campaign to immunize and protect the children of El Salvador.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. YATRON] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BROOMFIELD] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. YATRON].

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Resolution 145, which commends President Duarte and the participating international humanitarian organizations for their compassion, vision, and leadership in carrying out the recent vaccination campaign in El Salvador.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution, sponsored by our friend from New Jersey, Congressman SMITH seeks to enhance international awareness on what has been a miraculous undertaking by President Duarte, UNICEF, PAHO, and the Agency for International Development; a major, national campaign to immunize the children of El Salvador.

Mr. Speaker, the American public and the rest of the international community are under the impression that U.S. policy in Central America is limited to military involvement. The recent success of this immunization campaign demonstrates that this is just not the case.

Through a coordinated effort by UNICEF, USAID and several humanitarian organizations, President Duarte spearheaded a national campaign which resulted in over 200,000 children being immunized against several deadly diseases including diphtheria, polio, and the measles. The last vaccination drive took place on April 20.

The Subcommittee on Human Rights and international organizations has been very active in promoting the child survival revolution by authorizing money for the child survival fund and by increasing our contributions to UNICEF. The amended text of the resolution, which was agreed to in the Foreign Affairs Committee, reflects the fact that the Pan American Health Organization rendered an invaluable service in implementing this national campaign.

Given that President Duarte is due to arrive in Washington within the month, I think congressional passage of this resolution would demonstrate our support for his valiant efforts to save the lives of hundreds of thousands of children. Further, it would send a message to the international community that the United States is committed to fostering humanitarian relief and social development in El Salvador.

Mr. Speaker, it is also important to note that the Catholic Church in El Salvador played a vital role in this campaign by negotiating a temporary cease-fire between the guerrillas and the Government so that thousands of children in the rural countryside of this war-torn nation could benefit from this program. I want to commend Congressman SMITH for his leadership in this area; he witnessed the last immunization drive in El Salvador and has been an outspoken leader in promoting the child survival revolution in the Congress. I strongly urge our colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I offer my support for this resolution commending President Jose Napoleon Duarte and the concerned international humanitarian organizations for their outstanding work in the Salvadoran vaccination campaign.

Earlier this year, President Duarte initiated a massive health program in El Salvador which immunized more than 300,000 Salvadoran children. A followup inoculation program will add thousands more to the list of children who will be protected against the ravages of the many diseases prevalent in that part of Central America. President Duarte effectively coordinated this effort with numerous international organizations including the U.N. Children's Fund, and others.

Because of the unprecedented success of this vaccination campaign, El Salvador's program will serve as a model for programs in the developing world.

Once again, President Duarte has shown his leadership and his deep interest in the welfare of his people. Through his efforts, future generations of Salvadoran children will live normal healthy lives. The world needs more leaders of President Duarte's stature. He had displayed leadership, energy and vision in his service to the people of El Salvador, and has moved boldly to bring peace to that war-torn nation.

I am certain that my colleagues will join me in offering our praises for President Duarte's noteworthy accomplishments both in the political sphere as well as in the area of improving the well-being of the Salvadoran people.

My colleagues, I am certain that you will join me in supporting House Resolution 145.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], the principal sponsor of this legislation.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding time to me, and I appreciate the kind remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. YATRON], the chairman of the subcommittee, as well as the remarks of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BROOMFIELD].

Mr. Speaker, a couple of Sundays ago, on April 21, I went to El Salvador to observe and participate in a mass child immunization campaign organized and personally led by President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

I was joined in El Salvador by Mark Tavlarides, staff director of the Subcommittee on Human Rights, a very professional and hard working member of the Foreign Affairs' Committee staff, and while in San Salvador, met up with many distinguished people including Dr. Albert Sabine, developer of the oral polio vaccine a quarter of a century ago.

House Resolution 145 recognizes and salutes President Duarte for his vision, compassion and leadership in leading this campaign. The resolution also commends numerous agencies and organizations for their crucial role in the success of the program.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it is extremely important for this Congress to appropriately cite the dynamic leadership exhibited by President Duarte in the immunization program. It is estimated that up to 300,000 Salvadoran children were immunized or are in the process of being immunized and thereby protected from painful debilitating and even fatal diseases such as whooping cough, diphtheria, tetanus, measles, and polio. Significantly, tens of thousands more will be vaccinated in a follow up effort. It is clear, though, that without President Duarte's leadership, there would not have been an immunization campaign in El Salvador.

Mr. Speaker, the campaign was a model of good planning, effective management, and interagency cooperation. Key to the vaccine campaign's success was the participation by U.S. Agency for International Development UNICEF, PAHO, and several other agencies and organizations. I am very proud of our Government's contribution to this humanitarian effort. Very proud indeed. It underscores our commitment to the well-being and safety of the people of El Salvador, especially her children.

I would also like to point out to my colleagues that there are many individuals who are much deserving of praise including James Grant, Executive Director of UNICEF and a true champion of children, Dr. Benjamin Valdez, Minister of Health in El Salvador, and Dr. Carlyle Guerra De Macedo, Director of the Pan American Health Organization. These are just a few, there are obviously many others.

Also, Mr. Speaker, the Roman Catholic Church, in a further manifestation of its sacred mission to the world, put its full weight and resources behind the campaign and even mediated a cease-fire so the children living in contested areas of El Salvador could be immunized and thus protected.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the major obstacle to the immunization of all the world's children is not expense—it is relatively inexpensive—nor is it lack of interest on the part of volunteers and medical staff. Indeed, the El Salvador program benefited from more than 20 international and local organizations as well as more than 18,000 Salvadoran volunteers and medical staff.

Instead, Mr. Speaker, the chief problem lies in the lack of leadership at the highest echelons of governments. With proper leadership at the top, like in El Salvador, millions of children could be saved. It is so sad and regrettable, Mr. Speaker, that only 20 percent of the world's families are aware of and take advantage of the new low-cost immunizations which could protect their children. As a result, more than 5 million children die and a further 5 million more are mentally and physically disabled each year from these easily preventable diseases.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, President Duarte provided an inspiring example to the rest of the developing world, as to how to close the gap between available immunization services and children actually immunized in a country. In El Salvador, hundreds of thousands were in need of vaccines to protect them from these chronic diseases, and now many are protected. Despite the wartorn status of his country, President Duarte had the vision and courage to lead a nationwide effort to protect his country's children. We must encourage other leaders in the developing world to do likewise.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to report to my colleagues that few people in El Salvador were unaware of the national immunization campaign. With President Duarte leading the project, radio stations, churches, banks, health groups, community based organizations, and schools all participated in the promotion, as well as, the implementation of the vaccine campaign. By establishing conveniently located vaccination points—over 2,000 in El Salvador—and by coordinating specific dates and times, President Duarte ensured that more parents would be aware of the immunization program.

Thus, thousands of El Salvadoran children were immunized and an overwhelming percentage of children returned to receive all three doses which are needed for these vaccinations to be effective. Mass inoculations were provided on February 3, March 3, and April 21.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that President Duarte's effort in El Salvador will serve as a model for similarly needed programs throughout the developing world. El Salvador is a success story, an inspiration and an example to be duplicated.

I would like to take this opportunity in closing to thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Rights and international organizations, Mr. YATRON, and ranking member, Mr. SOLOMON, for their strong support and original cosponsorship of this resolution. I would also like to thank the distinguished chairman of the full Foreign Affairs Committee, Mr. FASCELL, and ranking member, Mr. BROOMFIELD, for their support. Finally I would like to thank Mr. BARNES, chairman of the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs and ranking member Mr. LAGOMARSINO and all 67 House Members who cosponsored this resolution.

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the ranking minority member on the committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, of which I am pleased to be a cosponsor. And I also commend the gentleman from New Jersey for his leadership on this resolution and for his taking the initiative to go down to El Salvador to see firsthand the immunization program; and also Chairman YATRON, and staff member Mark Tavlarides.

Mr. Speaker, the successful completion of a three-stage vaccination campaign in El Salvador has been one of the most dramatic and positive developments in the recent history of that troubled country. I am sure that much of the credit for this success goes to President Duarte. His wide leadership is supported by an overwhelming majority of the Salvadoran people and is instrumental in contributing to the stabilization of the country, to the greater observance of human rights, and to progress in meeting the needs of the people.

There are those of us in Congress, particularly on this side of the aisle, who are often critical of overwrought congressional resolutions that seem only to focus on problems—resolutions that criticize friends and allies of the United States. And so I am particularly proud to support a resolution like this, which congratulates a good friend and ally on a job well done. What a testimony it is for the world to see a democratically elected leader achieve a cease-fire in a time of civil insurrection in order to achieve a humanitarian purpose. Would to God the unelected tyrants in Ethiopia, for example, show the same compassion toward those starving people in the northern provinces of their country.

And so I strongly support this resolution. I commend Mr. SMITH for offering it. And I urge its unanimous adoption by the House.

● Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 145, to commend President Duarte and the several international humanitarian organizations on their recent mass vaccination campaign in El Salvador. I would also like to commend the sponsor of the resolution, our colleague, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey for bringing this important matter to our attention. I also want to thank Mr. YATRON, chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Rights and International Organizations and Mr. BARNES, chairman of the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs for the expeditious way in which they agreed to move this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, President Duarte and the international humanitarian organizations that participated deserve credit for arranging a 3-day period during which over 300,000 Salvadoran children were inoculated against killing and crippling diseases that confront El Salvador and the rest of the underdeveloped world. This successful project will serve as an example to the rest of the world as to what can be accomplished to improve health standards even under the most trying circumstances.

I would like to take particular note of the excellent work of the Pan American Health Organization, both in the immunization program in El Salvador and elsewhere in the region. Through the efforts of the Pan American Health Organization, the number of cases of poliomyelitis in Central and South America have been substantially reduced. Of equal importance for the health of the people, the Pan American Health Organization will soon launch a campaign to eradicate the indigenous transmission of wild polio virus by the year 1990. This program will require the same type of public and private cooperation which made the immunization in El Salvador so successful and deserves the active support of the governments of this hemisphere.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of House Resolution 145.●

Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. YATRON] that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, House Resolution 145, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the resolution just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Debate has been concluded on all motions to suspend the rules.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair will now put the question on each motion on which further proceedings were postponed in the order in which that motion was entertained.

Votes will be taken in the following order: H.R. 2268, and House Resolution 145, both by the yeas and nays.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic votes after the first such vote in this series.

UNITED STATES-ISRAEL FREE TRADE IMPLEMENTATION ACT OF 1985

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 2268.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSENKOWSKI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2268, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 422, nays 0, answered "present" 3, not voting 9, as follows:

Mr. BONIOR of Michigan changed his vote from "yea" to "present."

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLEMAN of Texas). Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device may be taken on the additional motion to suspend the rules on which the Chair has postponed further proceedings.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 2246

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a cosponsor of the bill, H.R. 2246.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 1403

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a cosponsor of the bill, H.R. 1403.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 1229

Mr. OLIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of the bill, H.R. 1229.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

VIETNAM VETERANS RECOGNITION DAY

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 128) to designate May 7, 1985, as "Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House the minority has no objection to the legislation being considered.

● Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my distinguished colleague from New York [Mr. GARCIA], and the other members of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee for bringing up Senate Joint Resolution 128, which would designate today, May 7, "Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day."

On May 2, I introduced an identical measure, House Joint Resolution 276, which was also referred to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. I am pleased to see this great body consider a measure with the same intent.

Our Vietnam veterans had to readjust to a society that, as a whole, found it difficult to understand their experiences and their needs. The Committee on Veterans' Affairs and the Congress have attempted, quite successfully I believe, to ease this readjustment by providing a comprehensive benefits program designed specifically for Vietnam veterans.

Setting aside this special day, the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam era, to recognize our Vietnam veterans is a very appropriate and important step. They have earned our respect and our praise for their noble efforts and their sacrifices in a country on the other side of the world.

"Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day" makes a major statement. It emphasizes that we are listening and that we do care. I'm proud to give my strong support to this measure, and I know it will go a long way toward increasing the public's awareness of the Vietnam veteran and his concerns. ●

● Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, 10 years ago today, with the fall of Saigon, our Nation's longest war came to a final close. The anniversary of that ending is a time for reflection for all Americans, and our reflections of the war are as many and varied as we are.

Indeed, the war in Southeast Asia was emotional, misunderstood, divisive, and it often pitted honorable people one against the other. There is one thought, however, Mr. Speaker, one reflection on the war that I believe is universal.

It is that all Americans are grateful for the honorable service and considerable sacrifices made by the almost 9 million men and women who served their country in uniform during this period. And while I know my fellow citizens would concur in what I have to say, I want to take this opportunity to express my personal thanks to each and every one of these fine Americans.

Vietnam veterans have recently been the subject of a poll by ABC and the Washington Post. Its results are most interesting, but in my view, not surprising. The poll clearly indicates that most of these veterans are better citizens because of their military experience. It shows, of course, that scars of war often remain but that these fine individuals have triumphed over social, economic, and educational difficulties to become some of our finest citizens. The fact is, in my view, they have always been among our finest citizens.

There is no question that special needs do exist among Vietnam veterans, and as a member of the House Committee on Veterans Affairs, I am proud to be involved in the effort to meet those needs through necessary legislation and specific Federal programs. Indeed, it is our duty to meet those needs. However, in our recognition of the needs of some Vietnam veterans, let us rise above the oft-repeated critical statements concerning the ability of these young Americans to readjust to civilian life after their service in Vietnam. The ABC-Post poll puts to rest some of these critical myths about Vietnam veterans and it is my hope that this country will finally realize that Vietnam veterans deserve to be recognized for their service, their strength and their successes as well as their needs.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I failed to mention a group of Vietnam veterans on whom the poll could not make comment, a group who cannot hear our thanks today, a group for whom there has been no homecoming. I am speaking, of course, of the 2,477 American servicemen still missing in Southeast Asia. As we commemorate an end to war, let us renew our commitment to gaining a full accounting for each and every servicemember whose fate remains unknown. Until this is achieved, there can be no end to the war for these men and for their families.

Mr. Speaker, Vietnam veterans willingly served their country when their country called. They did their duty as did millions of other Americans who were called to arms in previous wars. I salute these veterans as noble representatives of all that is good in America. Their patriotism and valor flows through the veins of all our citizens.

Vietnam veterans, like their comrades before them, have served us well and they deserve our everlasting thanks. May that be the lesson of Vietnam that is foremost in our minds on this 10th anniversary.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. ●

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. Res. 128

Whereas over three million American fighting men and women who served in the Vietnam theater for over a decade acquitted themselves in the highest traditions of American service personnel;

Whereas more than fifty-seven thousand Americans lost their lives there, and an additional two thousand four hundred Americans are still listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia;

Whereas thousands of Vietnam veterans still suffer physically and psychologically from the effects of the war, including many who are permanently disabled;

Whereas regardless of the ultimate verdict of history about United States involvement in that war, the service that patriotic Americans performed in the Vietnam theater is deserving of continued and reemphasized grateful recognition;

Whereas the Nation is now beginning to review in a more dispassionate and even-handed manner the history of our involvement in the Vietnam conflict;

Whereas for too long the Nation failed to honor the service of and respond appropriately to the needs of Vietnam veterans and was instead anxious to place the Vietnam experience behind it; and

Whereas May 7, 1985, marks the tenth anniversary of the official end of America's involvement in the conflict in Vietnam: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That May 7, 1985, is designated "Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day" and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such a day with appropriate activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL CORRECTIONAL OFFICERS WEEK

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 64) to designate the week beginning May 5, 1985, as "National Correctional Officers Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation being considered.

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANSEN. I would be happy to yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 100, a resolution to declare the week of May 5, 1985, as "National Correctional Officers Week," and its Senate companion which is before us today, Senate Joint Resolution 64.

As sponsor of the House version of the resolution, I want to express my appreciation and that of our Nation's correctional officers to all of our colleagues who have added their names as cosponsors of this resolution which points to the vital significance of correctional officers. I respectfully request unanimous consent that the names of all of the cosponsors be printed in the RECORD after my remarks.

We passed a similar resolution during the 98th Congress, and it led to ceremonies throughout the country which honored correctional officers for their important work. I was privileged to personally participate in a ceremony at the Great Hall of the Department of Justice along with Chief Justice Warren Burger and many uniformed members of correctional officers from throughout the country.

Correctional officers perform an essential task that few of us would be able to perform. Our criminal justice system operates under the premise that with proper guidance those who have been found guilty of criminal charges can be helped to return to a lawful way of life. This system breaks down without correctional officers, because if they are not there to shepherd this process, who will be?

Correctional officers have often been portrayed as cruel, as uncaring, and in some instances worse than those individuals with whom they are charged. Isn't it amazing what we are led to believe simply because it makes a more tantalizing plot?

If it is anything that has impressed me during my work on this resolution, it is that correctional officers are a strong opposite to the Hollywood version. They are very caring. They often take more grief than they have to take. They are committed to their profession, as is any true professional. And, sadly, they are not sufficiently appreciated. It was this element more than anything else that led me to sponsoring this resolution.

Over the past few months, my office has been contacted by correctional and police associations from throughout the country who are working very hard to make this commemorative week come about. Several States have planned commemorations of their own based upon the expectation of the passage of this resolution, and I am certainly pleased that we will not disappoint them.

We have been faced with several important issues in recent weeks, and I know that there will be some among us who will say that we shouldn't spend our time on commemorative resolutions of this type. We are a body of many views, and the one I have just described is certainly not mine. I believe that it is important that we pause occasionally to say "thank you" to Americans who perform tasks important to our society, and this is one of those times.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of our colleagues to support the passage of this resolution, and thereby House Joint Resolution 100, a resolution declaring the week of May 5, 1985, as "National Correctional Officers Week."

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I will not object, but I also take this time to thank the chairman of this committee and the ranking Republican for the expeditious handling of this very important matter. As one who represents many correctional officers, I know well the service they render in their States, their localities, and in the country.

Mr. Speaker, I want to voice my support for Senate Joint Resolution 64. This resolution will establish National Correctional Officers Week.

We have honored many Americans in this body, and the men and women who serve the public each day in prisons across our country deserve this small gesture of thanks.

Who among us has not called for a crackdown on crime? We should realize that the cost of safe streets is additional burdens on the people working in our correctional institutions.

And the corrections officers already have a tough job. The prisons are overcrowded. Racial tensions, bad enough on the outside, are intensified in close quarters. The corrections officers work in a constant state of alert, a constant state of danger.

When we do hear about corrections officers, it is when the pressures burst within a prison and they are hurt, or worse.

This resolution is long overdue. We should recognize the contribution corrections officers make each day to the safety of all of us. They do a tough job well, day in and day out, without applause or reward. It is time for us to say thank you.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, this past weekend marked the beginning of National Correctional Officers Week. I rise today to encourage my colleagues to recognize and pay tribute to this exceptional group of professionals.

As a former law enforcement official, I know of the unique pressures and frustrations felt by correctional officers. Their responsibilities are greatly different, yet no less important, than the policemen who patrol our streets. Correctional officers usually handle convicted felons restricted to a confined area. They must control violence in this environment, plus promote rehabilitation and prepare prisoners for release.

I am proud to join the Nation in honoring our courageous correctional officers. The Texas Department of Corrections has 6,000 dedicated correctional officers who epitomize the attitude, morale, and professionalism set forth in the declaration of National Correctional Officer's Week. They are responsible for the daily operations to include custody and control of 38,000 inmates, incarcerated in 27 major institutions throughout the State of Texas.

Texas correctional officers are committed to exerting a positive influence and taking a national leadership role in promoting continued professional growth, education, and training for all correctional officers to meet the increasing challenges and demands of their profession. These Texans serve as national role models in developing and implementing innovative standards for correctional services and methods for measuring compliance. They will continue to significantly contribute to shaping national correctional policies and procedures.

As a member of the House Armed Services Committee, I would also like to pay tribute to the men and women who serve as correctional officers in the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps. Over 5,000 correctional officers work in military prisons around the world. Additionally, the military correctional divisions of the armed services are continually improving themselves through professional affiliation in the Military Corrections Committee of the American Correctional Association and, as such, deserves our gratitude for the superb job done by the correctional officers who protect our servicemen and women.

The qualities I have attributed to the correctional officers of Texas are applicable to their colleagues across America. On this occasion, I would like to congratulate all correctional officers and encourage them to maintain their strong performance in a difficult job.

Mr. GRAY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Senate Joint Resolution 64, the National Correctional Officers Week. The resolution will name the week of May 5 as National Correctional Officers Week.

Mr. Speaker, there are about 300,000 correctional officers nationally. These officers are dedicated, hard-working professionals who perform the task necessary to an orderly society.

They often risk their lives in daily performance of work, working under conditions which would be difficult for most of us to bear.

Mr. Speaker, I have a bill in to make murder of correctional officers by inmates a capital offense.

We are proud of all correctional officers but in particular the correctional officers at the Marion Federal Prison and our State institutions. Thank you. ●

● Mr. ADDABBO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in designating the week of May 5 as National Correctional Officers Week.

The men and women on the front lines of our correctional system do a very difficult and often thankless task. As we are all too accustomed to hearing, dangerous and overcrowded conditions exist in most of this country's prisons. From time to time, this situation has led to violent confrontations between prisoners and correctional officers.

We have justifiably embarked on a national policy aimed at removing violent criminals from our society. More of them are behind bars today than ever before and for the first time in two decades, the crime rate is on the decline.

The job done by prison guards and parole officers is vital if we are to be successful in our national war on crime. I urge unanimous approval for Senate Joint Resolution 64 in recognition of the important work done by this dedicated group of people. ●

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 64

Whereas American correctional officers who work in our jails and prisons are currently responsible for the containment and control of over six hundred thousand prisoners;

Whereas correctional officers must protect inmates from violence while encouraging them to develop skills and attitudes that can help them become productive members of society following their release;

Whereas the morale of correctional officers is affected by many factors, and the public perception of the role of correctional officers is more often based upon dramatization rather than factual review;

Whereas good job performance requires correctional officers to absorb the adverse attitudes present in confinement while maintaining themselves as professionals in order to have their actions appreciated and accepted by the public at large;

Whereas correctional officers had been similarly honored by many States and localities in 1984;

Whereas correctional officers had been similarly honored by a similar joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled in 1984; and

Whereas the attitude and morale of correctional officers is a matter worthy of serious congressional attention: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning May 5, 1985, hereby is designated "National Correctional Officers Week" and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL DIGESTIVE DISEASES AWARENESS WEEK

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 94) to designate the week beginning May 12, 1985, as "National Digestive Diseases Awareness Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation being considered.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 94

Whereas digestive diseases represent one of the most serious health problems of the Nation in terms of human discomfort and pain, mortality, personal expenditures for treatment, and working hours lost;

Whereas digestive diseases rank among other forms of illness as the third largest burden on the economy of the Nation;

Whereas 20,000,000 Americans suffer from chronic digestive diseases and disorders, and more than 14,000,000 cases of acute digestive diseases are treated in the Nation each year;

Whereas digestive diseases account for one-third of all malignant growths and for some of the most common acute infections;

Whereas more Americans are hospitalized with digestive diseases than with any other form of illness;

Whereas digestive diseases account for 25 percent of all surgical operations and comprise one of the most common causes of disability in the working force;

Whereas digestive diseases represent more than $17,000,000,000 annually in direct health care costs and represent a total economic burden of almost $50,000,000,000 annually;

Whereas more than 200 deaths annually are caused by each of at least 100 different diseases and disorders of the gastrointestinal tract;

Whereas the people of the Nation should be concerned with research into the causes, cures, prevention, and clinical treatment of digestive diseases and related nutrition problems and should recognize prevention and treatment of digestive diseases as a major health priority;

Whereas national lay and professional digestive diseases organizations, individually and through the Coalition of Digestive Diseases Organizations and the Federation of Digestive Diseases Societies, are committed to promoting awareness and understanding, among members of the general public and the health care community, of digestive tract disorders;

Whereas the National Digestive Diseases Advisory Board, and the National Institutes of Health through its National Digestive Diseases Education and Information Clearinghouse, are committed to encourage and coordinate these educational efforts;

Whereas the National Digestive Diseases Education Program is a coordinated effort to educate the public and the health care community as to the seriousness of digestive diseases and to provide information on treatment, prevention, and control; and

Whereas the second anniversary of the National Digestive Diseases Education Program occurs during the week beginning May 12, 1985: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning May 12, 1985, hereby is designated "National Digestive Diseases Awareness Week", and the President of the United States is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon all public officials and the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate programs and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 1827

Mr. NIELSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed from the list of cosponsors of H.R. 1827.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL OSTEOPOROSIS AWARENESS WEEK

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 61) to designate the week of May 1, 1985, through May 7, 1985, as "National Osteoporosis Awareness Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation now being considered.

Mr. Speaker, under my reservation of objection, I would like to yield to the gentlewoman from Maine [Ms. SNOWE], who is the chief sponsor of House Joint Resolution 46.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. GARCIA], chairman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population, and the ranking minority member of the committee, Mr. HANSEN, for bringing this important issue to the floor. I rise in full support of Senate Joint Resolution 61, which is virtually identical to House Joint Resolution 46, a bill which I introduced into this Chamber. I think it is important to note that my resolution received the support of more than half the Members of the House. I appreciate the interest of my colleagues in this important issue.

As the author of the companion House bill, I am pleased that today we are considering legislation that, as amended, will designate the week of May 20 to 26 as "National Osteoporosis Awareness Week." We have the opportunity to bring to national awareness information on a disease that disables and kills thousands each year.

Osteoporosis is a disease that principally strikes women, the onset of which begins after menopause. One in four women over the age of 45 can be expected to suffer from this disease which is characterized by weakened bones that break and fracture. Hip fractures, which are often suffered by older people, may actually be caused by bones which are so brittle that they simply break, thus causing a fall, rather than the fall causing broken bones.

As a consequence, osteoporosis is responsible for the death of 50,000 women yearly who die from the complications that result from hip fractures. This is 10,000 more than the number who die annually from breast cancer, making osteoporosis the 12th leading cause of death. Unlike breast cancer and other such diseases, osteoporosis appears to be preventable. It has been found that 50 percent of bone fractures could be avoided by adding adequate levels of calcium to the diet. By following a regimen which includes adequate calcium, exercise, and in some cases, estrogen supplementation, it is possible to prevent the development of this disease.

Prevention is one way to address the increasing health care costs related to osteoporosis. Currently the costs are estimated to be between $3.8 billion and $6 billion. With the growing elderly population, these costs can reasonably be expected to increase.

While osteoporosis affects between 15 and 20 million individuals in the United States alone, it is still relatively unknown—more than three-fourths of American women know nothing about this disease. For that reason, by designating "National Osteoporosis Awareness Week," we can begin to focus attention on this problem. We have within our means the ability to reduce the pain, deformity, disability, and cost associated with osteoporosis. Let this week be the beginning of an educational campaign that will ultimately add osteoporosis to the list of those diseases which no longer are a threat to our society.

I thank my colleagues for their consideration of this bill and I urge unanimous consent of Senate Joint Resolution 61.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. Res. 61

Whereas fifteen to twenty million persons in the United States are afflicted with osteoporosis, and generative bone condition;

Whereas approximately 25 percent of postmenopausal women in the United States develop osteoporosis;

Whereas among those who live to be age ninety, 32 percent of women and 17 percent of men will suffer a hip fracture due mostly to osteoporosis;

Whereas more than fifty thousand older women and many older men die each year in the United States as a result of such complications;

Whereas hip fracture complications related to osteoporosis often result in loss of independence for older persons;

Whereas approximately $3,800,000,000 is expended annually in the United States for health care costs relating to osteoporosis;

Whereas osteoporosis is associated with the loss of bone tissue by estrogen lack and low calcium intake;

Whereas the majority of men and women are unaware of the condition of osteoporosis; and

Whereas the best treatment of osteoporosis is prevention through education: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of May 1, 1985, through May 7, 1985, is designated as "National Osteoporosis Awareness Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate activities.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GARCIA

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GARCIA: Page 2, line 3, strike out "May 1, 1985, through May 7, 1985," and insert in lieu thereof "May 20, 1985, through May 26, 1985."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

TITLE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GARCIA

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

Title amendment offered by Mr. GARCIA: Amend the title so to read: "A joint resolution to designate the week of May 20, 1985, through May 26, 1985, as 'National Osteoporosis Awareness Week'."

The title amendment was agreed to.

NATIONAL ASTHMA AND ALLERGY AWARENESS WEEK

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 83) designating the week beginning on May 5, 1985, as "National Asthma and Allergy Awareness Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation now being considered.

Mr. Speaker, under my reservation I would like to yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN] who is the chief sponsor of the House bill, House Joint Resolution 170.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to note that a majority of our colleagues have joined me in sponsoring House Joint Resolution 170, now identified as Senate Joint Resolution 83 to designate this week as "National Asthma and Allergy Awareness Week."

Allergic diseases know no age, race or geographic boundaries, and their toll on society is enormous. Taken together, asthma and allergic diseases represent a huge public health problem.

One out of every six Americans is afflicted in some way by these illnesses.

An estimated 5,000 individuals die each year from asthma, despite common medical knowledge and treatments capable of preventing such deaths.

As many as 9 million Americans are asthmatic, over a third of whom are children.

Hay fever, perhaps the most common allergic disease, afflicts an estimated 15 million of our neighbors.

About 8 million work days a year are lost due to hay fever and asthma.

Occupational allergic diseases are now believed to be a major cause of workplace-caused illness.

About 130-million school days are missed each year because of hay fever and asthma.

Many other ailments of the skin, joints, kidneys, lungs, intestines, glands as well as some parasitic, blood, infectious, and malignant disorders are now believed to have major allergic and immunologic components.

The total annual cost of these incurable immunologic diseases was estimated at $4 billion in 1981, and indirect costs alone, such as lost wages, probably exceed $800 million a year for hay fever and asthma alone.

Obviously, the Awareness Week which we create here today will not cure the diseases. However, by bringing the problem to the attention of the American public, the efforts of researchers—public and private—doctors, teachers, and volunteers of all types, are highlighted. From such effort, the work of the public and private institutions devoted to conquering the many related diseases is made easier.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the House for recognizing the importance of the job many individuals and groups are doing to reduce the suffering caused by these debilitating diseases, and for making it possible to increase the impact of the informational message about the diseases which the Awareness Week provides.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 83

Whereas asthma and allergic diseases result in physical, emotional, and economic hardship for more than thirty-five million Americans and their families;

Whereas thousands of Americans, many of them young, die each year from asthma even though sufficient medical knowledge and resources exist to prevent many asthma-related deaths;

Whereas student absenteeism is due in significant part to asthma and allergic diseases;

Whereas environmental conditions in the workplace often cause or exacerbate asthma and allergic diseases among employees;

Whereas many hospital patients suffer allergic reactions to prescribed medications;

Whereas it is estimated that the American public pays $4,000,000,000 per year in medical bills directly attributable to the treatment and diagnoses of asthma and allergic diseases and pays another $2,000,000,000 per year as a result of the indirect social cost of such illnesses;

Whereas, because of recent developments in the study of immunology, health care providers are better equipped to diagnose and treat asthma and allergic diseases; and

Whereas increased public awareness of recent scientific advancements in the study of immunology will help many of the common misconceptions concerning asthma, allergic diseases, and the victims of those illnesses: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning on May 5, 1985, is hereby designated as "National Asthma and Allergy Awareness Week", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SENIOR CENTER WEEK

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 60) to designate the week of May 12, 1985, through May 18, 1985, as "Senior Center Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation now being considered.

Mr. Speaker, under my reservation I would like to yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ROWLAND] who is the chief sponsor of the House bill, House Joint Resolution 146.

Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from Utah yielding. As you know, I introduced House Joint Resolution 146, which is identical to Senate Joint Resolution 60, the resolution being considered today. With over 218 cosponsors, the enactment of this measure will give special recognition to our Nation's senior centers by designating the second week in May as Senior Center Week.

Our older Americans appreciate having access to the many services provided by these centers. I want to thank my colleagues for signing onto this legislation commemorating the week of May 12-18, 1985, as Senior Center Week.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

S.J. RES. 60

Whereas local communities support over eight thousand senior centers and there is hardly a city or town without one;

Whereas senior centers affirm the dignity, self-worth, and independence of older persons by facilitating their decisions and action, tapping their experiences, skills, and knowledge, and enabling their continued contribution to the community;

Whereas senior centers, encouraged and supported by the Older Americans Act, function as service delivery focal points, helping older persons to help themselves and each other, and offering service or access to community services as needed;

Whereas the national theme for Senior Center Week is "Senior Centers are Wellness Centers", and senior centers nationwide are viewed as centers to promote the well-being of older persons—emotionally and physically; and

Whereas the month of May has historically been proclaimed Older Americans Month, and communities across the country are giving special recognition to older persons and the role of senior centers in serving them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the second week in May, May 12 through May 18, 1985, is designated as "Senior Center Week" and the President is authorized and requested to include this designation of Senior Center Week as part of the proclamation of Older Americans Month, calling upon the people of the United States to honor older Americans and these local organizations that bring together activities and services for their benefit.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

YOUTH SUICIDE PREVENTION MONTH

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 53) to authorize and request the President to designate the month of June 1985 as "Youth Suicide Prevention Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation being considered.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. Res. 53

Whereas the youth of society represent the hope for the future;

Whereas the rate of youth suicide has increased more than threefold in the last two decades;

Whereas over five thousand young Americans took their lives last year, many more attempted suicide, and countless families were affected;

Whereas youth suicide is a phenomenon which must be addressed by a concerned society; and

Whereas youth suicide is a national problem which can only be solved through the combined efforts of individuals, families, communities, organizations, and government to educate society: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America Congress assembled, That the month of June 1985 is designated as "Youth Suicide Prevention Month" and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the Governors of the several States, the chief officials of local governments, and the people of the United States to observe such month with appropriate programs and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE MONTH

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution of (S.J. Res. 65) designating the month of November 1985 as "National Alzheimer's Disease Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not object, but simply would like to inform the House that the minority has no objection to the legislation now being considered.

Mr. Speaker, under my reservation I would like to yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. LOWERY] who is the chief sponsor of the House bill, House Joint Resolution 193.

Mr. LOWERY of California. Mr. Speaker, Alzheimer's disease is a surprisingly common disorder which destroys certain vital brain cells causing a form of senile dementia. Alzheimer's disease affects between 5 and 10 percent of all of our citizens over the age of 65.

Precise figures are not available because there are no completely reliable diagnostic methods yet.

We do know, however, that Alzheimer's disease afflicted almost 3 million people or 1 adult in every 3 American families. Alzheimer's disease victims now constitute 50 to 60 percent of the 1.3 million Americans in nursing homes, accounting for more than one-half of the $25 billion spent annually for nursing home care. And by the year 2050, unless a cure is found, it is estimated that more than 3 million people will be afflicted, and the custodial cost will rise to more than $30 billion a year as a result of Alzheimer's disease.

Alzheimer's disease currently claims over 100,000 lives a year. It is awesome in the affliction that it causes and the pain that it causes to families.

We are raising the consciousness of the American people and through this legislation by declaring the month of November National Alzheimer's Disease Month I think we will acquaint more and more Americans with this problem.

I would like to insert the following article from Time magazine of July 11, 1983:

SLOW, STEADY, AND HEARTBREAKING ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE IS A DEVASTATING ILLNESS OF ADVANCING AGE

"You look inside your mind and see nothing but black."—A victim.

The first signs are small, puzzling and all too easy to dismiss. For Chicago Journalist Charles Leroux, it was his mother's diminishing ability to manage her checkbook and count change. For Frank Holmes, a retired Boston businessman, it was the wild spending sprees by his once prudent wife and her increasing tendency to garble phone messages. For Eleanor Zimmerlein, an Illinois farmer's wife, it was the decline in the quality of her husband's handiwork: "Suddenly the row of shingles he'd put on the roof would be crooked, and he couldn't saw a straight line." And for Chicago Office Clerk Eleanor Marzillo, it began with her husband's difficulty in shaving, first his trim mustache got bushier and bushier, then one day he shaved half of it off. At the same time, Marzillo recalls, rags were mysteriously collecting in the family car. "I couldn't figure out what Tony was doing with these rags," she says. "It turned out he knew how to start the car and how to drive, but he couldn't figure out how to use the windshield wipers or defroster any more."

Aberrations such as these mark the onset of Alzheimer's disease (AD), the insidious and heartbreaking malady of advancing age. The memory lapses, confusion and dementia inevitably get worse. The intelligent and athletic Mrs. Holmes, now 65, forgot how to cook: she set a chicken ablaze by trying to roast it over all four burners of her stove. She also forgot how to play tennis and ultimately she had trouble recognizing her friends. Once an active Y.M.C.A. employee, Tony Marzillo, 61, gradually lost all ability to care for himself, becoming incontinent, unruly and destructive. "It was like chasing a 6-ft.-tall toddler around," his wife recalls, "except you knew that a toddler would eventually learn the rules of the house." Today both Marzillo and Holmes are institutionalized. Says Eleanor Marzillo of her husband: "He cannot speak, he cannot eat, he cannot ask for water."

The relentlessness of Alzheimer's disease makes it a nightmare for families of the patients. The affliction's rising incidence threatens to make it a nightmare for the country at large. By far the leading cause of mental deterioration among the elderly, AD affects between 5% and 10% of all people over 65. Among them: former Movie Star Rita Hayworth, 64. Because most AD patients must eventually be placed in institutions, the disease puts tremendous demands on the nation's health-care resources. Alzheimer's victims constitute 50% to 60% of the 1.3 million people in nursing homes, accounting for more than half of the $25 to $26 billion spent annually on such care.

The disease will become more common and take an even greater toll as the U.S. population continues to age. On July 1, the U.S. reached a milestone: for the first time there are more Americans over 65 (27.4 million) than teen-agers (26.5 million). In March, Health and Human Resources Secretary Margaret Heckler created a special AD task force and proposed to increase federal funds for AD research to $25 million in 1984, up from $17 million in 1981. Says Heckler: "Every breakthrough we achieve is a step toward the reuniting of families and friends, the lifting of the veil of confusion and isolation from Americans who deserve days and years of celebration in their final years, not days and years of drift."

Alzheimer's disease was first identified in 1906 by German Physician Alois Alzheimer. His patient, a 51-year-old woman, suffered loss of memory, disorientation and later, severe dementia. After her death, Alzheimer conducted an autopsy on her brain and found the two distinctive characteristics of the disease: tangled clumps of nerve fibers and patches of disintegrated nerve-cell branches. Because Alzheimer's patient was relatively young, AD was at first considered a disease of middle age; similar symptoms in elderly people were simply regarded as a natural consequence of aging. Today this view has been discarded. Even in an octogenarian, severe mental confusion "is a disease, not a natural decline," says Katherine Bick, acting deputy director of the National Institute of Neurological Communicative Disorders and Stroke (NINCDS).

Little real progress has been made in the treatment of AD since Alzheimer's day, and even diagnosis remains difficult. The only way to be absolutely certain that a patient has the disorder is to examine the brain after death. Thus, the diagnosis must be approximated by a careful process of elimination. Through CAT scanning and other tests, the physician gradually determines that the patient has not suffered a series of small strokes, does not have Parkinson's disease, a brain tumor, depression, an adverse drug reaction or any other possible cause of dementia. If all tests are negative, AD is diagnosed by default. This conclusion may be further verified with psychological tests.

Alzheimer's disease would be far easier to treat and detect if doctors knew what caused it. The fact that the disease often occurs in several members of the same family suggests that a genetic factor is at work. This factor "is most prominent in very early onset cases," says University of Minnesota Psychiatrist Leonard Heston. In one family, for instance, two out of three siblings developed Alzheimer's by age 27. According to Johns Hopkins Psychiatrist Marshal Folstein, a sibling or child of an AD victim runs a greater than 50% chance of developing the disease by age 90.

Still, heredity alone cannot explain the disease, which often affects individuals whose families have no history of the disorder. "Possibly it comes down to genetic susceptibility triggered by one or more things," suggests Bick of NINCDS. Some doctors speculate that the trigger may be a slow-acting virus, similar to the "slow viruses" that cause such rare brain disorders as kuru and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in man, and scrapie in sheep and goats. Unfortunately, all efforts to isolate an AD virus have failed. Concludes Virologist Joseph Gibbs of the National Institutes of Health: "If slow virus are involved in Alzheimer's, I suspect that the association is remote."

Mr. GARCIA. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. HANSEN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I want to take a moment to commend my colleague for introducing this resolution.

This disease is one of the most tragic to plague our elderly. It slowly destroys its victim's mind, and finally, his dignity. Modern science has created miracles, helping mankind to deal with a host of diseases and afflictions. I don't know if we will ever be able to cure Alzheimer's, but we must try. Recognition of this disease is a first necessary step in that process, and by declaring November National Alzheimer's Disease Month we are calling attention to an affliction that must be fought, that must be beaten.

Mr. LOWERY of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the gentleman. What he says is absolutely correct. Progress is being made. In fact, in March 1984, Secretary Heckler appointed a special Alzheimer's disease task force; more funding for research is being recommended and by continually increasing the consciousness of the American people the funding will be coming forth both through Government as well as private sources so that we can eradicate this disease.

Mr. Speaker, before I yield back my time I would like to thank my colleague [BUTLER DERRICK] for his concern and interest in gathering the signatures so that this legislation may be brought to the floor.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. So there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution as follows:

S.J. Res. 65

Whereas more than two million Americans are affected by Alzheimer's disease, which is surprisingly common disorder that destroys certain vital cells of the brain;

Whereas Alzheimer's disease is the fourth leading cause of death among other Americans;

Whereas Alzheimer's disease is responsible for 50 per centum of all nursing home admissions, at an annual cost of more than $20,000,000,000;

Whereas in one-third of all American families one parent will succumb to this disease;

Whereas Alzheimer's disease is not a normal consequence of aging; and

Whereas an increase in the national awareness of the problem of Alzheimer's disease may stimulate the interest and concern of the American people, which may lead, in turn, to increased research and eventually to the discovery of a cure for Alzheimer's disease; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the month of November 1985 is designated as "National Alzheimer's Disease Month". The President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe such month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the several joint resolutions just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

ROACHBUSTERS

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago, my friend and colleague, the Honorable SILVIO O. CONTE, took this podium to declare his personal war against the crustatorial creatures that inhabit his office. Shortly thereafter, the Times-Picayune, the ranking newspaper of the great city of New Orleans, which by no coincidence must be known to the inner circles of insect society as Cockroach Valhalla, has given great praise to his intentions but offered bleak prospects for his success. Alas, the editorial board of the Times-Picayune is unfortunately correct, for the might of man is no match for the might of mite.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I would like to include the article from the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

ROACHBUSTERS

The history of the U.S. Congress is a hallowed story of more than two centuries of triumph over obstacles, difficulties and assorted forces of iniquity. But Congress may have finally taken on an adversary it cannot hope to overcome: the cockroach.

The Capitol, it seems, has become overrun with roaches. But as New Orleanians could explain to the distinguished members of the Congress, the outcome of the battle can safely be predicted: The roaches are going to win hands (or feelers) down.

Rep. Silvio Conte, D-Mass., who comes from a cold-weather state where roaches are insignificant both individually and as a group and large-scale roach-fighting is a virtually unknown art, has allowed himself to be chivvied into heading the would-be roach-busting campaign. Rep. Conte comes to this formidable task armed with two yellow flyswatters, 35,000 roach traps and a large canister of bug spray.

There has probably never been a combatant who declared a war so hopelessly unprepared for the struggle before him.

By contrast, New Orleanians have been fighting roaches at least since 1718, according to recorded history, and have accumulated a wealth of experience along with a certain superior amusement reserved for those who claim to see a light at the end of the tunnel.

Hardened by generations of roach-fighting and well versed in the almost supernatural cunning and physical stamina of their adversaries, New Orleanians know that anyone armed to battle roaches only with Rep. Conte's meager arsenal is a hopeless novice ripe for swift discomfiture.

Rep. Conte will learn in due course that it may be possible for him to clear his office of the pesky creatures for an hour or maybe a day, perhaps even two days. But as any New Orleanian can attest, the roach has not survived through some 350 million years of changing environments to now fall victim to an untutored native of Massachusetts.

However many individual roaches the congressman may account for with his flyswatters, traps and bug spray, the roach will not only survive but prosper—and return in triumph again and again.

FARM POLICY REFORM ACT OF 1985

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman a question, since he is a member of the Democratic leadership and one of the Members who last week lectured the Republican side on the dilatory tactics that were preventing us from hearing the debate on the State Department authorization bill, which today, now, the Democratic leadership has pulled off the calendar.

Could the gentleman, as a member of that leadership, explain to the House why that bill was pulled today?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I would be pleased to explain to the gentleman that it has come to our notice that the chairman of the Committee on For-ign Affairs, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FASCELL] is without the city.

Mr. WALKER. Further reserving the right to object, last week when we were doing something on this side of the aisle that we thought was important, the gentleman lectured us, and I have his words here, that we were in fact doing something that might jeopardize the lives and safety of Americans living abroad.

Is this matter with regard to the chairman so important that the Democratic leadership has now decided that that is not a concern of this body?

Mr. ALEXANDER. I have not conferred with the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs about his itinerary and do not know his reasons.

Mr. WALKER. Further reserving the right to object, so if I understand it then correctly, when the chairman of the committee is engaged in business that he regards as important, then it is all right to jeopardize the lives and safety of people abroad, but when the Republican minority is engaged in things that they regard as important, then the leadership can come on the floor and lecture us?

Mr. ALEXANDER. The gentleman misunderstands.

Mr. WALKER. Are we somehow engaged in practices—

Mr. ALEXANDER. I think the gentleman misunderstood my explanation. I have said that so far as I am advised—

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I would ask for regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas to address the House for 1 minute?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I simply take this time today to advise my colleagues that I have introduced the Farm Policy Reform Act of 1985, together with cosponsors DASCHLE, CONYERS, BRYANT, WEAVER, EVANS of Illinois, and HAYES, which bill will be filed as a part of the proceedings today and circulated among the Members.

I have asked permission, and I include herewith, a summary of that bill for Members and ask that they give it consideration pending the debate on the farm bill which is forthcoming.

SUMMARY—FARM POLICY REFORM ACT OF 1985

TITLE I. AGRICULTURAL COMMODITY SUPPLY MANAGEMENT

Section 101—Supply Management Program

A producer referendum is mandated on August 1, 1985, 1989, 1993, and 1997 to determine by majority vote if a mandatory supply management program will be in effect for the succeeding four-year period for the commodities wheat, corn, grain sorghums, barely, oats, rye, upland cotton, rice, and soybeans. If the referendum fails, the farm program will be established at the discretion of the Secretary.

If a referendum is approved, each producer will be assigned a normal crop acreage (NCA) equivalent to the average number of acres cultivated, including farm program acres retired, during the four preceding years. Each producer must set aside 15% of his NCA. This determines eligible crop acres. Each producer will submit planting intentions to USDA. If the producer's total farm and nonfarm income is less than $200,000, the producer will receive acreage allotments in accordance with that requested. Producers with gross incomes in excess of $200,000 must request supplemental acreage allotments for each commodity.

The Secretary, after determining a national marketing quota for each commodity, by totaling estimated domestic demand, export demand, food aid requirements, and reserve requirements, will prorate the remaining needed production to all producers requesting supplemental allotments through a formula which requires an increasingly greater set-aside percentage as producer gross income increases. Producers who earn more than 50% of their gross income from non-farm sources will be required to set aside an additional 10% of their eligible crop acres.

The Secretary may award bonus acres to all producers if the total of all allotment requests does not exceed the national marketing quota.

Nonrecourse loans will be made available for a period of 36 months and the loan rates shall equal 70% of parity for the 1986 crop year and will increase by 2% each year thereafter until 1996. Target price programs are eliminated.

At the time acreage allotments are assigned, the Secretary shall issue marketing certificates for each commodity based on county average yield or proven farm yield, whichever is higher. The certificate may be adjusted by the Secretary to reflect on-farm use. If production exceeds the amount in the marketing certificate, the surplus may be used for on-farm use, applied to the subsequent year's marketing certificate, donated for Title II, P.L. 480 use, or sold to the Commodity Credit Corporation for 50% of the loan rate.

Producers must apply approved conservation measures to set-aside acres. The Secretary may permit haying and grazing set-aside acres and may make a payment for land used for wildlife use.

A farmer disaster reserve is created to replace crop insurance. Each producer must contribute a portion of his production, determined on an actuarially sound basis, to the reserve. In the event of a disaster, the producer will receive commodities from the reserve equivalent to 90% of his marketing certificate less the amount actually produced. However, the value of commodities received under this program may not exceed $360,000 annually.

Section 102—Wool and Mohair

Section 103—Suspension of Permanent Program

Sections of current law which would conflict with this program are suspended.

TITLE II. AGRICULTURAL CREDIT

Section 201—Guaranteed Loans

Limits FmHA guaranteed farm operating and farm real estate loans to 10% of loans made in those categories.

Section 202—Limited Resource Real Estate Loans

Clarifies authority for FmHA to make limited resource real estate loans.

Section 203—Record Keeping Training

Requires record keeping training for limited resource borrowers.

Section 204—Limits on Operating Loans

Establishes a two-tiered debt ceiling on operating loans. For direct loans, the limit would be $200,000, except that no more than 25% of the funds could be used for loans above $100,000. For guaranteed loans, the limit would be $400,000, except that no more than 25% of the guarantee authority could be for loans above $200,000. Total FmHA indebtedness could not exceed $500,000 per farmer.

Section 205—Limited Resource Operating Loans

Sections 206-210—Emergency Loans

Reforms the FmHA emergency loan program by redirecting toward family-sized farms. The reforms include limiting loans to family-size farms, limiting loans to farmers who cannot get credit elsewhere, and reducing the individual loan ceiling from $500,000 to $200,000.

Section 211—Loan Deferrals

Expands authority for the deferral of principal and interest for up to 5 years as long as the producer can project a positive cash flow under the support price schedule in Title I.

Section 212—Loan Defaults

Clarifies FmHA Procedures for handling loan defaults.

Section 213—County Committees

Expands FmHA county committees to 5 members of which three must be farmer-elected.

Section 214—Prompt Approval of Loans

Section 215—Farm Program Appeals

Establishes a new procedure for the appeal of FmHA loan applications. The major components include informal meetings to facilitate resolution of disputes at local level, one formal hearing where informal meetings are unsuccessful, and the availability of an administrative law judge at the state level to conduct the formal hearing and provide independent resolution.

Section 216—Disposition and Leasing of Farmland

Clarifies procedures for disposition of farmland held in inventory by FmHA. Limits the leasing or sale of land to farmers who are eligible for FmHA operating or real estate loans, with first priority going to limited resource farmers.

Section 217—Release of Normal Income Security

Provides for minimum standards for the release of income security for family living and operating expenses.

Section 218—Loan Summary Statements

Requires FmHA to provide each borrower with a loan status report to provide farmers with necessary information to better manage their debts.

Section 219—Family Farm Definition

Clarifies definition of a "family farm" specifying that individuals owning farm must provide a majority of the labor.

Section 220—Limited Resource Loan Amounts

Restores the original minimum quota to require that at least 25% of FmHA operating and real estate loans go to limited resource borrowers.

Section 221—Farm and Home Plan Study

Provides for a study of the appropriateness of FmHA's "Farm and Home Plan" and proposed substitutes.

TITLE III. AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS

Subtitle A

Sections 301-302—Sales for Foreign Currencies

Section 303—Use of Private Entities

Grants may be made to private entities for projects designed to improve storage and marketing or to stimulate or expand private enterprise in friendly countries.

Section 304—Intermediate Credit

Requires using not less than $500 million annually for an intermediate export credit program.

Section 305—Quantities for Famine Relief

Minimum tonnage under Title II, P.L. 480 is increased from 1.7 to 3.25 million metric tons grain equivalent over a six year period.

Section 306—Multiyear Agreements

Title II, P.L. 480 amended to permit multi-year agreements with nonprofit organizations.

Section 307—Disaster Reserve

Voluntary agencies authorized to maintain an operating reserve of no less than 15% of approved levels in drought and disaster prone counties.

Section 308—Processed Product and Fortified Grain Reserve

Processed and fortified foods will be pre-positioned in the United States to ensure timely delivery of commodities.

Section 309—Authorization

Title II, P.L. 480 funding increased from $1.0 billion to $1.9 billion.

Section 310—Authorization to Purchase Foreign Currencies

Funding for Title II sponsors to utilize local currencies generated from Title I is increased from $7.5 million to $9.5 million.

Section 311—Multilateral Agreements

Encourages multilateral agreements with other food exporting nations to fulfill food aid requirements of needy nations.

Subtitle B—Agricultural Imports

Section 320—Agricultural Imports

Instructs the Secretary of Agriculture to utilize existing law to the maximum extent practicable to minimize food imports.

Section 321—Labeling Imported Meat

Requires imported meat to be so labeled with words to indicate its country of origin.

Section 322—Serving Imported Meat

Requires that eating establishments inform individuals purchasing food of the fact that such food products are imported.

TITLE IV. SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION

Subtitle A—Soil and Water Conservation

Section 401—Training of Soil Conservation Personnel

Authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to establish and carry out a training program for soil conservation service employees.

Section 402—Dry Land Farming

Authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to promote energy and water conservation through dry land farming.

Section 403—Local and State Committees

Instructs the Secretary to take the needed actions to strengthen the role of local and state committees.

Section 404—Agricultural Conservation Program

Instructs the Secretary of Agriculture to require all producers to use Agricultural Conservation Program payments, grants and aid in accordance with a conservation plan approved by the local soil and water conservation district.

Section 405—Conservation Reserve Program

Authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into contracts of 10 years in order to promote soil and water conservation on erosion prone land.

Section 406—Water Conservation Program

Authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into contracts of 5 years in order to reduce the use of water from underground aquifers to irrigate land.

Subtitle B—Highly Erodible Land Conservation

Sections 410-415

Instructs the Secretary of Agriculture to make any person or producer who plows out new highly erodible land ineligible for agricultural programs for that year. Producers would be ineligible for price supports, loans and guarantees, crop insurance, or disaster payments. Local agricultural stabilization and Conservation County Committees are to be used to administer the program.

TITLE V. FOOD ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Subtitle A—Food Stamp Program

Section 501—Adjustment of Trinity Food Plan

Increases the Thrifty Food Plan (TFP) to reflect actual food prices. Bases the food stamp allotment on the projected average cost of the TFP in the coming year. Food stamp recipients would receive a benefit reflecting the true cost of purchasing the TFP.

Section 502—Earned Income Deduction

Adjusts income deductions to enhance work incentives and better reflect actual excess shelter and dependent care costs.

In order to recognize the taxes and work related expenses and provide a work incentive for food stamp recipients, current law requires that 18% of any earned income be disregarded in establishing a recipient household Food stamp eligibility and benefit level. Prior to amendment in 1981, the disregard for earning was 20%.

Section 503—Dependent Care and Excess Shelter Deductions

Separates and raises the maximum dependent care deduction to $160 per month for all child care costs incurred, and the excess shelter deduction to $175 per month.

Section 504—Calculation of Income

Permits uneven proration of family income to be calculated either on a prospective or retrospective basis.

Section 505—Supplementation of Allotments

Permits supplementing the allotments of households that experience an income loss of $100 or more during a given month.

Section 506—Resource Limitations

Increases asset limits and changes the treatment of financial resources to reflect actual availability.

These provisions would raise the liquid asset limit applied to individuals and households to two or more without elderly members from $1,500 to $2,250. Similarly, it would raise the limit applied to households of two or more with an elderly member from $3,000 to $3,500. The exempt value of a non-excluded vehicle would be increased from $4,500 to $5,500.

Section 507—Personal Property Limitations

Non-liquid asset requirements would be waived for up to four months in areas of high unemployment and high farm foreclosures.

Section 508—Food Stamp Information

Requires states to provide reasonable program information to potential recipient populations and matches dollar for dollar state expenditures for this purpose.

Section 509—Authorization and Appropriations

Authorizes the appropriations of such sums as necessary for fiscal years ending September 30, 1986 through September 30, 1989.

Subtitle B—Child Nutrition Program

Section 502—Summer Food Service Program for Children

Permits private non-profit agencies to sponsor summer food service program and reduces restrictions for participation.

Section 521—School Breakfast

Increases subsidy to school breakfast program by 6¢ per meal.

Subtitle C—Food Distribution Programs

Section 530—Commodity Supplemental Food

Extends for four years the authorization for the Commodity Supplemental Food Program.

Section 531—Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program

Extends Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFFPA) through 1989.

Subtitle D—Effective Date

Section 540—Effective Date

Title V shall be effective on October 1, 1985.

[NOTE.—This bill does not address the dairy program and in the absence of legislative action, the support price for milk will revert to a minimum support level of 75 percent of parity on October 1, 1985. However, it is the intent of the author to include a dairy program consistent with the commodity provisions of Title I.]

OPPORTUNITY TO CORRECT TRADE IMBALANCE LOST IN THE DUST AT BONN

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, the first 5 months' U.S. record of food imports flies in the face of surplus domestic grain supplies. In fact, at this rate, the United States, the world's best producer of food grains, will import 20 billion dollars' worth of food products, nearly half as much as we will export, half the value of what we export. Trade barriers and the dollar value imbalance clearly are at the root of this particular food import flood.

Yet the opportunity to address this problem and resolve this trade imbalance, the $124 billion imbalance of trade in 1984, has been lost in the dust of Bonn. Clearly, the cosmetic approach to the problems of the international economy needs substantive answers, not euphemisms. The President's failure at Bonn to make any progress is yet another blow to our agricultural economy.

Mr. Speaker, I am inserting a copy of an article by Lee Egerstrom of the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch which documents the magnitude of this problem. The article is as follows:

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, Apr. 29, 1985]

DESPITE SURPLUSES, U.S. SETS RECORD AG IMPORTS

(By Lee Egerstrom)

Back up 20 or more years and speakers pandering to farm groups would tell demeaning stories about city slickers. One favorite was in the form of a question, "What do we need farmers for when we have so many grocery stores?"

That used to be funny. It isn't anymore. And not simply because Northern commodity producers have become pretty slick themselves.

Charles Goode, an economist with USDA's Economic Research Service, has concluded that America set a record for agricultural trade in fiscal 1984, but the record was for imports.

Farm product imports reached $18.9 billion in the fiscal year, an increase of $2.5 billion over 1983. That is shocking in this land of food abundance even though imports of non-agricultural products climbed to $295 billion compared with $229 billion the previous year.

All imports in the first half of the current fiscal year are well ahead of last year's pace. Agricultural imports during the first five months of this year—October through February—were valued at $8.2 billion compared with $7.5 billion a year ago.

Some of this is attributed to increased imports of citrus and vegetables after two rough winters in Florida that have reduced domestic production. And in some cases, such as coffee, rubber, fruit juices, vegetable oils and cocoa products, the increase in import value results from higher world prices.

But Goode said some of the increase is directly attributed to the working of world markets, with the strong U.S. dollar giving domestic products a substantial price disadvantage against commodities from other countries.

This was highlighted earlier this year when Cargill announced it was bringing a load of Argentine wheat to Southeastern ports. It canceled the deal, but it noted that it was economically feasible.

But Argentina is only one cereal grain exporting country where trading prices undercut U.S. commodities that are denominated in dollars.

While few people outside the grain trade have been watching, Canada has shipped 13,362 metric tons of wheat to U.S. markets since October. And Goode said one metric ton of wheat has come into the U.S. market from Asia.

In the previous year, a paltry 198 tons of wheat came over the border from Canada.

Meanwhile, Sweden has shipped us 113,000 metric tons of oats in the first five months of this year, compared with 15,000 tons a year ago. And Finland increased its oats exports to America from 44,000 metric tons a year ago to 100,100 tons through the first five months.

Barley, another cash grain important to the farm economy in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas, also is coming into the domestic market on boats.

Goode said New Zealand has shipped us 15,000 metric tons so far this year. There was no barley trading a year ago. And Canada has increased its barley shipments to the U.S. from 18,000 metric tons a year ago to 49,000 tons so far this year.

At the midway point of the current fiscal year, agricultural imports are on pace to reach $20 billion. That will be better than half the value of U.S. farm exports, according to current projections, and it may be close to two-thirds the value of what we sell.

Farm exports have been a major anchor for the U.S. economy and its balance of trade during the past 15 years. But the farm contribution is declining and is being dwarfed by the total trade imbalance.

Just what will happen to farm trade in the last six months of the current year is difficult to predict. The segmented soybean market suggests a lot of vegetable oil and related products will be imported, and it's likely the U.S. Customs Service will hire cowboys to handle traffic at the borders.

Domestic livestock production is being cut back sharply after continual poor cattle and pork cycles. This suggests there will be higher meat prices later this year. But will any strengthening of prices attract more imports of livestock and processed meats?

Goode said beef imports were among the few commodities to actually decline in the previous fiscal year, falling 16 percent to $1.2 billion. He expects a rebound this year.

And hogs and pork products valued at $703 million—a boost of 10 percent—came into the U.S. market last year. They are likely to be even higher this year despite U.S.-Canadian trade talks aimed at slowing the stampede.

Imports of oilseeds and vegetable oil products jumped 52 percent last year to $796 million, and there are more on the way. The domestic soybean market can't be called either bullish or bearish; rather, it is bizarre.

Jack Cole of Cole Commodities in Minneapolis notes that the nearby contracts for soybean oil show that food companies and other users are trying to pull soybeans out of storage and into the market with daily price increases of late.

Meanwhile, the price for soybeans have been steadily falling, and the price for soybean meal has been falling through the floor. "There is obvious tight supply for oil, but nobody can do anything with the meal," he said.

Prices trail off for all major grains and remain stagnant on soybeans for contracts on distant delivery months that will include the crops now being planted.

"Commodity markets are a scare market," said Cole. "Scare me. Tell me what I better buy today because I won't be able to buy it tomorrow."

At the start of this planting season, the markets are scary but the supplies aren't. Not with Canada, Sweden, Finland, New Zealand, the Common Market, Indonesia, the Philippines, Malaysia, Australia and most of South America standing by with surpluses of grains, oilseeds and livestock, and currency values that let them put goods on our grocery shelves.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Sparrows, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 1617. An act to authorize appropriations to the Secretary of Commerce for the programs of the National Bureau of Standards for fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 1617), "An act to authorize appropriations to the Secretary of Commerce for the programs of the National Bureau of Standards for fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. GORTON, Mr. GOLDWATER, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. RIEGLE to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

OBSERVING 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF REA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, in the beginning, when God created the heavens and the Earth, the Earth was a formless wasteland, and darkness covered the abyss, while a mighty wind swept over the waters.

Then God said, "Let there be light," and there was light. God saw how good the light was. God then separated the light from the darkness. God called the light "day," and the darkness He called "night," thus evening came, and morning followed—the first day.

And on the sixth day God created to His image and likeness man, and then woman followed, with the charge to have dominion over all the creatures of the land, and to subdue the Earth to their needs.

Here my friends began the quest for fire and light, for God clearly defined darkness from light, and it was for man to bring light into the darkness. Eventually man conceived light that would shine upon the darkness from fire and he utilized his genius to use his intellect and the tools at his disposal to make light, and thus we had electricity for those who could avail themselves of this great discovery—here my friends was the birth of REA—the Rural Electrification Administration to allow all who would, in partnership with their Government to have light, regardless of where they lived or their station in life—if we were to take all of time, from creation to now, and frame it in the space of 365 days—the last 50 years would be but the last 30 seconds of the 365th day—so we celebrate.

Mr. Speaker, I am so very glad to have this chance to participate in observing the 50th anniversary of the REA. This is an important observance for many reasons * * * and one of them is the fact that when this Congress makes decisions about the program in the future, our Members should be aware of what the REA has meant to rural America.

A lot of people these days do not remember what life was like a half century ago in areas without electric service. When we look back to those days, most of us who grew up in small towns and on farms may remember best the many good things about rural life. But for many people, there was another side to that rural experience. It was a side of hardships, isolation, and doing without many of the things that were part of everyday life for other Americans.

Not long ago, the Texas electric cooperatives went around to talk to some of our people who remembered the old days. One of the stories they collected for their oral history project came from a gentleman named Fain McDougal, a retired rural cooperative manager, at Cuero in south-central Texas. He was talking at one point about a conversation he had many years ago with a child from a family that had recently gotten electric service. Let me give you, word for word, what Mr. McDougal had to say:

One little girl from up at Yoakum says, "You know, when we first started to school we talked funny, and they made fun of us and the way we dressed. And now we've got lights, radio and television. And we dress like everybody and talk like everybody else. They can't tell us from town kids."

There was another interview in that series I want to give you briefly. Mrs. Ruth Lane of San Angelo. She had this to say about life in the country after the power lines came:

Now we have been put within the mainstream of American life . . . and I hope future generations can realize how much it has meant to rural America.

The rural electrification movement that began 50 years ago has, indeed, done a great deal for rural people and for our country. It has transformed the quality of rural life. It has made it possible for our farmers to become the world's most efficient producers of food and fiber. And it has been a spur for the development of thousands of new nonfarm businesses and industries and new community facilities in rural communities all across the country.

These are reasons enough to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the program.

We should be celebrating the accomplishments of the program and its leaders, both on the national level and in every local cooperative where people work together to make power systems work to meet their needs. We should be remembering people like President Roosevelt, who created the REA, and the great leaders in Congress who wrote the program legislation and kept it updated to meet changing needs down through the years. We should be noting the great service of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association down through the years.

But celebrating the past is not enough. This is also a time when we should be looking to the future. Times and conditions have changed since the REA was created half a century ago. But there are still great needs and future challenges out there, and the job facing the Rural Electric Program in the years ahead remains a major national challenge. The Rural Electric Program must continue to be an engine for making sure that rural America and its people have a fair chance to participate in future national economic growth. And to fulfill that initial mandate of "Let there be light."

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE] at this time.

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I particularly want to thank him for taking this special order.

Fifteen years ago we held a special order in this House, commemorating the 35th anniversary of the rural electric cooperative. It is hard to believe it was that long ago, but we had a very successful special order, and some 50 different Members expressed their appreciation for the service that REA had rendered to their districts and to this Nation.

Today, as we celebrate the 50th anniversary, I think it a moment for everyone in America to pause and thank the Lord for the blessing that program has given to rural America. It is terribly important what it has done for the countryside, that at that time had little hope and little promise because it was a dark and dreary landscape at times.

I suppose less than 10 percent of the Nation's people were being served with some kind of a central station electric service. Now it is amazing to realize how many people actually are served by the Rural Electrification Program.

In my district, I have two of the largest in the State of Texas, and some that would be classified as largest in the country. I know what it means to those rural people to have electricity, which they had been deprived of all the years.

The program was started in 1935 by Franklin Roosevelt. We really thought at the time it was a gamble. Could you actually build a cooperative line, a system that the farmers could pool their resources together and get enough service for them to collect money to pay the bill? Could they pay back the money they had borrowed? And it was not certain at all that we could do that.

Yet, though we had a chance to do away with the little old, bitty 25-watt bulb and put in some regular electric systems, they took that gamble, and rural America has not been the same since that date.

I take particular pride in calling to the Members' attention today the fact that the Congressman we had in our district at that time—this was 1937, was the then-new Congressman Lyndon Baynes Johnson. He was one of the greatest promoters of rural electrification in the country. He started the Perdinales Electric Cooperative, at a time when they were told that the land was too bare, the farms and the ranches too far apart, there were not enough people that can subscribe and pay for it, and actually the administration had turned them down.

Then Congressman Lyndon Johnson kept insisting that he had to transform the whole countryside, and electricity was the only vehicle they had to do it.

He went to work, and he finally convinced President Roosevelt, along with the national REA officers, that they would take this gamble out for the REA.

Today, the Perdinales Electric Cooperative is probably the first or the second largest one in the State of Texas. There is no question now; no gamble about it. It is so large now that their problem is one of distribution, of generation, where and how can they get the power to serve the people who they must serve in order to take care of their customers.

Well now, that is a success story, and the same is true of the Blue Bonnet Electric Cooperative down in Giddings—that county, Lee County, just left my district, but it is also a very successful program.

Do I know that those farmers and ranchers actually scratched out a living from their little farm, 50 years ago, to embark on a common cause: that is, electricity.

I want to yield to some of the other Members here, because I know Members want to participate in this special order. I want to call the people's attention to the fact that in the book that has been written about 1½, 2 years ago, about President Johnson.

The author took several liberties that we could take offense to in our district, but some of the chapters in that book were marvelous reading. One chapter dealt with the hill country; how bare and unproductive it was, how the people had gone there because they had no other land, but they could not make a living, and how the women in particular had to do all the work by hand. That meant going to the creek to get water. That meant scrubbing their clothes by hand. That meant washing, individually, every garment they had. That meant toting buckets of water over and over again, and all the other farm chores that were just a matter of physical ordeal.

Yet when they had electricity, that put a new life to them. Now this program is terribly important to this country, and we must not weaken it; we must find ways to see it strengthened.

I want to say to you that we must not allow the Rural Electrification Program to be set aside in this budget, or by this administration.

Many millions of Americans are being served by this program, and they are entitled to the consideration of their Government, and I think this Congress must be certain of that.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I would advise the gentleman that the time being consumed now is under my special order, and the gentleman's special order will follow, so we might interchange time here from time to time.

The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. JONES], chairman of the subcommittee on the Committee on Agriculture that has jurisdiction over the REA and who has done a magnificent job in guiding legislation related to REA, and has been one of the champions since his years here, since he came to Congress, and as his years as chairman of that subcommittee.

Mr. JONES of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I commend our colleagues from Texas, Mr. DE LA GARZA and Mr. PICKLE, for their leadership and efforts in providing this opportunity to recognize and celebrate the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Rural Electrification Administration.

At the height of the Great Depression our Nation's rural population was caught in a vicious web of poverty, unemployment, and despair. Rural America lacked the basic necessities to meet the challenge of pulling itself out of a situation which threatened its very existence. Then, 50 years ago, under the leadership of President Franklin Roosevelt, hope became a reality with the establishment of the REA.

As much as any other action taken during the 1930's, the electrification of rural America was responsible for holding the countryside together. I can well remember the day the lights were turned on at my family's farm in rural west Tennessee. Our lives, and those of our neighbors, were changed forever by the events which grew out of the creation of the REA.

With the expansion of the REA's mandate in 1949 to include loan assistance to rural telephone companies, rural America became a full partner on our Nation's road to progress.

In its half century of existence, the REA has provided technical assistance and long-term financing to rural electric and telephone systems throughout this country. The REA, along with thousands of rural electric and telephone cooperatives, has played a vital role in bringing the rural areas of America into the mainstream of modern life.

However, the job is not over, and the need for strong, effective REA activities continues today. It's true that 99 percent of America's farms and ranches now have access to central station electric service, and 95 percent have basic telephone service available to them. But the real challenge remains: In order to survive in today's economic environment, and in order to compete in today's climate of deregulation, rural America's needs are constantly changing and developing with the times. The question is not whether electric and telephone services are available to our rural citizens and small businesses; the question is whether these services are affordable.

Without continuing vital programs in the Rural Electrification Administration, I have serious doubts that our Nation's rural areas can stand up to the economic forces which would drive even more thousands of farmers and small businesses into bankruptcy. That's why I intend to fight this administration to the very end to save the REA from elimination, and I encourage all our colleagues to join in these efforts to protect one of the greatest institutions this Government has ever contributed toward the enrichment of its citizens.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman, and I certainly would commend the gentleman for the great work he has done in this area.

I might mention that it is so gratifying as chairman of the Committee on Agriculture to go out into the countryside and to see these REA cooperatives in North Dakota, South Dakota, Texas, throughout the South and the West and all of the areas of our country. I have taken it upon myself now—I mentioned it once when I was speaking to a co-op—I want to see that last pole, that last mile of line. I have seen it now. Just last month I was in Deaf Smith County, TX, and I went out to a little community named Friona, and my friend who was driving me around, I was telling him the story, the last pole, the last mile of line. He said,

"Well, if you don't mind going out of the way about 5 minutes, I'll show you." That is way out in west Texas, in Deaf Smith County, and we went out. There was the last pole, the last mile of line, and it came down to a water pump that irrigated about 200 acres of grain out there. And, believe me, that was the last pole because beyond there I think I could see the Pacific Ocean. Everything from there was just flat, going west, and to me it was a beautiful sight to see against the sky, that beautiful west Texas sky, that line coming out, knowing that someone could reap, hopefully, a profit, which not too many of our farmers are doing at this time, but that there was this partnership that brought this line out there where not even a hawk was flying but yet each one benefited from it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ROWLAND].

Mr. ROWLAND. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, you and the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Tennessee have certainly painted a graphic picture of what the coming of electricity through the REA to the rural areas of our country has meant.

Mr. Speaker, in a recent newspaper article about the coming of electricity to rural America, a farmer who was giving witness in a country church was quoted as saying:

"Brothers and sisters, I want to tell you this. The greatest thing on Earth is to have the love of God in your heart. And the next greatest thing is to have electricity in your house."

When President Roosevelt signed the Rural Electrification Act on May 11, 1935, he revolutionized much of America. Until then, a large part of the country's population still did not have the electric light, let alone central heating and air conditioning. People still relied on kerosene lamps and wood-burning stoves. Many older Americans tell you that among their most vivid memories are those of constantly hauling wood and water during their younger years.

Electricity not only brought new conveniences for rural families, it brought new opportunities. Farm operations were revitalized and new businesses and industries came to town. New jobs opened up, along with a new promise for our rural communities which is still in the process of being realized.

Georgia is the birthplace of the Rural Electrification Administration. President Roosevelt himself recalled that he began to think about how to bring electricity to rural areas while staying at his cottage in Warm Springs, GA, where he had to pay four times the amount he paid for electricity at his estate in Hyde Park, NY.

At the time REA went into effect, only one out of every 10 farms had electric service. Even after REA came into being, rural residents had to struggle to get electricity. But within a few years, they overcame all obstacles and the lights were turned on throughout the country.

Today, rural communities are still not getting an even break. Based on the amount they contribute in motor fuel taxes, rural areas deserve more Federal road funds. Many of our largest cities have grown too big too fast, and the blight that resulted has led to a range of social problems. The more rapid development of rural America can help alleviate those problems, and help improve the quality of life for urban and rural residents alike.

The REA has paved the way for that development.

Congratulations to the Rural Electrification Program on its 50th anniversary.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from South Dakota, a very prominent member of our committee and a friend of REA [Mr. DASCHLE].

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me and I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER].

Mr. WEBER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from South Dakota for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to compliment the gentleman in the well, the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee, for taking out this special order.

My district, of course, adjoins that of the gentleman from South Dakota. Unlike the gentleman, I do not represent an entire State, but almost. At least so it seems.

According to some statistics, my district is the most rural in the country, at least depending on how you measure it. Certainly there has been no program that has helped to create the economic backbone of my district or of the gentleman's or of many rural districts in the country than the REA Program.

I would just like to associate myself with the remarks of all the gentleman who have been participating in this special order to say that this is a great program that deserves our support. I would like to work with everybody on both sides of the aisle in making sure that we maintain the program in spite of an onslaught from the administration in the Federal budget. That is not a program that I think can be reasonably cut.

I would like to compliment everybody that has been a part of helping to build this program and make it what it is for rural America.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored and privileged to be a part of today's special order to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program.

Many of my colleagues will no doubt concentrate their remarks on the actual historical events surrounding the enactment of the REA program. My remarks will take a different tack. I want to concentrate these couple of minutes on my experience with the people who live with rural electrification every day, the people of rural Minnesota.

When I first came to Congress in 1981 I knew of rural electrification. My hometown of Slayton, MN, located in the southwest corner of the State, is located in a farming area. My high school friends from the farm were totally dependent on rural electrification. I grew up with their memories of having electric and telephone service at a reasonable cost miles away from our town.

Those memories I brought to this body, but my real lesson on the importance of the program has been learned the last few years. Working directly with the local cooperative members, listening to their concerns, successes, and hopes for the future gives me a personal insight into the REA people.

We started holding annual meetings on REA, inviting the board members of each cooperative and their general managers in the district, and we spent the evening talking about the program. There, I heard some of the history of rural electrification coming to rural areas, bringing with it the accessibility of modern conveniences to our producers of food and fiber. Just as important, though, was the close knit bond of trust and friendship we have developed at these meetings. We put politics aside and got down to talking about the real problems and solutions rural electric subscribers face daily.

I think these annual town meetings are unique among projects my colleagues have initiated in this Chamber. Through this sense of working together, hearing each other out, we have developed a strong bond between us.

I guess what I am trying to say is that it is the people in the rural electric cooperative movement who have made the program a success, and allows us to celebrate its 50th anniversary today. I can honestly say, that as a group, there are no finer individuals than those who are a part of the nearly 1,000 member-owned rural electric systems in the country. Those member-owned systems in Minnesota have provided me with an insight into the importance of the program I will never forget. If I would have come to Congress to do nothing more than work for the interests of the rural electric cooperative members, my time and effort would have been well spent.

We must now look to the challenges ahead so that in 50 years, Members of this body can celebrate the 100th anniversary of the REA program.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, in paying tribute to the Rural Electrification Program today and this week, I think it is instructive to note that the leaders of the program have had to fight day and night for survival for the past 4 years.

If it had not been for their unstinting efforts and the support of the majority of this House of Congress, the Reagan administration would have had its way and be presiding over the burial of the program at the moment when those of us who know the importance of rural electrification to America are planning to celebrate the 50th anniversary of REA.

I find it particularly disturbing to read that the Administrator of the Rural Electrification Administration has said that he can't support the Rural Electrification Program. I am concerned that instead of carrying out the responsibilities of his office, and to fairly administer the laws of the land, he is more concerned with devising ways and means of weakening and dismantling REA.

The Rural Electrification Program is looked upon as one of the greatest government-to-people kinds of program that has ever existed. It is the envy of Third and Fourth World governments around the world.

And the reason is quite simple. It is a great program, that was administered over most of its years by a dedicated and exceptionally good staff, and it was put into effect by thousands of determined and hard-working people in the rural areas of 46 States. It is their work that we are paying tribute to here today, and I believe that the leaders working in the Rural Electrification Program today have done, and are doing a great and patriotic service to their Nation by refusing to buckle under the administration's efforts to destroy the program.

I would call upon the administration, though they have refused to allocate a dime toward commemorating this great program and its golden anniversary, to abandon their policies of trying to systematically dismantle the REA, and recognize its value to the country—to strengthen its services such as those provided by the Engineering Standards Division, rather than trying to palm them off as unnecessary activities of government.

Fifty years ago, the President signed Executive Order 7037 and gave rural Americans the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of electricity and modern living. Forty-nine years ago, the very Chamber echoed with the thunder of debate as the Rural Electrification Act came before the House for consideration.

Even then, though rural Americans were living under disgraceful conditions, there were those who tried to deny them programs that would correct these conditions. Rural electrification has always had its enemies. And it always will. We have been right in our support and maintenance of the REA and its program. It has been, and will continue to be, a foundation of hope and progress in the future for rural America.

Mr. Speaker, I also take the floor today to highlight the importance of the Rural Electrification Administration in another important area of rural America. That area is the assistance provided in rural communities for rural telephone service.

Mr. Speaker, the establishment of the REA Telephone Program in 1949 was an important milestone for rural America. Because of the depression and the unavailability of loan funds to maintain the small telephone systems that serve rural areas, the number of American farms with telephone service declined. By 1949, only 38 percent of farms had telephones.

With REA money, the rebuilding of these systems has progressed steadily. Many telephone systems started with 8- and 10-party lines, an operator and crank telephones. Over the years, these have been upgraded considerably. By 1983, approximately 96 percent of farms had telephone service. About 85 percent of customers served by REA borrowers have single party service.

But, the job is not done. REA money continues to be needed. An estimated 260,000 miles of cable is exposed to the extreme weather conditions prevalent in rural areas and must be buried. Rural Telcos are exchanging their older electromechanical switches for the new digital technology at a rate that will leave them far behind their urban counterparts. About 15 percent of REA telephone customers are still on party-line service—including 4- 5-, and 8-party lines. And the Bureau of the Census estimated in its 1983 annual housing survey, that over 10 percent of households—as opposed to farms—in non-SMA areas do not have access to telephone service.

Resolving these problems and maintaining affordable service will not be easy for rural Telcos. Deregulation is pushing telephone rates up, especially in rural areas. Keeping a strong REA will be essential.

In addition to providing funds for upgrading service, REA has provided many services to help small telephone systems. Such services are provided by the telecommunications engineering and standards division. Using feedback from borrowers about technical problems, REA's engineers work with manufacturers and consultants to design new products to address these problems. Thus, the private sector is stimulated to manufacture new products tailored to the special needs of rural telephone service. Such products are now widely used by REA borrowers and nonborrowers alike. Some are used around the world. The REA-established uniform equipment in construction standards are also widely used.

Finally, I want to point out the unique, national impact of the REA Telephone Program. It is partly because of REA that we now have nearly universal telephone service. This House has recognized the importance of a universal telephone network to the economy as a whole. Clearly, the service is more valuable if the caller is able to reach anyone in the country in rural or urban areas. Businesses rely more and more on the telephone for their transactions. When telephone service is available to all, everyone benefits.

In the interest of rural citizens, in the interest of the Nation, both the REA programs and its telephone program must continue.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his cooperation always in the endeavors that we pursue in behalf of bringing light to rural America.

I might add that another thing, the bounty which has come to those people living in rural America has been shared because, through the private or public, I guess you might say, association; the National Rural Electric Cooperatives Association. They share the technology; they share their bounty around the world. I have seen some of their activities in the Philippines and Central America and Africa. They have tried to bring to other areas of the world that which we have so ably mastered in this country.

That beautiful partnership between the people organized in partnership with the Government, using the resources, using their own resources, because when we talk about tax money, it is not tax money; it is yours and my tax dollars. The peoples' money. Sometimes the people wisely put some added money of their own to that which they have submitted to the Government to put it together to work for the benefit of both.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, following on the chairman's last remarks, the spirit of cooperation has been the secret of the REA movement from its inception in 1936. The Federal Government undertook a project to allow neighbors working with neighbors; farmers with farmers. Rural citizens with not quite urban citizens, but small towns and small communities to work together, jointly with their Government in order to bring about a dream. A dream of area coverage or of universal service. The dream that all Americans, whether they live in the country or whether they live in town, could have central station power. Or, as later, telephone service.

The concept of area coverage was born, and I submit today that it has served this Nation well. The Federal Government's involvement in and its assistance to the electric utilities dates back to that early inception. I think we need to draw one distinction at this point as we celebrate the 50th anniversary.

In the beginning, the so-called investor-owned utilities fought the REA. Today, we have no one in the electric utility industry fighting that which the House Agriculture Committee and others who we have heard from today, are suggesting for the future; the next 50 years of rural electrification.

Today, 50 years later, rural electric cooperatives are still operating in the areas which other utilities cannot or will not serve for very good economic reasons. Furthermore, by providing low-interest, insured loans to telephone systems which could not afford or qualify for commercial loans, the REA Telephone Loan Program brought telephone service to those same areas.

Given the tremendous positive role that agriculture and other rural-based resource industries play in the economy of our Nation, and the fact that rural areas are typically the most difficult and expensive to serve for both electric and telephone utilities, there is a strong and valid reason for continued Federal assistance to REA.

I would hasten to point out that no one within the rural electric movement is suggesting that they should be exempt from the Budget Acts; that they should be exempt from what is necessary to bring about a balanced budget for our Nation as a whole.

We acknowledge that there are some costs involved. There always has been a cost involved to bring electrical service to rural, sparsely settled areas. I think that anyone who will examine closely the results of the last 50 years would come to the same conclusion: It has been a good investment, Mr. Speaker, as you have suggested, of our tax dollars. They are our dollars; the charge we have in the Congress is to make those investments and make them pay dividends for the Nation as a whole.

Today, 98 percent of our farms are electrified, but that does not mean the job for REA is over. Population density is still low, and in some areas getting lower. The cost of getting electric service to our Nation's farms and ranches is still high today. The REA still has a vital role to play looking ahead to the future.

Mr. Speaker, I know as one who spent 9½ years of my adult life involved in the Rural Electric Program, as a manager of a rural electric cooperative; as one who has seen time and time again the leadership of our rural areas come together, look at the problems at hand and put together a solution that is good for them and good for our Nation. Those problems that some talk about today with rural electrification that prompt some to suggest that the days are over.

I think that once again we will see the leadership of rural electrification throughout this Nation come together, provide for future responses, whether it be another CFC, a self-help lending program to assist ourselves in doing that which we cannot do individually, or whatever it might be, the term that our cooperatives like to use is, "We are owned by those we serve," and Mr. Speaker, I think your comments suggest that rural electric cooperatives are owned by all Americans, and I hope all who are listening and watching and will be reading and observing the day that you commemorate today with this special order, that everyone will feel a sense of pride in that their small part of this investment has been a good investment for them and for all of America.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman. He is part of our celebration in that he has been an integral part as a manager of a co-op. I wholeheartedly concur with him that America should be proud that that is our investment, that is our return, not a CD of 9 percent, or investment of 12 percent, or whatever; but, rather, it has been an investment in enhancing the quality of life for Americans, of enhancing the opportunities in rural America, of enhancing the economic growth in rural America.

This cannot be measured in dollars and cents, but I assure the gentleman it is a lot more than 15- or 20- or 30-percent return. For his participation, I think we should give him a special commendation, since he has been an integral part of the process that we legislate. He has worked with the REA as a co-op manager.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON], a member of our committee.

Mr. EMERSON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleagues today in paying tribute to the Rural Electrification Administration on the occasion of its 50th anniversary. I thank my chairman for making this tribute possible.

When the REA was created in 1935, only 10 percent of the Nation's rural families had electricity in their homes and farms. Since then rural America has come to enjoy a vastly improved standard of living and productivity on America's farms has increased many times over. Nearly 1,000 member-owned electric systems provide power to more than 25 million people in 46 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Without the REA, it is quite possible that many of these people would still be without electric service today.

The task of providing electricity to rural areas has never been an easy one. Our rural electric systems operate and maintain nearly half of this country's power lines, but they reach an average of only five consumers along a mile of line. In addition, lines must often cover rough terrain and remote areas where accessibility for maintenance crews is very difficult. These were the factors that prevented electricity from reaching rural America in the early part of this century, and in order to overcome these difficulties, rural America forged a partnership with the Federal Government that continues to be the linchpin of our rural electric system today.

Mr. Speaker, that it is why I believe it is so important that we pause today on the 50th anniversary of the REA to remember how far we have come and to think about where we can go from here if we continue this worthwhile commitment. Because there is electricity, farmers will continue to increase their productivity to better feed a hungry world. Because there is electricity, new industries we hope will continue to locate in rural areas, providing jobs and improving the economic climate of these areas. Because there is electricity, rural America will grow and diversify both economically and socially in ways no one ever dreamed of a few decades ago. And because there is electricity, Americans can now recognize that rural living offers both an attractive and desirable lifestyle in which to work and raise a family.

Over the years, the REA has helped many dreams become a reality. As we move forward in our efforts to improve the rural economy, there can be no doubt that the REA will continue to be an important key to our success.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI].

Mr. KANJORSKI. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I am pleased to follow my colleague, the gentleman from Missouri on the opposite side of the aisle, because I, too, would like to say that I represent not a rural area, but a Pennsylvania area with a very small rural population and a very small part of the aspect of rural electrification has affected my district, but those citizens of my district realize the importance of electrification and the telephone to the rural areas of America.

We in Pennsylvania, although not having taken part in much of the subsidies that the Rural Electrification Administration has provided, appreciate what it has done for the rural farmer and the rural communities in America, and I, as one Member representing a district that is not particularly affected by the rural needs of America, pledge my support for the continued type of development of the infrastructure of America such as rural electrification.

But I would like to say one further thing, and commend my fellow Members from the South and the West, and many of the rural areas of America, that this is an example of a national policy program that developed in the days of the New Deal that have established themselves as not only good thought but well worked programs that have served all America, and that as we move through this Congress and the future Congresses, particularly with the change in philosophy that has occurred in America, and sometimes the attempt to throw the baby out with the bathwater, I would say that some of us in Pennsylvania, and New York, and the industrial Northeast, and the industrial central part of America will be asking you to support programs that will offer subsidies to our area of the country, too, because they, too, will reflect upon the needs of the people in the cities and the urban areas of America.

As we pledge to support you in the South, and the West, and in rural America, we would ask your indulgence to consider some of the philosophical needs of the people in the cities and the urban parts of America, and if we can put aside our political disagreements, and sometimes our philosophical misunderstandings, and realize that a public policy that serves America totally, completely, as REA has these 50 years, it can serve all Americans well, and those in need, whether they be in urban America or rural America, should have the interest and attention of this Congress. I ask you in the future to give us that type of consideration.

I would like to offer on the part of Pennsylvania and my constituents congratulations to the Rural Electrification Administration.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I thank the gentleman for his contribution and concur in his philosophy and thinking, and how gratifying it is for me to tell the gentleman that that is exactly what we have been doing; that we have been working with our urban colleagues.

As a matter of fact, it was trying to bring what the inner city had, or the urban area had, to rural America to make us equal, and not only with power and light but with the telephone. I not too long ago remember someone telling me: "Why should not a grandmother in the last hollow in the mountains in West Virginia not be able to call her grandchild who lives in California? Why?"

Well, through the REA we have brought the rural telephone to the menu, to see that last pole out in that last hollow in West Virginia. We have brought that grandmother, as you see the ads on the television, to talk to her granddaughter. A little hollow in West Virginia has as much right to talk to a granddaughter in California as someone in New York City, or Atlanta, or a big town like Mission, TX, which is my hometown.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my strong support for America's rural electrification program. As someone who grew up on a farm in northeast Kansas, I know firsthand what rural electrification has meant to the farms and rural communities across this great land. Clyde Ellis, the first general manager of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, put it best:

The wires which tied the houses of rural people together also seemed to unite their spirits. Beginning in the early days and growing through the years, there has been some unusual quality about the rural electrification program which has drawn people of diverse political and social views together in a common purpose.

With the passage of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, the Federal Government undertook the challenge of assuring that the farmers, ranchers, businesses, and individual residents of rural America would have access to reliable, central station electric service at costs reasonably comparable to those charged to consumers in the urban and suburban areas of the Nation.

To pursue this goal, Congress created the Rural Electrification Administration [REA], now an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. In the 53-year period from 1881, when the first central generating system went into service, to 1936, when REA was created, only 10 percent of all farms in the United States were receiving electric service. In its near half-century of existence, REA has provided technical assistance and long-term financing to rural electric and telephone systems throughout the Nation, and thus has played a vital role in bringing the rural areas of our Nation into the mainstream of modern life. The success of this effort is well established by the fact that some 99 percent of the Nation's farms and ranches now have access to central station electric service. Also attesting to the quality and soundness of the Federal investment in rural electrification and telephone is the fact that of the more than $20 billion in loans and loan guarantees made since the inception of the program, losses have been less than $50,000—a peerless record by anyone's standard. Electric power encourages industrial and economic development in rural areas, and results in a rural market of electrical appliances and equipment estimated at more than $1 billion per year.

The REA loan program continues to be a vital element in providing reliable electric service to rural areas at affordable rates. Rural electric cooperatives are still operating in the areas which other utilities could not, or would not, serve, as was the case when the REA program was created nearly 50 years ago. Co-ops, by and large, serve thinly populated areas. They have built and maintain 50 percent of the Nation's electric lines, but account for less than 10 percent of its total electricity sales. The average electric cooperative's revenue per mile of installed line is about 8 percent of that enjoyed by the average power company, and their consumer density is just 13 percent of the typical investor-owned utility. At the same time, however, the co-ops' investment per consumer is 162 percent of the investment of the power companies. Adding to these handicaps is the fact that the growth in co-op consumers' demand for electricity has now fallen to between 2 percent and 4 percent per year, compared with 8 percent to 12 percent a decade ago.

All of this, combined with enormously higher utility construction and operating costs, has contributed to the difficult financial and economic conditions in which electric cooperatives now operate. And most of all, this is why the preservation of a stable and adequate REA lending program as the centerpiece of rural electric financing is so important to the future survival of rural electrification.

Mr. Speaker, in my home State of Kansas, the first electric loan under the Rural Electrification Act was to the Cooperative Electric Power & Light Co. of Iola. The first rural electric cooperative in Kansas to energize, however, was the Brown-Atchison Cooperative Association, headquartered in Holton, which is located in the Second Congressional District. Special ceremonies marking the energizing of 88 miles of line took place on April 1, 1938. The Kansas Electric Cooperatives, Inc., was formed on August 18, 1941. Membership in this group has grown to include all 37 electric distribution cooperatives that served consumer/members in Kansas. Today, there are 35 distribution cooperatives in the membership of KEC, plus the two generation and transmission cooperatives, Sunflower EC and KepCo.

In addition, REA loans to telephone borrowers in Kansas provide modern telephone service for an estimated 141,377 rural subscribers over 42,582 miles of line. When the REA telephone loan program was authorized by Congress in 1949, only 68.3 percent of the farms in Kansas had telephones, and much of this was obsolete service. Today, more than 96 percent of the State's 74,000 farms, as well as many rural homes and businesses, have telephones, and a much greater proportion is modern dial service. The first REA telephone loan in the State of Kansas was approved on April 17, 1951, to the W.E.G. Telephone, Inc., of the community of Gardner.

Mr. Speaker, in closing let me just say that I believe the multitude of benefits and opportunities that the rural electric and telephone systems have provided to rural America, and, in particular, to northeast Kansas, cannot be overestimated. These programs have changed untold numbers of rural lives for the better. The many good men and women of the Rural Electrification Administration truly have been doing outstanding work over the past 50 years, and they deserve our thanks, commendations, and continued support.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture for his leadership in this area, and I thank him for giving me the opportunity to participate in this program today.

Mr. TALLON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

(Mr. TALLON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Chairman DE LA GARZA and Mr. PICKLE for scheduling this special order commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration.

In the early 1930's, South Carolina leaders knew that if the State was ever to regain its position of leadership in this country, its rural areas must be brought into the 20th century.

Up until this time, electricity was confined to the towns and cities where power could serve large groups of people over small areas of land. The power companies said it was uneconomical for them to serve rural areas.

President Roosevelt during this time created the Rural Electrification Administration by Executive order to provide funds for electrical power to rural America.

Even though President Roosevelt was a man of great vision, he probably did not realize he had initiated one of the most successful programs of all times.

Today in South Carolina, there are 20 nonprofit electric distribution cooperatives serving rural and suburban areas, with 30,000 members scattered over 47,000 miles of powerlines or nearly 70 percent of the total land area of the State.

When the REA telephone loan program was authorized by Congress in 1949, only 8.5 percent of the farms in South Carolina had telephones and much of this was obsolete service.

Today that amount is 95 percent and REA loans to telephone borrowers in South Carolina provide modern telephone service for an estimated 172,000 rural subscribers over 22,155 miles of line.

Members of the South Carolina electric and telephone cooperatives, and all those across this Nation, are a living testimonial to the American spirit and ingenuity.

When others said there was no way to do it, these men and women brought rural South Carolina into the 20th century. America is a better place today because of them.

But now rural America is facing the most serious economic crisis since the Great Depression, with 1984 showing an overwhelming number of farm foreclosures and business failures.

This is no time to compound an already critical situation by overburdening rural electric and telephone systems. They are essential elements in promoting and sustaining an improved rural economy.

We must continue the mission REA was charged with 50 years ago—to provide adequate, reliable, and affordably priced electric and telephone service to the rural consumer.

The job of REA is not finished.

For instance, in the telephone program, many plants date from the 1950's when the REA first began taking effect and now need to be replaced.

Most telephone cooperatives cannot obtain commercial loans, since REA holds the first lien on the assets of its borrowers. The REA can accommodate some of these liens, but in recent years has been reluctant to do so. Because of this restrictive REA policy in the granting of lien accommodations, commercial lenders are unwilling to make loans to REA borrowers.

As well, the telecommunications marketplace is changing constantly, and rural America should not be denied an opportunity to share in the telecommunications explosion.

Mr. Speaker, all Federal programs should be required to prove their merit. I believe the REA has and continues to be an American success story.

Rural electric and telephone cooperatives have become a national resource providing us all with a higher standard of living and a better way of life. We must work to keep the cooperatives viable.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, the REA has printed a book entitled "The Next Greatest Thing," depicting the 50 years of the REA, and I want to give a quote from whence the title came. A farmer giving witness in a rural Tennessee church in the early 1940's finished his words by saying this:

Brothers and sisters, I want to tell you this. The greatest thing on earth is to have the love of God in your heart, and the next greatest thing is to have electricity in your house.

Mr. Speaker, I quote a farmer from rural Tennessee who shall remain unnamed.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this week marks the 50th anniversary of rural electrification in America. For rural America, this is not just an anniversary of an event to be marked on a calendar each year. It is a celebration of a beginning.

The bringing of electricity to America's plains, its valleys and its hills marked the beginning of a new America.

When President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed an Executive order creating the Rural Electrification Administration May 11, 1935, he lit the spark for the raging fire of change to sweep this country. Sometimes the fire moved slowly, creeping into crevices of doubt and opposition. The first fire break it jumped was the U.S. House of Representatives. This bill establishing REA as an agency squeezed out of Representative Sam Rayburn's committee by one vote.

One vote determined the difference between darkness and light in rural America. One vote put electricity into homes where children squinted by lamplight to quench the desire to learn, to reach horizons beyond the darkness.

One vote started the journey toward eliminating drudgery on the family farm. Without that vote, how long would farm families have been letting the bucket down into the well and drawing it out by rope, then carrying the filled buckets to the iron pots and tin tubs to scrub clothes by hand? How long would women have stood for hours lifting the hot irons out of the coals? How long would they have stoked and fed the firebox to keep the woodstove going in the dead heat of summer to preserve food for their families to eat the coming winter?

Without that one vote, where would American agriculture be? How long would it have been before dairy farmers could have switched from milking by hand to electrical milk machines? How long would it have been before the milk was pumped directly into temperature-controlled vats free of bacteria?

Where would we be had President Roosevelt not come to Warm Springs, GA, and realized that his electricity bill there was more than at his estate in Hyde Park? Where would we be without his recognition of a need and the foresight to light the spark which set the fire of rural electrification raging?

Had it not been for the foresight of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, had it not been for that one vote in committee in the U.S. House of Representatives, the light of knowledge and progress would not be shining as brightly in my home State of Georgia and in the rest of rural America. Without that light, our past 50 years might not have seen us as great a nation as we have become.

And, that is why we focus on this 50th anniversary of rural electrification.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my chairman for letting me have this opportunity to join him and others in commemorating this great anniversary.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. BOULTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BOULTER. Mr. Speaker, a lot has been said over the years about universal telephone service and about the role of the Rural Electrification Administration in helping to bring the magic of the talking wire to the back roads and rural farms of this great Nation. It is fitting, on this, the 50th anniversary of the REA Program—and the 36th year of the REA Telephone Program—to stop and reflect on the critical importance of REA, then and now.

Most people of my generation are astonished to hear that the quality of telephone service in this land was at an alltime low following World War II. Phone service was better in the early part of the century, when Mr. Alexander Graham Bell's patents expired and newly organized independent phone systems mushroomed in every small town across America. And yet, rural America went largely unserved, simply because it cost so much to bring telephone service to large areas with too few people. But over the next 30 years, rural citizens helped themselves get into the telephone business, and by 1929, literally hundreds of systems were established. Granted, they generally had inferior equipment and provided inadequate service. But by 1945, following 15 years of depression and war, telephone service in this country was worse than it had been two decades earlier. Most of the small independents simply operated the equipment until it stopped and then went out of business.

All that began to change, when in 1949, following 4 years of effort in Congress by rural interests, President

Harry S. Truman signed the telephone amendment to the Rural Electrification Act, making long-term, low-interest loans available to rural telephone systems. That year, fewer than two out of five rural homes and businesses had telephone service of any kind, and most of what did exist was inferior multiparty. The "whoop and holler" "hello central" magneto telephone system was still very much in evidence in rural America.

There is a small telephone cooperative in my district, Santa Rosa Telephone Cooperative in Vernon, TX, with very close and compelling ties to the Rural Electrification Administration. Its story is best told in the words of its founding manager, Carl Freeling:

I spent the first 52 years of my life on a rural farm without a telephone. When my mother died, I learned of it three days after her funeral. In World War II, one of my brothers was killed in action on the day I received a letter from him. I was notified of his death by telegram seven days later.

The problems of day-to-day living were almost as great. Farm commodity prices varied so violently that it was impossible for us, living 16 miles from town, to keep up with them. We had to make a trip to town in advance to see what kind of prices our products were bringing and we delivered them the next day, often only to learn that the market had dropped and we were left with the choice of selling at a loss or not at all. Eventually I had to move to town where I could have a telephone and find out about changes in commodity prices. We couldn't get commercial telephone service in our rural area for love nor money until a bill was passed in Washington permitting the REA to loan us money to finance our own cooperative telephone system. I immediately made myself available to establish and organize a telephone cooperative in our area. We held a meeting with the mayor, the bankers and a few of the leading farmers. About 20 of us discussed the possibility of organizing an REA telephone cooperative. The newspaper, the Vernon Record, promised to give the project free publicity. That was all the encouragement I needed. I held a meeting in the vicinity of the small, rural settlement of Tolbert, TX and 75 farmers attended. After I had explained my purpose, I received not only the unanimous support of those present, but also cash deposits of five dollars and promises to pay and additional forty-five dollars each when their telephone was installed.

This enthusiastic reception gave me a shot in the arm. I held similar meetings in eight more communities with the same success . . . and the prospects for success seemed bright when our loan was approved by the REA in 1952 . . .

Initially, the costs of service seemed prohibitive, but by offering good telephone service and using constant persuasion our system slowly grew.

Looking back over this development as I am retiring, I have never regretted any part of it. I receive constant thanks from many individuals for the profits they have gotten from their telephones. The most isolated subscribers are the happiest. It's amazing what the cooperative telephone system has done for rural America.

Carl Freeling retired from Santa Rosa, in 1968, and passed away 2 years later, but under the guidance of manager Howard Thomas, who has been with the system since 1958, the cooperative has continued to prosper. Subscriber growth is slow in west Texas, but today every Santa Rosa customer has single-party dial telephone service. Manager Thomas reports that the company today is a very successful venture serving 2,200 customers in 14 counties over an area of approximately 2,000 square miles. He says they have less than one subscriber per mile of line, and each one of those customers are very appreciative of the quality telephone service they are receiving.

Indeed, the telephone loan programs of REA have done a magnificent job of helping to bring modern, efficient telephone service to our rural citizens. And yet, as we approach the 1990's, the REA mission is as critical to rural America as it was back at the middle of this century. In 1985, close to 12 percent of America's nonmetropolitan households still do not have access to telephone service.

Fully 16 percent of the customers served by REA telephone borrowers are still communicating on multiparty; 2-, 4-, and even 8-party lines.

Deregulation has been a boon to the telephone industry, if what I read in the papers can be believed. Unfortunately, I know that that is not necessarily so, since the revenues historically gained from long-distance service by local operators is declining, and the result is hitting rural areas the hardest. Next month the Federal Communications Commission's residential subscriber line charge will take effect, adding another dollar to consumers' phone bills. This charge will rise to $2 next year. Let's hope it stops there, as the FCC has promised. Otherwise, I know quite a few rural folks won't be able to pay their phone bill.

Speaking of deregulation, the entire telephone industry is just beginning to emerge from a protracted period of drastic change—change that has left small, independent, rural telephone companies reeling. Many didn't know if they would be in business a year down the road. Now that the industry is settling into its new, deregulated phase, rural phone systems are better able to evaluate their futures, and are again lining up for help from their old friend, REA. REA is needed more than ever by small, rural telephone systems. Witness its current first-time current first-time loan applications, which total close to $90 million, or its entire backlog of loan applications of half a billion dollars.

Thanks to the ERA telephone loan programs, rural Americans pay fair rates for their local telephone service. But their local service is far different from yours or mine. Consider this: While you or I might be able to pick up the phone, and on a local call, dial any one of 3 million citizens, can you imagine what it's like calling your child's school or the hospital—long distance? REA telephone borrowers reach an average of only 5.8 customers per mile of line compared to thousands in urban America. And it costs an average of almost $2,000 per rural customer to provide the service that we have all come to take for granted. In some areas, it costs as much as $7,000 to provide a household with a phone, which is substantially more than it costs in urban areas.

Most REA borrowers could not dream of paying commercial interest rates. Few can even afford to pay the rate charged by the rural telephone bank—9.5 percent.

What about universal telephone service? To a large degree, REA is responsible for it; for your ability to pick up the phone and reach virtually anyone in the country. We can't afford to abandon our commitment—either to universal service or to rural America. Can you imagine going backwards to a time when you couldn't call a relative on the farm? It could happen. But not as long as the REA programs are intact. Having a phone in Vernon, TX makes the phone in New York City or Washington, DC more valuable, since it creates that unbroken link in a truly universal telephone network.

As modern technology continues to create new and sometimes mystifying capabilities like data transmission and computer shopping by phone, rural America must be allowed to keep pace, to constantly upgrade its telecommunications systems—first to single party, digitalized service, then to compatibility with this vast array of new technology, or run the risk of finding itself forever disenfranchised from the mainstream that is America.

Today, with the REA Program in its 50th year, and the telephone programs of REA in their 36th year, much has changed from the days when Carl Freeling met with the farmers of Tolbert, TX to organize the Santa Rosa co-op. No, modern, efficient telephone service didn't just happen. The real story of the development of rural telephony is not one story, but hundreds of individual stories. The buried cables leading to a customer's pushbutton telephone follow a path that someone walked 36 years ago to get the signatures and memberships that led to the establishment of a telephone cooperative.

REA telephone borrowers are proud of their history, their record of service, and their record of complete and total repayment to the agency that made it all possible—the REA.

Let me offer my congratulations on this 50th anniversary, with best wishes for another 50 years of service to the people of rural America.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE LA GARZA. I yield to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Texas, [Mr. DE LA GARZA] for organizing this special order on the 50th anniversary of what is undoubtedly one of the most successful Federal efforts in the history of this Nation—the Rural Electrification Administration.

The people of Minnesota have many special reasons to celebrate this birthday. First, much of our State is rural. Thousands of farms depend on the REA for the electricity that drives modern-day agriculture. Second, former Minnesota Congressman and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland is also now the head of the National Rural Electrification Cooperation Association. Finally, in my district of southeastern Minnesota, we shared in a very special way this heritage known to many simply as "the day the lights came on." Red Wing, MN, which is in Goodhue County, was the sight of the very first experiment by the Northern States Power Co. to see whether extending electricity to farms was practical. On Christmas Eve, 1923, a 6.3 mile experimental Red Wing line was energized to serve several Burnside farms including the Burnside Consolidated School.

The Red Wing Republican Eagle, Red Wing's daily paper, made special mention of this event recently by commenting on the U.S. Postal Service decision to issue a special stamp commemorating the first electric lines to rural America. Instead of Red Wing, the stamp will commemorate Madison, SD, where the small rural community of Renner was energized on that same Christmas Eve in 1923.

Whoever gets the credit for being the first rural community to receive electricity, we have all shared in the benefits many times over, the benefit of electrification that the REA helped to bring to all of rural America. To close my comments on this special part of our history, I would like to quote Partick Dahl, who recently wrote in Midwest News:

"The coming of the light and power to rural areas, the first magic glow of the naked bulb in the farm home, was witnessed by farm families with awe. Even today, the recounting of that high and moving moment imparts a sense of wonder. Countless stories are still told of that night: of children, and parents, too, running through their homes, turning lights on and off, of women quietly weeping to see new appliances—their electric servants—really working.

Rural life and work, rural society itself, was transformed forever.

Those words speak volumes about the importance of the REA to the development of rural America. Today we celebrate 50 years of success for this vital program.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I think we might add here another side of the partnership, because we do not exclude the public utility companies, the privately owned utility companies, but rather they are part of this unique partnership in that they complement. They are a capitalistic for-profit type of corporation and they could not come for profit to many areas, so there came then the REA, not to the exclusion, not in competition, but to complement and that partnership now extends to such a degree that the investor-owned rural electric cooperative, which is in partnership with the people, its membership, their users, with a Government who assists them in financing, with the private public utility company who many times sells the power to the REA. It is not a competition. It is not an exclusion, but rather a partnership.

I guess that is the beauty of our system. That is the beauty of our country. That is the thing that we have fought and died for. Without attaching any emotional involvement, that is what it is all about, the ingenuity of the American tradition, the American mind in the Congress and outside the Congress, working in unison, that when the private sector reaches a point where it cannot service, then not in competition, but in complementing, we find a way in which Government can involve itself, hopefully always not to the detriment, but rather to complement, the one to fulfill the need and in unison.

So here we have a three-cornered hat partnership, the Government, the public utility, the private investor-owned REA, all working in unison, not one against the other, but bringing light to rural America.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska [Mrs. SMITH].

Mrs. SMITH of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I wish to thank my distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] for his leadership in organizing this opportunity to pay tribute to one of the most successful Government programs in our Nation's history, the Rural Electrification Administration.

Since its creation on May 11, 1935, the REA has been a significant contributor to the development of our rural communities across this country. Today, nearly 1,000 member-owned rural electric systems provide service to about 25 million people in 46 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Ninety-nine percent of our farms and rural homes are electrified today, largely with power provided by REA-financed generation and transmission facilities.

This achievement is no small feat, particularly in a Nation with the broad geographic expanse that separates many of our rural residences. For example, the representatives of REA who have come to visit the Capitol this week from my home State of Nebraska can attest to the sparseness of population across the Great Plains and Sandhills areas, where in one case in my home congressional district, 47 miles separate nearest residences.

Without the vital provisions of financing and engineering assistance for cooperatives and other electrical companies in the countryside, many of our rural areas might still be without electricity to power the milking machine, television sets, and the yardlights that speckle the rural landscape on those crystal-clear nights that are familiar to those of us with rural backgrounds.

Today, nearly all of us take for granted the conveniences that electricity offers in our daily lives. Yet as one who watched as the REA was founded and developed during its early years, I can recall the days when electricity wasn't available to the average farm family. In those days of the kerosene lantern and the washboard, perhaps no one foresaw the manner in which "the electric" would come to influence our way of living.

Indeed, no one probably would have guessed the tremendous influence of the Rural Electrification Administration 50 years ago, either. At that time, in the midst of the Great Depression, rural electrification was originated to help put people back to work. While this was the original idea, little time passed before it became evident that the gigantic task of lighting the countryside would require the skills and organization of a group of professionals with expertise in engineering and management, and an understanding of the rural life that would be so revolutionized by this wonderful gift.

In foresight of this development, a fellow Nebraskan, the late Senator George Norris, took the leadership in converting the REA to an independent lending agency with $40 million in loan authority, to be extended to farmer cooperatives, public utility districts, and municipally owned power companies.

The rest is history, as the REA program has grown steadily, along with the electrical needs of rural America. In 1941, more than 100 million dollars' worth of loans were made for the first time by the agency. By this time, REA-financed cooperatives and companies had over a million customers.

This growth has continued to the current day. To date, the cumulative amount of loans and guarantee commitments made to REA borrowers has totaled over $50 billion. And in this time of harsh financial conditions in the heartland, only $44,478 in loan principal and interest losses have been recorded—a loss ratio of approximately one ten-thousandth of 1 percent.

Certainly, this phenomenal record speaks for itself. I would like to take this opportunity to heartily commend all who have been instrumental in the efforts of the REA to light our homes, to bind together our rural communities, and to provide rural America with a new lifestyle that otherwise might not have been achieved. I look forward to a continued cooperative effort between the Federal Government and rural America, to ensure the continued vitality of our rural electrical system.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman.

Forgive me for intervening periodically with personal experiences, but as I travel throughout this country and abroad, most of our travel is at night to get to a hearing for the next morning or to get from one place to the next place to be there for the hearing the following morning; we are so blessed and it is so beautiful as you fly across America, to fly across rural America, to see those lights out there. You can tell the size of the community. You can tell that they have a little football stadium, or a little league stadium. You fly in many other parts of the country and see these wonderful things.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE], who I think has the time next after me and clearly has a number of very distinguished Members who want to participate in what I think is a very educational special order already begun by his colleague, the gentleman from Texas, so I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE] be allowed to proceed next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

COMMEMORATION OF THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RURAL ELECTRIFICATION PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA].

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, first, I want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Georgia for his kindness and generosity.

This would be an added tribute to rural America and to the REA.

Let me just conclude by saying that in many other countries, including Europe, you will see darkness as you fly across the countryside, no lights, no bluish-greenish lights. Now and then in Africa and some other areas you will see a bonfire. You see a flicker that you know is somebody burning some logs. This is their power. This is their light.

Throughout America you see those bluish-greenish lights throughout the countryside and you know that it is a public utility or the REA complementing each other and bringing light to rural America.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from Texas, for yielding to me these last few minutes.

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA] for this special order. I am pleased to continue that special order.

I particularly want to thank the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] for his courtesy.

Mr. Speaker, 15 years ago, this body held a special order to express support for the Rural Electrification Administration and to celebrate the 35th anniversary of the REA. Joining me during that first session of the 92d Congress were some of the staunch supporters of the REA. Today, I join with my friend KIKI DE LA GARZA, along with many of our colleagues, in celebrating the 50th anniversary of REA. This program is a great and good program that just keeps getting better.

The Rural Electrification Administration was created on May 11, 1935, by Executive Order 7037 by President Franklin Roosevelt. REA was made an agency of the Government exactly 1 year later with passage of the Rural Electrification Act.

When REA was created, only about 10 percent of the Nation's rural families had central station electric service. Rural America, for many, was a dark and dreary landscape, offering some promise and hope, but without that one critical element necessary to make this rich and fertile countryside productive and prosperous—electricity. One young Congressman from the 10th District in Texas was extremely dedicated to the cause of getting electricity to his constituents. Lyndon Johnson knew then, as we know now, that electricity can change for the better the lives of rural Americans.

Since the Rural Electrification Administration began, more than 99 percent of America's rural areas have received reliable, central station electric service, and more than 25 million people, including most of the Nation's farmers and ranchers, are served by the nonprofit, locally owned electric cooperatives made possible by the REA. One of the direct benefits resulting from the creation of this small Government agency was the creation of the most productive agricultural industry in the world. In the 1920's, before rural electrification, the American farmer could feed himself and about 20 other people. By the 1950's with much of rural America benefiting from rural electrification, that same farmer was able to feed himself and about 50 others. Today's American farmer feeds more than 75 people.

Agricultural production improvements are not the sole benefit of rural electrification, however, as a result of bringing electricity to light up the countryside, vast improvements in the quality of life in rural America have evolved. The educational testing levels of rural children improved markedly upon the advent of rural electrification. People who live in rural America today have the advantage of modern health care with access to the highly sophisticated medical technology. Rural American housing has also improved. The advent of rural electrification has enabled, in many sections of the country, central heating and air-conditioning and a resulting improvement in the general health of rural people of all ages. Rural telephone service has brought neighbor close to neighbor, within quick calling distance of friends and communities.

Rural electric cooperatives, capitalizing on the experience and expertise that brought rural electrification in the countryside, have taken the initiative in many communities to bring needed facilities and services such as community health care facilities, water and sewer improvements, irrigation projects, and more. Just recently, the Pedernales Electric Cooperative, in the central Texas hill country and part of my congressional district, has instituted a communications system in their area for emergencies that is so good that the city of Austin is looking at it as an example for a system they might institute. PEC has already had many other services going as has Bluebonnet Electric Cooperative which is also located in my district.

These, and other rural electric systems across the country, have worked to bring business and industry to the communities they serve, to provide the vital off-farm jobs that diversify the rural economy and that provide the means of support that allow young people and small family farmers to stay in the communities in which they were raised, and where they might wish to stay. In fact rural electric borrowers, in the past 20 years, have assisted in the creation of more than three-quarters of 1 million new jobs in rural America, jobs that keep people on the farm and out of the already impacted cities.

These are troubled times in rural America. People who come from farming backgrounds and who want to continue to farm, committed young farmers who employ the best techniques to achieve maximum efficiency are being driven off the farms by the thousands each month because of a variety of economic conditions. Without the economic diversity created in part by these rural electric systems, that situation would be far worse than it is now.

Times have been tough in rural America before. But, since the coming of essential light and power made possible by rural electrification, there has always been a friend in the rural community—the rural electric cooperatives—whose leaders are concerned activists willing to lend a hand to solve whatever problems are present at the time, leaders who remain committed to the improvement of life in rural America, to the concept that agriculture, America's most vital industry, must be preserved and must flourish.

Mr. PICKLE. We do have several speakers and I would be willing to yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. VALENTINE].

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, today I join with my colleagues in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program.

In tracing the history of electrification of rural America, we are reminded of the high ideals, aspirations, and determination of the American people. A half century ago, rural Americans saw their need for electric power and light and worked with each other and the Federal Government to realize this dream. As a skeptical world watched, these pioneers created their own cooperative rural electrification program that has grown to over 1,000 co-ops across our Nation today. User-owned rural electric service not only enhanced the quality of life of the rural communities, but has made all of America a greater nation by the creation of jobs, advanced technology for hospitals, better serviced schools, and increased productivity to feed our Nation and a hungry world.

Since its inception, the Rural Electrification Program has made vast improvements in life on our farms and across rural America. At a time when our farmers face great economic adversities, we must continue to nurture and carry on the dream envisioned by rural pioneers 50 years ago.

Mr. PICKLE. I appreciate the gentleman's contribution. His State has been one of the best participants in the REA Program we have in this country, and many of our leaders in the program came from Carolina. We appreciate the gentleman's contribution.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PICKLE. I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, as we all rise this afternoon to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electric Program, I really can't help but observe how far we have come in our goal of electrifying rural America since the Rural Electrification Administration was created by Executive order in 1935.

Quite frankly, the REA Program was born out of the American sense of equality—that people who reside in rural areas should have substantially similar utility service as their urban counterparts.

And, as I have mentioned on the House floor on previous occasions, that certainly wasn't the case in 1936 when one of my predecessors, Garner Withrow, who served Wisconsin's Third Congressional District as a Progressive and a Republican for more than 15 years, took the well of the House to speak in favor of the very first REA authorizing legislation.

He eloquently pointed out that of the 6.8 million farms in the United States in 1936, over 6 million were without electricity. Even with the advent of the electric milking machine, America's dairyland—Wisconsin—had but 20 percent of its farms wired for electricity. And some States, such as Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi, were barely at the 1-percent level.

In short, the lack of electricity created a dramatic difference between life in urban America and life in rural America—a variance that was incompatible with our basic concept of equality.

And, as Republican Congressman Charles Wolverton of New Jersey so appropriately noted on the floor that same day in 1936, the REA would come to establish a permanent and comprehensive national rural electrification policy that not only bring the conveniences and comforts of electricity to American farmers, but would also stimulate American industry by greatly increasing the demand for electrical equipment and appliances.

Now, Mr. Chairman, from a rural electrification rate of 11 percent in 1936, we can now boast a near-perfect 99-percent level. Does that mean the job of REA is finished?

Hardly. On the contrary, we've just begun and, fortunately, are nearing completion of but the first phase of providing electrical service to rural America at reasonable costs.

As the REA begins its second 50 years and the second phase of its overall mission, we must consider those changes that will permit the program to respond and adapt to the ever-growing diversification of electrical needs in rural America while, at the same time, preserving the program's essential purpose. And, Mr. Speaker, that's a lot easier said than done.

It will take carefully crafted legislation to make the necessary adjustments in the program to preserve and extend our investment in the future of rural America. And, make no mistake about it, the challenges to that future are many.

Technological innovations for rural America are drastically altering the quantity of electricity needed by farmers. The exodus of many city dwellers to rural areas will increase the quantity and diversity of utility services demanded.

Thus, if we ever needed a healthy and dynamic REA to meet these new and dramatic challenges, it is today. Accordingly, as we pause to reflect on its first 50 years, we cannot help but consider the future of the Rural Electric Program as well.

It was rather ironic last weekend traveling through my district I stopped into a bakery in one of my towns to obviously buy some sweets to eat along the road, and as we were paying for it at the cashier's counter the lady there started bringing up some of her problems where she lives. She said: "You know, I live out here outside of town." It is near one of the more urban communities in my district. And she said a number of things were wrong and then she finished it by saying: "And, you know, I am on the Rural Electric Program so my rates are a lot higher than my neighbors who live in town."

What that points out is a fallacy which has existed so often, unfortunately, in this community, this town. That is that rural electrification provides a subsidy and, therefore, cheaper rates, rural electric rates to rural people than the urban consumers have at the same level of service. That is not true. She bore out those facts last weekend and we have seen those facts evidenced many, many times.

So the challenge of the REA in the future is going to be much. It is going to be providing the increased demand for electrical services. It is going to be responding to the changing electrical and technological needs of rural America, and most important it is going to be the challenge of trying to provide that service at rates equal to and not higher than our urban brothers and sisters.

The mission has started. It deserves a great commemoration for the progress it has made, but it is not completed.

I thank the gentleman very much for yielding me this opportunity to join with him in this celebration.

Mr. PICKLE. I thank the gentleman and thank him for his comments, and I know all those who participate in the REA Program appreciate his comments.

I think it is good for us to repeat again what the Members have said, that today, after 50 years of the operation of the REA, over 99 percent of the farmers in this country participate in the REA Program. And they can receive reliable, central station electric service.

Today, after 50 years in operation, over 25 million Americans receive electricity through these cooperative programs.

Now, that is important to know that that kind of service has been given to them by nonprofit, locally owned electric cooperatives made possible by the REA.

One of the direct benefits resulting from the creation of this small governmental agency was the creation of the most productive agricultural industry in the world. Today our agricultural production is the envy of the world.

If there is any one thing that the U.S.S.R. covets from us it would be our capacity to produce from our agricultural resources. They cannot do it. They try, and it seems like each year they have a shortage and they call on us for help. And we are glad to help.

But with all of their vastness of land, still they do not have that productivity, and I think a lot of it is the result of the REA Program.

In the 1920's, before rural electrification, the American farmer could feed himself and about 20 other people. By the 1950's, with much of rural electrification benefiting our people, that same farmer was able to feed himself and about 50 other people. Today the American farmer feeds more than 75 people.

Now, that is productivity and that shows you how much we have increased, threefold, in production.

Agricultural production improvements are not the sole beneficiary of rural electrification. However, as a result of bringing the electricity to light up our countryside, vast improvements in the quality of life in rural America have evolved.

The educational testing levels of rural children have improved markedly upon the advent of rural electrification. People who live in rural America today have the advantage of modern health care with access to the highly sophisticated medical technology that was beyond their dreams 50 years ago. Rural America housing has improved. The advent of rural electrification has enabled in many sections of the country central heating and air-conditioning, and a resulting improvement in the general health of rural people of all ages.

Rural telephone service also has brought service neighbor to neighbor within quick calling distance of friends in the community.

So all of these services have come about because of rural electrification and we should be grateful and salute this program on its 50th anniversary.

Mr. WRIGHT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PICKLE. I am pleased to yield to our distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WRIGHT] who knows something first hand of this great program.

□ 1610

Mr. WRIGHT. I thank my very good friend JAKE PICKLE for having yielded to me. I am grateful to him for having had the foresight to take this time in order that some of us on the House floor might say a few words of nostalgia, of gratitude, and of the progress that has occurred on the rural scene since that 50 years ago when rural electrification made its debut.

There are a few of us left who can remember childhoods when there was no rural electrification.

As a student in elementary school I used to visit my friends on their farms. There were no electric lights, they used lanterns. Sometimes they used candles, usually if they were lucky they used lanterns.

There was no such thing as a telephone on most Texas farms. Those outside my hometown of Weatherford certainly were not blessed with telephones. Fewer than 10 percent of the farms had the benefit of any use of electricity whatever. There were no electric pumps by which they could pump water. Many of them had windmills. They were dependent upon the vagaries of the weather and the water tables underneath them for their sustenance, for their health, for the well-being of their farms.

With the coming of rural electrification progress began to spread across America's landscape. America's farm families, over so many years, denied the privileges that had so long been available to their city kinsmen, became better customers and there burgeoned an entire new market for such things as deep freezers, refrigerators, electric fans, ultimately air-conditioning and television and telephones and all those things that symbolize this abundant American life that we enjoy and celebrate in this country.

I think on this occasion it is worth observing that rural electrification in the process of one generation turned America around from a stage in which fewer than 10 percent of our farms had the benefit of its benign services to one in which more than 90 percent of those farms enjoyed electrification.

When it was begun there were some who claimed that it was a terrible invasion on the part of Government in competition with private industry. The truth of it is that the private electric companies had chosen not to extend their electric service to farms because it was too costly, because it did not pay them, in the bottom line, to see to it that those American families had the benefits of electric service.

When we provided rural electrification with the benefit of a benign Government, a Government who reached the hand of friendship out across the miles to help those farm families to enjoy a part of this abundant life that is America, everybody benefited. The city electric companies did not lose anything. All along they had had the privilege, if they desired, to extend electric service to the farms and had not done so. And so it was no unfair competition to them. The marketplace, alone and unattended, the real selfish motive of profit its only goal, would not have provided service for many, many years, quite probably decades, to rural America.

It is in those occasions in those instances when it is not profitable for private industry to do that which is beneficial and in the public interest that a Government that serves its people, that is responsive to its people, has found that it can provide the difference, can create an atmosphere conducive to letting it be possible for these people through the organization of cooperatives to do it for themselves. We made that possible through low-interest-rate loans.

The Government has lost no money as a result of them. In fact, the entire economy is infinitely richer because of the broadening of the buying power and the participation in this economy by millions upon millions of additional people. I think the same thing may be said for such intuitive things as the Tennessee Valley Authority and other things that our Government has done to make life more abundant for America's farm families and other families previously denied.

On this 50th anniversary I certainly want to congratulate my friend Jake Pickle for having brought this to our attention.

Mr. PICKLE. I thank the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. Speaker, I was amused at his recollection of the early days of REA when he visited some of his rural farms out of Weatherford. It brought back to my memory some of my own experiences on a more limited basis. But I just wondered today how many Members of this body or those who might be listening can remember the days when we had to use the kerosene lamp. I wonder how many of you have had the chore of filling up the lamps at night so that you might have illumination during the evening.

I recall one of the comments that President Johnson used to say that that kerosene lamp caused him to have more ambition than almost anything he had to do except milking the cows. And that one of the almost hateful tasks he had was each night he had to somehow get that kerosene 5-gallon can and empty it out into the lamps. He said always the kerosene would get on your hands. Usually we had lost the little stopper on it and you would have an Irish potato and that sufficed. You could just slap that old potato on there and that held it pretty good.

But I will tell you, when you go to pour it out from that can into the lamps or into small buckets it always spilled over, it got on your hands, your hair, on your clothes, you would smell it all night. You would go inside the house at night and you could not get the wick lit just right, you would either get too much wick or too little wick to too much air or not enough kerosene. The lamp would get colored and sometimes you would have to blow it out and clean it and start all over again.

I imagine many a young man took a vow that "If ever I can get away from the kerosene lamp I will try to make something out of myself." I say that kind of facetiously but there is a lot of truth in it. So that is my recollection of the early days of the kerosene lamp. I remember them.

I vouchsafe that you would remember them too.

I yield to my good friend from Maryland.

Mr. MITCHELL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. PICKLE. I yield to the city man from Maryland.

Mr. MITCHELL. For the education of a poor old city fellow, what was the advantage of the Irish potato? What qualities does it have?

Mr. PICKLE. The potato was actually the stopper on the kerosene lamp. You always somehow lost a little screw, the little lid on it. When you did not have a lid on it you could not just let it go.

Mr. MITCHELL. So you used the Irish potato.

Mr. PICKLE. It served as a lid. You would just clamp it on there, the Irish potato.

Mr. MITCHELL. Would the gentleman yield a bit further for the education of this poor urban fellow?

Did the Irish potato have some absorptive capacities that took up some of the fumes?

Mr. PICKLE. The Irish potato did nothing but serve as a stopper, and it was not perfect because sometimes when you would stick it on the kerosene would come out and you would think it would be a good air seal but no such thing.

□ 1620

Mr. WRIGHT. If the gentleman would yield, I think our friend from Maryland [Mr. MITCHELL] needs to understand that no one sought then to eat an Irish potato that had been soaked with kerosene. That was not recommended.

In fact, it was highly discouraged. That served no purpose whatever in giving flavor to the potato. In fact, it saved the kerosene itself from evaporation and saved some spillage and possible danger, you know, if somebody had struck a match or a flickering ash had fallen from the fireplace onto that kerosene that might have spilled out on the floor, you could have had a fire.

Now, kerosene did have certain other values. Among them, if you had Bantam chickens or other types of chickens—

Mr. MITCHELL. Would the gentleman yield at that point? What kind of chicken?

Mr. WRIGHT. I would say a Bantam chicken, primarily, or another kind of chicken that had scales on its legs. You could rub those scales with "coal oil" which was a name applied to kerosene by some, and the scales would fall off, as if by magic. It was a marvelously wonderful medicinal purpose that it served.

But one did not eat the Irish potato, notwithstanding.

Mr. MITCHELL. May I thank both of the gentlemen; really I came here to learn and I have been very well educated in the last 2 or 3 minutes of this dialog.

Mr. PICKLE. I appreciate the gentleman's inquiry, and I know that he needs to be educated about these matters.

Let me say to the gentleman that the Irish potato helped, but it was quite difficult because after a time, the potato would just shrink a little, shrivel, and when you go to put that lid back on, you did not always get the same little ring you had made before, so you would be cutting another one. Pretty soon you would cut that potato up, and then it would spill off completely. It was not an easy task, and I tell you, living on a farm those days.

Now we tell about these things lightly. The fact of the matter is, it is well to remember that that is how we lived in rural America in those days, and the hardship you had with the lamp, the difficulty of hauling water, the great ordeals that our womenfolks went through as they tried to iron or wash. All of that disappeared, essentially, when we got the RE going full swing.

So it is good for us to recall these things, and though we might make light of it, it is a serious thing for us to remember.

I yield to the gentleman from west Texas, who is a real farm boy if we ever had one in the House.

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding, and I must say, in the recent colloquy between the gentleman from Maryland and the gentleman from Texas, my difficulty in remembering is somewhat greater. I was 2½ years old when electricity first came to our farm, but I can remember as well today as that day that one little wire hanging from the ceiling with the one light bulb on the end and the electricity coming in. I can remember it as though I see it today. How, I do not know; I remember very few other things.

I certainly do not remember the difficulties of kerosene at that age. I was not entrusted with the lighting of the lamp at that age; I was too little. But I fully remember.

Mr. PICKLE. Some of us more mature Members can remember those days.

Mr. STENHOLM. I would say this, Mr. Speaker. It is particularly fitting that the gentleman from Maryland has participated today, since he is waiting for another special order today which I intend to participate with him in: The commemoration of the Small Business Week for the United States.

In my district alone, I have 12 rural electric cooperatives with headquarters within my district. I have another 7 who have lines that come within my district, and I think that many of the things that he and I both will say in our recognition of the importance of small business, will be particularly appropos and applicable to the Rural Electric Program, because those rural electric provide many jobs, they provide many job opportunities, they in fact provide many opportunities for other small businesses who have been created within those rural communities and those small towns. That is what small businesses are all about.

I think it is very fitting that we recognize both the Rural Electric Program in its 50th anniversary, but also as we celebrate Small Business Week, we recognize we are talking about one and the same: Small businesses, working together to provide the jobs to provide that which has made America the great country we are.

I would further say to the gentleman from Texas, knowing a little further of your background, of the tremendous role that you have played throughout your political career and even before that, in seeing that we have gotten to this point of the 50th anniversary. The activities that you have been a part in, I know that others will join with me in saying "Thank you, Jake" to the gentleman for the tremendous leadership that you provided.

When I was a rural electric manager and president of the Texas Electric Cooperatives Association, working from the other side of the desk, or the other side of this Chamber, you might say, in recognizing the importance of those who have recognized, as the majority leader so eloquently expressed himself before.

Today I say thank you to a colleague.

Mr. PICKLE. I appreciate your comments very much. As a former manager of a rural electrification system, you can speak firsthand of the great good work that those cooperatives do, and that we hope they continue.

They have grown, and they have prospered. It is good for us to remember how much they really have grown. Let me give an example. When we started out in the Pedernales Electric Cooperative—of course, there were no users, and they said you could not get 100 people signed up. You could not get 200 people on the whole system, and they turned him, their Congressman, Lyndon Johnson down.

I remember he put on contests; he would say to different people: "If you'll go out and get people to subscribe, I'll get the one who signs up the most this month, I'll give him a hat."

I remember one man, E. Bade Smith, won the contest, one hat. One time he got 55 people to sign up. That was a monumental task, but that was quite an accomplishment.

Now from the days where we had no members, today we look at Pedernales Electric Cooperative. Today they have over 65,000 users on that one system alone. In the Blue Bonnet, which is located at Giddings in Lee County just below our city of Austin, that cooperative today has 42,000 people signed up who use electricity from that system.

Now that is over 105,000 people. That is almost half as many people in the whole district when we started out years ago. So it is good for us to remember how much we have done, how much we have accomplished, and therefore it is well for us to pause today to remember the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electric Cooperative Program.

I would be happy to yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma at this point.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, I do seek recognition.

Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to have the opportunity to speak before this body commemorating 50 years of electrification to rural America. I can remember when the lights came on for the first time in my rural area south of Bennington in southern Oklahoma. Electricity changed our lifestyle as it did for many rural Americans. The pride of rural Americans in themselves and their accomplishments grew as rural areas became plugged into the rest of the world.

The "night the lights came on" has become an unforgettable event in the lives of many rural people. Yet, today we take for granted this efficient system of nearly 1,000 member-owned rural electric systems that provide service to about 25 million people in 46 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

The year 1935 was the beginning of rural development with President Franklin D. Roosevelt's signing the law that created the Rural Electrification Administration. Now, 50 years later we stand at the edge of decision. Will this Congress accept the ideology of this administration to terminate a program that has been successful and changed the lives of so many people. REA changed the philosophy of rural Americans and their outlook on life. It was a light that overshadowed the darkness and despair of the period.

Today, we have the same kind of despair and tragedy in rural America as we see more than 50,000 farmers expected to be forced off the land this year. Electricity was the only light at the end of the tunnel for rural Americans in the late 1930's and early 1940's. For many it was the spark of hope as they realized that finally someone was taking notice of rural problems.

It is tragic that in a year that we are commemorating 50 years of successful service to rural America from the REA Program that this administration is proposing termination of REA. If the administration has their way it will be a blackout in rural America, because with fewer people on the lines rural users will not be able to afford the cost of electricity. Deregulation of the telephone company has already increased the rate of telephone subscribers.

It's not a coming storm that will affect rural electricity as portrayed so vividly in Thomas Hart Benton's painting. It's a storm that's already here. And, if the administration has anything to do with it then it won't blow over. It's a storm that will knock out the power to the homes and farms of every rural American. Combined with proposals to downgrade soil conservation programs and given agriculture's current economic status rural homes and farms face the biggest Dust Bowl and blackout since the 1920's and 1930's.

Anyone who was involved in the blackout a few years ago in New York City can describe the chaos and terror that struck the city that summer night. That same apparent danger is visible today in the proposals that have been made in the budget concerning REA.

When REA was created in 1935, only 10 percent of U.S. farms had electricity. By providing low interest loans to rural electric cooperatives, REA brought electric power to millions of rural homes that private utilities found unprofitable to serve. Today, 99 percent of U.S. farms have electricity.

A big enough breakerbox couldn't be built to absorb all the shocks that rural America will take as a result of the proposals by this administration. Without affordable power and continued quality service, rural America will virtually shut down. Granted the rural people will suffer, but higher electric rates will transfer to consumers through the purchase of food in the grocery store.

The administration has a choice today, to continue its efforts to weaken the bonds of a structure that has been a 50-year success or to use a tool that can provide rural development that will build jobs and keep farmers and ranchers on the farm and provide a cheap food policy for the consumer. We must decide. Are we going to throw the switch on rural America? Let's keep the current flowing across this great country and through its rural communities. Fifty years from now, will historians recall 1985 as the year that the REA Program was used to strengthen rural America or will they recall that 1985 was the year the administration terminated REA and the rural citizen have their electric bills increased 50 to 100 percent for some rural electric co-ops. If that occurs, then President Reagan has accomplished his purpose of exploiting the farmers from American soil—that surely will be a sad and tragic day.

Mr. PICKLE. I thank the gentleman.

The gentleman from Oklahoma heads up the Rural Electrification caucus for this Congress, and probably does as much as any Member of this Congress to advance the cause of rural America. His activities here the last few years have been very significant, and he certainly knows whereof he speaks when he talks about the value of rural America and the importance the REA Program plays in that program.

I would remind the gentleman that time was when REA's got started with 3 percent money, you could borrow money at very low rates. Now, 30 or 40 years ago 3 percent was not such a low rate. It was a pretty average rate. Today it seems like an extremely small figure. We have gotten away from that, and rightly so, and the co-ops now get money at the cost of Government, as they should be, but, in addition, now the cooperatives have formed their Cooperative Finance Corp. into which they have bought shares, and that program has built. So today when a cooperative goes to borrow money, it does not come just straight to the Government for appropriated funds, but they also can participate in their CFC; in other words, they are building up a financing mechanism to finance their own program, and that is good.

I am told just recently by the cooperative in my district, the Blue Bonnet, that they have asked for a loan of some $29 million. The REA would pay 70 percent of that loan and the CFC would pay 30 percent. In other words, it is a sharing program, and that amount is growing, so that if things continue on the present course, the cooperatives will be largely able to finance themselves.

I think the present administration thinks the REA is another social program and therefore they ought to cut back on it or do away with it. It is not a social program. It is an investment in America that is as important as our educational system and many other programs. So we must tell that story.

Now, today as I conclude this special order I want to commend the Rural Electrification for their 50 years of service to the American people. It has been a magnificent gift to the American citizen, and we should be grateful for it.

I would hope that the co-ops, though, out across our land would remember that they represent the people on the farms, by and large, and they are the ones they are serving. They are not serving themselves, they are not a utility, in the sense of the big private companies. They are supposed to be serving rural America. And I would hope that they would ask the members of these cooperatives what they want, what kind of service can they give. I would hope that the members who belong to the cooperatives go to their annual meetings and just do not take it for granted that the cooperatives are going to treat you right.

You go there and voice your opinion and cast your ballot; have a say-so in that cooperative so that they know what you are thinking and how you are feeling. If you have got some disagreement, remind them that the program belongs to you, not just a cooperative or someone else, but belongs to you, one of the members.

I would hope that the co-ops also would expand their services as they have in many different fields now, from electricity to housing to telephone service, and even today they are implementing on many of their farms solar systems. What a perfect system it is to augment their own farms.

So I think a lot of things can be developed and we can see further growth in both industry and business as we continue this program. It is very important that the people realize the importance to the American people. It is good for us in the Congress to pause long enough to say again that this is a good program; it has meant as much to America as any other one program, and we have got to remember it.

I think if I was to paint a last scene here before I leave, I would ask you a question, I would ask you people this question: What is the most peaceful scene that you can imagine? If someone were to ask you, what is the most restful or peaceful scene that you can have?

I will tell you what I think it is. I think it is being able to go to bed at night on a farm and listen outside and hear the tinkling of the windmill. A gentle breeze, blowing strong enough to turn that wheel; you hear the clinking and tinkling of the mill knowing that there is wind; water is being pumped; maybe a little rain. As you look out now, with REA in, you can see the illumination of a night light made possible by the cooperative. That is a restful scene. That is good for America. Let us keep it that way.

The accomplishments of the REA Program are truly deserving of much praise. It is appropriate that this body take note of those accomplishments. I want to thank my good friend and colleague, KIKI DE LA GARZA, for his leadership on this issue. I also want to salute this body for its role in the establishment and continued concern and efforts on behalf of electrification for rural America. I hope we will indicate our support for this program by continuing our present funding for the REA at the fiscal year 1985 level.

● Mr. EVANS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, in the past 50 years the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] has played an invaluable role in the development of our rural areas. It continues this tradition today, providing many of our rural communities and outlying areas the electricity needed to light their homes, and the power necessary to operate local businesses and industries.

This tradition of excellence is now under attack. The Reagan administration's budget for fiscal year 1986 calls for, among other things, the phase out of all REA loan programs by 1990. While this proposal leaves no doubt as to the future of the REA in the eyes of President Reagan and OMB, it cannot be interpreted as a recent decision, based solely on current budget realities. No; the REA was lined up in the gunsights of OMB long before the administration's budget was released. The call for a complete phase out is only the final salvo in a war of attrition which the administration has been staging with the REA over the past few years.

These efforts have been successful to date. The staff of the REA has declined to its lowest level since 1938. On June 30 of this year, the agency had 625 employees. It was authorized for 660. Shortly afterwards, the USDA put a freeze on new hiring at REA until the end of the fiscal year. This, in light of the fact that in May 1982, before the Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit, and Rural Development of the House Agriculture Committee, REA Administrator Harold Hunter, in response to questions concerning the shortage of manpower at the agency responded that "we're just about to the point now where we're ready to move ahead on that".

The level of morale at REA has followed suit. The employees are now subject to attempts to dismantle the agency through the elimination of essential divisions. "If I wanted to kill the rural electric program, the very first thing I'd do is abolish the engineering standards division," says Bill Matson, general manager of the Pennsylvania Rural Electric Association. That, of course, is exactly what the administration has proposed.

The engineering standards division establishes and enforces standards of safety, quality, and efficiency in the construction of rural electric systems, and provides technical assistance to REA borrowers and REA field representatives and the headquarters staff. These standards require all rural electric systems to use uniform materials, equipment, and plant design, which in turn holds down construction costs and enables rural electric crews to help each other to quickly and safely restore electric service in times of disaster.

The administration rationale for elimination of this division is based upon their unflappable belief that, as with many other Government-administered functions, private industry could carry out this function in a more effective and cost-efficient manner. I think that argument is deserving of some thought. Most private industries, as far as I know, are in business to make a profit. To achieve this goal a company will take a good, hard look at the costs involved in their production and/or service process, and determine whether or not the total costs justify their commitment of time, energy, and capital.

With that in mind, let's take a brief look at the scope of the product and service developed and administered by the REA: Only about five families live along each mile of rural electric line. It takes more than half the Nation's poles and power lines, owned and maintained by 1,000 locally owned, nonprofit rural electric systems, to serve 25 million people in the far corners of our Nation. Nearly 75 percent of all rural electric systems have higher costs and higher rates than neighboring urban facilities.

Does that sound like a scenario that most, if any, private industries would be willing to tackle? Moreover, can we seriously believe that the 50 years of REA experience which have made electricity a reality for our rural areas can be readily duplicated by an untold number of separate private businesses? I think not.

As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, I am keenly aware of the essential services which our rural electrification program has provided for millions of our rural citizens. I am also greatly concerned about the effect that the elimination of this program could have on our agricultural sector, which is currently in its worst throes since the days of the Depression. Then, as now, this program gives our farmers the security of a reliable source of electricity at a reasonable rate. To eliminate the REA would just be one more problem heaped upon our farmers. Moreover, it would seriously hinder the development of our rural areas. In this moment of need, we must work to see that this imprudent and short-sighted proposal does not reach fruition.

I urge our colleagues to look beyond the budget-cutting rhetoric of the administration and do everything in our power to see that the REA is not forced to die a quiet yet untimely death.

● Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, 1985 marks the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration, a program that made electric power a reality for rural America.

The story of the Rural Electrification Administration is remarkable, a shining example of what Americans can accomplish when they work together in their local communities.

The Rural Electrification Administration was created when President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order 7037 on May 11, 1935. One year later, Congress followed and passed the Rural Electrification Act.

Soon after, farms, ranches, and rural homes and businesses began to be transformed. The farmer now had a new "hired hand"—the electric motor. It brought with it unlimited potential for increasing agricultural productivity. Exhausting daily chores became greatly assisted by electric power. Furthermore, electricity furnished extra daylight hours in the farmer's barn allowing more time to be devoted to his harvest.

While the rural economy was being revolutionized, something special was also happening in America's homes. Electricity provided unlimited power and light for work and leisure.

Electric-powered appliances helped with the housework while affording more time to families to do what they enjoyed. More time could now be spent studying, worshipping, relaxing, and playing. Overall, limited leisure-time became more satisfying and work became more productive and rewarding.

Although most Americans today can take electric power and its benefits for granted, it is important for us to recognize the accomplishments of the Rural Electrification Administration. Because the REA and Americans all across this land have toiled for half a century at improving our rural communities, the quality of American life has improved immeasurably.

● Mr. TRAXLER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join today in paying tribute to the programs that have helped to provide electricity to our rural areas throughout the country. This is a most appropriate special order, because rural electric is most special.

We all too often fail to appreciate the programs that make our lives more livable each day. We become so used to having certain things available that we simply expect that they will always be there.

This hasn't been true for the provision of electric power in rural areas. Many public power companies would not take the risk of expanding into these areas because of the cost of providing service. But people in rural America need electricity just as much if not more than the people in our more populated areas, and the Rural Electrification Administration has helped to provide this assistance over the past 50 years.

More than 25 million Americans get their power from 1,000 rural electric systems that were developed with the help of the Rural Electrification Administration. Many of the people that I represent get their power from an important entity in my congressional district, the Thumb Electric Cooperative, and they pay fair prices for the service they receive. If it wasn't for REA, I know that the lives of these people would be vastly different, and the community structure of this area would also be quite different.

But I am very sad to say that after 50 years of aiding the people who live in rural areas, REA may soon find its ability to continue to provide assistance curtailed if the President's budget is adopted. As he has with so many other important domestic programs, he has said with his budget that the effort is no longer needed. That is not what I hear from the people I represent, and that is not what the Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations on which I serve was told my several witnesses. They told us that without REA their lives would change. People would find it difficult to live in certain parts of the country, and many more would face deteriorating service as electric power systems continue to age. But in the view of a few, we would "save" money.

It is true that some suggest that these rural systems should get financing from private sources. But rural areas are not the prime operating areas for investment bankers. And even if such loans would be made available from private lending sources, few electric co-ops could afford the interest rates while those who could would be forced to increase their power rates dramatically.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in the greatness of our country. I believe that this greatness is the product of we recognizing as Americans that our country has diverse needs, and that we will be the strongest when we meet as many of these diverse needs as possible. One-line platitudes are easy, and for this reason many people choose to believe them. But I challenge anyone to meet with people who depend upon rural electric co-ops and hear about the importance they have for their members, and then come back and tell us with a clear conscience that these programs can be cut.

The Rural Electrification Administration has helped millions of Americans since its creation, and the National Rural Electric Cooperatives Association has done stellar work in keeping all of us informed of the continuing need for REA programs. It is a privilege for me to participate in this tribute, and I hope that all of our colleagues will join me in wishing our rural electric programs another successful 50 years.

● Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to join with my distinguished colleagues, JAKE PICKLE and KIKA DE LA GARZA, in this special order to commemorate the accomplishments of the Rural Electrification Administration.

As a New York State Assemblyman, I had the opportunity to personally learn of the benefits to my upstate rural farm areas of the rural electrification program. As a result, since I have been in Congress, I have consistently been a strong supporter of the rural electrification program.

Through the efforts of cooperative groups such as the Rural Community Assistance Program and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, a tremendous job has been done over the years of bringing affordable electricity to rural America. Our Nation's farmers and ranchers have been able to provide high-quality food and fiber because rural electricians have provided them with the electric power they needed to become efficient. The over 1,000 rural electrical systems now in operation account for and maintain nearly half the country's power lines. This has allowed our farmers to focus more on expansion and diversification of their economic activities. In so doing it has made America the feeder of the world.

The Rural Electrification Administration has enabled the public and private sector to build a thriving economy where once there were few, if any, job opportunities. Unfortunately, the Reagan administration now proposes, in its fiscal 1986 budget, to cut the legs out from under the rural electrification movement in America. To my mind this would be a tragedy Congress must not allow to happen.

I commend the Rural Electrification Administration, on this, their 50th anniversary, and want to express my continued support for the tremendous job REA programs have done. These programs reflect the indispensable role of electric power to the American farm system.●

● Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to join in this celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electric Administration. I extend my congratulations to all the rural electric co-ops who have made such significant contributions in raising the standard of living for our Nation's rural areas.

As a native of rural Kansas and Nebraska, I am aware of the great benefits in rural life made possible by electricity. In appreciation, I wish to extend a special note of recognition to the statewide association, the Kansas Electric Cooperatives.

This year as we debate the future of the REA, we profit from a review of what has made this program a success. By recognizing that a true need was being left unmet, and that private enterprise would find these sparsely populated markets unprofitable, a partnership between Government and nonprofit member-supported cooperatives has been able to bring electric power to rural America. In a model program, both parties have been able to do what they do best. The Federal Government provided the focal point and the seed money while the local organizations were able to shape the delivery of electric service to best fit their needs and resources.

I have only one co-op which represents a very small portion of my district. However, REA was an instrumental factor in those great advances in American farming which we all enjoy today. Much of the productivity of our State's great wheat farms can be traced to the availability of electric power. The REA was charged with bringing power to rural America, a job which they have performed magnificently. The future of REA is a self-sufficient program insuring our hard earned gains will benefit future generations.●

● Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker, 50 years ago, less than 10 percent of all rural Americans enjoyed the benefits of central station electric service. Even in a densely populated State such as Pennsylvania, only 25 percent of the farms and rural homes were electrified.

Today, virtually every corner of the Nation, including some of the most remote areas, are served with electricity, largely because of the work of the Rural Electrification Administration.

This Saturday, Mr. Speaker, will mark the 50th anniversary of this Agency. It was on May 11, 1935, that then President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed the Executive order creating the REA, an agency that over the years has provided loans, loan guarantees, and other forms of assistance to about 1,100 rural electric utilities and more than 1,000 rural telephone companies in 46 States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, Rota, Saipan, and Tinian.

Quite frankly, if it were not for REA, many parts of this country would be without electric or telephone service.

Those of us from Pennsylvania, however, have a special closeness to the REA Program, primarily because the concept was developed during the 1920's by Pennsylvania Governor Gifford Pinchot.

During that decade, Governor Pinchot commissioned a study of the Commonwealth's electric utility industry and one of the principal recommendations was that everything possible should be done to bring the State's farmers and other rural residents into the 20th century by providing them with electric service.

As a testament of the work done by that study commission, it should be noted that Morris Lewellyn Cooke, the man who directed the electrification study for Governor Pinchot, was chosen by President Roosevelt to head up the REA. In fact, Pennsylvania is particularly proud of its role in the REA because the second administrator of the administration was John M. Carmody, also from the Keystone State.

In addition to serving to extend electric power, initially, and telephone service later, REA was developed as an unemployment relief program. The idea was to provide or guarantee loans to construct rural electric and telephone systems with the assurance that the actual construction would be done by the WPA.

As a Pennsylvanian, Mr. Speaker, I take great pride in honoring the 50th anniversary of this most important program. The services rendered to America's farmers and rural dwellers in the past 50 years cannot be overstated.

The benefits of this program, initially to the millions of unemployed during the Great Depression who were able to earn something and feel productive, and later to thousands of once-isolated families, are visible to the eyes of anyone who has traveled outside our primary and secondary population centers.

I am delighted to offer my anniversary wishes to the Rural Electrification Administration.●

● Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, today we have an opportunity to pay tribute to one of the greatest examples of the cooperative spirit that binds our Nation together * * * the Rural Electric Administration.

Fifty years ago the lights began coming on all over rural America, leaving confused farmers holding on to pull chains, fearing that the light would go out. The confusion soon passed, as farmers began to realize the potential for electricity. Workloads were considerably reduced, productivity increased, and activity on Main Street soared. The electric co-op soon became a vital foundation for rural communities, as powerlines went up around the country.

In its 50 years, the REA has put 25 million consumers on the lines of rural electric systems. Nearly half of the country's powerlines are operated and maintained by the Nation's rural electric systems. The era of the "Dirty Thirties" was transformed forever when the REA brought light to rural America. It is proper to pay tribute to the REA, a stellar example of people and communities working together in a spirit of cooperation.●

● Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I join my colleagues today in marking the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Act. The last 50 years have given rise to dramatic improvements in the quality of life for rural America, due in large part to the farsighted thinking of the originators of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Few other government programs have achieved the remarkable success of this program. Through it, rural America literally came out of an age of darkness into the modern world and at the same time, American agriculture has grown to one of the most imposing economic powerhouses on the globe.

We are now in the midst of writing a new farm bill, one which will be of critical importance to the future of agriculture. As we do so, we surely need to think critically about our policy and where it needs to be reformed. We live in a different world and we need updated policies to lead us into the next 50 years of advancements. However, we should stay mindful of the success Federal agriculture policy has accomplished. The critics, naysayers, and forecasters of doom and gloom see nothing but mistakes and peril in our policies. In their ideological zeal, critics would remove government's constructive hand from farm policy and cast American farmers adrift on an uncertain sea.

To them, I say: "Take a closer look." In our enthusiasm to criticize, improve, and reform, let us not forget what we have achieved. From the bleak, dark days of the Depression and the Dust Bowl, we have an industry which drives 20 percent of our economy, employing 20 percent of our workers, and reaching every corner of the country, indeed the globe. The REA has been a full partner in that success, and will continue as we move into the 21st century.

Cut spending and wring out the waste from government programs, yes. But slash them wholesale without thinking of the consequences, no. REA is of crucial importance and needs continued government support. Rural America is now with lights and telephones, but to continue to develop and grow and meet the challenges of the future, those needs will not wither, they will remain as pressing and crucial as ever before.

Today is truly a remarkable day. Ask any farmer in rural Kansas and he will affirm my amazement and support for the work REA and the network of our Nation's rural electric and telephone cooperatives have done. This is a legacy which must be preserved and built upon, not cast aside. Let's keep those lights burning bright.●

● Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. Speaker, it is truly a pleasure to be here today to salute the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration [REA]. Most of us here cannot imagine what life before the REA was like, but many of my constituents probably remember it first hand. They remember the difficulties of providing wholesome food for their families because they did not have electric refrigerators. They spent hours performing tasks that now take only seconds because now they have electricity.

With the advent of electricity in rural America came economic development. Rural electric borrowers, in the past 20 years, have assisted in the creation of more than three-quarters of a million new jobs in rural America, not to mention the millions of new jobs that were created because of electrification in general. Today over 50 percent of my constituents live in rural areas, and over 98 percent of them enjoy electrical service. That is pretty impressive, and I give much of the credit to the REA.

The success story does not end with electricity. In 1949, the REA was granted the authority to make loans for telephone service. Never again would the elderly, the young, and the helpless be isolated by the many miles that separated them from their neighbors.

The goal of rural electrification is being met, and all of America has benefited. No longer is rural America isolated from mainstream America. Indeed, rural America is mainstream America.

It is rare to see a cooperation between government and private individuals to be so successful. The last 50 years have proven that such partnerships can work. Arkansans continue to be involved in bringing efficient, inexpensive electricity to our State, and I am proud to offer my congratulations and heartfelt thanks to them on this very important anniversary.●

● Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues today in recognizing the invaluable contribution that the Rural Electrification Administration has made during the past 50 years to thousands of people in rural America as well as our Nation as a whole.

Our Founding Fathers believed that all men were created equal and REA Programs have certainly helped bring equality to living standards in rural areas.

In 1935, electricity reached fewer than 12 percent of our Nation's farms. In 1982, 99 percent of our farms had electricity. REA's responsibility to modernize and strengthen this vast network is as important today as starting the system was 50 years ago.

Economic growth depends upon strong energy networks and REA's role in these networks is crucial to ensuring that rural America shares in the economic growth of our Nation. Without the REA, farm families and small businesses in rural areas could be priced out of the electric market. No doubt, that would be devastating to the economies of rural areas.

We must take this 50th anniversary as an opportunity to repledge our support for the REA and the people which it serves.

TELEPHONE SERVICE IN RURAL AMERICA

In 1949, the mission of the Rural Electrification Administration was expanded to include telephone service when Congress declared a national policy of assuring the availability of adequate telephone service to the widest practical number of rural users.

Undoubtedly, the REA Program has been one of the greatest success stories of our Government and its citizens working together. In my own State of Oklahoma, only 32 percent of the farms had telephones when the program began in 1949. Today, more than 95 percent of the State's farms, as well as many rural homes and businesses, have telephones.

The story of the Panhandle Telephone Co-op in Oklahoma is an excellent example of the success of this effort to improve the quality of living and working in rural areas.

Back in 1950, no commercial telephone company was willing to assume the task of providing telephone service to the rural areas of the Oklahoma Panhandle with extensions into Texas, New Mexico, and Colorado. Even today this co-op has less than one subscriber for every mile of telephone line. The task was not economically attractive, and existing telephone companies were not eager to incur great expense and risk to extend lines into these remote rural areas.

For 6 successive years, 1962 to 1967, the co-op operated at annual losses in its struggle to meet service needs. But it never gave up. Competent managers—formerly Bob Jeffries and currently Gary Kennedy—along with the co-op's succession of dedicated board members, fought hard and made great personal sacrifices to explore every possible way for the struggling co-op to meet its telephone service needs.

In 1974, the co-op was one of the first of the Nation's co-ops to pioneer the cost study method of dividing toll revenues with Southwestern Bell and General Telephone. It was recognized that although this new procedure would require more work and effort from management and employees, it would produce significantly greater toll income to keep local rates low. Ever since, balance sheets and operating statements have steadily improved.

In view of the current changing nature of telecommunications industry, the co-op alerted its customers that telephone service pricing through-out the Nation is changing drastically—more than at any time in history. Court and regulatory commission efforts to induce competition into telephone services are forcing the price of most telephone services to be changed to reflect their precise cost levels. Co-op representatives appeared before a panel of State and Federal commissioners to argue the case for preserving affordable local telephone rates for small rural communities. Universal service at affordable rates must be preserved or we will end up with universal service only for those who can afford it. The deregulation of airline rates has either eliminated service or has produced tremendous increases in airfares for rural towns. Deregulation of telephone services must not force the rural citizen to give up his telephone or even curtail its use.

The opportunity for Panhandle Telephone Co-op to succeed was made possible by a loan from REA. On the 50th anniversary of the REA Program and the 36th anniversary of the telephone program I offer my congratulations to the agency for helping to provide adequate affordable telephone service to constituents in my district. I extend my best wishes for an additional 50 years of service to rural areas throughout the country.●

● Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Speaker, it is my sincere honor and privilege to participate in the special order today commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program.

The REA means a great deal to me and to my district in particular. Out of the 18 REA's serving the State of Florida, 11 are in my district.

Little did President Roosevelt know when he signed an Executive order back in 1935 to create the REA that so many lives would be touched and affected by his hope of bringing power to rural areas.

As of January 1, 1985, Florida's rural electric cooperatives were serving more than 480,000 people over 46,000 miles of line. Over the years, these low densities have continued to present difficult economics for the rural electric systems and in Florida there are only 10.4 consumers per mile of line, a challenging task to this day.

The rural electric leaders of our State and throughout the Nation are to be congratulated on the contributions they have made to this Nation. Happy 50th anniversary to REA, rural electrification, and to all its leadership and members.●

● Mr. BUSTAMANTE. Mr. Speaker, light has long symbolized creativity and progress. But light was more than a symbol for the majority of rural Americans in the 1930's who lived without benefit of electricity. Light was a badly needed service. As late as the mid-1930's, 9 out of 10 rural homes were without electric service. Since businesses and factories tended to locate in cities where electric power was readily available, rural economies were vitally dependent on agriculture. Yet without electricity, agricultural production was inefficient, and rural life was characterized by hard work and drudgery.

On May 11, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt created the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] by Executive order. REA switched rural America on with electrical power. But it was the involvement of the rural people themselves that really provided power for the electrification effort. Farmer-owned cooperatives, many newly organized for the REA loans, worked energetically and vigorously to obtain REA loans and being electricity to the countryside. Their cooperative efforts brought light to rural America and set the stage for growth and progress.

As we mark the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program, it is worthwhile to remember and recount this story in American history. It is also appropriate to pay tribute to those Americans who today devote their energies to delivering electricity to rural America.

Rural electric systems are consumer-owned utilities serving rural communities throughout the country. More than 1,000 rural electric systems form a rural electric network. In addition, in 39 of the 46 States in which rural electric systems are located, statewide organizations exist. These organizations represent members' interests and coordinate such services as communications, training, purchasing, billing, and research. Through the efforts of all involved in rural electrification, the lifeline of electrical power is brought to farms, homes, schools, community institutions, and commercial enterprises.

On this anniversary occasion, I want to say thank you to those who keep the lights burning across rural America.●

● Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, the rural electrification movement, spawned in the New Deal, is one of the great success stories of our recent history. In just 50 years, its efforts have transformed the face of rural America. As the very fine book put out by NRECA, "The Next Greatest Thing: 50 Years of Rural Electrification in America," says:

Because there is electricity, the American farmer and rancher has been able to increase his productivity to easily feed our nation and to help feed a hungry world—at a cost that allows Americans to spend less of their income for food than people of any other nation in the world. Because there is electricity, millions of acres of otherwise arid or marginal farmland can be irrigated, stabilizing food production and lessening potential perils of drought and famine. Because there is electricity, Americans eat fresh foods of a quality that defies comparison with those of just a generation ago. Because there is electricity, small industries—or large ones—can locate in rural areas, diminishing population pressures on America's cities. Because there is electricity, millions of Americans have a real choice about where and how they want to live.

This is one urban Congressman who understands that the well-being of our cities, and indeed the health of our entire economy, is inextricably bound up with the prosperity of rural America. And while I join in celebrating 50 years of progress, I also share with the rural electric co-ops the belief that, contrary to the opinion of some in this town, the job is not done. There is still much to do in maintaining and building upon work of the past half century.

That is why I have introduced legislation in the House of Representatives that is designed to allow rural co-ops to compete on a more equitable footing with other businesses in providing employee pension benefits. Specifically, my bill aims to correct an oversight in current law in which NRECA's pension is excluded from the increasingly popular salary reduction pension savings program authorized by section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code simply because it is not a profit sharing or stock bonus plan.

Our national pension policy has sought to encourage a broad spectrum of Americans to save for their retirement and section 401(k) was adopted in furtherance of that policy. Yet because of their very nature, the rural electric co-ops do not have stockholders and are nonprofit organizations. Thus, they have been denied the pension benefits available to most public utility companies, for example.

My bill would explicitly allow defined contribution plans of rural electric cooperatives to include a qualified cash or deferred arrangement to encourage pension savings. Since the legislation is narrowly drawn to include only rural electric cooperatives, the revenue loss will be negligible according to the Joint Tax Committee. At a time of great concern over the deficit, this is a very important point in the bill's chances for success.

In closing, I want to congratulate the men and women who have built and sustained the Rural Electrification Program. But, truly, their monument is their work, which has so enriched the lives of millions of rural Americans.●

● Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, today we celebrate 50 years of the Rural Electric Administration. It is hard to imagine that less than one lifetime ago rural Americans lived much like their pioneering ancestors. Before the coming of REA life in rural America was ruled by the amount of work that could be done by daylight. Without the modern conveniences of electrical appliances and farm equipment life was hard and there seemed little that could be done to improve the standard of living. Only the wealthy could afford electricity in the country. The average rural American could not escape from the daily drudgery of working without the assistance of electricity. That was before Franklin Roosevelt created the REA. This step gave rural Americans the opportunity to help themselves, improve living conditions, and increase agricultural productivity. The Government provided the opportunity but it was the people of rural America that brought about electrification through hard work, organization, and the cooperative. It is this spirit that today keeps over 1,000 rural electric systems serving 25 million consumers in the most remote areas of our Nation. In recognition of this achievement it is fitting that we commemorate the beginnings of this great program.●

● Mr. GRAY of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it is a distinct privilege to join my distinguished colleagues J.J. PICKLE and KIKI DE LA GARZA in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Having been raised on a farm I know first hand what a great value REA has been to rural America.

Since 1935 our country has been growing from mud roads and kerosene lanterns to super highways and modern farms, thanks in great part to this great program of electricity and telephones provided by REA.

As one farmer to another I salute these great achievements for America and wish REA well for the future. I want to thank my close friends for taking this time.●

● Mr. BARNARD. Mr. Speaker, on May 11, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed an Executive order creating the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] to bring power to rural America. It is one of the greatest success stories launched by any government.

When the agency was created, only 1 out of every 10 farms had electric service. In the early months of the development of REA, it became clear that power companies were not interested in REA's plan to construct electric lines with loan funds that were to be used on an area-wide basis. REA field personnel and the agency's engineers and planners in Washington found instead that it was nonprofit cooperatives, a familiar form of rural business enterprise, which were coming to the forefront, many of them newly organized for the REA loans.

Rural life and work, rural society itself, was transformed forever when rural areas became electrified. The entire process, organizationally and technically, was a test of the ingenuity, resolve and skills of rural citizens and their leaders.

Georgia has several cooperatives which build generating and distributing plants, and provide power at comparatively low costs to thousands of Georgians in rural areas. I have seen first hand what a difference REA can make to bring opportunity to rural users and rural businesses. The facilitation of telephone and electric services has permitted a section of the country that might have been left behind to keep up with more populous areas where the communication and energy industries prosper. The REA has played an important role in unifying numerous small communities and improving the quality of life.

Again, I wanted to take this opportunity to congratulate the Rural Electrification Administration on the occasion of their 50th anniversary. Universal electric and telephone service has become a near-reality because of REA's efforts, and all Americans—urban and rural—have benefited from this achievement.●

● Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, we celebrate today the golden anniversary when opportunity was extended to rural America some 50 years ago—the creation of the rural electrification program which brought electricity to millions who otherwise would have been left in the dark as our Nation surged to the forefront of a bright new age of technology.

Nearly 99 percent of rural households now enjoy the convenience of electricity, a monumental achievement directly related to the establishment of the Rural Electrification Administration. Witness the growth of rural cooperatives in Kentucky today: some 26 electrical distribution cooperatives serve 400,000 separately metered accounts throughout the State.

The economic challenges of the 1980's are similar in scope to those our forebearers faced when the campaign for universal rural electricity was born a half century ago. Absent REA's strong partnership with the rural electric cooperatives, the dream we know today as reality may never have been obtained.

We salute today those whose vision of a better America inspired the rural electrification movement half a century ago. On behalf of their heirs—nearly all rural Americans who now have electricity—we are eternally grateful.●

● Mr. ROSE. Mr. Speaker, May 11—this coming Saturday—marks the 50th anniversary of the birth of the Rural Electrification Administration—more familiarly known as the REA. I rise today to commemorate that anniversary and commend the fine job that the REA and rural electric cooperatives have done in "turning on the lights" in rural America.

In 1985, it is difficult to imagine a world without electricity. But in 1935, most of rural America was without electricity, and most rural Americans lived in intolerably primitive conditions. Nowadays, we tend to romanticize about those times when a farmer milked his cows by lantern light or a mother scrubbed her clothes on a washboard or children carried water from the well to the house. As romantic as this scene may be now, it was a tragedy in 1935, and on May 11, 50 years ago, President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Executive order establishing the REA.

This important Executive order, and the Rural Electrification Act—introduced by the late great Sam Rayburn—brought about the most dramatic change ever in the lives of millions of people in rural areas. Mr. Speaker, farmers no longer had to milk their cows by lantern light, mothers could own labor saving electric appliances, and children could get water from the tap inside the house rather than having to go to the well. Electricity transformed these people's lives from a life of drudgery and slavery to a life of just plain hard work.

After the establishment of the REA, neighbors joined with neighbors to form rural electric cooperatives and worked together to make electricity a reality. These cooperatives are a testament to the American spirit of hard work and ingenuity.

Mr. Speaker, even before I came to this House, and through my position on the Agriculture Committee, I have seen the fine work that rural electric cooperatives have done in bringing electricity to rural areas. The affordable electricity provided by cooperatives has allowed the expansion of agribusiness, and has brought about technological changes that make American Agriculture the envy of the entire world. Also, Mr. Speaker, electric cooperatives have spurred the growth of industry in rural areas, bringing much needed jobs to people who otherwise would have been doomed to a life of unemployment.

As much of a success story as rural electric cooperatives have been, they are still needed as much today as they were back in 1935 to provide affordable electric power to rural America.

Unfortunately, on the eve of the REA's 50th anniversary, this administration has made two proposals that would effectively eliminate rural electric cooperatives and the reliable service they provide. One proposal is to eliminate the REA Engineering Standards Division. The other proposal—a plan to replace the REA's general fund rule with a working capital criterion—would make 70 percent of the rural electric cooperatives ineligible for new REA loans or advances on already approved loans. Mr. Speaker, in a time that we are trying to promote economic growth and recovery, it makes little sense for this administration to eliminate one of the best vehicles for economic growth and recovery.

I want to commend the REA and all the rural electric cooperatives for their dedication over the past 50 years, and I look forward to their continued service for the next 50. Thank you.●

● Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Mr. DE LA GARZA, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PICKLE] for taking this special order today. I am happy to join with them in paying tribute to the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] on its 50th anniversary.

It seems hard to believe today that up until the mid-1930's only 10 percent of all the farms in this country had electric service. It was not until 1936, when the REA was created by President Roosevelt, that a serious effort was undertaken to "turn on the lights" in rural America. Today, as a result of REA and the very dedicated and hardworking people who made it a success, 99 percent of U.S. farms enjoy electric service.

Mr. Speaker, it would have been worth the effort if this work had only been done to make life more convenient for those in our Nation who chose to farm the land and provide food for America and the rest of the world. That alone would have been a worthy goal. But, the REA's effect has been much greater.

The more than 1,000 rural electric cooperatives across the country have enabled the American farmer and rancher to increase productivity tremendously, for obvious reasons. Small businesses, as well as larger ones, have been able to move to a more rural setting because of the availability of electricity. That has meant new jobs and better opportunities for everyone involved.

Another positive result has been the fact that the REA and the rural cooperatives have become a vital part of the communities they serve. The directors of the co-ops are the leaders in those communities and they have worked over the years to continue to improve the quality of life for these people.

There is no doubt that the REA has been good for Mississippi. Our State is predominately rural and I can tell you that it was the rule rather than the exception to find homes without electricity in the 1930's in my part of the country. The REA helped change all that and the cooperatives are at work today making sure that the systems are updated and things are running smoothly.

Mr. Speaker, we appreciate what the creation of the REA has meant to the people of Mississippi, as well as the rest of rural America. I am proud to take part in this recognition of its golden anniversary. ●

● Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a privilege to join my colleagues today in offering recognition and praise for a program that in 50 short years has had the most profound of impacts on rural America: the Rural Electrification Program. At the outset, I want to thank my distinguished friend and colleague, the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, KIKI DE LA GARZA, for reserving time today for this special tribute.

As the Representative of a predominately rural district in South Carolina, I can attest to the lifelines, both economic and social, rural electric and telephone cooperatives have provided my constituents.

Mr. Speaker, approximately 340,000 business and residential customers are currently served by rural electric systems in South Carolina—over 3 percent of the total number of rural electric customers nationwide.

In 1935, when the REA Program was established by Executive order by then-President Franklin D. Roosevelt, only 2 percent of South Carolina's farms were electrified. By 1978, that number had climbed to 98 percent.

In addition to the immeasurable impact electrification has had on the lives and well-being of rural Americans, the economic impact of greatly increased agricultural productivity is impressive as well. Farmers whose production feed an average of 20 Americans in 1935, now feed an average of 75 persons per farmer.

As impressive as the statistics regarding increased productivity and economic activity are, perhaps the most lasting and significant impact the rural electric program has had has been on the quality of life in rural America. Not only has rural America been brought directly into the mainstream of life in this great Nation, but the overall health and well-being of these Americans has been greatly enhanced by the provision of basic services most Americans have taken for granted for many decades.

Mr. Speaker, rural electric and telephone services have and will continue to have substantial impacts on rural America. And since 1935, most administration's have worked hand-in-hand to provide the necessary financial mechanisms to allow these services to be delivered efficiently.

In the last Congress, the House passed comprehensive legislation aimed at shoring up the Federal fund which provides the lending base on which this program rests. It was a comprehensive reform package, drafted in recognition of the present constraints on Federal spending, that would have gradually increased interest rates to REA borrowers while rejecting less thoughtful approaches that simply eliminating many of these necessary loan programs.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Budget Committee, it has been and will continue to be my aim to ensure that all Federal spending is carefully scrutinized and reductions effected equitably. The REA Program will necessarily be a part of this review. I intend to utilize my efforts, however, to ensure that each of my colleagues is aware of the outstanding record of success of this program, and its vital role in rural America.

Proposals aimed at immediately increasing interest costs to borrowers from the REA, as well as interest rates on repayment of existing debt from Federal Power Marketing Administrations—which are often significant sources of energy for rural electric systems—serve only to undermine the services rural electric and telephone cooperative must provide.

In fact, my colleagues might be interested to note that based on 1984 figures, the electric rates charged by rural cooperatives were higher than rates charged by neighboring utilities 72.3 percent of the time. In South Carolina, over one-half of the rural electric cooperatives must charge rates higher than neighboring utilities.

While we must appreciate and acknowledge the very important budget constraints we face, and the need to take effective action to lower Federal deficits, measures aimed simply at undercutting the goals and objectives of successful Federal programs must be rejected.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to work closely with my friend from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], on this issue during this Congress. There are few, if any, programs that have such a positive and significant impact on rural Americans. ●

● Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to join our colleagues in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program.

Special praise should be given to the leaders of the rural electric cooperatives, which serve an important part of the population in my home district in the Florida Keys, and throughout the State of Florida. I salute the dedication and leadership of the president and manager of the Florida Keys Electric Cooperative, the members who own it, and that of the Florida Rural Electric Cooperatives Association. Their accomplishments and progress over the years have helped the Florida Keys accommodate its unpredictably rapid population growth and development.

The Florida Keys Electric Cooperative, located in Tavernier in the Florida Keys, was organized and incorporated in 1940. Its 45th annual meeting will soon take place. Although not a farming area like other areas served by cooperatives, the community which FKEC serves was in the 1940's primarily a fishing area. This fishing community provided the impetus for bringing electric service into the Florida Keys.

Back then, the Florida Keys consisted of only a few fishing camps, a few houses for commercial fishermen, some stores, a few Red Cross hurricane cottages, and a lot of mangroves. Only 59 consumers received electric power for about 6 hours a day from small generating plants. A few pioneers, who were dissatisfied with the lack of electric service, banded together to request the Federal Rural Electrification Administration to assist them financially in establishing an economically feasible, community-owned and built power system in an area not served by other utilities. As the need for electricity grew, FKEC expanded its operations so that its generating capacity could meet the needs of the populace, businesses, and fishing industry.

Today, the continued success of the operations of the cooperative remains strong. Looking forward, FKEC's most important step for the future power supply of the Florida Keys was an agreement for the interconnection with the City Electric System of Key West and the proposed wheeling of power to the co-op.

This investor-owned utility is a member of a parent organization located in Tallahassee, the Florida Rural Electric Cooperatives Association, which also deserves special mention. The 16 rural electric cooperatives which are members of the association provide dependable service to over 1 million citizens in 49 counties in Florida. These individual cooperatives depend on the insights and guidance of the association's leaders and staff to assist them in their many needs. The association has called on me many times to discuss various legislative issues of interest to them, and I am happy to continue my dialog with them.

Again, I join our colleagues in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the rural electrification of America. This is indeed a noteworthy celebration, for without rural electrification, America—and my congressional district—would have greatly suffered. ●

● Mr. HATCHER. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to pay tribute to the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] on its 50th anniversary. Hailing from a predominantly rural area in south Georgia, I have witnessed firsthand the positive changes that have taken through the work of the REA.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt had the foresight to establish the REA on May 11, 1935, and he was followed 1 year later with the passage by Congress of the Rural Electrification Act, which funded the REA. The subsequent success of the REA came largely from a concerted effort on the part of millions of Americans throughout the rural areas of the country. As we face what is considered one of the worst financial crises in the Nation's farm belt since the Great Depression, we should take note of the dedication and inner strength of those same Americans, who were able to bounce back from the depression and set the country on a road to prosperity again.

REA cooperatives today bring a standard of living to rural America that is comparable to urban areas. We should indeed be proud of the REA's outstanding record of achievement as we salute 50 years of rural electrification.●

● Mr. DYSON. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to join in the tribute to the rural electrification program on this, its 50th anniversary.

Only 50 years ago, millions of rural Americans routinely used wood-burning stoves to cook, kerosene lanterns for light, and hand pumps to get their water. Less than 1 farm in 10 nationwide had the luxury of basic electrical service. This harsh lifestyle was changed by the creation of the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] in 1935. This agency assisted rural communities to obtain financing which permitted them to build generating stations, transmission and distribution lines. The low interest charged kept the cost of electricity equal to what was paid by their urban counterparts. Later, this agency provided the means for rural areas to extend and improve their telephone service.

Today we salute the 50th anniversary of the program which brought rural America some of the comforts which had been available to urban dwellers for years. This program provided affordable, reliable electricity in the quiet corners of the country. These areas were routinely avoided by the large power companies because of the large investment required for startup and the small return on the dollar. From the REA came the electric cooperatives. Today there are still almost 1,000 electric cooperatives located in 46 States. Two cooperatives in my district, southern Maryland and Choptank, serve over 90,000 homes thanks to REA.

Rural America is not as large as it was 50 years ago. Our population is centered around urban areas where electricity is easily and readily available. However, those that have remained in rural areas, many of them ranchers and farmers providing for the needs of their fellow Americans, still depend on the rural electrification program to assure a dependable continuation of affordable energy.

In 1973 the Congress created the revolving fund, an independent, long-term source of capital which provides insured loans to finance the rural cooperatives. The low interest charged for these loans guarantees those receiving electricity in remote areas will pay no more than those in the cities.

In spite of all the service that the REA has provided over the decades, it is in trouble and faces an end of services. The 1986 ceiling is $800 million with no new guaranteed loans scheduled and the lending program is to be phased out entirely in 1990. This demise comes at a time when this program continues to provide the same dependable service it was originally designed to provide. Hundreds of thousands of Americans will be adversely affected by the loss of the Rural Electrification Program.

Much of rural America is facing continuing and escalating financial loss and stress. This problem is further aggravated by the plight of our agricultural industry. We cannot turn our backs on those families who have already sacrificed so much. The basic quality of life requires the availability of affordable electricity.

Mr. Speaker, fellow Members, in 1985, the golden anniversary of the REA and its goal to provide electricity to rural America, it would be a cruel act if we let this important program slip away when it is the backbone of electricity in rural areas. I ask you to join today in saluting the accomplishments of the REA and the rural electrification program and also commit yourselves to protecting this program for the citizens of America who depend on it, and us.●

● Mr. YATRON. Mr. Speaker, I deeply appreciate this opportunity arranged by the gentlemen from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA and Mr. PICKLE] to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program.

There was a time when 90 percent of all rural Americans did not have access to central station electric service. With the establishment of the Rural Electrification Administration by President Roosevelt on May 11, 1935, however, a movement of cooperation between the Government and the rural community was begun that has resulted today in the participation of 25 million Americans in our rural electric systems. Individuals who otherwise would not have had the chance to utilize electricity for light and power were able to do so and farmers began to recognize the potential for electricity in their daily work.

In my home State of Pennsylvania, with a relatively dense population, the number of electrified farms 50 years ago was only 25 percent. Today, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania over 600,000 consumers are served by our nonprofit, consumer-owned rural electric cooperatives.

Rural electrification has a proud history. Virtually every corner of our Nation today has access to electric service, largely because of the work of the Rural Electrification Administration and rural electric cooperatives. The REA has been a very successful Government program that has helped to provide access to electricity to millions of rural Americans while helping to provide lower cost food to our urban population. Thus, the future of the American farmer and rural Americans continues to be linked with our rural electric systems. I am hopeful that this anniversary will serve to underline the importance of having an effective rural electrification system playing a pivotal role in helping us to address the current problems facing the American farmer. The REA has established a true partnership of the people with the Government and congratulations are in order for all those who have participated in a difficult job splendidly done.●

● Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Program which is administered by the Rural Electrification Administration [REA].

The programs of the REA literally brought American farms out of the dark ages and changed the face of rural America forever. Because of the modernization programs of the REA, American farming became the most efficient and productive agricultural endeavor in the world.

Although my district is in an urban area, everyone in my State experiences the benefits of the REA programs—from farmers to urban dwellers with summer homes throughout Wisconsin. I will continue to support the work of the REA and would like to include in the RECORD the following article on the subject which recently appeared in the Milwaukee Journal.

[From the Milwaukee Journal, Apr. 7, 1985]

REA IS 50, MORE POWER TO IT

HATLEY, WI.—Frank Rombalski, 69, scratched the back of his memory for a moment but then wondered, why?

"It's such a nice thing to forget," he said. But then he reached back again and the memories formed one little smile after another, not because of the things he had forgotten but because of the miracle that allowed them to be put behind.

The miracle is light.

This is the year of anniversaries in America—40 years since Iwo Jima, 10 since the fall of Saigon, and I since Cyndi Lauper became a star.

But in some ways more significantly than any of those, 1985 also is the golden anniversary of the act that brought rural America out of the dark ages.

Though it means little to those of us born into a world of blow dryers and electric guitars, around farmhouses the birth of the Rural Electrification Administration is not going unnoticed.

Frank and Louise Rombalski remembered, as did Earl and June Olsen, who live west of Iola. Iola is the home of the Central Wisconsin Electric Cooperative that finally brought electricity to their farms in the mid-1940s.

"It brought the city to the country," Rombalski said.

"It revolutionized rural America," Olsen said.

The REA was conceived and ordered by President Roosevelt, who had concluded that rural America had gone without electricity long enough.

American cities were plugged in by then. There were lights, refrigerators and power to run pumps for indoor plumbing. But the wires seldom stretched to the countryside. Utilities considered farms too far apart to make rural electrification possible and profitable.

Many farmers felt short-changed even if they understood the economics.

"You weren't a second-rate citizen, but you couldn't have refrigeration," said Olsen, 72. "We didn't have water in the house."

Louise Rombalski said, "You had to make do, that's all there was to it."

But after the REA was formed, there was more to it. It offered rural citizens who formed cooperatives the low-cost loans needed to plant poles and string wire along country roads. They then could contract with the utilities that had previously snubbed them and buy current to replace the lanterns in the barns, houses and schools of rural America.

Olsen filled out his membership card on the hood of the organizer's car. Rombalski, who went from farm to farm to enlist co-op members, said some farmers had to save for a few months to get the $5 fee, but that the army of this revolution had no opponents.

Even before the lines went up, farmers hired contractors to prepare their buildings for power.

"The engineers at my place came kitty-corner across a field and, of course, I don't think we cared where they put the poles at the time," Olsen said. "Afterwards, I think they probably could have put them in a little handier place, but we just were glad to get current."

Current in the lines and current with the times. That was when farmers milked cows by hand in the yellow light of kerosene lanterns and tried not to have to go into the hayloft after dark.

"You had to carry that lantern with you, and it wasn't a very safe thing," Olsen said. "There were a few fires that were caused by that, but when electricity came . . . it was a great thing for farmers."

And farm women, for whom life was very hard.

Louise Rombalski, 68, who looked after her nine children and 14 cattle while Frank taught school at Galloway during the 1940s, said: "I only remember the worst part of it, pumping water by hand for 14 cattle twice a day for 45 minutes. The kids would watch me until they'd get tired."

But she couldn't get tired because there was not power for a pump and the water was needed.

June Olsen said:

"You worked all the time. You carried the wood in to heat the stove and that turned into ashes and you had to carry it out. You carried your water in, and then you carried it out. You worked all the time and you were tired by the end of the day. It's a wonder farmers lived to be so old."

Not all lived long enough to see rural America into the bright lights of the 20th century. Olsen's father died in 1937, after the REA was formed but before electricity reached his farm near Rosbalt.

"I often thought of that," Olsen said. "It sure would have been wonderful if he could have seen that. I lived with my mother until she was over 90 years old and I tell you, I was glad she had many years of electricity."

When power reached her farm, Louise Rombalski felt she was joining "the rest of the world, really. We had had nothing, no telephones. If we had good voices we could communicate with the neighbor across the road."

"We just couldn't believe it was happening. We got a break from some faraway place and all of a sudden, things started happening to us."

It was an awe-inspiring, exciting time. First came the poles, then the wire, Frank said, and "all of a sudden you'd see the neighbor had lights and you'd call to one another."

"What a wonderful thing. It was just out of this world, let's put it like that."

When the lights went on inside the house, the bathrooms could follow. Refrigerators, even if they weren't self-defrosting, ended the chore of lowering milk on a rope into the well to cool it, and meant fresh meat didn't have to be stuck away in salt brine in a crock in the basement to prevent spoiling.

It meant coolers for the milk house, power for the milking machine, and a measure of safety in the hayloft. And it meant that people in the country had access to the same conveniences that made life easier in the cities.

For those who could afford more, it meant labor-saving appliances. But for everyone, it meant lights.

"A lot of people said it could never be done, that farmers and rural people could never run their own utility," said Olsen, who, though retired from farming, still is president of the local electric co-op. Rombalski is secretary.

Theirs is one of about 30 electric cooperatives in Wisconsin and, like the others, is collecting notes on the past for a special publication marking the anniversary.

"You're young," his wife told a visitor as she served coffee from a percolator in her thoroughly modern kitchen.

"You don't realize what a struggle we had. When they talk about the good old days, bosh, they can have them."

"We certainly owe Franklin Delano Roosevelt a lot." ●

● Mr. LEATH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the Rural Electrification Administration—a program that has helped countless rural Americans acquire something that we all take for granted—electricity. You know, it's hard to mention the

REA without thinking of the man who did so much for that program, the man who represented for 42 years the district I now represent—Mr. Bob Poage. I talked with Congressman Poage a couple of weeks ago, when I was down in the district, and we discussed the problems of rural development that existed 50 years ago. "The first thing you had to develop," Mr. Poage said to me, "was the roads. Then you had to have electricity and then water."

But Congressman Poage wasn't one to just sit around and talk about how things should be. From the time he got to Washington Mr. Poage worked tirelessly to ensure adequate funding for the REA. He authored the bill expanding the program to include loans for telephone service, as well as the bill establishing a loan and grant program for rural water and sewer systems. I doubt we can fully appreciate what rural America would be like today without the contributions of Congressman Poage.

And the first step in the process was the creation of the REA. I'm proud to stand here today and tell you that the first REA cooperative in the Nation to begin producing electricity is located in Bartlett, TX, which it is my privilege to represent. I talked just last week with Mr. Horace Keith, who lives down in Bartlett. Mr. Keith not only worked to help string the original power lines, but served for almost 30 years as manager of the cooperative.

He and his wife Marie remembered well what it was like in those days before they had electricity, or telephones, or even roads to speak of. They remembered coal oil lamps, and wood stoves, and how Mrs. Keith washed the clothes for this family of eight children by hand, using a washboard and tub.

They spoke of how the REA program had not just benefited rural areas, but the entire nation's economy as well. "Just think," they said to me, "of the many washing machines, and lamps, and other electric appliances we all bought." And this was a time, let us not forget, when one-quarter of the American people lived in rural areas.

So today, Mr. Speaker, we salute these people who banded together and gave freely of their time, and energy, and know-how; these people who worked tirelessly to see the completion of their dream—a dream of electric service for all. "The most beautiful sight," Mrs. Keith said to me, "was the sight of the smallest shack, miles away from any neighbors, with that electric line now running to it. We didn't want to leave out anyone just because they were far away," she said, "and we didn't."

These people, ladies and gentlemen, are the people who have made America the great Nation she is—a nation where neighbors are brothers, a nation where all work for the good of the community, a nation where no one is left out. I'm reminded of a tree; because as you know, trees need strong roots in order to flourish—in order for the trunk to grow tall; in order for the tree to bear fruit. Without strong roots, that tree withers. Rural America is today, and always has been, the strong roots of our Nation, and may we never forget that America's success is built on that strength.●

● Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, rural electric cooperatives helped to transform the quality of life for millions of farmers and other people in Wisconsin and other parts of rural America over the past 50 years.

When the Rural Electrification Administration [REA] was created 50 years ago, less than 10 percent of all rural families enjoyed basic utility services. In those years before REA, farmers had to endure enormous hardships and struggle with many of the simplest tasks we all now take for granted. Agriculture was a much more back-breaking endeavor than it is today and everything from pumping water to keeping food fresh was a major chore.

Without electricity, there was no easy way to raise water from the well. There were no electric lights or heat, no telephones, no electric irons, no washing machines or stereos, or television, or refrigeration. For Wisconsin's dairy farmers that meant lowering milk on a rope into the well to cool it. It also meant that you tried to avoid the hayloft after dark because of the dangers involved in taking a kerosene lantern with you.

The reason for this was simply that private utilities considered farms too far apart and the countryside too sparsely populated to make rural electrification a profitable commercial proposition. For many of the same reasons that the Federal Government provided assistance to the railroads in their endeavor to establish a transcontinental railroad system, the Federal Government established the goal of bringing electricity to rural areas.

REA offered rural citizens who formed co-ops the low cost loans needed to plant poles and string wire along country roads.

Today, reliable electricity and telephone service is available to 25 million people in 46 States throughout rural America at affordable rates set by farmers and their neighbors who are members and directors of nearly 1,000 member-owned local co-ops.

In Wisconsin, rural electric and telephone co-ops play a vital part in the State's economic picture. The 29 electric co-ops serve more than half of the State's farm and rural population—over 122,000 households. They also provide service to nearly 4,000 small commercial customers. And they have an important role in Wisconsin's tourism industry, providing service to about 32,000 customers for seasonal homes or cottages.

REA has come a long way and produced enormous benefits for rural America, but the job is not yet completed.

That's why I am very pleased to join in honoring REA on its golden anniversary not only to remember the great advances that rural America has enjoyed as a result of its work, but also to wish it and the rural co-ops it supports many more good years of service bringing light to the people of rural America.●

● Mr. THOMAS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, this day marks the 50th anniversary of the birth of rural electrification. It is an anniversary of a day that began a transformation of America.

The Rural Electrification Administration is, of course, a national program. But in Georgia, we lay claim to being the State that was the cornerstone of its creation.

It is almost impossible in 1985 to understand the incredible burden of poverty that held rural America in a relentless grip some 50 years ago. It was a yoke that was particularly heavy in the rural South, and it oppressed both our people and our economy.

REA is today such an unqualified success that we tend to take it for granted. And yet, it was a revolutionary concept when it was established, and there were many who predicted its failure.

It succeeded in large measure because it was handed to local people by the Government as a kind of seed, and it was placed in their hands to be planted and nurtured. This organization of local control is very much alive and well today in the system of local REA cooperatives. When you talk about a partnership of local citizens making a government program work as it should, you are talking about REA.

I am very proud of the fact that Mr. Walter Harrison of Millen, GA, in my congressional district, was one of the key leaders in rural electrification in its earliest days, and remains one of its most respected and effective leaders. He is one of the most accomplished and intelligent men I have ever known, and he typifies the citizen leadership of rural electrification.

Today, there are critics who say that REA has worked itself out of a job. They contend it is time for the Government to pull the plug.

They are wrong for at least two reasons.

First, the work of REA is far from complete. It is a thriving, hard-working enterprise, and if its labors are stilled, it would be a tragic step backward toward a rural America that was a national burden rather than a national resource.

Second, the REA has been a program that makes money for the Government in both the loans made to help fund its operation and in the tax revenue that comes from economic activity made possible by REA power.

Mr. Speaker, it is well known that rural America today faces its greatest crisis since the Great Depression. Falling commodity prices, soaring production costs, and declining export trade are just some of the reasons that America's rural economies have been ravaged at a time when the rest of our Nation has enjoyed a period of recovery.

Agriculture and agribusiness remain this Nation's largest employer. But agriculture and rural America have been gravely wounded in recent years. If we compound those problems by an attack on REA, we will do so at our own national economic peril.

Mr. Speaker, I am here to salute REA and the men and women who make it work. The fruits of their labor are their own best testimonial, and I am honored to associate myself with them on this day and at all other times.

At this point I would like to insert into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article which appeared in the May 3 edition of the Atlanta Constitution by Ms. Priscilla Painton.

I thank my colleagues.

1935: THE YEAR THE LIGHTS CAME ON IN RURAL GEORGIA

(By Priscilla Painton)

Brothers and sisters,

I want to tell you this.

The greatest thing on earth is to have the love of God in your heart,

And the next greatest thing is to have electricity in your house.

—A farmer giving witness in a rural Tennessee church in the early 1940s.

On May 7, 1937, Ethel Caudle was down at a Methodist church in Troup County when someone flipped the switch for the first time. "We were standing on the steps when the lights came on," the 81-year-old said, in a pious whisper. "We went inside and looked at them. What better place could we be?"

By the turn of the century, electricity had turned most of the nation's cities into beacons of the Industrial Revolution. But for rural America, electricity had done nothing except, by its absence, illuminate the farmers' days of drudgery and evenings of fumbling like moles in near darkness.

After sunset, "you just had to feel yourself around," said Murlin Whitlow, 80, of LaGrange.

Then came the Rural Electrification Act, which is 50 years old next week. Less than a year after the order was signed, Mrs. Whitlow's first bulb popped with light and she suddenly knew "how dark it (had been). You realized it more than ever. And when you saw the light, you saw the light and you wanted to keep the light."

Mrs. Whitlow kept the light and discarded much more. She got rid of the stove that she had kept burning at the height of summer because washing, ironing and baking knew no season. She put away the kerosene lamps whose small circle of light had tightened her eyes and wrinkled her brows. And she quit hauling wood and water, the chores that curved her shoulders before old age.

For these, and many other reasons, Mrs. Whitlow and rural residents across the nation next week will commemorate the start of a revolution completed quietly within their lifetimes. On May 11, 1935, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Rural Electrification Act, which made possible the wiring of millions of farms across America. That day, fewer than 11 out of 100 farms in the United States had electricity. Thirty-five years later, 99 out of every 100 farms were hooked up.

Georgians may be able to take some credit for this. Roosevelt blamed a Georgia electric bill for sparking the Rural Electrification Act and the Washington agency that went with it.

"There was only one discordant note in that first stay of mine at Warm Springs," Roosevelt said in 1938 of his Georgia refuge. "When the first-of-the-month bill came in for electric light for my cottage, I found that the charge was 18 cents per kilowatt-hour—about four times as much as I paid in Hyde Park, New York. That started my long study of proper public utility charges for electric current and the whole subject of getting electricity into farm homes."

Fifty years later, the Rural Electrification Administration, which lends money and guarantees loans for the construction of electric power systems, has spawned about 1,000 utility cooperatives nationwide, serving about 25 million people.

Georgia, like many other states, had no statute legalizing the corporate creature that Roosevelt's administration had envisioned would carry out the federal electrification program—a non-profit organization owned and run by its members. So in 1937 the Legislature passed the Electric Membership Corporation Act. Today Georgia has 2.3 million consumers, the highest number in the nation.

About 50 years later, REA is the acronym that has perhaps reached farthest into the political vocabulary of rural America. Not long ago, a woman near Goldsboro, N.C., was interviewed by a reporter before a vote in the State Legislature on the Equal Rights Amendment. "The ERA? Hell yes, I'm for ERA. Never would have had lights without it," she said.

The night the lights came on is often remembered as one of life's apotheoses for many rural families, ranking with marriages and births. Terry Kay, an Atlanta writer and also assistant to the general manager of the company that supplies most of the Georgia cooperatives with electricity, said his family in Vanna, Ga., gathered ceremoniously around the living room's naked bulb.

"We did not move, or speak," he recalled. "My sister, Peggy, who was standing near the wall switch, pulled the switch down, to Off, and the light snapped away. She pushed it to On, and the light reappeared. Off. On. Off. On. Light and shadow danced in the room. And then Gary, my younger brother, moved to my sister, Patsy. . . . He hugged her leg, tugged at her. And he said, 'Peggy, better quit doing that. She's going to burn out all the batteries.'"

"I'M CELEBRATING TODAY"

Even when the lights came during the day, many farmers refused to turn them off until late, out of fear that they would disappear, or just to savor their glow. One Georgia farmer, who told his story to the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, said it was spring and plowing time when the REA brought electricity to his home. "But I wouldn't go to the field," he recalled.

"I wanted to wait in the house and see what happened. The wife told me I was going to wear out the pull chain before we got the lights. I guess I was afraid of the bulbs bursting. They finally came in the late afternoon. There was plenty of light outside, the missis says, 'Aren't you going back out?' 'No,' I says, 'I'm celebrating today. I'm gonna sit here till dark and see how supper eats with a good light.'"

For Mrs. Whitlow, electricity eventually brought a washing machine that relieved her of a ritual whose strainful steps she can still describe:

"You put your clothes in a big old tub of warm water and you put lye soap in it. You rubbed them clothes on a rub board, you battled them on a battling block, we called it, then you rubbed them some more, then you put them in a pot and you boiled them, then you took 'em and wrenched them in three different waters, you wrenched them out of this one, then out of that one, and that one, and . . . then you hung 'em up.

"Now you go to a well and pull up three tubs of water," she said, almost defiantly. "Then you'll realize what a machine means to you."

LIGHT AFFORDED PROTECTION

Because there was no electricity, there were also full days for canning and ironing and baking, summer days during which the stove breathed such heat there seemed no air left for her.

Meanwhile, her husband, William, milked his cows by the faint light of kerosene, worrying first that it not tip over and burn the hay-filled barn, and worrying next that the milk not spoil as it waited for the dairy truck on the side of the road.

There was no electric pump to water his cows, no electric gauger to feed his livestock, no electric motor to unload his cottonseed and shovel it into the barn. So farmers like the Whitlows usually turned in after sunset, ending the day in the same darkness with which they had begun.

From electricity, Mrs. Whitlow learned, strangely, that she could feel afraid in the dimness of moonlight. For man-made light suddenly gave her a sense of protection. "You can see, and you can know what's going on around you. Anything that's starting in on you, anything happening, you can see," she said.

'WATCHING' THE NEW RADIO

That's perhaps why the lights on the farmhouse porch are still her favorite. They used to shine on the path her husband took when he returned to the couple's cottage from visiting his parents nearby. Her mother-in-law "turned that porch light on and watched him home. The light was bright and she could watch him just going home. 'Cause the light would shine all the way down to our little porch," she said.

If electricity made the world seem safer, it also burst the boundaries of life in rural America—to the thrill of some farmers and the bewilderment of others.

Radios were one of the first purchases in newly wired towns and, almost overnight, living rooms were filled with soap operas, pieces of advice and news dispatches.

Although radio broke some farmers' sense of isolation, it gave them one of a different kind.

"You know, people back then, they visited a lot," recalled Mrs. Whitlow. After radio, families stayed home to "watch" the radio, for they invariably looked at it as they listened.

"I kept up with some of the stories. . . and my neighbor across the street couldn't see why I settled down and listened to the stories like I did," said Mrs. Caudle. "And then her daughter gave her a radio, and she started, and when I'd go over, she didn't want me to say a word."●

● Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to participate today in this special order commemorating the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Rural Electric Administration by President Franklin Roosevelt.

In 1935, REA was created to provide electric service to those many Americans who lived in the rural parts of our country. At that time, only 10 percent of rural Americans received electricity. The goal of REA from the start was to give technical and financial help to consumer-owned rural electric cooperatives and other utilities who would provide electric service in rural areas. It has done a marvelous job of doing just that for the past 50 years, and will continue to do so in the future.

Being from Pennsylvania, Mr. Speaker, I am proud to point out that the first Administrator of the Rural Electric Administration came from our Commonwealth. Morris Lewellyn Cooke served as President Roosevelt's first Administrator after working on the issue of electric utilities for our Governor Gifford Pinchot in the 1920's. The second REA Administrator, John M. Carmody, also came from Pennsylvania. When you throw in the fact that the first rural electric cooperative in Pennsylvania was established in 1936, 49 years ago you can certainly see how Pennsylvania has been intertwined with the history of rural electricity.

Although rural Americans today benefit from electricity, the job of rural electric cooperatives is not over. As new customers arrive in rural areas, they must be connected to electricity with new lines. Of course, the quality of the old lines must be maintained with improvements and repairs. And any new generating plants in rural areas will need assistance in providing adequate and inexpensive supplies of electricity.

For all of these reasons, the Rural Electric Administration should be highly commended on its 50th anniversary, and on behalf of the rural citizens of Pennsylvania, I wish them a fruitful future. The assistance they have provided already to millions of Americans is immeasurable.●

● Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to join in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration, a Federal agency that has helped to literally light up the lives of countless thousands of rural Americans.

Over its 50-year history, REA has helped pay for power supply and distribution facilities serving Coloradans on almost 60,000 miles of line in the State.

When REA was created in 1935, only 11.2 percent of Colorado farms had central station electrical service. Our State's first REA-financed project was activated in Grand Junction in 1937. Since then, REA has loaned more than $700 million to rural Colorado power cooperatives. Today, of the 25,300 farms in our State, over 98 percent have electric service.

The REA's history, both in Colorado and across the country, is one of remarkable investment in our Nation's infrastructure. On behalf of more than 270,000 rural Coloradans who use REA-financed electrical service, let me offer sincere congratulations to the Rural Electrification Administration on its 50th birthday. ●

● Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, there are many things that are so much a part of our everyday lives, that we rarely think about them, or imagine what our lives would be like if they weren't there. Such is the case with electricity.

But, some of us who grew up in rural America can remember what life was like without electricity. We can remember coal and wood stoves, summers with no air-conditioning, farms and houses where all the power was supplied by man, mule, or horse. We can remember this, Mr. Speaker, because electricity didn't reach the rural areas of our Nation until Government and the people decided to work together to "electrify" all of America.

In the 1930's, when power lines were becoming a common sight in the cities of our Nation, the people of rural America still operated as they always had. Because of cost and other factors, it became clear that private utility companies were not going to extend their lines and the power they brought to the rural communities.

President Roosevelt saw this problem, and he determined to find a way to bring electricity to all sections of our country.

In May 1935, he signed an Executive order, creating the Rural Electrification Administration [REA]. This order was signed in Warm Springs, GA, which is in the heart of my district.

Under the auspices of REA, cooperatives began to develop, made up of people who wanted electricity on their farms or in their community. These electric membership cooperatives or EMC's became the catalyst that finally stretched power lines into even the most remote sections of our country.

Electricity changed rural America. It gave our farms the capability and machinery to produce enough so that we can now feed the world.

It brought new industry and economic activity to small towns and communities.

Just as it did with all other segments of our country, the coming of electricity opened rural America up to the wonders and effectiveness of modern technology.

That is what we celebrate today when we look at the 50 years since President Roosevelt first set out to spread electric capability. We celebrate the 25 million consumers who now have electricity because of the cooperation and the spirit of willingness that led to rural electrification.

For myself, it's a personal celebration as well. Because I will always remember the wonder and awe a small farm boy felt when he looked across the fields and, for the first time, saw his house ablaze with lights. I remember how electricity brought new life to our farm and community, so it is with gratitude and pride that I join today in celebrating the 50th anniversary of the REA. ●

● Mr. STANGELAND. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electrification Administration [REA]. As we all know, REA is responsible for bringing modern, affordable telephone and electric service to rural America. Key to REA's success is its standards setting program for rural utility construction.

Over the years, REA's telecommunications engineering and standards division has worked with REA borrowers, equipment manufacturers, and construction contractors to develop telephone system designs best suited to rural conditions. Because of the high caliber of standards work performed by REA, non-REA borrowers serving all areas of the United States and abroad have chosen to adopt REA specifications for electric and telephone plant construction.

Mr. Speaker, REA's standards have made enormous contribution to the quality of life of rural citizens, and to all Americans by enhancing the public telephone network. Standardization of rural telephone system plants has resulted in high-quality telephone service to and from rural areas. REA is in the best position to establish industry standards for its borrowers because of its expertise in rural telephone service and also because it has the power to enforce its specifications.

I am extremely troubled, Mr. Speaker, that despite its huge success in setting industry standards, REA is currently considering abandoning its function. This would be a serious blow to REA borrowers and nonborrowers who rely on REA standards work, particularly at this time of unprecedented, technological, and regulatory change in the telephone industry. The rural telephone industry depends on REA's publications, which are the only comprehensive publications on rural telephone system design. It also relies on REA's outstanding engineering staff to test new equipment and monitor operational equipment.

REA standards are also responsible for minimizing telephone company costs by ensuring competitive bidding on standardized equipment. It would be absurd to eliminate REA's standards and thereby risk higher telephone construction and maintenance costs, particularly in light of today's rural economic climate. Everyone is painfully aware of rising telephone charges, in the wake of the AT&T divestiture and deregulation. Higher telephone charges are compounding the economic crisis in rural America. Surely we do not want to relinquish a Government operation which is not only doing its job superbly, but also saving consumers money, a cost savings that may mean the difference between being able to afford a telephone and being forced to drop off the telephone network.

While no decision has been made as to the fate of the REA standards program, an alarming number of staff have left the standards division in the last year and their positions are not being filled. This is weakening the agency's ability to perform this vital function.

Mr. Speaker, REA has served the country well in its first 50 years, but it has much to do to ensure that telephone service remains affordable and available to rural citizens in Minnesota and throughout the country. I am extremely proud of the REA program and will work to maintain a strong REA. ●

● Mr. JONES of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, we are honoring today a successful program, one which has provided opportunities for millions of rural Americans that might never have become available if it had not been for this program—the Rural Electrification Administration.

As the son of a rural mail carrier in Oklahoma, I saw first hand the improvements in the quality of life in rural America which were a direct result of REA.

In much of Oklahoma, as in other rural areas, utility companies cannot provide affordable electric service. The density of population is too low to profitably build powerlines. Without electric cooperatives, the potential most rural areas have for economic development could never be realized.

Rural America has made great strides in developing its potential. While private enterprise can do many things better and more efficiently than government, it has in many cases not been able to provide to rural America the low-cost energy that it provides to urban Americans.

REA has been able to provide electricity to rural Americans who would not be able to afford it otherwise. Urban America depends on rural America to a greater degree than many people realize. If rural America cannot develop its resources to their fullest potential, then neither will America.

I spoke with a group of members from the Oklahoma Association of Rural Electric Cooperatives yesterday. These people recognize the sacrifices all Americans must make if we are to reduce the deficit. They are prepared to accept a reduction of 20 percent in the level of funds available for loans to cooperatives. This reaffirms to me the commitment those in rural America have to building a better future for all Americans.

Mr. Speaker, I give my warmest congratulations to REA on 50 years of work well done, and am happy to honor a group of people committed to making all America a better place. ●

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order in the next special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE END OF THE VIETNAM WAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, today, like every day in America and in this Congress, has been very busy. We have exhausted ourselves in speeches here on the floor and our busy days at work in the office. The hustle of the Capitol life whirls around us as it does every day that we come here.

Tonight, the news will be followed again by the weather; will be followed again by the sports; and at midnight, the seventh of May will end and tomorrow will begin another day, in many respects, just like today.

Before this day ends, this day is unusual in that it marks the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war. I think before this day ends, we all could do well by pausing to remember, to remember that it has been 10 years since our last soldier came home. So we pause to give thanks; we pause to add our prayers for those fallen soldiers whose lives have been lost, and for those whose complete use of their bodies and minds is even today but just a memory.

Memories have clouded in 10 years; we are older, and the experiences of life have dimmed the importance of the past. But after 10 years that war has left a mark on every Vietnam-era veteran, no more removable than the color of our skin or the shape of our bones. While the fire in us no longer burns out of control, the flicker is still there, and will probably last forever.

After 10 long years, a Vietnam veteran is now buried at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. We do not know much about him, but we know more than past wars. We know that this particular veteran was killed in 1973, but the circumstances surrounding his death are unknown. But we know this: We know that for those who witnessed the excruciating agony of this war, it was worse than any of the young men had ever dreamed.

Indescribable human pain; limbs and blood splattered about like a junkyard of human parts; screams and explosions ceaselessly through the night. As the night winds blew cool over the molten lead and still-warm bodies, this body lay totally undistinguished from the thousands of others; not even a name.

So now this young man lies in everlasting peace. Having been dealt the ultimate penalty of war. There is a line in an old spiritual: "All my trials, Lord, will soon be over."

Today we pause, if for no other reason than just to pay tribute. If for no other reason to him and to his comrades and to the millions who served to say, "Thank you; we haven't forgotten." As we pay tribute, let us also rise up as Americans across this land and make a solemn commitment, first to the families of the POW's and MIA's that we as a nation will not be satisfied until, until everyone of the 2,400 POW's and MIA's whose names we do know are accounted for and are returned.

Second, to those Vietnam veterans who daily experience the new wounds of a new war, that we will not stop, that we will not stop until as much as is humanly possible, those wounds are healed. Agent orange and delayed stress; wounds common and wounds unique.

Third, to those veterans whose needs remain, let us commit ourselves once again to a continued and a determined effort to meet them. The GI bill and education; full employment; judicial review. As Members of Congress, we have more reason than perhaps anyone else in the whole country to make that commitment.

This country has a practice that is a good one, I think. This country names cities after its heroes of history. We have taken their names for our children and we put their names on our schools. So far, that has not been the case for Vietnam veterans.

There are no cities; there are no schools for which their names are lent. Only a black marble wall. A monument to withstand the harsh elements of the future. But I see another monument, a monument to the living and to the children of those who live. A monument of laws; a monument to guarantee the commitments that we renew today. A monument to those Vietnam veterans who still experience the war and its toll. For a monument that we today now commit, let us pause, for it is indeed a monument of life.

It is indeed a monument that we can look again with hope, with commitment, with optimism, that those who have survived live on. Because they survived, and because they fought so valiantly, we have learned a great deal as a nation.

We live our life today much better as a result of their sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to commend the gentleman from South Dakota for taking this time to focus more acutely on what today really means, and beyond that to say that when I first came to the Congress, the gentleman from South Dakota was the one who was so actively involved in this area and helped to focus my attention on the problems that our Vietnam veterans were having.

If the gentleman recalls, it was the agent orange issue at that time which he was working so hard on, to make people realize the problems that the veterans were having from exposure to that herbicide during the Vietnam era, and I just appreciate very much the things the gentleman has done to focus attention here.

Mr. Speaker, the war in Vietnam ended for America 10 years ago, and today that experience is still very much on our minds.

We are aware of the superb record of service that our military personnel achieved in Vietnam, their bravery and sacrifice under circumstances that were just as difficult as any our Armed Forces have ever faced.

We remember the suffering which many Vietnamese people went through, both during the years of that conflict and following their country's eventual fall.

And more than ever before, we have begun to fully realize what was at stake there.

We know the United States cannot be the world's policeman and we should rely more often, I am sure, on diplomatic rather than military answers to our problems. But while many people may disagree with the direction we took in Southeast Asia, I also believe most of us realize that our presence in Vietnam was truly motivated by a concern for those human values this country has always represented.

Our forces were fighting for the freedom of South Vietnam and against the spread of totalitarianism throughout that region. We asked for nothing in return other than what we wished for the people we were helping defend. We wanted peace, security, and a continuation of a government based on the consent of the governed.

Representative democracy steadily grew and flourished around the world for nearly 200 years following the formation of our Nation. It had taken great sacrifice to establish freedom as a stable of government, and the generations that followed knew that the efforts which were first necessary to create it were just as necessary to sustain it in their own times. This still holds true today, Mr. Speaker.

It is a sobering fact, however, that totalitarian forces have advanced in recent years while representative democracy has fallen back, and yet, while we did not gain our objectives in Vietnam, we know the struggle against those forces is far from over at this time.

I believe our experience in Vietnam tells us we are still prepared to make the great sacrifices necessary to sustain freedom. Our directions may have changed, but I believe our resolve is greater than ever. In spite of the powerful forces aligned against humanity, I am convinced democracy will eventually regain lost ground and expand its boundaries throughout the entire world. I believe this not because we are necessarily the strongest country in the world but because our cause is true and right.

Today, we remain concerned about the people of South Vietnam who yearned to continue living under representative government, and it appears that they have lost it. We also remain concerned about our MIA's/POW's, and we will continue to search for the truth about their fate.

Mr. Speaker, the entire Nation owes a solemn debt of gratitude to all Americans who have served their country to further the cause of freedom.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman again for what he is doing here again.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. He has been an invaluable member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs. I cannot think of a Member who has come in in recent years who has contributed more, with more dedication, and with more credibility to the issues facing not only Vietnam veterans but those who have been exposed to atomic and nuclear difficulties and the ramifications of the explosions of nuclear devices than the gentleman from Georgia, and I am very grateful for his contribution today.

Mr. ROWLAND of Georgia. I thank the gentleman for those comments, and I shall look forward to working with him in the future to continue to do what is just for the veterans of this country.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank, the gentleman.

The war in Vietnam has been characterized many times as the longest and most divisive foreign war ever engaged in by the United States, but regardless of one's feelings about that conflict, I think all of us share a sense of full significance of our massive involvement in the affairs of that small Asian country has yet to be fully understood.

We do know that our experience in Vietnam was a deeply emotional one and one that had a profound effect on the entire generation of young Americans. Those who served on the Committee of Veterans' Affairs, including myself, have a special responsibility, I think, to fully understand and respond to the effects of the Vietnam war on those who served during that controversial era. It is a duty that I believe all of us welcome and even consider a privilege.

For too long, the ambivalence the Nation had toward the war in Vietnam extended to those who fought the war in our behalf. Veterans of Vietnam were either ignored because they were reminders of a national experience that many wanted desperately to forget, or these veterans were subjected to outright hostility, perceived as disturbed, maybe even dangerous individuals, whose values and behavior were somehow suspicious and alien.

The country seemed unable to empathize with these returning veterans. A nation noted for its compassion would not or could not open its heart to its own, denying Vietnam veterans the means and support they needed to finally come home. Throughout the world, our Nation's warriors have been celebrated as heroes, reflecting glory on their culture, but that was before Vietnam.

In his touching, powerful book, "A Rumor of War," Phillip Caputo describes the bonding which occurred between those in combat:

Two friends of mine died trying to save the corpses of their men from the battlefield. Such devotion, simple and selfless, sentiment of belonging to each other, was one of the decent things that we found in a conflict otherwise notable for its monstrosities.

Reconciliation has begun, and those young men and women we sent to serve in Vietnam are finally coming home to all of us. We must not let this process of once again belonging to one another falter. Our commitment to our Nation's veterans of Vietnam did not end 10 years ago when the last helicopter transported the last Marines out of Saigon. Our commitment did not end on May 7, 1975, when the President proclaimed that the Vietnam era had ended.

Our special national responsibility is ongoing. We will be shamed as a nation if we do not continue to honor that responsibility as we try to do so today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague and highly regarded member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, today, May 7 marks the 10th anniversary of the end of the war in Vietnam. During this spring season, a season that is a symbol of nature's unending renewal, it is fitting that we honor the memory of those who fought and died in that war.

Earlier this year, ceremonies took place that commemorated the closing of the Vietnam Veterans War Memorial Foundation, organized by Vietnam veteran Jan Scruggs. It was his mission, and that of thousands of Vietnam veterans and millions of Americans, to build the magnificent memorial to Vietnam veterans that lies adjacent to the Lincoln and Washington Memorials here in this Nation's Capital city. In each of our home communities this spring, we have paid tribute to the 59,000 men and women who died in that war, as well as the thousands who have died from war-related causes since, and the 2,477 still listed as missing in action. In Ohio, there are 148 Vietnam veterans who still have not come home. Today, in our hearts, we light a candle for each and every one of them. We remember them on behalf of the Nation.

Vietnam veterans are sons and daughters, parents, brothers and sisters, fiances, friends, classmates, buddies, and neighbors. They answered this Nation's call. Though our generation, in our lifetime, will never agree on the dimensions and ultimate meaning of that war for America, we know that the Vietnam Veterans of America, in their activities and devotion, have helped heal our Nation since then.

As Time magazine so aptly stated recently, Vietnam was "a bloody rite of passage * * * which cost America its innocence and still haunts its conscience." For America, there can be no turning back the pages of history. Though no testimonial can ever be adequate, we can honor those men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice by remembering them for all time.

Yet, if this Nation, from their sacrifice, develops a deeper understanding of the difficult but imperative challenges of peace in this dangerous and troubled world, we shall have paid them all the finest tribute.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the gentleman from Ohio for an excellent statement. Her contribution to Vietnam veterans in particular has been a very significant one, and her participation in the Committee on Veterans' Affairs and her work on so many issues is very deeply appreciated. I thank her for participating in this special order.

□ 1700

There is no Member in this entire body that serves with more ability and who receives more respect and general support than the chairman of our Committee on Veterans' Affairs. He has been able to reach out to every element in the House for support of his work. I gratefully acknowledge his presence and ask his participation at this time with my thanks.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I want to first thank my distinguished colleague from South Dakota, Tom Daschle, for those very kind remarks and commend him for calling this special order to commemorate not only the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war, but to pay tribute to its American participants.

Tom has been an outspoken advocate for benefits and services geared specifically toward the special needs of Vietnam-era veterans.

As you may know, Tom authored and nurtured the Agent Orange and Atomic Veterans Relief Act, provided the leadership that steered it through this great body and, as a result, we now provide a disability allowance to those veterans suffering from certain conditions that may be associated with exposure to agent orange.

Now, as chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Education, Training and Employment, Tom is working to ensure that all veterans are given ample opportunity to readjust and to be productive.

We're proud to have him as a member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, and the veterans of this Nation from all wars are fortunate to have him representing their best interests in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, it has been said many times—war does not end with cease-fire. Vietnam was no exception. In the years following the war, controversy remained. Vietnam veterans worked to readjust to a society that found it difficult to understand what they had been through, what they had done. Most were successful.

May 7 marks the 10th anniversary of the official end of the Vietnam era. It comes at a time when the psychological wounds of the Vietnam era are beginning to heal. Events of recent years have added much to the healing process.

In November 1982, there was a belated and much-needed thank you performed on The Mall in Washington—the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, 58,022 names on a black granite wall attesting to the high price of war, was dedicated. Last November, a statue of three fighting men was added and the memorial became a national monument. On Memorial Day 1984, a serviceman of the Vietnam war was laid to rest with his comrades from previous wars at the Tomb of the Unknowns.

I'm proud to say that, due to the nonpartisan efforts of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs and the House of Representatives, there is now a Comprehensive Benefits Program that recognizes the experiences, the contributions, and the special needs of the Vietnam-era veteran.

The program includes: Treatment for exposure to herbicides and a disability allowance for certain conditions that could be associated with that exposure; readjustment counseling; small business loans; increased job training and job placement assistance, including a landmark program that marks the first time employers have been paid directly to hire and train veterans; special consideration for Vietnam-era veterans seeking Federal employment—this program, the Veterans' Readjustment Appointment Authority, has provided employment opportunities for more than 200,000 Vietnam-era veterans—GI bill education benefits; and posttraumatic stress research and treatment.

In addition, the Veterans' Administration's efforts in carrying out congressional mandates have been noteworthy. Here are the facts:

The VA has assisted more than 6.5 million, or more than two-thirds of all Vietnam-era veterans, in receiving education benefits.

Approximately 600,000 Vietnam-era veterans receive monthly compensation checks for service-connected disabilities and over 21,000 receive pensions for severe disabilities incurred after discharge.

From 1981 through 1983 alone, the VA guaranteed $14.1 billion in GI home loans for Vietnam-era veterans. Vietnam-era veterans receive half of the VA's guaranteed home loans.

Since 1981, the number of VA Readjustment Counseling Centers has increased from 90 to 137, with an additional 52 in the works. More than 250,000 veterans and 50,000 family members have received counseling at these centers; 19,000 veterans visit the centers each month, 6,300 for the first time.

More than 178,000 Vietnam veterans have been given agent orange physical examinations. There have been more than 23,000 inpatient admissions and over 1 million outpatient visits associated with agent orange and herbicide exposure.

These benefits and services, like the wall, have become a symbol of America's increasing willingness to listen to those who survived the war and to remember those who didn't.

There are now over 8 million living Vietnam-era veterans. Approximately 3.4 million served in the Southeast Asia theater of operation; more than 58,000 were killed, 300,000 were wounded, and 75,000 were permanently disabled.

Mr. Speaker, the Vietnam war and our veterans who served and sacrificed in southeast Asia and during the Vietnam-era are a powerful part of our history. They deserve our gratitude and our respect.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the committee chairman very much for his statement.

It is only fitting, I think, that the chairman called a meeting of the Veterans' Affairs Committee today to deal with a number of bills directly affecting the Vietnam veterans and others, but particularly today Vietnam veterans, and I think the legislation as it will come to the floor in the next couple of weeks ought to be considered and supported by every Member in this body for the kind of show of support and the kind of value it will have for the veterans as they are affected. I thank the chairman for his work on this committee and for the leadership he has given all of us.

Mr. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I yield at this time to another active member of the committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MOLINARI].

Mr. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join in today's special order and I commend the gentleman from South Dakota for his initiative in this regard.

Each year I attend Vietnam Veterans Memorial Day ceremonies in my district. Each year I come away with the same troubled feelings. Ten years after the end of the war, the scars are still too visible. The continuing suffering is obvious. I then ask myself what we can do as a country to help these American veterans?

Look into their faces—into their eyes—speak to them. I see confusion, uncertainty, and perhaps that they are searching for something. Is it identity, is it peace of mind, is it a desire to forget or a desire to remember? I don't know the answers to these questions.

I have learned some things, however. Vietnam veterans do appreciate people who show concern for them, people who hold out a helping hand. Above all, I think they are searching for love and acceptance. If we can understand this, then I think we can respond in a way that can help them the most. God knows they certainly deserve at least that much from their fellow Americans.

Out Vietnam veterans are a special group of men and women. They answered the call of their country when it was popular, even fashionable, to condemn our Government and to praise those we were fighting against. Although there is a temptation to try to forget the Vietnam war and that troubled time, we must not forget those 58,000 who died and the thousands of men and women who heroically served in our Armed Forces in Southeast Asia.

There are a number of steps that have been taken and should be continued in the future to provide assistance to our veterans. Programs created specifically for our Vietnam veterans must continue with greater emphasis placed on readjustment counseling, employment training and other valuable services.

In the past few years we have witnessed several events in Washington to honor those who have served in Vietnam. Last year, the remains of an unidentified soldier killed in Vietnam were placed between those of the unknown soldiers from Korea and World War II in Arlington Cemetery. Like the Vietnam Memorial, this was a long overdue but deserved tribute. New York City is currently conducting 2 days of ceremonial events, including the dedication of a Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Lower Manhattan containing the texts of letters written to or from American soldiers, in order to recognize the 250,000 New York men and women who fought in Vietnam.

Ten years after the end of the war, the healing process is beginning and it is important that it be continued. In terms of compassion, understanding, assistance, and acceptance, Americans can do much to let the forgotten vet know that he is forgotten no longer.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. MOLINARI] for his excellent statement, and I appreciate his participation this afternoon.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I yield now to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY], another very active member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee.

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend and colleague, Mr. DASCHLE, for this opportunity to share his special order today.

This is an unusual day. There are few of us who, when asked the official date of the end of the Vietnam war, could quickly come up with "May 7, 1975," and fewer still who could readily recall where we were or exactly what we were doing on that day. For the most part, our troops had left Vietnam 2 years before, leaving, as they had come, not in platoons and squadrons, but in modest ones and twos, arriving home not to parades but often to anonymity. At the same time, it is a day we cannot let go by unnoticed.

This is not a day to engage in rhetorical breast-beating about who was right and who was wrong in our strategy in Southeast Asia. It is instead a day for remembrance, reconciliation, and recommitment.

It is first a day for remembrance. We remember the people whose lives were touched dramatically changed by the war. We remember the families who grieve for the nearly 57,000 who died in Vietnam. We remember the families who still wonder and wait to learn the fate of the 2,500 POW's and MIA's who have never been accounted for. We remember those who have learned to cope with disabilities—both physical and emotional—suffered as a result of Vietnam. We remember our brothers, sisters, fathers, and friends who served our Nation well. And, we remember the American children and the refugees.

This is a day for reconciliation, a time for all in our society to be reconciled to one another, to look beyond our differences regarding the war in Vietnam and to look toward our commonly shared goals of peace, justice, freedom, and democracy for all people.

Finally, this is a day for recommitment. For the thousands of veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder or from the effects of dioxin exposure or for those who are disabled or unemployed, Vietnam is not over. We must recommit ourselves to addressing their needs. We can pass legislation which presumes service connection for post-traumatic stress disorder; we can further expand agent orange compensation; we can extend the emergency veterans jobs training bill; we can act to keep the entire veterans health care system strong. And, we can continue our efforts to locate our POW's and MIA's.

As we pause today for remembrance, reconciliation and recommitment, we consider the words of Myra MacPherson in the Washington Post:

A quietness comes over those who visit the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Voices are stilled as people lose themselves in private thoughts, as they look at that wall with the names of nearly 58,000 dead or missing. And something else also happens. As you look into that black granite wall, your reflection stares back. That mirror image is a reminder of something long buried, long ignored: We in America are all veterans of Vietnam.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for a very, very good statement. I appreciate his participation this afternoon. The gentleman from Minnesota has been very active in many of these issues and it is obvious from the statement just provided that he speaks with an eloquence that comes from the heart.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. STAGGERS].

Mr. STAGGERS. Mr. Speaker, I would first like to commend my colleagues from the Veterans' Affairs Committee for calling this special order.

A decade has proven to be too short a time for us to fully understand the consequences of the Vietnam war. We know the number who died for their names are etched in stone.

We have counted the wounded, but must add to the number of casualties as we learn more about posttraumatic stress syndrome and agent orange.

We know the war cost $150 billion to wage, but many decades will pass before we know the cost of fulfilling our promise to those who served. A generation yet born will be called upon to shoulder that which has rightfully been called the continuing cost of war.

Vietnam was a deeply emotional experience for America. It had a profound effect on an entire generation of young Americans.

Initial American involvement in Vietnam's civil war was not unpopular. But as months turned into years, Americans began to weigh the cost in human lives for interests that no longer seemed vital.

The realities of war visited living rooms throughout the Nation on the nightly news. The absence of solidarity of purpose, that so characterized America in World War II, was mirrored in congressional debates and policies pursued by successive administrations.

Each individual had a special perception of the war. Fathers and mothers; brothers and sisters; those who had fought in other wars and those who never had; combatants and peace marchers. All were left with differing impressions of America's longest war.

The debate raged over our involvement in the war, but ignored those who were called upon to serve their country.

I was exposed to the same anxieties and pressures, during that time, like most people my age: I visited the local recruiter; not old enough to enlist; too young to fully understand war and the extent of Vietnam.

I felt I couldn't fully understand the experiences of classmates and friends who fought in Vietnam. And in turn, they told me they felt they had missed out on something that had occurred while they were away. Understanding is vital if we are to end the lingering divisiveness.

Those of us serving on the Veterans' Affairs Committee have a special responsibility to understand the problems confronting the American veteran. Only through understanding can we hope to be capable stewards of America's promise to those who defended our freedom and liberties.

We must acknowledge that the needs of veterans differ as acutely as the wars in which they fought. Whatever judgment is passed on American involvement in Vietnam, we must own up to the fact that young Americans went to Vietnam to fight for their country.

This is their distinction, this is the honor they share with American veterans of other wars. Their obedience to duty must not be tarnished by feelings of shame, guilt, or our failure to fully understand the changes in our society caused by the Vietnam war.

A Vietnam veteran told me recently that like so many others he received the cold shoulder upon his return from the war. Trying to talk to his family about the problems he faces, he was told by his uncles that they didn't want to hear it because they had won their war.

The shame is ours if we thrust upon the Vietnam veteran our national guilt. The loss is ours if we lock out a generation that has much to contribute. The misfortune is ours if we call upon another generation of Americans to defend our freedom and liberties and they fail to answer the call for fear of future condemnation.

As the leader of the free world, we bear a great responsibility. We must be strong economically for this is the bedrock of our security and prosperity. We must maintain a strong military force capable of defending our Nation and fulfilling our collective security commitments.

It is for these reasons I have supported military spending that I believe strengthens our ability and readiness. It is for these same reasons that I have supported programs that address the problems confronting veterans and rewards them for the sacrifices they have made in protecting our Nation.

Young Americans today considering going into the armed services must be assured that we stand by our commitments to our veterans. That we are genuinely concerned about their future well-being and that of their families. If we fail to make good on our debt to Vietnam veterans then we risk not having the essential ingredient necessary for a strong defense—dedicated men and women.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I think this year in particular as we consider budgetary matters, it is important that we also consider priorities with regard to those commitments that we have already made. They do not go in and out with fads. They do not go in and out with the popularity of a given issue. They remain commitments hard and firm, just as important and just as solid as that marble wall that is a constant reminder, perhaps far more visual than the reminder that we need to make each and every time we consider legislation here on the floor dealing with those veterans and the veterans who preceded them.

I thank the gentleman for his contribution this afternoon and his continued commitment to the Vietnam veterans who count on him and count on all of us for support.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the new chairman of the Vietnam Veterans in Congress, a person who has dedicated a great deal of his career in the House of Vietnam veterans and veterans of all wars, a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and a very able one at that, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS].

Mr. EVANS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend my distinguished colleague from the Veterans' Affairs Committee, TOM DASCHLE, for requesting this special order.

I am privileged to serve this Congress as chairman of the Vietnam-era Veterans in Congress caucus, a bipartisan, bicameral group of legislators dedicated to helping our Vietnam-era veterans. I can think of no more appropriate observance of this anniversary than rededicating ourselves to helping those Americans who served in Southeast Asia when their country called.

As we as a nation have approached this anniversary of the end of our Vietnam involvement, I have seen many accounts of how our experience there has affected our foreign policy. I have even read accounts of how the country of Vietnam is faring in the aftermath of the war. What I have not seen in any reasonable measure is an accounting of our continuing debt to our Vietnam veterans, or how that debt has yet to be fully repaid.

Yes; there has been a marked change in the way that we as a nation think about our Vietnam veterans. Our Vietnam veterans are increasingly recognized as patriotic Americans who served their country as bravely as did those veterans of earlier, more popular wars. With the construction of the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial and the inclusion of a Vietnam serviceman in the Tomb of the Unknowns, those who served in Vietnam have, symbolically at least, rejoined the mainstream. Vietnam veteran units can now march proudly in our Memorial Day parades.

But while our citizens have come to recognize the courage and dedication of our Vietnam veterans, our Government has been painfully slow to comply. It was the Federal Government which, rightly or wrongly, sent Americans to fight and die in Vietnam. Yet it is the Federal Government that still stands in the way of their complete rehabilitation.

It was U.S. policy to defoliate large portions of Vietnam, which exposed our air and ground troops to agent orange and other toxic herbicides. But the Veterans' Administration has been slow to compensate those affected by these poisons, or to help their families including children suffering genetic defects.

While the issue is endlessly studied and restudied, our Vietnam veterans are told that there simply isn't enough scientific evidence to prove their case. Yet the same Federal Government bought and evacuated the entire community of Times Beach, MO, because it was contaminated with the dioxin contained in agent orange. The parallels to our post-World War II veterans exposed to atomic radiation are apparent. It would be tragic if the VA waits long enough, as with the atomic veterans, the surviving agent orange veterans will become fewer in number and the pressure for Government action will diminish.

Serving in Vietnam often meant postponing a higher education or sacrificing job opportunities. And many Vietnam veterans experienced readjustment problems upon their return and were not easily reintegrated into the work force. Unemployment levels for Vietnam-era veterans have remained consistently above the national average for other Americans of comparable age. And whenever economic conditions worsen, Vietnam-era veterans suffer the brunt of the employment impact.

Yet the GI bill benefits for Vietnam-era veterans have been relatively limited in comparison to those provided for veterans of previous wars. Job and job-training programs targeted at Vietnam-era veterans have been enacted only recently, with relatively limited participation.

Vietnam-era veterans suffered a higher rate of less-than-honorable discharges than did their predecessors in previous wars. Fully a third of the U.S. Marines who served in Vietnam received less-than-honorable discharges. This stigma follows those veterans for the remainder of their lives, making employment and educational opportunities more difficult.

Finally, an estimated 2,400 Americans are still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. This Nation simply cannot rest until a full accounting of those servicemen is rendered. For those veterans and their families, the sacrifice continues. For them, no healing, no reconciliation is possible.

As this 10th anniversary of our withdrawal from Vietnam passes, the spotlight of publicity and commemoration will inevitably fade. Yet for the millions who served there, the memory will never fade. In all too many cases, their sacrifices continue.

It would be unconscionable for our Government to ignore the problems of our Vietnam veterans and those who love them. We must demonstrate the same compassion toward those individuals that we have for the hundreds of thousands of refugees from Southeast Asia who have made new lives on our shores.

As Members of Congress, we must ensure that our Government upholds its obligation to those who answered its call. If we fail in that regard, we surrender forever the moral basis for demanding similar sacrifices from future generations of Americans.

Again I thank Chairman DASCHLE for setting up this special order and Chairman MONTGOMERY for participating and staying with us through the course of it.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the gentleman for an excellent statement and a great deal of food for thought as we consider this 10th anniversary.

Mr. EDGAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DASCHLE. I now yield to my friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. EDGAR, a most active member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee and a leader in Vietnam veteran issues as well as many others.

Mr. EDGAR. I thank the gentleman for yielding and want to commend the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] for his leadership on the issue of helping to raise the consciousness of the House of Representatives and the other body to the issue of the Vietnam veteran.

Those of us who have been in Congress over the last 10 years, since the shutting down of the Vietnam war, through the period of agonies as Vietnam veterans struggled for some recognition, through the period of time when memorials were established not only here in Washington but throughout the country to recognize the service of these Vietnam veterans, the gentleman has provided a great deal of leadership.

The gentleman from Illinois, Congressman LANE EVANS, I think summed up much of our feeling about those persons who served in Vietnam, and I congratulate him for his leadership of those Members of Congress who served in the military during the Vietnam era.

I would also like to commend the chairman of our full committee, the gentleman from Mississippi, SONNY MONTGOMERY. When I came to Congress I was placed on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee by senior Members from my delegation who did not think I was going to be around very long. And I feel a little bit like the kid in the commercial who has the cereal bowl pushed in front of him and his two brothers look and watch and suddenly he takes a bite and they both respond, "Mikey likes it." I have really enjoyed my opportunity to serve on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee and deal with the issues of education, of employment, of readjustment counseling, of the issues relating to agent orange and trying to understand that chemical defoliant that was used in Vietnam that is inflicting great injury to many veterans. And it is the leadership of people like SONNY MONTGOMERY that has helped to make our committee a bipartisan committee where Democrats and Republicans alike struggle with the issues that are so important.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate my friend and colleague, the gentleman from South Dakota, TOM DASCHLE, for requesting this tribute in honor of all those who served their country during the Vietnam war. In particular, I would like to express my personal appreciation for his leadership in being one of the founding members of the Vietnam Veterans In Congress. This congressional caucus, currently under the direction of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS] has been one of the leading forces in supporting our efforts on the House Veterans' Affairs Committee in seeking meaningful recognition of the needs and strengths of all those who served during the Vietnam era.

Retracing our steps over the past 10 years in the Congress in our efforts to come to grips with the Vietnam experience is not an easy process. I was elected to Congress in November 1974 and joined the House Veterans' Affairs Committee in January of 1975. At that time there were no Vietnam veterans in Congress. There were very few of us then who even spoke out on behalf of Vietnam veterans issues. We were faced with a general consensus in this body and a growing feeling across the country that the Vietnam war should be put behind us. The blatant neglect which many Vietnam veterans experienced individually when they returned home was mirrored by the inadequacy of the programs, benefits, and services provided for them by the Congress.

It was the World War I generation in Congress, abandoned by their own Government when they returned home in 1918, who developed the GI bill, one of the most beneficial programs ever devised, for those who returned from World War II. The memory of that experience carried over to assist those who returned from the Korean conflict. But the Vietnam veteran fell quickly into the amnesia which surrounded the Vietnam war itself. Very few were willing to listen when we spoke out during those early years about the inadequacy of the Vietnam era GI bill, or the lack of proper employment training or readjustment programs for those who had returned from that war. There was very little understanding of the unique needs of Vietnam veterans. There was very little compassion or tolerance for their views when we fought to extend and expand education and rehabilitation programs specifically tailored to meet those needs.

Gradually and fortunately this attitude began to change. With it changed the perception and the appreciation of the American people for those who served in our last and longest war. We made progress slowly, but we still moved ahead with and for the Vietnam veteran. There were several landmarks in this process.

In 1978 Congressman DON EDWARDS of California and I called for the first hearings in the House Veterans' Affairs Committee on the impact of the use of the defoliant agent orange on the Vietnam veteran population. This led to a long and frustrating struggle which, while it continues, has since provided health care in VA facilities for those suffering disabilities which could be associated with exposure to the defoliant and a framework which will lead to a mechanism to provide compensation for those affected.

In 1979, the House Veterans' Affairs Committee finally accepted our recommendation through Public Law 96-22 to establish the first storefront readjustment counseling centers to provide outreach and assistance to those Vietnam veterans still seeking a way to fully readjust to civilian life. The centers were an immediate success. A nationwide study we authorized indicated that between 600,000 and 800,000 Vietnam veterans could benefit from these services. Despite efforts from the present administration to curtail the program or eliminate it entirely, we managed to both extend and expand the number of vet centers to over 186 communities across the Nation. Legislation, I introduced in the last Congress extended the program until 1988. Vet centers served two purposes. First, they were the key element in the congressional effort to advance the Veterans' Administration to the forefront in research, understanding, and treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder which has affected veterans from all wars. Second, they served as a catalyst to bring Vietnam veterans together for the first time to share with both their peers and the public at large the unique service and sacrifice that was Vietnam. The Vet Center Program sparked one of the largest volunteer efforts in the Federal Government when the call went out for assistance to augment the services provided by the program. Vietnam veterans from all backgrounds offered their help with counseling, job, and readjustment assistance. To date over 300,000 Vietnam veterans have sought assistance through the Vet Center Program.

In 1981, as chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Education, Training and Employment I introduced legislation, included in Public Law 97-72 which established a small business loan program for Vietnam veterans and disabled veterans. The provision served as a catalyst to encourage the Small Business Administration to implement their special outreach assistance to help Vietnam veterans start their own businesses.

In 1982, my subcommittee authorized and the Congress approved a targeted extension of the 10-year delimiting period for GI bill benefits to allow undertrained and unemployed Vietnam era veterans to utilize additional job training programs. We also, completely redesigned, through my legislation, the Department of Labor's veterans employment system to more fully meet the needs of those seeking employment and job placement services. Part of this process was also achieved through an amendment I offered to the Job Training Partnership Act which enacted a specific grant program for the States to provide community based and rural outreach employment centers for Vietnam veterans.

In 1983, we again addressed unemployment and underemployment among the Vietnam veteran population as one of our major issues of concern. Those who had gone to serve their country during the Vietnam war had historically been the last hired and the first fired. The serious economic depression in the early 1980's had brought this problem to crisis proportions within the Vietnam veteran population. Thousands of Vietnam veterans were out of work and seeking new skills. In response, we drafted the Emergency Veterans' Job Training Act of 1983. An entirely new concept, it provided, for the first time, needed incentives for employers to hire and train Vietnam era and Korean war veterans in new skills and new occupations. The program was designed to help new business and growth industries as much as it was planned to retrain the long term unemployed veteran or the veteran displaced from previous employment and job skills. Sadly there are many regions of the country that have not recovered from the economic tragedy of the early 1980's. Today our committee approved legislation which would extend this needed program again.

But perhaps the most rewarding contribution we have made in my mind as the present chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care has been within the system of VA medical benefits and services. All of the programs and not perfect, and we still have much to do in directing the VA to focus a clearer attention on the needs of the Vietnam veteran and all veterans; but we have made progress.

This progress has been shown in directing the agency to expand its new intensive in-patient treatment programs for veterans suffering from post traumatic stress disorder as we did in the last Congress. It has been shown in our efforts and our legislation directing the massive major studies on the effects of agent orange exposure or on the special concerns of women veterans who served in Vietnam. But perhaps the most tangible example of the worth of our work has been demonstrated in very human and very individual terms. For this subcommittee chairman, there have been many examples of the individual results of our efforts which paid off in terms of wounds healed, of lives restructured. There have been examples of dedicated VA employees giving their time their interest and concern to help those who served in Vietnam. There have been the individual examples of members of our great veterans organizations who have lent their voice and support to our efforts here in Washington and their concern and guidance to help veterans in communities across this country. And there have been great examples of the healing we have been able to achieve both in mind and body and spirit over the past 10 years in demonstrating our obligation to the Vietnam veteran and the contribution Vietnam veterans can make to this society.

Mr. Speaker, it is difficult in a short period of time, and merely through a litany of legislative measures to address the frustration, the concern, the excitement and the satisfaction of the past 10 years with our work in the Congress involving Vietnam veterans. It is also very true that Government programs, benefits and services are not, and should not, be the only benchmark we use in saying thank you and welcome home to those who served during the Vietnam war. But as politicians and representatives of the people we are tasked to address the needs of our constituencies and to meet the needs of those who require those services with specific solutions. I believe we have made and are continuing to make an honest effort to accomplish that goal. We have seen a new awakening of respect and understanding for all those who served during the Vietnam war in this process and not just those who have earned and deserved their Government's assistance. It is a record we all can share; both veteran and nonveteran alike. It is a debt we continue to owe.

I commend the gentleman in the well for just today you have acted in our committee to authorize a program extension and to provide for additional funds so that those who are still unemployed and underemployed might use that very program.

In listing out these programs, whether it is the storefront counseling centers, whether it is the Job Training Partnership Act, whether it is an issue to try to help focus the concerns on education, training, and employment for these Vietnam veterans, or simply counseling for those who are troubled, I think we have responded and taken the first steps. But through the efforts of the gentleman in the well [Mr. DASCHLE], the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS], and through the bipartisan efforts of Democrats and Republicans, I think it is clear that we are beginning to address the needs of Vietnam veterans.

The real question I think for this body is what is our vision of the future? How can we help those who are still unemployed find meaningful employment? How can we help those who are caught up in drug and alcohol abuse problems find some security through centers throughout the Veterans' Administration? How can we help the Veterans' Administration understand the special needs that these veterans have? And how can we help the administration understand that they simply cannot cut budgets that impact on concerns for those who are combat-related veterans who have post-traumatic stress disorder and other related problems that they face as a result of their service? You can be troubled by the war, but I think all of us here understand the need to care about the warrior. I think the gentleman in the well has demonstrated that in our committee, and hopefully as chairman of the Subcommittee on Hospitals and Health Care I can relate that health care system to the specific needs of veterans of all wars, but those special needs of the veterans who served our country well in Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his special order today and I appreciate his focus on this issue.

Mr. DASCHLE, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Early in my statement I said that not only did we need to tend from time to time the grounds and view the monument to the Vietnam veterans, but really those of us here have a special opportunity to build another monument, that is a monument of laws.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. EDGAR] has laid out the blueprint very well. That monument continues to find a need for construction, continues to find a need for completion, and continues to find a need among Vietnam veterans.

Let that be our goal and our commitment this afternoon.

To all of those who have participated in this special order, my thanks.

● Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, this week our Nation observes the 10th anniversary of the official end of the longest and most controversial military involvement in U.S. history—the war in Vietnam.

More than 9 million Americans served their country during that bitter and prolonged struggle. Nearly one-third served in the Vietnam theater, where combat prevailed. The average age of Vietnam veterans when they separated from military service was 24 years. The average time on active duty was 3 years, but most served in active combat zones for 1 year or less.

More than 58,000 of them lost their lives, 300,000 were wounded, and 75,000 were permanently disabled. We grieve not only for the dead, but also for the 2,400 or more Americans who are listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia and for their families who have waited for a decade or more to learn the fate of their loved ones.

For many Americans who were most affected by the conflict, the war seems in many ways not to be over. For the families of those killed and missing, it is surely not. Nor is it for the service men and women who came home not to the ticker-tape parades and fireworks that greeted the heroes of our previous foreign wars, but occasionally to hostility and often to lives of further sacrifice. Mostly, they and their unselfish contributions to their country were ignored.

Unfortunately, the reception these valorous and patriotic men and women encountered when they returned home was tainted by a nation anxious to put any thought of America's first battlefield loss behind it. In addition to the physical wounds endured by many of these veterans, thousands still suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder [PTSD] and other psychological problems which might have been alleviated by a more positive reception.

Now, 10 years later, we as a nation are finally welcoming home these gallant men and women. We are thanking them, as we should, for the service they rendered their country.

In November 1982, an awesome black granite wall etched with 58,022 names attesting to the high price of war, was dedicated on the Mall in Washington, DC—the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Last November, a statue of three fighting men was added and the memorial became a national monument. On Memorial Day 1984, a serviceman from the Vietnam war was laid to rest next to his comrades from previous wars at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

Long delayed but well deserved, these are appropriate tributes to the devotion and sacrifice of millions of Americans. The Vietnam Memorial and the Vietnam War's Unknown Soldier have become symbols of America's increasing desire to listen to the needs of those who survived the war and remember with love those who did not.

The Vietnam war is a powerful part of our history. Our veterans who served and sacrificed in Southeast Asia and during the Vietnam-era deserve our respect, our recognition, and our gratitude as we observe this anniversary of their service on May 7—"Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day."●

● Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, in this day and age, instantaneous communications and the rapid pace of daily life seem to make distance shrink and time rush forward. Yet even by modern standards, a decade is not very much time in which to heal and forget, particularly when the scars are so deep and painful as those left by the tragedy of America's involvement in Vietnam.

The second term of Abraham Lincoln began at the twilight of another divisive and deeply traumatic conflict, the Civil War. In his second inaugural address, Lincoln promised to rule over a time of healing in this Nation, offering "malice toward none and charity for all." Yet 10 years after his assassination, the nation was still feeling the divisiveness that bred that conflict. And has proven the same for Vietnam.

The battlegrounds of the Civil War were as close and familiar as Gettysburg and Antietam. In Vietnam, the names were unfamiliar, and bore a faraway sound—Pleiku, Khe Sahn, and Hue. Yet the war was as divisive to Americans as any in our history.

All we have to do to invoke those days is recall in our mind's eye the sight of the American flag being torn, trampled on, and burned. This sight is symbolic of the tearing apart of American society as the protests raged and Americans watched on their television screens the deaths of American boys in faraway jungles and the rioting of their counterparts on the streets and campuses of our Nation.

These intense memories, brought home to us nightly in images of death and destruction, are only now starting to fade, 10 years after the last helicopter lifted from the U.S. Embassy South Vietnam.

And there have been fresh horrors since then to drive home the enormity of the conflict in Southeast Asia. I speak, of course, of the holocaust played out on the killing fields of Cambodia in the wake of the takeover of the Khmer Rouge, the pitiful lunge for freedom by the boat people of Vietnam, following after the new communist Government of Viet Nam began its systematic annihilation of all organized opposition to the oppressive government.

I would be the last to say that these memories should ever be allowed to fade, or be forgotten. There is too much that must be remembered, and above all we must never forget the sacrifices of those brave young men who died so far from home.

But while these memories should remain with us forever, it is important that the painful wounds that caused them be allowed to heal, so that we can look back on these days with an historical perspective that will enable us to draw the proper lesson from this conflict.

I am very proud of the way this Nation has come together following the conflict in Vietnam to heal the wounds of war. I am especially proud of our Commander in Chief, the President of the United States, for the courage to tell the veterans of this country that their brothers who fought in Vietnam were part of a noble cause.

That remark caused a lot of controversy, but after thinking about it, who can deny the nobility of America's purpose. We did not seek to gain land, or wealth or power, but to stop communism dead in its tracks. And that is the noblest of causes for this Nation, the leader of the free world.

I'm also very proud to have been named by my friend and colleague from New York, STEPHEN SOLARZ, as the new chairman of the House Task Force on Prisoners and Missing in Action in Southeast Asia. We are pledged to a full accounting of the fate of the 2,500 Americans who are still unaccounted for. For their families and their friends, we are working to write the final chapter of the history of their bravery so far from home.

But, as I said before, as memories fade, the tempers cool, it is important that we gain some lasting lesson from the war in Vietnam. And I have learned one lesson that I want to share with my colleagues today.

Wars have been lost on the battlefield, wars have been lost in the command posts behind the lines, wars have been lost at headquarters. But the war in Vietnam was not lost by America's military, its fighting men or its generals. The war in Vietnam was lost here at home, right here in Congress, aided and abetted by the American media.

As we mark the 10th anniversary of the fall of Saigon, we must reflect on this lesson carefully. For I am very much afraid that the action of this House just 2 weeks ago denying aid to freedom fighters in Nicaragua could well set the stage for another anniversary 10 years from now—the fall of Central America.

When is this Congress going to learn to stand behind President Reagan's noble cause of stopping Soviet-style communism in Central America dead in its tracks. When are we going to learn not to nitpick and second guess our President? When are we going to learn that America can not have an effective and coherent foreign policy as long as there are 535 secretaries of state here on Capitol Hill? When are we going to learn to stop listening to men like Daniel Ortega and start trusting our own President? In short, when are we going to learn why we lost in Vietnam?

It's time we learn that freedom and democracy will face a defeat in Central America as great as that of Vietnam unless those of us who lived through that era learned from our mistakes.●

● Mr. MOLLOHAN. Mr. Speaker, as we all know, last week marked the 10th anniversary of the Communist victory in Saigon. In recent weeks much has been printed in the press, and broadcast on television, to resurrect for us the memories of that war, which for America, ended a decade ago. All the articles and documentaries serve to remind us of the impact which the Vietnam war had on this country then, and continues to have on us all today. Whether we served there, or had a brother or sister or child or friend who served there, we all realize the sacrifice which so many young Americans made to defend the ideals of freedom so far away from home. Undoubtedly, the memory of the Vietnam war will be invoked each time the United States finds itself at the brink of involvement in conflict around the world, just as it was recently brought forth during debate on the situation in Nicaragua.

Mr. Speaker, we could talk all day about the Vietnam war and debate the pros and cons of that conflict and our actions, but I feel that today it is more fitting to talk about the brave Americans who undertook the arduous, painful duty of defending freedom against the threat of communism. Lets today honor the 2.8 million servicemen who participated in the war, the nearly 60,000 who lost their lives, and the 2,500 Americans who are still missing and unaccounted for in Vietnam. Today, let us reflect on the debt we owe all the American servicemen who fought, and those who sacrificed their lives, to defend the American principles of freedom and liberty and lets make it a high priority of our work in Congress to secure a full accounting of Americans still missing in Southeast Asia.●

● Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. Speaker, 10 years after the fall of Saigon, the war in Southeast Asia remains a painful memory. It is the memory of America's only loss in war, but more than that it is the memory of the 58,022

Americans who gave their lives over the span of a decade and a half. It is the memory of a great power being humbled by its own arrogance and misguided tenacity.

The past decade witnessed in America a collective amnesia about Vietnam. Recently, that amnesia has subsided. This Nation has recognized the valiant efforts of the men who fought and died not for territory, or glory, or wealth, but merely because they were called to serve. On July 8, 1959, the first American was killed in Vietnam. On April 30, 1975, the last American fled, not because of defeat on the battlefield, but defeat on the homefront. Those men and women did not abandon their positions, it was America that abandoned them. It is time we acknowledged that those who served cannot be forgotten, or separated from our memories. They are part of our history.

It is fitting we should commemorate the fall of Saigon and the departure of the American presence in Vietnam. While we commemorate victories, we should recognize and learn from our failures as well. We must never forget the lessons that Vietnam taught. We learned that successful foreign and military policy hinges on clearly defined goals. Militarily we learned that body counts and bomb tonnage ultimately mean very little. And, morally, we learned that this Nation should never send its men to die with the same lack of conviction and determination we showed in Southeast Asia.●

● Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, next week on May 7 we will commemorate the 10th anniversary of the end of our Nation's involvement in the Vietnam war. That conflict involved over 9 million American servicemen, of which 57,000 lost their lives. Another 2,400 are still listed officially as missing in action.

The Vietnam war evoked great passions among all Americans. There was great division in the Nation over whether or not our soldiers should be fighting a war in Southeast Asia.

Whatever our feelings about what our role there should have been, it is fair to say the Vietnam war did not have the overwhelming national support that we associate with both World Wars and the Korean conflict.

Unfortunately, that angry feeling about the Vietnam war permeated the lives of our soldiers when they returned home from the battlefields of Asia. There were no parades down Broadway for the Vietnam vets. Instead, because of our desire to get Vietnam behind us, they became the forgotten generation of American heroes.●

In addition to horrendous physical disabilities, many of the Vietnam veterans came home with mental disorders caused by the trauma of the traumatic jungle warfare they suffered through.

Now, 10 years later, many of those soldiers still suffer from what has been termed post-traumatic stress disorder that causes them to suffer, among other symptoms, deep depression that prevents them from leading normal lives.

Mr. Speaker, it has only been recently that our Nation has begun to appreciate the valiant efforts made by our fighting men and women in Vietnam. The establishment of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington was a major step in acknowledging the bravery and devotion to duty of those who gave their lives in the name of freedom.

On this 10th anniversary of the end of that conflict we can take another step to honor those who fought in Vietnam and those who are still missing in action. I am most proud to join my colleague, Representative Tom DASCHLE of South Dakota, in urging President Reagan to declare May 7, 1985, as Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day.

Such a dedication is long overdue. It is my prayer that this observance will send a loud clear signal to all Vietnam war veterans that indeed, they have not been forgotten.●

● Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to your attention the accomplishments and achievements of the many young Americans who served with valor in the Vietnam conflict. On this, the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war, it is appropriate that we look back on this chapter in our history to honor those men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice on behalf of their Nation.

The Vietnam war was one of the most divisive in our history. The conflict in this country at times overshadowed the war itself.

The Vietnam era was a difficult time for our Nation and our Government, but its most profound impact was felt by the men and women who served in the Armed Forces.

Washington's Vietnam Veterans Memorial is one of the most moving structures in a city full of monuments. It is so moving because its message is so simple, yet profound. There is no greater service an individual can perform for his nation than to risk his life and limb on behalf of his country. The more than 58,000 American servicemen who died in Vietnam did so out of a commitment to their country. They served honorably and deserve nothing less than our fullest respect and appreciation.

While American troops no longer fight in Southeast Asia, many of the veterans of that conflict still carry the emotional and physical scars of the war. It is entirely appropriate that we recognize those who died in Vietnam. But we should also recognize the many thousands of soldiers who survive today. The State of Pennsylvania alone is home to more than 375,000 Vietnam-era veterans. We should never waver in our commitment to care for those who risk their lives for our freedom.

It has been 10 years since the fall of Saigon. Let us not forget that all wars are paid for in the blood of young soldiers. The men who served in Vietnam paid that price, and for their sacrifice we should be forever grateful. ●

● Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, this weekend marked the 40th anniversary of the close of the Second World War. While it is right and just to celebrate the end of this tragic war, I would like to take this opportunity to remind my colleagues of the thousands of American soldiers who are missing in action from the conflict in Vietnam.

Saigon fell 10 years ago. Thousands of American soldiers left Vietnam to return to their loved ones. Thousands of others offered the ultimate sacrifice for their country. There are still thousands for whom there is no accounting. They are missing in action. Their status is uncertain. Are they alive? Have they passed away? Are they still being held captive?

Wars leave countries in debt. Whether a country is victorious or not, a debt to the soldiers, to their friends, and to their families is always accrued. It is a debt that we, as a people and a nation, must repay.

Our debt to the missing in action, to their families, and to their friends is overdue. I will not rest until the debt is paid.

By the most recent figures, there are some 2,400 brave American soldiers who are missing in action. The Defense Intelligence Agency has indicated that sighting reports and other information confirm the possibility that there are servicemen still alive in Southeast Asia. In fact, refugees have reported in excess of 750 firsthand sightings of live American soldiers.

Progress is beginning to be made with regard to ending the mystery of our missing in action. I do not, however, think that the current faint glimmer of hope is an adequate downpayment on our debt.

Today I am joining my colleague, Mr. HENDON, of North Carolina, in sponsoring House Concurrent Resolution 129. This important legislation would create a congressional commission that would report to Congress on whether or not there are American soldiers being held against their will in Southeast Asia, and what steps this Congress should take to ensure their return.

We absolutely must be ever vigilant in our efforts to determine the status of our soldiers who have yet to return. ●

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MONTGOMERY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

U.S. SMALL BUSINESS WEEK, 1985

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MITCHELL] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, the climate during which we are celebrating U.S. Small Business Week 1985 is unparalleled. I cannot recall in all the years we've marked this observance a more awesome threat to all that the week of May 5-11, 1985, represents.

The administration—if it dared drop its cloak of hypocrisy and double-speak—would acknowledge as its symbol for Small Business Week 1985 a thumbs down on small business; thumbs down on free enterprise; thumbs down on economic empowerment for disadvantaged small and minority business; thumbs down on what has made America a land of opportunity through Government for the people rather than subsidies for the special interests.

My fellow colleagues, as I speak today, I must say that though I am pleased with the fact that we honor small business in 1985, it is clear that this is the year that small business in the United States has suffered unprecedented dishonor at the hands of the Federal Government—at the hands of the President of the United States.

Indeed, 1985 is the year that the U.S. Congress has been called on to be an accomplice in neutralizing the Government's role in maintaining and fostering a viable small business sector. Since 1932, Congress has seen fit to assist small businesses with technical and management assistance, loans and subcontracting.

What could be more disturbing? What could be more self-defeating? What could be more counterproductive than terminating Federal aid to small business at a time when we're focusing on revitalizing our economy and reducing a Federal budget deficit acquired by mismanagement, fraud, and selfish fiscal and monetary policies.

Nine Americans who served as Small Business Administrators under seven Presidents between 1951 and 1980 have made a matter of record their abhorrence of the administration's proposal to eliminate the U.S. Small Business Administration [SBA].

Their positions are not predicated on any sentimental attachment to an agency they once served. Instead, they are simply a part of a chorus of public outcry against the administration's destructive and uninformed decisionmaking—decisionmaking that is not guided by fact, and is arrogant in its disregard for the taxpayers and the will of the Congress.

Let us look briefly at some of these facts that are now being expressed in the wake of the administration's proposal to eliminate SBA.

First, reaction has been bipartisan, not only on the part of the former SBA Administrators, but on the part of individuals, groups, and governmental entities around the country. Indeed, the House Committee on Small Business has received, firsthand, public tributes to SBA for the help it gave that could not be found elsewhere. The committee has heard from mayors, such as Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and Ernest Morial of New Orleans. They told the panel that no small share of the economic development—jobs, tax revenues, decrease in public assistance—in their cities is due to SBA assistance. Governors have spelled out in letters to the committee their displeasure and indeed, their concern that further erosion of their economic bases will occur if SBA's long-term credit assistance is eliminated. We all know that big business and government borrowing dominate the long-term credit markets. We also know that SBA is the only public or private financial institution designed specifically to provide long-term credit to small businesses.

Over and over, in city after city, small business owners—some have subsequently graduated from this classification—took time from busy schedules to have placed in the records their account of how Federal assistance was there when they had no where else to go. Loans were provided small and minority entrepreneurs who were turned down by commercial institutions.

THE ECONOMIC FACTS

There is no argument from the administration regarding the economic stimulus derived from small business activity.

There is, indeed, no argument from the Congress on the economic benefits of a viable small business sector. Legislative activity of the Small Business Committee during the 98th Congress and continuing with the 99th Congress is based on opening up opportunities for capital growth, plant expansion, payroll and employee increases through public law mandated by the Congress.

As a result of such legislative activity during the last Congress several new public laws are on the books to stimulate achievement of a competitive small business sector. For the first time in the history of the Federal procurement system, competition is open to small business. There was unusually vocal opposition to what is now the Small Business Federal Procurement Competition Enhancement Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-577). Strong lobbying against this measure made its enactment not only momentous but a true test of the bipartisanship that should prevail in regard to the small business issue.

I call on you to be governed in this legislative session by that same spirit of bipartisanship as we look at the administration's economic package as it relates to small business and a range of domestic programs.

Be governed during this period by these facts:

Since 1932, Congress has seen fit to assist small businesses. Through various wars, assistance to its veterans, depression and recessions, Congress promulgated Acts which would assist small businesses with technical and management assistance, loans and subcontracting.

Small businesses employ approximately 48 percent of the private work force, contribute 42 percent of all sales in the country and are responsible for 38 percent of the gross national product.

Small businesses provide approximately 67 percent of initial job opportunities and, thus, are responsible for the major cost in initial on-the-job training in basic skills.

Small businesses have been responsible for more than 50 percent of the new product and service innovations developed since World War II.

Almost every energy-related innovation of the past century has come from small businesses.

To measure benefits to the Government from SBA program assistance is to recognize that in every case the return far exceeds the monetary outlay. In the case of the Small Business Investment Program, for example, the cost-benefit ratio is 1 to 110. For a Government outlay of $4 million the Government takes in $441.3 million.

We have much to observe this week. We also have a small business sector to which we owe credit and a means of survival and growth.

In paying these debts and in giving this honor, we honor America and what it should always stand for.

In paying tribute to small business, we pay tribute indeed, we honor this Nation.

I would take this time to admonish and warn that any proposition, any proposal that would seek to dismantle, reduce, gut or render impotent the Small Business Administration is a gross, gross disservice to this Nation and to the small business of the Nation.

● Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, we are the land of opportunity. The best example of the endless opportunities available here in America is our small businesses. Small businessmen and women define the word "entrepreneur." They challenge the odds, start up their businesses, risking their money and reputation and struggle each day for survival. These entrepreneurs are the ones who contribute the most to our economy.

Small businesses were the power behind the drive for the 1983 economic recovery. Small companies created roughly 2.5 million new jobs in 1981 and 1982, more than offsetting the number of jobs lost by large industries. It is the small companies which are flexible enough to respond rapidly to consumer demands. More than 97 percent of all American companies are small business operations. These companies account for approximately 40 percent of our gross national product.

Small business also means innovation. Small companies carve out market niches too small for large companies, offering vital goods and services that large companies cannot or will not provide. Small companies generate 24 times more technological advances per dollar spent as compared to large companies.

The accomplishments of small business are made in an environment which is not always conducive to economic expansion. I have been a member of the Small Business Committee since I first arrived to serve in Congress. I have heard countless small businessmen describing the difficulties they face: obtaining capital, paperwork burdens, management, regulations and unfair competition to name a few. Small business owners have shown time and time again that they can overcome these difficulties and contribute so much to our Nation's economy by creating new markets, new jobs and improving our quality of life.

Mr. Speaker, this week is set-aside to honor small business owners for their countless contributions. But, Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my concern for the small businesses in rural America. Along with the 5.6 million people actively involved in farming today, there are more than 54 million people whose livelihood is directly dependent upon agricultural production. The crisis of the farm economy is theirs too, and their burden is no less the same. Bankruptcy makes no distinction between farmer and farm supplier, or between farmer and farm banker. Let us remember that the survival and future of this important sector of small business will be reflected not only in the success of the general economy as a whole, but the success of the farm economy as well.

It is in our Nation's interest to encourage the success of all small business initiatives. We must reaffirm our commitment to that entrepreneurial spirit, so uniquely American, that has been the pride of this Nation's past and shall be the hope of its future.●

● Mr. MAVROULES. Mr. Speaker, during this week many of us are taking the time to honor some of our Nation's most successful small businessmen and women. These individuals are outstanding representatives of this important segment of our private sector economy.

I must say that I am proud that the small businessman of the year from Massachusetts is from my congressional district; Mr. Alfred D'Alessandro of Gloucester.

However, today there is a question on the mind of Mr. D'Alessandro and his fellow honorees. They are concerned over the future of the agency which has given so many a fighting chance, and are opposed to the administration's proposed abolition of the Small Business Administration.

SBA is the one Federal agency with the responsibility to assist this segment of our economy. Small businesses are at the forefront of the American economy, producing a majority of new jobs and innovation occurring in the United States today.

The administration is now apparently supporting a revised plan which, rather than eliminating SBA will dismantle virtually all of the agency's lending programs. They claim that an independent voice for small business will still be maintained. But I contend that without a strong, fully functioning SBA, we would be virtually ignoring the voice of small business—and reversing what has been a bipartisan commitment to the small business sector.

Opponents of the SBA claim that the agency is not well utilized by American small businesses. I wish they could have received all the mail that has flooded my office over the last few weeks. Since the administration's plans were announced, I have heard from a large number of small businesses who have used the agency and support all of its programs. Many of these businesses wrote that they would not be in business today were it not for the Small Business Administration. It is likely that even our small businessman of the year, Mr. D'Alessandro, would not be honored here today if the SBA had not been in existence to turn his ideas into reality.

Mr. Speaker, it seems that many people have not been listening to the grassroots supporters of the Small Business Administration. Indicative of this feeling is the sentiment expressed by the president of the chamber of commerce in my hometown of Peabody, MA. He has written to the National Chamber of Commerce in Washington, DC and urged them to reconsider their position in opposition to the SBA. The Peabody Chamber has informed the national office that it intends to withdraw from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce unless this position is reversed.

Mr. Speaker, I think the message from the grassroots is clear—save the SBA. ●

● Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the many men and women of vision who have created small businesses with their own ideas and their own energies.

During U.S. Small Business Week, it is appropriate that we reflect on the fact that all businesses began as small businesses.

In my own district of New Jersey, a man of vision named Henry F. Henderson, Jr., began a new business in 1954 and has built an engineering and design company that merges our industrial manufacturing strengths with high tech know-how.

Mr. Henderson has been recognized by the U.S. Small Business Administration for top honors in New Jersey.

He and thousands of men and women like him have begun with a dream and developed a strong future of growth and employment for hundreds of other people.

Cooperation between Government and the private sector has produced impressive results in my home State of New Jersey. I feel strongly that we must create that same type of cooperative atmosphere in Washington, if we are to be successful in our efforts to promote growth in the economy.

Small businesses are the backbone of our economy.

Most major corporations today depend on the support services provided by a wide variety of small businesses. Growth in one area promotes growth in related fields.

Last year, in the 11th Congressional District of New Jersey alone, 11,000 new businesses opened their doors.

These operations, and other businesses like them, employ a majority of the work force. Growth in this sector of the economy is a positive sign for the future.

Questions have been raised in Washington about Government's involvement in business investment and support services through the work of the Small Business Administration.

There is no question that Government has an important role in cooperative efforts to promote a strong economy. The question involves the form that role should take.

I have learned from the New Jersey experience that Government's involvement should include cooperative efforts to help small businesses. It is an idea with a proven track record.

The current challenge to the future of Federal programs for small business development may be a blessing in disguise.

By forcing all of us to review current programs and discover avenues toward improvement, this process will result in an ever-stronger cooperative commitment, based on proven ideas and methods.

We must work together to create a new level of Government-private sector cooperation to promote economic growth. ●

● Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, commitment. To me this three syllable word best describes the stuff that makes up the small businessmen and women around this country. They are people who are willing to take a gamble and follow through on their own beliefs. They are the pioneers of today, setting forth on new adventures; often times risking all they have to achieve their goal; relying on their own determination, knowledge and entrepreneurship. That's commitment, and that is why it is fitting and proper that we set aside a week to honor the small business person—truly the backbone of the American economy.

Small businesses are the foundation on which our economy was built. It was the small business person who paved the way for our economic recovery. They are the innovators; over the past 50 years small businesses have been responsible for the creation of the majority of new products in the United States. Firms with less than 1,000 employees generate 24 times as many technological innovations per research dollar than do businesses with over 10,000 employees.

Small businesses are the job creators; 80 percent of all new jobs are created in the small business sector. More Americans have jobs now than ever before in our Nation's history.

Small businesses are the producers; during the 1970's small business accounted for 50 percent of the private sector GNP.

Today, more than 14 million small businesses across the Nation provide the initiative to propel our Nation to new heights. Last year the American economy soared ahead by 6.9 percent, defying dire predictions of many economists by turning in its best possible performance in 33 years.

Small businesses provide the locomotion to keep our economy on track.

However, we should not underestimate the strength of Government to derail this powerful engine.

The Federal Government has a two-part role to play in ensuring a bright future for small business. First, it should take every responsible effort to free small business of burdensome regulations which hamper growth and productivity. Second, it should promote a positive atmosphere in which small business can flourish both domestically and abroad.

An example of meeting the first goal will take place this week. It is appropriate that this week the Congress will take final action to repeal a tax recordkeeping law governing the business and nonbusiness use of automobiles and other equipment. This regulation required that excessively detailed vehicle logs be maintained in order for business people to receive routine tax deductions. This placed an unfair burden on the small businessman. It is fitting and proper that it be removed as soon as possible.

On January 21, I introduced legislation, H.R. 541, the Paperwork Reduction Act, to repeal the "adequate contemporaneous records" provision. In the past "adequate records" or "sufficient corroborating evidence" served as the legitimate standard for tax purposes. Productive business people should not be made unproductive bookkeepers. It is unfair for them to spend even more time coping with Government redtape. Companies which faithfully followed these regulations would have no time to do anything else. Repealing this onerous requirement is an example of fitting Government action to reduce burdensome regulations for small businesses.

In meeting the second goal, a Federal agency is needed to serve as small business's watchdog within the Government and liaison between the public and private sectors.

I believe the wholesale elimination of the Small Business Administration would be a serious mistake. Though there has been dissatisfaction with major elements of its programs, the SBA remains the only agency at the Federal level to serve as an important clearinghouse for all small business information. Its district offices provide necessary advice, counseling and resources to the small business community.

Abolishing the SBA is not the way to fight the deficit; closing down the agency and selling off its portfolio would cost the taxpayers in lost payments almost exactly the same amount as the projected savings. Instead the agency should be revamped and made more responsive.

We are entering a new entrepreneurial era, and the SBA should be redesigned to meet new challenges. Programs that cost far more than they produce must be eliminated. Programs that could produce valid results if better managed should be made more efficient and effective. Programs that already work well should be retained and enhanced. If these reforms can be made, then the Small Business Administration can meet its historic goal as the practical manifestation of small business's importance to the economy.

As regards international promotion, we must look toward the future and keep in mind that the world is becoming increasingly interdependent.

I have introduced legislation to give small business a "leg up" on the international market. House Concurrent Resolution 70 calls for international agreement on tariff and tax preferences to encourage exports by small businesses. If we are serious about expanding small business participation in world trade, tariff reductions would be one way to offset the extra complexity and risk inherent for small business exporters.

Our national economy, as well as the world economy, stands to benefit from a global free trade zone for small business. We can significantly ameliorate our trade deficit by attracting more American companies into the international trading area. A free trade zone targeted to independently owned small business will help foster free enterprise and entrepreneurship around the world. It is an important U.S. foreign policy objective to encourage the healthy growth of an active private sector, particularly in the developing world.

In the end, however, the Government can only do so much. As any small businessman will tell you the success or failure of a company will depend on the individual, how good a manager he or she is, and his or her commitment. We from Wisconsin have had a long history of committed small business people working for a better future in our state. I am proud that two of my fellow Wisconsinites will be honored during this week for superior achievement in the field of small business.

Ted Batterman of Fort Atkinson, the Wisconsin Small Business person of the year, saw the commercial potential in shelving mounted on tracks. His simple technology resulted in an annual 44 percent average growth of sales and the employment of 95 people in the last dozen years.

Gene Boyer of Beaver Dam has been named Woman in Business Advocate of the year. She has designed a framework for an entrepreneurial training program that involves educators and established business owners in providing classroom and on-the-job training for aspiring entrepreneurs. As head of the newly formed Wisconsin Women's Business Coalition, Boyer has taken steps toward her goal of organizing Wisconsin's women in business, management, and public life into a force for change in the state's political, legislative, and policymaking processes. With leadership such as this, I have no fears for the future of small business in my state.

As President Reagan said in proclaiming Small Business Week, "The history of America is the history of a nation at work—a nation of farmers, manufacturers, and merchants joining together to build a better society." This week we take time to honor that commitment to hard work and the belief that through that work of the individual, a difference can be made a better society can be built.●

● Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate those in our small business community across the country during this, U.S. Small Business Week. The men and women in our small businesses are often on the leading edge of innovation and progress. They bring particular skills and capabilities to our business sector that allow our economy to move ahead.

I am especially honored today to represent the area in Minnesota in which Dianne and Rocco Altobelli reside. The Altobellis are being honored this week as Minnesota's small business persons of the year. When the Altobellis started their business 11 years ago, Dianne managed the books and the reception desk, and Rocco hired three stylists to work with him. Today, the six Altobelli salons serve approximately 15,000 customers a month and gross $5 million annually. Also very important, Rocco and Dianne have not lost their ability to continue their community spirit. For the past 2 years, they have sponsored a fashion show/hair styling competition raising money to benefit the University of Minnesota Organ Transplant Assistance Fund.

The businesses represented by the various States range from a lumber company in Arkansas to a chemical corporation in Arizona. Many of these entrepreneurs started with little cash in their pockets but a strong spirit in their hearts. Through hard work and determination, they were able to make a go of their operation.

I would like to thank my colleague, Mr. MITCHELL, for arranging this special order, and again extend my congratulations to our 13 million small business people across the country and encourage them to continue their hard work and dedication.●

● Mr. MACK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my distinguished colleague from Maryland, PARREN MITCHELL, the chairman of the House Committee on Small Business, for organizing today's special order honoring small business. It is a privilege to be able to participate in this celebration of Small Business Week.

The small business community has been the engine behind the tremendous recovery our Nation has experienced during the past several years. As small business owners in my State of Florida can testify, the continuing recovery has been strong and broad-based. In many sectors of the economy, small businesses have enjoyed considerably higher growth than their larger competitors. For example, between October 1982 and October 1984, employment in industries dominated by small firms rose 11.4 percent, nearly double the employment increase of larger firms.

Business starts across the country have set records for the past 2 years. In Florida alone, statistics indicate a 31-percent increase in new corporate formations during the past 4 years.

What has made this growth so dramatic? I think the answer is crystal clear—we have had a consistently low level of inflation.

I can think of no better way for this Congress to pay tribute to the economic importance of small business in America than to pledge that we will make the hard decisions necessary to promote an economic environment conducive to continuing growth and prosperity. First and foremost, this means that we must achieve substantial reductions in the projected budgetary deficits in not only fiscal year 1986, but in the outyears as well.

In a recent survey of its membership by the National Federation of Independent Business, it was learned that nearly 90 percent believe that reducing the deficit should be our Nation's highest priority. Almost 80 percent think that taxes are too high and accordingly, oppose efforts to force a citizen "bailout" of the Government. The message is—let us make the sacrifices across the board, let us not rely on new revenues that would inhibit further business expansion, and, let us pull together and do what is in the interest of the entire country, not narrow interest groups.

Doing what is best for small business is doing what is best for America. I urge that this House recognize this fact when we address the Federal budget in the coming weeks. If Congress is able to achieve significant deficit reduction, I am confident that the next few years will witness new records for small business expansion, continued employment increases, and a healthy, growing economy.●

● Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in rising today to salute what I consider to be the backbone of our Nation's economy; the small businessman and woman.

Some 21 years ago this week, Congress designated "National Small Business Week" to honor and recognize the achievements of those men and women who make up the small business community throughout our Nation.

Figures detailing the role the small business owners play in our economy are starting. It is estimated of the 15 million businesses in the United States, some 98 percent are considered to be in the category of small businesses.

The small business sector is by far the largest creator of jobs in our economy. In fact, the number of jobs created in the small business sector was twice that of large businesses.

Owning and operating a small business has been the dream of millions of Americans. The dream has become a reality for many of minority and women entrepreneurs. From 1983 to 1984, the percentage of women who owned their own businesses increased 5.1 percent from 2,440,000 to 2,566,000. The number of minority small business owners jumped 10.3 percent during the same time period from 570,000 to 629,000.

It is vital that Congress continue to support the efforts of the small business community in our Nation. Small Business Week is the perfect vehicle to highlight the achievements of our small entrepreneurs and to send out the message that the small businessman will be the leader in providing us with economic growth in the years ahead.

● Mr. TORRES. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Small Business for reserving this time to honor the Nation's small businesses.

Much has happened since last year's National Small Business Week. In a year, the Small Business Administration has gone from the praise of President Reagan to the scorn of David Stockman. The SBA, in 1 year, has gone from Presidential commendation to bureaucratic rathole.

But Mr. Speaker, it is not the SBA that has changed in a year. Most of the agency's programs continue to offer benefits to the Nation far exceeding costs. And it is not the small businesses that have changed in a year. Small businesses continue to need Government loans to expand and remain competitive.

What has changed is that some people stopped listening to small business men and women. Some people decided that honoring small businesses is enough but listening to them is too much. I disagree. To honor small businesses, we also must listen to the message of small business owners and employees carried in letters. They are asking us to save the SBA. To honor small businesses we also must listen to their testimony at committee hearings. They are telling us to save SBA's financial assistance programs.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit three letters from small business men and women. Listen to Isabelle Sanderman, the president of Li Wong Enterprises in West Covina, CA:

MARCH 1, 1985.

Mr. ESTEBAN E. TORRES,
Congress of the United States, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. TORRES: I have received your "Keeping in Touch" letter dated February 21, 1985 regarding the future of Small Business Administrations livelihood. I am one of those who used the Small Business Administration to help me along with an occasional problem. Nothing major, but it is a comfort to me to know that there is a place I can go if the need arises. No doubt there are countless others who stated their business with the help of the SBA. I am aware that the cost to keep this organization running is enormous, but I feel that we received so little for the taxes we pay in the way of community services from the government that I am in favor as you are to keep the SBA as long as possible.

You can tell the President for me that I voted for him because I like some of his policies and I think he is a fair man, but he cannot help the poor because he's never been there like so many others; and even though he means well, he can't do something about certain domestic issues if he knows nothing about them.

Thank you for keeping me informed.

Sincerely,

ISABELLE SANDERMAN,
President.

Listen to Richard D. Sullivan, the owner of Sullivan Janitorial Services in Cleveland, OH:

MARCH 4, 1985.

Congressman ESTEBAN TORRES,
Small Business Committee, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Congressman TORRES: We feel that the Small Business Administration has been a vanguard in helping small business.

In the beginning they made some mistakes, and had a few "kinks" in their procedures, but they have overcome the difficulties that they previously entertained and at the present time they are an effective and efficient "machine" working for the ongoing progress of the small business.

At this point in time the Small Business Administration is at the crest of what it was originally created to do.

The new programs which are being proposed and those that have been implemented, I am sure, will do some of things they are intended to do in 10 or 15 years, but not today. The Small Business Administration is doing them now.

In short, I think to disband the Small Business Administration at this time would be a great mistake if it is indeed your true intentions to aid and assist small businesses. We are sure the economical return will be more than tenfold the current investment in America's future.

Thank you for taking the time to listen to the voice of one small business owner.

Sincerely,

RICHARD D. SULLIVAN,
Owner.

And listen to Josie Mena, the project director of the San Joaquin Valley Business Consulting Center in Fresno, CA:

FEBRUARY 28, 1985.

Congressman ESTEBAN TORRES,
House of Representatives, Longworth Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN TORRES: I was pleased to receive your bulletin "Keeping in Touch" where you express your support for the continued funding of SBA.

As a Minority Business Development Center that provides management and technical assistance to minority owned business in Fresno County, we can certainly attest to necessity of SBA. Approximately 95 percent of our clients, financial packages are guaranteed through SBA. Their elimination would have a devastating impact in the formation of small business—specifically minority owned. Small businesses are the backbone of our economy and needless to say, they create the largest percentage of jobs.

Thank you for your support of SBA and if I can be of any assistance in lobbying for SBA please do let me know. For your information, I am attaching a copy of letter that I sent recently to Congressmen Coelho, Pashayan and Lehman.

Sincerely,

JOSIE MENA,
Project Director.

Mr. Speaker, these people are the small businessmen and women which we honor today. Listen to their words, save the SBA.

● Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I commend the chairman of the House Small Business Committee, our friend and colleague PARREN MITCHELL, for scheduling this time to honor the Nation's small business community. Your stewardship of the Small Business Committee and its jurisdictional issues pertaining to legitimate small business concerns is to be applauded. It is, indeed, my pleasure to be able to serve and work with you.

As a member of the Small Business Committee and chairman of the Subcommittee on Energy, Environment, and Safety Issues Affecting Small Business, I am pleased to take the opportunity to salute the men and women of this Nation who contribute to the economic welfare of America by operating and maintaining small businesses. The almost 13 million small businesses in this country are the very foundation of new jobs, ideas, and technologies that further the economic system we enjoy. Moreover, our Nation's small businesses provide communities with a sense of continuity and support that go beyond just dollars and cents.

My district, the 17th District of Texas, is a perfect example. In this predominantly rural area, there are almost twice as many small businesses as the national average. These businesses, and the people who maintain them—many of whom are third or fourth generation families carrying on a long tradition in business—are the backbone of the communities they serve, economically and culturally. These businesses and the people they employ are a part of the community, and the community is a part of them; this interdependence between a small town or city and its business persons can overcome recession and economic hardship that would otherwise destroy the fiber of a community.

On this note, I commend the Nation's small business community during U.S. Small Business Week, and remind my colleagues and all Americans that this week should not be the only time we offer our thanks to these men and women: their contributions are felt in every city and town in this country every day, and our appreciation should be extended to them on a daily basis.

● Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleagues in honoring small businesses during U.S. Small Business Week.

The efforts expended by small businessmen and women in operating their businesses efficiently, contributing to the development of new innovations and utilizing American talent in the workforce, is commendable. This week we recognize their important achievements and we honor them.

Today I would like to read to you some remarks made to me by small businessmen and women from my district. I think that they reflect the state of small business in my district and most importantly, they describe the character and motivation of the small businessman and woman.

First, I want to recognize the "Kansas small business person of the year." His name is Mr. Bruce F. Burdick, president of Burdick's Computer Stores, Inc. He is a resident of Overland Park, KS. Mr. Burdick is a successful businessman who has opened up a number of computer stores and often counsels Computerland franchisees. Last night at the small business reception he stated that he "supports the SBA and that some of its loan programs assisted him in starting his business."

The following statements are made by small businessmen and women from my district and I would like to read them into the RECORD:

Ms. Mary Birch, executive secretary of the Overland Park, KS Chamber of Commerce: "Overland Park and Johnson County have been fortunate in the last 10 years to experience a vast array of dynamic business growth. In the pattern of growth it seems to become evident that the glue of the community are the small businesses who are developing and expanding. Small business growth has been the catalyst that has resulted in over 10 years of business expansion and growth in employment opportunities."

Mr. John Jullian, president of the Small Business Council of the Kansas City, Kansas Area Chamber of Commerce:

"The small businessman is not a stereotyped chairman of the board. He is not a 'sit behind the desk' professional. He is an adventurer. He is a speculator and a dreamer. And when you think about it, isn't this how business gets started? An idea, with a dream—the American dream.

"The American dream is still out there for every person who is willing to roll up his or her sleeves and stop bellyaching. It takes time and patience to realize a dream. Faith is also a strong factor. Sometimes it is more powerful than logic or theoretical thinking. Remember that big business did not start out that way.

"Success stories of small business are increasing at a greater percentage than anytime in our history. This leads to Keener competition and professionalism. It sounds like a tough way to go but it's not impossible. When success is realized with the accompanying self-satisfaction and financial contribution to our community, as Jackie Gleason used to exclaim 'how sweet it is!'

"I believe that if you do what interests you, bearing in mind love, sensitivity, and cooperation with others, and strength and conviction, it can be done. It all makes you worthy of your own self-respect and that of others."

Mr. Mike Dugan, president of the Kansas City, Kansas Area Chamber of Commerce:

"Small business is big business in Kansas and throughout the United States. Locally, 96 percent of the area businesses have fewer than 50 employees. And those small businesses mean big numbers for employment. The Nation's 14 million small businesses employ one-half of the Nation's workforce.

"During National Small Business Week the Kansas City, KS Area Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the SBA, is saluting this essential group within the American economy. Today the chamber and the SBA announced the selection of the community's small business of the year. That small business is the Douglass Bank with Mr. Donald Ford as president and Mr. Will Taliaferro as chairman of the board. Additional awards were given to the new small business of the year. This business is River Views Newspaper, with John and Mary Walizek, owners and publishers. The outstanding contribution to the community was made by the small business named Buchanan Architects, Eugene and Georgia Buchanan, principals."

Again, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to honor small business in Kansas and throughout the Nation for their important and innovative contributions to the economy.●

● Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, it is with a mixture of pride and fear that I join with my distinguished colleagues today to celebrate National Small Business Week. Pride because of the spirit of entrepreneurship which has given life to the dreams of small business people all over this Nation. Fear, because the little assistance that the Federal Government has been able to give to help those dreams come true may be swept away by the Reagan administration.

As a member of the Small Business Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives, I have listened with great interest to the testimony of many small business owners, bankers, and elected officials in this country. I have been impressed by their courage and their perseverance. There have been stories filled with sadness and stories filled with joy, but they are all filled with hope for a better tomorrow.

Small business generates 38 percent of our Nation's gross national product. Additionally, small business accounts for over 85 percent of newly created jobs in the country. In the district that I represent on Chicago's south side, unemployment is 17 percent. Unemployment among our youth is over 60 percent. Given the potential to create jobs and opportunities for economic development, I am extremely concerned about the Reagan administration's proposal to eliminate some of the SBA's most successful programs. The direct loan program, the guaranteed loan program, and the surety bonding programs are targeted for elimination, and yet, these are precisely the programs that have helped to create, sustain, and expand businesses; businesses that last year added an additional 13,000 jobs in my home State of Illinois. I fear that under the pretense of "deficit reduction," the administration will do away with helpful, meaningful, programs that Budget Director David Stockman does not want to keep anyway—deficit or no deficit.

Small business had rallied to the defense of the SBA, however. We have heard from small businesses, Government agencies, and elected officials. The message has come from far and near and the message has been loud and strong; small business wants to have a strong and independent SBA. If deficit reduction is the goal, then SBA will take its share. I strongly oppose, however, elimination of programs that have been proven effective.

It is with this message, and with the hope of present and future small businesses, that I salute "Small Business Week." I salute the small business "people of the year," especially those in Illinois. I also congratulate Jack Smith, Chicago District Director of SBA, and the Chicago District office staff. Keep up the good work and good luck to all of you.●

● Mr. BONER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, all this week we are honoring this Nation's small business community. It is fitting that we do so, especially since they contribute so much to our economy.

At the same time, we need to realize that the Reagan administration wants to cut the lifeline to our small business community. I am talking about the proposal to eliminate the Small Business Administration.

The Small Business Administration [SBA] has been responsive to the needs of the small business entrepreneurs, including women and minorities, for the past 30 years. The SBA has proved effective in increasing Federal contract opportunities for small firms as well as by implementing set-aside provisions for minority-owned businesses.

The SBA has provided support to countless numbers of people in the Fifth Congressional District of Tennessee to operate many of this area's small enterprises. These are enterprises which stimulate and sustain our local economy. These are businesses that produce, innovate, and generate a large number of new jobs for the people of this country.

Small business is not just another special-interest group, it is a very vital component of our economic system. Tennessee's small business firms produce millions of dollars worth of products for both our domestic and foreign markets.

I believe that the real strength of our economy lies in the good health of the small business community. Without the continuation of the Small Business Administration, that strength in our small businesses and our economy would weaken. That is why I believe we must continue the programs sponsored by the Small Business Administration. I encourage all my colleagues here in the House of Representatives to support the continued funding of the Small Business Administration. ●

● Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, in 1840, Alexis De Tocqueville made this observation about the American economy: "What most astonished me in the United States was not so much the grandeur of some undertakings as the innumerable multitude of the small ones." Today, nothing has changed since 1840. Small business is the most vital segment of our economy.

Small businesses total 97 percent of all business establishments, and the goods and services produced by the American small business person makes them the world's fourth greatest economic power. The value of small business is even more critical to my home State of California, which accounts for over 11 percent of the Nation's small business establishments. Small business is not just important to California, it is our economic lifeline. It is estimated that by the year 1990, California's dynamic economy will create 2 million new jobs, most of which will be provided by the small business sector.

Part of that dynamic influence comes right from my congressional district. As part of Small Business Week, in honor of our Nation's more than 14 million small businesses, I have recognized four of the many outstanding small business individuals in my district. They are: Don Beckhart, PIP Instant Printing in Pomona; Ken Casford, Whittier Mailing Service in Whittier; Jerry Oxman, Oxman Surplus in La Mirada; and Patrick Gatti, La Verne Florist in La Verne. These four small business people epitomize the dedication and perseverance it take to become successful small entrepreneurs in a free and growing economy. As Members of Congress, we need to do our part to insure steady growth and opportunity so that every American can attain successful dreams similar to these four outstanding individuals. ●

● Mr. BARNES. I am pleased to take part in this recognition of National Small Business Week by honoring one of the more unique small businesses in my community of Montgomery County, MD—Integrated Microcomputer Systems, Inc.

As the following testimony by John T.C. Yeh, the owner, will show, Integrated Microcomputer Systems represents an inspiring example of how a long-shot business venture can succeed through the resourcefulness and perseverance of one individual—and with some help from the Small Business Administration.

When Mr. Yeh arrived in this country from Taiwan in 1947, not only was he completely unschooled in the English language, he was also deaf. Although he obtained a masters degree in computer science from the University of Maryland, he found that he was unable to advance in his chosen career because of the unwillingness of potential employers to hire someone with his handicap.

Frustrated by seeing his nonhandicapped brothers achieve professional success with similar qualifications, Mr. Yeh decided to strike out on his own. He received a loan from the Small Business Administration's Handicapped Assistance Loan Program and went on to achieve his dream of owning a business which has not only been financially successful, but has also provided employment for a number of minority and handicapped individuals.

The testimony follows:

TESTIMONY OF JOHN T.C. YEH BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON SMALL BUSINESS, APRIL 30, 1985

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as you can see my testimony will be presented in sign language. A member of my staff will be interpreting for me.

I am John Yeh, owner and president of Integrated Microcomputer Systems, Inc. IMS is a high-tech company located in Rockville, MD. We are involved in computer systems engineering, software development, office automation and telecommunications. Currently, we employ 175 people, almost 50 percent of whom are minorities and 20 percent of whom are deaf individuals. Most of these deaf employees were either unemployed or significantly underemployed before joining us.

I have been told that it might be useful to the 99th Congress, as it deliberates the future of the SBA and its various programs, to hear the story of why and how I founded the company and even a little about my background.

I was born deaf in Taiwan in 1947. In search of a quality education for my deaf sister and me, my parents moved the family to the United States when I was 15. I arrived not knowing a word of English but thanks to a constantly used Chinese/English dictionary and dedicated teachers at the federally funded Kendall School for the Deaf here in Washington, DC, I was accepted at Gallaudet College. It was at this internationally known college for the deaf, that I received a bachelor of arts degree in mathematics. Knowing that job opportunities were limited for deaf individuals, even for those possessing a bachelor's degree, I enrolled at the University of Maryland. There with the aid of interpreters and extra readings recommended by professors, I earned a masters degree in computer science.

After months of effort and the distribution of hundreds of resumes the only job I could find was as a computer programmer at my alma mater, Gallaudet College, a place not afraid to hire a deaf person. I advanced to senior programmer, a position I did not find sufficiently challenging and a position from which it was impossible to advance because of the limited opportunities inherent in any college's computer unit.

It was during this time that I saw my three hearing brothers, each of whom also received a graduate degree in computer science from the University of Maryland, advance quickly in the high-tech field.

Once again, I spent many months looking for a position that offered the professional advancement of which I knew I was capable. Potential employers, however, lost all interest as soon as they discovered I was deaf.

It was a very frustrating time for me. The high-tech world was rushing forward with many exciting advances, my brothers were experiencing constant professional progress and I, it seemed, would be in the same unchallenging, dead end position for the rest of my life.

At this point it became clear to me that the only way I would ever advance was to start my own business, a business which, hopefully, would allow me to provide employment opportunities to some of the many deaf people I knew who were unemployed or, like myself, underemployed.

After collecting several almost instantaneous rejections from bank loan officers, I received a $100,000 loan from the SBA's Handicapped Assistance Loan [HAL] Program to start Integrated Microcomputer Systems in 1979. The Small Business Administration continued to be of vital assistance through its many excellent publications and technical assistance, but most of all through its 8(a) set-aside program for minority-owned business.

I am certain that I would not have been able to start the business without the SBA. I am equally certain that the company would not have grown from myself, a secretary, and a part-time business manager to the 175 employees we have now without the SBA.

Although I am a Republican and support the administration in several respects, I vigorously oppose the elimination or reduction of the Small Business Administration as a very shortsighted attempt to reduce the Federal deficit. I firmly believe that the SBA and its Handicapped Assistance Loan Program are wise investments in the future of our country's economy. The billions of dollars small businesses and their employees pay in taxes shows the Administration's strategy to be "penny wise and pound foolish".

I respectfully urge this Congress to retain the Small Business Administration in its entirety. And I respectfully request this committee to make special efforts to assure that Congress retains the Handicapped Assistance Loan Program. The latter is the only way many disabled people will be allowed to reach their potential for contributing to the economic and social health of our country.

Thank you for the opportunity to share my experiences and views. ●

● Mr. ADDABBO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in recognizing the vital role that small businesses play in our Nation's economy.

President Reagan in his proclamation declaring the week of May 5 as "Small Business Week," stated that throughout our history small businesses have "provided the foundation for a growing and prosperous America". The President further asserted that small businesses "provide the technology to keep the economy growing, the manufacturing and marketing skills to keep the Nation competitive, and the innovation to guide us into a better future."

The President's words are not mere rhetoric. The fact is that small businesses provide 58 percent of the jobs in this country, are responsible for 45 percent of the GNP, and produce half of all major innovations at only 4 percent of what it costs big business and government to produce the remainder.

Thirty-two years ago, recognizing the importance of small businesses, the Congress established the SBA. Over the years it has played, and continues to play, a critical role in the expansion and development of small businesses throughout America. A great many small businesses would not exist today were it not for the financial and technical assistance made available to them through the programs administered by the SBA.

Yet the administration proposes to do away with the SBA. The President, as usual, was eloquent in his Small Business Week Proclamation. But this country and this economy needs more than just lip service from the White House, it requires a President who will provide a positive climate for small business. A good place to start would be with the removal of the SBA from the administration's hit list.●

● Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute small businesses all over the country as we celebrate Small Business Week this May 5-11.

Our Nation is a nation at work with small business leading the way. It is small business men and women who have created the jobs and the wealth of this great land and helped make our country the richest in the world. It is small business people who have done the innovation and have created the new ideas to keep America No. 1 in technology, manufacturing, farming, and in many other areas.

Our Nation's 14 million small businesses have led the way for our current economic prosperity. It is small business that has been willing to take the risks, hire the manpower, and rekindle that great American competitive spirit. Many young entrepreneurs have seen the opportunities and have striven to meet the challenge.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in celebrating "America at Work" and in saluting America's small businesses.●

● Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, in a recent Washington Post editorial George F. Will wrote: "Since 1970 the United States has produced more jobs every day than Western Europe has produced in the decade and a half." This is a tribute to small businessmen and small businesswomen who, by using what President Reagan calls enterprising genius, created more of these jobs than any other sector. In just 2 years, from 1980 to 1982, small business created 2,650,000 new jobs. All this is evidence small business is a driving force in our economy. It is fitting we honor them this week.

But what will we do to them next week? For gentlemen, we stand here today not only in the midst of "small business week," but also on the eve of the budget debate. The outcome of that debate will have a tremendous effect on small business and all Americans, for some time to come.

I believe we have but one alternative and that is to substantially reduce the deficit. This is a difficult chore, but not one that is optional. And if we meet the challenge, most experts agree interest rates will fall and small business will be off and running again. So, let us go forward in a bipartisan manner to reduce the deficit. This would show we truly honor small business. Thank you.●

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

BIG STEEL HAS BIG PROBLEMS; NOW WE NEED WORKABLE SOLUTIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GAYDOS] is recognized for 30 minutes.

● Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker it should come as no surprise to anyone in this body who has followed the American steel industry when I say that the industry is in big trouble. I have been saying so for the past several years and, while I fear that my words have fallen on deaf ears, I know I am not alone in my concern.

Recent reports strengthen my concerns. Just the other day, Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., which about 1 month ago filed for reorganization under chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code, issued its financial report for 1984—and the picture isn't too good.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh reported that in 1984 it suffered an operating loss of $8.2 million. Admittedly there was some improvement from 1983 to 1984. In 1983, Wheeling-Pittsburgh showed an operating loss of $93.3 million. Keep in mind, however, that there are operating losses, the difference between net sales and operating costs. The net loss for Wheeling-Pittsburgh in 1984—that's after interest on debt and other costs—was $59.3 million, as compared to a net loss of $54 million in 1983.

And, given the figures for the first quarter of 1985, things are still bleak. For the first quarter of 1984, Wheeling-Pittsburgh showed an operating profit of just over $7 million. For the first quarter of this year, the company reports an operating loss of $11.6 million.

But Wheeling-Pittsburgh is not the only steel company feeling the pinch. Armco, Inc., will sell up to $800 million in assets in order to reduce its debt and consolidate its operations. Armco hopes to stave off continuing problems through this means.

And, late last month, Inland Steel Co. announced that it would reduce its steelmaking capacity by 30 percent on a permanent basis over the next year and a half, laying off some 900 hourly workers and 150 salaried workers in the process.

In addition, other major steel producers in this country are facing similar problems that could result in similar actions—filing for reorganization and reductions in capacity. Given the fears that American lenders have with regards to loans to steelmakers, the problems could affect many others as well.

An article in the Wall Street Journal on May 2 clearly outlines the issue. The article quotes one bank vice president as advising loan officers to show extreme caution in making new loans to major steel making firms. That bank officer says that despite a reduction in steelmaker bank debt from 1983 to 1984, the industry's failure to rebuild its balance sheets during the economic recovery makes new credit just too risky.

What this means for the steel industry in this country is that at a time when it is seeking resources in order to modernize its plants and install new technological advances as a means of competing better with imported steel, it will not be able to get those funds from traditional lenders.

I am enclosing the article because I think every member of this body should be very much aware of the pressures facing this most important industry.

But, that isn't all. The United States Steel Corp. held its annual meeting in Los Angeles earlier this week. At that meeting, David Roderick, United States Steel board chairman, told stockholders that the American Steel industry would continue to shrink over the next 5 years and that United States Steel, itself, would survive only if the Government restricts imports and labor unions grant concessions.

Mr. Roderick, who strongly supported this administration's decision to aim for voluntary restraint agreements with several steel exporting nations, seems now ready to change his mind. How, he hopes the agreements work, but he isn't overly optimistic.

I don't know why he is so surprised. I have been saying since last September that only worldwide quotas would work. These agreements we have developed will only go so far.

The problem, simply stated, is that the agreements have been drawn with some eight steel-exporting nations. What we, who are concerned, see is other nations with whom there are no agreements shipping more here.

Last week, a new report on the steel industry was released. This report,

"The Competitive Status of the U.S. Steel Industry," was prepared by the Steel Panel Committee on Technology and International Economic and Trade Issues of the Office of the Foreign Secretary of the National Academy of Engineering and the Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems of the National Research Council.

The opening paragraph of this report sets the stage as well as any other single report I have read on the future of the American steel industry:

The domestic steel industry, probably more than any other industry in this country, offers a unique opportunity to study the influence of technology and international trade policy alternatives on mature or declining industries. For roughly two decades the steel industry in the United States has been beset by a plethora of related factors: Severe competition from imported steel, often sold at allegedly dumping prices; relative long depreciation schedules; outdated facilities; de facto price controls; high labor costs; high capital outlays to meet regulatory requirements; poor public relations; and management problems. Moreover, the international trade aspects of the problem appear to be increasing rather than diminishing. The world steel industry has access capacity and little or no profits while at the same time some developing countries are adding new capacity. These conditions are likely to induce foreign producers to export more steel to the United States, the world's largest and most accessible market.

There is almost nothing else to be said about the American steel industry except what to do to resolve the problems.

The report by the National Academy of Engineering and the National Research Council does not make any specific recommendations, but instead looks at a number of those that have been proposed and reviews both the positive and negative impacts of those suggested solutions.

Enforcement of countervailing duty or antidumping laws, the study says, would be beneficial in that industry would see the maximum extent of American fair trade laws. On the obverse side of that coin, there is no assurance that the imposition of unfair trade duties on particular countries or geographical regions would prevent other countries from expanding their steel exports.

The disadvantage of quotas, according to the report, is that they eliminate any foreign price competition and weaken the constraint on domestic wage settlements. On the other hand, they are the most direct way of assuring the domestic industry a specific market share and eliminate concerns about fluctuations in exchange rates and supply-demand balances.

One other suggestion worth noting concerns liberalization of antitrust policy in the United States. Such changes that would permit mergers and acquisitions to promote combining and matching of facilities; joint ventures to reduce capital costs; and jointly sponsored research and development.

This is an important study and one I recommend to each and every Member of Congress so that we, as a body, will be in a position to understand the problems of this most important industry and develop solutions that will have some long-lasting impact.

I have never made a secret of the fact that I would prefer specific quotas for a specified period of time, probably 5 years, because I believe that is the only way we will be able to control the flow of steel into this country and ensure our domestic steel industry an opportunity to hold its share of the American market.

That way, we would not have to fear increases from countries that have not signed voluntary agreements with us and, at the same time, we would have a better handle on exactly what our needs are.

I recognize that quotas alone might not do the job. It may well be that some combination of factors, such as strong enforcement of unfair trade laws and easing of antitrust laws as well as quotas, might be a better answer.

None of us, however, even those opposed to quotas, should close his or her mind to seeking workable solutions that will enable the American steel industry to remain healthy and productive.

BANKS FRET OVER EXPOSURE IN STEEL INDUSTRY

(By J. Ernest Beazley)

Since J.P. Morgan founded U.S. Steel Corp. in 1901, the alliance of steelmakers and bankers has been an intimate one. But that once-stable relationship appears headed for the rocks as lenders increasingly fret over their exposure in the troubled industry.

Last month's bankruptcy-law filing by Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. and Armco Inc.'s near-bankruptcy only exacerbated already-strained ties between capital and industry. They also illustrated the turbulence and heightened risk in steel lending.

Not long ago, the unraveling of the steel industry would have seemed unthinkable both to producers and bankers alike. But cheap foreign imports, high labor costs, obsolete hardware and the dwindling demand for steel have ravaged steelmakers, shattering their lenders' smokestack orientation.

Although loans to the industry pale next to the enormity of Latin debt, steel industry bankers find themselves in vulnerable positions. Most major U.S. lenders already are carrying large portfolios of shaky foreign loans, and their capital-to-assets ratios scarcely meet federal regulatory guidelines.

Money-center banks are reassessing major steelmakers as credit risks, while some lenders have turned to stronger producers such as Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., a specialty-steel maker, and Pohang Iron & Steel Co. of Korea, a government-controlled producer. Most banks are seeking to use debt-restructuring talks such as those with Wheeling-Pittsburgh and Armco to strengthen the security for existing loans.

Consequently, "it's getting to the point that banks hear the word 'steel' and think 'no,'" says Mark Steitz, steel analyst for the U.S. Congressional Budget Office.

CREDIT STATUS IS DAMAGED

Steel executives agree. "There isn't any doubt that lenders will be a little more edgy," says Robert Wilkins, Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s senior vice president, finance. Wheeling-Pittsburgh's bankruptcy-law filing, he adds, "damages everyone's credit status."

Even some profitable mini-mills have detected a coolness of late from usually friendly money-center banks. John Morris, assistant treasurer and controller of Roanoke Electric Steel Corp., says that when he discussed financing a planned new rolling mill recently with a large New York bank, "they told us they weren't at all interested because they already had so many steel loans in their portfolio."

Although steel industry exposure for individual banks is difficult to determine, such loan portfolios add up to several billion dollars for the nation's top five or six lenders alone. As a result, Frank Renaud, a Marine Midland Bank vice president and economist, advises lending officers to show "extreme caution" in making new loans to major steelmakers. Despite a reduction last year from 1983 in steelmakers' bank debt as a percentage of total liabilities, the industry's failure to rebuild its balance sheets during the economic recovery makes new credit "just too risky," he contends.

"The damage is probably containable, but it's a problem with a lot of long-term implications that we'll be wrestling with for years," says one major steelmaker's banker. Adds a director of another producer: "If the banks didn't already realize how serious the situation is, Armco and Wheeling-Pittsburgh got their attention."

Wheeling-Pittsburgh's Chapter 11 filing for bankruptcy-law protection, which followed months of talks aimed at restructuring the No. 7 producer's debt, left Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and 10 other lenders holding more than $300 million in unsecured debt.

Just a month earlier, Armco—less visibly—faced an equally severe crisis. The nation's No. 5 steelmaker, unable to meet regulators' demands for $130 million in fresh reserves to shore up its troubled insurance operations, turned to its banks to put together a new $300 million revolving credit agreement.

"Nobody wanted to stay in (the new agreement), but there wasn't a lot of choice," says one Armco lender.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh's filing and the gradual deterioration of steelmakers' finances didn't catch lenders totally by surprise. Bank of America is known to have conducted an extensive study of steel industry lending, long dominated by traditional Northeastern banks, only to conclude that a major entry was far too risky.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and Chase Manhattan Bank, meanwhile, have done recent analyses that found the banks had a large share of the industry's credits relative to other money-center banks. Bankers say the studies concluded that the two banks should be increasingly selective in steel lending.

Bankers say that the bulk of the industry bank credit is advanced by five or six major lenders, all but one of them in New York. The industry's top three lenders are said to be Citicorp, Chase Manhattan and Morgan Guaranty. Other major lenders are Manufacturers, Bankers Trust Co. and Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

The banks declined to discuss their exposure in the steel industry.

The increasing risk that comes with lending to steelmakers is illustrated by regulators' classification of industry debt. Before Wheeling-Pittsburgh's filing for bankruptcy-law protection, the steelmaker's bank debt already was classified as substandard. The category is the least serious of three used by bankers and examiners to designate problem loans. It basically means the loan carries excessive risk.

Bankers say Wheeling-Pittsburgh's loans now will be downgraded to doubtful, a more serious category that reflects increased likelihood of loss. Such classifications require the lender to add to its loan-loss reserve, with that amount subtracted from a bank's earnings.

Similarly, large portions of the bank loans extended Armco and Bethlehem Steel, another deeply troubled steelmaker, are also believed to be classified as substandard.

Compounding the problem for lenders is the seeming inevitability of the industry's continued decline. "The real fear we all have isn't so much that there'll be more Wheeling-Pittsburghs now during the industry down cycle, but that they've been wounded so badly they can't participate in any kind of an upturn," one lender says.

The extent of bank exposure to the industry is difficult to gauge. At least one large New York investment house recently tried to assess individual bank exposure only to come up short. "It's tedious and damned near impossible," says one of the firm's executives. Neither the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency nor the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. require their bank examiners to keep tabs on such loans.

That's partly because of the large numbers of contingent liabilities, off-balance-sheet financing transactions and other "creative" financing arrangements that steelmakers have resorted to as their finances—and credit ratings—deteriorated. Many commercial arrangements with steelmakers in which banks' assets are clearly at risk don't appear as loans to the companies on banks' balance sheets.

EQUITY INTEREST IN MACHINERY

When Bethlehem needed to make $540 million in mill improvements at its Sparrows Point, Md., and Burns Harbor, Ind., plants last year, the steelmaker's heavy debt load and poor credit rating ruled out conventional bank and insurance-company financing. Instead, Morgan Guaranty, Chemical and Bankers Trust agreed to take an equity interest in the modern steelmaking machinery. Once the machinery begins operating next year, the banks expect to recover their investment through a tolling, or fee, arrangement that hinges on usage.

Bankers have financed other steelmakers' iron ore and metallurgical coal suppliers on a production-payment arrangement. Although the banks technically have extended loans to the mining companies, repayment hinges on the steelmakers' ability to accept the ore. The loans, of course, don't appear on the banks' books as loans to steelmakers.

Even many steel bankers aren't able to assess the exposure. During Armco's negotiations with its lenders, the company circulated a three-ring binder outlining both its bank debt and lenders' contingent exposure—mainly letters of credit to back its reinsurance operations. Bankers dubbed it "The Debt Book."

"I was stunned," one Armco lender said. "There was a page in it for every bank, and I hadn't even heard of some of these banks." The banker adds: "If you define exposure as assets at risk, the big banks' exposure is far above what anyone thinks." ●

INDUSTRIAL COMPETITIVENESS LEGISLATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LaFalce] is recognized for 30 minutes.

● Mr. LaFalce. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a package of legislative initiatives designed to address the serious decline in the competitiveness of this Nation's industries in the world economy.

Two years ago, the Economic Stabilization Subcommittee, which I chair, began an extensive set of hearings on the competitive problems of American industry and the need for a public response to those problems. A major source of these problems is the overvalued dollar, but it is only one source. Our hearings disclosed deep-seated structural problems in the American economy that have persisted through fluctuations in the value of the dollar—slow productivity growth, high unemployment, stagnant wages, and high capital costs. Dozens of witnesses warned that these problems would hamper our ability to compete in world markets and make it impossible to sustain the rate of growth which is essential to provide a rising standard of living and decent jobs for all American workers.

We have failed to address these issues adequately and the results are clear. When I first introduced legislation in late 1983 to deal with our competitiveness problems, our trade deficit was running at a $69 billion annual rate. Last year it rose to a devastating $123.3 billion, and it is continuing to spiral rapidly upward. We are reaching the point where the losses our industries are suffering in terms of reduced market share, inadequate investment, plant closings, and declining employment, will be impossible to recoup.

Trade performance is increasingly critical to our prospects for growth—fully 75 percent of all goods produced in this country are now subject to international competition. But as our trade dependence is increasing, our trade performance is becoming even more abysmal. We are rapidly losing whatever competitive edge we had, not only in older industries such as steel and machine tools, but in potentially high-growth high-tech sectors. Imports are taking an ever-increasing share of our domestic markets in a whole range of goods, including steel, autos, and machine tools. Simultaneously, our share of the world's export market in such areas as semiconductors, computers and chemicals has dropped dramatically. Burdened by the overvalued dollar, the industrial strategies of our competitors, and their own competitive problems, our industries are no longer holding their own.

The burgeoning trade deficit that has resulted has become a tremendous drag on our economy. We have only to look at the newspaper to see that the President's engine of growth is grinding to a halt.

As of the first quarter of this year, our growth has plummeted to a 1.3 percent annual rate—the smallest quarterly gain since the recession ended in late 1982. The Commerce Department has just reported yet another drop in two key indicators used to gauge economic activity—the index of leading economic indicators and new orders for factory goods. New orders for factory goods now have declined in 8 of the last 12 months. Orders for nondefense capital goods have dropped 7.4 percent. New orders for consumer goods and materials are down, net business formation is down, contracts and orders for plant and equipment are down, vendor performance is down. The sudden acceleration of investment that began in 1983 has been fading for the past year.

Our economic slowdown is apparently picking up speed and our trade imbalance is a central factor. Domestic production gains are continuing to be limited by higher imports and flat export sales, holding down growth. Manufacturing activity, which never fully recovered from the last recession, has been weakened as demand has shifted from domestic products to foreign goods. We cannot possibly keep growing if we're importing all our goods.

If this period of minimal growth continues, and there is every indication that it will, the management of the American people will once again face the prospect of a serious recession. The administration can no longer apply what has been its chief economic stimulant—larger and larger budget deficits. Our reckless fiscal policy is now self-destructing. President Reagan has been counting on real economic growth of about 4 percent this year to prevent the Federal budget deficit from growing even larger. Instead, slow growth will swell that deficit. Lower economic activity, among other things, implies lower incomes, profits and Treasury revenues. It also suggests the economy's growth may not be vigorous enough to prevent a significant rise in an already unacceptable 7.2 percent unemployment rate.

We can no longer push these problems aside and hope they will solve themselves. It is long past time that we put the competitiveness of our industries, and the economic stability that competitiveness can bring, at the top of this Nation's economic agenda. The President's own Commission on Industrial Competitiveness perhaps put it best:

The United States is losing its ability to compete in world markets . . . A close look at U.S. performance during the past two decades reveals a declining ability to compete—a trend that, if continued, will lead to a lower standard of living and fewer opportunities for all Americans.

Through subcommittee's hearings, we identified three basic causes for our competitiveness problem:

First, we clearly have an extensive set of government policies which grant support to industry, but we have been unable to focus these policies into a coherent strategy to improve our international competitiveness;

Second, we have failed to support an adequate level of applied research and development to keep American goods and technologies competitive; and Third, we have been unwilling or unable to make the investment required to keep our industries competitive in world markets.

This is not my view of our competitiveness problem, or even the Democratic view. It is a view shared by nearly two dozen panels of distinguished experts of varying political persuasions—including President Reagan's own Commission on Industrial Competitiveness—who have tried to divine the roots of our economic slump.

The legislation I am introducing today would meet these problems head on. This legislation would create a Council on Industrial Competitiveness to address the issue of policy coordination; establish an Advanced Technology Foundation to facilitate the development and dissemination of new technology; and create a bank for industrial competitiveness to respond to the problems of inadequate investment and high capital costs.

Stunning confusion marks U.S. policy affecting competitiveness. While existing policies profoundly affect individual industries, their overall impact on key industrial sectors is too often neither intended, understood, nor anticipated. The Federal Government ostensibly applies public policy in pursuit of a public purpose, but in fact often has no clearly articulated purpose against which to measure the policy or its impact.

The basic issue confronting the U.S. economy is the inability of all those participants with important stakes in its success to act together, to build a consensus about common economic problems and to mobilize resources in pursuit of our common goals. In report after report, a principal recommendation is the need for better coordination of the various government actions that influence business activities and U.S. participation in the global marketplace. Business, labor and government all have critical roles to play in restoring America's global competitiveness. Consensus-building must, therefore, be the cornerstone of any competitiveness strategy.

The first bill I am introducing would create a Council on Industrial Competitiveness which would provide a mechanism for coordinating government policies and would allow government, business, and labor to work together and achieve consensus to better the competitive position of American industry. The bill would establish a national Council, charged with thinking broadly about the structure of our economy and the problems of international competitiveness. The national Council would in turn sponsor a series of industry subcommittees to explore in greater depth the problems and prospects of specific industries or sectors. The agenda for both the national and sectoral councils would be the same: to determine ways in which private action and public policy can further our common goals of economic growth and international competitiveness.

At the heart of the deficiencies in current government policies affecting the competitiveness of U.S. industries is an appalling lack of both basic economic data regarding competitive opportunities and problems and the focused analytical capability that could make use of it. This incredible lack of information contributes to this country's inability to devise effective economic strategies and perpetuates our unfortunate tendency to be "blindsided" by foreign competitive advances which could easily have been foreseen. This Nation's already inadequate economic data base has been eroded by cuts this administration has made in critical data collection programs. But even before these reductions, the Federal Government's capacity to analyze international economic data from a competitiveness perspective was minimal.

The Council would also be charged with undertaking precisely such analysis. It would interpret and analyze relevant domestic and international data concerning current and future economic trends and market opportunities. Consequently, it would be in a position to monitor the changing nature of the U.S. industrial economy and its capacity to provide marketable goods and services in domestic and international markets, providing an early warning system regarding problems in responding to international competition.

A second bill I am proposing would address our failure to support an adequate level of applied research and development. Applied research is the key to international competitiveness, as it is central to the production of new products and the introduction of cost-cutting breakthroughs in existing production which will allow American industry to retain the needed edge over foreign firms. Yet American industry systematically underinvests in applied research.

The Government has for years recognized the need for public support of research, yet we presently concentrate our efforts on either basic research via the National Science Foundation, or applied research in the military sector through the Department of Defense. We devote a far larger fraction of our government-funded R&D to defense purposes than does either Japan or West Germany and spend a substantially smaller fraction of GNP for civilian R&D purposes. The Reagan administration has increased the fraction of Federal R&D funds for defense purposes from about 47 percent in 1980 to the 1984 level of 70 percent.

The bill I am introducing today would create an Advanced Technology Foundation to provide our civilian industrial sector with the same type of support which NSF provides for basic research and the Defense Department provides for military applied research. The Foundation's mission would be to focus national attention on the vital link between technological innovation and the international competitiveness of the American economy, and to provide financial assistance programs to stimulate the development of technological innovation in the private sector. The bill would also create a Federal Industrial Extension Service in order to speed the diffusion of new technologies to small- and medium-sized firms that are not generally able to gain ready access to many new technological developments. The Foundation would focus on research in areas of industrywide significance. Such support will help all sectors of the American economy develop and maintain a strong competitive position in the world economy.

A third piece of legislation would address serious deficiencies in our capital markets. The bill would create a Bank for Industrial Competitiveness which will help to catalyze private financial support for industries and firms whose health is essential for a vital and competitive national economy. Although this country possesses one of the most efficient and highly-developed capital markets in the world, there remain certain key areas in which private capital markets fail to meet the needs of the economy. In particular, financial markets often fail to provide adequate flows of capital to mature industries seeking revitalization, and fail to supply innovative, growing firms with the patient capital they need for expansion. The bank's mission would be to promote the competitiveness of America's industry by cooperating with private banks in overcoming structural gaps in capital markets, thereby improving the efficiency of these markets.

As a market-perfecting institution, the bank would focus its attention solely on niches which are presently underserved by private financing. It would not be a source of subsidized rate financing. The bank would only help to finance projects that are financially sound when measured largely against market criteria.

In basic industries requiring modernization, the bank would help negotiate the kinds of revitalization agreements among all participants in the industry that are essential to producing a viable investment package. Failure to reach such a consensus between management, labor and lenders put Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. in bankruptcy court only a few weeks ago. This failure has serious implications for other companies in the steel industry and in other industries which face heavy debt and uncertain futures. In new and emerging industries, the bank would provide patient capital for new product or technology development through direct lending, and by promoting decentralized forms of development finance. In all cases, Bank financial participation would be limited to a maximum of 30 percent, and each package would have to bear the test of acceptance by private lenders.

Together, these three initiatives give us a comprehensive approach to our competitiveness problems. But each stands alone as an important contributor to an overall competitiveness strategy.

Ideally, I believe a comprehensive approach embodying these three initiatives is the way we should proceed. But I am a political realist. We know that the administration knows of our competitiveness problems—his own Commission has told him of them in devastating detail. We also know the President's response.

President Reagan has dealt with our desperate need to bring competitiveness issues to the top of this Nation's economic agenda by creating an advisory Commission on Industrial Competitiveness and then ignoring its recommendations. He has dismissed out of hand his Commission's recommendation that we establish a Department of Science and Technology—a proposal far more ambitious than the Advanced Technology Foundation I recommend. And despite continuing plant closings, rapid movement of production overseas, and decreasing levels of domestic investment, the administration has yet to even acknowledge that we have a capital investment problem. Perhaps our growing economic instability will eventually grab the President's attention—but, to date, his indifference has been devastating.

Given these political realities, I have included in the package I am proposing two bills which constitute an alternative approach—one creating a White House Adviser on Economic Competitiveness and the other establishing an Economic Information Center within the Department of Commerce. Virtually every group that has examined our international competitiveness problems has endorsed two specific recommendations. First, all agreed there is a need to create a Presidential Adviser on Economic Competitiveness to raise competitiveness to the highest level of U.S. economic policymaking, and to bring greater coordination and coherence to the welter of Federal policies that affect the competitiveness of U.S. industry. Second, there is agreement that the Federal Government must establish the analytic capacity to assess U.S. and foreign competitive shifts and the likely effects of U.S. domestic and foreign policies on American competitiveness.

As the other bills I have introduced today demonstrate, I believe far more needs to be undertaken than these two recommendations if our country is to make a serious effort to address its declining ability to compete in international markets. However, these are both sensible suggestions that have attracted widespread bipartisan support. Together they would make a constructive beginning toward developing a more coherent set of national competitiveness policies. In my view, these proposals represent the very least we can afford to do given the serious problems we face.

The first bill would establish within the Executive Office of the President the position of Special Adviser on Economic Competitiveness to advise the President on issues relating to the international competitiveness of the U.S. economy. The second would create an Information Center on Economic Competitiveness in the Department of Commerce to collect and analyze information pertaining to the international competitiveness of U.S. industry.

The duties of the Special Adviser would include evaluating existing government policies and business practices in terms of their competitive impact, analyzing relevant domestic and international data concerning current and future economic trends and market opportunities affecting U.S. industry, and providing policy recommendations and guidance to the President and the Federal agencies to further the development of a more coherent, long-term set of industrial strategies.

The Special Adviser would have the authority to constitute such advisory committees and consult with such representatives of industry, labor, consumers, State and local governments, and other groups as he deems necessary. He would be able to secure directly from any department or agency of the Federal Government, as well as private research organizations, the information necessary to carry out his duties. He would also be able to employ on a consultant basis the experts necessary to carry out the duties of his office.

In sum, he would serve as a desperately needed highly visible focal point for the making of U.S. competitiveness policy.

The Information Center on Economic Competitiveness would be responsible for collecting and analyzing, in consultation with the appropriate Federal agencies, all information pertaining to the international operations and competitiveness of U.S. industries. It would be responsible for collecting data and conducting studies on all sectors of the U.S. economy, as well as collecting comparative international information on specific industries and the policies of foreign governments toward those industries.

The Center would also serve as a national clearinghouse for information on economic competitiveness, providing data and analysis to State and local governments and to private industry. The Center would also help identify impending import threats and potential export opportunities for U.S. industries, and make available to industry currently unobtainable translations of foreign trade laws, regulations, and publications essential to the successful operation of American business.

In addition, the Center would be charged with maintaining updated input-output tables of U.S. industries capable of providing detailed analysis of the economic transactions among industries at particular periods in time. This essential analytical tool is currently updated only once every 8 years, making it almost useless for effective policymaking. In contrast, the Japanese update their tables on a yearly basis.

Since the Federal Government has a highly decentralized system of data collection, the success of the Center will largely depend on the cooperation it receives from the numerous departments and agencies that collect information relating to economic competitiveness. These agencies include, among others, the Federal Reserve Board, the Departments of Labor, Treasury, Agriculture, and Justice, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, and the Federal and International Trade Commissions. The bill explicitly directs these agencies to use the programs under their authority to provide the Center such assistance as the Center deems necessary to carry out its responsibilities.

The legislative initiatives I am introducing today are intended to refocus our national debate on economic policy. Improved competitiveness must be central to that debate, and it is my belief that these specific initiatives represent public actions which are essential to rebuilding our industrial competitiveness and insuring the long-run prosperity of the economy. ●

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include therein extraneous material on the subject of the special order today by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

PETROLEUM MARKETING PRACTICES ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1985

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR] is recognized for 5 minutes.

● Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, along with my good friend and colleague from Iowa, Congressman TOM TAUKE, I am today introducing legislation to amend the Petroleum Marketing Practices Act of 1978 [PMPA]. The purpose of this bipartisan legislative effort is to correct deficiencies in the existing Petroleum Marketing Practices Act, and to promote healthy and vigorous competition in the petroleum marketing industry in the United States.

This legislation is similar to PMPA amendments—H.R. 5023—which TOM TAUKE and I introduced in 1984. That legislation was cosponsored by 52 of our colleagues in the House, and the Fossil and Synthetic Fuels Subcommittee held 2 days of hearings on the proposal.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the original Petroleum Marketing Practices Act of 1978 was to enhance fair and open competition in the petroleum marketing industry by preventing franchisors—refiners and distributors—from arbitrarily terminating franchise relationships with their franchisees—distributors and dealers.

Unfortunately, some narrow judicial interpretations and some abusive and predatory marketing practices by some refiners have severely limited the ability of our Nation's independent marketers and dealers to reasonably compete in the marketplace, despite passage of the original PMPA law over 6 years ago.

The number of gasoline distributors and retail service station dealers in the United States has declined dramatically over the past years. While some of that shrinkage is attributable to normal market changes, it is also clear to us that predatory marketing practices by some refiners have hastened the decline. Our legislation seeks to address these abusive practices without unduly interfering in the marketplace.

Some major refiners will be quick to assert that declining petroleum prices have increased competition in the marketplace and that, through this legislation, inefficient marketers and dealers are simply seeking protection from the vagaries of the marketplace. Nothing could be further from the truth. While declining oil prices have increased the competitive nature of the market, what those same major refiners won't tell you is that this has exacerbated the predatory and abusive marketing practices of some refiners who attempt to sustain or increase their market share at the expense of their independents.

During the past several years, I have had the opportunity to speak with hundreds of independent dealers and marketers about the Petroleum Marketing Practices Act and their relationship with their suppliers. Contrary to what the refiners assert, these independents seek nothing more than fair and open competition—not protection from it. But, under current law, the deck is stacked against them and it's time we put an end to it.

I have yet to meet any independent marketer or dealer who is not willing to compete head to head in the marketplace provided the rules of the game are fair for both sides. But, Mr. Speaker, the rules as currently drawn are full of loopholes which are of advantage to only one side—the refiners. The legislation we are introducing today attempts to balance the rules a little bit, to give independent marketers and dealers the chance they deserve to go head to head in the marketplace. It won't protect independents from the normal pressures of competition; it will put a stop to some of the more flagrant marketing practices of those refiners who now take advantage of any and every existing loophole in order to undercut their independents.

The majors will also suggest that this legislation is an attempt to "regulate" the market, but that is not true. It does not set up any new Federal regulatory bureaucracy to enforce the law. Instead, it only gives independent marketers and dealers a self-enforcing right to action to ensure them a fair and reasonable opportunity to compete in the marketplace, by ensuring that normal contracting practices can and will work in the interests of a competitive market—rather than a restricted market.

Mr. Speaker, the need for this legislation is just as compelling in 1985 as it was a year ago. Accordingly, while some changes have been made in the language of some provisions to meet legitimate questions or criticisms raised by refiners last year, the thrust and the intent of the bill are the same—to benefit the industry and consumers alike by establishing fair and balanced rules for petroleum marketing and to promote healthy and vigorous competition in the industry.

As introduced, the bill would:

Prohibit franchisors from terminating franchisees for failure to purchase a minimum number of gallons, unless such volumes were offered at a competitive price;

Prohibit franchisors from discriminating in price and allocation policies between their classes of franchisees;

Provide that in the event of market withdrawal, refiner franchisors must offer franchisees the right of first refusal to purchase the leased marketing premises;

Require that changes made in the franchise agreement at the time of renewal be fair and reasonable;

Prohibit station conversions during the term of the franchise agreement;

Allow franchisees to continue operating the leased marketing premises in cases where the underlying lease had expired and where the franchisee had been able to negotiate his or her own agreement with the owners of the property;

Prohibit franchisors from engaging in anti-competitive pricing practices in instances where they are in direct competition with their own franchisees; and Allow for the sale or transfer of a franchise agreement and allow for succession of a franchise under a plan to be approved by the franchisor.

I urge all my colleagues to join us in this bipartisan effort by cosponsoring the legislation we are introducing today.●

● Mr. TAUKE. Mr. Speaker, over the past several years, Members of Congress have spent a considerable amount of time reviewing the petroleum marketing practices of the major refiners of crude oil. The record that has been compiled suggests that the major oil refiners have pursued policies designed to force a substantial number of service station dealers and oil jobbers out of business. These practices have reduced competition in the petroleum market. It is apparent that Congress should enact legislation to address this problem.

Let me begin by affirming my belief that Congress should enact divorce legislation prohibiting the major refiners from engaging in the retail marketing of petroleum products. Having pursued that course for 6 years, I recognize that it is unlikely that divorce legislation can be passed. Yet the problem persists. Therefore it is essential that Congress consider legislation that is "doable"—an approach that can receive majority support and be passed into law.

Toward this end, Congressman SYNAR and I began last year to work with the Petroleum Marketers Association of America [PMAA] and the Service Station Dealers of America [SSDA] to resolve their long-standing differences on legislation affecting the marketing of petroleum products and to develop a proposal both groups could support. As a result of lengthy discussions among Members of Congress, their staffs, the NOJC, the SSDA, and other interested parties, today we are introducing this bill, the Petroleum Marketing Practices Act Amendments of 1985.

This legislation is in the best interest of consumers because it will encourage competition in the marketplace. There are those who contend that the best way to serve consumers is to permit the major refiners to engage in predatory pricing practices to take over the marketplace. While there may be some short-term benefits to this approach, I am convinced that this is to the long-term detriment of consumers. We must not permit competition to be stifled, and thousands of small business men and women must not be replaced by the marketing arms of a few large refiners.

This bill is good for small business. Small businesses do not have the economic power to bargain effectively with major refiners, which is why Congress passed the PMPA in 1978. While the act has helped preserve competition in the marketplace by giving small businesses leverage in contract negotiations, it is clear that current law is not halting the purge of the small businesses engaged in marketing petroleum products.

Let it be clear that we are not trying to regulate the marketplace. This measure will not bring the Federal Government into the marketplace nor will it add additional regulations written by a Federal bureaucracy. What it does is ensure that the normal contracting processes which establish business policies in petroleum marketing can work and will work in the interests of a competitive marketplace and the consumer. ●

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows to:

Mr. WEAVER (at the request of Mr. WRIGHT) for today, on account of illness.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. BILIRAKIS) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials:)

Mr. GINGRICH, for 60 minutes, today.
Mr. WALKER, for 60 minutes, today.

Mr. BLILEY, for 60 minutes, today.
Mr. BURTON, of Indiana, for 60 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. FAZIO) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. CROCKETT, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. ANNUNZIO, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. LAFALCE, for 30 minutes, today.
Mr. GONZALEZ, for 60 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MITCHELL) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. MARTINEZ, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. SYNAR, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. DARDEN, for 5 minutes, May 8.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend remarks was granted to:

Mr. LAFALCE, and to include extraneous material notwithstanding the fact that it exceeds two pages of the RECORD and is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $1,803.

SENATE ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill and joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S. 597. An act to amend subtitle II of title 46, United States Code, "Shipping," making technical and conforming changes, and for other purposes, and

S.J. Res. 128. Joint resolution to designate May 7, 1985, as "Vietnam Veterans Recognition Day."

JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. ANNUNZIO, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on May 6 present to the President, for his approval, joint resolutions of the House of the following title:

H.J. Res. 195. Joint resolution designating May 1985 as "Older Americans Month," and H.J. Res. 258. Joint resolution to designate May 6, 1985, as "Dr. Jonas E. Salk Day."

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 44 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 8, 1985, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1223. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Air Force, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize the retention in active status until age 60 of certain Reserve officers employed as military technicians; to the Committee on Armed Services.

1224. A letter from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide for distribution to the States of certain amounts resulting from enforcement of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

1225. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to extend various health services authorities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

1226. A letter from the Acting Secretary of State, transmitting notification of the use of emergency authority to provide assistance under part I of the Foreign Assistance Act to the Afghan people, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2261(a)(2); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1227. A letter from the Director, Defense Security Assistance Agency, transmitting notification of the Department of the Navy's proposed letter of offer to Korea for defense articles and services, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1228. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of State for Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, transmitting the text of ILO Recommendation No. 169 concerning employment policy, pursuant to article 19 of the ILO constitution; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1229. A letter from the Commissioner, Immigration and Naturalization Service, transmitting a report on the admission of aliens who were affiliated with certain subversive organizations and who have established opposition to such subversion, pursuant to INA, section 212(a)(28)(ii)(b) (66 Stat. 182); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1230. A letter from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting the sixth annual report on the administration of the offshore oil pollution compensation fund, pursuant to Public Law 95-372, section 314; jointly, to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

1231. A letter from the Attorney General of the United States, transmitting notification of the determination, on constitutional grounds, not to appeal the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit in United States v. Wulff, pursuant to Public Law 96-132, section 21; Public Law 98-411, section 203(a) (98 Stat. 1558); jointly, to the Committees on the Judiciary and Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

1232. AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 2068

By Mr. VENTO:

Strike Section 126 and insert the following:

SEC. 126. ESTABLISHMENT OF A TRAVEL ADVISORY ON THE STATE OF JALISCO, MEXICO.

(a) VIOLENCE AGAINST AMERICANS.—The Congress—

(1) deplors the brutal murder of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, and the abduction and disappearance of numerous other Americans, including John Clay Walker, Alberto Radelat, Dennis Carlson, Rose Carlson, Benjamin Mascarenas, and Patricia Mascarenas; and

(2) finds that the violence perpetrated by drug traffickers in Mexico constitute a danger to the safety of United States citizens living and traveling in the State of Jalisco, Mexico.

(b) TRAVEL ADVISORY.—The Congress, therefore, directs the Secretary of State to issue a travel advisory warning United States citizens of the current dangers of traveling in the State of Jalisco, Mexico. Such travel advisory shall remain in effect until those responsible for the abduction or murder of any of the aforementioned United States citizens have been brought to trial and a verdict has been obtained.

REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

In compliance with Public Law 601, 79th Congress, title III, Regulation of Lobbying Act, section 308(b), which provides as follows:

(b) All information required to be filed under the provisions of this section with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall be compiled by said Clerk and Secretary, acting jointly, as soon as practicable after the close of the calendar quarter with respect to which such information is filed and shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate jointly submit their report of the compilation required by said law and have included all registrations and quarterly reports received.

REGISTRATIONS

The following registrations were submitted for the first calendar quarter 1985:

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.¶

The following quarterly reports were submitted for the first calendar quarter 1985:

(NOTE.—The form used for reporting is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

"QUARTERLY" REPORT: To indicate which one of the four calendar quarters is covered by this Report, place an "X" below the appropriate figure. Fill out both page 1 and page 2 and as many additional pages as may be required. The first additional page should be numbered as page "3," and the rest of such pages should be "4," "5," "6," etc. Preparation and filing in accordance with instructions will accomplish compliance with all quarterly reporting requirements of the Act.

QUARTER

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

- 1. State name, address, and nature of business.
- 2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

- 1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.
- 2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.
- 3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.¶

AFFIDAVIT

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "None" in the space following the number.

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following reports for the fourth calendar quarter of 1984 were received too late to be included in the published reports for that quarter:

(NOTE.—The form used for report is reproduced below. In the interest of economy in the RECORD, questions are not repeated, only the essential answers are printed, and are indicated by their respective headings.)

FILE ONE COPY WITH THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE AND FILE TWO COPIES WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"PRELIMINARY" REPORT ("Registration"): To "register," place an "X" below the letter "P" and fill out page 1 only.

Year: 19.....

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th

NOTE ON ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
 - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
 - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE ON ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER.—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE ON ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) Description, (b) quantity distributed; (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly" Report.

AFFIDAVIT

NOTE ON ITEM "D."—(a) In General. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—Section 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In General. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in accordance with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multipurpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In General. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

D. RECEIPTS (INCLUDING CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS):

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "None" in the space following the number.

Receipts (other than loans)

- 1. $.....Dues and assessments
- 2. $.....Gifts of money or anything of value
- 3. $.....Printed or duplicated matter received as a gift
- 4. $.....Receipts from sale of printed or duplicated matter

- 10. $.....Borrowed from others during this Quarter
- 11. $.....Repaid to others during this Quarter

- 12. $....."Expense money" and Reimbursements received this Quarter

NOTE ON ITEM "E."—(a) In General. "The term 'expenditure' includes a payment, distribution, loan, advance, deposit, or gift of money or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make an expenditure"—Section 302(b) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE. In the case of many employees, all expenditures will come under telephone and telegraph (Item "E 6") and travel, food, lodging, and entertainment (Item "E 7").

E. EXPENDITURES (INCLUDING LOANS) in connection with legislative interests:

Fill in every blank. If the answer to any numbered item is "None," write "None" in the spaces following the number.

Expenditures (other than loans)

- 1. $.....Public relations and advertising services
- 2. $.....Wages, salaries, fees, commissions (other than item "1")

- 7. $.....Travel, food, lodging, and entertainment
- 8. $.....All other expenditures
- 9. $.....TOTAL for this Quarter (Add "1" through "8")
- 10. $.....Expended during previous Quarters of calendar year
- 11. $.....TOTAL from January 1 through this Quarter (Add "9" and "10")

- 15. Recipients of Expenditures of $10 or More

In the case of expenditures made during this Quarter by, or on behalf of the person filing: Attach plain sheets of paper approximately the size of this page and tabulate data as to expenditures under the following heading: "Amount," "Date or Dates," "Name and Address of Recipient," "Purpose." Prepare such tabulation in accordance with the following example:

Amount	Date or Dates—Name and Address of Recipient—Purpose
$1,750.00	7-11: Roe Printing Co., 3214 Blank Ave., St. Louis, Mo.—Printing and mailing circulars on the "Marshbanks Bill."
$2,400.00	7-15, 8-15, 9-15: Britten & Blaten, 3127 Gremlin Bldg., Washington, D.C.—Public relations service at $800.00 per month.
$4,150.00	TOTAL

Loans Made to Others

"The term 'expenditure' includes a . . . loan . . ."—Sec. 302(b).

- 12. $.....TOTAL now owed to person filing
- 13. $.....Lent to others during this Quarter
- 14. $.....Repayment received during this Quarter
