HONORING THE BAYSIDE JEWISH
CENTER'S 75TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 23, 2001

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring the Bayside Jewish Center on the occasion of its 75th Anniversary.

It was in late 1926 that a small number of Jewish residents in the Bayside West community of Queens, NY, began to meet in a store on 32nd Avenue near 201st Street, made available by Isaac Muss, father of past Honorary President Charles J. Muss. Around the same time, a group of Jewish residents in the central Bayside area rented a loft and began to meet on the third floor above some stores on Bell Boulevard.

During the next seven years, the activities and participation grew steadily. In 1934, Rabbi Ariol Hyams became the spiritual leader of the Bayside West Jewish Center. Because interest had increased substantially, the space available to the members was no longer sufficient. Thus, they joined together with the group at the Center on Bell Boulevard to found and incorporate the Bayside Jewish Center. This was 1935.

It was not until 1960, after many trials and tribulations in respect to finding a permanent place for the center, when the traditional and formal dedication of the new Bayside Jewish Center building was held. Immediately following the dedication of the facility, the Bayside Jewish Center became the main center of community service, a veritable beehive of activity.

Many great personalities have attended meetings and functions at the Center including President Jimmy Carter, Vice President Hubert Humphrey, Senator Jacob Javitz, Senator Wayne Morse, Mayor John Lindsay, Mayor Robert Wagner, numerous Members of the House of Representatives, First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, Cantor Moshe Kousavitsky and President Norman Lamm of Yeshiva University.

The Center supported many well known causes such as the United Jewish Appeal, Bonds for Israel, Yeshiva University, and other worthy institutions. The Center was the founder of several local organizations as well, such as the Clergy Club of Bayside and the Council of Churches and Synagogues.

One of the great accomplishments of the Bayside Jewish Center was the founding of the Etz Chayim Youth Organization. This organization has brought together over two hundred teenagers to hold their Sabbath Services in the Junior Ballroom of the Center, followed by lunches on each Sabbath or holiday. Etz Chayim can also take credit for weekend Shabbatons, sponsored by Yeshiva University on an annual basis and attended by over three hundred young people from many communities throughout the United States, which have become well-established events. To this day, hundreds of its members are active leaders of many synagogues and Jewish organizations throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring the 75th Anniversary of the Bayside Jewish Center and all of the people whose lives it has touched.

HONORING THE LATE COL. JAMES
NEIL HICKOK

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 23, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I stand before you today to honor the memory of one of Western Colorado's leading citizens, Colonel James Neil Hickok. James was an active member of the community and was a member of the "Great Generation". He passed away on March 19, 2001 after a long 13-year battle with cancer. Everyone that knew him will truly miss him.

Neil was born in October of 1919 in Chicago Illinois. Neil joined the US Army when he was 16. His first assignment was to protect railroads and missionaries in China. After his tour he returned home to graduate from high school. He received degrees in Military Science from the University of Maryland and degrees in Anthropology and Geology from the University of Colorado. James re-entered the Army at the start of World War II and served in the Pacific Theatre. Neil also served in the Korean War and had three tours of duty in Vietnam.

Neil was a devoted family man. He loved his wife Carol, his son James and daughters Sharron and Dorothy. He also loved his home, which over looks the south fork of the South Platte River. His family said he had a wonderful sense of humor and genuine care for others. Neil served as the chairman of the Park County Republican Party for many years and helped Lake George get their park, library, community center and emergency medical service.

Mr. Speaker, a great friend, father and hero has left us, but his memory will always be with us. I'm asking Congress to pause a moment in remembrance of Col. James Neil Hickok and thank him for all that he has done for his family, community and country.

SCHOOL SAFETY

HON. PETER A. DeFAZIO

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 23, 2001

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, we've spent the day on a very important issue, our children's education. But, the whole picture is not complete. How about the kids who are not prepared for school or are disruptive in class. The kids that, at least, have run-ins with authorities and drop out of school, at most, end up committing violent crimes, sometimes against their own classmates.

The safety of our schools continues to be a major concern as evidenced by a CNN/USA Today/Gallup poll in which 43 percent of parents said they fear for their child's safety at school. One in three parents believes that it is "very likely" that a Columbine-type shooting could happen in their community. While the number of children hurt by violent crime has declined significantly in the last six years, we can't escape the reality of the shootings at Thurston High, Columbine and most recently in Santee, California.

As many of my colleagues know, following the tragic shootings at Thurston High School, I introduced legislation to help combat the growing problem of youth violence in America. The Youth Violence Prevention Package is based on needs identified by my community and is designed to prevent youth from turning to violence by providing adequate crisis intervention and support services.

After a decade of record economic growth and decreasing crime rates, America has the opportunity to invest aggressively in proven violence prevention and youth development activities to ensure that children and families are able to thrive. Targeted investment in prevention efforts that give children and families what they need to stay on track works.

That's why I'm so disappointed by the priorities set by President Bush and Congress in the budget blueprint.

—The Bush budget abandons a commitment made in past budgets to give one million children access to Head Start by fiscal year 2002. Under the Administration's own estimates, the Head Start program will fall 84,000 students short of that goal. The Bush budget actually results in the elimination of Head Start services for 2,500 children.

—In addition, the Bush budget reduces resources for existing Child Care and Development Block Grant projects by $200 million.

Specifically, my legislation would increase the authorization for Head Start programs to $11.5 billion. And, it would create a national child care provider scholarship program to further the goals, of child care provider recruitment, training, credentialing, and retention.

—The Bush budget cuts grants to help states investigate and prevent child abuse and neglect by $16 million—a 47% reduction. Furthermore, most other child welfare service programs are frozen at the fiscal year 2001 level.

—Also, general juvenile justice and delinquency prevention grants are cut by $44 million, gang-free schools and communities grants by $6 million, mentoring grants by $7 million, incentive grants for local delinquency prevention by $25 million and drug reduction grants by $12 million.

On the other hand, legislation I've introduced would increase authorization for Community Based Family Resources and Support Programs, like Relief Nurseries, by $44 million. In addition, it would increase the authorization for Title V incentive grants for local delinquency programs—like, parent assistance, antitrust, and court schools.

Providing parents with the skills and treatment they need to be better parents is critical. A comprehensive prevention approach that looks at the entire family and identifies the specific needs of the child within that family
