

their heart-wrenching stories with me about the death of their son or daughter. I have heard heroic stories of kids battling cancer or diabetes, and tragic stories of car accidents and drownings. Each of these families has had their own experience, but they must all continue with their lives and deal with the incredible pain of losing a child. By establishing a day to remember children that have passed away, bereaved families from all over the country will be encouraged and supported in working through their grief. It is important to families who have suffered such loss to know that they are not alone.

In addition, this year, I have added a provision to designate the fourth Friday in April as "National Children's Memorial Flag Day" in recognition of children who have died as a result of violence. April has been designated as National Child Abuse Prevention Month, an annual tradition started by President Jimmy Carter in 1979. Many State and local governmental agencies and private organizations already fly the Children's Memorial Flag on the fourth Friday in April to remember children lost to violence. Recognizing this day is another way we can commemorate the lives of children.
