

unlawful for franchise companies to sell franchises and distributorships, and then take back those franchises without fair compensation.

Franchises employ more than 8 million people nationwide, and account for more than 35 percent of U.S. retail sales. Current trends suggest this explosion will continue, providing a certain urgency to our cause to correct inequities and unfair trade practices sooner, rather than later.

Many issues deserve exploration such as proper disclosure by franchisors and parent companies. Our basic goal, however, should be to prevent unfair practices that do not properly recognize or compensate for the equity ownership rights that many franchisees and distributors have in their franchises, and ultimately devalue franchising as a successful way of conducting business.

TRIBUTE TO DR. O.C. SMITH

HON. JULIAN C. DIXON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 20, 1997

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, April 19, the men's club of the City of Angeles Church will sponsor a roast of church pastor, Dr. O.C. Smith. Dr. Smith, better known to many as the multiple Grammy nominee and singer of the million seller standard, "Little Green Apples," is the founder of the City of Angeles Church of Religious Science. In recognition of his numerous contributions to the church and to the Los Angeles community, and in appreciation of his lasting contributions to the music industry, I am pleased to have this opportunity to recognize Dr. Smith today.

Prior to embarking on his legendary musical career, O.C. attended and graduated from Southern University in Baton Rouge, LA, earning a degree in psychology. Following graduation, he entered the U.S. Air Force and Special Services, where as an entertainer he toured bases all over the world. Looking to break into the music business after his tour with the Air Force had ended, O.C. settled in New York City. During the winter months, he made the rounds in many of the small clubs in the city, giving nightly performances. In the summer months, he would travel to the renowned "Borsch Belt" hotels in the Catskills, where he entertained audiences with some of his most soulful hits.

O.C.'s big break occurred when he learned that the great Count Basie was looking for a replacement for the legendary Joe Williams. O.C. was selected and for the next 3 years, he toured with the "Count" developing a huge, loyal following throughout the United States. He left Basie's orchestra to pursue a solo career and struck gold with his memorable hits of "Little Green Apples," "Hickory Holler's Tramp," and "Daddy's Little Man." He sang the theme song from the motion pictures, "The Learning Tree," and "Shaft's Big Score." Other well known hits of his include "Help Me Make It Through the Night," "For the Good Times," "That's Life," "Don't Misunderstand," "Dreams Come True," and "What 'Cha Gonna Do."

Several years into his highly successful musical career, Dr. Smith opted to redirect his career focus to the ministry. He felt a great need to assist humanity and with his background in psychology, determined that the ministry would be the perfect place to impact the lives of his fellow brothers and sisters. After years of studying the ministry, he emerged to found the City of Angeles Church of Religious Science in 1985. Shortly thereafter, he founded the Children's Charities and Scholarship Foundation, thereby fulfilling a lifetime commitment to creating a viable organization dedicated to helping children. In the ensuing years, the church and its foundation have made innumerable contributions to the Los Angeles community.

Dr. O.C., as he is affectionately known by his congregation, continues to give concert performances and ministers to people throughout the world. Because of his commitment to humankind, he serves as a perfect role model for individuals—both young and old. I am proud to have this opportunity to commend him for his distinguished contributions to our society, and on behalf of the citizens of the 32d Congressional District, I salute him and wish him many more years of sweet, soulful music and fellowship as he continues to provide outstanding leadership as the spiritual head of the City of Angeles Church of Religious Science.

COMPREHENSIVE HIV PREVENTION
ACT OF 1997

HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 20, 1997

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation, along with Congresswoman NANCY PELOSI and more than 100 of our colleagues, to provide a comprehensive approach to HIV prevention.

Our country faces 40,000 new HIV infections each year. The HIV epidemic is leaving no population untouched, and it is spreading particularly rapidly among our young people, women, and people of color. Women are the fastest growing group of people with HIV; AIDS is the third leading cause of death in women ages 25 to 44. Low-income women and women of color are being hit the hardest by this epidemic. African-American and Latina women represent 75 percent of all U.S. women diagnosed with AIDS.

Our bill authorizes funding for family planning providers, community health centers, substance abuse treatment programs, and other providers who already serve low-income women, to provide community-based HIV programs. These provisions were part of my women and AIDS prevention bill from the last Congress. Our bill also creates a new program to address concerns about HIV for rape victims.

The legislation also authorizes programs to build on the HIV Prevention Community Planning Process implemented by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in 1994. Similar provisions were included in previous legislation introduced by Congresswoman PELOSI, who worked to reform the CDC prevention programs and to develop the community planning process. This process has ensured that States and local health departments, in partnership with community planning groups, make the decisions on how best to target their prevention dollars. The epidemic varies from State to State, and from locality to locality. What works best to prevent HIV infections in San Francisco may not be what is most effective in Baltimore. This local approach is consistent with efforts to place decisionmaking in the hands of states and localities, rather than pursuing a one-size-fits-all solution.

In my work focusing on the needs of women in the HIV epidemic, the effectiveness of community-based prevention programs has been demonstrated time and time again. Providers with a history of service to women's communities understand that prevention efforts must acknowledge and respond to the issues of low self-esteem, economic dependency, fear of domestic violence, and other factors which are barriers to empowering women.

Our bill is a comprehensive approach to HIV prevention. I urge my colleagues to join us as cosponsors of this important legislation.

HONORING JOSIE POITIER FOR 39 YEARS OF OUTSTANDING AND
COMMUNITIES WITHIN DADE COUNTY

HON. CARRIE P. MEEK

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 20, 1997

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to recognize Josie Poitier, from Liberty City, who has contributed greatly to the communities of my district. For 39 years, Ms. Poitier has volunteered her time, effort, and hard work creating many programs that have helped unite the community. She is an outstanding individual who has generated respect, helped shape community pride, and manifested hope that was once lost.

The Miami Herald recognized Josie Poitier in an article titled "Building Bridges Between Communities," published January 20, 1997, which commemorated her honorable civic service. I would like to submit a portion of this inspiring article for the RECORD.

"Every morning," says Josie Poitier, "I go outside to pick up my paper and I look up at the sky and pray, 'Lord, let me help somebody today.'"

For the last 39 years, Poitier has found plenty of people to help—from senior citizens who had never been on an airplane until she took them to the Bahamas, to the people from a myriad of heritages she invites to her now famous Good Friday/Passover brunch to share in a spirit of community.

And that's only two of the projects of her page-long list that includes: coordinating a holiday turkey meal for the elderly at St. Mary's Towers, pulling together an anti-drug workshop for 18 inner city schools, making sure her neighborhood's lights are all working properly and promoting scholarships and a college education for black youth.

Ask her why she does it, why she runs so hard, and Poitier will tell you it's because the elderly are lonely and their children are too busy to visit, and because, in South Florida, there's a need to build "a bridge between people."

"This opened a lot of avenues," she says of the brunch that started at her Liberty City home 11 years ago and has grown to 200 people who gather at Holy Redeemer Catholic Church. "Everyone comes together as one, like a family."
