The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR., to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 802. An act to authorize the Public Safety Officer Medal of Valor, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed bills of the following titles in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 39. An act to provide a national medal for public safety officers who act with extraordinary valor above and beyond the call of duty, and for other purposes.

S. 166. An act to limit access to body armor by violent felons and to facilitate the donation of Federal surplus body armor to State and local law enforcement agencies.

The message also announced that pursuant to Public Law 106-554, the Chair, on behalf of the President pro tempore, and upon the recommendation of the Majority Leader, appoints the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. HAGEL) to the Board of Directors of the Vietnam Education Foundation.

The message also announced that pursuant to Public Law 100-696, the Chair, on behalf of the Democratic Leader, announces the appointment of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN) as a member of the United States Capitol Preservation Commission, vice the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN).

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 3, 2001, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the majority whip limited to 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) for 5 minutes.

LINDA SHENWICK

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, having some concern by the recent UN votes that denied the United States a seat on both the Human Rights Commission and the Narcotics Trafficking Commission, many of my colleagues are again questioning how the U.S. should approach its participation in the United Nations.

In reality, while there is sufficient reason to assess blame on certain functions within the UN, we should also look to our own government. In 1999, during the State Department authorization debate, I brought to the attention of my colleagues the treatment of a dedicated State Department employee, Ms. Linda Shenwick.

Ms. Shenwick is an exemplary public servant, having served in the United States mission to the United Nations handling personnel and budget issues. She quickly carved out a reputation for diligence and hard work.

She earned three consecutive outstanding ratings and a promotion to the Senior Executive Service. Ms. Shenwick’s reputation earned the respect of other UN member states resulting in her election to serve on the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in 1991 and again then in 1993.

In her position she repeatedly found evidence of deliberate waste, fraud and mismanagement at the UN. Her reports, however, were largely ignored by the previous administration.

Without recourse to address these incidents on her own, Ms. Shenwick began notifying key Members of Congress regarding her discoveries. As a result of her work, Congress forced the UN to create an Office of Inspector General to end such fraud and mismanagement.

So how was one of the most valuable civil servants rewarded? Certain government officials and department employees embarked on a campaign to sabotage her career.

Ms. Shenwick has endured false accusations, unsubstantiated poor performance reviews, and the ultimate and, I believe, illegal removal from government service.

I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, to my colleagues that when former Secretary Madeline Albright refused to renominate Ms. Shenwick to the UN Budget Committee, negating 5 years of experience with the Byzantine UN budgetary bureaucracy, the U.S. ended up losing its seat on the Budget Committee for the next 4 years.

In all honesty, I do not think we would be seeing current problems at the U.S. mission if we had more employees like Linda Shenwick. Ms. Shenwick is a person that believes in the United Nations and wants to serve the U.S. mission if we had more employees like Linda Shenwick.

The problems of waste, fraud and mismanagement have been highlighted by most of my colleagues here on the House floor over the years.
Energy conservation is not just a matter of personal virtue, but if it were, there is nothing wrong with formulating energy policy that recognizes the importance of this virtue.

Energy conservation should be, with all due respect to the Vice President, the foundation of our national policy. It is the underpinning that will provide significant amounts of energy in the near term. Furthermore, it is an approach that has already proven effective and has received bipartisan support.

All the hotly debated talk about drilling in the Alaskan National Wildlife Refuge and building a new power plant a week is not going to alleviate the problems facing consumers now. Instead of cutting the budget for environmental conservation, we need to set policies that actually encourage it.

There are simple conservation measures we could be taking today. Number one, extending fuel efficiency standards to all vehicles, including SUVs, light trucks and minivans. An increase of 3 miles per gallon in the fuel efficiency of SUVs would save more oil than drilling in the Arctic would ever produce, and we will get the benefits long before we ever get any Arctic oil.

Two, encouraging higher building standards that are more energy efficient, such as colored roofs, which reflect heat rays and lower home temperatures by as much as 5 degrees.

Three, we should be promoting new technologies and alternate fuels. We should not force people who want a 70-mile-per-gallon vehicle to buy one from overseas. By providing incentives and Federal support for developing and deploying energy-efficient technologies here in the United States, we can provide new and lucrative markets for American businesses.

Four, we ought to restore the higher standards for energy guzzling appliances. The Bush administration should allow the saving standards issued by the Clinton administration to stand, not roll them back.

Businesses are already realizing these benefits. A DuPont plant in New Jersey, for instance, which refused energy use per pound of product by one-third, cut global warming pollution per pound of product by nearly one-half, and as production rose 9 percent, the total energy bill fell by $17 million a year.

But we need to get help to the people who perhaps cannot afford it. Five, helping people with today's skyrocketing energy bills and helping them install energy savings appliances seems to make sense. If we can afford, as some suggest, up to $2 trillion in tax cuts, there is no reason that Congress cannot put some money on the table now that will help reduce the demand for energy production and help low- and moderate-income people save money over time.

We should have policies that reduce the extra costs for low-income people who need to replace appliances that in the long term will pay for themselves many times over. The long-term benefits accrue not just to those low-income households. The community and the utilities will benefit huge savings by not building unnecessary power plants.

Yesterday's poll in USA Today showed that the American public understands this problem and an overwhelming majority favors conservation over production.

We should invest in alternative energy, retrofit existing buildings with new technology, help lower-income people control today and conserve for tomorrow, and all of us should embrace conservation.

These principles should be the basis of a national energy policy, an approach that will unite us in Washington, D.C., because it is what the people want and it is the quickest path to building more livable communities.

PARENTS' ROLE IN TEEN PREGNANCY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be joined on the floor of the House today by the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON), who is my very dear friend and colleague. The gentlewoman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWRY) have been very active on the issue of teen pregnancy, and work closely with the campaign to end teen pregnancy to bring attention to the issue throughout the Nation.

The newest data shows a very interesting fact: Teens listen to their parents. Often parents think their teenagers only listen to their teenage friends and sometimes give up talking to their teenagers about difficult subjects like sex and sexuality and sexual activity amongst teens.

But when your child is in their teen years, that is a time when you need to talk with your child. You need to listen to your son or your daughter. You need to hear what pressures they feel and face, because it is only through that conversation that you can help your teenager understand their own growth.

Of course, they are growing in sexual awareness, but they are also growing emotionally towards independence and intellectually towards a level of personal power necessary for them to fulfill their dreams.

When we talk to our kids about sexuality, we rarely talk to them about the terrible danger teen pregnancy poses to their growth and development, their ability to parent, their ability to provide for their child in the way they would want to. We rarely talk to them about the sheer lunacy of teen sex because of the devastating impact it can have on their lives. For young girls, particularly, inappropriate intimacy stunts their growth.

Teenagers, by their nature, spend their teen years weaning themselves from their parents. That is what growing up is all about. It is about gaining your independence, gaining a sense of yourself, developing your own skills so that you can be your own person in the decades ahead.

As one weans oneself from the control of one’s parents, one also must gain that control oneself. For young women particularly, premature sexuality has the effect of transferring control to the young man. It is simply more true for young girls than it is for a young man. Yet, we do not talk with our girls about this at all.

We do not help them to see that, if they want to succeed in the project of growing up, if they want to be their own person, if they want to be intellectually strong, they want to have a sound body, a sound mind, a sound heart, they have to take responsibility for themselves.

In seeking to leave their parents, it is particularly dangerous for young girls to shift that power of control through sexual intimacy to a young man. That is unfortunately exactly what happens, and we do not even talk about it.

It is important to talk to one’s teens. It is important to listen to the pressures they face. It is important not to be afraid of those pressures because, through discussion, one will arm one’s child with an understanding of the power that abstinence provides them over themselves and gives them in shaping their future.

Now, growing up has always been tough. It is tough all through one’s life to reach adulthood. But it is particularly tough in teen years and during that process of adolescence. If we, as parents, cannot talk straighter with our children and cannot learn at a level that allows us to listen to things we never thought we would hear our kids say, then we cannot, with them, help them guide themselves through the difficult waters of adolescence in helping them guide themselves through the decades ahead.

PARENTS’ ROLE IN TEEN PREGNANCY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. JOHNSON) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I am also delighted to join the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON) as we serve on the House Caucus for the Prevention of Teenage Pregnancy. I am delighted for many year reasons; one, because this is an opportunity, and the month of May is an opportunity to raise the awareness of an issue that growing up imposes on teenagers.

Over the last several years, I have spoken out often and devoted a lot of time and energy to this effort. But no more time is more rewarding than talking to young people themselves and talking to community leaders about this issue.

This week alone, I spoke to three different schools. It included a high school and two junior high schools. What I am finding out is that young people themselves have views, opinions, and they are part of a leadership, too. They should be engaged in this issue.

I am convinced if one is effectively to reduce teenage pregnancy, we must, indeed, bring the awareness to the community of the consequences of teenage pregnancies, not only to the families, the young people themselves, but also to the community. But more importantly, we must, indeed, engage our youth, because they are factored in resolving this issue.

We have good news. Since 1999, teenage pregnancies have gone down. It has been a steady decline. So we should celebrate that as a Nation. We deserve to be proud of that activity. But in spite of our good efforts and success, still, yet today, more than 1 million children, young people, indeed, become pregnant each year, those younger than the age of 20. Nearly 1 million every year now, although it is going down, there is a steady number of persons who are teenagers who are becoming pregnant before they reach their 20th birthday.

Also, in my part of the State, eastern North Carolina, the rate is not going down as fast. In fact, I have several of my counties where the rate is higher than in our State. So I am, indeed, concerned about that.

May, as I say, is an opportunity where we can bring the awareness to both the community and to the young people. The thing we want to emphasize to young people that teenage pregnancy is a time when they should be concentrating on education. They should be having fun. They should be talking about their career. They should be growing up and not focused on pregnancy or being a parent prematurely.

Mr. Speaker, I was happy to join the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON) recently when the National Campaign to Prevent Teenage Pregnancy released their report. As the gentlewoman has already commented, that report emphasizes several things, both around parents and teenagers; and that teenagers really wanted to talk to their parents.

Sometimes parents thought teenagers wanted to talk to teenagers and were getting all the information from them. But they really thought they should get that information from the parents. Both parents and teenagers agree more often than one would think. Ninety-five percent of parents felt that abstinence was absolutely what should happen. Ninety-three percent of the something must be missing in that game. It means that parents and teenagers are not talking to each other.

Now, many of the parents, as I said earlier, on one hand believe that contraception information and abstinence may give a dual message, but there was a role for the schools, and that the school should be engaged in that process; that the primary responsibility should be the parent. If both parents and teenagers believe that, something must be missing in that game. It means that parents and teenagers are not talking to each other.

In fact, I personally believe that abstinence is the most important. But I also know that young people are very active sexually. So we must be engaged in providing the critical important information to teenagers so they can make the decision. I believe if we empower young people, they will make the difference.
I am convinced that if we are to effectively reduce teenage childbearing, we must do more to raise the awareness level of this issue in our communities and actively engage our youth. Our youth have ideas, opinions, and can provide leadership in our efforts to reduce teenage pregnancy.

Since the early 1990s, teen pregnancy and birth rates have steadily declined. As a nation, we deserve to be proud of the progress we have made. Yet, despite these impressive gains, 4 out of 10 girls in this country still get pregnant by age 20—nearly 1 million adolescent pregnancies each year. Also, in an eastern North Carolina, the rate has not gone down at the same time as the nation, several counties in my district are among the highest in the State. In other words, we have a long way to go.

May is Teen Pregnancy Prevention Month. This is the most opportune time for all of us to re-double our efforts in convincing young people that adolescence must be a time for continued positive growth in the areas of education. It is the growing up and having fun stage of youth, not the time to dwell on pregnancy and parenthood. I was happy to recently help the private, nonprofit National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy release two important reports (including a large nationally representative survey of adults and teens) that should provide comfort to parents and schools while challenging.

First, and perhaps most importantly, the survey released by the National Campaign clearly shows that the American public has a very common sense view of the teen pregnancy problem. Despite the often-extreme rhetoric that surrounds the issue. The overwhelming majority of adults and teens believe that teens should not be sexually active but those who are should have access to contraception. The survey also reveals, however, that the public does not view abstinence and contraceptive use as equally attractive options. A clear national consensus exists that school-age teens should not have sex—more than nine of ten adults and 85 percent of teens (95 percent) said it is important that teens be given a strong message from society.

The consensus position seems to recognize that the continued debate over abstinence versus contraception is counter-productive and misses the more critical issue of motivation. Teens will do neither unless they are highly motivated to avoid pregnancy in the first place.

Parents who feel that they have lost their children to the influence of peers and popular culture should note that teens say their parents influence their sexual decisionmaking more than any other source. Parents, on the other hand, believe that peers wield the greatest influence on these matters. This generational divide must be bridged. Parents need to know that their children really do want to hear from them about sex, love, and relationships, even if they don’t always seem like it.

Schools are also clearly part of the solution to teen pregnancy. When asked where they have learned the most about preventing teen pregnancy, more teens said teachers and sex educators than other sources. Once again, however, both adults and teens take a common sense view of how much of the sex education burden schools should shoulder. Nine out of ten adults disagree that sex education is primarily the responsibility of schools and few adults or teens believe that schools are responsible for fixing the problem of teen pregnancy.

So what should be done? What do these findings and others from the National Campaign suggest? Here are some simple recommendations for continued progress in preventing teen pregnancy:

- Abstinence should be strongly stressed as the best choice for teens because of its effectiveness and its consistency with the beliefs of adults and teens. But giving teens information about—and access to—contraception is still important.
- Arguments over which strategy is better—sexual abstinence or contraceptive use—are recipes for stalemate. More of both are needed. In a diverse country, a number of different approaches to preventing teen pregnancy is absolutely essential.
- Parents can do much more to help. Kids want to hear from their parents about sex and values but often do not.
- Effective programs to reduce teen pregnancy should be expanded, but it is unrealistic to assume that community programs alone will solve this problem.
- The good news about declining rates of teen pregnancy is that progress on this seemingly intractable social problem is possible.

I was delighted by the comments and suggestions made by youth during my recent visit to neighborhood schools. Youth are concerned about the lack of constructive after school activities. Youth leaders would like to become more active in prevention activities with other youth, and would like to know that contraceptives are provided hassle free.

I believe that devoting more energy resources and funds to prevention teen pregnancy would not only improve the health, education, and economic opportunities of our Nation’s youth, but it would save money in the long run.

We cannot overestimate the far-reaching effects of teen pregnancy. We must continue to pursue ways to develop pregnancy prevention programs that educate and support high-risk youth and their families through comprehensive social and health services.

Young people say birth is that they have real futures to risk, have real incentives to delay parenting. That is why when we demand responsible behavior we have reciprocal obligation to offer a real future beyond early parent and poverty.

I strongly support abstinence education and feel that abstinence programs are critically important for pre-teens as well as teens; we, however, cannot ignore the fact that so many of our teens are already sexually active. Therefore it is important that teens hear both messages, abstinence and contraception. Good, factual information is empowering to our youth, especially with guidance from their parents. I encourage each community to help determine how best to address this critical issue.

TRIBUTE TO GLADYS HARRINGTON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to what I consider a great American lady, a woman who has witnessed firsthand World War I, the Great Depression, World War II, the invention of television, the microwave, and the World Wide Web.

On May 29, Gladys Harrington, who is a real friend of mine, a true pillar of the Plano, Texas community, is celebrating her 100th birthday.

She has lived an abundant life. She moved to Plano in the early 1900s when 1,500 people lived there. Today, Plano is home to 230,000 plus and growing.

She married Fred Harrington in 1919 in Plano, Texas and gave birth to two sons, Joe Harrington and Conner Harrington. Conner Harrington actually ran for Congress against a Democrat, Sam Rayburn, who was a friend of mine as well. She is the proud grandma of four children, Connie, Cynthia, Mary Lou, and Freddy, as well as two great grandchildren, Sage and Emily.

It is obvious that she has touched the lives of those around her and blessed everyone with her passion for life and zero tolerance service. As a member of the First Christian Church, she taught Sunday school, led the Christian Women Fellowship and served as a deaconess.

In addition, they helped found what is now the Gladys Harrington Library in Plano. What started as a one-room public facility has now blossomed into one of the leading libraries in the area.

Mr. Speaker, I may not even be standing here today were it not for the hard work and selfless dedication of my dear friend Gladys. I say that because Gladys helped me run my first campaign for Congress in 1991 and every time thereafter.

Every Republican knows that one cannot do anything Republican in Texas without Gladys Harrington. She has volunteered countless hours of her time and dollars to help the party rise to the best that it is today. Think about it. Every statewide office in Texas is now Republican. The Texan in the White House is even a Republican, too; and Gladys helped him as well.

Gladys helped lay the essential groundwork for the grassroots efforts for this amazing feat. She has mobilized ground troops, attended conventions, paid her dues and then some.

In addition to giving her time to the Republican Party, she gives so much to those around her. In fact, she continues to go to a book club and to the Plano Chamber Orchestra. She keeps scrapbooking, detailing the many years behind her and saving room for more to come.

I think America needs more good people like Gladys Harrington. She is a great American in my view, and I am proud to know her. I just want to wish Gladys a happy birthday. Plano would not be the same without Gladys.
TEENAGE PREGNANCY MONTH

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentlewoman from Indiana (Ms. CARSON) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Ms. CARSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor of the House this afternoon because I care about our communities and our young people. I want to give an ovation to the honorables and our young people. I want to give an ovation to the honorables and our young people. I want to give an ovation to the honorables and our young people. I want to give an ovation to the honorables and our young people.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the importance of the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy. The organization does a tremendous job because it recognizes the broad consequences for society and the individuals directly involved when children continue to have children. We must empower and support the brave individuals who are working with programs at the grass-roots level to reduce teenage pregnancy. It is programs such as these that give our young people a fighting chance and an alternative to engaging in destructive behavior.

We believe that if young people have a strategy for the future and have hope about their career and have economic security, they are more likely to value the need to develop themselves, rather than getting involved in behavior that is self-destructive, including premature sex.

I would like to recognize an important bill introduced by my colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE). This bill, the Mentoring for Success Act, will provide grants to expand mentoring through new programs and existing programs throughout the country, hopefully reaching around 200,000 young people.

As the gentleman from Nebraska mentioned, studies have shown that young people who are mentored will be 50 percent less likely to skip school, 50 percent less likely to begin using drugs, 36 percent less likely to lie to a parent, 30 percent less likely to commit a violent act of any kind, and certainly they are less likely to drop out of high school.

Mr. Speaker, let me add in closing that I stand here as a Member of the United States Congress and am the product of a teenage pregnancy. However, the amount of community support, religious support, and school support that I received as a young person has boded well in terms of my future. I hope that we can work together in Congress to pass important pieces of legislation and offer the necessary resources to counteract this pandemic.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m.

Accordingly (at 1 o’clock and 2 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Reverend Gene Arey, New Harvest Ministry, Waynesboro, Virginia, offered the following prayer:

Father, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God, we acknowledge You as Father God.

We pray First Timothy 2:1-4, “I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men; for kings; and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good, and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior, who will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.”

Father, I pray for our President and the First Lady. Bless them this day and give them the wisdom to do all that is set before them.

I pray for these Representatives, to have the wisdom of God to accomplish all that is set before them to do. Bless them for their commitment to serve the people of our Nation and carry out their duties.

Father, in Jesus’ Name I call this United States of America blessed in Jesus’ Name.

God bless America. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announced to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. BALLenger. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker’s approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Speaker’s approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BALLenger. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

SUNDRY MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Sundry messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Sherman Williams, one of his secretaries.
WELCOME TO THE REVEREND GENE AREY

(Mr. GOODLATTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure today to say a word about our guest Chaplain who is also my constituent.

The Reverend Gene Arey, who was born and raised in Waynesboro, Virginia, has served as copastor of Waynesboro's New Harvest Worship Center in Lynchburg. The couple cofounded the church, located at 555 West Main Street, more than 7 years ago. Reverend and Mrs. Arey, who are active in foreign missions, recently returned from Romania, where they also serve as church leaders. Reverend Arey was ordained by Archbishop Silasti Vagi of Kenya, Africa, and Dr. Decker Tapscott, pastor of Faith Christian Church in Warrenton, Virginia. Reverend Arey is joined in Washington today by his wife, his son Larry, daughter-in-law Kay, and granddaughter Olivia who live in Greenville, Virginia, also in my district.

ENERGY EFFICIENCY

(Ms. McCOLLUM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, the President will be in St. Paul, Minnesota, on Thursday to unveil his vision for a national energy policy. Minnesotans understand the value of a balanced approach that needs to be part of an energy policy which embraces our environmental qualities. We must use clean fuels, renewable energy and improved energy efficiency and invest in alternative energy resources. The Vice President said conservation is a sign of personal virtue, but not a basis for policy. In Minnesota, conservation is common sense. It means saving energy and money by using our resources more efficiently. Improved energy standards for consumer products would eliminate the need for an additional 180 new power plants. Energy efficiency standards have already saved American consumers $50 billion this past decade. Minnesotans expect conservation to be an important part of any energy policy that balances today's energy needs with the needs of future generations.

H.R. 1 EXPANDS CHOICE FOR PARENTS

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, children should not be trapped in failing schools where they cannot possibly reach their fullest educational potential. That is why H.R. 1 includes a school choice program that enables parents to remove their children from schools that, as President Bush says, do not teach and will not change.

Before giving parents the option of sending their children to another school, H.R. 1 gives low-performing schools the chance to improve by offering them financial assistance to increase student achievement. If these schools do not make adequate progress, parents will be able to send their children to another public school. After 3 years of chronic failure, disadvantaged students will be eligible for private school scholarships.

H.R. 1, it should be noted, aims to hold schools accountable for giving them special financial help. But more funding cannot be the final remedy. There must be a safety valve that allows children to escape continually low-performing schools. It goes without saying that we are all committed to improving the quality of our nation's schools; but first and foremost, students themselves should be our most pressing concern. And it is our responsibility to empower parents to make the right decision for their children's future.

CALIFORNIA'S ELECTRICITY CRISIS

(Mr. FILNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, we now know what GOP means. It means gas, oil and petroleum. What is the administration's answer to the electricity crisis confronting the West and soon the rest of the Nation? Drill for oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Reserve, cut research into renewable energy research, cut conservation programs.

Mr. Speaker, that is not the answer for the western electricity crisis. We must conserve. We must move more into renewable sources. We must do more research. But most of all, we have to bring down the criminal prices that are being charged for wholesale electricity in California and the rest of the West. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, this Congress, this administration, must act now. It is the prices that are killing the California and western economy. It is the prices that are going to kill the rest of this nation's economy. California is being bled dry by electricity wholesalers. We are being charged $2.5 billion a month for our electricity. This cannot stand. It is time for Congress, it is time for this administration to act. Let us get away from a gas, oil and petroleum policy for this administration.

INCREASED SPENDING JEOPARDIZES FUTURE OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Speaker, I understand that some Members of Congress are working on legislation which will tell the United States Army what kind of headgear to wear. I believe this action is micromanagement at its worst and makes Congress the fashion police. For those of us who have strong ties to the military community, this entire episode has been a whirlwind of emotions. Like most of my constituents, I too felt the issuance of a black beret, the modern-day symbol of excellence in the United States Armed Forces, to all soldiers, ill-advised. As I have related to senior Army officials and my constituents, this action is analogous to issuing a letter jacket to all high school seniors regardless of whether they played ball or not. This problem has been worked out, however, by allowing the Rangers to wear a different color beret to distinguish their unique contribution.

Even though I believe the Army is spending too much money on berets, $30 million and climbing, and even though I have problems with where they are made, particularly in China, although that contract has been canceled, I believe Congress does not have the time or the charter to meddle with what the Army does or does not wear. If we can trust the chief of staff of the Army to command our young Americans in wartime, certainly we can trust him to determine what kind of uniform they will wear.

CONGRATULATING DENISE QUINONES AND TITO TRINIDAD

(Mr. ACEVEDO-VILÁ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ACEVEDO-VILÁ. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate two Puerto Ricans that in the past weekend made all of us very proud. I am talking about Denise Quinones, who won the Miss Universe contest held in Puerto Rico last Friday, and Felix “Tito” Trinidad who on Saturday added the middleweight championship to his already amazing resume.

Denise and Tito, as we call him down there, make us proud because they represent some of the best qualities of the Puerto Rican people. Denise is much more than a beautiful face. She is extremely bright, well educated, fully bilingual and ready to meet the challenges of the future. Denise is a true role model for our youth.

We also celebrate the triumph of our champion Felix “Tito” Trinidad who is the best pound-for-pound boxer in the world. Tito embodies the talent and discipline of Puerto Rican youth. His unbreakable will in the ring reflects the strength of the Puerto Rican people.

Today, Puerto Rico celebrates two real stars. Denise and Tito remind us that we can accomplish anything through dedication and perseverance. Felicidades a ambos. (Congratulations to both of you.)

SUSPENSION OF UNLAWFUL AND UNNECESSARY REGULATIONS

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, industries around this Nation continually are burdened by unfair and unnecessary regulations. However, last year the mining industry faced an additional and unnecessary burden, an unlawful regulation.

Previously, Congress called for the National Academy of Sciences to study and assess the effectiveness of the existing 3809 regulations that affect the mining industry. That study, authorized by Congress, concluded that the existing laws were effective in protecting the environment. Yet the Clinton administration last administration promulgated new 3809 regulations in spite of the National Academy findings and in direct violation of Federal law.

In fiscal year 2000, the Interior appropriations bill clearly prohibited the promulgation of any new 3809 rules except those ‘‘which are not inconsistent with the National Academy of Science studies.’’

Thankfully, President Bush realized the error of President Clinton’s ways, and now we have only to roll back the unnecessary and unlawful 3809 regulations proposed by the previous administration, which do not protect the environment or the American people.

PERIODIC REPORT ON NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO BURMA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107-70)

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Gibbons) laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA), 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit herewith a 6-month periodic report on the national emergency with respect to Burma that was declared in Executive Order 13047 of May 20, 1997.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

CONTINUATION OF EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO BURMA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107-71)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1622(d), the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication, stating that the emergency declared with respect to Burma is to continue in effect beyond May 20, 2001. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on May 19, 2000.

As long as the Government of Burma continues policies of committing large-scale repression of the democratic opposition in Burma, this situation continues to pose an unusual and serious threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. For this reason, I have determined that it is necessary to maintain in force these emergency authorities beyond May 20, 2001.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a re- vote is ordered or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Such record votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate has been concluded on all motions to suspend the rules, but not before 6 p.m. today.

EXPEDITING CONSTRUCTION OF WORLD WAR II MEMORIAL IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1696) to expedite the construction of the World War II memorial in the District of Columbia.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1696

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. EXPEDITED COMMENCEMENT BY AMERICAN BATTLE MONUMENTS COMMISSION OF CONSTRUCTION OF WORLD WAR II MEMORIAL.

Section 2113 of title 36, United States Code, as added by section 601(a) of the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act (Public Law 106-117; 113 Stat. 1576), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(i) CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTION TO COMMISSION COMMISSION OF CONSTRUCTION: The requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), the Commemorative Works Act (40 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.), and all other laws pertaining to the siting and design for the World War II memorial having been met, the Commission shall expeditiously proceed with the construction of the World War II memorial at the dedicated Rainbow Pool site in the District of Columbia.

“(ii) The construction of the World War II memorial authorized by paragraph (1) shall be consistent with—

“(A) the final architectural submission made to the Commission of Fine Arts and the National Capital Planning Commission on June 30, 2000, as supplemented on November 2, 2000; and
Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 1696.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. STUMP asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, 8 years ago this month, the original authorization for a memorial on the Mall honoring the World War II veterans was signed into law, and still construction has not yet begun. H.R. 1696 will be the sixth bipartisan legislation Congress has sent to the White House for approval, attempting to move the process along.

Over the past 6 years, 22 public hearings have been held on the site and design of the memorial in compliance with the Commemorative Works Act. The memorial site and design have received the endorsements of the Historic Preservation Officer of the District of Columbia and four endorsements from the D.C. Historic Preservation Review Board. The Commission of Fine Arts and the National Capitol Planning Commission has each rendered approval for the memorial five times. This site was approved by both the Secretary of the Interior and the President. And still construction has not begun.

Two other very important things have also been happening since Congress authorized this memorial.

Through the leadership and hard work of former Senator Bob Dole and Academy Award winning actor Tom Hanks, the memorial fund has now raised over $170 million. There are no taxpayer funds involved in this memorial. Financial support has come in from half a million Americans, hundreds of corporations and foundations, dozens of civic, fraternal and professional organizations, 48 state legislatures, over 1,000 schools, and numerous veterans groups representing millions of veterans.

Unfortunately, something else has been happening since the memorial was authorized. Mr. Speaker. Millions of World War II veterans have gone to their eternal rest. According to VA statistics, 3 million World War II veterans have died since this memorial was authorized in 1993.

Once construction begins, construction of the memorial will take approximately 30 months. In that time, nearly 1 million additional World War II veterans will pass away. Each day of delay tragically adds 1,100 more. And still construction has not begun.

Why? Because a small group of opponents are desperately using litigation to challenge prior decisions and delay construction so that they can drag the memorial back through a mind-numbing bureaucracy. The opponents are not satisfied by more than 20 public meetings over the past 6 years resulting in endorsements and approval of all agencies required by law. They wanted to go back to square one.

This is truly bureaucratic at its worst. It has literally taken twice as long to go from Congressional approval to construction of a World War II memorial than it did to fight and win World War II.

Once again, it is up to Congress to get the job done and save the memorial from what an article in the Washington Post called "A bureaucratic form of double jeopardy.

A New York Times article recently quoted the Chairman of the National Capital Planning Commission as favoring Congressional action to "clarify the issue and moot the question by saying the commission’s actions were in fact valid.

H.R. 1696 does exactly that. It states that the memorial has met all legal requirements and that construction should begin expeditiously. This legislation has the support of virtually every service organization in the country, and I strongly urge my colleagues to vote for the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be joining with the Chairman of the Committee on Armed Services and the former chairman of the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs, my good friend, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP). I am glad to have him back working on veterans’ issues, if just for one day.

Mr. Speaker, let us expedite the construction of the World War II Memorial, and construct it now.

Mr. Speaker, John Ruskin once said “our duty is to preserve what the past has said for itself, and to say for ourselves what shall be true for the future.” This statement is an appropriate guide for our deliberations today as we consider H.R. 1696, a bill that will expedite the construction of the National World War II Memorial in the District of Columbia.

Congressional authorization authorizing the creation of a National World War II Memorial in Washington, DC. President Clinton signed the legislation into law on May 25, 1993. The memorial is intended to honor all who served in the United States Armed Forces during World War II. It is also intended to honor the entire nation’s contribution to the war effort. The future National World War II Memorial will be an integral part of the Washington, DC landscape. The memorial will not only appropriately honor and pay tribute to those who sacrificed so much, but will educate future generations to some of the costs of freedom.

Mr. Speaker, 14 years after Congress authorized the construction of this memorial, and six years from the first of 22 public hearings held by the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC) on the site and design, construction remains delayed by a lawsuit filed by a small opposition group and a procedural issue involving the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC), one of the agencies required by law to approve the memorial.

NCPC’s decisions of the past few years, including its approval of the National World War II Memorial, have been placed in question because the former NCPC chairman continued to serve on the commission after the expiration of his term. The legislation that established the commission permitted the chairman to serve until replaced, but when the law was amended this language was inadvertently omitted. The NCPC has scheduled yet another public hearing on the memorial for June 14, 2001. Meanwhile, court action on the lawsuit is on hold pending resolution of this issue, which may take several more months to conclude.

Mr. Speaker, more than 16 million Americans served in uniform during World War II. More than 400,000 gave their lives, and millions more supported the war effort on the front and at home. Of the 16 million who served, only five million remain alive today. World War II veterans are dying at a rate of 1,100 per day. With more than 400,000 veterans dying each year, every delay in memorial construction ensures that hundreds of thousands of World War II veterans will never witness the completion of the memorial. H.R. 1696 will expedite construction of the memorial and make it possible for many of our World War II veterans to be able to see the memorial with their own eyes.

H.R. 1696 would declare that the National World War II Memorial complies with the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, the Commemorative Works Act, and any other governing laws pertaining to the memorial’s site and design. H.R. 1696 would direct expedited construction of the memorial, consistent with reasonable construction permit requirements of the Secretary of Interior and the National Park Service. In addition, H.R. 1696 would mandate that the decision to construct the memorial at the Rainbow Pool site and decisions regarding the design of the memorial are final and conclusive and shall not be subject to administrative or judicial review.

The Commemorative Works Act of 1986 governs the process of establishing memorials in Washington, DC. The Act gives the authority for final approval of designs to the Commission of Fine Arts, the NCPC, and the Secretary of the Interior. In total, eight sites were considered for the memorial. The final Rainbow Pool selection was the consensus choice as the only site commensurate with the significance of World War II in American and World history.

Since 1995, the memorial site and design have been the subject of 22 public meetings that resulted in the endorsement of hundreds of Members of Congress, an endorsement from the State Historic Preservation Officer of the District of Columbia, four endorsements from the National Park Service, five approvals from the CFA, and five approvals from the NCPC.

In other words, the National World War II Memorial is the product of an open and democratic process in full compliance with all applicable laws. The site and design were debated in the media and in 22 public meetings since 1995. No party has been denied the right to be heard, and critics have had full opportunity to state their positions.

On May 28th of this year, many of us will attend Memorial Day observances. We will with humility and thanks, pay sincere respect to those whose sacrifices and dedications have protected the ideals on which America was founded. In this spirit, I strongly urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1696. The time is overdue to begin construction on this meaningful tribute and symbolic monument that will immortalize the defining moment of our history forever.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah. Reconvening as the chairman of our Committee on Resources.

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support this bill, which will expedite the construction of the national World War II Memorial at the Rainbow Pool site on the Mall. I commend the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) for the action he has taken.

It has been nearly 60 years since the people of our great Nation were called upon to defend democracy from the tyranny threatening to engulf the world. The best of America’s sons and daughters heeded the call, and with the Nation united behind them, they changed the course of history. Now as America’s greatest generation is in their twilight years, it is time to erect a fitting memorial to them on America’s Mall as a testament to their sacrifices and their triumphant victory.

The American Battle Monuments Commission has met the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act, the Commemorative Works Acts, and all other laws dealing with the site and design of this memorial, yet the memorial remains mired in administrative procedure, which continues to delay the construction.

It is time to set aside the bureaucratic obstacles and do what is right. We owe nothing less to those who gave so much for their country and the world.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, every Member of this body is anxious to see a memorial to the women and men who secured our freedom with their personal sacrifices and their lives. We can assure a memorial on the present timetable or sooner if we pass this deliriously destructive bill that will do irreparable harm to the World War II memorial itself by eliminating indispensable oversight for the largest and most significant memorial on the Mall since the Lincoln Memorial was constructed almost 80 years ago.

We can keep a memorial on schedule without destroying the Commemorative Works Act, signed by Ronald Reagan 16 years ago specifically to assure oversight of all construction on the Mall.

Those of us who wanted the extraordinary vista between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial left unobstructed lost that battle several years ago. This bill responds to press reports that left the impression that the National Capital Planning Commission, the NCPC, would reconsider the entire World War II memorial project.

Both the NCPC and recent press reports have corrected this erroneous notion. The matter is before the NCPC only because the Justice Department spotted a legal flaw that a hold-over member had called the vote into question. That would have imperiled the memorial.

This bill is not only unnecessary, it throws out the baby with the bath water that has already been eliminated. The only overreaching left now is in this bill. It would leave a huge memorial to rise on the Mall, without any Federal law or agency with the power or the expertise to assure that the memorial builders meet their commitments and that the many problems that have been identified are caught and avoided.

Here is some of them: Assuring that contaminated groundwater would be pumped out continually and treated before continuing into the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay inasmuch as the memorial is to be built below the groundwater table; protecting the structural integrity of the Washington Monument’s wooden foundations as groundwater in its subsoil is pumped out; insuring that the groundwater, upon which the old growth trees that beautify the Mall depend; assuring that helicopters have a place to land without putting helicopter pads on the memorial, a National Park Service proposal which was recently stopped by the NCPC; accommodating tour buses off the Mall area; assuring that the tidal 17th Street area of the District used by Virginia and Maryland commuters and tourists alike near the Tidal Basin is not closed to traffic; assuring that the nighttime lighting plan still to be developed; and ensuring oversight of the sculptural elements of the memorial and any inscriptions on the walls; assuring compliance with what has already been approved. This bill, which has no hearing and is informed by no meetings with relevant agency personnel promises serious unintended and counterproductive consequences that could be both embarrassing and disastrous for the memorial.

In the past, the Congress has always avoided the precedent this bill would set; using our power to tamper with the detailed oversight necessary to assure the integrity of the Federal presence. Vote no. The NCPC has already gotten the message.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HOUGHTON).
Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I first want to thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), who has been a real leader in this effort; and I appreciate what he has done.

I just want to say a couple of things. I came to this to discuss the architectural or the engineering problems here. I remember in 1939, I am old enough to remember that, they had the same arguments as far as the Jefferson Memorial. It would be ruining the tidal basin and everything like that. I do not believe that for a minute, and it has not proved to be so.

I enlisted in the United States Marine Corps in May of 1944. I was proud of that. There are an awful lot of us who are still around, a dwindling number, who want to see something. We have the Vietnam Memorial, we have the Korean Memorial, but we do not have a World War II memorial.

Frankly, there are hundreds of thousands of people who believe this and who contributed; organizations, foundations, corporations. I have a VFW post, number 524, in my little town of Corning, which is about 12,500 people, which has raised more money than any other small VFW post in the state of New York. They really believe in this. There are people out there, not intellectualizing about this, but who have a piece of their skin in this issue. They want to have something done. I would like to have something done, and I would like to have something done before I die.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR).

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Stump legislation to construct the World War II memorial exactly where it should be, as a memorial to the victory of liberty over tyranny in the 19th, and 20th centuries. It is a national building between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, exactly where it should be, as a memorial to our greatest generation, and to the military that will be represented here. It has been passed. Both Chambers of Congress, but as a city planner that helped take a look at the site, that has worked with the architects to make sure that the design was appropriate, blocking no views; and all public input has made this a better design than we began with originally.

Of the 16 million veterans who served during World War II, approximately 5 million still survive. Every day, approximately 1,100 World War II veterans pass away, never to see the memorial that will stand in Washington that will stand as testimony to what they did for us, with the heroism and the self-sacrifice that have given us a new generation of children of freedom.

It is time, Mr. Speaker, to move forward with construction of the World War II memorial. The time for delay is over. We not only honor our World War II veterans during this Armed Services Week in doing so, but we also say, we understand the cause for which they fought and the causes on the central part of our mall, complementing what we have done for the 18th century, the 19th century, and finally, the 20th century.

Support the Stump bill, H.R. 1696.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BALLINGER).

Mr. BALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I would like to say that myself and the other two Members that have spoken on this side of the aisle all joined World War II when we were 17 years old. My wife and I have read on a daily basis the stories of World War II veterans that are dying at the rate of 1,000 a day; and those that do not believe that, just look at the obituary columns in the newspaper.

Let me cite some of the reasons people fought and sacrificed during World War II. Critics claim that the memorial will block the mall’s open space between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, inhibiting pedestrians from walking through this part of the mall. That is not true.

Critics claim that the memorial will destroy the historic Rainbow Pool. That is not true. The Rainbow Pool will be lowered and rebuilt in its historic configuration. The pool’s waterworks, which have not functioned for decades, will be restored to their original splendor. The Rainbow Pool will earn greater historic significance as the centerpiece of the only memorial to a 20th century event commemorated on the main axis of the mall. Critics claim that the design echoes that Nazi Fascist architectural language of triumph and public spectacle. That is not true.

Critics claim that the World War II memorial is not part of the Lincoln Memorial, and that is not true.

I say to my colleagues, there are millions of reasons why this should be done, but every day there are fewer and fewer of us around that really can live up to the purpose that this memorial is died for. I would like to say we have waited long enough. It is time that we pass this bill. Let us vote for it.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD).

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I, first of all, want to rise in strong support of H.R. 1696, which would expedite the construction of the World War II memorial in Washington, D.C. I certainly want to thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), for his leadership in bringing this very important resolution to the floor today. I would also like to recognize the other World War II veterans who are still in the House of Representatives, including the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), who did serve in Guam during World War II. I especially the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), who also spent a significant amount of time in Guam during World War II.

The nation of Americans that fought and sacrificed during World War II deserve proper meaningful, and immediate recognition. A national monument should memorialize the spirit and the sacrifice and the unit of the American people in what was a chaotic and challenging time in world history and after several years of planning, organization, massive public input, and creative efforts by various groups, this... resolution seeks to make this monument a reality.

Time is against us, as has been already pointed out, as the veterans of World War II are dying at a rate that exceeds 1,000 every day; and if we do not act quickly, we risk losing the opportunity to finally ensure proper remembrance for those who made the ultimate sacrifice for our Nation and indeed preserved the Nation. It is one of the great monuments, when we look at what has happened on the mall, that we have the Washington Monument, which in a sense honors the founding of this Nation; and we look at the Lincoln Memorial, which preserves the national division from within.

We have in this memorial testimony to preserving the Nation in the face of challenges from abroad. So it is entirely fitting and proper that as we go through the sequence of American history, we take the time to honor those important events which this Nation experienced and in which this Nation thrived.

The World War II memorial will be discussed mostly in the sense of what happened during the battles of World War II, and I hope to make my own contribution. But we should always be mindful as well that World War II represented the maturation of our country as a world power, which has continued to the present. It is more than simply the battles of World War II; it is the way we shaped and reshaped the destiny of not only our Nation and the years subsequent to it, but indeed the entire world.

My own part in this memorial was to try to bring recognition to the people of Guam who experienced a terrible occupation during World War II as the only American territory with civilians still present who experienced occupation during World War II, and the Chamorros, who were American nationals at the time and remained steadfastly loyal to the United States, and this resistance to conquer only exacerbated the brutality which they experienced. So for the people of Guam, this has a very special significance as well.

One of the immediate challenges that we faced in trying to deal with the memorial was that there were an anticipated 50 pillars, each loosely reflecting each one of the 50 States. And one of the lessons that we tried to work with as the delay dragged on and the public input was to finally expand the number to 56 so that indeed all States and territories would be included in the commemoration of World War II. I believe that the people of Guam are not only grateful, as they have shown this recognition and attention. The people of Guam not only suffered the indignities of a Japanese occupation. Hundreds were executed and many, many more died as a result of the battle, as a result of deprivation.

One of the biggest holidays in Guam, even today, is July 21, which commemorates the landing of the U.S. Marines on July 21, 1944, which commemorates and celebrates the arrival of their fellow Americans to free the island from the hands of the Japanese and, more importantly, to cement a very strong relationship which exists to this day.

So this is a monument in which it is in the right place. I can think of no better place for it to be. Because when one comes to the Nation's capital, the whole Nation's history should be before us; and it would be a great testimony to the World War II veterans.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today in strong support of this measure. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1696 sets the record straight on the construction of the national World War II memorial here in our Nation’s capital, and I urge my colleagues to join in lending their support to this legislation. I commend the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. VANN) for his long-term diligent efforts to bring this measure to fruition.

This legislation states that the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, NEPA, the Commemorative Works Act, and any other laws pertaining to the siting and design of the memorial, have been fully met.

This measure allows the American Battle Monuments Commission to proceed expeditiously with construction of this long overdue veterans memorial to our World War II veterans at the dedicated Rainbow Pool site.

Moreover, the measure mandates that the decision to construct this memorial at the Rainbow Pool site and decisions regarding the design of the memorial are final and conclusive and should not be subject to any further administrative or judicial review.

Mr. Speaker, despite being authorized by Congress 8 years ago and having broken ground last year, which I was pleased to participate in, the construction of the World War II memorial has been delayed indefinitely. The decisions on location of the memorial and on its design were the subject of an open and dedicated process that included 22 public hearings over the past 5 years.

Despite these extensive reviews, there remains a small but vocal opposition that is prepared to block construction of the memorial on the Mall at all costs. The majority rule and the democratic process apparently means nothing to many of those opposed to the memorial, some of whom have succeeded in blocking construction with a pending lawsuit and a minor procedural issue.

The problem, Mr. Speaker, is that these petty delays will deprive hundreds of thousands of veterans of the opportunity to ever review the memorial. Only 0.5 million of the 16 million veterans who served in the Second World War remain with us, and we lose, as it has been indicated earlier today, 1,100 World War II veterans each and every day.

Mr. Speaker, I take offense at this small-minded opposition who want to block construction at all costs. What they forget is that it was the contributions of those who fought in World War II that permits them to freely voice their obstructionist views.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me say that the opposition has had ample time to speak. When subjected to a democratic vote, the location and design of the memorial was approved. It is now over time, long overdue to move forward with the construction of this important memorial for our World War II veterans.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER).

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, we have all been here this afternoon talking about honoring the World War II veterans, the greatest generation. We have all talked about how long it has taken to honor these veterans, how many have died, even in the planning process.

Mr. Speaker, there is one group of veterans of World War II that has waited 55 years to be honored. This Congress can proceed to do so. The previous speaker, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), and I have introduced legislation called the “Filipino Veterans Equity Act.”

In 1941, this country drafted all of the regular and irregular forces of the Philippine army and guerilla units. They fought in World War II. They fought in World War II. They held up the advance of the Japanese army. They surrendered with our forces at Bataan, suffered through the Bataan Death March, bravely defended our last forces at Corregidor. They stopped the Japanese timetable for many, many months, allowing us to reorganize the MacArthur time eventually to return and take back the Philippines.

Yet, in 1946 this country, this Congress in 1946, decided to take away all the veterans’ benefits that were promised to these brave heroes of World War II. It has been 55 years, Mr. Speaker, since that action was taken. It is time to restore the honor and dignity of the Filipino veterans. It is time to give them back the honor and the benefits that we promised but just took away.

Mr. Speaker, let us today take honor of our World War II heroes. We talk today about the freedom that they have given us and our Nation. As we talk about more than 1,000 people per day. How much more can they wait?

8 years. Almost 3.4 million World War II veterans have died. With each passing day, over 1,000 more veterans die, men and women who deserve this memorial who will never see it. As this process drags on, we lose 30,000 more each month and 400,000 a year. We simply have to get construction started and completed on this memorial. I want to add that this bill is not something we are trying to ramrod through at the last minute; quite to the contrary. There have been 22 public hearings, five approvals from the Commission on Fine Arts, and five approvals from the National Capital Planning Commission. There has been overwhelming national support, and over $170 million has been raised or pledged by over half a million citizens, hundreds of schools, and hundreds of veterans groups.

Mr. Speaker, all the requirements of both the National Environmental Policy Act and the Commemorative Works Act have been met. All of the approvals have been made. The site has been es-established and is in the proper, rightful, and fitting place. We must end the delays and get on with the construction of the memorial, which pays homage to the brave men and women who fought for our country and sacrificed their lives to keep this country and the world free.

Mr. Speaker, I am ashamed at the delay that has taken place. I strongly urge passage of H.R. 1696 so we can finally bring the stonewalling to an end and ensure that this deserving memorial will be constructed.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the chairman of our Committee on Veterans Affairs.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Committee on Veterans Affairs, I rise in very strong support of H.R. 1696, a bill to expedite the construction of the World War II memorial on the Washington Mall between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial. This artist's rendition to my left shows the dignity and grace that this memorial will provide and in true memory of those men and women who served so ably and so courageously on behalf of our country.

Mr. Speaker, as we know, the design and site for the memorial have been carefully studied. My good friend just a short time ago said the number of hearings. This has been an exhaustive process. It has been approved over a pe-period of some 6 years, a longer time than it took to win World War II.

The Allied victory in this greatest war of all time in the most important event of the 20th century.

The sad fact is, Mr. Speaker, that in the meantime, over the 8 years, almost 3.4 million World War II veterans have died. With each passing day, over 1,000 more veterans die, men and women who deserve this memorial who will never see it. As this process drags on, we lose 30,000 more each month and 400,000 a year. We simply have to get construction started and completed on this memorial.

I want to add that this bill is not something we are trying to ramrod through at the last minute; quite to the contrary. There have been 22 public hearings, five approvals from the Commission on Fine Arts, and five approvals from the National Capital Planning Commission. There has been overwhelming national support, and over $170 million has been raised or pledged by over half a million citizens, hundreds of schools, and hundreds of veterans groups.

Mr. Speaker, all the requirements of both the National Environmental Policy Act and the Commemorative Works Act have been met. All of the approvals have been made. The site has been es-established and is in the proper, rightful, and fitting place. We must end the delays and get on with the construction of the memorial, which pays homage to the brave men and women who fought for our country and sacrificed their lives to keep this country and the world free.

Mr. Speaker, I am ashamed at the delay that has taken place. I strongly have debated this bill for about 50 minutes. Sadly to say, Mr. Speaker, in that time, another 45 World War II veterans have passed away.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1696. This legislation will expedite the construction of the already-approved World War II Memorial on the Mall in Washington, DC.

In short, World War II veterans have waited long enough. When the long dark shadows of aggression appeared and threatened to cloak liberty, it was the World War II veterans that ensured liberty, freedom and the rule of law. It is time that all Americans express the gratitude and admiration that our nation’s World War II veterans rightly deserve.

Our World War II veterans are truly special. While many have served this great nation in varying capacities, it is the World War II generation that ultimately changed the course of history.

In return, this Congress must ensure the United States government remains steadfast in its support of this generation of World War II veterans and their families a memorial that they so richly deserve. We must act now.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 1696, legislation to fast-track the Construction of the World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C. This bill is necessary to accomplish an imperial and crucial element of time; time that is running out for many veterans. Every day, we lose more than 1,000 World War II veterans. Today, less than 6 million remain alive.

The intent of the World War II Memorial is to honor the 16 million Americans who served in uniform during the war, the more than 400,000 who gave their lives, and the millions who supported the war effort on the homefront. World War II was a point of transition in American history, a point at which America’s adolescence ended and a mature American mission emerged. This mission, as defined by President Franklin Roosevelt’s Four Freedoms, was a call to all Americans to work to end tyranny and poverty wherever it is found.

World War II also marked a time of rapid advancement in America. In order to meet the material needs of the worldwide war effort, America’s factories manufactured goods at an astronomical rate. To sustain this level of production while so many American men were putting on uniforms and going off to war, women entered the workforce in mass numbers for the first time. This forever changed the face of American industry, while also changing the way many women saw themselves and their role in American society.

The benefits provided to returning veterans, including financial assistance for education and home purchases, allowed many Americans to attain a level of freedom and independence that was not even imagined before the war. The Montgomery GI Bill provided countless veterans with a college education. In many cases, these veterans were the first in their families to go to college.

Above all, World War II was the moment in history when the United States helped save the world from fascism and tyranny. And, as Senator Bob Dole said, ‘It is time to thank the World War II veterans for doing what they believed was their duty—to help their country save the world. We must build a monument to bear them witness. Witness to young men who, armed with courage, liberated whole con-ments from tyranny. Witness to young soldiers who willingly died for a future they would never see.’

As a testament to the urgency of this matter, I read in today’s Washington Post the obituary of Barbara Lazarsky. During World War II, Ms. Lazarsky was one of the Women Air Force Service Pilots. She contributed to the war effort by ferrying planes across the United States so that men were free for combat overseas. When the WASP program was disbanded after the war, Mrs. Lazarsky became an aircraft accident analyst for the Air Transport Command. In 1947, she became a military and air attaché in India. Her recent death demonstrates the necessity of expediting the construction of the World War II Memorial.

This World War II Memorial honors those who served, and those who gave the ‘last full measure of devotion,’ while also commemorating the indelible mark left on American society. It is time to create a lasting monument to the legacy of those who gave so much and asked for so little. While we may disagree on the style and memorials, we all agree on the moral imperative to honor those who served their country in its hour of need.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1696.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1696, legislation that would expedite the construction of the World War II Memorial at the expense of protecting our National Mall. I inadvertently voted in support of this legislation earlier today. While I believe it is important to recognize the important contributions and sacrifices that our fighting men and women made in the turning event in world history, I do not support legislation that would do irrevocable harm to the World War II Memorial itself and to the national mall. If any precious national treasure deserves protection from Congress, it is the National Mall. H.R. 1696 would eliminate indispensable oversight for the largest and most significant memorial on the Mall since the Lincoln Memorial was constructed almost 80 years ago.

I oppose this legislation because not only is it unnecessary, but its provisions could seriously undermine the unique and surrounding cultural and historical landmarks of the city. Congress should not promote legislation that would eliminate or reduce oversight on already agreed to provisions that the City and National Planning Commission have developed. Such critical provisions not addressed by this bill include not allowing contaminated groundwater to be pumped into the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay, ensuring the structural integrity of the Washington Monument, and providing tourists with the ability to appreciate this Memorial and the Mall without suffering severe traffic congestion.

Congress should let the National Planning Commission deal with building the Memorial in a more appropriate manner, one that is already underway and which befits the important legacy that this Memorial is designed to honor. Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, it is essential that future generations always remember the sacrifices for freedom made by the World War II generation. A tribute to the men and women who served in the war, both overseas and on the home front is long overdue. It’s for this reason that I’m working to expedite construction of the memorial and why I will vote with my colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives to pass legislation that directs work on the World War II Memorial begin as soon as possible.

The construction of the country’s first national memorial dedicated to all who served in the armed forces and Merchant Marine of the United States during World War II on the National Mall is a fitting tribute. I am disappointed by the efforts of those to delay construction of the World War II Memorial, but the real victims of the indefinite delay are the members of that generation, who now must wait even longer for it to be completed. It is a harsh reality, but of the 16 million who served in uniform during the war, it is estimated that only 5 million are still alive, and of whom, we lose 1,100 each day.

Throughout a lengthy, open and democratic approval process, the American people have expressed their overwhelming support for the construction of the National WWII Memorial on our nation’s mall. Hundreds of thousands of individual Americans, hundreds of corporations and foundations; dozens of civic, fraternal and professional organizations; state legislatures, and veterans organizations have joined the effort to say thank you to America’s WWII generation.

Each year, millions of visitors come to the nation’s capital to appreciate its monuments to our country’s founding fathers, great presidents, and places of government. Home to our nation’s cherished symbols of freedom, the memorial will beautifully complement the green vistas of the Mall and its existing monuments. Their story of the World War II generation is an inspiration for us all. Once completed, this memorial will be a visible and timeless reminder of what they did to protect freedom and democracy.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. Gibbons). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1696.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

COMMEMORATING DEDICATION AND SACRIFICES OF LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 116) commemorating the dedication and sacrifices of the men and women of the United States who were killed or disabled while serving as law enforcement officers, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. Res. 116

Whereas the well-being of all citizens of the United States is protected and enhanced as a direct result of the vigilance and dedication of law enforcement personnel;
Whereas more than 700,000 law enforcement officers, both men and women, at great risk to their personal safety, serve their fellow citizens as guardians of peace;

Whereas these peace officers are on the front line in preserving the right of the children of the United States to receive an education in a crime-free environment, a right that is too often threatened by the insidious fear caused by violence in schools;

Whereas 151 peace officers lost their lives in the line of duty in 2000, and a total of nearly 15,000 men and women serving as peace officers have made that supreme sacrifice;

Whereas every year, 1 in 9 peace officers is assaulted, 1 in 25 is murdered, and 1 in 4,400 is killed in the line of duty; and

Whereas on May 15, 2001, more than 15,000 peace officers are expected to gather in the Nation’s Capital to join with the families of their recently fallen comrades to honor those comrades and all others who went before them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that—

(1) all peace officers slain in the line of duty should be honored and recognized; and

(2) the President should issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to honor and recognize such officers with appropriate ceremonies and respect.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BART of Georgia). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER).

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Res. 116, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

( Mr. OTTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the House consider H. Res. 116, legislation introduced by the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFFLEY), my colleague.

This rule commemorates the dedication and the sacrifice of the men and women of the United States who were killed or disabled while serving as law enforcement officers. By adopting H. Res. 116, the House will express its belief that all peace officers slain in the line of duty should be honored and recognized.

Further, Mr. Speaker, this resolution urges the President of the United States to proclaim this day calling on all Americans to honor and recognize such officers with appropriate ceremonies and respect.

Mr. Speaker, every day more than 700,000 law enforcement officers risk their lives and their safety to protect us. They patrol the most dangerous streets, and they deal with the most violent elements of our society. Increasingly, law enforcement officers are also called upon to preserve the right of our children to receive an education. They then pay a high price to defend all of our liberties.

As the resolution states, Mr. Speaker, 1 in 9 peace officers are assaulted every year; 1 in 25 are injured; and, even more sadly, 1 in 4,400 are killed in the line of duty.

In my own great State of Idaho, Mr. Speaker, we have lost 56 brave men and women in uniform who were protecting our families and our friends and our neighbors.

These, all of them, are heroes and they have put their lives at risk, put their families in danger, and have done something remarkable that we do not see too often today: They put society’s safety ahead of their own.

Mr. Speaker, on June 17, 1988, Officer Linda Huff, an Idaho State Police Officer, was shot in the parking lot of her patrol station while walking to her car. The assailant fired 17 rounds from a high-powered hand weapon at point-blank range. She was able to return fire and injured her assailant before dying.

The injuries Trooper Huff inflicted on her assailant led to his eventual arrest. More recently, on January 3 of 2001, two more peacekeeping Idahoans lost their lives while serving a search warrant. Corporals Anderson and Moulsion were both wearing bulletproof vests when they were met with gunfire from the suspect inside the home. Sadly, not only are these men and women protecting us; in that process, they have become targets themselves by the criminals.

Over 15,000 officers gather at our Nation’s Capitol today to join with the families of these recently fallen comrades and recognize the supreme sacrifice that so many others have made for our country. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (duly constituted and assembled), two-thirds of all its Members being present,

That the House of Representatives—

(1) recognizes the great sacrifices made by our law enforcement officers and employees, including the last officer killed in the line of duty; and

(2) the President should issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to honor and recognize such officers with appropriate ceremonies and respect.

The President, in his proclamation, shall—

(a) recognize such officers with appropriate ceremonies and respect;

(b) authorize the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund to conduct a national outreach campaign to commemorate law enforcement officers and employees;

(c) prescribe such other methods of recognition as the President deems appropriate;

(d) authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare such processions, demonstrations, or other patriotic displays as he may deem proper;

(e) call upon the Governors of the States to order the display of flags at half-staff for the period of the observance of Peace Officers Memorial Day; and

(f) make such further arrangements as the President deems advisable.

The President shall issue the proclamation not later than May 15, 2001.

The President shall further proclaim Peace Officers Memorial Day to be observed on May 15, 2001.

The President shall order the display of flags at half-staff on Peace Officers Memorial Day.

The President shall also proclaim May 15 as Peace Officers Memorial Day, and it is fitting that this resolution, honoring the men and women of this country who were killed or disabled while serving as law enforcement officers, be brought before this body today.

According to the National Crime Victimization Survey conducted by the Bureau of Justice Statistics in 1997, there were 31.3 million crimes committed in the United States, an average of one crime every second. That is how often law enforcement officers put their lives on the line; every second of every hour they are on duty protecting our country and our people.

Mr. Speaker, we have lost 56 brave men and women in uniform who were protecting our families and our friends and our neighbors. Since that time, more than 15,000 officers have been killed in the line of duty, and today roughly 740,000 officers continue to put their lives on the line for the safety and protection of others.

May 15 is Peace Officers Memorial Day, and it is fitting that this resolution, honoring the men and women of this country who were killed or disabled while serving as law enforcement officers, be brought before this body today.

The memorial honors Federal, State and local law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty and recognizes the service and sacrifice of all officers.

Completed and dedicated in 1991, the memorial, which is located here in Washington, D.C., has the names of more than 15,000 officers who have been killed in the line of duty inscribed on its blue-gray marble walls.

The names of seven fallen officers from Illinois were added to the memorial last past Sunday. Of these, Roy Costello, John Kearney, and Alane Stoffregen were from the Chicago Police Department.

Their watch over the city ended at various times: Mr. Costello in 1945; Mr. Kearney in 1969; and Ms. Stoffregen last year. But they served one common purpose: to keep the district that I represent safe.

Mr. Speaker, I salute them and those that serve today for their dedication and commitment.

Since 1854, a total of 417 Chicago police officers have lost their lives while serving our communities. For 40 years, the Chicago Police have held the St. Jude parade to honor fallen police officers of the previous year. More than 8,000 participants, including law enforcement officers and employees, marched the streets of Chicago.

This year’s march honored 30 fallen officers, including the last officer killed in action, James Camp, who was shot while investigating a car theft.

Soon a museum will be built near the memorial to tell the story of law enforcement’s proud history and to serve

Mr. Speaker, the first recorded law enforcement fatality in the performance of duty in this country occurred on May 17, 1792. The officer, Isaac Smith, a sheriff’s deputy in New York City, was shot to death while attempting to make an arrest.

The courage and sacrifice displayed by our law enforcement officers is being honored by Congress through the establishment of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial. This museum will ensure the stories of heroes and sacrifice of these police officers are always remembered.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage all Members to support this resolution to offer its vote, first, in appreciation to the fallen heroes, and, second, as a vote of confidence for those who still today serve.

This House should make plain its appreciation for the critical and often unappreciated sacrifices these men and women make in preserving the peace.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. DAVIS of Illinois asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFFLEY) for introducing this resolution honoring our law enforcement personnel.
as a research repository to promote law enforcement safety.

The memorial, the future museum, and this resolution will ensure that the heroism and sacrifice law enforcement officials make every day will be remembered and revered, so I would urge all Members to give support to this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. HEFFLEY). Mr. HEFFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER) for yielding the time to me.

Mr. Speaker, law enforcement officials from around the country have come in these last few days and today to Washington, D.C. to commemorate and honor fellow peace officers slain in the line of duty.

The National Peace Officers Memorial serves as a solemn reminder of the sacrifice and commitment to safety that police officers make on our behalf. The National Peace Officer Memorial Resolution, H.R. 116, which is cosponsored by 81 of our colleagues, expresses the gratitude of the House of Representatives for the work that these officers perform.

Law enforcement officers face unprecedented risks while protecting our communities and our freedoms. Today over 700,000 men and women place their lives at risk to serve as protectors of law and order.

Through U.S. history, more than 15,000 men and women serving as peace officers have sacrificed their life for their Nation and community. In the year 2000 alone, 151 Federal, State and local law enforcement officers gave their lives in the line of duty. To date, 54 have died in 2001; 3 of these 54 come from my home State of Colorado.

Law enforcement officers face enormous risks while protecting our neighborhoods, our freeways, our freeways; yet there is often an attitude of indifference. Every community has been impacted by the work of officers, yet most citizens have little direct contact with peace officers. Therefore, the sacrifices of these brave Americans go unnoticed and often underappreciated.

Mr. Speaker, without the service of peace officers, our society is left unproctected. Law enforcement officers serve to be recognized and honored for their work, their dedication, their sacrifice, and, yes, Mr. Speaker, their bravery in defense of our society.

I hope my colleagues will join me in expressing our appreciation to all peace officers and paying tribute to those slain in the line of duty and to their surviving families by supporting H. Res. 116.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK), one who knows exactly what it means and what it is like to be a law enforcement officer. Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) for yielding the time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support this resolution in honor of law enforcement officers who were killed or disabled in the line of duty. I want to thank the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFFLEY) for sponsoring this important legislation and to all of those who cosponsored it to make it a reality here today.

Before coming to Congress in 1993, I served as a police officer for 12 years, both as a city police officer and as a Michigan State trooper. I have known personally too many officers who have been disabled or who have given their lives for the people they serve.

Each of us may understand the importance of the House of Representatives in undertaking this resolution to honor law enforcement officers who have made the ultimate sacrifice. In this past year it has been 151 men and women.

We do not forget those officers who died in previous years. Mr. Speaker, in my case, I specifically think back about the funerals and where I was called to the foreman, Darrell Rantanen of the Gladstone Post back in 1974, or Craig Scott of the Lansing Post who died in 1983. Those officers did doing their job just like law enforcement offices do day in, day out.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, probably each one of us can name an officer that was killed in the line of duty either in our home districts or even here in the Capitol, which happened in 1998 with the deaths of Capitol Police Officers Chestnut and Gibson.

We do not forget the extreme sacrifice our Nation’s law enforcement and public safety officers make to our communities and to the Nation every day.

This legislation, as simple as it is, recognizes the very important value our government places on the work of the men and women who serve us each day. It is important that we take this step this week to show our respect and recognition for the jobs that police officers do every day, in every town, in every township, and every county in America.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all of my colleagues to join with me in support of this resolution. It is the least we can do for those who work with us and for work for us every day in this great Nation.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply say that when one gives of themselves and gives of their life, they have given the best that they have had to give, and I would urge support for this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFFLEY) for introducing this important piece of legislation and for his efforts to bring it to the floor and see it through its passage. I wanted to thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), of the Committee on Government Reform, and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH), chairman of the Subcommittee on Civil Service and Agency Organization, and the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS), ranking members, for working expeditiously for bringing this resolution to the floor.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me just remind everyone that it is our law enforcement officers that provide for the construction of the community, provide for its safety. They are, indeed, community builders. It reminds me of a poem that I learned many years ago, and I should like to offer it in closing, Mr. Speaker.

It goes like this: "I saw a group of men in my hometown. I saw a group of men tearing a building down. With a heave and a hoe and a mighty yell, they swung a beam, and a side wall fell. And I thought to myself, are these men skilled, you know the kind that you’d hire if you wanted to build?" He said, 'Why no indeed. To tear down a building, common labor is all I need. With common labor, I can tear down in a day or two what it took a builder 10 years to do.' So I thought to myself as I walked away, which of these rules am I going to play?"

Mr. Speaker, men and women in law enforcement and in that that build our communities deserve the vote, and I urge the Members to provide their vote and their support.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution and join Americans across the country today in honoring those officers who have died or who were disabled in the line of duty. South Texans appreciate those men and women who walk that thin blue line every day.

As a former law enforcement officer, I have an intimate understanding of situations that can be dangerous or dangerous. The men and women who police our communities walk that line that separates the good guys from the bad guys. The work we ask our police officers to do is dangerous, dirty duty.

What people do not understand very often is that it is the inherent risk of what we might have to do that makes law enforcement so dangerous. We see the best and worst of our fellow human beings. It is not our job to judge them. That is reserved judge and jury. Our job is merely to treat everyone equally.

Enforcing the law is a hard job. When people do something wrong, their first instinct is to find fault with the person who catches them. So being the guardian of our laws is never a simple endeavor. But in the end, it is the enforcement of protecting our neighborhoods and families that makes walking that line worth all the danger and criticism. It is the laughter of safe children, or the gratitude of someone whose life or property we protect, that makes doing this job enormously satisfying.

There are several South Texans who will be honored this week. Officers who made the supreme sacrifice include: Enrique L. Carrizalez, Alfred Walter Basler, David Rucker, Susan Lynn Rodriguez, Ricardo Guillermo Salinas, Joseph Moon, Juan Prieto, Dan Bock, Roy Smith, John Sartain, and Ruben Almanza. These people are examples of the message set forth by Jesus Christ in John 15:13: “Greater love hath no one than this, than to lay down one’s life for his friends.”

Let us not forget the sacrifice made on our behalf right here in this building; our own Capital Police Officers Chestnut and Gibson died defending Members of Congress and the public while on duty. The House of Representatives joins families and communities across the nation to remember those members of the force who are no longer with us, who made the supreme sacrifice in the line of duty.

For the sacrifices to ensure the rule of law, the officers we honor today and their families have the eternal gratitude and respect. I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on H. Res. 116.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 116, to acknowledge our fallen heroes, and express our sorrow and respect for the dangerous job of our brave law enforcement officers. It is fitting that we acknowledge and commend the courage and dedication shown by our law enforcement officers who have given their lives for our fellow citizens.

Mr. Speaker, sadly in the past year, 150 law enforcement officers gave their lives in the performance of their duty. In my own district, although we have been fortunate not to have lost officers in the line of duty in the past year, I pause to remember and recognize Randy Stevens, Steven Hodge, Richard Callwood, Dexter Mardenbourough, Wilbur Francis, Allen William, and Patrick Sweeney who were all killed as they sought to keep the streets and communities of the Virgin Islands safe.

Mr. Speaker, it was President Kennedy, who approved House Joint Resolution 730 in October 1962, which proclaimed May 15 of each year as Peace Officers Memorial Day and the Week of May 15th Police Week. Our Police Officers are the frontliners of our communities because they bravely protect us from mortal dangers, in some cases at the cost of their own lives. For that we owe them all our deepest gratitude and respect. I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on H. Res. 116.

Mrs. MC CARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, with the support and gratitude, but also they deserve protection under the law. That is why I cosponsored H.R. 218, the Community Protection Act. This bill, supported by police nationwide, allows law enforcement officers to carry concealed weapons. They need this as criminals know who the officers are, who their families are and where they live. Very simply: law enforcement officers need protection both on and off duty.

When law enforcement officers begin their day, the risk and danger are unknown. I cannot imagine a more unsettling feeling for both the officer and his or her family. Therefore, I honor law enforcement officers nationwide, particularly those who serve Long Island.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 116, honoring law enforcement officers who have been killed or disabled in the line of duty. Often, the immeasurable contributions of our nation’s law enforcement officers are unnoticed. The establishment of a Peace Officers Memorial Day would serve as a powerful tribute to slain officers as well as to those who continue to risk their lives each day to make our communities safe.

In one of the communities I represent, Glendale, California, four police officers and one sheriff’s deputy have been killed in the line of duty. Many more have suffered work-related injuries and illnesses that have contributed to early deaths. This ultimate sacrifice deserves honorable recognition.

One of these fallen heroes is Charles A. Lazzaretto, a Glendale Police Officer, who was killed in the line of duty only four years ago. Chuck was born on October 5, 1966 and spent his early childhood living with his family in the California communities of Walnut and Montebello, in the Lazzaretto family moved to Burbank where his father served as city manager. While attending Glendale Community College in the mid-1980s, Chuck was appointed as a campus public safety officer and subsequently promoted to the rank of sergeant. In 1988 he was transferred for the United States marine Corps Reserves and attended Officer Candidate School.

Chuck joined the Glendale Police Department on May 3, 1987 where he was appointed as a reserve police officer. In 1991, he received the rank of officer, working assignments in the juvenile, burglary, auto theft, arson, and robbery/homicide areas. Chuck’s favorite pastime was spending time with his family. He often spoke of his love for his wife and two sons, Andrew and Matthew, as well as his parents and three brothers. Chuck was a community leader and family role model.

Police officers touch the lives of so many Americans. It is a long overdue tribute that we remember and recognize law enforcement officers and their families for their service.

One of these fallen heroes is Charles A. Lazzaretto, a Glendale Police Officer, who was killed in the line of duty only four years ago. Chuck was born on October 5, 1966 and spent his early childhood living with his family in the California communities of Walnut and Montebello, in the Lazzaretto family moved to Burbank where his father served as city manager. While attending Glendale Community College in the mid-1980s, Chuck was appointed as a campus public safety officer and subsequently promoted to the rank of sergeant. In 1988 he was transferred for the United States marine Corps Reserves and attended Officer Candidate School.

Chuck joined the Glendale Police Department on May 3, 1987 where he was appointed as a reserve police officer. In 1991, he received the rank of officer, working assignments in the juvenile, burglary, auto theft, arson, and robbery/homicide areas. Chuck’s favorite pastime was spending time with his family. He often spoke of his love for his wife and two sons, Andrew and Matthew, as well as his parents and three brothers. Chuck was a community leader and family role model.

FALLEN HERO SURVIVOR BENEFIT FAIRNESS ACT OF 2001

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1727) to amend the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 to provide for consistent treatment of survivor benefits for public safety officers killed in the line of duty, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 1727
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Fallen Hero Survivor Benefit Fairness Act of 2001.”

SEC. 2. CONSISTENT TREATMENT OF SURVIVOR BENEFITS FOR PUBLIC SAFETY OFFICERS KILLED IN THE LINE OF DUTY.

Subsection (b) of section 1528 of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 (Public Law 105–34) is amended by striking the period and inserting “, and to amounts received in taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001, with respect to individuals dying on or before December 31, 1996.”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNULTY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD).

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot be considering this important legislation on a more appropriate day. Today is Peace Officers Memorial Day. Each year, on May 15, America honors the men and women in law enforcement who have given their lives to keep the American people safe in their communities and on their streets. Law enforcement officers in the line of duty.

Mr. Speaker, with the support and gratitude, but also they deserve protection under the law. That is why I cosponsored H.R. 218, the Community Protection Act. This bill, supported by police nationwide, allows law enforcement officers to carry concealed weapons. They need this as criminals know who the officers are, who their families are and where they live. Very simply: law enforcement officers need protection both on and off duty.

Under present law, a gross inequity exists because survivor benefits are treated differently, depending on when the officer was killed. This bill, Mr. Speaker, includes law enforcement officers, firefighters, rescue squads, ambulance crews and employees working in disaster or emergency areas.

Under present law, a gross inequity exists because survivor benefits are treated differently, depending on when the officer was killed. This bill, Mr. Speaker, includes law enforcement officers, firefighters, rescue squads, ambulance crews and employees working in disaster or emergency areas.

The Fallen Hero Survivor Benefit Fairness Act provides tax-free benefits to families of all public safety officers killed in the line of duty regardless of when the officer was killed. This bill, Mr. Speaker, includes law enforcement officers, firefighters, rescue squads, ambulance crews and employees working in disaster or emergency areas.

because of revenue constraints. Pursuant to an amendment to that legislation offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. THURMAN) and me, families of officers killed in the line of duty became eligible to receive survivor benefits tax free for the first time.

Unfortunately, however, because of the revenue limitations at the time, the tax-free benefits were limited to officers killed after December 31, 1996. As Mr. Speaker, families of our law enforcement heroes, our fallen heroes, are being treated differently by the Tax Code depending on when the officer was killed. I think all of us in this body and all Americans agree that it is absolutely unconscionable to discriminate against survivors of fallen officers simply because their husband, wife, or parent officer died before 1997.

The bill before us today is based on an amendment I offered 2 years ago in the Committee on Ways and Means. That provision passed both the House and Senate, but unfortunately the President at the time vetoed the larger bill.

I want to express my gratitude to the gentleman from California (Chairman THOMAS) for expediting H.R. 1727 in the Committee on Ways and Means. I want to also thank bipartisan members of the committee who joined me in sponsoring this bill and to the other sponsors, especially the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU), the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. THURMAN), and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK), who have worked on this issue over the years.

I am also grateful to the more than 20 State and national law enforcement organizations who sent letters in support of this important legislation. But most of all, Mr. Speaker, I am eternally grateful to the fallen heroes and their families we honor today.

As cochair of the Congressional Law Enforcement Caucus, I understand the risks police officers face every day in harm’s way. As they patrol our streets and communities safe.

Each year an average of 62,000 assaults are committed against peace officers, resulting in more than 21,000 injured officers. On the average, it was just said by the previous speakers, an officer is killed every 57 hours in America. A large percentage of peace and police officers gave their lives, which represents, by the way, a 12 percent increase in police fatalities over the previous year.

The average age of slain peace officers is only 38 years. Seventy-two percent of these officers were married, and the largest percentage had young children.

Of course the financial hardship on these families can be devastating on top of dealing with an unbearably painful loss.

So, Mr. Speaker, let me conclude by saying this legislation, H.R. 1727, is long overdue. Two years ago, a memorial service for fallen police officers was held here at the Capitol. Flags on all Federal buildings are currently flying at half-staff. It is time to honor our fallen heroes with deeds as well as words.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill which will ensure that all families, all families of slain police officers receive survivor benefits tax free, regardless of when the officers were killed. It is the very least we can do for families of our fallen heroes who have made the ultimate sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today H.R. 1727 comes to the House with strong bipartisan support. This bill was approved by the Committee on Ways and Means by unanimous vote. I strongly support this legislation.

H.R. 1727 would bring fairness to our Tax Code for a small but very special group of taxpayers. The bill would extend uniform tax treatment to certain payments received by the surviving spouse or children of a public safety officer killed in the line of duty. This legislation would extend current-law tax-free treatment to amounts paid under a survivor annuity with respect to a public safety officer killed in the line of duty before December 31, 1996 with respect to payments received after December 31 in the year 2001.

The Tax Relief Act of 1997 provided that amounts paid pursuant to a survivor annuity with respect to public safety officers who were killed in the line of duty after December 31, 1996 from the income of the officer’s surviving spouse or children if the officer’s death occurred on or after December 31, 1996. The annuity must be provided under a government plan.

For this purpose, public safety officers include, not only law enforcement officers, but also firefighters, rescue squad members, or ambulance crews.

As demonstrated under present law, this tax treatment is provided for amounts with respect to public safety officers who lose their lives due to risks inherent in their jobs. These officers risked their lives on a daily basis to protect our families and our communities. This sacrifice obviously is shared by their families.

Under H.R. 1727, we are acknowledging that, when a public safety officer is killed in the line of duty, the officer’s family has paid the ultimate sacrifice. The sacrifice is no less great because this officer was killed before December 31, 1996.

This is why H.R. 1727 extends current law to families of all officers killed in the line of duty without regard to date of death. All surviving spouses and all children of public safety officers killed in the line of duty should receive the same tax treatment.

H.R. 1727 provides that all payments received under a survivor annuity as prescribed above after December 31, 2001 would be excluded from income.

I urge all of my colleagues to support H.R. 1727 in the name of all of those who put their lives on the line for us 365 days a year.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU), an important cosponsor of this legislation, a strong advocate to law enforcement, and a fellow member of the Law Enforcement Caucus.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to rise in support of the Fallen Hero Survivor Benefit Fairness Act. I want to begin by thanking the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD), who is chairman of the Law Enforcement Caucus and who has worked hard and sought to bring this important bill through the Committee on Ways and Means and to the floor.

As he and previous speakers have indicated, this legislation extends the tax-free treatment to the survivors of those law enforcement officers and public safety officers lost in the line of duty, not just for those lost after 1996. It makes good sense. It is fair. It is just.

Especially during a week when we honor law enforcement officers and those who have fallen in the line of duty, it is an important gesture, a step forward that gives them the financial security and the piece of mind they so justly deserve.

I introduced similar legislation 2 years ago with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) after sharing the stories with several families in New Hampshire that faced the consequences of having lost a loved one serving in the line of duty prior to 1996.

It is my pleasure to support the legislation, and it is a pleasure to step forward on a piece of legislation that has such a bipartisan commitment behind it. I thank my colleagues for their support.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK), a friend, a colleague, and a former police officer who himself put his life on the line for the folks in his community.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD), my colleague and cochair of the Law Enforcement Caucus, for his hard work on this resolution and the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU) and the gentlewoman from New York (Mr. McNULTY) and all the members of the Committee on Ways and Means.
Means for bringing this legislation to the point where we are today.

Public safety officers put their lives on the line every day to protect and serve the people of this country. Yet, unbelievably enough, until 1997, survivors benefits for public safety officers who died in the line of duty were subject to Federal income taxes. The families, loved ones had done so much for this country, and their spouses and children sacrifice as well, yet the Federal Government would tax the benefits they so need.

In 1997, as I attended the Police Officers Memorial, I was made aware of this injustice of taxing survivor benefits. Because of the quirk in the law, those law enforcement officers who were disabled, their benefits were not tax-exempt; yet those who died, their benefits were taxed by the Federal Government. So I spoke then with the co-chair of the Congressional Law Enforcement Caucus, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD), we spoke with the President, got the support of the administration; we worked with members of the Ways and Means, especially the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. THURMAN); and we moved legislation to try to correct this injustice. The Congressional Law Enforcement Caucus wholeheartedly supported it.

In 1997, Congress started to fix this serious problem. The Taxpayers Relief Act of 1997 provided that the survivor benefits of officers killed on or after December 31, 1996, would not be subject to taxation. However, we had budget constraints back then; and we could not extend this legislation to everyone. But we did not give up. These were not minor omissions. The bill left numerous deserving families without assistance.

I am pleased to report that through this legislation today, authored by my colleague, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD) and my co-chairman of the Congressional Law Enforcement Caucus, who has worked so hard on this issue, we now have this bill for passage before the House of Representatives. Today, we close this unfair loophole by ensuring that the survivor benefits of all officers, regardless of the date they perished, will be exempt from taxes.

We must provide for those families that have suffered the devastating loss of losing their loved ones to the call of duty. These families deserve our support when the unthinkable happens and their loved one is struck down. We have to look out for them, just as their husbands, their wives, their mothers, and fathers look out for us every day, risking their commitments to their families for the greater commitment they make to this country.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to simply say that in the name of basic tax fairness and on behalf of all of the survivors of the heroes who put their lives on the line and gave their lives for our communities, I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to again thank my co-chair of the Congressional Law Enforcement Caucus, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK), and the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNULTY), the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. THURMAN), and the 13 other Ways and Means colleagues who cosponsored this important legislation. I also want to thank the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU) again for his hard work on this issue and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, for expediting this legislation at my request.

This is the least we can do, Mr. Speaker, for our fallen law enforcement heroes and other public safety officers killed in the line of duty, to give all of the survivors of public safety officers who give their lives for our public safety the benefits regardless of when their officer relative was killed. So I urge Members to support this important legislation.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, current law unfairly divides our fallen heroes into two camps. Officers who sacrificed their lives after 1997 are granted the fair and reasonable recognition of allowing their families to draw survivor benefits without paying taxes on the benefits.

Society recognizes that officers who make the supreme sacrifice deserve to be treated in a special way through this provision, which is designed to express our gratitude to the surviving family members.

Unfortunately, this distinction does not currently apply to the surviving families of officers who fell before January 1987. The law discriminates against these law enforcement officers because it denies their families the right to draw their survivor’s benefits without taxes.

We need to treat all of our fallen officers equally. We should single out those brave officers who give their lives protecting society. We should demonstrate a special reverence for their demanding and dangerous work as law enforcement officers. Easing the burden on surviving family members is a fair and appropriate gesture to convey our thanks and respect. Members should show our appreciation by supporting this legislation.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to review and extend their remarks and include extraneous matter on H.R. 1727.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

FAIRNESS FOR FOSTER CARE FAMILIES ACT OF 2001

Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 586) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide that the exclusion from gross income for foster care payments shall also apply to payments by qualified placement agencies, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 586
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Fairness for Foster Care Families Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. EXCLUSION FOR FOSTER CARE PAYMENTS TO APPLY TO PAYMENTS BY QUALIFIED PLACEMENT AGENCIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘qualified foster care payment’ means any payment made pursuant to a foster care program of a State or political subdivision thereof—

(1) which is paid by—

(A) a State or political subdivision thereof, or

(B) a qualified foster care placement agency, and

(b) QUALIFIED FOSTER INDIVIDUALS TO INCLUDE INDIVIDUALS PLACED BY QUALIFIED PLACEMENT AGENCIES.—Subparagraph (B) of section 131(b)(2) of such Code (defining ‘qualified foster care individual’) is amended to read as follows:

(2) a qualified foster care placement agency;

(c) QUALIFIED Foster Care Placement Agency Defined.—Subsection (b) of section 131 of such Code is amended by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

(3) The term ‘qualified foster care placement agency’ means any placement agency which is licensed or certified by—

(A) a State or political subdivision thereof, or

(B) an entity designated by a State or political subdivision thereof,
Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is a straightforward bill which updates and simplifies the Tax Code as it relates to foster care families. Under current law, foster care families are given a tax exemption on the payments they receive through a state-run foster care program. The current law was enacted in 1986. The law recognizes that if you are willing to open your heart and home by participating in foster care, you should receive this exemption. It is that simple.

Over the years, however, States have changed the way foster care services are delivered and many are privatizing or contracting out some or all of their services. When this happens, and a private organization participates in the State program, the tax exemption for families becomes confusing and, in some cases, unfair. Specifically, the exclusion is dependent on a complicated analysis of three factors: the age of the foster individual, the type of entity that places the individual, and the source of payment.

If the payments are found not excludable because a private entity is participating in one or all of these factors, the foster care provider is then required to keep extensive records of every payment on behalf of the foster individual in order to qualify for the exclusion. As my colleagues can imagine, these rules are extremely confusing. In fact, many accountants have difficulty interpreting these rules for families; and as a result, families are discouraged from participating in foster care. This problem is created simply because current law is outdated and no longer reflects the changes States are making in their business practices.

Mr. Speaker, States should be encouraged to be innovative and responsible in their business practices; but more important, foster care families should not be penalized as a result. My bill, H.R. 586, simplifies current law to ensure that the exemption is there for all foster care families regardless of how their State foster care practices change and regardless of the age of the individual.

My bill recognizes the increasing role of private agencies in State foster care plans and also requires these agencies to be licensed and certified by the State in order to participate in a State foster care program.

Again, Mr. Speaker, my bill simplifies and provides fairness for the Tax Code for all foster care families, and I urge my colleagues' support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my friend, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LEWIS), in supporting H.R. 586, the Fairness to Foster Care Families Act of 1999. This bill would remove restrictions currently imposed on foster families whose payments are made by for-profit agencies or, in the case of foster individuals older than the age of 18, by a nonprofit agency.

This bill would extend this favorable tax treatment to any foster care payment made by an agency licensed or certified by the State. This would remove restrictions currently imposed on foster families whose payments are made by for-profit agencies or, in the case of foster individuals older than the age of 18, by non-profit agencies.

The impact of for-profit agencies in the child welfare system is uncertain. We need more information on how these for-profit agencies affect child well-being and on how common it is for States to contract with them to undertake certain major aspects of the placement and oversight of children in foster care. However, it does seem appropriate that we not penalize foster families when they receive foster care payments from private agencies with which a State has entered into a contract to administer parts of their foster care system. Furthermore, H.R. 586 recognizes that States also may contract with private agencies to place older, often disabled children with foster families.

This bill will not be a single simple answer to the problems faced by our foster care system, but it does take a small step to help some foster families. I strongly support H.R. 586, and I urge support from all my colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 586, the Foster Care Promotion Act. As the son of parents who welcomed 25 foster children into their family, I know firsthand the worth of the foster care system.

This bill would allow foster parents to exclude payments for foster children of any age placed by a non-governmental care agency from their taxable income. By subsidizing the cost of foster children, regardless of their age or the method in which they were placed, we will properly value the incredible work of foster parents everywhere.

Foster care should be a last resort for any child who requires a significant financial and emotional investment. Many foster children have been abused or neglected. Such treatment leaves indelible scars, which foster parents lovingly attempt to heal. We should not ask such generous individuals to give up their pocketbooks as well as their hearts.

All children need love and support. This bill takes an important step toward ensuring that government, to think of this bill as a tax bill; but it is really a bill about children and families.

So often youngsters in the classroom ask me where I got the best insight to serve as a Member of Congress. They expect me to talk about economics, classes or different classes I had in school. And I always answer that it is being the mother of six children. What I have learned is that families are the most enduring, important part of a child's life. It is the security that they begin life with and that they carry throughout life.

Some of our children in this country have not been blessed with a consistent family life. To our benefit, we have agencies that are becoming partners with our States to provide more children with better services and an even better chance of growing up in a foster family. Some of these children come from the most difficult circumstances, and it is not surprising that sometimes support systems have to be in place for these families. It is to our good fortune and to this country's good fortune and to our children's good fortune that we have so many of these agencies that are able to provide the comprehensive support services that families need. It is only reasonable that we make sure that our tax laws support these new evolving, important systems that allow children to have what is the most important thing in their life: a family.

And so this bill is not about taxes. It is about families, specifically foster families, and expanding the number and the opportunity and the differing looks that foster families often have as they serve each one of our unique children. God bless our children. How lucky we are to have the services of our foster parents, and this bill will help make sure that these services exist and expand for every child.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume; and in support of all of the foster children across this country and the families who care for them, I urge support for this bill.

CONCERNING PARTICIPATION OF TAIWAN IN WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 428) concerning the participation of Taiwan in the World Health Organization.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. CONCERNING THE PARTICIPATION OF TAIWAN IN THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION (WHO).

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Good health is important to every citizen of the world and access to the highest standards of health information and services is necessary to improve the public health.

(2) Direct and sustained participation in international health cooperation forums and programs is beneficial for all parts of the world, especially with today’s greater potential for the cross-border spread of various infectious diseases such as the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), tuberculosis, and malaria.

(3) Taiwan’s population of 23,500,000 people is larger than that of 3⁄4 of the member states already in the World Health Organization (WHO).

(4) Taiwan’s achievements in the field of health are substantial, including one of the highest life expectancy levels in Asia, maternal and infant mortality rates comparable to those of western countries, the eradication of such infectious diseases as cholera, smallpox, and the plague, the first eradicate polio and provide children with hepatitis B vaccinations.

(5) The United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and its Taiwan counterpart agencies have enjoyed close collaboration on a wide range of public health issues.

(6) In recent years Taiwan has expressed a willingness to assist financially and technically in international aid and health activities supported by the WHO.

(7) On January 14, 2001, an earthquake, registering between 7.5 and 7.9 on the Richter scale, struck Taiwan. In response, the Taiwanese government sent 2 rescue teams, consisting of 90 individuals specializing in firefighting, medicine, and civil engineering. The Taiwanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs also donated $200,000 in relief aid to the Salvadoran Government.

(8) The World Health Assembly has allowed observers to participate in the activities of the organization, including the Palestine Liberation Organization in 1974, the Order of Malta, and the Holy See in the early 1970s.

(9) The United Nations in the 1994 Taiwan Policy Review, declared its intention to support Taiwan’s participation in appropriate international organizations.

(10) Public Law 106-197 required the Secretary of State to submit a report to the Congress on efforts by the executive branch to support Taiwan’s participation in appropriate international organizations, in particular the WHO.

(b) PLAN.—The Secretary of State is authorized—

(1) to initiate a United States plan to endorse and obtain observer status for Taiwan at the annual week-long summit of the World Health Assembly in May 2001 in Geneva, Switzerland; and

(2) to instruct the United States delegation to Geneva to implement that plan.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 14 days after the date of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit a written report to the Congress in unclassified form containing the plan authorized under subsection (b).

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 428.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 428.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support this legislation which would authorize the administration to initiate a plan to endorse and obtain observer status for Taiwan in the World Health Organization during the May 2001 World Health Assembly in Geneva.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 428.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) for his good work on this issue. On May 20 of last year, Chen Shui-bian was sworn in as President of Taiwan. This was an historic event, the first major transfer of power between rival political parties in the history of this island model for the world.

Mature democracies like the United States take such political transitions for granted, but the peaceful exchange of power is a rare democratic legacy. Taiwan’s peaceful transfer of power between rival political parties in the island of Taiwan has evolved into a stable, prosperous nation governed by the rule of law. Taiwan’s 40-year journey toward democracy is a success story. We should acknowledge and reward that progress and celebrate it.

Mr. Speaker, to this end, I introduced H.R. 428, which would authorize our U.S. Department of State to initiate a plan to endorse and obtain observer status for Taiwan in this year’s World Health Assembly. Ninety-two of my colleagues have cosponsored this bill fostering Taiwan’s participation in the World Health Assembly. This is a modest step, but a meaningful one. Observer status in the WHO does not require membership, but instead the WHO, the Order of Malta, the Vatican, and Rotary International all have observer status in Geneva at the WHA, but passing this bill will be a significant victory for every Taiwanese citizen and for every American who cares about human rights.

Children and families suffer from the effects of inadequate health care, whether they live in Washington, Geneva, Beijing, or Taipei. In 1998, Taiwan suffered an outbreak of enterovirus 71, a potentially fatal disease that causes severe inflammation of muscle surrounding the brain, spinal cord, and heart.
Children are especially vulnera-ibly vulnerable to this highly contagious virus. Unfortunately, the Taiwanese doctors treating enterovirus 71 did not have access to the medical resources of the WHO. By the time the outbreak was under control, 70 Taiwanese children had died. Had Taiwan been permitted to draw on WHO expertise, these children could very well still be alive.

But as Taiwan benefits from participation in the WHO, so does the rest of the world. Taiwan, with a highly developed health care system, has made great advances in science and technology. Inclusion in WHO would allow American health officials better access to Taiwan's expertise, as much as the other way around.

Mr. Speaker, our government's tacit support for the status quo, our unwillingness to fight for Taiwan's participation in the World Health Organization, is not in any way justified. It is unfoun-dable. Infectious diseases do not respect politically driven distinctions or national borders. Infectious diseases criss. Recently, the administration decided to sell four Kidd-class destroyers to Taiwan, despite threats from the People's Republic of China. If our commitment as a Nation is strong enough to justify Taiwan's military defense with arms sales, it certainly is strong enough to justify supporting access to global health resources for Taiwan's 23.5 million people.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the strong support H.R. 428 has received from Members on both sides of the aisle, and look forward to the bill's passage today. I call on President Bush to do the right thing, to go to Geneva and fight for observer status for Taiwan at the World Health Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana
(Mr. Pence).

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 428. I thank the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Brown) for their excellent work on this measure.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this measure before the House will mark yet another triumph for the United States and Taiwan. For too long Taiwan has been denied the full benefits of paricipation in the World Health Organization and a dialogue with its member nations concerning public health policy.

Unfortunately, this absence has prevented the people of Taiwan and the members of the World Health Organization from the experiences of an emergning leader in East Asia. I am pleased that we will correct this oversight today.

Mr. Speaker, we have a moral duty to ensure that our neighbors have access to the same lifesaving information and technology that we enjoy in the United States. As one of the world's most densely populated regions, Taiwan has been significantly impacted by infectious diseases and matching the infant mortality rates of developed nations.
Yet work remains in areas such as food safety and the control of illegal drugs.

Mr. Speaker, the World Health Organization can help Taiwan in those ef-orts. I am encouraged by the prospects for all the World Health Organization's members, and I look forward to increased participation by Taiwan in world health events. Ultimately, the benefits to Taiwan are only as great as the WHO will be the children of Taiwan who will have better access to immunizations and preventive care.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to join me in this bipartisan effort in support of this bill.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, our government's tacit support for the WHO is in the best interests of Taiwan. Let me stress that arguably the greatest issue in the world today may well be disease control. What the WHO symbolizes is a people-oriented concern for control of disease. Taiwan should not be precluded from joining its ranks. If the
WHO will be the children of Taiwan who will have better access to immunizations and preventive care.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this strong bill is a step in the right direction. I urge support of it.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the House Resolution 428 to approve Taiwan participation in the World Health Organization.

Historically the United States and Taylor have maintained good relationship. Ever since its establishment in 1912 we have had substantive diplomatic and commercial ties. On prior to 1972 and its loss of membership in the WHO, Taiwan sent specialists to serve on WHO-supported international health projects in other member countries, and its experts held key positions in the
WHO. In recent years, the Taiwanese government has expressed a willingness to assist financially or technically in WHO-supported international aid and health activities, but it has been unable to render such assistance because it is unable to participate in the World Health Organization.

Taiwan's population of 23 million people is larger than those of many member states already in the WHO. Clearly, Taiwan and the world community could benefit by its participation in the WHO. I believe the United States should actively support Taiwan's memburship in the World Health Organization.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 428.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the initiative by the gentleman from Ohio, Congressman BROWN, concerning Taiwan's participation in the World Health Organization. I commend our committee's distinguished chairman, Mr. HYDE and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Caliifornia, Mr. LANTOS and the subcommittee chairmen and ranking minority members of the International Operations and Human Rights

In view of our close diplomatic ties and excellent health care program in Taiwan, I support House Resolution 428 to allow Taiwan to participate in the World Health Organization.

Mr. BLIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 428 which authorizes the United States Secretary of State to imple-mament a plan to endorse and obtain observer status for Taiwan at the annual summit of the World Health assembly (of the World Health Organization) this month in Geneva, Switzerland. Taiwan and its 23 million people should have appropriate and meaningful participation in the World Health Organization (WHO).

The WHO Constitution states that the "enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of health is one of the fundamental rights of every human being without distinction of race, religion, political belief, economic or social condition." Yet today, Taiwan is excluded from participation in the WHO because of political pressure from the People's Republic of China.

This means that the people of Taiwan cannot share in the WHO's vital resources and expertise. Taiwanese physicians and health officials are not allowed to attend WHO-organized forums and workshops regarding the latest techniques in the diagnosis, monitoring and control of diseases. Taiwanese medical experts do not have access to WHO medical protocols and health standards.

Yet infectious diseases do not stop at national boundaries, and with today's high frequency of international travel, the possibility of transmitting infectious diseases is far greater than ever. Good health is a basic right for every citizen of the world, and Taiwan should be granted membership in the WHO.

Despite its exclusion from the WHO, Taiwan has made some remarkable achievements in the field of health, including one of the highest life expectancy levels in Asia, maternal and infant mortality rates comparable to those of countries with far weaker healthcare systems, and the eradication of infectious diseases such as smallpox and the plague. Taiwan is the first Asian nation to be declared free of polio and the first country in the world to provide children with free hepatitis B vaccinations.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of the Taiwan Human Rights Act of 1998 which would protect the human rights of Taiwan's people. That bill has been introduced for every session of Congress for the past 10 years, but has never been enacted. The possibility of enacting this bill is now greater than ever.

Good health is a fundamental human right. It is our duty to safeguard security and commority interests of the whole world.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues and I join together to support this important measure. The passage of this bill is a winning victory for all the children of Taiwan.
Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

CONCERNING PARTICIPATION OF TAIWAN IN WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and concurring in the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 428.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—

!Votes

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 701

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor from H.R. 701.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). Is there objection to the removal of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

THE CONGRESS IS OPPOSED TO FAST TRACK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTRUT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. KAPTRUT. Mr. Speaker, last week the President sent to Congress his International Trade Agenda for 2001. Many members who were expecting a detailed and responsible approach were sorely disappointed.

First, the President is trying to play the name game. He knows that Congress has repeatedly rejected Fast Track, most recently in 1998. He also knows that he does not have the support or votes in this Congress to pass this misguided approach. So instead of pushing an initiative that is bound to fail, he is trying to confuse the public and lead the press to believe that this is some kind of novel idea.

By any other name, Fast Track is Fast Track. Let us get real. Trade promotion authority, or TFA as it is being now referred to, is really nothing new. Congress rejected it before, and we will do so again. Let us remember why we rejected it the first place.

Without congressional oversight and input, trade agreements will be negotiated by unrepresentative delegates, who were never elected, standing up for the rights of international corporations, instead of our hardworking constituents, not to mention that a thing called the Constitution of the United States grants to Congress the right to... regulate commerce with foreign nations.

Our Founding Fathers granted Congress this responsibility as a check on the executive branch. It is critical that we do not trade away the right to represent our constituents.

They have sent us here to represent their wishes, not those of only international corporations looking to pollute their bottom line. The second round of the name game came when President Bush referred to labor and environment as core standards.

If these are core standards, why are they not being included in the core text of trade agreements? That would make sense, would it not? Instead, the President wants labor rights, get ready for this, to be enforced by the U.S. Agency for International Development and environmental standards by the World Health Organization. Who is kidding? Not Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to do exactly what we have done numerous times before. Reject this name game. Reject Fast Track. Stand up for the American people, their standard of living, their right to work for a living wage, their right to live in an environment which is not polluting, and to use the power of this marketplace to raise living standards in other parts of the world, not pull us down to their standards. Reject Fast Track. Reject the name game. Reject trade promotion authority.

INSTANT RECALL ON ANY VACCINE GOING INTO OUR CHILDREN THAT HAS MERCURY IN IT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I had a prepared statement that I was supposed to use, but it has not arrived, so I will speak extemporaneously tonight.

Mr. Speaker, vaccinations have been a real plus for this country. We had a lot of diseases that used to be so feared, like polio and diphtheria that we do not have to worry about anymore, and it is because we have vaccinations that really help protect our young people.

But along with the positives, unfortunately there are some negatives, and parents across this country ought to be aware of the negatives as well as the positives. That is why my committee has been holding a number of hearings and has had the health agencies of this country before the committee numerous times.

We have had what is called an explosion of autism in America. Autism, that is a disease most people are not familiar with unless it has hit their family, and that is where one day your child is apparently normal or appears to be normal, and the next day he is running around flapping his arms, cannot speak clearly anymore, bangs his head against the wall, has severe bowel disorders and other related things.

We have had an explosion, an absolute explosion. Twenty years ago, 1 in 10,000 children in America were considered autistic. Today it is 1 in 500. In some parts of the country, it is as many as 1 in 150. Now think about that; 1 in 150 children in some parts of this country is autistic. We need to find out why.

Our committee has held hearings, and we have heard some things that need to be thoroughly investigated, and one of those is why do we have vaccines going into children’s arms and into adults arms that contain mercury. Mercury.

Mercury is a toxic substance that we have taken out of our topical dressings. It used to be that you could buy creams that had mercury in them because it was a preservative. They said because it could leach into the bloodstream through the skin, they thought it was safe to take it out of all of the topical dressings. They still use it as a preservative in many of the vaccinations given to our children.

Mercury is being injected, as I speak tonight, into children across this country along with the vaccinations they are getting.

Other substances being injected into our children are formaldehyde and aluminum, metals that could be and substances that could be toxic. We need to find out why.

I, for one, believe that my grandson became autistic at least in part because he received vaccinations. He received 9 in 1 day, and 6 of those contained mercury. Mercury has a cumulative effect in the body. It gets in the brain. So I believe that 1 week after he received these vaccinations, he became autistic.

He spoke normally. He acted like any other normal child. Yet within 1 week he was running around flapping his arms, walking on his toes, because he had severe bowel disorder, banging his head against the wall, and he could not speak clearly anymore, and he still has those problems.

Mr. Speaker, if what we are putting into our children’s bodies along with the vaccinations is causing that, something has to be done.

I asked the Food and Drug Administration when they were before our committee, we have vaccines that do not contain mercury or these substances? They said, yes, we do, in single-vial doses. Now, what does that mean? It means that if we have single-vial doses that do not contain the mercury, the child is not going to get the mercury.

But what happens is, the pharmaceutical companies are putting out many shots into one vial, and because of that they have to have these preservatives in there, and in many cases they put several vaccines together.

And so they have these preservatives in there to make sure that the vaccine does not become contaminated.

If we went to single-vial vaccines and shots, we would eliminate, in my opinion, a large part of the problem. But that is why this country needs to have continued oversight over our health agencies, because our health agencies have not really been following up on these companies to see if there are any side effects that are really going to hurt our kids for the rest of their lives.

Mr. Speaker, I will say tonight that mercury should be taken out of every vaccine in the country, and it should be enough to have an instant recall on any vaccine that is going into our children that has mercury in it.

We have enough vaccines that do not contain these toxic chemicals and substances, so our children can be inoculated in a safe and effective way, and yet our health agencies continue to let these companies use mercury in these vaccines.

Today as I speak, as I said, children are being vaccinated with these toxic chemicals in them. It is unconscionable.

Mr. Speaker, we have what is called SIDS deaths, and they have said it is because children go to bed and they should not be there. I do not see the wrong way, there is no explanation why they do not. My granddaughter received a Hepatitis B shot, and within an hour she quit breathing. We had to rush her to the hospital, and she was blue in the face.

Had she been in bed, the next morning she would have been dead; but my daughter saw her and saw her turning blue and rushed her to the hospital. It was a reaction to the Hepatitis B shot.

Mr. Speaker, let me just say in conclusion, we will have more of these 5-minute special orders, every parent in the country ought to start reading the inserts on those vaccines. Vaccinations are important, but we want to make sure we know what is going into our children’s bodies.

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REFORM’S OVERSIGHT ACTIVITIES OF VACCINE SAFETY

During the 106th Congress the Full Government Reform Committee and two of its Subcommittees initiated investigations looking at several vaccine issues. There are increasing concerns that the risks related to vaccines are not widely known or acknowledged. Vaccines have been hailed as the greatest public health advance in the twentieth century. I have said before that out of our investigation that I am not anti-vaccine. Rather I support the appropriate use of safe vaccines that have been thoroughly tested. I support improved information sharing with parents and patients regarding the benefits and risks of immunization and respect the concerns that have been raised by consumers about vaccine adverse events. I also support increased clinical research looking at the long-term safety of vaccines, including their potential link to chronic conditions such as autism, diabetes, attention-deficit disorder, and asthma.

Vaccines are the only drugs Americans are mandated to receive as a condition of attendance at day care and schools and in some cases as a condition of employment. Because each state bases its mandatory immunizations on Federal recommendations, it is very important that adequate oversight be provided by Congress to ensure the integrity of the vaccine programs.

At this time, there is a paucity of research looking at long-term safety of any vaccine. This was acknowledged last year in a report to Congress from the Institute of Medicine, “Few vaccines for any disease have been actively monitored for adverse effects over long periods of time.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST ON VACCINE-RELATED ADVISORY COMMITTEES

The Committee investigated two vaccine-related advisory committees. We were concerned that the pharmaceutical industry has too much influence over these committees. From the evidence we found, I think they do.

The first committee was the FDA’s Vaccines and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee (VRBPAC). This Committee makes recommendations on whether new vaccines should be licensed. The second committee is the CDC’s Advisory Committee on Immunizations Practices (ACIP). This committee recommends which vaccines should be included on the Childhood Immunization Schedule. We focused on the handling of the rotavirus vaccine. The FDA approved it for use in August 1998. The CDC recommended it for universal use in March 1999. Serious problems cropped up shortly after it was introduced. Children started developing serious bowel obstructions. The vaccine was pulled from the U.S. market in October 1999. We learned that during the FDA’s committee meetings there was concern raised about adverse events. They were aware of potential problems. Five children out of 10,000 developed bowel obstructions. There were also concerns about children failing to thrive and developing high fevers, which as we know from other vaccine hearings, can lead to brain injury. Even with all of these concerns, the committee voted unanimously to approve it.

At the CDC’s committee, there was a lot of discussion about whether the benefits of the vaccine really justified the costs. Even though the cost-benefit ratio was questioned, the Committee voted unanimously to approve it.

We learned that waivers had been granted to individuals who had financial ties to the industry. This is troubling. At the time the Rotashield vaccine was approved and recommended for universal use, the following conditions existed: (1) That members, including the chair, of the FDA and CDC advisory committees who make these decisions own stock in drug companies that make vaccines. (2) That individuals on both advisory committees own patents for vaccines under consideration or affected by the decisions of the committee. (3) That three out of five of the members of the FDA’s advisory committee who voted for the rotavirus vaccine had conflicts of interest that were waived. (4) That seven individuals of the 15 member FDA advisory committee were not present at the meeting, two others were excluded from the vote, and the remaining five were joined by five temporary voting members who all voted to license the product. (5) That the CDC grants conflict-of-interest waivers to every member of their advisory committee a year at a time, and allows full participation in the discussions leading up to a vote by every member, whether they have a financial stake in the decision or not. (6) That the CDC’s advisory committee has no public members—no parents have a vote in whether or not a vaccine belongs on the childhood immunization schedule. The FDA’s committee only has one public member.

Families need to have confidence that the vaccines that their children take are safe, effective, and truly necessary. Doctors need to feel confident that when the FDA licenses a drug, that it is really safe, and that the pharmaceutical industry has not influenced the decision-making process. Doctors place trust in the FDA and assume that if the FDA has licensed a drug, it’s safe to use. I am concerned that this trust has been violated.

We will be continuing this investigation in the 107th Congress to see if the problems have been resolved. Last week, every member of Congress received a well-meaning letter with an attachment addressing some of the “anti-vaccine” messages. The letter states the information was prepared by the Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia. What the letter fails to inform members of Congress is that the document was prepared by a Center at Children’s lead by someone with direct financial ties to the vaccine industry. I am concerned about this subterfuge. It is important that individuals who are promoting vaccine safety deception and true interest. To not do so, in my opinion is unfair to those who receive the information. This omission of corporate sponsorship calls into question the accuracy and balance of the information provided.

The Institute of Medicine’s (IOM) Committee on Immunization Safety Review released the “Measles-Mumps-Rubella Vaccine and Autism Report” in April. I was troubled by the headlines and news reports which all stated that the IOM Committee found no connection between the MMR vaccine and autism. The IOM Committee also noted in its conclusions that it could not exclude the possibility that MMR vaccine could contribute to Autism Spectrum Disorder. I would urge all of you to read the entire report, which is available on the National Academy of Sciences website.

The reality is that there was insufficient scientific evidence to conclusively prove or disprove a connection between the MMR vaccine and acquired autism.

We have substantial parental observation, which should never be discounted. And we have several case studies and laboratory evidence showing measles virus in the guts of autistic children who have bowel dysfunction. And we also have several population-level epidemiological studies. While the IOM Committee noted that the epidemiological studies do not support an association at a population level, their report stated, “It is important to recognize the inherent methodological limitations of such studies in establishing causality.”

In essence, the studies that have been published and held up by the public health community as “proof” against Dr. Wakefield’s hypothesis can never answer the question of whether or not MMR vaccine is linked to autism in some children. That is why we need to insist that the National Institutes of Health fund independent research to replicate Dr. Wakefield’s research.

At this time, we do not have enough research to make an evidence-based final conclusion. What we have is a clear indication that a problem exists for some children. We need to do the research to get our arms around that problem, so that we can prevent any further escalation of this epidemic of acquired autism.

When the Institute of Medicine formed their Committee, we were assured that there were be no one on the Committee who had ties to the vaccine industry. I was disturbed to learn that the Committee sent this report out for review and comment prior to becoming final to numerous individuals who have ties to the vaccine industry including individuals with financial ties to the manufacturer of the MMR vaccine.

THE AUTISM EPIDEMIC

Two weeks ago, I stood in support of House Resolution 91, which recognizes the importance of increasing the awareness of autism spectrum disorders and supporting programs for greater research and improved treatment of autism and improved training.

Autism rates have skyrocketed. Conservative estimates suggest 1 in 500 children in the United States is autistic. However, those rates are dramatically higher in some places such as Brick Township, New Jersey, where the rates are 1 in 150.

In the first quarter of this year a child was diagnosed with autism every three hours in California. Last year, that rate was every six hours.

Indiana is seeking a similar trend in increased rates. One in 400 children in Indiana is autistic. Between December 1999 and December 2000, requests for special education services for children with autism went up twenty-five percent. That is a twenty-five percent increase in requests for taxpayer provided services in one year.

We have a national and potentially world-wide epidemic on our hands. It cannot simply be better reporting or an expanded definition of autism.

MY PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

Autism or Autism Spectrum Disorder is devastating to families. I know this from personal experience. My grandson, Christian, was born healthy and developed normally. His story is not much different than that of the thousands of families we have heard from over the last year. He met his developmental milestones. He was talkative. He enjoyed being with people. He interacted socially.

Then Christian received his routine immunizations as recommended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. His life changed dramatically and rapidly. He received five different shots and one oral vaccine in the same day. We now know that many of these shots contained the mercury containing preservative, thimerosal. He may have been exposed to forty-one times the level of mercury than is considered safe by Federal guidelines for a child his size. This was on top of other recent exposure from earlier vaccinations. This issue of having mercury in children's vaccine is a very troubling issue and I intend to continue this discussion in Special Orders every week.

Within ten days of receiving his vaccines, Christian was locked inside the world of autism. Is it related to the MMR vaccine? Is it related to the mercury toxicity? Is it the environment, including food allergies? Or is autism purely genetic?

As with any epidemic, we need to focus significant energy and research on containing it. We need to locate the cause or causes. We need to be aggressive in developing and evaluating treatments for both the behavioral issues and the biomedical illnesses related to this condition. Last week I chaired two days of hearings to ask experts and public health officials how they have responded to this epidemic.

SHOW ME THE SCIENCE

Some of the scientists and public health officials that have come before the Committee would have us believe that a child's regression into autism within a short time of vaccination is purely a coincidence. However their opinion is not based on scientific evidence, but on their own desire to protect vaccine policy. In fact, our Government has funded very little research looking at the long-term safety of vaccines and has funded no clinical research looking at the potential connection between autism and vaccines.

I don't want to leave the impression that I am an "anti-vaccine" because I am not. Vaccines have made infectious diseases such as polio and smallpox have saved thousands of lives. I support the use of needed vaccines that have been thoroughly evaluated for safety and efficacy and have been tested extensively.

As Chairman of the Government Reform Committee, I have conducted several hearings on vaccine safety issues and the potential connection between childhood vaccines and the autism epidemic. We have heard from a lot of witnesses on both sides of the issue. One common thread in testimonies of dozens of witnesses is that to date there is a very little research in this area.

Autism and vaccine safety are both very important issues. There is a lot of research that needs to be done to get answers about the causes of autism and whether or not the MMR vaccine and thimerosal-containing vaccines are linked to the onset of acquired autism. Our health care in this area can no longer hide their heads in the sand and refuse to acknowledge that we have an epidemic and that in our well-meaning desire to protect the public at large from infectious diseases, that we may have created this epidemic of a chronic and life-long disease.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 622, HOPE FOR CHILDREN ACT

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107-67) on the resolution (H. Res. 141) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 622) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand the adoption credit, and for our purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. NORTON addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

ENERGY PRICES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. LANGEVIN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to join my colleagues in addressing the serious issue of rising energy costs. Today in Rhode Island, the average price of one gallon of regular unleaded gasoline reached $1.77, almost 5 cents above the national average and a record high in the history of the state. Thousands of my constituents depend on their automobiles to get to their jobs each day and simply cannot afford the drastic increase in gas prices that they are being forced to pay.

Additionally, this problem has a significant impact on Rhode Island's economy which relies heavily on summer tourism.

Increased gasoline costs threaten to discourage people from summer travel, which would have a disastrous effect on our communities.

Mr. Speaker, we need a solution to this problem now. I have contacted the administration and insisted that any energy strategy that they develop must help American consumers by lowering gas prices.

Our national energy strategy must also incorporate technologies to improve vehicles' fuel efficiency standards in order to reduce our runaway consumption of oil and gasoline.

For example, by requiring SUVs to simply meet fuel efficiency standards of passenger cars would reduce U.S. oil consumption by 1 million barrels per day, approximately the daily estimated oil yield from oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Even though the technology currently exists to make our Nation's cars and SUVs more fuel efficient, Congress has blocked the establishment of higher standards since 1995.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to work with my colleagues in Congress to increase fuel efficiency standards, not only to cut our consumption of oil and gasoline, but also to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide, the greatest contributor to global warming.

I am optimistic that the United States will take advantage of our current energy debate to develop a forward-thinking plan for the future. We must establish an energy strategy that addresses short-term and long-term problems, is environmentally responsible, and truly benefits the American consumer as well as the future of this world.

ENERGY CRISIS AND FUEL PRICES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GRAVES). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, in my district in New Jersey, the average price for unleaded gasoline is $1.72 this month. The Energy Information Administration report shows that the average price in New Jersey was $1.14 at this time last year. This is a 50 percent increase in one year, yet I assure my colleagues that New Jersey is not seeing the worst of the gasoline price increases. Prices in many parts of California are well over $2, and price fluctuations in the Midwest have been dramatic.

But, unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, when we talk about the energy crisis and the increase in gasoline prices, President Bush’s answer has been, and he delivered this just last Friday, he said, ‘‘to make sure that people are able to deal with high energy prices is to cut taxes, is to give people more of their own money so they can meet the bills, so they can meet the high energy prices.”

Mr. Speaker, I understand that we just heard today that tomorrow President Bush’s tax cut bill, the reconciliation bill, is going to come to the floor. But I assure my colleagues that that is not the answer to gasoline prices.

He is just another way to assist the industry, his friends.

The interesting thing, Mr. Speaker, is that, if one looks at the message that President Bush is delivering today and one compares it to the one he delivered when he was a candidate last year, in January 2000, when heating oil prices were soaring in key campaign States and spot prices were $2.17 per barrel, the Bush said, “What I think the President ought to do is he ought to get on the phone to OPEC, the cartel, and say we expect you to open your spigots.”

Well, why is President Bush changing his position? Even today, Vice President Cheney was out saying he does not support increases in OPEC oil production. The Secretary Abraham was quoted a couple weeks ago saying that he was not going to give into or lower himself. I think the word was, to talk to OPEC about oil production because that would somehow lower his quality, his status as Energy Secretary.

President Bush has also said he will not release any oil from the SPR, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the first President Bush, his father, George W.’s father, successfully released oil from the SPR, from the reserve, to calm energy markets.

In fact, President Bush’s decision not to take action, I think, is essentially unilateral disarmament in talks with oil producing countries. We know last year President Clinton was very effective, I thought, in using the SPR as a tool, if you will, to try to bring prices down.

The other thing that President Bush has talked about as a long-term solution, of course, is to build more refining capacity. I mention this point because it does not help the consumer today. The interesting thing about Bush’s policy and Cheney’s policy is that they are not talking about the problem that Americans face today. We talk about how we have oil prices, gasoline prices rising dramatically. American motorists are spending too much on gasoline. They want a solution now.

The President talked refineries, but he did not talk about the effect of refinery consolidation. While the number of refineries has decreased, the refinery capacity has increased. Part of the problem that we witness today is this consolidation, is the size of the refinery, has increased. A problem in the refinery, like a fire, for example, that affects production has a greater impact on supply and price.

I just wanted to mention I have a number of colleagues who are joining me, my colleagues on the Democratic side. I do not want to take up more time before I start yielding to them, but I did want to talk a little bit before I finish the introduction here to our special. I wonder that we have tonight to mention mergers in the oil industry, because I also think that that is something that needs to be investigated and looked at, and it is not being looked at by this administration.

Recent company mergers include a $7.49 billion deal in which Tosco recently agreed to be purchased by Phillips Petroleum, and Valero will acquire Ultramar Diamond Shamrock for $3.91 billion.

In a letter I recently sent along with the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Barrett), we requested that the administration, specifically the Department of Energy and the FTC, the Federal Trade Commission, carefully re-examine and look at these mergers to assess that they do not unfairly disadvantage independent marketers.

While mergers like BP and Amoco or Exxon and Mobile may be good for business, I am concerned about the impact on consumers. Exxon-Mobile this year reported $5 billion in record profits, over the last year. Valero alone had a 2,272 percent increase in profits from 1999.

There are real solutions, and Democrats have the real solutions. But those solutions are not found in President Bush’s energy plan.

Let me just mention a couple of things that we can do. First, we need to review the effect that mergers have on the price of gasoline. Second, I strongly believe that we need to find innovative ways to reduce demand. Conservation and energy efficiency are vital components of reducing prices of gasoline at the pump, and these ideas must be part of our Nation’s energy use strategy.

But, unfortunately, President Bush does not really think about this. Last week, he announced that he would abandon the 2004 goal set to develop a five-person vehicle that would get 80 miles per gallon. The Federal Government has spent $1.4 billion on this initiative, and the National Academy of Scientists called the program an outstanding effort. But now this program aimed at reducing the future demand on gasoline has been put on hold.

But American demand for gasoline is 8.6 million barrels per day. Sport utility vehicles, pickups and minivans account for 43 percent of the vehicles on the road today, up from 30 percent in 1990. Because of this increase, the current fuel efficiency in the U.S. has dropped to its lowest level since 1980.

Today the standard for passenger cars is 27.5 miles per gallon, and for light trucks it is 20.4 miles per gallon. This standard has not changed since 1978. I think this is really an opportunity to bring 21st century solutions to meet our 21st century users.

I know that a number of my colleagues have been taking the lead on this, particularly some of the newer Members. I know the energy crisis has been particularly bad in California.

I yield first to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. Davis), one of my colleagues.

Mrs. Davis of California. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pallone) bringing this to our attention, and it gives me an opportunity to speak particularly about the situation in San Diego. San Diego families and businesses have been devastated with soaring energy costs. In September, we learned that San Diego was first with the most, not the distinction that we would necessarily like. Prices are always higher than neighboring Los Angeles. With these prices soaring across the county, San Diego is still at the head of the parade.

Much attention has been focused on issues of supply and demand, and these are important. But there are other predatory practices that crank up the price at the pump.

In August of 1998, as chair of the California Assembly Consumer Protection Committee, I held hearings on the question of high gasoline prices and why they are so particularly affected in my community of San Diego. We learned a lot during these hearings. We learned about mini-marketing techniques that control the supply. We learned that there are practices where companies sell the same gasoline to different outlets at different prices and discriminate against some communities.

These practices now are being challenged in the Wholesale Motor Fuel Maintenance and Price Discrimination Act that is being advocated by the gentleman from California (Mr. Thompson), and I am very happy to be a co-sponsor of that. There are several things that this legislation will do, and I hope that my colleagues will join me in working with the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON) on them.

One, they require that petroleum producers reveal their pricing structure. It seems like a sensible thing to do that will be helpful to consumers to know.

Two, it would make it illegal for companies to discriminate on price regardless of who is purchasing it.

The other bill that mandates that the Federal Trade Commission study the relationships between ownership of gas stations and the high price of motor fuel. I think all of these elements of this legislation are needed and will make it more difficult for oil companies to practice what we consider price zoning, redlining, and discriminatory wholesale pricing.

It is only right that consumers know how rebates, refunds, and discounts to dealers affect the prices that they pay at the pump. We should take advantage of this. We now have an opportunity and now should shine the spotlight on how gas is priced so we can then return to competitive pump prices.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) for bringing these issues to our attention.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS), and mention, which I am sure some people already know that certainly Democrats today, our Democratic leadership, announced an energy policy program under the auspices of the House Democratic Caucus, our energy task force.

There are a number of provisions in there that I think are very good. But one of them specifically says with regard to price gouging that we would instruct the Justice Department to aggressively investigate energy pricing to assure that illegal price fixing does not occur and to give thorough antitrust reviews to any proposals to further consolidate energy companies.

I know that the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), our leader, was out there with the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS) in San Diego, with some of our other colleagues from California, Southern California. We have been basically saying that we have got to look at this problem over all. Price gouging and gasoline prices are a part of this.

We still do not have the President’s or the Cheney proposal. That is supposed to come out Thursday. But so far every indication that we have got from President Bush and Vice President CHENEY is that they simply do not want to do anything about gasoline prices. It is just not their problem. I cannot imagine that, with all the problems that one faces in California with regard to blackouts and the overall energy crisis, that anybody is happy to hear that we are going to not address gas price problem.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, it is really adding insult to injury, I think, out in the West. When we have seen the energy prices going up 900 percent, people want to know where that is coming from.

I think, when it comes to gasoline prices as well, I know in the San Diego community, we have looked to our neighbors. We do not have to travel that far. I took trips every Sunday when I used to visit my dad actually in Orange County, and we knew where to fill up because gasoline prices were about 35 cents less.

Now we are seeing high prices throughout the state, but we still have some communities that seem to be affected more than others.

Mr. PALLONE. And in New Jersey we have the phenomenon whereas after Memorial Day, and I represent the shore area, everybody is going to be paying these higher prices when they have to travel to the shore or to the beaches. I know some might say that people do not have to go on a vacation; but obviously, that is not the answer. I just cannot believe that the President and the Vice President simply do not see this as a problem and think that somehow a tax cut is going to help that.

I want to thank the gentlewoman for being here. I know she has been taking her leadership in her home State on this issue. Thanks.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I now wish to yield time to my colleague from Arkansas.

Mr. ROSS of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Currently, Arkansas residents pay on average $1.69 per gallon of mid-grade gasoline. Thousands of my constituents depend on their jobs or on tractors or equipment to tend to their farms each and every day. I live in a rural district, and they simply cannot afford the drastic increase in gas prices that they are being forced to pay.

With the summer season expected to be as hot as last year, we will probably have in Arkansas a drought for the fourth year in a row, and I anticipate that we are headed for a repeat of last year’s over heated oil prices, the highest since 1990. In fact, we have already seen indications that the price is growing steadily.

A recent national survey shows that the price of gasoline has skyrocketed 17 cents in the last 4 weeks alone, bringing the national average to $1.82 a gallon. These prices are unjustified, and our response to bring these prices down must be immediate. I call on the President and the administration to tell OPEC to increase their levels of oil production, which they cut as recently as March by a million barrels a day. It is wrong that a handful of foreign countries can get together and have a lot to do with dictating the price of gasoline at the pumps in south Arkansas.

Our reliance on foreign oil has been steadily increasing. We must concentrate on increasing our domestic energy supplies and strengthening our energy infrastructure, and we must guard consumers against potential price gouging by the big oil companies.

Now, the President, as recent as last week, said that we needed a tax cut to pay for gasoline. Now, Mr. President, we need a tax cut. We need a tax cut for working families to help them make ends meet, to help them pay for child care and, yes, to help them send a child to college. We do not need a tax cut to pay for gas. We need to bring the prices of gas back down.

America’s economic prosperity and national security have come to depend on the availability of reliable, affordable energy. We need a balanced, long-term energy policy, not one built for the past, as the administration is putting forth. We need a proactive energy policy for the future, one that helps consumers by increasing energy production, while reducing energy demand; one that stresses the importance of conservation, building more energy-efficient products and developing more renewable and alternative fuel sources, the kind that can create new markets for our struggling farm families in south Arkansas.

The production, generation, and distribution aspects must all be done with greater efficiency. Research and development in new energy technologies that increase conservation in all areas are imperative. In addition, we need to expand other energy sources, such as wind, solar and hydroelectric. Renewable energy sources may not be an immediate answer to our energy crisis, while reducing energy demand for the long term as fossil fuel sources continue to diminish. These emerging technologies will need Federal support if we are to finally achieve energy independence.

We must look at all available options to solve this complicated crisis. But whatever we do, we must guarantee that drivers in south Arkansas and all across America will pay less when they fill up.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Arkansas. It is really almost incredible to think that the President and the Vice President do not understand what needs to be done now to address the problem with the gasoline prices.

I was just looking at some of the statements that were made here. This is from Vice President CHENEY, May 11, I guess just a week ago, in USA Today. He said, “There’s not much we can do in the short-term.” And he goes on to talk about everything they are going to come out with, theoretically this Thursday, is long term. Then it says that they apparently have been warning Republicans on Capitol Hill that the energy policy to be released will do little to help with gas prices or California blackouts this summer.

To call it incredible to think that they are not looking to at least talk to OPEC and say, look, do something here. These are countries where I think we have a lot of clout and the ability to influence their policy because they depend on us for so many things. The same goes for the SPR. I cannot believe there was so much discussion last session about the SPR and the ability to use that as a sort of a hammer to force prices down and to force more production of OPEC, and yet so far they are not willing to do it.

The gentleman obviously has the same problem leading up to Memorial Day and the summer in Arkansas that we have in New Jersey, and I just know that a few more weeks of these price increases are going to be a lot more than the number one issue on people's minds, but I do not know how we are going to be able to go back from Congress and say Washington is not doing anything about it. It is just incredible.

I want to thank the gentleman for participating and we are obviously going to be doing a lot more of this. Thanks.

Next, Mr. Speaker, we have, from my neighboring State of New York, and I imagine he has the same phenomenon that we have all over the States, with people leaving to get to Long Island for the start of Memorial Day weekend, the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ISRAEL, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his time and his important leadership on this very vital issue.

Mr. Speaker, last week gas prices on Long Island rose 9 cents per gallon in the span of a single week, and this year alone has already doubled its production twice already. I think it is absolutely outrageous that the same countries that we defend time after time are gouging Americans at the pump.

Now, last summer, then Governor Bush said that when he was President, if gas prices increased, he would simply get OPEC on the phone and tell them to turn on the spigot. Well, Mr. President, it is time to make that call. We cannot wait any longer. And when OPEC again in June increased its production, they have to know that we will no longer tolerate this price-fixing cartel behavior that is punishing Americans at the pump.

At the same time, however, while we are talking a tough line towards OPEC, we have to reduce our dependence on foreign oil. I have been working with some of my colleagues to draft a Tax and Energy Cost Relief Act that will provide working families with tax credits and deductions that will help them purchase energy-efficient equipment and technologies. Now, that is going to reduce taxes, it is going to spur the economy by encouraging people to go and purchase new energy-efficient products, it is going to improve our environment, and it is going to reduce our long-term dependence on foreign oil.

Taking a hard line with OPEC and expanding conservation is the smart way to reduce the price of gas while providing relief to working families and decreasing our dependence on foreign oil. It is time for a coherent, effective, comprehensive policy to get gas prices down; and I look forward to working with the gentleman from New Jersey to reach that goal.

Mr. PALLONE, Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from New York. I know we are both in the New York metropolitan area, so we share the same concerns and we hear the same complaints from our constituents.

I just wanted to mention, if I could, that the Democrats' energy policy paper was released today, wherein our leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. WASSERMAN SHUSTER), and one of my colleagues from Texas (Mr. FROST), who is the chairman of the caucus and also the chairman of the task force that put this together, talked about major tax credits along the lines of what the gentleman was talking about. And I would just like to mention them briefly, if I could.

There is this best energy savings tax credit, which is basically a consumer tax credit for up to $1,000 provided for new homes, in other words, a $1,000 credit for a new home based on the energy efficiency of the new home. And then similarly with regard to home improvements, 20 percent of the cost up to $2,000 based on the measures taken by the consumer. And there is a separate one for vehicles that an individual could get a credit up to $1,000 based on fuel savings or other performance standards when they purchase a car or a light truck or SUV equipped with these new fuel saving technologies.

And then for businesses, the Democraphic proposal has what they call a SAVEn incentive, structure and vehicle efficiency tax incentive; and this provides up to a 30 percent investment tax credit for business investment in renewable energy generation and allows businesses to take a deduction for increasing energy efficiency.

These are the kinds of conservation measures linked to new technology that I think is what the gentleman was talking about. And I think the great part of what the Democrats put forward today in our energy proposal is that it deals with the high price of gasoline, which is an immediate concern; it deals with conservation; it deals with efforts to use tax credits and deductions for conservation; and, at the same time, it has measures to increase energy production.

So we are looking at this universally, in a sort of a well-rounded way, whereas as all we get from the Bush-Cheney administration is just pump; let us pump more oil, let us pump more, and that is going to solve all our problems. But that is not going to solve our problems, particularly in the short term.

Mr. ISRAEL. If the gentleman will yield, about 2 weeks ago, five Federal laboratories issued a report that said if we encourage weatherization and encourage energy-efficient technologies and energy-efficient consumer products, we will not have to build the 1,500 power plants that the administration is proposing; that we would not have to drill the Arctic reserve that the administration is proposing; we would not have to degrade our environment. And those are the kinds of technologies and efficiencies that we ought to be pursuing.

Now, these were not Democratic Federal laboratories or Republican Federal laboratories; they were Federal laboratories that have been looking at this, and we need to heed their advice.

Mr. PALLONE. The amazing thing that I find is that even my own utilities, during Earth Day myself and my other Democratic colleagues in the House did a bus tour around the State, and one of the places we went, I think it was in the district of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE), was a generating facility in Linden, which was building a new plant that would reduce carbon dioxide and other emissions by 30 percent.

Here are these utilities, and this is the business community, telling us that they can address carbon dioxide in a very effective way. And at the same time that the Bush administration tells us they do not want to regulate it. So the President is just not being realistic about what can be done. He is sort of living in the past, in my opinion; and it is very unfortunate.

I want to thank the gentleman.

Mr. ISRAEL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, next is my colleague on the Committee on Agriculture who has worked in these energy issues for a long time, and I know that our committee has taken up some legislation, but so far the Republicans have not really been helping us very much in terms of addressing the California situation. I yield to my colleague from Ohio.

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE), and I would like to take a few moments to talk about my district in southern Ohio, because as I have heard my colleagues discuss gas prices in their districts, I was thinking gas prices are so much higher in my poor, rural district.

But first, I would like to say some things about the President and his justification for this tax cut, 43 percent of which will be going to the richest 1 percent of the people in our country. Last summer during the campaign he said we needed this large tax cut simply because we had a huge surplus, and this surplus rather than go toward government programs, should be returned to the taxpayer. That was the justification a year or so ago.
Then just 2 or 3 months ago, he was justifying this huge tax break, most of which is going to the very wealthy, by saying our economy is entering a period of slump and perhaps moving into a recession, so we need a tax break to generate growth within our economy and keep us from going into a recession. And behold a couple of days ago I was flabbergasted to hear the President say we need a tax cut so people can spend it on gasoline so that my friends in the oil industry can continue to benefit from the tax cuts. It is just beyond belief that we would have such shallow, superficial thinking going on when the Nation is facing a very serious problem.

My colleagues and I think this concern about gas prices may be near the top of people's concerns. I can tell my colleagues after having gone home to southern Ohio for the last several weekends, in my district it is the primary concern. No matter where you go in my district without meeting people who are saying to me, Congressman, what can you do about these gasoline prices?

I can tell you this weekend the cheapest price I could find in southern Ohio was nearly $1.86 per gallon. That was for the cheapest grade, and the premium was over $2 a gallon.

Mr. Speaker, another thing that troubles me, these prices fluctuate overnight. As we move toward the weekend, this happens regularly. As we are moving toward the weekend on Thursday night or Friday morning, prices may escalate 10 or 15 cents or more overnight. This happens weekend after weekend.

Now, the American people are fairly wise, and they know when they are being taken advantage of. I believe that there is a quiet but growing anger among people that there is a supply problem in the American marketplace. They are paying $1.86 up to $2 per gallon to get gasoline. We can buy as much gasoline in southern Ohio as we are willing to pay for. The problem is that, we are simply being charged too much.

Mr. Speaker, I believe there will be a price to pay, regardless of whether or not we are Democrats or Republicans, from what part of the country we come. If we do not do something to give relief to the American public, if we do not do something to make sure that the American people are protected, they are going to work and earn a living. We have got a responsibility to do something about that. It just really, really troubles me.

When someone runs for the Presidency, they assume responsibility. The President has a responsibility to the American people to provide leadership and to protect them from being gouged by the oil industry. That is his responsibility. If he did not want to accept that responsibility, he ought not to have sought the Presidency. There is a burden that comes with an office. We share it here in this House, but the President and the Vice President share it as well. They have got a responsibility to step up to the plate to say what is happening is wrong and to take the steps to make sure that the American people are protected.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think that we can overestimate the anger of the American people on this issue, and it is going to grow as we enter into the summer months and gasoline goes from $1.86 to $2 and beyond. That is when we are going to see the strong feelings of the American people directed toward us. That is one of the reasons to act. The real reason we should act is because it is the right thing to do for our constituents. But even if we did not care about the well-being of our constituents, if our only unworthy motive was our political survival, we ought to care.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the President and the Vice President and the leaders of this House are listening to this debate because the American people are expecting action.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I totally agree with what the gentlewoman said. I was looking at this last statement which I read where the Vice President said if the U.S. talked OPEC nations into increasing production, thus dropping the price of crude, the end result could be a slowing in investment by oil companies. It is almost as if he is saying that it is a good thing that the prices are going up because that gives them more money to invest, which is incredible.

Mr. STRICKLAND. I think his actions indicate that he is happy with the high prices. I say that the answer to the high prices is just for the American citizen to get a tax break so he can then take that tax break, use it to pay these high prices so that the oil companies will get their profits, that is very troubling.

Mr. PALLONE. I agree. It is incredible to think about the reasoning that goes behind it.

The second thing which was mentioned is the profits that the companies are getting. There is a gasoline tax at that I have that says that while consumers face spiking energy prices, many oil, gas and power companies post record profits. For example, Exxon-Mobil reaped nearly $18 billion in profits up more than 120 percent over the previous year.

This has a chart, and I will just give a few of them. It has Exxon-Mobil profits, increased from 1999 124 percent, British Petroleum-Amoco increased 34 percent; Chevron increase in profits over the year, 151 percent; Hess, which is in New Jersey, increase of 234 percent; Texaco, an increase of 116 percent. It is just incredible to see how much money they have been making.

Mr. STRICKLAND. Their profits are enormous. The supplies are there; otherwise we would not be able to go to the pump and buy the gasoline. I know of nowhere in this country where there seems to be a shortage. There is a gasoline tax at this time. There is all of the gas that we want to buy if we are willing and able to pay for it. How much profit is enough? How much profit is it going to take to encourage the oil industry to innovate and do those things that they need to do to bring more supplies to market?

Mr. Speaker, if I felt that there was a true shortage of supply, then there may be some reasonable expectation that prices would escalate. But what we have now is apparently a sufficient supply; but ever-increasing costs and ever-increasing profits; and we have got a President and a Vice President who seem to think that is okay. That is very troubling.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong what we say necessarily, but I want to mention again that the Democrats came out today with a new energy policy and principles. Obviously, we did this a couple of days before we hear the final report that is going to come out from the Vice President which will express the President’s position. I am very proud of what we did today because it basically addresses each of the issues that I think that the public is concerned about, both short term and long term.

If I can just review it and then we can finish our Special Order. First of all, it specifically deals with the problem of prices going up now, first of all, by asking that the President put pressure on OPEC to increase production and lower prices and to use the SPIT, the strategic petroleum reserve, and to investigate the price gouging by the biggest companies.

Then it has with regard to energy efficiency, what I mentioned, these best tax credits for both consumers and businesses to improve energy efficiency, to use renewables; and then we also have a program to help low- and fixed-income families meet the rising cost of home heating and cooling bills, basically supplemental to the LIHEAP program which helps people with their energy bills. We have the price cap in the crisis where you have blackouts, electricity blackouts, as well as with the high price of gasoline. All those things have to be looked at as the gentleman pointed out. I want to thank him, and I want to thank the rest of my colleagues for joining me this evening.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Holy Father, we join with Americans across our land in the celebration of National Police Week. We gratefully remember those who lost their lives in the line of duty. Particularly, we honor the memory of our own officers in the United States Capitol Police: Sergeant Christopher Eney on August 24, 1984, Officer Jacob Chestnut and Detective John W. Gibson on July 24, 1998. Thank You for their valor and heroism. Continue to bless their families as they endure the loss of these fine men.

May this be a time for all of us in the Senate family to express our profound appreciation for all of the police officers and detectives who serve here in the Senate. They do so much to maintain safety and order, knowing that, at any moment, their lives may be in danger. Help us to put our gratitude into words and actions of affirmation. May we take no one for granted.

Now we dedicate this day to You. Bless the Senators as they confront issues with Your divinely endowed wisdom and vision. Through our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

In the bill—and again I encourage our colleagues to go and look at what is in the underlying bill—we try to allow school districts to have that choice, to use the resources available either for class size or for teacher development, professional development, but that money must be shared between the classroom teacher and that student.

The goal is to boost student achievement. What is needed in Alamo, TN, might be different than what is needed in Miami, FL, or down in Fort Lauderdale, FL. One school might need class size reduction if the classes are very large in certain subjects. Another school might need a better and higher quality teacher in that classroom.

The underlying bill takes those two components of teacher quality and class size, pools those resources, and says to local communities and to local school districts: You choose as to which of those areas you need to apply those resources to boost student achievement.

I think it is very important because class size in some cases can be very important. We all know that. If you happen to be a student or a community where class size is very large in certain subjects, I think it is very important that class size be reduced. Other parts of the country might have already reduced class size down to an appropriate level and found they prefer the freedom to use that class size reduction money, and teacher development money, to recruit teachers or attract teachers by paying them more, or by encouraging their professional development.

What we want to do is give local school districts the freedom to spend the money in a way that they believe will best increase student achievement. School districts should have the flexibility to decide whether to use that money for class size or for teacher development. That is very simple. That is what we have heard laid out in the bill. It is very important for people to understand that is that flexibility, that local identification of need, that principle, on which we are voting at 2:20 today. We fundamentally believe school districts should be given maximum freedom and flexibility as to how they use those funds.

Again, it is important to understand the underlying bill. Basically, we pool these resources from class size reduction and teacher development and put them together. We give that local school district the opportunity to use them in the best way they see fit.

Over the last several days, we have talked a lot about cost effectiveness of our education dollars to get the very best bang for the buck, the very best outcome and achievement for the dollars invested. When you look at it that way, in terms of cost effectiveness, or in terms of the dollars being invested in education, that is what we are doing in the underlying bill. We are becoming not education spenders but education investors by investing in the system and investing in that flexibility and local control.

For every dollar invested, it is important to look at what sort of outcome you achieve. If we say school districts shouldn’t be forced to downsize classes, and recognize that some have downsized the class size already, then you can ask how effective is each of those dollars invested in terms of cost effectiveness. It is interesting, if you go back and look at the studies which examine at all sorts of different and independent variables regarding boosting student achievement, class size does not come at the top or even in the middle but further down on that list. In fact, in many of these studies, it is the least effective reform, but it is coupled with the very highest price tag. So in terms of dollars invested, the effect is it falls to the lower end of the scales.

Studies have found that class size can be among the least effective educational investment, especially when you compare it to something like teacher education, professional development—providing teachers with the resources they need to become better teachers, or to become better educated, for example, to become a real specialist in the field they are teaching.

Again, I don’t want to overplay this because I, for one, think class size is an important variable, but I think it is important to recognize that is addressed in the underlying bill. The resources are there. We are simply saying to give the local community the flexibility to use those dollars in a way that gives the biggest bang for the buck invested.

What is the No. 1 variable in many of these studies? If you look outside of parents’ involvement in schools, we encourage in the underlying bill, it is to have a highly qualified teacher in the classroom—not the size of the classroom but a highly qualified teacher. A recent study at the University of Rochester examined more than 300 studies on the impact of class size reduction and found that it is the quality of the teacher which is much more important than the absolute class size.

The National Commission on Teaching & America’s Future found that teacher education is five times as effective for each dollar invested as class size.

All of us can remember our own teachers when we were young and the impact that a high-quality teacher has in the classroom. It is a lasting impact. A smaller classroom has an effect—a here and now effect—but it doesn’t have the lasting effect that a highly qualified teacher does in the classroom.

A study done in Tennessee found that the impact of a high-quality teacher continues for at least two years after the student has left that teacher. Bill Saunders, who has been quoted again and again on this floor, determined that the percentile difference between the student who has 3 years of high-quality teaching versus 3 years of poor quality teaching could mean the difference between a student that is enrolled in a remedial class versus an honors class—again, underscoring the critical importance of not just having more teachers in the classroom but actually having high-quality teachers in the classroom.

Over the last week or so we have talked a lot about the shortage of high-quality teachers. The fact is that more than 25 percent of new teachers enter our Nation’s schools poorly qualified to teach.

We talked a little bit about the studies that have shown that mastering a subject area is the most tangible teacher quality. When you look at that measure, we are simply not doing as good a job as we should.

Many teachers either lack a major or minor in the subject they are teaching. Fifty-six percent of physics and chemistry teachers lack a major or a minor. Thirty-four percent of English teachers lack a major or minor. And 34 percent of math teachers lack a major or minor.

It is important for people to understand that compulsory class size—focusing just on class size—can exacerbate the problem of having a shortage of highly qualified teachers.

Over the past week, we talked about a little bit about California’s experiment with compulsory class size. It led to many credentialed teachers coming into the classroom. It led to under-quality teaching and an increased use of teacher aides rather than teachers in the classroom—all providing direct instruction to students. This hit especially hard in the underserved areas in inner-city schools, and in rural schools.

What more could you do? I think the impact of declining teacher quality has been greatest in low-income schools, if you look at the studies altogether. That is where the percentage of qualified teachers has dropped nationwide—but specifically in the California studies.

The third point that I would like to make is that there is no need today for compulsory class size reduction. Again, it comes back to this opportunity of freedom to choose class size reduction, if you want, or to spend those monies on training teachers.

I mentioned that it is important to understand what is in the underlying bill. It has combined professional development with class size money. Teacher quality and teacher recruitment varies from community to community. It varies from district to district. We want to have that right balance among class size and having a good high quality teacher in the room.

That is why we chose to pool those two resources together and allow that local school and that local school district to choose either a combination of both of those or one versus the other.

The underlying bill permits school districts to use Federal dollars to recruit high-quality teachers.

The underlying bill supports school efforts to establish incentive programs such as differential pay to attract, hire and keep highly qualified and knowledgeable teachers.

The underlying bill contains specific provisions for recruitment. It supports teacher efforts to find individuals who have careers outside of teaching but whose life experience provide a solid foundation for teaching.

The underlying bill also looks at the issue of class size, support schools in bringing teachers, reduce class size, if they so desire it, and to address the teacher shortages in particular grades in subject areas.

The underlying bill addresses the issue of teacher development and promoting teacher reforms, including mentoring and master teachers.

The underlying bill looks at issues, such as alternative credentialing programs.

The underlying bill addresses teacher opportunity payments, allowing funds to go directly to teachers so they can choose their own professional development.

In conclusion, I want to make it very clear from at least my standpoint, and I think that we are not opposed to class size reduction. Again, I think that an appropriate class size and appropriate ratios, depending on where you are in the subject matter, is important. I point out, many areas in many regions have already addressed this particular issue.

Secondly, the underlying bill permits States and school districts to use those pooled Federal funds in the best way they see fit.

We increase the number of high-quality teachers by promoting innovative teacher reforms, including alternative certification, merit pay, and the list I just mentioned.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the Murray amendment. Again, it will be a very important vote that we take at 2:30 today because I think it does move us in the wrong direction: less choice, less freedom for our local communities, less flexibility, and less attention to local needs.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to vote against the amendment later today and look forward to participating in the debate as we go forward.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, today I rise, once again, to urge my colleagues to continue our commitment to help our schools reduce classroom overcrowding.

Before I begin, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as cosponsors to my amendment: Senators LEVIN, MIKULSKI, and SCHUMER.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, we all want to improve education. In the last few years we have made a lot of progress. In fact, thanks to our commitment at the Federal level, local schools have now hired about 34,000 new highly qualified teachers.

Because of our investment over the last 3 years, almost 2 million students are no longer in large classrooms today. That is because of the Federal commitment we have had. Those kids are learning the basics. They have fewer distractions and fewer discipline problems. Isn’t that what we want for all of our kids?

I want to ask you, did the last 3 years we have done was take the responsible thing by supporting what works. But the underlying bill, despite the rhetoric you have just heard, takes a very different approach.

It breaks our commitment to investing in smaller classes. I can tell you as a parent, as a former educator, and as a former school board member, it is the wrong way to go.

We should be building on our progress. That is why I am offering this amendment today.

Just a few hours ago we are going to vote on this amendment. So I want to talk about some of the arguments we have heard throughout the debate last week and today and probably we will hear more of today.

Let me hear that smaller classes do not really make a difference. Let me tell you, any parent or any teacher knows better. The first questions parents ask their kids when they come home from school on the first day of school is: Who is your teacher? And how many kids are in your classroom? Parents know it makes a difference on how many kids are in that classroom as to whether their child is going to have a successful year or not.

It is not just parents and it is not just teachers. Research, over and over again, has shown us that smaller classes help children succeed. The Tennessee Project STAR—Student/Teacher Achievement Ratio—study has consistently demonstrated that class sizes in K-3 to 17 students significantly increases children’s reading and mathematics scores. And the biggest gains have been found for poor and minority students—those children who are most in danger of being left behind.

Studies have shown that the children in those smaller classes in the early grades were: More likely to take college entrance exams, more likely to finish high school, more likely to enroll in college, less likely to become teen parents, and less likely to go to jail.

In the last month two new studies that have been released interpreting the STAR study have concluded that smaller classes produce significant instructional gains. One joint study of researchers from the Tennessee State University and the University of Chicago found significant increases in ninth grade math test scores among students who had spent their early grades in smaller classes with the greatest pronounced among minority students.

Robert Reichardt, a researcher with Mid-continent Research for Education... and Learning, concluded in yet another study that class size reduction “provides policymakers with a direct lever for influencing classrooms” and is one of a few policies that “offer such immediate concrete effects.”

As in Project STAR, students participating in Wisconsin’s SAGE class-size reduction effort outperformed their counterparts in larger classrooms on standardtized tests.

Again, as in the other studies, these benefits were strongest among African-American students, who had larger gains than their white counterparts.

So not only can smaller class size help raise student achievement overall, but reduced class size may be an escially effective measure for closing the “achievement gap” between black students and white students.

I remind all of my colleagues that in this underlying bill we have targeted money for many causes, including reading, technology, afterschool programs, school safety, and charter schools.

In fact, there are more than 20 targeted funding streams in the underlying bill.

If targeted funding were really the problem, and why we should vote against it, then those who vote against my class size amendment ought to vote against the entire bill.

Some have said we should just let school boards choose how to use this money. But that really ignores the realities local school boards face. I served on a local school board. I know what it is like to try to set aside money to hire new teachers for the foreseeable future when you do not even have a school bond is going to pass next month. That is one of the rea-sions it is so hard for local schools to hire new teachers to reduce overcrowding on their own.

Fortunately, because of the work we have done in the last 3 years, today they are not on their own. They have a Federal partner to help them make that critical investment. We need to continue that commitment.

The truth is, the underlying bill would be a mixed bag of good schools against one another: Small classes and good teachers. Under this bill, any dollar that local schools decide to spend on smaller classes comes at the expense of a dollar spent on teacher quality. We should not make our schools choose between two prior-ties that are important; we should fund both.

This kind of “false flexibility” that we see in this underlying bill would be unacceptable in most other arenas. Do we make our military choose between weapons and training? Of course not. We know both are necessary to protect our Nation. Do we make a sick patient choose between food and medicine? Of course not, because we know both are necessary.

Why then, in this underlying bill, are we forcing our schools to choose between high-quality teachers and smaller classes? The answer is that we are necessary to help our children learn?

In their zeal to assail small classes, some people have even claimed that a good teacher is more important than a small class size. Let me say this as clearly as I can: That good teachers are both important. The importance of funding teacher quality should not crowd out funding for other important reforms such as smaller classes.

I also point out that smaller classes can help us recruit and retain good teachers. One of the main reasons that teachers leave the classroom is job dissatisfaction. The truth is, we are losing a lot of teachers very early in their careers. After 1 year of teaching, we lose 11 percent of our new teachers; after 2 years, we lose 21 percent of them; and after 5 years, it is now up to 39 percent.

Why are we losing teachers out of our classrooms? Studies have shown that one of the main reasons is job dissatisfaction. We know that some of the causes of job dissatisfaction: Overcrowded classes. Another top complaint: Student discipline. We know there are fewer dis-clipine problems in smaller classes. We need to keep good teachers in our classrooms; what we ought to be doing is invest in teacher quality. But it also means we should reduce overcrowding to encourage more good teachers to stay in our classrooms and give their students their best.

This is not just about statistics. The other day in this Chamber I read an excerpt from a letter sent to me by an award-winning teacher from Pullman, WA. Kristi wrote to me that she is very frustrated. Every day she tries to give her students the best, but with large classes that is getting harder and harder. Kristi is a great teacher. She is a national award-winning teacher.

She is asking us to help her be the kind of “high-quality” teacher we say we want for every child by giving her a class small enough for every child to get the attention they need.

Dedicated teachers such as Kristi spend their lives helping our children to learn. We reward them with working conditions that none of us would tolerate.

Fourth, some on the other side have said we should focus our reform efforts on testing and accountability. The truth is that this amendment is even more essential because of the testing and accountability provisions in the underlying bill. This bill could punish students for failing tests, but it does not give them the tools they need to pass those tests.

Implying that testing is some kind of magic bullet that will somehow turn around low-performing schools is sim-plectic. The truth is far more complex. Testing is just one of many tools, and it is useless by itself. Tests can identify problems but without the support to solve those problems, tests have little value. Tests alone cannot improve a student’s achievement, but give that student a smaller class and a good teacher, and the sky is not even a limit for his or her potential.

I want all of us to think about that. No test is going to help a student learn to read or learn to write or learn to add. A smaller class and a qualified teacher will.

We take a classroom of students and give them tests every day for 10 years, and those kids won’t do better unless they have a qualified teacher in a classroom that is not overcrowded, where they get the individual attention they need to learn.

Let’s make sure we give those kids the tools they need to pass the test, not just to take the test. Let’s invest in what works. Our schools are facing bigger challenges than they ever have before. They are enrolling more students, and more students with special challenges are filling our classrooms such as children with limited English proficiency and disabilities. They are educating them to meet higher standards in an increasingly complex world.

We know many schools need to do a better job. Schools need to be held accountable and teachers need to be held accountable. But in Congress, we must make sure our funding scheme is one that makes our responsibilities as a Federal partner to our schools. Believe me, if we pass this bill without guaranteed funding for things such as smaller classes and with huge unfunded testing manddates, we will be held accountable.

I want all of us to think about that.

Finally, I will mention something we did not hear from the other side but is at the heart of what is going on in the bill. We did not hear this new funding scheme that is in the underlying bill and that we heard a lot about the other side. Let me say that this is exactly what it is. The reason It is not called a block grant is because parents know that block grants offer less accountability, less focus on things that work, and in the end less funding. So instead of calling it a block grant, they now call it “a funding pool.”

Parents don’t want pools of funding. They want common sense investments that make a difference, such as smaller classes and decent facilities. We have heard a lot of excuses, but we have heard a lot of rhetoric. The only thing that will matter when this debate is done is how the students in Kristi’s classrooms and thousands of classrooms across our country do next year.

I have shown my colleagues why the argument that have been raised don’t hold up. I close by mentioning some of the reasons we should target these dol-ars to smaller classes.

Parents know better than to believe the false rhetoric about smaller classes not helping children learn. Smaller classes result in more individual attention for students and better student performance on assessments. They produce long-lasting academic benefits such as lower dropout rates and more students taking college entrance exams and long-lasting social benefits such as less teen pregnancy and incarceration. Rhetoric about choice and flexibility will not go very far when parents ask us why class sizes went back up. The reasons we need a guaranteed funding stream for class size reduction are clear.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to invest in the things that work. As local schools across the country try to make progress in the face of growing challenges, let’s give them the tools they need to succeed.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Enzi). The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I thank the ranking member for the time.

I compliment the Senator from Washington for her amendment and for the tremendous insight she brings, as someone who has participated on a school board, as a mom, who understands education from the grassroots.

As the Senator from Washington was talking, I couldn’t help but think, I don’t get to go to the movies very much, but there was one movie about 2 years ago named “October Sky” that I saw. It was about a coal mining town in West Virginia and how the science for those young people in school from a life of coal mining was only through the avenue of a dedicated teacher who ignited their little minds.

In this particular case, they were called the rocket boys. They went out and built miniature rockets, won the State science fair, got the college scholarships, and were able to go to college. It is based on a true story about one of those rocket boys who went on to become a very accomplished NASA engineer.

It popped into my mind because of what the Senator was saying about the importance of the teacher and the teacher being able to interrelate with the children in that classroom. If it is a classroom of 50 or 60 children, that personal attention, that interaction just isn’t going to occur.

How many studies do we have to undertake to understand that when class size is reduced, particularly in the formative years of kindergarten through the third grade, it shows up in grades later on in life by the child’s ability to accomplish and succeed.

The Senator’s amendment is so clear. This is a vote against motherhood. I can’t imagine anybody would not be supporting this amendment. We have already had 2 years of experience with this program. It clearly has started to work. The Senator wants to extend this to another 5 years for a total program of 7 years.

If I went to my State and asked the average citizen on the street: Do you want to lower class size by hiring more teachers over a 7-year period, to have the Federal Government invest more by hiring 100,000 teachers, I would get an almost unanimous response.

I add my voice of appreciation to the Senator from Washington for her wonderful commentary and for her very insightful amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield myself 10 minutes off the bill on the amendment.

I commend the Senator from Washington, Mrs. MURRAY, for bringing this measure back to the Chamber, urging the Senate to support an amendment which will make available to school districts the additional funding for smaller class sizes with a particular emphasis on K–3 classrooms.

Senator MURRAY brings a unique and special credibility to this issue as someone who has been an active school board member and also someone who has been a first grade school teacher. Although she didn’t review that experience with us this morning, I think all of us who have listened to her make this presentation and fight for this program remember very compelling case that she has made.

I think it still echoes in my ears about the schoolteachers who are in the classes with 30 children, trying to deal with all of their particular names and content needs, and coming to a teacher in a smaller class of 15, 13 children, where she is able to spend the time to give the individual kind of attention to the child, and particularly that child who may have some very special needs on that particular day. It is translated into helping and assisting children in the earliest grades to be able to develop their interests and their awareness in terms of education and reflects itself in terms of an enhancement in their academic achievement and accomplishment.

Now there has been some suggestion on the floor of the Senate that this is not effective, that the studies indicate this is not effective, that it is one of the least desirable reforms. I hope those who maintain that position will at least be good enough to illustrate what studies they were referring to, because I am going to give three practical studies that are compelling information and compelling case in support of the Murray amendment. They are overwhelming. And you don’t have to go back years to look at the results of the studies, all you have to do is look at the front page of the newspapers here Tuesday of last week:

Prince Georges’ Test Scores Show Best Gains Ever.

Then you read down through this:

Prince Georges County students posted their highest gains ever on a key standardized test used to gauge how local children measure up to their peers nationally, according to the results released.

Then the school superintendent, when asked about what the principal contributors were in moving the children along in this direction:

[She] said she hoped that county and State leaders would see the test scores as proof that the county is serious about improving academic achievement and that they would reward it with more funding to reduce class size.

There it is. Results. Reduce class size. We reject this idea that you have to make a choice between well-qualified teachers in the classroom and smaller class size. The Murray amendment says we can do both. That is our position, that we can do both.

With all respect to our colleagues on the other side, the Senator has been addressing this issue voted against getting an allocation of resources in our committee toward having well-qualified, well-trained teachers with professional development and mentoring. As many of us tried to say, let’s make sure we are going to provide that, and that was rejected in our committee. Now, in some kind of an attempt to defeat the Murray amendment, they say the No.1 question is: Are we going to have a well-trained teacher in every class?

We are for it. The Senate voted in favor of it, with a strong bipartisan vote to expand that last week. What we also achieved is we want they have a well-trained teacher in the class with professional development and mentoring programs, but we also want the smaller class size, as has been done here every time we have reviewed this amendment. All we have to do is look at the results.

I think what would be useful is, rather than speculating perhaps what each Member believes is best in the local community, to look at what is happening out in the country and what the results are. Maybe we can benefit from what is happening when we have results. That is what we have.

In the STAR program in the State of Tennessee, April 29, 1999, report, it says:

The original STAR research tracked the progress of an average of 6,500 students each year in 79 schools between 1985 and 1989 (and 11,600 students overall). It found that children who attended small classes (18-17 pupils per teacher) in kindergarten through grade 3 outperformed students in larger class sizes (22-25 pupils) in both reading and math on the Stanford Achievement Tests for elementary students. The second phase of the STAR research found that even after returning to larger classes in grade 4, STAR’s small class students continued to outperform their peers who had been in larger class sizes.

That is what we have, Mr. President. The study goes on and shows that students in smaller class sizes are more likely to pursue college, small classes led to higher graduation rates, students in small classes achieve at higher levels, and the list goes on. That is Tennessee, 6,500 students.

We can go to what took place from 1996 up to the year 2000 in the State of Washington, the SAGE Program. The exact same results—30 schools, 21 school districts. When adjusted for pre-existing differences in academic achieved, attendance, and socioeconomic status, the SAGE students showed significant improvement over their comparison school counterparts from the beginning of the first grade to the end of the third grade across all academic areas. The charts go through there.

We can take the Rand study. That is not known to be a flaming liberal or Democratic organization—the Rand Corporation. Here they examine smaller class sizes in California—more than 1.8 million students. This is their conclusion: Smaller class sizes with certified teachers. That is what we stand for. We have the certified teachers with the authorizations we passed last week in a bipartisan way. But also we haven't got the guarantee that there will be resources in here for the smaller class sizes. Here is the Rand study that was just produced in July of last year:

Smaller class sizes with certified teachers have the greatest benefit for the neediest students.

What do we do? That is what the Senator from Washington is saying. Why don't we do both? We are doing the well-qualified teachers. Why not do smaller class sizes? Why be in the situation? We have to make a choice. We know what is working. Let's give that option to the local communities. That is what the Murray amendment does.

Here it is:

Smaller class sizes with certified teachers have the greatest benefit for the neediest students. Even Rand shows that those students in the most disadvantaged schools were most likely to be in larger classes, or have less-qualified teachers. Students in smaller classes still outperformed their peers in larger classes, even with less-qualified teachers. These students could be performing even better if all children in these schools had fully qualified teachers and smaller class sizes.

That is the Rand Corporation. If we want to try to do something to help children in local communities, let's take the best of Rand's studies and let's take the best in practical experience. Let's take the best in terms of our own intuition and understanding about a schoolteacher in a classroom where they are familiar with the children and can spend the time with the children versus in a larger classroom. That is what this is really all about.

Finally, I want to read this. I have other examples. In Fayetteville, AR, there is a wonderful story about a rural school that took advantage of the Murray amendment, because although we are resisted on the floor of the Senate by our Republican friends, in the past we were able to, under the leadership of Senator Clinton and President Clinton, have an effective program that is currently working, and one we want to keep.

Let me just read a very brief letter from a student at the Richmond Elementary School in Narragansett, RI. I think it could have been from any number of children. This is from Marieke Spresser:

If I were in a smaller class, I would do more projects. I could talk more with my teacher about school. I could read more in my book packets. I could have more time for after school centers. I could ask more questions. I could talk more with my friends. The coat room would not be so messy and we would not waste the time looking for something. The line would not be so long.

My colleagues get the sense from this student. Even though there are references about other activities, my colleagues have an underlying worry that the children have that should not be lost as well. If we are talking about developing a legislative initiative that is going to present the best we possibly can to local communities, let them make their choice; let them make the decision. They are the ones who are going to ultimately make the request.

There is nothing mandatory in here, but let us at least pass legislation that reflects the best of educators and practical experience. The Murray amendment does that in spades. It is a compelling case. It should be accepted, and I hope it will be.

My colleague, the Senator from New York has arrived. The Senator from Washington can yield time to our colleague.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington. I rise to express my very strong support for Senator Murray's class size reduction amendment.

I have been in this Chamber several times in the last weeks talking about class size and have shown numerous pictures of conditions in the classes in the schools in New York. I have listened to the extraordinary description of other colleagues as to what their students and teachers face each day and day out because of overcrowded classrooms.

I know we will be making decisions that determine the opportunities for our educational achievement for our students for years to come when we vote on this amendment and on the bill of which I hope it will be a part.

I have to reiterate several points and call on my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to look at the evidence. I do believe sometimes in Washington we live in an evidence-free zone. It does not come up with whatever scientific research or evidence. If it runs against any political point of view, it is not given the seriousness it deserves.

I do not see how we can turn our back on what the evidence that we have from study after study that lower class size, when it comes to teaching children from disadvantaged backgrounds, makes all the difference.

Sometimes my colleagues say: But there are those that do a good job with more students, and I remember when I was in school and we had a lot of students.

I can remember that, too. I started school when we had three television networks. I can remember when we had more two-parent families. I can remember when we did not have all of the social and cultural interference with raising children that we now face. The fact is, we have to take our kids where they are today, and many of them today are coming from situations where they need more attention, more adult time, more discipline, more guidance in order to be academically successful.

We are turning our backs not only on the research which points that out time and again but on these children. I hope my colleagues who have not seen fit to support this amendment will reconsider it. It is not too late to cast a vote for the kinds of classrooms where teachers can teach and children can learn.

If you look at our big States with big cities—and I know New York has obvious special size of the school district in New York City, but it is not unique. In Pennsylvania, for example, the average class size in Philadelphia is 30 children per class. In Pittsburgh, it is 25 children per class. In Chicago, it averages 28. In Georgia, it averages 32.

This is not an issue for just Senators or teachers or school board members to be concerned about in debate. Much of the attention I have seen focused on this comes from parents who know their children are not getting academic assistance they need to do the best they can do.

There is a woman in New York whom I commend who started a grassroots parents organization called Class Size Matters. She began to form networks of parents around the country who know because they have seen with their own eyes and their experience of their children, that class size matters. Pennsylvania Class Size Matters network got 1,700 parents to sign a petition in just 2 days, urging the Senate to vote in favor of class size reductions.

I have heard from parents throughout New York who tell me in great detail how crowded their classrooms are and how they need help. This does not interfere with flexibility. This does not take anything away from the local school districts determining priorities, but it does give additional help and resources to those districts and those parents who know that unless we get those class sizes down, their children will not learn to the extent they should do so.

I also regret deeply that if we do not adopt this amendment, we will be stopping the progress we have made.

New York State has hired to date 2,600 teachers and has 700 more all ready to be hired. This will stop that hiring, and we know from the 2,600 we have already hired what a difference it makes in the classrooms of New York. I believe that without dedicated funding for reducing class sizes, our Conroy, who is the Senator Murray of the State Senate colleague, Senator Joe. Class size makes the country and the difference smaller about what has happened around the talk about by my colleagues today. Commonsense nature of this ideal with be a priority. And say: Well, of course, that ought to maximum opportunity to learn in the interact in the classroom and max-receive the attention they need from the teacher and have the opportunity to interact in the classroom and maximum opportunity to learn in the classroom. Everyone would look at you and say: Well, of course, that ought to be a priority.

We have been able to back up the commonsense nature of this ideal with numerous studies that have been talked about by my colleagues today about what has happened around the country and the difference smaller class size makes.

I want to share with my colleagues what is happening in my great State of Michigan. I have a colleague, a former State senator colleague, Senator Joe Conroy, who is the Senator Murray of Michigan. For years he has been speaking about the importance of lowering the number of children in a classroom and being critical that is to teaching. He has been bringing these studies to Michigan, and Michigan finally took action in 1996.

For the 1996–1997 school year, thanks to Senator Conroy, Michigan created a pilot project in Flint, MI, to focus on grades 1–3 and to create a 17-student-per-teacher classroom, a ratio of 17 children to 1 teacher in the high-risk schools.

They found it was so successful after 3 years that the State of Michigan has begun to look for ways to expand that and has now expanded a classroom project to lower class size to 26 different districts in Michigan.

That is the good news. They found in Flint that, in fact, it made a difference that children’s performance in reading and math increased dramatically. They are now looking for ways to bring that to children all across Michigan. But the challenge is that there are over 500 districts in Michigan that has been able to expand to 26 districts, but they need our partnership. They need this Murray amendment. Our children in Michigan need to know that we in Washington understand the critical importance of partnering with the States to lower class size so that our teachers can teach and our children can learn. We have heard the numbers. We have heard about national studies. Let me just add an analysis of a Texas program that used data from 800 school districts containing more than 2.4 million children. They found that as the number of children in a classroom went up above 18 students per 1 teacher, student achievement fell dramatically. So the more children in the classroom, the lower the achievement.

We have seen study after study that has shown this. We have the opportunity in the Senate to show that we have responded to the common sense and the studies that have indicated very clearly the direction in which we should move as we look at improving education for our children.

I support having strong standards, high standards, and I commend colleagues on both sides of the aisle for initiatives that relate to accountability. But if we do not also provide the opportunity for children to learn in small classes, if we do not also focus on recruiting more certified teachers, and there are there are an appropriate number of classrooms and they are modernized so the tools are there, we are only doing half the job.

I urge my colleagues to support the Murray amendment. It has made a difference. It will make a difference. The efforts that we have seen in Flint, MI, and now expanded across Michigan, have demonstrated very dramatically that if a teacher is able to spend the time in a classroom—and the ideal number we found in Michigan is 17 to 18 children per classroom—if you are able to do that, if that teacher has the opportunity to spend time with children in a small class, we know reading scores go up, math scores go up, and student performance goes up in general. We also found that students in smaller classes, if we do not also focus on providing more certified teachers, and there are there are an appropriate number of classrooms and they are modernized so the tools are there, we are only doing half the job.

I urge my colleagues to support the Murray amendment. It has made a difference. It will make a difference. The efforts that we have seen in Flint, MI, and now expanded across Michigan, have demonstrated very dramatically that if a teacher is able to spend the time in a classroom—and the ideal number we found in Michigan is 17 to 18 children per classroom—if you are able to do that, if that teacher has the opportunity to spend time with children in a small class, we know reading scores go up, math scores go up, and student performance goes up in general. We also found that students in smaller classes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senate has expired. Who yields time?

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask how much time remains on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the floor.

Mrs. MURRAY. How much remains on the other side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has 43 minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire when he intends to use his time? Mr. President, we have 16 minutes on our side and 43 minutes on the other side. If I could just inquire when the other side intends to use their time.

Mr. GREGG. I believe the Senator from Minnesota wished to speak. We will proceed after the Senator from Minnesota.

Mrs. MURRAY. I yield 5 minutes to my colleague from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I will just take 3 minutes because I want to give the Senator from Washington as much time as possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Senator from Michigan for her response. I ask unanimous consent I be included as an original cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I heard the Senator from Florida state to the Senator from Washington he appreciated her grassroots perspective. I do as well. I didn’t serve on a school board, I wish I had. I keep calling on people in Minnesota to please run for the school board. We desperately need good leadership on our school boards. There is no more important issue and there is no more important public service.

I certainly agree with what the Senator from Michigan has said. The only thing I would add to this debate is, while I didn’t serve on a school board, I have averaged being in a school every 2 weeks for the last 10 years. I was a college teacher, I was in Woodbury High School yesterday. I love being in schools. Almost every time in the last year or so we have gotten into discussions about education, I pretty much ask students: What do you think makes for a good education? Where do you think the gaps are? What works well? What does not? Why?

Really, over and over again the first of two things students talk about is good teachers. When they talk about good teachers, they never then define good teachers as teachers who teach to worksheets. They are not talking about drill education. They are talking about teachers who fire their imagination, get them to relate themselves personally in relation to the material that is being discussed. Also you hear about smaller class size.

I agree certainly with the little ones, under 4 feet tall, it is critically important. But I frankly think it goes all the way through high school. When you ask students to talk about why, it is just a no-brainer to them.

They say the good teachers are the teachers who get to know who can interact with us and can really support us, and they are much better able to do that when there is a smaller class size.

I am a proud Jewish father. My daughter is a great teacher. Next year, the school in which she is teaching will have to lay off 40 teachers for many reasons, including an awful State budget. She will have 50 students in her Spanish class. It is hard to get to know them well and give them the help they need.

Maybe this is the best way I can support this amendment. She said she kept the parents around the night of the parent/teacher conference and had them all crammed into the classroom. She sat them all down and said this year she has 40. She said: Next year, there will be 10 more. That means your child will get 1 minute.

If you think about a class, and they were all sitting there, thinking: This doesn’t work very well, does it?

It does not. At the national level, the one thing we can say is there are certain priorities we have, and there is a certain commitment we make to all children wherever they live. We at the Senate say we know good teachers and small class size are important, so we make this commitment in our education legislation. Therefore, I am proud to support your amendment. I certainly hope it will be agreed to in the Senate.

I have no doubt that at the grassroots level in all of our States, the people we represent, including the students who maybe cannot even vote, view this as a priority for them. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? If no one yields time, time will be charged equally to both sides. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, how much time do we have on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington has 11½ minutes. Mrs. MURRAY. The other side? The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have 43 minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire won the intent to use this time. Certainly we have several Senators coming to the floor. We would like to use our 11½ minutes. If the other side doesn’t want to use their time, we would love to have some of it.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the generosity of the Senator from Washington. I yield to the Senator from Alabama 20 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama has 20 minutes. Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy of the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire and appreciate his leadership on all issues relating to this education bill. As a former Governor and a person who has been deeply involved in trying to get the best possible advantage from every dollar spent on education, his influence has been very valuable to us in this body. I think President Bush—as a former Governor himself who made education a high priority, who traveled his State and who was in schools and met with school boards and principals all over his State, he wrestled with those kinds of issues that face all educators—also is providing great leadership, and I am excited to see support legislation that he proposes.

We deeply care about improving learning in the classroom. My wife and I both have taught. She taught a number of years. We care about it. It has been active in the PTA and those kinds of things, and have tried to keep up with the relevant issues of importance to education.

With regard to class size reductions, it would seem that class size reductions is a wonderful idea. I am sure teachers would say: Wouldn’t it be great if I had a smaller group of students? And teacher unions like it; they get to hire more teachers. Polling numbers show that people think they like that.

How are you going to improve education? What do you want to do? Poll? Reducing class size. That sounds like a good idea. It sounds like a good idea to raise a good idea for politicians who want to please the public and do something about education. I have thought over the years it is a good public policy we ought to pursue.

I do not suggest there is no benefit from reducing the size of the class. I think we need to be real serious about it. We are talking about a lot of money and a major commitment. We need to know whether or not this is the best way to achieve additional learning.

Senator MURRAY’s goal is a noble one. I know it comes from her heart. She believes in it. But her amendment is, in fact, a federal mandate and a $2.4 billion requirement on education for schools in such a way as to set the sums as are necessary for the next 6 years. It would require States to use those funds to reduce class size whether this is, in their mind, a local need or not.

The bill we have under consideration would allow schools to use the already increased Federal funds for class size reduction, but it does not require them to do so. It leaves those decisions in the hands of the States and localities. I think they should make those determinations.

In addition to that, I think we ought to be real careful in this body when we pass an amendment—if we were to pass this amendment—that we would be sending a signal that it is the considered opinion of this body and the Federal Government that class size reduction ought to be made the No. 1 priority in the schools around America. If that were the right thing to do, I would feel more comfortable about this.

Reduction of class size is a highly expensive policy to place on the States. Many researchers have found little or no benefit in reducing class size.

Some would say, JEFF, that is just skintight and not a frugal. You are always worried about spending money, and you know that we are going to have more learning if we have smaller classes. Why would you suggest otherwise? I thought so myself. But the more I look at the facts and the studies, I am less and less convinced that we receive any real benefit from a reduction in class size.

Professor Hanushek, a professor at the University of Rochester, and now I believe at Stanford University, has written that class size reduction is a bad idea. He seems to think of as a political decision. Past evidence suggests that it is a very effective mechanism for gaining voter support, even if past evidence also suggests that it is a very ineffective educational policy.

The problem is, we are dealing with a counterintuitive circumstance here. But we weren’t thinking this way in 1988. The Department of Education of the United States declared that reducing class size in 1988 was probably a waste of money.

Then we had a series of efforts and programs around the country and campaign. Then in 1988, the average class size in America was 30. In 1996, the average class size was 23.

Most Americans who are thinking about reducing class size probably don’t realize that the average class size in America is the smallest it has ever been. I think we have made some very good progress in reducing class size already. In fact, that is almost a one-third reduction since 1980 in the size of classes.

Unfortunately, we need to ask ourselves what kind of benefit have we received from this one-third reduction, this reducing down to 23 students per classroom. If we look at the standardized test scores over that same period from 1960 to 1998, scores have fallen. They have not gone up.

You say, well, a standardized test is not a perfect evaluation for a lot of complicated reasons. That is true. But most experts who have studied these numbers will tell you they believe fundamentally test scores have not gone up since 1960. I think most would agree they probably have at least declined some.

The NAEP scores of 17-year-olds have been conducted since 1969, and from 1969 to 1995, class size dropped 23 percent. But NAEP scores on academic improvement show that math and reading were level and science and writing declined.

We have a continual decline in classroom size and no improvement in learning scores. I think that is strong evidence when we are talking about these numbers.

Make no mistake. When we reduce a class size by one-third, what have we done? We have required that we hire one-third more teachers. We have required that we build one-third more classrooms; that we will have one-third more insurance to pay for; one-third more maintenance; and one-third more upkeep and all the things that go with operating a school—a tremendous cost of investment in classroom size reduction.

We have had big classroom size reductions, and I have always thought that was great. But we surely haven’t had great test score results in recent years. We have had big classroom size reductions, and I have always thought that was great. But we surely haven’t had great test score results in recent years.

The question I guess would be, if we have already had a one-third classroom size reduction and no benefit, why do
Mr. SESSIONS. I would like to see the results. I think the Senator from New Hampshire is precisely correct. It may be that a school system is in circumstances where they believe that class-size reduction is important. That can be done under this bill as it is written today. They can use the funds for class-size reduction.

But I think we ought to be careful that we do not require them to take steps that could cost tremendous sums of money, which could be better spent for bringing in a high-quality computer laboratory, a new science laboratory, the latest and best ways to teach mathematics, sending teachers to attend advanced degrees and advanced training in history and science and math and how to teach reading. Those kinds of things may be more important than simply whether the number of students in the classroom is 20 or 16. If you go from 20 students to 16 students in a classroom, that is a 20-per-cent decrease in the number of teachers you have to hire. If you go from 20 students to 16 students, you have to have 20 percent more classrooms and 20 percent more overhead and cost.

So I would just say that from Professor Hanushek’s analysis, and from what appears to be common sense over 40 years of rapidly reduced class size with no academic benefit, we ought to be a little bit humble in this body before we start suggesting that it is the only and best way for any school system in America to spend its money to enhance learning. That is all I am saying in opposition to this amendment.

I have serious doubts that this is the best leadership we can give to American schools. If the best we can say is, written today, to spend its money to enhance learning. That is all I am saying in opposition to this amendment.

I have serious doubts that this is the best leadership we can give to American schools. If the best we can say is, written today, to spend its money to enhance learning. That is all I am saying in opposition to this amendment.
Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of Senator Murray's amendment to authorize class size reduction. I have been listening to this rather pedantic discussion of studies and analyses. We can point on one side to a study from Tennessee and on another side to another study from an eminent expert from the University of Rochester. The reality is much more obvious.

Ask any parent in America if they want to reduce class size by 8 students, and go to 16 students, you have increased the number of teachers needed by one-third and increased the number of classrooms needed by one-third. That is a huge increase and huge reduction in class size. We have, at best, according to Professor Hanushek, something like a .2 percent statistical or standard deviation improvement, raising only the kind of atmosphere that provides for academic success.

Look around. Just last week, the headline in the Washington Post read: 'Pr. George's Test Scores Show Best Gains Ever.' What is the superintendent want to do with these remarkable results? The superintendent said he hoped that the county and State leaders would see the test scores as a guarantee that learning will improve. I yield back the time to Senator Murray.

I yield back the time to Senator Murray.
Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seven minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. I yield 2½ minutes to the Senator from Washington and then 2½ to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from my home State for yielding me time on this amendment.

I applaud Senator MURRAY for her consistent and passionate support for education throughout her political career. Her advocacy for education has deep roots dating back to her early experience as a legislator working for more funding for schools in her own special experience in volunteering and schoolteaching children in the Shoreline area.

This amendment is very important for the reasons some of my colleagues have said. It will provide the type of flexibility our school systems need. It is something that has been proven to work, and this is a program that works. Over the last 2 years, when we say a program has worked, we can show success. Thanks to this program, 1.7 million children across the country and over 23,000 schools are benefitting from smaller class size, primarily in the early grades when children must need personal attention from their teachers. As we have heard from other speakers, smaller class size is better, and it has demonstrated an impact on increasing educational performance but also has helped to limit disciplinary problems.
and, importantly, small class size has helped encourage greater parental participation in their children’s education.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this legislation that will lead to better student achievement, fewer discipline problems, more individual attention, better parent-teacher communication, and dramatic results for poor and minority students. This program does provide flexibility. Up to 25 percent of these funds can be used for other purposes that a program cannot afford to cut but we need to continue because it is working.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I certainly thank the chairman, the sponsor of this amendment. I want to ask her if she would be kind enough to yield for a question.

Mrs. MURRAY. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. I have listened carefully to the Republican opposition to this amendment to reduce class size in America. I am stunned at the suggestion that putting fewer kids in classrooms does not create a better learning experience. I can recall raising one child, then two, then three, and how the challenge grew geometrically as the number of children grew. I can’t imagine facing a room full of 30 kids and saying it is just as good as to be in a room of 13 or 18 children.

The thing that is said repeatedly by one of our colleagues is that “this is a mandate.” I ask the Senator from Washington to say once and for all, are we mandating school districts to districts that they have to reduce class size with this amendment?

Mrs. MURRAY. I thank the Senator for his question. Let me make it very clear, this is not a mandate. This is funded that are available to school districts to use to decrease class size. School districts that need those funds dramatically can apply for them with a simple application. The funds go directly to them. They are able to use them. It is not a mandate.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator.

The difference here is that most of us come to this debate as former students and parents. Senator MURRAY comes as a former teacher—one of the few in this body who has the memory of classrooms of children and taught them. The rest of us here have been pupils sitting at desks or parents wondering how our kids are doing. She comes here saying lower class size gives teachers a better chance to reach children. It is not just her opinion, studies show it.

The STAR project in Tennessee, which has been followed for years, showed significant gains in smaller class size. In Chicago last week, Larry Hodges at the University of Chicago and Barbara Ney of the University of Tennessee produced a study that found that smaller class size in the early grades produced better math scores not only in the third grade but all the way into high school—a full 6 years after the student was in a small elementary school class.

It stands to reason. Think about how discouraging it must be for a child who has a special need or a problem to be ignored day after day, until they have lost all interest and fall behind. In a smaller class a teacher can reach out and pick out a child who needs special attention. This is not a mandate; it is an option that makes sense.

We have decided in this bill to focus on the needs for reading—and I support that—and the needs for technology—and I support that, too. Just because President Clinton came up with this idea doesn’t mean it is a bad one. It has worked. It has reduced the size of classes across America and has given kids a better chance. I don’t think that President Bush, who has called for bipartisanship, should have a negative attitude just because this idea came about on someone else’s watch. Aren’t there some good ideas on both the Democratic side and the Republican side that we might put into this bill?

Sadly, unfortunately, that is the part of this that we have overlooked. More than 29,000 teachers were hired with Class Size Reduction Program funds in 1999, benefitting approximately 1.7 million young students. This bill eliminates that program. To do that is to turn your back on basic human experience. A teacher with a smaller number of students is going to be a better teacher and the students will have a better chance.

I support the Senator’s amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, how much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 12 minutes 50 seconds on the Senator’s side and 1 minute on the other side.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield myself 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise to restate the significance of the vote that we will have in about 2 hours—actually 2 hours, as a matter of fact. It is a vote that will reflect the underlying principles of freedom—freedom to identify teacher and student needs in a way that is specific to the problem, to the challenge, to the need in the community, or in a school, and address the principle of who best decides how to accomplish the goal we all agree to, and that is boosting student achievement. Is it Washington, DC, the Federal Government, or is it parents, local communities, local schools, principals—the very people who can identify what the needs might be?

The legislation captured it all in many ways, and therefore I think that we, our colleagues, and the American people should follow closely how the votes go because the bill captures that principle of flexibility and local control versus sort of a one-size-fits-all programmatic approach, a categorical approach that has so characterized our efforts over the last 35 years.

In 1965, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act was passed. Since that time, there has been, literally, a litany of programs, not 10, 20, 30, or 40, but 50, 60, 70—up in the hundreds by some counts—of well-intended programs based on the idea that if there is a problem it can be fixed by Washington. For example, if there are too many students in classrooms in one part of the country; let’s try to fix it in Washington by telling the local communities how to spend their education dollars.

Mr. President, this is about freedom, the freedom of local communities to use federal resources—resources that come from the taxpayers, the people back home, wherever our homes may be—as they see fit. Those resources, those dollars, have then come to Washington, DC, where they are distributed through huge bureaucracies in these categorical programs—all well intended—but all of which have been layered one after another, and in the end we have as many programs as the President, who has called for bipartisanship, should have a negative attitude towards. I ask my colleagues: Should we try to fix it in Washington, DC, or should we give the flexibility to the local communities how to spend their education dollars?

What is good about the underlying bill, and why I strongly urge my colleagues to oppose the Murray amendment, is that we do not make that decision. The data is there. We do not force or encourage or incentivize the system to go one way, or the other in terms of class size reduction, teacher recruitment, or professional development versus hiring another teacher and reducing class size.

Our argument is about local control. School districts decide whether they can make that choice. Mr. President, I yield the floor and urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, in my last 1 minute, I will address two quick points. Our colleagues keep referring to local control. Mr. President, I introduce one devil of a bill against an amendment that it should be local control when this underlying bill itself requires Federally mandated testing, requires funding streams for reading, for technology, for 20 other programs? That is fundamentally a flawed argument against this.

Our argument is about local control. Local schools decide whether they want to reduce class size knowing they have a Federal partner if they want to reduce class size knowing they have a Federal partner if they want to reduce class size, for teacher training, for technology in the classroom, or some other priority to reduce the student achievement gap.

There is some data, as I mentioned—again, I am one who thinks class size is, indeed, an important issue. I just think it needs to be determined by a particular school or a particular district rather than by Washington, DC.

The New Hampshire Center for Public Policy Studies found student grades did not lead to better test scores, and that there was no difference in the achievement of students from small classrooms versus those from large classrooms.

In Dallas, researchers confirmed that one of the studies that was done at the University of Tennessee found that not only did high-quality teachers have an enormous impact on student achievement, but that low-quality teachers actually stunted the academic performance of their students.

We have a shortage of high-quality teachers. People who say class size is the only thing that has been spelled out over the course of the morning and last week—that there is a shortage of high-quality teachers.

We do need to invest—remember, the purpose of this bill is to invest in education because the role of the Federal Government is no longer spender but investor. We know this because after about $120 billion over 35 years, we are still not accomplishing our goal. So, it’s not just a matter of money but a matter of investment. If you are a prudent investor, which I believe that is the outcome is student achievement.

If we have compulsory class size reduction, basically we are putting more teachers in the classroom. But if we have a shortage of high-quality teachers, by definition it means we are going to be taking lower quality teachers.

The data outlined is clear: You actually harm children rather than help children if you are putting poor quality teachers in a classroom today and, therefore, it is very important that you weigh the relative importance of putting just bodies at the head of that classroom, versus children, against putting high quality people at the head of the class.

The point is, we give the school, the school district, the parents, the opportunity to make that choice based on the needs they identify—it could be through assessments, it could be identification of that local need in any way that school district or that school sees fit.

Our underlying bill is very different from the Murray amendment, which overrides the school district priorities, and overriding the school district priorities in many ways restricts that choice, that freedom. That is why I urge defeat of the Murray amendment and hope that Mr. President will join me in defeating that amendment.

Again, as has been outlined in the underlying bill, we stress professional development, as well as class size, but it must be a local choice.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, in my last minute, I will address two quick points. Our colleagues keep referring to local control. First, I keep hearing the Hanushek study referred to.

Let me remind my colleagues that the Hanushek study is based on study of pupil-teacher ratio which includes all of the certificated people in the building which is today almost everybody. Hanushek is fundamentally flawed because he does not look at class size. All of the studies that we have shown from Wisconsin, Tennessee, the RAND study, and the California study dramatically show that reducing class size increases student performance.

How tragic it will be if this Senate does not approve this amendment and keep the commitment to reducing class size that we began 3 years ago.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I seek recognition to comment on Senator Murray’s amendment regarding class-size reduction. Yesterday, I withdrew my amendment, amendment No. 388, which would have accomplished what I sought to do last year on the appropriations bill covering the Department of Education. I would have preferred to give class-size reduction in hiring new teachers a presumption among the various items which the Federal funds could be spent for on teachers. If a school district would make a determination that other issues—such as training teachers to improve the education of students with disabilities or those with limited English proficiency—are more important, then I believe Federal funds should be available for those purposes as they may be decided at the local level.

As chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee that is responsible for funding critical labor, health and education programs, I have sought to strike a balance between providing States and localities the flexibility they need to implement programs designed to improve the academic achievement of all students—thereby relieving them of Washington’s straightjacket—and placing the highest priority on those issues that we deem critical to the success of America’s schoolchildren.

I believe that we must weight carefully the flexibility our States and school districts need to improve student achievement with priority programs such as class-size reduction. The underlying bill will permit the Federal funds to be used for class-size reduction by hiring more teachers although it lacks the impetus which a presumption would have given.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 having arrived, the Senate stands in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m. Thereupon, at 12:30 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2:15 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. THOMAS).

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S4913

BETTER EDUCATION FOR STUDENTS AND TEACHERS ACT—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We will now resume consideration of the Murray amendment No. 378. There are 5 minutes equally divided before the vote.

The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, in a minute we are going to be voting on a very important amendment which reduces class size in first, second, and third grades and continue the commitment this Congress has made in the last three years.

Frankly, I cannot believe the Senate just spent 20 hours debating whether or not smaller class size makes a difference. We know it makes a difference. Any teacher, parent, or student will tell you that, and we have the research that proves it.

This is our opportunity to support the progress being made in schools across the country and to show that we are willing to invest in the things that work. If our colleagues vote against this amendment, in September when parents find their kids back in overcrowded classrooms, they are going to be upset. They are going to want to know why you voted against smaller classes. You can tell them about flexibility, choice, and funding pools, but the hard truth is, none of those buzzwords will help their kids learn to read when they are fighting just to get a teacher’s attention. The choice we make today will demonstrate whether or not our children are going to be the at-risk group they are fighting just to get a teacher for. I urge my colleagues to oppose this class size amendment.

I oppose the class size reduction amendment because I believe local schools are in a better position than we are to determine how best to distribute funding in regard to professional development and hiring practices. S. 1 gives local school districts the opportunity to make their own decisions about the expenditure of dollars for the purpose of improving their teacher corps, which, in turn, will hopefully lead to gains in overall student performance. I urge my colleagues to oppose this class size amendment.

Mr. President, I yield back the remaining time on my side.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are premature. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. MILLER (after having voted in the negative). Mr. President, on this vote, I have a live pair with the Senator from Hawaii, Mr. AKAKA. If he were present and voting, he would vote “yea.” If I were permitted to vote, I would vote “nay.” I, therefore, withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 50, as follows:

(a) STuDY.—

(1) In General.—The Director of the National Institutes of Health and the Secretary of Education jointly shall—

(A) conduct a study regarding how exposure to violent entertainment (such as movies, music, television, Internet content, video games, and arcade games) affects children’s cognitive development and educational achievement; and

(B) submit a final report to Congress regarding the study.

(2) PLAN.—The Director and the Secretary jointly shall submit to Congress, not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, a plan for the conduct of the study.

(3) INTERIM REPORTS.—The Director and the Secretary jointly shall submit to Congress annual interim reports regarding the study until the final report is submitted under paragraph (1)(B).

(b) INFORMATION.—Section 411(b)(3) of the National Education Statistics Act of 1984 (20 U.S.C. 901(b)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following: ‘‘Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, in carrying out the National Assessment the Committees shall gather data regarding how much time children spend on various forms of entertainment, such as music, movies, television, Internet content, video games, and arcade games.’’.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to urge the adoption of this amendment to S. 1. I am delighted to be joined in this effort by my friend and colleague, Senator KOHL from Wisconsin. I would also like to thank the chairperson of the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions for his work in securing the passage of this amendment. I think this is a non-controversial amendment so I am going to summarize the point.

Over the past several years, we have had a number of hearings by this Congress about the impact of entertainment, particularly violent entertainment, on children, and the accessibility of such entertainment to children. This last summer we had the six major health organizations in the country—the American Medical Association, American Psychiatric Association, American Academy of Pediatrics, and others—sign a statement which said that exposing children to violent entertainment can actually cause increases in aggression and hostility and decreases in empathy.

Since then, there have also been reports of studies focusing on how violent entertainment affects a child’s brain activity. Less than a month ago, USA Today reported on a study conducted by Professor John Murray of Kansas State University. It showed the results of MRIs taken of children who were watching violent film clips. The reporter concluded: ‘‘The scans showed that violent film clips activated children’s brains in a distinctive, potentially violence-producing pattern. Although children may consciously know..." that violence on the screen isn’t real, their brains are treating it as gospel truth.”

We know that a young child’s mind goes through extraordinary development, particularly before the age of 7. We know that exposure on this—early life can profoundly affect both what they think about and how they think. New research has provided interesting insights into how parents can create the best learning environment and most encouraging learning environment for children—what influences and factors will encourage the healthiest development of a child’s intellect and cognition and enhance their abilities as they develop and move forward in life.

Despite these studies and their implications for the way a young child’s mind grows and develops, as well as how they perform in school, there has been very little study on how exposure to entertainment, particularly violent entertainment, affects their cognitive development. This is not a data gap; it is a chasm. And it needs to be filled.

It is in the public interest to find out what the impact of exposing children to violent entertainment has on their cognitive development. It is also in the parent’s best interests, as well as in the best interests of children, and, obviously, it is in the best interests of this country. Therefore, the amendment I am proposing, along with my colleague Senator Kohn, would be a first step in addressing this data chasm.

It calls for a study on how children’s cognitive and academic achievement are affected by exposure to violent entertainment. It calls on the National Institutes of Health and the Department of Education to jointly work out a plan for conducting this study, subject to congressional approval, and to report its findings.

The more we know about how our children’s young minds are formed and cultivated, the better we can educate, nurture, and care for them. This amendment is an important step towards realizing that goal.

In conclusion, let me say this: We know that currently children in America spend more time in front of a television, a computer screen, or a play station than they do in school. They certainly spend more time in front of one of those screens than they do talking with their parents. We know children spend a large portion of their waking hours focused on entertainment, and we can assume that it has some impact on their thoughts, attitudes, and even abilities. But what we do not know yet is what exposure to violent entertainment does to a child’s cognitive abilities. Some of the early studies seem to be very troubling about what it is doing to a child’s brain. That is why we are asking for this study, so we can learn about this much better.

Mr. President, I wonder if Senator Jeffords, the manager of the bill, would be willing to engage me in a short colloquy concerning the pending Brownback-Kohl amendment. I thank the managers of the bill for their willingness to include our amendment in the education bill. We think this is an important addition to the work of the Senate and the House and the legislation Congress and the Department of Education are working on and the tool for evaluating the effect of violent entertainment on the cognitive development and educational achievement of our children.

It is the Senate’s intention when we go to conference in the House to make every effort to assure that the Brownback-Kohl amendment is included in the final version of the bill?

Mr. Jeffords. Mr. President, this amendment has been cleared on both sides of the aisle. We all agree that the Brownback-Kohl amendment, which would gather data on the use of violent entertainment by children through the National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint National Assessment of Educational Attainment and require a joint

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. President, it is entirely appropriate that we study the impact of violence in the media on young people. The prevalence of violent behavior is alarming and we should carefully scrutinize the causes of that violence.

It will be very helpful to learn which types of imaging and broadcasting have causal links to violent behavior. A great deal of research has already been conducted in this area. For example, researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have studied the impact of violent images in movies, television and video games and have come against a presumption that there is an isolated cause and effect between violent images and violent action.

I also believe that access to guns is indisputably part of this critical problem. There is no one individual cause of this disturbing social pattern and we should avoid simplifying either this problem or our solution to it.

However, many young people spend a great deal of time watching television and movies and we should explore incentives to the industry to provide entertaining material that is nonviolent. Industry leaders need a willingness to incorporate improved warnings for parents to monitor the programming that their children do watch, and we should all do what we can to make these worthwhile tools accessible and understandable.

We should be ready also to acknowledge that the entertainment industry is not solely responsible for increasing violent behavior in our youngest citizens.

The Senate should also improve a broad range of opportunities for children to help them achieve to their fullest expectations and dreams. We can increase funding for Early Start and Head Start. We can improve the learning experience of children once they enter school, including reducing class size and teacher quality.

I have sponsored—and I have worked very closely with the Senator from Mississippi, Mr. Bennett—and our Ready to Learn legislation to ensure that time spent watching television by young preschool children will be entertaining and educational. With a modest $15 million Federal appropriation, public broadcasting has created effective educational programming that develops skills necessary for success when a child enters a classroom for the first time.

Accompanying material is provided for parents, caregivers and other family members to encourage reading in the child’s home environment. We should be tripling funding for this program, but instead, this bill seeks to eliminate it.

The number of awards that those programs for children have been nominated for has been truly amazing. There have been over 40 Emmys for all the ready-to-learn programs. ‘Between the Lions’ has really been an extraordinary success. It and its Web site have won several awards. The series won the Parents’ Choice Gold Award for best show for kids aged 4 to 7. It was recently named the Best Children’s Show in the country by the National Association of Broadcasters and the Critic’s Association. It has just been nominated for several Academy Awards. And the Web site won two awards in the fall of 2000: Best Children’s Entertainment Site from the Massachusetts Interactive Media Council and Best Kids Web Entertainment from NewsMedia.com’s Invision Awards.

We welcome the Senator’s amendment and think it is entirely appropriate one. We also recognize there are important additional matters to which we should guide focus.

I support a serious examination of the impact that violence in the media has on young children. I am, as well, hopeful we can also improve the educational components of our media.

As I know the Senator is aware, we attempted, for a number of years, to make that as a condition for the relicensing. What happened, of course, is that it is a condition we lost because we would find that with the application the broadcasting industry would just label programs as children's programs, and they never really carried forward the effect of that.

We have been remarkably unsuccessful in monitoring and affecting the kind of violence there is on television. But when we provided a very limited amount of incentives for the development of children's programs, and worked those through public broadcasting, we have had some amazing success.

I look forward to working with the Senator in terms of getting this study, this review, and also working with him to try to see what can be developed to attract families, and particularly parents with their children, to watch the programs on television that can be useful, positive, constructive, and, hopefully, educational and helpful to the children as well.

I urge acceptance of the Senator's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPRO), The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. CRAPRO. Mr. President, I do not believe there is any objection to the amendment.

I yield to the Senator on his amendment.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I believe we are ready to proceed to a voice vote on the amendment. Unless the Senator from North Carolina would care to address the amendment, I think it would be appropriate for us to proceed to voice vote. I call for a voice vote at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 413.

The amendment (No. 413) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BROWNBACK. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 462 TO AMENDMENT NO. 358

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide for an independent analysis to measure school district achievement)

On page 679, after line 25, add the following:

"(6) support for arrangements that provide for independent analysis to measure and report on school district achievement.");

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, my amendment is very simple and straightforward. It deals with the issue of testing.

Much of our education bill we have been discussing for the last several days and much of the administration's proposal is modeled after what has been done in North Carolina. In North Carolina, we have had in place for a number of years a very vigorous measurement and testing regime. In fact, we already have annual testing in reading and math in grades 3 through 8, which is precisely what is being proposed by the administration and is incorporated into this bill.

This testing process has played a very important role in allowing us to measure student performance in North Carolina and also to identify low-performing schools so we can make an intense effort to turn those schools around.

What I have learned from visiting our schools and talking with students and teachers is that testing in and of itself is not an end. It is a means. From talking to students and teachers and at town hall meetings talking to parents about this testing procedure that has been used in North Carolina, I have learned that there is a great deal of concern that students are spending too much time on the tests and teachers are spending too much time in the classroom teaching to the test.

It has gotten to the point where some students and some teachers believe the tests dominate the classroom. And because of the way the tests are given and administered and the kinds of tests that are given, it can sometimes be counterproductive to the learning process.

What we are doing in this amendment is providing that States can go to private parties to have the testing in a particular school district to determine whether it is working, how effective it is, and also to make comparisons with the testing being used in that school district as compared to the testing being used in another school district someplace else in the country.

The basic theory is these private outside firms can identify school districts where the testing is working, where it is effective, where it has as little interference as possible, and compare the process, inside the classroom so the teachers, the students, and the parents feel the testing process is working. It allows them to measure but, at the same time, it doesn't interfere with the substantive learning process of the students, for the students and the teacher.

The basic idea is the State is allowed to contract with these outside firms which can evaluate the testing programs and compare them with testing programs in other places across the country.

The amendment does not authorize any new money. It simply allows States to conduct this type of analysis. The purpose of this amendment and its thrust is to focus on testing, allow States to identify testing methods and procedures that are, in fact, working. It is a specific effort to address a concern I have heard expressed over and over from students, from teachers, and from parents; that is, to have a testing system and a measurement system that provides us with the information we need but at the same time does as little as possible to interfere with the teaching process and with the learning process.

I thank my colleagues for their support and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina has given additional focus on a very key element in this legislation; that is, the information made available to parents. His amendment will add an additional dimension in terms of the possible accuracy and types of information so it can be easily understood and utilized by parents so they can understand what is happening in the schools their children are attending.

In the existing legislation, there is the requirement that the States will provide information to the parents. What the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina does is allow the States the ability for the States themselves to get, through this contracting arrangement, the up-to-date, most advanced, most relevant, comprehensive information that can possibly be developed. It gives that option to the States and provides it to the parents. It is incredibly important.

This is one of the underlying concepts of the legislation; that is, that the parents become involved. We want them to be involved, and there are ample provisions in the legislation to have them involved. We want to get the parents involved. Part of a very powerful tool to get them involved is giving them information about what is happening in the school and what the condition of the school is.

We have provided in the legislation a range of different information that will be available in the report card. The Senator from North Carolina, with this additional amendment, can give the assurance that if the State wants to work through this kind of arrangement, the information may very well be much more available and usable and current for the parent. That is very important.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report. The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAYTON], for himself, Mr. CORZINE, and Mr. WELLSTONE, proposes an amendment numbered 622, as modified.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I may have to object. We haven’t seen a copy of it yet.

Mr. KENNEDY. Parliamentary inquiry. The Senator is permitted to modify his amendment. We haven’t asked for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DAYTON. I will make it a second degree.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was a filing in for first-degree amendments. That does constitute Senate action which would then require that the Senator does need consent to modify.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, we have no objection to the amendment, as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 622), as modified, is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act to fully fund 40 percent of the average per pupil expenditure for programs under part B of such Act.)

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. 6. AMENDMENT TO THE INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT.

Notwithstanding any other amendment made by or pursuant to section 611(j) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1411(j)), subsection (j) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

(j) FUNDING.—For the purpose of carrying out this part, other than section 619, there are authorized to be appropriated, and there are appropriated:

(1) $12,347,001,000 for fiscal year 2002;

(2) not more than $18,370,317,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2003;

(3) not more than $19,048,787,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2004;

(4) not more than $19,719,918,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2005;

(5) not more than $20,393,202,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2006;

(6) not more than $21,067,600,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2007;

(7) not more than $21,742,019,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2008; and

(8) not more than $22,423,068,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2009; and

(9) not more than $23,095,622,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2010; and

(10) not more than $23,751,456,000, or the sum of the maximum amount that all States may receive under subsection (a)(2), whichever is lower, for fiscal year 2011.

This amendment would bring the Federal share of funding for special education up to its long-promised 40 percent level in 2 years.

I greatly admire the efforts of my senior colleagues, the authors of this legislation, who have negotiated the previous agreement which is now contained in the legislation. I applaud their efforts and I support their work.

However, I would like to see their timetable for funding 40 percent of the costs of special education accelerated. That is the promise I made to Minnesota educators, parents, and students.

The failure of the Federal Government to pay for 40 percent of the cost of special education is a broken promise which now extends for 25 years. This unfunded Federal mandate is having devastating consequences for schools all across Minnesota.

Federal law requires that the Federal share of funding for special education services to students with disabilities and special needs, but it does not provide the funds necessary for them. There is no question that school districts must provide them and should provide them. But without the necessary and long-promised funding from the Federal Government, Minnesota school districts must take money away from other students and from other education programs. In Minnesota, that means local property taxes must be increased to make up the shortfall.

Yet even then there is still not enough money available to do justice to all students. These schools are blamed, teachers are blamed, and even students are blamed. Yet the failure is ours. The failure is our unwillingness to provide the funding necessary to allow schools to succeed, teachers to succeed, and students to succeed.

Without my amendment, we are saying: Yes, we recognize our responsibility. We intend to finally keep our promise, but we need 6 more years to do so. That is too much procrastination.

The recently passed budget resolution said that Congress can afford huge tax cuts for the very wealthiest Americans, but we cannot afford to keep our promises to the schoolchildren of America, especially those who have the greatest needs.

That is just plain wrong.

It is time to put our money where our mouths are. We can no longer hide behind the claim that we don’t have the funds to do what is right. We have the money. The question is, Do we have the will to spend some of it on behalf of better education for all of America’s children? That is the decision we must make today on this amendment.

My amendment would increase education funding by $12 billion in fiscal year 2002 and by $18 billion in fiscal year 2003. That is a lot of money, no doubt about it. But it is less than one-fifth the cost of the proposed tax cuts for 2002, and less than one-third of the tax cuts proposed for 2003. We could still cut the income tax reduction for middle-income working Americans, and even for upper income Americans, and still keep our promise to fund 40 percent of America’s special education costs.

That is the decision before us today. That is the question which my amendment addresses.

On behalf of Minnesota’s schoolchildren, I urge the Senate to adopt this amendment. Its benefits will accrue to every classroom, in every school, in every school district throughout America. It will help take the President’s words: “leave no child behind” and make them a living reality for millions of schoolchildren throughout our country.

I am reminded of the title of the old television show, “Truth or Consequences.” Either we tell the truth or we face the consequences. The truth is that we are not meeting our financial commitment to public education throughout America. The truth is that the Federal Government has mandated important special services to children with special needs for the last 25 years but has not provided its promised funding necessary to fulfill this pledge.

The consequences of our failures are children throughout America who are not receiving the special education they need and deserve. The consequences are lost hopes, lost dreams, and lost lives.

It is time to tell the truth. This amendment will restore the truth to a 25-year unfunded mandate.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate’s passage of this amendment.

I yield back my time.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WELLS—STONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLS—STONE. Mr. President, I rise to speak for and offer my strong support to my colleague from Minnesota, Senator DAYTON. My understanding is I am an original cosponsor, along with Senator Hagel, that this amendment will not take much time. There are other colleagues who are on the floor.

This amendment fully funds the IDEA program within 2 years, and the spending will be mandatory. Because of the special rules regarding mandatory spending, my understanding is this amendment will require 60 votes for it to be adopted.

To give some sense of the impact IDEA full funding will have on some school districts in Minnesota, Minneapolis will receive around $16 million; St. Paul, $15 million; Duluth will receive around $4.5 million; Blue Earth area public schools will receive around $550,000; Deer River will receive $419,000; and Walnut Grove will receive $54,000.

For those who do not know each of these towns, they probably know Minneapolis and St. Paul. I am also giving some greater Minnesota examples so no one will labor under the misunderstanding that this amendment only applies to urban or metropolitan areas. It is terribly important to rural areas as well.

We have had some other important amendments dealing with IDEA, and, in particular, there was the Harkin-Hagel amendment which passed last week. That was to fully fund IDEA and also to make it mandatory. That was to provide full funding over a 6-year period.

I commend the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Nebraska for their work. I also want to say this about the Senator from Iowa. I do not think there is another Senator—one has to be careful when one says this because one doesn’t want to slight anybody, but I think there has been nobody in the Senate who has been, if you will, more there for children and adults with disabilities than Senator Hagel. The IDEA program in some ways is Tom Harkin’s idea. This is who he is.

The amendment that was adopted is terribly important, and Senator Hagel’s support was critical as well. We also have done some other work on this education bill that is critically important.

The real importance of this amendment and what Senator DAYTON is saying and the reason this is a joint effort by both Senators from Minnesota—I worry a lot about what we are doing on this education bill. I worry about what we are doing for a couple of different reasons. I will try to make a couple quick points. I say to the Senator from Missouri and also to my friend from Arkansas.

I have not even had a chance to read this article yet today, but I was skimming reading a piece where I saw—and this is really important—a reference to a letter or a statement that has been put out by Dr. Robert Coles and Dr. Albert Poussant who are two child psychologists in the case of Coles, a psychiatrist, and maybe Dr. Poussant is a psychiatrist as well. They have done the best work with children in the country. Robert Coles has written 46 books on children. I remember assigning one of his books to my students called “Children in Crisis.”

I say to the Senator from Vermont, their letter is a plea to the Senate not to rush to these tests.

What they are saying is—these are now my words—you are taking the childhood away from children. They are finding 8-year-olds and 9-year-olds who are under tremendous stress and showing signs of being under tremendous stress because of all these tests they are now taking.

We have to think this through. Some of the amendments I have—and I hope to have as many of them adopted as possible, and I appreciate the support from other colleagues—are to make sure we do this the best possible way.

In my own mind, I raise the philosophical question: Would the Federal Government be telling every school district in every State to test every child starting at age 8 all the way every year to age 13? I do not know whether we should even be doing this. Should we be doing this to these little children? I am not sure we should. That is a philosophical question, and I will now put it aside.

The second problem is whether the resources are going to be there. I want to again put my colleagues on notice, not in a confrontational way, but I want them to know there are a couple of amendments I have prepared that I look forward to offering which basically say: When we adopt these amendments that authorize money, that does not mean it will ever happen, so we have to make sure we are doing this the right way, but that the funding will be available, be it the IDEA program—that is what is so important about Senator DAYTON’s amendment—for children with special needs, be it title I for children who come from economically disadvantaged families so that there is more help for reading, more help for after-school programs, more help for good teachers and teaching assistants, you name it—which will be another amendment which I, frankly, think is just as important, especially if we are going to start testing 8-year-olds, third grade. That is a forever coming thing so far more important in determining how that child is going to do—maybe not at age 13, but at age 8—far more important than the teacher, although good teachers are always critically important, and far more important than reduced class size, far more important than whether the school is inviting and a good facility is whether or not that child came to kindergarten ready to learn. So the issue is, if we are going to start testing 8-year-olds, then we do that. We fully fund the Head Start Program, and that includes Early Head Start.

I am convinced, the more I think about this moving beyond Head Start, that we have to get to the point where, for the next 3-year-olds ahead, it could be optional—you need to pay teachers who do this work decent salaries. The Head Start Program is optional for families, but every family has that opportunity, and we fund it with our overall goal of public education. We really need to get real about it.

I think the context for Senator DAYTON’s amendment is twofold. No. 1, for Minnesota, let me repeat these figures: Minneapolis, an additional $16 million; St. Paul, $15 million; Duluth, $4.5 million; Blue Earth Area Public School, St. Paul, $15 million; Duluth, $4.5 million; Minneapolis, an additional $16 million; St. Paul, $15 million; Duluth, $4.5 million; Blue Earth Area Public School. Senator DAYTON, in this effort.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending business and call up amendment No. 555.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the amendment. The clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. HUTCHINSON] proposes an amendment numbered 555.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 555), as modified, is as follows:

(A) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) Service in the Armed Forces of the United States is voluntary.

(2) Recruiting high quality persons in the numbers necessary to maintain the strengths of the Armed Forces authorized by Congress is vital to the United States national defense.

(3) Recruiting high quality members is very challenging, and as a result, Armed Forces recruiters must devote extraordinary time and effort to their work in order to fill monthly requirements for immediate accessions.

(4) In meeting goals for recruiting high quality men and women, each of the Armed Forces faces competition from the other Armed Forces, from the private sector, and from institutions offering postsecondary education.

(5) Despite a variety of innovative approaches taken by recruiters, and the extensive benefits that are available to those who join the Armed Forces, it is becoming increasingly difficult for the Armed Forces to meet recruiting goals.

(6) A number of high schools have denied recruiters access to students or to student directory information.

(7) In 1999, the Army was denied access to students or student directory information on 4,515 occasions, the Navy was denied access to students or student directory information on 3,634 occasions, and the Air Force was denied access to students or student directory information on 5,465 occasions.

(8) As of the beginning of 2000, nearly 25 percent of all high schools in the United States did not release student directory information requested by Armed Forces recruiters.

(9) In testimony presented to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate, recruiters stated that the single biggest obstacle to recruiting high quality young men in numbers sufficient to maintain the readiness of the Armed Forces and to provide for the national defense is a lack of access to student directory information. Denying recruiters direct access to students and to student directory information unfairly hurts the youth of the United States, as it prevents students from receiving important informational and training benefits offered by the Armed Forces and impacts students’ decision making on careers by limiting the information on the options available to them.

(11) Denying recruiters direct access to students and to student directory information undermines United States national defense by making it more difficult to recruit high quality young Americans in numbers sufficient to maintain the readiness of the Armed Forces and to provide for the national defense.

(12) Section 503 of title 10, United States Code, requires local educational agencies, as of July 1, 2002, to provide recruiters access to secondary schools on the same basis that those agencies provide access to representatives of colleges, universities, and private sector employers.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the Secretary of Education, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, should, not later than July 1, 2001, establish a year-long campaign to educate principals, school administrators, and other educators regarding career opportunities in the Armed Forces, as a standard required under section 503 of title 10, United States Code.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Since I became chairman of the Armed Services Personnel Subcommittee last year, the subcommittee has conducted two hearings on recruiting. This has been a real eye opener to me, to listen to these front-line military recruiters about the obstacles they face in doing a very important job for the U.S. military. I think the story about the career opportunities they might have serving in the U.S. military.

I was stunned to discover that more than 4,000 high schools across the Nation, which routinely allow colleges, employers, and class ring companies access to students, are denying access to recruiters from one or more of our military services.

In 1999, the last year in which accurate figures are available, the Army was denied access by 4,515 schools; the Navy was denied access by 3,634 schools; the Marine Corps was denied access by 4,884 schools; and the Air Force was denied access by 5,465 high schools in the United States.

This, I suggest, is a national disgrace. Our Armed Forces protect America’s freedoms, and uniformed recruiters should be denied access to almost one-quarter of America’s young people because, many times, of the arbitrary decision of a high school principal or a high school superintendent.

Denial of access undermines our national defense by making it even more difficult to recruit high-quality young Americans in numbers sufficient to maintain the readiness of our All-Volunteer Force.

Denying recruiters direct access to students and student directory information also unfairly hurts America’s youth. It prevents students from receiving important information on the educational and training benefits offered by the Armed Forces and impairs students’ decisionmaking by hiding the careers available to them.

When I became aware that our recruiters whom we ask to do one of the most difficult jobs in the military, to go out and recruit young men and women to go into our military at pay that is limited from what they would get in the private sector, in an almost full-employment economy, we were asking them to do that with one hand tied behind their backs because they were going to be denied access to one-quarter of the students, I offered a provision in last year’s defense authorization bill which would, effective July 1, 2001, require high schools to provide recruiters for the armed services both physical and directory access equal to that provided to colleges and prospective employers.

If the high school wants to have an across-the-board policy of no access to their students—no employers, no colleges—then certainly they could apply that to our recruiters. But if they are going to say class ring companies can come on, colleges and institutions of higher learning can come on to the campus and recruit, industries can come on and recruit for careers, then we say that military recruiters should have access on the same basis.

If such access is not granted, a recruiter must report the denial to his or her respective service. This report will trigger, then, a series of visits and written notifications by the Department of Defense personnel culminating in the Secretary of Defense contacting the relevant Governor and asking for help in restoring access to the offending high school.

Any school district in America would have the opportunity to opt out of the law if the local school board voted publicly to discriminate against recruiters from the Armed Forces. But no more simply shall a superintendent or a principal making a determination on their own, have whatever reason, because of a bad experience or whatever they might have had, that might motivate them to prevent these recruiters from access. It would have to go to a public vote of the elected representatives, elected school board, before they could opt out of the law. Any high school that continued to discriminate against recruiters from the Armed Forces without the support of such a vote would open itself to lawsuits in Federal court.

We are rapidly approaching July 1, 2001, which will mark 1 year until the new law becomes effective. We have already heard from many recruiters that they are finding that high schools are simply not aware of the public law that changed Federal policy and the fact it is going to go into effect in just a little over a year. So as thousands of high schools, yet ignorant of the pending change in the law, continue to discriminate against uniformed recruiters, I think now is the time for a national wake-up call concerning this denial of access that continues to this day.

My amendment states that:

It is the sense of the Senate that the Secretary of Education, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, should establish a year-long campaign to educate principals, school administrators, and other educators regarding the armed forces and the Armed Forces and the access standard (that is required under this new law).

I think it is very important that recruiters as they go across this country have the support of the Congress in the sense that these principals, these superintendents, and school administrators are aware that we have changed the public policy. There will be a new law in effect.

There will be a new law in effect, and the only way they can deny that access is when they go before the elected school board members and have a public vote to that effect.

I hope my colleagues will unanimously support a very commonsense and patriotic amendment.

I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered. Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, the quality classrooms amendment provides flexibility for our schools. I am delighted that the Senate has recognized the need to provide our schools with more choices, not more mandates. The amendment allows for the hiring of teaching specialists, the development of alternative educational programs, and year-round school schedules. It will recognize, reward, and encourage promising reform efforts.

I thank the managers for their assistance with the quality classrooms amendment. I greatly appreciate the suggestions that Senator JEFFORDS and his staff have offered. I am also grateful to Senator KENNEDY and his staff for their assistance and for their hard work throughout the education debate. I am proud to be a part of this debate. I am confident that our efforts in behalf of public education will bring greater opportunity to our Nation’s children.

I understand that the managers have agreed to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 448) was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.
The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside temporarily so that I might call up an amendment.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 564 TO AMENDMENT NO. 358

(Purpose: To encourage States to require each expelled or suspended student to perform community service for the period of the expulsion or suspension)
Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 564.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.
The legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Byrd] proposes an amendment numbered 564 to amendment No. 358. (The text of the amendment is printed in the RECORD of May 9, 2001 under “Amendments Submitted and Proposed.”)

AMENDMENT NO. 564, AS MODIFIED
Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I send to the desk a modification to the amendment. Do I need to ask unanimous consent?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.
Mr. BYRD. I do that.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?
Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is so modified.
Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be waived.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The amendment (No. 564), as modified, is as follows:

SEC. 4141. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.
“In addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 4004, there are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 for State grants to encourage States to carry out programs under which students expelled or suspended from schools in the States are required to perform community service.

SEC. 4142. ALLOTMENTS.
“(a) IN GENERAL.—From the amount made available under section 4141, the Secretary shall allocate among the States—

“(1) one-half according to the ratio between the school-aged population of each State and the school-aged population of all the States; and

“(2) one-half according to the ratio between the amount each State received under section 1124A for the preceding year and the sum of such amounts received by all the States.

“(b) MINIMUM.—For any fiscal year, no State shall be allotted under this section an amount that is less than one-half of 1 percent of the total amount allotted to all the States under this section.

“(c) REALLOPMENT.—The Secretary may reallocate the allotments among the States if the Secretary determines that the State will be unable to use such amount within 2 years of such allotment. Such reallocations shall be made on the same basis as allotments are made under subsection (a).

“(d) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term ‘State’ means each of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, many young people in our schools today are suspended or expelled, somewhat unlike the days when I was in high school. They took care of the bad ones right there on the spot when I was there. But today a lot of them are suspended. A number of children in our schools are expelled or suspended for violent or dangerous behavior. And I am all for that. I am all for suspensions and expulsions where warranted, but what then? In today’s home, all too often, both parents work. The suspended or expelled students may be left to his or her own devices. Many counties send expelled students to alternative schools, but alternative schools do not always follow the same procedure, the same schedule as regular public schools, again leaving children on their own for portions of the school day. And an idle mind is the devil’s workshop.

An idle young person with no supervision is a child who can easily get into trouble. A violent young person expelled for serious breaches of behavior could even be a menace to the community at large. Some children actually misbehave in school, I am told, in the hopes of being suspended or expelled with the notion that they will be able to enjoy a brief respite from their school classes.
The amendment which I have offered and which has now been modified would encourage States to create a program that enrolls suspended and expelled youth in community service programs. You see, put them to work at something that encourages them to become builders, not wreckers, of buildings. The purpose of this amendment then is twofold. First, it would occupy young people who have been suspended or expelled. It would put those idle hands to work. Instead of hanging around or street corners or roaming around the shopping malls, these youths would participate in community service activities that give them structure, that promote a work ethic, and send the message that being suspended from school is not a vacation.

Second, this program would give back to the community. Too often the young people of the “me” generation—the “me” generation—do not consider that we are a society, and that each member of that society has a responsibility to the other people in that society. By performing community service, these young people would be making a contribution to the community which would give them a sense of doing for others, perhaps even opening their eyes to the problems of those around them.

My amendment would provide $50 million to allow States to coordinate a program which puts suspended and expelled students to work. Whether it is picking up litter, whacking weeds, painting fences, or mowing the grass, participating in public service activities will provide these young people with an alternative activity that helps to better their communities, and to better their lives.

Wordsworth wrote, “Small service is true service while it lasts.” I urge my colleagues to support my amendment which authorizes this amount of money and helps to point troubled students toward true service to their communities, their country, and help them to become good, productive citizens.

I yield the floor.
Mr. President, if I may be recognized again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from Nevada, the Democratic whip, be made a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I am very happy to have a voice vote if Senators are so inclined.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, as I understand it, we are ready to vote on the Byrd amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I ask for the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 564, as modified.

The amendment (No. 564), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Vermont who is the majority manager of the bill. He is very gracious to accept the amendment. I also thank Mr. KENNEDY who likewise was supportive of the amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWN). The Senator from Arizona.

AMENDMENT NO. 577 TO AMENDMENT NO. 598

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside to call up amendment No. 477, which was previously filed. I send it to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate now adjourns to reconvene at 2:15 p.m. tomorrow.

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 2. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING TRANSMITTAL OF S. 27 TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.

SEC. 3. TRANSMITTAL OF S. 27 TO HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN] proposes an amendment numbered 477 to amendment No. 358.

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate that S. 27, the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2001, as passed by the Senate on April 2nd should be engrossed and transmitted to the House of Representatives without further delay.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN]—

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN]—

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, this is the Senate’s only opportunity to speak for the American people on this very, very, very important legislation.

I urge my colleagues, those who support campaign finance reform, to agree to this amendment.

The minority in this body has a great opportunity to express what I hope is the majority will of the Senate.

I want to talk for a second about this legislation to the other body. By not sending this and any other legislation that originates in the Senate over to the other body, we may be beginning a very dangerous precedent.

One can speculate—and I will not—on the reasons why this legislation is not being transmitted to the other body as is our custom. I say to my colleagues in all seriousness, if this practice is conditioned, watch out if you prevail and it is against the majority leader’s wishes for that bill to be sent over to the other body. By not sending this and other legislation passed by the Senate over to the other body, we may be beginning a very dangerous precedent.

I am very aware that this amendment is not relevant to the education bill, although obviously, as I mentioned, we educate our children in ways that we may have to at least amend in this book. I hope we don’t have to. But I want to assure my colleagues, as soon as this bill is transmitted to the other body, I will be the first to stand up and ask unanimous consent to withdraw this from the legislation because I don’t want to encumber the education bill with this issue. But when I see, after the long, hard struggle that I have been through, along now with a majority of the Senate, to achieve a legislative result that is a legislative result stymied at least temporarily in a procedural fashion, as far as I can see an unprecedented fashion, then I have to seek whatever vehicle I can to express what I hope is the majority will of the Senate.

I hope we can get this issue behind us. I strongly believe it has more importance than even the campaign finance reform bill itself, if this practice is allowed to become a precedent, what is being done with this legislation.

I might add, it was about 3 weeks ago that by accident I found out that it was not going to be sent over to the other body. I was not even notified that this legislation was not going to be sent over.

Once we did discover it, then I went to the majority leader. I asked on numerous occasions if he would send this bill over. The majority leader, yesterday morning, stated that under no circumstances would he do so.

I have no alternative than to move to get the Senate to the Senate on this issue and then if that doesn’t succeed, then we will have to obviously use what other parliamentary options we have.
After a long and fair and, in many ways, illuminating and elevating debate on this issue and having a result achieved, and then to have it not even sent over to the other body, is a great disservice. I hope it will be rectified as soon as possible. I ask for the yeas and nays at a time determined by the leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McCAIN. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am happy to join with the Senator from Arizona in offering this amendment. Actually, that is not true. I am not really happy, in offering the amendment; I am disappointed and puzzled. Because this amendment should be totally unnecessary. It is unnecessary because by instructing the enrolling clerk not to transmit S. 27 to the House, the majority leader is frustrat ing the will of the Senate and of the American people for no apparent reason.

I was pleased with the debate we had on campaign finance reform back in late March. Not only because we finally were able to have a real debate, vote on amendments, and ultimately pass a good bill, but also because I thought the Senate acquitted itself extremely well under difficult circumstances. Both sides played fair in that debate. The majority leader kept his word not to filibuster the bill.

The opponents fought hard but did not drag out the proceedings unnecessarily. I think we kept our word as well, even though there were amendments added that we did not necessarily approve of or like a great deal. We did not offer a cleanup amendment before the end of the debate to wipe out or amend the Senate’s additions. I would have liked to have had a technical amendment; I am disappointed and puzzled.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, in offering this amendment, I do not mean to detract from the good work that we offered and we voted on in that debate. The majority leader kept his word not to filibuster the bill.
reach children of the 0-to-3 age. It is important we invest in these efforts. It is a biological fact that development of a child’s brain reaches its maximum at the age of 5. All the development takes place prior to that time. It is enormously important the child have, up to that age, as many positive influences as possible.

We are going to battle the issues of funding for early intervention of children—the Early Start Program—the Head Start Program, which are only funded at about 40 percent, and the child care programs as well. We have had a good debate on funding IDEA, and we had a very powerful bipartisan vote in the Senate that put us clearly on record that we want to meet our responsibilities to the families and local communities by funding 40 percent of the education of the children.

I want to review where we are on the question of funding this legislation and what we understand will be the administration’s position on funding the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. This includes not only title I but professional development programs, technology programs, the Safe and Drug Free Schools Act, afterschool programs, and programs the are part of the whole Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

I pointed out at the time we had the last debate in the Senate last week what was going to be in the budget for this country, what was going to be available for funding. We have seen now that the Republican leadership, with the support of the administration, has effectively sucked all of the available resources that can be used for education with the $1.25 trillion tax reduction. As a result of that, as a result of the legislation that was passed that went into effect, we would say if we are going to have a tax cut, you ought to be able to get a tax cut, but first let’s fund education, including children to find out what they are structured, bringing together the outreach for good quality teachers, bringing together consolidation of the technology component, and with a strong emphasis that we are going to get curriculum reform, well-trained teachers, and a more thoughtful process in examining children to find out what they need to be able to get that so we can provide the supplementary services, reaching out to the communities in a much wider way than we have before to use the resources within the communities to help and assist children who might need that help, with supplementary services in a very expansive way that we had not done before—and to recognize we are only reaching a third of the children.

How are we going to achieve what this legislation effectively states, and that is that we will bring every needy child in this country up to proficiency within 10 years, if we are only reaching a third of them now? It is going to be difficult enough—if we were reaching all of them—to try to help with the additional resources in bilingual education, for example. The number of children who need those services has virtually doubled in our school-age population. We mentioned on other occasions, but it bears repeating, the challenges that schools are dealing with are much more complex today. We have many more families divided so children are growing up in divided homes. We see what has happened in terms of violence in so many of the homes, in inner cities as well as in rural communities, the problems with substance abuse and physical abuse. All that has taken place. Plus, we have seen an increasing number of children who are homeless—more than 700,000 by some estimates, do migrant children, sweeping from California all the way to Washington in the west and from Florida to the State of Maine in the east. We have about 1.5 million children.

There have about 700,000 immigrant children who are going to be citizens of the United States who need help and assistance as they move along. They are going to be American citizens. They are on the way to being American citizens. We want to invest in those children.

These are the kinds of challenges we were not facing 20 years ago, for the most part. So we have a more complex situation at the grassroots level. We have parents, teachers, and schools attempting to cope with these extraordinary circumstances. They need help, they want help, and they are counting on the help. That is for what we are fighting.

The way that we can do that is to make sure with this legislation and with the accountability that we are going to invest in children who need the help. That is for what we are fighting.

When you look at this chart, the comparison with what this administration is requesting, 3.6 percent this year versus the 8.6 percent average over the previous 8 years and understand that of that 3.6 percent, money is taken from other pots—that is not new money. Half of that is in job training. Two-hundred million dollars of that is from the National Science Foundation. Another couple hundred million dollars is from the EPA.

Look at this: $54.1 million from job training; $20 million from the early learning opportunities—that is the program that reaches the children in the 0-to-3 programs; pediatric graduate medical education to try to assure that we are going to have the best terms of pediatric training for children. They have taken $30 million out of that; clean water State fund, $497 million. That is a vital resource in terms of many of the States, including my State of Massachusetts where you have so many of the communities under court order to clean up their water systems in what which are basically blue-collar, working-class communities.

They have high taxes as it is. They don’t have the resources to be able to draw on a State fund. To help them is absolutely essential. We are cutting that program.

As to the renewable energy programs, we have the great debate and discussion about these energy programs. The administration takes out $156 million; NASA and National Science Foundation, $200 million; FEMA disaster relief, $270 million; and community policing, one of the most successful programs, they cut.

What we see is a difficult situation over the period of the next 5 years out I fear for the outyears, the fifth year to the tenth year, because we know what is going to be in this tax package which is going to be heavily weighted, or heavily biased. That is the word which is used. As we all understand around here, the reason it is backloaded is because it conceals its purpose.

Make no mistake about it; if it was frontloaded, there would be a clear indication of the amounts we could evaluate for the first 5 years; that is, the Joint Tax Program, the Congressional Budget Office, and the OMB estimates the first 5 years—not the back 5 years.

As a result, we find the backloaded tax bill. That is going to mean that education resources will remain scarce—not just for the next decade covered by the budget resolution but for the next decade as well when the enrollments are expected to expand dramatically.

I think this is a clear indication if you look at the broader issue. You say, “What if this is ESEA, but maybe much more will be done in the other areas of education; that is, in the Pell grants or other kinds of help and assistance in higher education, such as the Department of Education, or maybe we are looking at research to find out what real help.

But we have the same story. This administration fails in the education budget in investments in education. If we look on the chart, the total increase for the title I program was $669 million, 3.5 percent, even though if you look through the book that has the budget figures, that is effectively where it comes out. There was a great hoopla about how it was going to be 11.9 percent. It is $669 million, and the appropriation for the year 2001 was $3.6 billion.

If you look at the total Department of Education, 6.5 percent appropriations last year; the total for the Department of Education is $2.5 billion. That is not a great day for primary and secondary education, but it is in the higher education as well.

I know many of our colleagues have the opportunity to go back as I do and talk with people in our States. If I go back to Massachusetts and have a town meeting, I ask people in that hall, say you have $1 that represents the Federal budget. Let’s think through about how that ought to be spent. You ask people for a show of hands. They want national security. They want defense. They understand the importance of national security. They want to make sure whatever is necessary is there, and that is something certainly that we ought to support.

While we are talking about national security, is there anyone in this body who doubts that within the next 3 or 4 weeks after we pass their tax cut on tomorrow, or the next few days, that within a 4-week period we will have the requests from the Department of Defense as a result of Secretary Rumsfeld’s total Bottom-Up Review, and the best estimate is anywhere from $100 billion to $200 billion over the next 5 years. That is going to be on track. We are not hearing about it now. We are not talking about it now. But does anybody really doubt that? Does anybody in the defense community really question that? Not that I have heard. We are just not going to be able to do this.

As I say, if you are in that room and asking people what they think, they say: Oh, yes. We need Social Security and we need to have Medicare. They understand that. Maybe some will say we will start talking about it.

What about prescription drugs? Where do they fit? Some will mention that we have to pay an interest on the debt. Then you ask them: What do you think we are spending on education? First of all, what do you think we should spend? After they begin to understand that it is maybe 5 percent in terms of the defense and maybe a little less than that on the interest on the debt, you get probably 2.4 or 2.5 in terms of the Medicare programs. Then you ask them: What about other programs? And you have Social Security. That is figured in the budget. They see that going up.

But at the end of the day when you start talking about education, 80 percent of Senators voted to go to at the minimum spend 10 cents or 8 cents out of that dollar on education. Ninety percent will say certainly 5. Would you believe that it is less than 2? And under this administration, it will be less than 1 cent. Does that reflect the American families’ priorities in terms of education?

We understand it is a local responsibility and a State responsibility, and the Federal participation has been fairly minimal primarily on higher education. But I think most families would say we want a partnership with local, State, and Federal. We want a partnership because we recognize that we need the resources.

If you are in communities where you have the greatest kind of pressure, particularly in the poorest of the poor, they do not have the resources to be able to sort of deal with this.

We made a decision in the early 1960s that we are going to try to provide resources and recognize as a matter of national commitment that we were going to deal with the neediest students in this country.

That is what this title I program is really all about. It provides resources for those communities—not a great deal of resources. We have had some successes and failures. But we are in a new day and period.

But the idea that we are providing a proportion of that dollar in terms of education, which is really another word for talking about our future—children are our future. Investing in our children is investing in our future. Is there anyone who doubts that if you have an eighth grade class and the children don’t learn algebra that those children are not going to college? It is simple, plain, finished, conversation ended. You have to make sure you have people in there who are going to be able to teach them. That is going to take teaching.

We don’t expect to solve all the problems, but we have made a commitment at least in this bill that the teachers who are going to teach the children—better than 50 percent of the title I children who are going to reach the fifth grade within 4 years—will be well qualified. We have made our commitment. We have to have the resources to be able to do it.
children, or are we going to be presented with a future tax reduction for the wealthy individuals in this country? I think that is how it is going to be.

Let me make it clear that I have every intention of offering amendments to let the American people understand how this body wants to vote in terms of a reduction in the top rates for the wealthiest individuals, or fund education.

This body will have a chance to make a judgment decision on that. Are we going to go from the 39.6 down to 36, and then further reductions in many other areas or are we going to fund our children’s education in the future? What is in the national interest? What is in the interest of these children? Do we want this Nation to invest in our children or do we want to find out that we are going to provide additional benefits to people who have done very well in the last few years?

What we have seen in the most recent times has been this extraordinary kind of dichotomy where the wealthier have grown so much wealthier and the poor have grown so much poorer. I remember those charts, I do not have them here. But if you look at what has happened in terms of American income, broken into fifths, from the time of the war to 1972, you will find each group went up; they grew together.

As the old saying goes, a picture is worth a thousand words. This is a picture of a modern elementary school. This is Cleveland Elementary School in Elkhart, IN. If I am not mistaken, there are 17 or 18 kids in this well-lit, well-appointed, roomy classroom. That is what a modern school ought to look like. That is sort of what we think about as an elementary school in all of our minds. This is what we conjure up. We conjure up a nice, well-ordered classroom with a class small enough for the teacher to pay attention.

Or how about this? This is South Lawrence East School in Lawrence, MA. There are 12, maybe 13 kids here. This is the library and media center. Nearly 30 years ago, this kind of an ideal library and media center for all of our elementary schools around the country?

I ask any parent: Wouldn’t you like to have your child go to this school? Wouldn’t that be wonderful, to think that your kid was in a school like this every day with the latest technology, all hooked up to the Internet? That would be nice. I am afraid most schools look like this. That is not bad. That is not a dilapidated school. The average school building in the United States is 42 years old. This is where most of our kids go to elementary schools. They are over 50 years old. They have air-conditioners sticking out of the windows. This was added later because the schools were not air-conditioned in those days. Many of them have roofs that leak and are kind of rundown schools.

It is a national disgrace that the nicest places our children see are shopping malls, sports arenas, and movie theaters, and the most rundown place they see is the public school. What kind of a signal are we sending them about the value we place on them and their education and their future? How can we prepare kids for the 21st century in schools that don’t even make the grade in the 20th century?

The American Society of Civil Engineers recently issued a report card for America’s infrastructure. This is their report card. As we can see, the condition of our national infrastructure is poor. All of them are poor: energy, waterways, solid waste, wastewater, drinking water, airports, bridges— all in pretty bad shape. This is the second time they put out this report. The lowest grade of all goes, once again to public schools.

Seventy-five percent of our Nation’s school buildings are inadequate. The average cost of capital investments needed to upgrade and replace our schools is $3,800 per student. Since 1998, the total need has increased from $112 billion to $127 billion. That is just to bring the existing public schools, elementary and secondary schools, and private schools that we have in America, up to fire and safety code and to upgrade them in terms of the latest technology.

It does not refer to the amount of money we are going to need to build the new school buildings. That is going to require a lot more money in the future. Right now we have an all-time high of $53.2 million. This will grow. Over the next 10 years, it is going to be necessary to build an additional 6,000 schools. That number is not even reflected here. This $127 billion is needed now to repair and modernize existing schools.

I have been advocating this for about a decade now, starting back in 1991, that the Federal Government begin to meet some of its responsibilities. All one has to do is read Jonathan Kozol’s book “Savage Inequalities” to understand why it is necessary for the Federal Government to be involved.

A little history may be in order. I always ask the question: Where does it say in the Constitution of the United States that our public school system in America has to be based on property taxes? You will look in vain, and you won’t find it anywhere in the Constitution. Why is that the basis of funding for our public schools?

That was free public education for everyone. At that time it was free public education for white males, but with the adoption of the Bill of Rights and with the ensuing concept that we are all one Nation, we broadened that to women and minorities and everyone else.

Really, we have ingrained this idea of free public education for all. But at that time we didn’t have income taxes. We didn’t have corporate taxes. We didn’t have all these kinds of taxes. All we had were property taxes and excise taxes. So to fund the public schools, the only tax base they had to go to was the property taxes people paid. Thus the very system was built up over the centuries that way.

It literally was not until 1865, under Republican President Abraham Lincoln, that the Federal Government got involved in public education. That was with the Morrill Act that set up the land grant colleges of the United States. That was the first time the Federal Government really got involved in all in public education.

Then for about 100 years, the Federal Government was involved only on that level, through land grant colleges, through some research, and with the adoption of the GI bill after World War II, mostly focused at higher education from the Federal Government standpoint.

Then, with the passage of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, the progeny of which we are now debating, the Federal Government got involved with trying to equalize a little bit the disparities and provide education to meet the needs of lower income students, special needs students, and to help the States and local governments meet their constitutional requirement that if they did indeed provide a free public education, they couldn’t discriminate.

Again, no State in this Union has to provide a free public education to the kids in the State. But if they do, if a State decides to provide a free public education, then the Constitution kicks in and they couldn’t have a free public education for whites but not for African Americans, for men but not for women, for Catholics but not Jews, Protestants but not Catholics. It has to be free for everyone.

Of course, as my dear friend and colleague from Vermont knows, this was later expanded under a couple of court cases in the early 1970s to also say that you can’t discriminate on the basis of disability. Kids with disabilities under our Constitution also must receive a free, appropriate public education.

Since 1965, the Federal Government has been providing support and funds for elementary and secondary education. Thus, that is the bill we are debating.

As we have looked at the concept of what the Federal Government ought to do in terms of helping elementary and secondary education, we have title I programs.

We had the Eisenhower math and science programs and a variety of different efforts where we have come in and targeted the funds to address a national need whether it was a lack of science or math, under the Eisenhower math and science program, to try to help needy students who perhaps did not have any early childhood education or support, and title I programs, remedial math programs, to get these kids to catch up, get ready to learn. That is what these were all designed to do.

I forgot to mention one other aspect of our involvement in elementary and secondary education, and that was the free school lunch program, and later, the school breakfast program; both targeted not only nutritional needs but were to help kids learn better in school. I have been advocating for a long time—at least since I read Jonathan Kozol’s book called Inequality— that the Federal Government needs to be involved in helping to rebuild and modernize our public schools.

Why? In many areas you have poor schools, and the property-tax payers are overburdened. It is. We need to help them build these schools. It is a national problem, not just local.

So I believe this is a proper role for the Federal Government. As I said, I have been advocating this for over a decade. In fiscal year 1985, I did secure $100 million in the Appropriations bill as sort of a downpayment to get us started on this. I was disappointed when those funds were later rescinded. But, then, as the years went by, we made real progress, and last year we passed legislation to make emergency repairs to our schools. This was a bipartisan agreement, hammered out with Congressmen Goodling, Porter, and Obey on the House side, and Senators Jeffords, Specter, myself, and the White House, who all got involved in that and we hammered out this agreement. That was passed last year. That money is now going out to the States.

In about 2 months, that $1.2 billion will be made available to the States on the basis of the incidence of poverty, basically following the title I program. So those States with a high incidence of poverty tend to get more of the money. This is a busy chart, but it shows you the distribution on July 1 for school renovation grants. It goes from California, with $138 million; New York gets $105 million; North Carolina gets $21 million; North Dakota gets $5 million; Ohio gets $37 million; Pennsylvania, another major player in this, $44 million; Texas gets $94.9 million to help modernize and rebuild its schools; Louisiana gets $24.9 million; Vermont gets $5.4 million, about the same as Iowa, which gets $6.4 million. So this money is all contributed on the basis of the incidence of poverty as to the population in those States.

We can’t solve the whole problem in one year. This will make a difference, this bill before us, this program at a critical time, just when it is getting off the ground, the first year. We will get the money out to the States; they will be able to use some of this to get up to fire and safety code in some schools and modernize some schools, and this bill will pull the rug out from underneath them.

We must continue this program to repair and renovate our Nation’s public schools. That is why I am proposing this amendment on behalf of myself and Senators Kerry, Levin, Reid of Nevada, Biden, Corzine, Johnson, Cantwell, Torricelli, Bingaman, Clinton, and Dodd. They are the co-sponsors.

This amendment reauthorizes the school renovation program that we created last year and increases the authorization level from $1.2 billion to $1.6 billion. The amendment continues to target between the population and the needs of kids with disabilities under IDEA, which we negotiated in last year’s bill. Seventy-five percent of the funds will finance urgent repairs, such as fixing a leaky roof, replacing faulty wiring, or making repairs to bring schools up to local safety and fire codes. That is 75 percent of the $1.6 billion. The remaining funds will support activities related to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, part B, or for technology activities related to school construction.

The need to help schools make these repairs is clear. The Healthy Schools Network has reported many problems around the Nation.

Several parents complain that their children were getting sick at a large city school near Albany, NY. The county inspected the school and found unsafe levels of lead and mold in the school. The school was unable to correct the problem, citing a lack of funding for repairs. But the children continue to go to that school.

A child in North Carolina missed several days of school suffering from headaches and stomach aches. During summer break, the child’s illness abated. But when school started and they came back, he got sick again. The child attends class in an old trailer that has poor ventilation and bad odor problems.

In Southern California, a teacher was forced to quit teaching after she suffered hearing and voice loss from again, lack of proper ventilation and mold in her fourth grade classroom.

A Virginia parent said her son felt sick at school and was doing very poorly. An inspection of the classroom found nonfunctioning ventilators, water stains, mold in the ceiling tiles. Leaky roofs, peeling lead paint, poor plumbing, not meeting fire and safety codes aren’t just an inconvenience, they are a hazard to our children.
In my State of Iowa, the State fire marshal reported that fires in Iowa schools have increased fivefold over the past several years, from an average of 20 per year in the previous decades to over 100 per year in just the last decade. I asked the fire marshal what that was. Well, the schools are getting older, the wiring is in disrepair, and thus the fires are started. What happens is they don’t have proper wiring, and maybe they put more things in the classroom, and they expand the number of plugs going in the wall, so they overload the circuits and fires start.

So there is a clear need to help school districts improve the condition of their schools to ensure the health and safety and education of our children.

States and local communities are struggling to renovate existing schools and build new ones to alleviate overcrowding. School construction modernization is necessary to equip classroom rooms of the 21st century and improve learning conditions, end overcrowding, and make smaller classes possible.

Our school buildings are wearing out. Nearly three-quarters of all public schools in America were built before 1970; 74 percent were built before 1970. In fact, almost 1 out of every 3 schools in America was built before World War II, in the last century. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, when a school is between 20 and 30 years old, frequent replacement of equipment is necessary. When a school is between 30 and 40 years old, all of the original equipment should have been replaced, including the roof and the electrical system. After 40 years of age, a school building begins to deteriorate rapidly, and most schools are abandoned after 60 years. Yet before World War II, over 60 years ago—and 1 out of 3 schools functioning today were built over 60 years ago—the average school building was 42 years old, as I noted.

Technology is placing new demands on schools. As a result of the increased use of technology, many schools must install new wiring, new telephone wires, new electrical systems, and the demand for the Internet is at an all-time high. But in the Nation’s poorest schools, only about a third have Internet access. The need to modernize our Nation’s public schools is clear, and yet the Federal Government lags in helping our local school districts address this critical problem. Because of increasing enrollments and aging buildings, local and State expenditures for school construction have increased dramatically—by 39 percent—from 1990 to 1997. Let me repeat that. Local and State expenditures for school construction have gone up 39 percent from 1990 to 1997. However, this still has not been sufficient to address the need.

Those taxes from property-tax payers which—not in every case but in most cases—is one of the most unfair, unsound ways of taxing to raise money for our public schools. Again, if you live in an area where there is high income and pay high property taxes, you have good schools. If you live in an area that is low income with low property taxes, you have poorer schools.

Is that what this educational system of America based upon property taxes or where you live? If you are lucky and are born in suburban Northern Virginia, you have great public schools, but if you are born in the inner city or maybe even in the southern part of Iowa—I can speak about my own State—where we have low property values, a lack of a good property tax base, you simply do not have the good schools that you need.

This amendment will help school districts make the urgent repairs needed to make schools safer for our children, but we have to do more. Some buildings have simply outlived their usefulness. As I mentioned, we have to build an additional 6,000 schools in the next decade. We are not even talking about that here.

In the near future, the Senate will act on a tax cut for working with my colleagues, Senator KERRY and others, to provide school modernization tax credits to help underwrite the nearly $25 billion of new school facilities that are needed.

Mr. President, you might ask: Will this approach work? It will work. We have had an experiment going on in Iowa. We are in the third year of a school modernization demonstration project. Over the past 3 years, $28 million in Federal funds have gone to my State of Iowa to rebuild and modernize schools to bring our schools up to safety and fire codes, to make sure these schools are meeting the needs of the 21st century.

Twenty-eight million dollars have gone to Iowa, but it has leveraged $311 million in repair and new construction projects. For every dollar the Federal Government has invested in Iowa, it has leveraged over $10 of State spending to help rebuild.

The Iowa construction grant program shows what can happen if we put this money out nationally. If we put this money out nationally, the $1.2 billion that we did last year, I guarantee it is going to leverage money all over this country to rebuild and modernize our schools. That is why with $1.2 billion, I would be shocked if we come in at less than $7 billion or $8 billion of additional money leveraged in the States to meet this need. That is what this amendment is all about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it my understanding I will be voting at 5:30 p.m.; am I correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I congratulate the Senator from Iowa for bringing up this amendment. We will have an opportunity to address this issue perhaps later this evening and tomorrow.

As we have worked on the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, there have been five major components. A well-trained teacher in every classroom is enormously important. Smaller class sizes for the early grades are enormously important. Afterschool and other supplementary services are enormously important. Having newer computers and technologies to avoid a digital divide are enormously important. But to have a schoolroom that is going to be safe and secure and free from the conditions which the Senator described is absolutely essential as well.

I thank him very much. I will have more to say about this when the time comes. We are going to be voting in a few moments.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I would like to discuss the amendment that the Senator from Iowa and I, and others, have offered to deal with the oft-discussed issue of overcrowded and dilapidated schools.

As many of my colleagues know, for this is an issue that we have talked about before and even addressed in a bipartisan fashion last year, the need for school construction assistance is great. Three-quarters of the public school buildings are in need of repairs, renovation, or modernization. More than one-third of schools rely on portable classrooms, such as trailers, many of which lack heat or air conditioning. Twenty percent of public schools report unsafe conditions, such as falling fire alarms or electric problems.

At the same time the schools are getting older, the number of students is growing, up 9 percent since 1990. The Department of Education estimates that 2,400 new schools will be needed by 2003 and public elementary and secondary enrollment is expected to increase another million between 1999 and 2006, reaching an all-time high of 44.4 million and increasing demand on schools.

I have come to the floor on more than a few occasions and made clear my feeling that Democrats need to acknowledge that bricks and mortar alone are not the answer for our public schools; I think the reforms on accountability, local control, and tough standards that our party has embraced are absolutely essential as well.

Congressional Record — Senate
S4929

Many schools are trying to offer more robust curricula, including music, physical education and classes in the arts, but their ability to provide these programs is hampered if there is no space to house them.

Almost every State in the Nation has implemented curriculum standards, calling for advanced work in science and technologies, but some schools are so old that their electrical wiring cannot support enough computers for the students. And these science facilities are so antiquated that students cannot perform the experiments required to learn the State’s curriculum.

Some school districts are looking to implement universal preschool—a service that we know enhances children’s school preparedness and which a study published in last week’s Journal of the American Medical Association confirmed makes children more likely to complete high school, less likely to need special education or grade retention and less likely to avoid arrest as young adults—but the lack of available facilities is often prohibitive. If we are serious about encouraging research-based, meaningful, effective education reform, we have an obligation to do our part to help local districts run safe schools—a commensurate investment in school facilities is imperative.

I have listened to the debate today and have heard some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle talk about the Federal Government overstepping its bounds into what is a State and local issue. I agree with their sentiment that the Federal Government should not go into local communities and decide what to build or decide what to repair. I also agree, to a certain extent, that the burden of building and renovating schools should be borne by localities.

But what we have seen very clearly over the past several years is that States and local school districts are investing in school construction, but they still need our help. Annual construction expenditures for elementary and secondary schools have been growing. But local and State budgets have not been able to keep up with demand for new schools and the repair of aging ones. Unless school leaders can persuade their wary voters to pass such bond referendums or raise local taxes, though, there’s often little hope of change. Until the last few years, the plight of State and local leaders had not received much attention from Washington. Last year we came together to respond to their call by funding a $12.2 billion grant program and this year we should come together again and pass legislation that continues our commitment to help local districts with their repair and renovation needs.

The amendment that we are offering will provide $1.6 billion in grants to local education agencies to help them make urgently needed repairs and to pay for special education and construction expenses related to upgrading technology. And this amendment builds upon the bipartisan emergency school modernization initiative that passed into law as part of the fiscal year 2001 Labor-HHS-Education bill. Under this legislation, the demonstration program will distribute 75 percent of the funds on a competitive basis to local school districts to make emergency repairs such as fixing fire code violation, repairing the leaky roofs that allow cold air to penetrate our school walls, and installing new plumbing. The remaining 25 percent will be distributed by State competitively to local school districts to use for technology activities related to school renovation or for activities authorized under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

I know that my friend from Iowa has seen this school modernization program work. Earlier he talked about the demonstration program in his State, which leveraged $10.33 for each federal dollar invested. This body worked tirelessly to hammer out an agreement on the outstanding issues that have separated us in the past and which prevented us from completing work on this reauthorization during the last Congress. It is my sincere hope that we can come together again on the issue of school construction and pass legislation that addresses this nation’s critical need for school repairs and renovation, and that we can do it as a part of a broader package of honest and tough reforms which focus, above all else, on the goal of empowering our schools to raise student achievement.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise in support of Senator HARKIN’s amendment to the Better Education for Students and Teachers (BEST) Act, S. 1, that would restore the critical school repair program. I commend Senator HARKIN for his leadership on this issue, and I thank Senators KENNEDY and JEFFORDS for the work that they have done on the overall elementary and secondary education reauthorization bill before us today.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this amendment. Communities across the country like many in my home State of South Dakota are struggling to address critical needs to build new schools and renovate existing ones. School construction and modernization are necessary to address urgent safety concerns, to raise low test scores, to raise local tax revenues, to raise student enrollments, to help reduce class sizes, and to make sure schools are accessible to all students and well-equipped for the 21st century.

In South Dakota, it has become increasingly difficult to pass school bond issues, given the fact that real estate taxes are already too high and our State’s agricultural economy has been struggling. The result is an enormous backlog of school construction needs, and the costs of repair and replacement increase with each passing year. A report by the General Accounting Office found that in my home State of South Dakota, 25 percent of schools... have inadequate plumbing, 21 percent of schools have roof problems, 29 percent have ventilation problems, and 21 percent of schools are not meeting safety codes.

Crumbling schools are not just an urban problem; they are a national problem, and rural areas are no exception. In fact, 30 percent of schools in rural areas report at least one inadequate building feature. Nationwide, the statistics are similarly ominous. Nearly three-quarters of our Nation’s schools are over 30 years old with 74 percent of schools built before 1970.

According to the American Institute of Architects, one in every three public schools in America needs major repair. The American Society of Civil Engineers found school facilities to be in worse condition than any other part of our Nation’s infrastructure.

South Dakota’s tribal schools also face very serious facilities problems and major construction backlogs. There are nine federally recognized tribes in South Dakota. At my request, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Bureau of Indian Affairs have agreed to work cooperatively with the tribes to address their building needs. Federal-State-local partnership. South Dakota has a great many school districts which are not completely impoverished, but yet great many school districts which are not completely impoverished, but yet believe that there is a legitimate federal role in helping fix our Nation’s crumbling schools, and we can do so without undermining local control of education.

I applaud and support these efforts to invest a small portion of our Nation’s wealth in improved educational opportunities and facilities for all—this investment now, will result in improved academic performance, better citizenship and a stronger economy for generations to come. I urge the Senate to pass Senator HARKIN’s amendment and invest in the health and well-being of our Nation’s school children.

AMENDMENT NO. 477

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I want to state for the record that I will vote in opposition to the McCain position. I expect it will be an up-or-down vote. If not, I will vote to table. He is entitled to an up-or-down vote. I want to explain my position.

I indicated to colleagues that on this legislation I was going to resist non-germane amendments. I do not think the majority leader has the right to a pocket veto. Although it is a position which I strongly support, we have to be consistent if we are going to take the position that we are not going to support non-germane amendments. We cannot pick and choose with which ones we agree and differ.

Even though I agree with this amendment, I indicated to colleagues that I would oppose non-germane amendments. Therefore, I feel compelled to oppose this amendment.

Should there be an expression of overwhelming support with this then, obviously, I will at that time interpret my vote perhaps in a different way. I have every intention now to vote in opposition to the amendment.

The PRESENTING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I follow my good friend from Massachusetts in explaining that I, too, certainly agree with Senator MCCAIN on the merits of his proposal and that we should send that very fine bill to the House, but I also made a commitment to oppose all nonrelevant amendments to the bill. Thus, I will vote against the McCain amendment, but I certainly support the advancement of campaign finance reform was one of the principal sponsors and participants of that legislation of which I am very proud. I have made this commitment, and I will stick by it.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. We are almost at the point of voting.

The PRESENTING OFFICER. There is 1 minute remaining.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESENTING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. GREGG) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. AKANA) and the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. KOTT) are necessarily absent.

The PRESENTING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 61, nays 36, as follows:

I support Senator REID’s amendment, #460 to expand the 21st Century Community Learning Centers to include projects with emphasis on language and life skills programs for limited English proficient students. We know that it will take English proficiency is becoming increasingly important as many of our communities are receiving immigrant children from many different countries. Limited English proficient students are at greatest risk for dropping out, and we have a responsibility to provide a quality education for these students. In my own state of California we are losing qualified teachers to the work of education and care programs. This amendment would further help to forge a crucial partnership between the Department of Education and the Attorney General so that these two departments may work together to ensure that our schools have the resources and tools they need to create safe learning environments for our nation’s youth. In addition, the amendment would provide flexible funding, something that I have long fought for, to enable localities to design school safety programs that best meet their specific needs. For all of these reasons, I strongly support Senator Cleland’s amendment and am pleased it passed by a strong vote of 74 to 23.

(The original statement of Senator FEINSTEIN which was delivered on Monday, May 14, but omitted is as follows:)
Last year, the Head Start 2010 National Advisory Panel held fifteen national hearings and open forums. The panel found:

... that despite increases resulting from Federal quality set-aside funding, relatively low salaries and poor or non-existent benefits make it difficult to attract and retain qualified staff over the long term. The quality of the program is tied directly to the quality of the staff.

Head Start is one of the most important federal programs because it has the potential to reach children early in their formative years when their cognitive skills are just developing. Many of our Nation's youngsters, however, enter elementary school without the basic skills necessary to succeed. Often these children lag behind their peers throughout their academic career.

We must continue to improve the cognitive learning aspects of the Head Start program so that children are able to count to ten, to recognize sizes and colors, and to recite the alphabet. To ensure cognitive learning, we must continue to raise the standards for Head Start teachers. Offering Head Start teachers similar compensation for their educational achievements and expenses afforded to other teachers is one step to encouraging college graduates to become Head Start teachers.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak up to 10 minutes.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, it is my understanding, because there are people waiting to find out what the final decision is, that there will be no more votes tonight. That is my understanding; we are trying to finish.

Mr. JEFFORDS. That is my understanding.

Mr. REID. I also ask if there is going to be any more legislative business tonight.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Other than what is cleared between the two leaders, there will be no other business.

Mr. REID. I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I understand we may speak as in morning business for a few minutes.

ENERGY

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise on a small point, but it is representative of some of the difficulties we are having in trying to keep some focus on reality associated with the administration's anticipated energy package.

I am sure many Members saw the Washington Post today, Tuesday, May 15. On page 2, there was a color picture of the Phillips Petroleum Company facility at Alpine which depicts very vividly the realization that technology indeed can make a very small footprint in the Arctic areas of Alaska, my State.

The picture represents a fair evaluation of this development. It was taken in the summertime, that brief 2½ months or so when the area is not covered with ice and snow. The viewer can see the river, the lakes. But to grasp the significance of it, one has to recognize that this is a major oil field in itself. Yet it takes less acreage than the District of Columbia.

That footprint is concentrated in the area that is known as Alpine. For the most part, one derrick has drilled the wells there. These are directional drills that go out for many miles recovering the oil. This particular facility is producing about 88,000 barrels a day.

However, there is another picture. This is the point I want to bring home to the Members. In an effort to try to draw a balance, if you will, between development and the wildlife in the area, the Washington Post portrays a picture of three little bears, and it is entitled “A polar bear with her cubs rests in Alaska’s Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.”

The reality is that this picture was not taken in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. It was taken in another area of Alaska far, far away.

It isn’t that we don’t have polar bears in Alaska. We are all concerned about the beauty and the majesty of this beast, but we have done a lot to encourage the polar bear by safeguarding our wilderness. In Alaska, you cannot take a polar bear for a trophy. You cannot take a polar bear if you are a non-Native, but you can go to Canada and you can go to Russia.

We have and will provide for the RECORD the statement from the photographer of exactly where this picture was taken. But it is not in ANWR, and the photographer is prepared to give a statement in that regard. Here again we have another mischaracterization. The implication that ANWR is filled with polar bears and that if we open up this fragile area, somehow we are going to disturb the polar bears. That is not accurate.

The Washington Post should know better. They should check their sources. They should recognize that polar bears for the most part live out on the ice. Why do they live on the ice? Because that is where there is something to eat. They live on the ice, and they stalk the seal. As a consequence, they don’t come into the Arctic National Wildlife area in any abundance. They do come in from time to time.

But there is little food for them, and during the months where the ice is continuously moving, they simply stay out on the ice where they can have the availability of food. It is noted that there are very few that den on the shores adjacent to ANWR. So, again, I encourage my colleagues to recognize, as I am sure many people who see in the Washington Post today those warm and cuddly polar bears, that they are being misled in this particular photo because this photo was not taken in ANWR.

I also encourage my colleagues to recognize that the administration is going to come out with an energy task force report. We are not immune, I have not had briefings to amount to any significant detail. I think it is important for the American people, and my colleagues particularly, to know that it addresses positive corrections in the imbalance we have in America’s energy crisis.

We do have a crisis. One need only look at California to recognize that Californians are going to be paying an extraordinarily increased amount for energy. Electricity is $60 billion to $70 billion. Last year, it was in the area of $28 billion. The year before, it was $9 billion. They have an energy crisis. We haven’t built a new coal-fired plant in this country since 1985. Yet close to 51 percent of our energy comes from coal.

We haven’t built a new nuclear plant in this country for more than 10 years. Yet we know the value of nuclear from the standpoint of what it does to air quality. There are no emissions. There are no tradeoffs.

We also know we are now 56- to 77-percent dependent on imported oil, and the forecasts are that the world will be increasing its consumption of oil for one reason—for transportation—by nearly a third in the next 10 years or so.

We have seen natural gas and our increasing dependence on natural gas because it is one of the few areas where you can get a permit to put in facilities. Yet natural gas prices have increased dramatically from $2.16 per thousand cubic feet 18 months ago to $4, $5, $6, $7 to $8. We have had a coming together and that coming together also involves distribution. We have had the realization in the hearing that we had today before the Energy Committee, which I chair, that there are severe constrictions on transmitting electric energy.

In our bill that we introduced, we left out eminent domain for electric transmission lines purposely because we felt the States could meet that obligation as they saw fit. Now some suggest that States don’t have the commitment internally to reach the form that we are going to need Federal eminent domain. Maybe that is the case. It is like the perfect storm; everything is coming together at once. No new coal, no nuclear, dependence on imported oil, higher costs for natural gas, no relief on transmission. Now they are saying we have to do something about it immediately.
Well, what do you do about it? This didn’t come overnight. We have seen the realities with regard to higher prices of gasoline. Yet we know we don’t have the refining capacity. We haven’t built a new refinery in 23 years in this country. We have our refineries up to maximum production. They were busy making heating oil. Now they are trying to build up inventories for gasoline. So you not only have a shortage of refined capacity but you are dependent on foreign countries, OPEC, for the most part—for our crude oil. We suddenly find we have an inability to refine an adequate amount. So with inventories low, the maximum utilization out of refineries is converting over—and they have been for some time—to gasoline; and then the complications of 15 different types of reformulated gasoline in this country that require almost a boutique type of activity to see out of Presidents Bush’s and Vice President Cheney’s new energy task force—refiner—to which will be coming out Thursday.

We are not going to see generalities that we can simply get there by conservation. Conservation is important, but conservation isn’t going to do it alone. Make no mistake; Americans are used to a standard of living that has been brought about by plentiful supplies of relatively inexpensive energy. If we want to sacrifice our standard of living, that can be done. But I wonder how many people in California are ready to go out and turn in their old refrigerators, their old washers and dryers—well, they are not going to turn it out, for a new energy-saving appliance that will cut their energy bills in half. I don’t know. Maybe we can mandate CAFE savings. We have a mandatory 27-mile CAFE standard currently in the auto industry. People say it doesn’t include the vans, the sub-urban vehicles, the type that are so popular today, the SUVs and others. That is true. They are classified in the truck classification as light trucks, but the reality is that you can’t get there on CAFE, either.

We have 207 million vehicles in this country. About 170 million are automobiles and the rest are trucks and cars. It is going to take you 10 years to make a significant dent in that number of vehicles because a lot of them aren’t paid for. So you are not going to discard them.

If you mandate substantially increased CAFE standards, then people have to buy new cars; they have to buy new ones. CAFE standards are important, but you can’t achieve the kinds of savings we need by CAFE standards. You only give tax credits to people who save energy. I think you will probably see an amendment or two on that to give them a $250, $300 tax credit.

The point is that we are far behind, and what the administration is going to propose is some positive steps as to how we can address the energy crisis. It is going to take the conventional sources of energy that we know and have had experience with and the addition of the clean coal technology that we have come to develop in the last decade to stabilize us to use coal. We can use it in a manner in which we take out many of the impurities—the sulfur, and so forth. We can address the reality that we can produce more natural gas in this country, but the incentive has to be there. That is a return on investment.

Obviously, we can reduce our increased dependence on imported oil by producing more domestic oil. Of course, that involves my State of Alaska and the item that I first mentioned, the accuracy of some of the important portrayals of ANWR.

In conclusion, to those who suggest the potential development in ANWR, a reserve somewhere in the area of 56 billion to as high as 16 billion—and if it were an average of 10 billion it would be the largest oilfield found in the last 40 years—I suggest the prospects for developments of this area are very good. We have the technology to open it safely. I safe the Members who do not like the possibility that there is going to be an attempt to come up with a tax bill we call reconciliation.

I have heard in the last few minutes that there is going to be an attempt tomorrow to bring that bill before the Senate. I hope the majority understands there are 40 Democrats and 40 Republicans who do not think this is the right thing to do. There are 40 Democrats and 40 Republicans who do not think this is the right thing to do. There is a meeting of the Finance Committee taking place. There are 10 Democrats and 10 Republicans. I have tried today to tell my constituents that every legislator here is seeking recognition at this time.

Mr. President, thank you for indulging me additional time. I yield to my good friend from Nevada. He is seeking recognition at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

RECONCILIATION LEGISLATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as we speak, there is a meeting of the Finance Committee taking place. There are 10 Democrats on that committee and 10 Republicans. I have tried today to tell my constituents that every legislator here is seeking recognition at this time.

I have heard in the last few minutes that there is going to be an attempt tomorrow to bring that bill before the Senate. I hope the majority understands there are 40 Democrats and 40 Republicans who do not think this is the right thing to do. There is a meeting of the Finance Committee. It is a prestigious committee, I understand, but the members cannot speak for the rest of us, either Democrats or Republicans.

I very much want to have the opportunity to look through certain parts of that bill. It is going to be a very large piece of legislation. I doubt I will be able to read all of it, but I want to read parts of it. I have a staff that will read every word of it and bring to my attention those things I have not looked at first.

I have a staff that I think is well equipped to peruse that bill, but I just cannot imagine that we would go to that bill tomorrow without Members of the Senate having an opportunity to look at that legislation. That is how we get into trouble legislatively.

It is unfair to the American people. I have said from the very beginning we are doing well. We have a surplus. We don’t need a tax cut. The American people, the people of Nevada deserve a tax cut, and they should get an immediate tax cut. But that tax cut should be given to them with deliberation. We should make sure we understand every provision in that very important legislation. I cannot imagine a legislator voting for or against that bill not having the opportunity to read it.

I hope we slow down. We can work on this in the Senate or next Tuesday just as well as we can tomorrow. What I prefer, when they report that bill out of committee, is we have several days to look at it.

I repeat, there is no effort on this Senate floor to unilaterally proceed with major legislation. There are all kinds of ways we can do that. There has been talk, if this proceeding goes forward as indicated, that people will file lots and lots of amendments, and we would have to vote on every one of them and the voting would take several weeks.

There are methods of slowing this down. I hope we will not have to resort to any of those. I hope we have ample time for us and for our staffs to review this legislation in some detail.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield for a question?

Mr. REID. I will be happy to yield to my friend from North Dakota, whom I appreciate being here. I say prior to yielding to the House, I have in mind my friend from North Dakota. I looked to him when we served together. He was one of the leaders of issues dealing with money. He was on the Ways and Means Committee, which is the parallel committee to the Finance Committee in the Senate. I will be happy to yield to my friend from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Nevada makes a critically important point. It is important for all of us to think through this process and this strategy. We are blessed with a wonderful country that has had an economy that has produced jobs and expansion and opportunity in the last years. We want to make sure we do not create a fiscal policy that turns that around and moves us back into big Federal budget deficits and economic contraction rather than expansion.

The Congress is now, in a new day, set to provide some tax breaks because we are at this point experiencing some budget surpluses.

I support tax cuts. They need to be fair to all the American people. But what about is we do not create a fiscal policy that turns that around and moves us back into big Federal budget deficits and economic contraction rather than expansion.

The Administration has increased the deficit. The budget that was debated a couple of weeks ago in the House of Representatives, there were two very important pages missing that they found at 2 o’clock in the morning. Those were the pages dealing with the budget. The tax measures, whether it was done on purpose or not I do not know. The fact is those pages were found to be missing and it was necessary to put that over for a couple of weeks.

I say to my friend from North Dakota, I think the majority would be so much better served, our country would be better served, if we had the opportunity to have this week to study this legislation, come back Monday, we could come in at 9 o’clock in the morning—it doesn’t matter to this Senator. We could have ample time next week. There are 20 hours to debate it. We could have some thoughtful amendments prepared.

I am stating to anyone within the sound of my voice that there may be some Senators who feel so strongly about this basic principle, that before we pass on something you should be able to read it, we have this radical idea that they want to have a bill that involves trillions of dollars and, as the Senator has indicated, will involve fiscal policy for this country for more than 10 years—they have this radical idea they would like to understand a little bit before they vote on it. They may feel so strongly that they may file a thousand amendments on this legislation, and the rules are that we only have 20 hours of debate on it, but we can have a thousand days of voting on amendments.

It would seem to me to serve everyone’s best interests if we approach this in a deliberative manner, recognizing the Foreign Relations Committee, who would have a foggy idea of what is in that bill. Not even every member of the Finance Committee would have a foggy idea of what is in the bill. And certainly the 80 people who do not serve on the committee would not have the slightest idea of what is in that legislation. The Senator from North Dakota is correct.

I also say to my friend who has served in the Congress longer than I, I have known of occurrences when these bills are rushed through that mistakes are made: printing errors, people not having had the opportunity to look at them. Also, some mischievous things have happened. We know during the budget that was debated a couple of weeks ago in the House of Representatives, there were two very important pages missing that they found at 2 o’clock in the morning. Those were the pages dealing with the budget. most important legislation to people of Nevada, North Dakota, and all over this country.

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator from Nevada yields, and I appreciate that. I only have this to say. The people of America, I am sure, would not let you or I or anyone else has the opportunity to speak as long as we might want to speak on anything. They could not care less. Nobody is going to walk around with a bad attitude because somebody here doesn’t have enough time. Nobody is going to walk around with a bad attitude. What is important, if we are going to cut benefits, is who gets the benefit of those tax cuts? I wondered in school whether fractions would ever come in handy. We studied them in the lower grades.

Let me give a couple of simple fractions.

From a briefing, I understand, over in the Finance Committee right now the chairman’s mark—which is going to pass and be brought to the floor and apparently be brought here at 10 o’clock in the morning—does the following: The top 1 percent of the American income earners pay about a quarter of the taxes. They are going to get about a third of the tax cuts.

I did take fractions. I didn’t go way beyond fractions in my little school, but I understand fractions enough to understand that is not fair. Why not take some of that tax cut back, which is above that which should go to the Social Security trust fund? So all I am saying is, let’s not raid the trust fund this year but that is not care trust fund or the Social Security trust fund is held inviolate, that it is not done aboveboard—Whose slice is too large? Whose slice of this tax cut is appropriate? Whose slice is too large?

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. REID. The other Senator from North Dakota, I spoke to him right down in the well of the Senate a half hour ago. He left the Finance Committee to come to vote. I said: How are things going, Senator CONRAD? He said: You can’t believe some of the things that are going on there. He said: For example, so that they do not raid the Social Security trust fund this year, they put off one provision for 15 days so they will not raid it for 15 days so they can go around and say we did not raid the trust fund this year—but we will do it in 15 days when it cuts in. I would like to read that. I would like Senator CONRAD or someone on my staff to point out where it is they did that.

Mr. DORGAN. If you remember a couple of years ago, they created a 13th month—sort of the same tactic, perhaps by Senator CONRAD. That, they will need to see how the bill is written and be able to evaluate it with their legislative assistants.

As we take a look at all this and ask ourselves are we going to have a chance to dig into this, offer amendments, understand it, make changes, the answer is: If the bill is not written, except that provision, of course, is already in the chairman’s mark and we know he has the votes to get that out—if this bill isn’t written, they have 120 or so additional amendments they are going to consider this evening. Now we are told they want to bring it to the floor at 10 o’clock in the morning?

I just ask the question, not so much on my behalf but on behalf of the American people who are not going to get the benefit of getting a bigger tax cut than the proportion of that which they paid in taxes, would it be fair to have everybody take a look at this and see if maybe there is not a little better way to cut this pie? There are only so many pieces when you cut these pies up. It seems to me there is kind of this hog-in-the-corn-crib approach to some of these things around here. The same people always get the biggest slice. Did you ever notice that? The same interests always seem to end up with the biggest slice.

That is what I fear is going to happen here: it is not going to happen. I do not carry a tax cut. In fact, I support a tax cut. We have a surplus. Some of that ought to go back to the American people in the form of a tax cut. But it ought to be fair. It ought to be a circumstance where a lot of people who have lobbyists walking around this building or haven’t been able to afford people to represent their interests, those people, somewhere on the floor of the Senate, ought to have people to dissect this, take it apart and evaluate who is getting a fair piece. Whose slice of this tax cut is appropriate? Whose slice is too large?

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. REID. The other Senator from North Dakota, I spoke to him right down in the well of the Senate a half hour ago. He left the Finance Committee to come to vote. I said: How are things going, Senator CONRAD? He said: You can’t believe some of the things that are going on there. He said: For example, so that they do not raid the Social Security trust fund this year, they put off one provision for 15 days so they will not raid it for 15 days so they can go around and say we did not raid the trust fund this year—but we will do it in 15 days when it cuts in. Mr. DORGAN. If you remember a couple of years ago, they created a 13th month—sort of the same tactic, perhaps by Senator CONRAD. That, they will need to see how the bill is written and be able to evaluate it with their legislative assistants.

Just making a final point to the Senator from Nevada, I did serve in the other body, in the House, and served for 10 years on the Ways and Means Committee. We wrote tax law. We had done this many times, where we would write a rather complicated piece of legislation. But it has generally been the case when we have a kind of breathless quality to this rush: We must rush; We must get this done immediately; We must bring this bill to the floor immediately.

That is not fair. It is not fair in terms of those who come to this Senate wanting to represent their constituents, wanting to know what is in it for various income groups, various occupations. How will it affect their constituencies? How will it affect the people living in their State? That, they will need to see how the bill is written and be able to evaluate it with their legislative assistants.

Finally, I want to raise a point that will come before the body work its will. There is, as I said, a kind of breathless quality around here to rushing this thing through. I am not quite sure I understand why. As I indicated, this will affect our country for a decade. This is big stakes. It will have significant impacts on our economy, on the condition of the American economy, the rates of economic growth. I am not sure how. I am not sure anybody understands how. But we ought to all be given the opportunity to think through and evaluate what is in it, what it means to our country, what it means for the American people in general, and what it means for income groups and occupations, and so on.

The only way we can do that is to have the time. So I urge the majority leader, do not try to do that tomorrow. Do not bring a bill up tomorrow that has not yet been printed and ask the Senate, under 20 hours of time, to begin debating and trying to amend a piece of legislation that has not yet been printed. That is not fair to the Senate and that is not a thoughtful way to legislate.

Mr. REID. If the Senator would yield, I think we have to make sure that people understand this is not some stalling game we are playing. This bill is fast tracked. We have 20 hours to debate it. The majority has a right to yield back 10 of those hours. So it could be done in 1 day.

But I do not think it is a radical proposal when I say for the people I represent—the 2 million people I represent—I would sure like to read this bill first, have my staff review this bill first. I do not think that is asking too much. That is all we are asking.

I think the majority is buying themselves a lot of trouble by trying to fast track this. There is no reason to do this. Let us look at the legislation. We are going to offer amendments anyway. We might as well offer amendments and have this bill moving on the bill we have read rather than one we have heard about reported in the press.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

PRAYERS FOR THE CAPITOL POLICE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I was here this morning when the Senate was opened. The Chaplain gave a prayer. The prayer was dedicated to the police officers all over the country because this week we honor these brave men and women who have lost their lives in the line of duty. We recognize them. But the part of the prayer the Chaplain gave that I thought was so moving was the line of duty. We recognize them.

And women who have lost their lives in the line of duty. We recognize them.

Mr. REID. If the Senator would yield, I would sure like to read this—

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY last month. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to detail a heinous crime that occurred October 29, 1999 in Indianapolis, Indiana. A trio of men, while allegedly committing a series of robberies, broke into the apartment of two men. Convinced that the men were gay, the perpetrators forced the men to strip, tied them together, and tortured them with a hot iron. During the attack that lasted more than 30 minutes, both victims were burned repeatedly, kicked, beaten with a small baseball bat and other household items, and taunted with homophobic remarks. One of the victims was forced to drink a mixture of bleach and urine. The robbers also tried to burn the building down on their way out but later inexplicably returned, put out the fire, and gave some water to the man they made drink the bleach mixture. The robbers walked away from the scene after having stolen $6.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

IMPORTANCE OF THE SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I speak today in strong support of the sense-of-the-Senate resolution introduced by Chairman BOND and myself, recognizing the important role played by the Small Business Administration in half of the United States small business community. I am pleased to say that nearly every Senator on the Small Business Committee has cosponsored this important Resolution. I would like to thank Senators BENNETT, HARKIN, SNOWE, LIEBERMAN, ENZI, WELLSTONE, CRAPO, CLELAND, ENZI, LANDRIEU, EDWARDS, and CANTWELL for showing their support for America’s small businesses by cosponsoring this Resolution.

Mr. President, small businesses keep the U.S. economy moving. They are responsible for more than 52 percent of the private workforce; for creating more than half of the nation’s gross domestic product; and are the principal source of new jobs.

They were also responsible for helping to end the recession of the early 1990’s, and with the right programs and assistance, will be a major factor in sustaining our current economy.

To help them achieve success, small businesses rely on a range of programs administered and monitored by the Small Business Administration (SBA), such as the Small Business Innovation Research Program (SBIR), the 7(a) Guaranteed Loan Program, the 8(a) Business Development Program, the Small Business Development Center and Women’s Business Center Programs, and the New Markets Venture Capital Program. And these are just a few of the many initiatives that continue to receive widespread support from the Senate and House Committees on Small Business, as well as the Congress as a whole. Our resolution commends the SBA for their activities, and calls on the President to make every effort to strengthen and expand assistance to small businesses through Federal programs.

SBA programs are relied upon to help restore economically depressed communities, spur technological innovation, provide access to capital, train entrepreneurs, monitor the procurement practices of Federal agencies, and ensure small businesses are heard when new regulations are being developed.

Unfortunately, the SBA has received fewer resources than are necessary to do the job as effectively as possible.

To make the situation worse, the Bush administration’s budget request for fiscal year 2002 is woefully inadequate and goes in the wrong direction. President Bush has consistently stated that the economy is in a period of economic decline, yet he has proposed limiting the resources available to our small businesses by cutting funding and charging additional fees for programs that create businesses and jobs, and help generate revenue for the American people.
Mr. President, I would like to commend Chairman BOND for working with me to pass an amendment to the budget resolution restoring many of the cuts initiated by the Bush administration. I am hopeful that our joint effort will be retained in the final budget. I also hope that by continuing to work in a bipartisan fashion on this critical issue, we can further increase SBA resources for the next fiscal year. The SBA deserves our continued support for its important work, and I urge my colleagues to support this resolution as well as sufficient resources for the SBA and America’s small businesses.

Mr. President, I would like to join the chorus of other voices in Florida and Miami-Dade County who extend to John and Mary Jane Stokesberry best wishes on the occasion of their retirement. I congratulate them today and wish for them many more productive and healthy years.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN AND MARY JANE STOKESBERRY

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I am pleased to have this opportunity to recognize the exemplary contributions of an extraordinary couple, John and Mary Jane Stokesberry of Miami, FL. Given John’s significant impact on public policy development and implementation in the areas of gerontology and aging and Mary Jane’s passion for teaching with special educational needs, I know their joint retirement on June 30, 2001 will leave a void which will be difficult to fill.

John L. Stokesberry has had his credit over 30 years of administrative leadership in human service delivery in Florida. His most significant public role, John has served as the Executive Director of the Alliance for Aging, Inc., the Area Agency on Aging for Miami-Dade and Monroe Counties in Florida. Through his compassionate and adept oversight, many seniors and developmentally challenged individuals have been provided the benefit of quality care and the timely provision of services.

Florida has long been a favored retirement destination for seniors who have worked hard throughout their lives. They are more than deserving of living out their days in dignity and with whatever comfort and respect we are able to provide. Consequently, in Florida, increasing attention and focus is being placed on aging issues. John L. Stokesberry’s contributions in helping to chart Florida’s course in this relatively new frontier have been pivotal. We have benefited from his remarkable expertise, coalition building and advocacy for over three decades. Whether at the district or state administrative levels, his leadership has always been felt and has enhanced the mission of our state in meeting the needs of our seniors.

Mary Jane Stokesberry has worked at the Van E. Blanton Elementary School for 39 years and currently serves as the Chair of the Special Education Department. While instructing young people who have special needs can present unique challenges, Mary Jane’s genuine warmth and patience has consistently led to the most positive development of her students. It came as no surprise when she was recently designated as a Regional Teacher of the Year. Though many of her former students are now adults, I am sure they would agree that Mary Jane has left an indelible mark on their lives. Through her exceptional legacy, I am reminded of the proverb, “if you give a child a fish you feed them for a day; if you teach a child how to fish, you feed them for a lifetime.” Mary Jane has fed countless children for a lifetime.

For these reasons, I am proud to join the chorus of other voices in Florida and Miami-Dade County who extend to John and Mary Jane Stokesberry best wishes on the occasion of their retirement. I congratulate them today and wish for them many more productive and healthy years.

TRIBUTE TO PERRY COMO

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I would like to celebrate the life, and commemorate the death of an American cultural icon from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Perry Como.

On May 18, 1912, Pierino Roland Como was born in Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, the seventh of thirteen children to Italian immigrants. Pierino, who would become known as Perry as his English became more pronounced, was raised in the small town of the same name to help provide for his family. It is reported that Mr. Como’s illustrious singing career developed by singing to patrons in his own barber shop which he opened by fourteen. The baritone voice, which would become famous throughout the world, was soon discovered by a band traveling through his steel town and he began his career as an entertainer. In 1933, Mr. Como married his childhood sweetheart, Roselle Beline, who told him he could open another barber shop if his singing career failed. His career did not fail, nor did their marriage which lasted until Roselle’s death in 1987.

Perry Como’s singing and performing career spanned six decades and during that period he sold over 100 million records. Twenty-seven of his albums went gold, while four of ten singles reached number one on the charts. In 1945, “Till the End of Time” became the first single to sell more than one million records. After his great success in record sales in the 1940’s, 50’s and 60’s, his career evolved into that of a television star. From 1948 to 1963, Perry Como was a fixture in American homes as a pioneer of the variety show format. He won acclaim for his performances including 5 Emmy awards, 2 Grammy awards, People’s Choice award, and Golden Mike awards during his career. And in 1987 Mr. Como was presented a Kennedy Center Honor for outstanding achievement in the performing arts by President Ronald Reagan.

Mr. Como’s fame was worldwide and lasting. The BBC reports that he had twelve top ten hits in Britain, over twenty years. His Christmas broadcasts, for which, perhaps, he was most famous, were broadcasted around the globe over the years, including Israel, Paris, and London. A Roman Catholic, he reached Protestants and Catholics alike through his renditions of “Ave Maria” and “The Lord’s Prayer.”

He sang “Kol Nidre” each year on his television program in observance of Yom Kippur. Mr. Como also made many friends in Japan, where his variety shows had unique success. Perry Como continued to perform for fans in the United States well into his eighties. It is with great humility that I ask this body to remember an American cultural icon on the occasion of his passing. I hope and pray that future generations of Americans will use Perry Como’s example of dignity and decency in conducting their personal and professional lives.

STOCKDALE HIGH SCHOOL REPRESENTS CALIFORNIA IN THE WE THE PEOPLE NATIONAL COMPETITION

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I would like to recognize the achievements of students from Stockdale High School for winning an honorable mention in the We the People..The Citizen and the Constitution national competition. These outstanding students from Bakersfield, CA competed against 49 other classes from across the country and demonstrated a vast knowledge of the U.S. Constitution and American democracy. Their accomplishments are a reflection of their hard work and preparation for this prestigious event. On April 21–23, 2001, hundreds of young people ascended on our Nation’s Capital to participate in the We the People national finals. This exciting competition is administered by the Center for the Civic Education to educate students on the history and principles of American constitutional government. Reaching more than 26 million students nationwide, We the People introduces elementary, middle, and high school students to the intricacies of our government and encourages them to contribute actively to the political process throughout their lives.

I can think of no better way to ensure that this country has competent citizens and future leaders than to encourage more of our Nation’s youth to participate in programs such as this one. I am particularly proud of the accomplishments of the Stockdale High School class and encourage these students to stay vigilant in their future endeavors to learn about and foster our democracy.

BUENO FOODS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a family-owned business in my home State of New Mexico. Founded by a staple and generous partner in the community, but has grown to be one of the largest Hispanic-owned businesses in the United States. This company, Bueno Foods, this week celebrates its Golden Anniversary—50 years of producing premiere New Mexican food products.

The company, housed in Albuquerque’s South Valley, is a pride for the community.

Started back in 1951, the company provided the means for the Baca brothers, Joe, Ray and Augustine, to provide for themselves, their family, and improve their community. In the years after World War II, the Baca brothers first opened a grocery store that prospered until supermarket chains started to infiltrate the Albuquerque market. The brothers realized that in order to stay in business for themselves, they needed a new direction. So they expanded their store into featuring the traditional New Mexican recipes of their mother, Filomena.

Their company became the first commercial producer of flame-roasted, fresh frozen green chile. Today the name “Bueno Foods” is synonymous with that frozen green chile.

Since those days, the company has grown from a company with five employees to one with 240 workers. Still family run by the Baca family, its purpose has not only been to provide high-quality, authentic products, but also good jobs and active community involvement. Even with its large growth, the company has kept its roots and main plant in the South Valley, a historic and proud part of Albuquerque.

Throughout the years, Bueno has remained true to its core values and beliefs that center around making people’s lives better through jobs and opportunity, and contributing to the community. Bueno donates part of its profits to charities and scholarships, and every Christmas helps to provide food and clothing to the needy.

As Bueno Foods turns 50, it is celebrating its glory in a way that continues to epitomize those values. The company has teamed up with several organizations to host a 4-day fiesta for the South Valley’s Barelas community, where the Bacas were born and raised.

My congratulations go to Bueno Foods president, Jacqueline Baca, the other members of the Baca family who continue the legacy of the Baca brothers, and all their employees. I encourage my colleagues to join me in saluting this company’s success and its commitment to the Hispanic entrepreneurial and community spirit.

REPORT ON THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO BURMA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 19

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report, which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA), 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit herewith a 6-month periodic report on the national emergency with respect to Burma that was declared in Executive Order 13047 or May 20, 1997.

GEORGE W. BUSH

REPORT ON THE CONTINUATION OF EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO BURMA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 20

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report, which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(a) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the president publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication, stating that the emergency declared with respect to Burma is to continue in effect beyond May 20, 2001. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on May 19, 2000.

As long as the Government of Burma continues its policies of committing large-scale repression of the democratic opposition in Burma, this situation continues to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. For this reason, I have determined that it is necessary to maintain in force these emergency authorities beyond May 20, 2001.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. INHOFE:

S. 878. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to prorate the heavy vehicle use tax between the first and subsequent purchasers of the same vehicle in one taxable period; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about a bill that will help many truck-drivers across the country. As we all know, the trucking industry has incurred an incredible cost increase in recent years due to higher fuel prices and other taxes. One of my constituents, Phillip Parks, has felt this tremendous financial burden and, as a result, sold his truck and got out of the business altogether.

The heavy vehicle use tax is one tax many truck drivers, like Mr. Parks, are required to pay each year. Under the current IRS code, when a vehicle over 75,000 pounds is purchased and driven over 5,000 miles, the owner must pay a $550 heavy-use tax. However, if the owner sells the vehicle in the same year, he or she is unable to receive a refund on this tax, while the person buying the vehicle does not have to pay the tax during that year since it has already been paid. This is what happened to Mr. Parks.

My bill will not only make this tax more fair, but will provide some much-needed relief for people who wish to sell their trucks within the same year they bought them. The Heavy Vehicle Use Tax Equity Act will require the purchaser to pay a prorated tax on the vehicle, while the person selling it will receive a refund for the portion of the tax relative to the time in which they owned it.

I am pleased to introduce this bill that will help make our complex tax code more equitable while putting money back into the hands of hard-working Americans, like Phillip Parks of Stillwell, OK.

By Mr. SANTORUM:

SEC. 6051 (relating to receipts for employees) and section 6050T (relating to returns to be filed by service-renters) are described in paragraphs (1) through (4).

I would like to thank my colleagues for supporting the passage of most of the bill that I introduced last Congress—S. 880—which was passed as part of the Medicare Benefits and Improvement Protection Act, BIPA. This law extended the current time limitation for Medicare coverage of immunosuppressive medications for transplant recipients who (1) received a Medicare transplant and (2) have Medicare-age or disability status. However, transplant recipients whose Medicare eligibility is based solely on their End Stage Renal Disease, ESRD, status did not qualify for supporting the passage of most of the bill that I introduced last Congress—S. 880—which was passed as part of the Medicare Benefits and Improvement Protection Act, BIPA. This law extended the current time limitation for Medicare coverage of immunosuppressive medications for transplant recipients who (1) received a Medicare transplant and (2) have Medicare-age or disability status. However, transplant recipients whose Medicare eligibility is based solely on their End Stage Renal Disease, ESRD, status did not qualify for the extended coverage under BIPA and remain limited to coverage for 36 months post-transplant.

The bill we are introducing today simply would eliminate the 36-month time limitation for Medicare immunosuppressive drug coverage for the population that was not covered under last year’s BIPA provision. Under current law, an individual with ESRD retains Medicare coverage for all medical needs for 36 months post-transplant. This bill would eliminate the 36-month time limitation for the purpose of paying for the immunosuppressive drugs only—all other Medicare coverage, including that related to other post-transplant needs, would cease after 36 months, as under current law. A 1999 Institute of Medicine, IOM, study estimated the cost of providing indefinite coverage of all Medicare-covered kidney transplants at $848 million over five years. The IOM estimate for eliminating the time limitation for Medicare-aged and disabled transplant recipients only, covered under BIPA, was $566 million over five years. This represents a difference of only $282 million over five years to cover the rest of the ESRD population.

Furthermore, our bill would make Medicare the secondary payer after 36 months for beneficiaries who do not have Medicare-age or disability status, which the IOM report did not consider. Recipients covered by our bill would be subject to the Part B premium, deductible, and coinsurance that other beneficiaries pay to receive full Part B coverage.
Medicare will pay for another transplant (average cost is $100,000) or dialysis, annual cost is more than $50,000, if a transplant fails. It makes far better sense from an economic and social perspective to extend Medicare coverage for the anti-rejection medications especially at a time when the number of people waiting for a kidney transplant in this country exceeds 48,000 people.

I urge my colleagues to support our bill and help those who receive Medicare-eligible transplants gain access to the immunosuppressive drugs they need to prevent their bodies from rejecting transplanted kidneys.

This legislation is supported by the National Foundation, the American Society of Transplantation, the American Society of Pediatric Nephrology, the North American Transplant Practitioners Organization, LifeCenter, the Association of Organ Procurement Organizations, the American Kidney Fund, and the Polycystic Kidney Disease Foundation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

The Hatch-Biden bill introduce in the Senate today, the Fallen Hero Survivor Benefit Fairness Act of 2001, is designed to make annuity benefits for survivors of public safety officers killed in the line of duty tax free, so long as the annuity is provided under a governmental plan to the surviving spouse or to the child of the deceased officer.

In the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, Congress took an important step in showing our appreciation for this country’s fallen heroes by exempting from taxation survivor benefits for those killed in the line of duty after December 31, 1996. This change has undoubtedly made a significant difference to many such surviving families.

But what about the families of fallen hero who died before that date? Should not their government-provided survivor annuities be tax-free as well? Of course they should.

This bill provides tax equity for those survivors receiving annuities for officers who died on or before December 31, 1996. We have drafted this bill to ensure that tax free treatment available for all survivors of police officers who gave their lives to make this great country a safer place for us all to live. The tax correction in this bill would not be retroactive. Rather, it provides that payments from a qualified survivor annuity received after December 31, 2001, would qualify for tax-free treatment, even if the police officer was killed prior to the effective date of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 provision.

We are not talking about a great deal of money here. The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates this correction would cost the Government about $5 million per year in lost revenue or a total cost of $46 million over 10 years. This is not a high price to pay to show this country’s gratitude for the service these men and women who are public safety officers perform each day when they leave their homes, the risks they take, and for the ultimate sacrifice some of them have made.

Last week, the House Committee on Ways and Means approved identical legislation to correct this problem, and I am offering this companion bill to the entire House for a vote today. Mr. President, this week (May 13-19, 2001) is National Police Week. Although it does not begin to pay our debt to these men and women and their survivors, I cannot think of a better way to honor them than to pass bills like this one that recognize their sacrifices and attempt to help their families.

What is it I am talking about? I was shocked when I found out that Social Security does not pay benefits for the last month of life. If a Social Security retiree dies on the 18th of the month or even on the 30th of the month, the surviving spouse or family members must send back the Social Security check for that month.

I think that is an harsh and heartless rule. That individual worked for Social Security benefits, earned those benefits, and paid into the Social Security trust fund. Social Security should allow the surviving spouse or the estate of the family to use that Social Security check for the last month of life.

This legislation has an urgency. When a loved one dies, there are expenses that the family must take care of. People have called my office in tears. Very often it is a son or a daughter that is grieving the death of a parent. They are clearing up the paperwork for their mom or dad, and there is a lot of emotional travail involved. And they say, ‘Senator, the check says for the month of May. Mom died on May 28. Why do we have to send the Social Security check back? We have bills to pay. We have utility coverage that we need to wrap up, mom’s rent, or her mortgage, or health expenses. Why is Social Security telling me, ‘Send the check back or we’re going to come and get you’?"

With all the problems in our country today, I ought to be going after drug dealers and tax dodgers, not honest people who have paid into Social Security, and not the surviving spouse or the family who have been left with the bills for the last month of their loved one’s life. They are absolutely right when they call me and say that Social Security was supposed to be there for a difficult time. That is why we support recipients are protected during this difficult time. That is why we support making sure that the surviving spouse or family can keep the Social Security check for the last month of life.

We urge our colleagues to join us in this effort and support the Social Security Family Protection Act.

By Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 884. A bill to improve port-of-entry infrastructure along the Southwest border of the United States, to establish grants to improve ports-of-entry facilities, to designate the Southwest Border as a port technology demonstration site, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Southwest Border Port-of-Entry Infrastructure Improvement Act. The Southwest border region has been ignored for far too long, and as a result, has lagged behind the rest of the Nation in many areas. Poor health and environmental quality, inadequate infrastructure, and fewer technological and educational resources are common facts of life along much of the Southwest Border.

Last year, the U.S.-Mexico Border had 202 million crossings. By 2020, the region will have more than 21 million residents. That means that the southwest border region is growing at more than twice the national average and 40 percent faster than the U.S.’s fastest growing state.

And what has been the engine of this tremendous growth? Trade. When the North American Free Trade Agreement came into effect in 1994, U.S.-Mexico trade totaled $100 billion. In 1999, trade between the two countries accounted for $197 billion, a near doubling in only 5 years.

Unfortunately, we have failed to invest in the Southwest Border to accommodate this tremendous growth. In 1999, eighty-six percent of U.S.-Mexico trade was transported across the border by trucks. Yet, rather than promote a system where trade can flourish, we have congested traffic lanes where commuters have to wait in line even 5 hours before crossing the border.

These lines include all manner of people and industry, from a truck filled with auto parts en route to Detroit to hungry tourists wanting an authentic Mexican experience. And what has been the engine of this growth? The U.S.-Mexico Border.

Unfortunately, we have failed to invest in the Southwest Border to accommodate this tremendous growth. In 1999, eighty-six percent of U.S.-Mexico trade was transported across the border by trucks. Yet, rather than promote a system where trade can flourish, we have congested traffic lanes where commuters have to wait in line even 5 hours before crossing the border.

These lines include all manner of people and industry, from a truck filled with auto parts en route to Detroit to hungry tourists wanting an authentic Mexican experience. And what has been the engine of this growth? The U.S.-Mexico Border.
Second, long traffic backlogs detrimentally affect the people who live along the Southwest Border.

A study by the Environmental Protection Agency concluded that, “the border’s health conditions and risks are among the most troubling and the most serious in the United States. Health and environmental problems seem to be most prevalent in poverty-striken areas. The Southwest Border is one of the most problematic regions in the nation. In fact, nearly 27 percent of New Mexico’s Dona Ana County live below the poverty line, double the national average, and other counties along the border are even worse off. For example, 40 percent of Maverick County, Texas’ population live below the poverty level.

We cannot continue to focus on the increased wealth the Nation enjoys from trade while ignoring the burden that trade imposes on border residents. Long backlogs at ports-of-entry along the Southwest Border create a substantial hardship on the people in the region. The EPA report concluded that areas among the most vulnerable suffer from serious health threats due in part, to air borne pollutants from vehicle emissions.

Increased trade means ever-increasing vehicle emissions. A recent study by the North American Commission for Environmental Cooperation found that truck traffic increases 8.6 percent per year. An 8.6 percent increase means that by 2020, commodity truck flows will be 5.5 times greater than 1999 levels.

That study never considered the recent NAFTA arbitration panel ruling that the U.S.’s policy prohibiting Mexican trucks from entering the United States brings our infrastructure limitations to the forefront. It is imperative to improve the Southwest Border’s inadequate infrastructure and design. We must act to ensure continued national growth while working to improve the health and environment of border residents.

By Mr. HUTCHINSON (for himself, Mr. CLELAND, and Mr. MILLER).

S. 885. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for national standardized payment amounts for inpatient hospital services furnished under the medicare program; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I am pleased today to be joined by Senator Cleland of Georgia in introducing the Area Wage and Base Payment Improvement Act, which seeks to address Medicare payment inequities for rural and small hospitals so they may pay competitive wages to attract and retain health care personnel and provide quality health care.

We all know that the health care workforce is shrinking, both in its own right and relative to the growing patient population. This is illustrated by the nursing profession. The average age of registered nurses is 43.3 years, and less than 10 percent of the current nurse workforce is below age 30. Unfortunately, many nurses are leaving the occupation because of low pay, excessive paperwork burdens, a lack of respect, and other consequences of being short-staffed, such as overly long shifts, mandatory overtime, and the stress of having too many patients under their care. The result is that new nurses are getting into the pipeline to replace those who have retired or left the profession.

The nursing shortage is being felt in virtually every part of the country, but especially in rural areas, where it is hard to recruit and retain qualified personnel. In my home State of Arkansas, where nearly every county is considered a medically underserved area, hospitals are reporting over 750 nurse vacancies, this says nothing of the other personnel shortages they are experiencing as well.

Such severe shortages in qualified health care personnel have “nationalized” the market for health care professionals, and historically low labor costs in rural and small urban areas have disappeared. Hospitals in these areas must compete with large urban hospitals for qualified workers and pay higher wages as a result. In some cases, rural hospitals are being forced to pay health care personnel even more than urban hospitals. For example, a nurse practitioner in rural Arkansas is paid $29.04 per hour on average; while the same nurse practitioner would be paid $38.22 per hour in an urban hospital.

The Area Wage and Base Payment Improvement Act addresses this issue by establishing an area wage index floor of 0.925 in order to bring payments in areas with the lowest wage indexes up to just below the national average of 1.00. The wage index is intended to adjust Medicare hospital inpatient and outpatient payments to account for varying wage rates paid by hospitals for workers in different market areas across the country, but it has not been updated since 1997. In Arkansas, the area wage index for hospitals is as low as 0.7445. By creating an area wage index floor of .925, as many as 72 hospitals in Arkansas and 2,100 hospitals nationwide will see an increase in their Medicare payments and their ability to provide competitive wages for hospital labor.

The legislation we are introducing also makes an important change to the Medicare payment formula by increasing the Medicare inpatient prospective payment system (PPS) payment rates for rural and small urban hospitals. This base payment is primarily intended to cover labor costs. Today, there are two different base payment amounts for hospitals paid under the Medicare PPS. Hospitals in large urban areas receive a base payment of $4,197, while hospitals located in all other areas receive a lower amount of $4,130. This legislation will eliminate this disparity and create one base payment of $4,197 for all hospitals. Nationwide, 2,600 hospitals will benefit from this payment increase.

The Area Wage and Base Payment Improvement Act will provide critical payments to small and rural hospitals... striving to provide quality health care and put them on an equal footing with large urban hospitals in terms of competing for health care personnel. I urge our colleagues in the Senate to support this important, bipartisan legislation. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, I want to thank my distinguished colleague from Arkansas, Senator Tim Hutchinson, for his leadership on the Area Wage and Base Payment Improvement Act. I am very pleased to join Senator Hutchinson in this bipartisan measure to address inequities in the wage index for rural and community hospitals.

The severe shortage of nurses and other crucial health care workers has driven salaries higher to compete for these employees. The current Medicare wage index for rural areas reimburses at a lower rate which is based on 1997 data. In an increasingly competitive market for health care workers, rural area hospitals are in their ability to provide quality care.

Our proposal establishes a "floor" on the area wage index and will adjust Medicare inpatient and outpatient prospective payments (PPS) for rural and small metropolitan hospitals. By setting a floor on the area wage index of 0.925, our proposed correction would bring Medicare payments in areas with the lowest wage index up to just below the national average which is established at a floor of 1.00. This floor is estimated to help more than 2100 mostly rural, but also some urban hospitals across the country.

This measure also increases the Medicare PPS base, of which a significant portion is to cover hospital labor costs. Today's competitive labor market has reduced the disparity in wages between large urban hospitals and rural and small metropolitan facilities. It makes sense that Medicare needs to move to one base payment for the inpatient PPS. The key issue here should be access to health care. For states like Georgia and Arkansas, with a large number of residents living in rural areas, the closing or downsizing of rural beds could impact Medicare payments rates and insufficient health workers to provide safe care is creating a health care catastrophe.

Our measure is the companion bill to H.R. 1609. We urge our colleagues to support this bicameral, bipartisan effort to ensure access to rural and smaller metropolitan hospitals for Medicare beneficiaries.

By Mr. WELLSTONE.

S. 886. A bill to establish the Katie Poirier Abduction Emergency Fund, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, last year in my home State, a talented, spirited young woman named Katie Poirier was abducted from her job at a Carlton County convenience store. Within days of her disappearance, there was an enormous outpouring of community concern, with hundreds of volunteers helping local law enforcement search for Katie. Tragically, Katier's body was later recovered and a suspect arrested and tried for her murder.

The Poirier, Holmquist and Swanson cases in Minnesota, all involving abductions and homicides, demonstrate that resources and good information are absolutely crucial to successful law enforcement, particularly in our small towns and rural communities which are too often overlooked.

To that end, I am re-introducing legislation called "Katie's Law," in honor of Katie Poirier, which will give rural law enforcement the assistance they need to deal with high profile, major crimes.

This legislation will establish a Federal "Katie Poirier Abduction Emergency Fund" to assist local and rural law enforcement agencies with the unanticipated expenses of major crimes. Second, it will provide grants to local and rural law enforcement agencies to integrate their identification technologies, or to establish systems that work with the FBI’s Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System, IAFIS. In many rural communities, this will cut down the time it takes to identify a violent suspect from two months to two hours.

The disappearances of thousands of adult and child abductions and homicides each year in rural counties. When a high profile, major crime occurs, like the Wetterling or Poirier abduction, local and rural law enforcement with small budgets are frequently overwhelmed by the financial demands these large cases make. The overwhelming hours and investigative demand can wipe out small budgets with expenses, including overtime pay, transporting witnesses and suspects if there is a change of trial venue, as occurred in the Poirier case, and other unanticipated costs.

As the sheriffs across my home State will tell you, the first 72 hours in an abduction case are the most critical. After that, the chances of locating a victim alive drop dramatically. No matter how short staffed or small the budget, law enforcement must put its pedal to the metal 100 percent after an abduction or homicide. It is crucial that law enforcement agencies with limited resources handling major crimes get the support they need from the State and Federal governments.

In Minnesota when a high profile case occurs, a joint task force is established between the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension, the FBI, and the local law enforcement agency. Sheriffs I have spoken with say the task force model is effective and extremely helpful. Yet, they still must cover many unanticipated expenses such as huge surges in overtime. Many of them just can’t do it. As one sheriff said to my staff, “I am running my agency on fumes, not gas. I’ve got nothing left.”

My bill would establish a Federal Abduction and Kidnapping Fund to help state and local law enforcement agencies with expenses from high-profile, major crimes, including kidnapping and homicides. The Attorney General would make grants to state agencies to distribute to local and rural law enforcement agencies in need. The total amount would be $10 million for each of three years.

Second, my legislation will provide local law enforcement officers with the resources to use the latest identification technologies to solve crimes and prevent crimes. Access to quality, accurate information in a timely fashion is of vital importance in that effort.

One of the best tools available is the FBI’s IAFIS system. Since rural and local police agencies often do not have the funds to access the FBI’s Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System, (IAFIS), they are at a disadvantage when trying to identify violent offenders.

State and local law enforcement organizations need to develop and upgrade their criminal information and identification systems, as well as integrate those systems with other jurisdictions. The Federal Government has invested billions in information and identification systems whose benefits will go largely unrealized unless local law enforcement receive the resources to be able to participate in these systems.

Unfortunately, there is a wide disparity between the criminal identification systems that are now available, and the ability of state and local law enforcement to use them. Many states, including Minnesota, have been developing systems which will allow, at a minimum, the most populous areas to link up to the FBI’s IAFIS system. However, many small, rural localities are being left behind. This reduces the capacity of rural law enforcement to quickly verify the identity and criminal record of dangerous suspects in their custody.

Right now, in many rural counties, a sheriff’s office may have to wait as long as two months to have a suspect positively identified. Access to the FBI’s IAFIS system would allow sheriffs like Ray Hunt to determine under two hours a suspect’s identity who has an existing file with the FBI.

This legislation will be one step in bridging this gap. It will provide grants to states to assist local and rural law enforcement to integrate information technologies or to establish systems that work with the FBI’s. These funds may be used by local law enforcement agencies to integrate information systems with other jurisdictions, or for training, and maintenance and purchase of fingerprint identification technology. The total amount to be authorized is $20 million for each of three years.

“Katie’s Law” will be instrumental in ensuring that rural law enforcement is not left behind. I can never know how the Poirier and the other families really feel, the depth of their pain and the tremendous sacrifice they suffered. But, I do know how I feel—we must and can do more to safeguard our children and to support rural law enforcement prevent and solve violent crimes. I believe “Katie’s Law” is an important step forward in that direction.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $20,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

By Mr. WELLSTONE:

S. 887. A bill to amend the Torture Victims Relief Act of 1986 to authorize appropriations to provide assistance for domestic centers and programs for the treatment of victims of torture; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I am introducing the Torture Victims Relief Act of 2001. This bill authorizes increased appropriations to provide assistance for domestic centers and programs for the treatment of victims of torture. The bill authorizes the authorization levels for domestic treatment centers for victims of torture to $20 million for fiscal year 2002, double the $10 million amount currently authorized for the fiscal years 2000 and 2001. The bill authorizes the authorization for the $10 million amount currently authorized for the fiscal year 2000 of the Torture Victims Relief Reauthorization Act of 1999, and $25 million for fiscal year 2003 (an increase of $15 million over the current authorization) and establishes an authorization level of $30 million for fiscal year 2004.

Repressive governments frequently make use of torture to silence those who are defending human rights and democracy in their own country. Many of these people have sought refuge in the United States. The additional funding provided in the Torture Relief Act of 2001 recognizes the debt we owe to those courageous people who have made extraordinary sacrifices by speaking out for their principles.

We have long way in raising the awareness of torture and helping victims of torture since 1985 when the Center for Victims of Torture in Minnesota was founded and began its pioneering work with torture victims, but still much more needs to be done to stop this terrible practice.

In 1998, as an outgrowth of my work with the Center for Victims of Torture, I introduced the Torture Victims Relief Act. It was adopted by Congress and became law, PL 105-220. The legislation authorized the Department of Health and Human Services to support U.S. treatment programs for victims of torture. For Fiscal Year 2000, Congress appropriated $7.2 million. The implementation of the Office of Refugee Settlement, provided 16 grants with this appropriation. About twice that number applied for funding with a total request several times the available amount. For Fiscal Year 2001, Congress appropriated $10 million for this program, the authorized amount. It has become obvious that the program is significantly underfunded and requires the additional support provided by this legislation.

The Center will support treatment services to hundreds of victims each year in 23 treatment centers, located from New York to California and from Minnesota to Texas. The victims have suffered horrendous torture and as a consequence suffer from nightmares, anxiety attacks, flashbacks, depression and other mental health problems. With treatment they can become contributing members of our communities. Without treatment, victims potentially become burdens rather than contributors to society.

Since adoption of TVRA, the number of treatment programs for victims of torture has more than doubled. The National Consortium of Torture Treatment Programs now include 23 organizations and others are seeking membership.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mr. LIEBERMAN:

S. 888. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide assistance to students and families coping with the costs of higher education, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce the College Tuition Assistance Act of 2001, a bill that will provide tax relief to middle and lower income American families struggling to pay the rising cost of college tuition for their children.

Last year, at my request, the Committee on Governmental Affairs held two days of hearings on the affordability of higher education. Those hearings showed that the price of college tuition continues to rise at a pace that exceeds the rate of inflation. In fact, the most recent data released by the College Board show that since 1980, both public and private four-year college tuitions have increased on average more than 115 percent over inflation. It’s no wonder families are worried about their ability to afford a college education for their children, and about the student loan debt burden their children may have to bear after graduation. We should be worried too—ensuring that higher education is affordable is critical to our nation’s ability to maintain its competitiveness in a global economy. Highly trained, skilled workers are our engine that powers our economy, both because of the work they do and the revenue they generate as both buyers and sellers of goods and services.

The College Tuition Assistance Act will help families in four key ways:

First, it will help them pay tuition expenses while students are in school, by increasing the value of the current Lifetime Learning Credit. Under my bill, which is based on the President’s proposal, a family would be eligible for a tax credit or tax deduction worth as much as $2,800 toward the first $10,000 in tuition and fees they pay each year. In addition, the adjusted income levels at which individuals and families qualify for the credit are raised so that more families would be eligible to receive this credit.

Second, my bill would remove the requirement that Pell grants and other need-based government programs be subtracted from a family’s eligible college expenses, allowing those families to qualify for some portion of the Lifetime Learning Credit. A problem under current law is that the value of need-based aid, such as a Pell grant, received by the child of a lower income family may reduce or even eliminate the family’s eligibility for a tax credit based on tuition expenses. However, a recent study by the Consumer-Rights- and Student-Financial Assistance shows that, even after receiving need-based aid, students from low-income families have as much as $3,800 a year in “unmet need,” that is, expenses that are not covered by assistance and which the family may be unable to afford. If families are permitted to subtract the value of their government aid from their eligible college expenses, they may qualify for the first time for the Lifetime Learning Credit and apply this money toward the costs of their college student’s education. Without this help, many students from low-income families might not attend college. The Advisory Committee report says that, because of the financial barriers, even the most highly qualified students from low-income families attend college at a rate that is 20 percent lower than equally qualified students from the wealthiest families. For less qualified students, this differential is nearly 40 percent.

Third, the costs of higher education continue to be a burden for many students even after graduation, as their student loans come due and a significant portion of their disposable income going to pay interest on these loans. Some graduates find that, even with their higher salary, they cannot afford many of the basic things they would like to acquire as adults, such as a home or car purchases or even starting a new family. The College Tuition Assistance Act will expand the current tax law in three ways to provide more help offsetting the interest costs associated with repayment of student loans and graduation. First, it will remove the current five year limit on deductions of student loan interest, it will raise the adjusted income levels so more individuals and families can qualify for this deduction, and it will allow the deduction to be taken for each student in the family who owes interest on college loans.

Finally, studies repeatedly show that the purchasing power of the Pell grant itself has been significantly eroded. Recent reports issued by the College Board and the American Council on Education show that in academic year 1975-1976, the maximum Pell grant covered 78 percent of the price of attending a public four-year college; for the student academic year, the maximum grant is enough to cover only 39 percent of these costs. We must do a better job of funding this crucial assistance to low-income students. President Bush, during last year’s campaign, pledged to increase the maximum Pell grant for first-year students from $3,000 to $5,100 from its current level of $3,300. While many experts do not support the notion of "front-loading" by increasing aid only to first-year students, this was at least a significant proposed increase in Pell grant funding. The College Tuition Assistance Act will encourage meaningful increases in the maximum Pell grant by raising the authorization level for academic years 2001-2002 and 2002-2003 to $5,800.

A college degree is a basic necessity in our Innovation Economy and a family’s financial status should not be the determining factor in whether a young person joins society with the advantages of education or not. I hope, with the support of my colleagues, that we can pass the College Tuition Assistance Act in order to ease the burden middle and lower income families and their children bear on their way to success.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

making coverage decisions as "designated decision makers" who may be sued in federal court.

Finally, the Bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights Act of 2001 ensures that treating physicians and health professionals and their workers are protected from frivolous and unjustified lawsuits, provided they exercise ordinary care in complying with provisions of the law.

At the same time, the legislation recognizes that the federal government does not have all the answers. States will play the primary role in enforcing the bill's requirements. States will set the standards for health plans and will have flexibility to apply for certification from the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) that their laws are consistent with the requirements in the bill. A federal advisory board would evaluate state-passed consumer protections under this standard and make recommendations to the Secretary of HHS.

If a state does not have a law, or adopt a law, consistent with the new federal requirements, federal fall-back legislation would apply. Health, Labor, and Education would enforce the bill, while other health professionals from providing care otherwise prevents health plans from restricting care they need regardless of whether the emergency room is in their health plan's network. Employers that offer only closed panel health plans will be required to offer a point-of-service coverage options to their workers.

The Bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights Act of 2001 includes a comprehensive set of common-sense protections to ensure that patients have access to the care, treatment, and information they need. Patients can go the nearest hospital emergency room to get the emergency care they need regardless of whether the emergency room is in their health plan's network. Employers that offer only closed panel health plans will be required to offer a point-of-service coverage options to their workers.

The Bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights Act of 2001 guarantees that all Americans covered by private health plans will be protected through a new comprehensive, common-sense set of patient protections guaranteed by law. This centrist proposal builds upon and incorporates the best elements of the patients' rights legislation developed during the past two Congresses by both Republican and Democratic.

The Bipartisan Patients' Bill of Rights Act will ensure that all Americans covered by private health plans get the care they need and deserve by guaranteeing access to medical specialists, emergency care, needed pre-scription drugs, point-of-service coverage, and coverage for clinical trials. Patients will be guaranteed access to important information about their health coverage. Doctors, not health plans, will make medical decisions. When needed, health plans must ensure that patients have access to medically-necessary prescription medications that are not part of the formulary.

Health plans must ensure that patients receive timely access to specialty medical care when needed. Health plans that offer obstetrician/gynecological services must provide women with direct access to an OB/GYN specialist for OB/GYN covered services. Health plans that offer patients coverage in accordance with the recommendations of health plans must ensure that patients have access to medically-necessary prescription medications that are not part of the formulary.

At the same time, the legislation retains the current law distinction with respect to remedies in the areas that the courts have determined are traditional areas of state concern—quality of health care and “treatment” standards. The bill respects and reinforces state court jurisdiction over quality of care and treatment claims by expressly stating that any harm resulting from treatment and health care delivery activities will continue to be subject to state law remedies.

When a patient files an appeal and the external reviewer determines that the appeal is not subject to independent medical review, a federal court may assess a civil penalty up to $100,000 when the denial causes substantial harm to the patient.

The Frist-Breaux-Jeffords legislation protects employers who do not make medical decisions from lawsuits. The legislation that gives employers statutory authority to designate a party or parties, such as the insurance carrier or the third-party administrator that will have clear and exclusive authority to make determinations that give rise to legal causes of action. In a fully insured group health plan, this “designated decision-makers” insurance carrier, unless the employer expressly takes back responsibility from the carrier. Designated decision-makers must demonstrate that they can fulfill their responsibilities, including financial obligations that stem from liability, by obtaining liability insurance or by meeting certain capital and surplus requirements.

The Frist-Breaux-Jeffords legislation also helps protect doctors and other health professionals from new, expanded federal liability by expressly providing that health care professionals who directly deliver care or treatment, or who provide services to patients, can not be sued for coverage decisions as designated decision-makers unless they expressly agree in writing to be the designated decision-maker and meet the bill’s strict financial requirements. Further, insurance companies may not appoint treating health professionals as designated decision-makers under the bill.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, today, I am pleased to join with Senators BILL FRIST and JOHN BREAUX in introducing the Bipartisan Patients’ Bill of Rights Act of 2001, bipartisan managed care reform legislation that meets the patient protection principles outlined by President Bush for a bill he would sign into law. The President’s strong support for our legislation is proof that he is providing the necessary leadership to bring Republicans and Democrats to the table to develop managed care protections for all Americans.

Some believe that the answer to improving our Nation’s health care quality is to allow greater access to the State’s tort system. However, you simply cannot see your way to better health. Rather, we believe that patients must get the care they need when they need it. Under the Bipartisan Patient Bill of Rights Act of 2001, bipartisan managed care reform legislation that meets patient protection principles outlined by President Bush for a bill he would sign into law, the patient protection principles the President has set forth will assist consumers in navigating the health care system. Most importantly, the bills provide for an internal and external independent review process with strong new remedies when the external view process fails. Our primary area of disagreement lies in the degree that employers are protected from multiple causes of action in multiple venues and the provision of a reasonable cap on damages.

Fortunately, I believe we can provide the key protections that consumers want at a minimal cost and without disruption of coverage, if we apply these principles and insist that employers are responsible where they are needed, without adding significant new costs, increasing litigation, and micro-managing health plans. Our goal is to give Americans the protections they want and need in a package that they can afford and that works. The only way we can achieve the Bipartisan Patients’ Bill of Rights Act of 2001 represents true managed care protections that can be signed into law.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. CARPER):

S. 890. A bill to require criminal background checks on all firearms transactions occurring at events that provide a venue for the sale, offer for sale, transfer, or exchange of firearms, and to provide additional resources for gun crime enforcement; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to finally close what has become known as the “gun show loophole” and provide more resources to prosecute violations of gun laws. This bill, The Gun Show Loophole Enforcement Act of 2001, stops criminals from evading a background check while respecting the rights of individuals who enjoy attending and purchasing firearms at public gun show events and helps put criminals who use guns behind bars. I am pleased to have as cosponsors Senators LIEBERMAN, SCHUMER, DEWINE, and CARPER.

Since the Brady law went into effect, Federal law requires anyone buying a gun at a gun store to undergo a background check, but the law does not apply to private individuals selling guns, such as at gun shows. At gun shows, both licensed and unlicensed gun sellers offer guns for sale. At tables operated by licensed dealers, buyers must go through a background check; at tables operated by private sellers federal law requires no background check, and 32 states do not require such checks either.

Criminals and gun traffickers have figured this out. Gun shows are the second leading source of illegal guns recovered in gun trafficking investigations. According to the report by Americans for Gun Safety, “the states that do not require background checks at gun shows are flooding the rest of the nation with crime guns.” While 95 percent of buyers are cleared within two hours, the 5 percent who are not are 20 times more likely to be a prohibited purchaser. Background checks are an essential part of keeping guns from criminals and other prohibited individuals.

The gun show bill will require background checks at each of the 4,500 gun shows that occur every year. It does so in a way that is balanced and protected the rights of those who enjoy gun shows. It is the first gun safety legislation that is genuinely bipartisan and it is the only bill that creates real incentives for states to improve their criminal history records in order to make the National Instant Check System, NICS, faster and more accurate. And this bill contains no provisions that are designed to hurt legitimate gun show business.

This bill eliminates the confusing definition of previous bills and defines a gun show as any event where at least 75 guns are available for sale. This bill corrects a flaw in previous bills and excludes from background checks the sale of a gun either from the seller’s home or to an immediate family member.

The sticking point in previous failed gun bills was the maximum time allowed to complete a background check: 3 business days, which is current law for licensed dealers, or a shorter time due to the transience of gun shows. This bill creates an innovative compromise. For the first three years after the bill becomes law, it extends current law to gun shows: 3 business days. But after three years, states may apply for a waiver from the U.S. Attorney General under the promise that states will reduce the time allowed to complete a background check: 24 hours, but only when that state has automated its records so a waiver be granted so that a shortened time period won’t allow criminals and other illegal buyers to get guns. It creates accountability so that states can only receive this waiver when at least 95 percent of their disqualifying records dating back 30 years are computerized.

During the first three years, three business days is the maximum time it can take to run a check for unlicensed sellers. If, after those three business days the buyer has not been denied, he or she can purchase the gun. It is not a waiting period; if you clear the system, you immediately get your gun. If, after three years, a state has sufficiently computerized their records, 24 hours is the new maximum time it can take to run a fingerprint.

Background checks do not hurt gun show business in any way. For example, Pennsylvania currently requires background checks for all gun sales and hosts the second most gun shows in the nation, hundreds every year. And unlike previous bills, this bill creates no new onerous reporting requirements for gun sales at gun shows but requires only the same paperwork required for gun sales from a licensed gun store.

This bill will reduce crime by providing for tougher enforcement of current gun laws. This bill adds new ATF agents and gun crime prosecutors, expands Project Exile, calls for more resources for gun tracing and more research into new "smart gun" technologies, and provides much needed money for states to automate their records.

Recently, the States of Oregon and Colorado overwhelmingly passed statewide initiatives closing the gun show loophole. I wholeheartedly supported those efforts. Given the overwhelming support that the people of these two states provided to closing the gun show loophole, I think it is time that we have a national requirement for background checks for all sales at gun shows. In the end, it will require parity between gun stores and gun shows, help stop criminals from getting guns on the black market, reduce the interstate trafficking of guns, and will not harm gun show operators.

I do not view my stance on the gun show loophole as inconsistent with my twenty-year long Congressional voting record on gun-related issues. I will always stand for law-abiding Americans' Second Amendment rights, but with rights, come responsibilities. And we have a responsibility to help keep guns out of the hands of criminals while protecting the rights of honest, law-abiding citizens. I ask my friends on this side of the aisle to consider that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TITLE II—GUN LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

(c) MEDIA AWARENESS.—From amounts authorized by subsection (b), the Attorney General may provide funds to participating local jurisdictions.

SEC. 104. FUNDING FOR ADDITIONAL ATF AGENTS.

There are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal years 2002 through 2005 to the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose of—

(1) funding additional resources for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms to conduct a background check requirement anyone who makes occasional sales, exchanges, or purchases of firearms for the enhancement of a personal collection or for a hobby, or who sells all or part of his personal collection of firearms.” As a result, any person selling guns as a hobby or only occasionally, whether at a gun show, flea market or elsewhere, need not obtain a federal license and therefore has no obligation to conduct a background check. This means that anyone wanting to avoid a background check can go to a gun show, find out which vendors are not FFLs, and buy a gun. And this is dangerous not only because it allows convicted felons and other prohibited persons to buy guns, but also because, in contrast to FFLs, non-FFLs have no obligation to keep records of the transactions, thereby depriving law enforcement of the ability to trace the gun if it later turns up at a crime scene.

Our bill will change that. We will make sure that no one will be able to buy a gun at a gun show without it... first being determined whether that person is a convicted felon or is a member of one of the other categories of people we all agree should not be allowed to buy guns.

Senator MCCAIN and I have heard the concerns expressed about past proposals to close the gun show loophole, and we have tried hard in our bill to make sure those concerns are addressed.

First, our bill has a simple definition of a gun show, an event where 75 or more guns are offered or exhibited for sale—and we make clear that that definition doesn’t include sales from a private collection by nonlicensed sellers out of their homes.

Second, to respond to the argument that previous proposals made it too difficult for nonlicensed sellers to fulfill the background check requirement, our bill makes sure that nonlicensed sellers will have easy access to someone who can initiate background checks for them, and it requires a license whose sole purpose will be to initiate background checks at gun shows.

Third, we have tried to respond to those who say that the three-day check is too long for gun shows, because those events only last a couple of days. It is worth noting that the length allowed for the check doesn’t affect the majority of gun purchasers, because 72 percent of checks are completed within 30 seconds and 95 percent are done within two hours. We have come up with a compromise that authorizes a State to move to a 24-hour check for nonlicensed dealers at gun shows—when the State can prove that a 24-hour check is feasible. A State can prove that by showing that 95 percent of the records that would disqualify people in that State from buying guns are computerized and searchable by the NICS system.

Now I know that there are many, including President Bush, who argue that what we need to solve the gun violence problem are not new laws but the enforcement of existing ones. I agree with part of that statement. Our bill authorizes significant increases in funding for a number of gun enforcement programs, including state and local gun crime prosecutors, Project Exile, additional ATF agents, gun tracing and smart gun technology. I am pleased that the President said yesterday that he supports a large chunk of what we are proposing today.

But I believe we must go farther than that, because we will never be able to enforce existing laws unless we close the loopholes in them that criminals exploit. As we all know, 95 percent of felons are a big loophole in the provision saying that felons aren’t supposed to buy guns, and that is that criminals know that if they go to a gun show, they will be able to avoid the background check that was set up to keep them from getting guns.

Gun crime remains a critical public safety problem. For too long, it has unnecessarily divided the Congress, and the American people have been left to suffer the violent consequences. But the reality is that most of us agree on most of the critical questions. We agree that the laws on the books should be enforced, that the rights of law-abiding gun owners should be protected, and that convicted felons shouldn’t be able to get guns. The bill we are introducing today would write those principles into law. I hope all of my colleagues support it.

By Mr. DODD: S. 891. A bill to amend the Truth in Lending Act with respect to extensions of credit to consumers under the age of 21; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation designed to help avoid the growing problem of credit card indebtedness. This legislation is fairly straightforward. It would not prohibit people younger than 21 from obtaining a credit card. It simply requires that when issuing credit cards to persons under the age of 21, the issuers obtain an application, the signature of a parent, guardian, or other qualified individual willing to take financial responsibility for the debt; or 2. information indicating that the young person has a job or some means of repaying any credit extended; or 3. proof that the young person has completed a certified credit counseling course.

One of the most troubling developments in the hotly contested battle between credit card issuers to sign up new customers has been the aggressive way in which they have targeted people under the age of 21, particularly college students.

Solicitations to this age group have become more intense for a variety of reasons. First, it is one of the few market segments in which there are always new customers to go after; every year, 25 to 30 percent of undergraduates are fresh faces entering their first year of college. Second, it is also an age group in which brand loyalty can be readily established. In the words of one major college. In fact, most credit card issuers actively entice colleges and universities to help promote their credit cards, the report said. As part of the agreement, the university receives 0.4 percent of each purchase made with the cards. In a sense, this university has a vested interest in getting their students in as much debt as possible.

The “60 Minutes II” piece vividly illustrated the impact that credit card debt can have on college students. A crew form the show, on a major public university campus, and with the use of hidden cameras, filmed vendorsfree T-shirts, hats, and other enticements with credit card applications. “60 Minutes II” revealed that this university is being paid $13 million over ten years by a credit card company for the right to have a presence on campus and use the university logo on its cards.

This public university is making money off students who use these credit cards, the report said. As part of the agreement, the university receives 0.4 percent of each purchase made with the cards. In a sense, this university has a vested interest in getting their students in as much debt as possible.

The “60 Minutes II” piece also told the story of one student, Sean Moyer, and his desperate attempts to handle massive credit card debt. This student’s life began to spin out of control as the huge debts he racked up in just three years of college began to become, in his mind, insurmountable. As a result of mounting credit card debts, he ended up unable to get law school like he dreamed, and his parents could not afford to pay his way. So in February 1998, Sean took his own life.

“It is obscene that the university is making money off the suffering of their students,” said a local hotel, but he still could not pay his collectors, she said.

Even three years after her son’s death, she still gets pre-approved credit card offers in Sean’s name from some of the same companies that he owed thousands of dollars. One company pre-approved Sean for a $100,000 credit line, she said.

Last Congress, I went to the main campus of the University of Connecticut to meet with student leaders about this issue; quite honestly, I was surprised at the amount of solicitations going on in the student union. I was even more surprised at the degree to which the students themselves were concerned about the constant barrage of offers they were receiving.

These offers seem very attractive. One student intern in my office received four solicitations in just two weeks, one promised “eight cheap flights while you still have 18 weeks of vacation.” Another promised a platinum card with what appeared to be a low interest rate, until one reads in the fine print that it applied only to balance transfers, not to the account over-leescence to adulthood. As we do in many other places in the federal law, some extra care is needed to make sure that mistakes made from youthful inexperience do not haunt these young people for the rest of their lives.

Federal law already says that people under the age of 21 cannot drink alcohol. Our tax code makes the presumption that if someone is a full-time student under the age of 23, they are financially dependent on their parents or guardians.

Is it so much to ask that credit card issuers find out if someone under the age of 21 is financially capable of payback the debt? Or that their parents are willing to assume financial responsibility? Or that they understand the nature and conditions of the debt

Many responsible credit card issuers already require this information in one

Providing fair access to credit is some-able role in assisting in their pursuit of the American dream. I do not believe that this legislation is either unduly burdensome on the credit card industry or unfair to people under the age of 21.

The fact of the matter is that excessive solicitations assume that if the young adult is unable to pay, they will be bailed out by their parents. Many times this means that parents must sacrifice other things in order to make sure that their child does not start out their adult life in a financial hole or with an ugly black mark on their cred-

This measure is critical to ensuring that credit cards are both issued and used responsibly. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

SEC. 3. REGULATORY AUTHORITY.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may issue such rules or publish such model forms as are necessary to carry out section 127(c)(6) of the Truth in Lending Act, as added by this Act.

DEAR SENATOR DODD: Consumers Union, the Consumer Federation of America, and U.S. Public Interest Research Group urge your support of the Underage Consumer Credit Protection Act of 2001 that addresses the growing problem of credit card debt among young Americans.

Your bill would require that a credit card issuer undertake reasonable steps to verify that students under the age of 21 who seek to receive credit card offers. In the alternative, a credit card could be issued to a student who complies with these requirements at the front end before the student obtains a credit card. Nellie Mae found that: Some students unattenuate accumulate credit card debt, not necessarily planning ahead whether they can afford to borrow that sum, and not aware of the actual finance charges they will pay over time. Having a card doesn’t necessarily indicate knowledge about the ramifications of borrowing in general; nor does it show that the student has evaluated the benefit and costs of borrowing with a credit card vs. other types of financing. Without assistance, these students may not have the know how to borrow wisely on the front end.

The credit card industry has targeted America’s youth with relentless marketing ploys and tactics that seem designed to drive those students into debt. According to Nellie Mae, more than 70 percent of undergraduates possess at least one credit card. The average debt for undergraduates who do not pay off their bill every month is more than $2,000. Many students end up dropping out of school under the weight of such debt. The regulator should respond to this growing crisis on college campuses. And the problem could get worse as high school students are also receiving credit card offers.

Many colleges and universities not only permit aggressive credit card marketing on campus, they actually benefit financially from this marketing. Credit card issuers pay institutions for sponsorship of school programs, for support of student activities, for rent, and solicitation tables, and for exclusive marketing agreements, such as college “affinity” cards.

Congress should require lending institutions to explain in a simple and sound manner by verifying that the person to whom that credit card issuer is extending credit has the ability to repay. In the absence of acting in a safe and sound manner, the best that could be done is to give student’s some of the tools that could be used in avoiding financial trouble through credit counseling at the front end. A student should pass the Underage Consumer Credit Protection Act to preserve the soundness of our financial institutions and help America’s youth handle the aggressive credit card industry practices.

[From the Chicago Tribune, May 7, 1999] CHICAGO—REACHING OUT TO SAVE: EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGNS ATTEMPTS TO GIVE STUDENTS BASIC FINANCIAL SURVIVAL SKILLS, INCLUDING HANDLING CREDIT (By Humberto Cruz)

It should come as no surprise. Forty percent of Americans—count me in, too—who believe financial education should be mandatory in high school. A recent nationwide survey by the National Council on Economic Education found that 96 percent of adults believe basic economics should be a required part of the high school curriculum. Currently, 38 of the 50 states have adopted guidelines for teaching economics in high school, but only 16 mandate that schools provide such instruction. The survey also pointed to a growing desire among teachers and education and consumer groups.

“We asked ourselves what our priorities should be, and one thing that has come down loud and clear is the necessity to get many people to start saving early,” said Salisbury, who is also president and CEO of the Employer Benefit Research Institute in Washington, D.C.

As part of the campaign, the savings council and the institute released a “Youth & Money: Financial Skills” workbook, which was launched by 440 college students conducted by the research firm Mathew Greenwald & Associates.

The survey found that most students feel confident they understand financial matters. But their behavior suggests they don’t know nearly as much as they think, and that many are falling into bad habits.

For example, less than half save at least something whenever they receive money or get paid, only 23 percent draw up a monthly budget and stick to it, and 22 percent of those with credit cards roll over debt month after month.

Perhaps more telling, one-fourth of the students who think they do a good job of managing their money do not think regular savings is a very high priority, when in fact it should be.

And 25 percent of the students with credit cards who say they do a good job of managing their money roll over debt every month, one of the worst financial habits anybody can have.

“One has to presume they are influenced just by watching their parents,” Salisbury said. “They end up ‘learning’ things they would be better off not learning.”

If parents can’t or won’t help, what is the solution? The survey showed an overwhelming majority of students, or 94 percent, go first to their parents for financial information and advice. Only 21 percent had taken a financial education course in school, although 62 percent said they would like to take one. Thirty percent said they invested the savings differently than they thought they developed a budget. The Youth & Money survey, however, questions whether the students actually changed their behavior as opposed to just saying they did.

Still, Salisbury is among a big majority of Americans—count me in, too—who believe financial education should be mandatory in high school. A recent nationwide survey by the National Council on Economic Education found that 96 percent of adults believe basic economics should be a required part of the high school curriculum. Currently, 38 of the 50 states have adopted guidelines for teaching economics in high school, but only 16 mandate that schools provide such instruction. The survey also pointed to a growing desire among teachers and education and consumer groups.

“Many students could then educate their parents on the basics of budgeting and handling credit. Some say saving and investing would not be a subject that 30 percent of parents never discuss with their children, according to the Youth & Money survey. “What’s most effective is for students to take what they learn in school about finance and discuss it with their parents,” said Paul Yoboseki, director of research for the savings council.

TEEN’S ABLE TO CALCULATE HOW SAVINGS CAN ADD UP

Would you shell out $4,700 for a pair of sneakers? How about $2,383 for a computer game or $300 for a fast food meal?

The sums may sound outlandishly high, but that is how much a 13-year-old could potentially be invested in credit. Rather than spending $75 for a pair of sneakers, $45 for a computer game and $5 for a fast food meal, according to “AER Savings Calculations,” which was launched by 440 college students conducted by the research firm Mathew Greenwald & Associates.

DEBT SMOTHERS YOUNG AMERICANS (By Christine Dugas)

For many living in a world of easy credit, digging out of debt can become a way of life: 18- to 35-year-olds often live paycheck to paycheck, using credit for restaurant meals and high-tech toys. A news study says the average undergraduate now owes $2,748 on credit cards.

As a freshman at the University of Houston in 1995, Jennifer Massey signed up for a credit card and got a free T-shirt. A year later, she had piled up about $20,000 on debt on this one card.

Paige Hall, 34, returned from her honeymoon in 1997 to find herself laid off from her job at a mortgage company in Atlanta. She was out of work for 4 months. She and her husband, Kevin, soon were trying to figure out how to pay $18,200 in bills from their wedding, honeymoon and furnishings for their new home.

By the time Mistie Medendorp was 29, she had $10,000 in credit card debt and $12,000 in student loan debt. There is no need to worry about being over-leveraged. It all seems to work out.

Kevin Jackson, a 32-year-old software engineer, said his student loan debt of $20,000 was a home-equity loan. He doesn't believe he has a debt problem, though his goal is to reduce his credit card balance to $2,000.

"I live with a certain amount of debt," he says. "It's a means to an end. I'm trying to pay for everything and something to be said for enjoying life, as long as you do it responsibly." Unfortunately, enjoying life can be expensive, says Jackson, who is one of the youngest Americans who feel it is essential to have the latest high-tech products and services, as well as a cellphone, pager, voice mail, a computer and Internet service provider. Jackson works in the computer industry, which has high employee turnover rates. Jackson has been in the industry for four years of medical school, one year in an MBA program and a 5-year residency program.

During his residency and a subsequent fellowship, payments and some of the interest on his student loan have been deferred. Soon they'll have to begin paying them off.

year. With her husband, their annual income is more than $100,000. “But we’re still broke trying to pay our bills,” she says.

By Mr. HARKIN:
S. 892. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to phase out the use of methyl ter-tertiary butyl ether in fuels of fuel additives, to promote the use of renewable fuels and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am introducing today legislation designed to address the extensive problems that have arisen because of the gasoline additivemethyl tertiary butyl ether, MTBE, to make appropriate revisions to the reformulated gasoline, RFG, program in the Clean Air Act, and to increase greatly the use of renewable motor vehicle fuels. The bill is similar to legislation I introduced in the previous Congress.

We have to get MTBE out of our gasoline. This is absolutely clear. Even in Iowa, where we are not required to have oxygenated fuels or RFG, a recent survey found a surprising level of water contamination with MTBE. So my legislation requires a phased reduction in the use of MTBE in motor fuel and then a prohibition of MTBE use in fuel additives beginning three years after enactment.

My legislation recognizes the benefits that have been provided by the ox-gen content requirement in the refor-mulated gasoline program. Oxygen added to gasoline reduces emissions of carbon monoxide, toxic compounds and fine particulate matter. So my legislation continues the oxygen content requirement, but it would allow, in certain circumstances upon a proper showing, averaging of the oxygen content requirement over a period of time up to a year.

The legislation also ensures that all health benefits of the reformulated gasoline are maintained and improved, and includes very strong provisions to ensure that there is no backsliding in air quality and health benefits from cleaner burning reformu-lated gasoline. The petroleum comnies would also be prohibited from tak-ning the pollutants from gasoline in some areas and putting them back into gasoline in other areas of the country that are not subject to the more stringent air quality standards. Those are referring to anti-dumping protections. My bill places tighter restrictions on highly polluting aromatic and dozen content of reformulated gasoline.

My legislation also recognizes the important role of renewable fuels in improving our environment, building energy security for our nation, and increasing farm income, economic growth and job creation, especially in rural areas. The legislation creates a national renewable content requirement for motor vehicle fuel. The requirement would not be a mandate that any particular user of gasoline or diesel fuel has to use the renewable fuel, but it would require the petroleum industry to ensure that renewable fuels make up a certain minimum percentage of the total U.S. supply of motor vehicle fuel, gasoline and diesel fuel. By 2011, that percentage would be about 3 percent based on energy content or approximately 10 billion gallons based on current estimates of gasoline and diesel consumption.

Overall, my legislation will get MTBE out of gasoline, maintain and improve the air quality and health benefits of the reformulated gasoline program and the Clean Air Act, and put our nation on a solid path toward greater use of renewable fuels.
I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE EDUCATION BILL

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, we have several important amendments pending, but I would like to spend a few minutes discussing the very heart of the bill: Accountability and assessments. I believe the bill before us is the most dramatic reform of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act since 1965. I would like everyone to understand what is in this bill so they can understand how dramatic an impact it will have upon every school in this Nation.

For the first time, we will require all children in grades 3-8 to be annually assessed, and that schools, districts, and States will face consequences if they fail to improve the performance of their students.

Each year—in year out—every level of education will be held accountable for showing measurable progress for each group of students they serve. This is the central feature of the legislation, and yet, to judge from press reports and editorials, it is very poorly understood.

I want to do what I can this evening to make sure it is widely understood in this Nation how dramatic the changes are for which we are about to vote.

I am not probably known for unwavering support for the President’s agenda, nor, I hope, am I known for going out of my way to criticize the press. But I rise today both to defend the President and to suggest that the press has been sloppy in its reporting and editorial writing on what should be the central issue of the story, education reform.

For the past week or two, there have been a few press accounts and editorials implying that somehow the President or the Senate has caved to pressure, has watered down the standards in the bill, or has walked away from real reform.

In fairness to the press, I realize this is a difficult subject to cover. The topic can be a bit dense, and there is no real bright line as to the kind of progress we can expect from students and schools.

On Thursday, the lead editorial in USA Today read: “Congress Set to Dilemma Education Reform,” while the sub-head read: “Lawmakers gut school accountability, turn backs on minorities.”

That editorial is but one example of what I think is the lack of understanding about this bill, especially, it seems, in the press. And while my opinion, of course, is just that, it is based on a wealth of data that can be verified independently. Not only do I think it can be verified, I think it is the obligation of the press to do so before it makes value-laden judgments.

In order to understand where we are, a bit of background is necessary. The major education proposals before the Congress have at their core the requirement that States and schools set high standards in core subject matters and that they measure whether students are achieving those standards; further, that we pay particular attention to the progress of our lowest-achieving students. In other words, we are going to look at the groups of students, as well as the students on a general basis, to make sure that no child is left behind.

As reported from committee, both H.R. 1 and S. 1 contain the notion that all students would be proficient in math and reading in 10 years and that a school or school district or State that failed to meet this standard would be deemed to have failed—let me repeat that—and that a school or school district or State that failed to meet this standard would be deemed to have failed.

Further, progress in meeting this goal would be monitored on an annual basis. If a school or district or State failed to make the adequate yearly progress—a term I will use over and over again, “adequate yearly progress,” or, for short, AYP—it would be identified as needing school improvement—another phrase to remember—or subject to sanctions if improvement efforts failed.

The concept of AYP is an important one because adequate yearly progress is the bar for judging whether a school or district or State has succeeded or failed.

Legislating that all students should be proficient in 10 years is a wonderful goal, and perhaps for this reason none of us really gave it much thought. Having been involved in the passage of the Goals 2000 Act some years ago, having served on the national goals panel, I must confess that I have become a little wiser about our ability to achieve wonderful goals.

For my colleagues who may not be familiar with the Goals 2000 Act, in it we codified very ambitious goals that we hoped to achieve by the year 2000. For example, back in 1994, we called for our students to be first in the world in math and science—that was a big goal, a goal that we are so far from having fulfilled—and that we said our 4th, 8th, and 12th grade students would be doing so with demonstrated competency in challenging subject matter, including English, math, science, foreign language, and so on, all by the year 2000.

Well, 2000 has come and gone. In my view, we have made only limited progress in reaching those goals. We have a long way to go, especially in these goals directly relating to academics. I don’t think the lesson to take from this experience is that goals are a bad idea. Rather, I think the lesson is that an unrealistic goal, linked to very real consequences, is a bad idea.

The goal contained in S. 1, as it was reported from the HELP Committee, that all students would be proficient in 10 years, was both admirable and entirely unrealistic. That will explain why we have done what we have. It gives me no great pleasure to say this. I have spent a good part of my career continuing effort to improve education for all students, beginning in my very first year in Congress in 1975. Like anyone, I take some pride in my work. I would much rather correct a glaring problem in a piece of legislation before it is reported from my committee, but as has been noted before, wisdom is a rare commodity which should not be rejected merely because it arrives late.

Unlike some of the issues we confront in this Chamber, we have a solid amount of experience in the results of education reform and educational assessment. The same year we put in place the national education goals, we also passed the last reauthorization of ESEA. Among other things, that reauthorization required annual assessments of students served by title I; that is, for economically disadvantaged students. Combined with the efforts of States such as Washington, Connecticut and North Carolina and Texas, we have a good idea of what States can accomplish.

Thanks to the Internet, which effectively didn’t exist during the last reauthorization, it is a simple matter to examine how and how they compare with the standards we are contemplating in this legislation.

What you will find when you do so is that the standard we have set in our bill, expecting every child to be proficient in reading and math in 10 years, was simply not going to happen unless States dramatically dumbed down their tests. Moreover, because States used different criteria for determining proficiency, some States would end up taking fewer students as proficient, while Missouri, by its tests, got a different. According to the National Assessment of Education Progress, or NAEP, students in Texas and Missouri are almost identical in their reading assessments of the States of Texas and Missouri. The performance of each of these groups will be measured and disseminated in the towel, but neither can we legislate the poor performance of a child. The President and anyone engaged in education reform for very long knows that dramatic, with the entire staff being fired, maybe.

Those teachers with seniority rights would no doubt exercise their bumping rights to land a position in another school. This mass firing and dislocation of teachers would come amidst what most people see as a looming teacher shortage. All over the country, we know that our teachers are getting older and fewer and fewer are coming into the field of teaching. Thus, we are going to have problems in that, which is another issue we will have to face later. This is not good education policy. This is madness. But we were all so intent on proving how tough we could be improving education that for a long time nobody seemed to be willing to admit we were wrong.

The President and his everlasting credit, saw the problem and was willing to try to address it. He has stuck by that decision in spite of the often ill-informed treatment he has received from the press. He has chosen the substance of education reform over its political symbolism.

The President and anyone engaged in education reform for very long knows that a goal of education reform must be focused on improving schools. And to get it, you need to focus your efforts on the schools that need the most help. Monstrous gains from one year to the next, year in and year out, simply do not happen in the real world. Many schools are battling poverty, violence, drugs, unstable families, apathetic parents, engaged parents, with more than one job, television, turnover, and all manner of impediments. We cannot throw in the towel, but neither can we legislate miracles.

The substitute amendment pending before the Senate tries to set ambitious but realistic goals for school improvement. If they are adopted, we will all see the results in a few years. I would wager today that we will not look back with regret for setting the bar too low. My own view is that the glibly likelihood is that we will swamp the system by identifying too many schools as failing.

But we have reached a compromise on this issue and I will support it, in the firm hope that time will prove me wrong and this bill will not over-identify schools as failing.

The substitute amendment sets our two tests for meeting AYP. First, states must establish a formula that measures progress against the goal of 100 percent proficiency for all students in a decade. Many States already have such formulae in place, so they may have to make some adjustments to their existing approaches. The state-determined formula must give greater weight to improving the performance of the poorest performing students. Quite sensibly, greater weight should be given to greater gains. And the driving factor behind a formula must be the performance on assessments.

The second prong of the AYP definition is designed to ensure that no matter how a State formula is constructed, in order to show adequate yearly progress, the State and its schools and districts will be required to achieve at least a one percentage point gain in proficiency for each group of students, every year.

Let me briefly address the notion that our proposal permits schools to hide the performance of low-performing minorities.

Simply put, this notion is rubbish. The disaggregated scores of groups of students must be reported for schools, districts and states. As a result, parents and the public at large will know exactly how groups of students are performing.

I school would be steered into correction, even in the face of this evidence that every school, practically, in the United States would fail. But it is a mystery to me how you can have education reform if every school and every school district and every State is labeled a failure. Resources would be diluted; chaos would result, as every title I school would be steered into corrective action and reconstituted under the bill. Reconstitution means that you tear it all apart. You create a charter school, you hire nobody, whatever else. You have to do something that dramatic, with the entire staff being fired, maybe.

What are these groups? They are based on race, ethnicity, gender, migrant status, limited English proficiency, low-income status and disability. The performance of each of these groups will be measured and disclosed through various means, including the Internet. We’re not hiding the results, we’re putting them on a worldwide billboard.

A school will be deemed to have failed to make Adequate Yearly Progress if it fails to make progress for disabled students, for limited English proficient students, for low-income students, and for racial and ethnic groups of students in each subject assessed.

There are easily a dozen different ways a typical school can fail to make adequate yearly progress under the approach taken in the pending substitute. Making a one percentage point gain in the achievement year after year for every subgroup is a daunting task. Very few States have easily accessible data at the school level by the various subgroups for which this bill will require measurement and consequences.
But the few that do indicate it will be a high standard indeed.

Even at the State level, this kind of continuous improvement has proven elusive for almost every State, even those that are held up as examples of states committed to reform.

The Education Trust recently published a study of how well States have done in closing the achievement gap between white and minority students. As part of that study, it looks at the States making the largest gains in minority math achievement as measured by NAEP.

According to the Education Trust, eight States made above average gains in 4th grade math for African American students. They were: Massachusetts, Michigan, Texas, Iowa, North Carolina, Connecticut, Indiana, and Louisiana.

Most of these States are generally recognized as being in the forefront of education reform efforts in our country. They also share this distinction. Each of them would be deemed a failure under the committee-reported bill.

Let me repeat that. The eight states that did the best job in improving math instruction for black students would all fail if you held them to a standard of reaching 100 percent proficiency for all students.

I have with me a few charts that illustrate my point. In each, the most recent data available is used, and it is compared to what it would take to reach proficiency in 10 years. The charts go back in time as far as readily available comparable data permits. Again, these are some of the very best, most committed States.

If you go across the chart, you will find that in 1999, which is the year from 1998–1999, it shows failure because the progress was not there from 1998, and the actual progress was 11.5 and total required progress was 8.8. I get a little confused with the charts, and I suspect everybody will.

Let’s go to Iowa. It shows that their annual required progress was a 2.76 improvement. You will notice that as you go along, starting out with 72.45, if you add all the red, it is because they didn’t make the 2.76 improvement all the way across, and actually they are missing about 16.56 percent. Then you can break it down by groups. You can see all the way down male, female, and you go to mathematics and so forth. But they are failing.

Connecticut is the same. Connecticut has one of the most impressive educational systems, but you will see there from looking back to the annual progress, they fall right across the board for all those years. We thought they were one of the best. That gives you an idea of what we are looking at, which will show that we have really an incredibly strict piece of legislation.

Massachusetts failed to make progress in 1998, and actually lost a little ground in math.

Michigan, in 1999, failed in math and reading.

Texas failed in both subjects in every year but 1997. Iowa has failed for 5 years running in both subjects.

Connecticut would have failed to make AYP for 5 years running.

Indiana has lost ground in reading and math, and would have failed for 3 years running.

In Louisiana, given the high bar it sets for proficiency, its gains from 1999 to 2000 don’t come close to meeting AYP.

To sum up, every States fails.

So for the press to come out and say that we have weakened the standards and somehow we are not going to be stiff enough, they have to understand that under this bill it is going to be very difficult for the States to comply. These are the results that drove us to amend the committee-reported bill. We didn’t do it because of pressure from Governors or any allegiance to the status quo. We did so because facts are stubborn things. And the facts show that no State has made, or will make, the kind of gains called for in the original bill. The bar is too low. That’s a fair question. Again, I think it has to be answered by what the best schools and States can achieve. And again, I think we have set a very high bar.

A look at a random sample of school districts deemed “exemplary” in Texas shows that they nearly all fail to make one percentage point gains each year, for each group. That might be explained by the fact that when a school’s students are at 90 or 95 percent proficiency, either all students or a group or two will fluctuate up and down. But a look at lower-performing Texas schools, those deemed only “acceptable,” yields the same result. If you look at a dozen, probably only one will make AYP.

The same holds true for Connecticut schools and districts.

I have a chart that looks at the committee-reported standard, in which all schools and districts failed. But the results are only marginally different with a 1 percent standard. In the case of Connecticut, the data we have does not show student subgroup performance, which will show gains above and below the average performance, but not the average. Overall, North Carolina shows the same results. The areas that are darker are the problem areas with no success shown. We looked at the first dozen or so school districts in that State. As our chart shows, all but one failed to make AYP based on the performance of all students in either math or reading.

We found one district did make AYP on the basis of all students, but when you look at the performance of the subgroups of students as we do in the chart for the district, it failed to make a uniform 1 percentage point gain, both for some of the lower performing groups, but also for the highest one.

The purpose behind my remarks is not to leave all of us discouraged, but to try to illustrate that even where you have the best efforts at educational reform, improving educational performance is a very hard task, and we cannot expect miracles.

Our efforts should be ambitious but anchored to what we know schools can achieve. If we enact a system that labels all schools failures, then it is we who have failed.

On the other hand, if they have not already done so, I hope my colleagues in the Senate will take some time to talk with educators in their State about this issue. And I hope the very capable people in the press who write on this issue will spend a little more time in trying to connect the varying claims in this debate to the rich amount of experience that is easily available.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

I took the time this evening to allow people to have the full story so as to better understand, especially when the press says we have watered down the standards. They can make that argument, but if you realized how strict they were to start with and if you realized the present status of our schools, you would understand that had we not done this, it would have been devastating and probably so deflating that we would have chaos.

We have tried to come up with what we believe are the improvements that are capable of being performed by the schools. I point out, as I have pointed out to my colleagues continuously, that is why it is incredibly important we make sure the resources are there for these schools to make the changes to live up to the President’s program.

I urge everyone to follow the costs that are going to be incurred and to talk with the officials in their States to see what resources they believe will be necessary to make sure that every child in that State has an opportunity to be a successful student.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO GRACE ANN MURPHY

HON. RALPH REGULA
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, May 14, 2001

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, after 42 years of government service, the last 28 of which was with my office, Grace Ann Murphy has earned a well-deserved retirement. Grace began her government career at the Navy Department, followed by employment at NASA. In 1970, she came to Capitol Hill to work for Rep. Frank Bow, my predecessor in Congress.

When I came to the House in 1973, I was pleased to have Grace continue her service to the constituents of the 16th district. She is well known to residents of the 16th district having advised them on traveling to our Nation’s capital, helping to set tours of the Capitol and the White House, and responding to a myriad of constituent requests.

With her vast knowledge of how the Hill works, Grace’s skills were particularly appreciated in office moves and Presidential Inaugurations, both events having taken place recently. Grace is extremely knowledgeable about Washington, DC, as she was born and raised here where she graduated from Anacostia High School. She spends her spare time keeping track of all of her fellow class-mates for class reunions.

My staff, my constituents, and I will miss Grace not only for her many outstanding contributions in helping to keep our office running smoothly, but especially for the way she made the various holidays special with the appropriate decorations and foodstuffs. We wish her well in her retirement as it is richly deserved.

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, May 14, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Frank Dominguez for his committed service to the community of Elizabeth, NJ, and for his extraordinary business achievements.

Frank Dominguez is president and CEO of Imperial Construction Group, Inc., one of the fastest growing construction firms in the country. From 1996 to 1999, sales increased from $6.4 million to over $21 million. This year, Imperial Construction Group, Inc., was listed by the Hispanic Business Magazine ranked Imperial as one of the 100 fastest growing Hispanic-owned companies in the United States. The company has over 70 employees who provide construction and design services for private corporations and government agencies.

Many associations have recognized Mr. Dominguez for his outstanding business achievements. In 1993, he received the “Contractor of the Year” Award from the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce of New Jersey. In addition, the U.S. Small Business Administration has honored him four times in the last 8 years. In the past three years alone, Imperial has awarded over $14 million in subcontracts to numerous small businesses in the State. Mr. Dominguez’s dedication and commitment in assisting other small businesses speaks volumes about his character.

Frank Dominguez resides in Warren Township, NJ, with his wife and their two children Anthony and Mark.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Frank Dominguez for his hard work and for his years of service to the State of New Jersey, where he has helped build houses, develop and revitalize communities, and change lives for the better.

THE RETIREMENT OF CELIA DOLLARHIDE

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, as all federal agencies are keenly aware, the government is losing many valued employees to retirement. Among them, one stands out for her dedication and commitment—Mrs. Celia Dollarhide, Director of Education Service at the Department of Veterans Affairs, who retired on May 3.

Most veterans don’t know Celia Dollarhide by name. Her leadership in setting policy, working with Congress, and ensuring that education benefits are paid has been felt by the hundreds of thousands of veterans and their survivors who received an education under one of the three GI Bills during her tenure.

Celia Dollarhide has devoted her working life to federal service. After taking the federal entrance exam, Celia was highly sought by many federal agencies. Fortunately for veterans, she settled on the Veterans Administration. In 1966, Celia began her career as a claims examiner at the Chicago Regional Office, and in 1972 moved to Washington, DC, to work as an Education Specialist. By 1975, Celia was the Chief of the Program Administration Division in the Education Service. After various management positions within the Veterans Benefits Administration, she became the Deputy Director of the Education Service and in 1994, then-Secretary Jesse Brown promoted her meritoriously to the Senior Executive Service. Celia has served the last six years as Director of Education Service.

Throughout her career, Celia has received numerous awards and professional recognition due to her advocacy and leadership on behalf of veterans and their survivors. It is her core belief—that veterans could achieve so much more with an education—that has driven her to succeed at every turn. There is no way to count the number of people whose lives Celia has affected, and I wouldn’t even begin to try. Mr. Speaker, Celia Dollarhide has met the highest standards to which civil servants can aspire. On behalf of the VA Committee and our staff, I say thank you to this remarkable professional.

RETIREMENT OF CELIA DOLLARHIDE

HON. LANE EVANS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, last week marked the retirement of Celia Dollarhide, longtime Director of the Education Service for the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Like most people, I don’t like telling friends goodbye. And Celia has been an incredibly helpful friend to me and to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs over the years. However, Celia has been an unwavering friend to the men and women who have served our Nation in uniform.

Mrs. Dollarhide has served veterans faithfully for almost 35 years, all of which have been with VA’s Veterans Benefits Administration (VBA). She has achieved a remarkable record of accomplishment in the education program. From processing individual education claims for veterans to managing the administration of entire benefit structures, Mrs. Dollarhide’s career has been devoted over time to three different GI Bill programs. Prior to her management role at VBA, she began her career at the Chicago Regional Office in 1966 as a Veterans Claims Examiner. She then became an Education Specialist when she moved to Washington, DC in 1972.

From 1975 to 1980, Mrs. Dollarhide served as Chief of the Education Service’s Program Administration Division. Throughout the 1980’s, she assumed the roles of Administrative Officer for VA’s Central Region and Special Assistant to the Deputy Chief Benefits Director of Program Management. She returned to the Education Service in 1990 as its Deputy Director. In 1994 our former Secretary of Veterans Affairs, Jesse Brown, had the wisdom to bring Mrs. Dollarhide into the Senior Executive Service. Since that time, she has excelled in her role as Director for the Education Service.

Above all else, Celia Dollarhide has always believed in the power of higher education. As a major proponent of enhanced education benefits for veterans and as a caring administrator, her career stands as a testament to the notion of individual empowerment. Her life’s work has focused on empowering the brave men and women who defend this country to become more and achieve more than they ever could have without education.

The VA education benefits that Mrs. Dollarhide has so masterfully administered have helped countless thousands of veterans and servicemembers to make their dreams a realty, I can say this from experience, as I myself have directly benefited from VA education benefits under the GI Bill program. In this regard, I want to personally thank my friend Celia—for her tireless energy, for her unwavering advocacy efforts and for her leadership.

At VA, Mrs. Dollarhide has spent her working days seated behind the large lawyer’s desk that used to belong to her late husband, Charles “Lew” Dollarhide. Mr. Dollarhide also served as VA’s Director of the Education Service from 1980 to 1986. Mrs. Dollarhide’s service and that of her husband have been an exemplary contribution to public service by two remarkable people. For the betterment of veterans and their families, Celia Dollarhide leaves behind an outstanding record of achievement at VA and for this we are all grateful. Thank you, Mrs. Dollarhide, and best regards to you in your well deserved retirement.

NO ESCAPE, NO MORE TO GIVE
HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call the attention of my colleagues to a poignant and powerful article about the increasing violence we are witnessing in Israel. The author of this article, Sherri Lederman Mandell, is the mother of one of the two teenage boys who was found stoned to death in a cave last week. Her words provide us with an insightful look into the lives of Israelis living on the front lines of the violence in Israel.

We must not lose sight of the human element of the issues which we debate. The decisions we are trusted to make impact the lives of real people, a fact too often forgotten. This is especially true for the current violence in Israel, where personal testimonies are often drowned out by pools of rhetoric and propaganda. The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that innocent Israelis are forced to live lives full of fear of violence and terror. Confined to their homes by the violence that surrounds them, these brave people hold out hope that peace will occur one day.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that this entire article “No Escape, No More to Give” by Sherri Lederman Mandell, and published in the May 14th edition of the Washington Post be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I urge my colleagues to carefully consider the tragic human stories that are the backdrop of the Middle East conflict, and which the author describes so vividly in this excellent article.

TRIBUTE TO JOYCE WILLIAMS
HON. MARION BERRY
OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great American, and I am proud to recognize Joyce Williams in the Congress for her invaluable contributions and service to our nation.

Joyce comes from the small town of Bono, Arkansas, but her resume shows that she has not had a small town life. In the first place, she is one of the best-educated people I know, having attended Arkansas State University, the Graduate Institute of Politics, Jonesboro Business College, John Robert Powers Modeling School, and of course, Bono High School.

Right now she and her husband Jim—who also is a wonderful friend—operate Williams & Associates Management Consultants, but I came to know her when she worked for me after I was elected in Congress. In total Joyce spent 22 years employed with the U.S. House of Representatives, and her experience in the office of my predecessor was crucial as I learned how to represent the First Congressional District of Arkansas. Before working for our institution, Joyce had jobs in industry with General Electric and A.D.T., as well as in the bookkeeping trade and sales.

In addition to these professional responsibilities, Joyce somehow found time to be the Governor of Altrusia International, and held memberships in the Altrusia Club of Jonesboro, the Order of the Eastern Star, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, the Girl Scout Council, the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, the Arkansas Democratic Veterans, the Craighead County Democratic Women, the Craighead County Election Commission, the Walnut Street Baptist Church.

Joyce is a devoted mother to her daughter Teresa Jo—now Mrs. Michael Watkins—and spends a great deal of time with her grand-children Seth and Sarah Watkins, and she is a devoted daughter to her own mother.

I am proud to recognize Joyce Williams for everything she has done to help me and the residents of the communities that have been lucky enough to count her as a member. Today I want to express my appreciation on behalf of those people, and on behalf of the citizens of this nation.
CONGRATULATIONS, KID WITNESS NEWS AWARD WINNERS

HON. DONALD M. PAYNE
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues here in the United States House of Representatives to join me in paying special tribute to one of the most talented and especially to the students at the Gordon Parks Academy, located in my Congressional district in East Orange, New Jersey. On May 15th, they will be honored at the 11th annual Panasonic Kid Witness News Awards Ceremony, to be held in our own Newark Museum in Newark, New Jersey.

The Gordon Parks Academy, K–8, is this year’s special Technical Vision Award winner for producing a video with the best special effects. The winning video, “Reading Unlimited”, used especially creative and innovative special effects to create its message that books can transport the mind and the imagination. Two students wander into their school’s book fair looking for a recommendation. They are invited by the mysterious librarian to take a trip across the United States. To the tune of Nat King Cole’s “Route 66,” the students experience a fun-filled cross-country odyssey. The special effects reinforce the point that reading a good book can be as vivid as living what you are reading. Mrs. Sharman Howe Nittoli, the TV Production Teacher and KWN coordinator, should be commended for her outstanding work with the very talented young people who produced this video. Kid Witness News is a hands-on video education program in more than 200 primarily inner-city schools in 120 U.S. cities. Using Panasonic-supplied equipment to create video projects, young people are encouraged to develop their creative, communication, and technical skills through video production. Annual awards are presented to student teams in various categories, including Best Video, Documentary, Local Hero, Multiculturalism and News at a special program held in New Jersey each spring. It is apparent that this program is doing its job.

Proud is that we actually will see the results of the hard work of many talented students at such a commendable program. They are invited by the mysterious librarian to take a trip across the United States. To the tune of Nat King Cole’s “Route 66,” the students experience a fun-filled cross-country odyssey. The special effects reinforce the point that reading a good book can be as vivid as living what you are reading. Annual awards are presented to student teams in various categories, including Best Video, Documentary, Local Hero, Multiculturalism and News at a special program held in New Jersey each spring. It is apparent that this program is doing its job.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the 42nd Annual Castroville Artichoke Festival, taking place May 19th and 20th. While quite unknown to many people outside of my district in California, Castroville is the self-declared “Artichoke Capital of the World,” and this delicious thistle is one of the largest crops in northern Monterey County.

The Artichoke Festival is an annual two-day event that celebrates the culture of the Salinas Valley, specifically the growing, harvesting and many uses of the artichoke itself. Every year new events are planned, but the most popular ones include a classic car show, a parade, and, of course, the food. This year will surely be more exciting, with the addition of a 10K/ half marathon race and an artichoke recipe contest.

The artichoke first came to central California in 1921, when four families with close ties to Italy decided to grow the thistle that was so popular in Europe right in Castroville. With a climate that is perfect for this crop, the artichoke has become a rich part of the heritage and culture of our area.

Because of this importance in the life and economy of my district, and because it is such a delicious treat for anyone familiar with this thistle, I am pleased to be able to honor the 42nd Annual Castroville Artichoke Festival.

TRIBUTE TO JIMMIE LOU FISHER
HON. MARION BERRY
OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great American, and I am proud to recognize Jimmie Lou Fisher in the Congress for her invaluable contributions and service to our state and nation.

I have known Jimmie Lou for years, and I can testify from experience to her public service and the example she has set for others.

Jimmie Lou has served longer than any other state treasurer in Arkansas history. As one of the first female office holders in our state, she has been a positive role-model and trailblazer for young women. Most importantly, she executes her responsibilities effectively, and combines her obvious competence with a passion for politics. This explains why the citizens of Arkansas have elected her so many times, and why she has inspired so many others to become involved in our political system.

Clearly Jimmie Lou has mastered her job, and has shown creativity and ingenuity in the process. In 1990 she was named the president of the National Association of State Treasurers. Recently she was the only state treasurer in the nation to employ a state-of-the-art investment and general ledger system, which has cut paperwork and processing in half, and dramatically reduced maintenance costs.

Her many awards and nominations indicate the degree to which she has touched the lives of people in communities large and small. President Bill Clinton was lucky to have her as a district coordinator when he first ran for governor; the Democratic party was lucky to have her in all of the capacities she accepted in its behalf; the citizens of Arkansas were lucky to have her through almost eighteen years of superb service; and our state have been lucky to have her as a role model and inspiration.

Jimmie Lou decided to retire from politics this year, which came as a surprise to many people in our state. We all wish she could have served forever. On behalf of the citizens of the state of Arkansas and this nation, with great love and respect, I thank her for everything she has done to improve the lives of others. I am very proud to call her my friend.

TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT CHEN SHUI-BIAN OF TAIWAN

HON. GREG WALDEN
OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, President Chen Shui-bian of the Republic of China will be completing his first year of service as Taiwan’s head of state this May 20, and I would like to congratulate him and comment on a few of Taiwan’s achievements.

First, the Republic of China on Taiwan is a major trading partner of the United States and has maintained friendly ties and relations with us for the last ninety years. Second, over recent decades, Taiwan has become a successful model of political reform. Fifty years ago, Taiwan was a closed and authoritarian society with neither freedom of speech nor freedom of assembly. Taiwan did not have elections. Today, Taiwan has become a true democracy. It is the home to more than 90 political parties, virtually every political office in Taiwan is hotly contested through free and fair elections.

Third, Taiwan subscribes to the private enterprise system. Taiwan’s economy is vibrant and it offers its people one of the highest standards of living in Asia, including universal education and free medical care of people of all ages in Taiwan. Fourth, in terms of its trading relations with the United States, Taiwan represents our seventh largest export market, thus providing many jobs for our manufacturers. Fifth, in addition to trade relations, more than 30,000 Taiwan students are studying at U.S. colleges and universities. Sixth, the U.S. is the number one destination for most Taiwan’s travelers. Seventh, and last but not least, Taiwan and the U.S. share many values in common such as attachment to human rights, freedom and democracy.

Congratulations to Taiwan. I would also like to extend my sincerest welcome to President Chen during his visit to America. He will be stopping in New York on his way to Central America later this month. His stay in New York will be brief, but I hope he enjoys his stay and I wish him success during his official visit in Central America.

REVEREND FELIX B. DUCKWORTH

HON. MARION BERRY
OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great American, and I am proud to recognize Reverend Felix B. Duckworth in the Congress for his invaluable contributions and service to our nation.

Reverend Duckworth was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, in 1931, and raised in Cleveland, Ohio. He has been married to his lovely wife for 14 years, and he has two beautiful daughters who are 13 and 14 years of age.

His is a life of devotion to the church, and he has spent 20 years in the ministry winning souls for Christ. For ten of those twenty years, Reverend Duckworth has been pastor of a church. He served seven of the ten years as Pastor of the Star of Zion Baptist Church in Corpus Christi, Texas. While at the Star of Zion, he was as a member of the City Revitalization/Economic Development Committee. It was here that he committed himself to improving socially and economically distressed areas. Through his work on that board, Reverend Duckworth helped to build and develop the infrastructure for the city of Robstown, Texas, a suburb of Corpus Christi.

After leaving the Star of Zion, he moved to Forrest City, Arkansas, where he assumed the stewardship of Salem M.B. Church. At Salem, he continued his life’s work by providing the vision to construct the Salem M.B. Church Family Life Center. Reverend Duckworth used his experience in Corpus Christi to give Forrest City a resource that will provide the community with much-needed intervention and prevention programs. The Salem M.B. Church Family Life Center will serve as a community center that will offer counseling, tutoring and wellness services. The facility will have a computer learning center that is the result of a collaborative effort of state and federal agencies. The Center’s primary focus is promoting the importance of getting a good education and addressing the social problems that are ever present in inner city life. For ten of those twenty years, Reverend Duckworth has written several papers conveying his thoughts on leadership and stewardship. Recently he completed a Leadership Manual addressing church leadership philosophies that will probably be published in late 2001.

In addition to his main responsibilities with the church, Reverend Duckworth somehow has found time to be Moderator of the North Arkansas Baptist District Association, which oversees 12 churches; President of the St. Francis County (Arkansas) Ministerial Alliance; a member of the Community Relations Board at Forrest City Federal Prison; Chaplain of the Baptist Memorial Health Care Center in St. Francis County; a member of the St. Francis County NAACP;

I am proud to recognize Reverend Duckworth for everything he has done to help the residents of the communities that have been lucky enough to count him as a member, and I want to express my appreciation on behalf of the citizens of this nation.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE NEWARK YMCA ON 120 YEARS OF SERVICE

HON. DONALD M. PAYNE
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like my colleagues here in the United States House of Representatives to join me in honoring an institution which is close to my heart and which has served countless young men and women over its 120 years of service, the YMCA of Newark and Vicinity.

As friends and supporters of the Newark Y gather for the 120th anniversary celebration, we reflect on the unique history of the organization as it has worked to serve fellow citizens, young and old, men and women, families and singles, of all races and religions. The Newark Y was the first major Y in the nation to have an African American Executive Director, Mr. Robert Wilson. In the early 1950s, when both the YMCA and the YWCA were conducting a capital campaign to raise funds for a new building, it was decided that the two would merge, creating the YMCA.

The Newark Y has been in the forefront of international programs, with the diligent global work of people like Woody and Connie English putting Newark on the map.

As a school teacher in the 1950s, I encouraged students on the athletic team I was coaching at the then Southside High School, called Malcolm X. Shabazz High School today, to join in the storefront Y at 52 Jones Street. That first group formed the Omega Phi Epsilon High School Club, and within a few years we had over 40 clubs. The TransCity Teen Program was recognized as the most active in the country. Our efforts at the Y resulted in thousands of youngsters being mentored and placed in colleges throughout the northeast and the rest of the nation. Volunteers would drive them to college and help them settle in to their freshman dormitories. Participating in regional, national and international programs in Europe, South America and Africa, many of the Y youngsters of yesterday have become outstanding leaders of today in all fields: education, law, government, medicine, and the corporate world. The YMCA is committed to developing the spirit, mind and body of the individual; to creating a sense of common social purpose in the community; and to promoting basic, wholesome values for living. The YMCA demonstrates those commitments through programs and services which offer opportunities to develop youth leadership skills,
A TRIBUTE TO SMITH DOBSON

HON. SAM FARR
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a legendary jazz musician who passed away last month, Smith Dobson. Smith Dobson died April 20, 2001, in an automobile accident that took the life of a great pianist and teacher. Mr. Dobson was only 54.

Smith Dobson had a career that led him to some of the highest levels of performance. He was a member of the Airmen of Note, the official White House jazz band. His teaching career has been equally praised, having held positions in jazz history at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and jazz piano and harmonica at San Francisco State. Mr. Dobson was also a dedicated community advocate for music education and outreach. He sat on the boards of the San Jose Jazz Society, the Stanford Jazz Alliance, and the Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz.

Indeed, Mr. Dobson's death has shocked our local community as well as the jazz community at large. At his memorial service, over 1,000 people came to pay their respects, filling the chapel two hours before the service even began. His life was celebrated in word and song, as his friends and colleagues shared tales and memories. Smith Dobson has been described as the “moral center of the community”, a “world-class” player, and the “first-call guy.” In fact, last year the internationally known Monterey Jazz Festival recognized his talent and dedication to his craft with a lifetime achievement award. He and his family were also the recipients of the 2001 Gail Rich Award for excellence in the arts. Mr. Dobson's loss is indeed a loss for us all.

Smith Dobson was a consummate musician and member of his community, and I am honored that his legacy will continue through the talents of his two children and wife, all of whom are accomplished musicians as well. He will be greatly missed by his wife, Gale of Santa Cruz; son, Smith Jr. of San Francisco; and daughter, Sasha, of New York; as well as thousands of musicians, friends, colleagues and fans.

SUPPORT H.R. 10

HON. JACK QUINN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 10, the Comprehensive Retirement Security and Pension Reform Act. This comprehensive legislative package is an excellent first step toward rectifying the severe retirement savings shortfall in this country.

Clearly we need to do more to prepare for our futures. IRA's, 401(k) plans, and other tax-favored retirement plans are one way to do so. At present, half of our nation's workforce, practically 75 million Americans, lack access to a 401(k)-type plan or any kind of pension. IRA contribution limits have been frozen at the $2,000 limit since 1981.

I applaud Congressmen PORTMAN and CARDIN for creating this package that will allow Americans to set more aside in IRA's or 401(k)-type plans, modernize pension laws, and provide regulatory relief to working Americans to small businesses to offer retirement plans.

By allowing individuals to increase their contribution limit for both traditional and Roth IRA's to $5,000 over the next three years, gives them the potential for a sound economic future. This legislation would allow many workers to reevaluate their opportunities to better themselves, their families and their future. Also by including catch-up provisions granting individuals who are over 50 to increase their retirement contribution for IRA's to $5,000 next year, provides these individuals to chance for a better retirement.

In today's society, we are living longer and healthier lives. Current statistics indicate that one-fifth of today's 35-year-olds who reach retirement can expect to live into their 90's. This means that the baby boomers will outlive their retirement savings. Therefore, it is crucial that Congress can provide Americans, who have worked hard to support themselves and their families, every opportunity possible to achieve a financially secure retirement.

I would urge my colleagues to support this landmark legislation that would expand access to private pensions and increase flexibility for families to save for their retirement.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 11TH ANNUAL PANASONIC KID WITNESS NEWS PROGRAM AND THE NEW VISION AWARD WINNERS

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a very talented group of students at Theodore Roosevelt School in Weehawken, New Jersey. On May 15th, 11th annual Panasonic Kid Witness News program will present its New Vision Awards at the Newark Museum in Newark, New Jersey.

Theodore Roosevelt School's K-8 is this year’s New Vision Award winner for producing the best “Local Hero” video. Videos in the Local Hero category profile an individual who represents accomplishments, heroism or spirit, and demands our attention and adulation. The video created by the Weehawken school KWN team used a series of on-camera narrators, interviews, still photographs, and home video footage to create a moving portrait of one of their classmates, 12-year-old Lenny Rodriguez, a cancer survivor who made the hard decision to have his leg amputated. In choosing the Theodore Roosevelt School, the judges selected “Our Little Giant Dares to Dream,” an inspirational story about one person’s extraordinary triumph over adversity. I commend Mr. Jon Hammer, 7th grade teacher and KWN coordinator, and 6th grade teacher Eileen Hochman for their generous time and support given to the Weehawken KWN team to produce such an outstanding and special video.

I am very familiar with Panasonic's Kid Witness News program. It is a hands-on, video education program, in more than 200 primarily inner-city schools in 120 U.S. cities. Using Panasonic-supplied equipment to create video projects, young people are encouraged to develop their creative, communication, and technical skills through video production. Annual awards are presented to student teams in various categories, including Best Video, Documentary, Local Hero, Multiculturalism, and News at a special program held in New Jersey each spring.

Theodore Roosevelt School was the very first participating school in Panasonic’s KWN student news program. Mr. Anthony LaBruno, the school's principal, clearly understands the students' pride in accomplishing from these kinds of programs. Congratulations to him, to the KWN program advisers, and to the students of Theodore Roosevelt School for work well done. And a special recognition and best wishes to Lenny Rodriguez, a very courageous young man.

For 11 years the Panasonic KWN program has been helping young people learn about issues that affect them, their classmates, and their community. And in its efforts to bridge the digital divide, KWN encourages students’ discovery of what technology can do to enhance their educational experience. Therefore, I commend Moishe Glatt, Panasonic’s Chairman and CEO of North American operations, for his leadership and support. The effort of KWN to bring information, knowledge, and understanding of current events to tomorrow’s citizens will make a difference in the world we all share. Kid Witness News certainly has made a difference in the lives of children in New Jersey and throughout the United States.

I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing the talented students and teachers who have contributed to the great success of Panasonic’s Kid Witness News program.

TRIBUTE TO ANNE M. GLATT

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call the attention of my colleagues to a friend and constituent of the sixth district whose unselfish service for over 35 years has left a lasting impression in the hearts of members of both her Temple and her community.

Born in Poland and raised in a Yiddish-speaking home in Montreal, following her family’s 1930 emigration to Canada, Anne M. Glatt’s early education included both public school and a six-day cheder. After three years of college, Anne moved to the United States in 1950, living first in the Branch Brook Park section of Newark, NJ, then Jamestown, NY, and finally settling down in the Edison-Highland Park area in July, 1964.

When she arrived, Anne immediately began looking for a Hebrew School for her three daughters and called the Highland Park Conservative Temple and Center. Once all financial arrangements for her daughters’ schooling were arranged, Anne politely suggested to Executive Director Reuben S. Silver that the Temple might be able to use a bookkeeper. Director Silver agreed and thus began an extraordinary relationship that continues to this day. Anne was respected by all at the Temple, and found a particularly warm friend in the new young Rabbi Yakov R. Hilsenrath, with whom she often engaged in spirited conversation.

After having been single for 23 years, Anne met Moishe Glatt in 1982, and the two were married in 1986. They will soon be celebrating 15 wonderful years together.

Anne has been a loving mother, grandmother, wife, sister, and most of all, friend to everyone who has had the good fortune of meeting her. She has been the caring voice on the other end of a phone, shining smile behind the desk, and confidante in times of need. Her genuinely good nature and tireless devotion to her community have rightfully earned her the Temple’s prestigious Chaver Award for exemplary service.

It is my sincere hope that my colleagues will join me in honoring Anne M. Glatt for her nearly four decades of dedication to the Highland Park Jewish community and wish her all the best in the years to come.

CONGRATULATIONS TO PRESIDENT CHEN SHUI-BIAN OF TAIWAN

HON. PHIL ENGLISH
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, as the Republic of China on Taiwan prepares to celebrate President Chen Shui-bian’s first anniversary in office, I wish to extend to President Chen and the people of Taiwan my congratulations.

Despite its diplomatic isolation, Taiwan is a proud nation that has made extraordinary progress in recent years. It has an exemplary democracy with free elections, free press and respect for human rights.

For decades, the United States and its people are united in supporting Taiwan’s pursuit of freedom and democracy. We will continue to support Taiwan and its people. Peace and security in the region are vital to the security interests of all nations in the area.

Congratulations, President Chen on a job well done.

MEMORIALIZING MARY BIANCHINI’S LIFE AND SERVICE

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and remember the life and service of my dear friend and tireless advocate, Mary Bianchini of Nyack, NY.

Throughout her life, Mary Bianchini has not only served her family and friends, but our communities with her unwavering kindness and commitment. She devoted a lifetime to service to others—as a nurse, as a media personality, and as a linchpin in numerous charitable endeavors. It is therefore appropriate that we reflect upon Mary’s many significant accomplishments and as a dear friend to so many of us that we pause and express our love to her which she has showered upon us all these many years.

A cover story in the January–February 1987 issue of “Geniatric Nursing” recounted how Mary emigrated to the United States from Italy with her family at a young age. In 1929, she married the man her parents had chosen for her even before that union found a firm foundation in love. In fact, Mary remained married until her husband’s untimely death in the late 1950’s, nearly 30 years after their nuptials.

Mary was a devoted housewife and mother, but as happened with all too many Americans at that time, the Great Depression threw a wrench into her plans. Forced to find employment in a shoe factory, Mary had to seek new employment when that establishment burned down and upon applying to become a telephone operator at the Rockland State Hoswas a key member of the team that successfully attained legislative approval of the so-called 301(h) waiver for the Point Loma waste treatment plant. This action saved literally billions of dollars for the taxpayers of San Diego. Without Dave’s technical expertise and political acumen, we would not have been successful in this effort.

Dave’s talents were also critical to last year’s Congressional approval of the Bajagua project to treat Mexican sewage. Dave helped to develop the innovative public-private partnership that promises to solve a 50-year-old problem plaguing San Diego. We always relied on Dave’s “sense of the possible”—both politically and technically—to get over the many obstacles we faced over several years.

Dave is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland where he received a Bachelor of Science degree. He also holds a Masters degree in Civil Engineering from the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta. He is a registered professional engineer in the Civil Discipline. He has had nearly 30 years of experience in planning, engineering and construction project management and facilities management. Prior to his service with the City of San Diego, he served as a U.S. Navy Civil Engineer Corps officer for 25 years. He retired with the grade of Captain. Dave is a member of the Society of American Military Engineers, the National Society of Professional Engineers and the Navy League of the United States. He is also involved in numerous technical and professional societies in the San Diego area.

The City of San Diego will greatly miss the services of Dave Schlesinger.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF PHOENIX HOME LIFE MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY

HON. NANCY L. JOHNSON OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, 1851 was an extraordinary year. Our country was 75 years old and on the brink of Civil War. In the midst of all the chaos, a small group of Hartford, Connecticut’s leading businessmen, religious leaders, cultural and civic leaders, applied for a charter for the formation of The American Temperance Life Insurance Company, which would become Phoenix Home Life Mutual Insurance Company.

On Thursday, Phoenix celebrates its 150th anniversary. It has survived the Civil War, Reconstruction, the Great Depression, two World Wars and the societal upheaval of the late 20th century. Phoenix has endured because the company has always met the needs of its policyholders and customers while upholding its standards of integrity, and industry and community leadership.

Phoenix has through the years been a leader in product innovations: it was the first to insure the temperate, the first to lower rates for women (based on actuarial science), the first to offer policies that covered total families, not just individuals, and the first to lower rates for nonsmokers.

Phoenix has been a leader in business practice innovations: Phoenix was the first to require full-time dedicated agents and led the drive to make the sale of insurance a profession. Phoenix was also the first to develop a publication for its field force and the first company to use direct mail marketing.

Phoenix has been recognized ten times by Working Mother magazine as one of the Top 100 companies for working mothers. It was recognized for its efforts in providing childcare, workplace flexibility, leave for new parents, and advancement of women.

But perhaps most importantly, Phoenix’s Chief Executive Officer, Robert W. Fiodella, has proven that the values of community and citizenship made good business sense. Phoenix encourages its employees to volunteer through a policy that allows them to devote 40 hours of company time per year to community activities, provided it is matched by the same amount of personal time. The company also rewards its top 20 professional advisors through its Donor’s Award, a program that enables them to designate up to $2,000 to a local charity. Since its inception, the award has benefited many organizations, including the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, Lou Gehrig Baseball and the Make A Wish Foundation.

Phoenix has spearheaded a $3 million “Legacy Campaign” to sustain and grow the Doc Hurley Foundation, the creation of Walter J. “Doc” Hurley, who has worked tirelessly for Hartford’s youth. Phoenix contributed $250,000 at the start of the campaign and will contribute another $250,000 at the end of it. The campaigns’ endowment will help high school students go on to college through a scholarships and other support, such and help with purchasing books and completing paperwork. Foundation Trustees will help with mentoring and helping to complete necessary paper work pertaining to college applications.

Student attendance and mastery test scores have improved at Hartford’s Fred D. Wish Elementary School as a result of Phoenix’s partnership with the school. For 15 years, employees have worked one-on-one with students in grades three through six to sharpen math and language skills. Phoenix provides transportation each week for students to travel to their Hartford office for tutoring.

Mr. Speaker, at a time when some businesses are scaling back on their corporate giving programs, Phoenix is sustaining and even enhancing its involvement. In 1995, Phoenix made an eight-year commitment to Special Olympics International as its first Official Worldwide Partner, setting a standard for volunt eership and civic responsibility few companies can match.

Please join me in offering congratulations on their 150th anniversary and in recognition of Phoenix Home Life Mutual Insurance Company.

HONORING ENRON METHANOL COMPANY AS INDUSTRY OF THE YEAR

HON. KEN BENSTEN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. BENSTEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Enron Methanol as the 2001 Industry of the Year by the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce. On May 17, 2001 Pasadena Chamber of Commerce Chairman of the Board Larry C.
At the request of Mr. Speaker, Mr. Hyde, of Illinois, a Member of the House, asked that the text of his remarks be printed in the Record, pursuant to an appropriate request. Mr. Hyde was granted permission to make such an inquiry.

Mr. Speaker. Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a challenge to the Members of this House in order to stimulate an interest among the students of high school age in the American system of government.

A challenge has been presented that the students of this country could become informed about the dangers of democracy and that the threat of the Iranian government may be a lesson to the American people.

Furthermore, I believe that the purpose of the Electoral College was to prevent the concentration of power in one person or one political party. This system was designed to safeguard against the rise of a despot and to ensure that the people would be represented by a democratic process.

I am pleased to announce that the homes of the American people are being encouraged to participate in this challenge and that the students of the United States are invited to submit essays on the topic of the Electoral College.

HON. HENRY J. HYDE
OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a challenge to the Members of this House in order to stimulate an interest among the students of high school age in the American system of government.

The challenge is an essay contest I sponsor in cooperation with the Fenton High School and the Jefferson Middle School. The purpose of this contest is to encourage the students to write about their commitment to community service and to provide a better place to live.

time) and, ultimately, create the Constitution that we have today. The Constitutional Convention met in May 1787 in Philadelphia. Madison played a huge role. He drafted the Virginia Plan, the basis for the new government’s structure. He also created the checks and balances system, which insures that none of the branches of government become too powerful. Madison, Alexander Hamilton, and John James Todd wrote the Federalist Papers, essays that defended the Constitution against people who feared a strong central government. Madison then shepherded the new Constitution through the ratification process, through 1787 and 1788.

Madison was elected to the House of Representatives in 1789, where he sponsored the Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the Constitution. He broke with Alexander Hamilton and the Federalist Party in 1801 and joined Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe in creating the Democratic-Republican, or Jeffersonian Republican, Party. In 1794, Madison married Dolley Payne Todd, who was a widow.

In 1801 Madison was appointed secretary of state under Thomas Jefferson, where he failed to persuade the British to stop interfering with American trade. In 1806, he ran in the presidential election and defeated Charles Pickney, the Federalist Candidate with 122 electoral votes to 47. He repealed the embargo by which Thomas Jefferson (who predicted before him) tried to avoid war with Europe by banning trade with them. (The major European powers were at war themselves.) However, this didn’t stop tensions between Britain and America. Madison declared the War of 1812 on June 12. In 1814, Madison replaced Secretary of War John Armstrong (who wasn’t managing the war very well) with James Monroe when Washington was burned. A peace treaty was signed in Belgium in December 1814, but it didn’t solve any of the outstanding issues between the U.S. and Britain.

After the war, Madison charted a national bank and negotiated an agreement (called the Rush-Bagot Agreement) for demilitarization of the frontier between the U.S. and Canada. However, this agreement wasn’t ratified until Madison had left office. When Madison left office, he retired to his estate in Orange County, Virginia. He avoided further participation in politics, and helped Thomas Jefferson found the University of Virginia in 1826. Ten years later, at his estate James Madison died. That night, American lost one of the most important men in its development as a country.

FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2002 AND 2003

SPEECH OF

HON. BETTY MCCOLLUM OF MINNESOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, May 10, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration: the bill (H.R. 1646) to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal years 2002 and 2003, and for other purposes:

Ms. McCOLLUM. Mr. Chairman, once again, I would like to speak in opposition to the DeLaHey amendment to H.R. 1646.

The intent of the International Criminal Court (ICC) is to try individual perpetrators of genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity when nations cannot or will not hold perpetrators accountable. I can think of no Member of the U.S. Congress, the administration, or any federal agency, including the Department of Defense and all branches of our armed forces, opposed to ensuring that war criminals are brought to justice. If the accused perpetrator of a war crime is an American citizen, civilian or soldier, then I would strongly support our civil and/or military systems of justice to whatever power to bring this individual to trial in the appropriate American court as would be permissible under the ICC treaty because of our sovereignty.

The argument by supporters of this amendment that American servicemen and service- women would be at risk of being tried in foreign courts under the ICC treaty is not accurate. Presently, any alleged crime, including war crimes, committed by U.S. citizens on foreign soil can already be tried in that nation’s courts. The ICC would do nothing to diminish the role a U.S. court would have in bringing to trial accused war criminals if they were American citizens. In fact, the ICC could only intervene in trying Americans in the very unlikely event that the American judicial system would be unwilling or unable to try a case.

I do not believe the formation of the ICC will threaten American military personnel. The ICC will provide a forum to bring individual justice that commit the most heinous and inhuman acts of systematic violence around the world. To ensure that the U.S. Congress is committed to achieving this needed justice I oppose the DeLaHey amendment.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. BETTY R. HORNER

HON. BRAD SHERMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mrs. Betty R. Horner, Conejo Valley Civic Leader and pioneer in the communities of Westlake Village and Thousand Oaks, California. Her volunteer service spans more than 32 years.

Betty Horner’s community service began in 1968, in the Westlake Village Foxmoor neighborhood homeowners association. At the same time, she was a baseball and cheerleader team mother with the Westlake Athletic Association. She also worked with the PTA and PFA in her neighborhood schools.

While raising her family of three children, Cynthia, Larry Jr., and Kymberly, and helping support her husband Larry Sr.’s professional and political career, Betty began to fashion a civic and philanthropic career for herself.

Betty’s distinguished community involvement includes service as the First Lady of Thousand Oaks and Charge d’Affaires (official hostess for the City of Thousand Oaks). This role required her attendance at public ceremonies, meeting with public officials and dignitaries, representing the City of Thousand Oaks, performing ribbon cuttings, and presenting commendations. She was tenacious and carried out her duties with much style and grace. She attended all City Council meetings for 15½ years, a record unequalled by anyone in the city.

Due to her engaging personality and knowledge of the community, Betty has been asked to serve on many prestigious public and private boards and committees. She is an original member of the City of Thousand Oaks’ Volunteers in Policing Team and at 65 years of age she can be seen patrolling neighborhoods to help keep our community safe. In 1976, she joined the Westlake Women’s club, serving as its president during 1987–88. This philanthropic organization raises thousands of dollars annually for various local organizations and charities. Betty was also instrumental in helping to build the Thousand Oaks Library, and has served on the Library Foundation Board.

She was also selected by the Automobile Club of Southern California to serve on their Advisory Board for seven years.

Betty has received numerous honors and recognitions, including Woman of the Year from the Conejo Valley Chamber of Commerce and was also chosen as one of the ten Outstanding Women in Southern California by Coca Cola Bottling Co. and the Los Angeles Sentinel.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Betty R. Horner for her many contributions and years of dedication to the Conejo Valley.

FRAK BAUMAN: HONORED COMMUNITY SERVANT

HON. DAVID WU
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Frank A. Bauman, a native Portlander, whose 80th birthday will be celebrated on June 10, 2001. Mr. Bauman has dedicated his life to making enormous contributions to our city, the state of Oregon, and the international community. It is my personal privilege to bring my colleagues’ attention the outstanding accomplishments of this great Oregonian.

Mr. Bauman hails from the Oregon Bar in 1950 after graduating from our shared alma mater, Yale Law School, and practiced law in Portland for many years. During that period, he devoted substantial time to many worthwhile civic endeavors, where he held significant leadership positions, including: First Chairman, Oregon State Bar Committee on World Peace through Law; President, United Nations Association (Portland Chapter) and the Oregon Association (two times); President, World Affairs Council of Oregon (two times); Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations (two times); Chairman, Scholarship Committee of the University Club of Portland; Board of Directors, English Speaking Union; Master, Oregon-Ashlar Masonic Lodge; Director of Oregon’s State of Excellence; and the United Nations Information Office in Australia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, and Fiji.

Mr. Bauman executed these responsibilities very capably, while serving as the Chief Administrator of United Nations activities in Australia and conducting outreach relations with National and Regional Committees to deal with long-term development for Third World Countries.

Mr. Bauman’s commitment to society was further recognized in 1998 when he was awarded the E.B. MacNaughton Civil Liberties Award, a great honor for his legal work in Mississippi in the 60’s on behalf of African Americans.

It is my honor today, on the floor of the United States House of Representatives, to commend to my esteemed Members of Congress, the 80th birthday and extraordinary achievements of Frank A. Bauman.

FROM OUR FAMILY TO YOURS

HON. HEATHER WILSON OF NEW MEXICO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, they say salsa is now New Mexico’s #1 condiment, beating out even the ketchup bottle. A New Mexico company known nationally for their salsa—and their green chile, and their tamales—is celebrating its 50th year of business this month.

Bueno Foods takes pride in sharing a part of New Mexico’s culture through the wonderful food they produce and market nationally. Please join me in congratulating Bueno Foods and the Baca Family on fifty successful years and thank them for their contributions to our community.

In the beginning, for the Baca brothers, the company was a way to provide jobs for themselves and their employees. After serving in WWII several of the brothers had difficulty finding jobs in Albuquerque. Their father Refugio had worked for the Santa Fe Railroad all his life but had always dreamed of owning his own business. He encouraged his sons to start their own business.

The Ace Food Store, a neighborhood “mom and pop” grocery store, was born. They later saw a need to take their business in another direction. They expanded the store into carry-out, which featured traditional recipes by Filomena, the Baca brothers’ mother. Also at this time freezers were becoming popular. The Baca brothers recalled the yearly family tradition popular throughout New Mexico for roasting fresh green chile over an open flame, and freezing it for the winter months. They decided to take this home process into a commercial one and make this very special family tradition the focus of their restaurant and retail product lines. Food processing became their niche.

Understanding the leadership of Jacqueline Baca, President (the daughter of founder Joe Baca), Bueno Foods’ sales have grown six-fold and the number of employees has tripled. She started in the business at the age of 16 making tamales. Jacqueline is joined by her siblings in the family business. Gene Baca is Senior Vice President, Catherine Baca, MD, is Vice President of Research and Development, Ana Baca is Communications Manager and Marijo Baca pioneered the distribution of Bueno’s products in the Colorado market. Together, the company is said “From Our Family to Yours” a reality.

The Baca Family is committed to our community. From its start with 5 employees to more than 240, located in the Barelas Industrial Park, Bueno is one of the largest employers in this “Pocket of Poverty.” Bueno contributes between 3 and 5 percent of after-tax profits to organizations that help people meet basic needs including housing, food, and education. Among the many honors earned by Bueno Foods, in April 2000, they received the first annual New Mexico Ethics in Business Award recognizing the integrity, ethical conduct and the highest standards of civic and social responsibility that is part of daily operations within the company.

Please join me and other New Mexicans in honoring the Baca Family and Bueno Foods.

ALGERIA TRIP REPORT

HON. JOSEPH R. PITTS
OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, on February 24–26, 2001, accompanied by former Ambassador David Lax, I traveled to Algeria to meet with key officials and attend celebrations of the 25th anniversary of the Sahrawi Republic in the Sahrawi refugee camps in Tindouf, Algeria. The meetings and discussions with the President, Prime Minister and Cabinet Members in Algiers reflected officials who hold great concern for their nation and the development of their economy and society, as well as concern for North Africa and the whole of Africa.

Creative solutions were presented for problems facing the government as they seek to modernize the financial, security, and democracy aspects of Algeria. There were clear indications that the Algerian government desires to stabilize their economy to attract foreign, particularly U.S. investment (current U.S. investment is $3.5 billion, projected to grow to $6 billion in the next 5 years due to increased energy investment), and to cooperate in security/terrorism issues with the U.S. Government. A two and a half hour meeting with President Bouteflicka revealed a statesman with great insight, leadership abilities and vision for his nation and the continent, exemplified in the President’s key role in helping bring peace in the Ethiopia/Eritrea conflict and his leadership in the OAU in pursuing economic development in all of Africa. The impressive character and abilities of the President also are reflected in his Cabinet and the current Ambassador of Algeria serving in Washington, D.C, His Excellency Idriss Jaazairy.

The Algerian people and government are also to be commended for their great hospital towards the Sahrawis. Many of the Sahrawi people fled their homeland of Western Sahara over 25 years ago due to the conflict over Western Sahara. The Algerian people have graciously allowed the Sahrawis to live in refugee camps in Tindouf and have been supportive of humanitarian aid to assist the refugees arriving from all over the world.

Under the leadership of President Bouteflicka, Algeria has continued to extend hospitality to the refugees and not presented obstacles to the Sahrawis governing themselves in the Sahrawi Democratic Republic.

Upon my return to the United States, I shared my impressions about Algeria with a number of individuals, including Secretary of State Colin Powell. I suggested to Secretary Powell the idea of holding an Africa Summit with key African leaders such as President Bouteflicka of Algeria, for President Bush to listen and learn from those leaders as he shapes his policies on Africa and for the African leaders to garner international support for their vision to help eliminate poverty, elevate standards of living, and bring hope to the people of Africa.

In light of the various visions and solutions discussed in the meetings, there are several long term and short term practical actions the people of Pennsylvania and the U.S. government can take to support democratic, economic, and security developments in Algeria. My hope is to assist in building a strong relationship between the people of Algeria and the United States and our governments through the following projects:

Encourage President Bush to hold an Africa Summit with the leaders of the OAU in which the President can learn about Africa and African leaders can share ways in which the international community can support their vision to help the people of Africa.

Assist the Algerian Minister of Agriculture on his visit to the U.S. by arranging meetings with leading agricultural companies and producers. Interact with leading U.S. wheat producers regarding the potential opportunities for investment in Algeria.

Encourage the U.S. Department of State, Near East Division, about the need for increased counter-terrorism training and cooperation between Algeria and the United States.

Encourage the establishment of an Algerian-U.S. business council.

Assist in coordinating training seminars for Algerian Army regarding democracy and human rights.

Assist in coordinating police training seminars for Algerian police.

Assist in coordinating lecture, seminar series/academic exchanges at U.S. and Algerian universities.

Investigate water resource issues and possible expertise cooperation.

People to people exchanges and humanitarian projects, including medical equipment, police/forensics equipment, English textbooks, etc.

It gives me great pleasure to wish Ms. Smith my warmest congratulations on this truly special occasion.

Barbara Smith is currently a shareholder of McDonald, Hopkins, Burke & Haber Co., L.P.A. in Cleveland. She attended Old Dominion College (B.A., 1968); Pepperdine University (M.B.A. 1974, magna cum laude); and Case Western Reserve University (J.D. 1977, magna cum laude).

She is a former President of the OWBA (1994–1995) and is one of its original members. The OWBA was initially formed in 1991 and is the only statewide bar association within Ohio solely dedicated toward advancing the interests of women attorneys while encouraging networking and the creation of a statewide mentor program for women attorneys. The 2001–2002 membership year celebrates the OWBA’s 10th Anniversary.

Barb has also served as President of the Cleveland Bar Association. At the time she served, she was only the third female president in its 125-year history.

At the same time, Ms. Smith has been active in the community on issues affecting women and minorities, including Ohio Attorney’s Assault on Domestic Violence, a Charter Fellow and member of the Cleveland Bar Foundation Board of Trustees and a member of The Federated Church—Multi-racial, Multicultural Task Force.

Ms. Smith has been recognized for excellence in her field, including Who’s Who in American Law, Who’s Who in America and The Best Lawyers in America for Health Law.

On May 21, 2001, OWBA President Helen Mac Murray will be presenting Ms. Smith with the Ohio Women’s Bar Association’s Justice Alice Robie Resnick Award of Distinction at its Annual Meeting in Cleveland, Ohio.

It gives me great pleasure to rise today, Mr. Speaker, and join the OWBA in congratulating Barbara Smith and wishing her continued success.

Mr. Speaker, this Congress has an obligation to finish what it started in 1998. We have the opportunity and responsibility to give back every cent to those who were denied the opportunity to pursue the American Dream. I encourage my colleagues to join me by supporting the Black Farmers Fairness Act.

TRIBUTE TO RUBEN SIVERLING

HON. SAM GRAVES OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mr. Ruben Siverling, the recipient of the Clay/Platte Development Corporation’s Small Business Advocate of the Year.

Mr. Siverling is a full-time business consultant serving on the staff at the Rockhurst University Small Business Development Center. During his years as a consultant to the Small Business Community in the Kansas City region, he has helped start or expand over 1,700 small businesses.

Mr. Siverling was instrumental in opening a satellite Small Business Development Center in the Missouri 6th District. Being a resident of the district, he saw firsthand the growth in the Northland region of Kansas City and understood the importance of a guiding presence to help the area’s burgeoning entrepreneurs. His dedication to this cause is proven in the early mornings, long days and late evenings that he endures to help each and every one of his clients achieve success. Success to him does not only involve just having a client receive a loan, but all facets of learning the start-up process. Whether it is revising a loan package that was not approved on the first submittal, or following through with revision and follow-up meetings, he ensures that the small business client is getting a first-class education that will help their business flourish.

I commend the Clay/Platte Development Corporation on choosing Mr. Ruben Siverling as their Small Business Advocate of the Year, and once again congratulate and thank Mr. Siverling for his years of hard work and dedication to the Small Business Community.
homes, our families, and our neighborhoods safe and secure. Every day, they put themselves in the line of fire, confronting crime and those who engage in it, to make our communities a better place to live.

Our nation’s law enforcement officers put their lives on the line, just like the men and women of our armed forces, to protect Americans. For that reason, I have introduced legislation that would provide a Capitol-flown flag for deceased law enforcement officers. H.R. 94 would be a step toward this deserved recognition.

I encourage other Members to join me in passing this legislation, to properly show our appreciation for the risk that our nation’s law enforcement officers take just by showing up at work every day.

TRIBUTE TO LLOYD E. LEWIS, JR.
HON. TONY P. HALL
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, with sadness and regret, I rise to pay tribute to Lloyd E. Lewis, Jr., a city commissioner of Dayton, Ohio, who recently passed away at the age of 74. Throughout his life, Lloyd was a model civic leader who dedicated himself to the community he loved so dearly.

Lloyd’s record of service to Dayton goes back almost half a century and includes serving two terms in the Ohio House of Representatives and working as a Dayton assistant city manager. He also served two terms as chairman of the Dayton Plan Board.

Lloyd was a member of the Dayton Foundation board, Miami Valley Regional Planning Commission, the State Board of Housing, the United Way of Greater Dayton, City Wide Development Corporation, and the St. Elizabeth Medical Center board.

No one worked more tirelessly on behalf of Dayton. When he was assistant city manager, he even went on runs with the fire crews. During one particularly rough season of blizzards, the Dayton Daily News reported he was “all but sleeping at city hall.”

The son of a small businessman and the grandchild of a shoeshiner, Lloyd was a champion of the average man and woman. His family was one of the first black families to move into his West Side neighborhood. He knew racial discrimination but that only increased his desire to improve his community for all citizens.

Lloyd was a thorough gentleman in all his actions, public and private. He was admired and respected by all who knew him—an extraordinary achievement for someone in public life and a testament to his leadership.

Dayton has lost a great citizen and I have lost a friend.

TAIWAN CELEBRATES ITS PRESIDENT’S FIRST ANNIVERSARY IN OFFICE
HON. EARL F. HILLIARD OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, our friend in the Pacific, the Republic of China on Taiwan, is a small island nation that has maintained excellent relations with us throughout the years. Although we do not have formal diplomatic relations with the Island, our informal relations with Taiwan in areas such as trade and investment, science and technology, culture and security, have been growing steadily year after year.

In addition, Taiwan and the United States share many values in common. Both countries have an abiding attachment to freedom, democracy and human rights. As Taiwan gets ready to celebrate its President’s first anniversary in office, I wish to assure President Chen Shui-bian and his people that the American people will always stand behind Taiwan and make sure that it continues to thrive and prosper in the Pacific.

Good Luck and Good Fortune to Taiwan!

GLENDALE HIGH SCHOOL 100 YEAR ANNIVERSARY
HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 15, 2001

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Glendale High School, which celebrates 100 years of academic excellence on May 19, 2001. This was the first high school in the city of Glendale and famous alumni include actors John Wayne and Madeline Stowe, athletes, Brooklyn Dodger Babe Herman and 3-time track Olympian Frank Wykoff, and entrepreneur Bob Wian, founder of Bob’s Big Boy restaurants.

Glendale High has grown from an initial enrollment in 1901 of 23 students, but today hosts 3500 students, each of whom receives a comprehensive educational experience designed to prepare them with the skills, knowledge and training necessary to achieve individual goals and to participate as a productive and responsible member of our ever-changing society and in our own multi-cultural environment.

One of the keys to the success of Glendale High School are the independently-organized parent groups that are committed to continued involvement with the school. An innova- tion is the unique grade-level student support services, which counsel and follow students from the time they enter until the time they graduate from Glendale High School.

Please help me in congratulating co-principals Mrs. Gloria Vasquez and Mike Livingston, as well as all students, alumni, friends and family of Glendale High School on their 100 anniversary.

WILDLAND FIRE MANAGEMENT ACT
SPEECH OF
HON. CHRIS CANNON OF UTAH
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, May 9, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 581) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture to use funds appropriate for the wildland fire management in the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001, to reimburse the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service to facilitate the interagency cooperation required under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 in connection with wildland fire management.

Mr. CANNON. Madam Chairman, in the last eight years my home and the homes of my neighbors have been threatened by fire on the mountain behind our town in Mapleton. I want to thank the heroic, hard working Federal firefighters for how they fought those infernos. My home is in the mouth of a canyon that has a strong and regular evening wind. Had the fire reached the canyon it would have been like a huge blowtorch. Many Utahns have shared the same concerns. We have a lot of homes located along the hundreds of miles of the urban/public lands interface.

Our ways of thinking about fire have shifted in the last 20 years. We are now more familiar with the benefits of fires in the natural cycles of our public lands. The beautiful areas where we live, the parks and forests that we enjoy, can benefit from reducing the fire risk by reducing fuel loads, prescribed burns, and educating people on fire safety.

To undertake these prevention measures, the Forest Service must first consult with the US Fish and Wildlife Service, ensuring that there will be no adverse effects to animals and especially endangered species. Unfortunately, the USFWS lacks the money to do what is necessary.

H.R. 581 will allow the Forest Service to reimburse the Fish and Wildlife Service for their consultations.

Last year, many of the western states, including Utah, experienced some of the worst forest fires in history. Utah’s current fire conditions look similar to last year’s. According to the National Forest Service, most of the state is at high or very high risk of fire danger. Last year nearly 2,000 fires in Utah burned 228,000 acres of land. In Utah County alone, over 3,200 acres of land were destroyed by 57 fires.

Preventive actions can help save our lands as well as better allocate the taxpayer money spent on putting out fires. The Yellowstone fire of 1988 cost the nation $12 million to fight. Only a fraction of that amount would have been needed for prevention. As prescribed, controlled fire costs about $50 an acre. In a wilderness fire this cost for fighting the fire alone increases to between $200–400 an acre. That does not include the cost of lost timber, wildlife, or ecological damage. Simply reducing the built-up fuel load that grew during years of fire suppression can have a significant effect on reducing fire danger.

Educating people on fire safety is a key issue as well. In Utah, 60–70% of the fires are either accidentally or intentionally started by humans. Most of these could be avoided with proper understanding.

We must make funding for responsible fire practices a priority. This will improve the sense of serenity for my family, the constituents who I serve, and the many people who live on or near our public lands.
