HONORING NASHVILLE METROPOLITAN PARK SYSTEM FOR 100 YEARS OF SERVICE TO TENNESSEE RESIDENTS

HON. BOB CLEMENT

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 10, 2001

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the park system of Nashville, Tennessee, on its 100th Anniversary of existence.

The Metropolitan Board of Parks and Recreation, under the direction of Mr. James H. Fyke, currently oversees parks, historic sites, community centers, greenways, art galleries, golf courses, swimming pools, senior centers, and numerous other facilities which add to the quality of life for the 5th Congressional District of Tennessee.

Mr. Fyke and his staff are ardent supporters of the community by offering professionalism and vision as the parks system makes the transition into the 21st Century. The continued support of the Nashville Metropolitan Government over the years has been a crucial factor in the upkeep and maintenance of these properties, which benefit so many Nashvillians.

The Tennessee General Assembly approved legislation to enact and charter the Nashville Park System on April 13, 1901. That same year Mayor James Head appointed five individuals to the very first City Park Commission. On their first meeting, April 16, they began work with one mule, a handful of employees, one park, and no financial support whatsoever.

Nashville's first official park was Watkins Park, followed by Centennial Park in 1902. By 1903, the City Park Commission had an annual operating budget of $25,000, and employed Robert Creighton as the first Superintendent of Parks.

It wasn't until 1912 that additional parks were added to the system. These included Hadley and Shelby Parks. The first community center was added to Centennial Park just four years later, while the first public golf course opened in Shelby Park in 1924.

One of the crown jewels in the Nashville Park System is the Warner Parks, which the city acquired in 1926. To date the Warner Parks, located at Old Hickory Boulevard near Bellevue, offer 2,681 acres of natural beauty for the public to explore and enjoy, along with a Nature Center, picnic area, two golf courses, hiking and driving trails, and much more.

Another significant landmark belonging to the Nashville Park System is the Parthenon, the only full-scale replica of the original in existence. It was originally created as a temporary structure for the Tennessee Centennial Exposition in 1897, reflecting the city's nickname as "The Athens of the South". It was rebuilt during the 1920s and officially re-opened its doors to visitors from around the world during the 1930s. The structure is nearing the conclusion of a $13 million renovation and today houses many of the city's official art collections, while hosting visiting artwork from around the world. It is also the home to Athena, a 42-foot statue said to be the tallest indoor sculpture in the Western World.

The 1940s saw construction of the first gymnasium in Elizabeth Park Community Center and the first running of the Iroquois Steeplechase in Percy Warner Park. As the Park System celebrated its 50th Anniversary in the 1950s, the Cumberland Golf Course opened its doors as the first black golf course. However, by the end of the fifties segregation of Nashville's golf courses ceased for good.

The Metropolitan Board of Parks and Recreation as we know it today, first met on June 5, 1963. By 1976 the parks system had earned for itself an outstanding reputation and as such was selected as the most outstanding local agency in the United States. The seventies saw much activity as Greer Stadium, home of Nashville Sounds baseball, Fort Negley Park, Ice Centennial ice rink, Wave Country, and Hamilton Creek Sailboard Marina all opened to the public under the direction of newly appointed parks director Jim Fyke.

The now popular Riverfront Park was added in 1983, which has become the site of the city's annual Independence Day Celebration and numerous concerts and festivities. During the 1990s the following additions were made to the Nashville Parks System—the Centennial Sportsplex opened, the Metro Greenway Commission was created, Ted Rhodes Golf Course re-opened, Grassmere Wildlife Park was acquired, Metro Parks received the largest land donation in its history of 1500 acres, Shelby Bottoms opened, the Predators Ice Practice Facility opened, and many other improvements were implemented.

Most recently the parks system dedicated the new McCabe Golf Clubhouse and the VinnyLinks First Tee Golf Course and Learning Center in Shelby Park in 2000. Also, the countywide parks/greenways master plan will offer numerous improvements well into the 21st Century.

Today Metro Parks celebrates 100 years of existence with 93 parks, 9,350 total acres, 450 year round employees and 350 seasonal employees, as well as, 173 tennis courts, 85 ballfields, 14 swimming pools, 25 community centers, and 7 golf courses. The system also offers a sailboat marina, a wave action pool, 2 indoor ice rinks, 2 indoor tennis centers, a zoo, a nature center, a children's museum, a countywide greenway/trail system and a professional baseball stadium.

Metro Parks is to be commended for its legacy of excellence and service to the Nashville/Davidson County community for the past 100 years. May it continue to grow, prosper, and impact our region in the 21st Century. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

COMMEMORATING THE LIFE OF THE HONORABLE FLOYD SPENCE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, 1928–2001

HON. VAN HILLEARY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 10, 2001

Mr. HILLEARY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the life and public service of a great advocate for our nation's defense, a true gentleman in the finest Southern tradition, and my good friend, Floyd Spence.

For those of us who knew him only later in life, it may come as a surprise that this gentle soul spent his early life as a terror on the gridiron at Lexington High School and the University of South Carolina. It's less of a surprise that he had a distinguished 36-year career in the U.S. Navy and Naval Reserve, because his knowledge of our nation's military was rivaled only by his deep affection for it.

Mr. Spence was a leader with the courage of his convictions. He became a Republican in 1962, when Republicans in the South were still a rare commodity. That party switch cost him his seat in the South Carolina House of Representatives, but the people of South Carolina came to respect his courage and shortly thereafter sent him to Congress in 1970. By the time I first came to Capitol Hill in 1994, Southern Republicans had become relatively commonplace. That happened because people like Floyd Spence followed their conscience and accepted the consequences willingly.

When I met Floyd, he was then the newly installed Chairman of what was then called the House National Security Committee. He handled his considerable responsibility with grace and dignity, displaying fairness to all members, regardless of party, and showing considerable patience with us freshmen who showed up full of enthusiasm but short on experience.

Chairman Spence knew that freedom isn't free and deeply believed that lasting peace could best be achieved through unquestioned strength. He pushed for better funding for training, modernization, readiness and quality of life initiatives. His leadership was instrumental in finally stemming the tide of declining defense budgets and placing our military on the road to recovery. The soldier enjoying his new pay raise, the military families moving into improved post housing, the pilot stepping into a much-needed new fighter jet—each of these people, and many others, can thank Floyd Spence for fighting for them. We would be well-advised to continue along the path to recovery that this remarkable man worked so hard to put us on.
