AUTHORIZING THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY TO INVESTIGATE WHETHER SUFFICIENT GROUNDS EXIST FOR THE IMPEACHMENT OF WILLIAM JEFFERSON CLINTON, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Colorado (Ms. DEGETTE).

(Ms. DEGETTE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DEGETTE. Mr. Speaker, historians note that those who are in the middle of history often do not themselves recognize it. Today should not be about polls. Today should not be about the upcoming November election, and even today should not be about the serious matter of sexual misconduct. But with all due respect to my friends, that is exactly what today is all about.

This is only the third time in the history of this country that we are talking about opening impeachment proceedings against our President, and I am shocked at how many people, including some in this chamber, take this serious matter so lightly, even gleefully. We are witnessing a stampede to justice, my friends, and like so many stampedes, when the trail dust settles, we will leave chaos and we will leave ruin.

This is a time for statesmanship. Each one of us must independently assess the best direction for this House and this country, and I will say it is not an open ended, never ending, witch-hunt without any limits. We need to carefully consider the Starr report. We need to set a guideline and then we need to move forward with the serious business of this country.

Mr. Speaker, the House is about to decide whether to exercise one of the most grave constitutional steps within our power: hearings concerning the impeachment of the President. This is the most serious decision we can make, next to a declaration of war. It is legislative, moral, and civic duty to caution the House to carefully weigh this dangerous, perhaps necessary step.

Like so many of you, my political conscience was formed during the Watergate scandal and I applauded the Supreme Court’s ruling in U.S. versus Nixon that the President “is not above the law.” The President, whoever he or she may be, is not above the law. But my political conscience was also informed by reading “Profiles in Courage,” where John Kennedy, who well-knew the passions that govern partisan political discourse, discussed the failed attempt to impeach President Andrew Johnson. Johnson was saved from impeachment by the courageous actions of several senators who withstood the deep and intense partisan public hatred of a president attempting to unite a divided country.

Most historians would agree that the impeachment of Johnson would have been a constitutional, economic, and political catastrophe. In fact, the partisan bickering, motivated by the hope of political advantage, was a dark, shameful moment in American history which affected the national agenda for decades afterwards; a moment we may soon repeat if we do not learn from our history.

This is the time to ask what actions will best serve our country. Hasty decisions in a moment of passion will not serve the interests of our constituents. Frankly, I have heard little about the long-term consequences of an impeachment hearing, especially if we ultimately decide not to impeach the President. The Watergate scandal undermined the institutional authority of our political system for a generation. Therefore, we must carefully weight what we do now, because it will have consequences for at least a generation to come. Yes, we have a President who has lied to you and me and the American public. I’m, not happy about that; I am angry and outraged. He deserves our scorn and our condemnation. But we cannot impeach him because of our anger. That would turn our constitutional democracy into a parliamentary system. I am sure my colleagues do not want to subvert the constitution in that way.

What we must determine is this: does his conduct constitute a “high crime” or a “misdeemeanor”? There is a reasonable doubt about that, and reasonable people can differ on the answer.

Because ours is a legislative, not judicial, function, we must also determine if impeachment is in the best interests of the country.

Historians note that those who are in the middle of history often do not realize it. Today, we are not talking about polls—or even elections—or even the sexual misconduct of our President. After all, this will be only the third time in history we consider impeachment of a sitting President. But that’s what this debate is really about. I am shocked at how many people, including some in this Chamber, take this serious matter so lightly, even gleefully. We are witnessing a stampede to judgment. And like many stampedes, when the trial dust settles we may leave chaos and ruin. This is a time for statesmanship. Each one of us must independently assess the best direction for the House and for the country. That is why we should vote for a thoughtful process that will establish whether evidence exists to even open an inquiry before we begin a wide-ranging witch hunt with heavy heart and a keen recognition of history, and with reluctant support for this forum.

The American people, the world community, and future historians will judge us as we judge the President. I this House, at this moment, we must rise above passion and partisanship. We must be wise and equal to the public trust.

I ask my colleagues for a full debate on the resolution to open impeachment proceedings. We need more than one hour for discussion. Because of the gravity of this vote, we owe it to the American people to have a fully informed, careful, responsible discussion.

I ask for our best judgment. I believe that the process that allows us to have more prudent decision-making is the Democratic alternative. Before we can move forward in recommending articles of impeachment, the Judiciary Committee should determine the standards for defining impeachable offenses. That would be extremely helpful and fair in our evaluation of this issue. With this information, we would be in a better position to discuss impeachment.

And I ask for a narrow scope. Impeachment hearings should examine specific, clearly stated, concrete charges. We need to give the Special Prosecutor's report complete consideration, especially after spending $40 million to gather the information. I was not elected to Congress to waste the taxpayers' time and money in political chicanery. I was not elected to engage in a witch-hunt. The discussion must be on-point, specific to the matter-at-hand, relevant, and substantive.

This is the time for prudent judgment, for far-sighted decision-making, for fairness, and for justice. We cannot let our unharnessed passions nor our political greed sway us from acting in the country's best interests. We stand at a singular moment in history. Our actions will forever change the culture and political environment of our country. If we do not act with complete fairness, impartiality, and good judgment, we will certainly be harshly judged by our constituents, by the world community, and by history for our impotent folly.

I ask that we consider a fair and realistic process by which we examine these serious, dangerous, and historic charges against the President.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire how much time the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) and I have?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) has 20% minutes. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) has 20 minutes.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as I may consume to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

(Mr. BLUNT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution and will submit my remarks for the RECORD.

I intend to vote for the Judiciary Committee's resolution that would begin the inquiry for impeachment. The President of the United States needs the trust and confidence of the American people. When the President does not have credibility, the country is at risk.

Currently only one in five Americans say they have confidence in the President's credibility and truthfulness. The American people deserve a speedy resolution of this crisis-inconfidence. The President deserves the opportunity to restore his credibility by having the opportunity to explain his side of what seems to be perjury and obstruction of justice both in a civil case and before a federal grand jury.

It is my hope that this inquiry will meet the demands of the Constitution and be resolved with all deliberate speed.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to do their duty under the Constitution and take this step toward a conclusion of this national challenge.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE).

(Mr. GANSKE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, we have not always agreed on certain policies. I can think of a health care issue that we disagreed on. But I certainly do not think it is fair for the Speaker of the House to be accused of perjury in this debate today.

I think that I have some bipartisan credentials, so I want to say to Members on both sides of the aisle that the Republican resolution follows the same model that was followed in 1974. A time limit was recognized then, and it is recognized now, as a way to obstruct and delay. We must listen to our consciences. And if we do, I think we can all agree with Chairman Peter Rodino in 1974 and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) today, a time limit is not the way to go on this resolution.

Yes, I am tired of hearing about the President's indiscretions, and I have had a hard time explaining this to my 10-year-old son. And it will be a stressful time for us. But when I think about the President's times with our country and how our country has gone through the American Revolution, the Civil War, the two world wars, the Great Depression, I think it would be a shame for us to shirk our duty.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT), the only former sheriff in the House.

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the prosecutor has asked us to indict the President of the United States on 11 counts. All 11 counts involve an intern. In the video, a student asking the prosecutor did not ask the President one time about FBI files, about the travel office, about Vincent Foster, or about Whitewater. In 4 hours, basically the prosecutor asked a student what did the President know that he did it, and did he lie about it.

I am not minimizing the gravity of this, my colleagues, but this does not rise to the level of perjury. Now, let us be honest about that.

This prosecutor is required by law to submit all evidence to the House, which is a Grand Jury. I must assume he has. But I would also say to the leaders of both parties, if he has not, he should be compelled today to deliver every piece of evidence he has on any pending investigation. That is our duty.

I am going to support an inquiry today, but I am not going to support an extended soap opera, my colleagues. And I will say this: What the Congress of the United States, the House, has before us today is an 11-count indictment. We should be able to act on the substance by the end of our terms. Kenneth Starr submitted it to the 105th Congress, not to a future Congress.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. STEVE BUYER), a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time. I have listened to part of the debate, and I have to agree with the gentleman from Colorado that I am disappointed in the conduct of some of my colleagues here today. How people can be here on this House floor cheering or applauding, as though they have some kind of duty to the President, is dis-appointing to me. I think that part of that noise is about a clamor against the judicial process and their actions define themselves.

Actually, this kind of reminds me of a story about Abe Lincoln that I will share with my colleagues. Let me tell you this little story.

Abe Lincoln, in one of his many famous debates, was debating a person known to be very shallow in substance because he did not really have the facts on his side. He always tried to make up for his lack of substance by making a lot of noise. Sure enough, the debate began with his opponent using plenty of noise, increasing the volume of his voice with a lot of thunder and lightning, was all around them. The lightning was not enough for them to see, and the thunder caused confusion and made it difficult for them to see. And they got scared, because they were not sure they were going to be able to make it back to town. So they fell upon their knees and they prayed. And they said, God, may we have a little less noise and a little more light.

What we find here at the moment is a lot of noise, but I, for one, will enjoin in the prayer for a little more light. Our job here is to seek the light of the truth, because the truth matters.

And let us not confuse ourselves with what is happening here today. Both parties, Democrats and Republicans, are saying to America: We have a credible and substantive referral from an independent prosecutor, and we must take the next step toward the inquiry of impeachment. There may be a disagreement, there may be a debate about the scope or the limitation on times, but those are details. The facts will sort themselves out. If the facts find that the President should be exonerated, then you should act because we have the truth. If it is true otherwise, then we should proceed with the next step.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Ms. DEBBIE STABENOW).

(Ms. STABENOW asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. Speaker, today we make a critically important decision affecting the lives of every single one of us. Men and women, young and old, working hard every day, who care about their families. They want us to deal with the President's irresponsible behavior and lack of truthfulness in a fair and responsible manner, and they want us to do so as quickly as possible so that we can return to the important issues that affect their families.

The public also wants to rise above partisan self-interest and do what is best for the country, not Democrats, not Republicans, but as Americans. I am deeply concerned that this Congress will not meet this test today.

We have proposals in front of us. The issue is not whether or not to proceed, it is how to proceed. One proposal gives us the opportunity to come together in a bipartisan way, vote to begin an inquiry on the issues raised by the Starr report, and bring this inquiry to a conclusion this year. The Republican alternative is an open-ended, unchecked process that could continue throughout the next Congress, with no requirement to limit the issues formally presented by the special prosecutor.

In good conscience, I cannot support this process. It is not in the best interest of our country. It is not in the best interest of the families I represent to put our country in suspended animation for months and months when we have the ability here to bring this to a conclusion this year. I believe the American people deserve no less.

We must address this crisis fairly and responsibly and get back to the people's business. I implore my Republican colleagues to join us, to join with America in a process we can truly be proud of.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), a valued member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

(Mr. GOODLATTE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, in a short while this House will vote on whether or not to begin an impeachment inquiry against the President of the United States. A very serious matter. We will have a vote that will, I think, result in a substantial majority of the Members voting to proceed unhindered by artificial time constraints that simply subject the body to political gamesmanship of delay rather than expedition of the process. We will vote to allow ourselves to look at evidence regarding impeachable offenses from other credible sources, if those come before the body.

We should not engage in a fishing expedition, but we should exercise our constitutional responsibility in a full and open way, the same way we have always exercised that responsibility for every other impeachment inquiry in more than 200 years of American history. And we should do it in the way suggested by our former colleague, Representative Barbara Jordan, who said at another time, "It is the passing of passion, which must guide our deliberations, guide our debate and guide our decision."

The charges against the President include perjury, witness tampering and obstruction of justice. These are serious charges, charges that cannot be wiped away with a mere wink and a nod, an apology, or someone's interpretation of the latest opinion poll. The standard that the standard we teach our children, is that no person is above the law, including the President of the United States.

Amid the intense glare of the moment, we must keep in mind that what the House is considering today is not impeachment or articles of impeachment, nor is it about matters for which the President has apologized. Rather, the House must decide, in light of the documented allegations of serious crimes committed by the President, all of which the President has repeatedly denied, whether we should take the next step in the constitutional process by fully and completely investigating whether the charges are well-founded.

I urge you to take that step because it is the right thing to do. We must follow the truth wherever it leads.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), a valued member of his State's Supreme Court.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, the real question here today is not whether to begin an inquiry, but whether it will ever end. Whitewater, Travelgate, Filegate, it is really Rabbit Trail Gate that I am concerned about. We do not need Ken Starr squared in this chamber. The only way to force this Congress to get back to the real concerns of American families, like tax reform and Social Security reform, is to bring this matter to a prompt conclusion.

As a former Supreme Court justice, I will not defend the indefensible, but, by golly, there is a way to punish the lying without punishing the American people, who have clearly had enough of this and then some.

I believe that the standard that we apply should be no higher and no lower than we would apply to ourselves and that we have applied to the Speaker of the House in this very chamber. The Democratic amendment assures that that will happen. Without it, there is no assurance of a bipartisan pursuit of justice, of fairness, and an ultimate answer to the American people on this issue, and then getting back to business on their behalf.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON).

(Mr. WELDON of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, if we walk out the door to my right, in the middle on the minority side, and go left, we will come to a large marble staircase. At the top of that staircase is a large painting, a painting by Howard Chandler Christie entitled, "The Signing. The Constitution of the United States." And in the center of that portrait is Ben Franklin. It is reported that he walked out of the Constitutional Convention and a woman approached him and said, "What kind of government have you given us, Mr. Franklin?" And his response was: "A republic, if you can keep it."

The challenge before us today is: Can we keep it? Because a republic is a Nation that is guided by the rule of law. Not the whims of a dictator or a majority that can trample on the rights of a minority, but the rule of law. I urge you to give your vote in support of this resolution. I, like everyone in this chamber, would like to get this process behind us. The best way to do that is to support this resolution. It is the right thing to do, it is the right way for us to keep the republic, as Franklin asked us to do.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, a former member of the Committee on the Judiciary the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA) is no longer with us on the committee, but we still appreciate his legal insights. I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. The President's conduct in this matter was deeply disappointing to Americans. All of us have traveled down that path. There is no question of that. This House will proceed with an inquiry. That road we have also begun to travel. There is no question of that. But how we travel down that road is still subject to intense questioning. The majority would take us down this road that would offer no end in sight, that omits the rules of the road for its conduct, in essence open-ended, without conclusion.

times a day in every courthouse in the land. It is preceded by an oath that is taken by the judge to dispense justice, by the jurors to find the truth, by the bailiffs, by the clerk of court, by the sheriff, by the attorneys, the officers of the court. The judge tells the witness that it is not the witness stand pledging to tell the truth and nothing but the truth and does not, but commits perjury, then the entire process comes tumbling down.

The very core of the justice system on which we rely for justice for our families, for our churches, on our institutions, for the individual rights of every citizen of our country, all of that depends on that oath that is administered and followed, hopefully, by the witness who takes that stand.

We cannot afford to trivialize the possibility of perjury nor devalue its part in our democracy. That is why we must insist on a full and fair impeachment inquiry to determine whether the statements given under oath amount to perjury, number one, and whether that perjury, no matter what the subject matter is, is an impeachable offense. This is not about lying about sex. It is, rather, when under oath does one lie about sex. Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, very, very few people have argued their cases in the United States Supreme Court. Eleanor Holmes Norton, our delegate from the District of Columbia, has. I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

(Mrs. NORTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. NORTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, we have witnessed astonishing confusion in this House and in the Judiciary Committee concerning the requirements for impeachment. If these very issues were before a court of law, there might be wide disagreement on these facts, but everyone would agree on what the law is. In an impeachment proceeding, the law is the standard the House sets. We move today, Mr. Speaker, not by any standard, but by the seat of our pants. We are a constitutional democracy, not a parliamentary republic. A vote of no confidence in Great Britain requires no standard, but calls forth a new election. A vote for an impeachment inquiry in the United States requires a high standard, because it could nullify an election.

Mr. Speaker, the President’s misconduct may warrant an inquiry, but neither he nor any other American deserves an inquisition.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. FOSSELLA).

(Mr. FOSSELLA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOSSELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, it is with a heavy heart that I come before you today to support this resolution. I come not as a Republican, not as a New Yorker, but as a person who loves this great country and all its ideals and principles that it represents.

Earlier today, one of my colleagues said, I would like to bring the most divisive issue since the Vietnam War. While he may believe that to be true, I take strong exception with that, and I will tell my colleagues why. Men and women were sent overseas like every other war and military conflict since the Nation’s birth. The rule of law, the notions of personal freedom and individual liberty. And in the case before us today, we are asking a simple question: Did the President of the United States violate any of those rules of law that we cherish and that so many men and women have died for and are willing to die for at every point around the globe?

I do not want to be here today, like so many of my colleagues, but the generation of an unborn must look back on this day and this matter and this situation and see this as our finest hour, upholding what our Founding Fathers and every generation since has looked for and yearned for, the notion of freedom of liberty, the notion of the rule of law, and that each American cherish life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Reluctantly, I am here; I proudly, though, support this resolution.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK) who came to this body at the same time as I did, a distinguished lawyer in her own right.

(Mrs. MINK of Hawaii asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. Mr. Speaker, we have been besieged today on both sides of the aisle to follow the rules of law, to follow the Constitution. I ask each of you here to understand that the seat of which you occupy in this august Chamber has a constitutional limit which expires on January 3. What right have we to extend this investigation beyond our term of office? That is all that we are saying on this side of the aisle. There must be a limit. This investigation must end by the end of the year.

We also ask you to follow those points that are raised by the Ken Starr report, extended no further, limited to that. We also say that under the Constitution, we have to know what the rules are, exactly what is the standard of conduct which is impeachable. The Constitution says impeachable requires a definition of high crimes and misdemeanors and talks about treason and bribery.

The Judiciary Committee has not had 1 day of hearings to help this country to understand what constitutes an impeachable offense, so how can we vote today on an inquiry which has no standards, no rules of conduct, no time limit?

The President’s shameful conduct has brought humiliation to the Presidency, to his family, and to this nation. He has demeaned himself and the office to which he was elected. His conduct cannot be dismissed as a private matter. When he took office he took an oath to uphold the law. More important than that oath, is the role the President has as the moral and ethical leader of our country. What will our children think about their President? How will we answer their questions?

In this backdrop this House has now the constitutional duty to judge the facts and to make a determination whether “high crimes and misdemeanors” amounting to treason and bribery have been committed. Despite assurances by the Republican leadership that they would be fair in setting the rules for this inquiry I have concluded that their interests are primarily partisan.

They have the votes to do whatever they wish. Ultimately the American people will be the judge of whether they were fair. I, like most of my constituents who have called and written, would prefer that this matter be disposed of quickly. They are disgusted by the incessant media hype regarding the sexual details and just as it is for our children and our grandchildren. They want to spare their children from having to hear over and over again all the lurid details of the sexual conduct. They want the jokes to cease. The quickest way would be by censure without going through an inquiry. Unless we would assume all the narrative facts as described in the Starr report to be true and declare a punishment short of impeachment. It would be a public reprimand. It could also be a fine and forfeiture of pay or pension. Some of the women were among the punishments leveled on the Speaker at the beginning of this Congress.

We have had many discussions among minority members and it seemed to me that censure was the right course of action. I regret it could not be what we are discussing today.

The Republican majority have the votes to carry this forward to an inquiry. They want an open ended inquiry. Most of the public wants an inquiry. The public wants an end to this sordid matter. The public wants us to get back to the business of the nation.

The Democratic minority has suggested that if there must be an inquiry it be limited to the narrative contained in the Starr report and that the inquiry conclude at the end of this 105th Congress. This is a reasonable request. Why should newly elected members of the House be bound by an inquiry which they neither voted for nor participated in? The next Congress, the 106th, if the inquiry goes forward in its present form, has to elect a new Judiciary Committee and for all we know it may have many new members. The limitation to an inquiry by this Congress is both logical and practical and certainly is in keeping with the sentiment felt around the globe.

failed to do? Filegate, Travelgate, and Chinagate are all under investigation or have been. There is no need to raise these to the level of impeachment. If we must be saddled with an inquiry, it must be limited to the report of Kenneth Starr. The Democratic proposal is both fair, and reasonable. It would be accepted.

I shall vote against the Republican version because it leaves open the scope of this inquiry and allows it to go beyond the end of this Congress.

Furthermore, in my view the real debate we should be having in this House is what constitutes a “high crime and misdemeanor” within the meaning of the Constitution. Do the facts of this case, even if all true, warrant an impeachment? Are there judicial precedents? Unless and until we arrive to this determination, the rest of the inquiry is merely to sort out the sordid details, without even understanding whether even if true they mount to an impeachable offense.

Many of my constituents demand that I say whether I am for or against impeachment of this President. That’s like asking whether I am ready to drop to guillotine without knowing whether a capital offense deserving death has been committed.

Our system of justice is difficult to understand. For instance Oz Simpson was found “not guilty” of murder because guilt had to be found “beyond a reasonable doubt.” Yet in civil court where “the preponderance of evidence” rule is the guide OJ was found liable under the same facts.

Here the Constitution sets the narrow parameters of what an impeachable offense is. We must stick to that determination. First we have to agree what an impeachable offense is. Then we have to decide whether the facts at hand come up to that level of definition. I am the jury and the judge. Even if the往前 pending before my court a motion to dismiss the case. (Mr. STEARNS)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS).

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, we are on the threshold of a very simple decision here, a simple decision to decide whether or not to go forward on the constitutional duty. Let us stop the politics. Let us really talk about bipartisanship. Why can we not have adequate time to debate this important topic? The American people are watching. We know that this process is unfair. And wherever something is unfair, there is an old saying that goodness and justice shall prevail.

So I say if my colleagues keep going, their time will come.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Maine (Mr. BALDACCI).

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address the priorities of the American people. I rise today to address that the House of Representatives and, indeed, the country face today. I rise in support of the motion by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER) to substitute the motion by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and to have an impeachment inquiry, but to have a focused inquiry, and one that has an expeditious end to it so that the Congress, which has an obligation to do the people’s business, moves forward as quickly as possible and as fairly as possible. And most importantly, Mr. Speaker, I want to ensure that we are actively working to address the priorities of the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address the situation that the House of Representatives, and indeed, face today.

Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr has presented the House of Representatives with a referral and supporting documentation containing “substantial and credible information that President Clinton committed acts that may constitute grounds for an impeachment.” It is ironic that I have 20 seconds here. They want to severely limit the amount of debate here amongst our colleagues. The American people are watching. They want this politically motivated witchhunt to end. It is no coincidence that Mr. Starr brought his report 7 weeks before a national election.

Let us stop the politics. Let us really talk about bipartisanship. Why can we not have adequate time to debate this important topic? The American people are watching. We know that this process is unfair. And wherever something is unfair, there is an old saying that goodness and justice shall prevail.
This is an important matter. What President Clinton did was wrong, and he must be punished appropriately. However, instead of rushing to judgment, I believe we should pause to consider the long-term implications of our actions. I hope that the actions of this House will stand the test of time. I am concerned that they may not.

Today, I will support an inquiry that is limited in scope to the matters contained in the Independent Counsel's referral. (Should Mr. Starr refer additional matters, I would consider expanding the inquiry to include those matters at that time.) I do not believe that a wide-ranging resolution that will result in a re-examination of unrelated issues is in the best interest of our nation. The American people have rightly demanded that this matter be settled expeditiously, and there is no reason that cannot happen.

The House must define what constitutes an impeachable offense and determine whether or not the facts before us meet that definition. The potential impeachment and removal of the Chief Executive from office is a matter of considerable importance. We must carefully consider the President's conduct, and determine whether or not it rises to the level of "high crimes and misdemeanors." As we go forward, I believe we should explore whether another punishment, such as censure or re-buke, might be more appropriate to these circumstances. Above all, we must conduct our inquiry in a fair and deliberate manner that is worthy of the seriousness of the situation and that will not set precedents that will weaken the Office of the Presidency in the future.

Again, I support moving forward with a focused inquiry. I would encourage every member—Republican and Democrat—to support a focused inquiry that can bring this difficult situation to a close.

But I also want to recognize there are many other important matters facing our nation. Each week as I travel throughout Maine, I consistently hear from people that they are tired of hearing about the Starr investigation. They want to talk about Social Security, education, health care and other issues that affect their day to day lives. The Congress has an obligation to do the people's business. I want to move this process forward as quickly and as fairly as possible. Most importantly, I want to ensure that we are actively working to address the priorities of the American people.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER.)

(Mr. FILNER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, it is this Congress that is subverting the constitutional process. Vote for the resolution of the Committee on the Judiciary. Let us follow the procedures laid down in the Constitution, making certain that we have a fair country, a just country, a country: providing health care and education, making certain that we have a fair country, a just country, a country, let us talk about the issues facing the American people.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH.)

(Mr. HAYWORTH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in rebuttal, but strong support of the resolution offered by the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. It is disappointing to see this debate degenerate into a cacophony of cat calls.

Honest people can have honest disagreements. But I take strong exception, Mr. Speaker, to the notion that somehow this is unconstitutional. Quite the contrary. This follows the Constitution, Incumbent upon every Member of this House today is the most important responsibility of the responsibility of a declaration of war because we have to begin the process to determine the fitness for office of our Chief Executive.

There is no reason to let this degenerate into cat calls or into the spin cycle. Let us follow the Constitution, let us follow the procedures laid down by the Constitution, let us not confuse the issue, trying to superimpose ethics rules of this House on the constitutional process. Vote for the inquiry of impeachment.

Mr. CONYERS. With apologies again to my colleagues, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEEKS) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH.)

Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEEKS.)

(Mr. MEEEKS of New York asked and was given permission to revise and extend and his remarks.)

Mr. MEEEKS of New York. Mr. Speaker, this resolution does not allow us to even set standards. When we do not have standards, what we become is a modern-day kangaroo court.

I was arrested myself the other day, and I was promptly arrested for the immoral practices of the Supreme Court in hiring minority law clerks. I knew that I had a right to a speedy trial. I knew the elements of the crime that were against me. That is not here.

If we support another punishment, a threat to justice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

My fellow Americans, this is not about just justice for President Clinton. This is about justice for all of the American people.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH.)

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, this is clearly my saddest day as a Member of this body.

As my colleagues know, we have heard a lot of protests so far, and the protest that there is no politics here. Well, know something? People are protesting that protest a little too much. It is not believable.

The reality is that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, they cannot impeach Bill Clinton, but the truth is they can impeach a ham sandwich. That is the reality of the situation, and the American people understand it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 40 seconds to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY.)

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, there are strong beliefs on this issue on both sides. I believe strongly that many of the Republicans think and believe that this is about perjury and think it is about lying, and I think Democrats think that this is about a sexual affair. And in truth: in some ways both are right.

The question before us is whether or not we believe as a people and as a Congress, if these issues rise to a impeachable offense.

President Clinton did wrong. He admitted it, he said he was sorry, he asked for our forgiveness. Let us give him our forgiveness, let him run this country, let us talk about the issues that are important to the people of this country: providing health care and education, making certain that we have a fair country, a just country, a country that looks out for the poor.

That is the challenge before the American people.

That is the challenge before the Congress.

Let us meet that challenge and put this inquiry behind us, behind the American people.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON.)

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, today's vote is not about impeachment. Today's vote is about the search for truth. This vote that our grand-children will ask us about many years from now our constituents have long forgotten us, many years from now when our terms of office have been behind us for many years. They will look up and say:

"Why did you vote the way you did?"

Mr. Speaker, I think most Members are going to rise to this occasion and not vote by the polls, not vote by the parties and certainly not by the personalities, but vote for a higher reason: that question of does truth matter? What is right? What is wrong? Are we a Nation of laws? And do we want to affirm and uphold these laws? Do we see that as our constitutional oath of office?

I believe that when the gavel is sounded, most of us, Democrats and Republicans, will affirm that we do uphold the values, that we will move towards the search for truth, not happily jumping into it, but soberly uplifting our constitutional oaths of office.

Mr. Speaker, I have a series of unanimous consent requests to revise and extend remarks, and I yield such time as they may consume to: the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DeLauro), the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. McCARTHY), the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Ms. CHRISTIAN-GREEN), the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Ms. CLAYTON), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Lee), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD), the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELAZQUEZ), the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. FURSE), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD), the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY), the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN), the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ), and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

(Ms. DELAUNO asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAUNO. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I have been denied the opportunity to join this most important constitutional debate, and I rise to announce my intention to vote against an impeachment resolution and in support of fairness, the Constitution and America.

That's not asked Mr. Speaker, today the Angels are crying.

Today will be a historic day, but what kind of history will we be making?

If the vote goes as it is projected to and the resolution from the Judiciary Committee is passed in its present form, then Mr. Speaker, today the elected representatives of the people will in doing so defy the people, ignore their pleas that enough is enough, and instead vote to proceed with an ignominious impeachment inquiry that is based solely on partisan politics and not in or on our common interest or that of the state.

In doing so, given the nature of the charges which do not come even close to meeting the standards for impeachment, and having refused to limit the scope of the time, or purged in a fair manner, it is clear Mr. Speaker that the intent is to destroy President Clinton, and the Democratic chances for victory in November. It clearly has nothing to do with protecting the state.

My colleagues, I rise to say to you that what you are proposing to do will probably not destroy Bill Clinton although it may affect the election outcome, but what it will do is destroy the institution of the Presidency for future generations, it will undermine the Constitution that is there to protect the least of us, it will destabilize the economy that so many have benefited from, it will weaken our military efforts abroad, and it will damage the integrity of this House.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Angels are crying today.

Mr. Speaker, all the members of the Congressional Black Caucus asked for was fairness. That was not agreed to because it would have dictated that there be no inquiry at all. The Democratic caucus, knowing that a motion to proceed with the inquiry would pass, then asked for a legitimate fair focused process. This too is today being denied, Mr. Speaker, and in doing so it is the request of the American people that is being denied.

Today history will be made, let us proceed fairly and vote on the dictates of conscience not politics. Otherwise, I assure you, Mr. Speaker we will all regret that this day ever dawned.

(Mrs. CLAYTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this very unfair resolution and in support of a fair resolution, the Democrat alternative.

Mr. Speaker, today, as we consider this impeachment Inquiry Resolution, each must ask the question, what does the Constitution require of us? Impeachment of a President is really a greater punishment of the people. When we impeach a President, we frustrate the will of the people. That is why we must consider this matter with great care and probe deeply within our own conscience.

That is why we must have standards. In the sixty impeachment proceedings since 1789, no Congress has ever impeached a President. Two Presidents have faced impeachment, Andrew Johnson, 1868, and Richard Nixon in 1974. Johnson was acquitted. Nixon resigned before trial.

The Constitution sets out what constitutes an "Impeachable Offense," as "Treason, Bribery, or other High Crimes and Misdemeanors." We must ask ourselves, do we believe this President has committed "treason," or any offense like treason?

Treason, attempting by overt acts to overthrow the government, or betraying the government into the hands of a foreign power? We must ask ourselves, can it be said that this President committed "bribery," attempting to influence the behavior of a public official?

Neither the Starr Report nor the Shippers Charges, list treason or bribery among the claimed offenses. So, what does "other high crimes and misdemeanors," mean?

We must not substitute our personal view of an impeachable offense for the Constitution's definition. And, what of the people's business? What of education, health care, small farmers, the global economy, and Social Security? Each must ask, in seeking to do our duty with this matter, have we done our duty for the people? When this day closes, each must ask, have I moved this Nation forward? Have I met my appointed task? Have I carried out my responsibility? Have I done the deeds for which I was elected?

(Ms. LEE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)
Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I am in strong opposition to any impeachment inquiry, and hopefully we will move forward though in a fair and speedy process.

(Ms. ESHOO asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the resolution believing that in the national interest, in the national interest, that we have a brief and critical hearing.

(Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this unfair resolution.

(Ms. VELÅZQUEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. VELÅZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this undemocratic, unconstitutional resolution.

(Ms. FURSE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. FURSE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this unfair Republican resolution and in favor of the fair Democratic alternative.

(Ms. MILLERED-MCDONALD asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. MILLERED-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in unequivocal opposition to this unfair practice.

(Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the Hyde resolution and in favor of the Democratic amendment.

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I stand in opposition to the Hyde resolution and in support of the Democratic alternative.

As a woman and a Democrat, I am embarrassed by the President's conduct. What he did was wrong.

The very idea of considering impeaching a duly-elected President and removing him from office is one of the most serious and weighty tasks of the U.S. Congress. Since the Independent Counsel's report was delivered to the steps of Capitol Hill, I have thoroughly and carefully reviewed the allegations. But since that day, we have also seen important constitutional questions answered with partisanship, compromise destroyed by politics, and legal discussions replaced by political attacks. The Republican leadership has allowed desire for political gain to distort this investigation, with little regard for the harm done to American families.

The muddling and dirt digging has gone too far and lasted too long. It has hurt our country, damaged this Congress, and harmed our families. We should be focusing on education, Social Security, and health care. Our nation cannot endure an inquiry that goes on and on and on.

(Ms. MILLERED-MCDONALD asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. MILLERED-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this unfair Republican resolution and in favor of the Democratic amendment.

(Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this unfair Republican resolution and in support of the Democratic alternative proposal because it is fair, focused, and finite.

(Ms. BROWN of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise against this pre-Halloween witchhunt.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to this impeachment inquiry resolution. We have lost our senses in this Congress! This proposed inquiry is the result of a well-planned witch hunt. For years the nation has been forced to live with daily news articles aimed at discrediting the President and the First Lady. The nation is weary and the world is in crisis! We must end this insanity now!

Our Constitution is at stake; our democratic system is at stake. Will the Congress overturn the will of the people in electing our President? The report to the Congress on this matter is not about high crimes or misdemeanors against the United States of America—the only grounds for impeachment.

We do not need to waste more time on this issue. Every year 1 million more people lose health care and our education system is collapsing. This leadership refuses to address the important issues of working people, children, and the nation's oppressed. I urge my colleagues to end this nightmare now! (Mr. MENENDEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MENENDEZ. In view of the partisan, arbitrary and capricious limitation of time, I rise in opposition to the Republican proposal that limits time but does not limit scope.

(Mr. MENENDEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, the issue before the House of Representatives today is not whether the President's behavior should be condoned, nor is it whether the House should proceed with an inquiry to determine if this behavior amounts to an impeachable offense. I believe that the President's behavior was wrong and indefensible, and I believe an inquiry is necessary. The question before us today is what form this inquiry should take. Should it be an open-ended process as provided in the underlying motion H. Res. 581 that allows the Judiciary Committee to investigate anything it wants for as long as it wants, as this resolution would authorize, or should the inquiry be limited in scope to the allegations of the Independent Counsel's referral and brought to resolution by the end of the year, as the Boucher motion to recommit would do?

Mr. BENTSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BENTSEN. That is why I will vote against the Republican resolution. With no limits and no guidelines, the Republican resolution gives the majority party carte-blanche to do still more dirt digging, more snooping, and more probing into personal lives and intimate details. Quite simply, the Republican investigation risks careening out-of-control dragging our kids and our families down with it.

I will vote for the Democratic alternative proposal because it is fair, focused, and finite. While it does allow Congress to expand its investigation should new facts come to light, it first defines an intense, st definition of abuse, specifies the scope of the investigation, and establishes a concrete time frame. Without these guidelines and the time limit, we will never be able to get this ordeal behind us.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise against this pre-Halloween witchhunt.

Mr. MENENDEZ. View in the partisan, arbitrary and capricious limitation of time, I rise in opposition to the Republican proposal that limits time but does not limit scope.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, the issue before the House of Representatives today is not whether the President's behavior should be condoned, nor is it whether the House should proceed with an inquiry to determine if this behavior amounts to an impeachable offense. I believe that the President's behavior was wrong and indefensible, and I believe an inquiry is necessary. The question before us today is what form this inquiry should take. Today, I am voting for the motion to recommit because I believe the House should fully and fairly investigate this matter, but also bring it to a conclusion so we can move on and address the critical challenges facing our nation, including the most serious international economic crisis in half a century. If the motion to recommit were adopted and the Congress then begin with an in-depth inquiry into the referral of the Independent Counsel. The nation cannot afford, and the American people do not want, an open-ended, boundless, limitless inquiry as contained in the Hyde resolution that would consume all the time and energy of our national leaders. How long would this process go on? One year, two years? I fear the Congress will get little, if anything, done if we reject the Boucher motion and adopt the Hyde motion, as underscored by the recent track record of inaction on the budget, the Patients Bill of Rights, recapitalization of the International Monetary Fund, and other critical issues. My constituents tell me that they want this matter resolved quickly and fairly, and that is what I am voting to do today.

The resolution I am voting for today fulfills the House's obligations under the Constitution and the Independent Counsel law. It establishes a process by which the Judiciary Committee would first thoroughly and comprehensively review the constitutional standard for impeachment of the President. If the Committee determined that the Independent Counsel’s referral could constitute grounds for impeachment, the Committee would then move to an inquiry stage in which it would fully and completely determine whether to recommend to the House that grounds exist for the House to exercise its constitutional power to impeach the President. If the Committee did not recommend impeachment to the House, this resolution would allow the Judiciary Committee to adopt an alternative resolution to recommend no action at all. It is also important to note that this resolution, while limiting the scope of the current inquiry to the Independent Counsel’s referral, recognizes that the House would have to consider—as required under the Independent Counsel statute—any additional referral subsequently forwarded by the Office of the Independent Counsel. In short, this resolution neither forecloses a broader inquiry should one be warranted, nor does it presume that one may be needed, as the majority's resolution would do.

That said, I believe it is terribly important, given the circumstances, that Congress should seek to determine whether there is serious injury to the system of Government. But this does not mean that we should have an open-ended inquisition. The alternative resolution does not preclude investigating other matters when they are referred. It only means that for now, we should investigate what Judge Starr has referred to the Congress and proceed expeditiously and, above all, fairly.

Mr. Speaker, we should remember that the Framers of the Constitution did not see impeachment as punishment. Impeachment is a vehicle by which to remove a threat to the nation's laws and to restore its political and legal health. We cannot let our collective anger get the better of our constitution. If it is our anger that we want to express, we have several options and we can debate those at a later date. But we have a very serious...
Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I think that we all should understand that the American public are not just going to be mere spectators in this masquerade, since we are getting close to Halloween, I guess we want to get there earlier, of a legitimate inquiry. This Congress has conducted dozens upon dozens of investigations of Bill Clinton and his administration. Not one of them would any objective person say has been fair or nonpartisan, and this will not be. But if we got to impeach--from some of the evidence that he is in office, there will be economic consequences for the American people. Let them in on this big secret that they will not just be spectators if we carry on with this charade.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Tierney).

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Judiciary was asked on September 11 to review the communication received on September 9 to determine whether sufficient grounds exist to recommend to the House that an impeachment inquiry be commenced. We did not ask to go beyond what was in that report, but this is what the other parties seek to do.

We asked them to define the standard of what was an impeachable offense and measure what was in that report, and they have not done that on the committee. This was to be done before we got here today. Now we need a fair process, Mr. Speaker. Let us hope we can get on with that type of process.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Green).

Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose the open ended investigation and support a limited one.

Mr. Speaker, the overturning of an election in a democracy should not be taken lightly. Our country’s history in presidential impeachment inquiries is limited due to the seriousness of overturning an election.

The President’s conduct cannot be defended, and I have not done so. Like most Americans, I believe the President last January and February asked the American people to accept a constitutional standard for which he may properly be impeached. The President’s ability to discharge his constitutional duties as vetoing legislation that he considers contrary to the nation’s interest is fundamental to the American structure of government.

It is essential to the separation of powers. It is essential to the President’s ability to discharge such constitutional duties as vetoing legislation that he considers contrary to the nation’s interests. And it is essential to governance whenever the White House belongs to a party different from that which controls the Capitol. The lower the threshold for impeachment, the weaker the President. If the President could be removed for any conduct of which the American public disapprove, it would be improper to have any element of our democracy—the President’s independence from Congress—be destroyed.

It is not enough, therefore, that Congress strongly disapprove of the President’s conduct. Under the Constitution, the President cannot be impeached unless he has committed “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” Some of the charges laid out in the Independent Counsel’s report fall so far short of this high standard that they strain good faith, for example, the charge that the President gave false testimony to the FBI. The FBI informed the President repeatedly about the immunity he had. He chose to ignore the immunity he had and be voluntarily or pressed a debatable privilege claim that was later judicially rejected. These “offenses” are not remotely impeachable.

With respect to other allegations, the report requires careful consideration of the kind of misconduct that renders a President constitutionally unfit to remain in office.

Neither history nor legal definitions provide a precise list of high crimes and misdemeanors. Reasonable people have differed in interpreting these definitions. It seems clear that the proper interpretation of the Impeachment Clause must begin by recognizing treason and bribery as core or paradigmatic instances from which others—other high Crimes and Misdemeanors” is to be extrapolated. The constitutional standard for impeachment would be very different if, instead of treason and bribery, different offenses had been specified. The clause does not read, “Arson, Larceny, or other High Crimes and Misdemeanors,” implying that any significant crime might be an impeachable offense. Nor does it read, “misleading the People, Breach of Campaign Promises, or other Misdemeanors,” implying that any serious violation of public confidence might be impeachable. Nor does it read, “Adultery, Forcibination, or other High Crimes and Misdemeanors,” implying that any conduct deemed to reveal serious moral lapses might be an impeachable offense.

When a President commits treason, he exercises his executive powers, or uses information obtained by virtue of his executive power, to aid an enemy nation. If a President is bribed, he exercises or offers to exercise his executive powers in exchange for corrupt gain. Both acts involve the criminal exercise of presidential powers, converting those awful powers into an instrument either of enemy interests or of purely personal gain. We believe that the critical, distinctive feature of treason and bribery is grossly derelict exercise of official power (or, in the case of bribery to obtain or retain office, of the pursuit of official power). Nonindictable conduct might rise to this level. For example, a President might be properly impeached if, as a result of drunkenness, he repeatedly and repeatedly misused executive authority.

The misconception of which the President is accused does not involve the derelict exercise of executive powers. Most of this misconception does not involve the exercise of executive powers at all. If the President committed perjury regarding his sexual conduct, this would not rise to the exercise of presidential power as such. If he concealed evidence, this misdeed too involved no exercise of executive authority. By contrast, if he sought wrongfully to place someone in a job at the Pentagon, or lied to subordinates hoping they would repeat his false statements, these acts could have involved a wrongful use of presidential influence, but we cannot believe that the President’s alleged conduct of this nature amounts to the grossly derelict exercise of executive power sufficient for impeachment.

Perjury and obstructing justice can without doubt be impeachable offenses. A President who ordered the Federal Bureau of Investigation to obstruct an investigation would have criminally exercised his presidential powers. Moreover, covering up a crime furthers or aids the underlying crime. Thus a President who committed perjury to cover up his subordinates’ criminal exercise of executive authority would also have committed an impeachable offense. But if the underlying offense were adulatory, calling the President to testify could not create an offense justifying impeachment where there was none before.

It goes without saying that lying under oath is a serious offense. But even if the House of Representatives had the constitutional authority to impeach for any instance of perjury or obstruction of justice, a responsible House would not exercise this awesome power on the facts alleged in this case. The House of Representatives has not convinced us that a prosecution of the President’s conduct, like a prosecutor’s power to indict, is discretionary. This power must be exercised not for partisan advantage, but only when circumstances genuinely warrant it. The enormous price that the nation will pay in governance and stature if its President is put through a long, public, voyeuristic trial. The American people understand that the need to demonstrate a political wisdom that has held the Constitution in place for two centuries when, even after the publication of Mr. Starr’s report, with all its extraordinary revelations, they oppose impeachment for the offenses alleged therein.

We do not say that a “private” crime could never be so heinous as to warrant impeachment. Thus Congress might responsibly determine that a President who had committed murder in office, or who induced an individual who by the law of the land cannot be permitted to remain at large, need not be permitted to remain President. But if certain demands immediate removal of a President from office because of their unseemly heinousness, the offenses alleged against the President in the Independent Counsel referrals among them. Short of heinous criminality, impeachment demands convincing evidence of grossly derelict exercise of official authority. In our judgment, Mr. Starr’s report contains no such evidence.

I urge a yes vote for a limited and specific inquiry into the open-ended, partisan Judiciary Committee inquiry. Our nation is more important than an individual or political party.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONyers) has 81⁄4 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) has 8 minutes remaining.

MR. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), then I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. CLEMENT), then I yield 20 seconds to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS), our deputy whip of the House, if you please.

MR. SPEAKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

MRS. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, the people of the United States are wise and fair. They understand that the President’s conduct, the President’s lies, the President’s behavior was wrong and immoral and reprehensible. But they are wise.
October 8, 1998

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE

polling data, and reality. It will all converge. When we have that, perhaps this will end up being nothing more than the sound that is made when a leader falls off of his pedestal. Perhaps it will be a lot more than that.

But the only way we can get to this quickly is to vote for the Committee on the Judiciary resolution and put this work behind us.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL).

(Mr. DINGELL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, in the beginning I want to make two things clear. First I do not defend the President’s actions in the Lewinsky matter. He says they are wrong, I agree. Second, the matter of the impeachment process must be conducted in a manner which is fair, expeditious, and completely open.

Do these proceedings offered us in the Republican proposal meet these tests? Clearly, No.

In less than one hour Democrats are supposed to be able to discuss questions which rank in Constitutional importance with the declaration of war—the impeachment of a President and setting aside a presidential election, in which the people chose their President is before us.

We function under a gag rule. We are denied opportunity for the people to have this matter properly discussed in their Congress.

In one hour. Having Minority members to discuss a great Constitutional question, impeachment of a President—unlimited time to be spent on an investigation, unlimited personnel to be deployed, no limits as to money to be spent, no limits on the breadth and sweep of the investigation. All to be done under a gag rule.

At issue here is not whether the House will convene an impeachment proceeding. Before us is whether it will be fair, open and expeditious.

We have the referral of Mr. Starr. In that document he says he has put forward all information then available to justify impeachment.

I note Mr. Starr has spent over four years, forty million dollars, the time of scores and possibly hundreds of Federal law enforcement officers and other government employees and the full authority of the Federal Government.

I also note that another prior Special Prosecutor, Starr’s predecessor, spent two years and $20 million, and found no wrong doing.

Mr. Starr, then, finds, after prodigious effort and expenditure of funds, the substance reported his referral.

There he finds nothing now, except improper sexual activity, on which he reports in exhaustive, and in nauseating detail.

I insisted that all this be published in full, since it is regrettably the people’s business.

If you talk to the people, they are telling you they want the matter brought to a speedy end.

It can be ended speedily, and it should be. It will not take more than until year’s end to go through it the full of Mr. Starr’s referral, in whatever detail the Judiciary Committee wishes.

If they find more, or wish to inquire further, the Judiciary Committee can return and with proper request procure such additional authority as they require to carry out their function. No one will gainsay them.

I have supported this inquiry until now. I believe such inquiry should go forward, properly.

I do not however believe we should have an unlimited inquiry without constraints, and with an unlimited budget.

The Republican resolution authorizes a partisan witch hunt, not a responsible inquiry.

Vote against the partisan Republican resolution, vote for the Minority’s resolution for a proper inquiry, by expeditious and open.

The people are watching.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

(Stenholm asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of and encourage bipartisan support of both the motion to recommit and final passage.

In spite of the countless words which already have been spoken and written about the vote before us today, I feel compelled to clarify what this vote is and what it is not.

First, this is not a vote about guilt or innocence, primarily of President Clinton as, of course, has represented Kenneth Starr. While Members cannot be expected to be void of personal opinion, I believe those who already have made public declarations of guilt or innocence in this case have been both premature and negligent in their Constitutional responsibilities.

Second, this is not a vote about punishment or the specific punishment of impeachment. Unfortunately, the media frenzy about this action has confused many citizens who believe the House is voting today for or against impeachment. We are not.

At this point, it is entirely unpredictable what the ultimate outcome of this process will be. What is clear is that the Constitutional standard of impeachable offenses is a high and serious one.

Third, this vote is not about the election coming up in less than four weeks. I have been amused by reporters quizzing me in the past week about the degree to which political concerns enter into my votes today. I would like to know how they think any vote has a political advantage in a District, such as mine, which is split right down the middle on each question of impeachment, resignation, censure or discontinued all action. No, my votes today are not about politics and re-election.

What we are voting on is of the highest, most serious nature. We must cast votes which can stand through time, votes which we can defend today, next week, next year, and for the rest of our lives. Every member must not only feel free to vote his or her conscience, as has been mentioned several times today, but they must feel obligated to do so.

For me, that means doing all that I can to ensure this process is then abused with partisan gamesmanship.

Such abuse, by either side, has no place in this matter.

I support both of the motions before us today and encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to do likewise.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

(Stenholm asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I support the motion to recommit, and I am opposed to the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, today’s debate and the decision to move ahead with an inquiry of impeachment is a decision that we must address and which has taken four long weeks to make its way to the House Floor. Personally, I am deeply saddened by the President’s conduct, and I am time for us to move forward.

Looking into the details of the President’s personal life is not an issue with which Congress should need to be involved. This is a view that many of our constituents share. We have heard and read too much on this matter. We know what we need to know, perhaps even more than we should know in regards to some details. It is time to move forward as expeditiously as possible so that we can return to the business of our nation and the people’s concerns.

While we debate this resolution and move forward with an inquiry, other pressing matters that affect the everyday lives of our constituents go unanswered. Today, at this late date, the federal government is operating without a budget; funding legislation for most government agencies and programs remains in a Congressional gridlock; the President’s initiative to improve our children’s education by lowering classroom size is ignored; the tobacco settlement is blocked by special interests; and there is no time to address the growing health costs of the President and the nation year posting for special interest tax breaks and anti-environmental riders. It is time for this House to move forward and address the issues that matter, helping the American people to help themselves.

I support the Democratic alternative to conduct the inquiry. This Democratic alternative limits the scope of the inquiry to the report submitted by Mr. Starr and establishes a workable time frame, requiring Committee action to be completed by the end of December. The Office of Independent Counsel (OIC) issued a report on September 11 with specific allegations. We are compelled to review this report and the supporting documentation to determine their validity. What we must not do is to adapt a resolution of inquiry which will hand over to Starr agenda of continual referrals upon the Starr agenda of continual referrals upon this House essentially subverting the Legislative Branch controlling the work and agenda of Congress to their end, the people’s house controlled.

This Democratic alternative is a sound and fair framework which sets out an orderly process to assess whether the allegations meet the test of the Constitution first, and then and only then to proceed to determine the validity of such allegations.

Mr. Speaker, the American people are divided about what steps should be taken on this matter. Some have called for the impeachment of the President, others favor censure, while still others believe that the President’s personal life should not be the concern of Congress. Regardless of their views, however, the American people want this issue resolved and put behind us as quickly as possible. The Democratic alternative best meets that goal by establishing the proper scope and time frame to being this matter to a deliberate and orderly conclusion.

Consideration of any impeachment resolution or inquiry is a serious matter. It is a Constitutional responsibility which I take very seriously. However, acting responsibly should not be equated with an open-ended, unfocused inquiry. What supposes that this inquiry has been submitted by the OIC and is already available to the Committee and to the House. Requiring the Judiciary Committee to act by the end of November is a responsible time frame which allows more than enough time to consider the charges and to make a final recommendation. If new information comes to light or more time is required, that request could be accommodated at that point in time.

Any inquiry should be focused solely on the matters submitted by the Independent Counsel Starr. Mr. Starr and his staff had over 4½ years and $44 million to investigate virtually every aspect of the President’s life and to track down every rumor in Washington, D.C., Arkansas and who knows where else. The result of that exhaustive investigation is the Independent Counsel’s report and the boxes and boxes of information that he has submitted to the House. The extraordinary report, which repeatedly and redundantly outlines the allegations in vivid detail, has been publicly available for a month and spread across the land.

This report should be the sum and substance of our focus. The OIC report is where the matter should end and not be the opening for an impeachment inquiry that rehashes every rumor of every rumor spread over the past six years of the President’s term. In itself, the OIC report justifies this limitation. If after nearly five years and $45 million, the OIC did not forward the information to the House, it should not now be raised. Nor should Mr. Starr put this nation through endless impeachment inquiries and debate with each new focus or chapter in his investigation, stringing this matter out even further. Starr has had an opportunity to put his best case forward to Congress and the American people to help themselves.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the claim today of nonpartisan conduct is laudable but actions speak louder than words. This resolution leads this House down a path of partisan inquiry and hearings, no limits on the topics or scope, no time or date to complete. Good intentions and claims of good faith should be backed up with text and within context. Justice delayed is justice denied and this process is delayed. The American people want and deserve a break from this constant drum beat of investigations and leaks. This Congressional House, the People’s Body, should get back to the business which the people sent us to address.

I rise in opposition to the majority resolution. I ask unanimous consent that all Members may revise and extend their remarks on House Resolution 581.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this never-ending impeachment inquiry resolution. The American people want and deserve to have their rights to test the Constitution first, and then and only then to proceed to determine the validity of such allegations.

The President has had an opportunity to put his best case forward to Congress and the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. Gallegly).

Mr. GALLEGLY. I rise in opposition to this never-ending impeachment inquiry resolution.
dishonesty created a breach of trust between the President and the American people, which I believe calls into question his ability to be an effective leader.

The President’s alleged actions in trying to conceal the Monica Lewinsky affair may constitute an obstruction of justice. In addition, his deposition in the Paula Jones case, along with his testimony before the federal grand jury, may be construed as perjury.

There is no doubt this is a serious matter and a very difficult decision that should be made based on the facts. This rises above partisan politics. This is about doing the right thing for our Republic.

For these reasons, I believe a thorough and complete investigation not limited by time and scope should be entered into by the House of Representatives.

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COSTELLO).

(Mr. COSTELLO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, the House today undertakes one of the most serious deliberations facing this Congress—whether to proceed with a process to impeach President Clinton. The report issued to this Congress by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr—and the thousands of pages of additional information containing related information—have provided Members of Congress with an opportunity to review the actions taken by the President and make an initial judgment.

There is information in the Starr Report that is very disturbing. I am greatly disappointed in the President’s behavior and his affair with Monica Lewinsky. He has misled the American people by at first denying the affair and then adorning his transgressions. He has misled his family and the people who work for him by having them defend his denials. He has brought tremendous shame on the Presidency and the White House.

As disappointed as I am with President Clinton, I am also disappointed and disturbed by the conduct of the Independent Counsel, Kenneth Starr. I believe his investigation has produced leaks to the media which under our grand jury secrecy laws are illegal. I believe his investigators have intimidated witnesses and used questionable tactics to obtain information. Finally, his report is replete with salacious and sensationalized information which has disgraced the American people. I believe much of his investigation has been aimed only at embarrassing and weakening the President.

The question facing this Congress is whether the President’s affairs with Monica Lewinsky merits his impeachment. The Independent Counsel has spent almost five years and $50 million investigating the President. He has included what he believes to be the most serious allegations in his report; I have read this report and have taken the material from the White House and I have examined other relevant information sent to Congress by Kenneth Starr.

I have come to the judgment that the House should proceed with an impeachment inquiry not because of any specific issue but because this is an occasion when the Judiciary Committee has before it the product of the Independent Counsel. The Members of the Committee can finish their work and come to a judgment by the end of this year. If it means the Members of the House have to come back after Election Day to vote on a resolution of impeachment, then that is our duty.

I intend to vote for such a motion today on the House floor, and against the Hyde Resolution offered by the Republican Majority. The Republicans have crafted a resolution which includes no time limits, no boundaries, no scope. If their resolution is passed, we are looking at months and perhaps years of further investigation. In their partisan attempt to embarrass the President and make this an election issue, they have refused to allow an alternative to their resolution and permit only two hours of debate. It is an insult to our democratic process. Mr. Speaker, this investigation will become more partisan and political as time goes on.

There is much at stake as we consider this inquiry. We are facing a global fiscal crisis, a potential conflict in Central Europe involving Serbia and Albania, and continued problems here at home. The world is anticipating the leadership only America can provide. Are we prepared to squander the political process and leadership of the United States of America to further investigate the President’s extramarital affair? Will millions of Americans continue to live in poverty and without health insurance as Congress wages millions on more Lewinsky hearings?

Mr. Speaker, I yield time to bring this investigation to a close. The American people want us to weigh the evidence presented in the Starr Report, allow the Judiciary Committee to go ahead and make a judgment by the end of the year, and recommend a decision to the full House. The House should then vote and get this matter behind us, so we can turn as a nation to address those other issues which are calling out for our focused leadership. That is why I intend to vote to reject the open-ended Republican resolution, and for the motion to set specific time limits and scope so we as a nation can bring this matter to an end.

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KIND).

(Mr. KIND asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the resolution offered by Mr. HYDE to begin an inquiry into allegations against the President of the United States. This decision is not easy, but I believe that it is in the best interest of our nation. It is time to bring closure to this painful time in our history by conducting an open, fair and bipartisan inquiry to determine the facts in this case. Passage of the resolution will put in place a process to resolve this matter and allow Congress to move on and deal with the more pressing issues of the Country.

I am not entirely pleased with the resolution we have before us. I would like to see some of the provisions placed in this matter does not drag out for an extended period of time. That is why I also support the Democratic amendment which places reasonable time limits on the process while allowing for an extension of the inquiry if new information is presented to the House. That is why I believe that a hearing is needed to conduct a thorough hearing. There comes a time, however, when we must rely on the promises of members who are leading this effort. Chairman HYDE has promised that he will make every effort to finish this inquiry before the end of this year. Chairman HYDE is a man of great integrity and I am placing my trust in him and his commitment to conduct this inquiry in a fair, non-partisan and quick manner.

With passage of this resolution, we are embarking upon a very important Constitutional exercise that has seldom been used before. This is one of the greatest Constitutional responsibilities that members of Congress face. We must determine whether the conduct of the President rises to the level to justify removal from office and the paralyzation of our country for an extended period of time.

As a former prosecutor, I placed my faith and trust in the law and the due process law. We have a process in our Constitution which allow the Judiciary Committee to conduct an inquiry about allegations which may rise to an impeachable offense. I am willing to give the majority party, at this time, the benefit of the doubt that they can conduct this inquiry in a fair, quick and non-partisan manner. I believe that if we are going to have any credible closure to this investigation, it has to happen in a bipartisan manner.

My hope is based on the fact that when we believe this is extremely important Constitutional responsibility, all members will make decisions based on what they feel are in the best interests of this country and for future generations rather than short term partisan gain. That is what the American people expect us to do.

The American people will decide the fate of this President, and ultimately, they will be the judge and jury of the process we are about to embark upon. The authors of the Constitution placed the power of impeachment in the House of Representatives because it is the people’s House. Members of Congress must have the support of the public before we take action to overturn a national election.

I support this resolution with the confidence that Chairman HYDE will keep to his promise of conducting a fair, non-partisan and quick inquiry. Not only is the integrity and credibility of the Presidency at stake, but so is the integrity and credibility of the U.S. Congress. In the final analysis, our children and grandchildren will know, years from now, whether we did our Constitution and this great nation proud.

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentleman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER).

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)
The Speaker. On this rollcall, 423 Members have recorded their presence by electronic device, a quorum. Under the rule, further proceedings under the call are dispensed with.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I object that all Members of the House were not given enough time to speak.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The call was taken by electronic device, and the following Members responded to their names: [Roll No. 496]

Weigh on the Members' hearts for this path back to dignity. I want that to be an inquiry. No, let me define what is it that we stand for.

Mr. Speaker, I just want Members to know that in my view, the American people have a deep sense of right and wrong, of fairness and privacy. I believe that the Kenneth W. Starr investigation may have offended those sensibilities. Who are we in the Congress? What is it that we stand for?

Do we want to have prosecutors with unlimited powers, accountable to no one, who will spend a million dollars investigating a person's sex life, is that the precedent we are setting, who then hurl those charges before grand juries, every person that they have known of the opposite sex, every person that they had contact with, and then record and release videos to the public of the grand jury questioning the most private aspects of one's personal life?

Please, I beg the Members not to denigrate this very important process in Article II, Section 4.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentlelman from Massachusetts (Mr. BARNEY FRANK), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, someone inaccurately, well-intended but inaccurately, said the Democrats were agreeing there should be an inquiry. No, let me define what we say. We accept the fact that the statorily designated Independent Counsel sent us a referral, and we are obligated to look at it.

But what our resolution says is, let us first look at what he has alleged, and assuming that it is true, decide whether or not those things are impeachable. There is a very real question. If we look at the dismissal of the charge that Richard Nixon did not pay his income tax because it was a personal matter, that would suggest some of these are not impeachable.

If we get to the question of lying, in fact, both the Speaker and I have been reprimanded by this House for lying before official proceedings. That has not kept either of us from continuing to do our duty to our best possible. We will have to look at whether or not these are impeachable issues. But the question is, do we look at these, or do we look at a whole lot of other things.

I think my Republican colleagues fear that there is not enough in those accusations to meet the impeachment standard. That is why they refuse and refuse and refuse to limit it, to get into not just a fishing expedition, but the deep sea fishing expedition of White-water and the other matters.
Scope affects time. It is because they are holding out the hope that something will turn up after 4 years about Whitewater and the FBI files and the travel office and all of these other accusations that have to date proven to be drivel. It's for those trying to drag on the Clinton thing to try to limit the time because they need to keep it open.

Here is what that means in terms of time. Under our resolution, which calls for a December 31 deadline, we would begin work right away, on our time. This Court today, or by the President's decision, would set a timeline on our time, which would otherwise be not dealing with the public's business, we are ready to get into it.

Under their resolution, let me make it very clear to the Members, they have no real plans to do anything during October. We have read about that. They are not going to start until after the election. They are not going to start until 2 months after we got Kenneth Starr's report, because they think it will not play out well in the election, so vote for their resolution, and Members will find that the American people's time will be taken up again next year.

We are ready to do it now on our time and get it out of the way. They are asking us to give them a mandate to stretch it out, wait until after the election, and let it dominate next year, to our detriment, just as it has so far.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 20 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. ROGAN), a member of the committee.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 20 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank).

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior) to close debate on our side.

Mr. ROGAN. Mr. Speaker, first, in entering this debate, I consider it a great personal privilege to be allowed to follow two men for whom I have such profound respect, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank).

I want to say, as a Republican, that as we begin this procedure, I start with the presumption that the President is deemed innocent of any allegation of wrongdoing unless and until the contrary is shown. Every reasonable inference that can be given to the President must be given to the President.

It is unfortunate that some of today's rhetoric would suggest that this resolution seeks nothing more than to have a carte blanche opportunity for Congress to get into the President's personal lifestyle. Nothing could be further from the truth. However, it is our purpose, it is our legal obligation, to review any president's potentially constitutional misconduct within the framework of the Constitution and the rule of law.

When serious and credible allegations have been raised against any president, the Constitution obliges us to determine whether such conduct violated that duty they obligation to faithfully execute the law. We must make this determination, or else forever sacrifice our heritage that no person is above the law.

This Congress must decide whether we as a Nation will turn a blind eye to allegations respecting both the subversion of the courts and the search for truth. Mr. Speaker, I fear for my country when conduct such as perjury and obstruction of justice is no longer viewed with approbation, but instead is viewed as a sign of legal finesse or personal sophistication.

This House has an obligation to embrace the words of one of our predecessors, Abraham Lincoln, who called on every American lover of liberty not to violate the rule of law nor show toleration for those who do.

Mr. Speaker, there is a difference between knowing the truth and doing the truth. We have an obligation to both, and we have that obligation, despite whatever personal or political discomfort it might bring. For as Justice Holmes once said, "If justice requires the truth to be known, the difficulty in knowing it is not insurmountable."

Let our body be faithful to this search, and in doing so, we will be faithful both to our Founders and to our heirs.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dave Bonior) to close debate on our side.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior) is recognized for 3 and three-quarters minutes.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, we gather today to make a serious decision. What the President did is wrong. He should be held accountable. We have an obligation to proceed in a manner that is fair, that upholds our constitutional duties, and allows us to get this matter over with so we can get on with the business of the American people.

Unfortunately, the Republican proposal meets none of these standards. It is unfair, it is unlimited, and it prolongs this process indefinitely. Under the Republican plan, Congress will spend its time in hearings, tangled in testimony, and grinding its gears in partisan stalemate.

Today is just another example of that partisanship, that unbridled partisanship that has sapped our strength for the past year and run.

There are 435 Members that serve in this body, more on the floor today than I have seen in a long time, representing each about a half a million people. What has happened in this proceeding today, two hours of debate, 2 hours, 15 minutes, and beg for 20 seconds to talk to their constituency about one of the most important votes they will ever have to cast.

As the Speaker just said a few minutes ago, this is one of the most important debates that we will have. Why are hundreds of Members of this body being denied the opportunity to express themselves? This is a charade of justice. The American people, through this truncated debate, are being railroaded. Today's proceedings are a hit and run.

The Republican leadership's long-term strategy is very, very clear: Drag this thing out week after week, month after month, and yes, year after year, not for the good of the country, but for their own partisan advantage. The Democratic amendment guarantees that any inquiry will be fair, that it will be limited, and that we will complete our work by this year.

Mr. Speaker, the American people already have had all the sordid details they need, more than they ever wanted. Do we really want 2 more years of Monica Lewinsky, 2 more years ofインドリップ, 2 more years of our parents having to mute their TV sets so they can watch the 6 o'clock news? We in this Chamber have the power to stop this daily mudslide into the Nation's living rooms.

If the Republicans spend 2 years dragging this investigation out, when will they deal with education? If they spend 2 years dragging this investigation out, when will they deal with HMO reform? If they spend 2 years dragging this investigation out, when will they strengthen social security?

I urge my colleagues, let us put a limit, a limit on this investigation. Let us end it this year, this year. Let us get back to working for our children and their education, our families and for our communities.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. Lewis).

(Mr. Lewis of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, let me first express my affection and respect for my chairmanship, the Gentleman from Illinois, if Mr. Hyde says he hopes to complete this inquiry by the end of the year, I know he will do all he can to make good on that promise.

But if we adopt this resolution, the chairman's good intentions will not be enough to prevent the inquiry from consuming not only the remainder of this year but most of next year as well.

Nine days ago, I joined with Mr. Berman, Mr. Graham and Mr. Hutchinson in a bipartisan letter asking Chairman Hyde and our ranking member, Mr. Conyers, to contact the Independent Counsel—before we begin an inquiry—to ask him whether he plans to send us any additional referrals.

They wrote to Judge Start on October 2, and I wish to inform the House that last night we received his reply, and I quote, "I can confirm at this time that matters continue to be under active investigation and review by this Office. Consequently, I cannot foreclose the possibility of providing the House of Representatives with additional [referrals]."

There you have it, Mr. Speaker. Despite the fact that both Mr. Hyde and Mr. Conyers had urged the Independent Counsel to complete his work before transmitting any referral to the House, what he has given us in essentially an interim report.

As the Starr investigation enters its fifth year, we face the prospect that we will begin our inquiry only to receive additional referrals in midstream. Under this open-ended resolution, each subsequent referral will be... part of an ever-expanding ripple of allegations. With no end in sight.

That is not a process, Mr. Speaker. It's a blank check. And I believe it's more than the American people will stand for.

They do not want us traumatizing the country and our government for another year when we don't even know whether there is "probable cause" to begin an inquiry. And they don't want us abdicating our constitutional responsibility to an unelected prosecutor and accepting his referral on faith.

If we believe that—all President Clinton's adversarials have to do to start an impeachment proceeding is secure the appointment of an Independent Counsel and await his referral—then we will have turned the Independent Counsel Act into a political weapon with an automatic trigger—a weapon aimed at every future President.

What the people want is a process that is fair. A process that is focused. And a process that will put this sad episode behind us with all deliberate speed.

The major resolution does not meet those standards. Our alternative does. It provides for the Judiciary Committee to determine first whether any of the allegations would amount to impeachable offenses if proven. Only if the answer to that question is "yes" would we proceed to inquire into whether those allegations are true. That process would end by December 31—the target date chosen by Chairman Hyde himself—unless the committee asks for additional time.

Mr. Speaker, that is a fair and responsible way to do our job. It is also the only way to ensure that our job is done. The American people will embrace our conclusions, whatever they may be.

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated repeatedly over the past weeks and months, President Clinton's conduct in having an improper relationship with Monica Lewinsky and not being truthful about it was wrong, plain and simple, and it has left me profoundly disappointed.

I believe the House Judiciary Committee should begin an inquiry into whether the report of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr presented to the House of Representatives on September 9, 1998, and reviewing the materials made available to us since then, I believe there is enough information to continue on with an inquiry into the impeachment of the President.

Our colleagues on the House Judiciary Committee have already approved this resolution and believe a further investigation into the allegations against the President is appropriate. A vote in favor of this resolution by the full House will enable the House Judiciary Committee to proceed with their Constitutional obligations to conduct this investigation and make the necessary recommendations concerning the impeachment of the President.

I vote in favor of moving the process forward.

Mr. WEYGAND. Mr. Speaker, with a heavy heart and a clear conscience, I rise today to support the resolution commencing an impeachment inquiry into the President of the United States. Congress and the American people are faced with a dilemma. On one hand, we are aware of admitted wrongdoings by the leader of our nation and on the other hand, we are faced with what I feel is overzealous and partisan conduct of the Independent Counsel.

Mr. Speaker, I stand not to prove the President right or wrong. I want to do that in a fair, deliberate and timely manner. We must always remember that our Founding Fathers gave birth to the bedrock principle of American jurisprudence that the punishment must be proportional to the offense. It is with these principles in mind, that I suggest to my dear colleagues, that as we vote today in the people's house, and as this process moves forward, we must use all due deliberation to ensure fairness, and that any punishment meted out will fit closely with the President's transgressions.

Now the nation and we here in Congress must turn our attention to whether or not to proceed with an impeachment inquiry. And more importantly, we must focus on how we should proceed with an impeachment inquiry. In reviewing the proposals before Congress today, I state my support for the Democratic Amendment. The Democratic Amendment is focused, fair, expedient and deliberate. By requiring the consideration of a constitutional standard for impeachment, and a fair comparison of the well-established and accepted impeachment by the majority on the House Judiciary Committee is fatally flawed because it lacks focus, a careful process, and a clear end point. While an appropriate inquiry should proceed, a drawn out procedure designed to prolong scandal and achieve political advantage must not. I will vote today against the majority's inquiry resolution and instead to amend the inquiry process so that this very important constitutional proceeding is fair and expeditious, allowing all of us to return to the people's business.

Mr. Speaker, I have considered the referral. I have considered the Constitutional implications of the impeachment inquiry into the President of the United States. In expressing my concern, I cannot ignore the history which has placed this important resolution before this august body. My unease arises because it seems that after years of investigating White Watergate, Travelgate, Filegate and other events, the linchpin of the Independent Counsel's case are charges of perjury which emanate from a private lawsuit funded predomi- nantly by the most conservative, political en- emies of the President.

While there is no question that the President's conduct was reprehensible, I take great pause in the facts which have compelled the leader of the free world before the American congress and bared him virtually raw. I take great pause in what this means to the office of the President and, for that matter, any other leader in American society who chooses public policy contradictory to powerful opponents. While many here today speak to the "rule of law" they seem to neglect another American ideal which frames the rule of law. A bulwark of the American psyche is our embrace of the principle of fairness. It is the spirit of fairness that gave birth to the bedrock principle of American jurisprudence that the punishment must be proportional to the offense. It is with these principles in mind, that I suggest to my dear colleagues, that as we vote today in the people's house, and as this process moves forward, we must use all due deliberation to ensure fairness, and that any punishment meted out will fit closely with the President's transgressions.

The American people will embrace our conclusions, whatever they may be. which have the tendency to become jaded by an individual’s political beliefs. We cannot be cavalier and must be conscientious. As we continue this process, we must strive to be not only bi-partisan, but non-partisan because the framers of our Constitution and the people of our nation desire nothing less. We must remain focused on the true meaning of this action today. This vote is not a vote for impeachment nor does it authorize the removal of the leader of our nation from his post. This step today is taken so Congress can study if the admitted transgressions of the President warrant an official action or indictment by this chamber. It is my sincere belief that this inquiry is the proper forum in which the House of Representatives can undertake its solemn responsibility of deliberating if any of the President’s actions rise to the level of impeachment. I desire nothing more than to have a quick and resolute end to this distressing situation. I believe that ignoring the President’s situation will force our nation to endure this pain even longer. I feel an inquiry serves as the best avenue for the President to provide his defense and for Congress to reach the deliberative end for which our nations yearns.

My preference would be to limit this inquiry, by setting a deadline and imposing limits on what the inquiry would cover. These parameters are set by the Independent Counsel who appoints the Democrats and I support these reasonable efforts. I had hoped the Democratic alternative would be the roadmap that Congress would take for this inquiry. To my dismay, this effort failed. I support the underlying resolution.

As it stands today, a Sunday’s vote is not a vote to impeach the President. In fact, based on the knowledge I have today, I would not support an impeachment of the President. I have serious misgivings about the President’s actions and am disappointed with the extremely poor choices he made.

Each session, Members of Congress face a great number of votes. Some of these votes are merely procedural while others are more weighty relating to crucial issues affecting the welfare of our nation. All of these votes, seem to pale in comparison to the vote we cast today. Barring a vote on the declaration of war, I believe this is one of the most important votes we are called to make. I am guided by my strong beliefs and distinct desire to move on with this inquiry and come to a thoughtful, quick and appropriate resolution.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, We stand at a solemn moment in our nation’s history. Today, the House votes on a recommendation from the Judiciary Committee to proceed with a fair and judicious inquiry into the charges contained in the Independent Counsel. Like most of the people on Illinois’ 14th Congressional District, I am very sad about this whole situation, and I am concerned that the President’s actions have harmed not only his own reputation, but the trust and confidence that people have in the Presidency.

We live in a dangerous world. And our economy, while good, is threatened by problems from abroad. In these times, we need leadership that people can trust if our democracy is to work. Confidence in government is built upon trust. Despite all the media hype and sensationalism, I believe the Judiciary Committee must calmly and professionally do its work and uncover the truth, because that is the only way we can put this matter behind us. Sweeping the matter under the rug just won’t work but that would be a disservice to the American people. We must stand up for the Constitution and the laws of our land.

Today, I will vote to allow the inquiry to begin so we can move quickly to uncover the truth. Every member of the Judiciary Committee, Republican and Democrat, voted for an investigation; they only disagreed on whether it should be artificially limited. The Committee must be free to follow all of the facts until they find the truth. I prefer not to set an arbitrary deadline because it will encourage those who do not wish to risk facing the clock. Watergate Chairman Peter Rodino understood that, and that’s why he rejected a time limit when Republicans sought one during the Watergate Hearings. I am satisfied with Chairman Hyde’s commitment to try and get this matter resolved by the end of the year. Much as we wish we could just jump to an end result, the Founding Fathers were wise in establishing a balanced and deliberative process. It is the only path to the truth—the life-blood of our justice system and of our democracy. Today, we begin a process to uphold the rule of law and help the nation heal.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I oppose the resolution of inquiry as reported by the Judiciary Committee. I do so based on the concerns expressed in the Minority’s dissenting views, and for the additional reasons set forth below.

On September 9, 1998, Independent Counsel Kenneth W. Starr referred information to the House that he alleged may constitute grounds for impeaching the President. In the 30 days that have elapsed since our receipt of that referral, neither the Judiciary Committee nor any other congressional committee has conducted even a preliminary independent review of the allegations it contains.

In the absence of such a review, we have no basis for knowing whether there is sufficient evidence to warrant an inquiry—the assertion of the Independent Counsel himself that his information is “substantial and credible” and “may constitute grounds for impeachment.” I believe that our failure to conduct so much as a cursory examination before launching an impeachment proceeding is an abdication of our responsibility under Article II of the Constitution of the United States. By delegating that responsibility to the Independent Counsel, we sanction an encroachment upon the Executive Branch that could upset the delicate equilibrium among the three branches of government that is our chief protection against tyranny. In so doing, we fulfill the prophecy of Justice Scalia, whose dissent in Morrison v. Olson (487 U.S. 654, 697 (1988)) foretold with uncanny accuracy the situation that confronts us.

The danger perceived by Justice Scalia flows from the nature of the prosecutorial function itself. He quoted a famous passage from an address by Justice Jackson, which described the enormous power that comes with “prosecutorial discretion.” What every prosecutor is practically required to do is to select the cases... in which the offense is most flagrant, the public harm, the greatest, and the proof the most certain. If he is obliged to choose his case, it follows that he can choose his defendants. Therein is the most dangerous power of the prosecutor: that he will pick people that he thinks he should get, rather than cases that need to be prosecuted. With the law books filled with a great assortment of crimes, this gives the prosecutor a fair chance of finding at least a technical violation of some act on the part of almost anyone. In such a case, it is not a question of deciding the guilt or innocence of the defendant; the question is, then looking for the man who has committed it, is a question of picking the man and then searching the law books, or putting investigators to work, to pin some offense on him. It is in this realm—in which the prosecutor picks some person whom he dislikes or desires to embarrass, or selects some group of unpopular people for an offense, that the greatest danger of abuse of prosecuting power lies. It is here that law enforcement becomes personal, and the real crime becomes that of being unpopular with the predominant or governing group, being attached to the wrong political views, or being personally obnoxious to or in the way of the prosecutor himself. Morrison, 487 U.S. 654, 728 (Scalia, J., dissenting), quoting Robert Jackson, The Federal Prosecutor, Address Delivered at the Second Annual Conference of United States Attorneys (April 1, 1940).

The tendency toward prosecutorial abuse is held in check through the mechanism of political accountability. When federal prosecutors overreach, ultimate responsibility rests with the President. Section 595(c) of the Independent Counsel Act provides that the Independent Counsel is subject to no such constraints. He is appointed, not by the president or any other elected official, but by a panel of judges with life tenure. If the judges select a prosecutor who is antagonistic to the administration, there is no reason to think that he will not become a political one.” Morrison, 487 U.S. 654, 730 (Scalia, J., dissenting). Nor is there a political remedy (short of removal for cause) when the Independent Counsel perpetuates an investigation that should be brought to an end: What would normally be regarded as a technical violation (there are no rules defining such things), may in his or her small world assume the proportions of an indictable offense. What would normally be regarded as an investigation may reach the level of pursuing such picayune matters that it should be concluded, may to him or her have the character of an investigation that ought to go on for another year. 487 U.S. 654, 732 (Scalia, J., dissenting).

Under the Independent Counsel Act, there is no political remedy at any point—unless and until the Independent Counsel refers allegations of impeachable offenses to the House of Representatives under section 595(c). At that point, the statute gives way to the ultimate political remedy: the impeachment power entrusted to the House of Representatives under Article II of the Constitution.

Section 595(c) of the Independent Counsel Act provides that:

An independent counsel shall advise the House of Representatives of any substantial and credible information which such independent counsel receives, in carrying out the independent counsel’s responsibilities under this chapter, that may constitute grounds for an impeachment. 28 U.S.C. 595(c).

The statute is silent as to what the House is to do once it receives this information. But under Clause II, it is the responsibility of the Independent Counsel—which is charged with the determination of whether and how to conduct an impeachment inquiry. He is not our... agent, and we cannot allow his judgments to be substituted for our own. Nor can we delegate to him our constitutional responsibilities.

Never in our history—until today—has the House sought to proceed with a presidential impeachment inquiry based solely on the raw allegations of a single prosecutor. The dangers of our doing so have been ably described by Judge Bork, who has written that:

"It is time we abandoned the myth of the need for an independent counsel and faced the reality of what that institution has too often become. We must also face another reality. A culture of irresponsibility has grown up around the independent-counsel law. Congress, the press, and regular prosecutors have found it too easy to wait for the appointment of an independent counsel and then to rely upon him rather than pursue their own constitutional and ethical obligations.

We must not fall prey to that temptation. For when impeachment is contemplated, the only check against overzealous investigative zeal is the House of Representatives. That is why—whatever the merits of the specific allegations contained in the Starr referral—we cannot simply take them on faith. Before we embark on impeachment proceedings, we will further try to formalize the nation and distract us from the people's business, we have a duty to determine for ourselves whether there is "probable cause" that warrants a full-blown inquiry. And we have not done that.

What will happen if we fail in this duty? We will turn the Independent Counsel Act into a political weapon with an automatic trigger—a weapon aimed at every future president.

In Morrison, Justice Scalia predicted that the Act would lead to encroachments upon the Executive Branch that could be more harmful than the constitutional separation of powers among the three branches of government. He cited the debilitating effects upon the presidency of a sustained and virtually unlimited investigation, the leverage it would give Congress and the courts in government disputes, and the other negative pressures that would be brought to bear upon the decision-making process.

Whether these ill-effects warrant the abolition or modification of the Independent Counsel Act is a matter which the House will consider in due course. For the present, we should at least do nothing to exacerbate the problem. Most importantly, we must not be persuaded to carry it to its logical conclusion by approving an impeachment inquiry based solely on the Independent Counsel's allegations. If all a president's political adversaries must do to launch an impeachment proceeding is secure the appointment of an independent counsel and await his referral, we could do permanent injury to the presidency and our system of government itself.

If the House approves this resolution, it will not be the first time in the course of this unfortunate episode that it has abdicated its responsibility to ensure due process and conduct an independent review. It did so when it rushed to release Mr. Starr's narrative within hours of its receipt, before either the Judiciary Committee or the President was granted the opportunity to examine it. It also did so when the committee released 7,000 pages of secret grand jury testimony and other documents hand-picked by the Independent Counsel—putting at risk the integrity of the accused, jeopardizing future prosecutions, and subverting the grand jury system itself by allowing it to be misused for political purposes.

These actions stand in stark contrast to the process used during the last impeachment inquiry undertaken by the House—the Watergate investigation of 1974. In that year, the Judiciary Committee spent weeks behind closed doors, poring over evidence gathered from a wide variety of sources—including the Ervin Committee and Judge Sirica's grand jury report, as well as the report of the Watergate Special Prosecutor. All before a single document was released. Witnesses were examined and cross-examined by the President's own counsel. Confidential material, including secret grand jury testimony, was never made public. In fact, nearly a generation later it remains under seal.

The Rodino committee managed to transcend partisanship at a critical moment in our national life, and set a standard of fairness that earned it the lasting respect of the American people.

Today the Majority makes much of the claim that their resolution adopts the language that was used during the Watergate hearings. While it may be the same language, it is not the same process. Too much damage has been done in the weeks leading up to this vote for the Majority to claim with credibility that it is honoring the Watergate precedent. But it is not too late for us to learn from the mistakes of the last three weeks. If we adopt a fair, thoughtful, focused and bipartisan process, I am confident that the American people will honor our efforts and embrace our conclusions, whatever they may be.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Speaker, I support the Resolution before us today. The bottom line question is: Should we investigate the allegations that have been made against the President?

As someone has said, "Do we look further or do we look away?" To fulfill the oath that each of us took, I believe that we must look further.

Some may try to change the subject by quibbling with the parameters of the inquiry or the lack of a time limit. Those are details—if not excuses—which do not change the fundamental question. The only precedent of modern times, the Watergate inquiry, is being followed.

Others seem to have concluded that even if all of the charges are true, it doesn't matter; they do not constitute an impeachable offense. Those Members are wrong. Perjury, obstruction of justice, abuse of power do matter—by anyone—and against anyone charged in the Constitution with executing the laws of the land.

We must fulfill our oath to the Constitution that we have sworn to "support and defend." We must honor the Constitution and wish this unpleasant duty away. We cannot pass along our responsibility to polls, the media, or the other body. We have to try to do what is right, wherever that may take us, even if some of the facts are distasteful.

But, we must also remember that our response to these facts will help determine what kind of nation we will be in the future. Young people—and even those not so young—are watching. They are listening about telling the truth, lessons about selfish, reckless behavior, lessons about self-discipline and responsibility. They are watching to see if we really mean what we say, whether actions really do have consequences. We can teach them lessons about responsibility, or we can teach them lessons of another kind.

How we handle this episode—what we say about it and what we do about it—will affect how much trust people are giving to their elected representatives and the institutions which have navigated us through more than 200 years of often treacherous waters. Even more importantly, however, how we handle this episode will affect the values and moral character of a whole generation of Americans.

There are important decisions to be made in Washington over the coming weeks, but there are even more important decisions to be made around the kitchen table in every American home. I pray we all make the right decisions.

Mr. Speaker, less is more.

I rise today to urge bipartisan support of an impeachment inquiry into the very serious allegations of felony criminal conduct by the President of the United States. Our oath of office requires no less.

It has become clear over the last several months that the President lied under oath in the Paula Jones case, lied under oath to the FBI, and after taking a lifetime oath to the nation—an oath in which he swore to uphold the Constitution and faithfully execute the law—he lied to the American people.

Our American government—our systems of law based on truth, and on our leaders to respect and uphold that system. The President of the United States is the chief law enforcement officer in our country, and when the chief law enforcement officer shows contempt for the judicial process, it is no less than an assault on the rule of law. Congress cannot stand idly by. We have a prescribed Constitutional duty, as the people's representatives. The founding fathers charged us with the first of these most solemn duties not to sit in judgment today. Instead we are here to ensure that the President is held accountable for his actions in order to protect the dignity of the office he holds.

Equality is another principle fundamental to our government, and one that Americans hold dear. Every person should be equal before the law. If any other American citizen lied in a civil deposition, as the President did—lied to a grand jury, as the President did—or refused to answer grand jury questions without asserting a Fifth Amendment privilege, as the President did—that citizen would be prosecuted, and that citizen would face certain punishment, including possible imprisonment. Should such offenses be acceptable in a President? The answer is no.

But there are larger issues here than just narrow legal questions of perjury or obstruction of justice, Mr. Speaker. A President does not merely watch over the daily operations of the federal government. He is, in fact, using his moral authority to guide our nation. A President has singular power to influence our history, set our agenda, and to send our sons and daughters into harm’s way. There is a sacred trust between the President of the United States and the people.

When Bill Clinton made the decision to repeatedly lie and mislead the American people, he violated that trust and broke that faith. I believe he can no longer effectively lead our country, nor perform the duties expected of his office with that trust shattered. Long before we reached the point at which we are at today, the point of moving forward with an impeachment of the President, I joined many of my colleagues from both sides of the aisle in suggesting that Bill Clinton step down, resign, or resig

The American people down the path of impeachment. The choice our President has left us with is clear: We can proceed with our Constitutionally mandated duty and move forward with this impeachment inquiry, or we can knowingly let dishonest, perjurious—possibly felonious—behavior slide in the highest office in our nation.

This resolution is the right course of action for the House to take today. It lays out a procedure that is fair and just, both to the President and to the members of his party here in the House. Now is not the time for partisan stalling which would force any inquiry into an artificial time constraint, encouraging partisan stalling and thereby to avoid a thorough investigation are really seeking to avoid the truth.

These allegations of lying under oath, obstruction of justice and conspiracies are not about private conduct, but instead about public conduct in our courts of law. Our courts of law and our legal system is the bedrock of our democracy and of our system of individual rights. Lying under oath in a legal proceeding undermines the rights of everyone who seek redress in our courts. Lying under oath and obstruction of justice are ancient crimes of great weight because they involve offenses, blocking the light of truth in human affairs. They are a dagger in the heart of our legal system and our democracy; they cannot and should not be tolerated.

We all know that “a right without a remedy is not a right”. If we allow, ignore, or encourage lying and obstruction of justice in our legal system, then the rights promised in our laws are hollow. Our laws promise a remedy against sexual harassment, but if we say that “lying about sex in court” is acceptable or excused, our sexual harassment laws mean nothing more than a false promise, a fraud upon our society, upon our legal system, and upon women.

The Office of the Presidency is due great respect, but the President (whoever may hold the office) is a citizen with the same duty to follow the law as all other citizens. The world marvels that our President is not above the law, and my vote today helps ensure that this rule continues.

Mr. RILEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Republican proposal to pursue an analysis of the conduct of the President, including allegations of lying under oath, obstruction of justice, and conspiracy. The supporting evidence is clearly sufficient to warrant further investigation. Without further investigation, we would be ignoring the charges and clear preliminary evidence without cause or reason. The truth should be known, and only an impartial investigation can produce the truth. Those who seek to avoid a thorough investigation are really seeking to avoid the truth.

The American people and the Congress have preceded me in defending the Constitution and to all who have considered this course on other occasions in the 209 year history of our Constitution and Government. It is plain that we should proceed judiciously and fairly in carrying out this duty.

Today’s vote is how we should undertake this task. There are two proposals: The Republican proposal suggests that we authorize the Judiciary Committee to pursue an open ended investigation, consider all things that the Committee majority deems relevant for such time as that inquiry might take. The Democratic proposal provides for the Judiciary Committee to pursue an analysis of the facts referred by the Independent Counsel and the law and to make such recommendations to the House as it deems appropriate after such review.

I shall vote for the Democratic proposal and against the Republican one. My constituents should know why.

First, I believe the President’s conduct and public representations merit the disdain and deep disappointment, and, yes, even anger, of American people. But, I believe we must act according to the Constitu-tution, the facts, and with a view to the precedents of history and the precedents we will establish for the future.

In many ways the situation that confronts us is unique. This matter comes to us from the Office of Independent Counsel after four and one-half years of extensive investigation, at a cost of over forty million dollars. In addition the House and Senate have themselves spent over ten million dollars and thousands of hours on hearings, depositions, investigation, and consideration of allegations against the President and his administration.

I believe the Republican proposal to undertake additional investigation and hearings is not only unnecessary and redundant, it is also not in the best interests of our Country. I have stated before that I think this is the conclusion of the American public. Whatever action they favor, I believe they strongly support a prompt resolution so that whatever the outcome we can again focus on a public agenda reflecting the concerns, aspirations, and realities of our people’s lives and our Country’s in the international community. To do otherwise will jeopardize our future both in the short and long term. We must not continue to mire our public discourse in muck, ridicule, and nationally demeaning.

Secondly, I am convinced that we must decide whether the allegations contained in the referral from the Office of Independent Counsel, even if true, constitute impeachable offenses. It is clear that there is disagreement on that question among legal scholars.

The Republican resolution is clearly focused on procedures for further investigation and fact finding rather than a consideration of the information, allegations and conclusions referred by the Independent Counsel. It is difficult for me not to think this is simply the result of an attempt to prolong this matter for another year or two for political rather than Constitutional reasons.

From circus-like delivery of the Counsel’s report to the Congress the purpose of which, as quite obviously, to heighten public frenzy and expectation; to the immediate release of a salacious report designed, in my opinion, for sensationalism and to add to the debasement of the President, to the subsequent release of volumes of raw material for consumption by the public; to two days consideration of a resolution; with the gag procedures imposed during debate of the two alternatives, it is impossible to view these deliberations as either fair or judicious.

Such action ill serves our Constitution or our Country. It is, I sadly lament, nevertheless, consistent with the totally partisan tenor of the leadership of this Congress.

The alternative resolution I will support provides that the Judiciary Committee will review the evidence referred to it and either recommend to the House for more deliberations or to impeach. In both instances, a clear crime would be established for an act so offensive to the Constitution; and therefore, the President’s duties, the charges against President Clinton allege actions that did not interfere with his Presidential duties.

Because of the nature of the charges against President Clinton, the investigation could be disposed of in a way which maintains a sense of discipline.

The alternative resolution I will support also provides that the Judiciary Committee will fulfill its own responsibilities at the deadlines provided in the Democratic alternative. Only swift and deliberate action can meet the standards of Hamilton. There should be no reason why we cannot, as a Congress, set deadlines and return to the business of the people.

Mr. Speaker, we must carefully consider the matter at hand today and ask ourselves, “How can we best proceed in this matter to prevent the fears of our Founding Fathers from coming true?” I submit to you that the most responsible course of action is to impose upon ourselves the deadlines provided in the Democratic alternative. Only swift and deliberate action can meet the standards of Hamilton.

Three weeks ago, the Independent Counsel referred information to Congress that he alleged may constitute grounds for impeachment.

But it is not the Independent Counsel who is charged by the Constitution to determine whether to initiate impeachment proceedings. That is our mandate. He is not our agent, and we cannot allow his judgments to be substituted for our own.

Mr. Speaker, I am profoundly disturbed at the thought that this committee would base its determination solely on the Starr referral.

Never before in our history has the House proceeded with a presidential impeachment inquiry premised exclusively on the raw allegations of a single prosecutor. Let alone a prosecutor whose excessive zeal has shaken the confidence of fair-minded Americans in our system of justice.
It is the committee’s responsibility to conduct our own preliminary investigation to determine whether the information from the Independent Counsel is sufficient to warrant a full-blown investigation. And we have not done that.

If we abdicate that responsibility, we will turn the Independent Counsel Statute into a political weapon with an automatic trigger—aimed at every future president. And in the process, we will have turned the United States Congress into a rubber stamp.

Just as we did when we rushed to release Mr. Starr’s narrative within hours of its receipt, before either this committee or the President’s counsel had any opportunity to examine it.

Just as we did when we released 7,000 pages of secret grand jury testimony and other documents hand-picked by the Independent Counsel—subverting the grand jury system itself by allowing it to be misused for a political purpose.

Just as we are about to do again: by launching in inquiry when no member of Congress even now, has had sufficient time to read, much less analyze, these materials. Not to mention the 50,000 pages we have not released.

For all I know, there may be grounds for an inquiry. But before the committee authorizes proceedings that will further traumatize the nation and distract us from the people’s business, we must satisfy ourselves that there is “probable cause” to recommend an inquiry.

That is precisely what the House instructed us to do on September 10. The chairman of the Rules Committee himself anticipated that we might be “wrapping up” and seek “additional procedural or investigative authorities to adequately review this communication.”

Yet the committee never sought those additional authorities. Apparently we had no intention of reviewing the communication.

That is the difference between the two resolutions before us today. The Majority version permits no independent assessment by the committee, and asks us instead to accept the referral purely on faith.

Our alternative ensure that there is a process that is orderly, deliberative and expeditious—for determining whether the referral is a sound basis for an inquiry.

The Majority has made much of the claim that their resolution adopts the same process—indeed, the very language—that was used during the Watergate hearings of 24 years ago.

It may be the same language. But it is not the same process.

In 1974, the Judiciary Committee spent weeks behind closed doors, poring over evidence from a wide variety of sources—including the Ervin Committee and Judge Sirica’s grand jury report, as well as the report of the Watergate Special Prosecutor. All before a single document was released. Witnesses were examined and cross-examined by the President’s own counsel. Confidential material, including secret grand jury testimony, as never made public. In fact, nearly a generation later it remains under seal.

It is too late now to claim that we are honoring the Watergate precedent. The damage is done. But is not too late for us to learn from the mistakes of the last three weeks. If we adopt a fair, thoughtful, bipartisan process, I am confident the American people will brace our conclusions, whatever they may be.

If the Majority chooses to do otherwise, it certainly has the votes to prevail. Just as the Democratic majority had the votes in 1974. But the Rodino committee recognized the overriding importance of transcending partisanship. And it earned the respect of the American people.

It is our charge to ensure that history is as kind to the work of this committee.

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, the vote today is not a vote for or against impeachment. It is not a vote on whether to proceed with the investigation. It is not a vote to determine whether the President’s admitted behavior, I have strongly condemned his actions and believe he must experience the consequences of his behavior. As for whether those consequences rise to the level of impeachment cannot be determined until the Committee investigation is finished, and I believe the Democratic alternative which I support is the most focused, fair, and expeditious way for the Committee to proceed.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the Republican resolution calling for further interminable, open-ended, partisan investigation of the President of the United States. My constituents share my outrage at the attacks on President Clinton, and many—more than eight years in this House—have called, written, and emailed me to share their views on the course Congress should take in this matter.

As many of my colleagues on both sides have said, the duty imposed on the House by allegations of Presidential treason, bribery, or other “high crimes and misdemeanors” is very grave. Faced with such allegations, the House must carry out its responsibility in the fairest, most non-partisan manner possible. This is vital to preserving the integrity of a Constitutional process, and we owe it to the President and to the American people.

Having said that, I, and my constituents, believe that this process, based on these allegations, has been unfair and partisan, that the offenses alleged against the President are not impeachable, and that the House Republican leadership is not interested in investigating and trying to do as much of the people’s business as is possible in the few days left before Congress adjourns for the year.

On September 11, I voted against immediate release of the Starr report. Basic fairness, like that extended the investigator and tried to do as much of the people’s business as is possible in the few days left before Congress adjourns for the year.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I reiterate my deep disappointment at the President’s personal conduct and his refusal to cooperate with the American people.

We need a process that appropriately punishes the President without unduly punishing our nation. Today’s debate is not about whether there will be an impeachment inquiry, but about how the impeachment inquiry should proceed and how long it should last.

The House should approve an impeachment inquiry today that refers the allegations contained within the Starr Report to the Judiciary Committee to determine if they constitute impeachable offenses in a manner that assures an early conclusion and is clearly defined as to its scope. The Hyde proposal meets none of these criteria. I agree with President Gerald Ford who recently testified, that the Independent Counsel should be able to conclude a preliminary inquiry into possible grounds for impeachment before the end of the year.

The impeachment inquiry we approve today should be focused and clearly defined as to its scope. The Hyde proposal is neither focused nor clearly defined and places no limit on how long the investigation can go on. I believe the impeachment inquiry proposal that will be offered by Mr. BOUCHER meets appropriate standards and the interests of the American people. The Hyde proposal does not.

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address the serious business before us—the resolution authorizing the House Judiciary Committee to undertake an impeachment inquiry into the admitted and alleged misdeeds of President Clinton. We all know that President Clinton did something wrong. He had an affair and he lied about it. He admitted that to the nation in August. I was sorely disappointed by his misbehavior. His actions are to be condemned.

The Congress must address in the coming weeks and months, however, is whether his misdeeds merit impeachment. That means that we must sort out what he did, what his intentions were, and whether his actions constituted impeachable conduct. The first step—in this process was the submission of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr’s referral to Congress last month. The last sections of the referral documents were released to the public last week, and at this point Americans have had enough time to begin to digest the contents of the Independent Counsel’s report. Congress now has the responsibility of weighing the Independent Counsel’s charges objectively and determining whether to proceed with the next step in the impeachment process, which consists of an impeachment inquiry by the House Judiciary Committee.

I believe that given the seriousness of the charges, an impeachment inquiry is appropriate. The Starr Report is clearly not objective, but we must remember that it is not supposed to be objective. A grand jury proceeding is supposed to make the most compelling case possible for prosecution. The House should now review the Independent Counsel’s referral, allow the President to present his side of the story, and require testimony from any other witnesses necessary. Consequently, I support legislation authorizing the House Judiciary Committee to undertake an impeachment inquiry.

I am concerned, however, that an open-ended inquiry with the authority to re-visit every allegation made against President Clinton over the last 25 years would extend indefinitely. Many of these charges have been investigated extensively—by Congressional committees, the Justice Department, and the Independent Counsel’s office. Consequently, I will vote today for the Democratic alternative to this resolution, which would authorize an impeachment inquiry but limit its scope to the Independent Counsel’s referral. If, as I suspect, that alternative is rejected, I will vote against the resolution. I want to make clear, however, that I support an inquiry. I will vote against the resolution because I believe that an inquiry should focus on the charges set forth in the Independent Counsel’s referral. It shouldn’t be an open-ended, partisan fishing expedition.

Impeachment is one of the most serious actions that the House of Representatives can take. I know that my colleagues all appreciate the gravity of what we are about to do. I urge my colleagues to act with the country’s long-term interests in mind. Thank you.

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in support of H. Res. 581, a resolution to open an inquiry by the House Judiciary Committee to determine whether substantial evidence exists to recommend the impeachment of the President of the United States.

When taking his oath of office, President Clinton vowed to “preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.” Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr’s report outlines eleven potentially impeachable offenses. President Clinton suggested he did not honor his oath. An investigation into these allegations is necessary to determine if there is substantial evidence to prove that President Clinton did, in fact, commit these crimes and to determine if these offenses warrant impeachment.

We should be thorough but fair when determining if this impeachment inquiry is not an attempt to disguise the President but an honest effort to discover the truth. I endorse this impeachment inquiry by the Judiciary Committee. Like all Americans, I hope it will proceed fairly and conclude expeditiously. Just as Clinton took an oath of office when being sworn in as President of the United States, I also took an oath of office as a Member of Congress to uphold the laws of the land. For that reason, I support H. Res. 581—a vote for truth and justice.

Mr. PASCRELL. of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, today, I cast my vote for the proposal offered by Representative RICK BOUCHER for an impeachment inquiry. I firmly believe that this is the best course of action for our country.

The public interest in advancing a political agenda, would allow this inquiry to go on indefinitely. But the American people deserve to have closure on this matter as soon as possible.

Alexander Hamilton, over 200 years ago, warned our great nation of the divisive nature of unfair inquiries. Our proposal would allow us to uphold our Constitutional responsibilities, namely to determine whether these charges made against the President are true and if true, they mandate the President’s impeachment.

We have a duty to our constituents to get back to work on the many issues that affect our nation’s families. That is why I, and everyone in this room, was sent here in the first place. The deadline our proposal imposes would grant ample time to review the Starr Report and make these difficult decisions, and refocus our energies on other vital matters. My fear of the Hyde proposal is based solely on its open ended nature and the financial toll another lengthy investigation will place upon us.

Moreover, no matter what President’s admitted behavior is indefensible and that this matter has done great harm to our country and the office of the President. But, we need to move on and bring closure to this issue. I will not allow the House Leadership to bring down the institution in which I so proudly serve. And I will do my best to insure that the decisions made best serve our Constitution and our nation. No individual and no party is privy to virtue."

While we would have preferred that Democrats have a normal opportunity to present our resolution as a amendment, the procedure being used by the House does not make a Democratic amendment in order. The motion to recommit with instructions, however, offers an opportunity for adoption by the House of our alternative.

The Democratic amendment is a resolution for a full and complete review by the Judiciary Committee of the material referred to the House of the Office of Independent Counsel. The Republican resolution also provides for that review. The difference between the Democratic and Republican alternatives is only over the scope of the review, the time that the review will take, and the requirement that the Democratic alternative that there be a recognition of the historical Constitutional standard for impeachment.

The public interest requires that a fair and deliberate inquiry occur. Our resolution would assure that it does.

The public interest also requires an appropriate boundary on the scope of the inquiry. It should not become an invitation for a freeranging fishing expedition, subjecting to a formal impeachment inquiry matters that are not before the Congress today. The potential for such a venture should be strictly limited by the resolution of inquiry. Our proposal contains those appropriate limits. It would subject to the inquiry the material presented to us by the Office of the Independent Counsel which is the only material before us at the present time.

The public interest requires that the matter be brought to conclusion at the earliest possible time that is consistent with a complete and through review.

The country has already undergone substantial trauma. If the Committee carries its work beyond the time reasonably needed for a complete resolution of the matter now before us the injury to the nation will only deepen.

We should be thorough, but we should be prompt. Given that the facts of this matter are generally well known, and given that there are overwhelming witnesses whose testimony is relevant, all of whom have already undergone grand jury scrutiny, there is no reason to prolong the Committee’s work into next year. A careful and thorough review can be accomplished between now and the end of this year. Our resolution so provides.

Our resolution requires that the Committee hold hearings on the Constitutional standard for impeachment which has evolved over two centuries and which was recognized most recently by the Committee and by the House in 1974.

Our substitute then directs the Committee to compare the facts stated in the referral to the Constitutional standard and determine which if any of them rise to the standard.
Any of the facts stated in the referral which pass that initial test would then become the subject of a formal inquiry and investigation following which the Committee could reach its conclusion. It could recommend articles of impeachment, alternative sanctions or no action on the charges.

Under our resolution the committee will begin its work on October 12 and conclude all proceedings, including the consideration of recommendations in December. The House could then complete its consideration of any recommendations the Committee may make by the last week in December.

This approach is fair. It's in the public interest, and it is what the American public expects.

It gives deference to the Constitutional standard for impeachment recognized by the House in its 1974 report. It offers ample time to consider carefully, any of the allegations which rise to the Constitutional standard.

It assures that the entire matter will be resolved promptly and that the Nation is not distracted by a prolonged inquiry which is clearly not justified by the material presented in the referral.

It presents a framework that will enable the Committee and the House of Representatives to discharge their Constitutional obligations in a manner which is both thorough and expeditious.

I urge approval of the Democratic plan as rules of proceeding which are well tailored to the challenge before us.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, today is a sad day for our country. I take no pleasure in today's proceedings, or the events which have brought us to this point. I have been entrusted by the people of my district to exercise my judgment in this matter, and I take seriously my confidence in me to use my best judgment and to carry out my Constitutional responsibilities in a somber and thoughtful manner.

We are a nation of law. In conformity with our Constitutional obligation to oversee the Executive Branch of government, Congress passed an independent counsel law, which was supported by President Clinton. The independent counsel appointed pursuant to that law to investigate allegations of illegal conduct within the Executive Branch has, pursuant to that law, forwarded to the Judiciary Committee his report detailing possible impeachable offenses for President Nixon.

In forwarding to the full House a resolution authorizing the Independent Counsel Report warrants the start of an impeachment inquiry by the House. The President has admitted that he had an extramarital affair and then lied about it. Not one disputes that fact. The President's conduct, while reprehensible, was a betrayal of his vows to his wife but not his oath of office. His actions were personal in nature. If his lies to cover up his conduct amount to perjury, he can and should be held accountable through our judicial system.

Our founding fathers had something quite different in mind when they drafted the Constitutional language on impeachment, a political remedy for tyrannical acts. The Federalist papers shed some light on that. George Mason said that the phrase "high crimes and misdemeanors" refer to presidential actions that are great and dangerous offenses or attempts to subvert the government. Alexander Hamilton, in the Federalist paper 65, wrote that impeachable offenses are not in justices done immediately to society. Ben Franklin spoke of impeachment as an alternative to assassination.

When this House voted to proceed with an inquiry to impeach President Nixon in 1974, the offenses in the impeachment resolution contained serious abuses of official power: President Nixon used government agencies to carry out his personal and political vendettas against citizens. Not included in the list of impeachable offenses for President Nixon was his deliberate backdating of a tax document and his false filing under oath of IRS returns by which he sought to fabricate a huge, tax deduction. That conduct was felonious but determined not to be an impeachable offense in 1974 because it did not threaten the form of government; it was personal, reprehensible conduct.

I will cast my vote against the Hyde resolution. It leads us into an impeachment inquiry without focus or time limitation. I will support the motion to recommit because we need to resolve the issue of impeachment this year and then move on with the business of governing. We have serious work to do to resolve the solvency of the Social Security and the Medicare trust funds; we have children in need of health care and quality child care; our schools are overcrowded. The needs of real people will not be addressed until we bring closure of this issue.

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I am the junior member of the Judiciary Committee, argu- ably, comes to this decision with the cleanest slate, the least experience, and a perspective formed largely outside of these halls.

This morning, as we began our business, every member of this body gathered, faced God, and bowed our heads in the same pledge that school children from Long Island to Los Angeles, from Seattle to Saratoga recited this morning. "I pledge allegiance * * *" With our hands over our hearts, we told the country and each other that we are one nation, under God, with liberty and justice for all. Liberty and justice for all.

The meaning of justice in a free society governed by a constitution is what has been on my mind in the last weeks. I have read the Independent Counsel’s report and much of the supporting information which he has transmitted to us. Like my colleagues from both parties on the Judiciary Committee, I have come to the conclusion that we have been presented with substantial and credible evidence concerning the President of the United States that may constitute grounds for impeachment. We must do our duty and fully and fairly investigate these matters.

I have reached this conclusion with a profound sense of sadness. America is a great nation, and we are not less great because we are governed by fallible men and women. Indeed, our founding fathers knew well our failings, and led us to rely not upon the rule of men, but upon the rule of law. That is what is at stake here today—equal justice under the law.

I am reminded of the symbol of justice in America. Justice holding the scales is not blind because she looks away or because she will not see. Justice is blind so that every citizen, regardless of status or position in life, will be treated equally under the law. That includes the President of the United States. It is a powerful symbol. And today, it is one we must live up to.

I have not called upon today to vote on articles of impeachment. We are only voting on whether to proceed, or to look away. We are a nation ruled by laws. It is up to us to keep it that way.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I favor further inquiry by the Judiciary Committee. The issue before us today is straightforward: Do the allegations of possible impeachable offenses merit further investigation? Anyone who answers "no" and asserts that there should be no further review has a very high burden to meet. I think that the Judiciary Committee's careful, fair and expeditious review of all of the facts in light of the relevant law is precisely the Constitutional duty required of us by our oath of office. I also think that such a review is the duty we owe the American people.

Congress has received substantial and credible evidence that the President of the United States repeatedly violated the criminal laws of this country. I believe it would be a dereliction of duty to reject the highest orders for us to decide today that no further review is needed. After meeting with Chairman Hyde, I am convinced that we will move forward fairly, quickly and in a bipartisan manner. I am also troubled by reports that the White House is pressuring Democrats to vote against this inquiry.

My office has received over a thousand calls and letters in the past month on this scandal. Additionally, my web page also gives constituents an opportunity to express their views. Forty percent of the people who have contacted me have urged me to move forward with this investigation.

Despite much of the rhetoric, today's final vote only answers one question: Should we investigate the allegations or forget it? Those who vote against this resolution have a very high burden to meet in fact, saying that we should just ignore all the allegations against the President and have no further inquiry.

I have not decided whether President Clinton has technically committed impeachable offenses. However, I have called for President Clinton's resignation. Whether his actions rise to the level of 'high Crimes and Misdemeanors' is still to be determined. The point is that... we need to investigate the actions of the President and we need to get this situation behind us as quickly as possible, hopefully by the end of the year.

Today’s vote marks only the third time in American history that the House has opened an inquiry into possible impeachment of a President. It is a serious vote for all of us—possibly one of the most important votes I will take. I have made the decision to vote yes because I truly believe to do otherwise would not be in the best interest of our country’s future. Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, our former colleague from Oklahoma, Mickey Edwards, has gone from service in the House of Representatives to a very distinguished career teaching at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard. He has combined this with a role as a thoughtful commentator on public affairs. Mr. Edwards is as those who served with him know a very thoughtful conservative, and I disagree with him on many policy issues. Indeed, I disagree with his assessment of the policy impact of the Clinton administration, in foreign policy and elsewhere. But let me confine this in this article. But the whole it seems to me an extremely thoughtful essay that sheds a great deal of light on the difficult task we face in the coming weeks and months in dealing with the Independent Counsel’s investigation of the President.

Both because of the thoughtful nature of his work, and because of Mr. Edwards credentials as one of the most intellectually honest of our political commentators, I ask this thoughtful essay from the Boston Herald be printed here.

Today’s vote will be a presidential election. Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the American citizens. That is why I am not among the president’s defenders. For his indiscretions and lies, he alone is responsible. His activities benefit no one. His unceasing public denials and obfuscations have been not necessary to the public’s interests. But in the public’s interest, we have placed there. A president’s activities may be so heinous that he must be removed at any cost, but in a democratic society, the interests of an election must rest on more than shocked sensibility. What Mr. Clinton has lied about is an adulterous affair. If any one thing is fairest of the facts, his actions may be oath reprehensible and illegal. But there is a question of context: what he lied about was whether he carried on a consensual sexual relationship. It flies from that point, he ended not enough to overturn the will of the people that he should be the president. This brings us to a more serious matter. When Richard Nixon was our president, a Democratic Congress, asserting that a Republican Justice Department could not be trusted to act in the public interest, circumvented the existing governmental structure by creating a special prosecutor (the title is “independent counsel,” but as Kenneth Starr has demonstrated, it is an office with the power to function in a disturbingly aggressive manner.)

We should all be concerned about the danger inherent in the state’s ability to trample underfoot the rights of a citizen on behalf of some presumed “greater good.” There are “greater goods,” those common interests that transcend narrower individual interests, but even in the pursuit of such common interests the civil rights of citizens must be preserved.

President Bill Clinton should be impeached. Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, my election was not a fluke; it was a decision. The authority to impeach is an awesome power. I have feared, and fought against, the power to function in a disturbingly aggressive manner.

Our task is to make the best decision—one that will bring the President to justice and spare the American people from further pain. This vote is not about whether President Clinton should be impeached; it is about the charge that will bring the President to justice. It is not Mr. Clinton’s immaturity but Mr. Starr’s aggressive manner.

Bill Clinton’s flaws, the real danger here is not Mr. Clinton’s immaturity but Mr. Starr’s casual disregard for those considerations which protect the citizen against the excessive intrusion of the state.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this is only the third time since the founding of our Nation that the House of Representatives has seriously considered impeaching the President of the United States. The House deliberated extensively over the upcoming vote. Having reached a decision, there is little doubt in my mind that the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives should conduct a limited, clearly defined inquiry into whether President Bill Clinton should be impeached.

The alternative, a broad-based impeachment investigation with no time limits is unnecessary, unwarranted, and potentially harmful to our Nation.

Removing the President from office would invalidate the election of Bill Clinton by the American people. The standard for impeachment must be set high for Congress to revoke decisions made by the people at the ballot box. The authority to impeach is an awesome power which, if misused, threatens the foundation of our democracy. There is probably no individual in history who has been investigated more than President Clinton. Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr and his predecessor have taken more than four years, spent almost $60 million, and employed 60 attorneys, investigators, and other staff to examine President Clinton’s activities for evidence of wrongdoing. In addition, more than half a dozen House and Senate committees have investigated potential abuses by President Clinton and the First Lady—including many of the same subjects the Independent Counsel investigated—at additional expense to taxpayers.

I have read the report by Independent Counsel Starr and seen some of the evidence produced by the other investigations. I have concluded that there is no compelling reason for ending the Clinton presidency, or for starting a new, lengthy investigation. The U.S. Constitution permits the Congress to remove the President upon conviction of “treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.” President Clinton’s actions were not impeachable offenses.

The impeachment process is filled with potential dangers for America. With the near-collapse of the economies of Russia and several Asian countries, the world is on the verge of an international economic crisis. Military action may be necessary to stem the genocide in Kosovo. The threat of terrorism against U.S. citizens and interests abroad has never been greater. The impeachment process will weaken our President and hurt our Nation’s ability to deal with international problems. Our military and economic risk increases the longer it drags on.

A broad impeachment process will further distract the attention of Congress from more important issues, such as health care, education, tax reform, protecting Social Security, and reducing hunger and poverty. We should be dealing with these problems, not conducting endless investigations. An open-ended inquiry could cost millions of dollars—money which could be spent more productively. We are becoming a government that sees as its principal mission the investigation of its officers and citizens. Such a government does not serve the people.

Our task is to make the best decision—one that will bring the President to justice and spare the American people from further pain. This vote is not about whether President Clinton will be punished. I believe the President should be punished for his misconduct. We must send a clear and unambiguous signal that this type of behavior is not acceptable. But let’s not punish the entire Nation by going forward with an unlimited investigation. If, after a limited investigation, new and unexpected impeachable offenses are discovered, then that avenue should be pursued vigorously. But if the investigation does not have the potential to consider the recent suggestion of former President Gerald Ford that we publicly rebuke President Clinton. More than any other living American. Mr. Ford knows the pain and public divisiveness an impeachment process imposes on our country and its citizens.

If we vote for an unlimited investigation, when will it end? We have the assurance of well-meaning House leaders that it can be wrapped up by the end of this year. But if that is the goal, why not put it in this resolution? The Judiciary Committee took five months to write articles of impeachment against former President Nixon. The case against President Clinton, which already has become more partisan and controversial, probably will take longer. In an unlimited investigation, we are likely to see our newspapers and airwaves filled with still more stories about Monica Lewinsky, Whitewater, and alleged White House scandals from now until the end of the 106th Congress in the year 2001.

I recognize that my own constituents are deeply divided on this issue. Daily I have been receiving thoughtful and passionate telephone calls, letters, and e-mails from residents of Dayton and Montgomery County, Ohio, which I am privileged to represent. After listening to both sides, I concluded that an unlimited investigation by the House of Representatives is not warranted by the evidence, nor is it likely to find anything that has been missed already by investigators. An open-ended inquiry will just be a waste of taxpayers’ money and a drain on the public’s confidence and therefore, I will vote for another endless round of hearings, depositions, and testimony that serve no purpose.

The alternative I support calls for the Judiciary Committee to begin an impeachment investigation that will finish no later than December 31, 1998. I authorize the committee to consider all evidence provided by the Independent Counsel before they can be challenged, the “privileged or matter” itself would be excludable in court. The material would be subject to sanctions, and the material of this nature would violate not only Rule 6(e), but Department of Justice guidelines, pertaining to secret grand jury testimony than it is to public officials or other celebrities. We accommodate its essential role.

To this, one can only respond that the public disclosure of protected grand jury material could do serious and irreparable harm—not only to the President, but to the many individuals who are potential targets of an investigation are public figures. In an ordinary criminal trial, grand jury testimony is excluded from evidence (and thus from the public’s view) unless the defendant has specifically agreed during a negotiated agreement, under which the Independent Counsel agreed to honor the public interest in ensuring that the American people are to accept the eventual result of our deliberations, they must be satisfied that our proceedings have been thorough, disciplined, methodical and fair.

I seriously doubt that an objective observer looking back on these past nine days could characterize our proceedings in that manner. The process continues to careen forward—without a roadmap—a dizzying pace.

One portion of the Independent Counsel’s report that I oppose even once, but twice—was Mr. Starr’s transmittal letter, which cautioned that these supporting materials contain “confidential material and material protected from disclosure by Rule 6(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure” (the rule that provides for the secrecy of grand jury records). The implication of that warning is that the public disclosure of protected grand jury material could do serious and irreparable harm—not only to the President, but to the many individuals caught up in the vast web of the Starr investigation, including innocent third-parties, witnesses, and other potential targets of ongoing (and future) investigations. In the United States, those accused of criminal wrongdoing are presumed innocent—be they presidents or ordinary citizens. Yet if raw, unproven allegations are disclosed to the public before they can be challenged, the “presumption of innocence” loses all meaning. Minds are made up, judgments rendered, and the chance for a fair determination of the facts is lost.

That is one reason why federal grand jury testimony—which in printed or in audio-visnal form—is explicitly shielded from public disclosure under Rule 6(e).

But grand jury secrecy also serves the interests of the prosecution, by encouraging witnesses to come forward and ensuring that prejudicial material will not poison the jury pool. Thus, I have concluded that it is impossible to hold a fair trial. This is especially important when the targets and potential targets of an investigation are public figures.

The pre-indictment release of secret testimony compromises both objectives—trampling on the rights of the individuals involved and undermining the government’s ability to hold a fair trial. It calls into serious question the fairness and integrity of the grand jury system itself.

"LAUNDERING" THE EVIDENCE

Through its action today, the Judiciary Committee has engaged in an abuse of the grand jury process that has enabled it to accomplish indirectly what the Independent Counsel was prohibited from doing directly.

The Independent Counsel has developed his case by using the grand jury to compel testimony from various witnesses. Although the grand jury voted to indict the President, the Independent Counsel, and the videotaped testimony was ultimately obtained under a negotiated agreement, under which the Independent Counsel agreed to treat the testimony as secret grand jury proceedings pursuant to Rule 6(e). It was solely on this basis that the President consented to testify.

The Independent Counsel subsequently received permission from the court to release the videotape, together with the other grand jury material, to the Congress. But the court order did not authorize its further release to the public or the press.

By releasing that testimony to the public, we are—in effect—"laundrying" the evidence so as to nullify the express agreement under which it was obtained. This is an abuse of the grand jury that can only damage the public’s faith in that institution and impairs its ability to perform its essential role.

And what are the benefits that justify these evils? We are told only that the public has a “right to know”—an interest in the case that exceeds the interest of the information, even suggested that that interest is a financial one—that the public “paid” for this material and is entitled to it.

To this, one can only respond that the public pays for the grand jury testimony in every case. The public has an interest in every case—especially where the case involves high officials or other celebrities. We accommodate that interest by requiring that trials be held in open court. But the public is no more entitled to secret grand jury testimony than it is to classified intelligence. Not even when the case is concluded, let alone coming on.

In an ordinary criminal trial, grand jury testimony is disclosed under Rule 6(e) only under certain specific circumstances. For example, criminal defendants are entitled to see grand jury proceedings in order to cross-examine witnesses or challenge their credibility on the basis of prior inconsistent statements. On the other hand, the public release of material of this nature would violate not only Rule 6(e), but Department of Justice guidelines, court precedents and ethical rules binding on prosecutors in every jurisdiction in this country. A party found to have disclosed the material would be subject to sanctions, and the material itself would be excludable in court.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

THE PACE ACCELERATES

On September 9, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr sent the House of Representatives a 445-page report, together with some 2,000 pages of supporting materials, telephone transcripts and the President’s videotape. The implications of those disclosures are that the grand jury transcripts and the President’s videotape are to be considered “grand jury material.” Today, I want to call the public’s attention to the implications of that warning. By releasing that testimony to the public, we are in effect “laundrying” the evidence so as to nullify the express agreement under which it was obtained. This is an abuse of the grand jury that can only damage the public’s faith in that institution and impair its ability to perform its essential role. And what are the benefits that justify these evils? We are told only that the public has a “right to know”—an interest in the case that exceeds the interest of the information, even suggested that that interest is a financial one—that the public “paid” for this material and is entitled to it.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE
October 8, 1998

H10108

Chairman, Committee on Rules, House of Representatives.

This is certainly not an ordinary case. But neither is it so exceptional as to justify our riding roughshod over precedent and due process.

In both one historical precedent that is closest to the present situation, due process was scrupulously observed. Twenty-four years ago, a Republican president was under investigation by a Democratic House.

The Judiciary Committee spent seven weeks closed session reviewing judge
Sircia's grand jury materials prior to their release. President Nixon's lawyers were permitted not only to participate in these sessions, but to cross-examine witnesses before their testimony was made public.

While there are obviously major differences between the current controversy and the Watergate affair, President Clinton is entitled to the same due process protections afforded President Nixon in the course of that investigation.

As far as the case for preserving the confidentiality of the evidence is even stronger here than it was in the Watergate case. Mr. Starr's grant jury has made no findings whatsoever with respect to the evidence. The material we have consists merely of selected portions of what the prosecutor put before the grand jury, together with his interpretation of that material.

The jurors were never asked whether they thought that the video tape—or any other testimony—provided credible evidence of perjury or other wrongdoing. Having used the grant jury as his hightest responsibility, the Independent Counsel bypassed it as a fact-finding body.

That is his prerogative. But the Judiciary Committee has a duty to see that the material provided to us is handled appropriately. If we act carelessly, and in haste, we will not only cripple this President, but will do lasting harm to the values and institutions we hold most dear.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker I would like to enter into the record a General Accounting Office report entitled Executive Office of the President Procedures for Acquiring Access to and Safeguarding Intelligence Information

This report is a significant and impressive audit performed by the National Security and International Affairs Division of the GAO. It builds on the work previously requested by Chairman Goss and will be the foundation for further oversight by the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

The President's stewardship in protecting the National Security of the United States of America is his highest responsibility. There is no higher calling. I believe that this report raises significant questions that should be adressed.

Dear Mr. Chairman: This report responds to your request of November 6, 1997, asking us to determine whether the Executive Of-

Office of Administration reports to the As-the need-to-know principle and in accordance with applicable personnel security standards and procedures. In exceptional cases, the Senior Official of the Intelligence Community (or in the case of EOP employees) may, when it is in the national interest, authorize an individual access to SCI prior to completion of the individual’s security background investigation.

At least since July 1996, according to the National Security Council’s security officer, his office has not established temporary SCI access to government employees and individuals from private industry and academia—before completion of the individual’s security background investigation and without notifying the CIA. He added, however, that this practice has occurred only on rare occasions to meet urgent needs. He said that this practice was also followed prior to July 1996 but that no records exist documenting the number of instances and the parties the National Security Council had allowed temporary SCI access to prior to this date.

EOP “has not established procedures for conducting temporary SCI access.” This official also added that, after recent consultations with the CIA, the Office of Security Counsel provided in August 1998 to refer temporary SCI clearance determinations to the CIA.

EOP has not established procedures for conducting temporary SCI access. The EOP-wide security procedures issued in March 1998 do not set forth security practices EOP offices are to allow in safeguarding classified information. In contrast, the Office of Science and Technology Policy and the Office of the Vice President had issued office-specific security procedures that deal with safeguarding SCI material. The Office of Science and Technology Policy’s procedures, issued in July 1996, were very comprehensive. They required that new employees be thoroughly briefed on their security responsibilities, advise staff on ensuring accountability for implementing the security aspects of Executive Order 12958, and provide staff specific guidance on document accountability and other safeguard practices to ensure that SCI is safeguarded.

In commenting on our recommendation, the Assistant to the President stated that EOP security practices are important, the security procedures and an assessment of security controls beyond EOP daily security procedures are effective. Neither the EOP Security Office nor the security staff of the nine EOP offices we reviewed have conducted security self-inspections as discussed in Executive Order 12958. Self-inspections as described in Executive Order 12958 provide for the conduct of internal oversight, and assessing whether security controls beyond EOP daily security procedures are effective. The Director’s concern with having adequate inspection staff and his view on the primacy of internal oversight do not diminish the need for an objective and systematic program of periodic on-site security inspections by an independent party. An independent assessment of EOP security practices by the Information Security Oversight Office could have brought the security concerns raised in this report.

RECOMMENDATIONS

To improve EOP security practices, we recommend that the Assistant to the President for Management and Administration instruct the EOP Security Officer to revise the March 1998 Security Procedures for the EOP Security Office to include comprehensive guidelines and procedures EOP offices must follow in (1) acquiring SCI access for its employees and (2) safeguarding SCI material and establish and maintain a self-inspection program as described in Executive Order 12958.

We recommend further that, to properly provide for local operating procedures that implement the governmentwide procedures, the EOP Security Officer develop and implement a plan for conducting periodic on-site security inspections of EOP classified programs.

AGENCY COMMENTS AND OUR EVALUATION

We provided the EOP, the Information Security Oversight Office, and the CIA a copy of the draft report for their review and comments. The Director of the Office of Security Counsel and the CIA, the Office of the Vice President’s Special Assistant for Intelligence and Intelligence Community Programs issued written comments which are reprinted in their entirety as appendices I and II, respectively. The CIA said its comments reflect our recommendations. The Office of Security Counsel agreed that the EOP Security Officer needs additional assistance of the EOP Security Office staff to establish such a security self-inspection program as described in Executive Order 12958.

In commenting on our recommendation, the Assistant to the President stated that EOP plans to supplement its security procedures with additional guidance. We agree that the executive orders, Security Policy Board guidelines, and applicable Director of Central Intelligence Directives lay out governmentwide standards and procedures for access to and safeguarding of SCI. However, they are not a substitute for local operating procedures that provide agency personnel guidance on how to implement the governmentwide procedures. We believe that EOP plans to issue supplementary guidance could strengthen existing procedures.

The Assistant to the President also stated that it is not accurate to say that the EOP has not conducted security self-inspections. This official stated that our draft report acknowledges that “security personnel conduct daily desk, safe, and other security checks to ensure that SCI and other classified material is properly safeguarded.” The Assistant to the President is correct to point out the importance of daily physical checks as an effective means to help ensure that classified material is properly safeguarded. However, such self-inspection practices are not meant to substitute for the self-inspection program as described in Executive Order 12958. Self-inspections as discussed in the order are much broader in scope than routine daily physical checks. These self-inspection guidelines discuss reviewing relevant security directives and classified material access and control records and procedures, monitoring adherence to governmentwide standards, assessing compliance with controls for access to classified information, verifying whether agency specific access procedures adequately correspond to governmentwide procedures, and assessing whether controls to prevent unauthorized access to classified information are effective. Our recommendation is that the EOP establish a self-inspection program.

In commenting on our recommendation, the Assistant to the President said that to enhance EOP security practices, the skills of the EOP Security Office staff are being made available to all EOP organizations to coordinate and appropriate in agency efforts to enhance self-inspections. We believe EOP security practices would be enhanced if this action was part of a governmentwide security self-inspection program as described in Executive Order 12958.

The Director, Information Security Oversight Office noted that our report addresses important elements of the SCI program in place within the EOP and provides helpful insights for the security community as a whole. The Director believes that our report overemphasize the need to create EOP specific procedures for handling SCI programs. The Director observed that the Director of Central Intelligence has issued procedures on these matters and that for the EOP to prepare local procedures would result in unnecessary duplication of agency efforts and expenditure of resources and could result in local procedures contrary to the Director of Central Intelligence Directives. As we discussed above, we agree that the executive orders, Security Policy Board guidelines, and applicable Director of Central Intelligence Directives clearly lay out governmentwide standards and procedures for access to and safeguarding of SCI. However, they are not a substitute for local operating procedures that provide agency personnel guidance on how to implement the governmentwide procedures.

The Director agreed that his office needs to conduct on-site security inspections and... hopes to begin the inspections during fiscal year 1999. The Director also noted that the primary focus of the inspections would be classification management and not inspections of the access side.

SCOPE AND METHODOLOGY

To identify EOP procedures for acquiring access to SCI and safeguarding such information, we met with EOP officials responsible for security program management and discussed concerns, obtained and reviewed pertinent documents concerning EOP procedures for acquiring SCI access and safeguarding such information.

In addition, we obtained and reviewed various executive orders, Director of Central Intelligence Directives, and other documents pertaining to acquiring access to and safeguarding SCI. We also discussed U.S. government security policies pertinent to our review with officials of the Information Security Oversight Office and the U.S. Security Policy Board. Additionally, we met with officials of the CIA responsible for adjudicating and granting EOP employees SCI access and discussed the CIA procedures for determining whether an individual meets Director of Central Intelligence Directive eligibility standards.

As discussed with your staff, we did not verify whether proper procedures were followed in granting SCI access to the approximately 180 EOP employees identified by the GAO. Also, we did not review SCI physical security practices for safeguarding SCI and other classified material, conduct classified document control and accounting system integrity inspections, or perform other control tests of SCI material over which the EOP has custody.

We performed our review from January 1998 until August 1998 in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards.

At your request, we plan to report on self-inspections initiated by the EOP, the GAO report, and any comments on it included to date. At that time, we will provide copies to appropriate congressional committees; the Chief of Staff to the President; the Assistant to the President for Management and Administration; the Director, Information Security Oversight Office; the Director of Central Intelligence; Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Deputy Director for Information Security Policy; the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; and other interested parties.

Please contact me at (202) 512-3564 if you or your staff have any questions concerning this report. Major contributors to this report were Gary K. Weeter, Assistant Director, and Tim F. Stone, Evaluator-in-Charge.

Sincerely yours,

RICHARD DAVIS,
Director, National Security Analysis

1 The "need-to-know" principle is a determination made by competent authority that a prospective recipient requires access to specific classified information in order to perform a lawful authorized function. The prospective recipient shall possess an adequate security clearance and access approval in accordance with Director of Central Intelligence Directive 12509.

2 The SCI nondisclosure agreement establishes explicit obligations on the government and the individual protected SCI.

5 The President's Commission on the Intelligence Activities was abolished on June 28, 1994. On this date, the EOP Security Office assumed responsibility for security support for the EOP offices previously supported by the White House Security Office.

Subject: Comments on General Accounting Office (GAO) report “Executive Office of the President: Procedures for Acquiring Access to and Safeguarding Sensitive Compartmented Information”

I. Introduction

We also recognize and understand the NSC’s responsibilities to the President. With respect to information generated by the Intelligence Community, having appropriately cleared individuals on the job in a timely manner is essential. Because the SSCI program is so large and widely dispersed across the government, ISOO understands the NSC’s need to have the ability to grant interim clearances under certain conditions, so that individuals can perform their duties. Property managing and controlling how these interim clearances are granted would be an important element of oversight. Your report suggests that the DCI is addressing this issue with the NSC.

Please call me on 202-219-5250 if you have any questions concerning my comments on your draft report. Again, we appreciate the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,

STEVEN GARBIN.
Director

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in adamant opposition to this resolution and to the travesty of justice we are witnessing here today. From the time the voters of America put this President in office six years ago, his enemies have had a frenzied crusade to reverse the results of the electoral process and to subvert the will of the American people.

They have stopped at nothing. What began as an investigation into the conduct of the President and First Lady in Arkansas well over a decade ago has mushroomed into a frantic search to find something—anything—to bring this presidency down. The free-ranging, unbridled hunt for damaging information about the President has resulted in the expenditure of millions of tax dollars; it has featured the doctoring of tapes by Republicans; a so-called “Independent” Counsel whose office resorts to bullying, threats, and intimidation; a mad rush to put the report of the Counsel on the Internet without giving the President the basic right to review the charges against him; the release of the President’s videotaped grand jury testimony again with total disregard to his rights, and now the push to expand the inquiry into areas which have already been thoroughly investigated.

Do we really want to turn this nation into a police state where enemies of the President, in pursuit of a political agenda, have the power to restrict individual freedoms and intimidate citizens?

The vast majority of my constituents have told me they are ready to forgive the President for making a mistake in his personal conduct. It is time to move on to the pressing issues facing our nation—education, health care reform, protection of social security, and continued economic growth. I urge my colleagues to put a stop to this partisan, out-of-control vendetta and put the real business of the American people first.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, today is a solemn day. The Congress has been considering an impeachment inquiry only two other times in our Nation’s history. It is not a task that we take lightly.

I believe it is our constitutional duty to begin an impeachment inquiry based on the evidence delivered to the Judiciary Committee by Judge Starr.

I believe that the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Henry Hyde, has been committed to a fair and impartial process, and we will continue to follow his lead.

Article 2, section 1 of our Constitution contains the oath of office that the President must take before entering office. It states: “I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of the President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.”

This body voted today to investigate whether the President has broken this oath by committing perjury and obstructing justice.

I, too, took an oath to uphold the Constitution when I entered the military and I have taken that oath as a State representative and as a U.S. Congressman. Each time, I took it as a serious obligation.

The American people deserve answers to the many questions about the conduct of this President and today we have begun the process of finding those answers.

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to support the resolution calling for an impeachment inquiry against the President, William Jefferson Clinton.

While the actions and evidence that have led us here today are deplorable, the action we are taking today is a result of noble intentions. It is in the finest traditions of our tradition of our democracy that the process of impeachment begins.

We have heard much discussion today of the Constitution. We heard quotes from James Madison and the Federalist Papers. All that is certainly important in this debate. But our Constitution has a voice in this process too, and I received a letter from one last week that I think puts all this in perspective. It’s from a 6-year-old boy in Jacksonville, Florida.

He writes, “Someday in my mind I hope we get a better President. I want to have a President that tells the truth. Even I think I could be a better President than this man.”

There was a day when our children aspired to be President. Now, the children in my district aspired to be better than the President.

The Judiciary Committee, and this House, are about to begin a mission for the truth. But as we undertake the official process that is laid out in the Constitution, I hope we will also begin the process of healing our nation.

They said the truth is a liberating thing. It is only through a successful search for the truth that our Nation can heal itself from this scandal. To sweep it under the rug, would be to leave it to fester under the fiber of our democracy and to eat away at the rule of law.

Yes, we all want to put this behind us, but, as the Constitution requires, and our conscience dictates, we must proceed with this inquiry to do that.

I urge my colleagues to support the resolution.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, today I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the House Judiciary Committee’s recommendation to open an impeachment inquiry into the conduct of President Clinton.

I certainly understand the desire of all Americans, myself included, to be done with this matter and to return our attention to many serious issues that confront our country at home and abroad. And let me say quite frankly, I, like many of my colleagues, resent the fact that the President’s actions have brought us to this Constitutional crisis. Given the serious charges leveled against the President including testifying falsely under oath, obstruction of justice and witness tampering among others, I believe this inquiry is warranted.

Our inquiry has everything to do with the President’s ability to lead our country. He is our Commander-in-Chief, as well as the chief architect of American foreign policy and our domestic welfare. The President symbolizes to our nation and the rest of the world what it is to be an American. For these very reasons we need to be certain of the President’s conduct, and whether his wrongdoing warrants penalty. Our President is the moral authority to lead this great nation, especially in the critical times of crisis. And whether it be an issue of national security, or as a role model for our children, our nation cannot afford to question the President’s decisions or doubt his authority, which many of us do now. We may disagree politically, but every American must be convinced the President’s leadership decisions are genuine. I for one, want more from my President than feigned anger and forced contention. I want the truth that this inquiry seeks.

As recommended by the Judiciary Committee, the process by which this inquiry will be undertaken is the very same model used in the Watergate impeachment inquiry. While the Democrats on the Judiciary Committee did not support this model, I think it is important to note that they did support an inquiry, albeit a more limited one with a fixed timeframe for consideration.

There is no more serious obligation given to us under the Constitution than to uphold the rule of law and protect the integrity of the highest offices of our government. The charges against President Clinton cannot simply be ignored. We have a process for resolving them as prescribed by the Constitution and the House will not proceed in a Constitutionally sound and orderly fashion and do so as expeditiously as possible.

The seriousness of Congress’ duty to consider this issue is best stated by Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino of New Jersey in 1974, who said during the impeachment hearings of President Nixon, “we cannot turn away, out of partisanship or convenience, from problems that are now our responsibility, our inescapable responsibility to consider. It would be a violation of our own public trust if we, as the people’s representatives, chose not to inquire, not to consult, not even to deliberate.

Mr. Speaker, the President has already admitted to violating the public’s trust by lying to the American people, his family, supporters and Cabinet. We cannot let it happen again. It is our duty to restore that trust in the Presidency by approaching this inquiry with a commitment to fairness, and an unshakable dedication to seek the truth.

If it is proven the President of the United States lied under oath, obstructed justice and urged others to do the same, he has forsaken the oath he took when he became our President. Under those circumstances, removal from office is no longer a question. As far as I am concerned, the President’s impeachment and removal from office is no longer a question. But to question the President’s decisions or doubt his authority, which many of us do now. We may disagree politically, but every American must be convinced the President’s leadership decisions are genuine. I for one, want more from my President than feigned anger and forced contention. I want the truth that this inquiry seeks.

The President’s personal indiscretions, which he himself has essentially acknowledged, are not at issue. What is at issue are allegations of perjury, conspiracy to commit perjury, and obstruction of justice, both in a sworn deposition in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit and in sworn testimony before a federal grand jury. Judge Starr has suggested that there are eleven instances in which there is substantial and credible evidence of perjury, subornation of perjury and obstruction of justice. The Judiciary Committee has suggested there may be as many as fifteen separate charges that warrant investigation. These are serious charges; the underlying behavior which may have led to these charges is important, but not central to the charges themselves. If proven true, these charges could constitute grounds for the President’s impeachment and removal from office.

In the meantime, Congress bears the burden of proof and the President is entitled to a presumption of innocence.

While I supported the independent counsel and the expanded and added allegations that the Independent Counsel’s investigation. This Congress does not need a protracted, open-ended witch-hunt, intimidation, embarrassment and harassment. The tawdry and trashy pages of hearsay, accusations, gossip, and stupid telephone chatter do not meet the standards of high crimes and misdemeanors.

The President’s actions in this matter are disappointing and unacceptable, BUT NOT IMPEACHABLE! Mr. Schippers, the General Counsel for the Majority on the House Judiciary Committee, extended the allegations in order to make them meet the constitutional standards for impeachment. However, even the extended and added allegations do not comport with the Constitutional standard for impeachment.

It is time to move on! Reprimand or condemn the President—but let us move on! These grossly unfair procedures will only tear this Congress and this nation apart. I ask my colleagues to vote down this open ended, unfair resolution presented today by the majority. It does not deserve the support of this House.

Mr. Speaker, Members of the Congressional Black Caucus have constantly warned this body about the dangers of a prosecutor run amuck. The Congressional Black Caucus has warned about the abuse of power by the Majority. It is time to end this abuse. I ask you to re-read the words of one of our nation’s greatest leaders, and to remind you of the history of our people who have struggled against injustice and unfairness.

Let us not march backwards. Let’s be wise enough to move forward and spend our precious time working on the issues of education, health care, senior citizens issues, children’s issues, and justice and opportunity for all Americans.

Our entire system of law is based on a sound understanding that we must live by truth. Today we are casting a vote that defines every principal of which our Constitution was written; truth, justice, and equality.

This is not a vote for or against Bill Clinton. This is a vote for the truth. We must allow justice to be fairly served. I took an oath to defend the Constitution and ensure that no person is above the law, even if that person is the President. This is not a choice, it is a duty. Mr. Speaker, this is a sad day for America. No one enjoys this. The President of the United States stands accused of committing serious felonies. Congress must fulfill its duty to fully investigate these charges, not just for the sake of reaching the truth, but for the sake of our country.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker and Members of Congress, the decision of the Republicans to limit the debate on this important resolution and to decide whether or not this body will move an inquiry to impeach President Clinton, is a vote for the truth. We must allow justice to be fairly served. I took an oath to defend the Constitution and ensure that no person is above the law, even if that person is the President. This is not a choice, it is a duty. Mr. Speaker, this is a sad day for America. No one enjoys this. The President of the United States stands accused of committing serious felonies. Congress must fulfill its duty to fully investigate these charges, not just for the sake of reaching the truth, but for the sake of our country.

Mr. Packard. Mr. Speaker, I would like to encourage my Colleagues to vote in favor of proceedings to further investigate President Clinton on the charges brought against him.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, with a heavy heart but a clear conscience, I will vote today to authorize the House Judiciary Committee to proceed with a formal inquiry that could lead to the impeachment of President Clinton.

The President’s personal indiscretions, which he himself has essentially acknowledged, are not at issue. What is at issue are allegations of perjury, conspiracy to commit perjury, and obstruction of justice, both in a sworn deposition in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit and in sworn testimony before a federal grand jury. However, even the extended and added allegations do not comport with the Constitutional standard for impeachment.

It is time to move on! Reprimand or condemn the President—but let us move on! These grossly unfair procedures will only tear this Congress and this nation apart. I ask my colleagues to vote down this open ended, unfair resolution presented today by the majority. It does not deserve the support of this House.

Mr. Speaker, Members of the Congressional Black Caucus have constantly warned this body about the dangers of a prosecutor run amuck. The Congressional Black Caucus has warned about the abuse of power by the Majority. It is time to end this abuse. I ask you to re-read the words of one of our nation’s greatest leaders, and to remind you of the history of our people who have struggled against injustice and unfairness.

Let us not march backwards. Let’s be wise enough to move forward and spend our precious time working on the issues of education, health care, senior citizens issues, children’s issues, and justice and opportunity for all Americans.
Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to House Resolution #581, the Republican Impeachment Inquiry Resolution, in favor of the Alternative offered today. I cannot condone the behavior of the President; his actions have been profoundly disappointing to the country. But, I believe that the investigation of the President's behavior in the Monica Lewinsky affair is necessary to address the conduct described by the independent counsel Kenneth Starr. This inquiry has the potential to last many months, if not years, and into the next Congress. The American people have urged this House to come to a conclusion, and the resolution offered today ignores this plea. Instead of coming to a concisely and thoughtfully, the Republican party has instead brought forth a plan that is illogical, without direction, and indefinite in length and scope.

Mr. Speaker, we need to heed the call of the American public and resolve this painful conflict properly. The basic question that we should focus on is the facts brought to us by independent counsel Kenneth Starr demand impeachment? If we assume that Kenneth Starr is a competent attorney, and the evidence brought forth is fact, then with the business of admiring that evidence in the light of the Constitution and what our founding fathers deemed impeachable.

I believe that the only way that we, as a body, can properly do this is by focusing the scope, time, and money of the inquiry. The bill that we should focus on is the facts brought to us by the Independent Counsel. This is precisely what the offered Alternative does. It would produce a proceeding that is fair, and one that would open with a consideration of the constitutional standard for impeachment. Once these standards are determined, the facts of the case would be examined and held in comparison.

Congress needs to return its focus and attention back to the business of the nation. This process should not stand between the problems of the country, and our duty to solve them. There are many issues—such as saving Social Security, passing a Patient's Bill of Rights, saving our environment for future generations, and ensuring that all children are given the tools to succeed—that are floundering by the wayside as we continue to focus our energies on this drawn out process. I believe that the only way we can return to work on these imperative issues is by bringing an expeditious conclusion to the inquiry by the end of the year.

An impeachment inquiry is based in the Constitution, and removed from partisan politics is the only way that we can bring this country the resolution that it craves. In the House of Representatives there is a process in place to deal with matters of presidential improprieties. As a Member of congress, I believe in this inquiry that the matter actually before us in the Referral from the Independent Counsel. This is precisely what the offered Alternative does. It would produce a proceeding that is fair, and one that would open with a consideration of the constitutional standard for impeachment. Once these standards are determined, the facts of the case would be examined and held in comparison.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in expressing my concern about the allegation made by Kenneth Starr against the President of the United States. We are faced with an historical vote on whether to proceed with impeachment proceedings against the President.

While there is no doubt that the allegations against the President are serious, it is extremely necessary to examine them in a timely manner. The House Judiciary Committee should investigate the allegations, but should avoid the excessive process beyond the Congress since stretching the time frame does not do justice to the President, unnecessarily drag the country through a painful process, and opens up the body to criticism that we are stretching this process out solely for political reasons.

Furthermore, this impeachment inquiry should be limited to the charges made by the independent counsel in his current report to the Congress. An open-ended inquiry, as proposed by the majority, is little more than a fishing expedition to dredge up more problems if they exist. As we all know, Kenneth Starr began this investigation about four and a half years ago with the Whitewater allegations, then moved on to the misuses of the FBI files, the firing of people in the Travel Office, the Paula Jones lawsuit and finally to the Monica Lewinsky matter. The Starr investigation over these years involved large amounts of time and money, and Starr’s fishing expedition has resulted with his report to the Congress which is the subject of the resolution before us today.

As we embark on this journey, let us not forget that our predecessors have been down this path before. Over the course of American history, the House of Representatives has deliberated and in fact impeached 15 individuals, including a President, 12 judges, a Senator, and a cabinet member. The process for impeachment, established by the Constitution, provides for the House to impeach individuals, including a President, 12 judges, a Senator, and a cabinet member. The process for impeachment, established by the Constitution, is a serious and wrenching one. It takes its toll on each and every one of us, as we undergo the accusation and finally the conviction procedures. President Andrew Jackson, whose President has been impeached, was charged in 1867 with 11 articles of impeachment. President Johnson lost his case before the House; however, the Senate voted only three impeachment articles but failed to convict President Johnson by a razor-thin margin of one vote. Of the individuals who were impeached by the House, only seven were convicted by the Senate. I raise this point only to stress the seriousness of the impeachment process and that we not turn the pending resolution on its head without equally serious debate on the merits of this case against the President.

As a former teacher, I cannot resist the temptation of referring to the federalist papers in order to give us some insights as we decide on some form of sanction against the President. In the Federalist Paper, Number One, written by Alexander Hamilton in 1787, he reminded us that in a great national discussion of whether the nation should adopt or reject the constitution, and I quote: “A torrent of angry and malignant passions will be let loose upon the government. The states will vie for popularity at the expense of public good.” And finally, Hamilton noted: “… it will be equally forgotten, that the vigor of Government is essential to the security of liberty; that, in the contemplation of a sound and well-informed government, their interest can never be separated.” I believe that we can learn from these lessons as we contemplate our constitutional responsibility to handle the Starr allegations.

I urge my colleagues to heed the words of Alexander Hamilton, that we use caution as we proceed with this inquiry, and above all, that we be fair to all parties involved. Let us support the reasonable and reasoned Boucher proposal.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Guam elected me to work on the pressing issues which affect their daily lives, like educational opportunities, access to quality health care, as well as access to employment and economic opportunities. We have serious worldwide economic difficulties in Asia which demand our attention.

We should proceed with caution. But, we should be mindful of our responsibilities. Let’s rise above partisanship as we deliberate on the difficult discourse pending before the Congress, as I attempt to move the House toward a Constitutional duty to fulfill. Therefore, to drop, we as Members of this House have a Constitutional duty to fulfill. Therefore, to proceed with a formal inquiry as to those matters raised in the Referral of the Independent Counsel and the evidence surrounding the White House Travel Office and FBI files. I believe the decision of the Independent Counsel not to include any of these matters in his Referral today and the exhaustive investigation reflects his view that no substantial and credible basis exists to justify considering impeachment based on any of these matters. Therefore, I conclude that it would be irresponsible to include any of these matters in the formal inquiry. Broadening the scope would serve no useful purpose and, significantly expand the duration of the inquiry to the detriment of our nation, and undermine the essential integrity of the process.

As I am writing to urge you to clearly unequivocally, and publicly commit not to expand the formal inquiry to include matters other than those raised in the Referral with our first obtaining majority approval of the Members of the House voting to expand the scope on the basis that substantial and credible evidence exists to support these matters. With this commitment on your part, I and I believe other like-minded Democrats, will join you in voting for a motion to proceed with a formal inquiry as to the matters raised in the Referral. Without a commitment, I cannot, in good conscience, support a formal inquiry likely to include Whitewater and other matter already reviewed and apparently resolve by the Independent Counsel.

Thank you in advance for addressing these concerns.

Yours Truly,

that it will devolve into a drawn-out, partisan investigation searching for possible impeachable offenses rather than an expedited, fair investigation examining the allegations presented to this body of possibly impeachable offenses.

For these reasons I rise in support of an impeachment inquiry as embodies in the Motion to Recommit and in opposition to the base resolution which is dangerously open-ended. Having consulted with Constitutional scholars, listened to the comments of my constituents, and search my conscience, I believe this is the course which best serves the interests of our Nation.

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Speaker, today’s proceeding is of such great historical importance, that it should be approached with a deep and abiding respect for the Congress, the Constitution and the Presidency.

We had the opportunity to develop a fair and responsible process that would protect not only the dignity of office of the Presidency, but create a precedent worth following. But the Republican majority has squandered it and by doing so, it has set in motion a process that is too much about partisanship and not enough about statesmanship.

It is more about election year defeat of political opponents than it is about what is right, just or fair. The Republican proposal offers no limits on how long this partisan inquiry will go on, nor on how long Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr can drag up issues that he has had four years to bring to this House. Sadly there has been no willingness to limit the duration or scope of this resolution.

The Republican proposal moves ahead with an impeachment inquiry before the Judiciary Committee has even conducted a review of the facts and determined whether those facts constitute substantial and credible evidence. It lowers the threshold for which a President can be harassed and persecuted to the point of distraction from his Constitutional duties.

From now on, any Congress dissatisfied with the policies of a particular Administration or the personal behavior of any President, could simply conduct an ongoing, costly and distracting inquiry designed to dilute the authority of the President.

But after the election when rational behavior returns and cooler head can prevail, I urge us to forge a way to rise above the nasty politics that have clouded this body.

The American people expect that. But after the election when rationale behavior returns and cooler head can prevail, I urge us to forge a way to rise above the nasty politics that have clouded this body.

I have fought partisan battles; I have stood for the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee had much more to say to this body than has been said to it today. On that basis, for the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee, explained why Americans ought to be concerned.

The Republicans’ main concern is not the sex, but the lying under oath about it. The memory lapses about it, the exploitation of government employees to cover it up. David Schippers, a lifelong Democrat who is counsel for the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee, explained why Americans ought to be concerned.

Clinton took the position that the Paula Jones lawsuit was bogus, Schippers noted. But the law gives a defendant no right to combat a bogus lawsuit by lying under oath.

"The principle that every witness in every proceeding is bound to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth is the foundation of the American system of justice, which is the envy of every civilized nation," he said. "The integrity of this country's entire judicial process is fatally compromised and that process will inevitably collapse." He said the individual circumstances of the case didn't matter. "It is the oath itself that is sacred and must be enforced," he said.

The president was engaged in an improper relationship which he did not want discarded. The president was engaged in an improper relationship which he did not want discarded.

The position is designed to minimize Clinton’s deceptions by casting them in effect as little white lies. If the Democrats could convince the House and the nation that "it was just sex," Clinton's chances of avoiding impeachment might be greater.

The approach of the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee had much more to say to this body than has been said to it today. On that basis, for the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee, explained why Americans ought to be concerned.

Americans ought to consider the consequences of letting the president's lying go unpunished. This isn't just that lovable rascal, the Comeback Kid, trying to escape an other jam. This is the president of the United States defying one of the most important principles of the legal system: that the truth must be told when a person is under oath.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, the vote today on an impeachment inquiry requires each of us to do our best to avoid partisan-ship a matter laced with partisanship. It calls on each of us to set aside the passions of the moment and act in the long-term interests of the American democracy, to uphold the Constitution. I pray for the wisdom to do so.

President Clinton has committed serious offenses against the American people, against the dignity of the office of the President, against the truth, and, probably, against the law.

How does the House of Representatives meet its constitutional responsibility in this grave matter today?

We are at an early stage of these proceedings, but we already have a fairly clear picture of the facts. To consider rejecting an impeachment inquiry at this early stage, we are obliged to construe the facts against the President and then test the facts against reasonable constitutional standards for impeachment. That’s what I’ve attempted to do.

It’s proper, given the gravity of the remedy of impeachment of a President, to set the standard for impeachment inquiry at a comparable level of gravity. The level of proof of that behavior should be set commensurately high. And, finally, given the extraordinary nature of the impeachment remedy, there should be a substantial burden placed on proponents to justify its use. In other words, when in doubt, don’t.

As to the question of what is an impeachable offense, it is evident from the Constitution, and from the writings and commentaries at the time, that abuse of office is the crux of the matter. Such an offense must involve serious injury or threat of serious injury to the Republic and account for the President in the conduct of his office, or at least seriously undermining his ability to conduct himself in office.

It’s unclear where to draw the limits of conduct to be treated as private for purposes of impeachment. But it is clear that the Framers did not intend everything a President does to be viewed as public. In public view, the conduct of President Clinton in this case originated in the private sphere and then was drawn into the public sphere. That happened largely because of the extraordinary use of a grand jury by the independent counsel, elevating or transforming the private to the public. The grand jury and that transformation are a device and a result not available in the case of any regular citizen, and available here only because the case involved the President.

Therefore, after careful review of the provisions of the Constitution, the writings and debate of the Framers, the precedents in prior impeachments, and the analysis of constitutional scholars, I have concluded that no impeachment is not warranted in this case. The assumed offenses simply do not undermine the State in the way or to the degree required to constitute impeachable offenses.

It is possible that Mr. Starr may come forward with new information about other conduct by the Grand Jury and that transformation are a device and a result not available in the case of any regular citizen, and available here only because the case involved the President.

Today’s vote has to be based on what is known, and reasonably to be inferred from what is known, today. On that basis, for the reasons I’ve stated, I conclude that proceeding further with an impeachment inquiry would serve no useful purpose because the conduct of the President—deplorable as it was—does not warrant impeachment.
The President’s behavior, however, does warrant punishment. The good order of the Republic and a proper respect for the law demand that he be held to account and receive appropriate punishment.

While the President might well be advised to leave office voluntarily, it would be a profound mistake to use the impeachment power to remove the President from office involuntarily. Absent a resignation, and rejecting impeachment, other alternatives exist. Although none is perfect, they would be preferable to impeachment. A formal censure of the President, delivered in person before a joint session of Congress, together with a significant monetary penalty as punishment, would completely replace impeachment. To vindicate the rule of law, the President would remain liable to prosecution after leaving office, if warranted by evidence of criminal conduct—the same sort of prosecution any citizen might face for similar conduct.

My conclusion is that punishment but not impeachment is the right course. This is also affected by an understanding of impeachment’s enormous costs to the country. Those costs would be paid first in terms of political divisiveness, prolonged distraction from critical national and international problems, and a waste of the most precious resources of the democracy—time and money. It would come in the harmful precedent we’ll have set and its damage to proper constitutional standards and order. Those costs are excessive.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hyde) is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am very sorry that the gentleman feels he is wronged. As the gentleman knows, under the rule and under the Rodino format, they were entitled to 1 hour. We doubled that. I did not think that was fair, but we could have gone on and on, and much of the same thing said over and over again. It would have been much too much for me to expect appreciation for doubling the time, but the hostility?

Let me suggest to Members who think this is going on like Tennyson’s brook, just on and on and on, the 20th amendment to the Constitution says that “Congress shall assemble at least once in every year,” and such meeting shall begin at noon on the third day of January.”

Mr. BOUCHER moves to recommit House Resolution 581 to the Committee on the Judiciary with instruction to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

Strike the first section and insert the following:

That (a)(1) The House of Representatives alternates and instructs the Independent Committee on the Judiciary (in this Resolution referred to as “the Committee”) to take the following steps within the time indicated in order, fully and fairly, to conduct an inquiry and, if appropriate, to act upon the Referral from the Independent Counsel (in this Resolution referred to as “the Referral”) in a manner which ensures the faithful discharge of the Constitutional duty of the Committee and concludes the inquiry at the earliest possible time, and, consistent with chapter 40 of title 28, United States Code, to consider any subsequent referral made by the Independent Counsel under section 596(c) of such title 28.

(2) The Committee shall thoroughly and comprehensively review the Constitutional standard for impeachment and determine if the facts presented in the Referral, if assumed to be true, could constitute grounds for the impeachment of the President.

(b) If the Committee determines that the facts stated in the Referral, if assumed to be true, could constitute grounds for impeachment, the Committee shall investigate fully and completely whether sufficient grounds exist for the House of Representatives to exercise its Constitutional power to impeach the President.

(c) If the Committee finds that there are not sufficient grounds to impeach the President, it shall then consider recommending to the House of Representatives alternative sanctions.

(d) Following the conclusion of its inquiry, the Committee shall consider and recommend it may commend to the House, including—

(1) one or more articles of impeachment;
(2) alternative sanctions; or
(3) no action.

The Committee shall make such a recommendation sufficiently in advance of December 31, 1998, so that the House of Representatives may consider such recommendations as the Committee may make by that date.

(e) If the Committee is unable to complete its assignment within the time frame set out in subsection (d), a resolution to the House of Representatives may be made by the Committee requesting an extension of time.
Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute. Mr. Speaker, the motion to recommit that I appealed to offer this afternoon is well tailored to the challenge that we have before us. It offers a framework for a full and a fair review by the House Committee on the Judiciary and a full and a fair review by the House of Representatives.

It assures that we give deference to the historical constitutional standard for impeachment, which has evolved to this House over two centuries. It assures ample time to consider carefully any of the facts that are contained in the referral sent to us by the Office of Independent Counsel, which rise to that constitutional standard.

It assures that the entire matter will be resolved promptly and that the nation is not distracted by a prolonged inquiry.

Some Members, Mr. Speaker, would prefer that there be no review. Some would have us investigate, for more than a year, a wide range of matters. The resolution that we are offering through this motion to recommit steers a middle course, a careful review limited to the materials that are now before us.

With the rules we offer, the House will discharge its constitutional obligations in a manner that is both thorough and expeditious. I urge the approval of this motion to recommit.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT).

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, the motion to recommit will correct several of the most egregious problems with this resolution. Adoption of the amendment is not accepted, we will be voting for an inquiry that cannot end. So long as people send allegations to the committee, the committee will inquire and go on and on and on.

The amendment establishes a reasoned approach by which we would consider the allegations before us and come to a conclusion. This amendment would add focus to the deliberations because some of the Starr allegations are not rising into the realm of a crime. I might add, the Republican counsel found some of the allegations so flimsy that he did not even mention them during his presentation to our committee, and many constitutional scholars have already expressed the view that none of the allegations amount to impeachable offenses and the question is not even close.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, make no mistake about it. A vote for this amendment is not necessarily a vote for an inquiry, because some who are for an inquiry and others who are against any inquiry all agree that if we are going to have an inquiry, it ought to be fair.
I would ask the Members of the House to reject this contrived, ill-conceived procedure in the motion to recommit. We need to follow the precedent established in 1974, the precedent that the gentleman from Missouri asked us to follow. I support the resolution recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, the question before us in this motion to recommit is whether we should make ourselves slaves to the clock or attempt to find out the truth. And let there be no mistake about it, nobody’s conduct is under investigation here but that of the President of the United States. And if he had not committed those things that the allegations have sent forth to us by the Independent Counsel, we would not be faced with discharging our awesome constitutional responsibilities. This should not be a race against the clock. And do not take my word for it, take the word of a respected senior Democratic Member on the other side of the aisle, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. LEE HAMILTON), who said yesterday, “I have had a lot of experience with investigations. Time limits create large incentives for delay.” Do not give anybody an incentive to delay and string this by establishing an arbitrary time limit.

Now, my friends on the other side of the aisle have said that this will be a never-ending investigation. They have not read the twentieth century to the Constitution of the United States. The 106th Congress goes out of business on January 3, 1999. This resolution expires with the 105th Congress and would have to be renewed by a vote of the House on the opening day of the 106th Congress. So all of the arguments over here have been about just 3 days. I think that the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), in following the Rodino precedent, and just almost adopting the Rodino motion word for word, has done the right thing.

February 6, 1994, was the last time this House of Representatives had to do the sacred duty of commencing an impeachment inquiry. The gentleman from Illinois has patterned this resolution after the resolution introduced by Chairman Peter Rodino of New Jersey. There was bipartisanship on the Republican side of the aisle in commencing an impeachment inquiry along exactly the same lines against a Republican President. That vote was 404 to 4. I would ask my Democratic friends to be as bipartisan today as the Republicans were back in 1974 by rejecting the motion to recommit and joining with us to discharge our constitutional duty.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question. The Speaker. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection. The Speaker. The question is on the motion to recommit.
Mr. WAXMAN changed his vote from "nay" to "yea." So the motion to recommit was rejected. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution. The resolution was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote. A recorded vote was ordered. The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 258, noes 176, not voting 1, as follows:

WAIVING ENROLLMENT REQUIREMENTS FOR REMAINDER OF 105TH CONGRESS WITH RESPECT TO ANY BILL OR JOINT RESOLUTION MAKING GENERAL OR CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1999

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, by direction of a unanimous consent request, I call up House Resolution 580 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 580

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution, it shall be in order to consider in the House the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 131) waiving certain enrollment requirements for the remainder of the One Hundred Fifth Congress with respect to any bill or joint resolution making general or continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1999.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), pending which I myself yield such time as I may consider desirable.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. I thank the Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the custumary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), pending which I myself yield such time as I may consider desirable.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. I thank the Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the custumary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), pending which I myself yield such time as I may consider desirable.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. I thank the Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the custumary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), pending which I myself yield such time as I may consider desirable.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution. The previous question was ordered. The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 580 just passed, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 131) waiving certain enrollment requirements for the remainder of the One Hundred Fifth Congress with respect to any bill or joint resolution making general or continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1999.

H.J. Res. 131

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of sections 106 and 107 of title 1, United States Code, are waived for the remainder of the One Hundred Fifth Congress with respect to the printing (on parchment or otherwise) of enrollment bills on parchment, to enroll any bill or joint resolution in such form as the Committee on House Oversight of the House of Representatives certifies to be a true enrollment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the resolution, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. GEJDENSON) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS).

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as was just discussed, Mr. Speaker, this resolution allows us to, notwithstanding the law requiring enrollment bills on parchment, to enroll any bill or joint resolution in such form as the Committee on House Oversight of the House of Representatives certifies to be a true enrollment. That is the sum and substance of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, we have no objections to this particular proposition. It is part of the housekeeping efforts to keep us going and trying to get things done.

But, frankly, we are about to leave town, in my opinion, without getting some of the most important things we need to get done. There are seniors losing their HMO benefits across my State and much of the Nation. We are not addressing that issue. We are not addressing the issues of class size and the quality of education our kids get. We left campaign finance reform hanging around, lingering a slow death.

Mr. Speaker, some people said this is the last Congress of the Congress in the history of this Union. I am not interested in rating the Congress. I am interested in dealing with these issues. Our seniors deserve to have a Congress that is engaged, and we should not be leaving until we deal with a couple of these critical issues. They are life-and-death issues.

Senator Doocey and I had a meeting where one gentleman had a heart attack. He was so anxious about his health care policy and the company dropping him.

Mr. Speaker, again, we have no objection to this particular provision, but we do have an objection to the way this Congress has been run and the little it has done with the needs of the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I will re-strain myself and tell the gentleman I have no further speakers if he wishes to yield back the balance of his time.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) has 28 minutes remaining.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I have 28 minutes, and they have yielded back the balance of their time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) let me indicate that I will yield back the balance of my time as well.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS).

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers if he wishes to yield back the balance of his time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McMHALE) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER).

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on September 28 I chaired a Subcommittee on Military Personnel hearing that examined the evidence supporting the award of the Medal of Honor to Theodore Roosevelt for his valor on July 1, 1898, during the Battle of San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War.

During the hearing we heard compelling testimony about the courage and decisiveness of Theodore Roosevelt from two of our colleagues who studied his actions that day in great detail, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McMHALE).

We learned the details of the military battle that day and the political battle that followed from the historian, Dr. John A. Gable, the executive director of the Theodore Roosevelt Association, and Mr. Nathan Miller, the author of the biography "Theodore Roosevelt, A Life."

Mr. Speaker, finally, we also heard from Mr. Tweed Roosevelt, the great-grandson of Theodore Roosevelt. We heard about the man Theodore Roosevelt, a man of immense energy and intelligence and a family man, a man of unwavering moral fiber, a man of immense stature in the history of this Nation, and the great impact that he had upon his four sons. Then we stop and think about the fact that this is a family that lost four sons in a uniform, three in World War I and one in World War II.

Mr. Speaker, we are honored today to have Mr. Tweed Roosevelt in the gallery to witness this historic celebration of an important moment in the life of his great-grandfather. On behalf of myself and the Committee on National Security and the House of Representatives, I would like to thank Mr. Roosevelt for being here today to represent his family and to share this moment with us.

We can talk about the greatness of the man in Theodore Roosevelt, about his fidelity and his honor and his integrity, and we recognize that these are attributes for which there is no disagreement on this House floor. We give our regard to this President. But what we must focus on is not about the life of the man and how he led it and his impact upon not only his family and the Nation, we have to focus on what happened, as was documented by evidence that occurred at the Battle of San Juan Hill in San Juan Heights. It is his heroic performance, the documented evidence that it did meet the established standard for the award of the medal at the time.

I would like to summarize the evidence of Theodore Roosevelt's heroism that I found instructive. The extraordinary nature of his bravery was confirmed by superiors, subordinates and other eyewitnesses. His willingness to expose himself to the most extreme hazards of the battle, as evidenced by a number of people killed or wounded around him, and his decision to lead the charge on horseback, the only mounted man in the attack, demonstrated his disregard for his own life. Such qualities at least equaled the selfless service of those who were awarded the Medal of Honor for service that day, most for rescuing wounded comrades under fire.

His raw courage and fearless, bold and decisive action in leading these two charges when other commanders and officers around him hesitated to do so saved lives. Not only did his actions save lives on that day, but his conspicuous valor created the course of the battle and clearly set him apart from his contemporaries.

His recommendation for the Medal of Honor came from two officers: Major General William Shafter and Colonel Leonard Wood, who were most qualified to judge whether the extraordinary bravery and nature of Roosevelt's actions qualified for the award of the medal since previously both had been awarded the medal themselves.

Mr. Speaker, in the absence of records, and to substantiate why the decoration was disapproved at the time, I believe there is credible evidence that politics and not an honest assessment of his valor was the prime consideration of those who reviewed Theodore Roosevelt's recommendation for the Medal of Honor. There is no doubt in my mind that then Secretary of War Russell Alger and the McKinley administration were acutely embarrassed by press reports generated by Roosevelt's criticism of Alger's decision not to return the troops home after the war because the administration feared a yellow fever epidemic in this country. When the troops were returned home shortly after the exposure, however, it was pain-fully clear that Secretary Alger re-sented Theodore Roosevelt's involve-ment.

Mr. Speaker, the evidence supporting the award of the Medal of Honor to Theodore Roosevelt is overwhelming. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCHALE. Mr. Speaker, I yield some time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCHALE) in co-sponsoring this legislation.

Teddy Roosevelt's charge up Kettle Hill at San Juan Heights is one of the most inspiring moments in our Nation's history. His bravery and gallantry demonstrated that man's initiative can change the course of a battle. For his bravery he was nominated for the Congressional Medal of Honor. However, it was never bestowed by the Secretary of the Army.

Mr. Speaker, the Medal of Honor is the highest award our Nation can bestow, and, therefore, we should not confer this honor lightly. However, we must recognize the standards for awarding the medal at that time were not the same as the standards for awarding it now. We need the Depart-ment of Defense to examine this case on its merits in light of the others who won the Medal of Honor during that engagement.

The Subcommittee on Military Personnel recently held a hearing on the case for awarding the Medal of Honor, the award that Colonel Roosevelt valued so highly and that his superiors so clearly wanted to give him. While I was unable to attend this hearing because the hearing that was about to occur in Mississippi last Monday, I understand that witnesses unanimously reaffirmed the case for awarding the medal. I hope this legislation will give the Depart-ment the chance to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, while I have the chance, I would like to take this opportunity to commend the bill's author, the gentle-man from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCHALE). Paul has not been a Member of Congress as long as some others, but he has served this body extremely well. He was asked by the President to serve as the Secretary of the Navy and declined, and was one of a very few people on this side of the aisle who felt that the best thing for our country, regardless of partisan politics, was to ask the man who offered him the job of Secretary of the Navy to resign.

I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCHALE) is the kind of people that we need more of in Congress. I regret his departure and I am honored to have cosponsored this bill with him.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. SOLOMON),
The chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. Solomon. Mr. Speaker, I thank the great American from Indiana, and I also want to commend another great American from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHale). I praise him for a different deal,” my colleagues remember that, particularly proud of him as the greatest Republican in the history of our State.

I have had conversations in recent days with the Acting Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Army, where a position was presented to me that although Theodore Roosevelt had been brave on that day, they indicated it did not appear, based on the Army’s analysis of the recommendation, that the courage shown by Theodore Roosevelt was extraordinary by comparison to other officers of similar rank and responsibility.

Mr. Speaker, I have been a Member of this Congress for 6 years. I have been a United States Marine for 26 years. I would like to state in the strongest possible personal terms that the valor displayed by Theodore Roosevelt that day, July 1, 1898, was absolutely extraordinary, breathtaking. If anything, history has not credited to Theodore Roosevelt the full measure of courage that he showed under fire.

I respectfully submit, for reasons that I find inexplicable, the Army has so far not appreciated his leadership at that time and place. I believe, however, the record of contemporaneous correspondence captures full well the point that I am making.

As I read these accounts of men with whom I served that day, I ask Members to determine whether or not the courage that Theodore Roosevelt showed that day was extraordinary, and whether or not, in light of observations of those who were there, he did indeed earn the Medal of Honor.

Mr. McHale. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

He was a man who devoted his life to fighting for what he called a “square deal,” my colleagues remember that, for every American. His name is synonymous with the principles of fairness, justice, love of nature and the highest standards of morality and ethics, standards he maintained both in public and private life.

So it is a proud moment for me to endorse his receiving the Medal of Honor.

This bill will correct the miscarriage of justice which denied him the Medal of Honor during his own lifetime, despite the strong recommendations on his behalf by superior officers and others with whom he served in the Spanish-American War.

Mr. Speaker, not only have I had the privilege of representing the home of Franklin Delano Roosevelt in Hyde Park, New York, but I also represent the Adirondack Mountains where President Theodore Roosevelt spent much of his time. I would like to take just the rest of my time to tell a little-known story about the circumstances that surrounded Theodore Roosevelt’s accession to the Presidency.

When President McKinley was shot in Buffalo, New York, then-Vice President Roosevelt succeeded to the Presidency. Upon being assured by doctors that the President was out of danger, Roosevelt joined his family for a camping and hiking trip in the Adirondack Mountains up where I live, and, Mr. Speaker, on the afternoon of September 13, 1901, Roosevelt and several hiking companions were descending from Mount Marcy, one of the most beautiful mountains in the Adirondacks, when word came that the President’s condition had taken an unexpected turn for the worse.

They then hiked 12 miles in 3 hours and 15 minutes through the woods to reach a lodge where Mrs. Roosevelt was staying and they could await developments. And at 10 p.m., word came the President was sinking rapidly.

Roosevelt set out from there in a single horse-drawn carriage on a breakneck ride through the night in a thickly-forested area to reach the railroad station. Creations, New York. His horse and driver were changed twice en route, and Roosevelt covered 34 miles in a little over 6 hours. In the final relay, he covered 16 miles in just one hour and 41 minutes, and I challenge anybody to do that. Upon his arrival at North Creek just after dawn on September 4, 1901, Theodore Roosevelt was informed that he was the 26th President of the United States of America. He made his way to his 43rd birthday. He then boarded the train for Buffalo and was formally sworn in later that day.

Today, in my congressional district, there is a plaque that marks the approximate spot where Roosevelt was in his mad dash through the night at the moment that McKinley died. It was at that moment in that spot that he became the President of the United States of America.

Mr. Speaker, let me just conclude by making one more point. Theodore Roosevelt’s wartime exploits are well-known. Perhaps less well-known today is the fact that he was the very first American person to receive the Nobel Peace Prize. He was awarded that singular honor in 1906 in recognition of his successful effort to negotiate settlement in the Russo-Japanese War. Roosevelt’s role as a peacemaker provides a very interesting counterpart to his role as a soldier.

I have had conversations in recent days with the Acting Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Army, where a position was presented to me that although Theodore Roosevelt had been brave on that day, they indicated it did not appear, based on the Army’s analysis of the recommendation, that the courage shown by Theodore Roosevelt was extraordinary by comparison to other officers of similar rank and responsibility.

Mr. McHale. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me first of all thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. Solomon) for his very nice remarks. I would point out to the gentleman from New York that the carriage to which he made reference is today on display in the Adirondack Museum at Blue Mountain Lake. My family and I had the opportunity to view that carriage a few years ago.

Let me also thank the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Taylor) for the kind personal remarks that he directed toward me. In the interest of complete truth, I want to make it clear that I withdrew my name for consideration as Secretary of the Navy before the President had made any final decision, and before any offer had been made to me. Moving or not, moving or truly important, the combat record of Theodore Roosevelt, I rise to recommend to the membership of the House that the Medal of Honor be granted to former President Theodore Roosevelt.

On July 1, 1898, Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt of the 1st Volunteer Cavalry in the service of the United States, addressed to the Adjutant General, Washington, D.C.: Sir, I have the honor to recommend Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, 1st U.S. Voluntary Cavalry, for the Medal of Honor for distinguished gallantry in leading a charge on one of the entrenched hills to the east of the Spanish position in the suburbs of Santiago de Cuba July 1, 1898, Leonard Wood, Colonel U.S. 1st Volunteer.

First endorsement, 3 days later, July 9, 1898: Earnestly recommended Joseph Wheeler, General U.S. Voluntary Cavalry, commanding, a gentleman who returned to active duty as a commanding officer from this very body where he was at that time serving as a member of the United States House of Representatives.

Second endorsement, July 9, 1898: Respectfully forwarded to the Adjutant General of the Army:

Approved; William R. Shafter, U.S. Volunteeers, commanding.

The recommendation, Mr. Speaker, then went to Secretary of War Alger. From that point forward, what was purely a military recommendation, based on extraordinary courage under fire, became mired in unrelated tangential and unfortunate politics.

I'd like to state the firsthand observations of those who witnessed Theodore Roosevelt’s courage:

Headquarters, United States Military Academy, April 5, 1999.

My duties on July 1st, 1898, brought me in constant observation with Colonel Roosevelt from early morning until shortly before the climax of the assault of
At both Kettle Hill and the ridge known as the so-called Kettle Hill. During this time, while under the enemy's artillery fire from El Paso and while on the March from El Paso to San Juan, he, to the point from which his regiment moved to the assault about 2 miles, the greater part under fire, Colonel Roosevelt was conspicuous above any others I observed in men's performance of duty, in total disregard of his personal danger, and in his eagerness to meet the enemy.

At El Paso, when the enemy opened on that place with artillery fire, a shrapnel bullet grazed one of Colonel Roosevelt's wrists. The incident did not lessen his exposure under fire, but he continued so exposed until he had placed his command under cover.

In moving to the assault of San Juan, Colonel Roosevelt was most conspicuously brave, gallant, and indifferent to his own safety. He, in the open, led his regiment. No officer could have set a more striking example to his men or displayed greater intrepidity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Colonel, U.S. Army, Superintendent of West Point.

The second piece of correspondence, December 17, 1898:

I hereby certify that on July 1, 1898, Colonel Roosevelt, 1st Volunteer Cavalry, distinguished himself throughout the action, and on two occasions, when the cavalry was in a tangle in which the line hesitated under fire, Colonel Roosevelt placed his life in extreme jeopardy by unassailable exposure to severe fire while attempting to lead his regiment. For the performance of duty, in total disregard of his personal danger, and in his eagerness to meet the enemy.

Colonel Roosevelt never doubted his courage. The men who served with Theodore Roosevelt never doubted his courage. The men who served with Theodore Roosevelt, in the face of danger, displayed himself to enemy fire with absolute fearlessness. There is absolutely no historic doubt that after being recommended by his commanding officer, as pointed out by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Buyer), himself a recipient of the Medal of Honor, and the two senior officers next in the chain of command, Theodore Roosevelt was denied the Congressional Medal of Honor because he was then publicly engaged in an unrelated political dispute with the Secretary of War, who never quite found time to sign the recommendation that had been fully endorsed by the military chain of command.

After Theodore Roosevelt died, his widow, Edith, said that having been recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor and having not received it was one of the most significant disappointments of Roosevelt's life.

Let me conclude with this, Mr. Speaker. If I may, I admire Theodore Roosevelt. He was the President, tremendously, but after 26 years as a United States Marine, I would not recommend any man, including Theodore Roosevelt, for the Congressional Medal of Honor unless I believed deep in my heart that he had, through the display of valor, earned that decoration in battle. Mr. Speaker, I am absolutely convinced that was the case.

Because of political intervention, a man who later became President of the United States but who on that day was simply a very, very brave lieutenant colonel was denied the medal for which he had been properly recommended. It has been 100 years. Mr. Speaker, we today, in the name of history, and in the name of honor that he had, through the display of valor, earned that decoration in battle. Mr. Speaker, I am absolutely convinced that that was the case.

Because of political intervention, a man who later became President of the United States but who on that day was simply a very, very brave lieutenant colonel was denied the medal for which he had been properly recommended. It has been 100 years. Mr. Speaker, we today, in the name of the President and perhaps an even greater warrior, we have the opportunity to reverse a century of injustice by granting to Theodore Roosevelt, not President Roosevelt but Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, the medal that he earned in battle. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Buyer. Mr. Speaker. I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Utah Island, New York (Mr. Lazio), who has worked very hard on this, along with the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHale).

Mr. Lazio of New York. Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by thanking the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Buyer) for his leadership in bringing this to the floor. I also would like to acknowledge the great work of many different people who are not here in the Chamber today, but who were instrumental in giving us the factual basis for this, including the Theodore Roosevelt Association, Tweed Roosevelt, James Roosevelt, and many others.

I rise in strong support of this bill to authorize the President to award the Medal of Honor to that great Long Islander, Theodore Roosevelt. Teddy Roosevelt was a man of honor, a man who held tightly to his ideals and stayed true to them in the face of adversity. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHale) is such a man, and I cannot think of a more fitting tribute before he leaves this House than to pass this bill and to have it signed into law.

Theodore Roosevelt is a personal hero of mine. His leadership at the Santiago Heights is one of the reasons I admire him so. There were legions of men on the battlefield that day, and Teddy Roosevelt was just one, but through his actions, that one moment, cast aside all regard for personal safety, and he made history. He made history because of a choice he made in the face of danger, in the face of death. While we generally do not have to guard our lives because of the decisions we make here, we can be regarded as our honor. I look to Theodore Roosevelt as an inspiration.

As has been remarked earlier, Roosevelt was a great President and a great statesman, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, an author, a conservationist, a reformer, a trustbuster, a great Commissioner of Police in New York City, a great Governor of the State of New York.

But for none of those reasons are we here today, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHale) said. It is because of what he did on that fateful day on July 1, one hundred years ago. We speak more and more about role models in our society. Roosevelt was a role model of the first order. He told the truth. He did what he promised to do. He was an acknowledged inspiration to another Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. Delano remains a role model for all Americans.

The same character that made Theodore Roosevelt a role model also made him a hero. America could use some of that character right now. Today we have the marvelous opportunity to correct an injustice, to complete the historical record. We have an opportunity to help grant Theodore Roosevelt the Medal of Honor that he so richly deserved 100 years ago. He does not deserve it because of what we say now in this Chamber, but because the history and his contemporaries tell us he does.

Roosevelt's heroism on July 1 of 1898 has been documented. With his cavalry pinned down and taking heavy casualties, he fearlessly, on horseback, charged Kettle Hill, armed only with a revolver, knowing that his men would follow. The Rough Riders' heroic assault, with the brave Buffalo Soldiers and others, assured a quick victory, seized the high ground, and saved many lives.

Despite being recommended for the Medal of Honor by his superiors and subordinates alike, including those that have been referenced who have won the Medal of Honor themselves, the Secretary of War, Russell Alger, denied the medal out of personal dislike for Roosevelt.

Many others disagreed about this, but it was clear the medal was not denied on the merits; some saw it was because Roosevelt called to have his troops brought back so they would not face further losses as a result of yellow fever, some because they felt Roosevelt was so exuberant, some because Roosevelt was so ambitious. But it was not based on the merit.

The Medal of Honor citation for Lt. Col. Wendell Neville during the Mexican Campaign of 1915 could easily be inserted into a citation for Theodore Roosevelt. It reads as follows:

His duties required him to be at points of great danger in directing his officers and men, and he exhibited conspicuous courage, coolness, and skill in his conduct of the fighting. Upon his courage and skill depended, in great measure, success or failure. His responsibilities were great and he met them with an energy worthy of commendation.

In the modern age, individual cases of heroism occur, but the weapons of today open opportunities for unprecedented individual achievements in combat.

In the formal application I have submitted to the Army I cite the action of a Platoon Sergeant McLeery during the Vietnam War. McLeery single-handedly assaulted a hilltop Vietnamese bunker complex, firing his machine gun from the hip and tossing grenades at the defenders. Reaching the top of the hill, McLeery shouted encouragement to his platoon, who then joined him in the assault. McLeery then began a lateral assault on the bunker line.

Mr. COX of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution to recognize Theodore Roosevelt with the Medal of Honor, and in support of the two veterans of the armed services, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCAHLE) who have dignified us with this effort to bring it to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I want in particular to recognize one of those two sponsors, because he is going to be leaving us at the end of this Congress which is close upon us. I am referring to the gentleman from California (Mr. COX). I think that he summed up the admiration and public respect that we have for the gentleman from California (Mr. COX) and sought the minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania read about Teddy Roosevelt and describe to us the qualities that he possessed and the very reasons that he should receive this honor.

Mr. Speaker, during the gentleman’s tenure in Congress, he has been exposed to severe fire, metaphorically, but nonetheless truly. He has led his colleagues and his countrymen by his conduct and his example.

I came to work with the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BUYER) who the President was preparing to send troops to Bosnia, and I know the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) did as well. In meetings with them, with the President, the Vice President, the Secretary of State, and other senior administration officials, the gentleman from Pennsylvania was always enormously well prepared, always articulate, and always made his points with compelling logic.

His patriotism has always been evident. Upon his retirement, we can do no less than to honor him by passing this bill and by recognizing that the extraordinary qualities that Teddy Roosevelt displayed are qualities that the gentleman also possesses. Mr. MCAHLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for his kind words.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), a dangerous proposition in this case.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I find myself on this side of the aisle in order to honor the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PAUL MCAHLE) and thank him very much. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from California (Mr. COX). I think that he summed up the admiration that all of us have for the gentleman from Pennsylvania and an admiration that will go with him in the years ahead.

Mr. Speaker, it was 100 years ago this year that Teddy Roosevelt led his Rough Riders in the Battle of San Juan Hill, which was a decisive battle of the Spanish-American War. History has long overlooked the significance of that battle and the significance of that war, as well as the heroism of Colonel Teddy Roosevelt.

Had the battle of San Juan Hill been lost, America and the Spanish-American War would likely have been stuck into a no-win conflict, mired down with thinning ranks, troops being thinned, yes, from disease and from lack of competence on the part of our own country in terms of the art of fighting a war.

In fact, at that time we did not know how to transport our troops. We did not know how to supply our troops. And many more of those people who volunteered during the Spanish-American War died of eating tainted meat than they did from enemy bullets, because our country did not have the expertise. And if it had not been for the determination and the courage and the gallantry displayed by Teddy Roosevelt, that war would have turned out differently.

We need to ask ourselves as Americans, as we look back on this long forgotten war in the last century, what would the America that we know have been like had we lost that war? Most certainly had we lost that small war, America’s attitude towards involvement in the world would have been totally different. The American “can do” was so much a part of the 20th century would not have been a part of the decision-making process of our leaders and of our people when the great threats to all mankind emerged in the 20th century. That of communism, Fascism, the Japanese militarism, and communism.

Instead, America faced the 20th century with a positive sense of destiny; that we were meant to be a positive force in the world. This can be tied back to the success of that small war, that forgotten war, the Spanish-American War and Teddy Roosevelt’s pivotal moment in American history.

Teddy Roosevelt, in leading his troops up San Juan Hill, showed as much gallantry, and we have heard the evidence today, as our Medal of Honor winners. He exposed himself to the withering fire of the enemy and literally led his troops on horseback and making a target out of himself. Teddy Roosevelt deserved the Nation’s highest award and politics, as we heard, got in the way. Let us today pay this long overdue honor to this American President and this American hero.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER), and also like to say thanks to my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCAHLE) who is going to be leaving this House, but he will be with us. Thanks to his efforts, we are expressing the appreciation in this long overdue tribute.

Teddy Roosevelt’s courage and leadership in this battle, and his indomitable spirit, did much to shape the American character. We are giving him thanks today. It has also been stated by another friend who is also leaving, the gentleman from New York (Mr. SOLOMON) that Teddy Roosevelt was the founder of the American presidency. And if we succeed today, and I hope we do and I hope this goes through the legislative process, Teddy Roosevelt will be the only individual in history to have... earned both the Medal of Honor and the Nobel Peace Prize. I think that is a fitting tribute for a man who represented so much and did so much to shape the 20th century, the American century.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as I reviewed this case, a list of words come to mind. I want to share them with you. They are words that come to mind with regard to Teddy Roosevelt and his gallantry. They are virtues and ideals and values that we can all admire. I think about valor, bravery, gallantry, courage. He was audacious. He was bold. He was dauntless, fearless, gutsy. He had intrepid character. He was valiant, stalwart, steadfast. Yes, venturesome and daring.

And then I add three more: Bold-hearted, brave-hearted and lion-hearted. Those words, yes, apply to Teddy Roosevelt. It is his conspicuous valor and gallantry on that day, and that is why I believe this House should overwhelmingly pass this resolution to authorize the President of the United States to award the Medal of Honor to one of our great presidents, Theodore Roosevelt.

Let me conclude and say to my very dear friend, as you go home to your family, this Congress will miss you, the country will miss you, but more importantly, I am going to miss you, my friend.

When I think about bold-hearted and brave-hearted and lion-hearted, I think of PAUL McHALE, because your heart is in the right place, my friend. Godspeed to you, and that phone is two-way. Do you hear me?

Mr. McHALE. I do.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McHALE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume for concluding remarks.

Mr. Speaker, is it too late to announce my reelection campaign? Had all these nice things been said about me a year ago I might have run again.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Roosevelt, Twedd Roosevelt, I am delighted and honored that you are here with us today. Throughout the entire presidency of Theodore Roosevelt our forces were never ordered into battle. Theodore Roosevelt understood that the ultimate purpose of military power is to deter conflict and he, in fact, achieved that goal during his presidency.

I have had the opportunity on a number of occasions to go to the Roosevelt Room at the White House, where the Nobel Prize awarded to Theodore Roosevelt for his efforts in negotiating a peace in the Russo-Japanese War remains on display.

I can think of nothing more fitting for Teddy Roosevelt and in fact I can think of nothing more emblematic of our Nation than one day, following this action, to have the Congressional Medal of Honor on that mantle for display immediately adjacent to the Nobel Peace Prize.

We are a nation that reveres peace. We do all that we can to achieve peace, and we are prepared to go to war only in those cases when necessary to defend the best interests and liberty of the citizens of our Nation.

We abhor war. We strive for peace. Those two medals, side-by-side, on display in the Roosevelt Room, would capture much of Theodore Roosevelt and all that is good in our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, in a couple of moments, when it is procedurally proper, I am going to call for a recorded vote. We have little time remaining in this Congress. It is imperative that the other body act within the next 24 to 48 hours.

In order to impress upon the other body the sincere, overwhelming support of the membership of this House, I will call for a recorded vote so that the truth may be tallied, on the other side of the Capitol, provide an incentive for prompt consideration in the other body.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). Before putting the question, the Chair would remind all Members that pursuant to clause 8 of rule XIV it is not in order to recognize or call to the attention of the House any occupant in the gallery.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2263.

The question was taken.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

FURTHER PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4274, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1999

Mr. DREIER, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 105-798) on the resolution (H. Res. 584) further providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 4274) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 584 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That during consideration of the bill (H.R. 4274) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union pursuant to House Resolution 56—

(1) the general debate shall not exceed one hour; and

(2) amendments numbered 2 and 3 in House Report 105-762 shall be in order before consideration of any other amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) is recognized for one hour.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend from Fairport, the gentleman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded will be for purposes of debate only.

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous material.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, this rule provides for further consideration of the bill H.R. 4274, the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education appropriations bill for 1999, pursuant to H. Res. 564.

The bill will afford 60 minutes of general debate divided equally between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations.

This rule makes in order, before consideration of any other amendments, the amendments numbered 2 and 3 that were printed in the report of the Committee on Rules that accompanied H. Res. 564.

Mr. Speaker, the House last week passed a rule to provide for consideration of this appropriations bill, the single largest appropriations bill that comes before the Congress, the health care, medical research, education and job training programs provided for in this bill touch the lives of tens of millions of American families. For that reason alone, the bill deserves consideration on the floor of the People's House.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that this bill is immersed in highly charged social issues and is very controversial. Some may be uncomfortable with those debates but they are a fact of life when Federal Government programs impose on areas of daily life which for so long were outside the purview of Washington, D.C.

When that happens, deep and often emotional questions about values will be raised. We can expect nothing less. I applaud the work of my friend from Wilmette, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER), for tackling the challenge put before his committee in as commendable a fashion as possible. His bill deserves a fair hearing on the House floor.
This rule, that was already approved by the House, along with this modification, will allow us to engage in what will certainly be a spirited debate that is worth having. I urge Members on both sides of the aisle to recognize that fact and support this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. Dreier), for yielding me the customary half-hour, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, this rule is unprecedented. The House has already passed an open rule for the consideration of the Labor-HHS and Education bills. The second rule we are being asked to approve tonight is a rule that will block any real consideration of that bill.

Instead, this rule's extraordinary procedure is designed to give a single special interest group a vote that it wishes to use in a voter scorecard before the election. Once we take that vote, the appropriations bill will be pulled from the floor.

Subverting the House's legislative process for this cynical political ploy typifies the majority's actions this entire session. The do-nothing majority continues to put its own special interests before the public good. We have seen bill after bill manipulated for partisan purposes, forcing Members to take votes for purely partisan political reasons. We know these bills would never be enacted into law, but each provided a sound bite for some special interest.

In the meantime, this majority has failed in its most basic responsibility. For more than a year since the Congressional Budget Act was passed 24 years ago, Congress has not passed a budget resolution. The law requires action on a concurrent budget resolution by April 15. That is many months ago. Six months later, the majority has still failed to pass a resolution.

Today, 8 days into the new fiscal year, only one of the thirteen appropriations bills has been signed into law, and only three other appropriations bills have even been sent to the President. On October 8, with nine appropriations bills still in the legislative process, and with only 2 remaining scheduled legislative days, the House is being asked to again ignore its statutory responsibilities.

Today, we are not taking up the Labor-HHS-Education bill in order to move the process to a conclusion. A rump "conference committee" has been working on this bill for several days and this version is no longer the basis for further action. This new rule is designed solely to force a House vote on two contentious legislative amendments that amend a portion of the bill containing legislative language that does not even belong in the bill.

The rule would enable the House to proceed directly to a vote on a controversial provision in the second title of the bill, directly leaping over the Labor Department provisions and ignoring a number of important issues and amendments that deserve a full and fair debate in this chamber. Instead, the House would debate immediately an amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Dreier) and a substitute to be offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Istook) regarding parental consent for title X contraceptives distributed to minors.

Now, why is it so vital the House single out those two particular controversial amendments? There is only one reason. The majority has promised its far-right allies this vote to provide campaign fodder for the November election.

This hardly a new issue. The House has voted on parental consent issues many times, most recently on last year's Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill. Our positions are all clear on this matter. Yet the majority is knowing once again another element, handing them a politically attractive vote a mere 25 days before the election.

Mr. Speaker, I have been proud to support Labor-HHS appropriations bills in the past. I have enormous respect for its chairman, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Porter), who is one of the finest persons I have served with in the House of Representatives. Nevertheless, this rule will not provide for real consideration of this most important bill.

This rule represents the most egregious example yet of the majority using its powers for partisan gain. I urge my colleagues to reject this ruse. This situation should be better than this procedural farce. With the Nation's business to do, we should not be pandering to a single interest group. Please vote against this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to simply respond to the words of my friend from Fairport, and what I would say is that we have already considered this particular action that took place on the rule. This is simply making what is really a minor modification to ensure that amendments numbered 2 and 3 are going to be considered under the constraints that were included in the rule that did pass the House.

There are many Members who have indicated that they want to have a full and fair debate on those issues, which I admit are controversial. Frankly, we have the responsibility of dealing with tough public policy questions, and they are amended, too.

And so with that, I would say that we can continue to hear charges of the do-nothing Congress and all of this sort of stuff that was used back in 1948; we can hear all sorts of name-calling, which we heard earlier during the debate, but I would just underscore again that this rule passed the House earlier this week. We have considered this issue. We have a couple of amendments that members of our Members have brought to the forefront, and I think that those Members have a right to be heard.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Moakley).

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my dear colleague and friend, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Slaughter), today I am standing here on behalf of the thousands upon thousands of Americans who rely on the LIHEAP program to help heat their homes in the winter and cool them in the summer. As we celebrate an end to the budget deficit for the first time in years, these people are still wondering how they will keep their children warm this winter, and that, Mr. Speaker, is just plain wrong.

It is wrong for people to choose between putting food on the table and heating their homes when the temperature outside is below zero. And it is not only limited to the cold climate, Mr. Speaker. During the heat wave that swept through the south this summer, one billion dollar in savings were released to help the most vulnerable people suffering from those high temperatures.

Given how important this program is, given that it saves so many lives, and given the benefits that stretch from Maine to Mississippi, I am very disappointed that the Committee on Appropriations has decided to eliminate this program entirely.

Mr. Speaker, the people who this program helps are not the well-off people. Two-thirds of the people that this program is aimed at make less than $8,000 a year. And during periods of extreme cold or extreme heat they have to choose between paying their utility bills and paying their grocery bills.

Let me give my colleagues an example. I have here a letter from a retired veteran who lives in South Boston. He is a veteran of the Korean War. And he explained in this letter that he gets by on about $100 a week. And I would just like to read part of this letter. It says: Joe, why would anyone want to cut this heating program? It really helps us veterans in the winter. Sometimes you can't afford to heat your room and eat at the same time. What's the matter with the politicians when they want to destroy us veterans and the elderly?

Mr. Speaker, to tell the truth, I do not know how to answer this letter, and I suspect many of my colleagues feel the same way when they get similar letters.

Mr. Speaker, because the LIHEAP program has always received bipartisan support, my Republican colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. JACK QUINN), and I have sent a letter to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations asking for full funding of LIHEAP. This letter was signed by over 200 Republicans and Democrats alike, in a true bipartisan movement. And until this appropriations bill contains funding for the LIHEAP program, I urge those 200 Members to join me in opposing this rule.

With the budget finally in the black, with prosperity affecting millions upon millions of Americans, now is not the time to forget about the elderly. Now is not the time to forget about the poor. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I have the highest regard for my friend from South Boston, and I would say to him, as we consider debate on this rule, which is simply a modification of the rule that already passed the House, I think it is important to note that the LIHEAP program is something that I understand has actually had an increase in the manager’s amendment; and the next thing would be in order under this rule, following consideration of amendments numbered 2 and 3, would, in fact, be the manager’s amendment, which would include that increase.

I do not want to get into a big debate on the LIHEAP program itself, but I will say that if we look at the program that was put into place in the mid-1970s, at the height of the energy crisis, it was done so, in large part, to deal with that very serious need that was out there. Today, taking inflation into consideration, it is very clear that the cost of energy is substantially lower than it was even in those days in the 1970s. So the LIHEAP program was established, in large part, to provide reimbursement to the States, many of which had very, very serious deficit problems themselves at that point, and now most States are, in fact, running a surplus.

So I would say that I think my friend raises some very interesting questions about the LIHEAP program, and I would argue that those could, in fact, be considered following the consideration of this rule when they move ahead with the Labor-HHS appropriations bill. And, again, the manager’s amendment would, in fact, be the next thing in order.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY).

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman saying that this matter is dealt with in the manager’s amendment in this rule?

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOAKLEY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman that it is my understanding that the manager’s amendment, that would be next to be considered after passage of this rule, after we consider the amendments numbered 2 and 3, the manager’s amendment would be in order. And it is my understanding there is, in fact, an increase in funding for the LIHEAP program. Am I wrong?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOAKLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, there is not an increase in the LIHEAP program in the manager’s amendment. There is an increase from zero. But the program level last year was over a billion dollars. So it is an 85 percent reduction. Thanks for small favors.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I was correct, then, an increase from zero. There is, in fact, an increase in that.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I would just tell the gentleman that that increase still represents about a half a billion dollar decrease.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this astonishing rule. The Labor-HHS bill has often been described by both Democrats and Republicans as the people’s bill. It reflects our priorities, our concerns about the health, the education and employment of our children and our families.

What, then, does this rule reveal as Republican priorities? Will we debate full funding for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, which helps poor seniors and families with children heat their homes without sacrificing prescriptions or food? No, we are not going to do that.

Will we debate the elimination of the summer jobs program, which provides summer employment for nearly half a million teens who would otherwise be employed in this country? No, we are not going to do that.

Will we debate the $2 billion shortfall in education funding in this bill? The need for modern schools, so that our children can learn the skills that they need to get the good jobs of the 21st century? The need to reduce class size, train more teachers, ensure that every child gets the attention and the discipline he or she needs in order to be able to learn? No, we are not going to do that.

Will we debate funding for child care, to ensure that children have safe places to learn while their parents are at work? Will we debate after-school care, to keep kids off our streets and out of trouble in the hours after school ends and before mom and dad get home? No, we are not going to do that.

Will we debate funding for LIHEAP, for the LIHEAP program? Am I wrong?

Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON).

Ms. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in the capitol to increase persons coming in, immigrants, for jobs because we do not have them prepared, but yet we are gutting the part of this budget that would prepare our young people for the future. We have gutted Goals 2000 which brings our parents much more involved into the education planning for our students. The technology literacy challenge fund has been eliminated, the Eisenhower professional development grants being eliminated, title I grants and safe and drug-free schools.

We have heard arguments all year long about the increase of drug usage among our students, yet eliminating those dollars that can help eliminate the drug use to educate and treat young people who have gotten involved in drugs.

I do not understand the logic of why we are making tax breaks and immigration more of a priority than preparing our own young people for the future. It does not make sense. I ask my colleagues to vote against this rule.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a simple question. What in God’s name are we doing bringing up this bill... at this point? The authority for the government to remain open expires in one day. We still have seven major appropriation bills, funding more than half the government, that have still not been acted upon. And if they are not, it will be a whole lot easier for government not to be operating two days from now. Yet we are about to debate a bill which is going nowhere.

Now, we have been trying to get together to resolve the remaining differences on the seven major appropriation bills that have still to be disposed of so that we can finish our work, keep the government open and go home. We have some rather major problems. If anybody has noticed what has been happening today and yesterday with respect to the stock market and NASDAQ, you have a huge collapse on your hands. And it is probably going to get a lot worse. We are trying to figure out how to reach agreement on things as controversial as the IMF. We have been trying to get to a meeting since 10 o’clock this morning between the principal conferees on the labor-health-education budget, and we have a wide variety of other disputes that are preventing us from getting our work done.

I would point out that while the press seems to be under the impression that there are only five or six items that still are in dispute, we have over 300 open issues that are still highly controversial that must be resolved sometime tomorrow night. Yet we are being asked now to begin debate on a bill which we know is going nowhere.

This bill is so extreme that the Republican majority in the Senate has shoved it aside and produced an entirely different bill. We have yet to finish action on the Labor-Health bill, the Transportation bill, the State-Justice-Commerce bill, the Foreign Operations bill, the District of Columbia bill, the Ag bill. Yet the Senate passed the one we have been working on.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, earlier this afternoon, when the House voted on a motion to adjourn, I was unavoidably detained. I was conducting a satellite teleconference with the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury to constituents in Honolulu discussing the financial crisis in East Asia and the International Monetary Fund. Had I been present, I would have voted no.

FURTHER PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4274, DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). The Chair would advise that the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) has 24½ minutes remaining, and the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) has 12 minutes remaining in the debate on the rule.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, moving right along in an expeditious manner, as we have been trying to throughout the day on most of the questions we have faced here, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule regarding the appropriations measure on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. There has been a lot of work, of course, that has gone with this bill, as there always is, this being one of the largest spending bills each year that comes before the House.

I especially want to compliment the chairman of the Subcommittee of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER). This is always a very difficult bill, bringing together, as it does, so many different issues, so much major funding. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) has gone to great pains to work with a large number of Members who had concerns over this measure.

I know the gentleman is personally very pleased with the additional funding for medical research through the National Institute of Health, which are in this bill, the efforts to increase the efficiency of the money that actually reaches the classroom through Federal funding; and it be through different block grants and things such as impact aid. I know the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) has been very diligent in that.

Mr. Speaker, there is one particular portion of the rule that Mr. PORTER, that I want to make sure that I mention. A part of this bill each year involves Federal family planning funds under title 10 as it is called. In the Federal Family Planning Program of title 10, within the bill, is a measure which was adopted in the Committee on Appropriations in consultation, of course, with the authorizing committee involved to make a major reform in that particular program.

Mr. Chairman, 1½ million teenagers each year receive services under the title 10 Family Planning Program. Some of it is treatment for sexually transmitted diseases. Some of it is providing contraceptives and counseling to young people.

Since this program has been in place since 1971, however, which provides a mechanism for Federal dollars to provide contraceptives to teenagers with neither the knowledge nor consent of their parents. Mr. Speaker, the out-of-wedlock pregnancy rate among teenagers in America has doubled.

We hear a lot of talk about family involvement in major issues of our times, and certainly the rate of teenage pregnancy is one of those.

The measure adopted by the Committee on Appropriations has been desired by a great many American families for a great number of years. It says, in effect, that if a minor, an unemancipated minor, a teenager who is still dependent upon their parents, should not be provided contraceptives at Federal taxpayers' expense unless their parents are notified.

This does not apply to any particular other types of services. This does not, for example, say that parents have to be notified if it is some sort of emergency medical care. But if taxpayers' money is to be used to pay for future sexual activity by a teenager, this simply says that the parent ought to be notified.

As the parent of teenagers myself, Mr. Speaker, I know that they cannot receive pierced ears without parents being notified. They cannot go on field trips or get aspirins at school without parents being notified.

Yet Federal taxpayers' dollars are used to provide contraceptives to teenagers and the parents are never told. If my child were picked up for using drugs or using alcohol, I would expect to be notified.

The real tragedy is that there is not even notification for children who are below the age of consent. We have laws on the books in this State on statutory rape, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, taking indecent liberties with a minor, and so forth, and the title 10 clinics ignore those laws. They neither report violations of them to these courts nor to law enforcement authorities.

This bill has reforms in it that says they will provide notification in both of those instances. It is a very important measure to try to get parents involved in monitoring their kids and the life and the problems and the circumstances of their youth.

This measure needs to be preserved in this bill. We will have debate on measures to take it out. It is important that we keep it in.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the rule.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY).

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this rule, and I do so because I recognize that, while there is a political purpose being served by the use of the marshal law tactic to do this, and select on particular provision of the Labor-HHS bill and to use this chamber to then debate just that particular provision for the next few hours, what we are doing, and for political purposes because the Republicans feel they can win on that issue, what they do not talk about are the other provisions that are hidden in this bill, provisions like eliminating the Federal Fuel Assistance Program, eliminating the program to provide summer youth jobs to hundreds of thousands of children all across our country who in the middle of summer need to go to work.

What we are not seeing is a debate about whether or not we believe as a Congress, whether the Republicans and the Democrats agree that what we ought to do is go out and cut the Federal Fuel Assistance Program, cut a program that millions of Americans count on and will count on this winter to make sure that they stay warm.

We are in a situation where we read in the newspaper about how well America is doing and how much money the wealthy in our country have made and how the unemployment rate is down and the inflation rate is down and the stock market up until the last month or so used to be up.

But what we do not read about are the millions and millions of very poor people. We do not read about the hundreds of thousands of senior citizens that every winter have to buy blankets across parts of their houses because they simply cannot afford to keep those houses warm, that have to choose between having a hot meal or staying warm in their beds at night.

Many times do we have to have our elderly people suffer because they do not get enough money in Social Security? Then we turn around in this bill and cut a billion dollars out of the... money, the Federal tax monies to go into this program.

My colleagues say, well, we do not have the billion dollars. I will tell them something. The money is in this bill. There is plenty of money in this bill to pay for fuel assistance. The fuel assistance program was paid for years ago.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Woolsey).

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, this Labor-HHS appropriations bill makes me believe that some of my colleagues in the majority party would benefit from spending time back in the classroom. The numbers in this appropriations bill simply do not add up.

From Head Start through higher education and into the workplace, this bill shortchanges the vast majority of Americans.

I am most concerned about the damage done to American school children in this bill. The funds for education do not make the grade. Those of us who have done our homework know that overcrowded classrooms are one of the biggest obstacles to improving education for our children.

What parents and teachers already know is that smaller class size makes for better learning experiences and results in better grades. In fact, even the very Republican governor of my home State of California has made smaller classes a priority in our State.

But it costs money, Mr. Speaker. It costs money to reduce class size, because smaller classes mean more training and more teachers that need to be hired. Smaller classes mean building more classrooms.

This bill does nothing to help schools reduce class size. It cheats our students out of funds they need to get a good education. It defies the test of time.

This bill particularly fails teenagers. This bill does nothing to help schools prevent unsafe outcomes, or decisions, plural, because this bill allows parents the right to be notified whenever their little girls are being given contraceptive devices.

The language that we will be asking people to support is the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo language, which is a perfect example of what is wrong with the Castle-Greenwood amendment that will be offered on the floor.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Pelosi).

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time and for her leadership. I rise in opposition to the rule on the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill.

This is a bill that should attend to the urgent human needs and lay the building blocks for our children’s and our Nation’s future. But this Republican-designed bill fails on both counts.

The rule proposed today is an example of the misplaced priorities of the Republican leadership. In an effort to again appease their radical right wing, the Republican leadership is proposing a rule that caters to those who would undermine family planning and ignores all of the critical priorities contained in this bill.

Mr. Speaker, when on earth will we be awakened to what should be our priorities in this legislation and in this Congress? When we get a report that over 1 in 5 children in America lives in poverty, when we know that tens of millions of individuals cannot afford health insurance, when we see that class sizes are too large and children are struggling to learn in schools that are in need of repair, workers deserve adequate safeguards to protect them from needless injury, and what are we talking about once again on this floor? Stopping funding for family planning.

It should be the mission of this House to attend to the urgent needs of the American people and to answer the call to address education, health care and worker safety. And it is through the Labor-HHS bill that we can do this to share the benefits of prosperity with those in need.

This bill abandons our children by slashing the administration’s education initiatives, including education for the disadvantaged, Head Start, and Safe and Drug-Free Schools. It abandons workers by cutting OSHA workplace safety enforcement and mine safety enforcement, and it abandons people by eliminating or severely cutting the Summer Jobs Program and Out of School Youth Opportunities. It disregards the needs of the poor by eliminating or slashing home energy assistance, LIHEAP.

Mr. Speaker, this rule and this bill is bad policy and fails to attend to today’s priorities. I urge my colleagues to vote “no.”

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wilmington, Delaware (Mr. Castle), my very good friend.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentlewoman from California for yielding because he knows I am in opposition to this rule, and I am very, very strongly in opposition to it. Let me explain why I am opposed.

This has been a very controversial piece of legislation. Labor-HHS has had a very different agenda. It is the way from LIHEAP to summer jobs, and a lot of people have questioned and have wanted to change it one way or another. Probably the most controversial of these items is what we are debating right here which is the amendment with regard to contraceptive use with respect to contraceptive devices or drugs.

As I understand it, and somebody correct me if I am wrong, essentially we are debating this rule and we are going to debate this bill, and then we are going to consider these two amendments, and we are not going to consider the rest of this bill, which is going to end up in the omnibus bill anyhow, so we are essentially down to selecting a mechanism by which we are going to vote on two very difficult amendments, and I happen to be a co-sponsor of one of them, with a strong belief that it is the right way to go.

This is a heck of a way to legislate. This has been a piece of legislation that has waited until little over 24 hours away the time that we are supposed to leave here and that probably would have taken 3 or 4 days on the floor if it had been done correctly, and here we are with a very truncated rule process in order to move forward on it. My judgment is it has little to do with being prochoice or prolife or anything of those things, it is a process question that we have here.

I hope that everybody in this Congress will step forward and oppose this rule. This simply is not a good way to do business. It is what happens at the end of sessions such as this, and this is a shining example of the wrong way to proceed.

So I would encourage each and every one of us, when the time comes for this vote, to come over here and to vote “no” on this rule, end this bill, and let happen what is going to happen, and that is it will be rolled into the omnibus bill and the battle which have to be done, hopefully will be done, that way.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson-Lee). (Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

This is always a very difficult decision or decisions, plural, because this bill deals with Americans who are in pain. It deals with senior citizens, it deals with the mentally disabled, it deals with teenagers who are sexually abused by a parent or loved one and who are looking for relief if out of that sexual abuse comes an impregnation.
Yet now we come to the floor with the most acrimonious and destructive rule that I could imagine in these last waning hours of this Congress.

Today I engaged in a very painful debate, because it was my job. I came back from that debate and voted to sustain this House, something that I rarely do. And I did so because my constituents in Texas, some 32 of them died this summer in the most intense heat we had ever been impacted by or felt.

This rule would eliminate the dollars used to help air-condition or heat the homes of poor senior citizens, those of my constituents in Texas who would have died if not for that money. This devastates the LIHEAP monies for senior citizens and the infirm.

This as well devastates the kind of work we have done to keep teenagers off the streets in the hot summer and takes summer jobs money away from hardworking, deserving teenagers who use that money to supplement their family's income, and then it takes Goals 2000, a program that goes into rural and inner-city schools and slashes the schools that depend upon these matching dollars to lift their scores and give incentives to their children that come many times from broken homes.

This is an abuse of power. This is an offensive rule, and it should be defeated.

Ms. Slaughter. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Green).

(Mr. Green asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. Green. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from New York for allowing me to rise in opposition to this bill and the rule.

This appropriations bill grossly underfunds our national priority of providing the best public education for each and every child. There is not enough time left in this 102nd Congress to talk about how bad this bill is. Let me just try to hit some of the highlights.

Goals 2000, an education program that started with President Bush and continued under this President, is cut 50 percent from last year's funding level. The School-to-Work program is cut by $250 million. The America Reads program is eliminated. In addition to these facts, my Republican colleagues want to deny initial funding to many other important education programs.

Funds for Title I grants are frozen, cutting the administration's request by $437 million. And not giving over a half a million students in high poverty communities the extra help they need to master the basic courses. Funding for College Work Study is cut by $50 million below the administration's request, denying 57,000 needy students college work study awards. Head Start is cut by $160 million below the administration's request, denying slots to 25,000 low-income children.

Mr. Speaker, we have worked hard in Houston to ensure that we have the best Head Start program possible. We have three new providers now, and by collaborating with our public schools, we can truly give our children a real head start on life, but we cannot by short-circuiting and not providing the funding. We have made great strides, but additional funds are needed to meet the overwhelming need in the Head Start program.

The Republican approach to education is a wrong approach, and I think it is an approach that the American people do not want. That is why I urge my colleagues to vote down this short-sighted bill.

Ms. Slaughter. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. Lowey).

(Mrs. Lowey asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. Lowey. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, last year I was proud to stand on the House floor and work hard with our distinguished chairman and good friend, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Porter), to pass a bipartisan Labor-HHS-Education spending bill. I frankly am sad and disgusted that today we are called here at the last minute to debate a phoney rule on the same bill designed by the Republican leadership simply as a pre-election gift to their right wing.

This rule is a sham designed for one purpose and one purpose only: to give opponents of family planning a procedural advantage in a vote on their provision which was defeated on the House floor 2 years in a row.

It is my understanding that after the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Istook) gets his anti-family planning vote, we will simply rise and disappointment by this important bill with its key education and health care programs.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote down this bogus rule. Because the Republican leadership could not get an agreement to bring up the bill under a fair rule, the bill did not come up. Week after week went by and still no Labor-HHS appropriations bill. Now, 1 day before target adjournment, the bill is brought up suddenly and under a fake rule that is not about policy, but about election year politics.

If the rule does pass, then I urge my colleagues to support the Greenwood-Castle substitute and oppose the Istook second degree amendment.

The Istook second degree contains the same language restricting teenagers' access to Title X family planning services which was defeated on the House floor just last year. This parental consent restriction will deny vulnerable teens the contraceptive services they need to avoid pregnancy, HIV and STDs.

Last year's attack on the Title X program failed because a majority of Members understood that denying teens access to family planning does not promote abstinence. I only wish it were that simple. Instead, Members understand that the Istook language will increase STDs and HIV infections, unintended pregnancies and abortions.

I urge my colleagues to support the Greenwood-Castle substitute, it takes the responsible, sensible route, and defeat this sham rule.

Mr. Dreier. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair how much time is remaining on both this first and second degree amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. Dreier) has 17½ minutes remaining; the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Slaughter) has 30 seconds remaining.

Ms. Slaughter. Mr. Speaker, we have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Dreier. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this rule. We have already voted on the rule itself. This is a minor modification that was made to consider those two amendments numbered 2 and 3. There are a number of Members on our side who hope very much to have a debate on that question. We will be proceeding with funding in a wide range of other areas, and so I hope that we can proceed with this as quickly as possible and get to this appropriations work.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the SPEAKER pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. Slaughter. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

Pursuant to clause 5 of rule XV, the Chair will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question of agreeing to the resolution.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 224, nays 201, not voting 9, as follows: [Roll No. 500]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Sherman Williams, one of his secretaries.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 2281) "An Act to amend the Head Start Act, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981, and the Community Services Block Grant Act to authorize and make improvements to those Acts, to establish demonstration projects that provide an opportunity for persons with limited means to accumulate assets, and for other purposes."
that each party will have 8 minutes of time on each amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. As I understand it, there are 2 amendments. Each amendment would be divided equally between the majority and the minority or in some such fashion according to the proponent and the opposition. The proponent would get 8 minutes, the opposition would get 8 minutes on each amendment; so, for a total of 16 minutes on each amendment.

Mr. OBEY. But the question, Mr. Speaker, is will the minority party have 8 minutes on each amendment?

On each proposition, I mean.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. If the gentleman will yield further, I would suggest to the gentleman that the way that the amendment has been propelled that that would be up to the managers of the amendment and the managers of opposition to the amendment.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I just need to have the assurance, and I want to cooperate on this, but I need to have the assurance that our side will be yielded 50 percent of the time on each of the two propositions.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I understand that there is no certain way to guarantee that it is equally divided on each side of the aisle. However, I understand that there appears to be no opposition from the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), who would be one of the proponents of an amendment.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving my right to object, that means that we would only have 4 minutes out of all the debate time.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I do not think that that is the case.

If the gentleman will yield further, would he tell me who would claim time in opposition to the Istook amendment?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving my right to object, as the gentleman knows, I am trying to get to a meeting to help facilitate the moving of the budget forward, so what I would like to do is have the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) on this side manage the time for the entire bill, including the two amendments.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, if the gentleman would advise us that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) would rise in opposition to the amendment, it would be the intention of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) to yield 3 minutes for the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) to control on the Istook amendment.

Mr. OBEY. We would also have 8 minutes on the Greenwood proposition. Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman reserves the right to object. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). The reservation is presently held by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY). The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) may yield on his reservation if he so chooses.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. We have two issues before us, one which the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) supports, one which many people oppose; and we have the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) which he supports, but many on our side oppose. If we divide the time as the gentleman has suggested, those equally opposing each amendment will not have equal share of the time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I do not want to do that. Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to amend my unanimous consent request which apparently was unclear and unintentionally unclear. I ask unanimous consent that, on each amendment, those in favor of the amendment be allotted 8 minutes, and those opposed be allotted 8 minutes and that, to as great a degree as possible, the time in each instance be shared on both sides.

It may well be that nobody on the gentleman's side of the aisle would like to claim time in one of those categories or another, but at least people will have the opportunity within that time to make their comments and be heard.

Mr. OBEY. Well, continuing under my reservation, Mr. Speaker, I am still trying to figure out what that means. We are not trying to hold anybody up. There are people on this side who want to speak as well. We just want to make certain that we will have an equal amount of time that will be yielded on both propositions. That is all.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further? Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, we have two amendments. We have the Istook amendment, and we have the Greenwood amendment. According to my unanimous consent request, I have asked that, on each, there be 8 minutes allotted for and 8 minutes allotted against.

I guess it would be a little bit simpler if we only decide right now with the context of this unanimous consent who will represent those for and who will represent those against on each amendment.

In the instance of the Greenwood amendment, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) would have the time for 8 minutes. I am asking the gentleman's statements. I assume that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) could be recognized in opposition to the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, continuing under my reservation, let me explain to the gentleman, I am sure that, on our side of the aisle, the preponderance of the speakers will be against the amendment. We would want us to have all the time against the Istook amendment.

I think that, if there are 8 minutes against the Istook amendment, 4 ought to be reserved for the majority party if they want them. If they do not want them, I do not think we ought to have them anyway.

But we would like at least 4 minutes on the Istook amendment and 4 minutes on the Greenwood amendment. If the gentleman does not care how he works out the time.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. OBEY. Absolutely. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. That 8 minutes be allotted to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) to be divided as he sees fit.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Wisconsin will yield, which I would be happy to share with those who feel that position from your side of the aisle.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, so what the gentleman is saying, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) will have 8 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) will have 8 minutes, and he has agreed to yield 4 of it to us.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that is on Greenwood.

Mr. OBEY. On Greenwood.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will further yield, on Istook, that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) be divided as he sees fit, and that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) will be allotted 8 minutes in opposition to be divided as he sees fit.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, further reserving my right to object, we would agree that the time of gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) would be split evenly between the parties if there are persons on the gentleman's side who want to argue against that amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Correct.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, with that understanding, I withdraw my reservation of objection.
The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request by the gentleman from Louisiana? There was no objection.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1999

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 564 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 4274.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4274) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, with Mr. BERETTER in the chair. The name of the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 564, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Pursuant to House Resolution 584, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) each will control 30 minutes.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, today we take a vote on the future of our children. Day in and day out the Members of the 105th Congress come to the floor and express their concerns for ensuring opportunities for the next generation. H.R. 4274, “the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations bill,” is one piece of legislation that goes to the heart of our collective concerns. However, despite our desire to assist our children we instead embark on a bill that politicizes their future. Instead of providing opportunities, this bill guts national education funding for short term political gain. This bill eliminates funding for technology in the classroom in low-income school districts, it eliminates funding for teacher training, and it even eliminates funding to ensure that our children can read before the end of the third grade.

However, to just discuss the inadequacies of this bill on our elementary school aged children would not be a fair summarization of the destructive nature of this piece of legislation. This appropriations bill attempts at its very essence, to provide budget cuts off the backs of the poor, the immigrant and the laborer. H.R. 4274 if passed would eliminate federal subsidized funding for 4.4 million of the poorest households to pay for their heat during the winter months; this bill if passed would cut federal funding for bilingual education by $25 million which would reduce funding for adequate teacher training; this bill if passed would even cut OSHA workplace safety enforcement by $12 million which would result in 4,000 fewer workplace safety inspections in 1999.

The role of government is debated each day on the floor of this House, in our committee rooms, and in our districts but we all can agree that our mandate is to serve the people. It is paramount that as a national body we focus not on partisan political goals but rather on what is in the best interest of our constituents. Members would then understand that this appropriation bill is too unfair, too detrimental to our national educational policy and too damaging to the poor. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me in opposing H.R. 4274 and vote no on this bill.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, Mr. GREENWOOD’s amendment protects a good program, a program that Members should support.

One of our goals in this bill is public health programs that help expand access to care for the underserved. Title X—as George Bush and Richard Nixon recognized—is such a program.

1. It supports a broad range of reproductive services to women—including assistance for women who are having trouble conceiving children—as well as screening for breast and cervical cancer, sexually transmitted infections and hypertension. These are life saving, life giving, life enhancing services.

2. In 1994, one million unintended pregnancies were served—83 percent with incomes below 150 percent of the federal poverty level. Everyone above the poverty line pays something for their care on a sliding scale. For many working poor, Title X provides their only access to the health care system.

3. The law has always barred Title X from paying for any abortion under any circumstances. This is not an abortion issue.

Title X is really an anti-abortion program: roughly half of all unintended pregnancies end in abortion. It is estimated that, in 1994, one million unintended pregnancies were averted as a result of services received at Title X projects. Title X prevents the unintended pregnancies that lead to abortions and that lead to low-birthweight babies.

Title X improves maternal and child health, it lowers the incidence of unintended pregnancy and abortion and it lowers rates of STDs. It is a good program, it is a wise investment, and we should be very careful about adopting amendments that undermine the program’s effectiveness.

I urge all Members to support Mr. GREENWOOD’s amendment and oppose Mr. ISTook’s substitute.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, I oppose the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations (Labor—HHS) Bill considered in the House today.

EDUCATION SUFFERS UNDER THIS BILL

This bill would have devastating effects on students and our education system and I strongly urge my colleagues to reject this bill.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle have been busy with their education agenda this year. We’ve debated a Constitutional Amendment to allow for prayer in schools and we’ve tried to eliminate affirmative action programs for minority students. We’ve also tried to provide public dollars for private schools not twice, but twice, and to eliminate public dollars to be used for the purposes of educating our bilingual students. Lucky for our students, parents and teachers, Democrats have an education agenda, too.

The bill’s cut in funding will improve public education. We want to reduce the average class size in the early grades by helping local school districts hire 100,000 new qualified teachers. We want to provide federal tax credits to pay the interest on $22 billion in bonds for the modernization and construction of more than 5,000 schools. We want to make sure that schoolchildren have somewhere to go after school instead of hanging out on the streets. We are promoting after school learning opportunities for students; we support expanding resources for educational technology in order to ensure that every classroom and school library is connected to the Internet by 2001.

The Democratic ideas will work; they will provide more opportunities for out kids. Nobody denies that public education is in bad shape. But the majority’s solution is to cut funding and eliminate programs and to determine what choices are made available to school districts and teachers. This does not make good sense or good policy.

This Education Appropriations bill fails to fund a single one of the Administration’s initiatives to modernize schools and build new schools. It is no secret that schools are overcrowded. We support expanding funding for bilingual education so that schoolchildren have somewhere to go between classes in portables, school lunchrooms and even in hallways. The majority, by not addressing this problem in their bill, are putting a bag over their head and hoping the problem goes away.

This Education Appropriations bill does not fund the President’s Literacy Initiatives and eliminates funding for the America Reads Challenge. Furthermore, the bill cuts funding for the Safe and Drug Free Schools initiative, and does not fund the President’s plan to target funds to districts and schools with the largest drug and violence programs.

This bill also incorporates the text of a bill that was defeated by the House earlier this year and with regard to bilingual education. This bill would limit the amount of bilingual education a student could receive to a maximum of two years. Reputable research proves that children take between four to seven years to master academic English necessary for higher education success. This bill provides no safe or drug free education for students. We support expanding resources for educational technology in order to ensure that every classroom and school library is connected to the Internet by 2001.

The House has already soundly defeated this idea. Why does this bill’s cutting of bilingual education a student could receive to a maximum of two years? It does not make sense to shove children arbitrarily from an environment where they are learning to one where they are predetermined to fail.

The House has already soundly defeated this idea. Why does this bill’s cutting of bilingual education a student could receive to a maximum of two years? It does not make sense to shove children arbitrarily from an environment where they are learning to one where they are predetermined to fail.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, Mr. GREENDWOOD’s amendment protects a good program, a program that Members should support.

dollars to be used for the purposes of educating our bilingual students. Lucky for our students, parents and teachers, Democrats have an education agenda, too.

The bill’s cut in funding will improve public education. We want to reduce the average class size in the early grades by helping local school districts hire 100,000 new qualified teachers. We want to provide federal tax credits to pay the interest on $22 billion in bonds for the modernization and construction of more than 5,000 schools. We want to make sure that schoolchildren have somewhere to go after school instead of hanging out on the streets. We are promoting after school learning opportunities for students; we support expanding resources for educational technology in order to ensure that every classroom and school library is connected to the Internet by 2001.

The Democratic ideas will work; they will provide more opportunities for our kids. Nobody denies that public education is in bad shape. But the majority’s solution is to cut funding and eliminate programs and to determine what choices are made available to school districts and teachers. This does not make good sense or good policy.

This Education Appropriations bill fails to fund a single one of the Administration’s initiatives to modernize schools and build new schools. It is no secret that schools are overcrowded. We support expanding funding for bilingual education so that schoolchildren have somewhere to go between classes in portables, school lunchrooms and even in hallways. The majority, by not addressing this problem in their bill, are putting a bag over their head and hoping the problem goes away.

This Education Appropriations bill does not fund the President’s Literacy Initiatives and eliminates funding for the America Reads Challenge. Furthermore, the bill cuts funding for the Safe and Drug Free Schools initiative, and does not fund the President’s plan to target funds to districts and schools with the largest drug and violence programs.

This bill also incorporates the text of a bill that was defeated by the House earlier this year and with regard to bilingual education. This bill would limit the amount of bilingual education a student could receive to a maximum of two years. Reputable research proves that children take between four to seven years to master academic English necessary for higher education success. This bill provides no safe or drug free education for students. We support expanding resources for educational technology in order to ensure that every classroom and school library is connected to the Internet by 2001.

The House has already soundly defeated this idea. Why does this bill’s cutting of bilingual education a student could receive to a maximum of two years? It does not make sense to shove children arbitrarily from an environment where they are learning to one where they are predetermined to fail.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, Mr. GREENDWOOD’s amendment protects a good program, a program that Members should support.

One of our goals in this bill is public health programs that help expand access to care for the underserved. Title X—as George Bush and Richard Nixon recognized—subjects
The first rider would prevent the Secretary from requiring hospitals to report patient deaths to regional Organ Procurement Organizations. This simple requirement is in effect in Maryland and Pennsylvania and both states report additional organ donations as a direct result. Preventing this regulation from going forward will make more patients die waiting for other organs. This is a matter of life and death and this rider should be removed from the bill.

The second rider puts a moratorium on the Secretary's organ allocation plan to make the system more-fair for patients. The Secretary's organ allocation plan is urgently needed by patients across the country. Patients in the Bay Area wait an average of over 300 days for a transplant, while patients in Tennessee wait 21 days. This isn't fair. The Secretary has proposed to let medical people make medical decisions about the best way to allocate the limited number of donated organs. The Appropriations Committee should allow these regulations to be implemented without further delay.

This rider is being pushed by a group of Louisiana transplant surgeons who believe that organs should be hoarded for their own state use. Over 30% of Louisianans needing a transplant leave the state to find better care in other hospitals or because they have been turned down for transplants in Louisiana. The state has successfully overturned “abandoning” law to prevent organs that are made available for transplant in Louisiana from leaving the state. The state has also filed a lawsuit against the Secretary for issuing national regulations, despite the fact that the National Organ Transplant Act specifically requires that the Secretary do so.

Fairness is half of this fight; Quality is the other part. There is a lot of money to be made in organ transplants. Too many centers have been opened to increase the prestige and the profits of a local hospital—not because they do a good job. In fact, in general the lower volume small transplant centers have poorer outcomes than the high volume transplant centers. The fact is that having a transplant center has become the equivalent of high paying jobs. Many patients like the excess projects in the recently-passed highway bill; centers without a justification. But unlike highway pork, these centers sometimes end up killing patients because they do not do as good a job as the high volume centers. I really think it is immoral for centers that have a lower success rate than the high volume centers to be competing with the Department’s regulation. Their actions are a disgrace to the Hippocratic Oath.

The proliferation of poor quality transplant centers is not only wasteful, it wastes money. The United States has 289 hospitals doing transplants—and that is an enormous commitment of capital. I have read that a hospital has to invest about $10 million to be able to do heart transplants. These proliferating costs are part of what drives health inflation in the United States and part of what places such huge budget pressures on Medicare. Concentrating transplants in fewer, high-quality, life-saving centers would allow us to save hundreds of millions of dollars in the years to come. The Department’s regulation is the potential to focus on Centers of Excellence where we not only save lives, but can obtain economies of scale necessary to preserve the Medicare program.

If my colleagues are serious about putting patients first, what is so onerous about a system that proposes to base transplant decisions on common medical criteria on a medical need list—not geography, not income, not even levels of insurance coverage—just pure professional medical opinion and medical need.

This issue is about putting patients first—not putting transplant bureaucracies first. I can think of no better way to put patients first than to make the system fair for all. I urge my colleagues to support the Department’s regulations and to vote against the Labor-HHS bill.

The bill is bad for working families

This bill would have devastating effects on working families and I strongly urge my colleagues to reject this bill.

America’s working families deserve a break. After a few years of record profits for Wall Street and the Fortune 500 companies, it is time to help out the working men and women responsible for this productivity. Instead, some of my colleagues, in their quest to please corporate stakeholders, have launched an assault upon the basic protections that working families count on and enjoy.

I’ve heard from numerous young people in my district that they would love to participate in the Summer Youth Employment Training Program (SYETP). They tell me that they have learned the value of a dollar and the importance of being accountable and responsible because of their summer jobs. I’ve heard from Mayors and School Districts about the need for this program. The Castro Valley Unified School District wrote to me to tell me that “SYETP is one of those programs that addresses the needs of a segment of our student population and does so with a high degree of success.” I’ve included this letter for the Congressional Record to accompany my statement.

What has the Majority done in response to this support for the Summer Youth Employment Training Program? They have eliminated all of the funding for it.

The Summer Youth Employment Training Program works. It gives young people the tools, skills and experience they need to succeed in the workplace after they are finished with school. Eliminating this program is not an investment in our future.

This Labor-HHS bill cuts funding for Job Training Partnership Act by $1.5 billion from the President’s request. The bill also cuts School-to-work programs by 62 percent from last year’s appropriation. The message to young workers is clear: if you stuck in a low paying job or lack a graduate degree, the government will not help you obtain the skills you need to provide for your family. This is the wrong direction for our country to be going.

One of the largest roles for government to protect working families is through the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). OSHA offers guidelines for employers to provide employees with safe workplaces and enforce safety standards to ensure that the likelihood of injury or death on the job is reduced. OSHA is the safety cop on the beat for working families, and deserves our support.
This Labor–HHS bill cuts OSHA funding by $18 million from the Administration’s request. Furthermore, the bill includes provisions to require peer-review of the scientific data on which OSHA standards are based. The bill specifically permits taking a financial interest in the outcome of the standard to set on the peer review panel. I question how many true labor protection standards will make it out of the regulatory process with employers and employees alike. I believe that the decisions about what workers safe standards are really needed.

The majority’s labor record is clear. Working families should take a back seat to corporate interests and employer decisions. I don’t share this view.

I believe that working families deserve strong protections at the workplace, should be able to organize and bargain in the workplace that they are motivated by their common interests and should not have to work in an environment of indentured servitude to guarantee a paycheck.

If my colleagues were serious about help working men and women, they would work to pass a real minimum wage increase and link it to a cost of living adjustment to provide a real working wage for working families. Making investments in people is the highest priority for our society. In order for people to provide job skills and job security does not lead to an economically stable society.

I urge my colleagues to vote for working families and for worker protections and to vote against this bill.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, CASTRO VALLEY UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT; CASTRO VALLEY, CA, September 14, 1998.

HON. FORTNEY “PETE” STARK

Dear Representative Stark: The purpose of this letter is to support the continuation of the Summer Youth Employment Training Program (SYETP). This program has been an invaluable one over the years and I urge the Board of Education, Castro Valley Unified School District as it has provided opportunities for students from low income families to be successful in a work experience environment.

Our responsibility as educators is to provide programs and strategies that are diverse in nature, that address the diversity within our student population. SYETP is one of those programs that addresses the needs of a student population and does so with a high degree of success.

There is no doubt that the elimination of this program would be a major loss for us in the district and the Regional Occupational Program in general. Judging by the information that I have received, the elimination of SYETP within the district would result in approximately 400,000 young people not having an opportunity for work and educational assistance. This is staggering and unacceptable! We cannot afford to ignore the needs of any of our students and specifically with regard to SYETP, the needs of students who have productive members of our society when they reach adulthood.

Thank you in advance for your support and assistance.

Sincerely,

GEORGE GRANGER

President.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, thank you for the opportunity to speak on this bill tonight, and this amendment, the Istook/Barcia/Manzullo Amendment to the Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriations Act, Mr. Chairman, for the first time in 20 years, the House Appropriations Committee voted to impose a restrictive provision in this bill which will require that minors require five business days’ parental notice or parental consent before they can obtain contraceptive services, at a Title X clinic.

I have consistently opposed mandatory parental consent requirements for young people seeking family planning services, and I am not alone. The American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Academy of Physicians, and the American Medical Women’s Association are just a few of the organizations that oppose this restriction. The reason is because such restrictions are dangerous to our country’s young people.

There is no question that recent declines in the teen pregnancy and abortion rates have been attributed to increased use of birth control. The vast majority of young people who seek contraceptive and family planning services are already sexually active. In one recent study of over 1,200 teenagers in 31 family planning clinics, only 14 percent of the teens came in for family planning services prior to initiating sexual activity. In fact, over half of these (36 percent) sought services only because they suspected they were pregnant. This legislation will only make it worse. In general, teens are sexually active for 11.5 months prior to seeking clinic services! This provision will not persuade our young people to have sex, it will ensure that the rates of unintended pregnancies, abortion and STDs increase! Currently, 78 percent of teen pregnancies are unintended, half of which end in abortion. Approximately 3 million teenagers acquire an STD each year! I am sure that no Member of Congress wants these numbers to increase, yet making it more difficult for teenagers to seek reproductive health services will do just this.

Title X counselors are already required to encourage family participation for teen clients. However, Congress, despite, its wishes cannot mandate open communication. Title X clinics encourage their teenage clients to discuss their needs with parents or family members they can trust. Confidential access to family planning is crucial in helping teenagers obtain timely medical advice and appropriate medical care.

Our children are our most important resource. We must do whatever we can to make sure that our children remain safe and healthy. I am voting against this amendment because I want our children to have a childhood and to keep our teenagers from becoming parents.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, as you know, Title X, the Family Planning Service Act, the National Family Planning Program, sponsored by then-Congressman George Bush, was enacted in 1970. It was signed into law by President Nixon. The program provides grants to public and private non-profit agencies to support projects which provide a broad range of family planning and reproductive services, as well as screening for breast and cervical cancer, sexually-transmitted infections and high blood pressure. Title X also supports training programs which provide a broad range of family planning service delivery improvements. The Title X program has provided services to millions of American women, many of whom have no other access to health care. By law, none of the funds provided may be used for abortions.

Today, we are considering a bill that includes a provision requiring parental consent before a minor receives family planning services. This is to be applied to those minors who are seeking contraceptive drugs or devices. Ideally, we would like all teens to abstain from pre-marital sexual relations. Ideally, we would like to think that all teenagers have a wonder- ful relationship with their parents. Unfortunately, the reality is that for many, many teens neither is the case. There are young people who are scared to death of their parents. There are young people who do not have parents. And, the unfortunate reality is that there are young people who would rush out and have unprotected sex if they knew practicing safe sex would come at the price of having their parents find out. This is what the mandatory parental consent and advanced parental notification provision does.

In many cases such a provision would actually increase the chances of engaging in unprotected, nondiscriminatory or unsafe sex, thereby increasing the rates of pregnancy, sexually-transmitted diseases, and abortions. 56% of women and 73% of men are sexually active before the age of 18. 55% of teenagers using or seeking Title X services for the first time were already sexually active for nearly a year. In addition, studies show that about 55% of adolescents already inform parents of their use of reproductive health services. For those who do not or cannot discuss family planning with their parents, mandatory parental consent and advanced parental notification are not likely to convince them otherwise. Taking the number of teens who do not involve their parents in such decisions reported that they would not seek clinic care if their parents had to be notified. Let me repeat—they would not seek clinic care! And, if that means they make decisions on their own, those decisions will most likely lead to unprotected sex, higher rates of pregnancy and higher rates of abortion.

Let me give you an example. In my home state, as scary as this is, there are kids who have reported that they cannot tell their parents about the use of family planning services because they are afraid they will be physically harmed. We also had a case where parents of a 15 year old girl refused to bring her to get family planning services until she was 16 years old and had her driver’s license. Well, she turned 16, she got her driver’s license and she was already pregnant. If she had the services a year before, she wouldn’t be in this predicament. Now, I’m not saying this is the norm. What I am saying is that we need to take a look at this into consideration before we start mandating policies as far reaching as this one. If parents and guardians are unable to help these teenagers, for whatever reason, I believe health professionals should help.

I also want to note that the Greenwood.Castle amendment does not in anyway discourage parental involvement. It simply strikes the mandatory parental notification and inserts a strong language requiring Title X providers to take a strong stand on abstinence, by expressly informing all minors that abstinence is the only certain way to avoid pregnancy, sexually-transmitted diseases, and HIV. Our language ensures that all Title X counselors receive training on how to help minors abstain from sexual activity, avoid coercive relationships, and, involve the parents in the decision to receive family planning services.

We support family involvement, and if we believe that mandating parental consent or notification was in the best interest of teens, then we would support the Title X bill as it is. There are too many facts that demonstrate that mandating parental consent will hurt teens considerably more than it could ever help them.

Congressmen ISTOsk and MANZULLO will offer a second degree amendment to our amendment inserting the parental consent or notification language back into the bill. I urge my colleagues to reject this amendment and for the Greenwood.Castle amendment. Mandated parental consent or notification would scare teens into doing something stupid—like having unprotected sex in secret rather than having their parents find out that they wanted to be safe and responsible.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that under the rule my amendment to the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations bill is not permitted. The amendment forbids the Department of Health and Human Services from spending any funds to implement those sections of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 authorizing the establishment of a "standard unique health care identifier" for all Americans. The identifier would then be used to create a national database containing the medical history of all Americans. Establishment of such an identifier would allow federal bureaucrats to track every citizen's medical history from cradle to grave. Furthermore, it is possible that every medical professional, hospital, and Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) in the country would be able to access an individual citizen's record simply by entering the patient's identifier into the national database.

My amendment was drafted to ensure that the administration cannot take any steps toward developing or implementing a medical ID. This approach is necessary because if the administration is allowed to work on developing a medical ID it is likely to attempt to implement the ID on at least a "trial" basis. I would remind any colleagues of our experience with national testing. In 1997 Congress forbade the Department of Education from implementing a national test, however it allowed work toward developing national tests. The administration has used this "development loophole" to deceptively take steps toward implementation of a national test. It seems clear that only a complete ban forbidding any work on health identifiers will stop all work toward implementation.

Allowing the federal government to establish a National Health ID not only threatens privacy but also will undermine effective health care. As an OB/GYN with more than 30 years experience in private practice, I know better than most the importance of preserving the sanctity of the physician-patient relationship. Often times, a patient's confidence in his or her doctor. What will happen to that trust when patients know that any and all information given their doctor will be placed in a database accessible by anyone who knows the patient's "unique personal identifier?"

I ask my colleagues, how comfortable would you be confiding any emotional problem, or even an embarrassing physical problem like impotence, to your doctor if you knew that this information could be easily accessed by friend, foe, possible employers, coworkers, HMOs, and government agents? Mr. Chairman, the Clinton administration has even come out in favor of allowing law enforcement officials access to health care information, in complete disregard of the fifth amendment. It is bitterly ironic that the same administration that has proven so inventive at protecting its privacy has so little respect for physician-patient confidentiality.

My amendment forbids the federal government from creating federal IDs for doctors and employers as well as for individuals. Contrary to the claims of some, federal ID numbers for doctors and employers threaten American liberty every bit as much as individual medical IDs.

The National Provider ID will force physicians who use technologies such as e-mail in their practices to record all health care transactions with the government. This will allow the government to track and monitor the treatment of all patients under that doctor's care. Government agents may pull up the medical records of anyone suspected of fraud or justification even if the patient has not made a request. This will never take a backseat to the convenience of the government or politically powerful industries like HMOs.

Mr. Chairman, all I ask is that Congress give the change to correct the mistake made in 1996 when they authorized the National Health ID as part of the Kennedy-Kasebaum bill. The federal government has no authority to endanger the privacy of personal medical information by forcing all citizens to adopt a uniform health ID. It endangers the constitutional liberties, threatens the doctor-patient relationship, and could allow federal officials access to deeply personal medical information. There can be no justification for risking the rights of private citizens. I therefore urge the Rules Committee to take the first step toward protecting Americans from a medical ID by ruling my amendment to the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations bill in order.

Mrs. CLAYTON. The Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Bill is one about priorities. Cutting successful and extremely important education and labor programs is not a priority for me.

Mr. Chairman, I am very disturbed about the number of programs that have been left out of this bill. Strong employment and training programs for youth and adults would help mitigate problems arising from people who do not have the skills or the intent to be good employees. Yet, this Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations bill decimates funding for these very programs. This bill eliminates funding for effective programs such as School-to-Work, Summer Jobs, and Job Corps.

Eliminating the Summer Jobs program, the bill denies jobs to a half-million of our most disadvantaged youth. Without these funds, ¾ of the young people currently participating in this program would be without a job next year. Are these not the same youth who concern us because of their potential for gang affiliation, violence and crime?

The bill, in its original form, eliminated the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP)—a program that helps 4.4 million low-income households pay their heating and cooling bills. However, the House Manager's amendment may appropriate money for LIHEAP, but it will only be a fraction of the 1.1 billion appropriated in advance last year for use in FY 1999. 1.5 million of the 4.4 million households have elderly members, 1.3 million have disabled members, and 2.1 million have children in poverty. Who, out of the 4.4 million households, will receive the benefit of this insufficient amount of money?

This bill also cuts funding for the Goals 2000 education reform program to 9% below current levels. And it cuts OSHA workplace safety enforcement by 9% below the administration's request. It's ironic. How can you eliminate so many programs and claim to improve... and support opportunities for employment, and the good health and education of the people of our country?

We must restore these programs and remain committed to initiatives that allow the disadvantaged to survive. We must remain devoted to programs that educate our youth and dedicate our young with opportunities that prepare them for the world of work.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill about priorities. This is a bill about values. It is not my priority to eliminate necessary programs. And it definitely is not a priority for the disadvantaged individuals.

However, it is my priority to ensure that our youth and those who are disadvantaged are treated fairly and are given the opportunity to be productive citizens. So I ask you... honestly is this your priority? It is, then vote no to the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Bill.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Istook substitute.

The Istook amendment is unwise and should be opposed. First, House it overturns the considered judgment of many states.

1. Virtually all states have laws providing for some degree of confidentiality in the provision of such services to minors.

2. In Illinois, the law provides that physicians may offer birth control services and information to minors under a number of circumstances—including when the minor is already married, is already a parent, or when failure to do so would create a serious health hazard.

3. This amendment would overturn the considered judgment of the state of Illinois in enacting these provisions—and you might find that it poses similar problems in your state.

And I do not recommend abrogating a law that empowers physicians to act to address serious health hazards.

4. In fact, there are presently twenty-three states that explicitly ensure minors’ access to confidential family planning services. The amendment directly contravenes these state’s judgments.

5. If we are going to set up this Congress as a super State Legislature, it seems to me that, at a bare minimum, we should look at these state laws carefully and incorporate the learning of the states on this subject?

6. Second, the Istook amendment is premised on the false logic that, if minors had to tell their parents they were getting contraceptive services, they would abstain from sexual activity. That sounds good, but unfortunately its wrong.

1. The truth is that most minors who go to Title X projects have already been sexually active for about a year. They go to a Title X project when they fear they have contracted a disease, become pregnant, or they decide they need contraceptives.

2. When they enter the door, they receive counseling by professionals who attempt to ascertain the nature of the relationship, including potential sexual abuse, encourage the minor to consider abstinence and to involve their parents in their decision making, and educate them on how to resist coercive sexual activity.

3. If these minors who are already sexually active know that they will not be able to receive contraceptives, they will not go to the project. They will not receive abstinence counseling or other protective assistance. They will continue to have sex, contract STDs, become pregnant and, statistics tell us, over half will have abortions.

4. And minors from dysfunctional families who may suffer abuse at home and be surrounded by drug and alcohol and crime may have mental conditions for not involving their parents. Categorically mandating that involvement, in the absence of a court order is neither wise nor realistic.

5. This is why so many states expressly protect confidential services for minors.

6. And this is why many medical organizations—the provider organizations that know the realities better than anyone in this room—support confidential services.

As the American Medical Association has told us, AMA policy opposes mandatory parental notification when prescription contraceptives are provided to minors through federally funded programs since it creates a breach of confidentiality in the physician-patient relationship.

The American Public Health Association and American Nurses Association are similarly opposed.

We should heed this judgment and support the substitute.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the H.R. 4274, the Labor/HHS/ Appropriations Bill, because the House Republicans propose to make drastic cuts in many programs that are vitally important to all Americans, but especially to those most in need whose very survival and growth depends upon the assistance they receive from their government.

In fact, I fear this destructive bill is going nowhere and every Member of this body knows it for the sham that it is. The Republican leadership recognizes they don't have the votes to pass it and are negotiating to include another version of this measure in the Omnibus spending bill.

The funding levels in the bill, as reported, fall $2 billion short of what democrats believe is needed to improve our schools and prepare our children for the 21st Century. There are no funds for America Reads, which helps ensure that all children can read well when they complete the third grade. There are no funds to help communities hire 100,000 new teachers and reduce class size so that students can have a better chance to learn. There are no funds to help communities modernize and build schools that provide safe and appropriate learning environments. Clearly, there is nothing in this bill that reflects any investment in the future of public education. In fact, this bill grossly underfunds existing and proven educational programs upon which we have long relied.

Later today, this body will consider a bipartisan conference report reauthorizing the Head Start program, yet this appropriations bill would provide $160 million less than what the President has requested to run Head Start next year. A second bipartisan conference report to be taken up today extending child nutrition programs, would authorize new funds for meal supplements to induce greater participation in after-school programs. This appropriations bill, however, would provide $140 million less than what the President requested to operate these very same after-school programs.

I can imagine any Member who would vote today to reauthorize our Head Start and nutrition programs could, in good conscience, support these devastating cuts.

Regrettably, Mr. Speaker, the cuts don't stop here, there are many many more. For example, funding for Title I, bilingual education, Safe and Drug Free Schools, Work-Study, and School to Work are all cut. Without the assistance there programs, provide, thousands of disadvantaged students will be deprived of educational and career opportunities they need to succeed in life.

Our nation's labor force also suffers under this appropriations bill. It cuts funding for critical worker protection programs run by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and the Mine Safety and Health Administration. Several regulatory riders are attached that compromise these agencies' effective-ness. In addition, the bill undermines efforts to help our youth enter the workforce by completely defunding the Summer Jobs Program and the President's Youth Opportunity Areas Initiative.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, this bill eliminates funding for the Low Income Energy Assistance Program which provides heating and cooling assistance for over 5.5 million low and fixed-income households. With winter approaching, many of those who have relied on this program may soon be forced to choose between heating their homes and feeding their families. That should be totally unacceptable in a nation as prosperous as ours. But rather than meet the urgent need, Republicans would rather squander available dollars on tax cuts for the wealthy.

Mr. Chairman, this is a bad bill that hurts students, working families, and our most neediest families. I strongly urge Members to oppose it.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER).

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. OBRY. Mr. Chairman, because I think this is a colossal waste of time, I, too, yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes, namely:

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. GREENWOOD

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

This amendment is to the title to which the amendment relates as follows:

SEC. 220. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no provider of services under title X of the Public Health Service Act shall be exempt from any State law requiring notification or the reporting of child abuse, child molestation, sexual abuse, rape, or incest.

(b) None of the funds appropriated in this or any other Act for any fiscal year for carrying out title X of the Public Health Service Act may be made available to any family planning project under section 1001 of such title if any provider of services in the project knowingly provides contraceptive drugs or devices to a minor, unless—

(1) the minor is emancipated under applicable State law;

(2) the minor has the written consent of a custodial parent or custodial legal guardian to receive the drugs or devices;

(3) a court of competent jurisdiction has directed that the minor may receive the drugs or devices;

(4) such provider of services has given actual written notice to a custodial parent or custodial legal guardian of the intent to provide the drugs or devices, at least five business days before providing the drugs or devices;

(c) Each provider of services under title X of the Public Health Service Act shall each year certify to the Secretary of Health and Human Services compliance with this section. Such Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to effectuate this section.

This title may be cited as the "Department of Health and Human Services Appropriations Act, 1999." The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 printed in the House Report 105-762 offered by Mr. GREENWOOD:

Page 52, strike line 8 and all that follows through page 53, line 8, and insert the following:

(b)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall require that each family planning project under section 1001 of title X of the Public Health Service Act—

(A) expressly inform all minors who seek the services of the project that abstinence is the only certain way to avoid pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, and infection with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

(B) ensure that all individuals who provide counseling services to minors through the project are trained to provide to minors counseling that encourages the minors—

(i) to abstain from sexual activity;

(ii) to avoid being coerced into engaging in sexual activities; and

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House today, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) and a Member opposed, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) will control 8 minutes.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. ISTOOK AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GREENWOOD

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment.

The text of the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 105-762 offered by Mr. ISTOOK as a substitute for the Amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. GREENWOOD:

Strike section 220 (page 52, line 3, and all that follows through page 53, line 8) and insert the following:

(C) In developing protocols under subparagraphs (A) and (B), the Secretary shall consider the results of research under title XX of the Public Health Service Act.
percentage of teens seeking family planning services have already been sexually active for nearly a year. By denying contraceptive services to tens of thousands of teens, the Istook language will simply result in higher rates of STDs, more unintended pregnancies and more abortions. If teens are required to obtain parental consent for contraceptive services, they will also avoid STD and HIV screening and routine gynecological exams.

Our Nation already leads the western world in teen pregnancies. Millions of teens have some kind of STD, and the incident of AIDS among teens is, frankly, alarming.

Mr. Chairman, we need to address these problems, but not by making Title X services more difficult to obtain. My colleagues, we have a teen pregnancy crisis in the country, and the Istook provision, in my judgment, makes it worse. In contrast, the Greenwood-Castle substitute before us today promotes sensible policies for teens. It promotes the values we all share: abstinence for teens and parental involvement. However, it does not threaten the health of teens by withdrawing contraceptive services from our most vulnerable teens who simply may have nowhere else to turn.

Please, I say to my colleagues, think carefully. Let us protect the health and well-being of our teenagers, reduce the threat to their sexual health, and avoid unintended pregnancies and abortions, support the Greenwood-Castle substitute, and oppose the Istook second degree amendment.
Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, we have 3 cosponsors of the amendment: myself, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BARCIA), and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, the reason for the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo amendment is simple. In McHenry County, Illinois, which I represent, a 37-year-old teacher was raping a 13-year-old student of his over and over and over again. He took her to the Title X-funded McHenry Tri-County Health Clinic. She was injected on 3 different occasions with Depo-Provera, which is a harsh chemical. In fact, the chemical of choice for chemical castration by convicts.

Her parents had no idea that she was getting these shots. In America today, children as young as 12 years old are being injected, implanted, and given prescriptions to lower their own bodies without their parents even knowing.

Our bill does something very simple. It adopts the language of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) that Title X health care providers are required to counsel all minors regarding abstinence. It adopts the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY)’s problem with this bill that says that children are getting STDs because our bill still allows them to get STDs. In fact, the majority of parents of children who have already gotten STDs still have no idea that they are getting STDs. We talk about 17 year olds, the gentlewoman who just spoke said that we need more than just contraceptives. That is why the Greenwood language is so focused on abstinence, abstinence counseling. That is why we are so focused on getting the STDs out of the picture. The problem is that not every kid has the right parent to do that.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in very strong support of the Greenwood-Castle amendment and in opposition to the Istook amendment.

This current language in the bill requiring parental consent or notification would really do great harm to our efforts to lower the number of unintended pregnancies and abortions, and to our efforts to reduce the incidence of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV and AIDS.

On the face of it, it sounds very reasonable, but I really ignore the realities of the young people who seek care at these clinics. The vast majority of them are already sexually active, have been for almost a year or more, and many of them seek these services because they are afraid they may be pregnant or they have a sexually transmitted disease.

Mr. Chairman, if teens are required to obtain parental consent for any of the Title X services, many of them will avoid the program entirely. It is important to remember that some contraceptives provide protection from STDs. And the opportunity to provide accurate, potentially life-saving education on the transmission of HIV and other STDs could also be lost if teens avoid these services because of parental consent requirements.

I think the Greenwood-Castle amendment offers all kinds of counseling that would be necessary.

I just want to point out the medical community is overwhelmingly opposed to parental consent notification requirements for minors, and I hope that this Congress will support the Greenwood-Castle amendment and oppose this amendment very strongly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will seek a clarification of the gentleman from Pennsylvania. Did the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) yield 4 minutes, and I would be delighted to yield another 4 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has exhausted the balance of his time through yielding it to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I believe I yielded 4 minutes, and I would be delighted to yield another 4 minutes.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, is it the case then that the time is not entirely fungible, but that there will be another 8 minutes yielded on the Greenwood underlying amendment? Is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The time was allocated at the outset for both propositions.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, if I may inquire as to the time remaining and the different allocations.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair asks indulgence for 1 minute. The Chair understands the time as fungible.

Under the unanimous consent, each of the following Members were recognized for 8 minutes:

The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK); the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN); the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES); the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), and that on both amendments, in combination, total time.

So the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), perhaps under a misunderstanding, has yielded 4 of his 8 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES), who used that time. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) may, in turn, choose to yield 4 minutes of his time back to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD).

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) yields to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) for his management of 4 minutes of time.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BARCIA).

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Istook amendment to allow parental notification of minors seeking contraceptives in Title X clinics.

In a recent Gallop survey of 500 teens age 13 through 17, 66 percent indicated that they believed that parental consent should be required before minors received birth control, and believed in fact that parental support and involvement would be beneficial to them.

I would like to also point out, current law requires minors to receive parental consent to have their ears pierced, or even, in cases of an allergy sufferer, to receive an allergy shot. Yet these children can gain access to hormones or other contraceptive drugs that can in fact pose a serious danger to the health of that child. In effect, this issue begs the question of what role should parents have in helping to determine their children’s health care needs.

I want to say that while I respectfully disagree with my distinguished colleagues, I commend them for their concern and their focus on abstinence, also, as a key means of preventing unwanted pregnancies.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the four Members controlling time, for purposes of the debate that the decision is that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) as a member of the committee will have the right to close, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) as a member of the committee will be next to last in closing.

In order to balance the other two, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD), it is in the Chair’s discretion to decide. In order to alter the time, and considering this issue overall, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) will go first in the final use of time, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) will go second, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) third, and the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) fourth.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo amendment. I encourage all of my colleagues to vote for it, and vote against the Greenwood amendment.

As many know, I practiced medicine prior to coming to the Congress, including working in emergency rooms. When I work in the emergency room, one of the things we always fear is the possibility that a minor child can come in with a serious illness and the parents will not be with them, and we will not be able to get parental consent.

The reason why that is a very serious concern is if we stitch up a wound or give a drug and that child has a reaction to that drug, we can actually be prosecuted for assault. Indeed, a minor child cannot get an aspirin from a school nurse, nor, as was stated previously on the other side of the aisle, their ears pierced without parental consent in the United States. But there is one place in the United States today where a minor child can get medical care without parental consent, and that is in the Title X family planning clinics.

It has been proposed or expounded that these clinics are somehow cutting down on the incidence of AIDS, unwanted pregnancies, or HIV. I would assert that all the research data indicates that since this program began, that the incidence of all of those things has gotten consistently worse, not better.

Indeed, I would assert that this policy established by this Congress has been a tremendous assault on the integrity of the family, and has played a role in the explosion of sexual activity. In closing, I would just like to say one additional thing. The data that has actually come out of the Alan Guttmacher Institute indicates that up to as many as 50 percent of these kids under the age of 18 are having sexual relations with a man over the age of 18, and in the vast majority of the States that is statutory rape. Indeed, in the case cited by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO), it involved a teacher of 37 years having relations with a 13-year-old child.

So I would encourage all of my colleagues to vote for the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) on his amendment. It is the right thing to do for the family, it is morally right, and the arguments being put forward by the opponents of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK) are incorrect.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON).

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, in the real world it is not hard for kids to get condoms. We may not like it, but it is true. Would Members not rather that they got the advice that came from someone who said to them, you ought to talk to your mom and dad about this stuff because they actually do not know how to talk to their parents.

They would sit them down and say, look, this is how you do it, then back them up, and say, come back to me and talk to me about it. A lot of kids need to be coached to talk to their parents, because their parents do not talk to them. Their parents do not talk to them, not just about sex, but also not about school, not about friendships, not about intimacy, not about love.

Members want to mandate that everyone has to get anything they want to use from a Title X clinic or any health clinic that meets these standards. Then every kid, including the kid that the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) was concerned about, she would have come somewhere that was skilled in explaining to her, you do not have to participate in coercive sexual relationships.

My point is that if you do not tell kids this is coercive sex, we do not tell them they do not have to do this. We do not get them somewhere where there are skilled people who can help them build their relationships with their family, help them resist the kind of pressures that are on them, help them understand that abstinence is the only real protection. Furthermore, it gives them a chance to develop their personal power as a young woman.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, in the case in Illinois, under Illinois law, the 13-year-old did receive abstinence counseling.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to yield 45 seconds to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK).

Ms. MYRICK. Mr. Chairman, the Istook amendment does protect our children, and it does provide counseling for children during the time that they are going through emotional problems in their lives. But it does protect a parent's right. It simply requires that a parent be notified before their child is given contraception. As parents, we do want to know that. We want to know if they smoke, drink, or do drugs. I do not really see why this is any different.

One thing we have not talked about is that all birth control is not safe, because it has been documented that birth control can be very damaging to young girls going through puberty. It can cause blood clotting, bone deterioration among a long list of possible side effects, and even death in girls with heart conditions. It has been a cause of brainstem stroke in teenagers. So I urge Members to support the Istook amendment.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield ½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. SHEILA JACKSON-LEE).

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, this is a difficult time. Let me share a fact in our community. A young woman living with a stepfather and her mother, a young woman having her future before her, her stepfather sexually abused her. There obviously was not enough communication in that home. The child wound up pregnant.

I submit the Greenwood-Castle substitute, for any other approach to that would go against what 23 States have done. This now will require Title X counselors to expressly inform all minors that abstinence is the only certain way to avoid pregnancy, sexually transmitted infections, and HIV, but it adds counseling to this process. It makes clear that Title X providers must abide by State laws in the reporting of contribution, child molestation, sexual assault, and incest.

Now we are talking more to these young women who may come for these kinds of prescriptions, but then also share and burden those who are counseling them, what is going on in their home, and maybe this tragedy in Houston would not have occurred.

The Greenwood-Castle substitute ensures that all Title X counselors receive state-of-the-art training on how to help minors abstain from sexual activity, to help them through sexual relationships, and involve their parents in the decision to receive family planning.

Mr. Chairman, if the Istook amendment is passed, we will see more of those victims, impregnated young girls, losing the future of their lives. I would ask that we vote for the Greenwood-Castle substitute only.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. GREENWOOD).

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo parental notification amendment. Parents should have the right to know what the Federal Government is doing to their children. It absolutely mandates that the implementations of this provision do not have a problem with having to write a note for their daughter to receive an aspirin at school or permission to have their ears pierced. Yet, when it comes to young girls being given serious birth control pre-scription by strangers, opponents do not believe that parents should even be told, that they even have the right to know.

President Clinton has said, parents quite simply have a right to know. Unfortunately, he was not referring to parents having the right to know about their children being given DepoProvera, he was referring to the importance of parents knowing which companies are most responsible for the problem of teen smoking.

If parents quite simply have the right to know about teen smoking, then surely they have the right to know if their minor daughter is receiving potenti-ally dangerous contraceptive pre-scriptions. The Istook amendment is the only amendment that requires parental notification for prescription contraceptives. The Greenwood amendment would gut this provision.

I urge Members to vote for the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo amendment, to give parents the right to protect their minor daughters.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Ms. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I am strong support of the Istook-Barcia-Manzullo substitute. They need to be. They need to be. When we are dealing withStrasburg inhabitants, with the message that abstinence is the only way to avoid pregnancy, STDs and HIV infection without restricting their access to needed health care.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would inquire of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) how many speakers he has remaining for his ½ minutes?

Mr. COBURN. Just one, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. And how many speakers does the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) have remaining for his 2 minutes?

Mr. GREENWOOD. One, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STOKES) has 30 seconds remaining. In that case, I think it would be appropriate that all the rest of the time be used for closing statements.

So then it is appropriate under the previous direction of the Chair that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) is recognized to close with 2 minutes.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, this is one of those debates where real good friends look at each other and say, “How can you think this way? How can we come to such different conclusions?”

Mr. Chairman, these are my two pretty little girls and I love them and I want to make sure that nothing ever happens to them. And they are so lucky. They are so lucky because they have two parents, and I talk to them, we are going to talk to them about their health and their sexuality and their personalities and the strength of their character. And when they come to this decision, they will have us.

But walk out the door of this building and tell me how many minutes it takes to find the first teenage girl whose parents could care less about her; if they knew where she was, if she knew where they were, tell us what value it is that we are accomplishing when we send a letter into that home, send a letter into that home from an agency.

Do my colleagues know what happens? The girl says, Do not send that letter there. I do not want this service, if that is what it means. And so where does she live? She lives in a world in which she has predators. She could be 15 or 16, and there are guys in those neighborhoods all over America, all kinds of neighborhoods, worrying on her, putting her at risk of pregnancy, putting her at risk of HIV.

She has got nobody. She does not have a parent. She does not have, if the Istook language prevails, a counselor. She has got nobody to teach her what is right. And if we want these values taught to these poor kids, just like we want them taught to our kids, vote for the Greenwood amendment and please vote no on the Istook amendment.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK).
Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, this program provides birth control pills and other contraceptives to kids. Not just those who are 17, but it freely gives them to those who are 15, to those who are 13, to those who are 12, to those who are 11, with no limit, totally ignoring the State laws on the books about age of consent. Without the language, the Istook language in the bill, we do not even have a requirement to turn in people who are 10, who are 11, who are 12, who are 13, without permission of kids, and then taking them to these clinics for birth control, who are breaking the law that is designed to protect minors and our kids.

The issue is should $200 million a year of taxpayers’ money go to provide contraceptives to 1.5 million kids each year without their parents knowing it? This is not emergency care. We do not say they have to have notice if they need treatment. This pill, they have already contracted some disease. It is only if they are giving out contraceptives for future sexual activity.

And birth control pills, yes, they have side effects. They have interaction with other drugs. Parents need to know about their children’s health, as well as about their children’s morals, if they are going to be involved in being able to give parental guidance. The Istook language has counseling on abstinence. It has a requirement that State laws are to be followed in reporting sexual predators. For goodness sake, Mr. Chairman, let the parents know.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS) for the purpose of closing.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Chairman, this debate is certainly not about statutory rape, nor is it about taking aspirin. What this debate is about is the real world consequences of the Istook amendment, regardless of the intentions.

I often hear my Republican friends and colleagues talking about taking responsibility for one’s actions. They are right, and I agree. And what taking responsibility means on the Istook amendment is that the supporters of this amendment must honestly face the real world consequences of the actions of this amendment and the result of this amendment, if it were to pass into law.

According to the expert opinion of the American Medical Association, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and even the American Family Physicians, is that this type of amendment could cause several things to happen. First, more unplanned pregnancies. Because of that, more abortions.

It could also cause in the real world a lot of young teenagers to have serious health problems that otherwise could be avoided. Oral contraceptives do not protect a condom does not protect. What are we going to do to make sure our children have the two greatest sexually transmitted diseases we have today? The only thing that we can do is have the knowledge of involving the parents back with them in this decision.

I agree, there will be young women who will choose to go but there will be hundreds of thousands of young women who do have an opportunity to have a relationship with their parents renewed and discuss this issue. If they choose to continue to take oral contraceptives, they will have a parent there saying be sure and take your pill; be sure and do not discriminate; let us teach you how to do it.

The idea of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD) on counseling, I agree.

Title X, for those under 18 years of age, in my opinion, is one of the biggest causes of failure of our children. It is not a help. The facts do not show that it is a help. We like to say it is a help because of all of the problems we see.

I give teenage girls oral contraceptives. I practice in this area. But before they walk out of my office, after I have tried to talk them out of it, I make sure they know everything about it, everything about it. The real world is, is there are some wonderful Planned Parenthood clinics that do a good job but the real world on Title X clinics is they do not. They hand them a book of pure and piece of paper and say go. They never say the first thing about they are not going to be protected against a sexually transmitted disease.

Finally, my colleagues need to know about the NIH study. Ninety thousand teenagers, 1993, we sponsored the study, here is what it says: The number one way to keep teenagers from getting pregnant or getting a sexually transmitted disease is to connect the parent to the teenager. It is called parental connectedness.

Why would we not want to have a government policy that follows the largest study ever done in our country on this issue?

It is an easy, simple thing. We all want the same thing. We do not want our kids to get pregnant. We do not want them to get a sexually transmitted disease. The difference is, there is a base of knowledge and we will really look at it we will all go to the same point. We are not 100 percent right or 100 percent wrong.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. ISTOOK), as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 2(c) of rule XXIII, the Chair announces that he may reduce to not less than 5 minutes any recorded vote on the underlying Greenwood amendment.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—aye 224, no 200, not voting 10, as follows:

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the consideration of H.R. 4274, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED ACTS, 1999—VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 105-321)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

I am returning herewith without my approval, H.R. 4101, the “Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999.” I am vetoing this bill because it fails to address adequately the crisis now gripping our Nation’s farm community.

I firmly believe and have stated often that the Federal Government must play an important role in strengthening the farm safety net. This appropriation bill provides an opportunity each year for the Government to take steps to help hardworking farmers achieve a decent living, despite the misfortune of bad weather, crop disease, collapsing markets, or other forces that affect their livelihoods. It is especially necessary for the Government to act this year, with prices dropping precipitously, crops destroyed by flood, drought, and disease, and where many farmers will see their net income drop by as much as 40 percent below a 5-year average.

Two years ago, when I signed the “Freedom to Farm Bill,” I made clear that it did not provide an adequate safety net for our Nation’s farmers. There is no better proof of that bill’s shortcomings than the hardship in America’s farm country this year. Our farm families are facing their worst crisis in a decade.

My Administration has already taken steps to address this crisis. In July, we announced the purchase of $250 million of wheat to export to hungry people around the world. In August, I signed legislation to speed up farm program payments. But in the face of a growing emergency for our Nation’s farmers, we must do more to ensure that American farmers can continue to provide, for years to come, the safest and least expensive food in the world.

But in the face of a growing emergency for our Nation’s farmers, we must do more to ensure that American farmers can continue to provide, for years to come, the safest and least expensive food in the world.

Two years ago, I signed the Freedom to Farm Bill. I made clear that it did not provide an adequate safety net for our Nation’s farmers. There is no better proof of this bill’s shortcomings than the hardship in America’s farm country this year. Our farm families are facing their worst crisis in a decade.

My Administration has already taken steps to address this crisis. In July, we announced the purchase of $250 million of wheat to export to hungry people around the world. In August, I signed legislation to speed up farm program payments. But in the face of a growing emergency for our Nation’s farmers, we must do more to ensure that American farmers can continue to provide, for years to come, the safest and least expensive food in the world.

In August, I signed legislation to speed up farm program payments. But in the face of a growing emergency for our Nation’s farmers, we must do more to ensure that American farmers can continue to provide, for years to come, the safest and least expensive food in the world. Last month, I sent to the Congress a request for $2 billion in emergency general revenue funds, and I supported Senator Daschle’s and Harkin’s proposal to boost farm income by lifting the cap on marketing loan rates.
I am extremely disappointed that the Congress has reacted to this agriculture emergency situation by sending me a bill that fails to provide an adequate safety net for our farmers. I have repeatedly stated that I would veto any emergency farm assistance bill if it did not adequately address our farmers' immediate needs, and this bill does not do enough.

The lack of sufficient emergency aid for farmers in this bill is particularly problematic in light of the bill's other provisions that affect farmers and their rural communities. Cutting edge agricultural research is absolutely essential to improve our farmers' productivity and to maintain their advantage over our competitors around the world. But this bill eliminates the $320 million in competitive research grants for this year that I strongly supported and signed into law just last June. It also blocks the $60 million from the Fund for Rural America provided through that same bill, preventing needed additional rural development funds that would help our Nation's rural communities to diversify their economies and improve their quality of life. The bill also cuts spending for our food safety initiative in half, denying funds for research, public education, and other food safety improvements.

Many of our most vulnerable farmers have once again an obstacle that no one in America ever should have to confront: racial discrimination. Over 1,000 minority farmers have filed claims of discrimination by USDA's farm loan programs in the 1980s and early 1990s that the statute of limitations bars from being addressed. While I am pleased that this legislation contains a provision waiving the statute of limitations, I am disappointed that it does not contain the language included in the Senate's version of this bill, which provides a fair and full court review if they so choose, and covers claims stemming from USDA's housing loan programs.

Therefore, as I return this bill, I again call on the Congress to send me a comprehensive plan, before this session ends, that adequately responds to the very real needs of our farmers at this difficult time.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the JOURNAL, and the veto message and the bill will be printed as a HOUSE document.

Mr. SKEEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the veto message of the President, together with the accompanying bill, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to come to the floor today in support of H. Res. 578, which asks the House to endorse the Science Committee's National Science Policy Study, produced by our friend and colleague from Michigan the Committee Vice Chairman Mr. Ehlers. The study "Unlocking Our Future: Toward a New National Science Policy" is the result of over a year's work by the committee and reflects an approach to science policy that has earned the support of both sides of the aisle.

We have all heard the expression "if it ain't broke, don't fix it." Well, the clear message of this report is that, while not exactly broke, America's science policy is nonetheless in need of some pretty significant maintenance.

Mr. Speaker, this then is not a visionary document, but it is, I think, a document that makes sense. After all, that is what is scientists are, and it is important that we find ways to support them for the contributions they make to our national security, our health and our welfare, and this study succeeds in that.

In my view what makes this report different from other science policy reports published by various groups over the years, some of them very good, is the Committee on Science's intention to act on its recommendations in future oversight hearings in legislation. Indeed this report should not be seen as the end, but rather the beginning of a long process that will involve Congress, the Executive Branch, the States, universities and industry all working together.

Mr. Speaker, this report has generated a great deal of excitement within the scientific community, and before concluding my remarks I would like to share with the House some statements in support of this document from our colleagues and in the Executive Branch.

Dr. Neal Lane, the President's Science Adviser, said he found the report to be harmonious with the President's established science policy goals, and he commended it for underscoring the importance of sustaining and nurturing America's world-leading science and technology enterprise. Half of our economic productivity in the last half-century is attributable to technological innovation and the science that supports it.

The report's recommendations on the importance of education concur with the President's views that our nation flourishes in the 21st century will rest upon our success in developing a well-educated workforce able to embrace the rapid pace of technological change.

I hope this report will serve as a catalyst for broad-based bipartisan Congressional support of the Administration's thoughtful investments in science and technology portfolio. Such a partnership to stimulate scientific discovery and new technologies will take America into the new century well equipped for the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead.

I look forward to working with House Science Committee Vice Chairman Ehlers and other members of Congress to ensure that our national science policy keeps in step with a changing world.

STATEMENT BY DR. RITA COLWELL

I want to commend Rep. Vern Ehlers of his diligent work in preparing this report on national science policy. I am particularly pleased that it emphasizes the critical role of federal support for fundamental research, and especially for merit based investments in university research. The technological developments that are key to economic growth, public health, and national prosperity all rely on discoveries occurring at and across the frontiers of science and engineering.

I am also gratified that Rep. Ehlers has highlighted the singular role that math, science and technology education play in global competitiveness. We cannot expect to maintain a system of world class research unless we have broad support from an informed public, and we cannot have an informed public unless we commit ourselves to improving public science literacy.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, the Nation's scientific enterprise is too important to our future to be left on auto pilot. In adopting House Resolution 578 and endorsing the National Science Policy Study the House will be sending an unmistakable signal that America's scientific enterprise will no longer be taken for granted in the Halls of Congress, and the real work will begin of turning the ideas in this report into sound policy that is good for science and good for the Nation.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on H.R. 578, and I commend my colleague the Honorable gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ehlers) for the significant effort to bring forward a comprehensive science policy report. I commend the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Senseburner) and the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown) for allowing it to come this far. The report of The involvement of under-represented populations in the scientific community by partnership programs between historically black colleges and universities, Hispanic-serving institutions, large research institutions and corporations must be encouraged. As a result of these programmatic research and development agreements, the CRADAs, is an excellent opportunity for collaborations, provide role models and a support system for smaller institutions. However recent National Science Foundation data show that research institutions received approximately $12.7 billion from 10 Federal agencies. Ten billion dollars of this amount was allocated to the top 100 research universities, but not one historically black or historically Hispanic university received a substantial amount. Only 70% million went to the top 5 historically black and historically Hispanic producing students while J ohn Hopkins alone received $701 million. More needs to be done to develop the CRADAs with minority institutions of higher education if we are to see more minorities in the fields of science and technology. In offering these views it is our hope that any future congressional conversation include the aforementioned. In an effort to create a national science policy which is sound, diverse and inclusive. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) will control the balance of the time on the minority side.

There was no objection.

Mr. SENSENIBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS), the author of this report.

(Mr. EHLERS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks)

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to address the House this evening to speak regarding the report of the Committee on Science, Unlocking Our Future: Toward a New National Science Policy, that I have spent much of the last year working on.

We started this mammoth effort just one year ago. It has involved a tremendous amount of work on the part of myself, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENENSEBRENNER), the gentleman from California (Mr. BROWN) and our staffs, and has had the full support of the Speaker, and I certainly wish to thank them all for their support and their work.

I consider the release of this report to be a commencement; it is a beginning and not an end. It is intended to serve as the foundation for continued discussion within the Committee on Science, within the Congress and throughout the executive branch regarding the institutional funding of science and policy decisions relating thereto. This report was not intended to be an end in itself, but rather to stimulate discussion and provide direction for the Congress and for the Committee on Science in future deliberation on this topic.

I am certainly delighted by the reception the report has received up to this point. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENIBRENNER) has named some of the responses we have received, those from the Director of the National Science Foundation, from members of the bipartisan Senate Science and Technology Caucus, and from the person of the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy. All of them have indicated support for the report, and similar letters from many scientists, scientific organizations and universities have been pouring into our office and into the chairman's office.

The only comments that we received reflecting reservations agree with and support most of the report, but are concerned about what is not in the report. I must believe that we should have gone further, and indeed we should have and would have in certain subject areas had we had the time.

In particular I would like to respond to the comments of the gentlewoman from Texas who spoke just before me. I appreciate and agree with much of what she just said. There is a great need for us to continue our work in the area of underrepresented populations. I want to acknowledge in the report, that the instigation, the seed for this report, arose from an African American, Dr. Homer Neal of the University of Michigan, who was Chairman of the U.M. physics Department when I was in the Michigan State Senate. He invited me to the campus, and we began discussions regarding science and science policy. He eventually became Vice President of Research and then Interim President of the University of Michigan and was instrumental in bringing together a large number of scientists—administrators from major universities to begin discussions on this topic. They met with me, they met with the previous chairman of the Committee on Science, Mr. Walker, and then Dr. Neal organized a symposium at the University of Michigan which was instrumental in beginning the process of developing a science policy in this Nation.

In preparing this report we sought input from the community. I have personally spoken to or with approximately 10,000 scientists and perhaps two thousand nonscientists over the course of the past year. In addition, we started a web site. We have received over 300 E-mails and over 50 letters, thoughtful letters. I might add, from scientists across the country. We have held seven hearings specifically on this topic, and in addition to that last year held four hearings on science, math, engineering and technology education something that is extremely important to this country. We listened very carefully to what every group or individual had to say and I believe this report reflects much of what we have learned.

But as important as what we learned from these sources was the conviction that we started with.

Our goal, our vision, was that America ought to maintain and improve her preeminent position in science and technology in order, first of all, to advance human understanding of the universe and all that it contains, and, second, to improve the lives, health, and freedoms of all peoples on this planet. Science—including the physical, natural, life and social sciences, math and engineering can help bring about this vision. The scientific and technological enterprise is critical to bringing about advances in understanding that help ensure that we can maintain our national defense, keep people healthy, and bring about prosperity. I might add that, if we can maintain people's health and their prosperity, we have introduced a great deal of stability which very naturally will lead to greater democracy in this planet. I truly believe that science and technology are the key to the democratic future—as a Nation, and as a planet.

But for science to continue to exert its beneficial effects on society, the scientific enterprise must be kept strong and sustainable. Much of our report is devoted to recommendations for doing so.

We have identified three major areas needing attention. (1) We must have continued discoveries at the scientific frontier; (2) we need research advances in the private sector; and (3) we must improve our system of education from preschool through graduate school.

These are critical areas to address because, first of all, future advances in fundamental research will depend largely on substantial and stable funding for this research from the Federal Government.

Second, research in the private sector and industry is important in bringing the fruits of understanding-driven research to society through applied research.

Third, science and math education, the development of our Nation's intellectual capital, is fundamentally important to our Nation's future.

While the freedom of individual research is necessary, it is not sufficient to bring about ground-breaking scientific discoveries, it is crucial that the scientific and engineering enterprise strengthen its ties to society, the taxpayers, who support it. Our report suggests a number of ways to do so.

In addition, science has another role, and that is to help us make decisions, as a society, as a government, within both the regulatory sector and the judicial branch, as individuals and as voters. We must develop and strengthen our ability to draw on science and engineering to help us make decisions, and our report suggests ways to bring this about.
The work of addressing specific science policy issues will have to come later. I am gratified, in fact, that the additional views submitted by some committee members indicate a desire to pursue further issues raised in the report. It is my hope that we will do so in the next Congress.

Much hard work remains. We must address these issues that are so critical to maintaining our science and technology enterprise. Let's start that process. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Ms. EDELSTINE of California (Mr. EHLERS) referred to the Science Policy Study Kick-off Roundtable, Speaker Gingrich said, and I quote, "You give me a mission large enough to mobilize the nation. You give me a set of strategic investments large enough to be worth doing, and then make it my problem to go out and figure out how to find the money.''

The gentleman from California (Mr. EHLERS) accepted this challenge, and I commend him on his efforts to lay down policy for science, math, engineering, and technology.

In setting policy, decisions must be made about the direction this country should move in, the precedence we are willing to set, and the scientific agenda for the coming years.

The problem with this report is that, and this has been already acknowledged, so I am not trying to beat a dead horse, the Speaker sought a bold, visionary document, and what he got was a report which, valuable as it is, still satisfies mainly the needs of the status quo.

The Speaker, in reviewing the report at the press conference with which it was announced said this is a very good start, but it really only sketches the surface of what over the next 4 or 5 years will have to be a very important national dialogue.

This is the situation that we are in. I like the report as far as it goes. I think Speaker, one, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERNER) said. But I have cast my role here in the Congress at trying to look beyond the status quo at what needs to be done to solve the problems of the future. To me, this report does not go far enough in terms of that particular kind of goal.

So I am going to offer and I have offered this report and this report with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) whose contribution is very valuable. I have gone through many science policy reports over the last 30 odd years. I think this is the first one that I have seen that was completed on time and signed by the person who can do that in dealing with a complex subject like this deserves to be commended.

What do I think we need to do now is to accept the judgment of the Speaker that we need to continue working in this direction and to give our very best efforts to doing that.

The gentleman from Texas has pointed out some of the areas in which we need to continue working. This report, that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) has indicated is very acceptable to the research universities of this country and to those who benefit from the present establishment of science. They are, they are, sacrifice of the Congress committing itself to provide more money for what they are already doing, and they will be glad to spend that. That is not the problem.

The question is about what social purpose are we serving through the expenditure of that money? We no longer can justify on the grounds of, let us say, national security, although we will continue to spend some money on that, but that will continue to decline. We need to look for new ways of answering the question, for what purpose are we supporting this very large scientific establishment that we have created.

I happen to feel that such an establishment is of very great value, but I think we need to look at a new paradigm in terms of the purpose of that establishment and what it can do to achieve the goals of human society.

I know that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) referred to the need for greater democracy on this planet. Our good friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) in his eloquent remarks this morning quoted from Madison's Federalist Paper Number 51 on the problems of justice and how to achieve them.

The physical sciences cannot solve those kinds of problems, but it is conceivable that newly developing areas of science, in the social sciences, the cognitive sciences, is interdisciplinary science, a number of other areas might cast some light on this age-old search for a more effective, just society that we have not yet achieved.

We sometimes almost look as if we are not moving forward in that direction. But because I feel that it is my goal to continue to be the doubting Thomas and to focus on the needs of the future, I am going to withhold my support. I did this in committee, I might say, although I did not make any attempt to influence the other members of the committee.

I can tell you that more than 75 percent of the Committee on Science have signed their approval of this, which I think is probably a figure that ought to be even exceeded by the full House. But I am going to play the role that I have chosen, hoping that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERNER) will understand that I feel that that debate is the greatest contribution to moving us forward along some of the more urgent and critical paths that we need to follow if science is truly going to be the asset to this society that I know it can be.

Mr. Speaker, a year ago at the Science Policy Study Kick-off Roundtable, Speaker Gingrich said, and I quote, "You give me a mission large enough to mobilize the nation. You give me a set of strategic investments large enough to be worth doing, and then make it my problem to go out and figure out how to find the money.''

Representative EHLERS accepted this challenge and I commend him on his effort to lay down a national policy for science, math, engineering, and technology.

In setting policy, decisions must be made about the direction this country should move in, the precedents we are willing to set, and the scientific agenda for the coming years. Unfortunately, these are precisely the decisions that were absent from the report. I refer to this as a bold, visionary document: what he got was largely an affirmation of the status quo.

Any discussion surrounding this report or this broad topic must be put in context and not viewed as an isolated event. This Science Policy Report is not the first of its kind—not even the first such study by the Science Committee—and it will not be the last.

Over the last two decades I can point to a long string of incremental steps in the evolution of our thinking on science policy. In fact, I have read twenty significant studies on national science and technology policy just within the last few years, and I would ask permission to append this list to these remarks.

Twenty-two years ago, President Gerald Ford helped redefine the federal role in science policy with the signing of the National Science and Technology Policy Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976, a major work of the House Science and Technology Committee. While the Act was signed by the President, it was never fully implemented.

However, it did lead to the further definition of the federal role in technology transfer and advanced technology development in the 1988 Trade Bill signed by President Reagan. The Trade Bill then opened up a restructuring of... the broad area of Government-Industry-University cooperation as one way to making the U.S. industrial system more competitive with the national systems of Europe and Asia, which historically had encouraged closer ties between government and industry. During the Bush Administration, under the skilled guidance of his Science Advisor, Dr. D. Allan Bromley, and with the input of many science and technology organizations, continued progress was made in improving the process of innovation, of moving new inventions and technologies from the labs to the marketplace, and defining, through the device of cooperative research and development agreements, the legal structure for individual institutional agreements.

With the end of the Cold War, this policy debate has intensified. The House Committee on Science, Space, and Technology issued a report in 1992 on the health of research. The Clinton Administration has attempted to make this imprint on science policy with the 1994 report, "Science and Technology: A National Priority," a product of the Office of Science and Technology Policy. This report prompted Congressional hearings and a renewed discussion of science and technology policy at the national level.

With this historical perspective in mind, I would offer some guiding principles for an ongoing dialogue about the future of science policy.

First, a new science policy should reflect our understanding of the process of creativity and innovation. Second, a new science policy should articulate the public's interest supporting science—the goals and values the public should expect of the scientific enterprise. Third, a new science policy should point towards decision-making tools for better investment choices.

With respect to our understanding of the process of creativity and innovation, virtually no one still believes in the Vannevar Bush-era linear model of scientific breakthroughs leading inexorably to technological developments. Despite report language endorsing a more sophisticated model of science and technology innovations arising through an iterative process, the Ehlers report ultimately puts its money on the linear model by emphasizing Federal support for "basic" research. The report provides no guidance on how the Federal government should determine that a "market failure" has occurred in the downstream parts of the R&D process or what types of policies would be appropriate to redress such failures. I think we should work together to develop a policy on the appropriate limits of Federal support that fits with our understanding of how innovation actually works. Let's put our money where our models are.

And lastly, as regards our decision-making tools for better investment choices. In addition to identifying clear goals and values, a new science policy must try to accommodate a representation of these groups when one considers sources of scientific capital, the make-up of our workforce, and the nation's consumer base. Therefore, the question is not if, but when, we will begin to seriously tackle the issue of under-representation of these groups. Any comprehensive policy effort must address the inclusion of under-represented groups and acknowledge the future implications for the economy and society.

And lastly, as regards our decision-making tools for better investment choices. In addition to identifying clear goals and values, a new science policy should point towards methods for making better decisions. Some of the elements we need to define are: (1) are we framing the right problems, (2) are our current assessment tools for that are in place. For example, the Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA) challenges our agencies to develop comprehensive goals and measurements. However, in research and development programs, GPRA is still a fairly blunt instrument and is not always the muscle to make its desires stick with executive agencies.

Congress has creative leadership in both parties on science policy questions, but we suffer from a disorganized process for passing authorization and appropriation bills that leads to suboptimal outcomes. I think that we need to identify specific needs that science can help us remedy. What are the long term goals for society which the public should expect from these investments? To put it simply, science for what end? It isn't enough to declare science a public good and walk away from the table.

When we use public resources to support science and technology, we should clearly identify the public purposes which we desire to achieve.

In addition to clearly articulating the goals for science, we need to squarely face the values that science can help enhance or undermine. I am particularly concerned about the possibility that increasing technological sophistication and maldistribution of educational opportunity on this planet, only serve to exacerbate the question is not if, but when, we will begin to seriously tackle the issue of under-representation of these groups. Any comprehensive policy effort must address the inclusion of under-represented groups and acknowledge the future implications for the economy and society.

Some projections show that by the Year 2000, two-thirds of the new entrants into the American workforce will be made up of minority and women. These numbers present a compelling argument for inclusion of these groups when one considers sources of scientific capital, the make-up of our workforce, and the nation's consumer base. Therefore, the question is not if, but when, we will begin to seriously tackle the issue of under-representation of these groups. Any comprehensive policy effort must address the inclusion of under-represented groups and acknowledge the future implications for the economy and society.

And lastly, as regards our decision-making tools for better investment choices. In addition to identifying clear goals and values, a new science policy should point towards methods for making better decisions. Some of the elements we need to define are: (1) Are broad and sustainable, (2) form a broad picture of what we want to accomplish, and (3) are based ultimately on societal needs and our desire to improve the human condition.

Over the course of my career I have issued challenges to legislators, agencies, and the science community to set goals, define priorities, think in a global context, move beyond the limits imposed by discrete disciplines, and to find ways science, engineering, and technology can help society advance. The National Science Policy report written under the direction of Congressman EHLERS is clearly an attempt to move the science, engineering, and technology fields forward. It fails to adequately address the pressing issues that face the scientific enterprise and society in coming years. Therefore, I cannot agree that a Science Policy Report that fails to tackle these challenges is "a framework for future deliberations on congressional science policy and funding" as H. Res. 578 states.

I offer any help I can to Mr. EHLERS in continuing this dialogue, but I will withhold my support for the resolution before us today.

Recent Science Policy Reports

1992—President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology, "Renewing the Promise: Research, Engineering, and Technology."

Next, concerning the public's interest in supporting science and what goals and values the public should expect of the scientific enterprise, it was over fifty years ago that Vannevar Bush argued that science was worth public support because it could "insure our health, prosperity, and security as a nation in the modern world." I think those general goals are still valid today. However, I also believe that we need to identify specific needs that science can help us remedy. What are the long term goals for society which the public should expect from these investments? To put it simply, science for what end? It isn't enough to declare science a public good and walk away from the table.

When we use public resources to support science and technology, we should clearly identify the public purposes which we desire to achieve.

In addition to clearly articulating the goals for science, we need to squarely face the values that science can help enhance or undermine. I am particularly concerned about the possibility that increasing technological sophistication and maldistribution of educational opportunity on this planet, only serve to exacerbate the
Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 1/2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS), for their hard work. I support the recommendations in the report unlocking our future toward a new national science policy. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle next Congress to further promote a strong U.S. science policy.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the idea of a science policy statement is a very valuable idea. As a member of the House Committee on Science, I have wanted for a long time that we bring focus around the issues we work with. However, I think it is important to note that we have a long way to go, and what we might be able to add to this process is an understanding of greater creativity and innovativeness in science. I think that the public’s desire to participate in science, as well as to understand the science investments that this country makes. We also need better decision-making tools that will engage our scientists around the nation so that we can make the right choices of investment.

Then, although we speak about education in this policy statement, I think it is extremely important that we reflect more on the K through 12. One of our most important challenges is to encourage our young people to be interested in the sciences, to desire to participate in the sciences, and by that we must professionally develop our teachers, and we must work on the K through 12 development.

So I would hope that as we conclude this study, that we will look to do more and make it better to expand the interests of science throughout the nation.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Let me close my remarks by expressing my appreciation and respect for both the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) for both accepting this responsibility and for producing this report. I am pleased to have the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) acknowledge that this report is a commencement. I believe sincerely that he is willing and open to having more input as related to the areas I have identified.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
importance of the early detection (through mammograms and biopsies) should be recognized. The proportion of women aged 50 and older who had received mammograms in the prior year increased from 26 percent in 1987 to 57 percent in 1995. The proportion of women 40 to 49 who had received mammograms in the past 2 years also increased from 59 percent in 1990 to 66 percent in 1995. Mr. Speaker, I am very proud that our committee has done more than simply build awareness about this dreaded disease. Just 3 weeks ago on September 15, the House joined unanimously the Committee on Commerce in passing H.R. 4382, the Billey-Bilirakis Mammography Quality Standards Reauthorization Act of 1998. This bill will assure the safety, accuracy and overall quality in mammography services for the early detection of breast cancer. Women who seek mammograms, however, must be assured that their results will be accurate and not misleading. Billey-Bilirakis provides for direct patient notification of all mammography examinations in writing, and in easily understood terms so that women are fully aware of their results. As the August 4 joint letter of endorsement from the American Cancer Society, the National Alliance of Breast Cancer Organizations and the Susan Komen Breast Cancer Foundation states, “Studies have shown that women believe their mammogram results are normal if they are not contacted after their examination. An increasing number of mammography facilities have begun to report both normal and abnormal findings directly to the women as well as her referring physician, without disrupting the relationships with her referring physician.” The other body passed Billey-Bilirakis without amendment. It has languished on the President’s desk for a full week now. It merits his signature. Mr. Speaker, the month of October is breast cancer awareness month. Today is a fitting day for the House of Representatives to add its voice to the voice of many other dedicated citizens in this country to express the importance of early mammographies and biopsies. Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this resolution, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 565. As we all know, breast cancer is one of the leading causes of death among women in this country. By combining early detection of breast cancer with prompt treatment, we can reduce the number of deaths by as much as one-third. Although these facts are known, only half of all women over the age of 50 and over 90 percent of these early-stage cancers can be cured, according to the FDA. The use of mammography as a tool for detecting early cancer continues to increase. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the proportion of women aged 50 and older who had received mammograms in the prior year increased from 26 percent in 1987 to 57 percent in 1995. The proportion of women 40 to 49 who had received mammograms in the past 2 years also increased from 59 percent in 1990 to 66 percent in 1995.
Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Bass resolution because of the impact that the disease breast cancer has on the quality of life of America’s women. Since October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, it is imperative that we seize this opportunity to encourage women to take an active role in combating diseases that takes the lives of thousands of women every single year.

While we have seen tremendous progress in the early detection, diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer, there is still a great deal more work to be done. This year, approximately 180,000 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed, and almost 44,000 women will die from this disease.

That is why it is vital now, more than ever, for us to continue educating women about mammograms and about breast cancer. By the importance of mammograms and biopsies, the Bass resolution builds on the continuing efforts of those who work so very hard to promote the importance of early detection and early diagnosis in the fight against this devastating disease.

Mr. Speaker, one of my dear friends was diagnosed with breast cancer over a decade ago. She is living a healthy, productive life today because she conquered her illness, but her cancer was not detected early. Back then, only 10 years ago, women had mammograms less frequently, and she discovered the lump in her breast after it had been developing for some time.

She is a breast cancer survivor because of her own mental strength and her determination and the quality care that she received from her doctors. She was very fortunate, and for that I am thankful. But Mr. Speaker, other women may not be so fortunate.

Early detection and diagnosis through mammography and biopsy remain our best weapons against breast cancer. The resolution addresses the value of regular self-examinations and mammograms in detecting breast abnormalities, and the necessity of breast biopsies in diagnosing if the abnormality is cancerous or noncancerous.

Through our efforts to raise awareness about mammograms and the other biopsy options that are available, women will have the tools to make well-informed decisions when it comes to breast cancer.

Congress continues to improve the quality of life for American women. As a result of the good work of the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman B LILEY), we are now able to ensure that women have access to the highest quality medical equipment to detect breast cancer at the earliest possible moment, and women now will be able to receive their mammogram results in a clear and comprehensible form.

Congress is also continuing to invest in research that saves lives. We are working to double the funding for the National Institutes of Health over the next 8 years, because their research has produced major advances in the treatment of cancer and disease that affect the lives of women in America.

The Bass resolution complements these efforts to ensure that mothers, daughters, sisters, and wives will not be limited by breast cancer, but will be free to pursue their hopes and dreams, living healthy and productive lives.

I ask my colleagues to support this vitally important resolution.
there were no support groups. Indeed, there was very little understanding of what she faced. Unfortunately, I think she faced this disease with fright, with pain, and sometimes with great loneliness.

What we have done in those 26 years is really quite extraordinary, but there is a lot more work ahead of us. I want to see a world for my wife and my daughter, Lucy, that will be better than it was for my mother.

I think the chairman of the committee from the bottom of my heart for making this resolution in order tonight, and bringing the importance of breast cancer awareness to the public forefront.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the gentleman, and salute him for bringing this resolution to the floor. I thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BLILEY) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS) for the work that they have done, and the gentlemen from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS), who is the originator, who introduced this legislation this year as well as last year.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 565, expressing the critical need for mammograms and biopsies in the fight against breast cancer. I commend the bill's sponsor, the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS) for bringing this important bill to the House floor.

Breast cancer, by any definition, is an epidemic in our country. It is reported that every 3 minutes a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, and every 11 minutes a woman dies of it. As has been said, more than 44,000 women die from breast cancer. These women are our mothers, spouses, siblings, children, and our friends, the people we love the most.

The numbers are especially alarming in my own State of New Jersey, which has the second highest breast cancer mortality rate of any State in the Nation. The American Cancer Society estimates 6,400 new cases of breast cancer in New Jersey in 1997, and an estimated 1,800 deaths. I have found, and certainly the people who work on behalf of the American Cancer Society, that more than ever, many of these victims are young women.

While we have made some strides in raising awareness about the need for early detection and some strides in research, we still do not have a cure, nor do we know what causes this devastating disease. That is why more emphasis needs to be placed on the importance of mammograms to assist in the fight against this disease.

As a cosponsor of this legislation, I am pleased that the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS) and the gentlewoman from Washington (Ms. DUNN) have done much to bring this resolution to the floor. I commend their efforts. It is something that all Members should support.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, S. 2232 was introduced by Senator DALE BUMPERS from the State of Arkansas who worked hard and has done a very commendable job on a bill which recognizes a very important time in our history.

S. 2232 establishes Little Rock Central High School as a National Historic Site and unit of the National Park System. Little Rock Central High School played a prominent role in the struggle for civil rights and an excellent example and as a catalyst for the integration of public schools across the country. In so doing, the Federal Government would help to perpetuate and interpret the role this high school played in the integration of public schools and the evolution of the civil rights movement in the United States.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support S. 2232 and send it to the President.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DUTCH JOHN FEDERAL PROPERTY DISPOSITION AND ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1998

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker’s table the Senate bill (S. 890) to dispose of certain Federal properties located in Dutch John, Utah, to assist the local government in the interim delivery of basic services to the Dutch John community, and for other purposes, and for its immediate consideration in the House.
The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill, the SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah? There was no objection. The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Dutch John Federal Property Disposition and Assistance Act of 1998”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1)(A) Dutch John, Utah, was founded by the Secretary of the Interior in 1956 on Bureau of Reclamation land as a community to house personnel, administrative offices, and equipment for project construction and operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir as authorized by the Act of April 11, 1956 (70 Stat. 105, chapter 203; 43 U.S.C. 620 et seq.); and

(B) permanent structures (including housing, administrative offices, equipment storage and maintenance buildings, and other public buildings and facilities) were constructed and are now owned and maintained by the Secretary of the Interior;

(2)(A) Bureau of Reclamation land surrounding the Flaming Gorge Reservoir (including the Dutch John community) was included within the boundaries of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area in 1968 under Public Law 90-540 (16 U.S.C. 460 et seq.);

(B) Public Law 90-540 assigned responsibility for administration, protection, and development of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area to the Secretary of the Interior and provided that lands and waters needed or used for the Colorado River Storage Project would continue to be administered by the Secretary of the Interior; and

(C) most structures within the Dutch John community (including the schools and public buildings within the community) occupy lands administered by the Secretary of Agriculture;

(3)(A) the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are unnecessarily burdened with the costs of continuing to provide basic services and facilities and building maintenance and with the administrative costs of operating the Dutch John community; and

(B) certain structures and lands are no longer essential to management of the Colorado River Storage Project or to management of the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4)(A) residents of the community are interested in purchasing the homes they currently own from the Secretary of the Interior and the land on which the homes are located;

(B) Daggett County, Utah, is interested in reducing federal land ownership burden in the county by continuing to experience in providing local government support services to a community that produces little direct tax revenue because of Federal ownership; and

(C) a withdrawal of the role of the Federal Government in providing basic direct community services to Dutch John would require local government entities to provide the services at a substantial cost;

(5)(A) residents of the Dutch John community are interested in self-government of the community;

(B) with growing demands for additional commercial recreation services for visitors to the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area and Ashley National Forest, there are opportunities for private economic development, but few private lands are available for the services; and

(C) the privatization and disposal to local government of certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John would be in the public interest.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to privatize certain lands in and surrounding Dutch John, Utah;

(2) to transfer jurisdiction of certain Federal property between the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior;

(3) to improve the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

(4) to dispose of certain residential units, public buildings, and facilities;

(5) to provide interim financial assistance to local government to defray the cost of providing basic governmental services;

(6) to achieve efficiencies in operation of the Flaming Gorge Dam and Reservoir and the Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area;

Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, S. 890 is a very important bill. It helps a small town in Utah, and it saves the American people millions of dollars annually.

The Town of Dutch John was established in 1958 by the Bureau of Reclamation to provide housing and serve project construction needs for the construction of Flaming Gorge Dam. This provision will privatize certain lands at Dutch John which are no longer needed by the Bureau of Reclamation. An agreement reached between the local county and the Bureau, this language will transfer these lands and save the taxpayer over one million dollars annually.

I ask my colleagues to give S. 890 their full support.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERNATIONAL CHILD LABOR RELIEF ACT OF 1998

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4506) to provide for United States support for developmental alternatives for underage child workers, as amended.

H.R. 4506

BE IT ENACTED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "International Child Labor Relief Act of 1998".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) Article 32 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child recognizes "the right of the child to be protected from economic exploitation and from performing any work which is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the child's education or to be harmful to the child's health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral or social development."

(2) Article 2 of Convention 182 of the International Labor Organization, the Minimum Age Convention, states that the minimum age for admission to employment or work "shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling and, in any case, shall not be less than 15 years."

(3) Convention 29 of International Labor Organization, the Forced Labor Convention, which has been in effect since 1930, prohibits most forms of "forced or compulsory labor," including all forced labor by people under the age of 18.

(4) Although it is among the most universally condemned of all human rights abuses, child labor is widely practiced. The International Labor Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) have estimated that the total number of child workers, including all forced labor by people under the age of 18, is more than 100 million. Of those, more than 70 million are younger than 15 years of age.

(5) The International Labor Organization has estimated that 13.2 percent of all children 10 to 14 years of age around the world were economically active in 1995. According to UNICEF, 20 percent of the child laborers in the 10 to 14 age group work 5 days a week, 8 hours a day, and 50 percent work 9 hours a day or more. There are no reliable figures on workers under 10 years of age, though their numbers are known to be significant. Reliable child labor statistics are not readily available in poor governemnts in the developing world are reluctant to document those activities, which are often illegal under domestic laws, which violate international standards. They may be perceived as a failure of internal public policy.

(6) Notwithstanding international and domestic prohibitions, many children in developing countries are forced to work as debt-bonded and slave laborers in hazardous and exploitative industries. According to the United Nations Working Group on Contempory Forms of Slavery, Reflecting the International Labor Organization, there are tens of millions of child slaves in the world today. Large numbers of those slaves are involved in agricultural and domestic labor, the sex industry, the carpet and textile industries, and quarrying and brick making.

(7) In many countries, children lack either the legal standing or the means to protect themselves from cruelty and exploitation in the workplace.

(8) The employment of children often interferes with opportunities of such children for basic education. Furthermore, where it exists with high rates of adult unemployment, the use of child labor likely denies gainful employment to millions of adults.

(9) While child labor is a complex and multifaceted phenomenon that is tied to issues of poverty, educational opportunity, and culture, its most abusive and hazardous forms are repugnant to basic human rights and must be eliminated.

(10) Created in 1992, the International Labor Organization's International Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (IPEC) is the world's largest technical cooperation program on child labor, involving more than 50 countries and over 1,000 action programs. Governments take the initiative in seeking IPEC assistance, and demonstrate their commitment to combating child labor by signing a memorandum of understanding with IPEC, which serves as the basis for a long term indigenous program that is overseen by a national steering committee comprised of representatives of government, employers and workers' organizations, and relevant non-governmental organizations. IPEC activities aim at preventing child labor, withdrawing children from hazardous work, and providing alternatives to child labor as a transitional measure toward its elimination.

SEC. 3. UNITED STATES SUPPORT FOR DEVELOPMENTAL ALTERNATIVES FOR UNDERAGE CHILD WORKERS.

For each of the fiscal years 1999 through 2001 there are authorized to be appropriated for the Department of Labor under the heading "International Labor Affairs Bureau" $30,000,000 for a United States contribution to the International Program on the Elimination of Child Labor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this measure.
fed and clothed and housed and cared for and nurtured. But that is not the case with hundreds of millions of children around the globe. I would like to share a few of these children that this bill that these gentlemented to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), who was the principal sponsor on the Committee on International Relations, have cared for who would not have been cared for, or who will not even be noticed, unless we provide this money.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. This is a picture of a girl shining shoes. She works in a shoe shine stand in Ecuador. She cannot be more than 4 years old. She represents the millions of children who work on the streets of the world's cities. Children are sent on to the streets to work or to beg, and while seeking work, they are easy prey.

They are given a job, like this girl, shining shoes. They must turn over all the money they receive to an older child that gives them a small portion as salary. The older child rakes in profits by exploiting a small army of children. Frequently, though, the older child is in a similar relationship with even older children who control large groups of these children. Those who are beggars may be maimed to make them look more helpless and miserable than other beggars.

And as the children grow older, they learn they can make more money by theft or by exploiting children younger than themselves.

Here is another picture of the kind of child that this legislation deals with. This is a little girl who works in Aligarth, India, a town on the border of Nepal. This child is making tiny padlocks. The average pay for the children in the metal industry is $6 a month. They work 60-hour workweeks. They are recruited by middlemen, who are paid by the contractor, who prefers children because they are so much easier to control.

Although almost all metal factories claim to be family businesses to skirt India's scant child labor regulations, there are virtually no incidences of actual family metal shops in this part of India.

These children remove molten metal from molds near furnaces. They work with furnaces at temperatures of 2,000 degrees. Burns are a constant danger. Children who work during the night are electroplating polishing and applying chemicals to metal. This child is polishing padlocks on a small grindstone. Fumes and metal dust are constantly inhaled by these children, which causes tuberculosis and respiratory problems. The last picture of children that this legislation will help this is a little girl. This little girl is hammering rocks. Sometimes in other parts of the world the entire family is working in bondage, perhaps to pay the debt for ceasing to exist. Children are required to work alongside their parents to maximize production. They work up to 14 hours a day carrying rocks or breaking them into pieces. That is what this young girl is doing. She lives in an area where gravel is scarce. In order to make cement, rocks must be broken down to small stones.

In many rural areas, traditional class or caste systems perpetuate bonded labor. Pledging one's labor and that of his children may be the only resource that a father has and may be all that he can pledge as security for a loan. Unfortunately, this same family may be uncontrolled. It is easy prey for a money lender who may charge outrageous interest rates.

That is why this bill does what it does. That is why the gentleman from New York (Chairman GILMAN); why the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), chairman of our subcommittee; why the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER); why so many members of the Committee on International Relations and of the body, and really of the staff, know that this bill has to pass.

These are just a few of the horrors that exist as we speak. They have to be eliminated. This bill is important. I am sorry it comes up so late at night, but I appreciate the chairman has brought it up, and I appreciate the time that has been given me by the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the distinguished chairman of our Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights, who is the original sponsor of this measure.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) for his very eloquent remarks. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the distinguished chairman of our Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights; the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN); the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS); the gentleman from Florida (Mr. CANADY); the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. KENEDY); the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF); the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH); the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART); the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) who already spoke; the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER); the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Fox); the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Pitts), and others who helped shape this legislation and made it so hard to bring it to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, international child labor is a cancer on our global economy that defies an easy cure. In the words of the International Labor Organization, it is a "quack," "Few human rights abuses are so unanimously condemned while being so widely practiced as child labor."

Today somewhere between 200 and 250 million children under the age of 14 are being robbed of their youth for the profit of others. Many work in hazardous industries such as mining, explosives, manufacturing, and even deep-sea fishing. Others are forced into prostitution and other forms of sexual exploitation.

The sheer magnitude of these statistics, 250 million kids, a staggering number of kids, can blind us to the human misery that they represent. To those of us who haven't even imagined what a child would be like that we should imagine our own kids in those kinds of circumstances. Only then, I think, do we begin to get a taste of the hopelessness caused by this exploitation.

While the problem is heartbreaking and immense, there are new reasons for hope. Global public awareness of this problem is greater than it has ever been. My subcommittee has held three exhaustive hearings on the issue of child labor, and it involved representatives of the administration, nongovernmental organization witnesses, labor and manufacturing representatives, concerned celebrities such as Kathie Lee Gifford, who I think offered some very useful insight to our committee, and described victims who had actually been exploited came before the committee and stood there and told us how they were abused.

This year, the International Labor Conference issued proposed new labor standards on what they call extreme forms of child labor, which is expected to be adopted next June. Tonight it is increasingly important that we seize this momentum.

Experts believe that the current international financial difficulties that we see every day, just open up the paper about what is going on over the world, may only worsen the problem unless we take some real action.

One of the most promising weapons in the fight against this problem is the International Program on the Elimination of Child Labor, or IPEC, of the International Labor Organization. IPEC works within countries to help develop and execute practical solutions to child labor abuse. IPEC works only in countries whose governments have officially committed themselves to developing national child labor policies in cooperation with employers, workers, NGOs and other relevant parties.

In the past 3 years, with the United States' modest, and I mean this, it is really modest, contributions to IPEC has been on the order of $1 million to $3 million. Yet even that minuscule amount of money has resulted in disturbing improvements. Remember, this bill will authorize $90 million over 3 years for these kinds of programs. We are talking about 1 to 3 million, and we even see some success there.

One U.S.-funded project in Bangladesh removed 30,000 children from garment factories and placed them in schools. Another program in Pakistan will remove 7,000 kids from the soccer ball industry. My kids play soccer and
It is extremely important for us to deal with child labor all over the world, but we should not forget the issue of child labor here in the United States. Scores of young children in the United States are employed in unreasonably difficult and onerous conditions, and the Young Workers’ Bill of Rights will be an appropriate parallel legislation to this legislation which deals with the exploitation of children across the globe.

Mr. Speaker. Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

(Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to echo the remarks of my colleagues and to compliment the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the chairman of the Committee on International Relations, for bringing this legislation to the floor. I also want to commend my good friend, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the chairman of the Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights.

With so many lists going around, Mr. Speaker, I do not know which list to go on as far as the listing of the bills on suspension being brought to the floor. I was caught by surprise in learning that this legislation has been placed on the floor for consideration by the Members.

Mr. Speaker, there are approximately 200 to 250 million children in this world who are considered to be working not only under dire circumstances but the fact that they are, as far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, they are slave labor. I have held public hearings in the past, Mr. Speaker, on this issue, but we should not forget the issue of child labor. IPEC, the principal cosponsor of this legislation, has worked with us in the hearings. We stand arm in arm, Democrat and Republican, trying to advance the cause for these kids who are suffering and for their families.

Mr. Speaker, I do hope the body will adopt this legislation.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), my good friend.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER), my friend, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to pay tribute to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the chairman of the Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights, for taking the lead on this most important item. I also want to express my appreciation to the gentleman from New York (Chairman GILMAN) who has done so much on this most important issue.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues have spoken eloquently on this matter, and I do not want to take up much time, except to indicate that it is a moral obligation on the part of all of us to move this legislation. While doing so, allow me to share with this august body the report of the Christian Commission for the elimination of child labor, a report on the elimination of child labor in 23 additional countries. This program, based on the success of the U.S.-funded projects in Pakistan in the sporting goods industry, IPEC would like to begin projects in other exporting countries with strong links to the U.S. market. They would like to address the surgical instrument industry in Pakistan, the sporting goods industry in India, and brick-making industries in Pakistan, the sporting goods industry, IPEC would like to address the surgical instrument industry in Pakistan, the sporting goods industry in India, and brick-making industries in Pakistan.

Those programs are some of the things that they have identified: the need for approximately $125 million by Spain. That is the aggregate amount to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), for his initiative and his leadership in doing this, not only to sensitize the Members of the Congress about this very serious issue around the world, but the fact that we have now proposed legislation to look into and to fully examine and to provide some sense of sanity to this world and the fact that we have done this so unfairly to these young people around the world.

I want to compliment the member of the Committee on International Relations for bringing this legislation to the floor. I also want to compliment the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), who was here earlier, who shared with us some of the pictures that were taken. I suppose he may have done so himself when he visited some of these countries around the world to see that these things are real and not some abstract idea.

I also want to compliment the members of the Committee on International Relations for the way they brought this legislation to the floor. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.
Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FOX), a member of our committee.

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time. I appreciate this opportunity to speak on behalf of this legislation.

It is very important that we protect our children in developing countries who have been forced to work as debt bound or slave workers in hazardous and exploitative industries. According to the United Nations Working Group on Contemporary Forms of Slavery and the international labor organizations, there are tens of millions of child slaves in the world today. This must be ended, and this legislation will take a positive step to stop this.

We know of many countries where children lack either the legal standing or the means to protect themselves from cruelty and exploitation in the workplaces. The employment of children often interferes with the opportunities for the youth's basic education, and it coexists with high rates of adult unemployment where this use of child labor denies gainful employment to millions of adults.

While child labor is a complex and multifaceted phenomenon, Mr. Speaker, it is tied to issues of poverty, education opportunity, and culture, and I commend the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) for this legislation; the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), and the other cosponsors of the bill for moving it forward.

I am proud to be a cosponsor, and I look for colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this legislation to provide for United States support for developmental alternatives to underage child workers, and commend the sponsor again for his leadership and look forward to the bill's passage here this evening.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I wish to also express my support for this legislation, and I commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for his leadership role. And I also want to just thank the various colleagues for their presentations, very compelling presentations, here on the floor this evening.

The problem of child labor is truly a global one, as has been pointed out this evening. It impacts children on almost every continent and deprives them of their opportunities for a normal and safe childhood. It is one of the most intolerable forms of human rights abuses. Children have no way of protecting themselves against forced labor and other exploitative conditions. Recognizing this problem, I am pleased that the President announced earlier this year a child labor initiative.

This bill, as has been pointed out, will make the U.S. a leader in the international effort to eliminate child labor, and the children of the world need the United States to play a leadership role on this issue. Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4506, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4660) to amend the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 to provide rewards for information leading to the arrest or conviction of any individual for the commission of an act, or conspiracy to act, of international terrorism, narcotics related offenses, or for serious violations of international humanitarian law relating to the Former Yugoslavia, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I seek unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4660, the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4660 sends the following message to terrorists and war criminals: “You can run, but you cannot hide.”

Following the bombings of our embassies in Tanzania and Kenya, we must review the State rewards program. To date, the program is an unqualified failure. These rewards, the U.S. Government captured terrorists like Rami Yousef, the mastermind of the World Trade Center bombing, and Mir Amal Kasi, who murdered two people outside of the CIA headquarters in 1996, are all illusory. The outstanding reward of $2 million to bring Haroun Fazil back dead or alive for the recent U.S. embassy bombings.

And, Mr. Speaker, I am holding up the wanted poster for Fazil here in my hand, printed by the State Department and distributed throughout the world, along with reward matchbook covers, that resulted in the capture of a prior criminal.

We last set the levels of these rewards in 1989, and they are currently capped at $2 million. Last month, FBI Director Freeh testified before the Senate that the cap on rewards should be raised. Former CIA Director Woolsey noted that the architect of the embassy bombings, the very wealthy Bin Laden, could “see our $2 million and raise it” more than once. And we agree with that.

The bill before the House raises the total amount available for rewards from $2 million to $10 million, and increases the cap from $2 million to $5 million.

The administration and our senior military commanders in Bosnia also requested Congress to grant authority to the State Department to offer rewards for information leading to the arrest of persons indicted for war crimes in the former Yugoslavia.

Under current law, the State Department may offer rewards for information leading to the arrest of persons who commit or participate in acts of terrorism and illegal narcotics into our Nation. Our military commanders in Bosnia would like to expand that to include persons indicted for war crimes in Yugoslavia.

We all know who the main targets of that effort are, Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, who ordered and carried out the massacre of 7,000 civilians at Srebrenica, and Slobodan Praljak, who committed mass suicide.

These men remain at large and pose a danger to our U.S. diplomatic and military personnel who are stationed in Bosnia.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LAU- Tos), a cosponsor of this legislation, as well as Ambassador Gelbard, and the junior Senator from Arizona, Mr. Kyl, all of whom made this legislation possible. This is a bipartisan bill with strong support of the administration and our commanders in the field in Bosnia. Accordingly, I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, the bill authorizes one million dollars in FY99, 00 and 01 to be appropriated for these awards. The Administration believes that the rewards program will not top $100,000 each. CBO has scored this bill at a cost of $8 million in authorized spending, all subject to appropriation.

It is important to note that while we will authorize such rewards to be offered, the bill requires the Secretary of State to ensure that payment of rewards for the arrest of people in the current law—terrorists and narcotics traffickers—come before this new authority to pay rewards for U.N. war criminals. This requirement keeps the focus of the rewards program on catching people who commit crimes against Americans.

It is also important to state what the bill does not do. It does not authorize rewards for catching people indicted by the Rwanda tribunal, as originally requested by the Administration. While I favor including Rwanda as does most of the members of this committee, we reviewed this proposal with the senior Senator from North Carolina, Mr. Helms, who objected to the inclusion of Rwanda. Since we are looking to consider this bill in the Senate by unanimous consent to include Rwanda. Nevertheless, if this bill is enacted, I believe that it will make a rewards program for Rwanda more likely to be enacted in the next Congress.

In its comment to the Committee regarding this legislation, the Administration also does not like the language requiring that rewards for the arrest of people who attack Americans and narcotic trafficking take priority over rewards for the arrest of Yugoslav war criminals. While I understand the Administration’s call for flexibility, Sen. Helms and I both strongly believe that while we should offer rewards for U.N. war criminals, the priority should remain with those who attack Americans. In light of the Administration’s concerns, we did narrow the priority in the bill to making payments for U.N. war criminal arrests after any and all due and payable rewards under the original program are met.

This bill does not permit a judicial review of the U.N. war criminal rewards but I want to emphasize that while the underlying statute does not deal with this subject, we do not impair a judicial review allowed over the current program.

In addition, while we authorize payment of awards only for catching indicted war criminals, the State Department may offer rewards for unindicted criminals. They just cannot make a payment until the War Criminal Court brings forth an official indictment.

With regard to the account rewards will be paid from, the Emergencies in the Diplomatic and Consular Service Account, I will note this account pays the costs of post evacuations, the rewards program and representational expenses of the State Department.

Usually, the account is funded at around $5 million each year and has been supplemented by carryover balances that generally make around $10–12 million available in any given year. This fiscal year, the account is expected to only carry forward only $1 million due to the exceptional number of embassy evacuations.

The FY 98 Supplemental includes $10 million to replenish this account. The $10 million is divided as follows: $4.5 is to pay for medical expenses, transportation, etc. for the families of victims and the Foreign Service Nationals in Kenya and Tanzania, $4.5 to cover rewards following the bombings, and $1 million is targeted for other post evacuations.

The Department has authorization in transfer authority to replenish this fund out of the Diplomatic and Consular Programs account. They intend to use that authority in FY 99. In FY 2000, the Department expects to have a budget request of $10–12 million.

Subcommittee has been made available to pay rewards for information leading to the arrest or conviction of persons responsible for international terrorist activities. FY 97 $1.5 million was available for rewards; $1.2 million was obligated for three narcotics rewards and $144,000 for publicity initiatives.

FY 98 $3 million is available for rewards. $500,000 has been obligated for three narcotics rewards and $86,000 for publicity. Several other rewards are in the interagency review process.

FY 99 $2 million was requested for the rewards program.

In closing, I understand that while the State Department has some concerns with the draft, as outlined above, the Administration strongly supports passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to rise in support of this bill.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, adds a new authority to the current program of paying rewards for information leading to the arrest of terrorist and narcotics suspects. It would allow the Secretary of State to pay rewards for war criminals in the future. It is the result of an indictment by the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.

The bill is an important contribution to the efforts of the United States and its NATO allies to move forward on the difficult issues of Bosnia peace implementation. We know that the arrest of major figures who have been indicted by the war crimes tribunal has gone slowly. We need to help energize that process. Offering rewards for information leading to the arrest of war criminals is the sort of legislation that will, hopefully, give some incentive to those who, until now, have been wavering about offering information.
The arrest of these war criminals may not be the solution in itself to the success of the Dayton peace process, but it would be an important step in the right direction in moving the Dayton peace process forward. Mr. Speaker, I support this important bill and urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the distinguished chairman of our Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 4660, authorizing the provision of rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of war criminals and those who have committed other serious violations of international humanitarian law in the former Yugoslavia.

I want to thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for sponsoring this and for his steadfast work on behalf of those suffering in that very, very troubled region.

As cochairman of the Helsinki Commission, Mr. Speaker, and also as chair of the International Ops and Human Rights Committee, I have had a number of hearings in both of those panels on the issue of war crimes tribunals, on the fact that from the very beginning, we did far too little, we did not provide enough money, but certainly the effort was worth it to try to collect information. Thankfully some of the problems we had in the beginning of underfunding are beginning to be met and the indictments of Mladic and Karadzic and others is, I think, a compelling testimony that we will at some point hold accountable for their actions. While a legal action, it is unlikely the fact that there is a price—a high price—to be paid for allowing indicted war criminals like Karadzic and Mladic to remain at large. The unfolding carnage in Kosovo is most certainly the handiwork of the "Butcher of Belgrade," Slobodan Milosevic. I applaud the recent passage of resolutions in the House and Senate calling for the investigation and indictment of Slobodan Milosevic as a war criminal. In fact, I introduced the measure in this House. We all recognize, though, that true justice demands that the net be cast wider on the man most responsible.

As a supporter of the Tribunal from the get go, I offered amendments to boost funding—I believe it is critical that the Tribunal take a proactive stance in Kosovo that could serve as a possible deterrent. We know that war crimes were committed in the former Yugoslavia. In the case of Bosnia, the Tribunal could only react to crimes that were mostly committed before and during its formation. In Kosovo, however, crimes could perhaps be deterred if the Tribunal is visible in its investigation of ongoing activity.

Mr. Speaker, we saw a couple of days ago the reports of a major massacre in three villages in Kosovo, where women, children and the elderly were slain and, in some instances, their bodies mutilated by the Serbian security forces. These scenes are all too familiar and, absent determined action, will be repeated over and over and over again. The Helsinki Commission has received disturbing reports from Senator Bob Dole and Assistant Secretary of Defense Douglas B. Woodruff about the necessity of a fact-finding mission to Kosovo. They told us about men being separated from women and children and simply taken away, perhaps to lengthy detention or maybe their execution. There are also reports, again of the mass rape being used as a weapon of war.

Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 4660, I believe adoption of this legislation will underscore the continued commitment of the United States to see that those responsible for the war crimes and other serious violations of international humanitarian law are held accountable for their actions. While it is unlikely that the offer of rewards alone will lead to the arrest or conviction of all of those responsible for war crimes in the Former Yugoslavia, even if one criminal is brought to justice as a result of our action today, the modest investment would have been worth the effort.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS).

Mr. LANTOS. I thank my friend for yielding the time. I rise, Mr. Speaker, in support of this legislation, but also to recognize the enormous contributions of the distinguished Republican chairman of the Committee on International Relations in his fight against terrorism over many years in many capacities. At our annual meetings with the European Parliament, it was Chairman GILMAN who invariably raised the issue of international terrorism, drug trafficking, and other criminal activities. His unceasing efforts on behalf of these causes has paid off handsomely. I think this last measure is an appropriate indication of the change of antiterrorist legislation that Chairman GILMAN has introduced. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to support it.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California for his kind remarks and for his strong support for antiterrorism legislation in our committee.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FOX).

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for bringing this legislation forward. He has worked in a bipartisan fashion with the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) and others in the Committee on International Relations in his fight and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) in making sure that the antiterrorism legislation moves forward in this Congress. We owe a great debt of gratitude to the gentleman from New York for his leadership in this area.

We just have to look to the fact that the program that Chairman GILMAN referred to relates back to the August 7, 1998 reward and poster which he spoke of earlier where two explosions rocked the U.S. embassies in Kenya and in Tanzania killing over 200 innocent people. This particular reward calls for a reward to those individuals who will bring information against Haroun Fazil who is a member of an international terrorist group dedicated to opposing select governments with force and violence.

The fact is this legislation, H.R. 4660, Mr. Speaker, will amend the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 to provide rewards of an increase from $2 million to $5 million for the arrest and conviction of any individual for the commission of an act, or conspiracy to act, of international terrorism, narcotics related offenses, or for serious violations of international humanitarian law.

The fact is that it has been 10 years since the last time this threshold from $2 million to $5 million will have been changed. This legislation of the gentleman from New York which we have supported widely will help us to in fact catch those individuals in Croatia, Bosnia and the Federal Republic of Yugo-slavia who are committing the kind of terrorism that the United States wants to end. With this legislation, we will be one step further toward that.

I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) and the other cosponsors including the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Smith) for bringing this bill forward and look forward to its passage. I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for supporting this important bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4660, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read:

"A bill to amend the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1996 to provide rewards for information leading to the arrest or conviction of any individual for the commission of an act, or conspiracy to act, of international terrorism, narcotics offenses, or for serious violations of international humanitarian law relating to the Former Yugoslavia, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING SEWAGE INFRASTRUCTURE FACILITIES IN TIJUANA, MEXICO

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 331) expressing the sense of Congress concerning the inadequacy of sewage infrastructure facilities in Tijuana, Mexico.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. Con. Res. 331

Since the 1930's, United States beaches have been threatened by the flow of sewage from Mexico and, in the last 2 decades, this environmental problem has been elevated to a major health and safety concern; and

Whereas, most recently, the flow of sewage from Tijuana, Mexico, has forced beach closures and caused other environmental and economic hardships in the cities of Imperial Beach, Coronado, and San Diego, California, and caused severe degradation of the Tijuana National Estuarine Wildlife Preserve; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) if the Government of Mexico does not take appropriate actions to recognize and mitigate the inadequacy of sewage infrastructure facilities in Mexico (including facilities for the treatment and transport of sewage) and the adverse environmental and economic impacts of sewage from Mexico on cities in the United States, the United States should review its obligations with Mexico under treaties and other international agreements (including agreements relating to port access, loan guarantees, and other types of foreign aid) and take appropriate action that the Government of Mexico shares in the burdens caused by its sewage infrastructure problems; and

(2) any measurement of the responsiveness of the Government of Mexico to requests to mitigate its sewage treatment problems should be based on risk assessment procedures developed in consultation with the San Diego County Health Officer.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on this measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. (Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York (Mr. SHIMKUS) introduced this resolution and I was pleased to be able to take it up before our committee and bring it to the floor today.

This resolution highlights the serious problem of untreated sewage-tainted water flowing down the Tijuana River which is contaminated U.S. seashores and the Tijuana National Estuarine Wildlife Preserve. As recently as August of this year, 12 million gallons of river water contaminated with sewage was flowing down the Tijuana River to the Pacific Ocean every day. Ocean currents carried the contaminated water to the Imperial Beach, Coronado and San Diego area.

This is not a new problem and it has yet to find a solution. There have been terrible moments of crisis since the May 1994 break in the sewage line in Tijuana which dumped 25 million gallons of raw, untreated sewage into the Tijuana River a day for three successive days.

While Mexico has made significant infrastructure investments, our Nation has assumed a majority of the burden of building new sewage treatment infrastructure, and since 1989 has appropriated $294 million for the EPA under Section 105 of the Water Quality Act for "special purpose projects" in San Diego. By December of this year, the United States will complete our major outstanding agreed-upon infrastructure improvement, a pipeline to carry treated wastewater some 3 miles offshore. Still, experts estimate that this will only temporarily help address this bilateral problem.

It should be underscored that this is a problem that the United States and Mexico must work together jointly to resolve. Both governments must shoulder their responsibility. I have recently met with representatives of the Mexican government along with the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) to discuss this terrible problem. They have informed us that they both understand and share the deep concern of the people of our Nation who are affected.

I am hopeful that the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) and I will continue our tireless efforts to resolve this crisis and that new unspecified retaliation for insufficient action will hasten cooperation or will in fact undermine it. I believe that is exactly why the administration has concerns, Mr. Speaker, and I believe it would be helpful to the debate here this evening if we hear from others that support the legislation and also others that do have concerns about it. I know the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) is a supporter and I welcome his comments.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), the author of this legislation.

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the House Committee on International Relations, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for his steadfast support to addressing this critical problem. The administration does have concerns about this particular piece of legislation, and I know that there are many Members that have concerns as well. Because we have a 2,000-mile border with Mexico, we face a number of issues that we simply cannot solve with the good cooperation of the government of Mexico. To address these issues, we have developed an impressive number of joint efforts over the last decade. Some of these efforts are not adequately funded or staffed, but we have made progress in convincing the government of Mexico to work with us. We all want to see the sewage problem dealt with faster and better. But we must ask ourselves when we are considering any piece of legislation such as this whether it is going to enhance or undermine the bilateral cooperation that is the exact basis for this administration does have concerns about it. I know the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY) is a supporter and I welcome his comments.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
beaches and caused environmental and economic hardships for the San Diego region, including the degradation of the Tijuana National Estuarine Wildlife Preserve. This resolution simply states that the government of Mexico needs and merits adequate sewage infrastructure that is impacting the United States. Frankly, we need the United States and Mexico recognizing that it is the impact and outcome of this pollution that matters the most. Let me place an emphasis on the word “review” that is in this bill. It states that if this problem is not taken care of, then the United States will “review” its treaties with Mexico. That is all it says. It does not say we will repeal them. It does not mean we will be punitive, but it says we have a relationship with Mexico, we have treaties, and if there is a continuing environmental and health threat, we as Congress think that it is important enough for us to review our treaties.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is not punitive against Mexico. It is not anti-Mexican. It is anti-pollution. Now, there are those who oppose NAFTA. Some of my close friends opposed NAFTA because they were concerned that increased trade would equate to increased pollution, and they wanted an assurance that our trade agreements were not going to push pollution. This resolution, this sense of Congress just says that all our treaties or agreements will be considered; are they helping or hurting a pollution problem? This problem has gone on for decades and decades and decades.

Mr. Speaker, this is only a sense of Congress. We are not asking to spend money, we are not asking to take on anything except the feeling that this has to be addressed, and our colleagues will keep an open mind. I may say that the treaties to Mexico do not work and will never work. Well, first of all, I would ask my colleagues to read the record. We are not talking about a threat, we are talking about raising a legitimate concern, just as ambassador in 1987 raised a concern over a grant for water projects in Tijuana that would result in more sewage pouring into the United States, and because Gavin at that time spoke clearly and frankly to Mexico, Mexico agreed that we must make major improvements.

I think that this is another one of those chances for us to make a clear statement. The problem has gone on for decades and decades and decades.

My colleagues, there are those who promised to take care of these environmental problems if NAFTA was passed. Those of my colleagues who oppose NAFTA raised that issue. Now is their chance to say everything will be considered to clean up the mess.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues approve H. Con. Res. 331 and let me say sincerely I was raised in a community with raw Mexican sewage pouring in and polluting our beaches. I was brought up in the health threat. My children are second generation sewage kids growing up with this pollution. Please let us work together as Members of Congress, and let us work together between the United States and Mexico. Let us make a commitment tonight that from the year 2000 on, from now on, we will stop finding excuses for letting our beaches be polluted, and that the next generation of children that go to that beach will have clean beaches, pure beaches and healthy beaches.

Some may say that threats to Mexico do not work and will never work. Well, first of all, I would ask my colleagues to read the record. We are not talking about a threat, we are talking about raising a legitimate concern, just as ambassador in 1987 raised a concern over a grant for water projects in Tijuana that would result in more sewage pouring into the United States, and because Gavin at that time spoke clearly and frankly to Mexico, Mexico agreed that we must make major improvements.

I think that this is another one of those chances for us to make a clear statement. The problem has gone on for decades and decades and decades.

My colleagues, there are those who promised to take care of these environmental problems if NAFTA was passed. Those of my colleagues who oppose NAFTA raised that issue. Now is their chance to say everything will be considered to clean up the mess.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues approve H. Con. Res. 331 and let me say sincerely I was raised in a community with raw Mexican sewage pouring in and polluting our beaches. I was brought up in the health threat. My children are second generation sewage kids growing up with this pollution. Please let us work together as Members of Congress, and let us work together between the United States and Mexico. Let us make a commitment tonight that from the year 2000 on, from now on, we will stop finding excuses for letting our beaches be polluted, and that the next generation of children that go to that beach will have clean beaches, pure beaches and healthy beaches.

Some may say that threats to Mexico do not work and will never work. Well, first of all, I would ask my colleagues to read the record. We are not talking about a threat, we are talking about raising a legitimate concern, just as ambassador in 1987 raised a concern over a grant for water projects in Tijuana that would result in more sewage pouring into the United States, and because Gavin at that time spoke clearly and frankly to Mexico, Mexico agreed that we must make major improvements.
From the beginning, Chairman Gilman has been committed to working with me on this environmental and public health crisis. In fact, earlier this afternoon, the Chairman and I had the opportunity to meet with representatives from the Mexican Embassy to discuss both countries’ mutual interest in resolving these problems. Again, I think the Chairman for his leadership and support.

As the Chairman pointed out, H. Con. Res. 331 is simply a “sense of Congress” outlining past and present problems with inadequate sewage treatment and facilities in Tijuana, Mexico. This lack of infrastructure has forced beach closures and caused other environmental and economic hardships in the south bay region of San Diego, including severe degradation of the Tijuana National Estuarine Wildlife Preserve. The neighborhoods that are directly impacted by this health threat, such as my hometown of Imperial Beach, consist of largely working class, predominately minority families.

The Concurrent Resolution goes on to state that if the government of Mexico does not recognize and address the inadequacy of sewage infrastructure, then the United States should “review” its existing relationships with Mexico, including existing treaties and other international agreements to see where the weaknesses may exist. Let me place an emphasis on the word “review.” I call for a review of both the governments of the United States and Mexico to scrutinize on these agreements.

Let me be perfectly clear, this is only a sense of Congress. It is not legally binding, nor does it require Congress to Act. This resolution is an expression of our shared commitment to working on this issue, and will be inspired to continue and acknowledge the need to comprehensively resolve the sewage crisis along the border. H. Con. Res. 331 can begin this process.

Again, thank you for your consideration and I urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 331.

I would ask that these materials be placed into the Record following my statement.

TIJUANA SEWAGE IS FLOWING FASTER, KILLING ESTUARY

(By Michael Richmond)

An increasing amount of raw sewage flowing across the border from Mexico is killing marine life and threatening birds in the Tijuana River estuary, according to a newly completed study of the huge saltwater marsh.

The increase is the result of the continued growth of Tijuana, where many neighborhoods are not hooked up to sewers. The sewage flow in the river now averages nearly 10 million gallons a day, up from about 7 million gallons a day two years ago, according to Dion McMicheaux, resident engineer here for the International Boundary and Water Commission.

A three-year federally funded study shows that much of the sewage-laden water flowing down the river has harmed game fish and shellfish in the saltwater marsh at the river’s mouth. The marsh is a part of the 2,500-acre Tijuana River National Estuarine Reserve and the Tijuana Slough National Wildlife Refuge.

In recent years, the Tijuana River Valley has been beset with problems. Every beach stretching from the south city limits of Imperial Beach to the Mexican border, considered by some as one of the most beautiful in Southern California, is deserted most days, except for an occasional jogger or horse rider.

Among the area’s troubles:

- The two-mile beachfront has been under a health quarantine since 1983 because of sewage pollution from the Tijuana River. Sewage bacteria levels as much as five times the health limit have been measured in the ocean waters. Some surfers regularly ignore the warning, however.
- The 300-acre Border Field State Park, nestled against the international boundary, was closed for four months in 1988 because of sewage flow from Mexico, causing the closure from June to mid-September this year. After it was reopened with thousands of undocumented migrants and smugglers who used it as a staging area for their trips northward, the park was shut down without any public announcement and hasn’t just as quietly reopened, but only on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

Biologists and other researchers studying the Tijuana River estuary say the system no longer do field work at night because of the danger from border bands.

County health officials are worried about the potential for an outbreak of malaria or encephalitis from breeding of mosquitoes in sewage ponds that accumulate at times in place. I might add that there are also who will argue that the threat of pressure on Mexico has been used before as an excuse to not assert the need for change to the status quo.

More importantly, however, how can we as a Congress, in good conscience allow our environment and our public health and safety continue to be at risk without raising this issue? This problem has been going on for decades. It’s about time both sides come together and acknowledge the need to comprehensively resolve the sewage crisis along the border. H. Con. Res. 331 can begin this process.

the river bottom. The water is “heavily laden” with mosquito larvae, says Larry Akre, assistant deputy director of the county’s Environmental Health Services.

Some of the nutrients settle out of the water as it makes its way through a maze of small channels that thread the estuary en route to the ocean. “We’re essentially killing off that estuary,” Akre said.

A walk south from Imperial Beach along the beach at the edge of the estuary can be deceiving. Ocean waves wash gently upon the sandy beach. A flock of seagulls with a lone brown pelican rests on a sandbar near the river mouth. To the south, two riders trot their horses along the beach. The water from the estuary outlet to the sea appears fairly clear, diluted by incoming tides.

But a quarter-mile inland from the beach, the scene is much different. In places, the water is like a pea-green soup, full of algae, said Chris Nordby, manager of the Pacific Estuarine Research Laboratory at San Diego State University. It is also an area where there are no pollution sampling stations, “because when I went in there to set up my samples, there just wasn’t any water. There’s absolutely nothing there,” Nordby said.

Evidence of the extreme environmental damage is contained in a completed study funded by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which found significant depletions in some fish and shellfish populations, such as clams. The study is based on water-quality testing and sampling of fish and shellfish from 1986 through March of 1990.

One small game fish known as Top Smelt, which formerly accounted for 52 percent of the fish in the estuary, has fallen to about 5 percent, said Nordby, a biologist and principal investigator for the pollution study.

The California jackknife clam, which in years past accounted for 70 percent to 86 percent of the clam population, “is now down to about 27 percent,” Nordby said.

Another shellfish, the purple clam, is virtually extinct there. “People used to clam here in the 1970s and take their limit, but not anymore,” said Nordby, who has been studying the estuary since 1978.

Small round dollars, once abundant, are rarely found these days, he said. “Every now and then you’ll find a small tiny clam that’s still living, but it’s not being used to,” he said. The harm is caused by the year-round influx of polluted fresh water, which dilutes the salinity of the estuary, Nordby explained.

When that happens, marine organisms are killed or escape from the estuary.

In addition to marine organisms, the estuary is home to dozens of bird species, including the endangered least tern and the light-footed clapper rail. The effects of the sewage pollution on bird life have not been documented, but Nordby and others believe there is potential for harm. They note that a decline in the marine life on which birds feed will eventually reduce the bird population.

Paul Jorgensen, manager of the Tijuana River National Estuarine Reserve, said extensive efforts are needed to confirm the effects on birds. But he added, “If the shellfish, crabs and fish are affected, then the birds probably are affected.”

Nordby and others worried about the wetlands are pinning their hopes for its recovery on construction of a binational sewage treatment plant that has been proposed for the border area east of the river mouth, near the San Ysidro crossing. The treated effluent would be discharged directly into the ocean through a big pipe.

But the binational plant is still a long way from being approved. Mexico and U.S. officials have made only preliminary commitments. Negotiations on a detailed agreement between the two countries have been urged by the Mexican and U.S. commissioners of the International Boundary and Water Commission in El Paso, Texas.

Narendra Selvaratnam, head of the U.S. section of the international boundary commission, predicted earlier this year that the new plant could be in operation by 1993. That estimate, which is based on a commitment from Mexico that it would participate in the plant and on funding from both countries, may have to be revised. Without such a plant, the pollution woes of the Tijuana River Valley will only grow as Tijuana keeps growing, officials say. “I think these federal, state and local governments have a responsibility to the people in the area to make sure that dream becomes a reality,” said County Supervisor Brian Bilbray, a former Imperial Beach councilman and mayor who has spent his entire political career trying to resolve the Tijuana River Valley's troubles.

“The sewage system has become bad enough that the Federal Government can’t ignore it anymore,” he said. “We're going to find answers because you just can't allow problems like this to go on forever.”

In addition to the border sewage plant, Bilbray said, development of the long-sought Tijuana River Valley Regional Park will help transform the area.

The county park will encompass 2,200 acres along both sides of the river, extending from the ocean eastward to San Ysidro. It has received $1.5 million in state funds and $1.95 million from the federal government a year ago.

Bilbray has been critical of the Border Patrol and state and federal park and wildlife managers for past practices that he says have focused more on wildlife protection and keeping people out of the area.

Bilbray also criticized the Border Patrol for its “scorched earth” practice of clearing underbrush from large areas of the river channel to help them patrol the route. “If you and I did that, we'd go to jail,” Bilbray said.

As a result of the regional park, he said, he believes that wildlife preservation and recreation in the river valley can be compatible. When the park is completed, the river will be transplanted to Mission Bay and San Diego Bay.

Bilbray envisions miles of trails, small fishing lakes, campgrounds and other amenities. “I'm real optimistic that we're seeing a lot of movement we haven't seen in 20 years,” he said of efforts to solve the river valley's problems.

[3OFFICIALS HERE PLEDGE TO FIGHT SEWAGE PROJECT (By Kathryn Balint)

Meeting the news media in the sewage-polluted Tijuana River Valley, two San Diego city councilmen and a county supervisor vowed yesterday to fight to save local sewer users at least $1 billion on a massive project they say would harm the environment. “This is a fight we can win,” said Councilman Bruce Henderson.

Henderson, Councilman Bob Filner and Supervisor Brian Bilbray called a news conference yesterday near a national estuary, where endangered birds and plants live, to dramatize their point that a sewage-treatment plant there, near a national estuary, where endangered birds and plants live, would hurt the environment. Another reason they chose the site is that the plant is near a national estuary, where endangered birds and plants live, would hurt the environment. Another reason they chose the site is that the plant is near a national estuary, where endangered birds and plants live, would hurt the environment.

At the meeting, the three politicians said they chose the Tijuana River Valley because it had the highest water pollution in the world. They noted that a decline in the marine life of the estuary has fallen to about 5 percent, said Nordby, a biologist and principal investigator for the pollution study.

EMERGENCY DECREE MIGHT UNLOCK HELP FOR TIJUANA SEWAGE PROBLEM

By Graciela Sevilla

While county supervisors are poised to declare a state of emergency on the contaminated Tijuana River next week, just what would follow such an unprecedented action is being heavily debated.

County, state and federal officials are at loggerheads over who is to blame for the delay in attacking the chronic mosquito problem that a health official has called a “disaster waiting to happen.”

“I think something should be done before you have sick people,” said County Health Officer Donald Ramras.

“I think the federal government has the responsibility,” said Mayor Pete Wilson.

Although local health officials have called the sewage-infestation “a disaster waiting to happen,” the county health officer cannot declare a public health emergency until someone becomes sick from exposure to the water.

Timing is crucial because the river valley is home to several endangered species of birds that nest and migrate in the area during the spring and summer.

“If we wait, it becomes a choice between endangered species and public health,” said Bilbray.

The county has yet to determine how much time or money it will take to clear out the dense underbrush. According to Peace, the Regional Water Quality Control Board has indicated a willingness to fund the project if the emergency is declared.

For his part, Bilbray is optimistic that San Diego will fare well with its bide for help from Sacramento. If D-Chula Vista, Mayor Pete Wilson is inaugurated as governor.

“We have one big advantage in that the guy filling that office this month has got a very good background on this,” Bilbray said.

[The San Diego Union, Fri., Jan. 4, 1991]
South Bay residents have complained that the stench and mosquito swarms become intolerable during warm weather. In recent months, the residents formed a group called Fight Against Pollution to demand action from public officials.

Representatives from all involved agencies agreed action is needed to solve the serious health threat to the estimated 400 families who live beside the sewage-plagued waters, but say there are significant hurdles to clear even if an emergency is declared.

First, a declaration of emergency is needed to release state funds to finance the clearing of the enormous undergrowth that causes water to stagnate, enabling mosquitoes to breed.

At the urging of Assemblyman Steve Peace, D-Chula Vista, county Supervisor Brian Bilbray will ask his colleagues Tuesday to declare a state of emergency and to seek a similar declaration from the governor.

Until recently, the supervisors believed Ramras was the only county official with the authority to declare a public health emergency, something Ramras said he cannot legally do with this situation.

A situation that has the potential for making people ill is not enough, he explained. "Basically you've go to show that no only you have a health and safety issue there but that they've actually given someone encephalitis."

But Peace insists that Ramras can declare an emergency under state code, but has resisted doing so. "It's been an emerging reality on my part that somewhere there's been a reluctance to work on the problem," Peace said.

Unsatisfied with Ramras' posture, Peace asked attorneys for the state Legislature to search for a way around the impasse. In November, Peace learned that the state Legislature passed legislation that allows the State Emergency Services Act allows boards of supervisors to declare a local emergency.

If that's done, Peace said funds would be made available by the State Water Resources Control Board for removing the underbrush clogging the river and hampering its flow. A spokeswoman for the agency said the board would first have to vote to spend the money.

According to Peace, a governor's proclamation would suspend state statutes and state agency regulations that have hindered work efforts. However, federal agencies might still invoke environmental concerns to limit the project.

Depending on the scope of the proposal, which has yet to be defined, the project could require a permit from the Army Corps of Engineers, which must authorize any project that involves filling of wetlands.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service would also evaluate the project to determine if it would irreparably harm the environmentally protected species inhabit the river valley," said Kenney. "Several state and federally listed endangered species inhabit the river valley," according to a spokeswoman for the agency.

To date, Kenney said the agency's involvement has been limited to a preliminary survey of river habitats. "The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service would also evaluate the project to determine if it would irreparably harm the environmentally important area."

"Several state and federally listed endangered species inhabit the river valley," said Martin, the San Diego biologist. "Several state and federally listed endangered species inhabit the river valley," said Martin, "including the least Bell's vireo and the least Bell's vireo."

A local emergency declaration would clear the way for Gov.-elect Pete Wilson to call a state-level emergency and suspend the environmental stricture, Bilbray said.

A permanent solution to the Mexican sewage problem in the river valley may be years away, but a reduction in mosquito infestation and foul odor may be in sight. County Supervisor Brian Bilbray and state Assemblyman Steve Peace, D-Rancho San Diego, are optimistic the county can use emergency powers to clear dense vegetation that causes sewage stagnation in the border-area valley.

The county Board of Supervisors will consider calling a local emergency when it meets Tuesday. An estimated 13 million gallons of sewage flows daily through the valley, but a complex series of state and federal restrictions all the vegetation in the area, Kenney said.

In the meantime, disease-carrying mosquitoes, including the least Bell's vireo and the least Bell's vireo, continue to plague residents of Nestor and other parts of the valley. And the wildlife and vegetation that the environmental laws are supposed to protect are being destroyed, Peace said.

"If you continue on the same path, we're going to have a hot crisis," he said.

Bilbray said the county cannot afford to wait months to secure clearing permits. The removal must happen before the birds return from their winter migration.

The brush is habitat for several endangered birds, including the least Bell's vireo and the least Bell's vireo. The brush is habitat for several endangered birds, including the least Bell's vireo and the least Bell's vireo.

A local emergency declaration would clear the way for Gov.-elect Pete Wilson to call a state-level emergency and suspend the environmental stricture, Bilbray said.

"We must be bold defensive if they say there's an emergency when county health and everyone has known about this for a long time," the biologist said. "Why do you wait till January and say there's an emergency when you've known about this for years?"
Pease said he and Supervisor Brian Bilbray pushed the county to act for almost a year. Normally, a county’s board of supervisors must make an official request documenting the need for a governor to make a disaster or emergency declaration.

Tijuana River Valley May Get Emergency Status on Sewage

(From the Los Angeles Times, Jan. 1991)

It is important, said Peace, that work start on the Tijuana sewage problem with Bob White, Wilson’s chief of staff, and was very encouraged by his response. He said it was a ‘‘crisis of emergency’’ for the sewage-plagued Tijuana River Valley in south San Diego County, state officials said.

The declaration would make state funds available to clean up the border valley, through an estimated 13 million gallons of raw sewage from Mexico. The mosquito infestation became so acute that residents could not go outside without being attacked by the insects, which can transmit encephalitis, malaria and hepatitis.

The supervision and Assemblyman Steve Peace (D-Rancho San Diego), who has been pushing for emergency measures, said money is available from the state Regional Water Quality Control Board to pay cleanup costs.

The county, Bilbray said, cannot wait months to get permits to clear away the plants. He said the removal must begin soon, before endangered birds that nest in the valley return from their winter migration.

Wilson May Declare Crisis in South Bay

(From the Union-Tribune, Mar. 15, 1991)

In winter months, an estimated 13 million gallons in raw waste from the eastern hills of Tijuana pours into the river each day. The U.S. and Mexican governments, in cooperation with the county and city, are building a new $155 million sewage treatment plant in the South Bay that would capture and clean up the sewage flows. However, that plant is not expected to begin operation before 1995. The county hopes to construct a channel that would keep the sewage moving out to sea instead of forming stagnant pools, said John Woodard, chief of staff for county Supervisor Brian Bilbray, who represents the area and has been pushing for emergency status along with Peace for a year.

A bird on federal endangered species list, the least, Bell’s vireo, nests in several of the valley’s marshes between fall and spring, so any work done in the valley requires permits from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and should be kept to the winter months, Woodard said.

Illegals Cross Sewage River—and Feds Ignore Both Problems

In a near-disaster filled with symbolism and irony for San Diego, a group of undocumented immigrants crossing the border illegally, a bird seeking safety in the sewage-laden floodwaters of the Tijuana River during last week’s storm. Two floods met—a flood of immigrants and the flood of sewage, the Supervisor and Assemblyman Steve Peace (D-Rancho San Diego) released a statement saying he spoke with Bob White, Wilson’s chief of staff, Wednesday morning and ‘‘was very encouraged by his response.’’

The Assembly threw its support behind the cleanup effort Wednesday by passing a resolution urging Wilson to call a state of emergency.

The action was the first to be taken by the Legislature this year, and came a day after the county Board of Supervisors declared a local emergency for San Diego County. The local emergency proclamation was prompted by concerns that the summer would bring a repeat of last year’s unusually large swarms of mosquitoes, which thrive in stagnant pools of sewage. The mosquitoes from the foul-smelling sewage can transmit encephalitis, malaria and hepatitis to humans.

Money for the cleanup is available from the state Regional Water Quality Control Board, said David Takashima, Peace’s chief of staff. The governor’s discretionary funds, set aside in case of economic uncertainty, could also be used for an emergency cleanup.

Illegal Near Disaster

[From the Tribune, Mar. 5, 1991]
 Gov. Wilson today declared a state of emergency in San Diego County and urged a state board to provide $860,000 to help clean up the mess.

The raw sewage flowing across the border creates an extreme peril to people living and working in the area. The city and county of San Diego believe it will be necessary to perform an immediate cleanup because of the need to move quickly and resolve a public health threat caused by an estimated 13 million gallons of sewage that has been diverting effluent at the Point Loma sewage-treatment plant.

In a letter to Don Maughan, chairman of the State Water Resources Control Board, the governor urged the board to, at its March 21 meeting, approve $860,000 from the state cleanup and Abatement Fund as first-year costs for the $100 million treatment project, which Wilson toured before his midmorning news conference. The sewage has long caused county health officials to voice concerns about possible waterborne diseases. State and local officials provided that relief after the announcement, with county Supervisor Brian Bilbray and Assemblyman Steve Peace, Chairman of the California Legislative Fisheries Caucus—whom repeatedly has risked breaking state laws by using a bulldozer to rechannel or block effluent in the estuary—said the governor "has the guts to take this issue head-on when others would only talk." Peace pointed out that Wilson overruled advice of key staffers to take the move, which is seen as unprecedented because the full cost of sewage treatment has previously fallen on San Diego ratepayers.

The actions came after a unanimous vote by county supervisors Jan. 8 requesting an emergency decree and financial assistance.

The governor's actions included a letter to U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, seeking help with his request that the International Boundary and Water Commission provide treatment funds for the interim years, 1992 to 1995, or until the international facility is operating.

Writing to Baker, Wilson said: "The City of San Diego is unable now or should it be expected to bear these costs. Commission or federal government funds should be provided to San Diego to cover costs for interim treatment after the first year.

The governor wrote a third letter, to U.S. Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan, urging Lujan to direct the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to help San Diego County divert sewage flows by clearing brush along the Tijuana River and making effective use of insecticide to kill mosquitoes.

Wilson said diverting sewage will reduce dry weather flows in the channel, but mosquitos will remain during wet weather and possibly in standing pools at various times.

"To fully alleviate the mosquito and sewage problems, the city and county of San Diego believe it will be necessary to perform minor channeling and brush clearing in specific areas,” the governor told Lujan.

While there is a government duty to protect the nation's wetlands, Wilson said in the letter that the...
Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER).

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and I rise reluctantly to oppose this bill. It is my understanding that the chairman of the committee for his outline of the situation. He is correct. The situation is as he described, as someone who represents the adjacent district to the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) and whose district has that sewage flowing through it to Mr. Bilbray’s. And I thank him for his attention to it, and what I heard was his commitment to resolve it.

And when I say reluctantly, say that to my friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) because my colleagues should know that there have not been probably two people who have worked more closely or, I think, more effectively to resolve this issue over the last decade than the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) and myself. He was a county supervisor before he became a Member of Congress. I was a city councilman. Our districts completely interlocked, and we worked hand in hand to address this issue, and we had body has made substantial progress over the last decade than we were able to do working together, working together in local government, working together in the Congress, working together with Mexico.

We were the building of the international wastewater treatment plant which, when the outfall is completed by the end of November, we will open and go a long way toward resolving that problem. And that treatment plant was built in San Diego with the cooperation of Mexico and the City of Tijuana and the State of Baja. So the gentleman knows that we have worked hand in hand on these issues.

I agree with the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) when he says that he wants a forum to educate Congress and he wants to raise awareness, and we are doing that, but this is the wrong way to complete that job. It is only a sense of Congress, as the gentleman pointed out. It is not legally binding. So there is not much effect if it does pass.

The language that the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) uses threatens sanctions with Mexico. It implies that we are going to have to loan guarantees and foreign aid. I will tell the gentleman, though, even if we eliminated the foreign aid, direct foreign assistance to Mexico, tomorrow, it constitutes less than 0.001 percent of our total trade. So I am not sure what effect it has in the real world, except the way Mexico and its officials take it and how they will react in the kinds of discussions that we have participated in for over a decade, and I am sure we will be continuing to participate in the next trade, the building of the plant which, when the outfall is completed by the end of November, we will open and go a long way toward resolving that problem.

So I rise reluctantly because the gentleman and I have worked for so long together on these issues and I look forward to working with the gentleman over the next years on these to solve them but let us work with a cooperative tone and not a tone that threatens sanctions.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray).

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, I want to respond to my colleague from California (Mr. Filner) and point out that on environmental issues we should never threaten, but we should also never be afraid to hold people to standards. We should just be cooperative.

Frankly, let us recognize about this, is that we have to date been very cooperative.

The fact is, Mexico City and Washington, D.C. have not been as sensitive to the problem. As my colleague has pointed out, we have built a lot of projects, but the beaches are still polluted.

A $2 million project for a pipeline by itself does not make the beaches any cleaner and does not make the public any safer. Let me point out to my colleague, he may not be aware of the meeting we had this August, but I participated in that meeting. Showing the lack of sensitivity we can get on both sides, we still have 9 million gallons of drinking water pouring into raw sewage, spreading the pollution more onto Mexico’s side.

The word I have gotten on this is that the resources and the commitment is not going to be made. The frustration of the people in Tijuana is that Mexico City needs to be more aware of this. I appreciate the fact that the gentleman participated in this discussion, because the International Boundary and Water Commission, the gentleman from California (Mr. Filner) has this week delivered this sense of Congress to Mexico City. So hopefully it will tell everybody—we let us work together.

Let me point out that my reference to reviewing treaties and existing commitments may not necessarily mean reductions, but may also mean increases in resources under existing relationships. But it does mean that we will look at this substantially.

So I rise reluctantly to say that outcome does not matter here. All I am saying is, all the treatment plants, all the talk, all the negotiations, all of the relationships are fabulous, but if they do not make the environment safe for the children of Tijuana and San Diego and Imperial Beach, then all we are is a bunch of diplomats and politicians sitting around talking, patting ourselves on the back while our children are exposed to heroin, cocaine and marijuana and San Diego and Imperial Beach, then all we are is a bunch of diplomats and politicians sitting around talking, patting ourselves on the back.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask my colleagues to consider that and consider the kids that continue to be exposed. All I am asking is a sense of Congress that says this is important enough for us to review everything and let us talk about it, let us look it over. Let us set the standard that ending pollution is what we care about, not just the building of projects.

The SPEAKER pro tempore(Mr. BLUNT). The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Luther) has 13½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from New York (Mr. Gilman) has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rodriguez).

Mr. RODRIGUEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the resolution that is before us. The problems do exist in Tijuana but they also exist along the entire length of the U.S.-Mexican border, including my south Texas district. I represent probably the next largest sector next to one additional Congressman in Texas. I would my colleagues to know that I have problems also with potable water. I have problems with sewage. I have problems with Third World conditions and I am not talking about Mexico, I am talking about the United States. We also have an obligation to make sure that our cities have appropriate sewage plants, and we do not.
We are having a serious problem. I recognize that the efforts that are being made, and hopefully this will be an opportunity to bring to light what occurs in the area. But if anyone has received most of the NAD Bank money, it has been in the south Texas where we are suffering also for some of those same conditions.

At this time is not the time to start pointing fingers at Mexico. We need to look at ourselves and what we are also doing to the environment, and in the way we are also allowing Maquiladoras to go across the border and create part that have pollution.

This is a heavy-handed, counterproductive approach that could set back existing cooperations with Mexico to deal with serious environmental issues along the entire border. I would attribute to my colleagues that Mexico does not oppose this effort and that they oppose this effort and that the U.S. Department of State has indicated that they oppose this effort and that they need to be realistic about some of these items. I think we need to really look at the problems. But it does give us an opportunity to hold our own government accountable for Third World conditions that exist in the border.

I am hoping that, if nothing else, this issue allows us an opportunity to look at that. But I would also ask my colleagues to vote against this effort. I think we need to bring this issue forward and be part that have pollution.

I am frustrated because I recognize that my communities do not have the resources. I need 30 million in 1 little community. I am talking again about the U.S. I am not talking about Mexico that requires some money for potable water.

So, as I indicated to my colleagues, do represent constituents on the U.S. Mexico in south Texas who are facing pressing environmental problems on both sides of the border.

Through the International Boundary Water Commission, the Border Environmental Cooperation Commission, and the NAD Bank, we are working to solve some of these problems. I know it is going to take a long time.

I am hoping that the U.S. provides assistance to those Third World conditions that exist in the United States, and that we should take the initiative, and we should set the example, also, before we start to throwing stones across the river.

The Board of environmental Cooperation Commission has approved 24 environmental projects on both sides of the border with 14 in construction phase and eight pending construction. For every dollar we appropriate to the Board of Environmental Cooperation Commission, the U.S. Mexico has been matching that. Do we want to jeopardize that ongoing projects? I do not think so.

Sure, three or more problems are delayed with these projects, but the bottom line is this particular resolution will not solve those existing problems that we have there, and we need to begin to work cooperatively as we move forward.

I want to also emphasize that the U.S. Department of State has indicated that they oppose this effort and that this is not the way of going about making things happen. I would ask that, as we move forward, that we look at infrastructure that needs to be developed.

I would also attest to my colleagues that we have got to be careful when we do that. We are right now at the verge of putting a waste site which is nuclear and right on the Sierra Blanca, right on the border. That has direct impact. Mexico has protested the fact because it violates certain other treaties.

When the Board discussed about the language on their particular, it does talk about treaties. What are we talking about? Look at all the treaties that we have had with Mexico ever since. Are we going to go back to the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

I think we need to be realistic about some of these items. I think we need to really look at the problems. But it does give us an opportunity to hold our own government accountable for Third World conditions that exist in the border.

I am hoping that, if nothing else, this issue allows us an opportunity to look at that. But I would also ask my colleagues to vote against this effort. I want to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Gilman) for allowing me this opportunity to say a few words. I ask my colleagues to vote no.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Fox), a member of our committee.

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to rise in support of H.Con.Res. 331, the legislation introduced by the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray).

Certainly, any kind of legislation that is positive. It is going to bring forth, hopefully, the kind of environmental improvement that is much needed in California.

The flow of sewage from Tijuana has forced the beach closures. Certainly by bringing this problem to the attention of the Mexican government does not in any way jeopardize our relationship with them. We have a very close relationship with Mexico, working together with them on port access, loan guarantees, foreign aid. We have a very close relationship.

However, we need to work jointly on this problem, and we will, because this just highlights the need of, frankly, the White House, I am sure working with Congress, can take the leadership of the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) and others, bring up how we need to solve this issue.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rodriguez) has made an important point about the problems we have in Texas. That does not mean we should not work on the problem with Texas; but this resolution deals with Mexico, and we need to make sure that we work on this particular resolution now, and we will do this with Texas next. That does not mean we should forsake one for the other.

I frankly feel that the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) has, for a long time, brought to our attention, or. The importance of environmental protection, the importance of saving our beaches and making sure the air and water are pure. I have to compliment him on bringing this issue forward and making sure we deal with it in a sensitive matter.

This resolution, frankly, only advances what inquiry, brings us toward a solution, and we should support H.Con. Res. 331 in a bipartisan manner.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER) has 9½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) has 3½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, we have the right to close, I believe, in which case, we suggest the gentleman go ahead. We have only one more speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA). Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman for yielding and for being here at this late hour managing this bill along with the chairman and my other colleagues who have taken the time to speak on this matter.

Let me also thank my colleague and friend, the gentleman from San Diego, California (Mr. Bilbray), for raising this issue. But, unfortunately, I must disagree with the way he has done this.

As the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) said, this is only a sense of Congress. This bill will not have any practical legal affect on our laws and how we conduct our affairs, at least immediately.

It is, in essence, a message bill. Unfortunately, the message it sends is not that this is just a sense of Congress that there is a problem between our two countries of Mexico and the U.S. along our borders, but it sends a different message. The message that will be received, not here, but in Mexico will be one of threats.

While the gentleman from California (Mr. Bilbray) raised a very important point that we must take care of our environmental matters between two sovereign nations, in this case, our country and the country of Mexico, I do not believe that anyone south of the border reading this sense of Congress would believe that this is a cooperative, collaborative approach to resolving the problems that are disturbing the folks in San Diego.

Let us make it clear, the folks in San Diego have every right to be concerned. The folks in Tijuana, Mexico have every right to be concerned. But what we should not do is say that we will unilaterally take action if we do not believe the Mexican government and the Tijuana government have done enough to resolve this problem.

That is what we are faced with in this sense of Congress, which will have no immediate legal effect. It is a message bill. But the message it sends is that we are doing this today. Speaking from back from the Mexican government and the Tijuana government is, tomorrow we will do something similar.
Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. LUTHER) for conducting a very good debate on this measure.

Mr. Speaker, to close our arguments on our side, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY). Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues. I really want to thank my colleagues who have experience related to the Fronteras pollution problems. Let me just tell my colleagues, this is 20 years that I have been trying to address this issue. The reason why I came to Congress probably more so than anything else is the reputation I have had trying to confront the environmental problems.

The fact is that in 1978 almost everyone here believed that we should be doing more about this. Somebody that was willing to stand up, and senior citizens and children stood up and said, enough is enough. Our government has to start addressing this issue. They voted in 1990 against a resolution that would have enabled the EPA to address pollution that crosses the border. They did not have a lot of political clout, a lot of influence, but they felt, we are Americans. We have as much right to be defended and protected from environmental problems as wealthy people. Just because the color of our skin may be a little darker, we may be a little poorer, do not mean we do not have environmental rights.

Now, I say to my colleague from Texas, I agree with him, and I want to work with him, and I will commit myself to working with him. The fact is that the Clean Water Act should apply just as much for pollution across the border as it does for within the border. But the frustration of a working-class neighborhood that is told by EPA that they will go to jail if they dump their sewage while that same working community is polluted by somebody else, and the EPA does not clean it up, is just a working-class community. They did not have a lot of political clout, a lot of influence, but they felt, we are Americans. We have as much right to defense and protection from pollution as wealthy people. Just because the color of our skin may be a little darker, we may be a little poorer, it doesn't mean we do not have environmental rights.

The NAD Bank, there can be more things done with the NAD Bank, and I would really point out that there is agreement by the bank to build projects in the Republic of Mexico 60 miles from the border. And I think that ought to be taken care of, the landfill at Punta Penasco and the sewer treatment plant in Ensenada. But the border problems should be given the highest priority, because they are the ones that are really the threat to our growing prosperity.

Now, let me get back to this issue. I met with Mexico, articulated to Mexico that this is as much a message to the Federal Government of the United States as it is to Mexico. They understand the concerns. Those who say that we do not want to disturb Mexico or they might take it inappropriately, let me assure my colleague, in 1978, that is exactly what the Exxon Corp. was willing to do. If they had told the people at Imperial Beach was told by the Carter administration, because an oil deal was going through, and they did not want to jeopardize an economic oil deal over just an environmental problem in a working-class neighborhood in the corner of the United States.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not think anyone here believes that we should be

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues another example. Recently this Congress voted, this year this Congress voted, as the gentleman from Texas (Mr. RODRIGUEZ) mentioned, voted to site a hazardous waste deposit site along the Texas Mexico border, the Sierra Blanca site in Texas. The Mexican government protested to the U.S. Government and to the State governments of the States involved and would be depositing this hazardous waste along the border that this was unjust, it was unfair, that much of the hazardous waste would migrate to the end into Mexican territory and affect the lives of Mexican people. They also pointed out, as we have pointed out, that this hazardous site is on top of an existing earthquake fault. And if ruptures as a result of any earthquake would occur, that could expose many people, Mexican and U.S. individuals, to the effects of this hazardous waste.

All of that is to say this, we all have examples of how our governments, our peoples perhaps are not working in the fashion that the other people and the other government would want to see. What we should be doing is what we have done, and in the case of this particular environmental problem in and around Tijuana, the two governments have done, and they have worked cooperatively.

Mexico and the U.S. have been working cooperatively for a number of years on the South International Wastewater Treatment Plant, which is about to start up its operation. In addition, the U.S. and Mexican governments are working through the International Boundary and Water Commission to clean sewer lines and also to construct a back-up system to the current coastal sewage conveyance and treatment system.

They are doing things. But we can certainly argue that we have not seen enough done. But is this the way we treat a partner, someone we say we cooperate with? I think that is the problem.

If we are going to use threats, if we are going to use our muscle, then we should realize that we should be prepared to face the consequences of someone responding in kind. I do not believe that is what we should do with a solid trading partner.

I do believe we send messages, but send messages as a partner would send a message that we want to work with them and we want to improve the conditions. We want to do it together. Because there are people on both sides of the border who will be affected.

I believe the intent of the gentleman from San Diego is eminently good, well-intended. Unfortunately, this sense of Congress gets us there. I would urge my colleagues to vote against this resolution.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I simply want to say that I think this has been a good, healthy discussion. I appreciate the various points of view that have been presented. We all clearly wants to clean up the environment. That is not what initially meets the eye.

There are many facets to this discussion, this debate. Of course that is why the administration has embarked upon in the past and are continuing to undertake?

So I would simply ask the Members to vote their conscience, vote their point of view on this particular issue. I know there is a variety of points of view within our caucus as I am sure there are in the gentleman's.

I thank the Members again, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), for bringing this before us. I urge everyone to look at this issue carefully and to simply vote their point of view on the issue.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
selling out the environment for any economic deal. Those days are over with. The fact is, we need to send a very clear message, not just to Mexico, but to ourselves, that we will not allow the continuation of the pollution of our environment just because it is convenient to look the other way for economic or political reasons; that every neighborhood in the United States has the right to a clean, healthy environment, and the Federal Government of the United States has as much responsibility for that environment; along the border as it does anywhere else in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I am not half as concerned as the message this body could send to Mexico. We have already sent it, it has been delivered. What I am concerned about is the message we send to our fellow citizens here in the United States. There is much prejudice against Mexico, and I want to stop that, and I think the one way we stop it is by sending a clear message to American citizens that this body, the sense of Congress, is that we will not sell out the environment of America for economic advantage. We will place the environment of the United States and the citizens who live in that environment first, and foremost in all of our relationships.

I ask my colleagues, please, to pull together and just say, let us work together so that we make sure our relationships with Mexico and the United States and the environment are all cleaned up together. That kind of commitment is what I am asking for today. I ask for approval of this resolution, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California for his very eloquent argument.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 331.

The question was taken.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule 1 and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed. The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

EXPRESSING SUPPORT FOR U.S. GOVERNMENT EFFORTS TO IDENTIFY HOLOCAUST-ERA ASSETS, URGING THE RESTITUTION OF INDIVIDUAL AND COMMUNAL PROPERTY

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 557) expressing support for U.S. Government efforts to identify Holocaust-era assets, urging the restitution of individual and communal property, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. Res. 557

Whereas the Holocaust was one of the most tragic and complex horrors in this century, and survivors of the upheaval are now reaching the end of their lives; Whereas among the many atrocities committed by the Nazis was their systematic effort to confiscate property illegally and wrongfully from individuals, institutions, and communities solely because of religion or ethnicity; Whereas the Nazi regime used foreign financial institutions to launder and hold property illegally confiscated from Holocaust victims, and some foreign financial institutions violated their fiduciary duty to their customers by converting to their own use financial assets belonging to Holocaust victims and denying heirs of these victims access to these assets through restrictive regulations and unreasonable interpretation of those regulations; Whereas, despite the enactment of legislation and the establishment of institutions to restore confiscated property in a number of countries, progress has been slow, difficult, and painful, and many have established restrictions which require those whose properties have been wrongfully plundered to reside in or be a current citizen of the country from which they now seek restitution or compensation.

Whereas the Tripartite Gold Commission has now concluded its activities, and under the leadership of the United States established an international Nazi Persecutees’ Relief Fund, reached agreement with most of the countries which had gold on deposit with the Tripartite Gold Commission to donate their shares to this Persecutees’ Fund, and the United States has pledged to contribute $25 million to this fund.

Whereas the Conference on Material Claims Conference on Material Claims has recently been reached, the first between Holocaust survivors and private Swiss banks and the second between Holocaust survivors and European insurance companies, which represent significant first steps in the international effort to provide belated justice to survivors and victims of the Holocaust and their heirs.

Whereas the Department of State and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum will co-host the Washington Conference on Holocaust Assets and Claims this year in order to review current efforts, share research across national borders, renew efforts to open Nazi-era archives, and spur greater progress on the restitution of Holocaust-era assets; and

Whereas there is a growing international consensus and sense of urgency that, after a half century of indifference and inaction, justice must be obtained for victims and survivors of the Holocaust and their heirs; Now, therefore, be it

(1) recognizes the great responsibility which the United States has to Holocaust survivors and the large number of whom are American citizens, to continue to treat the issue of Holocaust-era assets as a high priority and to encourage other governments to do the same;
(2) commends the agencies of the United States government for their unifying efforts and, for example, the fact that they have signed the publication of the May 1997 and June 1998 reports on U.S. and Allied Efforts to Recover or Restore Gold and Other Assets Stolen or Hidden by Germany and the United States government and the efforts to return such assets to their rightful owners;
(3) commends those organizations which have played a critical role in the effort to assure compensation and/or restitution for survivors of the Holocaust, and in particular to the leadership of the United States government for their untiring efforts to do the same;
(4) welcomes the convening of the Washington Conference on Holocaust-Era Assets later this year by the United States government, the Tripartite Gold Commission, and the Department of State and expresses the hope that this conference will contribute to the sharing of information and will spur greater progress on the restitution of Holocaust-era assets;
(5) commends those countries which have instituted procedures for the restitution of individual and communal property confiscated from Holocaust victims, and urges those governments which have not established such procedures to adopt fair and transparent legislation and regulations necessary for such restitution;
(6) calls upon countries in transition in Central and Eastern Europe to remove certain citizenship or residency prerequisites for individual survivors of the Holocaust seeking restitution of confiscated property;
(7) notes that former Communist countries which seek to become members of the North Atlantic Alliance and other international organizations must recognize that a part of the international integration involves the enactment of laws which safeguard and protect property rights that are similar to those in democratic countries which do not require artificial citizenship and residency requirements for restitution or compensation;
(8) commends those countries which have established significant commissions, such as the Presidential Advisory Commission on Holocaust Assets in the United States, to conduct research into matters relating to the distribution of Holocaust-era assets. The Information developed by these commissions is publicly available, to complete their major historical research efforts and to contribute to the major funds established to benefit needy Holocaust survivors no later than December 31, 1999;
(9) commends those countries and organizations which have opened their archives and made public records and documents relating to the Nazi era, and urges all countries and organizations, including the major organizations, the Holy See, the International Committee of the Red Cross and national Red Cross organizations, to assure that all materials relating to that era are fully accessible to the public;
(10) urges all countries to develop and include as a part of their educational curricula material on the Holocaust, the history of the Second World War, the evils of discrimination and persecution of racial, ethnic or religious minorities, and the consequences of the failure to respect human rights;
(11) appreciates the efforts of the government of Germany for successfully concluding an agreement with the Conference on Material Claims Concerning restitutions for survivors of Central and Eastern Europe who have not yet received restitutions, and urges the United States to continue to negotiate with the Claims Conference to expand the eligibility criteria to ensure that...
Mr. Speaker, these clauses are the result of legislative support expressed by the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. Maloney), the gentleman from California (Ms. Woolsey) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Frank), and we thank them for their commitment.

Mr. Speaker, we must continue to make our voices heard on these important Holocaust-related issues. It is imperative that the countries involved in these matters understand that their response is seen as a measure of their commitment to basic human rights, to justice, and to the rule of law, and it is one of several standards by which our Nation assesses its bilateral relations. Those who perished, those who survived, and their descendents deserve nothing less.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this measure, H.R. 557.

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 557 is a measure which has many original co-sponsors, and for good reason. While its thrust concerns Holocaust-era communal property and assets as a result of a hearing our international Relations Committee held with Mr. Stuart Eizenstat, it also expresses the concerns of a number of Members of Congress regarding a number of Holocaust related issues.

H. Res. 557 is sponsored by our Committee colleague the gentleman from California, Mr. LANTOS, who bears the distinction of being the only Holocaust survivor serving in this body. We commend Mr. LANTOS and his staff for their deep seated commitment to ensuring justice for Holocaust survivors and their heirs.

H.R. 557 commends agencies of the United States government for their efforts to recover and to restitute Holocaust-related assets.

It also commends the World Jewish Congress and the Jewish Restitution Organization for their efforts in the many negotiations that have been underway.

This measure expresses support for the upcoming Washington Conference on Holocaust-Era Assets at the end of November, and urges those governments which have not established restitution procedures to do so—to ensure that citizenship or residency requirements do not become impediments. The bill wants information to be made public, and specifically mentions the Holy See, which has not been cooperative in opening its archives.

Additionally, H. Res. 557 incorporates the thrust of some measures introduced by colleagues of ours. It urges Germany to expand the eligibility criteria for needy Holocaust survivors, and it recommends that Germany investigate Dr. Hans Joachim Sewering for crimes against humanity committed during World War II.

We commend Mr. LANTOS and his staff for their efforts, and urge the Secretary of State to transmit copies to all relevant parties.

We thank them for their commitment to Holocaust survivors, and appreciate their involvement in these critically important issues.

Mr. Speaker, we must continue to make our voices heard on these important Holocaust-related issues. It is imperative that the countries involved in these matters understand that their response is seen as a measure of their commitment to basic human rights, to justice, and to the rule of law, and as one of several standards by which the United States assesses its bilateral relations.

Those who perished, those who survived, and their descendents deserve nothing less. Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I urge unanimous support for H. Res. 557.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, at the outset, let me express my appreciation to my good friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), for his leadership on this matter. Let me also thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HAMILTON), the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY), and all the other colleagues across the political spectrum who have chosen to cosponsor my legislation.

Given the lateness of time, Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief.

The Holocaust clearly was one of the most horrific crimes against humanity in this or, indeed, in any century. Most of the individuals who survived the Holocaust are no longer here. We are dealing with a passing generation, and we are dealing with their heirs.

The legislation called for an immediate and adequate rate for the death of 6 million innocent people; no legislation can compensate for the unspeakable horrors and suffering that millions of innocent people have suffered. But we find a half a century after the end of the Holocaust that governmental organizations and private institutions like banks and insurance companies have seen fit to hide and to use for their own purposes assets wrongfully and illegally taken from victims of the Holocaust, from individuals that these individuals created, and from entire communities.

The Nazi regime used foreign financial institutions to launder and to hold illegally confiscated assets from Holocaust victims. And some banking and insurance companies and some governments have seen fit to appropriate these assets.

Mr. Speaker, in the post-Communist period, some of the countries of Central and Eastern Europe have begun to take legislative action to fulfill their responsibilities to the victims of the Holocaust. The measure also urges everyone to work together to unify family members separated during the Holocaust.

No legislation can compensate for the death of 6 million innocent people; no legislation can compensate for the unspeakable horrors and suffering that millions of innocent people have suffered. But we find a half a century after the end of the Holocaust that governmental organizations and private institutions like banks and insurance companies have seen fit to hide and to use for their own purposes assets wrongfully and illegally taken from victims of the Holocaust, from individuals that these individuals created, and from entire communities.
Building on this momentum, as was pointed out, the State Department and the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum will convene a Washington Conference on Holocaust-Era Assets next month to address issues of Nazi-confiscated assets, including art, insurance, communal property, museums and archives, as well as Holocaust education, research and remembrance. Conference participants will include government officials from over 40 countries, historians, experts and representatives of major NGOs, including the survivor community.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution should not and could not be considered at a more opportune moment. The resolution calls on countries to return expropriated properties to Holocaust victims or their heirs without arbitrary discrimination.

It calls for the opening of archives relating to the Nazi-era and for the continued prosecution of Nazi-era war criminals. It calls on Germany to provide reparations to all Holocaust victims without delay and without the use of unreasonable eligibility criteria. And of very real importance, this resolution calls on all countries to encourage education on the history of the Holocaust and the consequences of the failure to respect human rights.

It is a great and very timely and important and I urge its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, in the aftermath of the Holocaust, survivors struggled to build their lives, and nobody knows this better than the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY), chair of the Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights of our Committee on International Relations.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for bringing this legislation to the floor, for authoring it and for the very important provisions that it contains.

Mr. Speaker, Holocaust victims in Western countries generally received some compensation, some monetary compensation, from Germany, albeit very limited. Those victims whose homelands fell behind the Iron Curtain after the war did not receive any.

Mr. Speaker, Holocaust victims in Western countries generally received some compensation, some monetary compensation, from Germany, albeit very limited. Those victims whose homelands fell behind the Iron Curtain after the war did not receive any.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY), my friend and colleague who has been so deeply concerned with this issue and has been a prominent fighter to right this wrong.

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.Res. 557. This resolution reflects the growing consensus that real justice must be obtained for the victims and survivors of the Nazi Holocaust.

Mr. Speaker, the world has an obligation to provide justice and dignity to all Holocaust victims and their survivors. I commend the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) and the gentleman from New York (Chairman GILMAN) for bringing the House resolution before us so we can begin to address this need for justice.

I am particularly pleased that this resolution urges all countries to continue aggressive investigation and prosecution of individuals who have been involved in Nazi-era war crimes, because we must bring these individuals to justice and never forget their horrible crimes.

The resolution calls on countries to return expropriated properties to Holocaust victims or their heirs without arbitrary discrimination.

The stop was brief because during World War II, Dr. Severing participated in the Nazi euthanasia program. Under Dr. Severing's orders, over 900 mentally disabled children were sent to a so-called "healing center" where physicians starved and drugged these children until their death. Over 900 innocent children.

Since the war, Dr. Severing enjoyed a full and rewarding medical career in Bavaria. In 1993, he became the President-elect of the World Medical Association, until controversy surrounding his involvement in the murder of Dr. Hans Seving placed Dr. Severing on our watch list, preventing his entry into the United States. But the Bavarian government refuses to investigate this matter. They refuse to press charges.

Dr. Severing and for every other individual who was involved in Nazi-era war crimes, until recently it appeared that the world had forgotten.

Today, along with Michael Franzblau and my colleagues, I demand justice for 900 children who lived a child of Dr. Severing and for every other individual and family that has suffered as a result of the Holocaust. It is not too late to provide the remaining survivors of the Holocaust with justice and dignity.

Today by passing this resolution we can begin the process. I support H.Res. 557 because we can begin that process.
Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) for her strong supportive arguments.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FOX), as Chairman of our Committee on International Relations.

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) for his outstanding bill, along with the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for bringing this forward today. They have been together a team working on this important issue for the U.S. Government to identify Holocaust-era assets and urging the restitution of individual and communal property for some time.

So the resolution offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), with the great support of the gentleman from New York, together have forged a great alliance in the Committee on International Relations and we appreciate their leadership and this is a resolution that deserves 100 percent support from this body.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution specifically expresses support of the U.S. Government to identify Holocaust-era assets. In recent months and years that we have learned about some of these assets that the public did not know about that people did not realize were there. And because of their efforts, we have now gone forward to identify those assets.

The Holocaust, as we know, was one of the most tragic and complex horrors of this century; an era we never want to see repeated ever in this world ever in our time. Whereas among their many atrocities committed by the Nazis was their systematic effort to confiscate property wrongfully from individuals, many of whom never lived, but their families and heirs have never received.

The Nazi regime used foreign financial institutions to launder and hold the property illegally confiscated. In the post-communist period of transition, many of the countries in Europe have begun to enact legal procedures for the restitution of this property. But this resolution, Mr. Speaker, will help us forge efforts in the House and the Senate, in banking circles and other economic circles, to make sure that the restitution will come about and that the survivors and survivors of the Holocaust will be able to get what is rightfully theirs, because of this resolution and the other items and initiatives that will follow.

Whereas the two significant agreements have recently been reached, the first between Holocaust survivors and private Swiss banks and the second between Holocaust survivors and European insurance companies, we will see that the Holocaust survivors’ families will be recognized.

Nothing can ever take back all the hurt, the pain, the suffering, the loss of life. But the House of Representatives can certainly, working together with the Senate and the President, take strides to make sure that we recognize our responsibility to the Holocaust survivors and to end this sad chapter of the world and at least do what we can to help those victims put their lives back together.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 557.

The question was taken. Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on the motion will be postponed.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed an amendment in which the conference of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title: H.R. 4309. An act to provide a comprehensive program of support for victims of torture.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1853) “An Act to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act.”

CONDEMNING THE FORCED ABDUCTION OF UGANDAN CHILDREN AND THEIR USE AS SOLDIERS

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 309) condemning the forced abduction of Ugandan children and their use as soldiers, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

WHEREAS the rebel Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA) has abducted approximately 10,000 children, some as young as 8 years old, in northern Uganda to support its efforts to overthrow the Government of Uganda; and

WHEREAS the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in March 1998 condemned “in the strongest terms” the LRA’s child abductions; and

WHEREAS children kidnapped by the LRA are forced to raid and loot villages, fight in armed conflict; and

WHEREAS Sudanese government soldiers have conducted “reconciliation” camps for former combatants; and

WHEREAS the United States has recognized the LRA as a terrorist organization; and

WHEREAS the United Nations has recognized the LRA as a terrorist organization; and

WHEREAS the United Nations has recognized the LRA as a terrorist organization; and

WHEREAS children are conscripted, coerced, or tricked into volunteering for the armed forces and are sometimes sold to armies and armed groups by impoverished families; and

WHEREAS the United Nations has recommended the establishment, through the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, of age 18 as the minimum age for recruitment and participation of individuals in armed forces; and

Resolved, That the House of Representativ—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr.
I urge my colleagues to support this resolution and speak out against these horrible practices.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res. 309, condemning the forced abduction of Ugandan children and their use as soldiers. I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the ranking member of our committee, for helping to bring this important resolution to the House Floor.

Let me also thank my colleagues, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERNARD), the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ), the ranking member of our committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) for being as concerned as I am about the plight of children in northern Uganda. Since 1994, it is estimated that from 8,000 to 10,000 children have been abducted in northern Uganda. They are the innocent victims, some as young as 4 years old, whose situation is exacerbated by internal and regional conflicts.

I had an opportunity to speak to a mother whose daughter was taken by the Lord’s Resistance Army from a local school. The little girl’s name was Mary. Mary was not the only one taken. She and 139 of her classmates were taken at gun point by the Lord’s Resistance Army.

Some of the children were rescued and told the story of what happened to Mary. They said that when Mary tried to run away, she was caught by the soldiers. When the soldiers caught her, they made an example of her so that other children would not run away. They forced one of her peers, another girl, to kill her.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, forcing children to kill their friends is used as a tool to instill fear and to break the spirit and ensure that they will continue to be little rebels, to be slaves, to be obedient to the military leaders. And by instilling fear, they reduce the possibility of children attempting to escape.

So, it does not come as any surprise that 90 percent of the casualties in the conflict in the northern part of Uganda are women and children. They are the most vulnerable.

The leader of the LRA is Joseph Kony, who has committed a series of human rights abuses. He is supported by the Sudan government, the National Front for the Liberation of Uganda (NFU), led by Ali Bashir, and his pariah government, which supports the LRA.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

This problem has been discussed by our President and the First Lady when they went to Uganda in 1998. They visited some areas where these children live. Recently, our Secretary of State, Madeleine Albright, has also shed light on this problem. And so I am now bringing this to the House of Representatives to ask that we join in the chorus of those who are outraged by this egregious and barbaric situation which is happening.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for this opportunity to present this resolution.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to commend the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE) for his leadership role in this very important human rights measure.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to commend the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) for authorizing this legislation. I think it is a very timely, and I thank my good friend from New Jersey for authorizing it and bringing to the full House’s attention this terrible situation.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, today I speak in strong support of H. Con. Res. 309, which condemns the forced abduction of children by the rebel Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA) in northern Uganda. I thank my esteemed colleague Mr. PAYNE for introducing this resolution. I also thank my fellow cosponsors: International Relations Committee Chairman GILMAN, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. SMITH of Nevada, Mr. PAYNE of California, Mr. MEEK of Florida, Mr. BROWN, and Ms. NORTON. It is time for the U.S. Congress to add its voice to those demanding an end to the atrocities suffered by children in northern Uganda.

The LRA, a bizarre Christian group supported by the fundamentalist Islamic government of Sudan, has kidnapped some 10,000 Ugandan children and forced them to fight as insurgents. Some of these children are as young as eight years old. Captive children raid and loot villages and serve in the front lines against the Ugandan army. They are also forced to help kill other abducted children who try to escape. Young teenage girls suffer the additional horror of serving as “wives” to ranking rebel soldiers. If they resist, they are beaten sometimes severely and sometimes not given to several men in the course of a year.

In July, the International Relations Committee heard moving firsthand testimony about the abductions from Sister Mary Rose Atuu, from the Little Sisters of Mary Immaculate of Gulu, Sister Atuu told of the harrowing 1992 abduction of 44 girls by LRA rebels from the school where she was a teacher. With great dignity, she begged the United States to stop the “war” being waged against innocent children in Uganda. We must not let her plea go unanswered.

The children’s plight is finally getting more international attention, which I believe is vital to ending their nightmare. Earlier this year, the U.N. Commission on Human Rights condemned “the strongest terms” the abduction of children in northern Uganda, and First Lady Hillary Clinton addressed the issue in the speech while visiting the country in March. We must do much more, however, to increase international pressure on Joseph Kony, the leader of the LRA, and the Bashir government in Sudan that supports him.

This resolution condemns the abductions of children by the LRA in northern Uganda and calls for the immediate release of all LRA child captives. It urges the recently-appointed U.N. Special Representative on Children and Armed Conflict to aggressively address the situation, and encourages the U.N. Committee on the Rights of the Child to investigate. The resolution also calls on the Al-Bashir Government in Sudan to stop supporting the LRA and asks President Clinton to provide more support to U.N. agencies and non-governmental organizations working to rehabilitate and reintegrate former child soldiers into society.
I am proud to be an original cosponsor of this important legislation and I urge all my colleagues to support it.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. OF MAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 309, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 2505) to amend title 5, United States Code, to provide that consideration may not be denied to preference eligibles applying for certain positions in the competitive service, and for other purposes.

"(3) The area of consideration for all merit promotion announcements under this subsection shall include consideration of individuals of the Federal workforce who shall indicate that preference eligibles and veterans who have been separated from the armed forces under honorable conditions after 3 years or more of active service are eligible to apply. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cummings) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may revise and extend their remarks on S. 1021, the Senate bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My colleagues, I am very pleased to be here this evening. It has taken us two Congresses, but this House is finally in a position to legislate long overdue relief for the men and women who have defended our Nation.

This process began in the last Congress when I was pleased to introduce H.R. 240, the Veteran’s Employment Opportunities Act of 1996. The House passed that bill twice, once as a stand-alone bill and once as an amendment to a Senate bill, S. 6668. Unfortunately, the other body did not act on either of these bills before that Congress adjourned.

On the first day of this Congress, Mr. Speaker, I introduced essentially the same bill, H.R. 240, the Veterans Employment Act of 1997. The House passed H.R. 240 on April 9, 1997. The Senate has passed the bill twice before us today, S. 1021, which was a companion bill to H.R. 240, introduced by Senators Hagel and Cleland, two very distinguished Vietnam veterans.

Mr. Speaker, there are many to thank for their hard work and leadership on this bipartisan issue. I want to particularly point out and thank for their strong support the current chair of the committee from Indiana (Mr. Dan Burton), and former chairman Bill Clinger, both of whom led the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight during this Congress and the last one.

I also want to take a moment to thank for their leadership the distinguished gentleman from Arizona (Mr. 406x58}
S. 1021 is a significant step forward for our veterans. It opens many jobs that were previously closed to them. It also advances the principle of open competition to civilian employees outside of its own workforce, it must also allow these qualified veterans to compete.

S. 1021 is a significant step forward for our veterans. It opens many jobs that were previously closed to them. It also advances the principle of open competition for Federal jobs. Most important, this provision recognizes that the men and women who served in our armed forces have indeed served as Federal employees and it honors and recognizes that service.

Like the House bill, S. 1021 also makes the violation of veterans’ preference laws a prohibited personnel practice. This means that bureaucrats who violate veterans’ rights do so at their own peril. They can be subjected in fact to disciplinary action before the Merit Systems Protection Board under this provision.

Mr. Speaker, this bill also expands veterans’ employment opportunities with Federal contractors and it also prohibits Federal agencies from contracting with companies that have not complied with the Department of Labor reporting requirements with respect to hiring Vietnam-era, Persian Gulf and our disabled veterans. The House bill contained no similar provisions. These are welcome additions that certainly embody the spirit of the House bill. They will open new job opportunities for our veterans, particularly our Persian Gulf veterans. However, just today the Society for Human Resource Management and other employer organizations has raised certain questions. One potential burden that may be imposed on employers by section 8 of the bill, this provision that I said was included by the other body.

Mr. Speaker, this is a question that should carefully be examined by, among others, the Committee on Education and the Workforce which has jurisdiction over the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Cummings. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I first wish to express my strong support for S. 1021, the Veterans Employment Opportunity Act. I would first like to congratulate the chairman of the Subcommittee on Civil Service the gentleman from Florida (Mr. McCa) for his leadership and his spirit of bipartisanship in an effort to expand and strengthen veterans’ preference. I also want to thank the chairman of the committee the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Burton) and our ranking member of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight the gentleman from California (Mr. Waxman) for their cooperation in making Sen. Cummings, who has done a tremendous job working with me hand-in-hand during the past years. Also, I want to thank former ranking members, one from California (Mr. Tom Harken) and the distinguished gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Moran), both of whom have supported this legislation, and I thank them for their untiring leadership.

Mr. Speaker, this bill does not resolve all of the problems relating to veterans preference in our Federal workplace. It does not contain all the protections for veterans that were in the bill that the House passed. Nonetheless, Mr. Speaker, there are some very important protections in this legislation.

Foremost among them is the creation of an effective and user-friendly redress system for our veterans who believe their rights have been violated. This has been sought by our veterans for many, many years.

In addition, veterans entitled to preference and other veterans who have 3 years of honorable service in the military will receive expanded opportunities to compete for Federal jobs.

- 2310

Very often, Mr. Speaker, Federal agencies will only allow current civilian employees to apply for vacancies. Veterans who do not work for the Federal Government are barred from even competing on their merits for these jobs. That will change when this legislation is enacted. Under this bill whenever an agency opens the competition to civilian employees outside of its own workforce, it must also allow these qualified veterans to compete.

S. 1021 is a significant step forward for our veterans. It opens many jobs that were previously closed to them. It also advances the principle of open competition for Federal jobs. Most important, this provision recognizes that the men and women who served in our armed forces have indeed served as Federal employees and it honors and recognizes that service.

Like the House bill, S. 1021 also makes the violation of veterans’ preference laws a prohibited personnel practice. This means that bureaucrats who violate veterans’ rights do so at their own peril. They can be subjected in fact to disciplinary action before the Merit Systems Protection Board under this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this bill also expands veterans’ employment opportunities with Federal contractors and it also prohibits Federal agencies from contracting with companies that have not complied with the Department of Labor reporting requirements with respect to hiring Vietnam-era, Persian Gulf and our disabled veterans. The House bill contained no similar provisions. These are welcome additions that certainly embody the spirit of the House bill. They will open new job opportunities for our veterans, particularly our Persian Gulf veterans. However, just today the Society for Human Resource Management and other employer organizations has raised certain questions. One potential burden that may be imposed on employers by section 8 of the bill, this provision that I said was included by the other body.

Mr. Speaker, this is a question that should carefully be examined by, among others, the Committee on Education and the Workforce which has jurisdiction over the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Cummings. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I first wish to express my strong support for S. 1021, the Veterans Employment Opportunity Act. I would first like to congratulate the chairman of the Subcommittee on Civil Service the gentleman from Florida (Mr. McCa) for his leadership and his spirit of bipartisanship in an effort to expand and strengthen veterans’ preference. I also want to thank the chairman of the committee the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Burton) and our ranking member of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight the gentleman from California (Mr. Waxman) for their cooperation in making this moment possible as we present this legislation tonight.

The spirit of cooperation on both sides of the aisle has been critical in bringing forward this important legislation. S. 1021 improves the ability of veterans to enter the Federal workforce, and it instructs the Secretary of Labor to maintain a database of contractors who have filed reports on the use of veterans in their workforce. The bill also makes knowing violations of veterans' preferences a prohibited personnel practice. Finally, it makes improvements in the system for investigating and redressing violations of veterans' preference whenever they occur.

The Federal Government is the Nation's leader in veterans' employment, with 27 percent of the Federal workforce made up of veterans. 506,939 veterans were employed by the government as of September 30, 1996. Compared to the private sector, the Federal Government employs two times the percentage of veterans. Yet testimony in previous Civil Service Subcommittee hearings has revealed that veterans' preference in the Federal workforce is sometimes ignored or circumvented, and that its continued viability in the workplace is threatened on several fronts.

For example, a 1992 General Accounting Office study of veterans' preference revealed that certificates, that is, the list of candidates from which agencies may hire, headed by a veteran entitled to preference were returned unused at almost 1.4 times the return rate of certificates headed by nonveterans. According to another GAO study, one-quarter of selecting officials who returned veteran certificates unused at their personnel offices in 1992 did so when they could not hire the candidate they wanted because a preference-eligible veteran was ranked higher.

Mr. Speaker, the congress has repeatedly declared that our veterans deserve special consideration in Federal employment decisions because of their vital contributions to our Nation's security. This bill continues that tradition.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1021 is a good bipartisan bill that strengthens veterans' preference in the Federal Government. It will give our veterans the help they need to obtain and retain civilian employment within the Federal Government. Our veterans have given so much to allow us to live the wonderful lives that we live. They have given so much of their lives to make it possible for us to have the freedom that we have. Therefore, I urge all my colleagues to support this very important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA), a tireless worker and advocate on behalf of our veterans and our Federal employees.

Mrs. MORELLA. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, Mr. Speaker. I must say, I am so pleased to see this bill come back under suspension because, as was mentioned, this will be the fourth time around. Twice during the 104th Congress did we pass it in this House and last year in the 105th Congress, and now as we are in our waning days of the 105th Congress, it has come back from the Senate slightly changed but one that will indeed enhance veterans employment opportunities, something that we need.

I want to commend the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) for his good work. He has been on the very start. Really it has been his concept that he developed and he crafted, and he has kind of guided it through so many years where there have been tremendous difficulties. And so congratulations to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) on a great job. He has already indicated our commendation to the chairman of the committee and also the ranking member of the subcommittee the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cummings) who is here and the others who have cared about this particular issue.

Basically, what it does is it simply, I guess I would call it a bill that enhances and enforces employment opportunities for veterans. It does not do anything about special, I will not say efforts but special privileges for them, but it gives them that they deserve, to make sure that they get equal access, a kind of a fair, level playing field and fairness in employment. I like the fact that it sets up also an accountability concept where, for instance, Federal agencies will notify OPM, the Office of Personnel Management and U.S. employment offices of each vacant position for which competition would include those individuals having competitive service which means our veterans. So that is the kind of accountability. And the protections of veterans' preferences would be prohibited under personnel policies and especially the redress mechanism, to ensure that veterans' rights are protected.

So I am pleased, Mr. Speaker, that this bill is finally getting through under suspension, and it is important because it makes us remember the veterans who have given so much to us and so much to this country. They deserve no less. And so I support S. 1021. Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I just want to say we have no speakers, Mr. Speaker, but I just wanted to pause to again express my appreciation to our entire subcommittee and our committee for all that has been done for our veterans. They are very, very important people, and I know in my District I get many letters from veterans and they come to visit me, I am constantly reminded of the role that they play in making our lives the best that they can be. So, Mr. Speaker, since we have no further speakers, again I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) for his cooperation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I have no further speakers, but I would like to take this opportunity to close. Mr. Speaker, this legislation indeed is a significant step forward for America's veterans. That is why all of the major veterans service organizations in the United States support this bill. They and the 12 million veterans they represent know how much veterans will benefit when we pass this legislation this evening. I thank these organizations and the many, many veterans who have contacted me and other Members for their very strong support, active participation and hard work to make this legislation possible. Their efforts were indispensable.

Mr. Speaker, America owes a very great and deep debt of gratitude to the men and women who have kept our Nation free and strong and who fought our battles and served in lonely and harsh outposts around the world to preserve peace. They have deserved to repay that debt. No measure this Congress can enact will ever fully repay that debt. But S. 1021 is a down payment and, in fact, a good one.

The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. S. 1021) has called this bill the most significant advance in veterans' preference in 50 years. That can also be said of this legislation, S. 1021. The relief and benefit it will bring to those who have served our Nation under arms is long overdue. This bill commands the support of every Member of the House.

So in closing I urge my colleagues to pass this legislation this evening so it can be made the law of the land. We can do no less for those who have done so much.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to give my support for S. 1021, the Veterans Employment Act of 1998. As a member of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee, I actively supported and voted for passage of H.R. 240, the Veterans Employment Opportunities Act of 1997. I am pleased to see the successful negotiations between the House and Senate have allowed a vote on this important reform of the federal employment hiring system.

This legislation equalizes the treatment of military and civilian employees when seeking employment within the federal government. The bill provides preference to our veterans—the same preference that civilian employees currently receive in the federal employment system. It provides support to the bill in the employment process and reward those veterans who provided us with our most sacred principle—freedom.

I am very pleased that we are going to pass this bill today and encourage all of my colleagues to vote for its passage.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to voice my support for S. 1021, the Veterans Employment Opportunities Act of 1998. This bill originated in the House as H.R. 240 under the guidance of Representative John Mica, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Civil Service, and passed the House on April 9, 1997. S. 1021 provides improvements to veterans’ preference and employment opportunities and strengthens veterans’ employment rights with federal contractors.

Mr. Speaker, through veterans’ preference, wartime and disabled veterans get a small advantage competing for federal jobs, along with promotion and protection retention. To date, veterans comprise 27.6 percent of the federal workforce, and it is the entirety of the commitment of the Congress to America’s 26 million veterans that prefer for federal jobs is an important way to share the sacrifices of war.

I’d like to thank Chairman Specter of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee for two provisions in particular. Section 6 expands and improves veterans’ employment under federal contracts, and expands the definition of who is a ‘covered veteran’ by including veterans who served on active duty during a war or in a campaign or expedition for which a campaign badge has been awarded. Section 7 requires federal contractors to include the maximum number and the minimum number of employees in their annual reports on veterans’ employment. Both of these provisions are designed to afford additional protection to preference eligible veterans employed by Federal contractors.

This bill is the most significant improvement in veterans’ preference in my memory and it deserves the strong support of the House. I urge my colleagues to support S. 1021.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all veteran’s, I’d like to express my thanks and sincere appreciation to Chairman John Mica as well the Ranking Member, Elijah Cummings, and all of their staff for the commitment that they continue to show to our men and women who have proudly served our country in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Mr. PAPPAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support our veterans by calling for the passage of the S. 1021, the Veterans Employment and Preference Daily Act of 1998. Last year, the House did the right thing by passing H.R. 240 introduced by Representative Mica. This legislation is the Senate’s long awaited companion bill and, while I wish it had gone further in its protection of veterans from Reductions In Force, nonetheless it also deserves our passage today.

For too long many of our nation’s veterans have been neglected by our own government when it comes to obtaining federal employment. Our nation’s veterans, who served so selflessly and risked their lives, face unnecessary restrictions that preclude them from federal employment. All they simply desire is the opportunity to continue serving their nation.

As the result of this legislation, veterans can apply for federal jobs on a more competitive basis at a time when their employment within the federal agencies is declining and approaching an historically low level.

This is a bipartisan bill and one that reflects the interests of the people who have served our country so courageously. I am proud that this legislation has the support of the American Legion. I commend Mr. Mica for his work and urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Mica. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cummings) each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. Cummings. Mr. Speaker, I request an extension of time to yield my time to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. Mica. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may agree to the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica).
They will also be able to carry more insurance into retirement.

The House bill required the Office of Personnel Management to submit a legislative proposal for offering group universal life insurance, group variable life insurance, family insurance, three options with respect to post-retirement basic insurance and accelerated payment options for the terminally ill.

Enrollees have a choice of basic life insurance, six levels of additional life insurance, family insurance, three options with respect to post-retirement basic insurance and accelerated payments options for the terminally ill.

Nearly 90 percent of the eligible Federal work force participates in the program. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DINGELL) and I, along with all of the members of the Subcommittees on Civil Service, were able to work together to develop legislation that would have implemented some excellent recommendations we receive from the witnesses at an oversight hearing we held on FEGLI last year.

However, some of the provisions implementing these recommendations were dropped when the Senate considered the bill. The House bill directed the Office of Personnel Management to submit draft legislative proposals for group universal life, group variable life, and accidental death and dismemberment insurance coverage within six months of passage of this legislation.

The Senate version requires OPM to merely conduct a study on these additional forms of insurance, rather than submit legislative proposals. While we can accept the Senate language on this issue, we strongly urge OPM to include in the study recommendations for legislative changes that may provide new life insurance options for Federal employees.

Included in the bill is a provision that will give enrollees the opportunity to continue the full extent of their life insurance coverage after they reach 65. By doing this, we will be providing a measure of comfort and convenience to many who would still have a desire to provide for the security of their loved ones. They will no longer have to seek a new company from which to purchase life insurance, something often difficult and expensive to do at that late stage in life.

I offered an amendment to H.R. 2675 during our subcommittee’s markup of the bill, which added a provision that would enable enrollees to purchase an increased amount of insurance coverage for their spouse and dependent children.

Clearly the present levels of coverage available, $5,000 for one’s spouse and $2,500 for each child are inadequate. They neither compensate for the loss nor cover average burial expenses. My amendment would make it possible for enrollees to obtain coverage for their spouse and dependent children up to five times the current levels. I am pleased to see that this important provision is still in the bill.

Additional provisions added to the bill by the Senate were to eliminate Basic Insurance maximum limitation, increase FEGLI coverage for family, and also include provisions for Federal employees who are wrongly covered. My amendment would have implemented some excellent recommendations we receive from the witnesses at an oversight hearing we held on FEGLI last year.

The legislation fulfills the legislative goal that I began to pursue in 1983 through legislation I introduced, H.R. 3297. The goal of that legislation was to extend the treatment currently afforded to Federal judges under FEGLI to other judicial officials.

Since 1983, I worked to get this important provision enacted into law, and now this important goal is realized through the increase in the class of eligible Federal employees who may receive this coverage during open enrollment that this bill provides.

The version of the bill we passed in the House of Representatives directed the Office of Personnel Management to conduct a study of Federal employees’ interest in additional insurance proposals and to submit a legislative proposal to offer group universal life insurance and group variable universal life insurance policies under FEGLI within 6 months.

The Senate language differs from the House version in that it does not mandate that OPM submit a legislative proposal, but instead requires OPM to submit findings to Congress by July 1.

While I think it is beneficial to compel OPM to submit a legislative proposal, this difference does not affect my support for this legislation because of its many other benefits. The legislation also incorporates a component of legislation I introduced in the last Congress to increase the amount of additional optional life insurance for dependents present level.

Although it does not mirror my proposal exactly, my proposal would have only included dependents with severe disabilities. This approach makes sense in that it will include a larger risk pool and not just those whose service is recognized. I thank the chairman for introducing this measure.

Finally, the bill provides Federal employees with the opportunity to continue the full extent of their life insurance coverage after they reach age 65. Under current law, when Federal employees reach age 65, they cease making premium payments, and the face value of the employees' life insurance is reduced by 2 percent each month for 50 months. Giving Federal retirees the opportunity to purchase life insurance benefits is a great accomplishment. I simply encourage my colleagues to support this bill, H.R. 2675.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank my colleague, the gentlewoman from Maryland, when she talked about insomnia. I am sure, hopefully, we will be able to wake some people up with all this good news we are imparting here tonight.

But with that, Mr. Speaker, I just want to again reiterate this is another piece of legislation that would not have been possible without the bipartisan efforts on the part of our subcommittee.

This is a very important piece of legislation because it once again sheds light on the fact that we care about our Federal employees who make it possible for us to do them and certainly to support our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I have no additional speakers, and I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, first I just want to take a moment to thank again the ranking member, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) and other members of our subcommittee.

Tonight we brought before the House two pieces of legislation, the bill, the Veterans Employment Opportunity Act, which provides veterans preference, which is something we have been fighting for decades since really World War II. It is an important piece of legislation. The staff and Members, in a bipartisan fashion, showed today what we can do working together.

Today has been a difficult day for the Congress and for the American people. It does show, in fact, what we can all do for the benefit of those who served us.

Finally, on this bill, this bill is important because we have over 4 million Federal employees and retirees.

This bill saves money for the taxpayer. This program has not been bid or really examined in some number of decades, and we can provide better benefits at lower cost to those who are actively serving us in Federal employment.

So I ask my colleagues to support this legislation, and I urge all Members to support this bill tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill H.R. 2675.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING THE IMPORTANCE OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 302) recognizing the importance of children and families in the United States and expressing support for the goals of National KidsDay and National Family Month.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 302

(1) recognizes the importance of children and families to the future of the United States;

(2) expresses support for the goals of National KidsDay and National Family Month;

(3) encourages the people of the United States to participate in local and national activities and celebrations recognizing National KidsDay and National Family Month.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 302.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res. 302, which recognizes the importance of children and families in the United States, and I express my support for KidsDay and National Family Month. I particularly want to commend the sponsor of the bill, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCHALE) and the chairman and ranking member for bringing this bill to the floor.

KidsDay and National Family Month were established by KidsPeace, a special organization dedicated to helping children in crisis. KidsPeace believes that every child is unique, and that children are helped the most by their mothers and fathers, the people who are closest to them.

We all have a responsibility to protect and support America's children. Mr. Speaker, 1 out of every 4 Americans is a child. Children are our hope for the future, our chance for renewal. They carry on our values and our ideals.

Childhood should be a time of learning and of play, and a time to be sheltered from the wickedness of the outside world. However, children and youth today are coping with increasingly serious problems that are robbing them of their innocence, security and physical safety. Violence in the schools... as well as on the streets, the availability of drugs, greater numbers of working parents, and soaring divorce rates are taking a toll on kids far sooner than in past generations.

Today, many children spend long hours at school and top week-ends unsupervised. They need and often admit wanting some guidance in facing the many challenges of their lives.

One in 5 children entering school this year are 5-years old. Half of those children born in the United States last year will live with a single parent by the time they are 18 years old.

As Americans, we enjoy the highest standard of living in the world. Our economy is one of the most dynamic and diverse in history. We have achieved a level of technological advancement and individual opportunity that is unequaled around the globe. Without a doubt, America is on top of the world.

But the future of America's greatness depends upon how we care for and support our children in the present. Setting aside a time to focus on children and families is important to America's future. National Kidsday is celebrated on the first Sunday of September, and National Family Month is celebrated during the 5-week period between Mother's and Father's day. I encourage all Americans to participate in local activities during the celebration of these important occasions, and I encourage my colleagues to support wholeheartedly this important resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as ranking member of the Subcommittee on Civil Service I would like to commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHALE) for the development of this bipartisan resolution.

House concurrent resolution 302 will help to address challenges children a generation ago did not have to face: drugs, violence, separation from parents, failing schools, peer group demands, and much, much more.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHALE) for a further explanation of this bipartisan resolution.

Mr. McHALE. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening in strong support of H. Con. Res. 302, and I begin by thanking the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Morella), my former chair of the Committee on Science on which I had the privilege to serve, and most especially the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cummings) for both the opportunity to speak this evening and their willingness to bring this legislation to the floor.

I will be leaving in just a few days to return to what matters most to me: my wife and my children. It is with great pride that I have served in this body and with some sadness that I near my final days as a Member of Congress. About a year ago, Mr. Speaker, my 7-year-old approached me as I was leaving for Washington on a Monday morning, and upon not getting the response he was seeking, he said, "Dad, you have been gone my whole life," and at that point I realized that at least for this Member of Congress, it was time to go home.

Today's society, as noted by the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. Morella) places increasing demands on children and families and has unfortunately left many children in crisis and failing that they have nowhere to turn for help. News of children becoming involved in violence, crime, drugs and so on indicates that we as a Nation must pay greater attention to the needs of children and families.

For this reason, I urge my colleagues to support the resolution that recognizes the importance of children and families in the United States. I introduced this resolution with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Roemer), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Pryce), the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Ford), and numerous other Members who have been such strong advocates for children. I would also like to extend my special thanks to the gentleman from Carolin (Mr. Jones) who is on the floor as I speak, as well as the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Burton), chairman of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, and the ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. Waxman) who helped to bring this resolution to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, H. Con. Res. 302 which has 44 bipartisan cosponsors, also expresses support for the goals of National Kidsday and National Family Month. These events were launched by KidsPeace, the National Center for Kids Overcoming Crisis, the largest, most comprehensive private nonprofit organization in the Nation dedicated to serving the critical needs of children and teens.

Headquartered in my district, KidsPeace has become a model of community involvement and improvement. KidsPeace programs include residential treatment centers, the National Hospital for Kids in Crisis, foster care in 6 States, community and diagnostic programs, a 24-hour help line, and an accredited school system for grades 1 through 12, and a referral network of thousands of health care providers across the country.

For more than 115 years, KidsPeace has been helping kids develop the confidence and skills to overcome developmental and situational crises in their lives. KidsPeace serves more than 2,000 children in over 32 programs in 25 locations across the United States.

Mr. Speaker, let me deviate from my prepared text for just a moment.

KidsPeace's ability to serve our Nation and my community in particular has not always been a resource available to us. I had the privilege of serving in our State legislature before I came to the Congress, and I remember very clearly about a decade ago when I received a phone call from a family absolutely desperate because they had a teenager in crisis. That child had nowhere to turn. There was no medical facility in our region of the State able to provide the care that that child and that family needed at that very desperate time. KidsPeace addresses that need today with professional medical care under circumstances where it did not previously exist.

KidsPeace has demonstrated an extraordinary commitment to assisting children and families across the country. National Kids Day and National Family Month were developed by KidsPeace as events to focus on parent-child and family relationships and provide positive encouragement and support for children to face successfully life's challenges. As a parent who has participated in National Kids Day activities in my district, I strongly support the establishment of these events as recognition of the importance of children and families.

Margaret Mead once said, "We must have a place where children can have a whole group of adults they can trust." 2350

These words very poignantly describe the work of KidsPeace in helping children overcome the challenges and crises in their lives. Helping children feel safe, trusted, loved, and empowered is the heart of the KidsPeace mission.

It is my hope that this resolution will call attention to the needs of children and families in the United States and throughout National Kids Day and National Family Month and thereby help families afford and support for their children. I urge my colleagues to vote for this bipartisan resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to conclude simply by saying that this Member of Congress realized that I could continue serving in this body or I could be a decent husband and father. And under the unique circumstances of my family, I realized that I could not do both. I made the decision to return home with enormous feelings of gratitude and respect for this institution.

This is probably the last time I will speak at a microphone in the House of Representatives, and I could not find a better topic than to address the needs, the love, the support that we as a Nation and we as an individual need to bring to the families of our country. I am pleased to close my career in this House on that note.

Mrs. Morella. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I wish the 7-year-old child of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. McHALE) could have heard him this evening. And, indeed, I hope the gentleman will save the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that will have enounced the speech that he just gave, because it was from the bottom of his heart.

Mr. Speaker, I would use this opportunity to express my warm feelings and respect for the gentleman from Pennsylvania and for the dedication that he has given to this body, knowing him from his service on the Committee on Science with me and as an individual and as a colleague, and knowing the courage that he has shown and the commitment that he made to our country.

So, we wish the gentleman well and thank him very much for what he has done. I think this is a nice commemoration to PAUL MCHALE.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES).

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) for introducing this resolution. Our children are our future. They are tomorrow’s leaders. My colleagues who are parents like myself know that when a child is upset or frustrated or feeling low, it is painful.

There are outside pressures that can affect our children’s lives, like the academic stresses, struggles to feel accepted, and teen violence just to name a few. These are the issues that our children face.

KidsPeace is a nonprofit organization that offers educational awareness programs and tools dedicated to help our children cope. We anticipate, intervene in, and overcome the crises that affect America’s children. For our Nation’s most rural communities, like those in eastern North Carolina which I have the privilege to serve, these are valuable programs that can provide our children with relief from the problems they face growing up.

Too many of our rural schools have limited resources which make it difficult to maintain the number of school counselors that are needed to help our children build the confidence to overcome their problems. Because of this, KidsPeace continues to grow, it is vital that it continues to reach out to America’s rural communities and communities throughout the Nation.

Even with a strong faith in God and the support of family and friends, our children sometimes need extra encouragement. This is what KidsPeace is working to do, to build confidence in our Nation’s children through sharing and learning.

The organization has established KidsPeace for its work over the past century helping children overcome all sorts of crises. National KidsDay and National Family Month, both established by KidsPeace, compel all Americans to focus on parent, child, and family relationships. These celebrations encourage parents and grandparents and caregivers to be involved in the lives of their children.

I believe we should all spend time every day nurturing and encouraging the children that we encounter in our lives. This Member of Congress can certainly appreciate the work of KidsPeace. Every child, which is not always the case, has four fundamental needs that must be fulfilled to lead a peaceful and healthy life: Safety to feel safe and protected; trust to be confident, hopeful and supported; love to be valued and unconditionally accepted; and a purpose, skill, or challenge.

This resolution recognizes KidsPeace, an organization that works hard to meet those needs. Through its good work, KidsPeace helps preserve the health and happiness of children who are suffering through crises and traumas.

The demand for organizations such as KidsPeace is apparent. From 1991 to 1992, the organization saw a 150 percent increase in the number of kids coming to it for help. That is when KidsPeace stepped forward on a national level with public initiatives to help prevent and overcome crises that can strike any child.

This extra push to alert Americans to the needs of our children could not come at a better time. Between 1990 and 1996, the number of children rose by more than 5 million to 69.4 million. The United States Census Bureau projects that the number of children will continue to rise over the next several decades reaching 77.6 million by the year 2000.

This resolution is worthy of our support, and I urge the Members of this body to do so.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I think it is appropriate for Congress to recognize the importance of children and KidsPeace. I have been very fortunate to have been able to raise nine children, six who were the children of my late sister, and we now have 15 grandchildren. And so I can value and appreciate children and the need for organizations like KidsPeace.

It is an honor to be managing this particular resolution, which I think is so very important. The institution of the family is, indeed, the bedrock of our society and of civilization, and without strong families, the outlook for children is bleak.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time for just one brief statement.

On the stationery for KidsPeace there is a quote by George MacDonald, and I think that it pretty much summarizes the life of our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCMAHON), and the things that he talked about just a moment ago, and certainly I salute him. But the quote is very simple. It says: "A man must learn to love his children not because they are his but because they are simply children."

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Con. Res. 302, recognizing the importance of children and families in the United States and expressing support for the goals of National KidsDay and National Family Month. I want to thank Reps. PAUL MCMAHON, Frank Wolf, Harold Ford, Nancy Johnson and DEBORAH PRYCE, who joined me in introducing this resolution last July, as well as Rep. WALTER JONES and the many other Members who helped bring it to the floor today.

We live in an increasingly stressful society these days. Perhaps no one feels this stress more acutely than our nation’s children. The pressures of crime, drugs, violence and broken homes are robbing many children of the joys of childhood. There is a growing concern that too many kids are in crisis, and that no one is speaking out for them or trying to help. That is what this resolution is all about. It is a simple, straightforward, bipartisan appeal on behalf of the children in our nation to pay more attention to their needs, to provide them with a healthy and safe environment, and to give them hope for a secure and prosperous future. The resolution also expresses support for two particular initiatives which are being undertaken on behalf of kids: National KidsDay and National Family Month. Both of these initiatives, which have been created by KidsPeace, our nation’s oldest and largest nonprofit organization dedicated solely to serving the needs of kids in crisis.

National KidsDay, observed on the third Saturday in September, encourages parents, grandparents and caregivers to spend a day with their children just having fun, and giving them a break from the strains of everyday life. National Family Month is celebrated during the five-week period between Mother’s Day and Father’s Day. Each week focuses on a specific value that families should provide to their children, including: a safe and secure home; the power and freedom to grow; and hope for the future.

Mr. Speaker, children are our most precious gift. We cannot afford to let even one child slip through the cracks. KidsPeace and other organizations are doing a wonderful job of reaching out to those children who are most at risk in society, and helping them develop the courage and skills necessary to overcome crisis. But no matter how hard they try, these organizations can never provide the glue of loving parents, stable homes, and a healthy environment in which kids can feel safe, loved and positive about their lives and their futures.

This resolution is small in scope but it is large in symbolism. It sends a message to children that we care about them, we understand their problems, we share their dreams, and we want them to enjoy life to the fullest. As Robert Kennedy said: “When one of us prospers, all of us prosper. When one of us fails, so do our colleagues. It is up to us to support this resolution and live with all our children a chance to prosper.”

Mr. PAPAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support our veterans by calling for the passage of the S.1021, the Veterans Employment Opportunity Act of 1998. The House did the right thing by passing H.R. 240 introduced by Representative Mica. This legislation is the Senate’s long awaited companion bill and, while I wish it had gone further in its protection of veterans from Reductions In Force, nonetheless it also deserves our passage today.

For too long many of our nation’s veterans have been neglected by our own government when it comes to obtaining federal employment. Our nation’s veterans, who served so selflessly and risked their lives, face unnecessary restrictions that preclude them from federal employment. All they simply desire is the opportunity to continue serving their nation.

As the result of this legislation, veterans can apply for federal jobs on a more competitive basis at a time when their employment within the federal workforce is declining and approaching an historically low level. This is a bipartisan bill and one that reflects the interests of the people who have served our country so courageously. I am proud that this legislation has the support of the American Legion. I commend Mr. Mica for his work and urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time, and urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time, and urge all Members to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, last year I introduced H.R. 2109 to require federal agencies to make filings electronically. This legislation requires that federal agencies make filings electronically and prohibits federal agencies from filing paper filings. The legislation also requires that federal agencies make filings electronically and prohibits federal agencies from filing paper filings. The legislation also requires that federal agencies make filings electronically and prohibits federal agencies from filing paper filings. The legislation also requires that federal agencies make filings electronically and prohibits federal agencies from filing paper filings.

The Clerk read as follows:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) will control 20 minutes, and a Member opposed will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Cox) and that he be allowed to manage that time, as I am about to lose my most valuable asset as a Member of Congress, and that is my voice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. COX).

Mr. COOK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, last year I introduced H.R. 2109, the Campaign Finance Reform and Sunshine Act. H.R. 2109 requires candidates to file campaign finance disclosure forms electronically with the Federal Elections Commission. The

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2109, as amended.

The bill is in order, and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is asked to explain the amendment.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2109, the Federal Elections Commission Sunshine Act of 1998, is the most important legislation that we can pass this year. It is an act to end the abuses of our political system.

The House has already passed bipartisan legislation to reform the Federal Election Commission. This legislation would strengthen the FEC and bring it more into line with the Federal Communications Commission, which has had a better track record in enforcing campaign finance laws.

The bill before us today would provide the FEC with the resources it needs to carry out its responsibilities. It would also make it easier for the public to access the information they need to make informed decisions about the candidates they choose.

Mr. Speaker, the bill is supported by a majority of House Members and has the backing of both parties.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
way toward improving the operation of these programs, freeing them from fraud and abuse and ensuring that children are provided with nutritious meals.

I would like to mention a few key provisions of the legislation. First, the legislation provides additional flexibility to States and local providers of nutrition programs. Second, the Summer Food Service Program is amended to encourage greater participation by private, non-profit organizations. This change is particularly important to rural areas, some of which I represent, where it is otherwise difficult to find program sponsors. Third, this legislation includes key provisions that address fraud and abuse in both the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children and the Child and Adult Care Food Program. Next, this legislation modifies current nutrition programs in order to provide snacks to schoolchildren participating in afterschool programs with an educational or enrichment purpose. Our Nation is currently undertaking efforts to reduce juvenile crime. Children participating in afterschool programs are more likely to engage in delinquent activities. I believe it is important that we support such programs by providing participants with a nutritious meal.

Last but certainly not least, I am pleased this agreement makes permanent automatic eligibility under the Child and Adult Care Food Program for children participating in the Even Start Family Literacy Program. We will now be able to provide the children of some of our most needy families who are making an effort to improve the quality of their life and the lives of their children with nutritional assistance.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bipartisan bill. I want to acknowledge those Members who contributed their time and effort to crafting this legislation. First I would like to thank the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) who spearheaded the development of this legislation in the Committee on Education and the Workforce. Working with him were the chairman of the Subcommittee on Early Childhood, Youth and Families the gentleman from California (Mr. RIGGS), the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. CLAY), the gentleman from California (Mr. MARTINEZ) and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

From the Senate side, I would like to mention the efforts of RICHARD LUGAR, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry, staff from both the House and the Senate who worked on this legislation, including Lynn Selmser, Vic Klett, Alex Nock, Marci Phillips, Dave Johnson, Mike Ruffner, Dan Spillacy, Mark Davalos and Ed Barron. Senators MITCH McCONNELL, THAD COCHRAN, PATRICK LEAHY and TOM HARKIN have also contributed greatly to the final version of this important legislation.

On a personal note, I want to thank Senator LEAHY, whom I have sat across from at many House-Senate conferences and have always found to be fair and respectful in his work and working in the best interests of our children, for offering a motion in the conference to name this important reauthorization after me. I am deeply honored and profoundly humbled by his gesture and that of my colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, this bill goes a long way in improving our Nation's child nutrition programs. I would like to stress that it makes these changes without spending any additional Federal dollars. These are important programs that provide nutritional assistance to millions of individuals. By strengthening these programs, we will ensure that they will continue to feed children and provide nutritional assistance to participants in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children for years to come.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, if the President were awake at this time of night and watching these proceedings, I am sure that he would say that while he is pleased that this important measure is moving forward, he is also disappointed that we have not addressed even more critical priorities in education. This Congress has failed to take action on reducing class sizes. This Congress has failed to take action to address crumbling and overcrowded schools. This Congress has failed to take action on revitalizing our public schools. If this Congress fails to take action on these critical education priorities, we are shortchanging America's schools and children. I am sure that would be the response that our President would make.

This bill, the William F. Goodling Child Nutrition Reauthorization Act of 1998, before the House is the product of bipartisan work and an excellent example of what can be accomplished when we join forces to address problems facing our Nation's youth. This important legislation firmly places our child nutrition programs on the path to serve the needs of America's children in the 21st century.

H.R. 3874 expands and improves the focus of child nutrition programs in numerous ways. First, it ensures that the Summer Food Service Program will reach more needy children with more nutritious meals. Second, the bill adds provisions to guard against fraud in the WIC program. In addition, it establishes a universal school breakfast pilot project which will examine the close link between education and nutrition.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, and most importantly, this legislation enables institutions providing afterschool care to receive reimbursement for meal supplements served to children under the age of 18. This supplement is one more incentive for parents and children to participate in productive, afterschool programs.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to extend my thanks for the hard work of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and the ranking member from California (Mr. MARTINEZ) for crafting this legislation. I especially want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) who spearheaded much of the reauthorization on our committee. It really has been invaluable and many of the bill's provisions are based on legislative proposals that she championed.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is a positive step forward. I urge its adoption by the House.

Mr. CASTLE. I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) and appreciate tremendously his effort in this direction. I do appreciate the work of the minority members on this bill as well as all the staff individuals as well.

I would say something to the ranking member before I get into the goodness of this bill, and I mean this very sincerely, because it has rendered me speechless. If the President came here in January and he talked about reducing class size, as the gentleman has indicated, and I think he is committed to that.

State and local governments, and secondly it seems to me that if the White House is referencing them and wants to get them done and puts up the money in the source of the tobacco money and then loses that, they have some obligation to come back and try to help out.

I just make a point. I do not want to make a fight of it tonight. It is too late, but I do think we have to recognize that. Let us talk about something that before school and then hire a bunch of breakfast police to enforce it, we need to start looking at school breakfast programs in a different way, and this bill does just that.

This bill also makes it easier for schools and community organizations to offer after-school programs to teenagers by making it easier to pay for their snacks.

We know that the vast majority of juvenile crime and teen pregnancies occur after the school bell and before the dinner bell. We desperately need more after-school programs for adolescents, but feeding adolescents, even when it is just a snack, can be expensive.

H.R. 3874 will open the child and adult care food programs to low income teens and to more after-school programs. This is not Twinkies for teens. The Police Athletic League and other law enforcement organizations have strongly endorsed the benefits of after-school programs for adolescents. This legislation will make more of these programs possible and give teens a place to be after school.

H.R. 3874 will benefit millions of children and I would say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling) that he can be proud to have this bill carry his name.

Children are only 25 percent of this country's population but they are 100 percent of our future. The William F. Goodling Child Nutrition Reauthorization Act is a sound investment in America's most precious resource: Our children. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, I will just close by reciting the 21 programs that came from our committee: Higher Education Act, Reading Excellence Act, Dollars to the Classroom Act, D.C. Scholarship, Prepaid College Tuition Plans, Job Training, Emergency Student Loans, Quality Head Start, School Nutrition, Charter Schools, Drug Education Initiative, A-plus Savings Accounts, $500 more for Federal Education, Loan Forgiveness for New Teachers, Teacher Testing, Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, High-Tech Job Skills/Vocational Education, Bilingual Education Reform, Prohibition on New Federal School Tests, Equitable Child Care Resolution, Juvenile Justice. That is a pretty healthy menu, I believe.

My friend from Delaware did not want to take the gentleman from Missouri on. I want to make very clear that the whole idea of pupil/teacher ratio has nothing to do with the Federal Government whatsoever. That is none of our business and if there are not quality teachers in the classroom, it would not matter whether they are organized. If that is something we want to do, fine.

Secondly, I want to make very sure that everybody understands, the Federal Government has nothing to do with maintenance and building of school buildings.

What the Federal Government does have something to do with is putting the 40 percent that they promised 30 years ago into special education, and every year the Los Angeles Unified School District would have had $18 million more, every year, to do whatever they wanted to do about class size and to do whatever they wanted to do about maintaining buildings. That was a responsability because we sent 100 percent of the mandate for special education.

What did the budget that came from the President of the United States do about special education? Cut it; did not even include an amendment; cut it; when there are more and more students coming in constantly into special ed, the most expensive program that we have.
who find themselves in that program simply because they have some reading difficulties.

So I do not take a back seat to anybody in relationship to what this committee has done during the last 2 years to try to improve education and job training in this country.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a short question?

Mr. GOODLING. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, how many of the 21 bills that the gentleman has cited have become law?

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, we are going to have Higher Education, we are going to have Reading Excellence.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, we are going to do.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, we are going to have Prepaid College Tuition Plans. We are going to have Job Training for Youth 18 and we are going to have Emergency Student Loans. We are going to have Quality Head Start. We are going to have School Nutrition. We are going to have Charter Schools. We are going to have Drug Education Initiatives. We already have $500 million more for drug education. We are going to have Loan Forgiveness for New Teachers. We had to bail out the department in order to get the loan situation straightened out.

All of those are there in law by the time we finish at 1 or 2 o'clock this morning. It will be a magnificent effort on the part of the committee of which the gentleman from Missouri was a part.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 3874, the William F. Goodling Child Nutrition Reauthorization Amendments of 1998. This legislation shows what we can do when we work together. It is a strong effort. It is a strong and certainly a strong supporter of vocational education.

This agreement is based upon four overarching principles: Strengthening academics in this country's vocational-technical education programs, broadening opportunities for vocational education students, particularly in areas of high technology; sending more money to the classroom; and significantly increasing State and local flexibility in the design of innovative programs that are responsive to local needs.

This legislation will move our Nation's vocational-technical education programs into the 21st Century, and more importantly will assist the 75 percent of American youth who do not complete a 4-year college degree.

Our Nation's young people should receive a high quality education whether they are bound for college, the military, further training, or directly into the work force.

Today's vocational education students need a quality education, a strong academic foundation, and relevant skills in order to thrive in today's economy.

This legislation makes a number of important improvements to current law that authorizes vocational education programs.

First, the agreement will strengthen the academic component of vocational education. It asks States and local school districts to describe in their State and local applications how they plan to improve the academic and technical skills of students participating in vocational education.

It also asks States to tell us how vocational education programs are going to improve the academic component of vocational education.

I am an educator. But Carl was just a wonderful friend, a great chairman, and certainly a strong supporter of vocational education.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the unanimous consent request, the conference report is considered read.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Conference Agreement on H.R. 1853, the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Amendments of 1998.

I cannot think of a better gentleman to have this bill named. I do not want to put "for" at the end a sentence; I am an educator. But Carl was just a wonderful friend, a great chairman, and certainly a strong supporter of vocational education.

In 1950, 60 percent of all jobs in the Nation were unskilled. In 1990, this figure dropped to 35 percent. By the year...
I myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Chairman JEFFORDS who led the Senate efforts on the legislation, and our House conferees the gentleman from California (Mr. MCKEON), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. J. JOHNSON), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CLAY), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KILDEE), and the gentleman from California (Mr. MARTINEZ).

I would also like to thank staff who have worked very hard in helping us develop this legislation, including Krisann Pearce, Sally Lovejoy, Mary Claget, Vic Klett, J u ne Harris, Alex Nock, and Marci Philips.

The conference agreement on H.R. 1853 is based on good public policy. The agreement expands opportunities for vocational education students, placing increased emphasis on academics, technology, and State and local innovation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge your support for this legislation.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 1853, the Carl Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Amendments of 1998. The Perkins Act has helped millions of students attain the education and training needed to compete in today's workforce.

In particular, the act has provided access to vocational education to a variety of under-served populations—women, including single mothers and displaced homemakers; individuals with disabilities; and students facing barriers to educational achievement, such as limited English proficiency. The reauthorization legislation before us today, I believe, strengthens the Federal Vocational Education Program.

We merge the best of the House and Senate bills to provide for a system that holds vocational education to high academic standards and accountability. We also reaffirm our commitment to special populations, and ensure that not only are they provided access to vocational education, but that they also are included in the quest for high quality.

I am also pleased that disagreements on the formula have been resolved, striking a balance between providing support for local schools and leveraging resources in leadership activities. Just as importantly, this new formula retains the Federal commitment to target scarce education dollars to the neediest students.

Finally, I would like to express my strong support for the provisions in the legislation that preserve the tech-prep program.

Tech-prep provides comprehensive links between vocational education and training in secondary schools and postsecondary education institutions.

As such, the tech-prep program enhances the Federal commitment to provide vocational education students with the skills and education to pursue a successful future after high school—whether it involves obtaining additional training, pursuing a baccalaureate degree, or entering the workforce.

I thank Chairman GOODLING and Chairman JEFFORDS for their commitment to reaching bi-partisan, bicameral agreement on vocational education reauthorization.

While these negotiations were lengthy, and often contentious, I believe the final product was worth the effort.

I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this conference report.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 2206, COATS HUMAN SERVICES REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1998

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 2206) to amend the Head Start Act, the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981, and the Community Services Block Grant Act to reauthorize and make improvements to those Acts, to establish demonstration projects that provide an opportunity for persons with limited means to accumulate assets, and for other purposes.

(For conference report and statement of the SPEAKER pro tempore, see proceedings of the House of October 6, 1998 at page H9680.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING).

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 2206.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on S. 2206, the Coats Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1998 named after the retiring Senator from Indiana.

I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Senator DAN COATS, not only for his remarkable efforts on what will be known as the Coats Human Services Act of 1998, but for his years of service and dedication to education and human services issues. He has been a staunch and compassionate advocate for children. We will miss his insight and wisdom that are reflected in dozens of laws that have and will continue to have positive impact on the lives of millions of American families.

I want to express my sincere appreciation to the members of the conference committee for their diligent efforts to resolve the differences between Title II of the legislation extends the authorization and makes changes to the Community Service Block Grant Act program. This bill will better enable States and local communities to eradicate poverty, revitalize high poverty neighborhoods, and empower low-income individuals to become self-sufficient. As with Head Start, this bill increases program accountability and CSBG. It encourages the development of effective partnerships between government, local communities and charitable organizations, including faith-based organizations, to meet the needs of impoverished individuals, and it encourages innovative community-based approaches to attacking the causes and effects of poverty.

I have been a strong supporter for many years of CSBG and the programs that it supports. I feel that this legislation will result in improvements in CSBG and will further improve services for the poor in each local community.

Title III of our legislation extends the authorization of another important program, the Low- Income Home Energy Assistance Program. LIHEAP provides heating and cooling assistance to low-income individuals at most homes 5 months holds each year. Individuals and families receiving this vital assistance include the working poor, individuals making the transition from welfare to work, individuals with disabilities, the elderly, and families with young children.

Finally, this legislation establishes a new demonstration program providing funding for individual development accounts, matched saving accounts for low-income individuals for post-secondary education, home purchases and business capitalization.

I commend Senators COATS and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) for their insight in the development of this demonstration.

Finally, I want to give special thanks to numerous staff who have worked for so many weeks, months, years to resolve the various differences on this bill. Their work has culminated in a strong bipartisan bill. Specifically, I would like to thank Sally Lovejoy, Vic Klatt, Mary Clagett, Denzel McGuire and Rich Stombes of our committee staff for their hard work on this bill, as well as Alex Nock and Marci Phillips of the Minority staff.

Let me close by saying that the legislation before us today is truly one of the most important pieces of legislation the 105th Congress will pass this year. It is a bipartisan bill that greatly improves the delivery of services provided under Head Start, CSBG and LIHEAP. It is my belief that many families will benefit from the improvements made under this act. I urge my colleagues to vote for the bipartisan conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for his leadership and all of the others on the conference committee.

It is unfortunate that it is this late at night that we have one of the most important pieces of legislation that could possibly be before us. It addresses the most vulnerable Americans in our society, our children, the working poor, the elderly, and families with young children. It is an innovative community-based approach to attacking the causes and effects of poverty.

This bill reauthorizes the LIHEAP program for 5 years, but also concentrates its weatherization services for low-income individuals with higher energy needs.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this legislation institutes important accountability provisions in the Community Services Block Grant program that will enable us to document its great successes.

In closing, I want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), our chairman; the ranking subcommittee member, the gentleman from California (Mr. MARTINEZ); the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE); and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) for their hard work on this conference agreement. I believe this strong bipartisan measure, which deserves the support of all Members of this Chamber, should be enacted.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER), who was with Senator COATS for a long time before he came to the Congress of the United States, and who has been very important in putting together parts of this legislation.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for his leadership and all of the others on the conference committee.

It is of special meaning to me in 3 different ways, and I want to briefly talk about those. One is my relationship to my former employer, Senator DAN COATS. Second is these issues are many of the things that motivated me to particularly run for Congress, and I was a very young member for 10 years I worked with, and now, to see some of them come to fruition as part of law is indeed a special honor and a privilege.
So let me touch on a couple of these issues together. Senator Dan Coats is retiring this year after many years in the House and Senate, and as a friend of his who worked in his first primary and general election campaign, we worked with him on many goals. Part of those goals are very tied to our personal and deep religious commitments and how we as Christians would address issues facing the most vulnerable in our society. He has tried to be one of the more creative leaders on our side in looking at the balance of how do we work through the private sector, how do we work in joint cooperation in public and private, and what is the role of government in helping develop opportunities.

When I served as Republican staff director on the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, we looked at the Head Start program and also saw that it was a Federal program that was very effective in at least some areas. And what we have done in this bill is to try to make it even more effective by putting better educational standards and accountability into it, and what we pay for Head Start teachers, and I think that is an example of a Federal program that has worked.

But there are several other things in this bill. Back when I was in the House and when Senator Coats was in the Senate, we were trying to look for creative ways of how to empower private sector organizations, and one of those things is a charitable tax credit.

For the first time, working with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Scott) on the minority in our committee, we were able to pass in the 10 percent of the State's community service block grants they can use that money to help offset an expansion of the State charitable tax credit. We have not been able to pass other elements of legislation at this point with it, but it is an important first step.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Hall) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf) have been leaders in the individual development accounts, the Assets for Independence for Dan Coats that has supported for a long time as I have. And this is another innovative way to help those who are less fortunate to develop the assets they need, whether they have their own personal expenses or whether it is for homes or housing or to develop a business. It is an important breakthrough.

It is something that we worked out when I was a house staffer for Congressman Coats and as a Senate staffer, and it is a tremendous victory for my fellow and former staffers, Stephanie Monroe and Sharon Soderstrom and Mike Gerson to see many of these dreams actually become part of law.

Dan Coats has been a personal model for me, so I find it fitting and appropriate that this bill is named after him, because he is a beacon of light and a personal moral example. An example of leadership, of how someone in government can be in both their personal and public life a model for young people around the country; a model for legislators as to how to be creative in their legislation, of how to be a conservative and yet, have a heart for the underprivileged. It has been a great honor to both work for him and now with him in this United States Congress, and he is going to be deeply missed by me and many others.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Woolsey). (Ms. Woolsey asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Community Services Reauthorization Act. The programs authorized by this legislation, Head Start, Community Service Block Grants, and LIHEAP, help our neediest Americans to grow. I am particularly pleased that the Community Services Block Grants include reauthorization for a demonstration project to test the effectiveness of Individual Development Accounts, IDAs. IDAs allow low-income account holders is matched by the community organization which sponsors the IDA. I was able to leave welfare when I was in trouble at one point because I invested in myself. IDAs allow individuals in the same kind of circumstance I was in to invest in themselves. IDAs give low-income individuals a needed chance to invest in themselves and in their futures. Because their deposits are matched, IDA accounts grow and IDAs accounts and live are changed for the better.

This country has been helping middle- and upper-income families invest in themselves and their future for years. For example, there are tax deductions for home mortgage. There are tax break for IRAs and tax breaks for other pension accounts. There are no breaks for low-income individuals who try to save. In fact, in some cases there are actually penalties if a low-income person accumulates assets.

So, Mr. Speaker, the Human Services Reauthorization Act will help millions of low-income families change their lives and I am proud to join my colleagues on both sides of the aisle in supporting it.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. Castle) an important member of the committee.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling) for yielding me this time, and I will try to be brief because of the hour.

Mr. Speaker, everything that has been said is so significant. And the Head Start program, the Community Services Block Grant which was heard about, and also the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance program which has struggled politically in this body a lot of times, have gone through strong reauthorizations. I would like to focus on the Head Start provisions of this bill for a couple of reasons for a moment. I believe that educational welfare for our children starts well before they even walk into kindergarten. It obviously starts the day they are born. And some of the most crucial times are their first experiences in structured settings such as in day care or prekindergarten programs.

We are all seeing what is as least viewed as a decline in education in America, at least for some of our students out there today. And I think early intervention is very necessary if we are going to be able to address some of these problems, particularly at the earliest ages. Because, of course, our students attain higher achievements throughout their lives.

What happened in this bill, and it was under the guidance of our Chairman, that we had the education components of this legislation. We are supportive to the whole concept of quality. We put more money into that area; into teacher certification and into making absolutely certain that the Head Start programs that we have would be able to upgrade in that circumstance.

It was a hard fight. It sounds simple, but it was relatively hard because there is a great force that wants more quantity and does not want us to set money aside for quality. We were able to do that working with both sides of the aisle and working with the Senate in order to achieve what I think is in the greater good for kids of this country.

Again, it is a shame that we are debating this bill at 12:55 in the morning as opposed to 2 o'clock in the afternoon. But the bottom line is this is good legislation. It is good legislation.

Some excellent staff work went into it, and I hope that we could unanimously endorse it in the House of Representatives and the President could sign it into law soon.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to stand up today in strong support of the conference report on the Human Services Reauthorization Act and proud to have been able to serve as a conferee on this very important piece of legislation.

The bills that came out of both Houses on Head Start, the Community Services Block Grant and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Programs were very strong and representative of very bipartisan efforts. During conference, we worked diligently to follow through on that bipartisan spirit and deliver a bill that will provide better assistance to some of our nation's neediest citizens.

As with most pieces of legislation, I realize we have not been able to meet everyone's needs, but I do believe we have made an excellent compromise that addresses a majority of this body's concerns. Throughout the process, I have been particularly concerned with Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY), our ranking member, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the conference agreement reauthorizing the Neighborhood Assistance Act of 1990 and the Community Services Block Grant, and the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act. On balance, this bill does many positive things for children and low-income individuals. I am particularly proud of the fact that it contains a provision that I cosponsored with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SOUDER) which replicates a successful program I sponsored in Virginia, the Neighborhood Assistance Act, which offers tax credits for donations to approved programs fighting poverty.

Unfortunately, the conference agreement also contains a provision I find very troubling, the so-called “charitable choice” provision. This provision has serious constitutional and policy shortcomings. Specifically, the “charitable choice” program allows religious groups to be funded under the Community Services Block Grant, even though they may be pervasively sectarian.

The Community Services Block Grant program also allows, because it includes a general prohibition against organizations to be funded, it allows publicly funded employee discrimination. Because Title VII of the Civil Rights Act contains certain provisions exempting religious organizations, it allows faith-based organizations to proselytize to beneficiaries as they receive services. It also allows faith-based organizations to require beneficiaries to participate in religious activities in order to receive services. And it allows beneficiaries to be denied alternative service providers if none are available other than the faith-based organization.

With respect to these constitutional issues, Mr. Speaker, I submit a letter from the Solicitor General and a补充意见 providing an in-depth analysis of why the proposed statute is unconstitutional. The First Amendment, in my view, states that federal financial assistance not be used in a way that would advance religious organizations’ religious mission. The Court in Bowen v. Kendrick, 487 U.S. 589, 606-07 (1988), made it clear that federal financial assistance not be used in a way that would advance religious organizations’ religious mission. The Court in Kendrick confirmed that even though religious organizations may participate in government-funded social welfare programs, the government must ensure that government aid is not used to advance any religious activities in an otherwise substantially secular setting. Indeed, in Kendrick, all nine justices accepted the principle that government funding of religious activities would be impermissible.

I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support the hard fought compromises we reached during conference and vote in favor of passage. This legislation takes several great strides for the benefit of our nation’s children.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT),
In conformity with this constitutional requirement, proposed section 679 of the House bill would provide that "[n]o funds provided to a faith-based organization to provide assistance under a program described in subsection (a) shall be expended for sectarian worship, instruction, or proselytization." Sec. 28. Even when this statute includes (as Sec. 206 does) this express condition that the federal aid not be used for sectarian worship, instruction, or proselytization, the government may not, of course, attempt in this manner to conspire directly to a pervasively sectarian institution, defined as an institution in which "religion is so pervasive that a substantial portion of its work or activities are subservient in the religious mission."\footnote{Id at 610 (quoting Hunt, 413 U.S. at 743); see also id. at 621 (holding that, apart from the question whether aid was being used for purposes permissible under Establishment Clause would be violated if the plaintiff could show that aid flowed to grantees that could be considered "pervasively sectarian religious institutions").} As the Court has explained, the reason for the prohibition on direct government aid to pervasively sectarian institutions is the unacceptable risk that where as a pervasively sectarian organization—secular and religious functions are "inextricably intertwined," aid, although designated for a secular purpose, in fact will invariably advance the institution's religious mission. Id. at 620. Again, it is immaterial to this part of the Court's analysis that the provision of assistance would serve a legitimate secular purpose. See id. at 622. What is critical is that the assistance also would have the effect of advancing religion because of the pervasively sectarian character of the recipients. And even if it were possible, as a theoretical matter, for a pervasively sectarian organization to use government assistance exclusively for secular functions in such institutions, the degree and kind of governmental monitoring necessary to ensure compliance with the requisite restrictions would itself create Establishment Clause problems.

It is uncertain which, if any, of the religious organizations that would receive funding under S. 2206 would be "pervasively sectarian." The boundaries of the "pervasively sectarian" concept are well-defined, and the Supreme Court has used it almost exclusively in connection with primary and secondary educational institutions. The Court has, however, noted that numerous factors are relevant in determining the pervasively sectarian character of the recipients. Among these considerations is whether the organization has explicit or implicit ties to a particular religious faith, and bylaws or policies that prohibit any deviation from religious doctrine. Kendoric, 487 U.S. at 804. The Senate bill also has treated the existence of religious qualifications for admission and hiring as a relevant factor in determining whether a school is pervasively sectarian. Kendoric, 413 U.S. at 754 (no religious qualifications for faculty or students) and Roemer, 426 U.S. at 757-58 (plurality opinion) (same), with Committee for Pub. Educ. v. Nyquist, 413 U.S. 756, 767-68 (1973) (religious restrictions on admissions and faculty appointments) and School Dist. of Grand Rapids v. Ball, 473 U.S. 373, 384 n. 6 (1985) (preference in attending private school afforded to children belonging to organizational denomination).

Although the House and Senate versions of proposed section 679(a) state that the block grant funds must be disbursed in accordance with the Establishment Clause, certain other provisions in the bill strongly suggest an expectation that state governments would be permitted to provide direct funding to religious organizations that are pervasively sectarian. In particular, the Senate version includes the following three provisions not found in the House version:

(i) Proposed section 679(b)(2)(A) would provide, with a minor exception, that "[n]either the Federal Government nor a State or local government shall require a faith-based organization to alter its form of internal governance.

(ii) Proposed section 679(b)(3) would provide, with a minor exception, that "[n]either the Federal Government nor a State or local government shall require a faith-based organization to alter its form of internal governance.

(iii) Proposed section 679(b)(3) would provide, with a minor exception, that "[n]either the Federal Government nor a State or local government shall require a faith-based organization to alter its form of internal governance.

In addition to the constitutional problem discussed in the text, this particular provision would cause a typographical error.

The Senate version of the bill designates this subsection (" Blanch") rather than (" Blanck "), but this appears to be a typographical error. 2

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I just want to say that I am so glad that our committee was able to hold this very infested with attorneys. We would not get anything done. I have to laugh because when they talk about money being spent, if you look at ESEA, if you look at Title I and if you look at the Head Start, Community Services Block Grant and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Programs. However, I want to focus my remarks on the new demonstration program which will be created if this bill becomes law.

Mr. Speaker, S. 2206 includes the text of H.R. 2849, the Assets for Independence Act which I introduced with Representative JOHN KASICH. The language was added by an amendment offered in the Education and Work Committee by Representatives MARK SOUTER and LYNN WOOLSEY. This legislation authorizes $26 million for five years for the creation of Individual Development Accounts (IDAs) for poor families and individuals. IDAs are dedicated savings accounts, similar in structure to Individual Retirement Accounts, that can be used, if you look at ESEA, if you look at Title I and if you look at the Head Start, Community Services Block Grant and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Programs. However, I want to focus my remarks on the new demonstration program which will be created if this bill becomes law.

The language was added by an amendment offered in the Education and Work Committee by Representatives MARK SOUTER and LYNN WOOLSEY. This legislation authorizes $26 million for five years for the creation of Individual Development Accounts (IDAs) for poor families and individuals. IDAs are dedicated savings accounts, similar in structure to Individual Retirement Accounts, that can be used for purchasing a first home, paying for post-secondary education, or capitalizing a business. IDAs are managed by community organizations and are held at local financial institutions. Low income individuals make a contribution to... the account which is then matched by private or public funds. Under the legislation, participants can have no more than $10,000 in assets (excluding their car and home) to qualify for the program. Federal money can only be used to match private money. In this way, the bill will leverage more private money and local involvement. By encouraging asset development, IDAs help families end their own poverty with dignity.

IDAs and other asset-building strategies for the poor appear to be among the most promising poverty-fighting ideas to emerge in the last few years. It is estimated that 100 communities are running IDA programs in forty-three states. Twenty-five states, including Ohio, have incorporated IDAs into their welfare-to-work plans, as authorized by the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996. The Joyce, Mott, Ford, Levi Strauss, and Fannie Mae Foundations have issued millions of dollars in grants to support IDA demonstration projects. IDAs have come a long way since the Select Committee on Hunger, which I chaired, first held hearings on this important idea in the early 1990s.

This demonstration project will provide additional fuel to states, localities, and community based nonprofit groups that are looking for creative and enduring strategies to help low-income families move toward self-sufficiency. Ownership itself gives people a stake in the future and a reason to save, dream, and invest time, effort, and resources in creating a future for themselves and their children. Assets empower people to make choices for themselves.

I would urge my colleagues to pass this important legislation.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Conference agreement on S. 2206, the Coats Human Services Reauthorization Amendments of 1998.

This legislation reauthorizes three programs that provide assistance to the neediest Americans: Head Start, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP), and the Community Services Block Grant (CSBG).

Historically this legislation has received bipartisan support, and today, there is no exception.

The conference agreement represents a compromise that will ensure the integrity and quality of these programs for years to come.

For more than three decades, Head Start has provided comprehensive social, health, and educational services, designed to promote strong, supportive families and provide disadvantaged with solid foundations for a lifetime of learning.

In 1994, we undertook the most ambitious reauthorization of Head Start, in which we initiated a strong quality improvement process. I am proud of this effort and the direction it established for the future of Head Start.

That is why, earlier this year, I introduced H.R. 3880, which simply called for building upon this investment in quality through stronger linkages between Head Start programs and schools, and increasing our investment in early Head Start.

I am pleased to say that the proposals in my legislation are in the conference agreement before us today.

S. 2206 allows for the continued expansion of Head Start, as well as the Early Head Start program. With measures in this legislation to strengthen both programs, and provide Congress with detailed reporting on the successes of these initiatives, I believe we can confidently commit ourselves to increased appropriations in the years to come.

This year we will be able to offer Head Start to the 60 percent of eligible children currently excluded from the program.

In this conference agreement, we also reaffirm our commitment to LIHEAP.

LIHEAP helps low-income Americans meet the costs of heating, cooling, and other home energy needs, particularly in times of extreme weather, natural disasters, and other emergencies.

With the five year reauthorization in this legislation, we are telling the Nation’s elderly, disabled, and low-income families that this assistance will be continued well into the future.

The third program addressed by this legislation is the Community Services Block Grant. CSBG supports the efforts of the community action network in addressing the causes of poverty and providing a wide array of assistance to Americans in need.

Services that have been traditionally provided include education, job training and placement, housing, nutrition, emergency services, and health.

S. 2206 also authorizes new activities, including literacy services and support for after-school programs.

In addition, this legislation provides for additional accountability and monitoring, which can only serve to strengthen CSBG.

It is also worth mentioning that while this legislation contains language that clarifies that CSBG dollars can flow to religious organizations to provide social services, we reaffirm that all such transactions are ultimately governed by the establishment clause of the Constitution.

In closing, I would like to urge my colleagues to join me in support of S. 2206, legislation that strengthens and improves some of our most important services for our neediest Americans.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the conference report on the Senate bill, S. 2206.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the conference report agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

According to the testimony received by the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law, this legislation is supported by both States and indeed our colleague the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. MOLLHAN) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARLETT) appeared before the committee as did Senator SARBANES. The legislation is supported by both States and has the bipartisan support of the delegations of both States. I am aware of no opposition whatsoever to this legislation.

Congress' approval of this legislation is necessary for the compact to become legally effective. If that does not happen, if this legislation does not pass, the Airport Authority will be unable to borrow funds or engage in other core activities. I urge the adoption of this bill.

up with a good product. I regret that we do not have everything that we would have liked in this bill, but it is a significant step forward. Certainly the gentleman from Minnesota and I are intent on continuing our work together so that there are other amendments on changes that we might be able to make in the future, namely at least in one respect and probably in others as well, but the one that I would single out here tonight is the debit card area, where next year I hope we can be together. Indeed, we have a letter here which we have agreed on, a bipartisan basis, to send to the Federal Reserve regarding the customer notification issue, and we hopefully will be able to solve that problem.

I also should mention not only the interest of the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO) the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFAUCHE), the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) and mine but also the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BARRETT), a strongly contributing member of our committee.

I would like to point out that the subcommittee had the responsibility to assure that Federal banking laws and regulations in the supervisory system not only assure the safety and soundness of the banking system but in so doing it is important to recognize that we need to review on a regular basis the legal requirements that have been imposed to assure ourselves the continuing safety and reliability of the system. Clearly as we all know, and we see worldwide, financial markets and the banking industry are evolving at a tremendous pace, and as changes in the industry occur, old approaches may or may not be appropriate and new ones need to be advanced. That is what this bill is about.

Because of the time here and because of the unanimity of opinion, we certainly do want to hear from our chairman (Mr. LEACH), other members of the committee and certainly the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFAUCHE), I will only outline the major portions of the bill. It has a wide ranging number of subjects, but the five most important provisions or most singular provisions are as follows.

Interest on the sterile reserves is the first major issue that we deal with. Without going into the details of it, the bill authorizes the Federal Reserve Board to pay interest on reserve balances, both required and excess reserve balances that are held at Federal Reserve banks. This is a significant change in banking law with very positive effects for both the banks and the Federal Reserve, and it will make it far easier to manage the economy. Without going into all the different aspects of it, I would simply point out that this provision is strongly supported by the Federal Reserve Board as well as by the banking industry.

Our colleagues on the committee, both the gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALFE), who is here this evening, we will be hearing from and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY) have been the prime advocates and leaders on this issue. I am sure we will be interested in hearing the gentleman's perspective on this and other portions of the bill.

The second issue is the interest on business checking. It is a major component of the bill. Financial institutions are currently prohibited by Federal statute from paying interest on business transaction accounts, and actually, as the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH), the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, pointed out that this provision is strong.

So we are changing this outdated prohibition of interest on business checking and have provided a 6-year transition period for the elimination of interest checking prohibition so that all parties can make adjustments to this proposal.

This has been somewhat controversial but we think we have reached an agreement that it should satisfy all parties, and it should be noted that the National Federation of Independent Business, the Treasury Management Association, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce all support repeal of that provision.

We also have in the bill the Bank Examination Report Privilege Act. Now that sounds like a lot but it establishes a privilege for correspondence, materials and information which regulators collect from banks and it is a very essential modification that should be, as far as we can tell and the way we have worked it out with all interested parties, including the American Bar Association, that it is in place now is it in place, and there is not a privilege for all documents which are turned over to the regulators.

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), the committee, was very instrumental in helping us reach this conclusion. The SAIF special reserve fund, and the time is going on so I shall simply mention the SAIF special reserve fund which now is possible to adjust and repeal the special reserve fund because of the conditions, both in the BIF and the SAIF and the sound economy that we have, and suffice it to say that all parties are completely supportive of that provision.

Of course, we like to hear this: The CBO has scored this provision and reported that there is no cost.

I am going to conclude now, without going into the details of the CEBA banks, but suffice it to say that this makes an adjustment and a reform from a 1987 law and one that is included in H.R. 10 but it has the support of everyone on all sides. We think it is long overdue.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time and would wait to hear the other Members.

Mr. LAFAUCHE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. LAFAUCHE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. LAFAUCHE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3464.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH), the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Speaker, the principal beneficiaries of the Depository Institution Regulatory Streamlining Act are the Nation's small businesses and their customers. The bill, so ably put together by the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions, will enable those principal providers of credit, under the leadership of the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO) will repeal over-time prohibitions in current law that banks from paying interest on business checking accounts.

In addition, the bill authorizes financial institutions to establish on an interim basis 24-transaction-a-month money market accounts for businesses. In effect, this means that small businesses, which have fewer options in money management than their larger competitors, will be able to have their money work for them.

The gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY) deserves special attention for her contributions in helping craft this important provision.

Given the liquidity problems increasing in American banking, the above-mentioned Federal Reserve Board being allowed for the first time to pay interest to depository institutions on the money they are required to keep on reserve with the Fed.

This would appear on its face to be only fair. Banks should be treated as equitably as others and allowed to collect interest on their savings. A critical upshot of advancing this commonsense precept is that the Fed will be able to better manage monetary policy because disincentive to holding funds at the Fed will be reduced.

This important provision has been advanced with great effectiveness over the past several Congresses by the gentlewoman from Washington (Mr. METCALFE) and he deserves enormous credit for introducing legislation in this regard and keeping it before the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs for such a long period of time. Before closing, I would like to thank or note again the hard work in bringing this bill to the floor by our subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from...
New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA), the ranking member of the full committee, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFalCE), and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO), and, of course, particularly to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALF), who has worked so tirelessly for the principles that are in this bill.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALF), a member of the committee. (Mr. METCALF asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, let me first thank the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH), the chairman of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA), the Chair of the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit, and the many members of the subcommittee.

I also thank the committee for adopting my bill, the Small Business Banking Act of 1997, as a section of today's bill. This bill represents a culmination of bipartisan effort that many have worked diligently to achieve.

Many people are unaware that small businesses are prohibited, by an outdated 60-year-old law that prevents them from paying interest on their business checking accounts. To address these problems, I have in both the 104th and 105th Congresses introduced legislation to simply allow, not mandate but to allow, the paying of interest on business checking accounts now prohibited under law.

I have heard from hundreds of banks across the Nation. Given the late hour, I will just mention a few. A banker from Iowa wrote, "There seems to be little reason to continue to prohibit interest-bearing checking accounts for businesses or corporations. Further, small community banks such as ourselves must either spend additional dollars to offer a sweep type of product or lose small business customers' accounts."

A banker from Wisconsin wrote, "Small banks are now required to use creative repurchasing agreement accounting in an attempt to compete. Why are our customers being disadvantaged?

In expressing his support of this legislation, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan wrote, "It would eliminate a significant distortion in financial markets that places small businesses at a particular disadvantage. Moreover, it would assist us in our implementation of monetary policy. Permitting depository institutions to pay interest on demand deposits would eliminate a constraint that serves no purpose and imposes unnecessary costs on banks, businesses and depository institutions."

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world's largest business federation, wrote in support of the bill, "By allowing for more open competition, this legislation offers an important opportunity to small business owners to establish a more complete relationship with their financial service providers."

The list goes on and on of those who support this legislation, including the National Federation of Independent Businesses, the Mutual Fund Company, T. Rowe Price, and America's Community Bankers.

In conclusion, this is a chance to do something tangible to help every small business in every congressional district. America's small businesses cannot afford for Congress to further delay lifting this outdated and anticompetitive prohibition. I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LAFalCE. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFalCE) has 11/2 minutes remaining.

Mr. LAFalCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I did not congratulate everyone associated with this bill, most especially the chairman of the full committee, the chairman of the subcommittee, and the distinguished ranking member of the subcommittee the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO) also.

I do want to single out that the chairman of the full committee, too. There were provisions within the subcommittee bill that was reported out of subcommittee that were ardently sought by Members of his own party, very adamantly opposed by ours.

There were provisions in this bill, other provisions that were vehemently opposed by our side. The provisions that Members from our side wanted to add to the bill. I think he took a very judicious, prudential approach in producing in a bipartisan fashion a bill that everyone today could support and is deserving of passage, not only by this House, but by the Senate, and deserving of signature by the President of the United States. I hope that will come about.

I thank the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) and the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA) for their cooperative attitude very much.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I do thank the ranking member for those kinds words. It does show how we can be a standard for the rest of the Congress in our bipartisan efforts here. I again congratulate the chairman of the full committee. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member rises today in support of H.R. 4364, the Financial Institution Regulatory Streamlining Act of 1998. This Member has a long history of initiating and supporting regulatory relief efforts and this bill is another substantial step toward this end.

This Member would like to thank the distinguished gentlelady, [Mrs. ROUKEMA] the Chairperson of the Banking Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Subcommittee from New Jersey, for introducing this bill and for her efforts in bringing H.R. 4364 to the House Floor. This Member would also like to express his appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH], the Chairman of the full Banking Committee, and the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. LAFalCE], the Ranking Minority Member of the full Banking Committee, for their efforts in bringing this measure to the House Floor today.

Before going into specific provisions of H.R. 4364, this Member believes it is imperative to note that efforts directed toward regulatory burden-relief benefits both financial institutions and consumers. It allows financial institutions to conduct the business of lending efficiently as well as reducing the costs of banking to the consumer.

This Member is supportive of H.R. 4364 for the following three reasons. First, H.R. 4364 would allow the Federal Reserve to pay interest on reserve balances maintained by depository institutions at Federal Reserve Banks at a rate no greater than the general level of short-term interest rates.

This Member understands and appreciates the beneficial effect of this provision since it enhances the liquidity of depository institutions which in turn will positively impact the manner in which depository institutions conduct their lending practices.

Second, this measure also amends the H.R. 4364 provision which would allow for the payment of interest on business checking accounts effective October 1, 2004. This provision, which is both pro-business and pro-consumer, eliminates an undue and unnecessary regulation.

Third, this Member would also like to highlight three under-recognized, but important parts of H.R. 4364 which will decrease the everyday regulatory burden on financial institutions.

For instance, this provision would require Federal Banking Agencies to use plain English in all proposed and final rules published after January 1, 1999. This measure will help all financial institutions from confusing and perplexing rules.

Further, H.R. 4364 permits the Comptroller of the Currency to waive the current restriction on having no more than 25 directors serve on the board of national banks. It appears to this Member that there actually is no rationale to support the current regulatory limit of 25.

This measure appropriately enhances the flexibility and freedom of a National Bank.

One additional small, but consequential, provision of regulatory relief is the repeal of the Dividend Notice Requirement. Financial institutions are many times inundated with regulatory paperwork. This simple provision would eliminate the 30-day advance notice to the Office of Thrift Supervision of a dividend payment by a savings association to its savings and loan holding company.

In closing, because of the above reasons and others, this Member would encourage the House to vote in support of H.R. 4364.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, let me first thank the Chairman of the Banking Committee... and also thanks to the Gentlelady from New Jersey, the Chair of the Financial Institutions Subcommittee, and the many members of the Subcommittee. I also thank the committee for adopting my bill—the Small Business Banking Act of 1997, as a major section of today’s legislation. This Act represents a culmination of bi-partisan effort that many have worked diligently to perfect.

Many people are unaware that small businesses are prohibited by an outdated 60-year-old law that prevents them from earning interest on their checking accounts. What’s more ironic is that many banks are actually clamoring to have the choice to serve their business customers by offering interest on these accounts.

To address these problems, I have, in both the 104th and 105th Congresses, introduced legislation to allow, not mandate, but to allow banks and savings institutions to pay interest on business checking accounts, which is now prohibited under law.

By lifting the current prohibition against banks offering interest, the legislation would allow banks to give small businesses this critically needed option. It would also allow banks the opportunity to better address the business concerns of their local communities without having to undergo costly, cumbersome procedures.

But don’t take my word for it. Listen to some comments I have received from community banks around the nation.

A banker from Wisconsin wrote: “Small banks are now required to use ‘creativity to proactively account for changes in the business cycle’ to avoid penalties. This is a clear example of the need for banks to offer competitive products to businesses. We also support this legislation as it will help banks to continue to serve their local communities.”

A banker from Iowa wrote: “There seems little reason to continue to prohibit interest bearing checking accounts for businesses or corporations. Further, small community banks such as ourselves must either spend additional dollars to offer a sweep type of product or lose a small business customers’ accounts.”

One of these provisions will allow banks to compete with the sweep service that is now available to many of our banks and other financial institutions. As the gentleman from New Jersey mentioned, many of our banks and other financial institutions are being driven out of business by these large financial institutions with their vast resources. This legislation represents the tireless efforts of many of my colleagues, especially the gentleman from Washington, Mr. Metcalf.

H.R. 4364 is a well-balanced legislative package of financial services regulatory relief. That is not to say that this bill is completely without controversy. Title I, which contains the provisions to allow interest on commercial checking, a big plus for small-and-medium-sized businesses which are not sweep always able to take advantage of the so-called accounts, also authorizes the Federal Reserve Board to pay interest on these accounts. Obviously, that policy, path has a price and we chose in the bill to pay for the savings by using the Federal surplus. How far past this House floor that these provisions will be is not clear to me at this time.

This bill provides for the elimination of the SAIF special reserves which in pulling off funds and retaining them from the Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation could set up a differential premium and get us back in the BIF-SAIF ‘situation’ that engulfed us in the last Congress. I support this provision that is supported by the FDIC.

H.R. 4364 also provides some housekeeping provisions for the banking regulators, bringing outdated statutes up to date, clarifying the meaning of changes made in previous laws, and providing technical corrections to many laws.
have been added. Many Democratic Members, including myself, would have liked to include positive proactive legislation for consumers. For example, I would have like to increase the limit for the applicability for non-mortgage Truth In Lending Act coverage from $25,000 to $50,000 so that consumers who buy a vehicle that costs more than $25,000 would be protected by TILA. These kinds of provisions, however, were held off in the spirit of pragmatism, trying to move a bill quickly and not to bog it down in controversy.

Let me balance the good, regulatory burden relief concept can generally be a good premise, but not if it breaches consumer protection OR safety and soundness boundaries. It cannot be an excuse for the lowest common denominator with regards to consumers, communities and safety and soundness. I supported working on this legislation so that we can maintain a non-partisan, non-controversial stance on some needed changes. There are unnecessarily changes, however, that were suggested.

For example, there are provisions in the regulatory relief bill that has been pending in the other body and I do find very egregious. They are absent in this bill and I appreciate the willingness to work together on this bill without those sort of provisions. That is what has made the $50,000 suspension bill today. Because of our less controversial approach, we may well have facilitated the positive consideration of this legislation in the very limited window we have left.

Mr. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4364, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4363, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Leach) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaFalce) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Leach).

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. Leach asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, S. 2561, the Consumer Reporting Employment Clarification Act of 1998 amends the Fair Crediting Reporting Act FCRA to revise certain changes that were made to the act last Congress. Some of these changes had inadvertent consequences on the trucking industry’s hiring practices.

Specifically, the bill amends the FCRA to remove burdensome restrictions so that trucking companies will be able to conduct background investigations of applicants in a timely and efficient manner to help ensure highway safety.

S. 2561 has bipartisan support and the agreement of the Federal Trade Commission and consumer advocacy groups. This legislation also amends the FCRA so employers have access to critical information in order to make informed hiring decisions. Current law exempts convictions of crime from consumer reports after 7 years for individuals applying for jobs with an annual salary of less than $75,000. S. 2561 would remove this exemption. Such information is particularly crucial in the hiring process for employers in the area of child or elderly care, school bus driving, and household services.

This bill makes small changes to the FCRA that will have a significant impact on the efficiency of many employers’ hiring practices, resulting in a safer environment for all.

I would like to commend Senator Nickles, Senator Bryan, and Senator Mack for their work on this legislation and the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Lucas) and the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Watts) for their leadership in the House and the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaFalce) for his cooperation in ensuring that this important legislation is able to be brought before us at the last moments of this Congress.

By making the change on September 30, 1996, Congress enacted amendments to the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) that unintentionally hindered the ability of trucking companies to hire safe, professional truck drivers. The new regulations, which went into effect last fall, required trucking companies to obtain written consent from truck driver applicants before the company may obtain driving records and accidents history information required by the Federal Highway Administration.

The new FCRA regulations have forced the trucking industry to add multiple, unnecessary steps to the hiring process, especially since these background checks are already required under federal law. Moreover, because of the burdensome paperwork requirements under these regulations, and because the industry is currently facing a critical shortage of drivers, many carriers will have no choice but to put drivers behind the wheel without the necessary background checks. This obviously raises serious safety concerns. For all these reasons, the trucking industry strongly supports an amendment to FCRA that would permit trucking companies to accept applicants consent over the telephone.

Section 604 of the FCRA establishes, among other items, the conditions under which a consumer reporting agency may furnish a consumer report for employment purposes. Current law requires prospective employers to certify to the consumer reporting agency that certain notices, including a summary of rights in the event of adverse action, have been given to the consumer and that information from the report will be used for lawful purposes.

In addition, the consumer reporting agency may only furnish a report to a prospective employer if the agency provides with the report the summary of consumer rights. The amendment establishes that the intent of the statute that cannot be met without the consumer reporting agency providing the summary every time a report is obtained. Instead, the requirement is satisfied if the consumer reporting agency has previously provided the notice. The amendment codifies interpretive letter of the Federal Trade Commission in this area.

Section 4 amendments are conforming amendments for provisions added to Section 604(b)(4) in the Intelligence Authorization Act of 1998. These provisions created an exception for providing certain disclosures to consumers if a written determination was obtained from the relevant agency that the disclosure would threaten national security, endanger an individual’s safety or hamper an official investigation. The proposed amendments provide for full compliance with the Intelligence Authorization provisions and protect consumer reporting agencies from unwarranted liability.

The Intelligence Authorization Act amendments failed to make conforming exceptions for requirements imposed upon consumer reporting agencies. First, under Section 609, a consumer reporting agency must, upon request, disclose to the consumer the end-user of the report. The amendment would provide an exception to that requirement if the relevant agency makes the appropriate written determination.

Second, under Section 613, consumer reporting agencies may be required to provide consumers with the name and address of persons seeking consumer reports consisting of public record information. The amendment establishes an exception for disclosing this information in the context of the national security area.

Under current law, if an individual is seeking a job with an annual salary below $75,000, no records of criminal activity, including convictions, may be reported if they antedate the report by more than seven years. This information may be of critical value to prospective employers, especially those in the areas of child or elderly care, school bus driving and household services. Under the bill, convictions of offenses from the seven-year obsolescence period would be exempted.

All in all this is a common sense bill designed to protect the public. I encourage support of all members.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LA Falce. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. LaFalce asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAFalce. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 2561, associate myself fully with the remarks of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Lucas).

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 2561, a bill to provide limited clarifications and technical corrections to the Fair Credit Reporting Act. I wish to thank the Chairman of the Banking Committee for bringing this legislation to the floor under suspension of the rules.

While I believe we need to be extremely cautious in accepting any proposal to revise the Fair Credit Reporting Act, especially those offered in the rush before adjournment, let me... say that I have closely reviewed this bill and have no objections. The exceptions that the bill creates from current FCRA requirements are justifiable and are very narrowly targeted. In addition, the bill provides a number of technical improvements to FCRA that were drafted with the assistance and support of the Federal Trade Commission.

The primary issue addressed by the bill relates to problems encountered by a limited number of firms that provide employment screening for national trucking companies. Under FCRA any report on an individual produced by a hired third party falls under the category of a “consumer report”. It requires, where such reports are prepared for employment purposes, that certain disclosures be provided in writing to the individual who is the subject of the report; that the individual provide written authorization for release of the report and that the employer provide a written copy of the report to the applicant where an adverse decision is made based on information in the report.

Since the companies providing employment screening for trucking firms seek applications in all parts of the country and communicate primarily by telephone, fax or mail, current FCRA requirements that disclosures and authorizations be made in person and in writing are inappropriate and burdensome. The legislation would add several narrowly crafted exceptions to FCRA that would permit—where employment applications are taken by phone, mail or electronically—greater flexibility in providing required disclosures and authorizations either by “oral, written or electronic means”, and in permitting delivery of a credit report to an applicant within three days after an adverse employment decision.

I believe these exceptions are reasonable and have been crafted to apply very narrowly only to truck driving positions that are defined and regulated under Federal law. The bill also makes a number of additional technical changes, most of which are intended to correct drafting errors made in the 1996 FCRA Amendments.

Mr. Speaker, the clarifications made by S. 2561 are supported by the Federal Trade Commission, they have been signed-off on by U.S. PIRG, and they have raised no objections among the major national consumer organizations.

I urge that the House suspend the rules and adopt S. 2561.

Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the “Consumer Reporting Employment Clarification Act of 1998.”

I would like to thank Banking Committee Chairman LEACH and Ranking Member LAFALCE, House Leadership, Senators CONNIE MACK and RICHARD BRYAN, and Senate Assistant Majority Leader DON NICKLES—Oklahoma’s Senior Senator—for their hard work on and their support of this legislation that will streamline the trucking industry’s hiring of competent, professional, and safe truck drivers.

Unfortunately, current Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) regulations have forced the trucking industry to add multiple, unnecessary steps to its hiring procedures. Worse, because of burdensome paperwork requirements under these regulations, and because the industry is currently facing a critical shortage of drivers, many carriers have been forced to put drivers behind the wheel before their safety records can be verified. This is not what Congress intended when it enacted changes to the FCRA.

This legislation will expedite the process by which employment background information is exchanged between truck company employers and truck drivers. Instead of having to obtain written consent from a potential employee to procure a consumer report, truck company employers will not be able to obtain a potential employee’s consent by mail, over the telephone, or by means of computer or fax machine.

I encourage my colleagues to support this bill. It has received the endorsement of the Federal Trade Commission—which enforces the FCRA—major credit institutions, consumer advocacy groups, and is strongly supported by the American Truckers Association and by trucking companies and truckers in Oklahoma.

Let’s put highway safety before bureaucratic red tape and correct this safety problem immediately, and vote for this legislation.

Again, I would like to thank those involved in the process of bringing this legislation to the floor.

Mr. LAFALCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) that the House suspend the rules and pass S. 2561.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on S. 2561, the Senate bill just passed.

DIGITAL MILLENNIUM COPYRIGHT ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the bill (H.R. 2281) amend title 17, United States Code, to implement the World Intellectual Property Organization Copyright Treaty and Performance and Phonograms Treaty, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2281), have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by all of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the Record of October 8, 1998.)

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the Conference Report on the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (H.R. 2281). In my view, we need this measure to stop an epidemic of illegal copying of protected works—such as movies, books, musical recordings, and software—and to limit, in a balanced and thoughtful way, the infringement liability of online service providers. The copyright industry is one of our most thriving businesses. But we still lose more than $15 billion each year due to foreign copyright piracy, according to some estimates.

And foreign piracy is just out of control. For example, one of my staffers investigating video piracy on a trip to China walked into a Hong Kong arcade and bought three bootlegged computer games—including “Toy Story” and “NBA ’97”—for just $10. These games, combined, normally sell for about $100. Indeed, the manager was so brazen about it, he even agreed to give out a receipt.

Illegal copying has been a longstanding concern to me. I introduced one of the precursors to this bill, the Motion Picture Anti-Piracy Act (in the 101st Congress), which in principle has been incorporated into this measure. And I was one of the cosponsors of the original proposed WIPO implementing legislation, the preliminary version of this proposal.

In my opinion, this bill achieves a fair balance by taking steps to effectively deter piracy, while still allowing fair use of protected materials. It is the product of intensive negotiations between all of the interested parties—including the copyright industry, telephone companies, libraries, universities and device manufacturers. And virtually every major concern raised during that process was addressed.

Unfortunately, however, the Conference Report dropped what I believe were crucial protections for databases. It is my understanding, though, that the Committee will be “fast tracking” consideration of database protection next Congress. I look forward to working with Chairman HATCH to move forward on this matter early next year.

In sum, Mr. President, I am confident that this bill will reduce piracy and strengthen one of our biggest export industries. It deserves our support and the President’s signature.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 2281, a bill to implement the World Intellectual Property Organization copyright treaties. I am pleased that the final product of the many months of negotiations has produced a bill of appropriate scope and balance, and reflects many of the priorities I established through the introduction of my own bill to implement the WIPO copyright treaties, to begin updating the Copyright Act for the digital era, and to address the potential problem of on-line servicer liability.

First, with respect to “fair use,” the conferees adopted an alternative to section 1201(a)(1) that would authorize the Librarian of Congress to selectively waive the prohibition against the use of circumvention to prevent a diminution in the availability to individual users (including institutions) of a particular category of copyrighted materials. As originally proposed by the Administration and adopted by the Senate, this section would have established a flat prohibition on the circumvention of technological protection measures to gain access to works for any purpose, and thus raised the specter of moving our Nation towards a “pay-per-use” society. Under the compromise embodied in the conference report, the Librarian of Congress would have authority to address the concerns of libraries, educational institutions, and other information consumers potentially threatened with a denial of access to categories of works in circumstances that otherwise would be lawful today. I trust that the Librarian of Congress will implement this provision in a way that will ensure information consumers may exercise their centuries-old fair use privilege to continue to gain access to copyrighted works.

Second, the conferees made an important contribution by clarifying the “no mandate” provision of the bill. Because the conference report is silent, I thought that I should explain this provision in some detail. As my colleagues may recall, I had been very concerned that S. 2037 could be interpreted as a mandate on product manufacturers to design products so as to affirmatively respond to or accommodate technological protection measures that copyright owners might use to deny access to or the copying of their works. To address this potential problem, I authored an amendment providing that nothing in the amendment’s design of, or design and selection of parts and components for, a consumer electronics, telecommunications, or computing product provide for a response to any particular technological protection measure. The amendment reflected my belief that product manufacturers should remain free to design and produce the best, most advanced consumer electronics, telecommunications, and computing products without the threat of incurring liability for their design decisions. Creative engineers—not risk-averse lawyers—should be principally responsible for product design. As important, the amendment reflected the working assumption of all of my colleagues that this bill is aimed fundamentally at limiting so-called “black boxes” and not at legitimate products that have substantial noninfringing uses.

As my colleagues know, there had been some concern expressed that the “so long as” clause of section 1201(b) made the provision appear to be circular in its logic. In other words, there was concern that the entire provision could be read to provide in essence that manufacturers were not under an additional design mandate to respond to technological measures, as long as they “otherwise” designed their devices to respond to existing technological measures. I never shared that perspective. To eliminate any uncertainty, the House Commerce Committee simply deleted the “so long as” clause. As I explained on the floor in September, that change merely confirmed my original conception of the amendment. Now that the conferees have adopted a provision that is not under any additional design mandate to respond to technological measures, as long as they “otherwise” designed their devices to respond to existing analog protection measures, the “so long as” clause has a meaning that all should agree is logical: Manufacturers of consumer electronics, telecommunications, and computer products are not under a design mandate generally, but they are otherwise subject to a single, very limited, and carefully defined mandate to design certain analog videocassette recorders to respond to certain existing analog protection measures. Quite importantly from my perspective, this provision is limited so as not to impair the reasonable and accustomed home taping practices of consumers recognized in the Supreme Court’s Betamax decision.

It thus should be about as clear as can be to a judge or jury that, unless otherwise specified, nothing in this legislation should be interpreted to limit manufacturers of legitimate products with substantial noninfringing uses, such as VCRs and personal computers—making fundamental design decisions or revisions, whether in selecting certain components over others or in choosing particular combinations of parts.

Third, I am pleased to see that the conferees have addressed the device “playability” problem. As I pointed out on the floor prior to final passage of S. 2037, “playability” problems may arise at two levels. Technological measures may cause noticeable and recurring adverse effects on the normal operation of products, and thus adjustments to products may be necessary at the factory levels to ensure consumers get what they expect. In addition, adjustments to specific products may be necessary after sale to a consumer to maintain their normal, authorized functioning. Subsequently, I was pleased to see that the Commerce Committee’s report explicitly reaffirmed my interpretation.

I also was pleased that the conferees shared my perspective on encouraging and not interfering with efforts to work together through a consultative approach before new technological measures are introduced in the market. As the conferees pointed out, one of the benefits of such consultations is to allow them and of proposed technologies to determine whether they create playability problems, and to have an opportunity to take steps to eliminate or substantially mitigate such adverse effects before new technologies are introduced. As the conferees recognized, however, persons may choose to implement a new technological measure (or copyright management information system) without vetting it through an inter-industry consultative process, or without regard to the input of the affected parties. Whether introduced unilaterally or developed with the input of experts in the field, a new protection technology coming to market might materially degrade or otherwise cause recurring adverse effects or authorized performance or display of works. Given the multiplicity of ways in which devices might be interconnected, some playability problems may not be foreseeable. I was thus pleased that the conference report unambiguously provides that manufacturers and persons servicing popular consumer electronics, telecommunications, or computing products who make product adjustments solely to mitigate a playability problem—whether or not taken in combination with other lawful product modifications—shall not be deemed to have violated either section 1201(a) or section 1201(b). Having heard directly from a major trade association representing professional servicers, I am pleased we could include such strong language so that they can go about their business without fear of facing crippling liability.

Fourth, the conferees adopted specific provisions clarifying that the bill is not intended to prohibit legitimate encryption research or security systems testing. As my colleagues know, Senators Burns, Leahy, and I have lead the effort in the Senate to ensure that U.S. business can develop and export world-class encryption products, by explicitly fashioning an affirmative encryption research defense, the conferees made an important contribution to ensure that U.S. industry remains at the forefront in developing secure encryption methods. In addition, by including a security system testing amendment, the conferees have confirmed that professional consultants and other well-qualified individuals and corporate citizens can survey and test IT security systems for vulnerabilities.

Finally, the conferees built on my efforts to ensure that this legislation would not harm the efforts of consumers to protect their personal privacy by including two important amendments proposed by the House Commerce Committee. The first amendment would create incentives for website operators to disclose whenever they use technological measures that have the capability to gather personal data, and to give consumers a means of disabling them. The second amendment strengthened section 1202 of this legislation by making explicit that the term “copyright management information” must include “any personally identifying information about a user of a work or a copy, phonorecord, performance, or display of a work.” In my view, these amendments will help preserve the critical balance that we must maintain between the interests of copyright owners and the privacy interests of information users.

We should all be gratified that so much has been done to appropriately calibrate the WIPO copyright treaties implementing legislation. Each of us, working alone, would undoubtedly have produced a different bill. But we have a good bill, perhaps one more balanced and limited in scope than might have been thought possible at times just a few months ago. I therefore urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the conference report.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to express my strong support for the Conference Report to the Digital Millennium Copyright Act. As one of the conferees, I believe this bill represents a fair compromise between the House and Senate versions of this most significant legislation.

Intellectual property is an increasingly important part of the American economy. This bill recognizes the significance of our copyright laws as America and the world have become increasingly computerized. The Internet is rapidly changing our lives, and our copyright laws must keep pace.

This legislation implements the WIPO treaties to help protect the property rights of the creative community in our global environment. It also contributes liability to Internet service providers regarding their liability for copyright infringement and permits fair use of works. Together, these provisions do a great deal to accommodate the interests of the owners of copyrighted works with those who use or facilitate the use of those works in the digital age.

A final title of the bill is the Vessel Hull Design Protection Act. Although it was the Senate way of the legislation, it was accepted at conference. I share Senator HATCH’s concerns about this controversial title. It contains not only industrial design protection, which itself has created controversy in the past because of its impact on patents and others, but it also protects functionality of vessel hulls in addition to aesthetic aspects. It is my understanding that functionality is protected from copying through patent, and this title is a significant departure from that principle, although for a specific narrow area.

Also, I wish to note that although data base protection is not included in this bill, I think it is important that we make every effort to address this significant issue next year.

In closing, I wish to thank the Chairman of the conference, Senator HATCH, and all of the other members of the conference for their cooperation in resolving this matter. I am very pleased with the result.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the conference report be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the conference report be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The conference report was agreed to. Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, in the waning days of a Congress, so many important measures need attention that the significance of individual bills is often not appreciated. This is even more true for a bill that has earned as its subject matter, such as the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, the conference report which passed the Senate today by unanimous consent. But the DMCA is one of the most important bills passed this session, as the distinguished majority leader stated yesterday.

“Digital Millennium” may seem grandiose, but in fact it accurately describes the purpose of the bill—to set a course for the future that has copyrighted works around the globe in a matter of hours, and Internet end users can receive copies of movies, music, software, video games and literary and graphic works that are as good as the originals. Indeed, the implementation of the WIPO treaties and the DMCA will protect the property rights of Americans in their work as they move in the global, digital marketplace, and, by doing so, continue to encourage the creation of new works to inspire and delight us and to improve the quality of our lives.

In addition to securing copyright in the global, digital environment, the DMCA also clarifies the liability of online and Internet service providers—the “OSPs” and ISPs—for copyright infringement liability. The OSPs and ISPs needed more certainty in this area in order to attract the substantial investments necessary to continue the expansion and upgrading of the Internet.

The final component of the DMCA is the Vessel Hull Design Protection Act (VHDPA). This legislation was not part of the Senate-passed version of the DMCA; rather, it was accepted by the Senate conferees in deference to the House of Representatives. Although I support industrial design protection as a legal regime outside of patent law, I appreciate how controversial it is, and I think that the Senate should act circumspectly. Furthermore, I am concerned that this bill is not like the traditional industrial design protection in that the VHDPA protects the functionality of vessel hulls, not only its aesthetic aspects.

But because the VHDPA is limited only to boat hulls, I think that I could acquiesce in including it in the conference report as a limited experimental in design protection. In order to make it truly experimental, I suggested, and the conference adopted, modifications that “sunset” the bill two years after enactment and that require two studies of its effect. Therefore, in the future, we will be able to re-evaluate the Act, and we will have the benefit of two studies—both of them conducted jointly by the Register of Copyrights and the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks—to help us make the right decision.

In the nearer future—early in the next session—I intend to focus my attention on database protection legislation. The House bill on this issue, which was attached by the House to the WIPO implementation legislation, was a good start toward tackling the problem of database piracy. It was quite controversial, however, so I asked the parties to sit down with me and dispassionately. They too wanted to get this done, and it was the spirit of cooperation on both sides that produced this admirable result.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge the hard work done by the Senate and House staffs. There were so many who worked on this bill that it would take a column of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to list them. But I would like to mention just a few. Manus Cooney, the staff director of the Senate Judiciary Committee, was the staff pilot for the DMCA. He was ably assisted by Edward Damich, Chief Intellectual Property Counsel of the Committee, and Staff Assistant Troy Dow. Senator Thurmond was ably assisted in the conference committee by his Judiciary Committee Counsel, Garry Malphus.

Bruce Cohen, Minority Chief Counsel and Staff Director of the Judiciary Committee; Barry Berdahl, Minority General Counsel, and Marla Grossman, Minority Counsel, provided invaluable assistance on all levels. We had superb cooperation from the minority, and the DMCA is truly a bipartisan bill.

Turning to the House side, I want to express my appreciation for the contributions of Mitch Glazier, Chief Counsel of the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property, Debra Laman, Counsel of the Subcommittee, and Andrew Levin, Minority Counsel of the Committee.
Mr. President, this bill, the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, is one of the most important bills in this whole Congress. It has taken a tremendous amount of effort from all of us to be able to put this together. It is going to make a difference for so many people, the protection of copyrighted works, in digital communication and otherwise—throughout the world, that I feel very, very happy to be able to say that this is being enacted into law at this particular point.

I would like to state my agreement with certain important points that Senator LEAHY made in his remarks about Section 1201(k), “Certain Analog Devices and Certain Technological Measures.” The Senator emphasized that that section establishes requirements only for analog videocassette recorders, analog videocassette camcorders and professional analog videocassette equipment, understanding that the intent of the conference is that these provisions apply only to analog video recording devices.

In addition, because innovation and technological development thrive in unregulated environments, this provision should not be misconstrued as providing any impetus or precedent for regulating or otherwise dictating to the computer software industry technological standards. I agree fully with the assessment of the conference that technology develops best and most rapidly in response to marketplace forces. For these reasons, this section applies to analog technologies only, and it is entirely without prejudice to digital technologies.

Let me just say that I am disappointed that we were not able to include database protection in this bill this year. There are so many people who would like to have that also my the floor and in the business world and elsewhere, but we were unable to get it done because of objections and because of some dissent. But I would like to put everybody on notice that, shortly after we get back next year, I will file a database protection bill. I believe my colleague from Vermont will join me in this. That, hopefully, will be a bill that everybody can support, because it is absolutely critical that we get this done.

It will be one of the highest orders of priority that we will have on the Senate Judiciary Committee next year. It was one of the things that I feel disappointed we were unable to get done on this particular bill. It just couldn’t be done at this time. I know there are people who are disappointed, but we will get it done next year—we will do everything we can to get it done, and I hope we can call upon industry and everyone involved in this issue throughout the country to help us in this matter. I hope our colleagues will, because it is very, very important.

Mr. LEAHY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, America’s founders recognized and valued the creativity of this nation’s citizens to such an extent that intellectual property rights are rooted in the Constitution. Article I, Section 8, Clause 8 of the Constitution states that “The Congress shall have power . . . [t]o promote the useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries.

The Continental Congress proclaimed, ‘Nothing is more properly a man’s own than the fruit of his study.’

Protecting intellectual property rights is just as important today as it was when America was a fledgling nation.

It is for this reason I am pleased that the Senate has today passed the Conference Report on the Digital Millennium Copyright Act (DMCA), H.R. 2281.

Title I of the DMCA will implement the two World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) Copyright treaties. These treaties will fortify intellectual property rights around the world and will help unleash the full potential of America’s most creative industries, including the computer software, publishing, music recording and other copyright industries that are subject to online piracy. By insuring better protection of the creative works available online, the DMCA will also encourage the continued growth of the Internet and the global information infrastructure. It will encourage the ingenuity of the American people, and it will send a powerful message to intellectual property pirates that we will not tolerate theft.

I should note that there are provisions in Title I that address certain technologies used to control copying of motion pictures in analog form on video cassette recorders which were not part of either the original Senate or House DMCA bills. These provisions establish certain requirements only for analog videocassette recorders, analog videocassette camcorders and professional analog videocassette recorders.

It is my understanding that these provisions do not establish any obligations with respect to digital technologies, including computers or software.

It is also my understanding that the intent of the conference is that these provisions neither establish, nor should be interpreted as establishing, a prece dent for setting copyright specific standards or specific technologies to be used as technological protection measures, particularly with respect to computers and software. Generally, Congress should not establish technology specific rules; technology develops best and most rapidly in response to marketplace forces.

Title II of the DMCA will limit the infringement liability of online service providers. This title is intended to preserve incentives for online service providers and copyright owners to cooperate to detect and address copyright infringements that occur in the digital networked environment.

Title III will provide a minor, yet important, clarification in section 117 of the Copyright Act to ensure that the lawful owner or lessee of a computer machine may authorize an independent service provider, a person unaffiliated and independent of the lawful owner or lessee of the computer machine, to activate the machine for the sole purpose of servicing its hardware components.

Title IV will begin to update our nation’s copyright laws to address library, archives, and educational uses of copyrighted works in a digital environment. It includes provisions relating to the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks and the Register of Copyrights, a new office of the Copyright Office. It also addresses the assumption of contractual obligations related to the transfer of rights in motion pictures. Finally, this title creates a fair and efficient licensing mechanism to address the complex issues facing copyright owners and users of copyrighted materials as a result of the rapid growth of digital audio services.

Title V, the “Vessel Hull Design Protection Act,” creates a new form of sui generis intellectual property protection for vessel hull designs. By adoption of this title, however, the conference wisely took no position on the advisability or propriety of adopting broader design protection for other useful articles. Indeed, when broad industrial design legislation was considered by the Congress in the late 1980s and early 1990s, a number of legitimate concerns were raised about the effects such legislation would have, particularly on the cost of auto repairs. Establishing narrow protection for vessel hulls in the conference report should not be interpreted as signaling support, or setting a precedent, for broader design protection for other useful articles. The Senate today is passing a balanced and important package. Certain issues that the House included in the version it passed on August 4, 1998, were eliminated to allow consideration of the rest of the package in a timely manner.

One of the issues dropped was that of database protection. Title V of the House passed DMCA bill created a new federal prohibition against the misappropriation of databases that are the product of substantial investment, with both civil remedies and criminal penalties. The enhanced database protection is that legal rulings and technological developments have eroded protections against database theft. Companies may be able to copy significant portions of established databases and sell them, avoiding the substantial cost of creating and verifying the databases themselves. I appreciate that the threat to U.S. databases has been magnified because database protection laws recently implemented in Europe will not be available to U.S. publishers unless comparable legislation is enacted in the U.S.
I have therefore been and continue to be supportive of legislation to provide database producers with adequate protection from database piracy. I am also sensitive, however, to the concerns about the House-passed database bill, H.R. 2652, which was later incorporated in Title V of the House DMCA, raised difficult and novel constitutional questions.

The Department of Commerce has also advised me that while the Administration supports legal protection against commercial misappropriation of collections of information, the Administration has a number of concerns with H.R. 2652, including that the Constitution imposes significant constraints upon Congress' power to enact legislation.

Just this week, the Department of Commerce told me in a letter that:

Given the critical importance of implementing the WIPO treaties, and the short time remaining in the Session, we urge the Conferences to focus issues germane to these treaties, rather than unrelated matters.

Although there was not enough time before the end of this Congress to give this issue the consideration it deserves, it is my hope that the Senate Judiciary Committee will promptly commence hearings on the issue and move expeditiously to enact further legislation on the matter at the beginning of the 106th Congress. The work the Committee did this year on the issue should be viewed as a beginning, and we are committed to making more progress as quickly as possible.

The legislation that the Senate passed today is the culmination of several years of both domestically and internationally, to ensure that the appropriate copyright protections are in place around the world to foster the international economy. The legislation that the Senate passed today is the culmination of several years of work to get us to this point. We both share great concerns about the database part. We understood that we would not be able to pass a bill that passed had that stayed in the bill.

Mr. President, so Senators will know, the distinguished senior Senator from Utah and I spent enormous amounts of time on this piece of legislation working to get us to this point. We both share great concerns about the database part. We understood that we would not be able to pass a bill that passed had that stayed in the bill.

The distinguished Senator from Utah and I will work between the time we go out and the time we come back in January to move expeditiously to enact legislation. There will be a strong effort, I know, on my side of the aisle, as there will be on his. We hope the Senate will be able to vote on that and the House, too, early next year. I say this because I do not want anybody to think that this has now disappeared because the rest of the legislation has gone through.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. DeWINE. Mr. President, I rise today to support only the conference report to implement the WIPO treaties. I also strongly support the copyright term extension legislation that we recently passed by voice vote.

While I would like to congratulate the Conferences and their staff for working out a consensus on so many controversial provisions, I feel it is necessary to express my disappointment that we are unable to pass some form of database protection this year. It is unfortunate that a consensus could not be reached on an issue that is so vital to so many people in our country. Agricultural databases, for example, are relied upon by our farmers and by others in our farming supply industry. While computers and the Internet make access to information available at our fingertips, we need to provide adequate protection for those who compile that information in such a user friendly format. Such easy access is essential to health care workers, for example, who need fast access to accurate information about which drugs have adverse reactions to other drugs or which antibiotics are most effective in counteracting certain poisons.

I see my friend from Utah, Senator HATCH, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is on the floor, and I would like to ask if he would agree that Congress should pass database legislation as early as possible next year to ensure that those who invest their time, money and effort in updating databases are protected from having their work pirated both domestically and internationally? Would the Senator from Utah agree that without such protections, database creators may decide that the risk of loss from piracy outweighs all the advantages from creating or updating databases?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, as my colleague well knows, I have facilitated a number of meetings with interested individuals and organizations due to the need to change to commerce in the digital age and well into the next century. I am proud that the Senate has passed this legislation today.
think everyone understands that. The Senator from Ohio has my assurance that I will continue to work with him on this issue.

Mr. DeWINE. I again commend the Senator from Utah and the other WIPO conferees and their staff, especially Senator LEAHY, for their tireless efforts to reach consensus on so many complex issues. I would simply like to ask my friend from Utah to work with those of us on the Judiciary Committee to introduce and seek passage of legislation early next year that protects our databases.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me assure my friend from Ohio that I have spoken to our colleagues on the House side, Congressmen Hyde and Cole, and we have agreed to work together to introduce and seek passage of database protection legislation early next year. I will continue to work with the Senator from Ohio and our Senate and House colleagues and address this issue early next year.

Mr. DeWINE. I thank the Senator from Utah for his comments.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARNER. Without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. HATCH. As I understand, the conference report has been agreed to. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. LEAHY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. I thank my friend, the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Will my colleague yield for 1 minute? I promise I would yield to the distinguished Senator from Arizona.

Mr. WARNER. I will be happy to yield to the distinguished Senator from Arizona, provided I do not lose my right of recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

MEDICARE BENEFICIARY FREEDOM TO CONTRACT ACT

Mr. KYL. I thank the Senator from Utah.

Mr. President, I rise with several of my fellow Senators in support of S. 1194, the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom to Contract Act. S. 1194 currently has 48 Senate and 192 House cosponsors.

We believe that Medicare beneficiaries should have the same right to obtain health care from the physician or provider of their choice as do Members of Congress and virtually all other Americans.

It is dangerous to have the government control health care decisions in a free society.

What is the problem addressed by this legislation?

The problem is simply one of health care choice for seniors—a problem which has been brought to our attention by countless constituents all over America.

As I have mentioned on the Senate floor several times, this problem was first brought to my attention in a letter I received from Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Howard of Prescott.

Mary Ann Howard is a diabetic. The medicine she was taking was not working, and she wanted to change doctors to one who specialized in treating diabetics.

Her doctor told her that this was not possible. Amazed, Mary Ann asked why, and her original doctor replied that, due to the regulatory and administrative burdens of the Medicare system, the specialist cannot afford to take any more Medicare patients.

When Mary Ann—who had recently turned 65 and enrolled in Medicare—asked the specialist if she could pay for the treatment out of pocket, the specialist said no. "If I accept you as a patient, I would be accused of Medicare fraud."

Yes, it's true: Because of a flawed interpretation of the Medicare law, the government has barred Medicare beneficiaries from using their own money to receive treatment from the doctor of their choice. It's Medicare or no care.

To end this unfairness, the Senate passed the Kyl amendment to the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 that would allow health care choice for seniors.

But the Administration threatened to veto the entire budget over this provision, and forced the Senate-House conference committee to include a poison pill: In order to enter into a private contract, a physician or other provider would have to sign out of Medicare for two years.

The two-year exclusion presents your options will likely be reduced.

To remove this "two-year" limitation on patient-choice, House Ways and Means Chairman BILL ARCHER and I introduced the Medicare Beneficiaries Freedom to Contract Act.

The bill removes the two-year exclusion and ensure that any Medicare beneficiary can enter into an agreement with the provider of his or her choice for any health care service. In his floor debate, President Clinton said that all Americans "should have the right to choose the doctor they want for the care they need."

We could not agree more. But as of January 1 of this year, seniors no longer have this right because, as I mentioned, the President insisted last year's Balanced Budget Act be changed to effectively preclude seniors from going outside of Medicare—even if they are willing to pay for the care themselves.

S. 1194 could also be referred to as the Senior Citizens "Medicare Point of Service Option."

Just as with the Point of Service Option in a private plan, this "Medicare Point of Service Option" would allow seniors to go outside of the Medicare network to obtain care from the doctors of their choice.

The only real difference is that the senior-patient would pay 100 percent of the cost of exercising this right, whereas the private plan would subsidize this choice to some degree.

Sandra Butler, president of United Seniors Association, represents the organization's 640,000 members who strongly support this bill.

United Seniors Association members believe that the government's view of private contracting "violates a basic—no, the basic—principle of American life freedom."

In addition, a broad array of organizations have expressed support for the case to overturn current law.

This group includes the Christian Coalition, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Heritage Foundation, the American Enterprise Institute, National Right to Life Committee, the American Medical Association, the American Conservative Union, Citizens Against Government Waste, and the National Center for Policy Analysis.

Opponents of the bill make three basic arguments: the bill will increase fraud, will put seniors at the mercy of doctors and other providers, and will hurt Medicare.

1. With respect to fraud, the bill contains extensive anti-fraud measures, including the requirement of a written contract with clear terms, such as the fact that the service could be paid for by Medicare.

2. Others believe that unethical doctors would take advantage of vulnerable seniors.

Common experience with medical professionals who save lives without reimbursement in emergency situations and seniors who read and question virtually every line in their Medicare bill, clearly refute this claim.

Further, a senior can for any reason terminate the contract prospectively and return to Medicare for the covered benefit.

3. Some believe private contracting will destroy Medicare.

However, private contracting will result in fewer claims being paid out of the near-bankrupt Medicare trust fund. The Heritage Foundation and seniors who read and question virtually every line in their Medicare bill, clearly refute this claim.

In his floor debate, President Clinton said that all Americans "should have the right to choose the doctor they want for the care they need."

Mr. President, I rise with several of my fellow Senators in support of S. 1194, the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom to Contract Act. S. 1194 currently has 48 Senate and 192 House cosponsors.
Mr. President, I take this opportunity to express my appreciation for my colleagues' willingness to work with me to ensure seniors the critical right of choice. I am joined by many of my colleagues in the Senate to ask the Majority Leader, Senator LOTT, and Senate Finance Committee Chairman ROTH, to work with us and the numerous outside organizations to address this issue of Medicare freedom of health-care choice as soon as is reasonable in the 106th Congress.

As we know, President Clinton and some of our colleagues on both sides of the aisle want the government to continue to control all medical decisions of seniors.

We must not rest until seniors are granted this basic civil right to choose the doctors and benefits that best address their particular health needs.

Mr. President, I speak today in defense of an essential freedom—the right to make health care decisions outside of the governmental bureaucracy. Yet the threat of our population—our seniors—who have lost that freedom. At the administration's insistence a provision was included in the budget reconciliation bill of 1997 that prohibits physicians from participating in the Medicare program for two years if they accept private payment for services normally covered under the Medicare program from a patient who is eligible for Medicare—essentially trapping our seniors in a government controlled health care program.

It is clear that the provisions included in the Balanced Budget Act are hurting seniors. One of my constituents stories was featured in the Reader's Digest. Ray Perry wanted to pay for routine screening tests for he and his wife because years before, prior to enrolling in Medicare, the Perry's had conducted a similar series of tests and were able to detect his wife's lymphatic leukemia very early when it was still treatable. Medicare decided not to pay for the tests because the Perrys didn't have certain symptoms that would indicate these tests were required. But, when the Perrys offered to pay out of their own pocket, the doctor didn't order the tests for fear of being penalized by Medicare. While both the Perrys and their doctor wanted medical services that were clearly reasonable, and the Perrys were willing to pay for these services, the restrictions currently found in Medicare prevented them from getting the kind of health care they needed.

It is unconscionable that in a nation founded on the principles of freedom that we would limit the freedom of the Perrys and millions of American seniors just like them.

Mr. CRAG. Mr. President, I rise today to make a few remarks concerning the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom for S. 1194, the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom to Contract Act.

It is ironic that the Balanced Budget Act—which purported to expand seniors' freedom of choice—took away most of the rights they already had to spend their own dollars to purchase health care of their choosing. Many senior citizens and disabled individuals in my state are outraged at this loss, and justifiably so. I must concur with the comments made recently by Art Spitzer, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of the National Right to Life Committee, CATO Institute, Heritage Foundation, National Association to Protect Families, American Civil Liberties Union, and numerous other organizations.

...the government should be able to say 'We are going to provide a certain amount of health care, and that is how much we will provide and we are not going to provide more than that.' But it seems quite outrageous to us...that the government could say 'and you may not get any more health care than we are willing to provide you, even if you and your doctor agree that it would be good for you, even if you are able to pay for it with your own pocket money.'

I ask that a letter I recently sent to the ranking member of the Senate Finance Committee be printed in the Record.

The letter follows:

Hon. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Ranking Member, Senate Finance Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR PAT: As you know, the American Civil Liberties Union of the National Capital Area has joined as an amici curiae participant in the United Seniors Association vs. Donna Shalala lawsuit to enjoin enforcement of Section 4507 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. I support the views expressed in this lawsuit that Congress made a mistake in the Balanced Budget Act by disallowing seniors from making the broadest array of physician and medical point-of-service choices in instances where private services outside of the Medicare system badly enough to spend their own money. It stepped far over the bounds of "protection" into erosion of freedom.

I strongly supported requirements that physicians file Medicare claims on behalf of beneficiaries. We've gotten the program so complicated that hardly anyone understands it, but doctors are better able to fight complex coding disputes and coverage rules than their patients. Also, not getting paid adds to the insurance companies' bottom line but doesn't have certain symptoms that would indicate these tests were required.

While most of us are able to find satisfactory care for which we are glad to have Medicare pay, many of my constituents have given rebirth to their desire to go outside the Medicare system from time to time. Take the example of a Federal employee who retired to the Charleston area after living sixty years in Washington. She wanted to return to have eye surgery at the Wilmer Eye Institute at Johns Hopkins but was prohibited from doing so because the surgery was not a covered Medicare service. She wrote me that she is not wealthy and has chosen to live frugally so that she has something left over after living expenses to spend as she sees fit. "What right does the Government have to tell me I can't spend my own money to buy the health care that I think I need," she asks. I must ask that the Federal Government tell us senior citizens what we can do with our own money is simply unacceptable.

Mr. President, I speak today in defense of an essential freedom—the right to make health care decisions outside of the governmental bureaucracy. Yet the threat of our population—our seniors—who have lost that freedom. At the administration's insistence a provision was included in the budget reconciliation bill of 1997 that prohibits physicians from participating in the Medicare program for two years if they accept private payment for services normally covered under the Medicare program from a patient who is eligible for Medicare—essentially trapping our seniors in a government controlled health care program.

It is unconscionable that in a nation founded on the principles of freedom that we would limit the freedom of the Perrys and millions of American seniors just like them.

Sincerely,

ERNEST F. HOLLINGS.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, we clearly cannot move forward with Medicare+Choice until the confusion over Section 4507 is resolved, and I join my colleagues in urging your earliest consideration of this matter in the 106th Congress.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I speak today in defense of an essential freedom—the right to make health care decisions outside of the governmental bureaucracy. But, when the Perrys offered to pay out of their own pocket, the doctor didn't order the tests for fear of being penalized by Medicare. While both the Perrys and their doctor wanted medical services that were clearly reasonable, and the Perrys were willing to pay for these services, the restrictions currently found in Medicare prevented them from getting the kind of health care they needed.

It is unconscionable that in a nation founded on the principles of freedom that we would limit the freedom of the Perrys and millions of American seniors just like them.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise today to make a few remarks concerning the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom... to Contract Act. Most Americans believe that should control their health care to the greatest extent possible. Others continue to favor comprehensive federal control of seniors, health care which results in rationing. All patients have the right to choose their own doctors and have complete freedom to supplement their insurance, including Medicare, as they see fit. The right of seniors to pay out of their own pocket for the health care of their choice is an essential element of our national health policy.

Under this Act, Medicare would pay the standard fee for the standard procedures by the standard practitioner with private contracting reserved for more specialized procedures. While it would be a right that—because of economics—would be exercised only in special circumstances, private contracting is a basic right every senior should have. And importantly, it would provide a safeguard from government manipulation—unlike the situation under the Clinton Administration, the right is not a one-tiered Medicare program. It is an all-possibility.

Under this act, seniors would be even less likely to privately contract than they are to go to nonparticipating physicians, who in private contracting agree to pay the full cost of the service themselves (just as they historically have.). In fact, if the desire to pay out-of-pocket were widespread, seniors wouldn’t join Part B (which is voluntary) at all. But seniors overwhelmingly choose Part B insurance—just as most other Americans do in choosing doctor-visit coverage in their health plans.

President Clinton said in the State of the Union that all Americans must have the right to doctor choice, and access to specialists without referral. Why not seniors, too?

Mr. President, I believe that Americans are right when they tell me in letters and on the public airwaves that they do not want to be trapped by a one-tiered Medicare program. I think I am correct in stating that senior citizens over age 64 are right in being angry at all members of Congress and the Clinton Administration for denying them their right to make any medical choice for themselves, to see any physician they want for any service they want if they want to spend their own money. It is for this reason, that I ask all my colleagues to work with us to restore their right to privately contract for any medical service with physicians of their choice. I look forward to working with the distinguished Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator Risch, and other members of the Senate toward that goal.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank the Chairman for his work and support of this very important legislation. I applaud all Senators to choose their dedicated work on this issue. I was pleased to join him as an original co-sponsor of this bill, because I believe that this is a fundamental issue of freedom for all senior citizens. Every senior citizen should have the fundamental right to pay out of their own pocket for the health care they want from the physician they choose.

President Clinton has repeatedly stated the Clinton Administration’s position that Medicare beneficiaries have the right to choose the doctor they want for the care they need. But apparently, the administration does not believe this should apply to Medigap beneficiaries. In fact, during the debate on the Balanced Budget Act (BBA) of 1997, the administration repeatedly stated their opposition to giving his unfettered freedom to senior citizens.

Finally, the administration agreed to drop their objections to this provision if the BBA would grant seniors only limited freedom with certain restrictions. In the spirit of compromise, the BBA included a limited provision to allow physicians to enter into private contracts with Medicare beneficiaries. Unfortunately, the provision in the BBA did not go far enough.

Under BBA, in order to enter into these contracts, a physician or other provider would have to opt out of Medicare. This is an act in an attempt, approved by HCFA, to ensure that no Medicare patients were treated. But the two-year exclusion presents the doctor with a difficult choice: either treat the patient on a private contract for two years; or refuse to treat the patient in favor of current Medicare patients. This is a difficult decision that neither a physician or beneficiary should be required to make.

Now, one can argue that the reforms in the BBA were a step forward for Medicare private contracting. If is true that HCFA had interpreted Medicare law, prior to the passage of BBA, as effectively prohibiting private contracts. But HCFA had gone as far as threatening physicians and other providers with fines and exclusion from Medicare and even criminal prosecution. So if HCFA’s interpretation was correct, perhaps the provisions included in BBA were a step forward.

On the other hand, many respected Medicare experts have suggested that HCFA did, in fact, misinterpret the Medicare statute. In other words, Medicare law did not prohibit private contracts. It prohibited Medicare patients from entering into those private arrangements. If this interpretation is correct, the provisions included in BBA could be viewed as a step backward.

In either case, the right thing to do is to allow seniors unfettered, unrestricted access to the doctor of their choice. The Kyl legislation does just that. It provides that seniors, in their right to Medicare beneficiaries with no limitation, allowing Medicare beneficiaries to be treated for Medicare-covered services by the physicians of their choice on a “case-by-case” and a “patient-by-patient” basis. No doctor who chooses to enter into a private contracting arrangement with a senior would be faced with fines or expulsion from the Medicare program.

The arguments of private contracting make two primary arguments against this legislation: unethical doctors will take advantage of seniors to increase their income; and it will result in excessive fraud and abuse in the Medicare program.

The argument that perplexes me the most is the concern that unethical doctors would take advantage of vulnerable seniors and use private contracts to increase their annual income. If I were a Medicare beneficiary I would be offended by the notion that I am unable to make my own financial and medical decision. Senior citizens are some of the most frugal and well informed health care shoppers in the country. Additionally, if I were a physician I would be the assumption that most doctors are unethical in their professional activities. Any physician that were to engage in unethical or coercive practices faces tremendous risks, including the loss of their medical license for ethical violations.

I assume that those who believe physicians will use the Kyl legislation to line their pockets would also be concerned with new federal coverage mandates. Every federal coverage mandate we place on health insurance providers increases the cost of health insurance and increases the revenues of physicians. But I haven’t heard many members who are concerned that federal mandates which require insurance companies to pay for a variety of treatments may increase the profits of physicians. Do we assume that physicians and other practitioners will be ethical when an insurance company is paying the bill and unethical when a vulnerable senior is paying the bill? The fact is that the opponents of this legislation simply want more control over the health care of senior citizens.

The bill also contains strong consumer protection standards to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries are not exploited. Private contracts must be in writing, signed by the beneficiary, and identify the services covered by the contract. It prohibits health insurance providers from requiring a physician that were to engage in unethical or coercive practices faces tremendous risks, including the loss of their medical license for ethical violations.

Private contracts may only be entered into on a prospective basis and may not apply to services rendered prior to the signing of the contract. Such contracts must also notify the beneficiary that Medicare is not responsible for the payment of any services rendered by a non-Medicare physician or practitioners to whom Medicare payment would be made.

October 8, 1998 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD – SENATE S11895

Other opponents of this legislation argue that private contracting will result in double billing and outright fraud. Perhaps the opponents haven’t looked closely at the extensive anti-fraud measures included in this legislation. The law prohibits payments by requiring physicians and practitioners entering into private contracts to submit to the Secretary such information as may be necessary to avoid any payment under Part A or Part B for services covered under the contract. Fraudulent billing would be detected and punished through existing fraud and abuse laws and standard auditing procedures used by Medicare and private plans. If Medicare did pay for a service, the patient would receive a statement and could easily notify Medicare of the payment error.

Mr. President, this legislation adequately addresses the concerns that have been raised by the opponents. The integrity of the Medicare system is at issue, and the issue is really quite simple. This is a fundamental issue of individual freedom. Do you support giving senior citizens the freedom to pay out of their own pocket for the health care they want from the physician they choose? Or do you support limiting that freedom and restricting the health care choices available to senior citizens? I hope my colleagues will join Senator Kyl in supporting this legislation and supporting individual freedom for every senior citizen.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today in support of Senator Kyl’s initiative to provide more choice for our nation’s senior citizens. I encourage the majority leader and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Roth to continue to work to address the issue of private contracting so that S. 1194 can be enacted into law.

I believe that our seniors should have the right to make their own decisions when it comes to matters of their health. Somewhere along the way, it has been mistakenly assumed that once a person reaches 65, they no longer are able to make their own decisions and do not desire the freedom of choice that others enjoy. Since when did the seniors of our nation become so helpless? Shouldn’t seniors be afforded the same rights that the rest of us enjoy—to determine what is in their best interest?

Current law does not permit seniors to purchase their own health care services if those services are covered under Medicare and provided by a physician who accepts Medicare payments. This is ludicrous. Not only does this law take away rights of senior citizens, but these types of regulations within the Medicare system also discourage the participation of doctors. If a physician decides to accept a private contracting fee, the doctor will give up all Medicare payments for two years. In effect, this law has the potential of limiting physicians who participate in the Medicare program. This could consequently decrease the quality of physicians in the Medicare system because doctors refuse to be part of such an oppressive system.

This issue is one of fundamental rights. No other government program restricts the participants as does Medicare—including Medicaid and health programs for government employees. Medicare beneficiaries should be given the right to pay out-of-pocket and to choose their own health care provider. Or do you support the notion of this nation is individual freedom. Congress should not support measures that clearly restrict freedom. I urge the enactment of S. 1194, the Medicare Beneficiaries Freedom to Contract Act.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I am pleased to be a co-sponsor of the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom to Contract Act. I want to commend the efforts of Senator Kyl, who introduced this important legislation to expand the ability of beneficiaries to work so hard to secure its passage.

The central questions with respect to the issue of Medicare private contracting are clear. It is the proper role of the Federal government to restrict Medicare beneficiaries the ability to use their own money to get the health care services they believe they need? Is it good public health policy to force doctors who treat Medicare beneficiaries on a private pay basis out of Medicare for two years?

I think these questions must be answered with a resounding “no.” If a Medicare patient—or any patient, for that matter—wants to spend his or her own money for health care services, it should be their decision and not the government’s decision. I also believe it is wrong to put a doctor in the position of having to decide between treating a Medicare patient who wants to pay for the health care service, or stop treating all their other Medicare patients for two years.

The administration makes the argument that its opposition to this legislation is based upon its desire to “protect senior citizens.” I certainly don’t question the sincerity of their concern. However, judging from the response my office has received, seniors neither want nor need the Federal government to “protect” them from themselves. Florida is home to the second largest Medicare beneficiary population in the nation. My office has been deluged with thousands of letters, telephone calls, faxes, postcards and telegrams from Medicare beneficiaries who are, quite frankly, outraged that the Administration is opposed to this legislation.

The communications I have received from seniors in Florida all have common themes—How can something like this happen? Is it the American way? Is it happening in Great Britain, with its socialized health care delivery system, has the ability to privately pay for medical services, but Medicare patients in the United States are denied the ability to make this decision for themselves unless their physician is willing to opt out of Medicare.

To me, this issue exemplifies one of the most fundamental differences I have with this Administration when it comes to either health care policy or the proper role of the Federal government in general. This absurd policy is simply another example of big government run amok, and it’s time to put a stop to it. The Senate should pass the Medicare Beneficiary Freedom to Contract Act now.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the issue of private contracting in the Medicare program is very important to my constituents in Iowa. I have received hundreds of letters asking Congress to repeal the provisions in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 requiring physicians who enter into a private contract with beneficiaries to opt out of the Medicare program for two years. Seniors in my state believe it is not the role of the federal government to “protect” them from their physician. They want to have as many choices and options as possible. I want to make sure their freedom is protected. That is why I want to thank the majority leader, Senator Lott, and the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator Roth, for recognizing the importance of this issue to our nation’s seniors and for agreeing to address this problem next Congress. I want to offer my support to help with these efforts as a co-sponsor of Senator Kyl’s legislation and as the Chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging and senior member of the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I rise to thank my colleague from Delaware, Mr. Roth, for his commitment to look further into the issue of Medicare private contracting and to thank the honorable Senator from Arizona, Mr. Kyl, for his leadership as the sponsor of S. 1194, Medicare Beneficiaries Freedom to Contract Act. As one of 48 co-sponsors of Mr. Kyl’s bill, I believe that we need to take steps to maximize choice, access and care for Medicare... patients, not restrict them in the name of patient protection. I have been contacted by hundreds of seniors from my state who understandably expressed outrage that Congress had passed a law that will inevitably restrict access to health care services. Persons with Medicare coverage may obtain health services without notifying the federal government. However, our nation's senior citizens must first seek out Washington's approval—when they prefer to pay the care out of their own pocket.

Congress intended to correct this situation by permitting private contracts. Unfortunately, the President insisted he would veto the entire Balanced Budget Act unless this fundamental right of all Americans was eliminated or severely limited for senior citizens. Medicare beneficiaries should have the same freedom to obtain the health care they choose from the physician or provider of their choice—as do Members of Congress and virtually all other Americans. It's ridiculous that this right was taken away and unfortunate that it's taken so long to correct.

Mr. President, I thank the majority leader, Senator Lott, and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Roth for recognizing the importance of this issue and for pledging to look into it further next year in the 106th Congress.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished friend, Senator KYL, for introducing S. 1194—the Medicare Beneficiaries Freedom to Contract Act and for his leadership on this issue.

I firmly believe it is my obligation, as an elected member of the United States Senate, to defend the liberty of the constituents that put me in office. Freedom manifests itself in various ways, but one fundamental concept of importance in America is the protection of one's discretion over one's financial resources. I often raise this issue in the context of taxes, but in addition to allowing one to reap what one sows, it is equally important that people have the ability to spend their earnings as they see fit. This is a very simple, yet important, freedom that people enjoy. We are not talking about letting people buy illegal products, but rather about the right of people to spend their money on health care. Only in Washington is such a notion be considered controversial. But to those who have little regard for individual freedom, and who have a vested interest in seeing the scope and power of government grow, this is a controversial matter.

H.L. Mencken once said that "the most dangerous man, to any government, is the man who is able to think things out for himself." That is the threat, Mr. President. Those that favor the Medicare monopoly, often even to the detriment of Medicare beneficiaries, resist the freedom of people to make these private decisions, because it threatens the government's control of health care delivery.

Unfortunately the era of big government is over, it is alive and well and is embodied in Section 4507 of last year's Balanced Budget Act. Therefore, I request that Majority Leader Lott and Finance Committee Chairman Roth help us attach S. 1194 to the 106th Congress.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader, Senator Lott, and Finance Committee chairman, Senator Roth, for recognizing the problem of many seniors who are not afforded choice in determining where they get their health care and on agreeing to address this problem in the 106th Congress.

I also thank Senators HOLLINGS, ROTH, GORTON, CRAIG, NICKLES, ALARD, MACK, GRASSLEY, BENNETT, INHOFE and SHELBY for participating with statements for the Record. We do intend to address this problem in the next session of the Congress because we could not get it done this session. I appreciate my colleagues' commitment to doing that and, again, thank the Senator from Virginia, The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

KOSOVO

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I wish to continue a series of remarks that I have placed before the Senate in the past several weeks regarding the increasing problems relating to Kosovo. Together, with other Senators, I have tried to bring to the Chamber's attention to learn about this situation. Just weeks ago, I made a trip myself into the region, accompanied by two outstanding ambassadors, Miles and Hill, and had an opportunity to get firsthand impressions. My trip included Bosnia, Belgrade, Macedonia, and Kosovo.

Those impressions, together with many years of really hard work studying the problems unfolding in Kosovo and the necessity for the world to respond to stop the tragic killing that is taking place every day.

I commend the majority leader—in- deed, I am sure there are others who have worked diligently on this—but he has, in this busiest of all weeks of the year in the Senate, found time to convene in his office and otherwise meet with people—and I have joined him on several occasions—about this situation. Indeed, a few days ago a group of us sent a letter to the President of the United States expressing our concerns. That letter was a letter that followed the briefing by the Secretaries of State and Defense, with the National Security Adviser and the Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Mr. President, I will address particularly that letter to the President and his response. The response was quite comprehensive.

Further today, I, and I am sure other Members of the Senate, have received drafts of proposed resolutions put forth by a Member on that side of the aisle and a Member on this side of the aisle. Given that they are drafts, and I don't know what the ultimate intention of the drafters will be, I will not identify the persons who distributed the drafts as a senatorial courtesy, but I would like to address my concerns relevant to both drafts.

The purpose today is, again, to give my personal views regarding the plan of operation that has been laid before us primarily by this President, by the NATO commanders and, indeed, by one or more of our allies, notably Great Britain.

I commend their Minister for National Security and Defense. He has spoken most forthrightly. Indeed, I think his views closely match my own, and that is, any planning to go forward to correct the problems that exist in Kosovo today has to be, in my judgment, and in his, twofold—ground as well as air. One, a very decisive series of airstrikes, which I support. I believe, and others believe, that a necessary second component of any military action, to back up the airstrikes, has to be the quick placement of a stabilization ground force into Kosovo, into the region, primarily the capital, Pristina. If that is not done, Mr. President, the goals of the airstrikes cannot have been fulfilled in my opinion.

We must judge the number of military units involved in that airstrike would be American, because of our specialized aircraft and air-to-ground precision ordinance. Our Allies in NATO will provide other important air assets. I think in order to consolidate the gains that we can anticipate from those air strikes, a stabilization force has to be put in place on the ground.

The main urgency of the moment—is some approximately quarter of a million Kosovars, Albanians who have been driven from their homes and villages into the hills who are confronting now another enemy. Once it was the Milosevic police, the Milosevic regular army. It is weather that is forcing these tragic people to endure conditions which will be severely injurious to their health and safety.

Food, medicine, and shelter must be brought in beginning immediately, to alleviate that crisis. And secondly, we want to have a cessation to the conflicts that have gone on between these peoples for these many months which have resulted in some 2,000-plus deaths, largely again suffered by the Albanians but also the Serbs and the Muslims.

But, indeed, there are incidents where the KLA, the insurgent forces within the Albanian population, have got to answer, themselves, for their responsibility for certain tragic killings of Serbs. And there are not clean hands on either side.

But again, to summarize the objectives: Get immediate relief for these refugees; and, secondly, stabilize the fighting among the minority Serbs and the majority Albanians.

If that is not done, if that stabilization force is not quickly put in, this situation could even escalate in terms of the killing, because you will have removed that military force, i.e., the Serbian paramilitary police, and indeed the regular army, and the remnants that will be left of the Serbian people, such police that are left, will then be faced with the preponderance of a 90 percent ethnic Albanian population coming down out of the hills. And I doubt that they will come down and shake hands with their former Serbian neighbors—finding their homes ravaged, destroyed, their livestock killed, their fields burned. It will not be, Mr. President, a very peaceful settling once the air seals off the flow of heavy armaments and military down from Belgrade.

Mr. President, herein is the problem as I see it. Our administration, regrettably, the administration of NATO, has, in their letter, momentarily—regrettably, has evaded, in my judgment, a full debate on the issue of the need for a stabilization force. They have focused the public attention in our country solely on the need for an air strike, leaving out what I think should be a responsible dialogue, beginning with the President and the Secretaries of State and Defense, on the need for a stabilization force.

Yesterday, I met with a senior officer from NATO, to discuss these elements of our allies, and I clearly understood the necessity for that stabilization force. Indeed, I happen to know firsthand NATO has studied the need for it. NATO has contingency plans to address that. The plans range all the way from taking the indigenous KDOM, which is a very interesting creation in this conflict—it is a combination of military people from the United States, Canada, and certain other European nations, together with diplomatic officials from those nations who go out into this region, unarmored, for the purpose of reporting back on what is taking place in terms of the ravaging of the countryside, theSerbs who have been driven into the hills. And it has been a very valuable source of information for the KLA, the insurgents within the Albanian population, to take on the potential parameters of conflicts that could break out following air strikes.

And so after dialogue with our guests yesterday, and dialogue with many others, it is my judgment that only NATO can provide such stabilization force as will be necessary in the immediate aftermath of a series of air strikes—only NATO. I believe it unwise for the Administration to embark on a stabilization force as being a part of a stabilization force composed of several NATO members.

When we had the Secretary of Defense before the Armed Services Committee the other day, regrettably, he did not respond with the precision I would have liked regarding U.S. participation. Indeed, I think the record reflects statements to the effect that there will be no U.S. participation should a ground element for stabilization be called for.

Mr. President, I do not think that we should embark—I want to repeat that—I do not think we should embark on these air strikes without a resolution of how that stabilization force is to be constituted and whether or not the United States will be a part of that force, because we will have started a situation of hitting a sovereign country. We have done that twice already here in the past month or two—hitting another sovereign nation with preeminently U.S. air assets—without any clear understanding of what is going to take place immediately afterwards on the ground in Kosovo.

We talk about a peace settlement. All of us would like to have a peace settlement, but I cannot believe that if you inflict severe air damage of the magnitude it will take to bring Milosevic, the principal wrongdoer in this whole situation—the principal wrongdoer for what has been occurring back in Bosnia—you cannot suddenly expect him to come to the negotiating table in a matter of days. And it is within those days that the instability could grow in the Kosovo region.

This instability could spread over into Albania, which is already torn by civil strife. Refugees could begin to flow into Montenegro. Montenegro is now burdened, heavily burdened, with refugees from Albania. More refugees into Macedonia. This whole region could be destabilized unless a stabilization force is put into Kosovo in a timely way.

And, further, in my judgment, the work that we have done, together with our allies over many years, to secure Bosnia, to the extent we achieved any results there—certainly relative peace compared to the war of several years ago—that could well be undermined, if the infusion in Kosovo are not contained, that will spread into Kosovo and begin to undo what we have achieved, what little we have achieved thus far, toward the implementation of the Dayton accords.

So my purpose in addressing Kosovo, again, is twofold. These resolutions in draft form call for only U.S. participation in airstrikes. I mean, it is very clearly laid out in both these resolutions. One of them states that: Whereas the Secretary of Defense, William Cohen, opposes the deployment of ground forces in Kosovo, as reflected in his testimony before Congress on October 6, and clearly says that while we support the use of air, it will be air, and air alone.

That I think is an unwise position for the U.S. to take.

Let me give you an example. Should it be the consensus of NATO that you have to bring a NATO ground force into Kosovo for stabilization, which is my judgment, and you plant the NATO flag, and the U.S. flag is not on the staff, we are not represented there, the question arises why? I mean, we bring into question, who is the commander in chief? Is it NATO? Is it the American officer? An American officer is to command of a stabilization force put into a hostile region, and there is not a single additional American there in that force! We should not take that position now.

I fought for many years placing the ground troops in Bosnia. Year after year I voted against it. It was only on the last vote where I joined Senator Dole that I relented. I had no desire to see American troops in Bosnia. I have a very bad feeling in there. I questioned, in some way, the vital security interests. But that's history; we are on the ground in Bosnia and our troops, with other SFOR elements are working to secure a lasting peace. NATO’s credibility is on the line now in Kosovo, for only a credible threat to use force can move settlement talks in Belgrade.

If NATO leaders, upon failure of diplomacy to launch a NATO air operation, the credibility of NATO is on the line. I think you should not start the air until we have fully answered the question: How do you secure the benefits flowing from the air operation and stabilize that region until the negotiators can come to the table and work out a cease fire.

The other resolution being circulated today, likewise, calls solely for air, very explicitly. It has another proviso in here which troubles me a great deal; that is, you can only use air for 6 months unless there is further consideration by the Congress.

Mr. President, we have known for a long time that setting deadlines with regard to troops just does not work. Therefore, the placing of a deadline in connection with the use of air and limiting it to 6 months, to me, is not a wise way to proceed. Therefore, I have indicated I would not participate; indeed, against any of these resolutions should they come back in this form. Both resolutions limit the U.S. participation to air. The President is authorized to use the U.S. Armed Forces for the purpose only of conducting air operations and missile strikes against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Again, you cannot plan an air operation without a concomitant means to secure the ground.

Let me pose the hypothetical: Suppose you strike with air and you are successful in destroying certain targets, then is Milosevic likely to sit there and do nothing? He could counterattack. His only means of counterattack is his artillery, given his air capability is largely destroyed, his naval capability is hopefully bottled up in the caves or elsewhere, his only avenue to retaliate would be on the ground; perhaps, once again, send out his column of tanks and his column of heavy artillery. Bad weather and darkness of night travel could inhibit air operations.

Air could interdict, I am sure, much of it, but it might require a ground force at some point to interdict such actions that may be taken in retaliation by Milosevic.

I urge the Senate to be very, very cautious as we proceed. I hope to continue our debate with other Senators here as it relates to this situation.

I turn to the response of the President. As I said, it contained specific responses. This is the President speaking.

On page 4 he states:

Second, on the question of ground force, although many U.S. Senators reviewed a broad range of options, some of which would involve ground forces and hostile circumstances, I can assure you (this is written to all of the United States Senators) that I support these options and there is currently no sentiment in NATO for such a mission.

The mission under consideration involves the use of graduated air power, not military forces on the ground.

Now, to me, that is just faulty planning.

I do support the use of force to stop the killing to enable the NGOs and others to have an environment in which they can bring supplies to help these people. I do not give my support unless a convincing argument is put forth about a stabilizing force and the need to have a force in order to secure the Kosovo region.

We have to be very careful that the credibility of NATO is protected. It is on the line. We cannot allow the NATO force to be considered as acting in concert with the KLA. That is a tough call. Try and find a LA leader. They are difficult to find. I am not talking about Rugova in Pristina. He has been accessible to all. These militants, the heads of the KLA troops, in this area of Kosovo are not well defined, not well known, and undermining. It is a problem to contain them once we begin to use our air. We cannot seem to be coming in here with a military hand to support Kosovo gaining independence from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a goal.

Again, only a ground force containing this situation in Kosovo, until such time as a settlement can be worked out at the table, is the only way, in my judgment, that this matter can be resolved.

I hope other Senators will come forward and give their views because this could break in military action any day now. I don’t predict in any way when the strike may begin. Hopefully, diplomatic efforts, which are still ongoing, can prevent the necessity of the use of force. It is only that credible determination to use force, as perceived in Belgrade, that will bring about successful diplomatic negotiations.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to allow this into the Record: The President and his response to the majority leader, which I referred to earlier, printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Dear Mr. President: We are writing to express our concerns about your Administration’s policy toward Kosovo. Since the Serbs invaded Kosovo more than seven months ago, senior Administration officials have repeatedly stated that Serbian actions would not be tolerated. For example, in March 1998, Secretary of State Albright stated, “We are not going to stand by and watch the Serbian authorities do in Kosovo what they can no longer get away with.”

On March 30, 1998, Acting Special Representative of the President and Congress stated, “There is no question that Serbian actions in Kosovo are illegal.”

To the extent we understand the proposed strikes, they appear to envision gradual and incremental measures. General Ralston dismissed a “limited option” that may or may not achieve its stated objectives. A more “robust” option is under consideration but apparently has not yet been finalized. We believe any air attack should be sustained and overwhelming. Air attacks should be designed to decimate Milosevic’s forces in Kosovo and in Serbia—in order to permanently eliminate the capability to perpetuate the conflict in Kosovo.

Finally and most importantly, we are concerned that U.S. policy is not based on a clear, convincing and compelling argument that protects our interests or recognizes the danger of becoming involved in another open-ended military commitment in the Balkans. Your policy seems to recognize that Milosevic is the problem but also proposes to make him part of the solution. By so doing, your policy helps us to see that your Administration has yet to formulate a policy for replacing Milosevic with a democratic government.

First, your officials stated that the credible threat of force was necessary to induce Milosevic to negotiate seriously. Yet in June, Secretary of State Albright stated, "The United States wants a diplomatic solution. And I don't want to threaten scales when what I'm trying to do is get a diplomatic solution." This is a disturbing and confusing inconsistency. A central question involves subsequent actions if any use of military force is not immediately successful in accomplishing its stated objective. If Milosevic does not accept U.S. or NATO demands either before or after the employment of military force, what is our next step?

Your policy apparently envisions a status of limited autonomy for Kosovo, a status that both parties have shed blood to reject. Independence has been the choice of the majority of inhabitants in Kosovo. Serb assaults and the approach of winter have coalesced an international consensus behind the United Nations Secretary General's report that both parties have shed blood to reject. Second, we are faced with a major humanitarian and human rights crisis that could soon become a catastrophe. Yesterday, the United Nations Secretary General's report on the massive and ongoing killing, destruction and displacement perpetrated by security forces in Kosovo. These forces have destroyed at least one hundred homes in over 200 villages. They have committed atrocities, including the mutilation and execution of senior citizens, women and children. We must act now to prevent more deaths with the onset of winter, to prevent further atrocities and to demonstrate that the international community will not tolerate such acts.

Third, it is important to sustain NATO's credibility as the principal peace and security instrument in Europe. Just as NATO's effective response to the crisis in Bosnia has stabilized influence throughout Europe, so too will NATO's efficacy in responding to Kosovo help achieve our longer-term goals for Europe. Moreover, as the situation in Kosovo has deteriorated, the credibility of U.S. warnings to Milosevic first issued by President Bush and reaffirmed by me, also are challenged.

We prefer to advance each of these interests through diplomacy that leads to a comprehensive agreement. But as your letter recognizes, the negotiating efforts have sought to accomplish. But largely as a result of Milosevic's assault, those negotiating efforts are impos- sible to pursue under these circumstances. I believe the credible threat, and therefore the willingness to use force, has become necessary. It now appears that our NATO allies share this view.

I will now turn to the four specific issues raised in your letter.

I am particularly concerned about military readiness, as I discussed at length with the Chiefs and CINCs recently. As noted in my letter to Secretary Cohen, we have made moves to address concerns, building on efforts initiated by my Administration over the past several months to support military operations. For example, in FY 1998 we worked with Congress to secure a $1 billion reprogramming that reallocated funds to readiness programs and a $1.85 billion emergency funding package to cover the unanticipated costs of the Bosnia and South- west Asia contingencies. For FY 1999, I have proposed a $1.9 billion emergency funding package to cover the rebalancing of our Bosnia deployment. To preclude serious readiness problems in FY 1999, I again urge Congress to approve this measure.

In addition to these steps, I committed my Administration to work with Congress to provide adequate resources for readiness and other defense programs in FY 1999 and beyond. For the short term, I proposed that members of my Administration work with you prior to the Congressional adjournment to craft a $1 billion supplemental package that will augment FY 1999 funding for key readiness programs. For the longer term, the Office of Management and Budget and the Office of Secretary Cohen were instructed to work with Secretary Cohen and the joint Chiefs to develop a multi-year plan that provides the necessary resources to preserve military readiness, support our troops, and modernize aging weapon systems. This plan will be incorporated in my FY 2000 defense budget request to Congress. As I wrote you on May 13, the use of our armed forces will have the resources they need to do their job.

First, Kosovo presents a far more difficult military challenge than the experience of potential military operations in Kosovo would be a function of the scope and intensity of such operations. My Administration will work with the Congress to ensure that our military forces have the funding necessary to defend the nation and to ensure that this does not come at the expense of our defense program.
Second, on the question of ground forces, although NATO planners have reviewed a broad range of options, some of which would involve ground forces in hostile circumstances, I am confident that the United States would not support these options and that currently there is no sentiment in NATO for such a mission. The mission under consideration is one of gradual use of air power, not military forces on the ground.

In the event that Milosevic agrees to comply with the cease-fire and if there is a frequent political settlement, some form of international presence may be needed. Whether this can be done entirely by international security arrangements and to what extent are matters we will need to consider in the context of any such agreement and with full consultations with the Congress.

Third, regarding the nature of the air campaign in Kosovo, NATO has developed a clear military plan. It entails the graduated but effective use of air power harnessed to two achievable objectives. The primary objective is by threat of force, or its use, to persuade Milosevic to comply with the demands of the Security Council Resolution 1199. If initial use of air power does not result in compliance, NATO’s secondary objective is to strike Belgrade’s military capabilities in order to damage his ability to conduct repression operations in Kosovo, the same objective you identify in your letter.

Let me assure you that NATO planning provides for air power to be used effectively. There will be no “pin pricks” strikes. Even the initial use of air power will send a very clear signal of our ability to disrupt operations by the FRY military and special police, and follow-on phases will progressively expand in their scale and scope. These operations are planned to involve virtually all NATO allies.

Finally, regarding your desire for a clear policy linked to our national interests and a defined end-state, NATO air power will be used as part of a broader political strategy to advance our overall objectives of promoting a political settlement and averting a humanitarian catastrophe. We are not replacing diplomacy with military force; rather we are combining the two to achieve our objectives.

Secretary Albright recently dispatched Ambassador Holbrooke to the region to make crystal clear to Milosevic what steps he needs under UNSC 1199 to take to avoid NATO air strikes. Even if Milosevic gives in but to execute his strikes, we will use them in a way designed to help bring an end to Serbian operations in Kosovo, voluntarily or involuntarily.

Our desired end-state in Kosovo is clear, comprising three parts. Our immediate objective is to achieve full compliance with UN Security Council resolution 1199, thus reducing the risk of wider conflict, averting a humanitarian catastrophe and lessening the chance of further atrocities. Our mid-term objective is to secure a political arrangement that grants broad autonomy to the Kosovars, while keeping Kosovo within the FRY. In particular, the agreement should ensure that the Kosovars have their own bodies of government and police. Our longer-term objective is a FRY that is democratic and on the path to European integration. This requires a responsible government that is accountable to its own citizens, of all ethnic backgrounds, and that carries out its obligations abroad, including in Bosnia. In this regard, we support opposing both a Serb-dominated and free and independent media in the FRY. Further efforts in these areas are an important part of our broader strategy.

The United Nations, the Contact Group, NATO and my Administration all agree that Milosevic bears primary responsibility for the current situation including the brutal tactics of his security forces. Not only has he displaced a quarter million of his own citizens, but he has also suppressed the human rights of other ethnic groups and forced them to bear the burden of the current conflict, of UN economic sanctions and of isolation from the rest of Europe.

While Milosevic bears primary responsibility for the current crisis, there are others whose actions could prolong and exacerbate it. I am referring in particular to the various armed insurgent groups in Kosovo, including the Kosovar Liberation Army, or UKM. Ambassador Holbrooke this week delivered a firm message to these groups to cooperate in bringing about a peaceful settlement. Armed reprisals against Serb civilians, or the continued pursuit of independence by military means, will only shatter a cease-fire and the hopes of attaining a political settlement that gives Kosovo true autonomy. We have told them that failure to cooperate will cause us to reassess our operations against the Serbs.

Larry Eagleburger, our former ambassador to Yugoslavia, once said that the war in Yugoslavia began in Kosovo and will ultimately end in Kosovo. According to him, this was the correct diagnosis. Our job is to bring that war to an end, to keep it from destabilizing the region and to avert a humanitarian catastrophe. I appreciate your willingness to work with the Administration to protect American interests in southeastern Europe. We will continue to consult closely with you in the critical days and weeks ahead.

Sincerely,

Bill Clinton

TRIBUTE TO ADMIRAL T. JOSEPH LOPEZ ON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENT

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to Admiral Joe Lopez on the occasion of his Change of Command as Commander of Allied Forces, Southern Europe and U.S. Naval Forces, Europe and his retirement from the United States Navy after 39 years of dedicated service to the nation.

Joe Lopez joined the United States Navy to see the world—and see the nation. A native of Powelton, West Virginia, he enlisted in the Navy in September 1959. In 1964, he was commissioned an Ensign via the Seaman-to-Admiral Program and upon commissioning, he was assigned first to the U.S.S. Eugene A. Greene (DD 711) and then to the U.S.S. Lind (DD 703). While onboard both of these destroyers, he saw action in Vietnam.

Admiral Lopez received his first command in September 1969, when he assumed the duties as Commander, River Assault Division 153, which operated in the Mekong Delta in Vietnam and as part of a counter-offensive into Cambodia in May 1970. Admiral Lopez was the only Navy commanding officer to lead a river assault into Cambodia.

Following tours of duty at the Naval Postgraduate School, the Armed Forces Staff College, and as Flag Secretary and Staff Officer for Commander Cruiser-Destroyer Group Eight, Admiral Lopez served as the Executive Officer onboard the U.S.S. Truxt (FF 1095) from 1977 to 1979. While he was XO, the Truxt operated in the Mediterranean and Red Seas.

Admiral Lopez commanded the U.S.S. Stump (DD 978) from September 1982 to November 1984. As the CO of Stump he completed a Persian Gulf deployment and participated in Comando Del Norte exercise in December.

While commanding the Stump, Admiral Lopez conducted a cruise to the Mediterranean, one of the steps he needs under UNSC 1199 to take to ensure compliance, NATO’s secondary objective was to conduct aЛЬBERT Program and upon commissioning, he was assigned first to the U.S.S. Eugene A. Greene (DD 711) and then to the U.S.S. Lind (DD 703). While onboard both of these destroyers, he saw action in Vietnam.

I congratulate Joe and Vivian Lopez upon the completion of their active duty Navy career and thank them for their service to the country. And finally, I want to thank Admiral Lopez for his friendship and honest counsel over the years. At the closing days of World War II, 1945, I have now served with many sailors. I rank him at the top, a "4.0 seaman patriot."

DEVELOPMENTS IN KOSOVO

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I thank Senator WARNER for speaking about Kosovo. I am disappointed that the Senate has not brought a resolution to the floor and had a debate about what our response should be as a Nation to what is happening in Kosovo. I think it is a profound mistake on our part not to have this discussion given the fact that we are going to adjourn within the next couple of days.

Mr. President, while there have been some recent reports that the slaughter of innocent civilians has slowed—at least temporarily—we cannot afford to turn our attention away from the situation there. President Milosevic claims to have ordered some of his army back to their barracks, but it is too early to tell exactly what these actions mean and whether Milosevic actually intends to cease his brutal offensive against the Albanian Kosovars. There is considerable evidence that he may not be truly pulling back in accordance with Western demands, but rather taking halfway measures that would allow his troops and tanks to return to the fighting almost immediately. UN Secretary General Annan reported earlier this week that he was still a significant presence of Serb armed forces in Kosovo, and that some special police units are continuing punitive operations against the local population. I remain deeply skeptical about Milosevic's intentions.

We have had too much experience with Milosevic to take his statements at face value and to assume that the killing has really ended. We have seen his defiance of world opinion and international law in recent years. Recent information was all shocked by the horrific massacres of civilians—the massacre of women, elderly men, even young children and infants. These killings, attributed to Serb security forces, are an affront to the international community.

Now, it appears as if Milosevic may have ordered a partial withdrawal of his attack forces, hoping to avoid imminent military action by NATO. He may believe that if the killings stop for a time he will be able to negotiate a way out, if NATO and the U.S. will turn elsewhere. We must not allow that to happen. We must keep our focus on the crisis in Kosovo, and not become distracted by other issues.

Unless immediate action is taken to forestall a humanitarian tragedy, we may soon see even more disturbing and gruesome pictures from Kosovo. With an estimated 150,000 people in Kosovo living out in the open without any shelter, with winter approaching, millions of related to the killing resumes or if Milosevic prevents relief from getting to the displaced Kosovars and fails to comply with the UN resolution and the demands of the international community, we may have to resort to military action.

I met with Milosevic once. I wanted to see firsthand the genocide of several years ago. He was the first and only person I have not shake hands with. I don't think he can be believed, and I think that we have to send him a forceful message.

To prepare for possible implementation of more forceful options developed by NATO planners, we should continue to move forward with, under NATO auspices, with pre-deployment in the region of appropriate levels of NATO military equipment and forces. This would include such actions as pre-positioning aircraft and naval vessels, and deployment of necessary material to support NATO troops.

These moves would be intended to send another clear message to Milosevic that he must comply with the UN Security Council Resolution immediately. If he does not respond we must be ready to take further steps to force compliance as necessary.

At the same time, we need to take other actions to keep the pressure on Milosevic. The U.S. should press forward on an intensified multilateral effort, at the United Nations and through regional bodies like the European Union, to firmly tighten the existing sanctions regime. We should impose other sanctions lifted after signing of the Dayton Peace Accord, and to otherwise increase pressure on Milosevic to comply.

We must also accelerate U.S. and NATO logistical support for the ongoing international humanitarian aid effort in Kosovo, including pre-deployment of humanitarian supplies in Kosovo in anticipation of winter distribution by non-governmental organizations, while ensuring the safety and security of those who will rely on such aid.

There must be no repeat of the disgraceful Bosnian "safe haven" disaster of the past.

The U.S. and NATO must also press for immediate and unrestricted access in Kosovo for internationally-recognized human rights monitoring organizations, including the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and increase aid and intelligence support to the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.
Mr. President, the U.S. and NATO are right to move forward now to send a clear and forceful message to Milosevic that he can no longer brazenly defy world opinion. The brutal slaughter of innocent non-combatants in Kosovo must stop now. If it continues, the West must have the resolve to do what is necessary to bring it to an end. And, if necessary, I want to say as a U.S. Senator, I think there should be air-strikes.

I wanted to speak out before we leave and I want the Record to show that I have spoken out. I wish that the U.S. Senate had brought this matter up. Other Senators would have very different points of view, and I understand that. But it really troubles me, saddens me, that the Senate as a body has not had a thorough discussion and debate about what is a life-or-death matter. I wanted to at least have a chance to speak out. I thank my colleague from Oklahoma for giving me some time.

Mr. SPECTER. Parliamentary inquiry: I have been asked to propound a unanimous consent request which relates to another bill. Would it be in order at this time to ask unanimous consent that it may be considered separately to another bill. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 2584.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2584) to provide aviator continuation pay for military members killed in Operation Desert Shield.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this legislation is introduced to correct a legislative inequity that has adversely affected one of my constituents, Mrs. Vicki Reid of Dauphin, Pennsylvania.

At the time of his death in Operation Desert Shield, Captain Frederick Reid was serving as a United States Air Force pilot. The Air Force had authorized an Aviator Continuation Pay contract contingent upon his continuing to serve in the Air Force. Unfortunately, on October 10, 1990, Captain Reid was killed during a flight training operation.

The Defense Department policy at the time was that one's death preceded receiving the continuation pay. Congress responded by enacting the Mack Amendment, under which families of pilots killed in action during Operation Desert Storm are entitled to the deceased pilot's Aviator Continuation Pay. This provision of the fiscal year 1991 National Defense Authorization Act (P.L. 102-172) stipulates that in order to collect the Aviator Continuation Pay, the pilot must have died during Operation Desert Storm (or on or after January 17, 1991), but excludes those pilots killed in Operation Desert Shield.

By letter to me dated August 3, 1998 from Under Secretary Rudy De Leon, the Department of Defense has confirmed that Captain Reid was the only U.S. Air Force pilot killed in Operation Desert Shield who was entitled to Aviator Continuation Pay and that approximately $58,000 of Captain Reid's Aviator Continuation Pay was unpaid at the time of his death. In a September 11, 1998 letter to me, the Air Force has expressed its support for an extension of the Mack Amendment to cover the Reid case.

While private relief legislation is a last resort to be used sparingly by the Congress, Captain Reid's service and dedication to his country are laudatory. Had he died only a few months later, his widow would have been justly compensated. Accordingly, I am introducing this bill today.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Department of Defense and a letter from the Air Force be printed in the Record. There being copies of the letters were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Hon. Arlen Specter,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Specter: This responds to your letter of July 2, 1998, to Secretary Cohen concerning Aviation Continuation Pay (ACP) due to pilots at the time of their death while serving in Operation Desert Shield.

A review of files pertaining to the members who died while serving in Desert Shield indicates that of the eight pilots who died during that operation, only Captain Reid was serving under an ACP bonus contract at the time of his death. Approximately $58,000 of that bonus was left unpaid due to Captain Reid's death and would be payable to his widow should legislation be enacted to extend the Mack Amendment to cover members killed in Operation Desert Shield.

I appreciate the concern you have shown about this issue. Please contact me if you require any further information.

Sincerely,
Rudy De Leon,

Hon. Arlen Specter,
U.S. Senator,
Philadelphia, PA.

Dear Mr. Specter: This responds to your inquiry of the possibility of receiving the remaining portion of her late husband's, Captain Frederick Reid, Aviator Continuation Pay (ACP).

As currently codified in Section 37, United States Code, ACP is paid upon the acceptance of a written agreement to remain on active duty. The agreement must complete the total period of service under the terms of that agreement, even as a result of death while in military service, are not entitled to the unearned portion of the compensation. Current law does not permit the Air Force to pay Ms. Reid the approximately $58,000 remaining on her husband's agreement.

Air Force officials are aware of the possibility of extending the Mack Amendment to cover members killed in Operation Desert Shield and strongly support this initiative. The Air Force officials sincerely appreciate the dedication to duty exemplified by Captain Reid.

We trust you will find this information helpful.

Sincerely,
Marcia Rossi,
Lt. Col. USAF, Congressional Inquiry Division, Office of Legislative Liaison.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear at this point in the RECORD.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—I will not object—I want to inquire, has that been cleared on this side?

Mr. SPECTER. It has been cleared on the other side of the aisle. It provides for aviator continuation pay for Air Force personnel killed in Operation Desert Shield. It is for a Pennsylvania constituent, as I understand it, the only one who has not been so compensated.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank the Senator. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2584) was passed, as follows:

S. 2584
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. OPERATION DESERT SHEILD AVIATOR CONTINUATION PAY.

Section 835(b) of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1992 (Public Law 102-172; 105 Stat. 1212; 37 U.S.C. 301(b) note) is amended—

(1) by striking out "January 17, 1991"; and inserting in lieu thereof "August 2, 1990"; and

(2) by inserting "(regardless of the date of the commencement of combatant activities in such zone as specified in legislation that Executive Order)" after "as a combat zone".

INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1999—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now turn to the consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3694, the intelligence authorization bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3694), have agreed to recommit and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by all of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of October 5, 1998.)
Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to ask that my colleagues support the Conference Report on the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999.

I want to thank Chairman YANO for his leadership in the Conference, and note for my colleagues that Chairman Goss was unable to chair the conference due to a serious medical condition in his family. We all wish Mrs. Goss a speedy recovery.

I believe the Conference Committee put together a solid package for consideration by the full Senate that fairly represents the intelligence priorities set forth in both the Senate and House versions of the Intelligence Authorization Act. I am pleased to report that the Conference Committee accomplished its task in a strong bipartisan manner, and I want to thank my colleague from Nebraska, Senator KERREY, for working so closely with me to produce this legislation.

I believe the Conference Report embraces many of the key recommendations that the Senate adopted in its version of the bill.

We recommended significant increases in funding for high-priority projects, better protecting the Intelligence Community for the threats of the 21st Century, while at the same time reducing funds for programs and activities that were not adequately justified or redundant.

The report includes key initiatives that I believe are vital for the future of our Intelligence Community.

These initiatives include: bolstering advanced research and development across the Community, to facilitate, among other things, the modernization of NSA and CIA; strengthening efforts in counter-proliferation, counter-terrorism, counter-narcotics, counter-intelligence, and effective covert action; expanded collection and exploitation of measurements and signatures intelligence, especially ballistic missile intelligence; developing reconnaissance systems based on new small satellite technologies that provide flexible, affordable collection from space with radars to detect moving targets; boosting education, recruiting, and technical training for Intelligence Community personnel; enhancing analytical capabilities; streamlining dissemination of intelligence products; and providing new tools for information operations.

The conferences have provided the funds and guidance to ensure that military commanders and national policymakers continue to receive timely, accurate information on threats to our security.

At the same time, we have found some critical areas within the Community that are in need of major improvement.

First, the CIA's foremost mission of providing timely intelligence based on human sources ("HUMINT") is in grave jeopardy. CIA case officers today do not have the training or the equipment needed to keep their true identities hidden, to communicate covertly with agents, or to plant sophisticated listening devices and other collection tools that will provide timely intelligence on an adversary's intentions.

Second, what many see as the "crown jewel" of U.S. Intelligence—the National Security Agency's signals intelligence capability—likewise is in dire need of modernization. The digital and fiber-optic revolution, here-and-now, but NSA is still predominantly oriented toward cold war-era threats.

The Director of NSA has recommended major changes in how NSA performs its espionage function, but those recommendations were not adequately addressed in the President's budget.

Third, promising technologies and systems for detecting missiles and their warheads have been included in the President's budget request. Likewise, robust funding for new tools for conducting information warfare, new sensors to detect and counter proliferation, and a demonstration of radar technology ensure that small and affordable satellites were not adequately addressed in the budget request.

And fourth, the declining quality of analysis within the Intelligence Community is cause for great concern.

Responding to the failure to predict the Indian nuclear tests, the Director of Central Intelligence commissioned a retired Admiral David J. Jeremiah to review what went wrong and why. Among other findings, the Intelligence Community analysts were complacent; they based their analyses on faulty assumptions; and engaged in wishful thinking. It is my belief that such is the state of analysis in the Intelligence Community.

In the future, the Intelligence Community will need to master the steadily more complex threat environments. The outlines of strong encryption, and the increasing porosity of international borders, to mention just of the future that are already upon us. In response to challenges like these, the conference authorized the start or continuation of a number of new technology initiatives, including most of those the Senate supported previously.

Finally, the Conference Report includes a provision to name the CIA Headquarters Compound after President George Bush. I am happy that we were able to recognize President Bush's service to this country as both Director of Central Intelligence and as President. As DCI, I sought innovation to the CIA, and dramatically improved the morale within the Agency.

He demonstrated leadership and integrity at a time when both were desperately needed to help restore confidence in the CIA and the other elements that make up the Intelligence Community. It is a fitting tribute that we designate CIA headquarters the George Bush Center for Intelligence.

Mr. President, the Conference Committee worked closely together, in a strong bipartisan fashion, to produce a comprehensive Intelligence Authorization Act, and I urge my colleagues to send its adoption.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to vote for this conference report and I urge the President to sign this bill into law. This legislation is an essential part of Congress' ability to provide the tools and the resources which safeguard the independence of the United States and the lives and livelihoods of the American people.

Chairman SHELBY's leadership and sustained effort throughout this process have brought to fruition an excellent bill and I congratulate him for the appreciation the vision and hard work of Chairman Goss and Ranking Member DICKS of the House Committee, together with the leadership of Chairman YOUNG at the conference.

This legislation, like the Intelligence agencies it authorizes, seeks to maximize America's capabilities against today's threats while simultaneously building capability against the threats of 2010 and beyond. The Intelligence Community cannot avoid the challenges like these, the conference report and I urge the President to sign this bill into law.
for the National Security Agency to modernize itself, as well as how technology could better support human intelligence. Their contribution of time and expertise is paying off already for the country, and they deserve the thanks of all of us.

Throughout the authorization process, the two intelligence committees have understood that their efforts to prepare U.S. intelligence to master the future must be bounded by budgetary reality. However, the intelligence budget is dependent on a defense budget which, as we all know, is under severe pressure. The intelligence agencies have ambitious projects, and it is part of our job to set financial limits and time constraints and closely oversee the progress of these projects. The conferences placed a cost cap on the National Reconnaissance Office’s Future Imagery Architecture for this reason.

The bill also encourages collaborative analysis of important and difficult intelligence topics. The Jeremiah Report, which reviewed intelligence community performance following this year’s Indian nuclear test and the Rumsfeld panel report on the ballistic missile threat both stress the need to use competitive analysis. Making sure we find insights from both within and outside the government. This bill encourages that process.

Analysis will grow stronger in the coming year, not only because of this legislation, but because there is now a place, under the Director of Central Intelligence, an Assistant Director for Analysis and Production. This official has not been confirmed by the Senate, although he may well be in the coming year, but he is already using the Director’s authorities to make analysis in the intelligence community more effective and efficient. He and his counterpart, the Assistant Director for Collection Management, and their supervisor, the Director for Community Management, are already by their actions validating Congress’ wisdom in creating these positions. As I go to briefings and learn how these officials are marshaling resources in times of crisis, setting priorities, and identifying gaps, I am pleased with the work we did two years ago.

Another aspect of the intelligence business should be praised, Mr. President, and that is the unparalleled level of cooperation between the agencies these days. The relationship between FBI and the CIA is particularly strong and it has paid off most recently in the investigation of the attacks on our embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Director Tenet and Director Freeh have overcome bureaucratic cultures and bureaucratic impulses to forge a strong team for America and they deserve our thanks.

Team-building and sound oversight both are essential to the flow of information. The Senate had gone on record three times in defense of a Federal employee’s right to bring classified information on wrongdoing to the appropriate committees of Congress. The House had devised a process by which such information could come to Congress while insuring the employee’s privacy, making the employee’s agency aware the information was going to Congress, and insuring the protection of sources and methods. The Senate followed the House provision and agreed to make the information process faster. As one who has argued several times on this floor for the right of Congress to be informed, I am pleased with the conference report. I am pleased and with the work of both bodies.

This legislation also recognizes the accomplishments of a great patriot, former President Bush, by naming the CIA Headquarters complex in his honor. From his initial service in World War II, President Bush has always stepped forward to do hard and sometimes dangerous work for his country. Leadership of the CIA has both characteristics. President Bush distinguished himself in that job, as in all his service, and I am pleased this legislation will honor him.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise to address an issue of serious consequence that has emerged in the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999. Mr. President, the Administration has informed us that it has paid off most recently in the relationship between the FBI and the CIA is particularly strong these days. The relationship between these agencies is fundamental to the overall framework of the Inspector General of Intelligence Community Whistleblower Program Act of 1998. The language, establishing the “Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act of 1998,” creates a process by which employees of intelligence agencies can provide information to Congress about certain potential problems without fear of reprisal or threats or reprisal.

Some of these provisions create duties for the Inspectors General of intelligence agencies. The legislation serves the dual purpose of extending Federal law enforcement oversight over the intelligence community and ensuring that the independence of Inspectors General is protected. The language provides a mechanism for employees of intelligence agencies to provide information to Congress about certain potential problems without fear of reprisal or threats or reprisal.

Thus, the Committee has an interest in any legislation that affects the duties of the IGs. Portions of the “Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act of 1998” amend the IG Act by vesting the Defense Department and Justice Department IGs with authority to act upon allegations received from intelligence community whistleblowers who wish to complain to Congress about problems they see in certain sensitive areas. Recognizing the Committee’s jurisdiction and interest in this matter, Senator Shelby solicited my views on how the whistleblower provisions fit within the existing IG statute. I thank Senator Shelby for offering me
The numbers have remained relatively steady since; a 1993 poll also found that three-quarters of those surveyed believed (consistent with the film JFK, released that year) that there had been a conspiracy.

It so happens that I was in the White House at the hour of the President’s death (I was an assistant labor secretary at the time). I feared what would become of him if he were not protected, and I pleaded that we must act. No one else seemed to be able to hear. Presently Oswald was killed, significantly complicating matters.

I did not think there had been a conspiracy to kill the president, but I was convinced that the American people would sooner or later come to believe that there had been one unless we investigated the event with exactly that presumption in mind. The Warren Commission report and the other subsequent investigations, which had nearly universal reliance on secrecy, did not dispel any such fantasies.

In conducting this document-by-document review of classified information, the Board did not find that the federal government needlessly and wastefully classified and then withheld from public access countless important records that did not require such treatment. How to explain this?

Beginning with the concept that secrecy should be understood as a form of government regulation. This was an insight of the Commission on Protecting and Reducing Government Secrecy, which I chaired, building on the work of the great German sociologist Max Weber, who wrote some eight decades ago:

“The pure interest of the bureaucracy in power, however, is efficacious far beyond those areas where purely functional interests make for secrecy. The ‘official secret’ is the specific invention of bureaucracy, and nothing is so fantastically defended by the bureaucracy as this attitude, which cannot be defended beyond these specifically qualified areas.

What we traditionally think of in this country as regulation concerns what citizens may do, secrecy concerns what the citizen may know. And the citizen does not know what may not be known. As our Commission stated: ‘Americans are familiar with the tendency to over-regulate in other areas. What is different with secrecy is that the public cannot know the extent or the content of the regulation.’

Thus, secrecy is the ultimate mode of regulation; the citizen does not even know that he or she is being regulated! It is at onceющей with the public because even a far greater potential for damage if it malfunctions. In our democracy, where the free exchange of ideas is so essential, it can be suffocating.

And so I propose that legislation must be enacted. The Majority and Minority Leaders have been persuaded on the necessity of such legislation and are cosponsors of the bill. On March 3, 1996, we engaged in a colleagues on the bill with the two Leaders, along with myself, Senators Helms, Thompson, Glenn, Shelby, and Kerrey. At that time we all agreed on the importance of considering the bill in this session. The Senator-Governmental Affairs Committee, chaired by Senator Thompson, considered the bill and approved it unanimously on July 22. In its report to accompany the bill, the Committee had this important insight:

“Our liberties depend on the balanced structure created by the Constitution, the framers of the Constitution. The national security information system has not had a clear regulatory foundation, but it has been developed through a series of executive orders. It is time to bring this executive monopoly over the issue to an end, and to begin to engage in the same sort of dialogue between Congress and the executive that characterizes the development of government policy in all other areas.

We are not proposing putting an end to government secrecy. Far from it. It is true that we may use the most legitimate reasons ranging from military operations to diplomatic endeavors. Indeed, much of our Commission’s report is devoted to explaining the varied circumstances in which secrecy is most essential. Yet, as Kerrey has pointed out, the bureaucratic attachment to secrecy has become so warped that, in the words of Kermit Hall, a member of the Assassination Records Review Board, it has transformed into a ‘deep- ingrained commitment to secrecy as a form of patriotism.’

Secrecy need not remain the only norm—particularly when one considers that the current badly overextended system frequently fails to protect its most important secrets. We must develop what might be termed a competing ‘culture of openness’—fully consistent with our interests in protecting national security, but in which power and authority are no longer derived primarily from one’s ability to withhold information from others in government and the public at large.

Unfortunately, the Intelligence Committee did not take up this bill. Part of the delay was a result of the tardy addition of significant new changes made by the Governmental Affairs Committee. A formal letter on the bill was not delivered until September 17. In addition, this letter sought the removal of the ‘balancing test’ contained in the bill, a change that the administration had not previously sought.

Nevertheless, we were on the threshold of reaching agreement on the bill. The Intelligence Committee has been working on the bill. Normally, I hope the Chairman will agree that the difference between us are not that great, and that we can pass the bill early in the 106th Congress.
I ask unanimous consent that the letter expressing the administration's views on the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point, along with comments on the letter made in a joint letter by the National Security Archives and Federation of American Scientists, and a letter by Representative LEE HAMILTON.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

October 8, 1998

Hon. LEE HAMILTON, Ranking Democratic Member.

Dear Mr. Aftergood,

Thank you for your letter of September 24, 1998, concerning the National Security Archives' letter to Mr. Richard Creek and Mr. Larry Williams.

I have carefully considered the Archives' letter, and I want to assure you that any changes made in the S. 712, the Government Secrecy Reform Act of 1998, will be made only after careful consideration of the Administration's views.

Further, I believe that the Archives' letter is essential to the success of the bill in the Senate. The Archives' letter sets forth specific standards for the Office of National Classification and Declassification Oversight, and it clearly states the Administration's views on the bill.

Finally, I want to assure you that the Administration is committed to working with the Archives to ensure that the bill is modified in a way that will be acceptable to both the Archives and the Administration.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely yours,

Kate Martin,
The conference report was agreed to.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—CONFERENCE REPORT TO ACCOMPANY H.R. 1853

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the majority leader, after consultation with the Democratic leader, may turn to the consideration of the conference report accompanying H.R. 1853, the Carl D. Perkins Vocational-Technical Education Act Amendments, and that the reading of the conference report be waived. I further ask unanimous consent that there be 30 minutes for debate equally divided between Senators JEFFORDS and KENNEDY, and that at the conclusion or yielding back of the time, the Senate proceed to vote on adoption of the conference report, without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 2431

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate turn to H.R. 2431, that the cloture motion be vitiated, and that Senator LOTT or his designee be recognized to offer a substitute amendment; that there be 2½ hours of debate on the substitute amendment to be equally divided between the majority and minority leaders or their designees; and that following the expiration or yielding back of time, the substitute amendment be agreed to, that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that an amendment to the title then be offered and agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, the bill be advanced to third reading, and the Senate vote on final passage of H.R. 2431, and without any intervening action or debate.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object. When this unanimous consent agreement was propounded initially, the distinguished assistant majority leader and I talked about including 20 minutes for me to speak. Will the Senator modify his request so that I may be recognized as soon as the Senator from Minnesota finishes his comments?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I so modify the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, we are ready to begin consideration on the International Religious Freedom Act.

The conference report was agreed to.

settlements in Virginia in 1607 and in Massachusetts with the pilgrims in 1620. That was also the reason that my father, Harry Specter, came to this country in 1911 at the age of 18, and my mother, Lillie Shanin Specter, came to this country at the age of 18 with her family which had lived in a small town on the Russian-Polish border. Freedom of religion is the heart of the first amendment, the provisions for religious freedom.

We have seen worldwide unspeakable religious persecution. We have seen Catholic clerics mistreated and tortured in China. We have seen Christians sold into slavery in the Sudan. We have seen the risk of the death penalty in Egypt and in Saudi Arabia for those of the Islam faith who seek to convert to Christianity.

This legislation is a very forceful statement by the United States of America that religious persecution is intolerable. Wherever it exists, whether it is against Christians, whether it is against Jews, or whether it is against those of the Islam faith, Buddhist, or whatever the religious persuasion may be, it is intolerable. This issue, as I have already noted, goes to the very personal roots. I was motivated to act for legislative relief by a distinguished American named Michael Horowitz, who came to see me in early 1997 and said that there had been enormous support from the international Christian community to react. I want to say to the Jewish community, I want to say to those of the Jewish faith, to try to help on the issue of persecution.

Margaret Chase Smith, a distinguished Senator from Maine, articulated a very important concept talking about the principle of compromise as opposed to the compromise of principle. And in the legislation which is being advanced today there is not a compromise of principle, but we are making accommodations to put this legislation through.

Over the past 2 years, I have conducted four hearings throughout Pennsylvania to hear from panelists who have witnessed or experienced personally the horror of religious persecution. These hearings were held in the Pittsburgh area, the Harrisburg area, Allentown/Reading area and the Wilkes-Barre/Scranton area. In addition, I have had several meetings with evangelical leaders and leaders of missionary organizations who have been striving to expose those governments and other organizations that tolerate or perpetuate serious, physical acts of religious persecution against their own populations.

It is clear from my meetings with religious leaders in Pennsylvania that there are regions of the world where the situation is particularly abhorrent. In China, the government distinguishes between ‘Patriotic’ Catholic and Protestant churches that are endorsed by the government and the more than 50 million ‘House’ church Christian Churches. The Chinese government recognizes officially only the Patriotic churches—those who refuse to register in a state religion, or who remain faithful to the Vatican—are regularly imprisoned for having bibles or holding worship services without permission.

In Egypt, I talked to the Copts, saw situations where religious persecution was present. Christians have talked about being criticized in the Egyptian press for our advocacy of religious freedom around the world. As the saying goes, you can tell a man or woman by their friends. And you can tell a man or woman by their enemies as well. Perhaps it is a mark of distinction to have been criticized, as Congressman Wolf and I had been in the Egyptian press, for articulating and pushing the principles of religious freedom.

In Saudi Arabia, I talked to Christians and Jews who had been persecuted there, and was outraged to find that if you were a Christian in Saudi Arabia, you could not have a Christmas tree in your window, which could be viewed from the outside; that the Jews and men and women who are stationed there in the American forces did not want to see their lamp shining the conversion, because the indication of being Jewish was a source of possible reprisal.

I heard conflicting statements in Saudi Arabia about whether the death penalty is imposed. Sometimes it has had a beneficial impact by raising the issue's visibility. For example, Archbishop Silvano Tomasi, Vatican Ambassador to Ethiopia, complimented the proposed legislation for raising the issue's visibility. He said, "little bite," then so much the better. I think this measure goes a long way in articulating the basic principles of religious freedom, which we prize so highly in America, and that we are exporting a fundamental American value. The bill I think would have been preferable to have sanctions. But it would be impossible to move it through the Senate. So we are taking a very substantial step forward in the legislation as it is framed. The legislation brings fair and honest fact finding to the situation of religious minorities around the world. It provides the necessary balance of respecting cultural differences and promoting religious tolerance throughout the world. The legislation provides for a strong, independent commission that can make recommendations based on honest facts.

I want to compliment and commend especially New York Times columnist A.M. Rosenthal, who has had a very profound influence on the formulation of this legislation. You see his articles from time to time, or you see a column from time to time, and there may be some impact. But Mr. Rosenthal has published column after column and has brought to the American people through the impressive op-ed page, or editorial page of the New York Times, discussions of the problems of religious persecution around the world. I think it has had significant impact in moving this legislation forward.

In our discussions, again, I compliment our distinguished colleague from Oklahoma, Senator Nickel, for his leadership, along with Senator Lieberman. Senator Coats has been a tower of strength. There have been a number of kudos and compliments to Senator Coats as he leaves the U.S. Senate. I think to all of those who have worked so hard for its enactment, because he has made a tremendous contribution to the U.S. Senate. But I believe that this bill will be a tribute, in effect, to Senator Dan Coats and I think to all of those who have worked so hard for its enactment.

Mr. President, how much of my 20 minutes remains?

Mr. SPECTER. Will the Chair doublecheck that? I have spoken very fast if I have said all of that in 4 minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has consumed 9 minutes. He has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You would have done better on the first one.

Mr. SPECTER. It all depends on what is "better," Mr. President.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for permitting me to speak at the outset. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I want to add a word of appreciation for a colleague from Pennsylvania for his support of this bill and for his leadership on the bill that passed the House of Representatives.

I will mention and compare a little bit between the House bill and the Senate bill. The House bill passed with an overwhelming vote. It came down very hard with punitive actions against countries that had gross violations of religious freedom. In the Senate bill, we have a milder action towards those countries that participated in really the most atrocious type of religious persecution—death, torture, imprisonment.

Again, I compliment Representative Wolf and Senator Specter for bringing that issue to the attention of the American people, maybe to the world's attention, because a lot of people didn't know that people were going to jail, that they were imprisoned for long periods, high-level officials, might be tortured, they might be actually killed for their religious beliefs. This bill goes a little bit further than that. It might be a little milder on the sanctions side because it gives the President a lot of options, and I would agree and I happen to think that is the right action, but we also provide that we should recognize violations of religious freedom, including violations such as assembling for peaceful religious activities, for speaking out on one's religion, for changing one's religious beliefs, for possessing or distributing religious materials or raising one's children in the religion of your choice.

In other words, we believe religious freedom should be a basic right for all Americans, for all people worldwide, and the United Nation's declaration includes such freedom. Countries that join the United Nations say, yes, we believe in religious freedom, but yet we find these things happening all the time.

As Members of the Senate and Members of the House, many of us have been engaged in trying to protect religious freedom when we find that maybe our constituents are denied access, denied the opportunity to worship, maybe put in prison because they share their faith or they wish to worship in a particular country and they find that it is not even available. So our bill goes a little bit further than the House bill in the fact that we include a lot of other violations of religious freedom.

I might mention a few other things, Mr. President, maybe outline some of the things that our bill does in comparison—not necessarily a comparison with what the House did but an explanation of what our bill does.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Oklahoma will yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I would like to make a presentation of what is in the bill. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DORGAN. I will ask the Senator from Oklahoma what will be his leadership, along with Senator Lieberman, for sponsoring it and for his work. I will tell all my colleagues there has been a significant amount of work that has gone into this bill. Questions have been raised, I have just a brief discussion of some of those concerns.

I also wish to thank Senator Biden, Senator Feinstein, Senator Hagel, Senator Gramm, and others who have raised questions and who have worked with us to try to solve some of those.

This bill creates a position with Ambassador rank called Ambassador at Large for International Religious Freedom. This Ambassador will serve as a high-level diplomat working with the State Department, trying to find out what religious persecution is happening in various places around the world and to represent the administration.

I also want to be a member of a commission on International Religious Liberty. This is a 10-member, bipartisan commission with appointments from Congress and the President. It will provide an outside independent voice investigating religious persecution incidents, raising the profile of religious situation while making substantive policy recommendations to the Congress and the White House.
On this commission of 10-members, the Ambassador at Large will be a non-voting member. The President or the executive branch will be entitled to three commissioners and in Congress the President’s party in each House will be entitled to one additional commission on both sides for a total of five, and the opposing party, in this case it would be the Republicans—Democrats control the White House—the Republicans would be entitled to two appointments from both the House and the Senate.

This commission, being an independent commission, will have the authority to investigate, to conduct hearings to find out what is happening with religious freedom around the world, and be able to make a report to the administration on their recommendations on how to alleviate religious persecution.

I might mention our goal is not to punish any country that is violating or persecuting anybody because of their religious beliefs. Our goal is to change behavior. Our goal is to eliminate religious persecution. Our goal is to expand religious freedom worldwide, and we have gone to great lengths to do that.

Our bill says the commission will make its recommendations to the President and to Congress by May 1. There is also an additional report that is made by the State Department on the advice of the Ambassador at Large, and the State Department gives a country-by-country review of religious freedom. They report that yes, there has been progress in some countries or no, there has not been progress, but rather significant persecution in basically all countries with whom we have relations.

I might mention we have human rights reports right now, human rights reports that cover these countries. But for many many years, we have been silent on religious freedom in those countries. So now we will be talking about an annual report on religious freedom and persecution.

And then we talk about responses, what can we do if we find that some countries are violating individuals’ or people’s religious freedom. Under the proposal, we have some positive things to promote religious freedom.

The International Religious Freedom Act says if there is legislation to promote religious liberty abroad. We have USAID funding for legal protection of religious freedoms in restrictive countries. International broadcasting can be used to promote religious freedom. Fulbright exchanges, for example, of religious leaders and scholars and legal experts can be used. Religious freedom awards and performance pay for meritorious foreign service officers; equal access to embassies for U.S. citizens at the embassy’s discretion for nations for religious activities on terms not less favorable for other nongovernmental activities; training for foreign service officers and refugee and asylum personnel to ensure the promotion of religious liberty, and accurate reporting of religious persecution and relief for victims of persecution.

We also have steps to directly target those agents and those countries that are responsible for religious persecution, and we have several of those. Some people have said, well, those are various sanctions. And these people, talking about sanctions, they usually think, well, we are going to have a worse embargo that happened during the Carter administration when the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan. I don’t see that happening.

There are several items, so-called sanctions. We have signed 15, and I might mention the first one is a private demarche. The second one is an ofﬁcial demarche. Those can be letters to the embassy: We have reports of people being persecuted; we hope you don’t do that anymore. It might be a call to the ambassador. It might be a call to the Secretary of State or to the diplomatic personnel that there are reports of religious persecution; we want that to be changed. Or it could be more serious. We could cancel a scientiﬁc visit. We could cancel an educational exchange. We could deny one or more State visits. We can cancel State visits. We can do several things.

And then we go into the possible range of economic sanctions. Some people say, well, wait a minute, should you do this? Let’s talk about it. These economic sanctions are only for the most egregious or the more, what we deﬁne under our bill as particularly severe violations of religious freedom. And particularly severe violations of religious freedom deals again with torture, imprisonment, deals with death, again the most egregious forms of religious persecution. And in those areas we have some economics—the withdrawal, limitation or suspension of development assistance. We have direction of the director of OPEC or TDA or EXIM not to approve guarantees, or we have the withdrawal, limitation or suspension of security assistance. I might mention it says “limitation.” It wouldn’t have to be 100 percent. It could be 5 percent or it could be a little bit more.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER: The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. NICKLES. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The clerk continued with the call of the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask—

Mr. GRAMM. I object.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
every tool at my disposal and I will also do everything publicly I can to make sure people understand who is not being cooperative in this effort.

I observe the absence of a quorum.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the majority leader request that the record be kept of the things we probably should have done a little earlier—I didn't know we were going to get stuck in this mess—would the majority leader go ahead and propound the unanimous consent request that we go ahead and vote tomorrow at 9:03 on the Religious Freedom Act, because I don't think there is any objection to that. I don't know how long this little debate will go, but I want to make sure we get that request made.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the recorded vote on religious persecution occur at 9:30 on Friday morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the majority leader withhold just for a moment?

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to.

Mr. LEVIN. During this quorum call, would anyone be inconvenienced if some of us who want to speak in morning business be allowed to speak?

Mr. LOTT. There is a problem with doing that until we get this agreement worked out. I would actually One of H.R. 10, as I understand it, would like for us to use this time, but both sides are still apprehensive about it. I asked for this time as majority leader and got it but I think, beyond that—we cannot.

Mr. LEVIN. Again, reserving the right to object, I obviously won't, would the majority leader then, in the UC that you are working on, make provision, then, for 30 minutes for morning business for me at the end of whatever.

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to do that.

And I would like for other Senators who might have a need for morning business time to get that time. We will block that in before we finish up with the UC.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I will not, but will we also at sometime before the chariots suddenly disappear on Sunday or Monday or whenever it happens—will we go to some of the judges?

Mr. LOTT. We are working now to go to No. 597, which is a State Justice Institute position. And we are working to try to go to the nomination of Mr. Paez. There are those who want time to talk about that. I hope we could do that tonight and tomorrow. But we will continue to try to get agreement on Paez. That is the one we are working on right now. We will either get to debate and vote on that tonight or, more likely, it is going to be done now, tomorrow.

Mr. LEAHY. If I may comment further, Mr. President, I will not delay this further. We have about 25 on the calendar itself—judges. I hope during the next few hours, or early tomorrow, the majority leader and I and a couple of others who are interested in this—Senator HATCH I am sure is—and others, that we might have a chance to talk about moving some of these other judges.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I observe the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that H.R. 10 now be the pending business, and immediately following the reporting by the clerk, the Senate resume H.R. 2431— that is the religious persecution bill—and that following the conclusion or yielding back of the time, the previous consent given by the Senate has been rescinded. Further, I ask that following the disposition of time on H.R. 2431 this evening, the Sencler then report H.R. 10, and the Senate then proceed immediately to a period for morning business.

Mr. SARBANES. I would like to inquire of the majority leader, I take it, then, that it is not the intention of the majority leader to file a cloture motion on H.R. 10 this evening.

Mr. LOTT. It is not my intention to do that.

Mr. SARBANES. I would like to inquire of the majority leader, I take it, then, that it is not the intention of the majority leader to file a cloture motion on H.R. 10 this evening.

Mr. LOTT. It is, therefore, the intention of the majority leader to let this proceed into another day; in other words, we lose a day on a cloture motion if one were to be filed.

Mr. LOTT. We do, because as I have assessed the situation, there are enough opportunities for cloture votes and delays that it would take us into next week. If you just look at the math, that is where it would go. You can go back and examine how we got in this position, and the answer is very simple: We have been trying to do other bills.

The only way we are going to get H.R. 10 now is by concession and by consensus, which is quite often the way the Senate works. We are going to have to see if we can find a way for Democrats who have worked on the bill and Republicans who have worked on it, some who have problems with it on both sides, can come together. There is also a concern from Secretary Rubin about a provision in the bill. But I would like to get it done. But we are not going to get it done by cloture motions. Therefore, I have no problem with going over another day and continuing to work and hope that we can find a way to come to an agreement on this bill.

Mr. SARBANES. I simply point out to the majority leader that the bill came out of the committee 16 to 2; that the relevant cloture vote we had where respect leader that he has, no intention to do that, to file the cloture motion, I am not going to object to the consent request, and then we move over until tomorrow. I wanted to keep this window of opportunity available, and now I know that the majority leader has no intention of availing himself of it, I am prepared to agree to this consent request.

Mr. LOTT. If the Senator from Maryland is trying to get the majority leader to take full resort for cloture filing cloture today, I accept it. It is my goal to get a bill, and I concluded that another cloture motion at this time on this bill is fruitless. I am perfectly willing to accept that responsibility.

Mr. SARBANES. I think I also point out to the majority leader that the effort to try to develop accommodations has to be a broad-based effort.

Mr. LOTT. It does. Mr. SARBANES. When we come in with 88 people on one side of the equation, if the 11 are going to hold us hostage or some of the 11 hostage—actually the word “extortion” was used in another context in the debate on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. LOTT. You wouldn't want to use that word. I think I have a card here I can call you on.

Mr. SARBANES. People are going to be highly resistant, I might say to the majority leader.

Mr. LOTT. I want to remind the Senator from Maryland, I was one of the 88, not one of the 11, but the 11 is on both sides of the aisle. We are never going to get an agreement until we get the 11 to feel comfortable that they have the opportunity that they are entitled to under the rules to make their point. It is the wonderful way the Senate works.

Mr. SARBANES. I know, but a lot of us have given at the committee over and over again to get the bill where it is.

Mr. LOTT. That is the price you pay for that wonderful assignment. It is a great committee to be on. You get all that good stuff. We did the credit union bill this year. A lot of credit goes to everybody for that.

Mr. SARBANES. We did the housing bill.

Mr. LOTT. Housing bill, you have done a lot of good stuff.

Mr. SARBANES. We did a lot of good work.

Mr. LOTT. I think I want on that committee next year.

Mr. SARBANES. We would welcome you. You would be a valuable addition. to the committee, and you can see the inner dynamics of the committee that result in the kind of problem we are now facing on the floor of the Senate. It would be welcomed for you to be in that cockpit seeing what takes place.

Mr. ROBERTS. I appreciate that invitation, but I went to assure the Senator that is all geographic areas.

Mr. SARBANES. That may be, but I don't think unless you are actually there to see it firsthand you can fully appreciate exactly what takes place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SARBANES. I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, and I say to Senator NICKLES, thanks for your diligent work. I say to Senator SARBANES, Senator GRAMM and Senator SHELBY thanks for your cooperation at this time. And we hope we will have it again tomorrow.

I yield the floor.

(1) financial modernization legislation should benefit small institutions as well as large institutions;

(3) large numbers of community banks have elected or expressed interest in the subchapter S election; and

(b) Sense of the Committee.—It is the sense of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate that—

(1) the small business tax provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, should be more widely available to community banks;

(2) legislation should be passed to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, to—

(A) increase the allowable mortgage of S corporation shareholders;

(B) permit S corporation stock to be held in individual retirement accounts; and

(C) clarify that interests in investments held for safety, soundness, and liquidity purposes should not be considered to be passive income; and

Mr. GRAMM. Would the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I will be happy to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I just simply want to say to my colleague, Senator SARBANES, and to others who support this bill, that I am willing, and have continued to be willing, to sit down and try to work something out. It may be that this will not be worked out, but I just want to reaffirm my willingness to sit down with Senator SARBANES, or any other person, who is in a position to work anything out—certainly Senator SARBANES is—and see if we could find some common ground. Maybe we cannot. But I just want to reaffirm my willingness to do it. I have sat down and discussed this with Senator Dodd. And I am willing to do it again.

So it may be that there is no way we can arrive at the different views we have, but I wanted to reaffirm my willingness to make an effort again. Though it may or may not prove fruitless, I am willing to do it. And I would like to work something out because, save the so-called CRA provisions, I am for this bill.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I know the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma wants to be heard, but I would just like to pick up on this last point, if I could, if my colleague from Texas would yield—

Mr. GRAMM. I do not have the floor.

Mr. DODD. To say to my colleague from Texas, and others, I didn't have the benefit of hearing my friend's comments from Maryland, but I fervently hope—it has taken almost 20 years for us to come to the point where we are with financial services modernization. And my colleague from Texas has been on that committee for a long time, the Senator from Texas, I think is the longest sitting member from Maryland and knows the agony we have gone through, Mr. President, over the years of coming close and failing, for a variety of reasons, to be able to put through a modernization bill that would enjoy the kind of support this bill does.

And here we have the world looking to us. You have news today of the yen now having, compared to the dollar in exchange rates, in the last 48 hours, dropped to an lower rate than it has in 50 years—50 years. We have a problem in Brazil of significant magnitude. It is no secret here that the world looks to us for a sense of confidence. And here we are within hours of leaving this session of Congress with a strong bipartisan bill, led by the Senator from Maryland, the Senator from New York, Senator D'AMATO, the chairman of the committee, with a 16-2 vote coming out of that committee, and 88-11 on a floor vote.

My colleague from Texas feels strongly about the CRA provisions, and I respect that. But I would strongly argue that there is going to be ample time for us, whether today or tomorrow, if we can get it done, but if not certainly the next Congress to deal with the CRA provisions.

There may not be another opportunity that comes along to deal with the issue. I say to the Senator from Texas. As he knows, we have spent so many years trying to put together—here we are on the threshold of doing something truly significant in this Congress, and as strongly as people feel about CRA, we should never allow that issue to deprive us of an opportunity to send a message not only here at home, but abroad that this country, that this Congress can modernize its financial institutions to such a degree that we send that message of confidence at this critical hour, a message of confidence.

The Democrats and Republicans have been able to come together on an issue that has divided us over the years. So I fervently hope that we will not allow that one issue to outweigh the enormous benefits that this bill offers people at home and abroad when the world financial crisis is literally on our doorstep.

So I hope that either something gets worked out or that those who are for it would be willing to put aside their feelings on the CRA issue until another day when there will literally be dozens of vehicles when that issue can be addressed. Mr. President, I tell you there are 12 or 13 dozens of vehicles available to us to do what we on the Banking Committee were able to present to all of our colleagues here for the first time in more than two decades, some would argue more than three decades. So the opportunity is here. I just hope we do not miss this.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Texas. As he knows, we have spent so many years trying to put together—a bill that is very important.

Though it may or may not prove fruitful, I think time is running. And we want to get back to our bill. I appreciate the comments that were made by the Senator from Texas, the Senator from Connecticut. And I echo those comments. I hope we can come to a compromise. I hope people do not draw the lines too firm in the sand and not allow us to make some minor adjustments to save a bill that is very important.

Mr. GRAMM. At the risk of overdoing it, could I have 30 seconds?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. It is interesting. I know what happens in these debates is we end up talking past each other. But the Senator's statement about "let's leave CRA to deal with next year" is precisely my position. The problem is, the bill has six new CRA provisions. So if we were leaving CRA to be dealt with next year, we would have no dispute, we would debate it next year.

I yield the floor.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. I will yield to my colleague from Maryland for 1 minute and then I am going to return to debate on the Religious Freedom Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must ask if there is unanimous consent for the Senator to yield, because questions have not been asked. And under the rules the Senator cannot—

Mr. NICKLES. I will be happy to yield to my colleague for a question.

Mr. SARBANES. I simply want to say to my colleague that I listened carefully to the distinguished Senator from Texas and this offer to try to work this out. The fact of the matter is, that colleagues have been buzzing around the Senator from Texas all week, like bees around a honeypot, although I am not sure describing the Senator from Texas as a honeypot is necessarily a very accurate description.

Mr. GRAMM. I like it.

Mr. SARBANES. I think there have been very reasonable efforts to reach an accommodation. They have not really gotten anywhere. If the Senator intends, in the name of accommodation, to make very substantial and substantive changes, then obviously a lot of people are going to have great difficulty with that. We have worked through this issue, and we reached an overwhelming consensus about it. And it seems to me that the effort now to sort of significantly rewrite these provisions is just not going to happen.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I am going to return to debate. And I ask unanimous consent that the hour and 40 minutes that intervened since my previous comments and the time allotted in the discussions and the quorum calls be outside the debate on the entire debate that we have on the religious freedom issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I was running through the potential sanctions, sanctions that would only apply for countries that were guilty of particularly severe violations of religious freedom. And particularly severe violations of religious freedom under our bill means: "Systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom; actions such as torture, cruel, inhuman, degrading treatment or punishment, prolonged detention without charges, causing the disappearance of persons by the abduction or clandestine detention of those persons, and other flagrant denials of the right to life, liberty or the security of persons."

And so, Mr. President, we define that. That is really bad actors. In those cases, our bill says that we would have sanctions. I was just discussing those. That would include the withdrawal, limitation or suspension of development assistance. It says "limitation." It didn't say "automatically all of it be limited, but at least some withdrawal or some limitation."

It gives the President the flexibility—a whole range of options. Also it would direct the director of OPEC or TDRA or EXIM to not approve guarantees, extensions or credits to the government involving gross violations to religious freedom. And it would have a sanction that would allow the withdrawal, limitation or suspension of security assistance. Again, it could be suspension. It could be limitation.

Also, another option would be instructing U.S. directors of international financial institutions to vote against loans to governments involving gross violations involving religious freedom. Another sanction option would be to prohibit the licenses or authority to export goods or technology to governments determined to be responsible for such persecution involving gross violations of religious liberty; and one final one prohibiting the U.S. Government from procuring or exporting goods or technology to governments involved in gross violations.

We have given the President a multiplicity of options, a range, which could reduce economic assistance; and other provisions might do more harm than good." The sanctions could be waived. It might result in greater persecution of individual beliefs by some governments. Our Government would have the option to waive these sanctions. We have modified that to accommodate some of the concerns that some of our people have. The sanctions can be waived to further the purposes of the act.

If persons involved—maybe the commission that studied this, maybe it is the Ambassador, maybe the State Department—said, "Wait a minute, some of these sanctions might do more harm than good," the sanctions could be waived. It might result in greater persecution of individual beliefs by some governments. Our Government would have the option to waive these sanctions. We have a commission of high-level people appointed by Congress and by the President to study and to make recommendations to the Congress and to the President, the Commission on International Religious Liberty, to make recommendations on what can be done to promote religious liberty worldwide; and we have given some tools and options to encourage positive behavior, positive efforts as well as some punitive efforts to try to modify behavior.

Our purpose in this bill is not to punish any country. Our purpose is to modify behavior to improve religious liberty worldwide. We don't want to be picking up the paper as we did earlier this year when the New York Times, for example, on May 11, had an article that said a Pakistani Catholic clergy was buried. It said a Roman Catholic bishop committed suicide last week apparently trying to protect religious liberty. Religious discrimination and persecution must be pretty severe if a bishop would commit suicide to protest the degree of persecution.

Other people have talked about Christians being sold into slavery in Sudan, or other countries where Christians, Jews, or other individuals were placed in prison merely for practicing their faith.

I want to thank again my colleagues who worked with me on this legislation. I mentioned Senator Lieberman earlier. I mentioned Senator Specter earlier. I mentioned Senator Lieberman who has worked with me in countless meetings for hours trying to work out this legislation. Senator Coats from Indiana is on the floor and will be called upon momentarily. No one has worked harder. I told him some time ago I feel that he is one of the best Senators I have had the opportunity to work with, and I mean that in all sincerity. He is a person with very strong religious beliefs and convictions, and his efforts to see this bill pass to make sure that we improve religious liberty worldwide are very much recognized, very much appreciated by this Senator, and I think by all Senators. I also would like to thank my colleagues, Senator Biden and Senator Feinstein, who have also worked with us in putting this legislation together.

I want to thank a couple of other people who have also worked in this effort. Steve Moffitt of my staff put in a lot of energy and a lot of the effort. John Hanford has put in years trying to enact measures to protect people who have been persecuted worldwide for religious beliefs. Also, on Senator Lieberman's staff, Cecile Shea has worked countless hours on this. I think them for their efforts.

I see my colleague from Indiana is on the floor. I am happy to yield him such time as he desires on this legislation.

How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has 41 minutes 49 seconds.

Mr. NICKLES. I yield my colleagues as much time as he desires.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, first of all, I begin by thanking my colleague and my friend from Oklahoma, Senator Nickles, for his friendship over the years as a Member of the Congress, in the last 10 years as a Member of the Senate, for his tireless work on a number of important issues facing this country, and for his tireless work on this issue, as difficult as the negotiations have been, to persevere, to bring it to this particular point. Senator Nickles has provided effective leadership and perseverance in resolving what I think is one of the most important issues that this Senate will be dealing with in this session of Congress. There are many others and I will mention some of those names at a later point.

The United States, which we are privileged and pleased to be citizens of, has long been considered a pillar of freedom around the world. Our Nation was founded by individuals fleeing persecution and discrimination throughout Europe. The founding documents of our country enshrine the value and principle of religious freedom. The very first clause of the first amendment guarantees each of us the right of free exercise of religion and prohibits our Government from dictating or establishing how we will worship and what we will believe.

Freedom of religion is enshrined in our founding documents because freedom, as a principle of religion, including the freedom to choose, to pray, to believe, to worship, to observe and practice one's belief individually or corporately. The freedom to practice one's religion without fear of outside intervention is the most fundamental liberty that any human being can possess.

We have a history as a country of concern not only for our own religious freedom but also for religious freedom in other countries. We want to stand as a beacon for religious freedom because we believe it goes to the most basic and most essential of all human freedoms and all human rights.

The cold war brought considerable national attention to the plight of Soviet Jews who faced extreme religious intolerance and persecution. The United States concerns ultimately translated into national policy, including the enactment of the Jackson-Vanik law in 1974. That declaration guarantees freedom of religion, including the freedom to choose one's own religious beliefs, to worship, to observe and practice one's religion individually or corporately.

Religious freedom is also recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948. That declaration guarantees freedom of religion, including the freedom to choose one's own religious beliefs, to worship, to observe and practice one's belief individually or corporately. Religious freedom is also recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948. That declaration guarantees freedom of religion, including the freedom to choose one's own religious beliefs, to worship, to observe and practice one's religion individually or corporately.

In our country, this freedom is acknowledged as a right endowed not by man, not by those who wrote those documents, but by our Creator. Therefore, they are unalienable and cannot be removed.

In Pakistan, Paul Marshall describes the treatment of Christians and Muslims and Animists, who have opposed political regimes, discrimination in employment, denial of participation in the political process, denial of common rights of citizenship, and in some cases, denial of the right to religious freedom. But these attacks can also take the form of extreme physical harm, torture, imprisonment, slavery, or death. In Iran, persecution is simply part of an overall pattern of government control over religious and other aspects of religious life. In Iran, persecution is simply part of an overall pattern of government control over religious and other aspects of religious life.

In China, the Christian home churches are flourishing despite the Communist government moves to strictly control churches. I trust we are familiar with the accounts of thousands of Catholic and Protestant Chinese who have been arrested, imprisoned, tortured, and killed. Christians from the north have been arrested, imprisoned, tortured and killed. Christians driven from their homelands to government-controlled areas of the country are forced to renounce their faith in order to receive food, housing, and other basic needs. In China as well, the government at-countries vital to our national security and pursue policies designed to promote our economic interests.

Yet as a Nation, especially a Nation with our heritage, we cannot close our eyes to real abuses and persecutions taking place in countries that have a balance, by and large, between compro- mised, apathetic, pretending to be ignorant. Because we are not ignorant. We must act wisely, but we must act. We need a comprehensive policy which draws greater attention to specific problems and works to change behavior. We also have a balance, by ways keeping in mind the plight of individuals and the role the United States can play in changing the behavior of other governments. Religious liberty has been our gift from the found- ers of this country; it is also our responsibility, and our torch to bear.

The Secretary of State’s Advisory Committee on Religious Freedom Abroad issued an interim report in January 1998. That report described our policies in this area.

The aim of U.S. foreign policy in this area should be to influence governments, with both positive and negative inducements and through public and private diplomacy, to live up to international standards of religious freedom.

This legislation can, first of all, alert us to the situations as they exist around the world, and then provide us a road map in terms of how we can most effectively address them.

The bill before us, introduced by Senators NICKEL, SPECTER and LIEBERMAN, is designed to promote and elevate religious freedom in our Nation’s conduct of foreign policy. My friends on the House side, led by Congressman WOLF of Virginia, have been tireless in pressing for this issue. I would like to take a moment to give credit to Congressman WOLF who has, without a doubt, been the most persistent and re- lentless advocate of our taking action to address the problem of religious freedom, together with CHRIS SMITH, and others in the House of Representa- tives. They have provided the impetus for this action and they have, through persuasion and education of Members of the House, alerted them to the problem that exists and achieved a very signif- icant vote in favor of what was then the Wolf-Specter bill. That bill has passed the House of Representatives and now, in the waning hours of the 105th Congress, the Senate, after ex- haustive negotiations, after a process that has gone on for an extraordinary amount of time, finds itself at this place.

Mr. President, a great number of people deserve credit for this work, includ- ing John Hanford of Senator LUGAR’s staff, Steve Moffitt, and my very own very able legislative assistant, Pam Sellars, and others on Senator NICKLES’ staff and Senator LIEBERMAN’s staff, have been working closely to fashion and iden- tify the legislation that will survive the myriad of proce- dural processes that we have to go through here in order to bring a bill to the floor, particularly in the waning hours. A great deal of effort and work has been put into making this a reality. I am so pleased that we stand here this evening on the verge of pas- sage of what I think is an extraor- dinarily important piece of legislation. The bill introduced in the Senate to strengthen religious freedoms abroad. The bill is balanced in its approach, it is comprehensive in its treatment, and it enables our Nation to custom-tailor our response to religious persecution in the many ways in which institutionalize our Nation’s histori- cal principles and religious liberty in our relations with other nations.

We establish an ambassador for inter- national religious freedom to help the State Department in assessing nations which engage or tolerate religious per- secution and to help promote religious freedom. We set up a process to ensure that the State Department is ade- quately focusing on religious freedom issues and that they report to Congress on what is happening. The State Department will have a country-wide assessment of religious freedom abroad with specific summaries of which countries are improving their records and in what ways our Government is actively engaging in change behavior that is not accept- able.

Most important, this bill establishes an independent commission of experts, appointed by the White House, the State Department, the Justice Department, the Senate, to monitor religious freedom on an ongoing basis and to make rec- ommendations to Congress on actions the U.S. can take in countries when persecution occurs. This is important because this is information that we need. We no longer will be able to sim- ply consign religious persecution and religious freedom to some clip we might read in the paper, or to some re- port that might come across our desk. We will have a commission constituted of experts, knowledgeable individuals, who will be able to present to us, on an annual basis, a de- tailed report of exactly what we are facing around the world. That can be the basis for this Congress and that can be the basis for the State Department and the administration—whichever ad- ministration is in power—to take signif- icant action and specific action to address these problems. I think that is the most important part of this bill and the one that will provide the impe- tus for this bill to pass.

There are a number of other provi- sions, and Senator NICKLES has laid some of them out—and others will dis- cuss those—which is important to the success of this legislation. On May 14, 1998, the House passed Congressman WOLF’s legislation—the Freedom From Religious Persecution Act—by an overwhelming margin of 375-41. Again, I commend my colleague, Steve Moffitt, for managing that. When that bill was passed by the House, it enables our Nation to custom-tailor our response to religious persecution that we find around the world and which seeks to change the behavior of those responsible. I trust that this legislation will flow what the House has done and demonstrate a strong, if not unanimous, vote for this bill.

Mr. President, in closing, I want to quote from the Statement of Con- science, issued by the National Evan- gelical Association for Mutual Understanding, in 1996:

Religious liberty is not a privilege to be granted or denied by an all-powerful state, but a God-given human right. Indeed, reli- gious liberty is the bedrock principle that animates our Republic and defines us as a people. We must share our love of religious liberty with other peoples, who in the eyes of our heart, are our neighbors. Hence, the re- sponsibility and that of the Government that represents us, to do everything we can to se- cure the blessing of religious liberty to all those suffering from religious persecution.

Mr. President, we in this country cannot begin to comprehend what peo- ple of faith in other nations have had to endure. They have had to put their health, their wealth, their family, their fortunes, and their very lives on the line. Many lives have been sacrificed in the name of religious expression, reli- gious belief. The persecution, which takes place in many countries around this world, is almost too terrible to de- scribe. As a Nation, as a people who have been so blessed with the freedom of religious belief, the least we can do is to hold ourselves out as an example and model for many nations around the world, but, more importantly, demon- strate through our policy that this violent human rights issue is an issue that cannot be ignored, sacrificed to trade, sacrificed to diplomatic relations, or to anything.

The basic human right, endowed by our Creator, for freedom of worship, freedom of belief, is something that the world desperately needs, something that we can promote. This legislation is designed to do that. I urge my col- leagues to support this bill. I cannot emphasize enough my deep conviction that we must act swiftly on this issue on which our country has, unfortunately, been silent on too long. We are now acting. We have come to that point. It is with great joy, I believe, in our hearts and in the hearts of people of faith throughout the world that the Senate will enact this legislation.

Our response to religious persecution in this world will not be in today’s action, but, more importantly, demon- strate through our policy that this violent human rights issue is an issue that cannot be ignored, sacrificed to trade, sacrificed to diplomatic relations, or to anything.

proud of the tradition that we have carried on, a tradition that finds its wording above our mantels here in this hall and says “In God We Trust,” a tradition that finds itself rooted in freedom, particularly religious freedom and religious expression of faith. They should be prouder that we passed this act and that we stand—and stand strong—around the world for religious freedom, freedom from persecution, and allow people of conscience to express their conscience and their desires as they see them fit before God.

Today, I stand to support the International Religious Freedom Act which addresses religious persecution worldwide. It is a noble and significant effort to confront an ancient prejudice which permeates societies and produces deep suffering.

I fervently hope that this legislation will be passed for many reasons. This legislation is an expression of solidarity with embattled minority faith communities. It supports those who simply and humbly seek to practice their religion in peace without crushing governmental interference. It supports those who were commanded to stop worshiping their God and refused. It supports those who fear for their safety and even life yet continue against the odds.

This is a legislative memorial to anyone who has been unjustly imprisoned for their faith, especially for the ones who either refused on principle and remained incarcerated for years, even decades. This is a memorial to peaceful believers who presently sit in jails throughout the world for the crime of daring to express their love of God. We put it above our doors in the U.S. Senate. We have written “In God We Trust.” Other people around the world sit in jail for uttering that same phrase.

This is a memorial to all persecuted believers who strain towards justice and freedom, and have no advocates.

I admire this bill particularly because it addresses the problem of state-sponsored persecution of peaceful religious groups. This is the most insidious form of persecution. How do sincere people of faith stand against the crushing onslaught of a hostile government? How does an individual, or a small faith community, stand against a national security force? Imagine countries where divisions of the national police are dedicated to stalking peaceful people of faith. Now imagine being the victim of this onslaught without any defense or advocates, whatsoever. This is true in communist nations, in developing nations, in ultra-nationalist nations. Bottom line—any individual who dares to stand alone, to stand against a hostile national government for their peaceful faith convictions deserves our advocacy. And this legislation provides tools for that advocacy.

In his 14th-century epic poem, “The Divine Comedy,” Dante believes a place reserved in the Inferno for those who refused to take a stand on the great moral issues of the day. I believe that religious freedom is one of those great moral issues. It is abundantly clear that in some parts of the world, your religious identity is your death warrant. This is simply wrong and self-evident. The Serenity Prayer of the American spirit, I believe that we all agree that religious liberty is worth our defense, that our nation was founded on this principle, and that it is central to the core of our American character. This legislation powerfully expresses our national concern for the sanctity of this fundamental right, internationally.

Is religious persecution advocacy our responsibility? It is certainly no less justified than our support for democracy dissidents in China or for Sakharov and Soltzenititsyn during the earlier days of Soviet Russia. There are striking parallels between both movements. Both, upon principle, refuse to bow the knee to the crushing dictates of hostile national governments. I am compelled by the stark image of a lone person refusing to recant a precious belief, and consequently incarcerated for the practice of fundamental rights, including free speech, assembly and association.

This occurs routinely in communist countries and other fundamentalist regimes. There are countless Chinese Christians who have been incarcerated for decades. Jail is known as “Chinese seminary” because the government incarcerates so many people for the crime of illegally sharing their faith. In North Vietnam, it’s even worse where, routinely, people of faith are incarcerated for 10 or 15 years. But the government does not stop there. Extended family members are also imprisoned, from grandparents and parents, to siblings and children—three generations being the victim of this onslaught of a hostile government. If we freedom-loving people do not stand for this fundamental principle who will? It is my honor to continue to advance the elementary notion that this is an inalienable right, which no one can dictate, not even a government. It is a higher principle, protected, divine, precious, fundamental, universal, and typically personal. And it deserves our protest on the same principle, so I am grateful for the advocacy tools provided by this legislation.

Throughout the centuries, many have fought for religious liberty at great personal cost. There is a magnificent cloud of witnesses who look down upon us, their scars bearing testimony to their commitment even to death for religious freedom.

Countless, nameless believers have engaged in tremendous feats of faith and self-sacrifice in the name of religious freedom and conviction. The 6 million Jews of Nazi Europe bear witness in an unmatched way for the sacrifice they made as a people for their religious identity. There are over 200 million Christian believers worldwide who presently live in nations which are so hostile to their faith that they are in physical jeopardy. The Bahai of Iran, one of the most devoutly peaceful faith communities in the world was racked in Iran with yet another execution last month and 15 more Bahai are faced with death row presently. The Tibetan Buddhists had thousands of monasteries destroyed, their nuns raped, their Dalai Lama forced into exile, their religion outlawed. The list is long, the suffering is great, and the opposition to their cause is oppressive throughout these great halls of freedom today.

Religious freedom is a fundamental, universal right protected by treaties and constitutions worldwide. I will continue to stand for this principle as long as people suffer for it, along with the many other Members of Congress who share this conviction. In the face of crushing persecution, in apparent defeat, there is a light that continues to shine. This light will not be extinguished. If we stand for anything, let us stand with those whose courage is a living testimony to the fundamental freedoms we love so deeply in America. Let us vote ‘yes’ on this legislation.

I urge my colleagues to do so.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, we would not be here today were it not for the tireless efforts of Senator DON NICKLES. Twenty-eight other Republican and Democratic Senators who co-sponsored S. 1868 (which is essentially the pending substitute amendment) and, for that matter all Americans, owe Senator NICKLES and his able staff a debt of gratitude.

Now then, the pending amendment is a modification of S. 1868. I am a co-sponsor of S. 1868, and while I vote for the pending change, I confess that it does not go far enough for my taste.

To be sure, these compromises were forced upon the sponsors by a White House and State Department who fought us at every step and habitually moved the goal posts during negotiations. The Clinton Administration may prefer that we do nothing, but doing nothing isn’t an option.

As you know, Mr. President, the Foreign Relations Committee has taken the lead in several historic steps by the Senate in recent months to advance U.S. foreign policy interests—including passage of a far-reaching State Department reorganization and U.N. reform package and the NATO Expansion Treaty.

Nevertheless, I believe it is obvious that neither initiative has stirred the hearts and souls of the folks back home in churches and synagogues to the same degree as the growing persistent torture and abuse of Christians, Jews and other religious minorities at the hands of intolerant foreign governments.
Americans are eager for their government to help ease the suffering of their brothers and sisters overseas. They are not at all satisfied with the inaction they have gotten to date.

I am sure these people—who are the backbone of this nation—have no quarrel with establishing special committees, or issuing reports, or having high level meetings with church groups. But Americans are looking for concrete action from the State Department and the White House—and certainly, people persevere in their faith in foreign lands deserve more than kind words and gestures.

It is important to emphasize that this issue, and the growing concern of Americans, have not fallen on deaf ears in the Senate. The Foreign Relations Committee held five hearings on this issue during the 105th Congress—two specifically on Senator Nickles' proposal. I especially want to thank Senators Brownback and Ashcroft for using their subcommittees to focus attention on this issue.

I hope every Senator will review the video tape of Senator Ashcroft's moving hearing on the tragic plight of Christians in southern Sudan. (These innocents have been brutally tortured, sold into slavery and, in some instances, literally crucified by the radical Islamic government simply because of their faith in Christ.)

The point is this: the vote we are about to take is a test to see whether Senators finally realize that, as a people and as a government, we must do more to advance the cause of religious freedom across the globe.

Finally, Mr. President, it is often pointed out—and I believe it with all my heart—that no matter what laws are enacted, religious intolerance will never be erased from the earth. I also believe that the prayers of millions of Americans and other believers around the world will accomplish more than any Act of Congress.

That does not mean we should not try. I hope the President will join with us as we attempt to strengthen U.S. leadership in this area.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, the Senate is debating the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998. In its current form, this bill is a careful compromise that has been months in the making. I had serious concerns about earlier versions of this legislation, but I am a cosponsor of today's compromise.

I am confident that we have crafted the right balance among different facets of American foreign policy. Economic freedom and individual liberties are not competitors—they go hand-in-hand! We want nations that are free, that respect rights and liberties, and that have free trade and market economies.

This is a bill that will focus America's attention on the desire to advance religious freedom around the world while doing no harm to America's national security, diplomatic or economic interests abroad. This is a bill that will give the President flexibility to craft a complete foreign policy—a foreign policy that does not elevate one facet of our foreign relations above all others.

Religious freedom and tolerance have always been America's creed. Freedom of religion is the first freedom guaranteed in our Bill of Rights. No person anywhere in the world—no Christian, no Jew, no Hindu, no Muslim, no Buddhist, no Bahai—a...no one—should suffer persecution and the State for worshipping as he or she sees fit. As a beacon of liberty and freedom, America has a moral duty to speak out against religious persecution around the world and to defend for people everywhere the fundamental right of freedom of worship.

At the same time, this bill recognizes that America bears a heavy and complicated burden of international leadership. Our relationships with other nations must reflect those complexities. American leadership is essential for international peace and security, free and open trade, a stable international economy and many other vital matters.

Like others, America must balance competing needs, interests and ideas. This bill gives the President flexibility to use the full power of American engagement to promote religious liberties abroad. America's strong commercial and diplomatic ties with other nations remain our most effective leverage to alter the behavior of authoritarian governments. American engagement abroad acts as a catalyst for change. The United States government cannot mandate religious freedom around the world, but America can lead the world in spreading respect for religious beliefs—just as we used the power of our example and determination to spread liberty, democracy and economic freedom around the globe.

This bill will focus U.S. government attention on religious persecution. It will make religious freedom part of American diplomacy from the training of foreign service officers to the granting of visa requests to the use of our embassy facilities.

This bill will also shine the light of day on countries, or entities within countries, that engage in religious persecution. It will require annual reporting on the state of religious freedom in every country, as well as annual publication of all actions the United States Government is taking around the world to promote religious liberty.

And, this bill establishes an orderly procedure for the President to consider taking targeted diplomatic and trade actions against the most severe violators of religious liberty.

This compromise gives the President the flexibility he needs to conduct a balanced foreign policy.

The President will have substantial flexibility to calibrate the most appropriate action to help change the behavior of the worst violators of religious freedom, including broad waiver authority and broad latitude to take actions other than sanctions. Congress will not be required to undertake a new series of counterproductive "mini-MFN" or "mini-drug legislation" debates about religious persecution around the world.

The Commission on International Religious Freedom established by the bill will make recommendations but will have no official role in shaping U.S. foreign policy. And the President will have substantial flexibility in deciding when and how to identify countries that will be subject to action under this bill. There will be no diplomatically damaging "list" of countries that violate religious freedoms.

Mr. President, this is not a perfect bill. But it is a good bill. Congress cannot, by passing a law, put an end to religious persecution outside our borders. But we can ensure that America speaks with one voice. We can ensure that our foreign policy does not mandate religious freedom, but America can lead the world in spreading respect for religious beliefs—just as we used the power of our example and determination to spread liberty, democracy and economic freedom around the globe.

This bill will amplify America's voice for freedom. It will strengthen the President's ability to craft a complete foreign policy in which the whole of America's national interests is not held captive to any single dynamic. Security, economics, diplomacy, trade, human rights, individual liberties—these are all part of America's national interests around the world. We can, we must, promote them all—we cannot afford to sacrifice any interest for any other interest.

When Congress returns next year, we should continue the effort to expand American engagement abroad—by passing fast track trade negotiating authority, by reforming outdated and counterproductive sanctions regimes, by reviewing every international institution, in which America participates, the furthest possible, so that the American military, which is the guarantor of our foreign policy, American leadership in all those areas is essential if we are to effectively promote individual liberties—including religious liberties—around the world.

We should pass this bill. And then Congress should resist the temptation to legislate further on this matter in the months and years ahead, and give this comprehensive new framework for religious freedom a chance to work.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, last week, as many of our friends and colleagues began the Jewish New Year with the Yom Kippur day of atonement—in freedom and in peace—millions of men and women elsewhere in the world were suffering for their faith. Mr. President, I believe that our freedom to pray is not something we can concede until all people are free to pray.

I am told of some specific examples which make me appreciate my freedom. and move me to come to the floor today. In Pakistan, a young man faces a death sentence based on trumped-up blasphemy charges. In Laos, ten courageous men and women of faith serve out harsh prison sentences for the crime of offering a Bible study, an act which many of us take part in regularly. In China, millions of Catholics and Protestants are forced to worship in secret, paying the price of prison, fines, and even torture if they are discovered. Muslims and Tibetan monks in China, Sudan, Christians and animists are sold into slavery or brutally murdered by an extremist Muslim government. These things ought not to be, and I believe that silence is no longer an option. We must act, and we must act wisely. For this reason, I join my colleagues from Oklahoma, Senator Nickles, in introducing S. 1988, the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998. This bill presents a responsible, flexible way of responding to the violations of religious freedom around the world. It allows for action that is comprehensive but calibrated. It requires consultation with those who best know the country in order to devise the most effective strategy. It ensures that the actions we take truly benefit the people who are suffering. The only option this bill does not allow is inaction.

The International Religious Freedom Act is not merely a short-term reaction to religious persecution. It has been carefully researched and crafted to promote long-term change, not simply to punish. There are numerous provisions for training our front lines in human rights policy—Foreign Service officers, ambassadors and refugee and asylum personnel. It incorporates religious freedom into numerous long-term avenues for change, such as broadcasting, Fulbright exchanges and legal protections for religious freedom.

This bill has wide support from a broad base of religious and grassroots organizations. With my colleague Don Nickles, we have listened to all who desired to contribute, and have worked with both sides of the aisle to address areas of concern. This bill is truly a collaborative product of countless hours of work among members of the Congress and the administration.

As Americans, we prize the right to freedom of religion. Our founding fathers sought to establish, as George Washington said, "a wall of separation between the powers of thought and conscience. We can look to William Penn as just one example of an individual in American history that strove to promote the rights of individuals to practice their religion without interference. His goal was to create a land of religious toleration—that land was called Pennsylvania. He even drew up the famous Pennsylvania Constitution, which included in its first article the protection of the freedom to worship according to one’s own conscience. To this day, America continues to be a beacon to the world, guaranteeing the freedom to worship as one desires. As a nation founded on Judeo-Christian principles, it especially saddens me when I learn about the increase in the persecution of Christian individuals worldwide. However, it is not just Christians in certain parts of the world that are being punished simply because of their beliefs—it is also those who practice Islam, Judaism, and just about every other religion or belief.

Our founding fathers made it clear in the Declaration of Independence that the broad rights of nature and of Nature’s God are entitled to all individuals. This guiding document, a unanimous Declaration of the thirteen United States of America, says that:...

The ability to practice one’s religious beliefs without undue government interference is a fundamental right—an unalienable right. The American founders believed in this right so much that they included the freedom of religion Clause in our First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America. The basic right to the freedom of thought, conscience and religion has also been declared by many other countries, as evidenced by the member signatories of the Helsinki Accords and the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

I believe this legislation will promote ideals that America stands for—specifically the freedom of religion—in the international community. This bill is especially important because religious persecution takes many forms and even seems to be on the rise in some parts of the world. The bill before us will deal with countries that disregard the basic right of individuals to believe as they choose in a manner that is consistent, yet flexible—one that allows the President to choose from a variety of measures to address the injustices of the violating country. It allows a flexible response from the Administration, which recognizes that religious persecution takes many different forms, with varying degrees of severity. The bill’s flexibility also recognizes the importance of a foreign policy that can be both pro-active and reactive to our national security and economic interests. One action in dealing with violators of religious freedom that would not be allowed by this bill would be that of inaction or silence. If we, as defenders of freedom, are silent in matters so fundamental to our political beliefs, systems of religious liberty, then we are no better than the perpetrators of this unjust persecution and discrimination. This bill would help create a consistent U.S. foreign policy with respect to how we deal with countries that do not respect individual freedom of thought and conscience. I urge my colleagues to join with me and the 28 other cosponsors to vote in favor of this bill.

Mr. Nickles. Mr. President, I yield my colleague from Minnesota 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. Grams. Thank you very much, Mr. President, and I thank Senator Nickles also.

Mr. President, I rise to support the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998. While I continue to have serious questions about the general concept of categorizing foreign individuals in a variety of partitions on a country considered a “country of particular concern” will enable us to make progress toward ending religious persecution, I have co-sponsored this legislation. The consideration has been made to redraft the legislation in a far more positive manner. Since it has significant support, it was important to ensure we will pass a version that had a better chance to work—not one that could have been counterproductive.

The Nickles compromise to the Wolfe-Specter version I believe is far superior, and has addressed the concerns of many others. Those who fear the original legislation could have actually harmed believers in other countries. Let me repeat—those who served as missionaries and promoters of religious freedom abroad told me this legislation could actually have been counterproductive. In fact, some of them questioned a government involvement in this debate at all, other than through normal diplomatic efforts—or even better than the efforts of religious leaders and missionaries themselves, who have been able to make progress on their own.

Yet, many Washington stakeholders, supported an approach, to publicly humiliate and punish countries which meet our definition of "a country of particular concern" for retribution toward any US government action. And some of these individuals, I believe, may have placed their own personal agendas ahead of the very people that we, through this bill and this legislation, want to help in these countries.

Mr. President, I strongly commend my colleague, Senator Nickles, for his understanding, his patience and his dedication to work with us on this legislation. I know he made many revisions to the bill which were recommended by myself and others that we thought would help change the focus from an approach that was more negative to one that was very positive and had a better opportunity to work. There is far more emphasis now on working with countries, working with them quietly to try to end those violations of religious freedom, and to working with our allies in order to try to reach multilateral solutions rather than a far less effective unilateral approach and solution.

The recent Nickles substitute before us, I think, gives the President more flexibility regarding how efforts to achieve religious freedom are reported and that we talk not only about the progress that must be made, but also the progress that has been made. The report that discusses the progress that needs to be made is less inflammatory and it does not link any suggested sanctions to each country of particular concern.

The President's waiver authority has been also expanded to permit a waiver if an action, including sanctions, would be counterproductive. And just this week it has been further expanded to a national interest waiver which is significant progress. I believe, to improve this bill. A waiver could be communicated to Congress the same day it is exercised rather than the earlier notice requirement.

One concern of mine, however, does still remain, and it relates to the commission which provides its own report on religious freedom. While the commission should be advisory, I believe, detailed employees from the Government should be added. I was informed late in the negotiations that awarded the commission $3 million for each of the 2 years for its own staff. That is a lot of staff when "free" staff was available.

Now I believe the commission needs some autonomy, but in my judgment this could further politicize the commission, which would make it less effective. But I am pleased that Senator Nickles added my requirement that the commission must have some direct experience abroad in order to be appointed to the commission. We must have a commission with members who have direct knowledge of religious freedom issues in targeted countries, those who have been there, those who know the problems that these people could face in the form of any kind of retribution toward any US government action taken.

I was also pleased that language was added to track some of Senator Nickles' provisions from an earlier notice requirement. It shall dictate how it is working and to have them if we are ready and willing to help religious believers in other countries.

Mr. President, this is good advice, and it shall dictate how I personally analyze the success or failure of this legislation.

But tonight I want to urge all my colleagues to strongly support this as a beginning. Again, I thank Senator Nickles for all the hard work to get us to this point on this legislation. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor. Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Minnesota for his leadership on this, for his willingness to meet with us for hours to work out some of the concerns that he had, the latest concern he mentioned being where some people who are in foreign countries who are missionaries wanted to make sure this wouldn't have a counterproductive effect. We actually put in a waiver of that. We have a waiver of that could be imposed if the administration felt like it would be counterproductive to the goals and purposes of the act.

Again, I thank my colleague, Senator Grams from Minnesota, for his willingness to work with us, to cosponsor this legislation.

Mr. President, I did not do this at the beginning of the debate and I should have. I ask unanimous consent to, in the advice of my Senator LIEBERMAN, have the following Senators be included as original cosponsors of this bill: Senators MACK, KEMP, THORNE, CRAIG, HUTCHINSON, ENZI,
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUPPORT OF THE AGRICULTURE APPROPRIATIONS BILL

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I rise tonight to express my grave disappointment of President Clinton's decision to veto the 1998 Agriculture Appropriations conference report, which includes emergency relief for farmers around the country, like those farmers in the Red River Valley area of my home state of Minnesota, who are struggling against a combination of devastating factors.

Inclement weather, low prices, high market yields generally, and multiple years of wheat scab disease have converged to produce an atmosphere where even the best, most competitive farmers in Northwestern Minnesota are suffering.

This, despite the fact that the Market Transition Payments in the FAIR Act have provided our nation's producers with a much greater safety net than the deficiency payments they would have received under the old program—about $7.5 billion more under the new plan.

Yet the President's actions will delay this important relief. This bill provides twice as much assistance as he originally requested, yet he has now joined the bidding war, changed his mind and now jeopardizes this needed assistance to our farmers.

It is crucial for farmers in Minnesota, as well as other states, that the Agriculture Appropriations bill be signed by the President and not used as a pawn in a political debate. The bill funds all of our agriculture programs including $675 million to Plains farmers to help offset crop failures, like those caused by the wheat scab epidemic.

It also includes $1.65 billion which is to be added to the annual market transition payments—this money will help to address depressed commodity prices.

The conference report funds $56 billion to fund needed agriculture programs. This includes funds for many crucial tools to help our farmers promote their commodities at home and throughout the world.

The bill funds the Farm Service Offices in our states to aid farmers in making the adjustment to Freedom to Farm.

It also funds the Foreign Agricultural Service, which promotes U.S. agricultural products abroad. The Service coordinates CCC Export Credit Guarantee Program; PL-480; Export Enhancement; and the Market Access Program. The bill will continue and expand needed assistance to farmers in the long term, as well as the short term. It is a good compromise. I voted for the conference report because there are sections that I, like many, oppose, such as language from an earlier House version which would create a backdoor extension of the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact. I raised some strong objections to this political maneuvering on the Senate floor last week.

It will allow an unjustifiable, reprehensible program to continue for another six months.

While I have deep reservations, this compromise is one that should continue to support one the President should sign.

Some say this compromise does not include enough to address the farm crisis. Yet, this conference report provides over $4.2 billion in farm relief money. This is the money that will be available immediately to farmers.

This is in addition to the regular AMTA payments—that is the marketing transition support payments which have provided roughly $17.5 billion to farmers over the last two years. This is also in addition to approximately $4 billion that producers will receive in loan deficiency payments this year.

Both Democrat and Republican plans were debated thoroughly in Committee, and the plan before the President is one that the Senate decided to support. The concept behind this agreement is that it continues to support farmers through the transition from the old failed system of our farm program to the new Freedom to Farm legislation, as well as to address needs created by weather and disease disasters.

It does not attempt to throw another net of Washington programs over our farmers.

Despite the partisan grandstanding you have heard, the plan before us will provide the transition assistance that our farmers need. And it will not undo the Freedom to Farm policy that we worked so hard to achieve.

Farmers in Minnesota have made it clear to me that their welfare. The relief plan currently in the Agriculture Appropriations report avoids going in that direction. It is a one-time support package, as opposed to returning to our failed agriculture policies of the past. It also avoids the flaw of lifting the loan caps, a move that would both exacerbate the current grain glut and also distort market signals, encouraging excess production, which would continue low prices.

It is painfully clear by this point that the only purpose served by promoting "lifting the loan caps" is one of grandstanding, and we all know that a higher loan rate leads both to increased production, larger surpluses along with lower prices.

This option again was rejected by the Senate, Senate twice, yet it keeps coming back, rearing its ugly head.

There is simply no justifiable basis for a Presidential veto of the Agriculture Appropriations bill.

As we have heard Chairman Cochran explain here on the floor, it contains a lot of money for production agriculture. So a threatened veto is certainly not about money—it is about politics.
I remind my colleagues the President’s original request for farmer relief—the original request—was $2.3 billion. The current package contains more than $4 billion. Now, however, he wants to veto legislation providing more money than his request. He has changed his mind and now wants $3 billion more.

This is simply a half-hearted attempt by the President to back a Democrat effort to revisit the Freedom to Farm bill. This is legislation that only 2 years ago the Congress and President Clinton himself agreed it was needed to move the business of agriculture out of the grip of Government control.

It is disturbing to me that when the White House does not get its way, it vetoes legislation or takes it to the courts, and if rejected there, appeals to the higher courts. The bottom line is that it continues to try and go around Congress, rejecting decisions made by a majority of Congress.

Minnesota farmers should not be used as pawns in an election-year drama. The President should help farmers by signing this significant, emergency legislation, rather than joining those who seek to undo the progress that has been made on agriculture policy.

The solution is here before us, and delays will be laid right at the President’s feet. For the sake of our nation’s farmers, let’s end the bidding war. Let’s end it now. I strongly urge the President to reconsider his decision as he reviews this crucial legislation again in the Omnibus Appropriations bill.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, Senator Grams from Minnesota, for his speech, but also for the homework and dedication that he had on this piece of legislation. He had some concerns about it. He was an effective Senator.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Assistant Majority Leader, Senator Nickles, and the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, Senator Lieberman. I want to salute their deeply held commitment to religious freedom for all people. I am aware that they and their staffs have been negotiating this bill for many months. They have been through draft after draft. With the Administration, a large number of Senators with different interests, and a wide range of concerned outside organizations.

Their mission has been to produce a bill that would make a meaningful contribution to combating the problem of religious persecution in foreign countries, one that would pass with broad support in the Senate, and a bill that the President would sign. I know how much time and energy they have been working on this effort.

Earlier this week, they had hoped to move the bill forward. There were still a number of provisions which I was concerned about, and I felt that since the bill had not come through the Foreign Relations Committee, on which I sit, and would not be open to amendment on the floor, I wanted a chance to address those concerns.

Despite the marathon talks the Assistant Majority Leader and the Senator from Connecticut had already engaged in on this bill with so many others, and despite my late entry into the fray, they graciously and without hesitation agreed to sit down with me to see if we could come to common agreement. We were also joined by Undersecretary of State Stuart Eizenstat.

I am happy to report that, as a result of these discussions, with good will by all sides, we were able to reach agreement on each of the provisions that was of concern to me, and I think the bill is better for it. Let me explain what we agreed upon.

First, I have come to the conclusion that when the Congress legislates sanctions, we need to provide the President with a reasonable amount of flexibility in the implementation, both to respond to changing conditions, and to protect other American interests.

Normally, we provide the President with a waiver authority for sanctions, but the standard of that waiver is critical. The State Department believes, and I agree, that the “national security” waiver standard in the most recent draft was too high—it would be difficult for the President to waive the sanctions required under this act except in extraordinary circumstances. A waiver of “national interest” was deemed by the sponsors to be too low. So we compromised: the President can now waive the sanctions in this bill if the so-called “important national interest” requires it.

Second, the definition of what constitutes a “particularly severe violation” of religious freedom was originally drafted in such a way that it could have inadvertently triggered other sanctions—those required for gross violations of human rights—under sections 116 and 502B of the Foreign Assistance Act. There was no intent in any of the discussions to trigger two sets of sanctions, so it was simply a matter of ensuring that a different standard was required for each trigger.

The standard we agreed upon was proposed by Senator Lieberman. Particularly severe violations of religious freedom are now defined as “systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom.”

To my mind, this is neither a higher nor lower standard than the “consistent pattern of gross violations of human rights” that requires a separate set of sanctions under the Foreign Assistance Act, but it is a sufficiently different standard that it finding under one act should not automatically trigger sanctions under both acts. I think this is an important improvement in the bill.

Third, we were concerned that there could be situations in which the President has already taken significant action against a country to respond to human rights abuses, and then a finding of particularly severe violations of religious freedom would require additional actions under this act. In the case of a country like Sudan, where we have already imposed extensive sanctions, it makes sense for the President to be able to cite an existing sanction as fulfilling the requirements of the International Religious Freedom Act.

Again, to the best of my knowledge, the sponsors of the bill had no desire to force the President to impose redundant sanctions on a country. So, in section 402(C)(4) we have developed language that allows the President to cite existing sanctions as fulfilling the requirements of this act. I think this change also makes the bill better.

We are all aware that there are people of faith who are suffering for their beliefs in many parts of the world. As a nation founded on the precious principle of religious freedom, a principle which is enshrined in the Bill of Rights, we cannot and must not turn a deaf ear to the cries of the oppressed. Making the protection of religious freedom a high priority in our foreign policy is the right thing to do.

The challenge is to create mechanisms to promote religious freedom and protect persecuted believers that: provide enough flexibility to respond to different conditions at different times and places; avoid having targets of sanctions making life harder for those we seek to help; and, make a meaningful contribution to the cause of religious freedom without unduly jeopardizing other important national interests.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998, which is the substitute amend-LIEBERMAN and also, as I said earlier, a lot of that credit goes to Senator hope and light. and conservatives, and everybody in the Record show that the combination of him personally, I just want to let the Senate demonstrate when it votes shortly. And perhaps the most impressive evidence of their success is that earlier today, National Security Ad- viser Sandy Berger informed the Mi- nority that the Administration now supports the bill as drafted. After so many months, we know that the President will sign this bill, and it will become law.
I yield the floor.
Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I know the Senator from Connecticut will be here shortly. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The Senator from Indiana.
Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I know our colleague, Senator LIEBERMAN, is on his way over to speak on this bill. I want to take this opportunity to say how much his presence and his involve- ment on this issue was necessary to our forging this bipartisan consensus. I think it is important that we speak with one voice as a nation on an issue as critical as religious persecution. It was the work of Senator LIEBERMAN, primarily on the other side of the aisle, that allowed us to address some of the concerns of some of our colleagues—many of them legitimate concerns—and to work through the process, con- vinced his colleagues that what we were attempting to do was done in a way that addressed their concerns. Rearranging it, without his help we could not have forged this bipartisan consensus. So while he is not here for me to praise it, he is looking forward to a solid vote tomorrow. Again, my compliments to all of those who played such an important role in that.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen- ator from West Virginia.
Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Indiana for his compliments. I want to reiterate my state- ment that Senator COATS was there from the beginning, and he was there at almost every meeting saying, “Let’s get this done,” and, “Let’s forge the consensus,” “Let’s make the compromise,” and he helped make it happen.
He is also very correct in com- plimenting Senator LIEBERMAN for his work. I mentioned that earlier. Senator LIEBERMAN has been with us on this bill for a long time. He has worked with us. He has helped us craft the bill and helped make com- promises to make sure it is enacted.
I also thank our colleague from Cali- fornia, Senator FEINSTEIN, whom we met with last night at length to be sure, again, that this bill would be ac- ceptable and we could get it through. We did. We made a change. We changed the waiver provision from “national se- curity” to “important national interests,” which, again, is something the administration wanted.
I think it is still compatible with our goals and objectives of passing a good bill that will help move countries, that have been persecuting people because of their religious beliefs, away from that behavior.
I thank my colleague from California for her work, and also the Senator from Delaware, Senator BIDEN, who three times in the last 15 years helped to reauthorize the independent counsel law, I have been giving a great deal of thought to the way in which the independent counsel statute has func- tioned in Kenneth Starr’s investigation of President Clinton.
The important purpose behind the statute was to have an objective person investigate credible allegations of violations of criminal law against top Ad- ministration officials in order to give confidence to the public that the At- torney General, an appointee of the President, was not put in the position of investigating those allegations.
But what if the person selected to in- vestigate those allegations by the spe- cial court, the three-judge court that appoints independent counsels, violates the restrictions in the law?
Some will dismiss these questions and more specific ones related to Mr. Starr’s investigation of the President as defending the President’s actions, actions which were irresponsible and immoral, and which by the President’s own acknowledgment, hurt those closest to him and which damaged the body politic of the nation. But dismissing such questions would be be- cause the actions of the independent counsel in this case, and the implica- tions his actions have on the future of the independent counsel law and, in- deed, upon the rule of law, demand our attention as well.
The authors of the law in 1978 at- tempted to put limits on the independent counsel in the law itself and pro- vided, for instance, that the independ- ent counsel must follow the policies of the J us tice Department and that the Attorney General could fire an inde- pendent counsel for cause.
The Supreme Court in Morrison v. Olson upheld the constitutionality of the independent counsel law in large part because of those provisions, stating that: ...the Act does give the Attorney General several means of supervising or controlling the prosecutorial powers that may be wield- ed by an independent counsel. Most impor- tantly, the Attorney General retains the power to remove the counsel for “good cause.” Power that the Act con- cluded provides the Executive with substan- tial ability to ensure that the laws are “faithfully executed” by an independent counsel. In addition... the Act requires that the counsel abide by Justice Department policy unless it is “not possible” to do so.

During each of the reauthorizations of the law, in 1983, 1987, and 1994, Congress was concerned about the potential for an open-ended, unlimited investigation by an independent counsel, and we adopted various restrictions in an effort to be fair to the President. We added, for example, a number of budgetary restrictions, reporting requirements, and a biannual GAO audit. And, we gave the Special Court the authority to terminate an independent counsel if it found that independent counsel’s work to be “substantially completed.”

Those of us involved in those reauthorizations worked in a bipartisan manner to put additional checks and limits on these investigations. We did so in the hope that we could preserve the core principle of the law—that someone outside of the Department of Justice could investigate credible allegations of criminal violations by high level Executive Branch officials.

Our goal has been to have independent counsels be like ordinary prosecutors, treating high-level government officials no better and no worse than a U.S. Attorney would treat a private citizen. The specific questions that need to be addressed are whether Mr. Starr has met that standard or whether he has violated important requirements of the independent counsel law, whether he has ignored his responsibility not to abuse the grand jury process and whether he has carried out the duty of all prosecutors as established by the Supreme Court not just to prosecute but to prosecute fairly.

ROLE OF PROSECUTOR

A prosecutor’s responsibility is unique among the criminal justice system. As articulated by Justice Sutherland in the 1935 Supreme Court case of Berger v. the United States, a prosecutor’s responsibility is not to do whatever it takes to get a conviction, but to “do justice.” Justice Sutherland wrote: “The United States Attorney is the representative not of an ordinary party to a controversy, but of a sovereignty whose obligation to govern impartially is as compelling as its obligation to govern at all; and whose interest, therefore, in a criminal prosecution is not that it shall win a case, but that justice shall be done. He may not歪曲tend to pedalset success or defeat. He must be content with less, content even to have his case fall short of complete success, if by so doing he protects the freedom of all.”

The President's responsibility to draw conclusions and arguments, it is also biased and prejudicial manner. Under the Constitution, the House has sole responsibility to decide whether or not the President should be impeached. The independent counsel does not have a statutory responsibility to argue for impeachment. His responsibility is to forward "information" to the Congress that "may constitute grounds for an impeachment." The independent counsel law says:

An independent counsel shall advise the House of Representatives of any substantial and credible information which such independent counsel has uncovered during the course of his investigation of the independent counsel’s responsibilities under (the independent counsel law) that may constitute grounds for an impeachment.

That is. That’s the extent of the independent counsel’s responsibility. The law doesn’t give an independent counsel the responsibility to argue for impeachment. But the report in effect did that. The independent counsel law doesn’t give the independent counsel the responsibility to draw conclusions from the information they present to Congress. But the report did that as well. For example, in the introduction to the report, Mr. Starr states unequivocally that "[t]he information reveals that President Clinton", and then lists seven conclusions such as: "lied under oath..."; "attempted to obstruct justice..."; "lied to potential grand jury witnesses."

In other parts of the report, Mr. Starr makes conclusory statements such as "President Clinton testifies falsely that..."; "the President’s denials—semantic and factual—do not withstand scrutiny"; "the President’s claim..."; "the President could not have believed the affirmation..."; "the President lied under oath three times."

The report not only is full of conclusions and arguments, it is also biased in its presentation because it omits exculpatory evidence. For instance, the Starr report omits Lewinsky’s clear statement before the grand jury that "no one ever asked [her] to lie" and "she was never promised a job" for [her] silence. (Appendices, Part 1, page 1161.)

The report doesn’t mention that Ms. Lewinsky testified that when she asked President Clinton whether she should get rid of his gifts to her in light of the Jones subpoena, his response was, “I don’t know, and that she left his office without “any notion” of what she should do. Starr with the gifts. (Appendices, Part 1, page 1122.) The report omits Ms. Lewinsky’s statement that when she asked the President if he wanted to see her affidavit in the Paula Jones case before she filed it, he said he didn’t want to see it. (Appendices, Part 1 page 1558)

VIOLATIONS OF THE INDEPENDENT COUNSEL LAW

No person is above the law. That principle is the touchstone of our system of government. And the rule of law holds true for both the prosecutor and the judge. Indeed, as we have seen, Mr. Starr has placed himself above the law in a number of ways even before he sent his report to Congress.

EXCEEDING LIMITED JURISDICTION

The Supreme Court was clear in 1988 when it reviewed the constitutionality of the independent counsel law that the specific and narrow jurisdiction granted to each independent counsel by the appointing court is key to the law’s constitutionality. The Supreme Court in Morrison v. Olson held that, “the independent counsel is an inferior officer under the Appointments Clause, with limited jurisdiction and tenure and lacking policymaking or significant administrative authority.” “Limited jurisdiction.” “Lacking policymaking authority.” Did Kenneth Starr respect this limitation in the law that created his office? I believe not. Again, the most fundamental limit in the law is that an independent counsel can investigate only that which is within the scope of the jurisdiction granted by the court that appoints him.

Mr. Starr was appointed to office in August 1994 to investigate Whitewater.
Three months earlier, in May of 1994, Paula Jones had filed her civil law suit against the President accusing him of sexual harassment. Mr. Starr's grant of authority was completely unrelated to the Paula Jones case and made no reference to it.

But in April of 1997, according to a June 25, 1997, article by Bob Woodward and Susan Schmidt in the Washington Post, FBI agents and prosecutors working for independent counsel Starr questioned Arkansas state troopers about their knowledge of any extramarital relationships Mr. Clinton may have had while governor and questioned a "number of women whose names have been mentioned in connection with President Clinton in the past. The two troopers who served on the governor's personal security detail, Roger Perry and Ronald Anderson, are quoted in the article as follows:

"In the past, I thought they were trying to get to the bottom of Whitewater," Perry said in an interview with The Washington Post.

"This last time, I was left with the impression that they wanted to show he was a womanizer. ...All they wanted to talk about was women. Women." (Interviewed in April 1997 for more than 1½ hours by an attorney in Starr's office and an FBI agent.

Perry, a 21-year veteran of the Arkansas state troopers, was asked about the most intimate details of Clinton's life. "They asked me if I had ever seen Bill Clinton perform a sexual act," Perry said. "The answer is no."

..."They asked me about Paula Jones, all kinds of questions about Paula Jones, whether I saw Clinton and Paula together and how many times," Perry said. ...Anderson said he refused to answer the questions about personal relationships Clinton may have had with women. "I said, 'If he's done something illegal, I will tell you. But I'm not going to answer a question about women that he knew because I just don't feel like it's anybody's business."

What justification did Mr. Starr provide for the inquiries in April of 1997? The Washington Post said deputy Whitewater counsel John Bates defended Mr. Starr's action by saying that the purpose, as restated by the Post, "is to ensure that a full and thorough investigation is conducted that leaves no avenue unexplored."

Mr. Starr's appointment was completely unrelated to the Paula Jones case. Yet here he was inquiring in significant detail in April 1997, leaving "no avenue unexplored," about possible relationships Mr. Clinton had with various women, including Paula Jones. And the New York Times reported on Sunday, October 4th, that contrary to Mr. Starr's statements in his report to the House that his office first learned of the Lewinsky affair from Linda Tripp on January 12th, the Starr office had been contacted by Jermoe Marcus, a Philadelphia lawyer with ties to the Paula Jones legal team, at least a week earlier. The earlier contact between Mr. Marcus and the Starr's office has now been confirmed by Mr. Starr's spokesman. The call from Mr. Marcus and his relationship to the Jones case was not, according to the New York Times, disclosed to the Justice Department when Mr. Starr sought to expand his jurisdiction.

So when, on January 12, 1998, Linda Tripp, who had been subpoenaed in the Paula Jones lawsuit, contacted Mr. Starr's office and told the office she had tapes of Monica Lewinsky describing an affair with President Clinton, the Starr office had already gone beyond its jurisdiction into the Paula Jones case.

Ms. Tripp apparently told Mr. Starr's office on January 12, 1998, that she had tapes of several recorded telephone conversations containing allegations that "the President had told Ms. Lewinsky to lie in the Paula Jones case. (Ms. Lewinsky later testified before the grand jury that she was lying to Ms. Tripp when she had said that on the tape.) Because secretly taped telephone conversations are a felony under Maryland law (Md. Code Ann., Section 10-402), Ms. Tripp discussed immunity from prosecution for her own actions. According to the FBI summary of Ms. Tripp's interview with the Starr office on January 12th, independent counsel Starr not only discussed with Ms. Tripp a grant of immunity under federal law and promised Ms. Tripp that his office "would do what it could to persuade the State of Maryland from prosecuting Ms. Tripp for any violations of that state wire-tapping law" (Page 223 of the Appendices to the Starr Report), Starr's office actually promised Ms. Tripp immunity. "OIC attorneys...advised Tripp she would be granted federal immunity by the OIC for the act of producing the tapes to the OIC." (FBI 302, interview with Linda Tripp, 1/12/98)

Again, with no jurisdiction to investigate matters involving the Jones case, Mr. Starr instructed FBI agents to equip Ms. Tripp with a hidden microphone and surreptitiously record a four-hour conversation with Ms. Lewinsky the following day, January 13th.

Where did Mr. Starr get the authority to enter into immunity negotiations with Ms. Tripp on January 12th? Where did Mr. Starr get the authority to instruct FBI agents to wire Ms. Tripp and tape her conversation with Ms. Lewinsky? Mr. Starr didn't have the authority and he didn't have the jurisdiction on January 12th. (He didn't receive the authority and jurisdiction until days later when he went to the White House Travel Office which by that time the court had also authorized. He thereby ignored the statutory limitations on his authority—the limits that confined him to matters involving Whitewater and investigations into the White House use of FBI files and the White House which by that time the court had also authorized. In doing so, he used some of the most powerful tools given to a prosecutor—immunity from criminal prosecution and electronic surveillance by the FBI—to go beyond what the law permitted him to do.

It was only after he gave immunity to Ms. Tripp and used FBI agents to monitor four hours of conversation between Ms. Tripp and Ms. Lewinsky on January 13th that independent counsel Starr sought authority to expand his jurisdiction. On Thursday, January 15, he contacted Attorney General Reno's office on an emergency, expedited basis to get the special court to authorize the added jurisdiction. The emergency was apparently caused by the threat of a story about the Lewinsky affair becoming public in an upcoming "NewswEEK" article.

A letter by Mr. Starr to Steve Brill, publisher of "Brill's Content," in March 1998 suggests that Mr. Starr based his request for expanded jurisdiction primarily on the FBI tape between Ms. Lewinsky and Ms. Tripp (again, a tape that the Starr office had no authority to obtain). The special court granted Mr. Starr jurisdiction in the Lewinsky matter on January 16th.

(2) Failure to Follow Justice Department Policies

Mr. Starr also violated the independent counsel law's requirement that he follow the policies of the Department of Justice. The Supreme Court placed great emphasis on the law's requirement that an independent counsel be bound by the policies of the Department of Justice. The only exception to this rule is where compliance with Departmental policies would be "inconsistent with the purposes of the statute" such as, for example, compliance with a policy requiring the permission of the Attorney General personally to take a specific act. Barring this exception, the law is clear that independent counsels must comply with Justice Department policies.

The Supreme Court placed great emphasis on the law's requirement that an independent counsel be bound by the policies of the Department of Justice and that the independent counsel law "does not include any authority to formulate policy for the Government or the Executive Branch."

Yet there are at least five instances in which Mr. Starr appears to have failed to follow Justice Department policy: discussing immunity with Ms. Lewinsky without contacting her attorney of record; subpoenaing the Secret Service; subpoenaing news organizations; subpoenaing Ms. Lewinsky's mother; and subpoenaing the notes of the attorney for the late Vince Foster (arguing that the attorney-client privilege terminates upon the death of the client).
Ms. Lewinsky was first confronted by Mr. Starr's office then takes over the question/answer format. Ms. Immergut then describes meeting Ms. Tripp at the Ritz Carlton.

Ms. Lewinsky: She was late. I saw her come down the escalator. And as I—as I walked toward her, she kind of motioned behind her and Agent—and Agent—presented themselves to me and—

A Juror: Do you want to take a minute?

Ms. Lewinsky: And flashed their badges at me. They told me that I was under some kind of investigation and something to do with the Paula Jones case, that they—that they wanted to talk to me and give me a chance, I think, to cooperate, maybe. I told them I wasn't speaking to them without my attorney. They told me that that was fine, but I should know I won't be given as much information and won't be able to help myself as much with my attorney there. So I agreed to go. I was so scared.

(The witness begins crying.) [Then Ms. Lewinsky begins to cry so upset with Mr. Emmick, an attorney with Mr. Starr who was present when Ms. Lewinsky was confronted by Mr. Starr's office on January 30th, that he asked me to step out of the grand jury room, which it appears he finally does. Ms. Immergut, another attorney with Mr. Starr's office then takes over the questioning of Ms. Lewinsky and it turns into a question/answer format.]

Q: Okay. Did you go to a room with them at the hotel?

A: Yes.

Q: And what did you do then? Did you ever tell them that you wanted to call your mother?

A: I told them I wanted to talk to my attorney.

Q: Okay. So what happened?

A: And they told me—Mike (Emmick) came out and introduced himself to me and told me that—that Janet Reno had sanctioned Ken Starr to investigate my actions with the President and they—that they knew that I had signed a false affidavit, that they had me on tape saying I had committed perjury, that they were going to—that I could go to jail and they were going to charge me with perjury and obstruction of justice and subornation of perjury and witness tampering and something else.

Q: And you're saying at that point, who was talking to you about that stuff?

A: Mike Emmick and the two FBI guys.

Q: And where were you at that point?

A: Just—I felt so bad. [She then discusses why she feels bad and the question/answer session continues.]

Q: I guess later just to sort of finish up, I guess, with the facts of that day, was there a time then that you were—you just waited with the prosecutors until your mother came down?

A: No.

Q: Okay.

A: I mean, there was, but they— they told me they wanted me to cooperate. I asked them what cooperating meant it entailed, and they told me that—they had first they had told me before about that—that they had had that tape on the lunch that I had had with Linda at the Ritz Carlton the other day and they—then they told me that I was under some immunity offer and that I had to—I had to place calls or wear a wire to see—to call Betty and Mr. Jordan and possibly the President. And—

Q: And did you tell them you didn't want to do that?

A: Yes. I—I— I remember going through my mind, I thought, well, what if—what if you know, what if I'm not—I'm not smart, you're old enough, you don't need to make a decision. And then they didn't—they didn't want to talk about this, they didn't want anyone to find out and that they didn't want—that was the reason I couldn't call Mr. Carter [Ms. Lewinsky's attorney of record at the time]. Mr. Emmick had said that he would tell the person who took me to Mr. Carter. They told me that I could call this number and get another criminal attorney, but I didn't—I didn't know how to trust them. Then I just cried for a long time.

A Juror: All while you were crying, did they keep asking you questions? What were you doing?

Mr. Lewinsky: No, they just sat there and then—they just sort of sat there.

A Juror: How many hours did this go on?

Ms. Lewinsky: Maybe around two hours or so. And then they were—they kept saying there was this time constraint, there was a time constraint to make a decision. And then Bruce Udoiff came in at some point and they told me that they were going to—they weren't going to let me call my attorney, so I just—they called my mother and they—and they—and they didn't know what that meant. I mean, I thought if I left then they were just going to arrest me.

And then they told me that I should know that they were planning to prosecute my mom for the things that I had said that she had done. And then Ms. Lewinsky begins crying. Ms. Immergut asks if Ms. Lewinsky wants to take a break, and she says she does. The questioning then resumes.]
apparent violation of J ustice Department policy. Consider also what Mr. Starr's office was trying to get Ms. Lewinsky to do. She says under oath, before the grand jury, that they wanted her "to agree to be debriefed and that [she] have to place one could agree to a wire to Betty and Mr. Jordan and possibly the President." In a letter from Mr. Starr to Steven Brill, Mr. Starr said, "This is false. This Office never asked Ms. Lewinsky to agree to wire herself for a conversation with Mr. Jordan or possibly the President." Mr. Starr goes on to criticize Mr. Brill for making such a claim by saying, "You cite no source at all; nor could you, as we had no such plans."

But a memo from Starr's office itself of an interview with Ms. Lewinsky provides confirmation that Ms. Lewinsky was asked on January 18th to wear a wire. The relevant part of the interview summary says:

"Lewinsky, who was 24 years of age when approached by the Starr Office on January 16, 1998, was not prepared to wear a wire and/or record telephone conversations. The request to do so was a lot to handle that day and Lewinsky's mother, who concluded her parents and Bill Ginsberg." (Appendices, Part 1, page 1355)

In Mr. Starr's report to the House of Representatives he states, "In the evaluation of experienced prosecutors and investigative personnel, Ms. Lewinsky has provided truthful information." If Ms. Lewinsky is telling the truth when she swore that Mr. Starr's office tried to get her to talk to the FBI with Mr. Jordan or the President, then Mr. Starr was not speaking truthfully in his letter. And if Ms. Lewinsky is telling the truth that would mean Mr. Starr intended to surreptitiously record the President of the United States in order to develop evidence against him. A second example of Mr. Starr acting inconsistently with Department of Justice policy involves the testimony of the Secret Service in the Lewinsky matter. Over the strong objection of the Justice Department and for the first time in the nation's history, Mr. Starr asked a federal court to force Secret Service personnel to disclose how they operate and what they have observed of the President in the course of protecting him. No federal prosecutor had ever before asked a court to compel such testimony from a Secret Service agent, according to the Justice Department.

Discounting arguments regarding the safety of the president and effective operation of Secret Service personnel, Mr. Starr issued subpoenas which have proven in violation of Justice Department policy and in violation of Mr. Starr's legal obligation to comply with Justice Department policy. Moreover, Mr. Starr argued in his report to the House that the President's "acquiescence in the J ustice Department's opposition to the Secret Service subpoenas was evidence of obstruction of justice on the part of the President presumably because, Mr. Starr argues, the Justice Department's opposition to the Secret Service subpoena was "interposed to prevent the grand jury from gathering relevant information." This claim by Mr. Starr is so preposterous, particularly in light of the letter of support for the position of the President from President Bush, that it lays bare the excessive zeal of this investigation. The fact that the court eventually upheld the subpoenas issued by Mr. Starr does not indicate his position. His pursuit of subpoenas of Secret Service agents may not have violated the law, but it violated the policy of the Justice Department which Mr. Starr is bound to follow under the clear requirements of the independent counsel law.

Third, Mr. Starr issued subpoenas to news organizations to obtain nonpublic information from their news gathering efforts despite Justice Department regulations which caution federal prosecutors to take a number of steps before subpoenas are issued in order to safeguard freedom of the press. The regulations require trying elsewhere for the information, negotiating voluntary agreements to provide the information first, and, in a final provision that one court held was not binding on Mr. Starr, obtaining the Attorney General's permission prior to issuing a subpoena. Despite the established policy discouraging media subpoenas, independent counsel Starr issued subpoenas to news organizations on several occasions. When ABC News objected to one such subpoena, Mr. Starr stated in a court pleading that the Justice Department's "regulations of this type do not govern an Independent Counsel."

The fourth example of Mr. Starr not following Justice Department policy is the subpoena to Monica Lewinsky's mother. He issued this subpoena despite the U.S. Attorneys' Manual policy that the Department ordinarily avoid seeking to compel the testimony of a witness who is a close family relative of ... the person upon whose conduct grand jury scrutiny is focusing.

And fifth, in this same vein, but not related to the Lewinsky matter, Mr. Starr subpoenaed the notes of the late Vince Foster, arguing in an unprecedented case before the Supreme Court that the attorney-client privilege expired upon his death. The Justice Department's general policy is that federal prosecutors will respect bona fide attorney-client relationships, where possible, consistent with its law enforcement responsibilities and duties. The Supreme Court rejected Mr. Starr's policy-setting position. Violating the independent counsel law's limited grant of authority, ignoring established Justice Department policies (indeed making the claim that the independent counsel was governed by the Justice Department policies even though the independent counsel law says he is), Mr. Starr has made a mockery of the independent counsel process and the statutory constraints designed to insure that the independent counsels obey the same rules that apply to all other federal prosecutors.

USE OF THE GRAND JURY

also have concerns about Mr. Starr's use of the grand jury. Was Mr. Starr properly using the grand jury when he subpoenaed a federal employee who was on his personal time when he called friends in Maryland from his home to congratulate them on demanding an investigation of Linda Tripp for his illegal tape-recording of telephone conversations with Ms. Lewinsky? Robert Weiner was subpoenaed within 24 hours of the calls and wasn't even interviewed first or contacted by the independent counsel as an initial step. Among other questions, prosecutors asked him to reveal the future plans of Maryland Democrats. How could that possibly be an appropriate use of the grand jury?

Was Mr. Starr properly using the grand jury when he subpoenaed Sydney Blumenthal to testify before the grand jury on what he was telling reporters about Mr. Starr's office because Mr. Starr believed Mr. Blumenthal was trying to intimidate his staff? The answer is no. A person who is not under investigation by the independent counsel to criticize a prosecutor to the press without fear a grand jury subpoena.

There are numerous allegations that Mr. Starr and his staff inappropriately developed grand jury information to third parties in violation of rules governing grand jury secrecy. Rule 6(e) of the rules of federal criminal procedure prohibit prosecutors and grand jurors from discussing the proceedings before the grand jury.

Mr. Starr has explained communicating with the press in the August 1998 edition of "Brill's Content" as "countering misinformation that is being spread about our investigation in order to discredit our office and our dedicated career prosecutors." Mr. Brill also quotes Mr. Starr as saying that as long as the independent counsel is providing reporters with information about "what witnesses tell FBI agents" or the independent counsel's office "before they testify before the grand jury" it is not subject to Rule 6(e). If such a standard were adopted, there would be little practical restraint on the grand jury information a prosecutor could discuss with the press.

All matters of improper leaks by the Starr office were presented to Judge Norma Holloway Johnson, and the Associated Press reported in August of this year that Judge Johnson ruled that there is a prima facie case of violations of the grand jury secrecy rules. The Associated Press further reported that "the U.S. Court of Appeals rejected Starr's efforts to stop Johnson's investigation, allowing her to continue to collect evidence and hold a hearing to determine if Starr's office should be punished."

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Finally, there are the apparent and real conflicts of interest Mr. Starr has... copy of an affidavit of a witness in the Paula Jones case that was to be filed in that case—before the affidavit had been filed in court. While Mr. Starr's firm denied assisting Jones' legal team, it also resisted responding to a subpoena issued by the independent counsel relative to the sending of that affidavit. Also, the press reported that a former counsel to Paula Jones, Joseph Cammarata, admitted that he had sought legal advice on several occasions from one of his firm's partners, Robert Porter. So while Mr. Starr was working as independent counsel and continuing to serve as a partner at Kirkland and Ellis, one of his law partners allegedly gave legal advice to the counsel in the Paula Jones case, in possible violation of the independent counsel law which prohibits "any person associated with a firm with which [an] independent counsel is associated" investigating "any person involved in" any investigation conducted by such independent counsel.

CONCLUSION

The position that Mr. Starr occupies is a position of public trust and duty, designed to be free from politics and partisanship, a position with powerful tools for investigation, unlimited but for the parameters of the independent counsel law and for the common sense and good judgment of the person holding the office.

Kenneth Starr has acted with no effective limits, because although he is subject to the ultimate authority of the Attorney General, he can fire him for cause, she is effectively powerless to rein in his excesses because her discharge of him would be so reminiscent of the "Saturday Night Massacre" in which Archibald Cox, the prosecutor investigating Richard Nixon, was fired. (In fact, the Attorney General has already been threatened with impeachment simply because she has taken a stand to protect her ongoing criminal investigations and prosecution with respect to campaign finance abuses.) I have urged the Attorney General, by letter, to go to court to enforce the requirement that Mr. Starr abide by the policies of the Department of Justice. She has not responded and perhaps could not because, I am speculating here, it could make it even more difficult for her to finally act to restrain Mr. Starr should she decide to do so, as it might appear that she was doing so under pressure.

Some Democrats are reluctant to speak out against Mr. Starr's abuses of power out of fear that they will be perceived as defending the President's actions as improper. It is not their desire, or their preference, or their choice. They do not want to witness the most aggressive and most irresponsible of the President's troubles. It was raised under the pretension or suggestion as part of an evaluation of the independent counsel but really amounted to, I think, an unfair restraint of many charges that have been made against the independent counsel, most of which I believe have already been answered, or could be answered pretty easily. I served as a prosecutor for a number of years, and I would like just to share some thoughts. I prosecuted a number of government officials. And it was my experience during that process that government officials, more than any other person I had the occasion to investigate, were the most aggressive and most impossible to the prosecutor. It is part of their team effort with their attorneys to attack the person who is out speaking the truth.

It is not an easy job for this independent counsel to obtain the truth. These officials don't want it out. It is not their choice. It is not their preference, or their desire, that what they may have done is revealed, particularly if what they have done may involve perjury or some illegality.

So it is not an easy thing to do. And when the independent counsel was charged with going out and finding the truth, he faced a systematic effort to obfuscate that truth. I wish it weren't so, but that is what appears to be.

So now when we get through this process—it took several years to finally get this information that we now have—we have Members of the other party participating to come in here and attack the memo that ultimately what appears to be the truth. At least I have not heard it substantially disputed. And he submitted a report. They said, "Oh, well." Judge Sirica, he said, wanted to review the grand jury testimony. That was before the independent counsel law. That was an unprecedented thing, I suppose, for Judge Sirica to report grand jury testimony. There was no law.

But now, under the independent counsel law, the independent counsel is required to submit the information that he finds to the Congress, to the House of Representatives. That is what his duty was—to find out the truth and to submit it. And it was not easy to find the truth. It often is not. It was particularly difficult with the clever people he was dealing with in this instance.

So it just disturbs me, I must say. And if it is true, if he has so violated his oath of office, then he should remove him from office. If she has a basis for it, she ought to do it. And she will not be criticized by this Senator.

So they say, "Well, his duty is to prosecute fairly." Well, you don't prosecute fairly. You don't prosecute unless you get the facts. And his responsibility was to find those facts.

They say graphic details were not necessary. Well, I am glad that we have some fastidious concern. I think we do have too much unhealthy sex and stuff in this country today. But we have a denial. We had a suggestion that, "What did I was not really sex." So I suppose the details of what the President may have done are relevant to whether or not he had sex or not, and I am certain that is why the independent counsel felt it was his obligation to do so. And his goal is to report that information.

They say, "Well, he shouldn't have suggested in his report that the President lied under oath." That is one of the words that was said he used. But he was required to report on matters that may lead to impeachment charges.

So summary report was his opinion as to whether or not there was evidence accumulated sufficient to lead to impeachment. He is required to give his opinion and his summary of the evidence as to whether or not it required impeachment, and he concluded, based on all the evidence, that the President lied under oath, apparently, and he put that in his report.

I submit he was required to do so. Oh, they say, you didn't get all the exculpatory evidence. That's what didn't all come out, and that she said, Miss Lewinsky said, "No one ever asked me to lie." Well, I am not sure and therefore—but from what I read in the report, it would suggest to me that the Starr report didn't say anybody ever said she was asked to lie. The Starr report simply said that there were circumstances that led to that, apparently. But it did not use those words and he would not have been required to put it in his report.

So Judge Sirica's circumstances are not quite the same, is all I am saying. And I respect the distinguished Senator and his comments and his concern, and we were all ever, and we were all public official accountable. We ought to scrutinize all of our behavior here and we ought to be prepared to stand the heat. I am sure Mr. Starr has got to stand the heat like everybody else if he is going to be in the kitchen. If you recall, we have a word in the criminal lexicon today called "Sirica." And what happened was, if you will recall, some of those burglars who said, oh, this is just a two-bit burglar—do you remember that? Judge Sirica gave them the maximum sentence, the maximum "joh," and what is when they testified.

So I am sure these things are tough for Miss Lewinsky or anyone else. She had a choice whether she was going to cooperate or not. She continued to hold fast to her previous story, and it does appear that she did for a while adhere to one story and then changed it.

So I don't believe the independent counsel has placed himself above the law. I don't believe he has abused his office. And I don't believe most of the other complaints that have been made about the independent counsel, once the full facts are out, are going to suggest any problems. No doubt, there are so many complex rules over the period of an investigation, somebody will say you should have done this under this circumstance and you should not have done this under that circumstance. Normally, when happens, any evidence obtained from an improper source gets excluded from the trial and can't be used, but it doesn't undermine the overall integrity of the investigation if that was obtained properly.

So I don't know what the end of this will all be. It would please me if things get settled and that is the end of it, and this body isn't involved. I don't think we need to be debating these issues on the floor, and the only reason I have spent my floor time is because others have made statements related to those issues, so I felt I ought to suggest there might be another interpretation that could be given to those issues.

So, to me, the issues are complex. The House is dealing with this matter. Let's let the House deal with it. Let's try to make sure we have a bipartisan effort, or a nonpartisan effort, that no partisanship should be involved in this. Let's move up in the ranks.

Mr. President, I thank this body for allowing me to make these comments. I have some other things I could say but I will not. I just believe that we need to be careful. Let's let the House do their business, they have had votes over there. It is their business, not our business. And I think we would be better off if we left it there. I thank you.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The President from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. Is there a limitation on time? The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not any limitation.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. A HERO MOVES ON

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Random House College Dictionary defines the term "hero" first as "a man of distinguished courage and moral nobility who is admired for his brave deeds and noble qualities," and second as "a small loaf of Italian bread."

There is, of course, a wide disparity in these two definitions. I think I shall appropriately use that definition to describe the hero of whom I am about to speak, Senator J ohn H erschel Glenn, J r. I have had the honor of serving with him in the Senate for the last 24 years.

Mr. President, he is a gentleman. He is a great public servant to all the Ohioans whose beliefs and values he has so ably represented in this body.

As Senator Glenn prepares to officially retire from the Senate and take up his wings of flight once again, I shall use a few minutes to thank this distinguished Senator from Ohio for all that he has done for our Republic as a United States Senator and as a hero.

I thank him for his achievements as a Senator. I thank him for his dedication to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, on which he has served since 1975.

Following his personal motto: "You Keep Climbing," Senator Glenn has moved up in the ranks. From 1957 to 1965, he served as the chairman of the committee, and then as the ranking Democratic member until the present time.

As a member of the committee, Senator Glenn has worked to protect our Nation and its people utilizing his expert knowledge to combat the issue of nuclear proliferation, to protect our fellow Americans from all the environmental dangers that are associated with the byproducts of nuclear weapons, and to make the Government more accountable for waste and fraud.

As a member of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, on which I am pleased to serve with him, Senator...
GLENN has worked to ensure that the United States military remained ready and strong in the perilous aftermath of the cold war. He has shared a concern over the dangers of chemical weapons. He has joined others in attempting to ensure that our military has absorbed the lessons of the gulf war and is prepared to protect our troops from low levels of chemical weapons.

On these two committees, Senator GLENN has served as a voice of reason and common sense.

Senator GLENN is a hero for all of us in emulating as a result of his honor and dedication to his country, his family, and his own high standards.

I have asked this question in the Senate before: "Where have all the heroes gone?"

To this question I have no definitive answer, but I do know where this hero is going to go... again.

Senator JOHN GLENN is a steam engine in britches; he is atomic energy in the flesh.

The senior Senator from Ohio has been a daredevil virtually all of his life. Not one to know when to slow down, Senator GLENN has risked life and limb, both on the Earth's surface and in the vastness of space which encompasses it, for one thing, and one thing only—the United States of America.

JOHN GLENN is the legendarily blessed to have had the opportunity to soar above this Earth of ours, soar like an eagle, surveying the beauty of creation that is God's Green Earth.

To quote William Shakespeare in "twelfth night."

"Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them."

Senator GLENN is one who has achieved greatness through his service to his country; he is truly a great American hero.

Not only a veteran of World War II, having served in combat in the South Pacific after he was commissioned in the Marine Corps in 1943, JOHN GLENN is also a veteran of the Korean war.

Having survived 149 combat missions as a marine, our hero—our hero, my hero, your hero—our hero wanted to move on to a more challenging career as a test pilot of fighter and attack aircraft for the Navy and Marine Corps. And there he looked for new and extreme ways to test his mortality, on February 20, 1962. Astronaut JOHN GLENN gently squeezed his body into the Friendship 7 rocket and became the first American to orbit the Earth at almost 18,000 miles per hour.

Think of that. When I was young, I read a book by Jules Verne titled, "Around the World in 80 Days." JOHN GLENN went around the world in 89 minutes.

This may well have been the pinnacle of JOHN GLENN's life and career.

On that fateful Tuesday in 1962, not only was America waiting with nervously clenched fists for news on Lt. Col. JOHN GLENN's condition after his return to Earth, but the whole world was watching.

People from all nations prayed for the safe return of this brave man.

Mr. President, I quote from an article entitled "Nine: 'I have been saving this article, now, for almost 37 years—'Man's 'Finest Hour,' by the late David Lawrence, which was originally published in the March 5, 1962, edition of U.S. News & World Report.

"Miracles do happen when the world shows its humility in prayer. The voices that besought Almighty God to save the life of Colonel Glenn can speak again, as even more of us petition him to save humanity from nuclear war."

"For those prolonged minutes of prayer on Tuesday, Feb. 20, constituted man's 'finest hour.'"

Now, if the Good Lord is willing, on October 29, our friend and colleague— and hero—JOHN GLENN, still brimming with vital energy, will be leaving the relative comfort of Mother Earth far behind.

It is always a melancholy time when the institution of the United States Senate has one of its finest Members move on. But it is a glad time when one of its Members moves on to something greater."

"Excelsior, ever upward." That is the motto of JOHN GLENN. He has bigger fish to fry, so he is ready to get away from Washington, D.C.—far, far away.

Senator GLENN's return to space and aboard shuttle Discovery will add another significant page to the annals of history.

The capacity in which Senator GLENN will be operating on the Discovery is representative of the way in which he had lived the last three decades of his life, despite his global fame—modestly and without great fanfare.

I am certain that he will perform his mission on Discovery with the same diligence and sense of duty that he has shown in serving his great State of Ohio in the United States Senate.

The world in 1998 is a lot different from that world of 1962, when JOHN GLENN was first catapulted into space. Similarly, the space shuttle Discovery is about as close in design to the Friendship 7 rocket as an old Oliver typewriter—I was trying to remember the name of an old typewriter I had around the house when I was a boy—about as close in design to the Friendship 7 rocket as an old Oliver typewriter is to a home computer.

The one thing that shall remain constant in this most recent launch is that the world will once again be watching, gripping chairs, biting fingernails, and saying its prayers for the Glenn family. For JOHN GLENN, and for all the crew members of Discovery, and for Annie, that sweet little wife of JOHN.

It is hard to relate, to those Americans who were not yet born in 1962, the thrill and emotion of the world on Tuesday, February 20, of that year.

Technology has become so advanced that flights into space are routine.

Men and women are able to live for months at a time in floating space stations.

America tends to take for granted the risks that our Nation's astronauts take to perform scientific experiments, carefully placing communications satellites into orbit, and repairing important instruments of observation—all of which make life on Earth much more enjoyable.

In 1962, the risks were greater and there were many unknown factors that experience has now brought to light and revealed and smoothed over.

Senator GLENN's return to space brings all of us back to the awareness of the tremendous changes wrought by Americans within the career of one man.

So, this evening I take this opportunity to wish the best of luck to JOHN GLENN, Senator GLENN with the wind of change, and to Annie and to others of his family.

I anxiously anticipate Discovery's safe return to Earth, and I extend my best wishes, and those of my wife Erma, to Senator GLENN and to Annie for many more years of health and happiness after he returns to Earth and leaves the Halls of the Capitol behind.

Thank you, thank you, thank you, Senator GLENN.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Sessions). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ABRAMAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Sessions). Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR DIRK KEMPTHORNE

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, it is almost kind of sad in a way to think that DIRK KEMPTHORNE will be leaving the Senate after only one term in the U.S. Senate. It has been a pleasure to work with him, to be with him, to get to know him, to get to know his family, his wife Pat. But I will just say DIRK KEMPTHORNE is a Senator's Senator. He is a person who comes from the great State of Idaho.

He brought a great deal of, I must say, refreshing energy to the Senate. He served as mayor of Boise City for 7 years. He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1992 and proved something unconventional: He could get a lot done in his first term in the Senate. Most people have the idea you have to be in your last years in the Senate to get anything accomplished, but he proved quite the opposite.

He proved to be a very effective legislator. He proved to be a person who could work on both sides of the aisle, that he could work with Democrats and Republicans and make things happen.

He was the principal sponsor of a bill that most of us have claimed some part to, the unfunded mandates bill that President Clinton signed and it became...
law. It was strongly supported by States, Governors, mayors and commissioners and others who said, “Let’s quit passing unfunded mandates on to the States, cities and counties.”

He has been instrumental in leading the fight in needed reform in the Endangered Species Act. He has been a tireless worker on the Armed Services Committee.

He has always kept his priorities straight. His family has always been first and foremost. His love for his State is very evident.

Now he will return to the State of Idaho. He is running for Governor. I am very confident he will be elected Governor, and I am quite confident he will be one of the outstanding Governors in the country. I appreciate his service and his friendship. He has been an outstanding Senator. I hate to see him leave the U.S. Senate, but I do wish him, his wife and his family best wishes as he leaves the Senate and returns to his State and continues his public service in a different capacity, and that will be as Governor of the great State of Idaho.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR DAN COATS

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I also wish to pay my compliments and accolades to Senator Dan Coats of Indiana. I have had the pleasure of knowing Dan Coats ever since I was elected to the House of Representatives in 1990, the same year I was elected to serve in the U.S. Senate. He had something unusual happen.

When Dan Quayle was selected as Vice President and elected in 1988, Dan Coats was appointed to take his place in 1988.

That almost sounds like it was easy, but it turned out he had to run for re-election in 1990, and he won. But that was only for a partial term, and so he also ran for re-election in 1992. So he had the unenviable task of having really challenging races both in 1990 and in 1992 for the U.S. Senate. He won both, and deservedly so, because he has been an outstanding U.S. Senator.

I remember Dan Quayle telling me, “You’re really going to like Dan Coats.” Dan Quayle and I were good friends, and Dan Coats and I have become very good friends. And he was exactly right. Dan Coats and his wife, Marcia, his family, are not only good friends of our family, but I would say anybody serving in this body—anybody—whether they be on the House side or the Senate side, cannot help but like Dan and Marcia Coats. They are a couple—they are a couple—in the greatest tradition of the Senate.

His wife Marcia has been active in the Senate wives’ groups and active with the prayer groups that many of our wives are involved with. They go to functions together. They are mutually involved. They both play tennis. They both play golf. They both have a good time. They keep their priorities straight. They both have a very strong belief in God and in their families, and work comes down somewhere below that.

He has done an outstanding job as a Senator for the great State of Indiana. I would say that he has done an outstanding job as a Senator for all of us in America, whether it be his work on the Armed Services Committee, whether it be his tireless efforts on welfare reform in the Labor Committee, his efforts to try to reduce poverty, his efforts to alleviate suffering of our kids.

Many of our colleagues are not aware of it, but he is national president of the Big Brothers program, which could probably be a full-time job for anybody, but he is able to do that. He has been a Big Brother. He actually was a Big Brother in a town for a youngster who did not have a dad, did not have a mentor. Dan Coats became his mentor—as a matter of fact, became his best man at his wedding.

What a great compliment for an individual who, of course, had unlimited demands on his time, was willing to take time out and serve as a Big Brother to a young person who did not have a dad, and he did it for years. Ultimately this young man became quite a success, a success in his own right, and I think in large part because of the time and attention and love that Dan Coats gave to him. He selected Dan Coats as his best man at his wedding, which is quite a compliment.

Dan Coats was recently selected as Christian Statesman of the Year by a national organization. They had a big banquet honoring him, and it was well deserved. I have the pleasure of knowing Dan Coats in many respects. His belief in God, it is sincere, it is real. He is the embodiment of a Christian statesman. And so that award was well deserved.

He has been a leader, as many of us know, of the Senate Prayer Breakfast that we have ongoing in the Senate that goes back for years for years and years. He has been chairman or president of that group for us for the last year or so and has done a good job—done an outstanding job in every respect.

So he is absolutely a dear friend, and I hate to see him leave the Senate. He has served now in the Senate since 1988, so only for 10 years. But he also served 8 years in the House, and before that he served 2 years in the Army. So he has given a lot of years in public service, and he deserves, I guess, a chance to do something else.

But I am confident—absolutely confident—that whatever he does will be a great service to this country. He has been a real blessing to this body. He and his wife have been a real blessing to this country. And it is with great regret that I see Dan Coats join the group of retiring Senators. But I do wish him every best wish for his family, for his outstanding service to their State, to their country, to God, and to their family.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FREEDOM FROM RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION ACT OF 1998

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. NICKLES. President, I believe there is still some remaining time on both sides on the international religious freedom bill. I now yield back all remaining time for tonight’s debate on that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the substitute amendment is agreed to.

The substitute amendment (No. 3789) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

FINANCIAL SERVICES ACT OF 1998

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report H.R. 10.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 10) to enhance competition in the financial services industry by providing a prudential framework for the affiliation of banks, securities firms, and other financial service providers, and for other purposes.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate is now in a period of morning business.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

TRIBUTE TO DOUGLASS FONTAINE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a fellow Pascagoulan and personal friend, Mr. Douglass Fontaine. Doug has devoted his life to an industry for which Mississippians are proud to be recognized—hospitality.

A third generation hotelier, Doug grew up surrounded by the hotel industry. Both Doug’s parents and grandparents managed the historic Allison’s Wells Spa in Way, Mississippi. He too took his turn at managing Allison’s Wells after returning from Germany, where he managed an R & R hotel. He then eventually relocated to Pascagoula, and for more than 35 years has owned La Font Inn. Doug has not
Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I would like to make a brief comment, and go through the regular procedure with the leadership and the House. I would like to express some concerns which I have about the procedures where some of the amendments have been presented to leadership to conclude our session with the target date of October 9.

The Constitution gives to the Congress the authority and responsibility of appropriating funds that customarily proceeds with action in the Appropriations subcommittee, then the appropriations full committee, then the full body of the Senate, where Senators have an opportunity to comment on the legislation and to offer amendments, and then, when acted upon, goes to a conference in the House of Representatives, which has followed the same pattern—consideration of the subcommittee, full committee, and by the House, and then the conference committee.

That process has been short-circuited this year without having the legislation, the appropriations bill on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, come to the Senate floor. We have sought a conference with our distinguished House Members—Congressman PORTER, who chairs the House equivalent of the subcommittee, and Congressman Obey, the ranking minority leader—along with Senator Tom HARKIN, my ranking member of the subcommittee.

It would be my hope that as we proceed with the business of the Senate in future years, we would be able to proceed in regular order so that the Senate has an opportunity to consider the measure, Senators offer amendments, and go through the regular procedure on the House-Senate conference.

CRISTOPHER HAYES HONORED BY NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION COUNCIL

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, next week, on October 14th, the National Crime Prevention Council will honor Christopher F. Hayes of Boston as one of the seven recipients of this year's Ameritech Award of Excellence in Crime Prevention. The award recognizes individuals who demonstrate outstanding leadership, courage, and dedication to crime prevention in their neighborhoods, states, or nationally.

This honor is a well-deserved tribute to Christopher Hayes and his 13-year career as Founder and Director of the Neighborhood Crime Watch Unit of the Boston Police Department.

Mr. Hayes founded the Neighborhood Crime Watch Unit in 1985 as a one-person organization based on his philosophy that the key to crime prevention is to rely on connections from neighbor to neighbor and from people to people to work together and with the police to create innovative solutions for reducing local crimes. The initial model for his crime watch group was simple phone tree

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, while we are on the Appropriations Process, I would like to take a few moments to recognize the enormous contributions of the men and women. NCPA represents local, community pharmacists. They play a critical role in our nation's health care delivery system through careful drug monitoring services, personalized service, coordination with other health providers and services, and community-oriented care.

Each year, millions of Americans purchase prescription and non-prescription medications at their local pharmacist. Pharmacists can help them select the medication that is most appropriate and prevent harmful drug interactions. Pharmacists have the expertise and knowledge to help consumers face an intimidating array of medications associated with drug complications.

Community pharmacists are a highly effective advocate for community-oriented care. They provide reassurance and inspire the confidence of those they serve.

Independent community pharmacies are primarily family businesses, and they have roots in America's communities. They are owned by civic leaders who are actively involved in a variety of community-oriented public health, civic, and volunteer projects. Many hold local elected or appointed offices. Public service and commitment to community are hallmarks of independent pharmacy.

For all of these reasons, it is my pleasure to pay tribute to independent community pharmacists and the organizations that represent them. Through integrity, expertise and tenacity in the face of dramatic changes in our health care system, community pharmacists have inspired the confidence and trust of millions of Americans. Our Nation is truly well served by them.
whistle alert system that allowed neighbors to keep in touch with each other.

Today, the Neighborhood Crime Watch Unit offers support and training for such neighborhood groups, which now number over 40. The program has prevented a third of all streets in the city. The successes have been impressive. Entrenched drug dealers have been exposed and forced out. Muggings have been averted. Suspects have been arrested. Drugs have been seized. Vacant lots have been reclaimed. Neighborhoods have been reborn. Neighborhood watch units have been a vital part of the effort to reduce the crime rate in Boston to the record lows the city is now enjoying.

I commend Christopher Hayes for his innovative leadership and his extraordinary contribution to our city.

CONGRATULATIONS TO DR. SHUKRI KHURI OF MASSACHUSETTS WINNER OF THE BERRY PRIZE IN FEDERAL MEDICINE

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President. It is an honor to call to the attention of my colleagues in the Senate, Shukri F. Khuri, M.D., of the Brockton-West Roxbury, Massachusetts Veterans Affairs Medical Center, has been awarded the 1998 Frank Brown Berry Prize in Federal Medicine. This high honor is bestowed each year in memory of Frank Brown Berry, a thoracic surgeon and brigadier general who served in both World War I and World War II, and who served for seven years as the top medical officer in the Department of Defense. The award is presented jointly by U.S. Medicine newspaper and the Science Applications International Cooperation.

Dr. Khuri was chosen for this high honor from a large pool of nominees by a committee of representatives from the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Defense, the Veterans Health Administration, and the staff of U.S. Medicine.

Dr. Khuri received his medical education at the American University of Beirut before coming to the United States in 1972. Many of us know AUB well as one of the premier institutions of higher education in the Middle East, and as one of the strongest bulwarks of American ideals and values in that part of the world. Dr. Khuri’s recognition as one of the leading medical practitioners-scientists in the United States reminds us of another important fact about AUB. Many of its graduates—5,000 distinguished alumni—live here in the United States and make major contributions to life in the country in America. In fact, Dr. Khuri serves as President of AUB’s Alumni Association of North America.

Dr. Khuri is now Chief of Surgical Services and Chief of Cardiothoracic Surgery at the West Roxbury VA Medical Center, the largest open-heart surgery program in the VA health care system. He also serves as the Vice-Chairman of the Department of Surgery at Brigham and Women’s Hospital and is a Professor of Surgery at the Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Khuri was honored with the Berry Prize for his accomplishments in three important areas of medical research. He developed a device that monitors online myocardial protection during open heart surgery, a device which enables surgeons to monitor the effect of open heart surgery on the patient and to reduce the chance that the surgery will cause irreversible damage. Dr. Khuri’s device is a major innovation, and it seems likely to become a standard piece of equipment in all cardiac surgeries.

Second, in cooperation with the Navy, Dr. Khuri devised strategies to increase the conservation of blood during open-heart surgery. Third, he directed the creation of a model system to assess the quality of care that patients receive by using risk adjustment techniques. These accomplishments have significantly affected the practice of medicine in the United States.

I congratulate Dr. Khuri on the Berry Award and for his important contributions to American medicine. I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD an article from the August 1998 issue of U.S. Medicine, which describes Dr. Khuri’s accomplishments in greater detail.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[FROM THE U.S. MEDICINE, AUGUST 1998]

THE FRANK BROWN BERRY PRIZE FOR 1998; CARDIAC SURGERY, QUALITY ASSESSMENT

Name: Shukri F. Khuri, M.D.
Title: Chief of Surgical Services and Chief of Cardiothoracic Surgery, Brockton-West Roxbury VA Medical Center; Vice Chairman, Department of Surgery, Brigham and Women’s Hospital; Professor of Surgery, Harvard Medical School.

Summary Of Accomplishment: Three disparate areas of accomplishment.

1. Directing the creation of a model system to assess quality of care using risk-adjustment techniques.
2. Developing a device that monitors online myocardial protection during open heart surgery.
3. Through a collaboration with the Navy, devising strategies to better conserve blood during cardiac surgery.

Path To Accomplishment:

Research-Clinical Link: Dr. Khuri chairs the largest open heart surgery program in the health care system, and his medical contributions promise to have a far-reaching impact on medicine and health care around the world.

A native of Palestine, Dr. Khuri received his medical degree with distinction from the American University of Beirut in Lebanon. Following his internship, he received further training in the 1970s at Johns Hopkins University and at the Mayo Clinic.

Today, his curriculum vitae reads like a book.

When he first arrived in the U.S. in 1972, he relates, his intention was to return to Lebanon eventually. Fortunately, it was in 1976 and the strife was at its height. He could not think of returning. Harvard University recruited Dr. Khuri to come to West Roxbury VAMC. Again, he planned to stay only a few years, but instead has remained for 22 years.

The West Roxbury VAMC has the oldest and the largest open heart surgery program in the VA system and have been designated by the agency as a Center of Excellence in Cardiothoracic Surgery, West Roxbury VAMC proudly states.

“I’ve been chief of cardiothoracic surgery at West Roxbury since 1977,” Dr. Khuri comments. “Recognizing that one of the facility’s major strengths is offering the ability to combine investigative research with clinical practice, I feel we can only improve the way we deliver care by simultaneously conducting practical research that will answer the questions that we meet at the VA. This is an ideal environment that allowed me to combine both research as well as clinical care.”

For example, shortly after arriving he was allowed to pursue his interest in medical informatics. The result was the first automated ICU in the VA system. Subsequently, he chaired the surgery SIUG (Special Interest User Group), and was instrumental in developing software that is in current use in all VA surgical services.

pH In Heart Surgery: Almost all his achievements, Dr. Khuri explains, “have been borne out of some frustration with current limitations of our current clinical efforts.”

During open heart procedures, cardiac surgeries must cross-clamp and totally interrupt the blood supply to the heart in order to arrest it. However, to avoid irreversible tissue damage to the heart, they must employ myocardial protection techniques, comprised of administering solutions to the heart. Without such fluids, he explains, surgeon would be able to safely cut off the blood flow to the hear for only 15 to 20 minutes.

This is not enough time; cardiac surgery takes a lot longer, hence the need to find a way to evaluate how successfully the surgeons were protecting the heart during surgery. In a large series of basic animal experiments, which he subsequently conducted both at the West Roxbury VAMC and the NMR Magnel Laboratory at MIT, Dr. Khuri demonstrated that the rise in myocardial tissue hydrogen ion concentration (or fall in myocardial tissue pH, measured with a glass electrode which he had developed in conjunction with Vascular Technology, Inc., based in Chelmsford, Mass., provided an accurate metabolic measure of the magnitude of regional myocardial ischemia (i.e., the damage caused by the lack of adequate nutritive supply).

The electrode which he developed for this purpose is made of special 1 mm in diameter photoconductive glass containing silver chloride. Although the full 10 mm length of the electrode is inserted perpendicularly into the heart muscles, it is limited to its distal 4 mm tip, allowing assessment of the acid-base balance of the deepest and most vulnerable tissues of the heart.

His most recent project, the new electrode also allows for the simultaneous measurement of the temperature of the tissues at the

His most recent project, the new electrode also allows for the simultaneous measurement of the temperature of the tissues at the same site of electrode insertion. The electrode is attached to a computerized monitor which corrects for the changes in temperature and provides online readings of both the pH and the hydrogen ion concentration in the heart.

Dr. Khuri’s research group conducted animal studies which also demonstrated the utility of measuring regional myocardial pH changes in tissues other than the hearts, specifically in transposed musculocutaneous flaps and the intestinal wall.

The first myocardial pH measurements in man were reported by Dr. Khuri’s group in 1987. The technique has been utilized in more than 600 patients undergoing cardiac surgery. Based on the observations, a new concept of “pH-Guided Myocardial Management” has been formulated by Dr. Khuri and his group.

FDA approval for the Khuri pH Electrode and Monitor was obtained in 1987. At that time, however, “we were reluctant to distribute it nationwide, mainly because there was a lot more that we needed to understand about myocardial tissue pH and what it means to the patient,” the technology that really took a great deal of time after we developed the technology was to figure out what maneuvers to employ to maintain normal pH levels in the heart and to reverse a fall in pH.

“That was the key question that we addressed in our clinical and laboratory studies since 1987,” Dr. Khuri explains.

The final results of these studies was the development of a set of maneuvers that formed the basis of pH-Guided Myocardial Management.

“The underlying hypotheses behind all of this, which we ultimately have verified, is that acidosis occurs when something is wrong for the heart.” So if a surgeon can prevent myocardial acidosis during surgery chances are it will improve the protection of the heart and ultimately improve the outcome of the patients.

Dr. Khuri is optimistic that the impact of pH-guided myocardial management will be two-fold: surgeons will improve on the adequacy to protect the heart and therefore improve the outcomes of these patients, and also they will have a tool which allows them to assess bypass operation, exactly how well they have improved the blood supply to the heart.

His data are very compelling and have been shared with leading experts, who “feel that it is a very promising and valuable tool in cardiac surgery,” he relates. One leading expert has compared it to the new standard Swan-Ganz catheter developed some 30 years ago. The monitor, which he emphasizes has no known dangers or “downside,” might one day become a routine piece of cardiac surgery equipment.

Once it becomes widely available commercially he is confident the Veterans Health Administration will make it a standard operating procedure. VA medical facilities, particularly in cardiac surgery, have a wonderful tract record in the use of innovative technology from the pacemaker onwards” he relates. Once the device is available commercially, then “I’m almost certain that it would be applied within the VA.”

“But those things do take time. There are many skeptics out there” he notes. “There are many surgeons who believe they already know how to protect the heart and do not need another.”

Defeating The Bleeding: In 1983, Dr Khuri formed a collaboration with colleagues at the Naval Blood Research Laboratory (NBR) and one of the standing naval research institutes in the country,” to tackle another frustration of cardiac surgeons—unavoidable bleeding following open heart surgery.

All cardiac surgeons, he explains, are seeking methods to decrease this bleeding which sometimes can be bothersome. Through “very fruitful collaboration” with Dr. C. Robert Valeri and his team at the NBRL, Dr. Khuri has contributed to the understanding of this postoperative bleeding.

Through his years of research trying to alleviate this frustration, he has come to understand the role of platelets in bleeding diatheses and has identified a host of factors associated with the platelet which resulted in platelet-dysfunction during surgery. These include platelet aggregation, hypothermia, heparin, and hemodilution.

In addition, “we have demonstrated, for the first time,” the value of using platelet-poor plasma as an alternative to using fresh platelets and have shown, “I think unequivocally that you can use heparin-coated circuits with low-dose heparin to a big advantage during cardiopulmonary bypass.”

“We are advocating a compendium of techniques and maneuvers that, in our hands, at least, and neighborhood of postoperative bleeding” by almost 80 percent, he relates.

“Our blood loss postoperatively now is really minimal in these patients.” His unit has not taken a patient back to the operating room for bleeding in several months, a feat which he emphasizes has not been achieved anywhere else.

Part of the technique he advocates is the use of heparin-coated circuits with low-dose heparin, which decreases the need for heparin and reduces the risk of cardiopulmonary bypass. Not many institutions are using this technique—including VA facilities, he points out.

The cardiac surgery unit at Boston University, where the technique also is used, he states, “has had just as dramatic an experience in reducing their blood loss as we have here.”

Part of this work has been published, and one paper exploring his work on cryopreserved platelets has been accepted for publication in the Journal of Thoracic and Cardiovascular Surgery, which he hopes will add “academic credibility” to his strategy.

Dr. Khuri has had the opportunity, through publication of his work, to work with a number of institutions that have adopted his technique— including VHA facilities, he points out. In addition, "we have demonstrated, for the first time," that the technique of using platelet-poor plasma as an alternative to using fresh platelets has helped improve the outcomes adjusted for the severity of illness of its patients.

O/E Ratio: An assessment system was developed that enabled a particular surgical service to calculate the expected mortality or complications rate for patients undergoing surgery over a certain period of time in that hospital, based on the preoperative severity of their illness.

Then using the observed mortality rate for the same period, an observed to expected ratio, or “O/E Ratio” could be generated, he explains.

If the observed ratio is much higher than that expected, based on the severity of the illness of the patients, he explains, the assumption is that there are other factors that have contributed to the high mortality rate of that population, probably related to the quality of care in that institution.

A study was performed to validate the O/E Ratio as a measure of quality of care, and by January 1995, "we had developed for the first time a tool that would allow for risk adjustment, not only in cardiac surgery, but in almost every major field of non-cardiac surgery.

O/E Ratio: An assessment system was developed that enabled a particular surgical service to calculate the expected mortality or complications rate for patients undergoing surgery over a certain period of time in that hospital, based on the preoperative severity of their illness.

The committee he chaired put together a study to examine the unadjusted outcomes in the VA surgical services. In 1991, it launched the National VA Surgical Risk Study in 44 VA medical centers and assigned clinical nurses to collect preoperative, intraoperative, and outcomes data—both deaths and complications on all major operations.

From the inception of the study, an advisory board comprised of leading outside experts advised the study how to proceed and conduct analyses. Dr. Khuri also recruited Dr. Jennifer Daley, an expert in health services research, as his co-chair of the risk study. The results of this prospective analysis ultimately led to the development of national models that allowed VA to report its outcomes and for the VA to report its outcomes on a national level.

Dr. Khuri’s committee advised VA to explain to Congress the lack of national standards and pointed out that the agency was in the unique position not only to develop these national standards, but also to develop risk-adjusted outcomes with which it could compare one VA medical facility to another and to the national average.

It took almost three years to convince VA to make this claim to Congress and to agree to publish adverse events.

The program uses 88 full-time nurses to collect data on all major surgery in the VA, which is transmitted to the program database in Chicago. The "very rich database" contains over 400,000 cases, he relates, and generates annually a detailed report for each surgical service at the VA.

The program has published more than 17 public reports based on the NSQIP data and, within the coming year the program will be accessed through the Internet.

VHA believes one of the advantages it implemented in the outcome assessment program, he explains. First, the agency's uniform clinical and administrative database and software program (the Decentralized Hospital Computer Program, now known as VISTA) has permitted the NSQIP to access a consistent surgical scheduling module and operating room database to identify all operations performed in operating rooms throughout the country and to centralize the data so that the surgical nurse reviewers enter uniform data.

However, the NSQIP risk models and outcomes may have a few limitations, he caution, because they may not be generalizable to populations dissimilar to veterans. Further, to reduce the data collection burden for the nurse reviewers, operation and sub-specialty-specific patient risk factors are not collected for surgery at the VA.

A final limitation, Dr. Khuri notes, is that the outcomes measured in the NSQIP currently are restricted to the adverse occurrences of surgical mortality and morbidity and length of stay.

"There is a lot of interest now, not just among the VA surgeons, but among the surgical community outside of VA." Dr. Khuri contends, especially with modern medicine's current emphasis on managed care and cost containment.

"VA has completely adopted this." Dr. Khuri proudly notes, and "it is leading the world in the use of risk-adjusted outcomes."

"We think that the NSQIP is providing models that are leading the way towards the qualification of quality of surgery and the ability to compare the quality of care at various institutions using risk-adjusted outcomes." Dr. Khuri declares.

Results of the National VA Surgical Risk Study were published as lead through articles in the October 1997 issue of the Journal of the American College of Surgeons, and a full description of the NSQIP will be published in the upcoming October issue of the Annals of Surgery.

TRIBUTE TO BILL SHIELDS FOR HIS DISTINGUISHED SERVICE TO THE CONGRESS AND THE NATION

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to pay tribute to Bill Shields of the Department of Defense, who is retiring after two decades of impressive service to our Nation. He is an outstanding attorney whose intellectual skills and dedication have helped to maintain and improve our country's military.

Bill is a native of Buffalo, New York. He received his BA and JD degrees from the University of Buffalo, and a LL.M from the National Law Center at George Washington University.

Bill then served in a number of legal positions in the Department of Defense, including assistant in charge of a legal office in Florida, counsel for an air station in Maine, and international law attorney in Japan.

I first met Bill in 1987, when he joined my staff as a Congressional Fellow with the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources. As Chairman of that Committee I was extremely impressed with Bill's work on the Polygraph Protection Act and the Airline Ticketing Amendment. Senate staff spent hours researching these issues, drafting the statutory language, and preparing witnesses and Senators for hearings. His efforts were indispensable in obtaining enactment of those two critical pieces of legislation.

After leaving the Senate, Bill served as Deputy Assistant for Civil Affairs and as Deputy Director of the Appellate Government Division in the Department of the Navy, and excelled in both assignments.

In 1993, he became Legislative Counsel in the Senate of the Navy's Office of Legislative Affairs. In that position, he worked closely with us on the Senate Armed Services Committee on major issues such as the Strategic Defense Initiative, the A-12 aircraft contract termination, and the Seawolf submarine.

In 1994, Bill was appointed as Counsel and Special Assistant for Legislative Affairs in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. In that position, he has been deeply involved in issues such as research and development, test and evaluation, acquisition policy, major weapon systems, and intelligence. Bill was primary liaison with Congress for the Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology, the Director of Defense Research and Engineering, the Director of Test Systems Engineering and Evaluation and the Director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

In this capacity, Bill worked with Senators and staff on a daily basis to ensure the effective use of scarce defense resources. He was deeply involved in major defense restructuring. He was responsible for overseeing the authorization of $67 billion of the annual DOD budget for such projects as the F/A-18, F-22 and Joint Strike Fighter aircraft, the New Attack Submarine, the Commanche helicopter, numerous medical research projects and the Technology Reinvestment Program. On all of these issues, Bill's leadership, intelligence, and integrity have contributed significantly to the readiness and ability of our troops in the field.

The Congress has always owed a debt of gratitude to Bill Shields. His skilful leadership will continue to have a lasting impact on our national security for years to come. It has been an honor to be associated with this exceptional public servant. His distinguished service will genuinely be missed, both in the Pentagon and in Congress.

All of us who know Bill are grateful for his leadership and his friendship. We wish him every success in his new post as General Counsel for the American College of Radiology. We know that his wife Maryann, and his three children, Andrew, Molly and Brian, are proud of him as he reaches this special milestone, and all of us in Congress are proud of him too.
This revised Honesty in Sweepstakes legislation would go a long way toward protecting our nation's seniors and other vulnerable consumers from misleading and deceptive sweepstakes promotions. This is something we should do this year to protect consumers. I urge my colleagues to pass this legislation before the 105th Congress concludes.

For my colleagues' reference, I ask unanimous consent that this new Honesty in Sweepstakes language be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the language was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

...
that as the appropriations process continues, the negotiators will give fair and appropriate consideration to the Senate's $175 million earmark for prostate cancer research.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR DALE BUMPER

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I would like to pay a brief tribute to my friend and colleague and neighbor from the State of Arkansas, for his 24 years of service in the Senate.

I have had the pleasure of working with Senator DALE BUMPER since I was elected to the Senate 18 years ago. So I am completing three terms. He is just completing four terms. Twenty-four years in the Senate is a long time. But I think the Senate has been blessed by his humor, his levity. The camaraderie that Senator BUMPER has brought to the Senate floor and to the Senate group has been enjoyable, educational, and humorous, to say the least.

I have had the pleasure of serving with Senator BUMPER on the Energy Committee where he has been a ranking member for the last several years. We have worked together on a lot of legislation. We passed some good legislation, I might add, as well. So I compliment him for his years of service.

He served 4 years as Governor of Arkansas; I think he was elected in 1970, and elected to the U.S. Senate in 1974. It seems like he has been in the same chair for years. He has been the same Senator who will still get excited on a speech and pull his microphone cord to the limit. Maybe he might test the limit of the cord as much as anybody I know in the Senate—a very good speaker, a very good friend who has served his State very well.

We worked together on several pieces of legislation, including legislation that dealt with the exchange of lands, both for the Forest Service and for protecting lands in both Arkansas and Oklahoma, that would not have happened if it had not been for his good work and leadership. And frankly, he was a pleasure to work with on that bill, and many other pieces of legislation throughout our careers.

So I certainly wish DALE BUMPER and his wife Betty every best wish in their days ahead. He has made a valuable contribution as a Member of the Senate family. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. EFFORDS addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. EFFORDS. Let me first join my good friend from Oklahoma in his accolades for Senator BUMPER. I expect that I, as a Republican, probably supported some of Senator BUMPER's pieces of legislation more than any other Republican. And I had an opportunity to work with him on many that were not popular with some of the people, especially in the far West. But I point out that I have enjoyed so much working with him, especially in the far West. But I think the Senate has been blessed by his humor, his levity. The camaraderie that Senator BUMPER has brought to the Senate floor and to the Senate group has been enjoyable, educational, and humorous, to say the least.

I am going to be so sorry to see him leave. We had wonderful times together. And I expect we will have some more out in his great State.

of 18. This prohibition threatens both the religion and lifestyle of the Amish. The House has already passed by a voice vote H.R. 4257, introduced by my distinguished colleague, Representative JOSPEH R. PITTS, which is similar to the legislation that I have introduced today. I am aware that concerns to H.R. 4257 exist: safety issues have been raised by the Department of Labor and Constitutional issues have been raised by the Department of Justice; I have addressed these concerns in my legislation.

Under my legislation youths would not be allowed to operate power machinery, but would be restricted to performing activities such as sweeping, stacking wood, and writing orders. My legislation requires that the youths must be protected from wood particles or flying debris and wear protective equipment, all while under strict adult supervision. The Department of Labor must monitor these safeguards to insure that they are enforced.

The Department of Justice has stated that H.R. 4257 would "raise serious concerns" and "may impose an establishment clause. The House measure confers benefits only to a youth who is a "member of a religious sect or division thereof whose established teachings do not permit formal education beyond the eighth grade." In drafting my legislation, I attempted to overcome such an objection by conferring permission to work in sawmills to all youths who "are exempted from compulsory education laws after the eighth grade." Indeed, I think a broader focus is necessary to create a sufficient range of vocational opportunities for all youth who are legally out of school and in need of vocational opportunities.

I also believe that the logic of the Supreme Court's decision in Wisconsin v. Yoder supports my bill. Yoder held that Wisconsin's compulsory school attendance law requiring children to attend school until the age of 16 violated the Free Exercise clause. The Court found that the Wisconsin law imposed a substantial burden on the free exercise of religion by the Amish since attending school beyond the eighth grade "constrains the basic religious tenets and practices of the Amish." I argue that a similar argument can be made with respect to Amish youth working in sawmills. As their population grows and their subsistence through an agricultural way of life decreases, trades such as sawmills become more and more crucial to the continuation of their lifestyle. Barring youths from the sawmills denies these youths the very vocational training and path to self-reliance that was central to the Yoder Court's holding that the Amish were entitled to the final two years of public education.

At this stage in the legislative process, so close to the end of the 105th Congress, passage of my bill requires a unanimous consent agreement. I have already been notified that there are Senators who would object to such an agreement, and I do understand that a measure of this nature cannot be rushed through the Senate. Nevertheless, I believe my legislation in the hope of beginning a dialogue on this important issue.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. 2580. A bill to amend the Trade Act of 1974, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE TRADE FAIRNESS ACT OF 1998

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition today to introduce legislation responding to the critical steel import crisis along with my colleague from West Virginia, Senator ROCKEFELLER, who serves with me as co-chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, Senator HOLLINGS, and Senator DURBIN on behalf of the bipartisan "Trade Fairness Act of 1998" because it would amend the Trade Act of 1974 to remove statutory provisions which put our domestic industry at a significant disadvantage compared to their foreign competitors. Specifically, this bill makes technical corrections to the so-called "Section 201" provisions of the Trade Act of 1974 to harmonize our laws with international laws administered by the World Trade Organization.

While I know it is very late in the 105th legislative session, we intend that the introduction of this legislation will demonstrate our bipartisan commitment to responding to the current steel import crisis. Further, this should send a strong signal to the administration that it is high time that we respond.

Yesterday, Senator JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, 3rd, and Congressman JIM OBERSTAR and Congressman JOSEPH R. PITTS of the Senate and House Committees on Commerce, Ways and Means, and Railroads, and I met with representatives of the Clinton administration, specifically Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, Commerce Secretary William Daley, United States Trade Representative Ambassador Charlene Barshefsky and National Economic Council Advisor Gene Sperling, to discuss the steel import issue. At that meeting, representatives of the Clinton administration assured us that they are looking into actions that the administration can take to respond to the illegal dumping of foreign steel on the U.S. market but have yet to make a final decision on their response.

While I appreciate their efforts to take a closer look at the problem, I am disturbed by the Administration's failure to take immediate action up to this time to prevent cheap steel from flooding the American market. I am further disturbed by the fact that senior administration officials could
The urgency of this crisis and the failure of the administration to take action is well illustrated from testimony presented on September 10, 1998, where, as Chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, I joined House Chairman REGULA in convening a joint meeting of the Senate and House to hear from executives of the United Steelworkers of America and a number of the nation’s largest steel manufacturers about the current influx of imported steel into the United States. At that meeting, I expressed my profound concern regarding the impact on our steel companies and Steelworkers of the current financial crises in Asia and Russia, which have generated surges in U.S. imports of Asian and Russian steel.

The past three months have been the highest monthly import volumes in U.S. history and, with Asia and Russia in economic crisis and with other major industrial nations not accepting their tariffs, the adjustment has been traumatic. U.S. steel companies and employees are being damaged by this injurious unfair trade.

The United States has become the dumping ground for foreign steel. Russia has become the world’s number one steel exporting nation and China is now the world’s number one steel-producing nation, while enormous subsidies to foreign steel producers have continued. The U.S. Department of Commerce recently revealed that Russia, one of the world’s least efficient producers, was selling steel plate in the United States at more than 50 percent, or $110 per ton, below the constructed cost to make steel plate. The dumping of this cheap steel on the American market ultimately costs our steel companies in lost sales and results in fewer jobs for American workers.

Specifically, in the first half of 1998, total U.S. imports were 18.2 million long tons, which is a 12.4 percent increase over 1997’s record level of 16.2 million net tons for the same period. For the month of June 1998, total U.S. imports of steel mill products totaled over 3.7 million net tons, which is an increase of 39.2 percent from the June 1997 level of 2.6 million net tons. In June 1998, U.S. imports of finished steel imports were a record 3 million net tons, a 41.6 percent increase over the June 1997 2.1 million net tons.

Also in the first half of 1998, compared to the same period in 1997, steel imports from Japan are up 114 percent, steel imports from Korea are up 90 percent, from India are up 39 percent. Most significantly, the U.S. steel industry currently employs 163,000 people down from 500,000 people in the 1980’s. This situation is untenable for the American steelworkers, steel manufacturers, their customers, and the American people in general.

I believe that the growing coalition of steel manufacturers, steelworkers, and Congress must work together to remedy this import crisis before it is too late and the U.S. steel industry is forced to endure an excruciatingly painful economic downturn. The United States has many of the tools at its disposal to protect our steel industry from unfair and illegally dumped steel; therefore, I submitted Senate Concurrent Resolution 121 on September 29, 1998, to call on the President to take all necessary measures to respond to the surge of steel imports resulting from the Asian and Russian financial crises. Specifically, the resolution called on the President to: pursue enhanced enforcement of the U.S. trade laws; pursue all tools available to ensure that other nations accept a more equitable sharing of these steel imports; establish a task force to closely monitor U.S. imports of steel; and, report to Congress by January 5, 1999, on a comprehensive plan to respond to this surge of steel imports. I am pleased to state that as of today’s date, twenty-nine of my Senate colleagues have joined me in sponsoring this resolution.

While this resolution is an appropriate way for Congress to express our concerns and request immediate actions by the administration to respond to the steel import crisis, I think it is also important to give the administration all the necessary tools to fight the surge of these imports.

For example, in February 1998, the U.S. trade laws with Senator ROCKEFELLER, we discovered that our laws regarding safeguard actions actually put the United States at a disadvantage in the international trade arena. Safeguard actions, or section 201 of the 1974 Trade Act, provide a procedure whereby the President has the discretion to grant temporary import relief to a domestic industry seriously injured by increased imports. Our laws in this area are actually more strict than those agreed to in the Uruguay Round negotiations.

Specifically, it states “with respect to serious injury”, the ITC should consider “the rate and amount of the increase in imports of the product concerned in absolute and relative terms; the share of the domestic market taken by increased imports; changes in the levels of sales; production; productivity; capacity utilization; profits and losses; and, employment.” These factors are important guidance to the ITC in evaluating a petition of serious injury. Again, I think it is appropriate to be consistent with the WTO language as America increasingly interacts on a global scale.

The U.S. steel industry has become a world class industry with a very high quality product. This has been achieved at a great cost: $50 billion in new investment to restructure and modernize; 40 million tons of capacity taken out of the industry; and a work force for the future that has been reduced from 500,000 to 170,000. With these technical changes, the Administration will be armed with ammunition to bring a self-initiated Section 201 action on behalf... of the steel industry that has been harmed not only by the onslaught of cheap imports on a daily basis but by U.S. law that has prevented swift and immediate action by the U.S. government. This legislation is essential to allow the industry to respond quickly to the current steel import crisis. It will allow steel companies to compete in a more fair trade environment, preventing bankruptcies that would cause the loss of thousands of high-paying jobs in the steel industry. Too many steelworkers have lost their jobs due to unfair trade practices.

It is obvious that the matter is a sensitive one where imports are coming from Russia illustratively. The Russians are having enormous economic problems, are dumping steel in the United States far below cost to try to remedy their economic situation. Sympathetic as we may be to the problems of the Russians, when they dump, unload steel in the United States and undermine our steel industry, they violate international trade laws and it violates the trade laws of the United States.

To reiterate our meeting yesterday was one where those of us in Congress on the steel caucus asked the administration to take administrative action. We have requested a meeting with the President for tomorrow before the session ends to try to persuade him to take administrative action. Our requests are not protectionism. They are not protectionism, but they come within the definition of "free trade" where our laws are defined consistent with GATT and the World Trade Organization to prohibit subsidized goods and dumped goods from coming into this country.

Again, the legislation we are proposing today would remove the requirement that imports must be a substantial cause of the serious injury and only require that the damages be caused by the imports, by striking the word "substantial," which is consistent with GATT and the World Trade Organization. We have a higher definition than we have to. Our laws ought to be changed to eliminate "substantial cause" to "cause in fact." Secondly, this bill would change the definition of "serious injury" to include the injury by not seeking an excuse where there are other factors which may result in the imports.

A third part of the bill changes the definition of "serious injury" to include the injury by not seeking an excuse where there are other factors which may result in the imports. The administration ought to act on it. For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to join me in support of the legislation to bring fairness to our trade laws.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation which will help the President deal with the flood of dirt-cheap steel imports from one of our trading partners. The Section 201 reform bill I am proposing with my colleagues and Senate steel caucus co-chair, Senator SPECTER, will strengthen the President's ability to help domestic industries. They need an effective steel relief which would be immediate.

Import relief is what the U.S. steel industry desperately needs right now. We have requested a meeting with the President for tomorrow before the session ends to try to persuade him to take administrative action. Our requests are not protectionism. They are not protectionism, but they come within the definition of "free trade."
facing a flood of imported steel being sold at rock bottom prices—again, below the cost of production in some instances. We cannot compete against that kind of unfair competition. The legislation Senator SPECTER and I are introducing today will give the President an improved tool to ensure that when there is serious injury as a result of imports, the U.S. can respond.

Specifically, our legislation will reform Section 201 which permits the President to grant domestic industries import relief in circumstances where imports are the substantial cause of serious injury.

Under current law, domestic industries must show that increased imports are the “substantial cause” of serious injury—which means a cause that is important and not less than any other cause. This imposes an unfair, higher burden on domestic industries than is required to prove injury under World Trade Organization standards. The Safeguards Code of the World Trade Organization was established to make sure that fair trade did not mean countries had to put up with unfair practices. The WTO standard requires only that there be a causal link between injury and imports.

I believe that U.S. law should not impose a tougher standard for American companies of harm than the WTO uses for the international community. Applying the WTO standard is responsible and reasonable. In this bill, we propose the same standard for the U.S. as is used by the WTO.

Free trade must mean fair trade.

In addition, in this bill we also intend to conform U.S. law to the standard in the WTO Safeguards Code when considering the overall test for judging whether there has been serious harm to a domestic industry. We clarify that the International Trade Commission (ITC) should review the overall condition of the domestic industry in determining the degree of that injury by making it clear that it is the effect of the imports on the overall state of the industry that counts, not solely the effect on any one of the particular criteria used in the evaluation.

It is our sincere hope that Congress will act on this legislation and send the message that the United States will fight for the right of its industries to compete on a level playing field in world trade. If imports flood our markets, we will act to protect American industries against the consequences.

I am someone who adamantly believes the promotion of free trade is essential to our country’s continued economic growth. If we are to continue to expand the trade base of our economy we need U.S. industry to know that we will keep it fair. American industry and American workers can deal with fair trade, but they shouldn’t be asked to sit still for unfair trade practices that hurt workers and their families, while robbing the profit-margins of U.S. companies.

I intend to work in Congress, with my colleagues on the Finance Committee and those in the Administration responsible for trade policy to give the President better, more effective tools to ensure that our country can insist on fair trade. Our steel industry, indeed all U.S. industries, deserve no less. I will carefully monitor the steel import crisis and consider other appropriate actions as we see how this situation develops.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself and Mr. HOLLINGS):

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, my purpose today is to introduce legislation that would increase the authorization level of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. The recently passed TEA-21 legislation authorized NHTSA at its requested level, approximately $87.4 million. The Office of Management and Budget recently asked that NHTSA receive $99.9 million in the budget request. Although the Department of Transportation had requested $97.4 million, we are now informed by Secretary Slater that this authorization level will not permit the funding of “key safety initiatives.”

I know that no one in this body wants a situation where highway safety is degraded in any way. I also know that there is no opportunity that this legislation will clarify that to this Congress. This is an issue that we will address in the next Congress. I look forward to working with my colleagues to address this important issue of highway safety in a manner that provides an appropriate funding level to meet safety needs while also meeting our budget obligations and the consensus of the Appropriations Committee.

By Mr. BREAUX (for himself and Mr. MACK):

S. 2592. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for a prospective payment system for services furnished by psychiatric hospitals under the Medicare Program; to the Committee on Finance.

MEDICARE PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT SYSTEM ACT OF 1988

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, today my colleague CONNIE MACK and I are introducing legislation that would improve Medicare inpatient psychiatric care by reforming how Medicare pays for services provided in free-standing psychiatric hospitals and distinct-part psychiatric units of general hospitals. The Medicare Psychiatric Hospital Prospective Payment System Act of 1988 would establish over time a prospective payment system (PPS) for these providers. Currently psychiatric hospitals and units are exempt from PPS. Their costs are reimbursed under provisions in the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, or TEFRA.

The Balanced Budget Act (BBA) of 1997 made significant changes to the TEFRA payment system by reducing incentive payments and imposing a limit on what Medicare will pay for services provided in psychiatric facilities, regardless of a facility’s costs. The result is that many of these providers will be hit hard by deep and sudden cuts, with no transition period to adjust to the changes.

I believe that moving psychiatric hospitals to a prospective payment system will ensure that these changes do not reduce patient access to psychiatric care.

Our legislation proposes to transition psychiatric inpatient hospitals to a prospective payment system—a system that will be more efficient, allow for better planning, and lead to improved patient care. This legislation also addresses the short-term viability of many of these facilities to enable patients to continue receiving the specialized care these providers offer. For that reason, our legislation includes immediate financial relief to those psychiatric facilities hardest hit by the BBA: twenty-five percent of facilities in the first year, about thirteen percent in year two, and approximately ten percent in year three. The relief will then be phased in over the next two years. Specifically, the Breaux-Mack bill would limit an individual facility’s payment reductions to no more than five percent in the first year, seven and one-half percent in the second year, and ten percent in year three. After the third year, a PPS based on per diems would be phased in. In the first two years of the new PPS, the per diem rates would be adjusted downward to pay back the savings lost to the Medicare program as a result of the “hold harmless” provisions of the bill. Consequently, our bill is budget-neutral over five years, yet it provides some measure of relief to those Medicare providers most severely affected by the BBA and guarantees that beneficiaries will not lose vital services. But perhaps the most important feature of our bill is that it moves the last of the TEFRA providers—psychiatric facilities—out of a cost-based payment system and into a PER DIEM RATES.—The Secretary shall determine the per diem rate (determined under paragraph (7)(D)) of the facility-specific per diem rate weighted average per diem rate for each psychiatric facility that does not have a base fiscal year and before October 1, 2003, by—

(A) DURING TRANSITION PERIOD.—Notwithstanding section 1813(b), but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of payment with respect to the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services furnished to patients in psychiatric facilities that are owned and operated by a State, or local government and for facilities that are owned and operated by an agency or instrumentality of Federal, State, or local government and for facilities other than such facilities.

(B) UNDER FULLY IMPLEMENTED SYSTEM.—Subject to section 1813, the amount of payment with respect to the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services furnished to patients in psychiatric facilities that are owned and operated by a State, or local government and for facilities other than such facilities shall be computed by—

(1) establishing a separate average weighted per diem rate for each facility by—

(i) adjusting for variations among facilities by area in the average facility wage level per diem; and

(ii) adjusting for variations in case mix per diem among facilities (based on the patient classification system established by the Secretary under paragraph (4));

(2) computing the weighted average per diem rate determined under paragraph (1); and

(3) determining the Federal per diem rate under paragraph (3).

(A) BASE YEAR.—The Secretary shall determine, on a per diem basis, the allowable operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services for each psychiatric facility for its fiscal year that begins in the base fiscal year (as defined in paragraph (7)(A)), such costs determined as if subsection (b)(8) did not apply.

(B) UPDATING.—The Secretary shall update the amount determined under subparagraph (A) for each cost reporting period following the beginning of the fiscal year, based on the weighted average per diem rate determined under subparagraph (D) and such other factors as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(C) COMPUTATION OF STANDARDIZED PER DIEM RATE.—The Secretary shall standardize the amount determined under subparagraph (B) for each facility by—

(i) adjusting for variations among facilities by area in the average facility wage level per diem; and

(ii) adjusting for variations in case mix per diem among facilities (based on the patient classification system established by the Secretary under paragraph (4));

(D) COMPUTATION OF WEIGHTED AVERAGE PER DIEM RATE.—

(i) SEPARATE RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL AREAS.—Based on the standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (C) for each facility, the Secretary shall establish a separate weighted average per diem rate—

(I) for all psychiatric facilities located in an urban area (as defined in subsection (d)(2)(D)); and

(II) for all psychiatric facilities located in a rural area (as defined in subsection (d)(2)(D));

(ii) for HOSPITALS AND UNITS.—Subject to paragraph (7)(C), if the Secretary may compute a separate weighted average per diem rate for—

(I) psychiatric hospitals; and

(II) psychiatric units described in the matter following clause (v) of subsection (d)(3)(B).

If the Secretary establishes separate average weighted per diem rates under this clause, the Secretary shall also establish separate average per diem rates for facilities in such categories that are owned and operated by a Federal, State, or local government and for facilities other than such facilities.

(3) NEW FACILITIES.—In the case of a psychiatric facility that does not have a base fiscal year (as defined in paragraph (7)(A)), payment for the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services shall be made under this subsection using the applicable Federal per diem rate determined under paragraph (3).

(B) UNDER FULLY IMPLEMENTED SYSTEM.—Notwithstanding section 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of payment with respect to the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services furnished to patients in psychiatric facilities for each fiscal year that begins in the base fiscal year and before October 1, 2003, is equal to the applicable Federal per diem rate determined under paragraph (3) for the facility for the fiscal year in which the day of services occurred.

(C) NEW FACILITIES.—In the case of a psychiatric facility that does not have a base fiscal year (as defined in paragraph (7)(A)), payment for the operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services shall be made under this subsection using the applicable Federal per diem rate determined under paragraph (3).

(D) DETERMINATION OF FEDERAL PER DIEM RATE.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall determine, on a per diem basis, the allowable operating and capital-related costs of inpatient hospital services for the psychiatric facility for its fiscal year that begins in the base fiscal year (as defined in paragraph (7)(A)), such costs determined as if subsection (b)(8) did not apply.

(II) UPDATING.—The Secretary shall update the amount determined under subparagraph (I) for each cost reporting period beginning in the base fiscal year and before October 1, 2003, by a factor equal to the market basket percentage increase.

(3) DETERMINATION OF THE FEDERAL PER DIEM RATE.—
legislation prevents the type of dislocations we now face in the Home Health Care industry.

The purpose of this bill is to give psychiatric facilities a period of adjustment to the mandates of BBA while it provides for a transition period that will help providers adjust to a prospective payment system that will be installed in three years. At the end of this time psychiatric facilities will be paid on a prospective payment basis.

Psychiatric hospital managers understand that the financial limitations imposed by BBA on their facilities must be met, and this bill smooths out the requirements for accomplishing this in such a way that the integrity of patient care is maintained. I urge my colleagues to join me in co-sponsoring this important piece of legislation.

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself and Mr. COCHRAN):

S. 2583. A bill to provide disadvantaged children with access to dental services; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President today I introduce with my friend and colleague, Senator THAD COCHRAN, the Children’s Dental Health Improvement Act of 1998. The bill is designed to increase access to dental services for our disadvantaged children.

Medicaid’s Early and Periodic Screening Diagnosis and Treatment or “EPSDT” program requires states to not only pay for a comprehensive set of child health services, including dental services, but to assure delivery of those services. Unfortunately, low income children do not get the dental service they need. Despite the design of the Medicaid program to reach children and ensure access to routine dental care, the Inspector General of the Department of Health and Human Services reported in 1996 that only 18 percent of children eligible for Medicaid received even a single preventive dental service. The same report shows that state provides preventive services to more than 50 percent of eligible children.

Dentist participation is too low to assure access. We are falling short of our obligation to these children.

In the past few months, I have had the opportunity to speak to many of New Mexico’s rural health providers and have learned that for New Mexico, the problem is of crisis proportions. Less than 1% of New Mexico’s Medicaid dollars are used for children’s oral health care needs. My state alone projects a shortage of 157 dentists and 229 dental hygienists. Children in New Mexico and elsewhere are showing up in emergency rooms for treatment of tooth abscesses instead of getting their cavities filled early on. It provides for a transition period that will help prevent untreated dental problems from progressing and ultimately require more expensive interventions.

Many of these children come to emergency rooms and ultimately must be treated in the operating room.

Tooth decay remains the single most common chronic disease of childhood and according to the Children’s Dental Health Project, it affects more than half of all children by second grade. Tooth decay in children six year olds is 5 to 8 more common than asthma which is often cited as the most common chronic disease of childhood.

National data confirm that pediatric oral health in the U.S. is backsliding. Healthy People 2000 goals for dental needs of children will not be met. As this chart shows:

- 52% of our 6 to 8 year olds have dental caries, or cavities compared to 54% in 1986.
- Our goal was to decrease this to 35% by the year 2000; we have only succeeded in a 2% change in this area.

Additionally, we have slid backwards in some areas. The Healthy People 2000 oral health indicators show an increase in the percentage of children with untreated cavities. In 1996, 28% of our 6 to 8 year olds had untreated cavities compared to now where we find 31% of these children have untreated cavities. Tooth decay is increasingly a disease of low and modest income children. A substantial portion of decay in young children goes untreated. In fact, forty seven percent of decay in children aged 2 through 9 is untreated.

The Children’s Dental Health Improvement Act is designed to attack the problem from many fronts. First, our bill addresses the issue of provider shortage by expanding opportunities for training pediatric dental health care providers. Next, we will work towards increasing the actual care provided under the Medicaid program. Additionally, we have looked at the need for pediatric dental research to facilitate better approaches for care. Finally, we have put into place greater measures for surveillance of the problem and have looked at the need to increase accountability in the area of actual treatment once a problem is identified.

I am committed to solving the problem of adequate access to dental care for our children and view this as a public health issue that has gone unnoticed for too long. I will welcome my colleagues to work with me to ensure that these children have healthy smiles vs. chronic pain from untreated problems.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the text of the Children’s Dental Health Improvement Act of 1998 printed in the Record.
There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 2585. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to eliminate a threshold requirement relating to un-reimbursable expenses for compensation under the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program; to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENT TO THE NATIONAL VACCINE INJURY COMPENSATION PROGRAM

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce, with my friend and colleague from South Dakota, Tim JOHNSON, legislation to make several common-sense changes to the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program. This bill removes an unintended and unjustified barrier blocking certain children from qualifying for the compensation program. It also makes the necessary changes to allow new drugs to be incorporated into the program, including the newly-approved rotavirus vaccine.

The Vaccine Act dates back to 1986, when Congress determined that a no-fault alternative to the tort system would best accommodate the dual objectives of ensuring proper compensation to victims of vaccine injuries and fostering continued development and broad-scale availability of lifesaving vaccines.

Through the Vaccine Act, children seriously injured by a childhood vaccine can receive compensation for medical care, custodial or residential care, lifetime lost earnings, pain and suffering, and emotional distress—benefits comparable to those awarded through the judicial tort system.

Tragically, some children have been unfairly denied the right to petition for benefits under the program because they did not incur $1,000 or more in out-of-pocket medical expenses.

At first glance, the eligibility requirement of at least $1,000 in out-of-pocket medical expenses may seem like a reasonable way of deterring individuals from petitioning for benefits if they lack a material claim to compensation. However, the absence of out-of-pocket health care expenses does not mean a child has not been seriously injured, nor does it suggest they have access to other sources for recoupment of the losses their injury has exacted.

Many children, including the children of military personnel, Native American children covered by the Indian Health Service, children with Medicaid coverage, and children covered under employer-sponsored health plans with minimal cost-sharing requirements, do not have high out-of-pocket health care costs.

While health insurance may remove the burden of high medical bills, it does not replace lost income or cover custodial and residential care. It cannot compensate for the toll these injuries have taken and will take on the lives of these children. Health care costs are just one component of the compensation for which a seriously injured child is eligible.

I know of a Native American child in my own state who was profoundly injured after receiving a diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus vaccination. Within hours of receiving the shot, this five-month-old child had a seizure and suffered severe brain damage because of the defective pertussis component of the shot.

The doctors tell us that his disabilities will, throughout his lifetime, preclude this little boy from having a normal life. He will never live or work independently. But, because he receives health care from the Indian Health Service (IHS), he is not eligible for any benefits under the vaccine compensation program. Not only is this child barred from compensation for lost income and emotional trauma, he is denied financial support for his injury-related assisted living needs.

Through legislation, Congress can foster continued improvements in public health, the federal government has obstructed this child's right to sue vaccine manufacturers. But the program's gate-keeping mechanism is off the mark. What we are saying—however unintentionally—to this particular child and others like him is: "Fend for yourself." To deny this child the benefits available to other injured children is indefensible.

The Vaccine Act contains other safeguards to prevent unjustified requests for compensation. For example, no benefits claim is accepted without a thorough review and significant medical proof of severe injury directly related to the childhood vaccination. The $1,000 threshold is unnecessary.

I hope this Congress will seize the opportunity to reconcile the intended and actual standards of fairness by which the National Vaccine Compensation Program fulfills its role in the public health system. This bill will make a tremendous difference in the lives of children in desperate need of our support.

There is also a disconnect between the Act's intended consequences and its actual effect in regard to enrollment of new vaccines. Several vaccines that have been approved by the Food and Drug Administration and have met the guidelines established in the Vaccine Act are still not fully integrated into the program.

There are currently several vaccines Congress has approved for taxation and inclusion in the Vaccine Compensation Program that, because of a technical error in the legislation, were not authorized as compensable. This bill will correct those errors, include the program, and it will ensure that all new vaccines will be automatically compensable once the tax is levied.

In addition, it initiates the 75 cents-per-vaccination tax on the rotavirus vaccine, which will ensure compensation for recipients of that vaccine. The rotavirus vaccine was approved by the FDA in August of this year to protect against rotavirus gastroenteritis, which causes about 125 deaths and 50,000 hospitalizations per year among infants in the United States. Initiation of the excise tax will help protect the 4 million children who are expected to receive the vaccine annually.

The changes proposed in this bill are not controversial. They are commonsense, and they are overdue. When Congress established the Vaccine Compensation Program, its intent was to protect the rights of victims without jeopardizing an invaluable weapon against childhood illnesses. The underpinning of this program is fairness, a standard that cannot be met as long as Congress makes these important changes.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 2596. A bill to amend parts A and D of title IV of the Social Security Act to require States to pass through directly to a family receiving assistance under the temporary assistance to needy families program all child support payments received with regard any child support that the family receives in determining the family’s level of assistance under that program; to the Committee on Finance.

CHILDERN FIRST CHILD SUPPORT REFORM ACT

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation to put America’s children first by putting more resources into the hands of families and encouraging more parents to live up to their child support obligations. My legislation, the Children First Child Support Reform Act, would direct that all child support collected through the Federal-State Child Support Enforcement Program be passed through, or paid directly to the children and families to whom it is owed and disregarded in the calculation of public assistance benefits. My legislation will assure non-custodial parents that the child support they pay will actually contribute to the well-being of their child, rather than the government. And will thereby also reduce administrative burdens on the state.

As my colleagues know, since its inception in 1975, our Federal-State Child Support Enforcement Program has been tasked with collecting child support for families receiving public assistance and other families that request help in enforcing child support. Towards this end, the program works to establish paternity and legally-binding support orders, while collecting and disbursing funds on behalf of families so that children receive the support they need to grow up in healthy, nurturing surroundings.

But on one crucial point, the current program is creating a policy work on behalf of families and, perhaps more importantly, may actually work against families by discouraging non-custodial parents from meeting their child support obligations.

If the family was never on public assistance, the support is collected by the Child Support Enforcement Program and sent directly to the family. However, under current law, most child support collected on behalf of families is retained by the state and Federal governments as reimbursement for welfare expenditures. In addition to this cost recoupment function, collections made on behalf of welfare families are used to fund the child support program in many states.

Thus, under current law, we have a system where the vast majority of children on public assistance never actually receive the child support that is paid on their behalf. The government keeps the money. The research shows that many non-custodial parents who pay support do not believe that their payment actually benefits their children. They realize and resent that they are paying the government. Worse yet, some non-custodial parents may decide not to pay support because it does not go to their children. Some custodial parents also are skeptical about work- required assistance, and the challenge of securing payments since the funds are generally not forwarded to them.

Mr. President, we know that an estimated 800,000 families would not need public assistance if they could count on the child support owed to them. In addition, we know that 23 million children are owed more than $40 billion in outstanding support. Clearly, the vital importance of child support in keeping families off of assistance remains as true today as when the program began.

In a world with TANF time limits, it has never been more important. And with these figures in mind, it is not unthinkible that some policymakers may have or might still consider this program as a means of recovering welfare expenditures.

But I am convinced that that thinking must change, if not cast off entirely, because, simply put, times have changed. The welfare reform law of 1996, which I supported, paved the way for the limitations and sanctions that provide clear and compelling incentives for families to enter the workforce and find a way to stay there. Open ended, unconditional public support is no longer a reality, and our goal as policymakers, our obligation to our children, and our goal as policymakers, our obligation to our children, and our goal as policymakers, our obligation is to help families as they struggle to become and remain self-sufficient. And I say we go down the road of putting child support first, a path that we have already made some progress. Under the welfare reform law, states will eventually be required to distribute state-collected child support arrears owed to the family before paying off arrears owed to the state and Federal governments for welfare expenditures. In addition, states were given the option of continuing to pass through directly the first $50 of child support to the family.

One state, my state of Wisconsin, has opted to pass through all child support collected on behalf of participating families to those families. As you know, Wisconsin has been a leader and national model in the area of welfare reform. Under Wisconsin’s welfare program, child support counts as income in determining financial eligibility for welfare assistance, but once eligibility is established, the child support income is disregarded in calculating program benefits. In other words, families are allowed to keep the money. Non-custodial parents can be assured that their contribution counts and that their child support payments go to their children. And both parents are presented with a realistic picture of what that support means in the life of their child. I believe we, as a nation, should follow Wisconsin's example.

The full passthrough and disregard approach also has significant benefits on the federal side. These passthrough and disregard distribution requirements place significant computer, accounting and paperwork burdens on the states. They are also costly. Data from the Federal Office of Child Support demonstrates that nearly 20 percent of program expenditures are spent simply processing payments. States are required to maintain a complicated set of accounts to determine whether support collected should be paid to the family or kept by the government. These complex accounting rules depend on whether the family ever received public assistance, the date a family begins and ends assistance, whether the non-custodial parent is current on payments or owes arrears, the method of collection and other factors.

We know that we have already asked much of the states in the realm of automation, systems integration and welfare law child support enforcement technology. We know that the states are doing their best to make improvements. They will lead to better collection rates. Now we have a chance to simplify and improve distribution of support. What could be simpler than a distribution system in which all child support collections will be delivered to the child, to whom it is owed? A distribution system in which child support agencies would distribute current support and arrears to both welfare and non-welfare families in exactly the same way?

Mr. President, I am raising these points and introducing this legislation today, in the final week of the 105th Congress, as a marker, as a starting point to this discussion. Child support financing must be addressed. First, our current distribution scheme is out of step with the philosophy of current welfare policy. We must move the child support program from cost-recovery to service delivery for all families. Second, the current financing scheme is no longer workable. TANF caseloads are decreasing dramatically, even as over-all child support caseloads are increasing. Therefore, while the system needs additional resources, the portion of the caseload that produces those resources is decreasing. We must put the child support program on a sound financial footing that confirms a strong Federal and state commitment to the program.

So, I believe it is time to begin a discussion on the issue of child support financing and the vital role of the child support program in helping families help themselves. The Administration has already begun to meet with policymakers, state administrators, and children's advocates to discuss the future of child support financing. I am determined to begin to close this important debate, by pushing for a financing system that puts more resources into the hands of children, that lets our nation's families keep more of their own money.

But let me strongly affirm that adopting a children first policy is only one of my goals. At this time, my proposal addresses only one half of the financing issue. Yet, we should put children first, but let me stress that I have every intention of continuing to refine this proposal so that it addresses the second point as well—finding alternative financing mechanisms so that states can maintain and strengthen their child support programs. Without adequate funding, state child support programs cannot deliver effective child support services to the families that so desperately need them. I want to continue working with my colleagues, Wisconsin and the other states, advocates and families to sort out the rest of the financing question. By authenticating a full passthrough and disregard approach, I am absolutely not advocating a disinvestment in our child support system. The federal government or the states. Our commitment to this program must remain strong and steadfast.

But it is time for us to create a system that truly serves families by giving them the tools to survive in a world without public support. It is time for a child support financing system that truly puts families, and not the government, first.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following be printed in the Record:

S. 2587. A bill to protect the public, especially seniors, against telemarketing fraud and telemarketing fraud over the Internet and to authorize an educational campaign to improve senior citizens' ability to protect themselves from telemarketing fraud over the Internet; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

TELEMARKETING FRAUD AND SENIORS

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, online consumer purchases are poised to explode to more than $300 billion early in the next century. But the goldrush in cyberbuying is likely to carry along with it a billion in cyberfraud. Congress can help head-off this cybercrime by extending our current telemarketing laws to encompass fraud on the Net.

In response to the staggering $40 billion consumers lose in telephone fraud each year, Congress early this summer passed the 1998 Telemarketing Fraud Prevention Act. I strongly supported that effort. The new law builds upon the four federal laws enacted since the early 1990s that deal directly with telemarketing fraud. The 1998 law stiffens penalties for telemarketing fraud by toughening the sentencing guidelines—especially for crimes against the elderly, requires criminal forfeiture to ensure the boot of the telemarketing crime is not used to commit further fraud, mandates victim restitution to ensure victims are the first ones compensated, adds conspiracy language to the list of telemarketing fraud offenses, and provides that prosecutors can find the masterminds behind the boiler rooms, and will help law enforcement zero in on quick-strike fraud operations by giving them the authority to move more quickly against suspected fraud.

The 1998 law is a good step forward but it's not enough to deal with today's digital economy. As more Americans go online, cyberscams are bound to proliferate. The Congressional crackdown on telemarketing fraud will only encourage cyberscammers to migrate to the Net unless the law gets there first. That is the purpose of the legislation I am introducing today.

The Telemarketing Fraud and Seniors Protection Act simply extends current law against telemarketing fraud to include the same crimes committed over the Internet. The approach expands the existing law applicable to mail, telephone, and television to fraud to fraud over the Internet, and its enforcement would follow the same division of labor there is today between the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice. The bill would apply the same tough penalties that Congress enacted earlier this year to cyberscams. The growth of Internet telephony makes it more attractive for cyberscammers to set up shop offshore, beyond the reach of U.S. law. My bill would address this problem by allowing law enforcement to freeze the assets and deny entry to the United States of those convicted of cyberfraud.

The bill takes special aim against those attempt to defraud one of our most vulnerable groups—our senior citizens. Seniors are the target for more than 50 percent of telemarketing fraud. Although telemarketers convicted of fraud face stiff penalties—a maximum sentence of five years, and restitution payments to their victims, we also need to better educate and inform senior citizens on how to avoid becoming victims of telemarketing fraud in the first place, and how to assist law enforcement in catching the perpetrators.

The legislation would also authorize the Administration on Aging, through its network of area agencies of aging, to conduct an outreach program to senior citizens on telemarketing fraud. Seniors would be advised against providing their credit card number, bank account or other personal information unless they had initiated the call unsouthlicit. They would also be informed of their consumer protection rights and any to forward consumer resources to report suspected illegal telemarketing.

Mr. President, the Federal Trade Commission is off to a good start against cyberscammers. Some of the operations the FTC has targeted are not companies at all, but merely websites that promise consumers everything from huge new consulting contracts to the elimination of bad credit reports. They may use scare tactics to get consumers into sending important personal financial information and hundreds of dollars for services the consumer will never see, or attempt to lure consumers with the promise of help them cash in on the Internet explosion. The FTC also has a strong operation going against junk e-mailers. My legislation will complement and strengthen the FTC's efforts to target telemarketing fraud over the Internet and especially when such fraud is aimed at seniors.

I urge my colleagues to join me in this important legislation, and ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TITLE II—SPECIAL PROTECTION FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) telemarketing fraud costs consumers nearly $40,000,000,000 each year;

(2) seniors are often the target of telemarketing fraud;

(3) fraudulent telemarketers compile into "mooch lists" the names of potentially vulnerable consumers;

(5) the Department of Justice has undertaken successful investigations and prosecutions of telemarketing fraud through various operations, including Operation Disconnection, Operation Senior Sentinel, and Operation Upload;

(6) the Federal Bureau of Investigation has helped provide resources to assist organizations such as the American Association of Retired Persons to operate outreach programs designed to warn senior citizens whose names appear on confiscated "mooch lists"; and

(7) the Administration on Aging was authorized to conduct an outreach program to protect senior citizens from the dangers of telemarketing fraud and fraud over the Internet before they become victims.

SEC. 202. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this title through education and outreach to protect senior citizens from the dangers of telemarketing fraud and fraud over the Internet and to facilitate the investigation and prosecution of fraudulent telemarketers.

SEC. 203. DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.

S. 2588. A bill to provide for the collection and interpretation of state of the art, non-intrusive 3-dimensional seismic data on certain federal lands in Alaska, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

LEGISLATION AUTHORIZING 3-D SEISMIC TESTING IN ALASKA

Mr. MURKOSKI. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation to ensure that when Congress looks at ways to reduce the United States' dependence on foreign oil, it does so with the best science available.

The legislation I introduce today would require the Secretary of the Interior to conduct 3-dimensional (3-D) seismic testing on the Arctic Coastal Plain of Alaska.

This testing leaves no footprint. In fact, just last year the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service allowed such testing to be done in the Kenai National Wildlife Refuge, declaring such testing would have no significant impact. It would have no impact on the frozen tundra in ANWR.

It is also a possibility that the oil industry would be willing to share in the cost of such testing. Let's at least find out what kind of resource we are talking about.

Mr. President, I think it is important that we look at some of the history of his area and the testing that has occurred there.

In 1994, Amerada Hess concluded the Northstar field in Alaska was uneconomic because development would exceed $1.2 billion and eventually sold the field to BP.

Today, BP expects to begin production of that field's 145 million barrels of reserves in 2000. Estimated development costs: $350 million—a 70 percent reduction from just 4 years ago!

Mr. President, all of these factors point toward the logical conclusion that underlyng the 1.5 million-acre oil reserve in Alaska lies greater reserves than recently estimated, and we need to confirm them with better science.

Dr. Thomas J. Casadevall, acting director of the USGS, was very clear in his explanation that if the newer three dimensional (3-D) seismic data were available from the Arctic Oil Reserve, their high May estimates of producible oil could increase significantly.

Casadevall explained that their new estimates, while supported by sound science and peer review, were still based on 2-D seismic tests done more than a decade ago.

Kenneth A. Boyd, director, Division of Oil and Gas of the Alaska Department of Natural Resources, likened the advance of the new testing to the difference between an x-ray and a CAT-scan. He said the available information from 2-D seismic as opposed to 3-D seismic is that the former produces a line of data while the latter produces a cube of data. The cube can be turned and examined from all sides and the geologic information proves invaluable for exploration.

This data has revolutionized exploration and development of the North Slope of Alaska. Modern 3-D data provides enhanced and incredibly accurate imaging of potential subsurface reservoirs.

This in turn reduces exploration and development risk, reduces the number of drilled wells, and in turn reduces both overall costs and environmental impacts.

Of course there is little pressure to allow testing or exploration of the Coastal Plain with gas prices at a 30-year low. However, the Department of Energy’s Information Administration predicts, in 10 years, America will be at least 64 percent dependent on foreign oil. It would take that same 10-year period to develop any oil production in AOR.

It seems prudent to plan ahead to protect our future energy security.

If the Nation were to be cruched in an energy crisis—like the Gulf war that accelerated the speedup of development; that development could impact the environment negatively because it would not have the benefit of thoughtful planning.

I believe it is criminal as stealing gold to refuse to acknowledge the potential for producible oil in the Coastal Plain of the AOR. If we don’t know what the resource is, how can we protect it or make an informed decision about the use of the area?

And coupled with those in this administration or the environmental community argue it is a bad idea to seek a greater understanding of these public lands? Particularly, when the Congress of your administration or the environmental community argue it is a bad idea to seek a greater understanding of these public lands?

And coupled with those in this administration or the environmental community argue it is a bad idea to seek a greater understanding of these public lands? Particularly, when the Congress of your administration or the environmental community argue it is a bad idea to seek a greater understanding of these public lands?

Mr. President, this legislation will also better enable the Secretary of the Interior to protect the Federal petroleum resources underlying the Coastal Plain. However, without knowing what those Federal resources are however, there is no way to protect them.

Just last year a major oil discovery was announced in State lands immediately adjacent to the federal border. Production from this well could drain portions of the federal reserve without adequate compensation to the federal treasury.

The Secretary has an obligation to protect the Federal resource underlying ANWR and this legislation will provide him the tools to do so.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to make it perfectly clear that this bill is being pushed by those of us in Congress who believe that if you are to make a decision about the best use of our public lands you should do so with the benefit of available science.

It is not, as Secretary Babbitt has suggested, an effort being pushed by the petroleum industry.
I request my colleagues' support in this effort to bring fairness to cross-border chemical pricing.

By Mr. GRAHAM:

S. 2593. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide a credit against tax for employers who provide child care assistance for dependents of their employees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE WORKSITE CHILD CARE DEVELOPMENT CENTER ACT OF 1998

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation designed to assist American families with one of their most pressing needs—child care. This legislation would make child care more accessible to millions of families who find it not only important, but necessary, to work.

In today's world, parents, I believe, would prefer to have their children raised by at least one parent at home. However, for a vast majority of families in America, this ideal is not possible. And for the working poor and many members of our middle class, this ideal is a luxury that they cannot afford.

The legislation which I am introducing today would not solve the child care needs of American parents. However, it would serve to provide a much needed incentive—a jump start—to promote employer provided child care, particularly among our nation's small businesses.

The legislation I am introducing today would offer a tax credit to those employers who undertake the responsibility of assisting their employees with child care expenses. This bill—the Worksite Child Care Development Center Act of 1998—would modify that part of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which relates to business tax credits. It would do so by providing child care tax credits to employers for—

One-time 50 percent tax credit, not to exceed $50,000 annually, for those expenses related to the operating costs of maintaining a child care facility; and

A 50 percent tax credit, not to exceed $25,000 annually, for those expenses related to the opening and expansions of an employer-sponsored child care facility.

One may ask, "Why is this legislation important to American employers and employees?" Mr. President, I submit to you that there are four compelling reasons for the Congress to pass this legislation.

First, child care is a major concern for American families. We should be concerned about child care because it has become one of today's most pressing social issues. Ask working parents today to identify their top daily concerns, and a large proportion will most certainly identify quality, affordable child care as one of them.

On June 1st of this year, I hosted a Florida statewide summit on child care, which was attended by over 500 residents of my state who shared with me their concerns, and sometimes their frustrations, about this issue. The feedback that I received from my constituents concerned issues reflecting the high level of concern that parents have regarding access, quality, and the level of investment we are making in child care. We had five panel sessions moderated and staffed by 25 of Florida's most prominent professionals in the field of child development and human services and education. The panels covered a wide range of issues from affordability and access, to quality of care, to public-private partnerships between government and businesses.

I am pleased that I was able to hear from my constituents and from experts regarding the extent and nature of the problem. One participant summed it up correctly in his closing remarks in the summit today are concerns that need to continue to be addressed until the needs are met; however, the needs are going to continue to grow as our preschoolers and school-agers go into middle schools.

Mr. President, it's no wonder that there is so much interest in the issue of child care. Child care, when it is available, is provided to a child at one of the most important times in that child's life. Indeed, recent research has confirmed what many of us had always believed—that quality child care can positively influence cognitive and social development. Current scientific research tells us that the most crucial period in children's brain development and brain readiness—which determines so much of the course for the rest of their lives—is that time between birth and the age of three.

Second, America's workforce is changing. The workplace has changed dramatically over the past fifty years. In 1947, just over one-quarter of all mothers with children between 6 and 17 years of age were in the labor force. By 1996, the labor force participation rate of working mothers had tripled. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that 65 percent of all women with children under 18 years of age are now working. This percentage is not expected to decrease—it is expected to increase. As we enter the 21st century, women will comprise 50 percent of all new entrants into the labor market. A large proportion of these women are expected to be mothers of children under the age of six.

The expectations for employers are clear. Employers understand well that our nation's workforce is changing rapidly. Those employers who can attract and hold onto the best employees are likely to be among the most competitive.

Many of our larger corporations and government agencies have recognized this and are already moving in that direction. For example, our nation's military is often cited as having a model child care program for its personnel. Military leaders know well the relationship between a parent's peace of mind and satisfaction with good child care and job performance.

The Florida State of Florida, Ryder has taken similar steps to invest in their employees. I recently visited Ryder Corporation's Kids' Corner child care center in Miami where more than 100 children are cared for in a top-flight day care program. Ryder has received many accolades, including being recognized as the Best Employer of Women in the State of Florida by the Florida Commission on the Status of Women. Ryder now plans on extending this effort to bring fairness to cross-border chemical pricing.

Similarly, NationsBank, formerly Barnett Bank, in Jacksonville, operates three state of the art child care facilities for its employees. According to Ms. Mari White, the senior vice president in charge of the formal Advisory Committee on Child Care at NationsBank, the program's success was due to a commitment from the top. "We take care of our employees, and our employees care about us. And we are dedicated to our employees' children. We are dedicated to the success of our employees. We are dedicated to the success of our employees' children."

I commend Ryder Corporation, NationsBank, and the many other corporations in Florida and throughout the nation, which have taken the important step forward in providing child care for their employees. I submit to you that small businesses, which do not have the resources to undertake such efforts, sought to offer similar benefits to its employees. My legislation is intended to make it easier for them to do so.

Third, child care is important for the success of Welfare Reform. This legislation is an important component to our national welfare policy. While most American families struggle with child care, this problem is most acute among the working poor and the middle class.

In 1996, Congress and the President changed welfare as we knew it. We made fundamental changes to the policies, and the social expectations, relating to work and welfare. The federal government has asked our business community and governmental agencies to work in partnership in keeping the working poor off of the welfare rolls. If we are to see the reforms of 1996 succeed, we must ensure that the means to succeed are provided.

The working poor—particularly those formerly on welfare—face major challenges associated with staying off of welfare. These challenges include their ability to:

1. get to and from work;
2. obtain the job training they need to get and hold onto their job; and
Mr. President, I believe that the provision of child care should be a concern of my legislation and a boon for American small businesses. According to the Small Business Administration, small businesses in America employ:

Fifty two percent of private workers;
Sixty one percent of private workers on public assistance; and Thirty eight percent of private workers in high tech occupations.

Small businesses have contributed virtually all of the net new jobs which have been created during these recent years of job growth. And small businesses represent 96 percent of all exporters of goods leaving the United States. Small businesses are truly a big piston in the engine of our nation’s economy.

Yet, we know that the owners of small businesses struggle to make ends meet. That is why initiatives like the one I propose are important for strengthening the viability of the small business community. For small businesses, resources are limited and survival in a competitive world market is difficult. Think of the impact on a small business when one of its employees is absent for the day to care for his or her child because that employee’s day care worker is sick that day with the flu.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, employers surveyed reported positive benefits associated with providing child care to its employees. The Treasury Department’s data indicates:

Sixty two percent reported higher morale;
Fifty four percent reported reduced absenteeism;
Fifty two percent reported increased productivity; and Thirty seven percent reported lower job turnover.

Providing child care to employees can be a major step-up for small businesses. My legislation would provide tax credits to the employers who make investments to help their businesses and their employees with child care or back-up child care when their regular services are not available.

Mr. President, in concluding, I would like to thank the 30 members of my Information Children’s Development Advisory Committee which has provided invaluable support to me, my staff, and Floridians throughout the state. This group of dedicated individuals, who hail from a wide variety of professions, were instrumental in organizing the Childcare Summit which we held in South Florida in June of this year. They have worked with child care professionals, parents, and business groups to raise awareness on this issue, and have supported my efforts to draft this important legislative proposal.

To them, I offer my deepest thanks for the assistance they have provided me and for all of their hard work on behalf of the welfare of children in Florida.

I would like to quote Ms. Janet Ndah, the Dean of Students at the Punta Gorda Middle School in Punta Gorda, Florida, who says of my legislation: “As an educator and a working parent, care for children is definitely a priority and a challenge. Therefore, I am extremely supportive of this child care act and in particular, the tax credits that employers would receive as they begin a site-based child care facility.” Ms. Phyllis J. Siderits, who works at the Florida Department of Health—and is a member of my Advisory Committee—also has written to me of the benefits of this proposal: “This Act is of benefit to employers as well as employees. For too long, I have witnessed the inability to maintain qualified and competent employees because of child care issues, whether those issues were ones of compensation, scheduling and work time difficulties, or caretaker concerns. It is especially gratifying to know that this act will help to attract employees who have children with special needs and allow the employees to have closer contact with their children during the day where employer-sponsored child care facilities exist. We have not supported single-parent or dual-parent families who work and have tremendous difficulties obtaining child care. The ideal solution is an employer-sponsored child care facility. I think this comprehensive proposal outlined by the President at the start of this year would have provided much needed support to American families in this vital area. However, I believe that the legislation which I am introducing today would make a valuable contribution to the quality of life and care for families; the success of Welfare Reform; and the strengthening of our small business community.

On July 30, 1998, I introduced, with 20 of my colleagues, a Senate Resolution which would designate October 11, 1998 as National Children’s Day. That legislation now has 52 cosponsors and is awaiting passage by this Congress. It is only fitting that I am introducing this child care legislation just days prior to that date which the United States Senate is designating as “National Children’s Day.”

Mr. President, it is in recognition of our commitment to the children of our nation that I introduce the Worksite Child Care Development Center Act of 1998. Our children and their families deserve our support. I ask unanimous consent that the text of S. Res. 260 and a list of the members of the Advisory Committee be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the items were ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

S. 2956. A bill to amend the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 to provide affordable housing and community development assistance to rural areas with excessively high rates of outmigration and low per-capita income levels.

THE RURAL RECOVERY ACT OF 1998

Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that will help rural areas affected by severe population loss improve their economic conditions and create new jobs.

We are experiencing first-hand the challenge of retaining entire generations in many parts of rural South Dakota as the agricultural crisis deepens and fewer and fewer young people can find employment regarding opportunities that give them reason to stay. As a result, young people are being forced to leave the towns in which they grew up for better jobs in urban areas, causing a depressing loss of generational continuity and a foreboding sign for the future of these rural communities.

Too often we forget that while the economic growth experienced in our urban areas is a necessary element of a sound national health, the health and vitality of our rural areas are just as critical to our Nation's economic future, and to its character. If nothing is done to address the out-migration that is currently being experienced by our most rural communities, we will continue to jeopardize the future of rural America.

That is why I am introducing legislation to provide these critical rural areas with the resources necessary to combat this threat. This bill will help young families remain active residents of the rural communities in which they choose to live. The Rural Recovery Act of 1998 would provide a minimum of $250,000 per year to counties and tribes with out-migration levels of fifteen percent or higher, per-capita income levels that are below the national average, and whose exterior borders are not adjacent to a metropolitan area.

The legislation authorizes the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development to award a Community Development Block Grant to the money, which is already included in the agency's budget, will be allocated on a formula basis to rural counties and tribes suffering from out migration and low per-capita income levels.

County and tribal governments will be able to use this Federal funding to improve their infrastructure, purchase land for development, build affordable housing and develop economic recovery strategies. All of these important steps will help rural communities address their economic challenges and plan for stable long-term growth and development.

While Federal agencies such as the United States Department of Agriculture's Office of Rural Development and the Economic Development Administration do provide aid for rural development purposes, there are no Federal programs that provide a steady source of funding for rural areas most affected by severe out migration and low per-capita income. For these areas, the process of encouraging economic growth is arduous. I strongly believe the Rural Recovery Act of 1998 will provide the long term assistance required to aid the coordinated efforts of local community leaders as they begin economic recovery efforts that will ensure a vibrant future for rural America.

In August, Senator MURKOWSKI and I introduced legislation to provide assistance to rural communities that experience extremely high electric power rates. Today, I am pleased that he has agreed to join me in cosponsoring this legislation to assist rural areas with high out-migration and low per-capita incomes. It is important that Congress do whatever it can to assist these economically-challenged rural areas to remain vibrant participants in the American Dream. Senator MURKOWSKI and I expect to combine these bills and introduce them as a single piece of legislation next year.

I hope that my colleagues will join Senator MURKOWSKI and I in the 106th Congress to enact these important new policies. I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SENATE RESOLUTION 292—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING TACTILE CURRENCY FOR THE BLIND AND VISUALLY IMPAIRED

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

S. RES. 292
Whereas currency is used by virtually everyone in everyday life, including blind and visually impaired persons;
Whereas the Federal Reserve notes of the United States are inaccessible to individuals with visual disabilities;
Whereas the Americans with Disabilities Act enhances the economic independence and equal opportunity for full participation in society for individuals with disabilities;
Whereas most blind and visually impaired persons are therefore required to rely upon others to determine denominations of such currency;
Whereas this constitutes a serious impediment to independence in everyday living;
Whereas electronic means of bill identification will always be more fallible than purely tactile means; and
Whereas tactile currency already exists in 23 countries worldwide; and
Whereas the currency of the United States is presently undergoing significant changes for security purposes: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Senate—
(1) endorses the efforts recently begun by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to upgrade the currency for security reasons; and
(2) strongly encourages the Secretary of the Treasury and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to incorporate cost-effective, tactile features into the design changes, thereby including the blind and visually impaired community in independent currency usage.

Mr. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, today I am submitting a resolution that encourages the Bureau of Printing and Engraving to incorporate tactile features on the currency to aid the blind. This resolution enjoys considerable bipartisan support, and was passed by voice vote in the House of Representatives.

Four years ago, Mary Scroggs, a constituent of mine, was hit by a drunk driver on the sidewalk in front of her office as she walked to lunch. As a result, she was left visually-impaired. Since this time, she has tirelessly pursued opportunities to improve the ability of the visually-impaired to live independently. It was her voice on this issue which brings me to introduce this important legislation.

In March 1994, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing commissioned the National Academy of Science to execute a study entitled “Current Features for Visually Impaired People.” This report explored the methods of making currency more accessible for all Americans.

In 1997, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing began implementing significant changes to simplify the identification of currency, such as larger numbers and higher color contrast, to ease identification of counterfeit currency. This resolution simply endorses the efforts of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving to study the cost-effective tactile changes to aid those afflicted with low vision or blindness and encourages those changes in the national currency.

This minor change in currency will have a significant impact on the independence of visually impaired Americans. Moreover, incorporating tactile features can serve other purposes, such as being an additional counterfeit deterrent.

Visually impaired individuals are capable, independent people whose valuable contributions touch all of our lives. It is important that all Americans are afforded equal opportunities to perform at the best of their abilities. I hope all of my colleagues will join me in supporting this resolution.

SENATE RESOLUTION 293—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT NADIA DABBAGH SHOULD BE RETURNED HOME TO HER MOTHER, MS. MAUREEN DABBAGH

Mr. ROBB (for himself, Mr. Graham, Mr. Warner, and Ms. Feinstein) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

S. RES. 293
Whereas Mr. Mohamad Hisham Dabbagh and Mrs. Maureen Dabbagh had a daughter, Nadia Dabbagh, in 1990.
Whereas Maureen Dabbagh and Mohamad Hisham Dabbagh were divorced in February 1992.
Whereas in 1993, Nadia was abducted by her father.
Whereas Mohamad Dabbagh later fled the country with Nadia.
Whereas the governments of Syria and the United States have granted child custody to Maureen Dabbagh and both have issued arrest warrants for Mohamad Dabbagh.
Whereas Mohamad Dabbagh has escaped to Saudi Arabia.
Whereas the United States Department of State issues travel warnings to families in Syria.
Whereas Maureen Dabbagh, with the assistance of missing children organizations, has been unable to reunite with her daughter.
Whereas the Department of State, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Interpol have been unsuccessful in her attempts to bring Nadia back to the United States.
Whereas Maureen Dabbagh has not seen her daughter in over five years.
Whereas it will take the continued effort and persistence of all officials to bring this case to a successful conclusion: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the government of the United States and Syria immediately locate Nadia and deliver her safely to her mother.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I am submitting a resolution today expressing the Sense of the Senate regarding a heinous crime affecting a family in Virginia and a growing problem in this country.

According to Department of Justice statistics, 114,600 children are the subject of an abduction attempt by a stranger each year, and 12 children are actually abducted by a stranger every day. The statistics on child abductions by non-custodial parents is even more alarming, with 983 abductions each and every day.

I believe that we, as members of Congress, as parents, and as concerned citizens of this country, should use all available resources in an exhaustive effort to locate missing and abducted children.

Today, through this Sense of the Senate resolution, I seek to bring to your attention the plight of Ms. Maureen Dabbagh of Virginia Beach. Ms. Dabbagh has not seen her daughter, Nadia, in five years. At the age of three, Mr. Mohamad Hisham Dabbagh illegally abducted Nadia and fled the United States. He is wanted on state and federal warrants in connection with this abduction and he has been the subject of an international “wanted” notice since 1995. Should Ms. Dabbagh have a significant impact on the independence of visually impaired Americans.

Whereas the Senate of the United States has never endorsed the creation of an independent Palestinian state;

Whereas the United States has traditionally opposed the unilateral declaration of a Palestinian state because of concerns that such a state could pose a threat to Israel and would jeopardize the peace process and destabilizing effect on the entire Middle East;

Whereas the United States stated its position, when the Palestinians signed the Oslo Accords, that all questions of Palestinian sovereignty and statehood are matters which must be mutually agreed upon by the parties;

Whereas, the Administration's recent statements on a unilateral declaration of a Palestinian state have been contradictory and confusing;

Whereas a unilateral declaration of Palestinian statehood would be a grievous violation of the Oslo Accords;

Whereas despite the Oslo Accords, Chairman Arafat, his cabinet, and the Palestinian National Council, have threatened to unilaterally proclaim the establishment of a Palestinian state in May, 1999;

Whereas the Palestinian cabinet, on September 24, 1998 stated that "at the end of the interim period, it (the Palestinian government) shall declare the establishment of a Palestinian state on all Palestinian land occupied since 1967, with Jerusalem as the eternal capital of the Palestinian state";

Whereas Chairman Arafat in speaking to the United Nations on September 28, 1998, called on world leaders to support an independent Palestinian state;

Whereas Chairman Arafat stated on July 15, 1998, that "[t]here is a transition period of 5 years and after 5 years we have the right to declare an independent Palestinian state."

Whereas Palestinian National Council Speaker Salim al-Za'nun stated on June 15, 1998, that: "If following our declaration of a Palestinian state, Israel renews its occupation of East Jerusalem, the West Bank, and the Gaza Strip, the Palestinian people will struggle to free Palestine and its people, posing an armed struggle"; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress hereby expresses its opposition to any deployment of United States ground forces into the Serbian province of Kosovo for peacemaking or peacekeeping purposes.

Sec. 2. The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this concurrent resolution to the President.
Monitoring, to provide for the imposition of sanctions against countries engaged in a pattern of religious persecution, and for other purposes; as follows:

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, now that it seems the debate on campaign finance is over for this session, I wanted to make a few comments concerning the current approach to reform and what I believe would be the best approach, one which needs to be done in fixing the system, but the problem is that the approaches debated this year raise constitutional issues.

I have supported Congressional reform since entering Congress in 1990, especially term limits. If we want to end the so-called money chase, then lets end the life terms in Congress. Many outside groups who favor campaign finance reform are against term limits for they believe it democratic. I find quieting peoples voices and stopping them from participating in the electoral process to be even more undemocratic, and probably unconstitutional.

I have heard that people have become disenchanted with the process. I believe this disenchantment has less to do with the fact that campaigns have become expensive, than they are tired of campaign laws being broken. Let's not just enforce the laws on the books before we pass more laws and make it even more difficult for citizens to participate. Let's not penalize law abiding citizens because some elected officials will not follow current laws. Regardless of expensive campaigns, lets take a look at some numbers. When I first came to Congress in 1990, there were 1,759 federal election candidates in the U.S., who raised 471.7 million dollars and spent 446.3 million dollars. This year, the highly averaged 268,168 dollars raised and 253,753 dollars spent by each federal candidate in the U.S. By comparison, in 1996 there were 2,605 federal election candidates which raised 790.5 million dollars and spent 763.3 million dollars. This means that each candidate raised 303,454 dollars and spent 293,781 dollars.

We can see that spending on campaigns has increased but so has the number of candidates. This influx of new candidates could make some incumbents nervous. But, I say that competition is a positive thing for the electoral system. So, when we hear that there are fewer people who want to run because of the cost of campaigns, we know that this is not necessarily according to the Federal Election Commission.

Yes, fewer incumbents are running for reelection, but more people are trying to replace them in representing their states or districts. With overall campaign spending going up, I can understand how some in this body and around the United States find that the cost of campaigns are just too high. However, during my 63 town meetings in 1998, this topic has come up only a few times. But, more and more people are complaining about taxes being too high.

Last year, as a percentage of GDP, federal tax revenue reached its highest level since World War II to 19.8% and rising to 19.9% this year. I am much more worried about the working man and woman who must work long hard hours to make ends meet only to find that nearly 40% of their hard earned money must be given to the local, state, and federal government. I think we should give the American people a tax cut. My town meetings also indicated that Coloradans are concerned about... the national debt and the interest their children and grandchildren will pay. I don't see this getting much attention by the so-called "good government" groups. I am more concerned about the abusive 5.5 trillion dollar debt that we have levied on this nation. Let's pass my bill, S. 1608, the American Debt Repayment Act, and get this burden off the American people's back.

In regards to campaign finance reform, I believe that reform should pass three tests: First, it should be voluntary; Second, it should be inclusive, not exclusive; And third, it should be constitutional.

The United States is based on freedom and we have become the model for freedom around the world. However, with freedom comes rights and responsibilities. One of these rights is the ability to join or not to join, to participate or not to participate, to speak or not speak, to associate or not associate. These rights should be reserved for the individual and Congress has the responsibility to preserve this right for all Americans.

When I ran for the Senate, people participated in my campaign only if they chose to. They could give their time or their money. I had to assume that if they did, they did so because they believed in me and the ideas that I stressed. I never forced any person to put out a sign, wear a button, or give a contribution to my campaign. It was always voluntary. We need to ensure that any campaign finance reform makes participation a voluntary activity for all individuals. If someone does not want to give, they have the right to say no or at least should be able to provide their consent.

That is why it is important to include the Paycheck Protection Act in any campaign finance reform. I find it confusing at best that we allow labor unions to take money out of a paycheck and use it on political matters without their members expressed written consent.

According to the Department of Labor, 80 percent, or 81 million, of all private sector workers covered by a union contract are required under that contract to pay union dues as a condition of employment. American workers should not have to choose between their jobs which provide the food and clothing and political activity with which they may disagree. I have yet to hear a solid reason how asking people to give their consent to use their required dues for political purposes would hinder a group's ability to participate.

When I was a small business owner, I was a member of a few groups, but I joined each one voluntarily. I could have said, "Well, I can always go to bed at any time without any threat to my job or well being. Whenever a person is forced to join a group, like those in a closed shop, their dues should never be used for political purposes unless they first state in writing that it is OK to do so. To do less would be deceptive.

Another problem area is the possibility that the FCC may require free TV time to be provided to federal candidates.

First, I have never believed that a regulatory agency should act without the authorization of Congress. The Constitution states that "all legislative powers shall be vested in a Congress of the United States ." Regulatory agencies only enforce the laws as set by Congress, not make them.

Second, the American media is a large market and could be reached. Therefore, the broadcasting signal will be subsidizing not only their own federal candidates but also the federal candidates of the states that depend on them for the broadcast. Not only do I believe it is wrong for the FCC to implement this without Congressional authorization, but it would force the media to be unwitting volunteers for candidates.

If freedom must be preserved for all individuals to choose the ideas that they support or oppose, then Thomas Jefferson said it best, "To compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves, is sinful and tyrannical."

The Supreme Court has been very clear in its decisions regarding the First Amendment and campaign finance laws. Since the post-Watergate changes to the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, twenty-four Congressional actions have been declared unconstitutional and four cases have been decided on the First Amendment. Out of those nine, four dealt directly with campaign finance reform laws. In each case, the Supreme Court has ruled that political spending equals political speech. This Senate attempted to change this through a constitutional amendment limiting the amount one can spend in a campaign, which only tells me that this fact is undeniably recognized by this body.

The First Amendment is not there to hinder Americans from speaking their ideas, but to ensure that their ideas can be spoken. One way Congress and outside groups speak is through political campaigns, and it is a fact of life that it takes money. After deciding the Valeo vs. Buckley case, former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall stated that, "One of the points of which all Members of the Court agree is that money is essential for effective communication in a political campaign."

When we pull the rug out from underneath people who want to speak their mind, whether they have little or lots of money, we pull the rug out from underneath their basic right to freedom of speech.

From the much quoted Buckley case, this fact is placed into its proper context. It states, "A restriction on the amount of money a person can spend on political communication during a campaign necessarily reduces the quantity of expression by restricting the number of issues discussed, the depth of exploration, and the size of audience.* * *

The Court ensures that a "major purpose" of the First Amendment was to protect the free discussion of governmental affairs and that any limitations of contributions and/or expenditures must be constitutional, with nine rejections of the Federal Election Act of 1971, twenty-four Congressional actions have been declared unconstitutional and four cases have been decided on the First Amendment. should be inclusive for all citizens who want to speak their minds? I truly do believe it is wrong for me to try and silence people who want to criticize my voting record. That is their right and they should be able to do so whenever they choose and should be able to defend it whenever they choose. I do not consider that support positions I take should be able to support my position whenever they choose.

From the beginning, I have believed the campaign finance system to be unconstitutional and a recent case in Michigan shows this to be right. In August, a federal court struck down, on First Amendment grounds, a Michigan election rule prohibited incorporated groups and labor unions from using the names and likeness of political candidates for 45 days before the election. The state argued that the ban should be allowed because it applied "only" to a limited time period and did not apply to PACs. The rule does not suffer from constitutional overbreadth because it is content neutral, and is narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest in the integrity of the election process. However, the Michigan District Judge Robert Holmes Bell ruled that the ban violated the First Amendment.

Judge Bell ruled that "[i]n this case the censorial effect of the Rule on issue advocacy is neither speculative nor insignificant." He also stated that "While the time period is short, it could involve a critical time period for communications.... A 45-day black-out of names would protect incumbents seeking re-election from grassroots lobbying efforts on pending legislation, and incumbents would soon learn to schedule votes on controversial legislation during this time period and thus avoid unwanted publicity and attention.... The ban on the use of candidates' names is a heavy burden on highly protected First Amendment expression. Voters have an interest in knowing what legislators are associated with legislation, and an representatives' ability to educate the public on pending legislation is unduly hampered if they are unable to name the legislators involved.

In conclusion, Judge Bell said, "The fact that we are dealing with a corporation rather than an individual does not remove its speech from the ambit of the First Amendment. ...Because the rule not only prohibits expenditures of support or opposition to a candidate, but also prohibits the use of corporate treasury funds for communications containing the name or likeness of a candidate, without regard to whether the communication can be considered as support or opposition to the candidate, there is a realistic danger that the Rule will significantly compromise the First Amendment protections of not only the Plain-tiff, but many other organizations which seem to have a voice in political issue advocacy."

I believe Judge Bell's ruling will stand the test of appeal for he stated that any decision regarding the "constitutionality of campaign finance must begin with and usually ends" with the Buckley case. And again, the Buckley decision clearly states that "...the distinction between discussion of issues and candidates and advocacy is not a constitutional line where the two spheres of activity end. Candidates, especially incumbents, are intimately tied to public issues involving legislative proposals and governmental actions. Not only do they state the basis of their political beliefs on various public issues, but campaigns themselves generate issues of public interest."

This clearly states that it is a constitutional right to criticize an elected official and their record, and that no citizen needs to ask permission from the government when and how this can be done. Believe me, I can understand wanting to control the debate of a campaign and silence some of the critics, but I cannot constitutionally, or in good conscience, do that. For every citizen has the right to be a part of the debate. I believe that placing a road block to the First Amendment only closes doors to the system not opens them.

We will always hear that money is the reason why people don't run or get involved. I can say that I am not a wealthy man. I started a veterinarian hospital with sweat and hard work. While I was in Congress, I didn't have a lot of money, but worked hard to make myself known. When I ran for the Senate, I still wasn't wealthy, but I did run against a wealthy man. When the campaign was over, I had more votes and no campaign debt despite the fact that I was outspent by 750,000 dollars, three-quarters of a million dollars. You don't have to have a lot of money to win a race, just the right message. I will not vote for legislation that I believe would stop someone from sharing their message, even if it's my opponent.

While I do not believe closing the door on the First Amendment is the right approach, I do believe that opening up the system to fuller and more timely disclosure would provide for a much more robust campaign system.

This is why I introduced my own bill, the Campaign Finance Integrity Act, S. 1190. My bill does not restrict one person's right to express political opinions, but asks for complete and honest disclosure of all campaign spending. While this statement is not one of endorsement concerning my legislation, the American Civil Liberties Union did state in a review of the McCarran-Ferguson bill that, "Disclosure, rather than limitation, of large soft money contributions to political parties, is the more appropriate and less restrictive alternative." My bill does just that. As a matter of fact, I believe my bill has some of the strongest disclosure requirements of any bill introduced.

My bill also:

Requires candidates to raise at least 50 percent of their contributions from individuals in the state or district in which they are running.

Equalize contributions from individuals and political action committees (PACs) by raising the individual limit from $1000 to $2500 and reducing the PAC limit from $5000 to $2500.

Indexes individual and PAC contribution limits for inflation.

Reduces the influence of a candidate's personal wealth by allowing political party committees to match dollar for dollar the personal contribution of a candidate above $5000, by using only hard money.

Requires organizations, groups, and political party committees to disclose within 24 hours the amount and type of independent expenditures over $1000 in support of or against a candidate. Only the organization discloses it expenditures, not the names of the individuals donating.

Requires corporations and labor organizations to seek separate, voluntary authorization of the use of any dues, initiation fees or payment as a condition of employment for political activity, and requires annual full disclosure of those activities to union members and shareholders.

Prohibits depositing of an individual contribution by a campaign unless the individual's profession and employer are reported.

Encourages the Federal Election Commission to allow filing of reports by computers and other emerging technologies and to make that information accessible to the public on the Internet less than 24 hours of receipt.

Completely bans the use of taxpayer financed mass mailings.

Lastly, S. 1190 creates a tax deduction for political contributions up to $200 for individuals and $200 for a joint return to encourage small donations.

A further way to "clean up" the campaign finance system and reduce the so-called special interest money is to reduce the size and scope of the Federal Government and I am not alone in believing this. Last year, Rasmussen Research did a survey showing that 62% of Americans think that reducing government spending would reduce corruption in government. The same survey showed that 44% think that cutting government spending would do more to reduce corruption than campaign finance reform, while 42% think campaign finance reform would reduce corruption more than cutting government spending. I have said many times, if the government rids itself of special interest funding and corporate welfare, then there would be little influence left for these large donors.

I know that no one in this chamber takes the first amendment lightly. It is the cornerstone by which many of the rights we enjoy today are set. It is up to us to ensure that the Government does not control us, but that the Government is under control. In 1808, Thomas Jefferson stated the first amendment should and would mean to each of us—"The liberty of speaking and writing guards our other liberties." And again in 1828, he said, "The force of public opinion cannot be resisted when permitted to freely be expressed. The agitation it produces must be submitted to." This is why any campaign finance reform should be reform that preserves the right of free speech and which allows all Americans to voice their opinion.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

- Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, a little more than a year ago serious financial problems began to arise in Thailand. What began in Thailand, however, quickly spread to other Asian financial markets like Indonesia, South Korea, and even Hong Kong and Japan. In recent months, we have seen this financial crisis creep into other economies around the world, most notably, perhaps, Brazil. This crisis is not just about Asia, Russia or Latin America, however; it's about the U.S. as well.

In today's increasingly intertwined global economy, the U.S. has an important national interest in working to stabilize the economies of its trading partners around the world. It is the U.S. that ultimately stands to lose if other economies fail—economies that are markets for our products. Reductions in Asian purchasing power or slow economic growth in Brazil, for example, could undermine the economic health of the U.S. The economic crises in Asia, Brazil and Russia have pushed Brazil to the precipice of economic and financial collapse. The stakes for America and Americans are considerable. If the Brazilian economy fails, the financial crisis now gripping large parts of the rest of the world will be on America's doorstep.

The huge Brazilian economy, the ninth largest in the world, is the backbone of Latin American economies. Economists warn that if Brazil's economy collapses, the economies of Argentina, Chile, and the rest of Latin America will be in serious peril.

Almost twenty percent of our exports are purchased by Latin America and it is home to a number of important American-owned factories whose sales and profits are important contributors to the balance sheets of corporate America. A sharp reduction in the flow of this income, combined with the sharp reductions which have already occurred in Asia, would seriously imperil economic growth here in the U.S. As an economist at Salomon Smith Barney stated, "There is just no way we can allow Brazil to fail." The financial crises in Asia, Brazil and other parts of the world, are potentially particularly problematic for my home state of California. California is the world's seventh largest economy, it has a gross state product of more than $1 trillion, and is by far the nation's largest state market. It exports more than any other state in the country; and thus, not surprisingly sensitive to the financial crises faced by our trading partners.

The Asian financial crisis is illustrative of this point. Because of California's geographical proximity to Asia and what had been Asia's rapidly expanding economies, a growing number of California's exports were, and are, going to Asia.

Of California's top 10 export markets, 6 are Asian. Moreover, forty-four percent of all California exports are to Asia and approximately 725,000 California jobs are supported by exports to Asia. During the first quarter of 1998, however, California's exports to Japan decreased by 12 percent, exports to Singapore decreased by 14 percent, to Indonesia by almost 25 percent, and to South Korea by 40 percent.

Although Brazil ranked 17th among California's export markets in 1997, Brazil's financial troubles do present added risks to California's ability to export goods and services. California's high technology companies have reportedly been building a presence in Brazil and a consumer class has emerged. Moreover, California's trade officials, and many California exporters, have said they had begun to look to the Latin American markets to offset the trade imbalance in Asia and the state's exports growing—exports which are so vital to the California economy.

Given this global economic interdependence, the question is not can we legislators do to help, aid, or assist in getting these distressed economies back on track? While there are some things we cannot do, like dictate or direct that countries follow economic practices and economic practices set forth by the U.S., there are things we can do. One of the things we can do, and I believe we must do, is provide technical and financial assistance to economically distressed countries through our participation in the IMF.

Last September, while the Asian financial crisis was still unfolding, the IMF Executive Board agreed on quota increases for its members. The request for an additional $60 billion in the IMF and the U.S. Treasury to (1) $34.5 billion for our share of the increase in normal quota resources, and (2) $3.5 billion for U.S. participation in the New Arrangements to Borrow, an additional to the Fund's emergency credit lines for use in systemic financial crises.

In late March, the Senate, with strong bi-partisan support, voted to include the Administration's full IMF funding request, of approximately $18 billion, in its 1998 supplementary appropriations bill. The House, however, refused to include this funding in its supplemental appropriations bill.

Although the House did agree to provide the IMF $3.4 billion in funding on September 17, that amount is far short of the $18 billion requested by the Administration, approved by the Senate and needed to help curb the economic crisis which threatens several regions around the globe. The House and Senate are now debating this important issue, and I support and encourage Chairman Stevens' steadfast insistence that the House recede to the Senate on the issue of full IMF funding.
The IMF is the world's largest lender of last resort and is designed to foster trade and economic growth by helping maintain stability in the international monetary system. Countries join the Fund by agreeing to a capital subscription and abiding by rules set up in the Articles of Agreement.

The 182 member countries may borrow money from the IMF to finance short-term balance of payment deficits and to help manage more serious longer-term financial imbalances. In return, countries must adopt economic policies negotiated with IMF economists, and approved by the Executive Board, designed to ensure the underlying problems which caused the crisis are corrected.

These policies, or conditions, are market-oriented measures that vary depending on the situation, but often focus on reducing government spending, implementing banking and financial industry reforms, and taking often painful steps to control inflation. IMF loans to its members are repaid with interest. Although, the IMF has had to restructure some of the outstanding loan balances of the poorest countries, no country has ever defaulted on its IMF loan.

It is important to note that in addition to U.S. economic interests, U.S. national security interests are also at risk as a result of the Asian economic crisis, as well as the economic crises in Russia and in other parts of the world. Many of the countries affected by the crisis are key strategic allies.

The U.S. has 100,000 troops based in Asia, 37,000 on the Korean Peninsula alone. History has shown that economic distress and financial instability can threaten political stability and security.

Mr. President, in closing I want to note my agreement with many of my colleagues who believe the IMF needs to be reformed. I do not disagree. Chairman Greenspan said during his September 16 testimony before the House Banking Committee, "I think it is time to change the way the IMF works, and to help reduce the world's reliance on it as a lender of last resort."

In fact, I got to know Carl after he was elected DAV Department Commander in 1995. I can tell you from personal experience that he was a staunch advocate for disabled veterans and their families, often urging us in Congress to do well for our veterans, and I deeply respected him for that. According to his wife Val, he became such a strong veterans advocate because of love for his older brother, whose life was changed from being wounded in combat during World War II.

Carl also had a strong connection to agriculture, starting as a family farmer and then moving to a career in agriculture. He was a fine athlete who loved to swim, cross country ski, and run. But perhaps most impressive was how his kindness touched people and how his compassion helped build consensus during times of conflict.

Mr. President, I conclude by asking my colleagues to join me in expressing our love and prayers to him and his family. For his children and grandchildren our nation's eternal gratitude for Carl Youngblom's significant and myriad contributions.

RECOGNIZING "CHARACTER COUNTS!"

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize a very important organization in the state of Michigan. The CHARACTER COUNTS™ coalition, a national grassroots organization which promotes character education with a program utilizing six components: respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship and trustworthiness.

Across the country, individuals, organizations, and entire communities are coming together on a united front dedicated to enrolling a set of ethical values which are the very foundation of a free, democratic society. My colleagues and I truly appreciate their dedication to educate and improve the character of our nation's youth.

As the Chairman for CHARACTER COUNTS™ in Michigan and in light of National CHARACTER COUNTS™ week, I extend my best wishes to Pat Malijewski the CHARACTER COUNTS™ in Michigan Project Coordinator and everyone involved in making CHARACTER COUNTS™ a tremendous success in Michigan and across this great country.

TRIBUTE TO CARL YOUNGBLOM

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to Carl Youngblom, a great American from my state of Michigan.

Carl proudly served his nation as a Korean War veteran. He proudly served his community as former president of the St. Peter Rotary International. And he proudly served disabled veterans as a past Minnesota Department Commander of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV).

In fact, I got to know Carl after he was elected DAV Department Commander in 1995. I can tell you from personal experience that he was a staunch advocate for disabled veterans and their families, often urging us in Congress to do well for our veterans, and I deeply respected him for that. According to his wife Val, he became such a strong veterans advocate because of love for his older brother, whose life was changed from being wounded in combat during World War II.

WORLD FOOD DAY AND THE UN WORLD FOOD PROGRAMME

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise today to call attention to the celebration of World Food Day on October 16th. I also rise to recognize the many successes achieved by the UN World Food Programme (WFP), the world's largest international humanitarian organization, over the past 38 years.

The WFP provides humanitarian relief to the world's poorest and most downtrodden people by distributing food to those individuals who are particularly vulnerable to malnutrition and famine, particularly poor children. Last year alone, the WFP fed over 52.9 million people, by transporting food to needy and malnourished families in 84 countries. The WFP also provides much needed assistance to the tens of millions of victims worldwide who have suffered through natural disasters, such as earthquakes, severe floods and drought. Moreover, the WFP has committed itself to ensuring peace and stability around the world by providing food to people in countries like Sudan and Rwanda. Finally, the WFP uses donated food for development activities such as paying individuals that replant forests in Ethiopia and providing nourishment to workers repairing dikes in Vietnam. These activities help developing countries build strong infrastructures and promote economic stability.

With nowhere else to turn, the poorest of the world's poor have been able to find solace in the hard work and dedication of the WFP's many volunteers and employees.

American citizens have a particular reason to be proud on World Food Day. The United States has committed itself to be a world leader in the global battle against hunger. The late, Honorary Chairman for the WFP, Carl Youngblom, the St. Peter, Minnesota native, was elected DAV Department Commander in 1995. I can tell you from personal experience that he was a staunch advocate for disabled veterans and their families, often urging us in Congress to do well for our veterans, and I deeply respected him for that. According to his wife Val, he became such a strong veterans advocate because of love for his older brother, whose life was changed from being wounded in combat during World War II.

REINVESTMENT AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION ACT OF 1998

Mr. CHAFFEE. Mr. President, I would like to commend my colleague from Louisiana, Senator LANDRIEU, for her herculean efforts in developing this legislation. She has worked tirelessly with other Senators, the House, and numerous stakeholders, including industry groups and environmental groups alike. The bill she introduces... today reflects her tremendous dedication to this issue. I also applaud Senator LANDRIEU's efforts to shape this legislation into a significant conservation initiative. Her legislation includes two titles devoted to ensuring federal funding for the Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF), and title III for funding non-game species protection by the States, known as Teaming with Wildlife. These worthwhile programs have not received the same benefit or funding they deserve on their own, and the inclusion in this legislation gives them an opportunity to fulfill their potential. In particular, the LWCF was created in 1964 with the principle that revenues from a resource extraction activity—offshore oil drilling—should be reinvested in the acquisition and protection of other natural resources with lasting value. Senator LANDRIEU's bill remains true to this principle. In my view, this bill is a major piece of legislation, with much promise. It deserves careful consideration. I intend to give the bill this consideration during recess. I intend to consult with different groups here, and with constituents in my home state of Rhode Island. Some groups have raised concerns that this bill will encourage offshore drilling, despite the Senator's strong statement that this bill is "drilling-neutral." I would like to reach my own conclusion on this score. Different interest groups have made suggestions to improve the provisions in all three titles, and I would like to explore those as well during recess.

Senator LANDRIEU has expressed a genuine openness to consider new ideas, and a genuine willingness to incorporate good ideas into her legislation. I look forward to working with my colleague from Louisiana during the coming months on this initiative, and again, I wholeheartedly congratulate her on how far she has come already.

U.S. ROLE IN ERADICATING POLIO

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, there are fewer than 800 days left before we reach the goal of eliminating polio throughout the world by the end of the year 2000. That victory will mark the second time in history we have been able to eradicate an infectious disease. The first was the eradication of smallpox, a disease that claimed millions of lives through the centuries. As recently as the 1950's, smallpox was killing over 2 million people each year, despite the fact that an effective vaccine for the disease had been in use since 1796. Smallpox eradication began in 1967. The campaign required 11 years to complete and cost nearly $300 million—$200 million from countries with endemic smallpox and an additional $100 million from international donors. The U.S. was the largest international contributor with a total investment of $32 million. And that investment has repaid itself many times over. Beyond the humanitarian benefits of eliminating this vicious killer, we have enjoyed tremendous economic benefits. The U.S. alone has recouped the equivalent of its entire investment every 26 days since 1974. More importantly, we will have conquered a disease responsible for crippling millions of children over our history. Finally, we will have set the stage for our next campaign—the eradication of measles. Regional efforts to eliminate measles have been mounted and an international effort is on the horizon. Historically, measles has killed more children than any other infectious disease. Even today, it is responsible for one out of every 10 deaths in children under age 5. Many leaders in the public health field believe that we should begin planning an international strategy over the next two years so that resources can be easily shifted from the polio effort to a measles campaign once polio is eradicated.

I would like to conclude by paraphrasing the testimony of several witnesses at a recent Appropriations Committee hearing on measles and polio eradication. We live in a time when government and politicians are the targets of great criticism. At the same time, there are few instances of social justice by groups other than government. No social club, no church group, no other organization represents all of us. Only government does that.

Our immunization successes in this country have resulted from government at its best—government was an aim to protect every child individually and society collectively. It is the product of politics at its best. Likewise, while the U.S. effort to support smallpox eradication, polio eradication, child health and child immunization is a consequence of enlightened self interest, it also expresses our highest values. As Americans, of a responsibility to the world and to the future. It is the U.S. government at its very best.

IOWA NORTHLAND REGIONAL COUNCIL OF GOVERNMENTS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, on the occasion of its 25th anniversary, I would like to congratulate the Iowa Northland Regional Council of Governments. Only INRCOG does that. In January 1973, INRCOG was the first council of governments formed in the State of Iowa. As a voluntary association of local governments serving the member jurisdictions in Black Hawk, Bremer, Buchanan, Butler, Chiswick and Grundy Counties, INRCOG has long been recognized as a leader among service and planning organizations. Responsible for coordinating, assisting, and facilitating programs in commodity and economic development, transportation, housing, environment, safety, planning, administration and transit, INRCOG's services have benefited all governmental bodies in the INRCOG region and the State of Iowa.

Through INRCOG’s intergovernmental communication and cooperation, flourished and public-private partnerships have been enhanced. The ability of these entities to plan for their own future has been enhanced, and we wish them many more years of successful service for the success of Iowa’s communities, for their efforts will continue to strengthen the backbone of America’s governmental system, thus enriching the lives of our citizens.

REMEMBERING VETERANS

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to make a few remarks about the distinguished service of United States veterans. As Veterans Day approaches, we look forward to honoring the men and women who have served this country with bravery, honor, and valor. I am submitting, for my colleagues, a May 28, 1998 article from the Los Angeles Times written by Patty Andrews, the Andrews Sisters. The Andrews Sisters spent much of World War II entertaining the young men who fought so courageously in Europe, the Pacific, Africa, and other parts of the world. In this stirring piece, Mrs. Andrews details the service and sacrifices of all of those who contributed to the war effort, and describes how she and her sisters helped to build morale and comforted the wounded.

The article follows: [From the Los Angeles Times, May 25, 1998]

"Bugle Boys of Company B Died to Keep America Free" (By Patty Andrews)

My sisters and I probably met face to face with more soldiers in World War II than any general or field marshal. The Andrews Sisters entertained tens of thousands of GIs at bases here and abroad throughout the war and I can still see so many of their smiling faces. We sometimes wonder how many of those faces made it home safely and how many are now just faint memories. I’ll carry their memory for as long as I live. But then what? Without anything to publicly commemorate those GIs, their deeds will be forgotten.

The faces of the survivors are now creased and some have grayed many years—but they still smile when they see me. And I see them all the time, in airports and shopping malls. The veterans of global war are living their autumn years happily, oblivious to the fact that they are walking history.

We have a common bond. We were all soldiers in the greatest war ever. And we share a knowing wink—if you weren’t there you’d never understand the terror of total war or exhilaration of saving the world from evil incarnate. I guess I remind the veterans that it all really happened, that it wasn’t some hazy memory, that they answered the call and succeeded beyond all expectation. They won a victory so complete that we hardly remember a “victory” as such in baseball had ever been enshrined. I guess I wish them many more years of successful service for the success of Iowa’s communities, for their efforts will continue to strengthen the backbone of America’s governmental system, thus enriching the lives of our citizens.

twice elected Mayor Pro-Tempore and has volunteered numerous hours to local charitable organizations and causes, including Right to Life of Michigan.

I want to once again express my singular appreciation and gratitude to Omer O’Neil for the service and leadership he has provided the Southern Wayne County Chamber of Commerce and the Downriver communities. I wish Omer well in his retirement year.

CLASS ACTION REFORM

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise to express my continued strong interest in meaningful class action reform—and to announce that, although we do not have the time necessary to move legislation any further this year, class action reform remains one of my highest priorities. Although many class action lawsuits do result in significant and important benefits for class members and society, too many class lawyers put their self-interest above the best interests of their clients—resulting in unfair and abusive settlements that shortchange class members while their lawyers line their pockets with high fees.

To address this growing problem, Senator GRASSLEY and I introduced the Class Action Fairness Act of 1998 (S. 2291). My bill is a modest approach to weed out the worst abuses, while preserving the benefits of class actions.

To encourage closer scrutiny of class actions through several provisions. It requires that proposed class action settlements be in plain, easily understandable English and be sent to state attorneys general, so they have an opportunity to weigh in with any objections. It requires courts to determine what damages will actually be paid to class members before awarding attorneys’ fees, rather than calculating fees based on overvalued estimates of meaningless coupon settlements. And it moves more class actions to federal courts, which generally give closer scrutiny than state courts and can promote efficiency and avoid a costly “race to settlement” by consolidating overlapping cases.

These proposals have earned a broad range of support. Even Judge Paul Nienaber, the Chair of the Judicial Council Advisory Committee on Civil Rules, who has studied class actions closely and testified before Congress on this issue, expressed his support for this “modest” measure, noting in particular that increasing federal jurisdiction over class actions will be a positive “meaningful step.”

This year, our bipartisan measure was reported favorably by the Judiciary Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts. Unfortunately, as the term has wound down, we have been too busy with other pressing issues to give this proposal the full consideration it deserves. Still, we already have made several revisions. to improve the bill and address concerns that have been raised, and in my view any remaining concerns can be worked out.

So next year, class action reform will be one of my highest priorities. I look forward with my colleagues to ensure that we eliminate those abuses that too often give class actions a bad name.

TRIBUTE TO DR. STEVEN DEKOSKY
• Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, next month our nation acknowledges the more than 4 million Americans who suffer from Alzheimer’s disease and the 19 million who are their caregivers. National Alzheimer’s month is a time to reflect on those who are afflicted as well as those who are dedicating their lives to eradicating this disease.

I bring to your attention one of those who is committed to creating a world without Alzheimer’s. His name is Dr. Steven DeKosky and since 1990, he has been an the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine where among other things, he directs the Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center funded by the National Institute on Aging. Dr. DeKosky’s accomplishments are enormous as reflected in his curriculum vitae, which is some 36 pages long. If I tried to list all of his achievements it would fill dozens of pages of the Congressional Record. In the interests of the taxpayers, I’ll mention only a few of Dr. DeKosky’s contributions.

As a renowned Alzheimer researcher, clinician and teacher, Dr. DeKosky is dedicated to finding answers to the Alzheimer’s puzzle. To this end, he is active in basic and clinical research. His basic research is on the structural and biochemical changes in human brains with dementia. His clinical research focuses on four key areas. One is to find ways of diagnosing the disease more effectively and differentiating it from other related diseases. A second area involves neuroimaging, which helps to confirm other diagnostic techniques, but also opens “windows” to the brain to enable scientists to understand the disease better. A third area of study, and one that is offering very exciting possibilities for treatment, is the assessment of genetic risk factors in Alzheimer’s. Finally, he is involved in clinical trials to assess new medications for the disease.

Dr. DeKosky is active in the American Academy of Neurology and the American Neurological Association. The latter organization honored him with its “Presidential Award” in 1988. He is listed in “The Best Doctors in America.” He serves on the editorial boards of the “Archives of Neurology” and the “Alzheimer Disease and Associated Disorders: An International Journal.” He also received a Teacher Investigator Development Award from the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke.

Despite his involvement in dozens of research projects and other academic pursuits, Dr. DeKosky contributes vast amounts of time as a volunteer to the Alzheimer cause. He currently chairs the national Alzheimer’s Association’s Medical and Scientific Advisory Council and is a member of the board of the Alzheimer’s Association. He chairs the Professor A. D. S. Board of the Greater Pittsburgh Chapter of the Alzheimer’s Association and was a founding member of the Lexington-Blue Grass Chapter of the Alzheimer’s Association.

Dr. DeKosky has a special gift as a communicator of science. Whether in the classroom or speaking to groups of family members in the community, Dr. DeKosky has a knack for making the complex seem simple. He expresses the enthusiasm and hope created by scientific research in Alzheimer’s, which is offering promise to Americans of all ages that their future may not be blighted by this dread disease. And, he has a sense of humor and a healthy curiosity which allows him to “connect” to those to whom he speaks.

Mr. President, I believe it is important to acknowledge the unsung heroes who are working tirelessly in laboratories and in the clinic to make our world a less disease-prone. Dr. Steven DeKosky is one of those exemplary citizens who through his daily efforts is bringing about a better tomorrow.

THE YEAR 2000 PROBLEM
• Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise today to express my great concern about the Year 2000 computer problem, and to urge that funding be approved on an emergency basis to address this problem.

Mr. President, in less than 500 days, an unknown number of computers around the world will fail because they can’t tell the difference between the year 1900 and the year 2000. Although the software for this problem cannot be easily fixed, it is not. It’s time consuming, difficult, and expensive to address. And the implications of failure are enormous.

We have known about the Year 2000 problem for some time, Mr. President, but many have failed to appreciate its severity. Throughout the private and public sectors, top officials assumed that someone else would find a solution. Or they simply did not appreciate the importance of making this problem a priority.

Fortunately, Mr. President, many in the private sector are now taking this threat seriously. One Federal Reserve official speculated that private sector spending on the problem could exceed $50 billion. While many small businesses are just beginning to face the problem, most major large businesses are acting aggressively. Banks, utilities, hospitals, factories, insurance companies, and railroad companies are scrambling to ensure that the problem will be ready.

Many understand that this truly is an emergency, and they’re treating it that way.

Still, I am afraid that most Americans still do not appreciate the severity of the Y2K problem. And I would urge all those listening to educate themselves about it. Admittedly, it is very difficult for most of us to evaluate the risks. But many credible experts have warned us about the very worst scenarios that are truly alarming.

Consider, for example, the impact of the Year 2000 problem on public utilities. Senators BENNETT and DODD, the chair and ranking minority member of the Senate’s Environment and Public Works Committee on the Year 2000 Technology Problem, have held a hearing on this, and I commend both of them for their leadership. Their Committee surveyed major utilities and found that many are far from ready for the year 2000. The Committee’s work raises very serious questions about the risks of major power outages throughout our country, and the impact of such outages on our financial and telecommunications systems.

Indeed, the essential infrastructural systems that support our nation could be at risk.

Largely because of such threats, some economists have argued that the Year 2000 problem is likely to lead to a severe recession. Some see a parallel to the downturn of the 1970’s when oil supply problems, the disruption of oil supplies, and the sharp rise in interest rates and inflation, all at the same time.

Now, Mr. President, I’m not saying that this is bound to happen. Experts disagree about the likelihood of major economic and social dislocations. However, even if the odds of a significant breakdown are modest, the potential enormity of the problem demands that we take it seriously.

I come from my own experience that software problems can be terribly serious and difficult to address. Before I came to public life, I was an executive in a computer services firm, a firm that has been quite successful. I can tell you that nothing is more vexing than a seemingly insignificant software glitch that grinds an entire program to a halt. Fixing such a glitch can require laborious, line-by-line examination of impenetrable computer code. Meanwhile, everything is often bought to a standstill.

While analysts may disagree about the scope of the Y2K problem, Mr. President, it does seem clear that some things will go wrong on January 1, 2000. We just can’t say exactly which, or how many. Compounding matters, even if one system has had its Y2K problems fixed, it still can be corrupted by interacting with other systems that are flawed. We have a systemic problem—and it will only be solved if all of us work together.

What is the government’s role in all this? Well, our first responsibility is to put our own house in order.
As the General Accounting Office has reported, Y2K could have a devastating impact on the provision of public services. These include air traffic control, Social Security and Medicare payments, supervision of the financial system, monitoring of nuclear facilities, and a wide variety of other services. And let's not forget the Nation's defense. We are all proud of our modern military with its smart weapons and computerized battlefields. But a technology-dependent military is subject to the same computer hazards as everyone else.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, many agencies are way behind schedule in fixing the Y2K problem. According to GAO, “unless agency progress improves dramatically, a substantial number of mission-critical systems will not be compliant in time.”

So, Mr. President, this is truly an emergency, and it’s critical that we act as soon as possible. Unlike many problems, we have no courageously say one can’t be delayed or postponed. We can’t set up a commission. We can’t put it off until the next Congress. On January 1, 2000, the problem will hit, whether we like it or not. And we have to do everything we can to prepare.

Mr. President, let me commend my colleagues on the Appropriations Committee, and throughout the Senate, for approving emergency funding to address the Y2K problem. I wish I had done so earlier. Unfortunately, there are many Members in the House of Representatives who strongly oppose treating this funding as an emergency. And they have created serious obstacles to allocating the funding. I urge them to reconsider their opposition, and am hopeful they will.

Beyond increasing funding, Mr. President, there are other steps that the Federal government must consider to address the Y2K problem. For example, we need to encourage businesses that share relevant information with each other. We need to ensure that businesses accurately report on their compliance efforts to the SEC and investors. We need to support small businesses’ efforts to fix their computers. I have actively supported these types of legislative initiatives. But I recognize that they are not sufficient. We also need to communicate better with our constituents about the problem, so that all Americans can prepare.

Mr. President, given differing views on the actual risks, the only wise thing is to prepare for the worst. When a hurricane approaches, we never know exactly where it will hit, or how destructive it will be. But that doesn’t stop us from evacuating and boarding up our homes in expectation of the worst case scenario. Sometimes, those preparations prove unnecessary. And, if the hurricane there will also be cleanup costs later. But the better one prepares, the more efficient, and less expensive, the cleanup will be. And the same is true for Y2K.

So, Mr. President, I would strongly urge this Congress to focus serious attention on Y2K, and to strongly support all funding needed to solve the problem. This is an emergency, and the time to act is now. We shouldn’t panic. If we waited, like so many others do, until the last minute, when nobody knows the exact dimensions of the problem, this is one threat that we ignore at our peril.

CORRECTION TO THE LIST OF OBJECTIONABLE PROVISIONS IN THE FISCAL YEAR 1999 INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS BILL

- Mr. McCaskill, Mr. President, I wish to place the record on the list of objectionable provisions to the Senate passed version of the FY ‘99 Interior Appropriations bill.

I was pleased to learn that the Indian health facility that is designated to be constructed on the Hopi reservation in Arizona was requested for funding in this year’s budget. I had previously objected to this item in my pork list, not based on the merits of the project, but what appeared to be an unrequested, directed earmark.

The Hopi Health Center in Polacca, Arizona is requested for funding at the level of $14,400,000 for construction of a new Indian health facility, which is consistent with the budget request. I will remove this item as an objectionable provision.

I assure Chairman Wayne Taylor and the Hopi Tribe that I continue to be supportive of establishing an Indian health center for the Hopi community.

TAWAIN’S NATIONAL DAY

- Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. President, I rise today to offer my congratulations to President Lee Teng-hui and the people of the Republic of China on Taiwan on the occasion of their National Day which will occur on October 10. It is a deep honor for me to join in the celebration of this momentous occasion.

The remarkable achievements of Taiwan continue to tell a powerful story of how democracy can grow in Asia, and that it is compatible with a commitment to capitalism. Taiwan’s ability to survive the Asian financial crisis better than any other free economy in the region is just another example of the significance of Taiwan’s leadership. Quite simply, Taiwan’s economic and political miracles never cease to amaze me.

It is a true honor for me to have a long-standing, very personal friendship with Taiwan. My own state of West Virginia has benefited from Taiwan’s commitment to democracy, to vibrant economic ties with the U.S. and the rest of the world, and to peace.

ELLEN BERLINER

- Mr. Spector, Mr. President, with more than 4 million Americans suffering from Alzheimer’s disease at a cost to our society of more than $100 billion annually, it is time we take a moment to reflect on the work of those who are dedicating their energies to coping with this terrible disease.

One of those people is Ellen Berliner. Ms. Berliner, who lives in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, took care of her husband with Alzheimer’s disease for 13 years. For those of us who have not been a caregiver for an Alzheimer patient, it is difficult to comprehend what the experience is like. It has been described as the “36 hour day” or the “endless funeral” because the demands are greater and more stressful than what most of us can deal with in a normal 24 hour day, and the losses and emotional strain are enormous. Ms. Berliner, like so many other Americans, stepped up to the challenge of caregiving and performed what is a long-standing, very personal friendship with Taiwan. My own state of West Virginia has benefited from Taiwan’s commitment to democracy, to vibrant economic ties with the U.S. and the rest of the world, and to peace.

The Hopi Health Center in Polacca, Arizona is requested for funding at the level of $14,400,000 for construction of an Indian health center for the Hopi community.

TAWAIN’S NATIONAL DAY

- Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. President, I rise today to offer my congratulations to President Lee Teng-hui and the people of the Republic of China on Taiwan on the occasion of their National Day which will occur October 10. It is a deep honor for me to join in the celebration of this momentous occasion.

The remarkable achievements of Taiwan continue to tell a powerful story of how democracy can grow in Asia, and that it is compatible with a commitment to capitalism. Taiwan’s ability to survive the Asian financial crisis better than any other free economy in the region is just another example of the significance of Taiwan’s leadership. Quite simply, Taiwan’s economic and political miracles never cease to amaze me.

It is a true honor for me to have a long-standing, very personal friendship with Taiwan. My own state of West Virginia has benefited from Taiwan’s commitment to democracy, to vibrant economic ties with the U.S. and the rest of the world, and to peace.

ELLEN BERLINER

- Mr. Spector, Mr. President, with more than 4 million Americans suffering from Alzheimer’s disease at a cost to our society of more than $100 billion annually, it is time we take a moment to reflect on the work of those who are dedicating their energies to coping with this terrible disease.

One of those people is Ellen Berliner. Ms. Berliner, who lives in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, took care of her husband with Alzheimer’s disease for 13 years. For those of us who have not been a caregiver for an Alzheimer patient, it is difficult to comprehend what the experience is like. It has been described as the “36 hour day” or the “endless funeral” because the demands are greater and more stressful than what most of us can deal with in a normal 24 hour day, and the losses and emotional strain are enormous. Ms. Berliner, like so many other Americans, stepped up to the challenge of caregiving and performed what is a long-standing, very personal friendship with Taiwan. My own state of West Virginia has benefited from Taiwan’s commitment to democracy, to vibrant economic ties with the U.S. and the rest of the world, and to peace.
role model to her peers and to future generations.

BIG SKY AIRLINES TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate a small business in my state, Big Sky Airlines, on their 20th Anniversary.

Big Sky Airlines commenced scheduled passenger service on September 11, 1978. The initial flight flew from Billings to Helena with continuing service to Kalispell. The aircraft was a Hadley-Paige Jetstream with a seating capacity of 10.

Today, Big Sky operates a fleet of six nineteen-passenger Metro III aircraft, with service to 12 cities in Montana and Spokane, Washington. The company operates out of its hub in Billings and provides connecting opportunities from Billings and Central Montana to its markets in the west. The Montana cities are Glasgow, Glendive, Miles City, Wolf Point and Sidney in the east. Havre and Lewistown in central Montana, and Great Falls, Helena, Missoula, Kalispell and Spokane in the west. All of the eastern and central Montana service is operated under the Essential Air Service subsidy contract with the Department of Transportation.

Big Sky Airlines has been through a lot in their 20 years of providing service in Montana. They've had their good times and bad. However, through it all they continued to provide service to remote areas that would have otherwise been further isolated from the nation's economic centers without them. The Essential Air Service program is critical to these communities. Without this service, these communities would be seriously isolated from their economic centers to attract new business or even to retain those they now have, resulting in further strain on local economies and loss of jobs.

In my visits to the state, I frequently fly on Big Sky Airlines. In our state, to many cities, it's the only way to fly. I've had lots of experiences, I could tell you about. However, I'd rather talk about the many families I've seen reunified as the Big Sky plane lands in those rural communities.

I'd like to congratulate the Board of Big Sky Airlines and their chairman, John Marchi for their foresight and perseverance. I'd also like to congratulate the others of the company: Kim Champney, the President and CEO, and Craig Denney, the Executive Vice President and Chief Operating officer. Kim has only been there a short time, but is moving the company in exciting new directions. I've personally seen Craig load the luggage, check in the passengers and send the airplane on its way. He knows how to do every job in the company and do it well.

I'd also like to congratulate John Rabenberg and the other members of the Essential Air Service task force for the hard work they do in their communities for this program.

Big Sky Airlines currently employs 103 people throughout its system (all in Montana). And you can tell it's a good company to work for. Whether you are checking in at the counter, or watching the pilots get ready to take-off, they are very customer service oriented, and Mr. President, it's a pleasure for me today to congratulate them on their 20th Anniversary and to wish them many more years of flying the big sky of Montana.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise today to raise awareness of a startlingly common problem occurring every 15 seconds across our nation—and that is the issue of domestic violence. October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and I would like to take this opportunity to discuss the devastating impact of domestic violence on individuals, families and our communities.

Few people want to tell the dark secrets of their family. Though many keep incidents of domestic violence secret, it is a scourge on our landscape. Through the efforts of medical researchers, law enforcement officers, advocates, and victims, more attention is now being paid. In the last two years alone, according to the National Library of Medicine, approximately 500 articles have been written on domestic violence in prominent journals and periodicals.

Despite these efforts, many remain uncomfortable talking about domestic violence. According to the Department of Justice Violence Against Women Office, domestic violence is a crime that is frequently underreported to law enforcement authorities. Victims often live in fear and do not share their troubled secrets. They fear threats, additional violence and more pain.

The U.S. Department of Justice estimates that 3 to 4 million women are battered each year by their husbands or boyfriends. Data published by the Commonwealth Fund shows that women are more often the victims of domestic violence than victims of burglary, muggings or other physical crimes combined. The National Crime Victimization Survey indicates that from 1991 to 1996, approximately half of female victims of domestic violence were physically injured.

Unfortunately, only one in five of those injured victims sought treatment at a medical facility. As a physician, I know that our health care delivery systems can be critical links in identifying cases of domestic violence. In a 1990 study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, 22 to 35% of women treated in emergency rooms were there for injuries related to domestic abuse. Health care providers can have a significant impact in identifying such cases, and we must give them the tools to help us address the problem.

Another sad truth is that domestic violence crosses all racial, gender, age and economic boundaries. Children, men and the elderly are also victims. Child abuse is 15 times more likely to occur in families where domestic violence is present. In the late 1990's, rear-ended elderly alone was almost 20% nationally. With these staggering numbers before us, it is apparent that domestic violence necessitates a coordinated community response with partners at the local, state and federal levels.

That's why I am particularly heartened by efforts in Tennessee to address the issue. The Tennessee Task Force Against Domestic Violence is dedicated to ending violence in the lives of women and children through their network of coalitions and shelters. The Task Force has partnered with the Tennessee Medical Association to educate health care providers. They also work closely with law enforcement authorities. My home town of Nashville, for example, has a domestic violence division of any police department in the country. Working together with the Task Force, the city’s police department has seen an increase in the number of calls from victims who now have more confidence in the system.

Knoxville, Chattanooga and Memphis have similar efforts underway. I am proud of my fellow Tennesseans for the example they are setting and the models they are creating. They are sending a clear message that domestic violence is wrong and has no place in our society.

We are working to send a similar message at the federal level. I have authored three bills which contain provisions to address domestic violence. S. 1754, the “Health Professions Education and Partnerships Act of 1998,” passed the Senate by unanimous consent in July. Among other things, it requests that the Institute of Medicine examine and make recommendations regarding the training needs of health professionals with respect to detection and referral of victims. In S. 1722, the “Women’s Health Research and Prevention Amendments of 1998,” and in S. 2330, the “Patients’ Bill of Rights,” we authorize federal funding for community programs on domestic violence through the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act. I have recently joined my colleagues Senators Domenici and Stevens to cosponsor S. 2395, the “Prescription for Abuse Act,” which will help health care providers to better identify, address and prevent domestic violence.

Domestic violence warrants our full and responsive consideration. I urge my colleagues to take time during October—Domestic Violence Awareness Month—to determine what more we can do to address this problem.

Together we can send a clear message that domestic violence must continue to be addressed comprehensively, creatively, and compassionately.
SAFETY AND SOUND COMMUNITIES ACT

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise to outline my proposal for reducing juvenile crime—the “Safe and Sound Communities Act,” which I will make available as a discussion draft today. In the past few years, we have begun to make real advances in fighting juvenile crime in cities across the country. But juvenile crime has started to fall. For example, after Boston implemented a city-wide anti-crime plan, the number of juveniles murdered declined 80 percent, and two years later, no 11-year-old was killed by a gun. Not one child. And in three “Weed & Seed” neighborhoods in Milwaukee, violent felonies dropped 46 percent, gun crimes fell 46 percent, and crime overall was down 21 percent. Now we need to build on what works, in order to protect our children and to make our communities “safe and sound.” This measure will be an important step in the right direction.

Indeed, we do not have to reinvent the wheel to reduce juvenile crime. The lesson from Boston, Milwaukee and other cities is clear. There is no one magic solution. But a number of steps, taken together, can and will make a difference: put dangerous criminals behind bars; keep guns out of the hands of juveniles; and give children after-school alternatives to gangs and drugs. That’s what works in Boston and Milwaukee and the rest of America. And that’s what this proposal is all about. It builds on each of these three basic strategies and expands them to more cities and more rural communities across the nation. Let me explain.

PUT DANGEROUS CRIMINALS BEHIND BARS

First, this proposal makes it easier to lock up dangerous juveniles. We can’t even begin to stop violent kids unless police officers on school grounds can catch them, and state and local prosecutors can try them. So this measure extends the highly successful COPS program, which is due to expire in two years, through the year 2003. And it provides $100 million per year for state and local prosecutors to go after juvenile criminals.

Of course, we can’t keep criminals off the streets unless we have a place to send them. Unfortunately, although we provide states with hundreds of millions of dollars each year to build new prisons, most states use all of these funds for adult prisons only. So this measure requires states to set aside 10 percent of federal prison funding to juvenile prisons or alternative placement. Senate-passed 1994 crime bill, which set the stage for spending billions of dollars on prisons through the 1994 Crime Act.

This proposal also helps rural communities keep dangerous kids behind bars. Now, although the closest juvenile facility may be hundreds of miles away, federal law prohibits rural police from locking up juveniles in adult jails for more than 24 hours. This means that state law enforcement officials either have to waste the time and resources to cross-carry the state even for initial court appearances, or simply let dangerous kids go free. That’s a no-win situation. This measure gives rural police the flexibility they need by letting them detain juveniles in adult jails for up to 72 hours.

And this measure will help lock up violent gun-toting kids—and the people who illegally supply them with weapons. It builds on my 1994 Youth Handgun Safety Act by turning illegal possession of a handgun into a felony. And the same goes for anyone who illegally sells handguns to kids. Kids and handguns don’t mix, and our law needs to make clear that this is a serious crime.

KEEP GUNS OUT OF THE HANDS OF CHILDREN

Second, this proposal will help keep firearms out of the hands of young people. It requires the Justice Department to track the sale of child safety locks with new handguns. Child safety locks can help save many of the 500 children and teenagers killed each year in firearm accidents, and the 1,500 kids each year who are wounded or murdered by suicide. And just as importantly, they can help prevent some of the 7,000 violent juvenile crimes committed every year with guns children took from their own home.

It also helps identify who is supplying kids with guns, so we can put them out of business and behind bars. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been working closely with cities like Milwaukee and Boston to trace guns used by young people back to the source. Using ATF’s national database, police and prosecutors can target illegal suppliers of firearms and help stop the flow of firearms into our communities. This measure will expand the officer’s duties and, especially, the search with the increased penalties outlined above, it will help cut down illegal gun trafficking.

In addition, this measure closes a loophole that allows violent young offenders to buy guns legally when they turn 18. Under current law, violent adult offenders can’t buy firearms, but violent juveniles can—even the kids convicted of the schoolyard killings in Jonesboro, Arkansas—at least once they’ve reached age 18. This has to stop. So this measure declares that all violent felons are disqualified from buying firearms, regardless of whether they were 14 or 24, or a day short of their 18th or 28th birthday, at the time of their offenses.

CRIME PREVENTION AND AFTER-SCHOOL ALTERNATIVES TO GANGS AND DRUGS

Third, a balanced approach also requires a significant investment in crime prevention, so we can stop crime before it starts. The measure encourages officials agree that we need a bigger investment in prevention. For example, more than 400 police chiefs, sheriffs, and prosecutors nationwide have endorsed a call for after-school programs for all children. And in my home state of Wisconsin, 90 percent of police chiefs and sheriffs surveyed agreed that we need to increase federal prevention spending.

This proposal promotes prevention by concentrating funding in programs that already have a record of success, like Weed & Seed, and those that rely on proven strategies, like programs that give children a safe place to go in the after-school hours between 3 and 8 p.m., when juvenile crime peaks.

For example, it expands the Weed & Seed program, a Republican program which combines aggressive enforcement and safe havens for at-risk kids. The measure also gives more schools the resources necessary to stay open after school, through expansion of the 21st Century Learning Center program.

It promotes innovative locally-tailored prevention initiatives by authorizing and expanding the Title V At-Risk Challenge Grant program, which I authored. It builds on our support for the valuable work of Boys & Girls Clubs, by extending that program and expanding it to support other successful organizations like the YMACs. The measure also requires that at least 25 percent of the new juvenile crime funds—namely the recently-initiated $500 million juvenile accountability block grant—be dedicated to prevention.

Of course, we shouldn’t blindly invest in prevention programs, just because they sound good. Quality, not quantity, matters. That’s why my measure cuts $16 billion in prevention programs authorized by the Crime Act—so we don’t waste money on redundant programs which don’t have records of success or bipartisan support. And that’s why my measure requires five to ten percent of all prevention funds to be set aside for rigorous evaluations—so we can keep funding the programs that work, and eliminate the programs that don’t. It also rewards cities that adopt comprehensive anti-juvenile crime strategies, like Boston’s and Milwaukee’s—so prevention is part of a balanced, coordinated overall plan.

This combination of tough enforcement, reducing youth access to guns, and effective prevention will help stem juvenile crime. In addition, several other necessary reforms in this proposal will make a difference. It strongly encourages stay-behind the records of violent juvenile offenders, and provides the funding necessary for improved record-keeping. The fact is that law enforcement officials need full disclosure in order to make informed judgments about how to treat—and whether to incarcerate—a child.

The measure also addresses the dangerous problem of school violence. It increases school security by encouraging communities to use COPS funding to place police officers in schools. It encourages the development of initiatives to prevent school violence. And because understanding the problem is essential to any comprehensive solution, it requires better reporting of firearms-related incidents in public schools. Unfortunately, many states do not report guns seized on school grounds.

Mr. President, the question about how to reduce juvenile crime is no longer a debate. We have a good idea about what works. The real question is: When will we act? As the chances for a juvenile crime bill this year look increasingly slim, I recommend this framework as a good starting point for next year. Let’s build on what works so we can serve as a model for others.

As long as we’ve been involved in sounder places to live. I ask unanimous consent that a summary of this proposal be printed in the Record.

The summary follows:

Summary of S. 12026:

TITLE I: INCREASED PLACEMENT OF JUVENILES IN APPROPRIATE CORRECTIONAL FACILITIES

States must dedicate 10 percent of all prison funding from the 1994 Crime Act to juvenile facilities or alternative placements for delinquent juveniles. Expands ability to detain juveniles temporarily in rural adult jails by permitting detention for up to 72 hours and ending requirement of separate staff to oversee juveniles and adults.

TITLE II: REDUCING YOUTH ACCESS TO FIREARMS

Limits access of juveniles and juvenile offenders to firearms. Requires the sale of child safety locks with all handguns.

TITLE III: CONSOLIDATION OF PREVENTION PROGRAMS

Repeals over $1.6 billion in authorized prevention programs from the 1994 Crime Act. Expands Weed & Seed to $200 million per year (from $335 million in 1998), the Title V At-Risk Children Challenge Grants to $200 million per year (from $80 million), and the 21st Century Learning Centers to $200 million per year (from $40 million), and extends Boys & Girls Club funding for five more years, increasing to $75 million per year (from $20 million) and expanding the program to support other successful community organizations like the YMCA.

Consolidates several gang prevention programs into one $25 million program. Rewards cities that have a 10 percent of prevention funding for evaluation, implementing the proposal of the DOJ-sponsored University of Maryland report.

TITLE IV: JUVENILE CRIME CONTROL AND ACCOUNTABILITY BLOCK GRANT

Promotes funding for prosecutors, improved record keeping, juvenile prisons, and prevention through $500 million block grant. Qualifies to trace all firearms recovered from individuals under age 21 to identify illegal firearm traffickers, and must share criminal records of all juvenile violent offenders and delinquents in other jurisdictions. $500 million of this grant must be dedicated to both prevention and to hiring more prosecutors.

TITLE V: SCHOOL VIOLENCE PREVENTION

Expands role of police officers on school campuses through COPS program. Encourages better reporting of incidents of firearms violence in schools, including gun tracing to identify suppliers of firearms recovered on school property. Complements expansion of school violence prevention programs in Title IV block grants.

TITLE VI: EXTENSION OF COPS AND JUVENILE JUSTICE PROGRAMS

TITLE VII: EXTENSION OF VIOLENT CRIME REDUCTION TRUST FUND

Extends trust fund established by 1994 Crime Act to pay for anti-crime programs with savings from reduction of federal workforce.

20TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RUTH AND MAX ALPERIAN SCHECHTER DAY SCHOOL

- Mr. CHAFFEE. Mr. President, next month a very special school will be celebrating its 20th anniversary. On November 15th, 1978, the Ruth and Max Alperian Schechter Day School in Providence, Rhode Island opened its doors to ten students. Today, its classrooms are filled with over 230 students, and it is one of the fastest growing Jewish institutions in Rhode Island.

The Ruth and Max Alperian Schechter Day School is a state accredited, egalitarian, conservative Jewish Day School serving children from kindergarten through grade eight. In addition to having a fine reputation for quality education, with a well-rounded education, the Alperian Schechter Day School also focuses on academic growth, ethical values, and Jewish identity. Its academic programs are both rich and challenging in general and Judaic studies.

Recognizing that a partnership with parents is essential to the education of our youngsters, the Alperian Schechter Day School continues to promote open communication with families. As a community of learners, the entire school body works together to create a community of successful, well-rounded members while encouraging continued learning and increased participation in school activities.

In fact, students from the Alperian Schechter Day School continue to build on their education, even after graduating. As academic advisors work with families and students to ensure future success, Alperian Schechter Day School graduates have gone on to attend a variety of colleges and universities including, Yale University, Harvard University, University of Rhode Island, Georgetown University, Rhode Island School of Design, and many, many other fine institutions of higher learning. In addition, students have had the opportunity to serve as interns in our nation’s capital, build houses with Habitat for Humanity, and work with disabled children.

In closing, I want to congratulate the Ruth and Max Alperian Schechter Day School on its 20th Anniversary and hope for its continued success in providing academic excellence to our youngsters.

DETOUR ATHLETIC CLUB HONORS CHUCK DAVEY

Mr. ABRAMAM. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Mr. Charles Chuck" Davey on the occasion of the Detroit Athletic Club’s Fall Boxing Classic.

This year’s honoree began his impressive boxing career at the Air Force Academy in Colorado and University of Michigan State University. Remarkably, Chuck won his first NCAA Championship at age 17, a collegiate record, and was the NCAA’s only four time boxing champion in four different weight classes. He also served as Captain and was recognized as an Outstanding Boxer from 1947-1949. Deservedly, he is viewed to be the greatest collegiate boxer of all time.

POMC 8TH ANNUAL LOVE FOR LIFE BENEFIT

- Mr. ABRAMAM. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the organization Parents of Murdered Children, Inc., Metro Detroit Chapter, on the occasion of their 8th Annual Love for Life Benefit.

The POMC was founded in Cincinnati, Ohio, 18 years ago by Charlotte and Bob Hullinger after their daughter was murdered in Germany by a former boyfriend, who traveled there and stalked her. They fought and other families who were dealing with the violent death of a loved one, to gain mutual support. This is the only organization in the United States to support... surviving family members and friends of all homicide victims who are in need of such assistance.

The Metro Detroit Chapter is celebrating its 16th anniversary this year. They have tirelessly helped hundreds of families and friends outside of Michigan whose loved ones were murdered here. The nation’s second Sibling Group was founded by the Metro Detroit Chapter for the unique needs of brothers and sisters who suffer the violent death of a sibling.

POMC’s dedication to help the families and friends of those who have died by violence is commendable. POMC has made a significant impact in easing the difficult times many people have encountered while improving the legal system and the rights of the victims of crime.

I want to express my congratulations to POMC, Inc. Metro Detroit Chapter for their tremendous accomplishments. I also wish them much success in their continued work on behalf of our families and our communities.

STANBRIDGE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Donald and Shirley Stanbridge on the occasion of their 50th Wedding Anniversary. They were married on November 5, 1948.

Don and Shirley were introduced by Shirley’s mother in 1945 and began dating shortly thereafter. Don entered the service in 1946 and asked for Shirley’s hand in marriage in 1947. They have resided in St. Clair Shores, Michigan, for 48 years where they raised two children, and now enjoy three grandchildren.

Martin Luther once wrote: ‘There is no more lovely, friendly and charming relationship, communion or company than a good marriage.’ They are blessed to enjoy the special bond of a strong, enduring marriage.

I want to express my congratulations and happy anniversary to Donald and Shirley Stanbridge on this day, November 5, 1998, and I wish them many more years of joy in marriage.

REINVESTMENT AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION ACT OF 1998—S. 2566

The text of the bill (S. 2566), introduced on October 7, 1998, is as follows:

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Reinvestment and Environmental Restoration Act of 1998.”

TITLE I—COASTAL IMPACT ASSISTANCE

SECTION 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Coastal Conservation and Impact Assistance Act of 1998”. SEC. 102. AMENDMENT TO OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF LANDS ACT.

The Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (92 Stat. 629), as amended, is amended to add at the end thereof a new Title VII as follows:

SEC. 701. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) The Nation owns Federal mineral resources that are located both onshore and in the Federal Outer Continental Shelf, and the Federal Government develops these resources for the benefit of the public under certain restrictions designed to prevent environmental damage and other adverse impacts.

(2) Nonetheless, the development of these mineral resources of the Nation is accompanied by unavoidable environmental impacts and public service impacts in the States that host this development, whether the development occurs onshore or on the Federal Outer Continental Shelf.

(3) The Federal Government has a responsibility to the States affected by development of Federal mineral resources to mitigate adverse environmental and public service impacts incurred due to that development.

(4) The Federal Government discharges its responsibility to States where onshore Federal mineral development occurs by sharing 50 percent of the revenue derived from the Federal mineral development in that State pursuant to section 25 of the Mineral Leasing Act.

(5) Federal mineral development is occurring as far as 200 miles offshore and occurs off the coast of only 6 States, yet section 25(g) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act does not adequately compensate these States for the onshore impacts of the offshore Federal mineral development.

(6) Federal Outer Continental Shelf mineral development is an important and secure source of our Nation’s supply of oil and natural gas.

(7) Further technological advancements in drilling and natural gas exploration, and production need to be pursued and encouraged.

(8) These technological achievements have and will continue to result in new Outer Continental Shelf production having an unparalleled record of excellence on environmental safety issues.

(9) Additional technological advances with appropriate incentives will further improve new resource recovery and therefore increase revenues to the Treasury for the benefit of all Americans and programs funded by Outer Continental Shelf moneys.

(10) The Outer Continental Shelf Advisory Committee of the Department of the Interior, consisting of representatives of coastal States, recommended in October 1997 that Federal mineral revenue derived from the entire Outer Continental Shelf be shared with all coastal States and territories to mitigate onshore impacts from Federal offshore mineral development and for other environmental mitigation; and

(11) The Nation’s Federal mineral resources are a nonrenewable, capital asset of the Nation, with the production and sale of the resource producing revenue for the Nation, a portion of the revenue derived from the production and sale of Federal mineral resources should be reinvested in the Nation through environmental mitigation and public service improvements.

SEC. 702. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act:

‘‘Shoreland’’ means, for a coastal State, that portion of revenue that is available to be distributed to that coastal State under this title. For an eligible political subdivision of a coastal State, such term means that portion of revenue that is available to be distributed to that political subdivision under this title.

The term ‘‘coastal State’’ means the population of political subdivisions, as determined by the most recent official data of the Census Bureau, contained in whole or in part within the designated coastal boundary of a State as defined in a State's coastal zone management program under the Coastal Zone Act (16 U.S.C. § 1451) or which are making substantial contributions to coastal States and to eligible political subdivisions equal to the amount deposited in the Fund for the prior fiscal year, together with the portion of interest earned from investment of the funds which corresponds to that amount (reduced by any refunds paid under section 705(c)). Such payments shall be allocated among the coastal States and eligible political subdivisions as provided in this section.

(c) Determination of States' Allocable Shares.

(1) Allocable Share for Each State.-For each coastal State, the Secretary shall determine the State's allocable share of the total amount deposited in the Fund for each fiscal year using the following weighted formula:

(A) 25 percent of the State's allocable share shall be based on the ratio of such State's coastal shoreline miles to the shoreline miles of all coastal States.

(B) 50 percent of the State's allocable share shall be based on the ratio of such State's coastal population to the coastal population of all coastal States.

(C) 25 percent of the State's allocable share shall be based on the ratio of such State's coastal area to the coastal area of all coastal States.

(2) Minimum State Share.-In general, the allocable share of revenues determined by the Secretary under this subsection for each coastal State with an approved plan under this subsection (as defined by the Coastal Zone Management Act (16 U.S.C. §1451) or which is making substantial contributions to coastal States and to eligible political subdivisions but which are determined by the Governor or the Secretary to have impacts from Outer Continental Shelf related activities and which have an approved plan under this subsection.

(b) Payment to States.

'Title II—LAND AND WATER CONSERVATION FUND

'Section 201. Short Title.

'This title may be cited as the "Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1998".

'Section 202. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

'(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the fol'lowing:

'(1) The Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 embodied a visionary concept—

'that a portion of the proceeds from Outer Continental Shelf mineral leasing revenues and certain proceeds from Outer Continental Shelf mineral leasing revenues and certain proceeds from nonfederal natural resource should result in a legacy of public places accessible for public recreation and benefit from resources belonging to all people, no place, and the local government. The most precious and most renewable natural resource of any nation, healthy and active citizens.

'(2) The States and local governments were to occupy a pivotal role in accomplishing the purposes of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 and the Act originally provided revenue funds to the States, and through them, to local govern'ments.

'(3) However, because of competition for limited Federal moneys and the need for an annual appropriation, this original intention has been abandoned and, in recent years, the States have not received an equitable proportion of funds.

'(4) Nonetheless, with population growth and urban sprawl, the demand for recreation and conservation areas, at the State and local level, including urban localities, re'mains a high priority for our citizens.

'(5) In addition to the demand at the State and local level, there is an increasing unmet need for Federal moneys to be made available for Federal purposes, with lands identified as important for Federal acquisition not being acquired for several years due to insufficient funds.

'(6) A new vision is called for—a vision that encompasses a multilevel national network of parks and conservation areas that reaches across the country to touch all communities. National parks are not enough; the federal government alone can’t accomplish this. A new vision, backed by realistic national funding support, to stimulate State, local and private sector, as well as Federal efforts, is the only way to ef'fectively address our ongoing outdoor recrea'tion and conservation needs.

'b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to provide a secure source of funds available for Federal purposes authorized by the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 and to revitalize and complement State, local and private public lands and resources in the United States through the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 and the Urban Park and Recreation Recovery Act of 1978 by providing grants for State, local, urban recreation and conservation

'Section 203. LAND AND WATER CONSERVATION FUND AMENDMENTS.

'(a) REVENUES.—Section 2(c)(3) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. § 460c–5(c)(1)) is amended by striking "equivalent amounts provided in clause (1)" and inserting "$900,000,000".

'(b) APPROPRIATION.—Section 3 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. § 460c–6) is amended by striking "Mon-

'propriated for the following:

'(1) 45 percent shall be available for Fed-

'eral purposes. Notwithstanding section 7 of this Act (16 U.S.C. § 460c–9), 25 percent of such moneys shall be made available to the Sec-

'terior for the acquisition of lands, waters, or interests in land or water within the exterior boundaries of areas of any Park System, National Wildlife Refuge System, or other land management unit established by an Act of Congress: Provided, That at least 90 percent of the moneys available for the purposes of this paragraph shall be spent east of the 100th meridian.

'(2) 45 percent shall be available for finan'cial assistance to the States under section 6 of this Act (16 U.S.C. § 460c–8) distributed according to the following allocation formula:

CARL D. PERKINS VOCATIONAL-TECHNICAL EDUCATION ACT AMENDMENTS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the bill (H.R. 1853) to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The clerk reads as follows:

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1853), have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conference committee.

Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the Record of October 8, 1998.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I will make a few comments on the vocational education bill at this time.

Today we are considering the reauthorization of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act.

This is one of the most important proposals we will consider in the 105th Congress. In July, we passed the Workforce Investment Act. The reauthorization of vocational education is an important partner to the Workforce Investment Act.

There are presently between 200,000 and 300,000 unfilled positions in the technology field. The reason for the difficulty in filling these positions is not because of low unemployment numbers, but because of the lack of skilled workers. Many of these jobs do not require four years and plus of post-secondary education. They do require an excellent vocational education system and the ability to pursue further technical education following high school education.
One of the most fascinating facts to come out of the Senate Labor Committee's hearings on vocational education was that Malaysia has replicated our Tech Prep model. Tech Prep was created in this country and we have many models of it, but not as many as we should have. Malaysia realized Tech Prep was a key answer to improving their skilled workforce and they have put the resources behind it to make it very successful.

The 1998 reauthorization strengthens the Tech Prep program by emphasizing the importance of the business community as a partner with the education sector. The United States is the most productive country in the world, but we are losing our edge to other industrialized nations such as Japan and Germany as well as other rapidly developing countries such as Taiwan, Korea, and China.

Over the past 25 years, the standard of living for those Americans without at least a four year postsecondary degree has declined. In the next decade, we are in danger of being surpassed as the world's number one economic power if we don't begin to redefine our priorities at the national, state, and local levels.

Our international competitors have been leaders in making the important connection between education and work. Last year, a report released by the National Center for Research in Vocational Education, a report which I requested as part of the 1998 vocational education reauthorization, highlighted the importance of a cohesive partnership between educators and employers. Employers are active participants in the governance of work-related education and training in Australia, Great Britain, France, and Germany.

Another significant finding of the report was that European nations, such as the Netherlands and Denmark, are attempting to create a technical education system that can serve as either a bridge to additional vocational training or pursuing college level courses. This reauthorization package emphasizes the important balance between a strong academic background and a vocational and technical education system. The Perkins Act has had a highly positive effect on the quality of vocational education across the nation. Its goal is to encourage innovation and ensure fairer opportunities for all students—especially those who have historically been denied access to high-level careers and have suffered the most from the inequities in the job market.

The bill also recognizes the importance of preparing students and trainees for retribution of employment. Supporting these underserved populations is increasingly important if we are to meet the demands of the 21st century economy.

Finally, this legislation retains our commitment to the important role of gender equity in vocational education. Gender equity issues must continue to be part of every state's priority. Every student should be convinced that good careers are not out of reach because of such discrimination. Vocational education must expand opportunities, not restrict them.

Overall, this legislation enables the nation to move forward in all of these important ways. I commend the members of the House. We are bringing this to a close just at the end of the session. For a long period of time, it looked like we would not be here, but we are. I thank Chairwoman Lieberman, and Congressman Buck McKeon for their tremendous help in bringing this to fruition.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I strongly support this reauthorization of the Vocational Education Act, the Carl Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Amendments of 1998. This bill, along with the Workforce Investment Act passed earlier this year, are important steps to improve the quality of our nation's workforce. Well-educated and well-trained workers are essential for the nation's future. As students prepare to enter the workforce, they should have a variety of choices, and this bill gives it to them.

It encourages more effective integration of academic skills and job skills. It helps school districts form partnerships with community colleges, area technical schools, and businesses of all sizes to combine quality academic instruction with real-world work experiences. These partnerships will provide internships, apprenticeships, and practical job experience that will teach students about many difficult aspects of the world of work.

It also encourages schools to use state-of-the-art techniques and equipment in teaching, so that students are offered challenging courses, and so that graduates can continue their education or enter the workforce better prepared for good careers.

States are also guaranteed a greater flexibility in providing funds to local schools to improve their vocational and technical education programs. The Perkins Act has had a highly positive effect on the quality of vocational education across the nation. Its goal is to encourage innovation and ensure fairer opportunities for all students—especially those who have historically been denied access to higher level careers and have suffered the most from the inequities in the job market.

The bill also recognizes the importance of preparing students and trainees for retribution of employment. Supporting these underserved populations is increasingly important if we are to meet the demands of the 21st century economy.

Finally, this legislation retains our commitment to the important role of gender equity in vocational education. Gender equity issues must continue to be part of every state's priority. Every student should be convinced that good careers are not out of reach because of discrimination. Vocational education must expand opportunities, not restrict them.

Overall, this legislation enables the nation to move forward in all of these important ways. I commend the members of the House. We are bringing this to a close just at the end of the session. For a long period of time, it looked like we would not be here, but we are. I thank Chairwoman Lieberman, and Congressman Buck McKeon for their tremendous help in bringing this to fruition.

visitors, staff, and the Office of the Majority Whip of the House of Representatives: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the United States Capitol Police headquarters building located at 119 D Street, Northeast, Washington, D.C., shall be known and designated as the "Enoch, Chestnut, Gibson Memorial Building".

VITIATION OF PASSAGE OF S. 777

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent that Senate passage of S. 777 be vitiated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill will be returned to the calendary.

NONCITIZEN BENEFIT CLARIFICATION AND OTHER TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1998

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 4558, just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4558) to make technical amendments to clarify the provision of benefits for noncitizens, and to improve the provision of unemployment insurance, child support, and supplemental security income benefits.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the bill now before the Senate contains seven technical amendments. Although each provision may seem minor, every one serves a larger, more important purpose. Also, as I will describe, the legislation is time sensitive, which is why the Senate is considering this bill in an expedited manner. Let me also note that the bill has bipartisan support and passed the House on a voice vote on September 23rd. Also, the small cost of the bill is fully paid for.

The first provision would ensure that every elderly or disabled noncitizen dependent on SSI and Medicaid benefits when welfare reform was enacted in August 1996 will remain eligible. The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 grandfathered most legal aliens receiving SSI. However, at that time, a small number—about 22,000—received only a temporary extension, until September 30, 1998, pending a study of their legal status. That issue has been largely resolved, and this provision would complete the work of BBA.

The bill also makes a number of common sense changes that encourage work and personal responsibility in several programs under the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee.

Finally, I would like to highlight an important humanitarian provision in this legislation. Many members are undoubtedly aware of the Make-A-Wish Foundation and similar organizations that help fulfill the dreams of children with life-threatening or terminal illnesses. For example, the child with cancer who gets a trip to Disney World. Yet, a sick child could lose SSI and Medicaid benefits if the cash value of their "wish" exceed current law income limits. This bill would fix that problem.

I urge the support of all Members of this legislation.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent the bill be considered read the third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 4558) was deemed read the third time and passed.

SEC. 211. SHORT TITLE.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are exchanged for legitimate criminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy with its own borders; and

(5) a compact between the Federal and States to provide for the provision of the federal and State and records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies with respect to the protection and safeguarding of the information contained in such records from unauthorized disclosure or use.

Subtitle B—Volunteers for Children Act

SEC. 221. SHORT TITLE. This subtitle may be cited as the “Volunteers for Children Act”.

SEC. 222. FACILITATION OF FINGERPRINT CHECKS.

(a) STATE AGENCY.—Section 3(a) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(3) In the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an appropriate adjudication body created pursuant to the National Criminal Fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the FBI’s procedures promulgated thereunder and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the States.”

(b) FEDERAL LAW.—Section 3(b) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(b)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following:

“in the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an appropriate adjudication body created pursuant to the National Criminal Fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the FBI’s procedures promulgated thereunder and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the States.”

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, final passage of this bill—S. 2022, comprising the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998 and the National Criminal History Improvement Program Act of 1998—is truly a historic achievement. I want to thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, and in both Houses of Congress, for their hard work on this legislation. S. 2022 is based on the principle that technology is the future of police work. It is the number one edge our law enforcement officers are going to have in the struggle against criminals, well into the 21st century.

The Crime Identification Technology Act (CETA) authorizes $1.25 billion over the next five years in grants administered by the Office of Justice Programs (OJP) in the Department of Justice, with reliance upon the expertise of the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS), also in the Department of Justice, to help every state to establish or upgrade its use of information and identification and forensics technology across the entire criminal justice system. Title II of the Act, the National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act, establishes an Interstate Compact which binds the Federal Bureau of Investigation and, upon approval by the state legislatures, the states to participate in the non-criminal justice access program of the Interstate Identification Index (III) in accordance with the Compact and established system policies.

SEC. 223. INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION INDEX

In a certain sense, Title I of the Act, The Crime Identification Technology Act, replaces the National Criminal History Improvement Program (NCHIP) which expired at the end of fiscal year 1998. NCHIP monies, totaling almost $200 million dollars, were provided to the states by BJS and the Department of Justice and have been enormously successful in helping states to enhance their automated criminal history records and to identify and develop other relevant information systems for instantaneous firearms eligibility determinations. Because more needs to be done and because it is immediately evident that building a fast, comprehensive and reliable National Instant Check System for firearms eligibility, S. 2022 will permit the federal government and the states to continue to build upon this important innovation.

SYSTEMS INTEGRATION

S. 2022, however, does much more. In particular, Title I provides for systems integration, permitting all components of the criminal justice (law enforcement, courts, correction and prosecution) to share information and communicate more effectively and on a real-time basis. Revolutionary improvements in information and identification and communications technologies have created opportunities and, indeed, responsibilities, for all of our nation’s criminal justice agencies to build integrated information and identification systems. This bill will provide leadership and, in partnership with state and local governments, the resources necessary to build these important systems. S. 2022 will also support the courts and their use of information and identification technology. The courts are a critical part of the criminal justice information system. Not only are the courts a supplier of information on dispossession, they are also the all-important consumer of information on arrest and conviction. The courts require state-of-the-art, integrated information identification systems for both functions. Until now, the courts have lagged behind in their use of technology—and this bill will help fill that void.

INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION INDEX

S. 2022 addresses virtually every technology-based, information identification and forensics need of state and local criminal justice agencies. Title I of S. 2022, for example, will support passage not only to lose momentum in the Interstate Identification Index, which is the decentralized federal system that permits state, local and federal criminal justice agencies to exchange arrest and
S. 2022 will also help state and local agencies to take advantage of two important FBI initiatives which are nearing completion. The FBI's Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IAFIS) and the FBI's NCIC 2000 (National Criminal Information Center) will create a platform for the FBI to use state-of-the-art identification and information and technology, both internally and to communicate with state and local agencies. Obviously, state and local agencies must also be able to upgrade their information identification technologies in a way that is compatible with the FBI's new systems if the FBI and the Nation are to obtain full benefit from these FBI initiatives for which the Congress has appropriated several hundred million dollars over the last few years.

EMPLOYMENT AND LICENSING

S. 2022 will also support faster, more complete and more reliable state and local responses to employment and licensing background check requests. Over the last decade, employers and non-criminal justice government agencies have emerged as the largest group of consumers of arrest and conviction record information for background checks for child care workers, school bus drivers, private security guards and a host of other individuals seeking employment and licensing in sensitive positions of trust. We simply must do a better job of providing appropriate arrest and conviction information on a fast and reliable basis. S. 2022 will go a long way toward helping our state and local law enforcement agencies to achieve this capability.

AGGREGATE STATISTICAL DATA

S. 2022 will support statistical and research systems, which can together provide community-relevant information to support smarter decisions and more cost efficient and effective administration of criminal justice resources.

SEX OFFENDER REGISTRIES

S. 2022 will permit state and local criminal justice agencies to continue to build more useful and effective sexual offender identification registration systems, as well as domestic violence identification and information systems.

COMMUNICATIONS TECHNOLOGIES

S. 2022 will also help our criminal justice agencies to acquire and implement communications systems which are compatible with neighboring police systems, compatible with systems operated by other components of the criminal justice system and compatible among federal, state and local criminal justice agencies. Every criminal justice agency should be able to communicate with other criminal justice agencies in an instant and reliable way in order to respond to emergency situations and to promote the routine and appropriate sharing of information.

FORENSICS

Finally, S. 2022 provides a 20 percent set-aside for forensic science and Medical Examiner programs. New forensics technologies are creating a truly remarkable potential to solve crimes that previously had been unsolved and to convict offenders who previously could not have been convicted. Implementing and using this technology across the nation takes leadership and resources. S. 2022 will provide both the administrative set-aside and the amount actually funded under S. 2022 and is not a requirement which is made mandatory for each state. In other words, a state which does not wish to draw down 20 percent of its funding under this Act for forensic science and medical examiner purposes is not required to do so. We will be monitoring the states' use of funding for forensic science and Medical Examiner purposes, with an eye to re-examining whether this kind of earmark is necessary and, if so, at what level.

OVERALL IMPACT

The Crime Identification Technology Act does more than provide support for critical identification, communications and forensic technology applications. S. 2022 creates a vision and makes a commitment. The Act envisions a criminal justice system in which all parts of the system—law enforcement, justice administration, probation, parole and correction—use state-of-the-art, information, identification, communication and forensics technologies in a compatible and integrated manner, so as to mount the most effective and cost efficient challenge yet to crime. The Act also represents a federal commitment that every criminal justice agency in this country should have the resources, in partnership with state and local funding, to obtain and use state-of-the-art technology in the war against crime.

MATCHING REQUIREMENT

In this regard, the Act requires a 10 percent match to be borne by the states. As a practical matter, we expect that the states will spend state money far in excess of 10 percent of the funding under this Act in the acquisition, implementation and use of crime fighting technologies. Because of this, it is expected that OJP will take into account all relevant costs borne by the state, including the cost of correction—use state-of-the-art, information, identification, communication and forensics technologies in a compatible and integrated manner, so as to mount the most effective and cost efficient challenge yet to crime. The Act also represents a federal commitment that every criminal justice agency in this country should have the resources, in partnership with state and local funding, to obtain and use state-of-the-art technology in the war against crime.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO NICS

S. 2022 also requires, by way of assurances, that states assure the Attorney General that the state “has the capability to contribute pertinent information to the National Instant Criminal Background Check System.” This language does not mean that states are required to operate their own Instant Check Systems or to otherwise be a “point-of-contact” or intermediary between the FBI and state and local law enforcement. Rather, the states should be able to contribute pertinent information to the FBI's National Instant Background Check System. This assurance requires that states are contributing criminal history information and, if practicable and required by the FBI, other pertinent information to the National Instant Criminal Background Check System. States which are participating in III or working actively toward participating in III are presumed to meet this assurance.
Finally, Title II, the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact of 1998, establishes a uniform standard for the interstate and federal-state exchange of criminal history records for non-criminal justice purposes. In addition, Title II permits each state to continue to enforce its own record dissemination laws within its own borders. The Compact facilitates the interstate and federal state exchange of criminal history information by clarifying the obligations and responsibilities of participating parties, streamlining the processing of background search applications, and eliminating record maintenance duplication at federal and state levels. Finally, the Compact provides a mechanism for establishing and enforcing uniform standards for record accuracy and for the confidentiality and privacy interests of record subjects.

This is a landmark piece of legislation, and I am delighted to be here today in support of my colleagues for helping to move it toward enactment.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am delighted that the Senate will pass the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998, S. 2022, sending it to the President for his signature into law.

I am proud to join Senator DeWine in supporting our bipartisan legislation to authorize comprehensive Department of Justice grants to every state for criminal justice identification, information systems, communications technologies and systems. I applaud the Senator from Ohio, Senator DeWine, for his leadership. I also commend the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee and the Democratic Leader for their strong support of the Crime Identification Technology Act.

I know from my experience in law enforcement in Vermont over the last 30 years that access to quality, accurate information in a timely fashion is of vital importance. As we prepare to enter the 21st Century, we must provide our state and local law enforcement officers with the resources to develop the latest technological tools and communications systems to solve and prevent crime. I believe this bill accomplishes that goal.

The Crime Identification Technology Act authorizes $250 million for each of the next five years in grants to states for crime information and identification systems. The Attorney General is directed to make grants to each state to be used in conjunction with units of local government, and other states, to use information and identification technologies and systems to upgrade criminal history and criminal justice record systems.

Grants made under our legislation may include programs to establish, develop, update or upgrade — State, centralized, automated criminal history record information systems, including arrest and disposition reporting;

Automated fingerprint identification systems that are compatible with the Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IAFIS) of the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

Finger imaging, live scan and other automated systems to digitize fingerprints and to communicate prints in a manner that is compatible with systems operated by States and the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

Systems to facilitate full participation in the Interstate Identification Index (III); Programs and systems to facilitate full participation in the Interstate Identification Index National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact;

Systems to facilitate full participation in the National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) for firearms eligibility determinations;

Integrated criminal justice information systems to manage and communicate criminal justice information among law enforcement, courts, prosecution, and corrections;

Non-criminal history record information systems relevant to firearms eligibility determinations for firearms eligibility determinations.

Court-based criminal justice information systems to promote reporting of police, court, and government repositories to and from the FBI and to promote the compatibility with, and integration of, court systems with other criminal justice information systems;

Ballistics identification programs that are compatible and integrated with the ballistic programs of the National Integrated Ballistics Network (NIBN); Information, identification and communications programs for forensic purposes;

DNA programs for forensic and identification purposes; Sexual offender identification and registration systems;

Domestic violence offender identification and information systems;

Programs for the development of integrated fingerprint-supported background checks for non-criminal justice purposes including youth service employees and volunteers and other individuals in positions of trust, if authorized by federal or state law and administered by a government agency;

Criminal justice information systems with a capacity to provide statistical and research products including incident-based reporting systems and uniform crime reports;

On-line and other state-of-the-art communications technologies and programs; and Multi-agency, multi-jurisdictional communications systems to share routine and emergency information among federal, state and local law enforcement agencies.

Let me just give a couple of examples from my home State of Vermont that illustrate how our comprehensive legislation will aid state and local law enforcement agencies across the country.

The future of law enforcement must focus on working together to harness the power of today's information age to prevent crime and catch criminals. One way to work together is for State and local law enforcement agencies to band together to create efficiencies of scale. For example, together with New Hampshire and Maine, the State of Vermont has pooled its resources together to build a tri-State IAFIS system to identify fingerprints. Such legislation would foster these partnerships by allowing groups of States to apply together for grants.

Another challenge for law enforcement agencies across the country is communication difficulties between Federal, State, and local law enforcement officials. In a recent report, the Department of Justice's National Institute of Justice concluded that law enforcement agencies throughout the Nation lack adequate communications systems to respond to crimes that cross State and local jurisdictions.

A 1997 incident along the Vermont and New Hampshire border underscored this problem. During a cross border shooting spree that left four people dead including two New Hampshire State Troopers, Vermont and New Hampshire officers were forced to park two police cruisers next to one another to coordinate activities between Federal, State and local law enforcement officers because the two States' police radios could not communicate with one another.

The Vermont Department of Public Safety, the Vermont U.S. Attorney's Office and others have reacted to these communication problems by developing the Northern Lights proposal. This project will allow the northern borders States of Vermont, New York, New Hampshire, and Maine to integrate their law enforcement communications systems to better coordinate interdiction efforts and share intelligence data seamlessly.

Our legislation would provide grants for the development of integrated Federal, State, and local law enforcement communications systems to foster cutting edge efforts like the Northern Lights project.

In addition, our bipartisan legislation would help each of our States meet its obligations under national anti-crime initiatives. For instance, the FBI will soon bring online NCIC 2000 and IAFIS which will require States to update their criminal justice systems for the country to benefit. States are also being asked to participate in several other national programs such as sexual offender registries, national domestic violence legislation, Brady Act, and National Child Protection Act.

Currently, there are no comprehensive programs to support these national crime-fighting systems. Our legislation will fill this void by helping each State meet its obligations under these Federal laws.

The Crime Identification Technology Act provides the foundation without the heavy hand of a top-down, Washington-knows-best approach. Unfortunately, some in Congress have pushed legislation mandating minute detail changes that States must make in their laws to qualify for Federal funds. Our bill rejects this approach. Instead, we provide the States with Federal support to improve their criminal justice identification, information and communication systems without prescribing new Federal mandates.

Mr. President, I am also pleased we are passing, as title II of this bill, the Federal-State "III" Compact for exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes. This Compact is the product of a decade-long effort by federal and state law enforcement officials to establish a legal framework for the exchange of criminal history records for authorized noncriminal justice purposes, such as security clearances, employment or licensing background checks.

Since 1924, the FBI has collected and maintained duplicate state and local fingerprint cards, along with arrest and disposition records. Today, the FBI has over 200 million fingerprint cards in its large central database of routinely Index to direct the requestor to the FBI's centralized files of state of- corrected copy of every State and local fingerprint cards, and textual identification Index (III), consisting of the FBI for all arrests. Instead, the large central database of routinely Index to direct the requestor to the FBI's centralized files of state of- corrected copy of every State and local fingerprint cards, and textual identification Index (III), consisting of the FBI for all arrests. Instead, the FBI will no longer have to maintain duplicate State records. Moreover, States would no longer have the burden and costs of submitting arrest fingerprints and charge/disposition data to the FBI for all arrests. Instead, the State would only have to submit to the FBI for all arrests. Instead, the State would only have to submit to the FBI the fingerprints and textual identification data for a person's first arrest. With this system, criminal history records would be more up-to-date, or complete, because a decentralized sys- tem will keep the records closer to their point of origin in State repositories, eliminating the need for the States to keep sending updated disposition information to the FBI. To ensure further accuracy, the Compact would require the records checked to be submitted with fingerprints or some other form of positive identification, to avoid mistaken release of records.

Furthermore, under the Compact, the newly-created Compact would establish procedures to require that the most current records are requested and that when a new need arises, a new record check is conducted. Significantly, the newly-created Council must establish procedures to enhance the privacy laws that protect the records; furthermore, the Compact makes clear that only the FBI and authorized representatives from the State repository may have direct access to the FBI index. The Council must also ensure that only legally appropriate information is released and, specifically, that record entries that may not be used for noncriminal justice purposes are deleted from the system.

Thus, while the Compact would require the release of arrest records to a requesting State, the Compact would also require that if disposition records are available that the complete record be released. Also, the Compact would require States receiving records under the Compact to ensure that the records are disseminated in compliance with the authorized uses in that State. Consequently, the Compact is a State that receives arrest-only information would have to give effect to disposition-only policies in that State and not release that information for noncriminal justice purposes. Thus, in my view, the impact of the Compact for the privacy and accuracy of the records would be positive.

Mr. President, I am also pleased with Senators HATCH and DEwine to make a number of refinements to the Compact as transmitted by to us by the Administration. Specifically, we have worked to clarify that (1) the work of the Council includes establishing standards to protect the privacy of the records; (2) sealed criminal history records are not covered or subject to release for noncriminal justice purposes under the Compact; (3) the meetings of the Council are open to the public; and (4) the Council's decisions, rules and procedures are available for public inspection and copying and published in the Federal Register.

Commissioner Walton of the Vermont Department of Public Safety supports this Compact. He hopes that passage of the Compact will encourage Vermont to become a full participant in III for both criminal and noncriminal justice purposes, so that Vermont can "reap the benefits of cost savings and improved data quality." The Compact is also strongly supported by the FBI and SEARCH.

We all have an interest in making sure that the criminal history records maintained by our law enforcement agencies at the local, State and Federal levels, are complete, accurate and accessible only to authorized personnel for authorized purposes. This Compact is a significant step in the process of achieving that goal.

I know that the Justice Department, under Attorney General Reno's leadership, has made it a priority to modernize and automate criminal history records. Our legislation will continue that leadership by providing each State with the necessary resources to continue to make important efforts to build their criminal justice systems up to date.

Mr. President, the Crime Identification Technology Act will ensure that each State has the resources to capture the power of automation, communications and record-keeping technologies to serve and protect all of our citizens. Mr. JEFFORDS, ask unanimous consent that the Senate agree to the amendment of the House.

The clerk will report.

The legislation the clerk read as follows: A resolution (S. Res. 207) commemorating the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Vietnam Veterans of America.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I was proud to submit S. Res. 207 on April 2nd of this year, and I am very pleased to mark its adoption tonight.

Tonight's action by the Senate is but one small step to redress the very reason why the founders of the Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) felt compelled to take action 20 years ago. In 1978, Vietnam Veterans were suffering under the wave of anti-Vietnam sentiment that had swept the nation. Little recognition was given to their sacrifices during the war. And in fact, there was even a great deal of official denial about the extent of the price that had been paid by these veterans, both physical and emotional. For instance, it would be years before Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder was a recognized condition for many veterans and before the Federal Government admitted that our use of Agent Orange had left a terrible legacy of continued suffering for our veterans. The founders of the VVA felt that they needed an organization to speak directly to those needs. The outpouring of enthusiasm from the veterans themselves demonstrated the depth of these feelings.

I am also very proud that Chapter One was founded in my home town of Rutland, Vermont. Vermonters have maintained a prominent voice in the organization, and are active in defining its future direction.

The VVA is not focused just on the three decades behind us. It continues to look to the large challenges ahead both for veterans as a group and Vietnam Veterans in particular. Just as the Vietnam Veterans Memorial is a permanent reminder of the sacrifices of the past, the VVA will be a continual voice for pragmatism and commitment to the future of the veteran.

I ask unanimous consent the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, a motion to reconsider be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, a motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear at this point in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3792) was agreed to.

The bill (H.R. 4309), as amended, was considered read the third time, and passed.

PERSIAN GULF WAR VETERANS ACT OF 1998

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of calendar No. 696, S. 2358.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4309) to provide for the establishment of a service-connected disability rating for illnesses associated with service in the Persian Gulf war, to extend and enhance certain health care authorities relating to such service, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Veteran's Affairs, with amendments, as follows:

(THE PARTS OF THE BILL INTENDED TO BE STRICKEN ARE MARKED WITH SINGLE UNDERLINES. THE PARTS OF THE BILL INTENDED TO BE INSERTED ARE SHOWN IN ITALIC.)

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

FEDERAL RESEARCH INVESTMENT ACT

Mr. EFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of calendar No. 677, S. 2217, and the PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2217) to provide for continuation of the Federal research investment in a fiscally sustainable way, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Federal Research Investment Act".

SEC. 2. GENERAL FINDINGS REGARDING FEDERAL INVESTMENT IN RESEARCH.

(a) VALUE OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.—The Congress makes the following findings with respect to the value of research and development to the United States:

(1) Federal investment in research has resulted in the development of technology that saved lives in the United States and around the world.

(2) Research and development investment across all Federal agencies has been effective in creating technology that has enhanced the American quality of life.

(3) The Federal investment in research and development conducted or underwritten by both military and civilian agencies has produced benefits that have been felt in both the private and public sector.

(4) Discoveries across the spectrum of scientific inquiry have the potential to raise the standard of living and the quality of life for all Americans.

(5) Science, engineering, and technology play a critical role in shaping the modern world.

(6) Studies show that about half of all United States post-World War II economic growth is a direct result of technical innovation; and science, engineering, and technology contribute to the creation of new goods and services, new jobs and new capital.

(7) Technical innovation is the principal driving force for long-term economic growth and increased standards of living of the world’s modern industrial societies. Other nations are well aware of the pivotal role of science, engineering, and technology, and they are seeking to exploit it wherever possible to advance their own global competitiveness.

(b) STATUS OF THE FEDERAL INVESTMENT.—The Congress makes the following findings with respect to the status of the Federal Investment in research and development activities:

(1) Federal Investment of approximately 12 to 14 percent of the Federal budget in research and development over the past 11 years has resulted in a doubling of the nominal amount of Federal investment.

(2) Fiscal realities now challenge Congress to steer the Federal government’s role in science, engineering, and technology in a manner that maximizes its investment by encouraging the prudent use of limited public resources. There is both a long-term problem—addressing the ever-increasing level of mandatory spending—and a near-term challenge—appropriating a dwindling amount of discretionary funding to an increasing range of targets in science, engineering, and technology. This confluence of increased national dependency on technology, increased targets and pressures for increased funding, priorities must be established among different programs. The United States cannot afford the luxury of fully funding all deserving programs.

(3) Current projections of Federal research funding show a downward trend.

SEC. 3. ADDITIONAL FINDINGS REGARDING THE LINK BETWEEN THE RESEARCH PROCESS AND USEFUL TECHNOLOGY.

The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) FLOW OF SCIENCE, ENGINEERING, AND TECHNOLOGY.—The process of science, engineering, and technology involves many steps. The present Federal science, engineering, and technology structure reinforces the increasingly artificial distinctions between basic and applied activities. The result too often is a set of discrete programs that each support a narrow phase of research or development and are not coordinated with one another. The United States should therefore maximize its investment by encouraging the process of science, engineering, and technology from the earliest stages of research up to a pre-commercialization stage, where funding agencies and vehicles appropriate for each stage are provided. The process must also be subject to merit review at each stage, so that promising technology is not lost in a bureaucratic maze.

(2) EXCELLENCE IN THE AMERICAN RESEARCH INFRASTRUCTURE.—Federal investment in science, engineering, and technology programs must foster a close relationship between research and education. Investment in research at the university level creates more than simply world-class research. It creates world-class researchers as well. The Federal strategy must continue to reflect the nation’s 2 traditional research and development programs in science, engineering, and technology that represent investments in the nation’s long-term future scientific and technological capacity, for which government has traditionally served as the principle resource; and (B) mission research investments, that is, investments in research that derive from necessary public functions, such as defense, health, education, environmental protection, and raising the standard of living, which may include pre-commercial, pre-competitive engineering research and technology development. Additionally, Federal funding should not compete with or displace the short-term, market-driven, and typically more specific nature of private-sector funding. Government investments in research should be responsive to competitive market activities, leaving competitive activities solely for the private sector. As a rule, the government should not invest in commercial technology that is in the product development stage, very close to the broad commercial marketplace, except to meet a specific agency goal. When the government provides the initial funding for any scientific and pre-competitive engineering research over the 12-year period following the date of enactment of this Act.
(2) to invest in the future of the United States and the people of the United States by expanding the research activities referenced to in paragraph (1).
(3) to enhance the quality of life for all people of the United States;
(4) to guarantee the leadership of the United States in science, engineering, medicine, and technology; and
(5) to ensure that the opportunity and the support for undertaking good science is widely available throughout the United States by subjecting geographically diverse research and development enterprise.
(b) AGENCIES COVERED.—The agencies intended to be handled to the extent that they are engaged in science, engineering, and technology activities for basic scientific, medical, or pre-competitive engineering research by this Act are
(1) the National Institutes of Health, within the Department of Health and Human Services;
(2) the National Science Foundation;
(3) the National Institute for Standards and Technology, within the Department of Commerce;
(4) the National Aeronautics and Space Administration;
(5) the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, within the Department of Commerce;
(6) the Centers for Disease Control, within the Department of Health and Human Services;
(7) the Department of Energy (to the extent that it is not engaged in defense-related activities); (8) the Department of Education; and
(9) the Department of Transportation;
(10) the Department of the Interior;
(11) the Department of Veterans Affairs;
(12) the Smithsonian Institution;
(13) the Department of Transportation; and
(14) the Environmental Protection Agency.
(c) CURRENT INVESTMENT.—The investment in civilian research and development efforts for fiscal year 1998 is 2.1 percent of the overall Federal budget.
(d) DAMAGE TO RESEARCH INFRASTRUCTURE.—
A continued trend of funding appropriations equal to or lower than current budgetary levels will lead to permanent damage to the United States research infrastructure. This could threaten American dominance of high-technology industrial leadership.
(e) INCREASE FUNDING.—In order to maintain and enhance the economic strength of the United States in the world market, funding levels for fundamental, scientific, and pre-competitive engineering research should be increased to equal approximately 2.6 percent of the total annual budget.
(f) FUTURE FISCAL YEAR ALLOCATIONS.—
(1) GOALS.—The long-term strategy for research and development funding under this section will be raised by a steady 2.5 percent annual increase above the rate of inflation throughout a 12-year period.
(2) INFLATION ASSUMPTION.—The authoriza-tions contained in paragraph (3) assume that the rate of inflation for each year will be 3 percent.
jobs for our citizens in the face of increasing global challenges to all our principal industries. The Federal Research Investment Act continues the goal first expressed in S. 1305, that I co-sponsored with Senators DURBIN and BINGAMAN, to double the nation's investment in science and technology. Among other improvements, S. 2217 proposes a more realistic time scale for achieving this expanded support. This doubling must be accomplished within a balanced budget that avoids deficits, thus a longer period is a better choice. That balanced budget is essential, it enables the economic health that is fundamental to our ability to really use advanced technologies.

The new bill continues to emphasize a broad range of research targets, from fundamental and frontier exploration, through pre-competitive engineering research. This emphasis on a spectrum of research maturity is absolutely critical. The Congress should see a focus on so-called 'basic' research that can open new fields, but then leave those fields wanting for resources to develop these new ideas to a pre-competitive stage applicable to future commercial products and processes.

The new bill addresses a spectrum of research fields with its emphasis on expanding S&T funding in many agencies. We need technical advances in many fields simultaneously. In more and more cases, the best new ideas are not flowing from explorations in a single narrow field, but instead are coming from inter-disciplinary studies that bring experts from diverse fields together for fruitful collaboration. This is especially evident in medical and health fields, where combinations of medical science with many other specialties are critical to the latest health care advances.

This new bill has additional features that weren't part of the earlier one. It proposes to utilize the National Academy of Science in developing approaches to evaluation of program and project performance. This should lead to better understanding of how GPRAs can be used in S&T programs.administered from a central level can be best coordinated. The new role for the National Academy can help define criteria to guide decisions on continued and future funding. The bill also sets up procedures to use these evaluations to terminate federal programs that are not performing at acceptable levels.

The new bill incorporates a set of well-developed principles for federal funding of science and technology. These principles were developed by the Senate Science and Technology Caucus. Those principles, when carefully applied, can lead to better choices among the many opportunities for federal S&T funding. The new bill also incorporates recommendations for independent merit-based review of federal S&T programs, which should further strengthen them.

Many aspects of the Federal Research Investment Act support and compliment key points in the new study released by Representative Vern Ehlers just recently. His study, "Unlocking Our Future," will serve as an important focal point for continuing discussions on the critical goal of strengthening our nation's science and technology base. I appreciate interactions with Representative Ehlers as he developed his study and as S. 2217 was developed.

The new Federal Research Investment Act builds and improves on the goals of the previous bill. With S. 2217, we will build stronger federal Science and Technology programs that will underpin our nation's ability to compete effectively in the global marketplace.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee substitute be agreed to, the bill be considered read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed at this point in the RECORD.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the 'Muhammad Ali Boxing Reform Act'.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress makes the following findings:

Professional boxing differs from other major, interstate professional sports industries in the United States in that it operates without any private sector association, league, or centralized industry organization to establish uniform and appropriate business practices and ethical standards. This has led to repeated occurrences of disgusting and competitive practices in the boxing industry, to the detriment of professional boxers nationwide.

Professional boxers are vulnerable to exploitation by business practices engaged in by certain promoters and sanctioning bodies which dominate the sport. Boxers do not have an established representative group to advocate for their interests and rights.

State officials are the proper regulators of professional boxing events, and must protect the welfare of professional boxers and serve the public interest by closely supervising boxing activity in their jurisdiction. State boxing commissions do not currently receive adequate information to determine whether boxing events in states with weaker regulatory oversight.

(4) Promoters who engage in illegal, coercive, or unethical business practices can take advantage of the lack of equitable business standards in the professional boxing industry. Conflicts of interest arise when boxers competing in multiple jurisdictions may be subject to on an interstate basis; and positive impact on our society, are unsurpassed in the history of boxing.

(5) Open competition in the professional boxing industry has been significantly interfered with by restrictive and anti-competitive business practices of certain promoters and sanctioning bodies, to the detriment of the athletes and the ticket-purchasing public. Commission members, promoters, and sanctioning organizations represent restraints of interstate trade in the United States.

(6) It is necessary and appropriate to establish national contractual reforms to protect professional boxers and prevent exploitative, oppressive, and unethical business practices. With the aid of enhanced financial disclosures to State athletic commissions to improve the public oversight of the sport.

(7) Whereas the Congress seeks to improve the integrity and ensure fairness of professional boxing matches per year for the boxer; and positive impact on our society, are unsurpassed in the history of boxing.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be agreed to, the bill be read the third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3794) was agreed to, the bill be read the third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider laid upon the table.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, last year I joined the distinguished senior Senator from New York, Mr. MOKINIAN, in introducing a bill to authorize the placement of a memorial to Mohandas K.—Mahatma—Gandhi, on Federal land in the District of Columbia. At the time of the introduction of that bill, in the House of Representatives, a similar bill was introduced in the House of Representatives.

I am pleased to report that the House unanimously passed their version of this bill on September 15 and it now rests here in the Senate awaiting our action. It is my hope that the Senate will pass this bill and it is for this reason that I rise today.

The proposed memorial will comply with the Commemorative Works Act and will be placed at no cost to the U.S. government; the Indian government will be responsible for the construction and maintenance of the memorial. In addition, the National Capital Memorial Commission and the National Park Service have designated and approved the site.

At midnight on August 15, 1947, 400 million people received their independence and an institution in world history came to an end. This is the date that India became a free nation, and the mighty British empire, in effect, ceased to exist. One man more than any other is credited with bringing this profound change to the world. Dressed in homemade cotton cloth, with only a handful of worldly possessions, Mohandas Gandhi—known as Mahatma, or “Great Soul”—showed the world that dedication to principles, and belief in reconciliation, can prevail over otherwise insurmountable odds. Best known for his civil disobedience characterized by nonviolence and passive resistance, Mahatma Gandhi is revered by millions throughout the world for his dedication to personal freedom, justice, and human rights.

Gandhi is not only the father of modern India, but a leader whose impact changed the world forever. Gandhi influenced great champions of freedom throughout the world including Lech Walesa of Poland, the Dalai Lama of Tibet and Aung San Suu Kyi of Burma. Albert Einstein said of Gandhi, “Generations to come will scarcely believe that such a one as this walked the earth in flesh and blood.” Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., said of Gandhi’s importance to the world, “We may ignore Gandhi at our own risk.” And Gandhi himself had strong ties to the United States. He acknowledged being influenced in his own thinking by Henry David Thoreau, as well as by the U.S. Constitution.

Mr. President, the story of India’s recent history is the story of people struggling for freedom—and this struggle is universal. Gandhi has made us all richer in our freedom through his life’s work and sacrifice. I urge this body to do is to support the Indian government’s efforts to erect this memorial; it will be a gift to the American people symbolic of the greater gift we received more than fifty years ago from Mahatma Gandhi.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, today the United States Congress acts to authorize the placement of a statue of Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi—Mahatma Gandhi to federal land along Massachusetts Avenue in front of the Indian embassy, will stand not only as a tribute to the shared values of the two large democracies in the world, but will also pay tribute to the lasting influence of Gandhi thought on the United States.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed at this point in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 4284) was read the third time, and passed.

PATRIOTIC AND NATIONAL OBSERVANCES, CEREMONIES, AND ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 680, S. 2524.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2524) to codify without substantive change laws related to Patriotic and National Observances, Ceremonies, and Organizations and to improve the United States Code.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2524) was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed; as follows:

(1) whether the Federal Government or the Space Shuttle contractor should own the Space Shuttle orbiters and ground facilities;

(2) whether the Federal Government should indemnify the contractor for any third party liability arising from Space Shuttle operations, and, if so, under what terms and conditions;

(3) more than National Aeronautics and Space Administration payloads should be allowed to be launched on the Space Shuttle, how missions will be prioritized, and which parties will own and operate them when;

(4) whether commercial payloads should be allowed to be launched on the Space Shuttle and whether any classes of payloads should be made ineligible for launch consideration;

(5) whether National Aeronautics and Space Administration and other Federal Government payloads on the Space Shuttle may be launched on commercial payloads in the Space Shuttle launch assignments, and what policies should be developed to prioritize among payloads generally;

(6) whether the plan shall keep certain Space Shuttle functions continue to be performed by the Federal Government; and

(7) how much cost savings, if any, will be generated by privatization of the Space Shuttle.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall conduct a study under subsection (b) and shall submit a report on the study to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 205. USE OF EXCESS INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC MISSILES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Government shall not—

(1) convert any missile described in subsection (c) to a space transportation vehicle configuration;

(2) transfer ownership of any such missile to another person, except as provided in subsection (b);

(b) AUTHORIZED FEDERAL USES.—(1) A missile described in subsection (c) may be converted for use as a space transportation vehicle by the Federal Government if, as provided in paragraph (2) and at least 30 days before such conversion, the agency seeking to use the missile as a space transportation vehicle transmits to the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Armed Services of the United States; and

(2) a certification that the use of such missile—

(A) would result in cost savings to the Federal Government when compared to the cost of acquiring space transportation services from United States commercial providers;

(B) meets all mission requirements of the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Armed Services of the United States;

(C) is consistent with international obligations of the United States; and

(D) is approved by the Secretary of Defense or his designee.

The requirement under paragraph (1) that the certification described in that paragraph must by transmitted the study required under subparagraph (A) is satisfied if the Secretary of Defense determines that compliance with that requirement would be inconsistent with meeting immediate national security requirements.

(c) MISSILES REFERRED TO.—The missiles referred to in this section are missiles owned by the United States;

(1) were formerly used by the Department of Defense for national defense purposes as intercontinental ballistic missiles; and

(2) have been declared excess to United States national defense needs and are in compliance with international obligations of the United States.

SEC. 206. NATIONAL LAUNCH CAPABILITY STUDY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that a robust satellite and launch industry in the United States serves the interest of the United States by—

(1) contributing to the economy of the United States;

(2) strengthening employment, technological, and scientific interests of the United States; and

(3) serving the foreign policy and national security interests of the United States.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Defense.

(2) TOTAL POTENTIAL NATIONAL MISSION MODEL.—The term “total potential national mission model” means a model that—

(A) is consistent with international obligations; and

(B) includes all launches in the United States (including launches conducted on or off a Federal range).

(3) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, in consultation with the Administrator and other appropriate representatives of the satellite and launch industry, the governments of States and political subdivisions thereof—

(A) submit a report that meets the requirements of this subsection; and

(B) submit that report to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science of the House of Representatives.

(2) REQUIREMENTS FOR REPORT.—The report prepared under this subsection shall—

(A) identify the total potential national mission model for the period beginning on the date of the report and ending on December 31, 2007;

(B) identify the resources that are necessary or available to carry out the total potential national mission model described in subparagraph (A), including—

(i) launch property and services of the Department of Defense, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and non-Federal facilities; and

(ii) the ability to support commercial launch-preparation on-demand on short notice, taking into account Federal requirements, at launch sites or test ranges in the United States;

(C) identify each Federal agency or entity referred to in paragraph (B) that provides the required funding necessary to meet those deficiencies for the period described in subparagraph (A).

(3) COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—Based on the reports under subsection (c), the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce, and representatives from interested private sector entities, States, and local governments shall—

(1) identify opportunities for investment by non-Federal entities (including States and political subdivisions thereof and private sector entities) to assist the Federal Government in providing launch capabilities for the commercial space industry in the United States;

(2) identify methods by which, if the resources referred to in subsection (c)(2)(D) are not available to the Department of Defense and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the control of the launch property and launch services of the Department of Defense and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration may be transferred from the Department of Defense to—

(A) one or more Federal agencies;

(B) one or more States (or subdivisions thereof); or

(C) one or more private sector entities; or

(D) any combination of the entities described in subparagraphs (A) through (C);

(3) identify the technical, structural, and legal impediments associated with making... launch sites or test ranges in the United States have the primary role in developing the wildlife habitat that these birds require. Additionally, many nations that support these species, as well as all levels of society, recognize the importance of migratory birds, and many North American bird species, once considered common, are in decline;

1) birds constitute one of the most important economic benefits, such as control of noxious insects on agricultural crops, there-by preventing hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses each year to farming and timber interests; and

2) more than $20,000,000,000 is spent in the United States each year on watching and feeding birds;

3) a healthy bird population provides important economic benefits, such as control of noxious insects on agricultural crops, there-by preventing hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses each year to farming and timber interests; and

4) more than $20,000,000,000 is spent in the United States each year on watching and feeding birds;

5) a healthy bird population provides important economic benefits, such as control of noxious insects on agricultural crops, there-by preventing hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses each year to farming and timber interests; and

6) more than $20,000,000,000 is spent in the United States each year on watching and feeding birds;

7) a healthy bird population provides important economic benefits, such as control of noxious insects on agricultural crops, there-by preventing hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses each year to farming and timber interests; and

8) more than $20,000,000,000 is spent in the United States each year on watching and feeding birds;

This Act may be cited as the “Neotropical Migratory Bird Conservation Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) birds constitute one of the most widely recognized and appreciated components of North American wildlife;

(2) Mexico’s Secretariat of Environment, Natural Resources and Fisheries lists approximately 390 bird species as being endan-
ergred, threatened, vulnerable, or rare;

(3) 124 North American bird species are of high conservation concern; and

(4) the large majority of those species, the neotropical migrants that winter in Latin America and the Caribbean; and

(5) neotropical migrants in particular have received much attention because of their population declines;

(6) the primary reason for the declines is habitat loss and degradation (including pollution and contamination); and

(7) because neotropical migrants range across numerous international borders each year, their conservation requires that safeguards be established at both ends of the migration routes, as well as critical stopover areas along the way; and

(8) establishing such safeguards necessitates the joint commitment and effort of all nations that support these species, as well as all levels of society; and

(9) numerous initiatives exist to conserve migratory birds, including Partners in Flight, the Western Hemisphere Shorebird Reserve Network, the North American Waterfowl Management Plan, and monitoring action plans and conservation plans for water birds, marsh birds, and raptors; and

(10) those initiatives can be significantly strengthened and enhanced by coordination of their efforts to protect habitat shared by migratory birds; and

(11) this Act constitutes an effort on the part of the United States to adopt appropriate measures for the protection of migratory birds in collaboration with—

(A) neighboring nations that are parties to the Convention Respecting Nature Protection and Wildlife Preservation in the Western Hemisphere, done at the Pan American Union, Washington, October 12, 1940 (56 Stat.
1354); and

(B) States, conservation organizations, corporations and business interests, and other private entities; and

SECTION 3. SHORT TITLE.

The Charter School Expansion Act continues to use Federal start-up grants as an incentive for local communities to design charter schools that provide sigificant options for parents within the public school system. The Act encourgages the sharing of ideas and practices between charter schools and other public schools, so that schools benefit from the best lessons of each.

The pending legislation strengthens the accountability provisions for charter schools by giving funding preferences to states that review and evaluate the performance of their charter schools at least once every five years. Charter schools must continue to be held accountable for achieving the many local regulations, and would also give teachers the opportunity to participate in decision making.

The Charter School Act, as amended, was passed.

AMENDMENT NO. 3906

(Purpose: To provide a complete substitute)

Mr. JEFF FORDS, for Mr. CHAFEE, proposes an amendment numbered 3906.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's Record under "Amendment Submitted")

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is considering S. 1970, the Neotropical Migratory Bird Conservation Act of 1998, introduced by Senator ABRAM. I am also pleased to be a cosponsor of this legislation. The bill would establish a program to provide financial assistance for projects to promote the conservation of neotropical migratory birds in the United States, Latin America and the Caribbean.

Each autumn, some 5 billion birds from 500 species migrate between their breeding grounds in North America and tropical habitats in the Caribbean, Central and South America. These neotropical migrants—or New World tropical migrants—are birds that migrate between the biogeographic region stretching across Mexico, Central America, much of the Caribbean, and the northern part of South America.

The migratory routes of these migratory birds are profound. These challenges have been exacerbated by human-induced impacts, particularly the continuing loss of habitat in the Caribbean and Latin America. As a result, populations of migratory birds have declined generally in recent years.

While there are numerous efforts under way to protect these species and their habitat, they generally focus on specific groups of migratory birds or specific regions of the Americas. There is a need for a more comprehensive program to address the varied and significant threats facing the numerous species of migratory birds across their range.

Frequently there is little, if any, coordination among the existing programs, nor is there any one program that serves as a link among them. A broader, more holistic approach would bolster existing conservation efforts and programs, fill the gaps between these programs, and promote new initiatives.

S. 1970 encompasses this new approach. Today, I am offering an amendment in the nature of a substitute to the bill. This amendment makes numerous changes to the bill as approved by the EPW Committee. These changes have been incorporated based on very constructive, bipartisan negotiations with the sponsors of the bill, the House Resources Committee, and the EPW Committee.

One major change between this amendment and the reported bill relates to the advisory group. Formation of the group is now discretionary on the part of the Secretary. I urge, however, that the Secretary convene a group to assist in implementing the legislation. The success of this initiative will depend on close collaboration with public and private organizations involved in the conservation of migratory birds.

Another significant change applies to the funding levels. While the Federal share remains no more than 33 percent, the non-Federal share has been changed so that projects involving the U.S., the non-Federal share must be paid in cash, while in projects outside the U.S., the non-Federal share may be entirely in-kind contributions. This change is intended to create an incentive for projects to undertake projects outside the United States. To complement this change, the substitute amendment eliminates the limitation that no more than 70 percent of appropriated funds may be used for projects outside the United States.

Other changes include a clarification of the purposes section, inclusion of a definitions section, and changes to the section enumerating duties of the Secretary, given the elimination of the advisory committee. In addition, several changes were made to reflect a desire that projects be developed with the support of the relevant wildlife management authorities of the country. This change recognizes the need to collaborate and coordinate among both public and private sectors, and at local and national levels.

I believe that this amendment greatly improves the bill, and I am very pleased with the legislation. I urge my colleagues to support, and urge its speedy enactment.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. ABRAM. Mr. President, the Senate today will pass compromise legislation worked out between the House and Senate, and between Congress and the President, regarding migratory birds.

I thank Senator DASCHEL, who is an original cosponsor of this legislation, along with Senator CHAFEE, for their support and assistance in formulating legislation which I have been told the President will sign.

Mr. President, the "Neotropical Migratory Bird Conservation Act of 1998" is designed to protect over 90 endangered species of bird spending certain seasons in the United States and the rest of the year in other nations of the Western Hemisphere. In doing so, it will protect the environmental, economic, recreational, and aesthetic benefits these birds provide to the United States and to the Western Hemisphere as a whole.

Every year approximately 25 million Americans travel to observe birds, and 60 million American adults watch and feed birds at home.

Bird-watching is a source of great pleasure to many Americans, as well as a source of important revenue to states, like my own state of Michigan, which attract tourists to their scenes of natural beauty. Bird-watching and feeding generates fully $2 billion every year in revenue across America.

Healthy bird populations also prevent hundreds of millions of dollars in economic losses each year to farming and timber interests. They help control insect populations, thereby preventing crop failures and infestations.

Despite the enormous benefits we derive from our bird populations, many of them are struggling to survive. Ninety species are listed as endangered or threatened in the United States. Another 124 species are of high conservation concern. The primary reason for these declines is the degradation and loss of bird habitat.

What makes this all the more troubling is that efforts in the United States to protect these birds' habitats can be of only limited utility.

Among bird watchers' favorites, many neotropical birds are endangered or of high conservation concern.

And several of the most popular neotropical species, including bluebirds, robins, goldfinches, and orioles, migrate to and from the Caribbean and Latin America.

Because neotropical migratory birds range across a number of international borders every year, we must work to establish safeguards at both ends of their migration routes, as well as at critical stopover areas along their way. Only in this way can conservation efforts prove successful.

Mr. President, this is the motivation behind the "Neotropical Migratory Bird Conservation Act." This legislation will protect bird habitats across international boundaries by establishing partnerships between the business community, nongovernmental organizations, and foreign nations.

By teaming businesses with international organizations concerned to protect the environment we can combine capital with know-how. By partnering these entities with local organizations in countries where bird habitat is endangered we can see to it that local people receive the training they need to preserve this habitat and maintain this critical natural resource.

This act establishes an account with $8 million appropriated from the treasury, to be supplemented by donations from private or public sources, to help establish programs in the U.S. Latin America and the Caribbean.

These programs will manage and conserve neotropical migratory bird populations.
Those eligible to participate will include national and international governmental and nongovernmental organizations and business interests, as well as U.S. government entities.

This Act was formulated with the understanding that the key to environmental success is cooperation among nongovernmental organizations. Thus the federal share of each project’s cost will never exceed 33 percent. In order to foster support in communities here and abroad, the nonfederal share for projects may be in cash or in-kind contributions.

The approach taken by this legislation is different from all-too-many existing programs. It is proactive, and it avoids a crisis management approach. I am convinced that it will prove significantly more cost effective than current programs.

In addition, Mr. President, this legislation will bring needed attention and expertise to areas now receiving relatively little attention in the area of environmental degradation.

By establishing partnerships between business, government and nongovernmental organizations both here and abroad we can greatly enhance the protection of migratory bird habitat throughout our hemisphere.

Mr. President, this bill is a major step forward for us, and I think it will be seen as one of the key environmental measures passed by this Congress. I thank my colleagues for the support of this legislation that I have received.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to, the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3796) was agreed to.

The bill (S. 1970), as amended, was agreed to.

S. 1970

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Neotropical Migratory Bird Conservation Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Consistent with that—

(1) of the nearly 800 bird species known to occur in the United States, 500 migrate among countries, and the large majority of those species are neotropical migratory birds, winter in Latin America and the Caribbean;

(2) neotropical migratory bird species provide irreplaceable environmental, economic, recreational, and aesthetic benefits to the United States, as well as to the Western Hemisphere;

(3) a decline in the populations of those species is habitat loss and degradation (including pollution and contamination) across the species’ range; and

(4)(A) because neotropical migratory birds range across various international borders each year, their conservation requires the commitment and effort of all countries along their migration routes; and

(B) although some initiatives exist to conserve neotropical migratory birds and their habitat, those initiatives can be significantly strengthened and enhanced by increased collaboration.

SEC. 3. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to perpetuate healthy populations of neotropical migratory birds; that the Secretary considers to be necessary for evaluating the proposal.

(2) to assist in the conservation of neotropical migratory birds by supporting conservation initiatives in the United States, Latin America, and the Caribbean; and

(3) to provide financial resources and to foster international cooperation for those initiatives.

(b) encourage submission of proposals for projects eligible for financial assistance under section 5, particularly proposals from relevant wildlife management authorities;

(c) select proposals for financial assistance that satisfy the requirements of section 5, giving preference to proposals that address conservation needs not adequately addressed by existing efforts and that are supported by relevant wildlife management authorities; and

(d) generally implement this Act in accordance with its purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and inserted in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. So ordered.

(4) the need to modernize is heightened because the United States is at risk of losing its competitive edge as a result of the priority that foreign competitors are placing on modernizing their own waterway systems;

(5) growing export demand projected over the coming decades will force greater demands on waterway systems of the United States and increase the cost to the economy if the system proves inadequate to satisfy growing export opportunities; (6) the locks and dams on the upper Mississippi River and Illinois River waterway system were built in the 1930s and have some of the highest average delays to commercial tows in the country; (7) inland barges carry freight at the lowest unit cost of all land and rail transportation that is environmentally sound, is energy efficient, is safe, causes little congestion, produces little air or noise pollution, and has minimal social impact; and (8) it should be the policy of the Corps of Engineers to pursue aggressively modernization of the waterway system authorized by Congress to promote environmental, economic, and social positions the United States in the international marketplace.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 3798 AND 3799, EN BLOC

Mr. J EFFORDS. Senator CHAFEE has two amendments at the desk and I ask for their consideration en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS], for Mr. CHAFEE, proposes amendments numbered 3798 and 3799, en bloc. (The text of the amendments is printed in today’s Record under “Amendments Submitted.”)

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, today the Senate will consider S. 2131, the Water Resources Development Act of 1998. This measure, similar to water resources legislation enacted in 1966, 1968, 1990, 1992, and 1996, is comprised of water resources project and study authorizations and policy modifications for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Civil Works program.

S. 2131 was introduced on June 4 of this year and was reported by the Environment and Public Works Committee to the full Senate on August 25, 1998.

Since that time, additional project and policy requests have been presented to the Committee. Some have come from our Senate colleagues—others have come from the administration. We have carefully reviewed each such request and include those that are consistent with the Committee’s criteria in the manager’s amendment being considered along with S. 2131 today.

Mr. President, let me take a few moments here to discuss these criteria—that is, the criteria used by the Committee to judge project authorization requests.

On November 17, 1986, President Reagan signed into law the Water Resources Development Act of 1986. Importantly, the 1986 Act marked an end to the 16-year deadlock between Congress and the executive branch regarding authorization of purposes of meeting the requirements of the Army Corps Civil Works program.

In addition to authorizing numerous projects, the 1986 Act resolved longstanding disputes relating to cost-sharing between the Army Corps and non-federal sponsors, waterway user fees, environmental requirements and, importantly, the types of projects in which federal involvement is appropriate and warranted.

Is a project consistent with the traditional and appropriate mission of the Army Corps?

Is a project consistent with the traditional and appropriate mission of the Army Corps?

Is a project consistent with the traditional and appropriate mission of the Army Corps?

Should the Federal Government be involved?

These, Mr. President, are the fundamental questions that we have applied to each and every project included here for authorization.

This legislation authorizes the Secretary of the Army Corps of Engineers for some 36 projects for flood control, navigation, and environmental restoration. The bill also amends 43 existing Army Corps projects and authorizes 29 project studies. In total, this bill and the manager’s amendment authorizes an estimated federal cost of $2.3 billion.

Mr. President, this legislation includes other project-specific and general provisions related to Army Corps operations, as I mentioned at the outset. Among them are two provisions sought by Senator Bono and others to enhance the environment along the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers. We have also included a modified version of the administration’s so-called Challenge Initiative to encourage more non-structural flood control and environmental projects. In addition, we are recommending that the cost-sharing formula be changed for maintenance of future shoreline protection projects.

Mr. President, this legislation is vitally important for countless states and communities across the country. For economic and life-safety reasons, we must maintain our harbors, ports and inland waterways, our flood control levees and shorelines, and the environment. I strongly urge adoption of the underlying bill and manager’s amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to support the adoption of S. 2131, the Water Resources Development Act of 1998. This legislation is our usual biennial authorization for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It includes authority to construct projects for navigation, flood control, hurricane and storm damage reduction, water and electric power, ecosystem and streambank and shore protection, water supply storage, recreation and ecosystem restoration and protection. These projects range from harbor... improvements in Nome, Alaska, to shore protection at Little Duval Island in Florida.

Since this historic Water Resources Development Act of 1986, when project cost-sharing was established, the Corps of Engineers has established a successful working relationship with the local sponsors of these projects. This partnership has proven to be beneficial for all involved, and we have continued it in this bill. This important principle, combined with technical soundness, environmental acceptability, and economic justification guided the selection of projects in this legislation.

The legislation contains several changes to the Corps' program. It established new continuing authorities program that would allow the Corps of Engineers to undertake nonstructural flood control projects. It changes the periodic beach renourishment cost-share from the current 65 percent Federal, 35 percent non-Federal, to 50 percent Federal, 50 percent non-Federal. And it allows the Corps to use recreation fees collected above the current baseline to remain at the park where they were collected to be used for maintenance.

The legislation contains 2 provisions that are very important to my State of Montana. One provision would allow the Corps of Engineers to provided needed emergency streambank stabilization in Billings, Montana. Another provision directs the Secretary of the Army, in cooperation with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the U.S. Geological Survey, the Natural Resource Conservation Service, the State of Montana and all local interests to conduct a comprehensive study of the cumulative impacts of activities on the Yellowstone River. This study will give us a better understanding of how the natural flow and the man-made structures can best protect the river and its habitat.

I thank Senators CHAFFEE and WARRER and all members who worked with us.

I urge the passage of this bill and swift consideration by the House in order to enact this legislation in the Congress.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased that the distinguished managers of the Water Resources Development Act (WRDA) of 1998 have agreed to include into the managers' package several provisions which I have proposed. These cover Michigan projects, Great Lakes Basin matters, and contaminated sediments. I am hopeful that the House will expedite passage of this important matter before concluding legislative business this session.

There are several specific items in the managers' package that will benefit Michigan. They include an Army Corps feasibility study for improvements to the Detroit River waterfront between the Belle Isle Bridge and the Ambassador Bridge, as part of the ongoing revitalization of that area.

The Corps will also prepare studies for flood control projects in St. Clair Shores and along the Saginaw River in Bay City to see what types of structures will be necessary to protect shorelines and property. Similarly, the Corps will conduct an erosion control study for the Hamilton Dam flood control project. And, lastly, the Corps will review its denial of the city of Charlevoix's request for reimbursement of construction costs that it incurred in building a new navigation connection to the Federal navigation project at Charlevoix Harbor.

Mr. President, I would like to mention my colleagues' attention to my proposal, now in the amended bill, that the Great Lakes Basin program be named the "Iohn Glenn Great Lakes Basin program." This is a small tribute to our colleague for the hard work that he has done to promote and protect the Great Lakes Basin region. As Democratic Co-Chair of the Senate Great Lakes Task Force and as a former Chairman and now Ranking Member of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, he has long advocated common sense and efficiency in the management of Federal controls on the Great Lakes. The provision is directed to inventory existing information detailing the economic benefits of Great Lakes Basin waters. The specifics of the program, including a special study on the western Lake Erie watershed, are as follows:

Strategic Plans. The Army Corps of Engineers is directed to develop a framework for their activities in the Great Lakes basin to be updated biennially. Many Army Corps of Engineers divisions have developed and use such strategic plans. Development of such a strategic plan for the Great Lakes Basin has never been more important than at present, given the potential implications of the restructuring plans for the Great Lakes and Ohio River Division.

Great Lakes Hydrological Information. The Army Corps of Engineers is directed to inventory existing information for the Great Lakes hydrological system and sustainable water use management. The Corps is then to report the results of this inventory, including recommendations on ways to improve the information base, to Congress, the International Joint Commission and the eight Great Lakes states. The report will consider and update Congress on the status of the issues and the recommendations described in two IJC reports regarding diversions in building a base of Great Lakes waters and Lake levels. This information will be crucial in ongoing debate regarding the continued attempts to export or divert Great Lakes surface and ground water out of the Basin.

Great Lakes Recreational Boating. The amendment directs the Army Corps of Engineers to submit to Congress a report based on existing information detailing the economic benefits of recreational harbors in the Great Lakes Basin. As many of my colleagues may know, despite Congress' repeated objections, consecutive Administration have unwisely sought to limit the Corps' role in dredging so-called recreational harbors. The amendment directs the Corps to make this management tool as effective and efficient as possible.

Study on Western Lake Erie watershed. This regional study for the western basin of Lake Erie is a pilot project for efforts in the region to understand the synergistic relationships within a natural watershed and the interplay of human economic, agricultural and commercial development with environmental quality objectives.

Mr. President, once again, I'd like to recognize Senator Glenn for his dedication and devotion to the Great Lakes region, even when it might have caused him some political difficulties at home. He was a staunch supporter of the Great Lakes Water Quality Initiative, which came under greater attack from various quarters around the Lakes. Senator GLENN happened to have some of the most vociferous opponents in his state, but that never stopped him from advocating for uniform water quality criteria across the Basin. All of us in the Great Lakes will always be indebted to him for his support on that measure. By the way, my colleagues might be interested to know that implementation of the Great Lakes Initiative is proceeding nicely in all eight Great Lakes States.

Mr. President, the managers have incorporated another very important matter which I have been pressing them and Federal agencies on for some time. The subject is aquatic contaminated sediments and they are a potential threat to public and environmental health across the country. EPA has begun to document this problem in the National Inventory of Contaminated Sediments, or NICS, earlier this year. That inventory identifies 96 areas of probable concern which Congress and the public should be concerned about and which require appropriate remedial actions.

The provisions which I requested will require the Army Corps of Engineers and the Environmental Protection Agency to finally activate the National Contaminated Sediment Task Force that was mandated by the Water Resources Development Act of 1992. I am hopeful that convening this Task Force will encourage the Federal agencies to work together to combat this problem and create greater public awareness of the need to address contaminated sediments. Task Force will be required to report to Congress on federal actions to clean up contaminated sediments around the country. The Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works has assured me by letter that the Army will support the convening of the Task Force.

As the managers may know, WRDA 92 required the creation of a Task Force to advise EPA and the Corps in implementing the National Contaminated Sediment Assessment and Management Act, to review and comment on specific issues, including the extent and seriousness of the problem and recommend development strategies, and to make recommendations on prevention and source control. WRDA 92 required the Task Force to report to Congress with findings and recommendations within two years of enactment of that Act. Though some time has elapsed, the Task Force’s responsibility to comply with that reporting requirement and other statutory responsibilities has not. I fully expect to see that the Task Force complies with the statutory requirements under WRDA 92 and this Act and will be working to make that happen. I will be doing whatever I can to help the Task Force provide Congress with useful advice on contaminated sediment management in advance of reauthorization of Superfund, the Clean Water Act, RCRA and other pertinent laws.

Mr. President, contaminated sediments can pose a serious and demonstrate a health threat to the environment. Persistent, bioaccumulative toxic substances in contaminated sediment can poison the food chain, making fish and shellfish unsafe for human and wildlife to eat. Potential costs are potentially huge and include losses in health effects such as cancer and children’s neurological and IQ impairment. Contamination of sediments can also interfere with recreational uses and increase the costs of and time needed for navigational dredging and subsequent disposal of dredged material.

Since enactment of the Great Lakes Critical Program Act of 1990, and the National Contaminated Sediment Assessment and Management Act of 1992, the Nation has gained considerable experience and understanding about sediment contamination. As I have mentioned, the report on the Incidence and Significance of Sediment Pollution in Surface Waters of the United States, required under section 503 of the National Contaminated Sediment Assessment and Management Act of 1992, identified 96 areas of probable concern where contaminated sediments pose potential risks to fish and wildlife, and to people who eat fish from them.

The Assessment and Remediation of Contaminated Sediments (ARCS) program under the Clean Water Act, and subsequent studies, have demonstrated that there are some effective tools for determining the extent and magnitude of sediment contamination, for assessing risk and modeling the changes that would result from remedial action, and for involving the public in solutions. Prompt response after discovery of sediment contamination can prevent subsequent spread through storm events and minimize environmental impacts and response costs.

Unfortunately, the resources of the Federal Government have not been brought to bear on these problems in a well-coordinated fashion. That is the principal reason for pursuing the convening of the Task Force. But, we also need a better understanding of the quantities and sources of sediment contamination, to prevent subsequent re-contamination and minimize the recurrence of these costs and impacts, and to get a handle on the extent of the public health threat. To that end, my provision requires the Task Force to document in a report the status of remedial action on contaminated sediments around the country, including a description of the authorities used in cleanup, the nature and sources of sediments, the remediation methods used for determining the need for cleanup, the fate of dredged materials, and barriers to swift remediation.

The response to releases of contaminated sediments should reflect the risk associated with the contamination, and remedies should reflect the beneficial reuse of contaminants. To respond to the serious environmental risks that can be posed by contaminated sediment sites, the Federal Government should use funding and enforcement authorities of existing programs to help remediate these sites.

Last year, the National Research Council’s Committee on Contaminated Marine Sediment published a report on Contaminated Sediments in Ports and Waterways: Cleanup Strategies and Technologies. That report highlights the problems with the existing regulatory framework for addressing sediment contamination. While the EPA has put out a new, “Contaminated Sediment Management Strategy”, the regulatory and policy issues raised by NAS clearly go beyond the scope of the authority of any single agency.

NAS concludes that in the committee’s view, cost-effective management of contaminated marine sediments requires a coordinated campaign as well as a willingness to innovate. The Task Force is set up to involve different agencies and levels of government, including States that have pioneered innovative approaches for intergovernmental collaboration. The NAS report actually makes specific recommendations for statutory language changes. That would be the function of the Task Force.
Mr. President, I want to be clear that convening the Task Force should not provide an excuse for delay or more inaction. The report observes that: . . . there is no reason to delay urgent projects in anticipation of new technological solutions; decision makers should continue to try to make incremental improvements in the overall management process, . . . and that, "The need to meet these challenges [posed by contaminated sediment management] is urgent."

I appreciate my colleagues' assistance in incorporating this and the other matters I have discussed into the managers' amendment to S. 213L. I look forward to their support in getting these important provisions signed into law.

Mr. CHAFFEE. The senior Senator from Georgia is correct.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 213L, the Water Resources Development Act of 1998, and the Committee amendment, which provides for the development and improvement of our Nation's water resources infrastructure. This legislation authorizes water resource projects of vital importance to our nation's and our states' economy and maritime industry as well as our environment.

I am particularly pleased that the measure includes a number of provisions for which I have fought to ensure the future health of the Port of Baltimore and Maryland's environment.

First, the bill authorizes nearly $28 million for needed improvements to Baltimore Harbor Anchorages and Channels. Many of the existing anchorages and branch channels within Baltimore Harbor were built in the first half of this century and are no longer deep enough, wide enough or long enough to accommodate the vessels now calling on the Port of Baltimore. Many of the larger ships must now anchor some 25 miles south of Baltimore in naturally deep water, resulting in delays and increased costs to the shipping industry.

Also, the narrow widths of some of the branch channels result in additional time for the pilots to maneuver safely to and from their docking berths. In June 1996 the Chief of Engineers approved a report which recommended a number of improvements including: 1) widening and deepening Federal Anchorages 3 and 4; 2) widening and providing a turn basin at the head of the Fort McHenry Channel. The report identified the project as "technically sound, economically justified and environmentally and socially acceptable."

This project has been a top priority of the Maryland Port Administration and of the shipping community for many years and I am delighted that this legislation will enable us to move forward with this important project.

Second, the legislation directs the Corps of Engineers to evaluate the benefits and costs needed safety improvements to the Tolchester Channel in the Chesapeake Bay. The Tolchester Channel is a vital link in the Baltimore Port System. It was authorized in the River and Harbor Act of 1958 and aligned to take advantage of the naturally deep water in the Chesapeake Bay, along Maryland's Eastern Shore. This alignment, which is shaped like an "S," has posed a serious navigation problem and safety risks for vessels. Ships must change course three to five times within three miles, often beginning a new turn, sometimes in the opposite direction, before completing a first turn. With vessels nearly 1,000 feet in length, it is difficult to safely navigate the channel, particularly during nor'easters when vessels often begin a new turn, sometimes in the opposite direction, before completing a first turn. With vessels nearly 1,000 feet in length, it is difficult to safely navigate the channel, particularly during nor'easters.

The U.S. Coast Guard and the Maryland Pilots Association have expressed serious concerns over the safety of the area and have long recommended straightening of the channel due to the grounding and "spill over" which have occurred in the area. The cost for straightening the Tolchester "S-turn" is estimated at $12.6 million with $1.3 million coming from non-federal sources. This authorization enables the Corps to proceed expeditiously with these improvements and address the serious concerns of those who must navigate the treacherous channel.

Mr. President, the Port of Baltimore is one of the great ports of the world and plays an important role in the important economic assets. The Port generates $2 billion in annual economic activity, provides for an estimated 62,000 jobs, and over $500 million a year in State and local tax revenues and customs receipts. These two projects will help assure the continued vitality of the Port of Baltimore into the 21st Century.

In addition to port development and improvement projects, the measure contains a provision which will help ensure Maryland's environment and quality of life and help achieve the goals and vision of the Potomac American Heritage River designation.

It authorizes $15 million for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to modify the existing flood protection project at Cumberland, Maryland to restore features of the historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal adversely affected by construction and operation of the project. Mr. President, the C&O Canal is widely regarded as the Nation's finest relic of America's canal building era. It was begun in 1828 as a transportation route between commercial centers in the East and frontier resources of the West. It reached Cumberland in 1850 and continued operating until 1924 when it succumbed to floods and financial failure. In the early 1950's, a section of the Canal and turning basin at its Cumberland terminus was filled in by the Corps of Engineers during construction of a local flood protection project. Portions of the Canal were proclaimed a national monument in 1961 and it was officially established as a national historical site in 1992.

Douglas described the park "... not yet marred by the roar of wheels and the sound of horns ... The stretch of 185 miles of country from Washington to Cumberland, Maryland, is one of the most fascinating and picturesque in the Nation."

The National Park Service, as part of its General Management Plan for the Park, has long sought to rebuild and re-water the Canal at its Cumberland terminus. The NPS entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) with the Corps to undertake a study of the feasibility of reconstructing the canal and flood protection project. The Corps completed this study in July 1995 and determined that "it is feasible to re-water the canal successfully; the canal and flood protection project can co-exist on the site without compromising the flood protection for the City of Cumberland; re-construction and partial operation of the lock is feasible; the flood protection system; and information available. Undergound utility impacts can be mitigated at reasonable cost to allow construction of the canal and turning basin in basically the same alignment and configuration as the original canal."

A subsequent Rewatering Design Analysis estimated the total project cost at $15 million. This authorization will enable the Corps to proceed with restoring a 1.1 mile stretch of the C&O Canal and re-establishing a navigation link in the Baltimore Port system. It is a vital link in the Baltimore Port System. It was authorized in the River and Harbor Act of 1958 and aligned to take advantage of the naturally deep water in the Chesapeake Bay. The Tolchester Channel is a vital link in the Baltimore Port System. It was authorized in the River and Harbor Act of 1958 and aligned to take advantage of the naturally deep water in the Chesapeake Bay, along Maryland's Eastern Shore. This alignment, which is shaped like an "S," has posed a serious navigation problem and safety risks for vessels. Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, it is my understanding as well, that both the Chief of Engineer’s Tier I Environmental Impact Statement and Feasibility Report provide for the establishment of a stakeholder’s evaluation group that will have early and consistent involvement in the project, and as part of the process, the EIS requires the development of a mitigation plan to fully and adequately address predicted and potential adverse impacts on, among others, the Savannah National Wildlife Refuge; striped base population; short-nose sturgeon; salt water and fresh water wetlands; chloride levels; dissolved oxygen levels; erosion, and historical resources. Is that correct?

Mr. CHAFFEE. That is correct.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, is it my further understanding that before this project is carried out, the Secretary, in consultation with affected Federal and non-Federal entities, must develop a mitigation plan addressing adverse project impacts and that the plan must be implemented in advance of or concurrent with project construction and must ensure that the project cost structure is sufficient to address all potential mitigation alternatives. Is that correct?

Mr. CHAFFEE. That is correct.

Mr. COVERDELL. I thank the Chairman for his assistance and look forward to working with him on this important matter.

Mr. CLELAND. Would the Chairman yield for two additional questions on this project?

Mr. CHAFFEE. I would be happy to answer any questions the Senator may have.

Mr. CLELAND. It is my understanding that the authorization language provides that neither the Secretary nor the Georgia Ports Authority will proceed with the design or construction of the project until the respective department heads concur on an appropriate implementation plan and mitigation plan.

Mr. CHAFFEE. That is correct.

Mr. CLELAND. Any funds to be appropriated by Congress for the project must be allocated in a manner that ensures that project impacts are fully and adequately mitigated and are otherwise consistent with the mitigation plan developed by the Secretary and the stakeholder evaluation group. Is that correct?

Mr. CHAFFEE. That is correct.

Mr. CLELAND. I thank the Chairman for the opportunity to clarify these understandings.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be agreed to, the bill (S. 2131), as amended, was passed. [The bill was not available for printing. It will appear in a future issue of the Record.]

This Act may be cited as the “Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act of 1998”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the populations of all but 1 species of rhinoceros, and the tiger, have significantly declined in recent years and continue to decline;

(3) the Parties to CITES have adopted several resolutions—

(5) there are insufficient legal mechanisms enabling the United States Fish and Wildlife Service to interdict products that are labeled as containing substances derived from rhinoceros or tiger species and prosecute the merchanters for sale or display of those products; and

(6) legislation is required to ensure that—

(A) products containing rhinoceros parts or tiger parts are prohibited from importation into, or exportation from, the United States; and

(B) efforts are made to educate persons regarding alternatives for traditional medicine products, the illegality of products containing rhinoceros and tiger parts and need to conserve rhinoceros and tiger species generally.

Section 3 of the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 3503) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(3) To prohibit the sale, importation, and exportation of products intended for human consumption or application containing, or labeled or advertised as containing, any substance derived from any species of rhinoceros or tiger.”

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S12087
SEC. 6. EDUCATIONAL OUTREACH PROGRAM.

The Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 5301 et seq.) (as amended by section 5) is amended by inserting after section 7 the following:

"SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act of 1994 to prohibit the sale, importation, and exportation of products intended for human consumption or application containing, or labeled or advertised as containing, any substance derived from any species of rhinoceros or tiger, and for other purposes.".

AMENDMENT NO. 3979

Mr. JEFFORDS. Senator CHAFEE has a technical amendment at the desk, and I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS], for Mr. CHAFEE, proposes an amendment numbered 3979.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 5, line 23, insert "or advertised" after "labeled".

On page 6, line 4, insert ", or labeled or advertised as containing," after "containing".

On page 6, line 9, insert ", or labeled or advertised as containing," after "containing".

On page 7, line 20, insert "OR ADVERTISED" after "Labeled".

On page 8, line 2, insert "OR ADVERTISED" after "Labeled".

On page 10, line 17, insert "or advertised" after "labeled".

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is considering S. 361, sponsored by Senator JEFFORDS and approved by the Committee on Environment and Public Works on July 22, 1994.

Rhinos and tigers are some of the most critically endangered species on the planet. Fewer than 7,500 tigers survive in the world today, and of the eight subspecies that have been identified, three are extinct. Another subspecies in South China is on the brink of extinction, with a population of about 20 animals.

Rhinoceros number between 11,000 and 13,500, with two species in Africa and three in Asia. Two of the Asian species themselves are on the verge of extinction, with the Javan rhino having less than 100 individuals, and the Sumatran rhino having less than 500.

The reason for the recent decline of rhinos and tigers is the primary threat to their survival is the same—poaching. The reason for the poaching itself is also the same—parts of both rhinos and tigers are used in traditional Asian medicines.

In 1994, Congress passed the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act to help conserve rhinos and tigers. The Act established the "Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Fund" to receive funds appropriated by Congress, as well as donations, to fund conservation projects. Since its enactment, Congress has appropriated $1 million for the program, funding 40 projects in 10 range countries in Africa and Asia.

Despite these intercessions, the recent efforts by the Parties to CITES, trade of traditional Asian medicine containing rhino and tiger parts continues to be high, particularly in Asia and the United States. Neither the ESA nor CITES lists rhinos or tigers.

It prohibits products that are labeled or advertised as containing substances derived from rhinos or tigers, without evidence that the products in fact contain these substances.

Such evidence, at best, would be extremely difficult and expensive, and time-consuming to acquire, and at worst, would be impossible to acquire.

The bill amends the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act to address this problem. It provides that Party Members that contain, or are labeled or advertised as containing, rhino and tiger parts, in an effort to reduce the supply and demand of those products in the United States. It requires a public outreach program in the United States to complement the prohibitions. Lastly, it reauthorizes the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act through 2002.

As a related matter, I would like to note that even as Congress reaffirms the strength of the conservation of rhinos and tigers, funding for implementation of these laws is woefully inadequate. This year—the Year of the Tiger—the Administration requested only $400,000 for implementing the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act. The Act is authorized to be appropriated up to $10 million annually.

I strongly urge the Administration, for FY 2000, to request funding commensurate with the dire situation facing rhinos and tigers, in the wild. I also would like to note that the Act allows for donations to be made to the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Fund, and I urge both corporations and individuals to make donations to this fund.

I wish to thank my colleagues for considering this bill, and I urge the House to approve it expeditiously, so that it can then be signed by the President. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent the amendment be agreed to, the committee substitute be agreed to, the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the amendment to the title be agreed to, and the title, as amended, be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3979) was agreed to.

The committee substitute, as amended, was passed, as follows:

S. 361

ASSISTING THE IRISH PEACE PROCESS

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 4293 which was received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4293) to establish a cultural training program for disadvantaged individuals to assist the Irish peace process.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. D’AMATO. Mr. President, on May 22, 1998, the people of Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland courageously voted to make a break with the tragic violence of their past by expressing their support for the April 10 Peace Accord.

The time is right for the United States to step in and show support for the changes in Northern Ireland. We have a unique opportunity to participate in the building of an everlasting peace with the Northern Ireland Visa for Peace and Reconciliation Act.

Northern Ireland will undergo massive changes as it progresses beyond its violent past to a calm, more peaceful future. These changes require economic opportunities and a workforce that can rebuild a beautiful country.

The U.S. can offer training and job skills. More importantly, when they return home, they will be prepared to provide the crucial skill-base needed to attract private investment to their local economies.

This past July, Senator T ORRICELLI and I introduced S. 2269 set up for the same purpose. After much negotiation, we now have before us a bipartisan effort to show support for peace—the Irish Peace Process Cultural and Training Program Act of 1998.

This bill will provide 4,000 visas a year for three years allowing young people from Ireland to live in the United States for up to 36 months—gaining experience working and living in a peaceful, multicultural society.

It is my hope this bill establishes a program that will expose individuals from disadvantaged areas of Ireland to business and social life of other communities and train individuals for job skills for which there are opportunities in Ireland. That translates into a low-risk, high return investment in peace in Northern Ireland.

This bill will provide opportunities for residents of Ireland to have an experience that they can bring home with them to cultivate their economy and culture as the region enters into a new and promising era. It is called the Northern Ireland Visa for Peace and Reconciliation Act. And I hope we call it law very soon. I believe some call it INNISFAILE, Island of Destiny.

I want to congratulate Congressman Walsh and so many others for their vision and persistence in getting this bill passed and I urge its adoption.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 4293) was passed.
In such cases, temporary assistance can make all the difference for homeowners, allowing homeowners to pay for repairs and honor their mortgages. The FHA saves money because the temporary assistance they provide is far less costly than paying the full cost of the mortgage. In addition, the temporary assistance must be paid back thus recouping additional taxpayers' dollars. The lenders are equally satisfied because they are receiving their monthly assessments. And the community is preserved from blight that would otherwise reduce property values throughout the area. The Homeowners Emergency Mortgage Assistance Act is a solution that restores the dream of homeownership for everyone concerned.

The program has also been "battle-tested." My legislation is based on a very successful program in Pennsylvania. More than 24,000 Pennsylvania families faced with possible foreclosure have received help from the state's Homeowners Emergency Mortgage Assistance Program (HEMAP). Pennsylvania's Republican Governor Tom Ridge and Democratic leaders throughout the state endorsed the program as a cost-efficient means to prevent homelessness. In Pennsylvania, 90 percent of assistance payments have been paid back and only eight percent of HEMAP loans have resulted in foreclosure. This record of success should be duplicated at the Federal level.

Saving homes, money and neighborhoods is what government programs should work to achieve. The Homeowners Emergency Mortgage Assistance Act will accomplish these vital goals. I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor this legislation and work with me to maintain the dream of homeownership for middle- and low-income Americans.

Religious Liberty in Central Asia

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, this Congress has focused much needed attention on U.S. foreign policy with respect to the internationally recognized right to freedom of religion and the right to practice one's personal faith. As Chair of the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe and for the benefit of my colleagues, I would like to direct the attention of this House to the Department of State's "OSCE Implementation Report 1998" and, more specifically, the sections concerning religious freedom issues.

In Central Asia, the recognition of religious liberty has been mixed. The Constitution and laws of the Kyrgyz Republic provide for the right of all citizens to choose and practice their own religion. However, these rights are not being effectively protected in practice. In December 1996, the President issued a decree creating new legal obstacles for registering church congregations. In 1997, a new law failed to pass the parliament that would have severely limited religious liberties. Similarly, in its seventh year of independence, Kazakistani citizens enjoy basic religious rights, although the government is inclined to monitor the activities of foreign religious associations. Current law in Turkmenistan requires 500 signatures before registration is granted and in Uzbekistan, similar restrictions apply to religious groups.

In Eastern Europe, although there are signs of progress, there are some countries that could be potential trouble spots. In 1997, Russia enacted a potentially discriminatory law concerning religion which imposes new restrictions on the establishment of new religious organizations. In Moldova, there is currently in force a 1992 law on religion that contains some restrictions to religious liberty and could inhibit the activities of some religions, although these provisions are reportedly not being enforced. In Ukraine, despite a 1997 law which has positive provisions, a 1993 amendment to that law has been used to restrict the activities of foreign religious organizations. Foreign religious workers have encountered resistance from Ukrainian local officials when trying to renew visas or seeking the use of public buildings for religious services. These kinds of government activities may violate commitments found in the Helsinki Final Act, Basket III, Section 1d, in which the participating states commit to religious faiths can have contacts and meetings among themselves.

The focus of the report on the Baltic States is Latvia where freedom of religion is constitutionally well established. Under the 1995 Law on Religious Organizations, the Government of Latvia does not require religious groups to register. However, there is incentive to do so in that certain rights and privileges will be afforded to them only if they register. The Justice Ministry has registered some 800 congregations under this law but still denies registered status to Jehovah's Witnesses, the Latvian Free Orthodox Church, the Church of Christ Scientist, and the Rock of Salvation Church. With respect to foreign missionaries, they are allowed to hold meetings and proselytize only if Latvian religious organizations invite them. In particular the Jehovah's Witnesses have encountered severe obstacles under the current Latvian legal framework. As one of the privileges afforded to registered religious organizations, Latvian law allows for religious education to be provided to students in public schools on a voluntary basis by representatives of registered faiths. Elsewhere in the Baltics, Estonia has yet to clarify the implementation of a new visa law enacted in January which could potentially restrict residency of foreign missionaries to ninety days during any six-month period. The Baltics merit a close watch, despite some favorable reports. In the Caucasus, both Azerbaijan and Armenia have strict laws prohibiting foreigners from proselytizing. While Azerbaijan does respect "domestic" faiths, placing no restrictions on them, many foreign groups have reported harassment. The Ministry of Justice has denied... registration to one such group but does allow it to continue to function. The Helsinki Commission in investigating this case has learned that, because of this church's work among the refugee population, the Azeri government continues to refuse to register the humanitarian aid and continues to refuse registration to their religious body. Unfortunately, this appears to be a pattern the Azeri Government follows when it receives a benefit from a group it does not want to register.

In Armenia there are similar concerns. In September of 1997, a new law was enacted by parliament, designed to stifle the growth of non-Armenian Orthodox churches by tightening registration requirements for non-Apostolic religions and also by tightening funding restrictions so that foreign-based churches are not allowed to be supported by funds from headquarters outside Armenia. Despite this, however, a variety of faiths regularly hold services.

While there has been progress in the OSCE region, there remain areas where significant violations of religious liberty are occurring in Eastern Europe. I commend the “OSCE Implementation Report 1998” to my colleagues as an interesting study of the progress and problems of the region.

TRIBUTE TO MARY FAT
HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to one of Sacramento’s most inspiring citizens, Mary Fat. Mrs. Fat will be honored this evening by the Jinan-Sacramento Sister Cities Corporation. I ask all of my colleagues to join me in commemorating her remarkable contributions to the people of Sacramento.

Mary Fat was born Yee Lai Ching in Canton, China in 1908. She was the youngest of seven children in a prominent Hong Kong family. She became the bride of a young Frank Fat in 1924 in Canton. A traditionally arranged marriage, she never knew her husband before they were wed. In 1925, the couple saw the birth of a son, Wing-Kai.

Frank returned to the United States where he had worked before in 1926, without his wife and newborn son. His objective was to make enough money to repay debts and support his young family. Frank quickly found work in a restaurant in Sacramento, California.

Yee Lai Ching was not eager to join her husband in the United States. But in 1936 she and her son joined Frank in Sacramento. At this time she adopted the American name of “Mary.” She found a job at a Del Monte cannery in addition to her work raising a young son. Frank and Mary eventually had six children, four sons and two daughters. Their children were educated as attorneys, a dentist, and successful businessmen and women.

In 1939, Frank bought a dilapidated Chinese restaurant on L Street in Sacramento. His hard work and Mary’s assistance eventually established the restaurant as one of the best in California’s capital. They forged a successful life together in both business and community activities which encouraged an awareness of Chinese culture.

Mary strongly supported Frank as the leader of the Chinese community in Sacramento. With her help, he founded the Jinan-Sacramento Sister Cities Corporation, the Chinese American Council of Sacramento, and CAPITAL, the Council of Asian Pacific Islanders Together for Active Leadership.

Today, with the tireless work of Mary and Frank Fat, CAPITAL is Sacramento’s premier Asian American Pacific Islander organization, comprising 65 groups in Northern California. Yet the Fat’s family life was every bit as prolific as their civic endeavors.

Mary and Frank’s children and grandchildren are following the example set by the Fats. They are positively contributing to their community and furthering awareness of the diverse Chinese culture which exists not only in Sacramento and California, but throughout the United States.

Mr. Speaker, Mary Fat has devoted her adult life to supporting the civic activism of her husband and promoting the wealth of Chinese culture which exists in my home state. As she is honored tonight, I ask all of my colleagues to join me in congratulating her seventy years of great accomplishments and community service in Sacramento.

ACKNOWLEDGING THE COMPLETION OF THE SAN LEANDRO CREEK MURAL
HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to inform my colleagues today about the completion of an important project in my district.

The Friends of San Leandro Creek have completed work on a creek mural located in Root Park in my district. This mural spans more than 19,000 square feet and is the largest of its type in the Western United States.

Students participating in the San Leandro High School Art Program created the mural design. The students were presented with information about the history of the creek and a list of items to be used in the final design. The mural depicts the Creek as it was in the early 18th century, filled with rainbow trout and fished by Native American tribes for food.

I would like to point out the hard work of Rick Richards. Rick put this idea together and has been a longtime local activist for environmental causes and a tireless advocate for local community development issues that may impact the San Leandro Creek. Rick is the environmental conscience of the San Leandro community. I would also like to thank Veronica Lacarra Werkmeister for her dedication to this project. She is a nationally renowned muralist and her commitment to teaching children and this project has resulted in the works we commemorate this weekend.

I am very proud to share this mural with my colleagues. The Friends of San Leandro Creek and the students at San Leandro High deserve credit for their commitment to this project and their years of service to the San Leandro community. I look forward to visiting this mural after Congress adjourns and encourage residents of San Leandro to do the same.

CELEBRATING THE 87TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE REPUBLIC OF CHINA
HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, it is a great honor for me to congratulate the democratic government and the people of the Republic of China on their 87th National Day which they celebrate on October 10, 1998. Taiwan has much to celebrate this year, as it approaches the culmination of a decade marked by unparalleled economic growth, laudable political progress on human rights issues, and the general advancement of values cherished by free men and women around the world. Under the leadership of President Lee Teng-hui, Taiwan has proved by comparison that free enterprise and political freedoms work with greater efficiency and justice than Communist alternatives.

President Lee’s numerous and comprehensive reforms have provided unimpeachable evidence of this fact. He has limited government authority, reduced extraordinary powers that were provided by outdated civil war decrees, and he has focused the government’s responsibilities on issues such as technological investment and environmental protection. In addition, President Lee has led the Taiwanese people in the establishment of a diverse, competitive, multi-party political system with a free press and respect for human rights. This process was capped by Taiwan’s presidential election in 1996, when, for the first time in five millennia of Chinese history, the head of state was directly elected by the people.

Despite the dire warnings of those who opposed this evolution, Taiwan’s economy and political freedoms have flourished with these progressive changes.

Taiwan’s enrichment has not only benefitted its island’s nearly 22 million citizens; in addition, the ROC’s largesse has aided developing nations and those suffering from humanitarian disasters as well. Whether operating a much-needed hospital in the strife-torn capital of the Central African Republic, contributing to the relief efforts of its home state of California after a devastating earthquake or, most recently, using its membership in the Asian Pacific Economic Community (APEC) to employ its vast foreign exchange reserves to help ease the financial crisis suffered by its neighbors. Taiwan has proven its commitment to the welfare and health of the international community.

Given this reality, Mr. Speaker, it is both unfortunate and unjust that Taiwan is still denied membership in the United Nations, the World Health Organization, the World Trade Organization, and other multilateral bodies that would benefit from the Taiwan’s active involvement. Regrettably, many of Taiwan’s humanitarian contributions have been shunned or rejected as a consequence of this political inequity.

In 1993, for example, the ROC’s Department of Health pledged to donate $200,000 to a WHO/UNICEF program in order to provide vaccines for children of Kazakhstan and four other Central Asian republics. However, this donation was rejected because the ROC is not a member of the UN or the WHO. Mr. Speaker, it is tragic when children suffer because political obstinacy was more important than human welfare.

Not only does Taiwan’s exclusion for participation in international organizations harm other nations, it violates the fundamental international right that countries that are affected by multilateral cooperation agreements should have the right to participate in the crafting of these agreements. Taiwan, according to the UN itself, is one of the six largest high-sea fishing countries in the world, yet it was denied the opportunity to join in the negotiation and adoption of an important UN fish conservation agreement in 1995.

In a similar situation, Taiwan’s offer to become a signatory to the Montreal Protocol on the Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer was refused, resulting in the threat of international economic sanctions against Taiwan—despite the ROC’s unilateral implementation of the provisions of the Protocol. Mr. Speaker, the diplomatic anachronism of Taiwan’s absolute exclusion from efforts of international cooperation must come to an end.

Mr. Speaker, Taiwan’s 88th year appears to hold great promise, as long-stalled talks with the People’s Republic of China seem likely to continue in the near future. In addition, Taiwan’s economy remains strong despite serious regional difficulties. The record of success of the Taiwanese people is unmistakably clear and strong.

This is an important anniversary. Mr. Speaker, I wish the people of Taiwan a glorious National Day and I wish the government of Taiwan the voice that it deserves in the international community.

SHIRLEY FLEISCHMANN NAMED MICHIGAN PROFESSOR OF THE YEAR BY CARNEGIE FOUNDATION

HON. VERNON J. EHLERS OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Shirley Fleischmann, an engineering professor at the Padnos School of Engineering at Grand Valley State University. As Vice-Chairman of the House Science Committee, I am extremely proud to announce that Shirley has been named by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching as its 1998 Michigan Professor of the Year.

Dr. Fleischmann is the first engineering professor and the fourth woman in the state of Michigan to receive this award since it was introduced in 1985. She is also the first Grand Valley State University professor to receive this award that recognizes undergraduate instructors who excel as teachers and who influence the lives of their students. The award is based on the recipients demonstrated involvement with undergraduate students, their scholarly approach to teaching, and their service to their profession and the community in which they live. For professors the award is one of the highest honors they can receive.

Before beginning her teaching career at Grand Valley, Shirley was a professor of mechanical engineering at the United States Naval Academy from 1982–1988. She earned her Ph.D. in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Maryland. She also received M.S. degrees in Mechanical Engineering and Physics from Maryland and was awarded a B.S. in Physics as well. Shirley grew up in Holland, Michigan, where she graduated from Holland Christian High School. To this day she credits her high school teachers for giving her the tools and skills necessary to do her job so effectively.

Mr. Speaker, it is the effort and dedication of professors like Shirley Fleischmann that is so crucial to the future of science education. Professors such as Shirley can help the United States renew its interest in science and better prepare our leaders of tomorrow with the necessary tools and knowledge they need for careers in math, science, and engineering. Her excitement and willingness to go that extra mile in training future scientists and engineers is a shining example of why she was selected for this prestigious award. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Professor Shirley Fleischmann on this outstanding accomplishment.

INTRODUCTION OF ESOP REFORM LEGISLATION

HON. PHILIP M. CRANE OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing two bills to provide tax reform in order to encourage economic growth of employee-owned companies in my State of Illinois and around the country.

I have been a strong advocate of employee stock ownership plans (ESOP’s). I also have the privilege of representing a significant number of employee-owners of the Nation’s largest publicly-owned ESOP, United Airlines. After taking over the ownership of the company, the United employees effected a dramatic economic turnaround of the company’s fortunes—making United Airlines a financial success story.

In the summer of 1997, Gerald Greenwald, Chairman and CEO of United Airlines, came to me with ideas to amend the tax rules to allow employees to better utilize their ESOP Investments. When the ESOP tax laws were written, the tax code did not account for companies like United taking ESOP’s to such a grand scale. So, as in so many cases it is time for the law to catch up to the realities of the marketplace.

In the summer of 1997, Gerald Greenwald, Chairman and CEO of United Airlines, came to me with ideas to amend the tax rules to allow employees to better utilize their ESOP Investments. When the ESOP tax laws were written, the tax code did not account for companies like United taking ESOP’s to such a grand scale. So, as in so many cases it is time for the law to catch up to the realities of the marketplace.

I have been working on these proposals since then to prepare for an opportunity to include them in an appropriate tax vehicle. Such an opportunity has not yet presented itself. Therefore, I am introducing these proposals as stand-alone bills and to bring more attention to the need for updating the ESOP laws.

While ESOP’s give employees a stake in the company and provide a great opportunity to invest for retirement, the current tax rules restrict the ability of employees to use their investments for other important events in their life.

The first bill will expand the ability of employee owners to make qualified distributions from their ESOP’s, without incurring a 10-per-cent penalty on early withdrawals. Similar to the expanded uses for individual retirement accounts Congress has passed, this proposal will allow ESOP distributions for first time home purchases or for college expenses. This will especially benefit middle-income level employees who find it more difficult to save the money to buy their own home or send their children to college.

The second proposal would address a conflict between 401(k) plans and ESOP’s. Under current law, employer contributions to 401(k) retirement plans are limited when contributions are also being made to an ESOP. My bill will allow employers to contribute to their employees’ 401(k) plans while taking into account their ESOP contributions.

I commend these bills to the attention of my colleagues and urge them to support the employee-owners at United and other ESOP’s around the country by cosponsoring these measures.

REDOUBLING EFFORTS TO APPREHEND INDICTED WAR CRIMINALS IN THE FORMER YUGOSLAVIA

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4660, authorizing the provision of rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of war criminals and those who have committed other serious violations of international humanitarian law in the former Yugoslavia.

As Co-Chairman of the Helsinki Commission, I have followed the tragic developments in the former Yugoslavia and advocated decisive action to stop the senseless slaughter, first in Bosnia, and most recently in Kosovo. But decisive action is not limited to military intervention alone. The tragic chapters of genocide and cold blooded murder in the Former Yugoslavia will not be closed until those responsible for such heinous criminal acts are brought to justice.

Developments in Bosnia underscore the fact that there is a price—a high price—to be paid for allowing indicted war criminals like Karadzic and Mladic to remain at large. The unfolding carnage in Kosovo is most certainly the handiwork of the “Butcher of Belgrade,” Slobodan Milosevic. I applaud the recent passage of resolutions in the House and Senate calling for the investigation and indictment of Slobodan Milosevic as a war criminal. In fact, I introduced the measure in this House. We all... recognize, though, that true justice demands that the net be cast farther than the one person most responsible.

As a supporter of the Tribunal, I believe it is critical that the Tribunal take a proactive stance in Kosovo that could serve as a possible deterrent against new round of war crimes in the Former Yugoslavia. In the case of Bosnia, the Tribunal could only react to crimes that were mostly committed before and during its formation. In Kosovo, however, crimes could perhaps be deterred, if the Tribunal is vigorous and visible in its investigation of ongoing activity.

Mr. Speaker, we saw a couple of days ago the reports of a major massacre in three villages in Kosovo, where women, children and the elderly were slain, and, in some instances, their bodies mutilated by the Serbian security forces. These scenes are all too familiar and, absent determined action, will be repeated over and over and over again. The Helsinki Commission has received disturbing reports from Senator Bob Dole and Assistant Secretary of State John Stanku who formed a fact-finding mission to Kosovo. They told us about men being separated from women and children and simply taken away, perhaps to lengthy detention or maybe their execution. There are also reports, again of the mass rape being carried on.

Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 4660, I believe adoption of this legislation will underscore the continued commitment of the United States to see that those responsible for the war crimes and other serious violations of international humanitarian law are held accountable for their actions. While it is unlikely that the offer of rewards alone will lead to the arrest or conviction of all of those responsible for war crimes in the Former Yugoslavia, even if one war criminal is brought to justice as a result of our action today, the modest investment would have been worth the effort.

ELECTRICITY Deregulation

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, today, together with my Ways and Means colleague, Mr. Neal, I have introduced a bill setting forth the Administration’s approach to legislation addressing the tax consequences of electricity deregulation upon tax-exempt bonds issued by municipally owned utilities for the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity. As my colleagues may recall, the Administration unveiled a comprehensive electricity deregulation package on December 24, 1998, which included a section dealing with the tax issues associated with deregulation.

The 105th Congress did not have an opportunity to take up this or other proposals on electricity deregulation this year. However, despite the lack of Federal legislation in this area, 18 states have already gone forward and begun to deregulate electricity at the state and local level. My own home state of California has deregulated much of its market already. The era of competition has already started for the utilities operating in these states.

Municipally-owned utilities have operated up to now under a strict regime of Federal tax rules governing their ability to issue tax-exempt bonds which were enacted in an era that did not contemplate electricity deregulation. These so-called “private use” rules limit the amount of power that municipal or state-owned utilities (“public power”) may sell to private entities through facilities financed with tax-exempt debt. The private use rules are cumbersome but manageable. As states deregulate, however, the private use rules are threatening many communities that are served by public power with significant financial penalties as they adjust to the changing marketplace. In effect, the rules are forcing public utilities to face the prospects of violating the private use rules, or walking off their customers from competition, or raising rates to consumers—the precise opposite of what deregulation is supposed to achieve. The consumer can only lose when this happens.

The Administration proposal that I am introducing today would protect consumers by grandfathering already outstanding bonds, continue to permit public utilities to issue tax-exempt bonds for facilities involved in the distribution of electricity in the future, but eliminate their ability to issue tax-exempt debt in the future for facilities involved with the transmission or generation of electricity.

In addition, because the restructuring of the electric utility industry is affecting the investor-owned utilities as well as public utilities, the Administration proposal includes a provision intended to address a tax problem that a number of the investor-owned utilities face in a deregulated world. Specifically, under present law, the amount of contributions to a qualified nuclear decommissioning fund a utility is entitled to deduct is the lesser of “cost-of-service” amount or the “ruling amount.” In a restructured market, if a nuclear power plant is no longer subject to cost-of-service ratemaking, it could be determined that the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost-of-service would be zero. To eliminate this possibility, the provision would change the present law limitation on the amount to the deduction by limiting the deduction solely by reference to the “ruling amount.”

I am introducing this legislation at this time in order to give affected parties, including consumers, an opportunity to review the bill and provide us in Congress with input on its provisions. With this input, we will be in a position to address this important issue more capably in the 106th Congress. I am certainly aware that there are other approaches to the private use problem, some of which have been introduced this year in the House and others in the other body. There are numerous policy and technical issues to be resolved in designing a fair and workable solution to this problem.

The bill does not resolve all of those problems, and, indeed, is intended to be a starting point for the consideration of the tax issues involved with electricity deregulation. Other approaches, for instance, providing an election to public utilities to live within the current private use regime or opt into a regime without the ability to issue tax-exempt bonds except for distribution and transmission, merit serious review and discussion.

Even within the approach the Administration has taken in this bill, there are issues that need to be looked at carefully. For instance, the legislation somewhat arbitrarily defines “distribution property” as output facilities that operate at 69 KV or lower. It is our understanding that this definition does not pick up all facilities used for distribution, and that a more flexible definition may be necessary. We welcome input on this issue.

In addition, the legislation ties the relief in the bill to enactment of a Federal electric deregulation bill, which, of course, has not yet been introduced. Because California utilities have already deregulated, public power consumers need this relief now. An alternative effective date tied to state deregulation activities would be appropriate.

Another example of an important issue that might be addressed differently is the refunding of bonds. The legislation permits only current refundings of tax-exempt bonds within the grandfather of existing debt, but it also permits the maturity of the bonds to be extended for a limited period. On the other hand, it does not permit advance refundings. The legislation could be drafted to permit either approach to refunding, or advanced and current refundings without extension of the maturity term. I urge affected parties to comment on which is the more appropriate rule.

Another complex issue on which we seek comment is whether public utilities should be able to issue bonds for generation and transmission where the proceeds of the bonds are used just to repair or make environmental improvements to existing facilities and are not used to expand significantly current capacity. The bill as introduced does not address this issue.

Mr. Speaker, we plan to work with all interested parties including American consumers to ensure that we end up with the fairest, most reasonable solution to this complex problem. We want electricity deregulation to be a good deal for everyone involved, especially the American consumer who certainly deserves the lower electric bills that a competitive marketplace is supposed to provide. I urge my colleagues to review this legislation carefully over the coming months and welcome their input, as well as that of all affected parties.

STATEMENT RECOGNIZING SYRIA’S LIBERAL POLICY OF JEWISH EMIgration

HON. TOM CAMPBELL
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor today to recognize with commendation that the country of Syria followed through on its promises regarding Jewish emigration over the past 6 years.

Beginning in 1992, without fanfare, Syria eased its strict travel and emigration policies on its Jewish community. Numbering around 100,000 at the turn of the century, the Syrian Jewish community numbered only approximately 5,000 by 1992. Up until 1992, Syrian Jews could only travel outside of the country individually, and only if family members remained behind. Between April and October of 1992, however, approximately 2,600 of this 5,000 were allowed to emigrate from Syria.

In October of 1992, Syria temporarily suspended this extended program. However, in December of 1993, Secretary of State Warren Christopher visited the country, and in a goodwill gesture during this visit, President
Assad informed Secretary Christopher that all remaining Jewish families were free to leave Syria. The liberal Jewish emigration procedures soon resumed, and the Department of State informs me that all but 118 Jewish individuals have been granted exit visas and left Syria. The majority of these families decided to remain in Syria. A State Department official in Brooklyn, where a thriving Syrian Jewish community of about 35,000 exists. The State Department reports none of these remaining Syrian Jews have reported Syrian government persecution, and that many plan to emigrate soon.

I was first made aware of Syria’s emigration policy toward its Jewish community when I met with President Assad this past June in Damascus. In discussion, President Assad referenced this emigration policy as an example of Syria’s continuing good faith effort to propel forward the Middle-East peace process. He did not, but some in the Syrian government did, observe that no statement of acknowledgment of Syria’s following through on its emigration commitment had ever been entered into the Congressional Record. I wish to correct that oversight now.

Emigration is a basic human right that all responsible nations respect and allow. I commend President Assad for joining the community of nations that seek to guarantee this human right. In an attempt to create a conducive atmosphere, accelerated fostering of the peace process, President Assad allowed Syrian Jews to emigrate. Six years have passed since this policy began. It is time that recognition and approbation be properly given.

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to recognize and add my congratulations to the 50th anniversary of the Community Baptist Church of San Mateo. It has been truly a great honor to work with Doyle Corman, a statesman for the people of San Mateo.

The Community Baptist Church was the product of a mission program, it has continuously provided the community with a community cultural center where the children of our mutual constituency can learn and grow. The church has provided the community with weekly classes in the Cantonese language, which have awakened interest in and informed students about their Chinese heritage.

The church has also served for many years as a learning facility for the Minister-in-Training program for graduate seminary students. These students have gone on to serve as pastors of their own churches or as staff members of the American Baptist Churches of the West. Most notable of its numerous achievements, the Community Baptist Church has developed into a close-knit and supportive family. Many of its young members have grown into strong church and community leaders who now serve throughout California and across our nation.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize and thank the Reverend Norman Owyang and his congregation at the Community Baptist Church for their outstanding contributions to the people of San Mateo and the Peninsula. I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Reverend Owyang and the Community Church of San Mateo another half century of prosperity and continuing service to our community.
First Lady Hillary Clinton’s public statement this May that “it will be in the long-term interests of the Middle East for Palestine to be a state . . . and seen on the same footing as the ests of the Middle East for Palestine to be a state.” This May that “it will be in the long-term interest of the Middle East for Palestine to be a state.” The Palestinian Cabinet, on Thursday, October 8, 1998, announced that, “If following our declaration of state, Israel renews its occupation of East Jerusalem, the West Bank, and the Gaza strip, the Palestinian people will struggle and resist the occupation by all means possible, including armed struggle.”

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution and to expedite its consideration.

RECOGNITION OF TAMMY LYONS, TEACHER OF THE YEAR FINALIST

HON. ROBERT A. WEYGAND OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. WEYGAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Tammy Lyons, a constituent from my district, who was recently selected as a finalist for the Department of Education’s “Teacher of the Year.”

Tammy, a resident of Charleston, Rhode Island, has earned a great deal of respect and honor from her work as a fourth grade teacher at the Ashaway Elementary School. Her status as a Teacher of the Year is a testament to her dedication to the education of her students as well as to the improvement of her school and community.

We have spoken a great deal lately of the importance of preparing our nation’s students for the coming years and for the new challenges they will face. This goal will be reached through the dedication of our teachers, and Tammy stands out among their number. Not only does she shine as a teacher of the basic skills that students need, she has also brought new ideas to her community. Her day does not end with the afternoon bell; she helps coordinate an after-school program to help students deal with conflict. Such programs are clearly beneficial to our students, for they instruct in the skills of understanding and tolerance, key character traits that are essential in a world that contains many ideas and beliefs.

For the last nine years, Tammy has been an asset to her school and her community by bridging the traditional role of teacher with the new expectations asked of modern educators. I thank Tammy for her dedication and commitment and ask colleagues to join me in congratulating her on this notable accomplishment.

CRIME IDENTIFICATION TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1998

SPEECH OF
HON. PETE SESSIONS OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 7, 1998

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my friends from Florida, Mr. McCollum and Mr. Foley, for working together to bring this legislation to the floor today. Their hard work is sure to provide greater safety to millions of Americans. I want to thank Mr. McCollum, especially, who, as Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Crime of the Committee on the Judiciary, has given me his assurances that the provisions in the bill which allow for criminal background checks do not open volunteer organizations to greater liability. As the bill allows qualified entities—certified volunteer organizations—to obtain national criminal fingerprint background checks, it avoids organizations that make use of the services generously donated by millions of Americans of a privilege heretofore unavailable to them. I am grateful for Chairman McCollum’s recognition that obtaining criminal fingerprint background checks is a costly process from which, at least at present, results may not be available on a timely basis. Charities must balance the cost, burden, and timeliness of the process against the risk that other unqualified individuals may be discouraged from volunteering, and these volunteer programs may have to be reduced or eliminated to pay for such background checks. The committee included section 222 in the bill to provide an... option to voluntary nonprofit organizations, not to require them, either directly or indirectly, to undertake criminal fingerprint background checks for employees and volunteers. Chairman McCOLLUM has assured me, both personally and in his statement, that failure to seek or obtain a criminal fingerprint background check should not be construed as a basis for, or offered as evidence of, liability in civil litigation against a nonprofit voluntary organization where the lawsuit is based on the conduct or actions of an employee or volunteer.

Once again, I would like to congratulate the gentlemen from Florida for their herculean efforts to pass this important legislation, and I thank them for the privilege of making a statement on the bill. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the measure.

IN HONOR OF THE PEARL BUCK CENTER'S 45TH ANNIVERSARY
HON. PETER A. DEFAZIO OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998
Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and honor to congratulate Pearl Buck Center on 45 years of dedicated service to individuals with developmental disabilities.

When Pearl Buck opened in 1953, it was one of the only educational programs in Oregon providing educational services to children with mental retardation and other developmental disabilities. Pearl Buck Center has continued this tradition of leadership in the community, the state, and the nation, providing vocational training, employment, education, and case management services to people with developmental disabilities.

Annually, Pearl Buck Center provides services to about 400 individuals with developmental disabilities and their children. Since it was founded, Pearl Buck Center has helped thousands of adults and children meet the challenges of their disabilities and find opportunities to succeed in school and on the job; to succeed as parents and as self-sufficient individuals; and to contribute to the community and society.

I would like to acknowledge the hard work and spirit of service that characterizes this organization. I hope that all Americans will reflect on the dedication of the staff and volunteers of Pearl Buck Center and on the struggles and successes of the individuals they serve.

I extend my deepest appreciation and thanks to Pearl Buck Center for their efforts, past and present, to help individuals with disabilities more fully realize their abilities, poten-many of these same seniors also decide to skimp on drugs to treat potentially serious diagnosed conditions, including leg swelling and diabetes.

This year, I have heard from many, many distraught seniors who have written to me they simply are having a hard time getting their doctor's orders filled. I believe that some will wind up in worse health when they decide to forgo or cut back on the very drugs designed to keep them clinically stable.

The absence of a prescription drug benefit in Medicare that forces elderly people to skip and skimp on drugs is inexusable. It is time for Congress to debate and enact legislation that will provide all seniors who want it access to affordable Medicare-sponsored drug coverage.

There really aren't any good alternatives. Trends in employer-sponsored retiree health coverage—which has traditionally featured a drug benefit—show it is eroding. A somber General Accounting Office report released last summer warns that "while an estimated 60 to 70% of large employers offered retiree health coverage at the beginning of the 1990's, fewer than 40% do so today, and that number is continuing to decline despite the recent period of strong economic growth."

That's a polite way of pointing out that the number of U.S. companies offering their retirees health coverage in the last decade has been dropping like a stone.

For those seniors who don't—and won't—have retiree health coverage, purchasing a supplemental policy with good drug coverage may soon be unaffordable. Supplemental Medigap policies now costs on average more than $1,200 per year, according to the American Association of Retired Persons. But Medigap policies with drug coverage can cost far more. The range in costs for Medigap policies with drug coverage is also large. In Los Angeles, Bankers' Life Insurance and Casualty sells a drug-Medigap policy for $6,381 at age 65. At age 75, the same policy costs $9,174! The difficulty that seniors have in affording comprehensive supplemental insurance is illustrated by the fact that in 1994—95, a mere 15% of seniors purchasing a Medigap policy had drug coverage.

The hard fact is that a Medigap policy with drug coverage is not now—and will never be—within the financial reach of millions of Medicare beneficiaries, particularly the very old, who are spending down their assets. That brings us to Medicare managed care.

Remember, one quarter of those who are enrolled in Medicare Part B do not have drug coverage. Those who do are facing ever-higher deductibles and copayments, and ever-lower annual reimbursement caps. In Massachusetts, where there has long been an explosion of HMOs to offer drug coverage, Medicare managed care plans are now asserting that last year's Balanced Budget Act says they don't have to comply.

Only recently have seniors begun to understand that the comprehensive drug benefit they were promised in glossy HMO marketing materials is the equivalent of a "low introductory rate" pitch made by credit card companies. It's great while it lasts. But after that, you could be in trouble.

The Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage Act is carefully designed to help those who most need an outpatient drug benefit—who don't get it from a former employer, from Medicare, or any other federal health program, and who pay an extra premium under Part B for Medicare drug coverage.

I am introducing this bill, roughly modeled on the 1994 legislation, so that consumers, pharmaceutical providers and others can study the issue over the winter, comment and suggest changes for a revised bill to be introduced at the beginning of the 106th Congress. I am leaving the numbers for the deductible, the caps, and the premiums blank, so that groups can comment on what they think the appropriate combination of figures should be.

In a separate statement, I am reprinting some of the literature that is available on the cost of different prescription drug benefit plans at different deductible levels. Clearly, there is a tradeoff between the size of the benefit and its affordability: Striking the right balance is the key to the passage of successful legislation.

There is a critical distinction between previous proposals for Medicare drug coverage and the legislation I am introducing today: If you already have an adequate prescription drug benefit, you will not have to "pay again" in higher Part B premiums. If you have coverage, there will be no change and no new cost to you. If you do not have a prescription drug benefit, you will face a higher Part B premium, but if you are low income, you will get assistance in paying for it. While it is tempting to say that the decision to enroll in the prescription drug benefit could be voluntary, the adverse risk selection (i.e., only sick people needing lots of costly prescriptions would be likely to sign up) would make the cost of premiums to those enrollees prohibitive.

Adding an outpatient drug benefit to Medicare is not cheap. But IF prices are set at the "wholesale" level that physicians, medical suppliers and other purchasers pay, and IF all budgetary savings are not immediately earmarked for tax cuts, then Medicare drug coverage is affordable.

In the next Congress, we will have another opportunity to reshape Medicare to make it a better program. As we work to stabilize the program's financing, we must also improve it for those it was created to serve—our nation's seniors.

Without drug coverage, more and more seniors will fall through the widening cracks of a health care system that is getting leaner and meaner.

Without drug coverage, we'll see more seniors who cannot take their medications treated in the emergency room, where health care costs are highest.

Adding a prescription drug benefit to Medicare along with a requirement that costs be held to reasonable levels and a reasonable rate of growth is a clear way out of this dilemma. It is legislation that is 33 years overdue. I hope my colleagues will join me in introducing this legislation. As we work to stabilize the program's financing, we must also improve it for those it was created to serve—our nation's seniors.

THE NATIONAL ALLIANCE: HATED AND BIGOTRY IN ITS MOST FRIGHTENING FORM

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues to join me in studying the recently released report of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) entitled Explosion of Hate: The Growing Danger of the National Alliance. This comprehensive and well-written document addresses the activities and proclivities of one of the most dangerous hate groups in America, the neo-Nazi National Alliance.

The stated goal of the National Alliance is to secure "a racially clean area of the earth...no non-whites in our living space...a thorough rooting out of Semitic and other non-Aryan values and customs everywhere...a thorough warping and warping..." Indeed, the ADL report details the depths of "temporary unpleasantness" to which the National Alliance has sunk in its pursuit of its depraved agenda, tracing numerous cold-blooded murders and other terrorist activities to National Alliance members.

Declared National Alliance leader William L. Pierce: "We have to get away from this. We should not focus on the fact that it will be horrible and bloody, but on the fact that it is necessary, and because it is necessary it is good." The dramatic growth of this frightening organization over the past several years should alarm us all.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to enter into the RECORD selected portions of "Explosion of Hate: The Growing Danger of the National Alliance." I hope that my colleagues will read the entire report on the ADL's web site at www.adl.org.

EXPLOSION OF HATE: THE GROWING DANGER OF THE NATIONAL ALLIANCE: INTRODUCTION: THRIVING ON HATE

The Most Dangerous Organized Hate Group

A new ADL investigation reveals that the neo-Nazi National Alliance (NA) is the single most dangerous organized hate group in the United States today. The NA sprang to national attention several years ago, when it was discovered that a fictitious incident in The Turner Diaries, a racist novel written by the NA's leader, might have been used as a model for the Oklahoma City bombing. Convicted bomber Timothy McVeigh was a devoted reader of The Diaries, which features a bomb scenario that is eerily reminiscent of the April 19, 1995 blast. The book was also the blueprint for The Order, a revolutionary terrorist group that robbed and murdered its way to fame in the early 1990s. The ringleader of The Order was an organizer for the NA.

Now, the National Alliance has leaped to prominence again. In the last several years, dozens of violent crimes, including murders, bombings and robberies, have been traced to NA members or appear to have been inspired by the group's propaganda. At the same time, the National Alliance's membership has experienced a period of growth and its numbers more than double since 1992. The group, headquartered near Hillsboro, West Virginia, is led by former University of Oregon physics professor and veteran anti-Semitic William L. Pierce.

Active Cells From Coast to Coast

With 16 active cells from coast to coast, an estimated membership of 1,000 and several thousand additional Americans listening to its radio broadcasts and browsing its Internet site, the National Alliance is the largest and most active neo-Nazi organization in the United States. The group has significant political connections abroad. In the past three years there has been evidence of NA activity in no fewer than 26 states across the country. The organization has been most active in Ohio, Florida, Michigan, New York, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, and New Mexico.

The National Alliance's current strength and influence can be attributed to several factors, its skillful embrace of technology, its willingness to publicize its activities, its energetic recruitment and promotional activities, and its vicious, but deceivingly intellectualized propaganda.

Learning From The Turner Diaries

Around the country, local National Alliance leaders are responsible for ensuring that their charges read Pierce's novel. The Turner Diaries is almost certain to be taught in some of these units, and the group's tenets. "It is not an Aryan religion, but rather a civic religion [it] is irredeemably primitive."

Jews as THE Threat

While Pierce and other NA figures dehumanize both Blacks and Jews, depicting them as a "degenerate" and "racial purity." Jews are considered a more immediate menace to white survival. In his infamous "Turner Diaries," Pierce's hatred of Jews turns to paranoia and conspiracy mongering, as he describes the United States as being in the thrall of a malevolent enemy. "The Jewish control of the mass media."

While Pierce writes, "the single most important fact of life, not just in America, but in the world today. There is nothing—plague, famine, economic collapse, even nuclear war—more dangerous to the future of our people."

The Ideology of Hate

Beyond these specific tactical instructions, National Alliance leaders school their adherents in an ideology of hate. The NA is determined to secure "a racially clean area of the earth...no non-whites in our living space..." The group's belief is that "the sickness of multiculturalism is destroying America, Britain and every other Aryan nation in which it is being promoted."

Rejecting Democracy

The group's racist vision extends to its views on government. The National Alliance decries "the growth of mass democracy," including elements of "the world order" and non-whites, and favors a government that will "reverse the racially devoluntary course of the last few millennia and keep it reversed."

NA activists are also eager to erase the special progress made by women in the last century, and believe that "feminism is a threat..." to "our racial survival." The group's belief is that people are the masters of their destiny, and can control the trajectory of their lives, within the laws of nature. The doctrines of various religious groups are targeted. The National Alliance specifically rails against Christianity, because most of its members have Christian family backgrounds. They are power to oppose the Christian churches and to speak out against their doctrines," read the book's tenets. The October 1995 issue of "Free Speech," a monthly newsletter sent to financial supporters of the NA's "American Dissident Voices" radio program, seems to have had a particular impact on Shoemake. The issue featured an article called "Separation or Annihilation," which exhorted readers to choose between "racial separation" and "annihilation" of whites. It stated that "attaining and publishing by the Jackson, Mississippi NA's slogan in a final, rambling letter to you? We will see." Shoemake repeated the phrase, "The Turner Diaries." Along the margins of the page, Shoemake underlined and wrote, "We should be willing to give up every material thing we own to achieve it." Along the margins of the essay, Shoemake scrawled, "I say: Separation or annihilation! Who is crazy? Me or you? We will see." Shoemake repeated the NA's slogan in a final, rambling letter obtained by the Jackson, Mississippi, Clarion-Ledger. Shoemake wrote: "Black is the problem. It's in their genes. . . . They will never forgive whites from the Blacks and other non-whites and cannot forgive whites. They will never forgive whites.

Continuing his tirade, Pierce said that while individual Blacks and Jews may seem worthy of redemption, the only tenable solution for white people is to eliminate all non-whites.

Calling for Racial Cleansing

In January 1998, in a speech titled, "What Is a Patriot to Do?" Pierce spoke of starting an armed revolution against the Jewish people of the NA does not appear to be siphoning members from these declining groups, but actually recruiting a fresh cast of educated, middle-class bigots. These new followers appear to be attracted to the National Alliance's dedicated membership, its commanding presence. More over, while the program's topic varies from week to week depending on current events, Pierce's writings and his weekly radio show is rife with incendiary speech. Moreover, although the topic of the program changes from week to week, the bottom line to listeners was a shrill cry for violence. "We should not focus on the fact that it will be horrible and bloody, but on the fact that it is necessary, and because it is necessary it is good."

LOOKING AHEAD

The National Alliance's dramatic growth is significant because it comes at a time when other neo-Nazi organizations, as well as groups like the Ku Klux Klan, are becoming weaker and more fragmented. Moreover, the NA does not appear to be siphoning members from these declining groups, but actually recruiting a fresh cast of educated, middle-class bigots. These new followers appear to be attracted to the National Alliance's dedicated membership, its commanding presence on the Internet, its emphasis on maintaining a "sophisticated" image, and its powerful leadership. As the National Alliance continues to gather momentum and strength, its threat of violence grows. Crimes being plotted or committed by NA members of "Turner Diaries" devotees have been mounting. By publishing this report, ADL seeks to increase public awareness of the dangers posed by these individuals, as well as to encourage stepped-up vigilance by law enforcement officials at all levels.

CONSIDERATION OF H. RES. 557

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, October 8, 1998

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this important resolution that addresses many of the unresolved issues of the Holocaust era. I appreciate the efforts of my colleagues, Mr. GILMAN and the bill's sponsor, Mr. LANTOS, and their staff for preparing this important measure. In the aftermath of the Holocaust, survivors struggled to rebuild their lives. Holocaust victims in Western countries generally received some monetary compensation from Germany, albeit very limited compensation. Those victims whose homelands fell behind the Iron Curtain after World War II did not receive even this slight measure of justice. Other issues related to the Holocaust era, including the disposition of assets such as real or financial property, art work, and insurance policy proceeds went unresolved for all of these individuals, as well as for religious communities.

Mr. Speaker, a belated measure of justice for Holocaust victims is within reach. Much has been achieved, including unprecedented settlements between Holocaust survivors, Swiss Banks, and European insurance companies. Building on this momentum, the State Department and the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum will convene the Washington Conference on Holocaust-era Assets next month to address issues of Nazi-confiscated assets, including art, insurance, communal property, libraries and archives, as well as Holocaust education, research and remembrance. Conference participants will include government officials from over 40 countries, historians, experts, and representatives of major NGOs including the survivor community.

This resolution could not be considered at a more opportune moment. The resolution calls on countries to return expropriated properties to Holocaust victims or their heirs without arbitrary discrimination. It calls for the opening of archives relating to the Nazi era and for the continued prosecution of Nazi-era war criminals. It calls on Germany to provide just reparations to all Holocaust victims without delay and without the use of unreasonable eligibility criteria. Of equal importance, this resolution calls on all countries to encourage education on the history of the Holocaust and the consequences of the failure to respect human rights.

Mr. Speaker, we should pass this resolution as a demonstration of Congress' support for the U.S. Government's efforts to achieve justice for Holocaust victims and their families. I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this measure.
