

have the opportunity to do so again this year.

At a time when we are exposed to a constant stream of violence, profanity, and immorality—both through the media and in every day life—the issue of character is of vital importance. Those of us in this Chamber spend a great deal of time trying to develop ways to improve the Nation. I can think of few things we could do to better achieve this goal than to emphasize the importance of character to younger generations.

Those of us in positions of leadership, especially in the Government, have a special duty when it comes to character. Whether we realize it or not, we are role models and we have a duty to demonstrate those same attributes of character—trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, justice and fairness, caring, and civic virtue and citizenship—which National Character Counts Week highlights. Unfortunately, far too many Americans have come to believe, wrongly in most cases, that these qualities no longer exist in the Government. I urge all of my colleagues to begin today to make that extra effort to show the people we serve that the faith they demonstrated when they voted for us has not been misplaced. In the words of President George Washington, "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair."

Mr. President, I recently chaired an Armed Services Personnel Subcommittee hearing in which the issue of character was prominent. During the hearing I was deeply disturbed to hear that the lack of character, values, and discipline is making it harder and harder for the Armed Forces to recruit the high quality people we need to serve in our military. Testimony supplied at the hearing indicated that an ever-increasing number of potential recruits are unacceptable, in terms of ethics, education, and values, for the armed services. I am not talking about difficult kids who simply lack discipline, the military has always done a fine job handling those recruits. I am talking about young people who have no respect for authority, no respect for their peers, no respect for our society, and often, no respect for themselves. As a result, they lack basic values such as compassion, honesty, and integrity. Our military commanders cannot be expected to instill those kind of values in individuals who have lacked them throughout their entire lives. That process must begin at birth and in the home.

Mr. President, with this resolution, we are taking a step forward in trying to teach younger generations about the importance of character. I am pleased to note that schools, churches, and civic organizations around the Nation are also seizing the initiative on this important issue. But our efforts, whether on the national or local level, must not end here. Actually, to be more precise, our efforts must not begin here. While there are certainly things we can do as a government, or as a community, to teach character to young people, these lessons must begin at home. We cannot hope to improve the overall character of the Nation unless the fundamental values described in National Character Counts Week are instilled in the home. No amount of moral instruction from outside the home can replace the guidance of a loving and supportive family.

Recognizing a national week to stress the importance of character is but a small step in addressing the crisis of ethics the Nation faces. At the same time, it is an important step which I believe all of us should support. I would like to thank Senator DOMENICI for his continued leadership on National Character Counts Week, and urge my colleagues to cosponsor the resolution.
