

The bill would make several technical modification to last year's legislation. It would repeal the provision that restricts ownership of qualified zone academy bonds to financial institutions, it would require a maximum maturity of 15 years, rather than a maximum maturity determined under a formula, it would change the formula for allocating the national limit to make it consistent with the formula used in allocating the limit on qualified school construction bonds, and it would provide an indefinite carryover of any unused credit.

2. QUALIFIED SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION BONDS

The bill would also permit State and local governments to issue qualified school construction bonds to fund the construction or rehabilitation of public schools. Interest on qualified school construction bonds would in effect be paid by the Federal government through an annual tax credit. The credit would be provided in the same manner as the credit for qualified school academy bonds.

Under the bill, a total of $9.7 billion of qualified school construction bonds could be issued in 1999 and in 2000. Half of the annual cap would be allocated among the States on the basis of their population of low-income children, weighted the State's expenditures per pupil for education (the Title I basic grant formula). The other half of the annual cap would be allocated among the hundred school districts with the highest number of low-income children and that allocation would be based on each district's Title I share.

The following chart shows the aggregate amount of qualified school construction bonds that could be issued in each State under the bill. The total includes amounts allocated to large school districts in the State. An additional $600 million is reserved for allocations to other school districts not in the largest 100 districts.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, on roll call vote #26 on the bill, H.R. 217, taken on March 3, 1998, I was erroneously recorded as voting "yes." On that vote I intended to be recorded as voting "no." I ask unanimous consent that this statement appear at the appropriate place in the RECORD.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY 1998

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 4, 1998

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, the glorious and joyous holiday of Saint Patrick's Day for all of those Irish around the world, and their many friends, fast approaches once again.

It is especially important this year to celebrate this great holiday honoring Ireland's patron saint, and we and the entire world hope and pray that lasting peace and justice on the Emerald Isle will emerge from the current peace talks on the future of the north of Ireland.

I recently returned from Ireland where I helped lead a Congressional delegation to reinvigorate the Irish American inter-parliamentary exchange, dormant since the mid-1980s.

We were all very grateful for the leadership of our Speaker NEWT GINGRICH, and the work of our distinguished U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kennedy Smith in Dublin, in helping to bring about this renewed inter-parliamentary exchange between Ireland and the U.S. Congress.

We saw firsthand on our visit to Ireland, the new economic vibrancy in the Irish Republic. The "Celtic Tiger" is alive and well. One statistic we learned paints the impressive economic picture of the new Ireland: Other than the U.S. today, Ireland exports more computers worldwide than any other nation in the world, including even Japan.

For the first time in many years, there are more than enough good jobs, immigration is down, and the Irish diaspora are returning home to work and take these new jobs. 4,500 in 1997 alone returned home from America. The long suffering of the close knit Irish family from the immigration of its sons and daughters, hopefully is a thing of the past.

The close links, common bonds, friendships and mutual understandings between the Irish people and our nation are long, strong and vibrant. Both nations have benefited from these close ties, common links, and deep mutual understandings and fond affection.

The Irish have played a vital part in American history. There were Irish soldiers and officers who distinguished themselves in the American Revolution, helping us secure our own freedom from the British.

Many Irish paid the ultimate sacrifices in our tragic civil war. For example, 540 Irishmen died or were wounded in less than 30 minutes on September 17th, 1862 at Antietam in fighting on the side of the north as part of the Irish Brigade, in the bloodiest day of our civil war.

The Irish contribution is enormous to our politics, arts, sports, literature, commerce, the labor movement, and so many other areas of our American life. We, as a nation and a people, owe the Emerald Isle much. We have an obligation to pay attention to events in Ireland today.

The Irish role in U.S. politics is well known, including providing us more than a dozen American Presidents. Our histories, cultures, and people are very closely linked.

It is little noted, but at one time not long ago, the President of the U.S., the Speaker of the House, and the Majority Leader of the U.S. Senate, while serving together in our highest elected offices, were all Irish Catholic with close and very deep roots in the Emerald Isle.

Today, the future of the north of Ireland, and its relationship with the vibrant and prospering Republic of Ireland to the south is being decided across the bargaining table, not by the bomb and gun. Those engaged in the senseless sectarian killings have not de-railed the peace process. They shouldn't and must not be permitted to do so!

The U.S., both the executive branch and the Congress have played a vital and constructive role through an evenhanded and balanced approach to the Irish peace process, now moving forward in Belfast, albeit at far too slow a pace.

I have been particularly pleased to play a small part in keeping the Irish question high on the U.S. foreign policy agenda. We owe all the Irish people here and there, at least that much.

I have not hesitated to provide bipartisan support for President Clinton's overall constructive and very helpful efforts in helping to find peace and lasting justice in the north of Ireland.

These historic talks in Belfast today are being led, we are all very proud to say, under the table chairmanship of our former congressional colleague, Senator George Mitchell of Maine who himself has some proud Irish roots.

In promoting the effort to finding lasting peace and justice in the north through all party inclusive talks, we in America have in some small way been able to help pay back Ireland's warm and generous people, who have given our nation so much.

Today, after urging by both governments in the region, the U.S., and the millions of friends of the Irish people all around the globe, the future of the north is being decided by the responsible leadership of the people through political means, and discussions and their eventual "consent" to any proposed solutions. This is how it should be!

The Irish people both north and south, have consistently made clear that talks and negotiated political settlement were and are the
