GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to support Senate Resolution 79, the resolution designating March 25, 1995, as Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy. The resolution also asks the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the designated day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

March 25, 1995, marks the 174th anniversary of the beginning of the revolution which freed the Greek people from the Ottoman Empire. It is fitting that we celebrate this day together with Greece in order to reaffirm the common democratic heritage of Americans and Greeks.

The ancient Greeks forged the very notion of democracy, placing the ultimate power to govern in the people. As Aristotle said, "If liberty and equality, as is thought by some, are chiefly to be found in democracy, they will best be attained when all persons alike share in the government to the utmost."

Because the concept of democracy was born in the age of the ancient Greeks, all Americans, whether or not of Greek ancestry, are kinsmen of a kind to the ancient Greeks. America's Founding Fathers drew heavily upon the political and philosophical experience of ancient Greece in forming our Government. For that contribution alone, we owe a heavy debt to the Greeks.

The common heritage which we share has forged a close bond between Greece and the United States, and between our peoples. And it is reflected in the numerous contributions made by present-day Greek-Americans in New Jersey and across the country to our American culture.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution as a tribute to these contributions, past and present, which have greatly enriched American life.●

TRIBUTE TO TOM AND GANIA TROTTER

● Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I am pleased to pay tribute today to two eminent Alaskans, Tom and Gania Trotter, on the occasion of their retirement after many years of dedicated service to higher education in America, but most recently in their roles as president and associate to the president for development at Alaska Pacific University.

F. Thomas Trotter is a native of Los Angeles, CA. After serving in the U.S. Army Air Corps in World War II, he attended Occidental College and received his Ph.D. from Boston University. He served in numerous ministerial and faculty roles, and was elected to be the first dean of the School of Theology at Claremont College. In 1973, Dr. Trotter became general secretary of the Board of Higher Education and Ministry of the United Methodist Church. In this post, he gave oversight to 128 colleges and universities related to the denomination. During his administration, significant international programs were established including a United States-Japan consortium and the establishment of a new university in Zimbabwe. He has been the director of several businesses, including the Third National Bank of Nashville, is the recipient of 10 honorary degrees, and is a trustee of Dillard University. Dr. Trotter is the author of "Jesus and The Historian" and "Loving God With One's Mind."

Gania Demaree Trotter, a native of Anaheim, CA, is also a graduate of Occidental College and received an M.A. in Student Personnel Administration from Columbia University. A gifted musician, Mrs. Trotter was a choral director in California schools and churches and a member of the Robert Shaw Collegiate Chorale. She was director of development for the Blair School of Music of Vanderbilt University and is an experienced higher education administrator.

Dr. Trotter began his service to Alaska Pacific University as a trustee in 1974, and in 1987, he was selected as its eighth president. He worked diligently to improve curriculum design and financial growth. He introduced new undergraduate and graduate programs and thawed the ice curtain when he forged an agreement between APU and Far Eastern University in Vladivostok, Russia. The Carr Gottstein academic building, which has been a wonderful addition to the campus, was designed and constructed under President Trotter's careful oversight. During his tenure, Alaska Pacific University has been recognized in several national publications for its academic excellence.

Gania Trotter has supported the university and its mission with energy and grace both in development and community awareness. She has cultivated important relationships which will benefit the university and its students for many years to come. Mrs. Trotter has further distinguished herself in Alaska through her creative enthusiasm and civic involvement, most notably in the symphony, opera, and Catholic social services.

Tonight in Anchorage, several hundred friends and colleagues will gather to honor Tom and Gania for their years of selfless dedication to the education of Americans, a gift that will last for generations. I join many others in offering my sincere gratitude and best wishes to both of them.●

LINCOLN, LABOR AND THE BLACK MILITARY: THE LEGACY PROVIDED

● Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, William B. Gould IV—the Chairman of the National Labor Relations Board [NLRB]—celebrates the end of the first year of his first term today.

Mr. Gould recently delivered a speech entitled, "Lincoln, Labor, and the Black Military: The Legacy Provided," that makes an important contribution to the celebration of Black History Month. This speech analyzes President Abraham Lincoln's legacy on the development of democratic institutions and the protection of human rights in the United States. More specifically, this speech highlights the Great Emancipator's views on labor and the right to strike which were founded on the belief that "All people could improve themselves and thus arise out of their station if opportunity were afforded them."

Our Nation held its first, officially recognized, Black History Month in 1976. In reality, of course, the event dates back to 1926, when Carter G. Woodson, the noted historian and author, selected February to honor the achievement of black Americans because it was the month in which both Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass were born.

There are still some who would simply like to forget the ugly history that surrounds race relations in this country, and who question the need for a month set aside to reflect on the accomplishments of African-Americans. But for me, each year the month of February provides me with an occasion to look back and survey the triumphs of African-Americans, often against overwhelming odds. It gives me a chance to give thanks to those who have gone before me, and who paved the way for me. And, more importantly, it provides me with the opportunity to reflect not only on how far we have come, but also on how far, in many respects, we still have to go.

Having spoken in favor of his nomination on the Senate floor 1 year ago today, I am pleased to see that Mr. Gould—the first African-American chairman of the National Labor Relations Board—also recognizes the importance of celebrating President Lincoln's birthday and Black History Month.

I am also encouraged by the fact that Mr. Gould continues to reaffirm his commitment to promoting "The right of employees to band together for the purpose of protecting or improving their own working conditions, to join unions, to engage in collective bargaining, and to be free from various forms of discrimination."

Mr. President, I would like to conclude my remarks by urging my colleagues to read Mr. Gould's speech and by wishing Mr. Gould all the best as he continues to serve his country as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

I ask that the text of Mr. Gould's speech be printed in the RECORD.
