The House met at 10 a.m.

Imam Yahya Hendi, Muslim Chaplain, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., offered the following prayer:

A reading from the Holy Koran, the Muslims' Holy Scripture, chapter 5, verses 8 and 9:

"And remember the favor of God unto you, and His covenant, which He ratified with you, when you said: 'We hear and we obey.' Fear God, for God knows well the secrets of your hearts. O you of faith! Stand up firmly for God, as witnesses to fair dealings. Let not the hatred of others to you make you swerve to wrong and depart from justice. Be just, that is next to righteousness. Fear God for God is well-acquainted with all that you do.'"

And now let us bow our heads before God and pray:

Loving God!

Source of justice, goodness and generosity!

We ask You to guide the men and women of this Congress with Your divine light, to empower them with Your wisdom, to enable them to be agents of peace in this Nation and around the world.

Help them lead us to act as brothers and sisters. Empower them to help us work out our differences. Help them help us confront hatred wherever it exists that we all may live as one Nation, united, under God.

God!

Receive our thanks and hear our prayers. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. KUCINICH led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOMING IMAM YAHYA HENDI

(Mr. LAFAELCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LAFAELCE. Mr. Speaker, as we begin Ramadan, we are especially pleased to have a Muslim Imam give our opening prayer to the House of Representatives. I am honored to welcome Imam Yahya Hendi as our guest chaplain this morning, and I thank him very much for those inspiring words and reading from the Koran.

Imam Hendi currently serves as the Muslim chaplain at Georgetown University, which is where I first heard him. He also serves as spokesman and member of the Islamic Jurisprudence Council of North America and directs the “PEACE” office of the Muslim American Society. Now an American citizen, Imam Hendi was born in Nablus in the Palestinian Territories and educated at the University of Jordan in Amman and the Hartford Seminary in Connecticut. He was one of the Muslim leaders who met with President Bush in the aftermath of the September 11 tragedy.

I asked Chaplain Dan Coughlin to invite Imam Hendi to deliver our opening prayer today to mark the commencement of Ramadan, the Islamic holy month of fasting and spiritual renewal. Observance of Ramadan begins tomorrow evening at dusk, and fasting will commence at sunrise on Saturday.

There are 1.5 billion Muslims in the world, including almost 7 million in the United States alone. During these troubled times, I believe it is important to show all Muslims and the world our good will toward the Muslim community and our respect for the Islamic faith.

Again, our thanks and appreciation to Imam Yahya Hendi for offering our opening prayer this morning.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE HONORABLE GARY A. CONDIT, MEMBER OF CONGRESS

HOPEFUL IN THE UPCOMING 107th CONGRESS

HANSEN) laid before the House the following communication from the Honorable GARY A. CONDIT, Member of Congress:

Mr. Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Speaker: This is to formally notify you, pursuant to Rule VIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, that my office has been served with a grand jury subpoena for documents issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I will make the determinations required by Rule VIII.

Sincerely,

GARY A. CONDIT
Member of Congress.
Islam is a way of life for millions of Americans, and we in the Congress want them and all Americans to know of our Nation’s view that Islam should be understood as a faith that firmly upholds the values of respect for the individual human being, the value of the family, and justice for all. We join the growing American Muslim community in condemning those who try to tell us otherwise and who commit crimes against humanity in the name of Islam.

Congress has expressed itself formally in condemnation of those who, in the wake of the events of September 11, took illegal actions against people solely because they were, or seemed to be, Muslims. Moreover, we support the President in his forthright expressions against all such illegal actions, his prosecution of those who commit such crimes; and we join President Bush’s assurances that our efforts in Operation Enduring Freedom against terrorism are not directed against Islam or against Muslims.

Mr. Speaker, to the contrary, we embrace our fellow citizens who are Muslims and all those of the Muslim faith who are temporary or permanent residents here as adherents of one of the three great religions in the monotheistic tradition.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of this holy month, we extend our warmest greetings to the American Muslim community; and we wish them a blessed Ramadan.

AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE SYSTEM

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, we all agree that terrorists should be brought to justice. But what kind of justice? The American jurisprudence system is the envy of the free world with its emphasis on due process. Yet the recent executive order substitutes our American system for military tribunals, where officers sit as judge and jury with secret evidence, secret witnesses, secret verdicts, and even secretly handed-down death sentences.

This order is not reflective of the workings of the great solons of the law whose likenesses ring this Chamber. This is not reflective of Jeffersonian democracy. This is Kafka’s trial writ large. We cannot, we should not let the actions of terrorists cause us to reject our American system of justice. The ultimate terror in a democracy is the destruction of constitutional principles.

Let us defend against terrorism, and may we always remain one Nation, under God, indivisible with liberty and justice for all.

URGING ACTION ON AIRLINE SECURITY AND ECONOMIC STIMULUS BILL

(Mr. FOLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, if you read Roll Call today, you will realize that the majority leader of the other Chamber decided at a very important engagement with President Putin to make a joke about his height. A few months ago, he seemed to make the same reference to our own President when he quipped that international stature. The gentleman must obviously have a height fetish. Rather than focusing on things we can do for our country, he is making fun of the gentleman’s stature.

Our President has led us successfully in Afghanistan. The words from the field include: “The Taliban’s on the run”; “we’re focusing in on bin Laden”; and “we’re going to achieve our goal because the United States and its allies remain committed to the end of terrorism.”

I salute our President. I urge the majority leader of the other body to quickly take up the airline security bill which the House passed which includes options for localities to hire the kind of screeners they need to protect the traveling public. I also urge him to take up the economic stimulus bill that is ready at his desk and ready for the American economy.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members are reminded not to make mention of Members of the other body.

WELCOMING IMAM YAHYA HENDI

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, as co-chair of the new Democratic Caucus working group on Central Asia and the Middle East, please let me warmly welcome Imam Yahya Hendi to the people’s House.

His prayer ascends to the God of us all, who shows us the straight way, the way of those on whom grace is bestowed, and whose portion is not wrath, so we will not go astray.”

Mr. Speaker, I am fortunate to represent a region of our Nation where Muslims and justice for all. We have 56 faith-filled people from all denominations and those of secular persuasion have joined together in an interfaith mission to promote tolerance, understanding, and to advance social justice. We have 56 homes for the poor through Habitat for Humanity. We work together in the campaign to erase hatred. Ours is a peaceful community and a patriotic community. Indeed, in my district, Muslims have made history. They have become prominent citizens in all walks of life: medicine, engineering, law, business, education, and entertainment.

Our citizens built the first mosque in Ohio and the third in our Nation. And on September 11, people of faith joined hands around our Perrysburg mosque in a strong show of unity with our common bond to the Creator of us all.

During the upcoming Ramadan, Christmas, and Hanukkah seasons, may our national mosaic shaped by people who have come here willingly from throughout the world shine beautifully as an example of how people can live together with respect for one another and without fear.

CONGRATULATIONS TO CORAL GABLES FIRST UNITED METHODIST CHURCH ON ITS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, this year marks the 75th anniversary of the Coral Gables First United Methodist Church, and I congratulate its clergy and its parishioners.

Since July of 1926, when 100 Coral Gable citizens gathered to charter a United Methodist church, First United has been a spiritual beacon to its community.

With the current leadership of Senior Pastor John Harrington, the church continues its mission of serving south Florida by reaching out to all communities with its message of hope and love. Church members operate a “Pastor’s Pantry” and a “Sharing Place” to provide immediate food and clothing needs to the destitute.

The Church also supports many ministries: Habitat for Humanity, the Community Partnership for the Homeless, the Agape Women’s Center, and the Riverside House, just to name a few. Funding missions all over the world that bring the promise of Jesus Christ and that relieve suffering in the world have always been priorities for the Coral Gables First United Methodist Church.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my congressional colleagues to join me and the Matson family in congratulating the Coral Gables First United Methodist Church. May it continue serving with love and devotion as a spiritual center for many of our south Florida residents.

CHINA IS DESTABILIZING THE WORLD WITH AMERICAN CASH

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, a report said China is selling missiles to our enemies. The report said China sold missiles and technology to Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, and Pakistan. In addition, China sold nuclear technology to Iran and Pakistan, and it has been confirmed by American officials. The report further said that these Chinese sales to Iran enabled Iran to deploy nuclear warheads in the near future.

November 15, 2001

Beam me up, Mr. Hansen. China is destabilizing the world with American cash. That is no laughing matter. I yield back all those American flags that were recently passed out at the Wizard of Oz game that were made in China.

THE TIME IS NOW TO PASS AN AIRLINE SECURITY BILL
(Mrs. MYRICK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to pass an airline security bill. The holiday season is going to begin next week, and millions of Americans will be flying to see their loved ones. It is ridiculous that Congress is dragging their feet. It should have been done weeks ago.

We need to make sure that the skies are safe for all people so they feel secure. It is understandable that folks are still anxious about flying. That is why we must act. We must reach a compromise. We must restore confidence in the American public so they will fly on the planes, and we must send a message to the terrorists that they are not going to scare us into changing our way of life.

PUTTING BOOKS IN THE HANDS OF CHILDREN
(Mr. DAVIS of Illinois asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition of the beginning of the holy month of Ramadan. For nearly 7 million Muslims in America and more than 1 million worldwide, this is a period of introspection and faith. As Muslims prepare for the daily fast, they begin a month of deep spirituality and communal observance.

Like many things related to Islam in America, Ramadan is not well understood by most Americans. The word “Ramadan” comes from the Arabic root "ramada" which means “parched thirst” and “sun-baked ground.”

Some say the word expresses the hunger and thirst felt by those who spent the month in fasting. Others suggest it is so-called because, during Ramadan, hearts and souls are more readily receptive to the admonition and to the words of God, just as sand and stone are receptive to the sun’s heat.

Ramadan is a beautiful work that truly captures the spiritual and the physical renewal of this most treasured time for Muslims. Americans have benefitted immensely from learning more about these traditions.

I join my colleagues today in sending our warm regards and warm greetings for a blessed beginning to the holy month of Ramadan for all Muslims, here at home and around the world.

RECOGNIZING THE VISION AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF HARRY W. COLMERY
(Mr. RYUN of Kansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the vision and achievements of Mr. Harry W. Colmery of Topeka, Kansas. Mr. Colmery’s efforts led to the enactment of the GI Bill of Rights in 1944. This bill made a college education possible for 2 million veterans and has also allowed for more than 2 million others to buy homes for their families.

In December of 1943, Harry Colmery, the National Commander of the American Legion, wrote the first draft of what became the Servicemen’s Readjustment Act, known as the GI Bill. Thanks to the work of Mr. Colmery and others, his bill was signed into law by President Roosevelt some 6 months later.

The GI Bill continues to serve as a fitting reward to servicemen and women who have risked their lives to protect our freedom. Millions were able to better themselves and their families through higher education.

For this reason, I am asking President Bush to posthumously award the Presidential Medal of Freedom to Harry W. Colmery, and I ask my colleagues to join me.
jobs. We need an economic stimulus package now that will lower the Federal tax burden and, thereby, increase incentives to work, to save, to invest, to start new small businesses, to hire new workers.

We need to create an environment of opportunity, to help people get back to work, because the people that I represent in the Lehigh Valley and the Upper Perkiomen Valleys of Pennsylvania, they do not want to know how long they can stay out of work; they want to know how quickly they can get back to work.

The President has proposed and the House has passed a meaningful, tax-lowering, back-to-work economic stimulus package. And what is the other Chamber doing? Instead of a real economic stimulus package, the majority party in the other Chamber has proposed a package mostly consisting of unproductive government spending.

Unbelievably, less than 30 percent of the Senate Democrats’ stimulus bill, so-called stimulus bill, is dedicated to actually increasing any incentives for new job creation. Instead, there is all manner of new spending. There is an expansion of authority for Indian tribes to issue tax exempt private bonds, there are increases in subsidies to bison ranchers and pumpkin growers, there is a tax credit proposed for using poultry waste to produce electricity.

Mr. Speaker, this is not economic stimulus; it is pork barrel spending. We need real economic stimuli.

CONGRESS MUST MOVE QUICKLY TO SAFEGUARD AIRLINE SECURITY

(Ms. WATSON of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, our airline industry is vital to America’s economic health. Our airlines not only employ over 1 million Americans, but they also provide the mobility upon which our modern economy and society is based.

In the wake of September 11, Congress passed a short-term boost for the airline industry. But the only way to ensure the long-term stability of our air transport system is to reassure the public that air travel is safe.

In contrast to the speed with which this Congress enacted the $15 billion quick-fix for airlines, the House dragged its feet on passing an airline security bill.

This week, another aircraft accident has caused further alarm for the flying public. While there is no reason to believe terrorism was involved, Americans need assurances that air travel is safe.

Mr. Speaker, please urge the conferences to finish their work this week and give us an aviation security bill that, like the original Senate version, can be passed unanimously into law.

TIME TO FEDERALIZE AIRPORT SECURITY

(Mr. HEFLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, we need airport security, we want airport security, and we must have airport security.

When I say that, I do not mean Argenbright Security. Did we ever hear a worse oxymoron than using the term “Argenbright” and “security” in the same sentence? How can one claim to be a security expert when one man can get through with seven knives, a can of Mace, and a stun gun? That is not security.

How can airlines keep hiring this company? Southwest and United up in Baltimore just hired them again to manage their security. How can anyone put confidence in a company that has repeatedly been fined for violations? How can anyone put confidence in a company that either does not do background checks or does them in such a shoddy way that felons can slip through their screening? How can anyone put confidence in a company when they are hiring new immigrants from the Third World to do their security checking?

What we are doing is not working. We need a change. The first change we need is to recognize that airport security is a Federal responsibility. Now, whether they are all Federal employees or not is not the point, but it is a Federal responsibility.

The other body needs to stop stonewalling and negotiate in good faith and get us an airport security bill today. The American public is losing its patience.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will remind Members that they should not characterize actions of the other body.

GLARING INADEQUACIES IN AIRPORT SECURITY DEMAND FEDERALIZATION OF AIRPORT SCREENERS

(Ms. WATERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DeLAY) and too many Republicans are holding the airline security bill hostage. They refuse to federalize airport screeners.

September 11 revealed the glaring inadequacies in airline security. Since September 11, a passenger entered the cockpit of an airplane and attempted to take over the plane. Unfortunately, the time line for cloning science is set to outpace our own schedule.

Therefore, I urge my Senate colleagues to act now to bring this bill to the floor in a few months. Unfortunately, the time line for cloning science is set to outpace our own schedule.

Tribute to Michael G. McGinty of Foxboro, Massachusetts

(Mr. WATT of North Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday, my colleague, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK), and I announced, in the midst of all of the important other agendas that are going on in the House, an effort to pay tribute to all of the people who were killed in the September 11 disaster.

Today I rise to pay tribute to Michael G. McGinty, who, during his life in an Air Force family, moved many times. So when he and his wife, Cynthia, bought their first home in Foxboro, Massachusetts, he put down roots, planted flowers to attract birds and butterflies, and became chairman of the deacons at Bethany Congregational Church.

But his great joy in life was being the father of David and Daniel. Ms. McGinty says, “I’m the one who would say it was time to do homework, but he would come and make it fun and games.”

The night before Mr. McGinty left for his meeting at the World Trade Tower, he and his wife had a great conversation about the future. They clicked, and they felt really good about their family and children. She said, “I am so glad that the last conversation we had was a really good one.”

I pay tribute to Michael McGinty today.

TRADE PROMOTION AUTHORITY

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to discuss the issue of trade promotion authority today.

The benefits of international trade have been clear for decades. Trade fosters not only economic growth, but also the growth of free and democratic societies around the world. As the most prosperous Nation in the world, we understand the importance of expanding trade, and expanding trade helps spread our values overseas.

It is not a coincidence that many of the economies most engaged in trade have also pursued political freedom. South Korea, Taiwan, and Mexico are just three examples. If economic isolation were the answer, then Cuba and North Korea would be among the wealthiest and most prosperous countries in the world.

Now more than ever the U.S. has a moral obligation to lead the fight for democracy around the world. Free trade offers one of the best ways to promote a democratic society. We must lead by example. Support trade promotion authority.

THE AVIATION SECURITY BILL

(Mr. CROWLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, over the last 2 months we have seen reports of knives, guns, mace, and stun guns slip past keystone cop security guards at our Nation’s airports, and still the GOP defends the third-rate rent-a-cops at our airports.

Two days ago, one of the airport screeners at Logan Airport in Boston who was tasked with protecting the traveling public left her checkpoint unattended for 4 minutes while passengers obtained unfettered access to the gate area.

There have been over 90 breaches of security since September 11. In the words of our colleague from Ohio, “Beam us all up, have we totally lost it? Have we learned nothing from the events of September 11?” I find it incredible that negotiation for this bill have dragged on this long.

There is no compromise when it comes to the security of our aviation system. The status quo has failed us, and continues to fail us every day. We must do away with private security firms at these checkpoints and implement the federalization of our airport security apparatus immediately.

This country has suffered enough, and we have an obligation to protect each and every one of our citizens. We must do that today.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN). With reference to a previous speaker, the Chair reiterates that Members should not urge action by the other body.

TRADE

(Mr. LINDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, as Americans struggle with economic uncertainty, Congress seeks to stimulate our stalled economy and create new jobs. However, I daresay that many of my colleagues have overlooked one of the most consistent and dependable solutions available, one that Congress has the ability to foster: Trade.

Recent studies have found that if global trade barriers were cut by one-third, the world economy would increase by more than $900 billion a year. Eliminating trade barriers altogether would increase the global economy by nearly $2 trillion. The infusion of this much capital into the world market would serve as an engine of economic growth and improve the standard of living for all Americans.

Also, it would be unwise to ignore the fact that, since 1990, more than 20 million new jobs have been created in the United States.

It is not merely coincidental that this increase corresponds to the enactment of trade agreements such as NAFTA and GATT. In fact, trade has stimulated job creation, resulting not only in new jobs, but in higher wages in those jobs supported by exports.

As we seek to alleviate economic hardship, the U.S. must look beyond our borders to increase interaction with our trading partners, and Congress can facilitate this by supporting trade promotion authority.

RAMADAN GREETING

(Mr. DINGELL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, it is highly appropriate that we welcome Imam Yahya Hindi. This body represents all Americans, and it is extremely appropriate, then, that we should welcome the Imam today to help celebrate the commencement of the holy month of Ramadan, which is set to begin tomorrow.

Islam is not only one of the world’s great religions, but it is one of the most American of religions. American Muslims have immigrated to this country from all corners of the globe, and in all parts of the United States Muslims are valued, integral members of our communities.

It is an honor for me to represent the largest Arab American community in the United States. As Ramadan begins, I extend my personal greetings to all Muslim Americans, particularly my friends and constituents in Michigan’s 16th District.

Mr. Speaker, I also send best wishes to our Muslim friends and allies in the Middle East and South Asia, as well as Muslims in all corners of the world. To our allies in the Islamic world, I would like to express my gratitude for their friendship, particularly at this difficult time. As President Bush has pointed out, the United States is not at war with Islam. We are at war with terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, some of what has been said over the last couple of months has painted a highly inaccurate picture of Islam. Islam is not a religion of division and intolerance, but rather, a religion which values diversity and understanding. It is, above all else, a religion of peace and progress.

Americans must not tolerate injustices committed out of ignorance against any group of Americans, particularly against Muslim Americans, who share with us the horror of September 11. What to them are particularly offensive because the Muslim community feels it is grossly improper that the perpetrators express attempted to use that faith as an excuse for a horrible crime.

In this month of introspection, faith, prayer, and cleansing, I again wish to relay my greetings and best wishes to the Muslims in southeast Michigan and in the United States, as well as all the Muslims in the world.

IN HONOR OF TUBBY RAYMOND’S 300TH WIN

(Mr. CASTLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to a football legend, the great Harold Tubby Raymond, head coach of the University of Delaware Fightin’ Blue Hens.

A lover of sports since he was a kid, Tubby played football and baseball in college. Unable to hit the curve ball, Tubby realized early on that his future was in coaching, and what a future he has had. Tubby won his 300th game on Saturday, November 10, 2001. He became one of only nine elite coaches to win so many games.

Most importantly, Tubby won them all at the University of Delaware. Three national championships, 14 Lambert Cups, four NAAC Coach of the Year awards, and 300 wins, all earned doing something he loves: Coaching young men to be extraordinary football players.

Tubby Raymond is more than your average football coach. Revered and respected by his peers, Tubby’s name is synonymous with Bear Bryant, Joe Paterno, Eddie Robinson, and so many other football legends.

What many people do not know is that he is also an accomplished artist who paints portraits of senior players each week. What began as fun many years ago has turned into a tradition cherished by his players, while providing a great escape.

Predictable as ever, upon winning his 300th game, Tubby Raymond gave the credit to his players, coaches, and fans who supported the Blue Hens during his 35-year career.

A great friend to all Delawareans, I want to join with his family, friends, and the football community in congratulating Tubby and wishing him a belated 74th birthday, and many more wins.

THE HIV AIDS CRISIS IN HAITI

(Mrs. MECK of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MECK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, according to the World Bank, more than 250,000 people are living with HIV/AIDS in the Caribbean region, and the prevalence among adults 15 to 49 has reached 2 percent.

In Haiti, the situation is dramatically worse. Estimates reach as high as 12 percent of the urban population, and 5 percent for the rural population. We must speak very strongly for Haiti. We must speak very strongly against this HIV epidemic or pandemic that is going across our world.

The epidemic has spread beyond the high-risk population to the general population. Mr. Speaker, a regional strategic plan is in place to reduce the spread and impact of the epidemic in Haiti and throughout the Caribbean, but Haiti desperately needs the financial support of the United States, the World Bank, and the international community to implement it.

I have yet to understand why the United States is holding up its aid to Haiti. Mr. Speaker, Haiti has made considerable progress politically. It has now met virtually all of the conditions established by the United States.

I appeal to the Congress to press for relief for Haiti.

TRADE PROMOTION AUTHORITY FOR PRESIDENT BUSH

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, virtually every Member of Congress is talking about the need for us to turn around the economic challenges that we have faced leading up to September 11, and the situation which certainly was exacerbated with what took place on September 11.

We have right now an effort going on to put together an economic security bill which deals with putting in place both spending, opportunities to help those who are at the lower end of the economic spectrum, and also tax reductions, which are designed to encourage economic growth.

I think it is important for us to note that as we look towards job creation and economic growth, one of the most important things that this institution can do is to create an opportunity for President Bush and his team to go out and pry open new markets for U.S. goods and services throughout the world.

It is very apparent that within this hemisphere, every single one of the democratically elected leaders is committed to our goal of establishing a Free Trade Area of the Americas. Their goal is to have this done by 2005. Some of the countries would like to move it up even quicker.

But Mr. Speaker, unless we grant the President trade promotion authority, the ability to put together that very important Free Trade Area of the Americas and other agreements would be greatly diminished.

We will, in the not too distant future, be facing an opportunity to do something that will create jobs, help the workers in this country, and encourage economic growth, so I hope very much that, in a bipartisan way, our colleagues will join in support of trade promotion authority.

HAITI AND FUNDING FROM THE INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

(Ms. LEE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge the United States to lift its block on approved loans by the Inter-American Development Bank to Haiti.

Haiti is now in the midst of a political impasse that began months after the May, 2000 elections, and has become a national crisis. The United States has since blocked foreign assistance, as well as international financial institutions’ funding for Haiti.

Meanwhile, the humanitarian disaster looms large over the population of 8 million people, including a devastating HIV/AIDS pandemic, extreme poverty, and high infant mortality rates.

We must address this injustice. The people of Haiti need our support. Our country can help alleviate human suffering in this country in the Western Hemisphere. We must release these approved loans. They are not grants, mind you, but they are loans to Haiti.

NOT ENOUGH DISASTER RELIEF

(Mrs. MALONEY of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, after the September 11 attacks, the administration told us it would do whatever it takes to help New York recover. Forty billion dollars was quickly approved, $20 billion to fight terrorism and $20 billion for disaster relief primarily for New York.

Well, yesterday, the Committee on Appropriations allocated that $40 billion and New York got less than $10 billion.

Now we want to know, what will it take for New York to get its fair share? Will it take a mass exodus from the city? Because people and businesses are making decisions to stay or go right now and New York’s future hangs in the balance.

We are told that we will get the money eventually. I want to congratulate two of my Republican colleagues, the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Sweeney), for their courage in saying eventually is not soon enough. That money was allocated for this year. Now we have to go and hunt for it somewhere else.

New York is one of the economic centers of America and it should not take this much trouble for America to give New York help.

HUMANITARIAN CRISIS IN HAITI

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak of humanitarian crisis, not half a world away in Afghanistan, but in our own hemispheric neighborhood of Haiti.

Mr. Speaker, airline security, the economy and the war have our full attention, and rightfully so, but closer to us in Haiti, the last election has been hopelessly deadlocked with no resolution in sight.

To compound the problem, because of the opposition of some to the outcome of those elections, our country and international financial institutions which hold the lifeline of aid dollars to this struggling democracy, have blocked the release of loans to Haiti.

This has created a crippling effect of economic consequences where the poorest country in our hemisphere cannot Laying on the Table House RESOLUTIONS 179, 182, 217, 220, 236, 237, 258, 267 AND 268

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to lay on the Table House Resolutions 179, 182, 217, 220, 236, 237, 258, 267 and 268.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT SECURITY ADVICE ACT OF 2001

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 288 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk reads the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 288

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 2269) to amend title II of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to promote the provision of retirement investment advice to workers managing their retirement income assets. The bill shall be read for consideration. In lieu of the amendments recommended by the Committee on Education and the Workforce and the Committee on Ways and Means now printed in the bill, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in part A of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill, as amended, and on any further amendment thereto to final passage without intervention of any point of order; (1) one hour and 40 minutes of debate on the bill, as amended, with one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce and 40 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means now printed in the bill; (2) the further amendment printed in part B of the report of the Committee on Rules, if offered by Representative George Miller of California or his designee, which shall be in order without intervention of any point of order, shall be considered as read, and shall be separately debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent; and (3) one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) is recognized for 1 hour.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BOEHLER) and the ranking member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER). The remaining 40 minutes are equally divided between the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL).

In lieu of the amendments recommended by the Committee on Education and the Workforce and the Committee on Ways and Means, the amendment printed in Part A of the Committee on Rules report accompanying this resolution shall be considered as adopted.

I would simply note for my colleagues that this Part A amendment combines the provisions reported by the respective committees into one amendment. After general debate, it will be in order to consider only the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) and the amendment printed in Part B of the Committee on Rules report and is debatable for 1 hour.

Finally, the rule permits the minority to offer a motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

The resume waives all points of order against consideration of the bill as amended, as well as the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. Speaker, today in America more and more working men and women are investing in a world where only the richest Americans participate in the stock market. Today's workers are using worker-directed or 401(k)-type plans to manage and grow their retirement funds. In fact, it is estimated that some 43 million workers are, in part, managing nearly $1.5 trillion dollars in assets through defined contribution plans.

Unfortunately, current law does not reflect the new world that we live in. For the average worker trying to get ahead, raising a family or simply pursuing the American dream in any way they choose, managing their retirement funds can be a daunting, difficult and sometimes costly task, and current law is keeping them from getting the direction that they need.

Back home, I know many young people who are in their early careers or newly married. I see them and their families struggling to understand today's complex financial reality. And these are smart kids. They know that you can never be too young to begin planning for your future. But with a future that involves starting a family, purchasing a home and a car, planning for your children's educational needs, understanding investments for retirement is just one more difficult piece of a very complicated puzzle.

Everyone who enters the workforce has dreams of one day returning to full-time private life. Some dream of a house on the shore or a ranch out west. Others dreams are more modest, a small home close to family and friends. But the common theme of all retirement dreams is security, comfort and a small reward for a lifetime's work.

Planning for retirement today is not like it was when our mothers and fathers and even some of us were new to the workforce. Retirement planning does not simply involve Social Security and a savings account. Today's retirement planning requires an understanding of the many investment options and their attendant risk and benefits.

To be sure, planning for the future through investment is a welcome aspect of our country's financial progress and the continued expansion of options for American workers. But we would be remiss if we did not make sure that the law kept up with these widening options.

We must recognize that with the wealth of investment options available to workers, there must also be options for advice and direction. Workers need access to sound advice to help them maximize their retirement security as well as minimize their risk.

H.R. 2269, the Retirement Security Advice Act responds to this need and provides Americans with access to this help.

It allows employers to provide their working colleagues with access to high quality, professional investment advice. It retains critical safeguards and includes new protections to ensure that participants will receive advice solely in their best interests.

Advice will be provided by fiduciary advisors who will be personally liable for failure to act solely in the interest of a worker and subject to both criminal and civil sanctions through the Department of Labor for any breach of their fiduciary duty. It is also important to note that all existing securities and State insurance protections will continue to apply as well.

H.R. 2269 also includes a strict, plain-language disclosure requirement to inform participants about any and all potential fees or possible conflicts of interest when advice is first given. Finally, it works to educate and empower
Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. (Mr. FROST asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and thank my colleague, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) for yielding me the customary 30 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, both the underlying bill and the Democratic substitute address an issue of great importance to the millions of Americans who will depend upon participant-directed pension accounts for their retirement income. Nowadays, fewer and fewer employees have traditional pension plans. That means that more and more will depend heavily on investments for their retirement income. Currently, approximately 42 million workers participate in such accounts.

It is very important that these workers have access to sound financial planning and advice to help them make the most of their investments. It is also critical that the advice they receive is unbiased and in their best interests, not just the benefit of the advisor or counselor or the businesses they represent.

The Democratic substitute makes important improvements in the underlying bill. Specifically, the Andrews-Rangel substitute allows employees to receive investment advice and education from their employers, while still being protected from conflicts of interest and unqualified investment advisors.

The rule provides an hour and 40 minutes of debate on the bill and another hour on the substitute. Let us pass this rule so we may get on with the debate and rules of order. Let us pass this substitute. Let us pass this bill. The SPEAKER read the title of the bill. The text of H.R. 2269 is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Retirement Security Advice Act of 2001.”

SEC. 2. PROHIBITED TRANSACTION EXEMPTION FOR THE PROVISION OF INVESTMENT ADVICE.

(a) AMENDMENT TO EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT OF 1974.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 408(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1056) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(g)(1) The requirements of this subsection and the following subsections are met when the fiduciary advice referred to in paragraph (i) of this section has been provided (whether by an employee benefit plan or otherwise) to a participant or beneficiary of an employee benefit plan, and such advice is based on advice provided in accordance with the provisions of section 408(b)(1), by a fiduciary adviser provided to such participant or beneficiary by an employer benefit plan, and such advice is based on advice provided in accordance with the provisions of section 408(b)(1), by a fiduciary adviser provided to such participant or beneficiary by an employer benefit plan.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Section 408(b) of such Act is amended further by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g)(1) The requirements of this subsection and the following subsections are met when the advice referred to in section 3(21)(A)(ii), provided to an employee benefit plan or a participant or beneficiary of an employee benefit plan by a fiduciary adviser, includes advice to plan sponsors or other persons who are fiduciaries of such benefit plan with respect to the provision of investment advice, in connection with the provision of investment advice referred to in such section, and

(ii) the terms of such arrangement require compliance by the fiduciary adviser with the requirements of this subsection.

(3) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to exempt a plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary from any requirement of this Act with respect to the prudent selection and periodic review of a fiduciary adviser with whom the plan sponsor or other person enters into an arrangement for the provision of investment advice referred to in such subsection (b)(1) or (ii). Such plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary has no duty under this part to monitor the specific advice given by the fiduciary adviser to any particular recipient of such advice.

(4) For purposes of this subsection and subsection (b)(1) of this Act the term ‘fiduciary adviser’ means, with respect to a plan or any acquisition of any property with respect to which the fiduciary adviser has any fiduciary responsibility under section 3(21)(A)(ii) or (iii) of such Act, any fiduciary of the plan for the purpose of determining whether the requirements of the preceding provisions of this section and of section 3(21)(A)(ii) are met. A transaction prohibited under section 406 shall not be considered to have occurred solely because the plans are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the 6-year period due to circumstances beyond the control of the fiduciary adviser."
the plan or to a participant or beneficiary and who is—

"(iii) an insurance company qualified to do business under the laws of a State,

"(v) an affiliate of a person described in any of clauses (i) through (iv), or

"(vi) an employee, agent, or registered representative of a person described in any of clauses (i) through (v).

"(B) 'Registered representative' means—

"(i) in the case of the initial provision of such advice, a person described in section 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(3)),

"(C) The term 'registered representative' means a person described in section 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(3)),

"(D) 'Registered representative or affiliate' means—

"(i) a person described in section 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(3)),

"(ii) an insurance company qualified to do business under the laws of a State,

"(iii) a bank or similar financial institution referred to in subsection (e)(3)(B), or

"(iv) an investment adviser referred to in subsection (e)(3)(B) provided to a plan or to a participant or beneficiary, the fiduciary adviser or affiliate) in connection with the provision of such advice, maintains the information described in subclauses (I) through (IV) of clause (i) in currently accurate form for availability, upon request and without charge, to the recipient of such advice,

"(V) the compensation received by the fiduciary adviser and affiliates thereof in connection with such acquisition or sale, in accordance with all applicable securities laws,

"(vi) a person registered as a broker or dealer under the laws of a State,

"(E) A FIDUCIARY ADVISER or FIDUCIARY ADVISOR and affiliates thereof (including any affiliate of a fiduciary adviser or an affiliate thereof or any employee, agent, or registered representative of a fiduciary adviser or affiliate) in connection with the provision of such investment advice.

"(F) REQUIREMENTS.—Subsection (f) of such Act—

"(I) all fees or other compensation relating to such advice that the fiduciary adviser or any affiliate thereof is to receive (including compensation provided by any third party) in connection with the provision of such advice or in connection with such acquisition or sale,

"(II) any material affiliation or contractual relationship of the fiduciary adviser or affiliates thereof in such security or other property,

"(III) any limitation placed on the scope of the investment advice to be provided by the fiduciary adviser with respect to any such sale or acquisition, and

"(IV) the types of services offered by the fiduciary adviser in connection with the provision of investment advice by the fiduciary adviser, other property by the fiduciary adviser to the plan, participant, or beneficiary, the fiduciary adviser provides to the recipient of the advice, at a time reasonably contemporaneous with the initial or any subsequent provision of advice described in paragraph (1) to the plan, participant, or beneficiary if, at any time during the provision of investment advice referred to in section 3(21)(A)(i)(II) or solely by reason of contracting for or otherwise arranging for the provision of the advice, if:

(1) the advice is provided by a fiduciary adviser pursuant to an arrangement between the plan sponsor or other fiduciary and the fiduciary adviser, and

(2) the arrangement require compliance by the fiduciary adviser with the requirements of this subsection, and

(3) the terms of the arrangement include a written acknowledgment by the fiduciary adviser that the fiduciary adviser is a fiduciary of the plan with respect to the provision of the advice.

(b) CONDUCT OBTAINING BY PRUDENT SELECTION OF ADVISOR AND PERIODIC REVIEW.—Nothing in subparagraph (A) shall be construed to preclude the use of plan assets to pay for reasonable expenses in providing investment advice referred to in section 3(21)(A)(ii).

(c) AVAILABILITY OF PLAN ASSETS FOR PAYMENT OF REASONABLE EXPENSES.—Such expenses shall be incurred only if, and to the extent that, the expenses are reasonable and are incurred in connection with the provision of the advice.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection and subsection (b)(4):

(1) A FIDUCIARY ADVISER.—The term ‘fiduciary adviser’ means a fiduciary (other than a fiduciary adviser) to the plan in connection with the provision of investment advice referred to in section 3(21)(A)(i)(II), or by reason of the provision of investment advice referred to in section 3(21)(A)(ii) a fiduciary with respect to the plan in connection with any sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property, or

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply with respect to advice referred to in subsection (d)(16) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 or section 4975(e)(3)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provided on or after January 1, 2002.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. After debate on the bill, as amended, be in order to consider the following amendment printed in part B of the report, if offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), or his designee, which shall be considered read, and shall be debatable for 60 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) each will control 30 minutes of debate on the bill, and the gentlemen from King (Mr. THOMAS) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT) each will control 20 minutes of debate on the bill.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER).

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H.R. 2269.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My colleagues, this week we found that for the first time in the Nation’s history, more than half of all American families have invested in the stock market. I think that is enormously significant. For years, certainly when I was growing up, we thought of the stock market as something only the wealthy cared about. And for the most part, it was. As late as 1982, fewer than 15 percent of all American households held stocks, bonds, or mutual funds.

Today, the working class and the investor class are one and the same.

It is these new entrants into the investment markets that H.R. 2269, the Retirement Security Advice Act, is meant to help. We have seen an expansion in the number of 401(k) plans and IRAs, defined contribution plans in which the employee decides how much to invest and how to invest. As we see from this chart next to us, more than 48 million Americans participate in defined contribution plans today. These plans offer great opportunities for investment, but they also carry risks.

The best way to maximize opportunities and to minimize risk is to have access to high-quality investment advice.
But access to advice has not kept pace with participation in these defined contribution plans. Every day, workers who are trying to figure out how to best invest their money go to their employers and ask for guidance. Sadly, current law cripples employers who might help them do it.

So, how did we get to this point? The 1974 Employee Retirement Income Security Act, enacted long before the advent of 401(k)s and other defined contribution plans, continues to mistakenly deny many employers the opportunity to provide their workers with investment advice benefits that could help them enhance their retirement savings.

We have heard from employers that they want to provide this service as a benefit to help retain skilled workers. We have heard from workers that they want quality advisers to guide investment decisions. The authors of ERISA never intended for millions of individuals to have to become investment experts. This point, we see on the chart next to me. Betty Shepard, the Human Resources administrator at Mohawk Industries Carpet Company in Kennesaw, Georgia, testified before our committee that, and I will quote "Without the fear that all of our employees may overreact to market fluctuations and listen to the commentary of family, friends or the media to make retirement planning decisions.

We know from survey after survey that a large majority of employees do not have access to quality investment guidance. In fact, as we see from this chart, only 16 percent of 401(k) participants have investment advice options available through their retirement plan, according to the Spectrum Group.

It is this investment advice gap that H.R. 2269 seeks to close, and it does it in several ways. First, it streamlines the employer’s duty in selecting and monitoring investment advisers. Employers will not be responsible for every piece of advice or every transaction, but when general problems arise, they must respond to them. Employers tell us this will give them the clarity guidance they need to offer quality investment advice to their employees as a benefit. The following chart summarizes how this bill changes current law.

Second, the bill maximizes competition in the investment advice market by allowing many of the most highly regarded investment firms to offer investment advice through employers. It will also protect workers by clearly requiring advisers to act at all times in the workers' best interest, and, if they have any possible conflicts of interest, to disclose them early and clearly.

If they breach that fiduciary duty, they will be subject to civil litigation and even criminal prosecution by the Labor Department. The Department of Labor, which has the responsibility for protecting workers, tells us that this structure gives it the authority necessary to protect workers from abuses. But competition is the best consumer protection available, and our bill creates a competitive marketplace that would be flexible and dynamic enough to respond to worker needs.

I think everyone in this House shares the twin ultimate goals of providing quality investment advice to workers who critically need it, and I urge Members today to support this bill. Employers, workers, both the Commerce and Treasury Secretaries, and the nation’s chief pension law enforcement official all support this legislation.

It takes a balanced approach for increasing worker access to advice while including safeguards to protect their investments without discouraging employers from offering any advice at all. I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON), who, as a Member of the Committee on Ways and Means and also as chairman of our Subcommittee on Employer-Employee Relations, has been instrumental in moving this bill through the two committees; and I want to thank him for the vital role he has played in this process.

Mr. Speaker, we must ensure that the American dream is within the grasp of rank-and-file workers, not just a select few. Access to quality investment advice is one way we can help rank-and-file workers maximize their retirement security.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the time originally allotted to the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) will be controlled by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON). There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill; and later in the debate the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and myself will offer a substitute which we believe is a more positive alternative.

I want to proceed by agreeing with the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEINER), the chairman, and my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON), the subcommittee chairman, that there is a serious problem that requires a remedy, and that problem is the fact that there are millions of minority Americans, who now hold interest in the equity markets, in the stock markets, and that many of these Americans do not receive adequate advice as to the options and strategies they should follow in investing their money.

There are too many people who get their investment advice from a neighbor, over the back yard fence, or through hearsay at an office gathering, or what have you, and we all agree that that is a situation that we want to change.

I also want to say that Chairman BOEINER and Chairman JOHNSON have been open and fair throughout this process, and I hope that we are able to continue working together as the legislation advances to the other body so that we may reach a mutually agreeable solution, and I thank the chairman for his openness and fairness throughout this process.

We think that this bill is the wrong way to give investment advice because we think it is flawed in four essential ways:

First of all, it is important to understand that this bill will make it possible for a person to receive investment advice about their pension assets, perhaps along with their home the most important assets a person owns, from someone who has a vested interest in that decision, in addition to or other than the interest of the pension. In other words, an employee of an insurance company or a bank or a financial services company can give advice to a person who has a vested interest in that decision. That is an important conflict of interest that we think is a very serious and troubling one.

First of all, its disclosure provisions do not adequately or contempora- neously disclose to the investor what the risks are. If there is to be such advice given, we believe, Mr. Speaker, that the person receiving the advice should know with specificity what the nature of a potential conflict is at the time he or she is making the decision. It is not good enough to receive that disclosure months or even years before one makes the decision. It is not good enough that that disclosure be confusing, presented in the verbiage of financial planning professionals and not the commonsense language most of us would be able to understand. Because the bill does not provide for adequate disclosure of potential or real conflicts by investment advisers, it is flawed.

Secondly, the bill does not provide for adequate qualifications of the investment advisers. If someone is going to be giving investment advice to American pensioners and American workers, that someone ought to be trained and qualified and accountable. There is a serious loophole in the underlying bill with regard to training and qualification. There are cases where employees of large banks, large insurance companies, large financial services companies do not have that kind of adequate training, as we recommend the bill, they would still be able to give such advice. We believe that only people who are duly licensed and trained and qualified should be giving such advice.

The third major flaw of this bill is that it does not take adequate measures to make the investor aware that there are alternatives, in many cases better alter- natives to receiving advice other
Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, the process is entirely voluntary for the employees. The workers have full control over their retirement; they decide who the investment advisor is. H.R. 2269 does not require any employer to contract with an investment advisor, and no employee is under any obligation to accept or follow any of the advice.

Furthermore, it requires financial service providers to fully disclose their fees and any potential conflict because investment advice may be offered only by fiduciary advisers, qualified entities that are already regulated under other Federal and State laws. The courts have consistently held that fiduciary duty is the highest form of financial responsibility to which an investment advisor can be held under the law.

This bill authorizes, contrary to what the gentleman tried to imply, the individual participant and the Department of Labor can seek both criminal and civil penalties for infractions of fiduciary duty. Comprehensive disclosure will inform participants of any financial interest advisors may have, the nature of the advisor’s affiliation, if any, and any limits that may be placed on the advisor’s ability.

Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to serve as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Employer-Employee Relations under the wing of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER), and I am also the only Member on both committees. I am pleased to report that both committees have passed this bill, and it was passed with bipartisan support. Now, more than ever, economic security goes hand in hand with retirement security. People are concerned when they watch their nest egg dwindle.

Russell Morgan, a defined contribution consultant at Watson Wyatt Worldwide in Dallas, a management consulting firm said recently that employees are having a tough time doing it on their own. For those who choose poorly, retirement may not be an option. That is just plain wrong.

It is obvious that people need investment advice and they need it now. This bill does just that. This measure removes the obstacles for employers to provide millions of workers access to professional investment advice. The bill requires financial service providers to fully disclose their fees and any potential conflicts, as I said before. This bill protects people from fly-by-night groups or people trying to make a quick buck. There are a number of safeguards to protect employers and employees.

One, under this bill, sound investment advice can only be offered by fiduciary advisors, qualified entities that are already fully regulated under other Federal and State laws. Courts have consistently held that fiduciary duty is the highest form of financial responsibility to which an investment advisor can be held under the law.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2269 is a bill that is sort of sitting out here, collecting dust, does not seem to be much interest. There are not many people over here, but this is a very important bill. American industry has moved away from fixed benefit pension systems and given people 401(k)s. People on this floor, we have 401(k)s, those of us who came after a certain date. We do not have a fixed benefit for all of our money. We have to put it in the stock market and see what happens.

In 1974, we set up a restriction that the advice investors got had to come from somebody that was disinterested. In the last few years, the stock market has gone crazy and everybody has been watching their 401(k) go up, up, up. Somebody must have gotten the idea that they were left out of the process, so they came with this piece of legislation.

This legislation eliminates workers’ protections. All of us want our workers to have people give them some advice, but we also know something is human nature. Human nature says if I am going to recommend something that is in my interest or something that is not in my interest, but might be good for workers, I have a tension. I have a conflict whether I recommend investors buy my product or whether investors buy the product over here that might be better for them.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have outlined today that are weaknesses in this bill justify a vote against the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, the process is entirely voluntary for the employees. The workers have full control over their retirement; they decide who the investment advisor is. H.R. 2269 does not require any employer to contract with an investment advisor, and no employee is under any obligation to accept or follow any of the advice.

Furthermore, it requires financial service providers to fully disclose their fees and any potential conflict because investment advice may be offered only by fiduciary advisers, qualified entities that are already regulated under other Federal and State laws. The courts have consistently held that fiduciary duty is the highest form of financial responsibility to which an investment advisor can be held under the law.

Two, this bill authorizes the individual plan participant and the Department of Labor to seek both criminal and civil penalties for infractions of fiduciary duty.

Three, comprehensive disclosure will inform participants of any financial interest advisors may have, the nature of the advisor’s affiliation, if any, with the available investment options, and any limits that may be placed on the advisor’s ability to provide advice, these types of disclosure obligations, wild fiduciary duties, have worked well in regulating the conduct of advisors under Federal security laws for more than 60 years in protecting innocent people from scams and fraud.

Both committees have worked hard to take a balanced approach to increasing access to advice while including safeguards to protect employers and employees.

With this bill, employees will continue to fend for themselves in today’s roller-coaster market when it comes to planning their retirement. Help people who want to help themselves and vote for this bill. It is the right thing to do.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2269 is a bill that is sort of sitting out here, collecting dust, does not seem to be much interest. There are not many people over here, but this is a very important bill. Mr. Speaker, I have outlined today that are weaknesses in this bill justify a vote against the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.
Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, the Members of this Congress have many reasons to support this legislation, and again I believe it illustrates a fundamental difference between the Republican and Democrat philosophy. We trust people to manage their own affairs and to use their intelligence. Nearly 42 million Americans have saved about $1.7 trillion in 401(k) plans, and under current law those people must either hire their own investment advisor, rely on an employer-sponsored advice or investment decisions on their own; whereas this legislation, the Retirement Security Advice Act, will give workers access to professional investment advice from the administrators of their own plan for the first time, as long as those advisors make a full disclosure concerning any potential conflict.

The bill also protects employees by holding the financial advisor, not the employer, personally liable and subject to other criminal penalties if they act on behalf of any interest other than that of the investment portfolio or those who contribute to it.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the best part of this legislation is that it is completely voluntary. The bill strengthens retirement security and gives workers access to expert investment advice when they need it. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 20 seconds. I would simply say that it is of very little comfort to a pensioner who has just lost everything in their 401(k) that the Department of Labor may someday institute some civil proceeding. People need to get their money back, and under this bill they do not.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), the ranking member of our full committee.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding time and I rise in opposition to this legislation.

It has been said time and again, and we all agree, that pension plan participants need to get additional advice on the investment of their money. We have made the point that for the new generation of workers, these pension plans are going to become an ever more important part of their future retirement and that we must take care with the investment of those funds by these employees to make sure that in fact that will be there when they decide to retire.

We also know that these funds, unlike their Social Security retirement, are subject to the ups and downs of the market. It will be important how they make these investment decisions because the timing of when they retire may not necessarily coincide with the good cycle in the market, as many people have found out over the last 2 years. We now hear more and more of our constituents telling us because of the loss of the markets, because of the placement of their investments, they are going to have to work a couple of more years, they are not going to be able to retire like they thought, or one of the wage earners in the family is going to have to go back to work. So these funds are subject to the volatility of the market, but that is understood. And it is also understood that we believe that over the long run people will be better off with the investment of these funds if they were a publicly held corporation would be invested in the stock of that corporation. Obviously in many instances the workers in that corporation lost much of their investment, some have been affected. They act on behalf of any interest other than that of the investment portfolio or those who contribute to it.

In many instances, we have seen over the last many years that basically the company put in their 401(k) funds if they were a publicly held corporation would be invested in the stock of that corporation. Obviously in many instances the workers in that corporation lost much of their investment, some have been affected. They act on behalf of any interest other than that of the investment portfolio or those who contribute to it.

The question then comes, the question of the type of advice that they can be given by their employer. We know that there were many, many employers over the last many years that basically made a decision that the 401(k) funds if they were a publicly held corporation would be invested in the stock of that corporation. Obviously in many instances the workers in that corporation lost much of their investment, some have been affected. They act on behalf of any interest other than that of the investment portfolio or those who contribute to it.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the best part of this legislation is that it is completely voluntary. The bill strengthens retirement security and gives workers access to expert investment advice when they need it. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

has been down for 7 or 8 months in a row; it has lost 70 to 80 percent of its value, and they are still telling them to be in there. Lo and behold, when you start to look at some of this, as the stock exchanges have, you find out that the people who are managing the money for the executives of the company, not necessarily do they hold a position in that company, but they hold another position with the executives in managing their portfolios. They do not want to upset them, so the negative is fairly mild. “Buy this stock. We’re on our way back.” The fact of the matter is people have been torched. That is subject to disciplinary actions again.

But in this legislation, that conflicted advice necessarily is not out of order here because they have a system of disclosure, and that disclosure is given once a year and then you are on your way. What you find out is the way the bill is written, under the law, that the company has the ability under any sense of fiduciary relationship to manage the money, to make a decision, buy this stock, make this investment, put it in this fund. Obviously, they should be making the decisions; but the way this legislation is written, once they do that, they are managing the money for the executives that they hold a position or they are in some way connected to, they start to look at some of this, as the stock exchanges have, you find out that the fiduciary relationship that we keep talking about does not really exist because the law is set up that the person whose funds it is, the employee, has to make a decision, buy this stock, make this investment, put it in this fund. Once you have made the decision, it is your money.

I just think that we have to understand now that the change in the marketplace, the interlocking relationship between a whole range of financial services, a whole range of financial entities requires that in fact we have the means by which the employee can get independent advice to make their decisions. But I do not believe that this legislation is written, once they do that, they have the ability in terms of fiduciary liability under any sense of fiduciary relationships under the law, because as we see under section 304 of the ERISA law: “No person who is otherwise a fiduciary shall be liable under this part of the law on account of any breach, which results from such participant’s, or beneficiary’s exercise of control.” Then you go to the law, and the law says the beneficiary must exercise control. At that point we are home free.

I just think that we have to understand now that the change in the marketplace, the interlocking relationship between a whole range of financial services, a whole range of financial entities requires that we change the laws. We have the means by which the employee can get independent advice to make their decisions. I do not believe that the law is written to reflect that.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY), a distinguished member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rangel); and then I think we would have a wire one way. I think that would do what we all recognize must be done in terms of giving employees greater options about the investment and more information about how to invest their money, but make sure that that is offered in a fair and open manner to the employees.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY), a distinguished member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Rangel) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNNER) for their leadership on this issue.

In this bill there are adequate disclosure requirements. This is a good bill. I have heard some interesting debate today about whether the person should have an investment in the firm or not; should they be giving advice. There are two schools of thought to that. I particularly like somebody whose money is riding along with mine investing in the market. If they are willing to put in their equity, I am a little comforted by the fact that maybe they are interested in the risk/reward.

I remember in Palm Beach County, we had a bank that sold a preferred note and on the front of the note, it was an 11 percent coupon. But huge disclosure: “This is a risky investment. This is not FDIC insured.”

What happened was the consumer, the constituent, decided because of greed that they were willing to gamble on the fact that maybe they are interested in the risk/reward.

I think many of us in puzzling with our Thrift Savings Plan options think, “This is hard, this is confusing,” and I don’t quite know if I am doing this in the right way. I will tell my colleagues, looking at my returns from the last little while, I am quite sure I am not doing it the right way. I could use more advice. An awful lot of people in the workforce today are thinking exactly the same thing. And so we need a strategy to get them more advice. I think the chairman’s strategy represents a constructive way of approaching it. The chairman and I are in strong agreement that as we try and get more advice to plan members, the problem today for plan participants of 401(k)s is that they have been given responsibility for the investment of their retirement funds without being given access to information to help them make informed decisions as they deal with something as important as trying to find optimal earnings on their retirement savings.

This legislation updates important remedies for those who invest. I have a 401(k) here in Congress and they send me advice and they tell me that over the last several years government funds have done such, 401(k) or equities should be the same. It is the question of whether I invest in equities or other fixed incomes. I can choose the more speculative route of equities. They make it clear that that is risk based. That advice is mine for the taking. If I do not want to use it and want to make whether I invest in equity bonds or other fixed incomes, I can choose.

This legislation updates the substitute by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Rangel); and then I think we would have a wire one way. I think that would do what we all recognize must be done in terms of giving employees greater options about the investment and more information about how to invest their money, but make sure that that is offered in a fair and open manner to the employees.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY).

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, I think the biggest problem today for plan participants of 401(k)s is that they have been given responsibility for the investment of their retirement funds without being given access to information to help them make informed decisions as they deal with something as important as trying to find optimal earnings on their retirement savings.

This is hard, this is confusing, I don’t quite know if I am doing this in the right way. I will tell my colleagues, looking at my returns from the last little while, I am quite sure I am not doing it the right way. I could use more advice. An awful lot of people in the workforce today are thinking exactly the same thing. And so we need a strategy to get them more advice. participants, we do not want to put people at risk of heavy sales practices that might be against their interest and have them investing in funds that are inappropriate for their situations.

Therefore, if we have the following standard, investment advisers will be subject to the same standards advanced by this legislation. I think you can actually get more advice and still protect the employee’s interest. You need to have the fiduciary standard apply so that the advisor must be providing advice solely for the interest of the plan participant or the employee. You have got to have some form of administrative recourse so that if the individual violates that advice, you can withdraw that individual’s license. You can take away their employment. You can put them out of business.

I used to be an insurance regulator. There is not a better policing mechanism than being able to put the guy out of business to make certain that they are providing advice that is appropriate and comports with the legal requirements.

Thirdly, you need to have fee disclosure. These things have cost loads. Increasingly, employers have shifted all of the investment risk to the employees loads of 401(k)s. Employees need to know what it is going to cost them as they look at these different options. Having a disclosure plan and in fact having a uniform disclosure format of fees will help the individual make sure they know what they are getting into as they make various investment options. And so with this legislation, subject to some further protection of workers managing their retirement income.

I do not think that the opponents of this legislation have reflected enough upon the disservice we do to those in the workforce by giving them the responsibility of investing their own money but depriving them of the information to do it. Defined contribution plans presently represent 90 percent of all retirement savings plans in the workforce. There are $1.5 trillion worth of investment in 401(k) plans. But still we have less than a quarter of employer-sponsored defined contribution plans.

I have held a number of round tables across North Dakota visiting with employees, visiting with employers, about how we can do a better job with facilitating retirement savings in this country. Information in terms of how to invest within those plans.

So with this legislation, subject to some further clarification in terms of how to invest within those plans.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, in reining my time, I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. AXNRESS) who has worked on this bill with me over the last several years. Although we may be in some slight disagreement today over how much protection is available in this bill, he has been a faithful partner as we have tried to reach some accord. The gentleman from North Dakota and I have also been working together to try to bring the protections in this bill into a proper balance. I want to thank him for bringing these pertinent modifications to my attention.

I support the changes that the gentleman has described which will further protect workers’ retirement income security. I support the creation of a model disclosure form as well as a requirement for advisors to disclose to plan participants that independent advice is available. In addition, I support the gentleman’s proposed changes to the qualification section which would ensure that only licensed individuals provide this advice; or in the case of banks, such advice be provided by trust or custody department employees who are individually accountable to State or Federal regulators.

During conference negotiations with the Senate, I will work with my colleagues from North Dakota and others to make these modifications for the further protection of workers managing their retirement income assets.

Mr. POMEROY. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ).

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, many Americans have little knowledge about investing their own retirement funds, stocks and bonds are very complicated instruments to which people pay little attention, especially when they have got other things to do all day long.

I know firsthand how complex these instruments can be because of my professional experience as an investment advisor.

In concept, the Retirement Security Advice Act is a great idea. We must find ways to ensure that all Americans participating in retirement savings plans make the best choices that will help them in the long run. All Americans should have access to licensed investment professionals who can advise...
Mr. BOEHNER, who has spent years on this issue, understanding that there is a need to change the FRISA laws, which are way out of date. As more and more people have moved into the defined contribution plans, the 401(k)s, the 403(b)s and the 457s, 90 percent of the rules now are in these defined contribution plans. The law has not changed to allow them to get the type of advice they need. Only 16 percent of workers out there in these plans are getting any advice, only 16 percent, yet 75 percent of them say in surveys, they are desperate to get that kind of advice.

So this is a very important change in the law that has to be made in order to allow people, those school teachers, those folks who are in retirement plans all over this country who need this kind of advice, to be able to make better decisions.

Recently this Congress took the lead on retirement security by passing legislation that dramatically expands the availability of defined contribution and defined benefit options. We allowed everybody to put more money away in their 401(k), for instance. We simplified all the rules now in terms of all of the pension plans, to help small businesses to get into this area.

We also allowed portability, to be able to move your plan from job to job and to be able to integrate those plans in a seamless way into one account. This is extremely important, and we think it will allow for millions, millions more Americans, to have the kind of retirement security they need and to have the kind of peace of mind in retirement that is necessary.

That was passed overwhelmingly by this House, and it is great legislation. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARSON) and I worked on that for years together.

But now we need to take the next big step, which is education. It is providing people with the means to understand the importance of retirement savings, first, on a broad sense, but also to understand the numbers in terms of what they can invest in if they are indeed going to be among those who benefit from this expansion that this Congress has pushed forward to get people into 401(k)s, 403(b)s, deferred compensation, retirement plans.

So this is the next logical step, and I commend the chairman and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER) for moving this forward, and the gentleman from California (Chairman THOMAS) for getting it to the floor today.

Now, we have heard some discussion here about what some people see as some of the deficiencies in this legislation. I would just remind people, read the legislation. If you are going to offer this advice, you have to be licensed or have to be a bank trust officer. That is in the legislation.

The gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY), who is going to support the bill on the floor today, who worked very hard on this legislation over the years and also helped us with all the portability provisions in the Portman-Cardin bill, has just indicated he is going to support it because the chairman has agreed to even some other slight modifications to ensure that you do not have the conflicts of interest that would otherwise occur if you did not have the kind of wise decisions that people who do offer this advice are qualified, and, finally, to be sure you have the kind of disclosure that is necessary.

This legislation increases that disclosure. As it has gone through the process in the Committee on Ways and Means, we were sure that there would be yearly disclosure, disclosure upon request, and disclosure if there is a material change. Again, this legislation is sorely needed. We wanted to encourage people to save more for retirement. One of the impediments now is the lack of good advice and the lack of good education. So I commend those on both sides of the aisle who have brought this legislation to the floor. Let us pass it today in a bipartisan way and send a strong message to the Senate that it is about time to help people out there be able to make the kind of wise decisions that they should be making for their own retirement.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair how much time the Committee on Education and the Workforce minority has remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LOUV). The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER) has 19 minutes remaining; the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) has 11½ minutes remaining; the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON) has 9 minutes remaining; and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDERMOTT) has 10½ minutes remaining.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 20 seconds. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN), my friend, just spoke about his representation that one needs to be a trust officer of a bank. I would respectfully disagree. Page 10 of the bill, line 12, indicates an employee, agent, or registered representative of a person describing an institution who satisfies the requirements is qualified. So if there are no local applicable banking or securities laws; a mere employee of a bank or an insurance company is qualified to give the advice.

So the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) was correct in our description.
Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Tierney), a committee member.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding me this time.

Like many Members, I represent people who have worked hard and whose entire hope for a secure retirement may well rest on the success of their 401(k): leather workers, jet engine assemblers, teachers, nurses, and other hard-working folk who may be bright and able, but many of whom have little experience in understanding investment fundamentals. They may lack the time or even the knowledge to work through a mountain of financial information. They need advice that is given by a provider that meets at least minimum standards, one who is qualified and one who is subject to the laws of ERISA's fiduciary standards, standards of trust, and one who is free from financial conflicts, free from divided loyalties; and they need an advisor who will put the worker's or investor's interests first, above profit.

Consider this following example: two mutual funds, each posting annual gains of 12 percent consistently for 30 years. In an expense fee of 1 percent, the other an expense fee of 2 percent. If you invested $10,000 in each fund, the fund with the lower expense fee at the end of 30 years would earn $229,000, but the other with the higher expense fee of 2 percent would have only $174,000. The mutual fund would pocket the difference of $55,000.

Obviously, there may be little incentive for the advisor connected to the mutual fund to highlight the significance of this conflict, of his or her potential gain in steering someone to the higher fee investment. Why should we allow such a conflict of interest to exist when it is not necessary?

Many firms already provide for investment education. Many plans now provide independent investment advice through financial institutions and other firms without conflict. Clarifying the responsibilities of the investment advisor would further increase advice as necessary.

Disclosure alone will not mitigate potential problems. The alternative bill in adding some protections and they are a choice of alternative advice that is not conflicted is a better idea, but the best idea remains a prohibition against conflicted advice. Congress, by clearing up the liability issue, can encourage independent, unbiased investment advice. That will better enable employers to improve their long-term retirement security, while minimizing the potential for employee dissatisfaction and possible litigation. This is what is in the best interests of the plan participants and, in fact, the best interests of the plan; and it certainly is in the best interests of the hard-working people in my district who need to know that their retirement is secure.

Mr. Speaker, this bill takes a balanced approach. I urge its passage. I thank all of the people involved in this.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Dooley).

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2269, the gentleman from California (Mr. Dooley).

Mr. DOOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Dooley).

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2269, and I appreciate all of the work that has gone in to drafting this piece of legislation.

In my estimation, this legislation is long overdue. What we are seeing is an increasing number of working people who are participating in plans that require a defined contribution. They need to have access to the information that allows them to make the decisions that are going to maximize the returns on their investments and their retirement accounts.

This is inevitable, as we are seeing more and more people who are coming to expect that they will have more choices, more choices in the consumer products that they are accessing, as well as more choices in the financial alternatives they have to meet their retirement needs.

I think this legislation takes a very balanced approach, and especially with some of the modifications that were agreed to by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Boehner) that were offered by the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. Pomeroy), and I think it also addresses some of the remaining concerns. It does provide for adequate disclosure. It does provide for an fiduciary responsibilities. It is not a bill that the costs are being a little bit condescending to a lot of the people who are participating in these plans when we are not giving them the credit for engaging in their own due diligence by trying to determine what the values are of the various instruments of investment that they are going to be considering.

Mr. Speaker, most people today are becoming increasingly aware that you have to consider the cost of a particular plan. Most people are becoming aware that there is increasing risk and volatility with different mechanisms that you could invest in.

I remember when Mr. Lieberman was here in his last lecture in this Chamber, I asked him why he had said it is interesting, when I would be making some visits to labor groups and, in particular, I went into a firehouse and met with some firemen there, and he said, their questions to me was not so much what was the challenge they face in their jobs, he says, their questions were all about their 401(k) plans and the investments that they were making. He said they had more information than most people that he had come in contact with on Wall Street.

Mr. Speaker, this bill takes a balanced approach. I urge its passage. I thank all of the people involved in this.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Oxley), the chairman of the Committee on Financial Services.

Mr. OXLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio, my good friend, for his leadership on this issue, and the gentleman from Texas.

This is an important piece of legislation that really represents bringing ERISA into the 21st century. Let us face it, ERISA was passed almost a quarter of a century ago; and times have changed. I am convinced, after looking at this piece of legislation, that the responsibilities of the investment advisors are fully covered and regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and by various State regulations. I think nobody needs to fear that these folks will not be regulated. They have been regulated over the years and will continue to be so to make sure that the investors are protected.

I was reminded of a story the gentleman from California raised about the visit to the firehouse by Senator Lieberman. I had a similar situation in my office last year where I had a young worker from my congressional district who had come in to talk to me. He was a member of the machinist
Mr. LAFALCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 2269. I was listening to the distinguished chairman of the House Committee on Financial Services just now, and I have the honor of serving as the ranking member. I guess we have heard different things at the committee hearings and drawn different conclusions.

I heard about the tremendous conflicts of interest that existed within securities firms. Absolutely outrageous, individual investors participating within IPOs and then giving analyst advice concerning those IPOs. That is just one small example.

I heard testimony that in the year 2000, of all of the recommendations that were given regarding stocks, 1 percent were sell recommendations, 1 percent in the year 2000.

I heard testimony that talked about earnings management or earnings manipulation, earnings manipulation on the part of the chief financial officers and the chief executive officers of major corporations, Fortune 500 companies; earnings management, earnings manipulation by the audit committees of the board of directors, all, of course, with stock options and a vested interest in what the earnings were. And earnings management and earnings manipulation on the part of the accounting firms who often had a conflict of interest also.

Mr. Speaker, disclosure does not do the trick. Disclosure does not protect the investor. In a day when we have converted from primarily defined benefit plans to overwhelmingly defined contribution plans, the need for a strong prophylactic ERISA is greater than ever. We eviscerate those protections within ERISA and we say, well, let us disclose the conflicts. That is grossly inadequate.

Surely it would be nice to come up with better investment advice for the participants within pension plans, but we also need to protect against conflicts. The bill does not do that. The alternative does. Maybe that is why the representatives of the employees in the 401(k) plans, and some other groups, the Consumer Federation of America, etc. et cetera, say support the substitute, but reject the bill that has been reported out of committee.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON), a subcommittee chairman over in our committee.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise today in support of H.R. 2269, the Retirement Security Service Act. I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON), the subcommittee chairman, for bringing this legislation to the floor for our consideration.

Many workers might not know it, but there is an outdated provision within a 27-year-old Federal law that unintentionally prohibits their employers from providing access to high-quality investment advice.

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act, also known as ERISA, was written in 1974 at a time when no one had heard of 401(k) plans and no one ever imagined that so many people would participate in the stock market like they do today.

Under ERISA, the mutual funds, banks, and insurance companies that administer 401(k)s can only provide general investment education directly to participants in those plans. They are prohibited from providing advice about a person’s specific investments.

Since last year when the market began to slide and the economy began showing signs of weakness, many workers have watched their retirement savings dwindle. People need sound advice, especially during these times, to maximize their investment opportunities by making it possible for workers to be able to get the same kind of advice that wealthy individuals are able to pay for out of pocket.

H.R. 2269 would do just that. This legislation modernizes ERISA to let employees give their employees access to high-quality, tailored investment advice, as long as financial advisors fully disclose their fees and any potential conflicts.

I have heard some scare talk here about, we need to protect people from charlatans or from people who would take advantage of them. But I think that we need to give the people credit for understanding and being able to separate advice. The important thing is that they should be able to get it.

This bill retains important safeguards and includes new protections to ensure that participants receive advice that is solely in their best interests. The measure requires that advice be given only by fiduciary advisors which are qualified, fully regulated entities, like insurance companies and banks, that would be held liable for any failure to act solely in the interests of the worker.

Moreover, the whole process is completely voluntary, because the bill does not require any employer to contract with investment advisers, and no employer will be obligated to accept any advice.

As Members can see, Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2269 provides assistance for hard-working Americans so that they can wisely plan their retirement years. Therefore, I strongly urge all my colleagues to support this much-needed legislation.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK), a member of our committee.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise today, Mr. Speaker, to urge a no vote on H.R. 2269, the Retirement Security Act of 2001.

When Congress enacted the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, known as ERISA, one of its strong goals was to protect employee pension benefits, which it has done tenaciously since enactment.

In the ensuing 27 years, employees have seen significant changes to their pension plans. Many companies no longer offer predefined benefit plans, and many workers place their retirement funds in stock markets using 401(k) and other similar investment plans.

According to the Investment Company Institute, over 42 million people use 401(k)s and other similar plans.

Last year, the total value of these plans reached $2.6 trillion. These plans offer higher returns and, of course, higher risks.

In today’s market, the value of one’s investments could change drastically in the course of a year or even 1 day. With the highly volatile stock market, no investments know the need for providing good, sound, reliable advice to invest one’s retirement funds. We must therefore ensure that the underlying principles behind ERISA remain intact. We must protect the interests of workers and beneficiaries.

H.R. 2269 fails to provide the basic protections that all workers deserve. The bill allows unqualified individuals to provide investment advice. We should make advisers obtain Federal and State licenses or other qualified certifications. They should not be connected in any way to the investment industry or investment companies who could benefit from the advice given.
Advisors often receive financial rewards for recommending certain investments over others, but H.R. 2269 does not require advisors to clearly disclose their incentives for making a particular recommendation. Advisors can bury disclosures in a mound of paperwork that the average investor will not read or understand. Advisors who will make money on giving advice should clearly and continually warn workers of any conflicts of interest.

Presentments of the bill say, well, the advice is free. This is not true. Each investment that the worker makes will pay from 1 to 1.5 percent of the money invested to the broker. There is big money at stake involved in the advice given and the advice taken. The bill allows investment companies to make billions of dollars every year.

Advisors entangled with payoffs, depending upon the advice given to the worker, should be absolutely forbidden in the workplace.

The bill does not provide any remedy or penalties for tainted advice. I urge this House to reject this legislation.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT), a member of our committee.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, when a person has a cold, he can go to his local drugstore and choose dozens of different cold remedies. When he is not sure which medicine is appropriate, there is a pharmacist available who can provide expert advice and help him to make the best selection.

Yet, when it comes to 401(k) plans in the workplace, Congress, in effect, has gagged the pharmacist. Employers pay good money to provide an excellent benefit to their employees, 401(k) plans run by professionals, yet our 27-year-old law, ERISA, effectively silences those investment professionals, denying employees a major part of the benefit their employer has intended for them.

Now, more than ever, Americans investing their retirement income in 401(k) plans need access to critical investment advice that will help them achieve their financial goals. The Retirement Security Advice Act of 2001 updates our laws so workers have access to high-quality professional investment advice. These advisors will be required to fully disclose their fees and any conflicts of interest. This legislation also establishes important safeguards to ensure that investors’ goals are met.

Mr. Speaker, let us stop gagging the pharmacist or silencing the investment advisor. Let us make it easier for the 42 million Americans who participate in 401(k) plans to choose among investments. Let us pass H.R. 2269, which will increase employee participation and enable more workers to live out their American retirement.

I urge my colleagues to support the Retirement Security Advice Act of 2001.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT), a member of our committee.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Retirement Security Advice Act of 2001. We need to be sure that the law allows families to have a wide range of investment advice as they plan for their retirement. As we do so, we need to ensure that there are adequate protections for these workers.

Under the bill, there are protections. The advisors are subject to a fiduciary duty and will be personally liable for failure to act solely in the interest of the worker. Under the bill, the Labor Department is authorized to seek both criminal and civil penalties if an advisor breaches that responsibility.

The language also contains provisions to ensure that there is full disclosure in plain language to the workers of fees and conflicts of interest. These disclosures and fiduciary protections are significantly stronger than the average investor has today.

Now, the bill is not perfect. I believe that we may strengthen the bill by building on the protections in current law that employees need and must have and must be able to depend on.

The Andrews substitute is a win-win for employees, and I urge my colleagues to vote against H.R. 2269 unless the substitute is included.
turned out to be more like two, and so we go.

We have now spent all the Social Security money. That is the advice we are giving to the American people, and then we say, we want to turn you over to these major companies, they will take care of you. We have taken away their medical security. We have not even put the money that they contributed into the Medicare program. If we were under ERISA, we would be before the courts for the way we are doing this, we are doing the investments of our constituents.

We got so wild around here with our tax cuts and all the problems after they figured it all out, and said, well, we need an economic stimulus bill. So we come out here with a nonsense bill, give it another $161 billion off to major companies in this country. This is our advice to America. This is what we think and then this bill is the follow-on.

That nonsense of the stimulus package has run into the ditch over in the Senate. I never thought I would count on another body to save us from ourselves. I know they are going to save us from this bill ultimately. This really looks like another bill of a fund-raising bill, and when I stand here and think about it and listen to all this talk, I cannot help thinking about my grandfather.

He was an Irish immigrant, went to the second grade. He could read the newspaper a little bit and he could sign his name. That was the basis of his education. He was a hod carrier down in central Illinois, and in the 1920s, there was a scam in this country. A guy named Samuel Insull was selling in central Illinois, and in the 1920s, he said to her, if this is such a good idea, why are those boys from Chicago and the whole rage in this country, and you are suddenly faced with this question of what should I do with my money for when I get old and somebody comes to you who has a conflict of interest about it, what do you do at that point? You say to your employer, give me another advisor.

The bill does not allow that. It does not say you can give me this guy with the vested interest, but I would also add to that sort of on my side, maybe, and maybe I can get back at him if he gives me bad advice. We say to the workers of this country, we are going to take this away from you at the very time when we are acting financially as irresponsible as we could be.

We are the Congress. If it was run by the House of Representatives, we would be borrowing money right now to give back to the companies of this country $25 billion they paid back in 1986. That is the kind of financial advice we are giving this country. We are saying, well, we are going to stimulate things, we are going to give money back to IBM and Ford and all those companies while they are laying people off. We give them $15 billion to the airline industry, because we do not want them to get in trouble, right, and all those investment people are out there selling those stocks, right, keep buying that American Airlines and United Airlines and all those stocks.

So we give them $15 billion. We are going to stabilize it. We do not give one single penny to the workers for their health insurance or for their unemployment, and they lay off 100,000 people in the airline industry, and Boeing lays off 30,000 because when the airline industry goes down, so does Boeing go down and everybody else; but they have still got their 401(k), and we say, well, we are going to give you an advisor to tell you what to do with your money, and that is business.

I say this is bad legislation. It looks to me like a fund-raising piece, not a real serious effort to take care of people's investments. If the amendments that were put in here in the Senate were accepted, all of us would be in favor of it. We think people ought to have advice, but it has got to be advice that is not conflicted, that does not have its own pocket interest, and I think that we will have a substitute offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Andrews) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Rangel) which will fix this bill, but I urge people to vote against the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

There is a broad consensus that workers need access to expert investment advice. I did not know we were going to talk about tax relief and other subjects, but there are only 16 percent of 401(k) participants that have access to investment advice through their retirement plans, and only 17 percent bearing substantial investment advice costs. Seventy-five percent of full-time employees surveyed said they would take advantage of individualized advice service if their employers offered it, and we have been hearing about banks. Banks are regularly examined. Examinations occur frequently. Bank tellers cannot provide investment advice. Bank trust department have a reputation of trust investment, and they have been managing trusts for over two centuries. Banks manage over $2 trillion in employment benefit trusts, and the bank has strong capital, which provides added protection for funds being invested. I doubt there is a bank in this country that would allow their trust department to make bad advice because the bank would be out of business.

Recent market volatility tells us investment decisions must be based on solid and experienced judgment. Yet, as of today, we continue to deny our employees the same tools that corporations and unions are allowed to use in making sound investment decisions for their defined benefit plans. This bill changes that. This measure ends investment ignorance and provides workers full control over their investment decisions. It repeals an outdated 1974 law that denies millions of Americans access to investment advice that would help them make the most of their retirement savings.

No longer will wealthy individuals be the only ones to enjoy the luxury of being able to afford their own professional investment advice. Now low and middle income Americans will have the same choice.

Since individuals bear the risk of stock market volatility in their 401(k) accounts, they are the ones who must have advice on how to better diversify their portfolios so they are financially prepared for retirement.

H.R. 2269 will permit employers to offer investment advice as an employee benefit. This legislation does not require any employer to contract with an investment advisor, and no employee is under any obligation to accept or follow any advice.

This bill is good policy for today's workers and tomorrow's retirees. That is why the bill has been endorsed by the Department of Labor, the Department of Treasury and the Department of Commerce.

In testifying before my subcommittee, Department of Labor Assistant Secretary Ann Combs praised the bill, and said, "We believe the bill creates a strong protective framework for the provision of investment advice to participants. Both the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Education and the Workforce have worked hard to take a balanced approach for increasing worker access to advice while including safeguards to protect employees' interests."

I urge Members to join all of us in supporting H.R. 2269. Without it, millions of Americans will be in the dark in protecting and growing their retirement nest egg.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

November 15, 2001
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill. People need investment advice, that is true, but it is also true they are getting it from the independent agents that are out there in increasingly high numbers.

Just 2 years ago only 17 percent of employers were offering investment advice options; today it is up to 31 percent, nearly double, and it is growing. When will the regulators for investment advice and the advice is being given by a conflicted advisor, that conflict ought to be disclosed at the time of the decision. That does not happen under this bill.

The advisor ought to be completely qualified and accountable. That does not happen under this bill. The person receiving the advice ought to know that he or she has other independent choices. That does not happen under this bill. And if the advice that is given is bad and hurts the investor, there ought to be adequate remedies to make that investor whole. That does not happen under this bill.

For all of these reasons, and the others stated by my colleagues, I would urge a vote against the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I think all of us agree that we want to do everything possible to improve the retirement security of all American workers. And I think, based on what we have heard here today, all of the Members believe that providing investment advice for those employees who have self-directed pension accounts is vital.

In 1974, when ERISA was enacted, 95 percent of pension assets were in defined benefit programs. And no one in 1974 with the enactment of ERISA ever envisioned that we would have the number of self-directed accounts, such as 401(k) accounts, and the amount of participation and the huge shift in assets away from defined benefit plans towards defined contribution plans.

What has done is leave us in a situation today, where millions of American workers have trillions of dollars in their retirement savings, that basically they are left to their own ability to get an investment advisor, because under the law as written in 1974, we have so protected and insulated American workers that there is really no place they can turn for advice. And so where do they turn for advice? They turn to Bob at the coffee shop.

So what we are trying to do here in this bill today is to provide a mechanism for providing specific investment advice to employees while providing safeguards to protect their retirement security. We believe that there has to be a balance between the offering of the advice and the amount of protections.

Is there risk involved in this bill? Yes, there is. Do we think American workers are smart enough and bright enough to make these decisions? Yes, they are.

It is a completely voluntary program for employers and employees. Once the advice is given within the safeguards that will be outlined in this bill, the employee has no inhibitions about making their own decisions about how they want to allocate their assets and their needs based on their own retirement.

The problem that we have with the additional safeguards that are being proposed here is that they will so restrict the ability to get advice that we will get what we have today and that is no advice at all. Now, if our goal truly is to provide more investment advice for American workers, we have to strike a balance, a balance that will work for employers and those who would be the advice.

Now, we are hearing an awful lot of criticism about people who sell products and the fact that under this bill they would be able to give advice after they have disclosed any potential conflicts, after they have disclosed their fees, and with other protections.

Now, what they really want to do is, they want to eliminate this sector from being able to give advice. These are the most respected investment firms in the country, with the best track record of investment advice in the country, that we would want to shove out of this market and prevent these people from giving the expertise and advice to the American workers. I just do not think that that makes any sense in the marketplace we are in. And so I think if we all step back and look at where we are trying to go, I have worked with Members on both sides of the aisle trying to craft a proper set of balances.

And in the debate today, the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. Pom- enoy) and I came to an agreement to add additional protections to this bill that I do think will protect American workers more without hindering the ability of employers or their agents to provide the kind of investment advice that American workers so sorely need and want today.

So I would ask my colleagues, as we continue to move this process along, that we come together to try to find the right balance, because, as we know, the action in the House today will not be the end of the process. It is actually the beginning of the process. This bill will have to go through the Senate, and I am confident that we will be able to continue to move this in a strong bipartisan manner.

I ask all of my colleagues today to support the underlying bill and do what we can to help American workers increase their retirement security.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I oppose H.R. 2269, the falsely named Retirement Security Act of 2001, introduced by Representative BOEHRER. The bill not only neglects to provide any type of security for workers’ retirement, but it actually puts worker retirement plans at greater risk for fraudulent activity.

Workers need independent financial advice, not advice plagued by self-interest. Current proposals to ensure that anyone or administer assets of a pension plan cannot engage in any transaction under the plan in which they have a financial or other conflict of interest. These rules, known as the prohibited transaction rules, are designed to ensure that the best interest of the participant is maintained. When these rules are eliminated, as H.R. 2269 calls for, the integrity of the pension system is threatened by fraud and abuse.

For example, one of our nation’s premier investment companies, Prudential, in 1996, agreed to pay at least $410 million in restitution and fines to compensate investors who suffered losses to fraud as far back as 1980.

Many Wall Street brokerage firms sold limited partnerships in the 1980’s to customers seeking tax deductions and the potential for profit through limited partnerships. These investments were typically suitable only for wealthy investors because of their speculative nature. Prudential made nearly $1 billion in commissions and fees from the sale of its partnerships. In addition to the limited partnership scams, widespread fraud violations were made at various Prudential branches across the country. These practices included:

- Lying about risk—Selling risky real estate and energy partnerships to pension funds, and other individual investors who were told their investments were safe.
- Lying about return—Publishing promotional material that misled investors about the return they could expect on their money.

Turning a blind eye to a subsidiary—inadequately supervising the subsidiary that advertised and sold the partnerships.

Turning a blind eye to employees—inadequately supervising employees in nine branch offices, whose fraudulent practices resulted in losses of hundreds of thousands of dollars from registered customers.

Churning—Trading excessively without authorization in clients’ accounts to increase brokers’ commissions.

The settlement affected 8 million investors in every state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. Many of the investors were elderly and faced the risk of not being compensated in their lifetime.

Workers should have access to investment advice they can be certain is neither influenced by corporate profit motives or driven by brokers’ need to sell unprofitable financial products. H.R. 2269 undermines that certainty by permitting advisors to provide plan participants with self-interested advice regarding the investment options under the plan, as well as asset allocation. Under H.R. 2269, both financially sophisticated and financially inexperienced workers would lose access to independent investment advice under their 401(k) plans. Clearly, this provides less security than employees currently receive and has the potential for fraudulent activity that would be virtually impossible to remedy under our judicial system.

The fraudulent Prudential activity illustrates the need for unbiased, independent investment advice for employees. We cannot allow... the concern that they, the employer, will ultimately be held responsible for the specific advice provided. The bill before the House says that if the employer exercises prudence in selecting the adviser, he or she will not be subject to liability for the advice provided. This is a good, sensible reform, and I support it.

The second issue addressed by the bill poses a different problem within ERISA, dealing with "prohibited transactions." ERISA contains important protections that prevent investment advisers from advising plan participants to invest in products where the adviser has a conflict of interest. It is a sensible protection, and one that should only be lifted with great care.

The bill before us does not, in my judgment, provide satisfactory protections for workers faced with investment advisers providing conflicted advice. The bill will require advisers to disclose that they are in a position to make money on the advice they are offering. That is an important provision, and the disclosure provisions were strengthened by the amendment presented by the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

But disclosure, by itself, is not enough. Workers need to know more than that the person sitting in front of them will make money if their advice is followed. They need to know the range of investment options. They need to know the fees that are charged for different types of investments, and how those fees will affect their long-term returns.

In short, this bill does not provide any assurance or requirement that workers will have the information they need to make prudent investment decisions. On the other hand, at the end of paragraph (14), by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (14), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (15) and inserting "or"; and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(15) any transaction described in subsection (f) of this section in connection with the provision of investment advice described in subsection (e)(3)(B), in any case in which—

"(A) the plan provides for individual accounts and permits a participant or beneficiary of the plan to exercise control over assets in his or her account,

"(B) the advice is qualified investment advice provided to a participant or beneficiary of the plan by a fiduciary adviser in connection with any sale, acquisition, or holding of a security or other property for purposes of investment of plan assets, and

"(C) the requirements of subsection (f) of this section are met in connection with each instance of the provision of the advice.".

Under current law, employers are discouraged from providing this service because employers may be held liable for specific advice that is provided to their employees. H.R. 2269 removes the barrier to employers contracting with advice providers and their workers by clarifying that employers are not responsible for the individual advice of professional advisers to individual participants.

Under this legislation, investment advice may only be offered by "fiduciary advisers"—qualified entities that are already fully regulated under other federal and state laws, such as registered investment advisers, registered broker dealers, insurance companies, and banks. Existing federal and state laws that regulate individual industries will continue to apply. Moreover, employers will remain responsible under ERISA fiduciary rules for the prudent selection and periodic review of any investment advice.

The bill does two things to make it more possible for workers to get investment advice. First, it provides liability relief for employers. Currently, surveys of employers tell us that a major impediment to employers retaining investment advice firms for their employees is the concern that they, the employer, will ultimately be held responsible for the specific advice that is provided to their employees. This makes it less appealing for employed to provide their workers with access to professional investment advice as long as the investment advisers fully disclose their fees and any potential conflicts. At the same time, it establishes significant safeguards to ensure that these workers receive advice that is solely in their best interests.
"(A) ALLOWABLE TRANSACTIONS.—The transactions described in this subsection, in connection with the provision of investment advice by a fiduciary adviser, are the following:

(i) the provision of the advice to the participant or beneficiary;

(ii) the sale, acquisition, or holding of a security or other property (including any lending of money or other extension of credit associated with the sale, acquisition, or holding of a security or other property) pursuant to the advice; or

(iii) the direct or indirect receipt of fees or other compensation by the fiduciary adviser with respect to the plan in connection with the provision of the advice.

(B) EXEMPTION FROM PROHIBITED TRANSACTIONS WITH RESPECT TO PROVISION OF INVESTMENT ADVICE.—The requirements of this subparagraph (B) (including no additional charge to the participant or beneficiary, as apply with respect to the security or other property) are the following:

(i) WRITTEN OR ELECTRONIC DISCLOSURES.—At a time contemporaneous with the provision of the advice to the participant or beneficiary, the fiduciary adviser shall provide to the participant or beneficiary a written (or by electronic means) notice (including no additional charge to the participant or beneficiary) that the advice is provided by the fiduciary adviser to the participant. Such notice shall be deemed not to have been met in connection with the provision of the advice unless it is in writing (or by electronic means) and includes (a) a clear and conspicuous notification, written (or by electronic means) in a manner to be reasonably understood by the average plan participant pursuant to regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary (including mathematical examples), of the following:

(A) INTERESTS HELD BY THE FIDUCIARY ADVISER.—Any interest of the fiduciary adviser in, or any affiliation or contractual relationship with the fiduciary adviser (or affiliates thereof) with any third party having an interest in, the security or other property.

(B) RELATED FEES OR COMPENSATION IN CONNECTION WITH THE PROVISION OF THE ADVICE.—All fees or other compensation relating to the advice (including fees or other compensation paid to the fiduciary adviser or any affiliate thereof with respect to the security or other property with respect to which the advice is provided) that the fiduciary adviser or any affiliate thereof (including no additional charge to the participant or beneficiary) receives in connection with the provision of the advice or in connection with the solicitation or holding of the security or other property.

(C) ONGOING FEES OR COMPENSATION IN CONNECTION WITH THE SECURITY OR OTHER PROPERTY INVOLED.—All fees or other compensation relating to the advice (including fees or other compensation paid to the fiduciary adviser or any affiliate thereof) that the fiduciary adviser (or any affiliate thereof) is to receive, on an ongoing basis, in connection with any security or other property with respect to which the advice is provided, without charge, to the recipient of the advice.

(D) VARIOUS SERVICES GENERALLY OFFERED.—The services of services offered by the fiduciary adviser in connection with the provision of investment advice by the fiduciary adviser.

(E) FIDUCIARY STATUS OF THE FIDUCIARY ADVISER.—That the fiduciary adviser is a fiduciary of the plan.

(F) DISCLOSURE BY FIDUCIARY ADVISER IN ACCORDANCE WITH APPLICABLE SECURITIES LAWS.—The fiduciary adviser shall provide appropriate disclosure, in connection with the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property, in accordance with all applicable federal and state securities laws.

(G) DUTY OF CONFLICTED FIDUCIARY ADVISER TO PROVIDE FOR ALTERNATIVE INVESTMENT ADVICE.—If a fiduciary adviser has an interest in, the security or other property with respect to which the advice is provided, the fiduciary adviser shall provide appropriate disclosure as required under subparagraph (F) and, in addition, shall provide the option of an alternative investment adviser at no additional charge to the participant or beneficiary, as apply with respect to the security or other property.

(H) FIDUCIARY ADVISER DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph and subsection (d)(16), 'fiduciary adviser' means, with respect to a plan, a person who—

(i) is a fiduciary of the plan by reason of any provision of qualified investment advice with respect to the plan in connection with the provision of investment advice by such person to a participant or beneficiary;

(ii) meets the qualifications of clause (ii), and

(iii) meets the additional requirements of clause (iii).

(I) QUALIFICATIONS.—A person meets the qualifications of this clause (I) if—

(i) is registered as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80b–1 et seq.), or

(ii) if not registered as an investment adviser under such Act by reason of section 203(a)(1) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 80b–3a(a)(1)), is registered under the laws of the State in which the fiduciary adviser is located, maintains its principal office and place of business, and, at the time the fiduciary last filed the registration form most recently filed by the fiduciary with the appropriate authority in order to maintain the fiduciary's registration under the laws of such State, also filed a copy of such form with the Secretary;

(iii) is registered as a broker or dealer under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.), or

(iv) is a bank or similar financial institution referred to in section 203(b)(2)(A) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 80b–3(b)(2)(A)).
(II) a security or other property for purposes of investment of plan assets, and

(iii) the sale, acquisition, or holding of a security or other property with respect to which the fiduciary advice is provided by the fiduciary adviser pursuant to an arrangement between the plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary of the plan and the fiduciary adviser of qualified investment advice, and

(iv) the terms of the arrangement require compliance by the fiduciary adviser with the requirements of this subsection.

(B) Disclosure by fiduciary adviser in accordance with applicable securities laws.—The fiduciary adviser shall provide appropriate disclosure, in connection with the provision of qualified investment advice, of the ownership or control of the security or other property, in accordance with all applicable securities laws.

(C) Transaction occurring solely at direction of recipient of plan advice.—Any transaction occurring solely at the direction of the recipient of plan advice, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property shall occur solely at the direction of the recipient of the advice.

(D) Reasonable compensation.—The compensation received by the fiduciary adviser and affiliates thereof in connection with the provision of qualified investment advice, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property shall be reasonable.

(E) Arm’s length transaction.—The types of services offered by the fiduciary adviser with respect to the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property shall be at least as favorable to the plan as an arm’s length transaction would be.

(2) Continued availability of information for at least 1 year.—The requirements of paragraph (1)(A) shall be deemed not to have been met in connection with the initial disclosure referred to in paragraph (A) unless the information described in paragraph (A) is made available to the plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary of the plan for at least 1 year following the provision of the advice in connection with the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property.

(3) Model disclosure form.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations establishing a model disclosure form, the contents of which shall be prescribed by the Secretary (including mathematical examples), of the following:

(B) Fees or other compensation relating to the advice.—All fees or other compensation paid or payable to the fiduciary adviser (or any affiliate thereof) in connection with the provision of the advice, the terms of the arrangement requiring the payment of such fees or other compensation, and the nature or extent of the services performed in connection with the receipt of such fees or other compensation.

(C) Contingent fees or compensation in connection with the security or property involved.—All fees or other compensation paid or payable to the fiduciary adviser (or any affiliate thereof) in connection with the provision of the advice with respect to which such fees or other compensation were paid or payable.

(D) Reasonable compensation.—The compensation received by the fiduciary adviser pursuant to an arrangement between the plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary of the plan and the fiduciary adviser of qualified investment advice, and

(E) Arm’s length transaction.—The types of services offered by the fiduciary adviser with respect to the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property shall be at least as favorable to the plan as an arm’s length transaction would be.

(2) Continued availability of information for at least 1 year.—The requirements of paragraph (1)(A) shall be deemed not to have been met in connection with the initial disclosure referred to in paragraph (A) unless the information described in paragraph (A) is made available to the plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary of the plan for at least 1 year following the provision of the advice in connection with the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property.

(3) Model disclosure form.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations establishing a model disclosure form, the contents of which shall be prescribed by the Secretary (including mathematical examples), of the following:

(A) Interests held by the fiduciary adviser.—Any interest of the fiduciary adviser in, or any affiliation or contractual relationship of the fiduciary adviser (or affiliates thereof) with any third party having an interest in, the security or other property.

(B) Fees or other compensation relating to the advice.—All fees or other compensation paid or payable to the fiduciary adviser (or any affiliate thereof) in connection with the provision of the advice, the terms of the arrangement requiring the payment of such fees or other compensation, and the nature or extent of the services performed in connection with the receipt of such fees or other compensation.

(C) Contingent fees or compensation in connection with the security or property involved.—All fees or other compensation paid or payable to the fiduciary adviser (or any affiliate thereof) in connection with the provision of the advice with respect to which such fees or other compensation were paid or payable.

(D) Reasonable compensation.—The compensation received by the fiduciary adviser pursuant to an arrangement between the plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary of the plan and the fiduciary adviser of qualified investment advice, and

(E) Arm’s length transaction.—The types of services offered by the fiduciary adviser with respect to the sale, acquisition, or holding of the security or other property shall be at least as favorable to the plan as an arm’s length transaction would be.

(A) Reliance on contractual arrangement.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to exempt a plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary from any requirement of this part for the prudent selection and monitoring of fiduciary advisers with whom the plan sponsor or other person enters into an arrangement for the provision of qualified investment advice.
provision of qualified investment advice. The plan sponsor or other person who is a fiduciary shall not be liable under this part with respect to the specific qualified investment advice that was provided by the fiduciary adviser to any particular recipient of the advice. Pursuant to regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary, the fiduciary adviser shall provide disclosures to the plan sponsor to enable the plan sponsor to fulfill its fiduciary responsibilities under this part. In connection with the provision of the advice, and with the exception of the alternative investment advice provided pursuant to this paragraph by an alternative investment adviser as defined in section 3(a)(18) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(18)) (substituting such entity for the broker or dealer referred to in such section) or a person described in section 3(a)(18) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(18)) (substituting such entity for the investment adviser referred to in such section), (c) Enforceability—

(1) Liability for breach.—

(A) Liability in connection with individual account plans.—Section 409 of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1104) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) In any case in which the provision by the fiduciary adviser of investment advice to a participant or beneficiary regarding any security or other property consists of a breach described in subsection (a), the fiduciary adviser shall be personally liable to make good to the individual account of the participant or beneficiary any losses to the individual account resulting from the breach, and to restore to the individual account any profits of the fiduciary adviser which have been made through use of assets of the individual account by—

"(i) the fiduciary adviser; or

"(B) any other party with respect to whom a material affiliation or contractual relationship of the fiduciary adviser resulted in—

"(i) the provision of qualified investment advice to a participant or beneficiary or

"(ii) a violation of section 404(a)(1) in connection with the provision of any qualified investment advice—

"(A) if the participant or beneficiary shows that the fiduciary adviser had any interest in, or had any affiliation or contractual relationship with a third party having an interest in, the security or other property, there shall be a presumption (applied to the preponderance of the evidence) that the fiduciary adviser failed to meet the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 404(a)(1) in connection with the provision of the advice, and

"(B) the dispute may be settled by arbitration, if only pursuant to terms and conditions established by agreement entered into voluntarily by both parties after the commencement of the dispute.

(B) The additional definitions of this subsection, the terms ‘fiduciary adviser’ and ‘qualified investment advice’ shall have the meanings provided such terms in subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, of section 409(b)(14).

Section 203A(a)(1) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 80b–3(a)(1)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) In any case in which the provision by the fiduciary adviser of investment advice to a participant or beneficiary regarding any security or other property consists of a breach described in subsection (a), the fiduciary adviser shall be personally liable to make good to the individual account of the participant or beneficiary any losses to the individual account resulting from the breach, and to restore to the individual account any profits of the fiduciary adviser which have been made through use of assets of the individual account by—

"(i) the fiduciary adviser; or

"(B) any other party with respect to whom a material affiliation or contractual relationship of the fiduciary adviser resulted in—

"(i) the provision of qualified investment advice to a participant or beneficiary or

"(ii) a violation of section 404(a)(1) in connection with the provision of any qualified investment advice—

"(A) if the participant or beneficiary shows that the fiduciary adviser had any interest in, or had any affiliation or contractual relationship with a third party having an interest in, the security or other property, there shall be a presumption (applied to the preponderance of the evidence) that the fiduciary adviser failed to meet the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 404(a)(1) in connection with the provision of the advice, and

"(B) the dispute may be settled by arbitration, if only pursuant to terms and conditions established by agreement entered into voluntarily by both parties after the commencement of the dispute.

(B) The additional definitions of this subsection, the terms ‘fiduciary adviser’ and ‘qualified investment advice’ shall have the meanings provided such terms in subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, of section 409(b)(14).

Section 406 of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1106(c)) is amended—

(i) by redesigning paragraph (2) as paragraph (3) and by adjusting the margination of such paragraph to full measure and adjusting the margination of subparagraphs (A) through (D) thereof accordingly; and

(ii) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2)(A) In any case in which—

"(i) a participant or beneficiary exercises control over the assets in his or her account by means of a sale, acquisition, or holding of a security or other property with regard to which qualified investment advice was provided by a fiduciary adviser, and

"(ii) any transaction in connection with the exercise of such control is not a prohibited transaction solely by reason of section 406(b)(14), paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to any tax-exempt status. In connection with the provision of the advice.

(B) For purposes of this subsection, the terms ‘fiduciary adviser’ and ‘qualified investment advice’ shall have the meanings provided such terms in subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, of section 406(g)(7)."
(2) ATTORNEY’S FEES.—Section 502(g) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1132(g)) is amended—
(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting “or (3)” after “paragraph (2)”; and
(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
“(3) In any action under this title by the participant or beneficiary against a fiduciary a

When we are trying to make investment advice more accessible and affordable, I do not see any sense in driving up costs and compliance effort by, in effect, forcing employers to select and monitor two advisors instead of just one.

Finally, the substitute creates huge problems with ERISA’s remedy structure and would subject employers to a stream of unfair and costly lawsuits by reversing the burden of proof and dramatically increasing ERISA’s already intimidating remedies provisions. The substitute also erodes ERISA’s careful preemption which gives employers legal certainty and clarity amongst our 50 States.

The underlying bill is meant to make very minor change to ERISA to allow employers to offer investment advice to their employees. H.R. 2269 works within the existing ERISA structure to do this without affecting ERISA’s important protections or modifying the flexibility courts have to fashion appropriate remedies within ERISA.

Amending ERISA’s remedy structure will likely have unintended consequences on all ERISA claims. And before significantly changing ERISA’s structure, I would look at the remedies offered in more detail. ERISA’s current remedies structure permits courts to flexibly fashion appropriate remedies, including attorneys’ fees, economic damages, disgorgement of profits, and even treble damages. Moreover, reversing the assumption of proof will not protect plan participants, but will only line the pockets of trial attorneys. So I urge my colleagues to vote against the substitutes for these reasons.

Put yourself in the place of an employer. Why would you offer investment advice to your workers if your litigation risks were so high that you might lose your entire business? Or in the words of an advisor, why would you even try to enter the investment advice market when, by doing so, would subject yourself to 50 different standards of litigation, 50 States under a standard of proof that guarantees you costly litigation, even if you have done nothing wrong?

H.R. 2269 effectively protects plan participants in a way that still makes employer-provided investment advice economically viable to employers and their employees. The fiduciary duty that it imposes on employers and advisors alike is the highest duty of loyalty in the law. Its disclosure requirements are actually more consumer friendly than the Andrews-Rangel substitute because it requires disclosure on an annual basis, or when there is a material change in disclosure. And it provides for the most vital consumer protection of all, a vibrant competitive marketplace, by opening the field to many of the most highly regarded investment advice firms in the country.

The underlying bill reaches the right balance of increasing worker access to advice while safeguarding the interests of the American workers without discouraging employers from offering any advice at all.

Mr. Speaker, the Andrews-Rangel substitute, I do not believe, will protect workers; and I do think it will discourage any employer from offering advice. This will not help workers that desperately need this kind of advice to try to increase their own retirement securities. So I urge my colleagues to oppose the substitute.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

The liability provisions in this substitute do not impose new liability upon employers. What they do is impose new responsibility and liability upon advisors who breach their fiduciary duty.

And the employer-protection provisions in this substitute are essentially identical to those in the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDERMOTT), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Andrews-Rangel substitute. I told a story earlier which sort of makes you wonder about why it is that the employee groups are not here saying this is such a good deal. Where is the AFL-CIO? Why are they not running in here? Why is the AARP not coming here saying we want old folks to have this investment? Because the bill is not a good one, that is why.

Now, the substitute that has been offered, really deals with the four issues that we need to deal with: one is the disclosure of conflicts, and that has to be done in a way that people actually hear it and know what is going on. Under the disclosure requirements contained in this substitute, plan participants or beneficiaries under the plan would receive adequate disclosure of fees and other compensation that would be received by the advisor with respect to the product being recommended.

So they would know at the time they are getting this pitch, who is doing what.

Secondly, the qualification of advisors. We hear a lot of talk about banks are regulated. Yes, banks are regulated. But the fact is that under the Investors’ Advisors Act, that is, the Federal law that controls advisors on money, banks are exempted. So all this talk about banks are regulated, blah, blah, but not in this area. Our substitute closes that loophole.

Now, the ability to get some nonconflicted advice, investors should be able to have at least two, one that is selling something and someone who is not selling something.

The fourth area is the question of remedies. If someone sells us something, and most Americans do not know what is going on in the stock market, if somebody says this is the thing to buy, and they know that it is about to take a dive, maybe they have even sold short. Who knows? I do not know that. Here is somebody that is supposed to give me that advice. We close that possibility by the conflicted question, and then we give a remedy.

Mr. Speaker, to do any less than this is to say to people, yes, we are going to give Members another chance. Maybe they can come to the conference committee; or maybe we will pass a bill next year and fix this. This ought to be fixed right now. We have the opportunity. We know what the problems are. We have the chairman suggesting he agrees with the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY). We should be able to do it. There is a real question here that we cannot do what we all agree from the chairman on down is this has got to be done. I urge Members to vote for this Andrews-Rangel substitute, and then we will have a pretty good bill.

PERMISSION TO POSTPONE FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2269

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that further consideration of H.R. 2269 pursuant to House Resolution 288, notwithstanding the operation of the previous question, the Chair may postpone further consideration of the bill to a time designated by the Speaker on this legislative day.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON).

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we talk about two advisors. I do not know how we keep both of them from being bad. As I mentioned, our measure removes the obstacles for employers to provide millions of workers professional investment advice.

The bill requires financial service providers to fully disclose their fees and any potential conflicts. In this bill’s current form, we protect people from fly-by-night scam artists looking to make a fast buck.

There are a number of safeguards that will protect workers and ensure that they receive investment advice on their 401(k) plans that is in their best interest. The pension fund managers at corporations and unions who make decisions about their defined benefit funds have access to professional portfolio managers. Now this bill will give rank and file the same protections.

We have the chairman suggesting he agrees with the gentleman from North Dakota. We should be able to do it. There is a real question here that we cannot do what we all agree from the chairman on down is this has got to be done. I urge Members to vote for this Andrews-Rangel substitute, and then we will have a pretty good bill.
time, and they do not have time to seek and sift through paperwork and bureaucracy and two advisors. Importantly, our bill retains critical safeguards and includes new protections to guarantee that people receive sound investment advice. That is just wrong.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to reject the Democrat substitute and pass H.R. 2269 the way it is.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, H.R. 2269 is a prime example of how a good idea can become a bad bill. Is it a good idea to make investment advice available to employees at the work site? Of course it is. But it is a bad idea to allow self-interested advisors, those who could benefit from the advice given, into the workplace. That is exactly what H.R. 2269 does.

Currently ERISA prohibits investment advisors from coming to a workplace to provide employees with investment advice if there is any reason to think that the advisor might benefit from recommending one investment over another. We must remember that ERISA is designed to protect workers from abuses related to their benefits.

With H.R. 2269, we will allow investment sales folks onto the work premises under the guise of the employers' endorsement without protecting the workers significantly, or at least enough to make sure that they are in good hands when they have heard the advice.

Fortunately, we have an alternative to H.R. 2269. That is the Andrews substitute. We do not need to wait for employees to be billed by some scam artist to make H.R. 2269. We can pass the Andrews amendment and then we have a good bill.

The Andrews substitute starts with the same good idea of bringing investment advisors to the workplace, but the Andrews substitute includes strict standards to protect employees from receiving tainted advice. The Andrews substitute includes a meaningful disclosure of the advisors' affiliations in a way that is easily understandable to all employees, and it allows employees to meet with an independent advisor if there is a conflict of interest.

The Andrews substitute keeps the good idea of making investment advice available to employees at the workplace, but it builds on the protections in current laws that employees need and must depend on. The Andrews substitute is in the best interest for employees, and I urge my colleagues to support it as the correct and safe way to provide investment advice at the workplace.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BALLENGER).

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, as an employer with employees who have 401(k) plans back home, I am pleased that the House is voting on a bill to ensure that employers have access to professional advice for rank-and-file workers and their individual needs.

I urge my colleagues to reject the Andrews-Rangel substitute which would, in fact, reduce the number of employers and financial advisors willing to offer their advice to employees. This is just the opposite of what the worker needs at a time when they are nervous about their retirement assets.

It is just more government regulation. The substitute is bad because it increases the cost for advisory services by requiring two fiduciary advisors as options. It undermines the current ERISA remedies, and erodes the pre-emption statute, and adds more Federal regulation already regulated by Federal and State entities, areas in which the Department of Labor has no expertise. And it reverses the burden of proof in lawsuits against employers and financial advisors which surely will attract attorneys already practitioner, lawyers. It will reduce the number of employers that are willing to have a 401(k) plan.

Mr. Speaker, it is important that my colleagues support the bipartisan Boehner bill, adopted by the Commerce, Department of Treasury, along with the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Rural Electric Coop. These groups speak for a great many of the employers and employees in my district, and I support the Boehner bill as a much-needed update of the current law.

This bill gives protection and access to today's employees who seek investment advice to maximize their retirement savings. The primary focus of this advice is to give participants advice solely in their best interest. The bill achieves this by including strict disclosure requirements, with sanctions, to inform plan participants about any potential fees or conflicts of interest in what average investors have today.

Most important, workers will have full control over their investment decisions. I urge the House to reject the substitute amendment and pass the Boehner bill today.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAACKSON).

Mr. ISAACKSON. Mr. Speaker, the intentions of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS) in the substitute are as noble as the intentions of the authors of the underlying bill, but I happen to favor the underlying bill for a couple of reasons that, hopefully, Members need to understand.

To be against the underlying bill and for the substitute, Members have to presume we cannot trust employees or IRA-SEP beneficiaries, independent contractors, to have information and then make a decision.

Secondly, and most importantly, Members need to understand that most Americans today, unlike 25 years ago, the number of employees in IRA-SEPs or other self-directed plans for their retirement. I ran as a trustee of a 401(k) plan for my company for 22 years, offered an IRA-SEP plan for the 800 contractors we had.

I understand the floor wall that prohibits the employer from giving any advice and the limited amount of advice that becomes accessible to either IRA-SEP or 401(k) beneficiaries.

It is wrong to presume that an employer would intentionally, willfully, or wantonly allow bad advice to come to their employees. To the contrary, it is the security blanket which binds those people to the company. In this time when we are needing the best information possible, we should trust our employees to be able to allow access for their employees and independent contractors to credible, competent financial advice.

In the substitute, Members trust the Department of Labor to determine who can give the right advice. In the underlying bill, Members trust the employer, whose most valued asset is their employees, to be able to offer credible advice through advisors to their employees and independent contractors.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to adopt the underlying bill and reject the substitute.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER).

(Mr. SOUDER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS). I understand some of his concerns and share some of the gentleman's concerns, but I wanted to speak because overall this is a strong bill. It is one that we need to pass.

I believe that some of the comments that have been made here in this debate have been inappropriate and indeed anticapitalist and antibusiness. To argue that workers should not get financial advice or to argue that businesses are somehow going to trick their employees or bring in charlatans is in many ways beyond the pale of debate here in Congress.

I believe that we need to get rich from.
Most employers know that if they brought in somebody with a conflict of interest, that would be out there and informed at their plant immediately. If they had somebody who was a charlatan ripping off, you would have all sorts of litigation problems, not to mention that if it is a smaller company that is not unionized, the people probably have their kids go to school in the same place, they eat in the same restaurants, they live in the same town. To imply that employers are somehow likely to want to rip off their employees or give them bad advice at a time when this would be a way to help them and improve their relations with their own workforce is absurd.

The problem is that our law is arcane. It has been out of date for a number of years. As more and more employees in America have flexibility, they need, to have the same advice that the management is getting, that the business leaders are getting and we should not discriminate against employees.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. FORD).

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I am a little disappointed that we are actually in the midst of having this debate today before completing work on an aviation security bill and before completing work on a stimulus package for people all across this great Nation. Hopefully, the encouraging news we have heard today about progress being made on that bill will not only give assurance or perhaps provide a vehicle for us to pass something before we leave here but provide the American people with some comfort as they prepare to travel on the busiest holiday of the year.

I rise today, Mr. Speaker, with a lot of disappointment about the package that has come before the House and with great concern, I rise to support the Andrews substitute (Mr. ANDREWS), who has worked so tirelessly with Members on both sides of the aisle to find some sort of agreement acceptable, one that would balance the needs of advisors with investors. I might add that the Andrews substitute achieves the twin goals of investor education and choice far better than the base bill. The substitute offered by the gentleman from New Jersey presents the best opportunity, particularly in my eyes and I am sure many even on the other side, to achieve these goals.

First, the Andrews substitute would ensure that the advice is provided by qualified, licensed and regulated professionals. This provision would simply ensure that the advice is at least as good as they promised it to be. I have heard my friends on the other side talk about why we do not guarantee this and mandate this is beyond me.

Finally, as the gentleman from New Jersey said so well in his opening statement, the substitute empowers consumers to make a choice should they determine that a potential conflict necessitates declining that advice, meaning, as the gentleman from New Jersey said, that the advisor would have to consent to providing the investor a different advisor if he or she so chose.

Any Member with misgivings about the scope of this bill should carefully consider the serious implications uncovered in a series of hearings held this year, in particular, on matters involving the substitute. I have not made my mind up on final passage, but I would certainly urge a "yes" vote on the Andrews substitute.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The arguments we have heard against the substitute that the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEY) and I have put forward essentially boil down to two arguments. The first is that employers would be sued if the substitute were adopted; and the second is that investment advice would be too expensive for investment advice firms to give if the substitute were adopted.

Each of these arguments is incorrect.

Liability protection provisions in this substitute are essentially identical for employers as those that are in the base bill. If an employer does not engage in any independent act of negligence or illegality, the employer is not liable, the same as is the case in the base bill. In fact, the substitute adds provisions, adds protections to employers which do not exist under present law to provide a safe harbor for employers who hire investment advisors. So the argument that this somehow is going to unleash a flood of litigation against employers is reminiscent of the similar false point made under the patients’ bill of rights debate and it is equally wrong.

The second argument is that somehow or another the expense that is going to be imposed upon advisor firms is going to preclude them from giving advice is equally wrong. It is not very expensive to tell an employee that there somewhere else he or she can go to get advice. It took me about 4 seconds to say it. It would not take much longer for the advisor to say it, either. It is not very expensive to say to an investor that before you put your money in this fund, you ought to know that I as your advisor make more money if you put the money in the fund than if you do not. It took me about 4 seconds to say it, and it would take about 4 seconds for the advisor to say it as well. The additional cost that would be imposed upon investment advice firms I am sure would be gladly borne by those firms in order to win the commissions which they rightfully earn by giving the advice in the first place.

I believe, covers the key grounds. It says that a conflicted advisor must give full, timely and understandable disclosure. It says that every person giving advice, not most people giving advice but every person giving advice must be duly qualified and accountable to lose his or her license if they breach their fiduciary duty.

It says that every person receiving advice from a conflicted advisor must know that there are other choices to whom the person can turn that are not conflicted. And it says that if a fiduciary duty is breached, if bad advice is given and a pensioner or worker suffers, there is somewhere to go to be made whole, not to get back all of what you lost but to get back all of what you lost if your advisor has broken the law.

Our substitute deserves the support of Members on both sides of the aisle. We respectfully ask its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

We have come to the close of this debate on the substitute. Certainly we appreciate the work of the gentleman from New Jersey and the, I think, attempt to certainly make sure that we protect workers as they get advice on their investments.

As we have seen over the last number of years, and as I recall owning a business and providing retirement plans for my employees, there has been a substantial shift from what we call defined benefits to defined contributions, to the 401(k)s and the like. It is such accounts. It becomes imperative with that shift that we allow advice to be made to the employees and that we do it in such a way where it is efficient, where it does not drive up the administrative cost, and where the employees can be assured that there is the appropriate accountability.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEHNER), the chairman of this committee, has worked for over 6 years; and I think he has put together an excellent, balanced bill which meets those requirements. It certainly provides an ability for employers to continue to offer good retirement plans of the defined contribution sort. It also provides the ability for them to offer advice so that their employees can make the best investment and have the most money when they retire at the end of their work livelihood. It additionally provides for great accountability. There is a disclosure that must be made if there are conflicts of interest.

I think the difference we see between these two bills is the balance, of how much are we going to go toward trying to, what I would say build a box that is padded so no one gets themselves bruised. In a world where we have freedom here, people are going to make mistakes. That is part of what freedom is about. How much are we going to restrict that in order for us to try to make sure that we protect individuals? There needs to be a balance that is struck, and I think the substitute goes too far. It does not allow the freedom that will encourage businesses to offer the kind of advice that is needed. It will restrict in the long run the ability, and there are differences in the liability sections, there are some very vague portions here where the liability not only to the fiduciary advisor but, as it says on page 33, or any other party with respect to whom a material affiliation or contractual relationship of the fiduciary advisor resulted in a violation of that section, certainly that could include, in the vagueness of it, the employer and possibly any other person it does open up a substantial liability and some vagueness which makes that liability unpredictable. The bill we are looking at, the base bill, has strong accountability.

When you talk about getting advice from someone, I was even thinking that all the advice that we get in whatever purchases we make, and I go back to the individual who offers me advice on buying suits, a guy named Harlan Logan. He is in Lexington, Kentucky. I know very well, I buy from Harlan Logan, he is going to make money. He should be able to make a good, honest living for doing whatever purchases we make, and I go back to the individual who offers me advice on buying suits, a guy named Harlan Logan. Pursuant to the previous order of the House, further consideration of the bill is postponed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. BONILLA, expressing regret that the Senate has passed with amendments a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2540. An act to amend title 38, United States Code, to make various improvements to veterans benefits programs under laws administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 162

Mr. BONILLA (during debate on H.R. 2269). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 162.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 30 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD) at 2 o'clock and 39 minutes p.m.

RETIREMENT SECURITY ADVICE ACT OF 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the previous order of the House, proceedings will now resume on the bill, H.R. 2269.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.
The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yes 280, noes 144, not voting 9, as follows:

(RECORDER VOTE)

[Table of votes]
The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Honda), that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 228, as amended.

This will be a 5-minute vote. The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 0, not voting 11, as follows:

SUDAN PEACE ACT

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on International Relations be discharged from further consideration of the Senate bill (S. 180) to facilitate famine relief efforts and a comprehensive solution to the war in Sudan, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. Biggert). Is there objection to the recognition of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Sudan Peace Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Government of Sudan has intensified its prosecution of the war against areas outside of its control, which has already cost more than 2,000,000 lives and has displaced more than 4,000,000.

(2) A viable, comprehensive, and internationally recognized peace process to protect from manipulation, that presents the best chance for a permanent resolution of the war, protection of human rights, and a sustainable solution.

(3) Continued strengthening and reform of humanitarian relief operations in Sudan is an essential element in the effort to bring an end to the war.

(4) Continued leadership by the United States is critical.

(5) Regardless of the future political status of the areas of Sudan outside of the control of the Government of Sudan, the absence of credible civil authority and institutions is a major impediment to achieving self-sustenance by the Sudanese people and to meaningful progress toward a viable peace process.

(6) Through manipulation of traditional rivalries among peoples for resources, and their control, the Government of Sudan has effectively used divide and conquer techniques to subjugate their population, and international humanitarian efforts to facilitate famine relief efforts are sometimes interpreted as an incentive to the Government of Sudan to subdue areas of Sudan outside of the control of the Government's control.

(7) The Government of Sudan has repeatedly stated that it intends to use the expected proceeds from future oil sales to increase the tempo and lethality of the war against the areas outside its control.

(8) Through its plans for air transport flights under the United Nations relief effort, Operation Lifeline Sudan (OLS), the Government of Sudan has already been able to manipulate the receipt of food aid provided by the Sudanese people from the United States and other donor countries as a devastating weapon of war in the ongoing effort by the Government of Sudan to subdue areas of Sudan outside of the Government's control.

(9) The efforts of the United States and other donors in delivering relief and assistance through the United Nations relief effort, Operation Lifeline Sudan (OLS), has alleviated the ability of those populations to sustain themselves.

(10) While the immediate needs of selected areas in Sudan facing starvation have been addressed in the near term, the population in areas of Sudan outside of the control of the Government of Sudan are still in danger of extreme disruption of their ability to sustain themselves.

(11) The Nuba Mountains and many areas in Bahr el Ghazal, Upper Nile, and Blue Nile regions have been excluded completely from relief distribution by OLS, consequently placing their populations at increased risk of famine.

(12) At a cost which has sometimes exceeded $1,000,000 per day, and with a primary focus on providing only for the immediate food needs of the recipients, the current international relief operations are neither sustainable nor desirable in the long term.

(13) The ability of populations to defend themselves against attack in areas outside of Sudanese control has been severely compromised by the disengagement of the front-line sponsor states, bolstering the belief within officials of the Government of Sudan that success on the battlefield can be achieved.

(14) The United States should use all means of pressure to facilitate a comprehensive solution to the war in Sudan, including—

(A) the multilateralization of economic and diplomatic tools to compel the Government of Sudan to enter into a good faith peace process;

(B) concerted support or creation of viable democratic civil authority and institutions in areas of Sudan outside government control;

(C) continued active support of people-to-people initiatives and efforts in areas outside of government control;

(D) the strengthening of the mechanisms to provide humanitarian relief to those areas;

(E) cooperation among the trading partners of the United States and within multilateral institutions toward those ends.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) GOVERNMENT OF SUDAN.—The term “Government of Sudan” means the National Islamic Front government in Khartoum, Sudan.

(2) OLS.—The term “OLS” means the United Nations relief operation carried out by the United Nations Emergency Program, the World Food Program, and participating relief organizations known as “Operation Lifeline Sudan”.

SEC. 4. CONDEMNATION OF SLAVERY, OTHER HUMAN RIGHTS ABUSES, AND TACTICS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF SUDAN.

Congress hereby—

(a) condemns—

(1) violations of human rights on all sides of the conflict in Sudan;

(b) the Government of Sudan’s overall human rights record, with regard to both the prosecution of the war and the denial of basic human and political rights to all Sudanese;

(c) the ongoing slave trade in Sudan and the role of the Government of Sudan in abetting and tolerating the practice; and

(D) the Government of Sudan’s use and organization of “murahalliin” or “mujahadeen”, a term which refers to the ongoing slave trade in Sudan and the role of the Government of Sudan in abetting and tolerating the practice.

SEC. 6. MULTILATERAL PRESSURE ON COMBATANTS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should continue to increase the use of non-OLS agencies in the distribution of relief supplies in southern Sudan.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report describing the progress made toward carrying out subsection (a).

SEC. 7. REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall submit a report to Congress describing the progress made toward carrying out subsection (a).

(b) BEDROTTA.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in carrying out the plan developed under subsection (a), the President may reprogram up to 20% of the funds available for support of OLS operations (but for this subsection) for the purposes of the plan.

SEC. 10. HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE FOR EXCLUSIONARY “NO GO” AREAS OF SUDAN.

(a) PILOT PROJECT ACTIVITIES.—The President, acting through the United States Agency for International Development, shall authorize and conduct a study examining the adverse impact upon indigenous Sudanese populations by curtail direct humanitarian assistance to exclusionary “no go” areas of Sudan.

(b) STUDY.—The President, acting through the United States Agency for International Development, shall conduct a study examining the adverse impact upon indigenous Sudanese populations by curtail direct humanitarian assistance to exclusionary “no go” areas of Sudan.

SEC. 11. REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall submit a report to Congress describing the progress made toward carrying out subsection (a).

(b) E XCLUSIONARY ''NO GO'' AREAS OF SUDAN DEFINED.—In this section, the term “exclusionary ‘no go’ areas of Sudan” means areas of Sudan designated by OLS for curtailment of direct humanitarian assistance, including, but not limited to, the Nuba Mountains, the Upper Nile, and the Blue Nile.

SEC. 12. REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall submit a report to Congress describing the progress made toward carrying out subsection (a).

(b) E XCLUSIONARY ''NO GO'' AREAS OF SUDAN DEFINED.—In this section, the term “exclusionary ‘no go’ areas of Sudan” means areas of Sudan designated by OLS for curtailment of direct humanitarian assistance, including, but not limited to, the Nuba Mountains, the Upper Nile, and the Blue Nile.

SEC. 13. REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall submit a report to Congress describing the progress made toward carrying out subsection (a).

(b) E XCLUSIONARY ''NO GO'' AREAS OF SUDAN DEFINED.—In this section, the term “exclusionary ‘no go’ areas of Sudan” means areas of Sudan designated by OLS for curtailment of direct humanitarian assistance, including, but not limited to, the Nuba Mountains, the Upper Nile, and the Blue Nile.

(c) E XCLUSIONARY ''NO GO'' AREAS OF SUDAN DEFINED.—In this section, the term “exclusionary ‘no go’ areas of Sudan” means areas of Sudan designated by OLS for curtailment of direct humanitarian assistance, including, but not limited to, the Nuba Mountains, the Upper Nile, and the Blue Nile.
their holdings drop precipitately even at the suggestion that companies in which they are invested would be forced to delist from U.S. exchanges.

In sum Madam Speaker, I believe it is a mistake to unilaterally try to resolve complex foreign policy issues through an untested formula that would greatly impair the U.S. capital markets. The goals of the Sudan Peace Act are laudable, however, I am deeply troubled by the capital markets sanctions that are included in the bill. As the House considers the certainty the Sudan Peace Act, I urge my colleagues to continue pursuing open and fair financial markets and reject these types of sanctions.

Mr. NEY. Madam Speaker, due to the recent tragedies on U.S. soil we are in the position to find ways to stop terrorist attacks. As Congress works to develop these policies it is important that we be careful to not accidentally damage legitimate American jobs. We must act in ways that do not damage our economy, the free flow of capital, or create greater uncertainty in our capital markets.

I am extremely concerned over proposals that would deny legitimate investors and issuers access to the U.S. capital markets. As this body moves to go to conference with the Senate on the Sudan Peace Act (S. 180), I urge my colleagues to take a close look at the provisions of the bill that would impose such sanctions. The imposition of capital markets sanctions could have the unintended effects of redirecting business out of the United States and eroding the certainty and predictability that have been fundamental to the success of the U.S. Capital markets. Moreover, capital markets sanctions would seriously disrupt investor confidence—both domestic and foreign—in the U.S. Markets, thereby jeopardizing their continued vibrancy.

The safety and certainty of U.S. capital markets attracted record numbers of foreign issuers and investors in the 1990s. In the competitive, global environment, however, there are few products and services for which U.S. companies are the sole suppliers. If issuers are denied access to the U.S. capital markets through unilaterally imposed sanctions, they will simply turn to other countries. Indeed, since the House of Representatives approved the Sudan Peace Act (H.R. 180), I urge my colleagues to consider the certainty and predictability that have been fundamental to the success of the U.S. Capital markets. Moreover, capital markets sanctions would seriously disrupt investor confidence—both domestic and foreign—in the U.S. Markets, thereby jeopardizing their continued vibrancy.

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on House Joint Resolution 74, and that this may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

FURTHER CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 74) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. OBEY. Reserving the right to object, Madam Speaker, I do not intend to object since I support this continuing resolution; but I rise in order to do a couple of things: first of all, to try to ascertain exactly what the schedule is expected to be around here for the remainder of the week; and, second, to try to focus the attention of the House on the linkage that exists between our need to pass this continuing resolution and our inability to finish the Defense appropriations bill, which the committee has tried mightily to produce as a bipartisan product.

I am wondering if the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young), under my reservation, I am wondering if he can tell me if he has any idea what the schedule is going to be for the remainder of the week.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, I wonder first if the gentleman would have any objection if I just make a brief explanation of what the CR does.

Mr. OBEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman under my reservation for that purpose, Madam Speaker.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

Madam Speaker, this is a simple CR. It extends the current continuing resolution until December 7. The terms and conditions of all the previous CRs remain in effect. All ongoing activities will be continued at current rates under the same terms and conditions as fiscal year 2001, with the exception of the agencies covered by the FY 2002 appropriations bills that have already been enacted into law.

Additionally, the provision for mandatory payments has been extended for payments due on December 1, 2001.

Mr. OBEY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) has suggested, this is not a controversial resolution, and I urge that we move it quickly.

Then to the gentleman's question as to the schedule, I wish I could give him a very definitive answer; but as he knows, we have completed work on all of the House bills, and yesterday the Committee on Appropriations was able to finalize the markup of the Defense appropriations bill.

I could just state for the record, the reason the Defense appropriations bill is late is two-fold:

One is we waited until early July to get the President's budget amendment for the pre-September 11 Defense request, and then the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations was actually here in the Capitol on September 11 when the tragic attacks on the World Trade Center took place, and at the Pentagon.

As the gentleman knows, the Capitol was evacuated immediately, so that had to be postponed.
Since then, additional activities have taken place; the $40 billion emergency supplemental was broken up into three separate tranches; and yesterday we finalized the Defense bill plus the last tranche of that emergency supplemental.

Now the issue, I believe, for the schedule is this: that if the requirement of a 3-day layover before filing the bill, if that were to be waived, then we could actually bring the Defense appropriations bill to this floor tomorrow.

If it is not waived, then the 3 days would have to ensue. Then we would file the bill, get a rule, and it would appear to me that that would either be early next week or following Thanksgiving.

I think the 3-day rule is affected by what type of rule would be presented by the Committee on Rules. I believe that is an issue that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) is very much interested in.

That is about as much as I can say about the schedule. It is sort of iffy.

As far as the nonappropriations legislative schedule, of course the majority leader will speak to that probably somewhat tomorrow.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, continuing under my reservation, I thank the gentleman for his comments. I would like to just make an observation.

I know that a number of Members of the House are being told that we may be in session Saturday because I and several others on this side of the aisle are refusing to grant permission for the Defense appropriations bill to be moved.

In fact, I made an offer yesterday to the majority in which I indicated that we would be willing to not offer any amendments in the full committee when the Defense appropriations bill was before us, and that we would be willing to give unanimous consent for that bill to be considered today on the floor, or tomorrow, provided only that we be given the opportunity to offer the three amendments which were in fact offered in the committee yesterday: one by the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), another by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), and a third by myself.

Those amendments relate to guaranteeing that New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia would in fact get the amount that they were originally promised in the original budget supplemental.

The Murtha amendment referred to crucial upgrades that we felt were needed in the defense budget in light of the events of September 11, and the contents of my amendment would have been focused on the need to strengthen homeland security in a wide variety of areas.

We said that if those amendments would be made in order on the floor, that we would be willing to go directly to the floor. That suggestion was not responded to by the majority leadership.

I am willing to make an offer again right now, today, I would be willing to give my support to a unanimous consent request to bring that Defense bill up either today or tomorrow, provided only that those three amendments be allowed to be debated and voted on the House floor.

Those amendments were considered in committee yesterday. One was defeated on a vote of 31 to 34. Another was defeated on a vote of 31 to 33, and the third was dealt with on a voice vote. That is offer number one. If that is not acceptable, I would be willing to waive the 3-day requirement to file views and to allow the bill to be called up immediately, provided that if the rule was defeated, the majority intends to offer that we would then be allowed to debate the bill under a rule which would allow those three amendments to proceed. So the majority leader, if he wished, or the majority leadership, if it wished, could get a vote on the kind of rule that they now want. And if this was down, and this goes down, the House would then be given the opportunity to vote on these three amendments.

I think we are trying to be infinitely flexible on this bill. But we do insist on the right to deal with these issues that are central to the defense bill which is the defense of the homeland, added funding for defense for overseas activities, and meeting our commitments to New York that were made in the aftermath of September 11.

We pledged at the time that the money to New York would be allocated in one of the subsequent appropriations bills. Since this is the only one remaining, this is it.

So I want to repeat that and to suggest that I think the House would appreciate the opportunity to vote on whether or not we should upgrade State and local health departments to help meet any public health problems that could be associated with terrorism. I think we would agree that we ought to increase our capacity at biosafety laboratories. Right now, those laboratories are operating at full capacity. They have no real ability to expand in time of crisis.

We would like to put $150 million more in here to help firefighters. We would like to put $240 million more in the budget to provide for additional cockpit security. We would like to put an additional $300 million into the bill to provide assistance to local airports whom we have mandated to increase law enforcement without being given the concurrent Federal resources to do that.

We would like to add $440 million to State and local health departments to better prepare the country for health emergencies. We would like to provide $107 million more to the FBI so that they can protect their records and make them less subject to problems in the event of attacks on the FBI itself.

We would like to provide $500 million to the post office so that they can begin the process of figuring out how to sterilize the mail. And we would like to include additional funding for the Coast Guard and Customs, among other items, all crucial to the security of the country. And all we are asking is that the Committee on Rules allow those three amendments to be debated.

I would ask the gentleman under my reservation if he would have any objection to the Committee on Rules allowing those three amendments to be considered by the House.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Madam Speaker, I would like to say first that I appreciate the support that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) has given us through the process; and yesterday when the Committee on Appropriations took up the Defense bill, the Defense Appropriations bill, and added to it the amendment that, the chairman’s amendments that allocated the $20 billion of that $40 billion supplemental. He was very supportive in his comments of both the underlying bill and the amendments. His position was, as he indicated, that there was much more that needed to be done.

I would say to the gentleman that I have analyzed those amendments closely and I have really found no objection to the amendments. The objection that I had to raise in the committee was only one of timing, whether we would do it today, now or whether we would wait for the President to request a supplemental.

But anyway then, directly to the question of the gentleman, I have no objection to the Committee on Rules providing a rule that allows any amendment in order to an appropriations bill that, in fact, is an appropriations issue. I do object to a rule or adding nonappropriations language to a bill.

In the case of the gentleman’s specific question, I would tell him that I spoke to the chairman of the Committee on Rules earlier today and advised him that I would have no objection personally to a rule that would allow the consideration of those amendments. I believe that Members have a right to be involved in the debate on very serious issues; and, in fact, after the experience that we had yesterday, after about 7 hours, I almost wish that all of our Members could enjoy some of that fun that we had yesterday.

The answer is I have already advised the chairman of the Committee on Rules that I would not object.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his comments. I understand that there are some other Members who will have different positions.

Under my reservation, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO), the ranking member. of the Subcommittee on Transportation of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I rise to support the continuing resolution and to speak about the supplemental appropriations bill. Yesterday in the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) offered an amendment to increase funding for a number of critical security needs. Unfortunately, that amendment was defeated. The September 11 tragedies happened because terrorists were able to take over the cockpit of four airplanes. The Obey amendment would have provided an additional $250 million to prevent this from ever happening again. The President even requested this funding, but the majority bill, due to other priorities, included only $50 million of the President’s $300 million request.

Today, the airlines have made some interim improvements so that cockpit doors cannot be as easily broken into, such as the strengthening of bolts. The President’s proposed $300 million for permanent improvements to secure the cockpit doors is a absolutely necessary. In order to protect the life of the President, the funding request by the President and included in the Obey amendment, would help airlines ensure that all aircraft cockpit doors are secured as quickly as possible.

In addition, the Obey amendment would provide additional funding to our Nation’s airports to meet additional security needs. They are doing increased patrols of ticket counters, baggage claim areas and screening checkpoints that have been mandated as have increased inspections, controlled access points in areas outside the terminal buildings. Airports have also been required to reissue all airport identification and verify such identification at all access gates. To meet these requirements, the airports have incurred significant additional costs, primarily for law enforcement officers and overtime pay.

The American Association of Airport Executives estimates the cost of these new requirements to be about $500 million this year. These increased costs come at a time when airports are losing money due to increased air travel and fewer sales in airport shops and eateries. The airports estimate total revenue lost to be $2 billion in 2002, or 20 percent of estimated revenue.

The Obey amendment included $200 million to assist airports in meeting the cost of increased security requirements mandated by the FAA. As the Defense bill now goes to the House Committee on Rules and then comes to the House floor, I urge the House to consider the Obey amendment.

Just to be clear, would the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) yield for a question?

Mr. OBEY. Surely.

Mr. SABO. Madam Speaker, all the funds that I speak of and all the funds that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) speaks of in his amendment, as I understand, are declared to be emergency and to be spent, even after they are appropriated, if the President agrees, says there is an emergency and then releases the funds.

Mr. OBEY. That is exactly correct. What I am saying is that we believe that the President needs the added flexibility to have these funds available because of the crisis that we are in; and if he deems any of the items to be nonessential, he simply does not have to designate them as an emergency and that money would not be spent.

Mr. SABO. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for his answer, and I might indicate also that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) amendment includes some additional funding for the important duty of the Coast Guard and for port security in this country, which is very crucial.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, further responding to the right to object, I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO) very much. I think the gentleman’s comments indicate why in the process of approving this continuing resolution we are concerned that the amendment will be passed by the Congress between now and the expiration of the new continuing resolution would be put to the best possible use.

Madam Speaker, continuing under my reservation, I yield to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government, as well as the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services and Education.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for his leadership on this issue. I thank him for raising issues on an item that is not controversial, but gives us an opportunity to say that we need to move on these and we need to move in the short term and I am hopeful, and I say to my chairman for whom I have, as he knows, unreserved respect and great, great affection.

I think he is one of the finest Members of this body, and I would urge him to rail upon those who will be making decisions to allow these amendments to be considered on the floor when we consider the Defense bill and its supplemental title, because I believe that considering these now is in the best interest of our country, the best interest of our security, the best interest of the safety of our people, the best interest of our confronting those who would terrorize this land and people around the world.

Therefore, based on the very issues while we do need to address these immediately to the Terrorist Act, we need to respond with as much efficiency and speed as we possibly can to these identified.

I know the chairman and the ranking member agree on the objectives. That is the irony. It is not that we disagree with the objectives. We are just disagreeing on timing, and now is better than later. It is safer, more appropriate policy, and I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for his leadership.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) for his comments.

Under my reservation, Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Military Construction.

Mr. OLVER. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for yielding to me in support of the continuing resolution which is indeed necessary, and I hope that this continuing resolution, which is dated for December 7, will in fact provide us with enough time to finish the work that needs to be done on the appropriations legislation; and I have every reason to believe that will be the case.

I want to speak specifically to the portion that has to do with the military construction budget, the area where I am the ranking member. One of the issues that is involved in the homeland security amendment which the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) offered yesterday, has to do with the military construction budget, the area that has to do with the military construction budget.

hears from their own constituents about the need for more fire personnel, safety equipment, and vehicles. I want to thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for yielding. This is an important matter to Americans and our fire departments and our EMT squads throughout the United States. They have been there as first responders, and we cannot ignore them. So I appeal to both gentlemen to hear the fairness of my request from the depths of their own hearts.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, reclaiming my time under my reservation, I thank the gentleman very much for his comments, and I totally agree with them.

Madam Speaker, continuing under my reservation of objection, I yield to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin for yielding to me and for his leadership, and I thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), chairman of the committee, as well as his honoree and forthrightness, for those of us who did not have 7 hours yesterday, were not in the Committee on Appropriations, to make mention of his support of these amendments.

I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for the amendments and I would like to highlight and hope that the Committee on Rules will not only make them in order but I am hoping that they will prevail on the floor of the House.

I think the distinction that the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO) made is very important for us to reemphasize. This simply provides the appropriations that can then be designated by the White House as to whether an emergency exists and that these monies are then available to be utilized. I have no doubt that the President, once the facts are presented fairly and without obstruction, will understand what is going on in local communities.

The firefighter matter that my distinguished colleague from New Jersey just mentioned, I have had firsthand experience with. First of all, Houston went through Tropical Storm Allison. It does not compare to September 11 in the enormous loss of life, but we had our emergency responders on the front line there along with FEMA. Following back to back with Tropical Storm Allison in Houston came September 11, and the anthrax scare subsequent to that. My firefighters answered about 75 calls in a 3-day period, the HAZMAT team.

So the $150 million to local communities, spread across the communities, is crucial. I would like to return to what the firefighters, the first responders, and the emergency teams are going through at this time. And so I hope that we will be able to not only pass this through the Committee on Rules but also pass it on the floor and ultimately pass it.

Just this morning, I believe we reached some sort of compromise on the airline security bill. I am hoping that the compromise, when it ultimately reaches the floor, will be satisfactory as it relates to federalizing all of the security for the airlines. I understand it is gradual; that it will have a pilot program of five that will be able to experiment with a company, but, more importantly, it will have a 3-year window of federalizing all of the security at our airports.

I regret that we were not able to get these things passed in our subcommittee. Everybody is concerned about these important issues, and both the chairman and the subcommittee chairman have worked hard and the ranking member as well.

I am from Florida, and I have a sincere appreciation for the safety features that we must have at our seaports. Port security is an issue which the Obey amendment addresses to show exactly why it is so important. I think if Congress understands this, we can better interpret this to the administration. Each of us has constituents back home that we must face. The President is in a larger one. We want to know, are we safe and are our ports safe. We must carry that message. If we take a strong enough leadership position on this, I think the President will acquiesce, because he, too, understands the port security that is determined to get some kind of consideration for their needs.

Port security is an issue that neither party can take a stand against. Number one, we have 14 deep-water ports in this Nation. We have 14 deep-water ports in Florida. My own port in Miami is the largest cruise port in the world; 3.4 million people go through our port annually. Ports in the United States handle about 7.8 million tons of cargo each year.

At the same time, the State of Florida is heavily port dependent. Florida has the longest coastline of any state in the lower 48 States. International trade through Florida seaports reached 16 million tons in 2000, valued at $73.8 billion.

Our State laws in Florida require that our ports have vulnerability assessments. They have been reviewed by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. We already have security plans in place to ensure the safety of our citizens at Florida seaports. Not only is this important in Florida, it is important throughout the Nation. Most of the ports in this country do not have those security assessments made. We need to do these assessments, and we need to do them now and we need to address our vulnerabilities. Many of our seaports are located in extremely close proximity to United States military bases, population centers, and even the NASA operations at Cape Canaveral.

As the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) knows, the port of Tampa alone handles over 10 million tons of hazardous cargo each year, including petroleum products. I cannot stress too strongly the importance of port security. There is a clear funding shortfall at this time for these ready-to-go projects. They do not have to wait. We must impose upon our administration to bring these points to light. I am 100 percent behind the continuing resolution, but I would be less than a good Representative if I did not come before the Congress and ask for many of the things that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) has asked be considered in his amendment.

On the basis of Florida studies, Florida’s deep-water ports require $80 million in infrastructure improvements. The Chairman of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government has done the best the gentleman can do. We have a huge security risk. Congress needs to understand that, and the administration also. It is clear that port safety and security nationwide is very costly. The President recommends no funds whatsoever for port security. It is difficult for me to see the rationale for that. The Obey amendment includes $200 million for port security assessment and improvement. The Obey amendment is a prudent amendment. It looks at the security of our nation. I say to Members that port security is a tremendously important security problem.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the CR, and I also urge the leaders to get these things done, to take the message to the President that we must take a stand on this. It is important.

Mr. Obey. Madam Speaker, continuing under my reservation, I yield to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Hoyer) who wanted to make one additional point.

Mr. Hoyer. Madam Speaker, I had spoken generally about the amendments that we considered yesterday. As the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government, I wanted to speak particularly about one item, and then others quickly.

First, New York, Pennsylvania and the Pentagon, Virginia and the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, sustained a direct attack; but there is another institution in our country which has sustained a direct impact, and that is the Postal Service of our Nation. We have lost two postal workers to anthrax. They died as a result of anthrax inhalation. I attended a memorial service for those two gentlemen, Mr. Curseen and Mr. Morris, 2 days ago. The Obey amendment adds $200 million for the Postal Service, before it is delivered to individuals, is in fact free of biological or chemical agents which would cause them harm.

This is a critical component of the Obey amendment that, hopefully, will be made in order and we can offer. We cannot wait. From my standpoint, this is not enough money for the Postal Service. This is not, and I would stress, all of the money that they will need. The Postmaster General said they will need between $3 and $5 billion to respond to the events of September 11 and the anthrax scare that has confronted the Postal Service and others. I would urge us to focus on this Postal Service money.

Quickly, I would remark on the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pascrell), who has been a leader on behalf of the fire service. The Obey amendment provides an additional $150 million for the firefighters and emergency response personnel.

The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pascrell) mentioned the shortages around this country in the fire service in our major cities. I will tell my friends in this House, the fire service of the District of Columbia does not now have the capacity to respond to a major catastrophe in this city. We all hope and pray that does not occur, but we are not ready for it if it does.

Two other items in the Treasury-Postal Service, $200 million for the northern border has been a relatively porous border. Canada is no threat to us, but terrorists have utilized Canada as an entry point into the United States. The Customs Department has told us that they have substantial funds. Unfortunately, they were not included in the President’s budget, as submitted to us.

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young) added to the sum that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young), so we can accomplish a more secure northern border across which we know when the millennium occurred on January 1, 2000. Shortly before that, one of the terrorists came across trying to cause an explosion to occur in the Los Angeles airport. Coming south, they would be bordercrossers; such was the case that we were lucky; and we need to beef it up substantially, and the Obey amendment does that.

Lastly, we have talked about security at the Capitol. It is important and I support it. This is the center of democracy, but we need additional funds to secure our Federal facilities in which Federal workers labor daily on behalf of the American people. It is not that the terrorists seek to get to those individuals. They do not care who they are. What they want to get to is the Federal Government, and if we do not secure those buildings, we place our people at risk. The Obey amendment speaks to that objective, and I would hope that we can consider it as soon as possible.

Madam Speaker, again I thank the ranking member for his leadership, for his efforts on behalf of these objectives. I know the chairman of our committee supports these objectives. He articulated that yesterday. He is dealing with constraints, and we understand that.

Mr. Obey. Madam Speaker, continuing under my reservation, I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Edwards), the second ranking Democratic member on the Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development.

Mr. Edwards. Madam Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young) on his efforts of moving the government forward during this time of national crisis. He has worked on a bipartisan basis, and for that, I have the greatest respect. Madam Speaker, God forbid, had the terrorists of September 11 chosen as their weapon a nuclear bomb with just enough uranium to fill a soda can, placed in a car in New York City, 2 million people, men, women and children, would have been killed that day.

To put that in perspective, one nuclear bomb parked in one car in a major American city would kill 400 times the number of people that the terrible terrorist attacks of September 11 killed. If I were you, I know we would all agree in this Chamber, Democrats and Republicans alike, that there is no greater responsibility of the Federal Government than to protect the lives of American citizens and families. In so many ways since September 11, this body has acted responsibly. Chairman Young especially has led the fight to address vital national needs when it comes to homeland protection.

Madam Speaker, I come today to point out one area where I think this Congress has failed the American family. It is the area of protecting American citizens from the real and devastating threat of nuclear terrorism. I think most Americans would be shocked to find out that even despite all we have learned since September 11 that this Congress this year will actually reduce funding for the programs designed to keep nuclear weapons out of the hands of terrorists. Let me repeat that because I think many Americans will not believe it. Despite the occurrences of the tragedy of September 11, this year this Congress has voted to actually reduce funding for programs intended and designed to protect the American homeland and families from terrorists making nuclear bombs as weapons against our country. I find that incredible.

Intentions have been good. No one has intended to make America more vulnerable to nuclear terrorists. But in government good intentions do not protect anyone. It is our priorities and our funding decisions that really count.

I find it somewhat amazing that last night in the defense appropriations bill we were able to find $256 million to protect this Capitol and me, Members of Congress and congressional employees from possible terrorist attack; but we could not find $2 billion to fund defense of 281 million Americans against the real threat of nuclear terrorism.
I am not here to criticize anyone who helped put together necessary funding to protect this Capitol, its Members of Congress, 535 of them, and staff. This is the center and the symbol of our democracy, and it is right that we should protect it. I would urge the House to approve $256 million in this bill coming up this week to protect a couple of thousand people here in our Nation’s Capitol, then we surely should be able to find $100 million to protect 281 million Americans from nuclear terrorism.

If I am to ask you to support President Bush, I would suggest to you that the house of nuclear materials and the nuclear threat is a real one. This Congress has not acted to protect us adequately, and we have an opportunity to act now to protect Americans from the threat of nuclear terrorism.

I support President Bush’s effort to say we must act now. I would urge the Appropriations Committee to take responsibility to act now to protect Americans from the threat, the real threat, of nuclear terrorism. But this Congress has taken no action. In fact, if anything, we have rolled back the clock and reduced funding for those important programs.

Madam Speaker, I think it is absolutely essential for the protection of our homeland. The Congress, the Appropriations Committee in the days ahead should take the lead of President Bush’s amendment. That amendment was voted on the House floor, because it would put into action what President Bush has said in his words, that we must act now.

Finally, some said last night in the Appropriations Committee hearing that we should wait a year. Sometimes waiting is the responsible thing to do. I would argue that when it comes to protecting Americans from the threat of nuclear holocaust, waiting is a dangerous mistake. I am not willing to let other families pay the price of playing that waiting game. Let us follow the lead of President Bush in this time of national crisis. Let us act now by voting for the Obey amendment and adequately funding the programs to keep terrorists’ hands off nuclear materials.

Mr. OBEEY. I thank the gentleman for his comments. I think they are most important and ought to be heard by everyone.

Madam Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHY).

Mr. HINCHY. Madam Speaker, I thank my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. MURTHA). I thank him for offering this amendment to Appropriations, for yielding to me for an opportunity to make some comments about the present situation. I also want to express my appreciation and high regard for the chairman of the Appropriations Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), for the way in which he has handled the Appropriations Committee this year and the fairness with which he has conducted its operations. But there are several important issues that are important. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. MURTHA) says, and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) says, that we have failed to take the necessary steps and as a result of this, many of us are fearful that we are not going to be dealt with appropriately, much less thoroughly. Therefore, I want to say, also, how much I support the amendment that was put forth by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. MURTHA). This amendment that was offered on a bipartisan basis by the five members of the Committee on Appropriations who represent various congressional districts in the State and City of New York. As is true with the other two amendments, I think it is true of this one as well, that the chairman of our committee along with the ranking member support the ideas behind these amendments and the provisions in them.

It is unfortunate that the chairman of our committee is working under very difficult and dire circumstances. Otherwise, we know that it would be routine for these amendments to be brought forward. But routine or not, these amendments should find their way to the floor.

The amendment that we introduced as representatives of the State of New York also should have an opportunity to be heard on the floor, and I believe the leadership of this House of Representatives to express their will with regard to the disaster that struck New York City when the Twin Towers were attacked on September 11.

I do not know of another time, at least in the modern history of our country, when the Committee on Appropriations has not responded to the request of Members for aid at a time of disaster. In almost every instance when we speak of disaster, we speak of natural disaster. We speak of the recent fires in New York or earthquakes or fire or some other natural disaster. The Committee on Appropriations always responds. This House of Representatives always responds when disaster strikes anywhere in the country. The disaster that struck New York is the worst disaster in the history of the Nation. No, it is not natural, it is man-made. It was inflicted upon us by enemies from without. Nevertheless, we need to respond to the financial needs that are associated with the occurrence of that strike, that disaster.

We thought that this had been done. Under the leadership of the chairman of our committee this past week, the Speaker of this House and others, an agreement was made shortly following the attack of September 11 which would provide $40 billion; $20 billion of that $40 billion would go for national defense and home security, and the other $20 billion, it was made clear, would be made available to the City and State of New York as a result of the consequences of this incredible disaster that fell upon New York City.

We thought that that deal was signed and secure. It was made, again, by the leadership in this House, the leadership of the Committee on Appropriations on a bipartisan basis with the President of the United States. And the President said, You shall have that money, State of New York, because we know you need it. But now we are told that it is not necessary to provide that money at this time. Only half of it has been made available to the City and State of New York because of that terrible strike.

We need to take care of the widows and orphans that have resulted as a consequence of that disaster. Five thousand people almost were killed as a result of that strike. They left behind husbands, wives, children. Many people are without health insurance; many others have lost their jobs.

We need to take care of the widows and orphans that have resulted as a consequence of that strike, and we need to make available to the people who have been placed out of work, tens of thousands of people have lost their jobs as a result of that strike, we need to make available to them health insurance through COBRA, Medicaid for those who were not eligible for COBRA, unemployment compensation and Workers' Compensation for those people who have been injured as a result of this strike.

So these things, all of them, are necessary. These amendments are appropriate. They ought to be considered in the context of the bill. I hope and trust that when the Committee on Rules considers this issue, they will in fact make these amendments in order.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I thank the gentleman very much for his comments.

Madam Speaker, before I withdraw my reservation, I would like to bring to the attention of the House two additional matters with respect to this matter.

I note and I am now reading from a story in the New York Times today which reads as follows:

"Osama bin Laden's al Qaeda net work held detailed plans for nuclear devices and other terrorist bombs in one of its Kabul headquarters. The Times discovered the partly burned documents in a hastily abandoned safe house in the Afghan capital's political quarter of the city, written in Arabic, German, Urdu and English. The notes give detailed designs for missiles, bombs and nuclear weapons. There are descriptions of how the detonation of TNT compressed plutonium into a critical mass, sparking a chain reaction and ultimately a thermonuclear reaction.

"Both President Bush and the British Prime Minister are convinced that bin Laden has access to nuclear material, and Mr. Bush said earlier this morning that al Qaeda was seeking chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

"The discovery of the detailed bomb-making instructions, along with studies into chemical and nuclear devices, confirms the West's worse fears and raises the specter of an attack that would far exceed the September 11 atrocities in scale and gravity. Nuclear experts say the design suggested bin Laden may be working on an fission device similar to Fat Man, the bomb dropped on Nagasaki. However, they emphasize it was extremely difficult to build a viable warhead."

The story goes on.

That is just one explanation of why the amendment that we seek to bring to the floor after this continuing resolution is approved, why that amendment contains $1 billion aimed at keeping weapons of mass destruction away from terrorists, including the items discussed most eloquently by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

I would simply say, Madam Speaker, there has been considerable misunderstanding about what the genesis of this amendment is.

Let me simply say, Madam Speaker, that immediately after the need became apparent, the gentleman from Florida and I both instructed our staffs to review all of the agency requests for additional funds that might legitimately be considered by this body in order to strengthen homeland security; and we produced for discussion purposes a document which listed items Tier One, Tier Two, Tier Three, in the order of what people considered to be their importance. Some of them are funded, some of them are not, under the base bill.

We feel that if there had not been intervention at a higher level in this institution, I feel strongly that we would have had a bipartisan amendment presented to the committee yesterday and to this House, whenever the bill is considered, which would have had us stand as one, just as we did a few weeks earlier when we passed with no dissenting votes the first down payment of $40 billion that the Speaker played a very constructive role in helping to negotiate.

Let me simply say that I understand why our friend on the majority side of the aisle and the minority could not vote with us on the amendments that we were proposing. I also understand that, in their hearts, many of them would have liked to.

I do have an observation to make about that which has been, in my view, willfully misunderstood by one person in OMB who attended a meeting in the White House last week and willfully misunderstood the proposal.

When I was at the White House, I simply made this observation about Congress as an institution. It had nothing whatsoever to do with the operation of the White House or any other branch of government. What I simply observed was this: When each of us is elected, we come to this body as politicians. All we prove when we win our first election is that we know how to win an election. We then come to this body and seek to become legislators as well as politicians, and that balance is furthered by each of us being given a committee assignment. After we are given that committee assignment, we learn the business over which that committee has jurisdiction. Some Members of this House learn it awfully well on both sides of the aisle.

The point I was trying to make is that for any legislative body to be a self-respecting legislative institution, there has to be a fair balance between the political requirements that sometimes drive the party leadership of both parties and the substantive legislative requirements that should drive the committees of this institution.

In my view, when the leadership of the other party seeks to intervene and shut off the judgment of the committee that has responsibility for the subject matter at hand, there is nothing wrong with that happening occasionally. That is the job of the leadership of both parties. But when it happens routinely, especially on matters sensitive, then what happens is that this body becomes more and more strictly a political rather than a legislative institution. That is not good for us, that is not good for the country, and that is the point I am trying to make.

It seems to me that if the committee had been left to its own devices, we would have had a significantly uncontroversial proposal to make to the House, which would have increased funding for military expenditures associated with the war. It would have added these additional items which I believe are not at all and are badly needed to plug some of the security holes, and we would have also assured that the original commitment made to New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia would have been maintained.

That is what we were trying to do yesterday.

I urge the White House and I urge every Member of this House to, please, before they make up their mind about how they are going to vote on whatever rule is attached to the Defense Appropriations bill, I urge every Member to simply review line-by-line what it is that is being proposed. If they do, I think that you will find that the vast majority of members of both parties would recognize the substantive value of what it is we are trying to do. It just seems to me that that is our job.

I also want to point out again, lest anyone think we are trying to bust the budget, each and every add-on to the homeland security package, each and every item in that bill contains as part of that item the following language: “Provided further that such amounts shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request that includes designation of the entire amount of the request as an emergency requirement, as defined in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted by the President to the Congress.”

What that language means, Madam Speaker, is that if this money were to be provided, not a dime could be spent unless the President later agreed that each and every one of those items represent an emergency that needed to be funded. If, in the judgment of the President after reviewing our arguments, he decided that spending could wait for another day, that is the way it would be. He would maintain total control over the expenditures.

But we believe it is crucial to provide this, because we have talked to the FBI, the CIA, the National Security Agency, to many other agencies of government, and we are convinced that this is necessary for the good of the country.

We have stimulus packages floating around here being promoted by both parties. I will not comment on what I think of them. But the fact is that if we were to try to restore economic confidence in our ability to travel and people’s ability to go into public places without fear, and that is what we attempt to do. That could do more to restore economic confidence than virtually anything else this body will do.

So I urge each and every Member to review this. And I repeat, we are perfectly willing at any time to grant unanimous consent for that Defense bill to come up today or tomorrow; provided only that we have an opportunity to vote on these three amendments. Surely that is not too much to ask.

Madam Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. BIGGERT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H. J. Res. 74

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Public Law 107-44 is further amended by striking the date specified in section 107(c) and inserting in lieu thereof “December 7, 2001”; and by striking the date specified in section 123 and inserting in lieu thereof “December 1, 2001”.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMUNICATION FROM STAFF MEMBER OF THE OFFICE OF ATTENDING PHYSICIAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GRUCCI) laid before the House the following communication from Ronald J. Norra, Pharmacist/Security Officer of the Office of Attending Physician: Office of Attending Physician, U.S. Capitol.

Hon. J. Dennis Hastert,
Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Speaker: This is to notify you formally, pursuant of the Rules of the House of Representatives, that I have been served with a subpoena for production of documents issued by the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

After consultation with the Office of General Counsel, I will make the determinations required by Rule VIII.

Sincerely,

Ronald J. Norra, Pharmacist/Security Officer.

UNITED STATES ARCTIC RESEARCH PLAN BIENNIAL REVISION: 2002–2006–MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without prejudice, referred to the Committee on Science.

To the Congress of the United States:

George W. Bush.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pallone) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. Pallone addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)
Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, last Friday I led a bipartisan delegation to Europe that met with the exiled King of Afghanistan in Rome, and I want to say up front one of the most common questions we had was, is United States policy tilted towards the King, or is it towards the Northern Alliance? And one thing we continually made clear and we need to continually make clear is that many of us here in Congress supported the Northern Alliance and wanted additional funding to go to the Northern Alliance and we supported the exiled King. We support both, and we believe there should be a coalition government.

In fact, today's papers, in The New York Times, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, all are running stories suggesting that the Northern Alliance is suddenly wanting to go it alone, now that after months of not moving or actually retreating, were able to advance with American bombs, all of a sudden the Northern Alliance says wait, our policy needs to be balanced. I would like to share a few comments of our exchange with the King and then some thoughts on the direction of where we may head. Clearly, the King is 87, not 57. His heart hurts for his people and country. He represents the terrorism that brought the bombing. He stated that that bombing was a necessary evil. He stressed the need for meetings with the Northern Alliance as soon as possible. We pushed him hard in part on that point, and clearly they need to get to those meetings. Unfortunately, one of the dangers here is if one group gets in a dominant position, particularly if they are in the minority population, a dominant governing position over the others, we will not have their peace interest. We will descend into further chaos.

We stressed Afghan solutions. But that does not mean just warlords who could not have advanced without our bombs; it means a real coalition. Our goal is to hunt down terrorists and to bring them to justice and to hold those who harbor terrorists accountable; but our goal is not to be nation-building beyond a point. We want an Afghan solution, but if they want our long-term support, they need to have a balanced solution.

We also aggressively oppose the distribution of heroin and the violation of human rights, which some of our so-called new-found friends have done as well, not just the Taliban, Financial assistance and trade policies of the United States are impacted by a government's abuse of human rights and death peddling through drug dealing and drug trafficking of heroin.

There is a solution that meets these goals, but it needs to include the people of the north as well as the majority Pashtuns of the south. Americans today only see an AfghanSolution that is riven by tribal factions, funded by heroin, chaos and constant war, terrorists and terrorist sympathizers. But the former King has shown that a different Afghan did exist, a coalition government, a move from monarchy to democracy, rights for women, and an economy not dependent upon heroin. It can happen in Afghanistan, and it did for many years.

In that sense, the country is currently missing all of this for many years, and the exiled king would give them a vision of hope. It is not a question of his returning as a King, but as a symbol of a functional Afghanistan which many people in the United States and the world do not see. As our delegation told him, if we do not see, if the Afghan that he represented that did not harbor terrorists, that respected human rights and, in fact, does not distribute heroin, then the American people will help rebuild their economy, and they will get the financial assistance, the trade and help in rebuilding their country, we want to see a decent government.

Afghanistan has been subject to being a political football for centuries, particularly between Russia and England, but all the way back to Timur-i-Leng, for centuries and centuries. The book "Tournament of Champions," a book about this battle for Central Asia, reads, in many ways, like the current New York Times: "Back and forth through the passes, through the mountain hideouts, hiding out in the snow, fighting mountain wars, tribal factions dominated by the bordering nations."

What we do see in the reign of the former King is a move to democracy, a move to a different Afghan did exist, a coalition government, not distribution of heroin, chaos and constant war; the Taliban is not suddenly going to be paradise on Earth. Romanticism by Americans is not that important.

But we do know that it can be a better Afghanistan. We do know that if there is a coalition government that respects the rights of the Afghan people, that does not do deal in heroin, that is committed to rebuilding their economy, that is oriented towards peace, not harboring terrorists, it can be different. If it does not, it not only will not be a paradise, it will continue to be close to an earthly version of hell.
where we left off yesterday as we continue to pay tribute and honor the fallen who perished as a result of the attacks of September 11, 2001. This growing list of over 3,000 names includes many of the victims of the recent horrific attacks on our great Nation. I intend to read these names for many days as it takes in this ongoing effort to honor those individuals who lost their lives or are still missing. Again, please forgive me in advance for any mispronunciations of the names.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for God’s blessing on the following: Terence M. Lynch; Michael F. Lynch; James Francis Lynch; Farrell Peter Lynch; James Lynch; Robert H. Lynch, Jr.; Sean Patrick Lynch; Michael Lynch; Richard Dennis Lynch; Louise A. Lynch; Sean Lynch; Nehamon Lyons, IV; Michael J. Lyons; Patrick Lyons; Monica Lyons; Robert Francis Mace; Marianne Macfarlane; Jan Maciejewski; Susan MacKay; Catherine Faith MacRae; Richard B. Maddex; Simon Maddison; Dennis A. Madsen, Sr.; Noel C. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE) is recognized for 5 minutes. (Mr. THUNE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and for extraneous material on the subject of my special order this evening.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

HONORING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF JET MAGAZINE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the 50th anniversary of Jet Magazine and pay tribute to its former, Mr. John H. Johnson.

This month Jet Magazine, black America’s number one weekly news magazine, turns 50 years old. Since 1951 Jet Magazine has provided a voice to African Americans and people of color. Jet Magazine has covered stories in black life that the mainstream press often ignores. From the civil rights movement to politics, music, the arts, and sports, Jet has always been there to give voice to ordinary people.

Today, Jet Magazine currently enjoys a circulation of more than 970,000 weekly and is international in its scope. The magazine has been successful because it speaks to and addresses issues that directly impact black America.

As Jet Magazine celebrates its 50th anniversary, it does so in good financial shape. We know that behind every successful venture is a person with vision and a good work ethic. Well behind Jet Magazine is Mr. John H. Johnson, a man of integrity a man who believes that hard work, determination, dedication, and education allows one to rise above poverty and racism.

Mr. Johnson’s story is truly representative of one who has pulled himself up by his bootstraps. Born in Arkansas, on the banks of the Mississippi River, he moved to Chicago when he was 15.

As a young man, he spent 2 years on welfare while at DuSable High School. He often calls himself a welfare graduate. He noted that the days he spent on welfare were some of his darkest days, and his greatest goal was to get off, which he did.

Mr. Johnson recalls that when, at the age of 21, he first tried to borrow money to start a magazine geared toward African American readers, a banker refused and called him a boy. However, he did not give up nor give in. He secured a $500 loan by using his mother’s furniture as collateral.

In 1942, he founded Johnson Publishing Company in Chicago and began production of the Negro Digest, later the Black World. November 1, 1945, the first issue of Ebony hit the newsstands. With a monthly circulation of more than 2 million, Ebony is the largest African American-oriented magazine in the country.

Mr. Johnson did not rest on his success, and in 1985 he started Ebony Man, which now has a circulation of 300,000, and he owns a 20 percent interest in Essence, his closest competitor.

In the 1970s, Mr. Johnson branched into cosmetics, insurance, and other media. Today he owns Fashion Fair Cosmetics and Supreme Beauty Products. By all accounts, Mr. Johnson has risen above the obstacles of poverty and prejudice to become one of the most successful publishers and businessmen in history.

On tomorrow, I shall introduce a resolution in the House so that all Members will have an opportunity to pay tribute to this outstanding American.

He will be the first to tell us that he has not always enjoyed success. In fact, he started seven magazines, four of them failures. Mr. Johnson says that out of failure comes success. He instructs that one must always be willing to take the risk of failing in order to succeed.

His unwavering spirit, tenacity, and persistence to succeed have not been his alone. Mr. Johnson credits his late mother, Mrs. Gertrude Johnson Williams, for much of his success. It was her nurturing, support, and guidance that planted the seeds for his success. He notes that she lived to see 30 years of his success.

Additionally, he credits his wife of more than 50 years, Ms. Eunice Johnson, who is the producer and director of Ebony Fashion Fair, and his daughter, Linda Johnson Rice, who is the chief operating officer of Johnson Publishing Company.

Additionally, no operation is successful only because of its leadership. Mr. Johnson has a team of over 2,600 employees who contribute to Johnson Publishing Company. Stellar among this group for many years was Mrs. Willie Miles Burns, a good friend of mine and Mr. Johnson’s cousin, who for many years was vice president for circulation.

As a result of Mr. Johnson’s prowess, others have been able to let their lights of journalistic talent and management skills shine, individuals like associate publisher and executive editor emeritus Robert Johnson, who ran Jet for many years; and current senior editor, Sylvia P. Flanagan; managing editor Malcolm R. West; feature editor Clarice Johnson; and many others who have helped to make the Johnson Publishing Company a team.
Mr. Johnson, now 83, still works hard and has not missed a beat. He has received thousands of awards and accolades. Recently, he was the first African-American to be inducted into the prestigious Arkansas Business Hall of Fame.

Mr. Johnson and Ebony and Jet have all given African Americans, as well as much of the rest of the world, knowledge, insight, and understanding into the needs, hopes, and aspirations of the people.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my congratulations to JET Magazine and its founder and publisher, John H. Johnson, on the 50th anniversary of the world’s leading Black weekly newsmagazine.

John H. Johnson is the president of Johnson Publishing Company, the most prosperous African-American publishing empire in America. In addition to JET Magazine, his company also publishes Ebony, Black Star and JET Jr. magazines. Within the journalism industry, John H. Johnson is to publishing, what Berry Gordy’s Motown is to the entertainment industry.

John Johnson’s journalistic dream began in Chicago in 1942. Back then, he was going to college and working part time for an insurance company, where he clipped articles concerning African-Americans out of newspapers and magazines. It was there that Johnson realized that the African-American community was lacking a publication similar to Life and Reader’s Digest. So he set out to design a magazine that would cater specifically to the African-American community.

To raise money to fund his project, Mr. Johnson’s mother allowed him to use her fur coat as collateral for a $500 loan. Johnson then developed a mailing list of 20,000 African-American households, whose names he had pulled from the insurance company’s list of policyholders. With the money he had borrowed, Johnson sent letters to those on the list, in which he offered $2 subscriptions for his yet unpublished magazine. He received 3,000 replies and printed the first issue of his new magazine, Negro Digest, later to be renamed Black World, with only $6,000.

Mr. Johnson began his second publication, Ebony, in 1945. Six years later, Johnson started JET Magazine, which today is his flagship publication. However, due to his humble roots, Mr. Johnson did not have the financial support necessary to support his new publication. At the time, mainstream banks did not commonly finance African-American owned businesses. One of John Johnson’s jobs was to comb African-American newspapers and magazines from around the country, in order to brief the President of Supreme Liberty Life. John Johnson soon discovered that African-Americans were hungry for news of their own community—news that was broader than what was reported in the predominantly white media of the time, and news that was not, as Mr. Johnson remarked, “only in connection with a crime.”

So in 1942 John Johnson founded Negro Digest. However, due to his humble roots, Mr. Johnson did not have the financial support necessary to support his new publication. At the time, mainstream banks did not commonly make loans to African-Americans, so John Johnson ended up borrowing $500 at the Citibank. However, using his mother’s fur coat for collateral, the magazine quickly became successful.

In 1945, John Johnson launched Ebony, modeling it after Life and Look magazines. Ebony started as a magazine about achievement and success, and soon realized the importance of African-Americans feeling good about themselves, and of their achievements in the context of American society. In his book, Succeeding Against the Odds, Mr. Johnson wrote that at the time, “There was no consistent coverage of the human dimension of black Americans in Northern newspapers and magazines. It’s hard to make people realize this, but blacks didn’t get married on the society pages of major American dailies until the late sixties.”

JET Magazine followed in 1951, and continued John Johnson’s vision of reporting about the people, history and current events of the African-American community. For example, Jet Magazine’s Ticker Tape column, authored by Simeon Booker, has been a consistent source of information about current events, and governmental and legislative decisions.

Over the years, John Johnson has helped to present the news and interests of people of color virtually around the world. Today we salute him and one of his flagship publications—JET Magazine—for being part of our lives for 50 years. All of us look forward to another 50 years of success, and of Ebony and Jet Magazine continuing to bring the news not only to all of us, but also to future generations.

Mr. MECK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleagues in honoring Mr. John H. Johnson, Publisher and Chief Executive Officer of the Johnson Publishing Company on the 50th Anniversary of JET Magazine—Black America’s leading weekly news magazine.

Mr. Johnson is one of the true giants of the American business world, and the publishing industry. In November 1942, as a young visionary, he began publishing the Negro Digest in order to get his start and move to higher positions. Mr. Johnson is one of those special individuals in whom there exists not only an immense capacity for service, but also that touch of genius which everybody recognizes but no one can define. He is also a great man with a great big heart. Since 1958 he has donated more than $48 million to charitable causes.

So, to John H. Johnson I say thank you for your vision, your wisdom, and your example. Thank you for giving African Americans a voice in the publishing world, and congratulations on fifty years of publication of JET magazine.

AGRICULTURAL BIOTERRORISM COUNTERMEASURES ACT OF 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Lucas) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my appreciation for Members’ support for the Agricultural Bioterrorism Countermeasures Act of 2001, H.R. 3293.

The tragic events of September 11 have made all Americans appreciate our freedom and democratic way of life more than ever. As we continue to get our lives back to normal, we must also realize how much this has changed.
Terrorism does not have to be directed towards people; it can be directed at our modes of transportation, our communications infrastructure, or even our food supply.

The United States Department of Agriculture, along with the Food and Drug Administration, is in charge of ensuring that Americans have a safe and abundant food supply.

I would like to make it absolutely clear that because of USDA and FDA America enjoys the benefit of the safest food supply in the world. However, USDA and FDA have not had to clearly focus on how to prevent terrorism, bioterrorism, agriterrorism, or whatever term one prefers to use in describing the threats to America’s food supply.

Prevention is the key and long-term planning should be the goal to continued food safety. Congress needs to take positive steps to help USDA perform what we ask of it.

Today, I am dropping a bill to help with prevention and long-term planning. H.R. 3293 authorizes money to be spent on USDA’s agricultural research laboratories so that there is adequate plant and animal research being performed on bioterrorism. Some of USDA’s most important research facilities need to be modernized in order for the U.S. to stand ready for our new flight.

The bill also provides money for the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism, for research to make sure that USDA, the Department of Agriculture, and other law enforcement and emergency preparedness organizations cooperate and have the proper techniques in place in the event of bioterrorism events.

Further, Oklahoma State is authorized to receive a grant to establish a food safety research center. OSU is the ideal location for a food safety center that is needed in our new struggle. This proposed food safety center will utilize state-of-the-art detection methods to determine the critical points in the food chain, from production, harvest, processing, and distribution, to consumption, where interventions could be applied to eliminate the known hazards for humans.

The Secretary of Agriculture will develop rapid response field test kits that can quickly be deployed to state and local agencies to determine if an act of bioterrorism has occurred. These are intended for quick discovery and to confirm outbreaks of plant or animal diseases, pathogens, or other bioterrorism agents.

The intramural agricultural bioterrorism research and development section of this bill will make USDA’s ARS programs focus on enhancing regulatory agencies’ response time, encouraging academic and private sector partners to work together to maximize research benefits, strengthening the links with the intelligence community to learn what research needs are most important, and encouraging ARS to work with international operations to control the spread of plant and animal diseases.

The consortium for countermeasures against agricultural bioterrorism is truly valued. Those colleges and universities that agronomists, animal and plant doctors will coordinate with the Federal agencies, such as USDA, to develop the long-term program needed to combat bioterrorism. Furthermore, competitive grants will be provided through USDA which are directed towards the protection of the domestic food supply. The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, APHIS, will be authorized to receive more funds to increase inspections at points of origin and to improve surveillance at points of entry. They will also be required to develop new and better techniques of working with State and local agencies to control the outbreaks of plant and animal diseases.

The Food Safety Inspection Service, FSIS, will be charged with enhancing its ability to inspect the safety of meat and poultry products. Like APHIS, FSIS will be expected to work with State and local agencies to create the best possible means of sharing information and technology in order to reach the best results possible.

This legislation is designed for the long-term benefit of producers and consumers alike. Please support H.R. 3293.

HISTORIC COMPROMISE ON AVIATION SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. Speaker, today is a glorious day for us. It is a glorious day for the American people because today we have reached a historic compromise and have finally addressed aviation security, and full & weeks after the tragic events of September 11.

We now have a victory for the American people, the flying public, and the flight crews that will be traveling during this upcoming holiday season. We will be scrapping a system that is broken.

Today, public safety is threatened by an unprecedented event: War has been declared on the American people by Osama bin Laden and his terrorist network. The Federal Government must protect our country during these times of peril.

Security at the Nation’s airports is no longer a private-sector matter; it is in fact part of the front line of our Nation’s defense. Congress needs to treat this as a question of national security by putting in place an effective Federal law enforcement system.

Mr. Speaker, America is experiencing a crisis of confidence in its aviation system. The status quo of private security firms in no way will provide the aviation security necessary to protect the traveling public. Simply put, the private contractors who currently have the responsibility for screening passengers and baggage failed on September 11, and for that matter, they have failed for the past three decades.

The private contractors entrusted with overseeing security for our aviation system are the same companies who pay very low wages, have a turnover of over 400 percent, and have failed to detect dangerous objects that were recently revealed by the GAO and the Department of Transportation during their testing.

In fact, 68 percent of the teams sent by the DOT Inspector General repeatedly found a breach of security.
Argenbright, one of the companies currently entrusted with security at our Nation's airports, was fined a million dollars and placed on 36 months probation. This company failed to conduct required background checks, hired convicted felons, and improperly trained workers who provided security at U.S. airports. Their probation was extended on October 23 for failure to comply with a previous court order. This is the same company that was responsible for the recent security breach at O'Hare.

This issue does not resolve just around Argenbright. In the last 5 years, FAA successfully prosecuted over 1,776 cases for screening violations which amounts to more than a violation a day. These cases resulted in $8.1 million in civil penalties against air carriers for screening violations by screening companies.

Are these the kind of companies, Mr. Speaker, that we want to ensure our aviation security when millions of our fellow Americans and even us, who travel twice a week and will be traveling during this upcoming holiday day season, need? Absolutely not.

Thankfully, under the compromise reached by the conference and the administration, all airports will have federalized screeners. In addition, this compromise will allow for a significant increase in the air marshal program. It will require screening for all checked baggage within 2 years, and it will require checks for all airport personnel and aircraft crews.

The Congress owes a duty to the American public to ensure the strongest level of security possible at our Nation's airports. As the senior member serving on aviation from California, I am very pleased to be able to come today to let the American people know that Congress has responded to their requests.

Removing the profit motive from airport security and establishing a Federal law enforcement work force will provide the necessary security and re-store the traveling public's confidence.

Mr. Speaker, we are all the better off.

TRAVEL STIMULUS ACT OF 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Committee on Education and the Workforce held a hearing at the request of the Democratic members of individuals who have been impacted by the downturn in the economy, workers, Mr. John Sweeney, the president of the AFL/CIO, who represents many, many workers who have been caught in this downturn in the economy.

As we listened to two of the witnesses, Mr. Michael Hannah, who is a member of the Steel Workers in Birmingham, Alabama, who has worked for 29 years in that industry and recently, working for Butler Manufacturing, has just been told that he will be laid off indefinitely as of November 30. Mr. Hannah had been laid off earlier this year for 4 months. And, of course, what Mr. Hannah is now confronting is, his unemployment benefits of $190 a week are running out.

We also heard from Linda Woods. Linda Woods has been employed in the commercial printing and advertising industry for the last 18 years and for one company the last 8 years, making $19.11 an hour, but she too has been laid off and she is down to her last unemployment check. Her son, who is also working and helping her obviously while he is holding down two jobs for a hotel and an auto parts factory, has lost 50 percent of his income. He spent the hotel job and then the auto parts factory job. So that income has been lost to her household.

Mr. Hannah told us also of the problems of his wife who just suffered a back injury and is unable to work and needs a lot of expensive medicines, as he said. He has also told us he would not be able to continue his health insurance under the COBRA program which allows unemployed people to maintain insurance they had when they were working, but they must pay for, would cost him $529 a month. And, of course, his unemployment provides him $760 a month, and he is unable to pay for that. So it is not a luxury, but it is something he must let go if he is going to try to meet his mortgage payment and the rest of the obligations to his family.

Ms. Woods was in the same situation. On her unemployment, she would have had to pay $200 a month for her COBRA and she can not afford to do that, nor can her son.

These are two individuals that, between them, have worked almost 50 years. 50 years, and find themselves having to need unemployment for 26 weeks and that has run out. And yet this Congress has failed to respond to provide for an extension of unemployment benefits. We provided a bailout for the airline industry for $15 billion, $5 billion in cash. We provided $38 billion to the energy industries in tax provisions. We have provided a repeal of the alternative minimum tax so that some of the richest and largest corporations in the world would get their taxes forgiven back to 1986. We have provided tax reductions for the wealthiest people in this country. And most recently now has suggested we speed up those tax reductions to that same group of very, very wealthy individuals.

But what the Congress has not found time to do is to take care of the hundreds of thousands of people, the millions of people in this country that are in the same situation as Linda Woods and Michael Hannah. What we have not found time to do is extend the unemployment benefits for another 26 weeks or another 13 weeks or whatever we can do to help these people. Many of these people were unemployed before September 11. But because of the September 11 terrorist attack in New York City and the Pentagon, the economy has gotten worse.

So their situation in trying to find work has become more difficult, and many people who are unemployed because of September 11 in the hotel industry, the travel industry, they now find themselves trying to replace their income in a worsening job market. If they look for work for 30 hours a week, they cannot get unemployment because that is not full-time, and while 97 percent of the businesses in this country pay into unemployment insurance, less than 40 percent of the people are covered.

Mr. Speaker, I realize my time is running out. I just want to say this. As Congress heads home for Thanksgiving dinner with their family, the holidays with their children and grandchildren, we had better remember these families and pass the unemployment extension bill so that they can do it. It is the most efficient, economic stimulus we can provide. These people will spend the money to create the demand so the economy can recover. We ought to do it and we ought to do it now.
THE PLIGHT OF BLACK FARMERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, over the last 9 years I have come to this floor more than once again to raise a saga that has affected the minority farmers just over the last 15 years, from 6,996 farms in 1978 to 2,498 farms, again when we measured from this time in 1992. There are several reasons why a number of minorities and women farmers have declined so rapidly, but the one that has been documented time and time again is the discrimination in the credit extended by the Department of Agriculture, the very agency established by the Constitution to accommodate and by the lost opportunities that the black farmers would have.

All farmers are affected by changes and forces that have been experienced in this new world order or this new economy. There are several factors that have caused small farmers to decline or to accelerate the decline of these small producers. They include globalization of commerce, economies of scale, limited access to capital and technological advances. Those who are affected by the mists of mistreatment and benign neglect. I would say that both the problems, as well as their possibilities, really transcend, region, transcend race. It encompasses a wide array of individuals that go beyond just black Americans but includes Hispanics, includes Asian, includes Indian Americans and women as well.

This issue also affects the disabled. A wheelchair-bound white male in Michigan has felt the sting of unfair discriminatory practices on the part of the Agriculture Department and contacted the Agriculture Department, who are there to serve; and indeed, all who are involved in farming as a way of life suffered by the mistreatment and by the lost opportunities that the black farmers would have.

In my home State of North Carolina, there has been a 64 percent decline in minority farmers just over the last 15 years, from 6,996 farms in 1978 to 2,498 farms, again when we measured from this time in 1992. There are several reasons why a number of minorities and women farmers have declined so rapidly, but the one that has been documented time and time again is the discrimination in the credit extended by the Department of Agriculture, the very agency established by the Constitution to accommodate and to assist the special needs of all farmers and ranchers.

The issue was first raised in 1968 when the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights established that the USDA discriminated both in internal employee actions and external program delivery activities. An ensuing USDA employee focus group that was established in 1970 again reported that USDA was callous in their institutional attitude and demeanor regarding civil rights and equal opportunity.

In 1982, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights examined the issue yet again and published the report called The Decline of the Black Farmers in America. The Commission concluded that there were widespread prejudicial practices in loan approval, loan servicing, farm management assistance as administered by then what we used to call the Farmers Home Administration.

However, as no improvement was forthcoming. I did not hear the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) had a report. I want to tell my colleagues that this saga has been going on. In fact, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) in his operational committee, as he chaired it, had a report and he called it The Minority Farmer: A Disappearing Resource. Well, we have an obligation then. We should do better.

Mr. Speaker, I will be coming to this floor more than once again to raise a consciousness that we cannot have this mistreatment, this mistreatment and this discrimination.

TRIBUTE TO VICTIMS OF SEPTEMBER 11 TRAGEDY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GRUCCI). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SHIMKUS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleague, the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS), in expressing the condolences and the grief of the American people.

We want to recognize the names of those who fell in the tragedy on September 11, and I would do so now.

Kevin Marlo; Jose J. Marrero; Fred Marrone; Constance Marshall; Shelley A. Marshall; John Marshall; Daniel A. Marrs; Michael A. Marti; Teresa M. Martin; Peter C. Martin; Karen Martin; William J. Martin; Brian E. Martineau; Waleska Martinez; Jose Martinez; Edward J. Martinez; Betsy Martinez; Robert Martinez; Lidie Martinez-Calderon; Paul Richard Martini; Joseph Mascali; Bernard Mascarenhas; Stephen Masi; Ada L. Mason; Nicholas “Nick” Massa; Patricia A. Massari; Michael Massaroli; Paul J. Mast; Billus J. Mast; Joseph Mastromonaco; Joseph Mathai; Charles William Mathers; William A. Mathiesen; Margaret Elaine Mattic; Marcello Mattricciano; Dean E. Mattson; Robert D. Mattson; Walter D. Mattson; Jason McArthur; Snowy McAvoy; Robert J. Maxwell; Renee May; Tyrone May; Keithroy Maynard; Robert J. Mayo; Kathy Mazza; Edward Mazzella, Jr.; Jennifer Mazzotta; Kaaria Mbaya; James J. McAalary; Brian McAleece; Patricia A. McNaney; Colin Richard McArthur; John McAvoy; Kenneth M. McBrayer; Michael Justin McCabe; Brendan F. McCabe; Charlie McCabe; Robert McAllister.

And I would encourage my colleagues to contact our colleague, the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. Jo Ann Davis), to help us read the names of those who fell in the tragedy on September 11.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER CONGRESSMAN EDWARD P. BOLAND

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) is recognized for 30 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate having this time in order to speak about our great beloved, departed colleague from the State of Massachusetts, Edward Patrick Boland. He served in this institution for 36 years. He was elected in 1952; he served until 1988.

He loved this institution, and this institution loved him. He arrived in 1952, with his best pal, Tip O’Neill, another freshman Congressman coming from the eastern part of the State. They were roommates for 24 years here in Washington, really only staying here on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and immediately returning to their home districts after the close of business on Thursday.

And that is how it went in their little apartment over all those years until Tip was elected Speaker and brought Millie down. However, it had been preceded just a couple of years before that by Eddie breaking his long years of bachelorhood and marrying Mary Egan, a marriage that produced four beautiful children that were, without question, the pride and joy of his life.

Now, for those that knew Eddie, he still and for always will be thought of as a giant, as someone who motored around on the floor of the House like the Energizer Bunny, moving at the speed of sound from deal to deal.
deal to deal as he worked his legislative magic. And whether the Member was Democrat or Republican, Eddie Boland was universally respected.

When, in 1977, Tip O'Neill decided that it was necessary to create a Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, by definition that job required someone who could keep secrets, someone who could be trusted with the greatest intelligence which our country has, that which protects the nation's health and safety, the being of every American, out of the entire institution, Tip selected Eddie Boland to be the first chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. Because he was someone that every Member, Democrat and Republican, would trust.

And so, without question, as the 20th century’s legislative history is written, he will be looked back upon as someone who was the quintessential public servant, who served as a State representative when Roosevelt was President. He served in World War II, was elected and served in Congress in the Korean War, in the Vietnam War, and all the way through to the point where not only was a whole generation ending, George Bush, Sr., administration was about to begin. What a legacy that he leaves to this country, to his family.

So we in the Massachusetts delegation, without question, will miss him; but we will all of our colleagues, all of his constituents, and all who came to know him in this great country.

I would like to turn now to the gentleman who succeeded Eddie in the United States Congress in his seat in Springfield, and, in fact, was Eddie’s choice to carry on the political and spiritual legacy that he brought to the Congress from the City of Springfield, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Neal). Mr. Neal of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Markey), who is the dean of the Massachusetts delegation, for organizing this Special Order as we pause in remembrance of my friend and former Congressman, Edward P. Boland.

Congressman Boland came here in the midst of the Eisenhower landslide; and he won that first race, I believe, by 5,000 votes. And for 36 years he served in Congress. I, by contrast, was making my first run for political office as a district that partly overlapped Eddie Boland. And here is an even more compelling statistic, given the modern nature of Congress. Congressman Boland held one press conference in 36 years to announce he was retiring; and he did it on Hungry Hill, where 36 years before he had announced he was running, without a press conference at that time.

It is remarkable that his legacy could have been as pervasive as it was, given the future he was fairly shy and really did not care for the limelight and did not care for the national attention that his years in Congress and the Boland amendment and the housing programs that he championed brought him as they were put in front of the American people.

It is the honor of a lifetime to have known him. I attended one day this remarkable Christmas luncheon that he had every year after he retired, which many of us are happy to have selected him State representative 50 years before all attended faithfully. At one of these luncheons, the fellow he defeated, I believe in 1934, for State representative from Hungry Hill, was there. And when asked why he was there, he simply pointed out that a half century before Eddie Boland had retired him from public life. And with that graciousness Boland simply smiled and laughed, and they had a wonderful moment of friendship and harmony.

I am struck by that service. I am struck by the legacy, but I would like to take all of the young Members that have come to this Congress during the last 2 years and say to them: you should understand the reverence that Eddie Boland held for service in this institution. He really believed that this was one of the great arbiters of fairness in American life. He really believed that this institution was courageous and visionary in the manner in which it proceeded. But not only did he feel strongly about this institution, he was a believer in the Federal Government of the United States.

I am going to close on this note, because while people understood him and his legacy and the programs he championed, one of the footnotes that occurred in his obituary that few people ever knew, because he never called attention to it, Eddie Boland marched in Selma, Alabama, to bring about an end to much of the unfairness that had been institutionalized in American life. He was patriotic, he was kind, he was impeccably decent.

To a wonderful wife in Mary Egan, and to hear his son’s remarkable testimony to his father at the funeral, his son Edward, his daughter Martha, daughter Kathleen, and son Michael. What a great family. And I would be remiss as I close if I did not mention one of the great eulogies that I have ever heard that came from former judge and my friend, Daniel M. Ekey, who was Eddie Boland’s friend for 70 years.

We will miss him in this institution; we miss him in Massachusetts. A great friend was Congressman Eddie Boland.

Mr. Markey. Let me now yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Olver), whose congressional district abuts the district of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Neal) and then Congressman Boland, so he knew him very well.

Mr. Olver. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I am very pleased to be able to join my colleagues, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Neal), from the second district, and the successor to Edward P. Boland, and the dean of our delegation, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Markey), from the eastern part of the State.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the life and work of Congressman Edward Boland, who represented the Second Congressional District of Massachusetts for nearly 4 decades. Let me start by giving my deepest sympathy to Mary Boland and the Boland children for their loss of a husband and a father.

I first met Congressman Eddie Boland in 1968. He had already served more than 15 years and was a force in the Congress. I, by contrast, was making my first run for political office as a Massachusetts State representative in a district that partly overlapped Eddie Boland’s Second Congressional District.
was speaking at an event in Granby, and I was certain that he could be heard all of the way to South Hadley. Over time I learned that Congressman Ed Boland was not just heard, but attention was paid when he spoke. He was highly regarded in the halls of the Senate. He was heard by Presidents at the White House. He was even heard at the Pentagon.

This modest man with a towering voice commanded towering respect here in Congress and he was a towering presence in the political life of western Massachusetts. Eddie Boland provides even now a model for Members of this House of Representatives to follow.

Eddie Boland was known equally for his ability to tackle the most complex issues of the day, and his willingness to show simple kindness to anyone around him who needed his help. He rose to national prominence on a number of issues, most notably his authorship of the Boland amendments restricting U.S. involvement in the conflict in Nicaragua. Yet the people of the Second Congressional District remained his focus throughout his long and distinguished career.

When Eddie Boland passed away last week, everyone in the Pioneer Valley lost a friend. On behalf of the people of the First Congressional District, I rise to say “thank you” one last time to Congressman Edward Boland for his work and his service.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for participating in this special order, and now I yield to the minority whip designate, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI), who knew Ed Boland well.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman for calling this special order and congratulate him. I congratulate because this is a wonderful occasion when we in the House who served with Ed Boland can come together and talk about him and the wonderful contribution he made to our country.

I felt a special responsibility to come to the floor, not only because it was a privilege to serve with Eddie, but also as the senior Democrat on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, I know full well what his great contribution was to our country. The gentleman referred to in his remarks very beautifully, and I want to speak to that for a bit.

I do so in part to some of the appreciation from the staff of the Intelligence Committee, as well as many Members who have served on that committee over time. We serve in the Edward P. Boland Room in the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

For over 50 years, 36 in this House, Eddie Boland represented the people of western Massachusetts with uncommon dedication and effectiveness. He believed deeply in the capacity of government to do a positive force in people’s lives and in the duty of those in government to do everything within their power to ensure that result.

It has been said that he treated his constituents the same way as he treated his friends. That explains not only his success at the polls, but the high regard with which he was held. His career was a testament to the fact that politics, when practiced by people of great skill and great commitment, is both an art and a high calling.

Eddie served with distinction on the Committee on Appropriations, and was the committee’s second most senior Democrat. He was a long-time chairman of what was then the Department of Housing and Urban Affairs and Independent Agencies, now known as VA-HUD. I doubt that there are many communities in the United States who have not benefited from his programs that he promoted on the subcommittee. Veterans hospitals and clinics, projects to improve the quality of air and water, affordable housing for the poor, the elderly and disabled, efforts to reinvigorate the Nation’s cities and to explore the universe of which we are a part, were among the activities made national priorities by the appropriations measures he crafted. It is impossible to calculate all of the ways in which those programs made fuller and more secure the lives of the people of our country.

Had Eddie Boland’s service been measured only by his work on the Committee on Appropriations, it would have been deemed highly successful. As has been noted, the distinguished dean of the Massachusetts delegation earlier, in 1977 Speaker Tip O’Neill asked Eddie to be the first chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. Tip’s reasoning was simple. The leader of that committee would have to be someone people could trust, as the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKET) said, someone who could keep a secret.

Eddie Boland’s integrity was unassailable. The reputation for keeping secret matters secret is due in large part to the standard established during the 8 years he served as chairman. That is an incredibly long time to be chairman of the Committee on Intelligence.

Although not one to seek fame, he did not shrink from taking on a popular President in a most public way when the U.S. intelligence agencies, unwisely, in his judgment, became involved in a Nicaraguan adventure. Later when questions arose as to whether laws restricting the activities of those agencies had been violated, he was among the small number of Members of the House selected to determine the truth. Even in the highly charged atmosphere that surrounded that investigation, when legislation bearing his name was central to the inquiry, he was not interested in publicity, but sought only to do the job entrusted to him by the House.

Despite many accomplishments in Washington, Eddie took his greatest joy and was most proud of his family back home in Springfield. His wife, Mary, and their children, Martha, Edward Jr., Kathleen, and Michael were the focus of his life, each though he started late in life to acquire that magnificent and beautiful family. Many of us saw him with his family at the funeral of Congressman Joe Moakley, an old friend, in this House, and it gave us a chance to say hello to Eddie, and little did we know that it would be good-bye. But we reported to our colleagues in the House that Eddie was still as sharp as a tack and enjoying his time here.

That is why he left here, to spend more time with his family at a very important time in their lives. His devotion to them says as much about the man he was as does his distinguished service in the Congress.

Mr. Speaker, although I only served for a short time with Eddie Boland, I directly followed him onto the Committee on Appropriations and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, so I know well how well-respected he was by his colleagues and by the people in the executive branch. He was one of the quiet, hard-working Members so essential to the conduct of the business of the House. His service enriched the Nation, and will always be a source of great pride for his family. Anyone who served with him will always treasure the privilege of calling him a colleague.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for allowing me to participate in this special order.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for participating.

One of the great things about Eddie Boland was that he lived such a long life. He passed away at 90. The gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) is now one of the few Members who served with him because he left 13 years ago. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for holding this special order so we can pay tribute to Eddie Boland. I want to mention a small episode.

There was a time when many of us were involved in trying to end the violence in Latin America, in Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua and elsewhere. It was a struggle that was consuming those individuals and those countries. It was an uphill struggle.

Finally, justice came, and in the case of El Salvador, a democratic government has been established and a series of elections have been held; but that was not the history of the region and the countries. It was an uphill struggle.

about their involvement in the killing of the Jesuits at the university. From that day forward, because he recognized the lie when it was uttered, and I was with him on the trip to Latin America to investigate that, Mr. Moakley recognized the lie the minute it was put forth, knew that military liaison officers were present and was caught in a situation of politesse by those generals. He pursued it along with our now-colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. McGovern) for many, many months until that lie unraveled and we realized the incredible that the Government of El Salvador played in the murder of those Jesuits and its military.

Eddie Boland, while he did not agree with us necessarily on the policy in Latin America or what some of us were trying to achieve, believed that the laws of the land were the laws of the land. When he later found out the involvement of the intelligence agency in Latin America and when it became clear that they were judicating the laws, we passed the Boland amendment that made it very clear that having Eddie Boland stand before this Congress and support the Boland amendment and having this Congress pass the Boland amendment as he did in his role as the chairman of the Intelligence Committee, changed the dynamics and changed people’s attitude to what was taking place in Central America and the deep involvement of this country in really horrific events and abuses of human rights in those countries.

Mr. Markey, I think we owe him a great debt of gratitude because he insisted that people not play fast and loose with the laws of this country, that this country not be involved in the abuse of human rights of the people in El Salvador; and we all should thank him very much and remember him for that important role that he played on behalf of humanity who, without Eddie Boland, would not have had a champion of that stature to bring about that change.

I thank Eddie Boland for his service to this country.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Pelosi).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I just want to mention that we serve, those of us on the Intelligence Committee, serve in the Edward P. Boland Room upstairs, and while Members have the opportunity to come to the floor to press our comrades as well as their commendations of Mr. Boland, I want to extend the condolences also of the staff of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, especially Mike Sheehy, the Democratic counsel to the staff, who served Mr. Boland so very well for so many years, and mourns his death, and knows more about his contributions than many.

I thank the gentleman for allowing me that further remark.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. George Miller) very much. When a younger Member is advocating for an idea, you look around the institution to find somebody who everybody respects who as we say in the Catholic Church, would place their imprimatur, their blessing, on the idea.

As the gentleman from California (Mr. George Miller) knows, when Mr. Boland put his blessing in terms of what our relationship should be with the Government of Nicaragua, at that point people could disagree with Eddie Boland, but they knew they would be wrong because he would never take anything other than the most honest position.

Let me conclude the special order by recognizing the only other member with the exception of myself who served in the Massachusetts congressional delegation with Eddie Boland, the Congressman from the city of Newton, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank).

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Markey) for taking this special order and for giving us a chance to express our sympathy to Mary Boland and their children, and express our admiration for a man who really had an extraordinary, distinguished legislative career.

I am a great follower of parliamentary and legislative history. It is something that I read to relax, reading about the British parliament and other parliamentary bodies. I do not think it is sufficiently appreciated what an important role a leading institutionalist played in making democracy function. Among other things, that is what Eddie Boland exemplified.

He was an elected official, a man who came up through the political ranks, was always deeply rooted in the community from which he came, who was always in constant touch at all levels with the people he represented, and who took to Washington their mandate and built on it. He was at the same time their Representative and someone who transcended what might be the narrowing aspects of being a Representative.

As previous speakers have said, he confounded some stereotypes. He was not by his manner, by his political background, by his general place in the world of the political culture the kind of man who we would have expected to have been leading an assault on a Presidential foreign policy. We have a tradition of deferring to Presidents in foreign policy, indeed excessively, it seems to me, in many cases because legitimizing differences ought to be articulated.

Eddie Boland, as the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from California just said, did a great deal to legitimate the notion that in a democratic society, elected officials had not only the right but the duty to speak out if they thought the President was pursuing gravely mistaken foreign policies. The fact that Ed Boland did that and did that with his dignity and with his respect for this institution and with all of the cultural attributes that he brought to the job really did, as the gentleman said, give it the imprimatur, or did give it a legitimacy.

What that meant was this. It meant we would argue it on the merits. Too often when we are dealing with an issue like this, there is a whole set of defences, a whole set of attitudes that interfere. Ed Boland’s stature in this institution was justifiably of sufficient weight so that when he spoke on that issue, he overcame those defences and we got to the merits, and he did a great service. He was also, of course, defending the prerogatives of the elected legislature against the executive, and in that also he was carrying on in the tradition of great parliamentarians.

Finally, as someone who has been concerned with housing policy since I got here, I want to acknowledge his work on the Appropriations Subcommittee Chair in terms of recognizing the obligation of this very wealthy country to do something about the housing needs of the people. We look back now to the days of Ed Boland’s chairmanship of the Appropriations subcommittee dealing with HUD as golden days when we in fact did far more to meet vital social needs than we are doing today, unfortunately. And there are a lot of reasons for that. But Ed Boland’s committed and passionate advocacy, and you can have that without a lot of noise, you can be passionate by having an unstinting, unyielding determination to do the right thing; and that is what he had.

As my friend from Massachusetts has said, he and I are the last two Members who served with Ed Boland and know just what integrity he brought to this job and just to what extent he exemplified what an elected representative of the people ought to be in a functioning democracy. I thank him for giving me the opportunity to say this.

Mr. MARKEY. I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts, and I thank all of the Members who have participated in this Special Order.

We will keep this part of the Record open so that any other Members who wish to do so may enter their own statement.

Eddie Boland’s career ended the way it began. He worked tirelessly in order to make the world a safer place. I am proud to have known him. I am proud to have worked with him. I am proud to have served with him in this institution that he loved so much. I am proud to have called him my friend. His service to this country will never be forgotten. Our condolences to his wife, Mary, and his children.

May Eddie Boland rest in peace.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the life of public service and dedication of Congressman Edward ‘Eddie’ P. Boland. Congressman Boland was a humble statesman who moved legislative mountains and earned the respect of his colleagues with a polite manner and solemn regard for this body.

He received his education from Springfield's Bay Path Institute and Boston College Law School. The son of an Irish immigrant railroad worker, he would later establish himself as a community leader. Boland began his life of public service at the age of twenty-three when elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives. Later, he was elected as the Hampden County register of deeds. In 1942, he enlisted in the Army to fight tyranny in the Pacific theater of World War II and was promoted to captain.

In 1952, Eddie Boland won election to Massachusetts' second congressional district seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. During his 36 years in the House, Congressman Boland became the Chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and of the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee. Developing the necessary trust between his committee and the intelligence community and an acceptance of the need for Congressional oversight were hallmark achievements. For example, he was a steadfast advocate for individual's privacy rights and providing informative but discreet intelligence information to the public. Among this most notable legislative achievements was passage of the Boland amendments to the use of U.S. funds by Nicaragua's Contra rebels and lay at the heart of the "Iran-Contra" scandal.

Although Congressman Boland rose to become a figure of national prominence, he never lost sight of his modest beginnings in the Hungry Hill district of Springfield, Massachusetts. Congressman Edward P. Boland is survived by his wife Mary Egan, and four children. His legacy to our nation is a model of leadership born from quiet dignity and integrity.

AIRLINE SECURITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Tiberi) Under the Speaker's announcement of policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Inslee) is recognized for the balance of the hour, approximately 28 minutes.

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I have come to the floor this evening to comment on what I believe is a major, major step forward in our national security and, that is, the imminent passage of our airline security bill. Our conferees, we have been told, have agreed on a measure that will be given to the traveling public. It is high time that the U.S. Congress has passed such a measure. We are told now that our conferees in both parties, in the House and Senate, have agreed on a measure that will set a deadline for the actual implementation of technologies for checked baggage. We also are told that we are going to have interim measures while we get to that 100 percent use by mechanical devices, by some of the sophisticated machinery, to be assured that we could see a plane taken down out of the sky.

This has been the result of a lot of effort here in Congress, but I want to pay a real congratulatory note to two gentlemen who have been working for over a decade now to achieve that end, and those gentlemen are Bob Monetti and George Williams, two gentlemen each of whom lost a son in the Lockerbie bombing in Scotland in 1988. Bob Monetti, who lost his son Rick, a Syracuse student, in that bombing and Mr. Monetti have been working with the community of families that lost members in the Lockerbie bombing to try to get this Chamber, the U.S. House, and the Senate, to pass a provision to assure that that type of tragedy cannot happen again.

I have met Mr. Monetti; he is a great leader in this regard and has been a conscience of his community to see it to it that the House of Representatives would act. I have also met Mr. George Williams, who lost his son Geordie, an American soldier, Mr. Williams, a proud Marine. I really want to thank Mr. Williams for his efforts to make sure that the U.S. Congress would finally act to see it to it that other family members do not have to suffer a loss that they have done. I think it is a real mark of tribute to these families that they have hung in this effort for over 10 years to see it to it that the Congress would finally act.

Now, in the next day or two, we will be voting on a provision that will finally achieve their goal of having 100 percent screening. I want to thank Mr. Monetti and Mr. Williams and all of the Lockerbie families for their efforts to educate us in Congress about the need for this. I hope they take some measure of satisfaction. I know Rick and Geordie would be real proud of their fathers when this bill passes, as we were of them.

I also want to thank some of our co-sponsors, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Strickland), a Democrat, who has insisted on this; the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Shays), a Republican. The gentleman from Connecticut has been a great, great leader on many reform efforts. He has been instrumental in convincing some of the leadership on the Republican side of the aisle in including this measure in the eventual airline security bill. I consider this a bipartisan success through the efforts of several other Republicans, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Markey) and others on our side of the aisle who have gotten this in. We are happy that we have finally achieved this end, that we can now tell Americans that they will be able to have the peace of mind when they get on an airplane that we are not going to have explosives in the belly of the airplane.

There are a couple of things we hope that both our conferees, if this has not been totally finalized, and our friends at the FAA and the Department of Transportation need to be attentive to, and that is, that we need to very quickly evaluate the screening devices for various types of technology to make sure that we use the most effective, the fastest, the most efficient, the most cost-effective means of screening this baggage. We brought to the Cannon House Office Building last week some new technology that we hope that the FAA will look at very closely when we choose which types of screening machines to use. We want the FAA to be very open in its assessment so that we have the fair opportunity to assess all of the technologies, and there are several types of machines that use several types of technology to determine whether there is an explosive device in a bag. We are going to be working diligently with the FAA to make sure that they have a fair evaluation process to decide which type of technology to implement throughout our Nation's airports. In doing that, we are going to be very insistent that we fully mobilize the industrialized base of the United States.

Some time ago, the FAA talked about getting this done in 10 years or more, to get enough machines in our airports to get this done. We are not going to wait that long. We need to do the same kind of industrialization and mobilization that happened in World War II. We built about 10 or 12,000 B-24s in World War II when we fully mobilized our industrial base. We have got the same game in the same machines. We need a couple of thousand of them, and we need to find the licensing and a contractual way to fully engage the manufacturers of this country to get this done right away. We are going to be very insistent on that. We look forward to working with our agencies to make sure we make this decision promptly and in a way that gets the best technology into our airports.

The other aspect of this bill that we are very pleased at it will have a quantum leap forward in the quality of screening of the individuals who screen passengers when they go through these screening gates heading for their airplanes. We have had such a litany of failure. We have had such a disastrous experience with private companies, low-bid contractors, who have allowed these types of failures to occur. Now, we have finally agreed and our conferees have agreed to essentially ensure that we will have the same kind of industrialization and mobilization in these stations in the next 2 years. We are very happy that that assurance will be given to the traveling public. It is time that we have the same level of protection of folks when they get on airplanes as we do when we have folks coming across our borders, namely, we have Federal employees who have been certified and trained, that work for Uncle Sam; now, we have a type of assurance that we have with FBI agents, and we have a type of assurance we have for fire and police personnel who work for the public and are certified and trained appropriately. We are going to require that and that that will happen.

As you know, as with any legislative process, there has been some give and take in fashioning that, the give and take as some of the Republican leadership has resisted this idea, and we have been told that in this provision, there will be a provision that 2 years from now, airports that wanted to petition the agency to have a private contractor do this work, if they can convince the agency that that was a good idea, they would at least allow that argument to be made. But with all due respect, we do not think there is going to be any such petitions because the traveling public is going to learn that the best way to get this done is to have Federal employees to do it, and we are confident that that is going to be the case; and we feel good about the strides that have been made.

We want to compliment our friends across the aisle who showed some bold leadership to move this effort forward. I see the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Ganske) here. I do not know if he wants to join in this colloquy or not, but I would be happy to yield to him if he would like to join me in this regard. Mr. GANSKE. I appreciate the recognition.

On September 11 when we saw the airplane fly into the World Trade Center after the first one had already struck the first building and we kept seeing it and seeing it again and again on TV, it really brought home the fact that aviation security is a national security. We have learned from September 11 that we also need to have very good security at our smaller airports, because some of those terrorists enter the system through the smaller airports, and, once they are passed as screeners, then they do not get examined again.

So what the thrust of this conference report will do is to make sure that these screeners get professional training, that they meet professional standards, that they meet decent living wage, so that they do not just run down the hallway and take the next job that is open at McDonald’s, that they will view themselves as a professional in terms of law enforcement, similar to what we have with Customs inspectors and officials.

That changes the whole mind set of the people who do those jobs. I think it is very, very important. Yet, at the same time this conference report, this compromise, addresses concerns that people had with regular civil service, in that they were worried that if a person was not doing their job, that you could not get them off the job and replace it in a reasonable period of time. Because this is a job, these screener jobs are, in my opinion, professional law enforce-type jobs, and I think we learned on September 11 that, you know, aviation security is a national security, and national security is something that we all take an oath to uphold when we say that we will defend the Constitution, because the Constitution says that we will do our best job to secure the protection and the national defense.

So, I, too, am pleased with the conference report that we are going to vote on tomorrow. I expect we will have an overwhelming vote for this conference report. We are going to sign it, and we will start to get on our way to having better security.

I think the gentleman was absolutely correct, it will take a little while to implement. You will still be some mistakes made. Nobody and no system is perfect. But the question is, will we have a better system? And I think this conference report will do that.

Mr. INSLEE. I thank the gentleman for his leadership on this issue. It is a very difficult position, and the gentleman did an admirable job getting this issue before on your side of the aisle. We appreciate that very much.

Mr. STRICKLAND. I want to thank my friend from Washington State. You know, oftentimes when we stand in this chamber, we find that we are being critical of each other. But I would like to think about what is it we are fighting out that the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) has been really wonderful on this issue.

I am a Democrat, you are a Repub-clican. But I have observed you during the course of your tenure in this House, and not only on this issue, but on the Patients’ Bill of Rights and on many other issues. The gentleman has been such a worthy Member and has fought for very good causes. I thank you for your great efforts on this legislation.

I also want to thank my friend from Washington State (Mr. INSLEE). I really believe that the emphasis on screening all of the baggage that goes into the baggage of airplanes, which has been included in this compromise, I believe that provision perhaps would not have been included had it not been for your efforts.

So I suppose this is an evening when we stand on this floor and, instead of being critical or talking about the things that we wish would happen, we in a sense celebrate the fact that, after weeks of work, that we have been able to reach a compromise. But it is not a compromise on safety, it is a compromise on strategy and process.

I think what we have done is come up with a bill that will make the American people feel much safer. That is something that both sides of this chamber should feel good about.

I do not think either side, Democrat or Republican, can claim total victory in terms of getting their particular point of view put forth in this compromise, but I do think this is an example of how the process can work and should work. It has worked with this issue, and it is my hope that in the remaining days of this session of our Congress, that this kind of process could work to get a Patients’ Bill of Rights brought before us, to get an education bill brought before us. We still have some time remaining before we have to draw this session to a close, and I trust that we will get somewhere as long as we are unbending and uncompromising. But if we work together for the good of the country, I think we can accomplish a great deal of good.

So I feel some relief tonight. I stood last week where the gentleman is standing, and I said that if the American people will just simply allow their voices to be heard, if they will communicate their strong desire for an airline security bill to the Members of the House and the Senate, that we can get this done before we leave here.

I believe over the last several days the American people have expressed themselves very clearly and very strongly. They want to feel that it is safe to get on an American airliner and fly. They want to know if they put their families on that airliner, that everything that can be done has been done to see that their family members are going to be safe. They want this chamber to work together cooperatively to do the people’s business.

So, as we found out throughout the course of our debate, we have been able to accomplish that, and tomorrow I think we are going to have a very strong vote on this bill, the President will sign it, and we can say to the American people and to our individual constituencies that we have done our part to make sure that they are safe when they fly.

Is it perfect? No, it is not. Will it solve all the problems? No, it will not. There will be no perfect solution to the problems that we face.

One of the things that I continue to be concerned about, as I know my friend from Washington State is concerned about, is whether or not we are moving as expeditiously, as rapidly as we should be able to accomplish that. And I believe we eventually will get to the point where people can say that my government has done all that it can do to make sure that I am safe when I get on an airliner.

Mr. INSLEE. I thank the gentleman, and I appreciate all your great work. When we started this dialogue several weeks ago, it was a little bit lonely talking about that checked baggage. But I agree with the gentleman: The American voice was heard. We shared some information with America, namely, that not enough of these bags were being screened. Americans responded, they let their legislators know what they thought, and we have this product.

So we want to thank Americans for their part in achieving this end, and we will look forward now to passage of this in the next day or two, and realize that we have a real step forward in airline security.

Mr. STRICKLAND. If I could just say another word, I mentioned earlier the tenacious fight of the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) for a strong Patients’ Bill of Rights. Perhaps the American people can do for a Patients’ Bill of Rights what the American people have done for an airline security legislation if they just simply let their Member of Congress or they let their Senator know how important this is.

I stood on this floor a few weeks ago and I talked about one of my constituents, a young woman, 41 years of age, whose name was Patsy Haines. She had leukemia, and she needed a transplant, a bone marrow transplant. She had a brother who was a perfect match. The insurance company would not agree to pay for it. She was not going to pay for it.

I went to the James Cancer Center in Columbus, Ohio, a wonderful institution where they do great research. I talked with cancer specialists. They talked with my constituent, these wonderful well-trained doctors and researchers. They talked with my constituent, they talked with her personal physician, and they convinced her that she needed this transplant, and, if she received it, she quite possibly would be cured of her condition and live a long life, and the chances were if she did not receive this treatment, that she almost certainly at some point in the future would lose her life.

I went to Secretary Thompson and talked with him about it, and he was wonderfully sympathetic. In fact, I wrote the Secretary a letter today thanking him for his concern for Patsy Haines.

But the fact is that the only way she got this surgery, and, by the way she got her surgery last week and we are staying in touch on a daily basis to see how she is doing, but the way she got her surgery was for Uncle Sam to come along and provide it. The Medicare system provided this surgery. Her insurance company never relented. So here Uncle Sam comes to the rescue.

But when I think of Patsy Haines and her critical condition tonight, and our great hope that she is going to recover and continue to be a wife and a mother and a grandmother to her child, I am reminded that there are many people in this country who face similar circumstances and who need the protection that this House of Representatives can give them.

So I just hope that the people in this country, as they did with the airline security bill, will contact Senators and Congress Members and say get this bill passed so that we can know that we are being protected in terms of our health care.

Mr. GANSKE. If the gentleman would yield further, I thank the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Washington for their kind words.

The economy is in a real sleep right now, and insurance premiums have gone up a lot. People are being laid off work. So there is a real problem with access to health care. However, as those HMOs start to squeeze down, I predict that we are going to see more and more examples again of people not getting the type of necessary medical care that they deserve and that they pay a lot of premiums for.

I assure the gentleman that we will continue to push to get a real bill to push for a strong Patients’ Bill of Rights. The conference has not even yet been named, partly, I think, because of September 11 and because we have had to deal with a number of emergent issues, such as aviation. But that does not mean that when we come back after Christmas, the beginning of next year, that we should not refocus attention on some of these issues that we have debated in the past.

I would encourage the gentlemen to listen to part of my next half-hour or so, because I am going to be introducing tomorrow, along with the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. BERRY), the companion bill to the Kennedy-Frist bioterrorism bill, which does a number of good things to try to address the issue of bioterrorism.

We are looking for cosponsors, we are going to drop that bill tomorrow sometime, and I would encourage my colleagues’ participation in this, because I know both of my colleagues have been very interested in health issues. I think that this is a really good bill; it is a bipartisan bill. It is not a bill on the cheap, but it is not a profligate bill either. It will address many issues that our constituents are asking us about in terms of their threat from such things as anthrax and smallpox and potential epidemics. So once again, I thank both the gentlemen for their kind remarks.

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I would love to listen to the gentleman’s presentation, but I have a meeting with an incredible high school teacher named Mary Linquist of the famous Linquist teaching family that I have to keep to tackle educational matters, but I will look at the gentleman’s bill and I thank the gentleman for his work on that.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I would like to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr.
THE THREAT OF BIOTERRORISM IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FORBES). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, September 11 did change this country. As we were just discussing here on the floor, all of us have very vivid memories of September 11. We see images seared into our minds of airplanes flying into buildings, those tall World Trade Center buildings collapsing, clouds of evaporated concrete, steel, glass, and fellow human beings rolling down the streets. I have a picture in my mind of the flaming crater of the Pentagon and an American flag flying in front of it.

A few days after September 11, I visited ground zero. At that time there were six or seven stories of smoking rubble. I will never forget that visit. I kept seeing superimposed on that horrific sight, especially the graveyard of 5,000 innocent Americans, words that I had seen written on the wall of a family relief center just a short time before visiting ground zero. This was a family relief center where families of victims could come in, get financial help and get counseling as well. All along one wall for probably about 100 yards, families had brought in pictures of their mothers and fathers and sons and daughters, put them on the wall and then written personal notes to them, and there were flowers and candles underneath these pictures. I kept seeing, as I was looking at that pile of rubble, I kept seeing the handwriting of a little girl. One could tell she was just learning to write from her handwriting and it said, "Daddy, I miss you. I will love you always." I will tell my colleagues something. We still grieve for those victims. Every day in The New York Times there is one full page of obituaries from the victims of that attack. A little picture and a little story or vignette about that person. I do not know about my colleagues, but I can only read about two or three of those, and that is all I can read for that day. They are very human stories. Because they remind us that these were people just like our neighbors, members of our family, and we grieve for these people. We grieve for the victims of the bioterrorist attacks, the anthrax attack that has killed people and made many others sick.

I remember from September 11 about 170 Members of Congress gathering on the steps of the Capitol in the lengthening twilight shadows to say a prayer for those victims. As our leadership, both parties, was walking off the steps, somebody started singing God Bless America. I felt a real sense of unity at that moment, because we were standing there, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans. And the message that day and today and tomorrow to those who have one of the greatest, if not the greatest, nations on Earth, the United States, the most powerful country, the United States, that we are here, we are united. You can challenge our Nation's spirit, but you cannot break it. And we will chase down to the ends of the Earth, if necessary, the terrorists who caused this attack on our country. We have to find the funds for the victims' families, and our national security demands it.

I commend the brave men and women who, even at this moment, are fighting in Afghanistan, flying airplane raids against the Taliban, a thoroughly despicable lot, the Taliban and the terrorists they harbor. People who have taken little girls who have dared to do something like go to school, taken them to a soccer field and killed them. It is a war, but as President Bush has rightly said, this is a war that will probably go on for some period of time. It will not be easy to root out the nests of those vipers. They are intertwined throughout Europe in the most grotesque and/publ. homes yet in the United States. So we are devoting a lot of resources to find them. This Congress has acted on this. We have passed legislation to give assistance to our security forces and to our military. I give a great deal of credit to NCSL and NCVS, who need to find out these terrorists before they commit an act like an airplane hijacking or lacing letters with anthrax and sending them through our mail system.

I think we have done a pretty good job here of, in a bipartisan fashion, crafting, drafting legislation, getting it signed with overwhelmingly bipartisan votes and to the President's desk for his signature that balances the rights of individuals to their privacy and the need of the Government to monitor them. As we move forward, I think that one of the most important constitutional protections is to our citizens' health and safety.

Now, prior to coming to Congress I was a physician. I have taken care of patients with some pretty serious infections. I have treated patients who have had what is called necrotizing fasciitis, or in the popular vernacular, it is called the flesh-eating disease. But I will not finance this and say that there was anthrax that had gotten through the mail, contaminated the Hart Office Building, contaminated my office building, the Longworth Building, I needed to go back and review a little bit on the biology of anthrax and look up again some of my old medical textbooks on smallpox.

Mr. Speaker, we had thought that we had eradicated that disease from the world, and yet we are finding out that there may very well be supplies of anthrax not just in secured labs in the United States and Russia, but potentially also in some terrorist states. Something to worry about.

This last weekend I was in Iowa. I had several meetings; and I will tell my colleagues that people are concerned about aviation security and they are concerned about a bioterrorist attack. I would recommend to my colleagues that they see or watch the program that was on WITF last night on WITF. It is called "America's Secret War—Germs," by Judith Miller, Stephen Engelberg and William Broad. This should be required reading for every Congressman and every Congresswoman. It is readable; it is understandable. It does not deal just with biology, but it deals with the bioterrorist threat.

There is another book that people should read, or at least parts of it. It is by a fellow named Ken Alibek, and it is called "Life and Death in the Soviet Union." It is referenced in this book "Germs." Now, let me read a section. Ken Alibek was a Russian scientist who did germ warfare for the Soviet Union. He changed his name when he defected to the United States. His real name is Kanatjan Alibekov. He changed it to sound more American. Here is what is, a short section of what this book "Germs" says about the type of information Mr. Alibek brought to our intelligence agencies. Mr. Alibek had to say that he was reporting in grim detail, "massive batches of 'anthrax' that were produced hundreds of tons of anthrax." Let me repeat that, "Hundreds of tons" of anthrax, smallpox, plague germs meant for use against the United States and its allies."

The amounts dwarfed anything American experts had ever imagined. Alibek also described a germ empire that stretched from the Soviet Council of Ministers to the Soviet Academy of Sciences through the Ministries of Health, Defense and Agriculture and into the Biopreparat, his own ostensibly civilian pharmaceutical agency.

In fact, Biopreparat was a biologic war machine that employed tens of thousands of people at more than 750 sites spread across Russia and Kazakhstan. We were worried about this.

This book goes through the long history of biologic warfare research, but we were particularly worried because there filtered out of the Soviet Union reports of an epidemic, an anthrax epidemic in one of these towns that proved to be a research town.

For years we tried to figure out whether in fact this had been tainted meat, like the Soviets had said, or whether in fact there had been a release of aerosolized anthrax by accident from one of the Soviet bloc labs. It turned out in the end that it was a leak, and there was a very significant contamination and loss of life in the Soviet Union from that.

The United States carried on research, too, but nothing to the scale of the Soviet Union. What is worrisome is that after the collapse of the Soviet Union and the economic chaos that has ensued, so many of these biologists in the Soviet Union that were doing the type of research that Mr. Alibek was doing were basically unemployed. They were destitute.

It is fair to say that our defense and our intelligence agencies, members high up in our government, have been very concerned that these individuals and their expertise could get to terrorist states. So, all of a sudden when we had these letters laced with anthrax, the public became very aware of this potential threat.

Now, I should point out that this attack with anthrax was not the first biologic terrorist attack in the United States. I did my general surgery training in Oregon. Shortly after I left Oregon to go to Boston for some additional training, 750 people in a little town in eastern Oregon became deathly ill with salmonella. It turned out that end of the year.

It is clear that the United States faces a grave and I think growing threat from bioterrorism. There is some evidence that Osama bin Laden and his people have tried to develop biologic agents. We know that a terrorist group from Jordan tried planting biologic agents in subways.

We have also found that the recent rather limited anthrax attacks on our country have stretched to the breaking point Federal, State, and local public health agencies, so I think we need to substantially invest in some bioterrorism preparedness. As I said before, a major epidemic I think would overwhelm our hospitals. It would overwhelm our Federal, State, and local health agencies.

We need to be able to respond to a bioterrorist attack. We need to do things to improve the ability of victims to survive, improve our ability to treat the victims of an attack in a hospital. I think we need to improve our ability to contain an epidemic by expanding treatment. That means increasing our supplies of drugs, our pharmaceutical stockpiles. We need to accelerate the development of new treatments, including a smallpox vaccine.

So tomorrow, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. BERRY) and I will introduce in the House a companion bill to the bill that Senator BILL FRIST and Senator KENNEDY introduced on the Senate side today. It is called the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act. Let me just briefly summarize a few things that this bill does.

We need to upgrade Federal capacity to respond to bioterrorism by expanding the strategic national pharmaceutical stockpile. It would expand the Centers for Disease Control capacities and improve training.

Public health laboratories, our laboratories, have been severely stretched in trying to deal with all of the types of cultures that we have been doing with just this anthrax attack. We need better disease surveillance so that we can coordinate information from all around the country, so that we have early warning systems and will be able to respond to those.

We need to enhance the controls on dangerous biologic agents. Anthrax is an organism that exists in the soil and the United States and see a sporadic anthrax case in cattle, for instance. There have been many, many sites around the country that have anthrax in their storerooms, in their stores, in their labs, because they have been doing research on this as it relates to animal diseases.

We need to make sure that those dangerous agents are properly secure so that they cannot be stolen. We need to improve the response at the State and local level.

Mr. Speaker, the States right now are having a tough time because, as the economy has gone down, we will see in practically every State's newspapers problems with meeting their State budgets. This is the case in Iowa. Our legislature just had a special session where they did an across-the-board 4 or 5 percent cut in Federal-State spending, but it is clear that these State public health services have been trimmed for several years and are very, very insufficient.

So we need to provide grants to the States, in my opinion, to assure for adequate planning and preparedness. We need to equip hospitals to respond to this threat. We need to develop new treatments, vaccines. We need to accelerate the production of the smallpox vaccine. We need to expand research grants for new product advancement.

We need to authorize long-term contracts for vaccinations and drug developments and be able to do it in a way that we do not violate things like anti-trust.

We need to improve research and development coordination through both public and private partnerships.

We need to improve our food safety. We have an awful lot of food coming into this country from foreign countries. We need to make sure that there are no accidental exposures or acts of bioterrorism related to food coming into this country.

If nothing else, we need to make sure that our borders are secure so that somebody does not try to introduce, let us say, hoof and mouth disease. Hoof and mouth disease resulted in a several billion dollar loss in England alone. If hoof and mouth disease were used by terrorists in this country, it could wreak economic devastation on our agricultural sector and significantly hurt the whole economy. We need to address that.

We need to increase inspections of food and products coming into this country. We need to improve the Federal Government's capacity to prevent and detect those terrorist activities on agriculture.

Now, we cannot do this on the cheap; but at the same time, we need to be careful that we spend wisely. Senator Frist and Senator Kennedy introduced their bill today. This bill would cost about $3.2 billion. Let me run briefly through some of the areas where we need to do some spending and put this into perspective.

I have already mentioned that we need to improve the national strategic pharmaceutical stockpile. This would increase the coordination of activities, increase the amount of necessary therapies, including therapies for post-exposure vaccines. I think it would be reasonable to spend about $640 million on this.

If we then moved down to title IV in the bill, smallpox vaccine, this would cost roughly $500 million. So if we add up the drugs that we need plus the vaccines alone, we are already at about 1.2, $1.1 billion that is without anything else. If we stopped at $1.2 billion, we would have nothing left for doing the other things that we need to do.

For instance, we need to upgrade the CDC's bioterrorism capabilities. Under the bill the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. BERRY) and I will introduce tomorrow, we set aside $60 million for that.

We need to improve the public health laboratory network through the CDC. That would be another $60 million. We need to improve State and local preparedness capabilities.

There are about 280 million Americans, roughly speaking, in this country. We are proposing spending about $1 billion in order to create a new emergency State bioterrorism program, a grant program that would assist all States in achieving some minimal levels of preparedness. We need to strengthen the current 319(C) grant programs to allow project grants to address public health capabilities.

Now, think of that, 280 million Americans cost $1 billion; we are talking about probably less than $3.75 per American to do this. Do you think most Americans think that is too much to spend on being able to combat a terrorist activity at their State and local level?

What about hospitals? As I said before, hospitals have been cut to the bone. In Iowa, especially some of the rural hospitals, it is even worse than that. They are already in the red because of low reimbursements rates from Medicare and from HMO's. So what do we need to do? We need to assist hospitals who are part of a consortium that would respond to an attack. I think a figure of about $375 million is a reasonable figure for that.

Finally, I talked a little bit about things we need to do for agriculture. We have about $500 million budgeted into this bill for that. These are not huge sums; we are talking about a country as big as the United States. This comes to about $3.2 billion. As Senator Frist said today, we think that this amount is enough to get us ready, to take us from an unprepared state, to get us to a prepared state. We may need to do more later on. But this is a good start.

Let me go into a few more details about the bill. Title I of this bill, the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001, basically deals with national goals to deal with that threat. The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act states that the United States should further develop and implement a coordinated strategy to prevent and, if necessary, to respond to biologic threats and attacks. We do not know anyone in this Congress that would disagree with that.

It further states that it is the goal of Congress that this strategy should, number one, provide Federal assistance to States and communities in the event of a biologic attack; number two, improve public health, hospital, laboratory communications and emergency response preparedness; number three, rapidly develop and manufacture needed therapies, vaccines, medical supplies; and number four, enhance the safety of the Nation's food supply and protect its agriculture from biologic threats. Noncontroversial section.

Title II of this bill, improving the Federal response to bioterrorism. This is important. It may sound a little dry, but unfortunately, we have a situation now where you have this responsibility spread out through about 40 different agencies. That is part of the reason why President Bush stood on this floor and said we need a director of homeland security. We need to consolidate. We need to streamline.

Title II of this bill does this because it requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report to Congress that the United States should further develop and implement a coordinated strategy to prevent and, if necessary, to respond to biologic threats and attacks. We do not know anyone in this Congress that would disagree with that.

In addition, Title II establishes an assistant secretary for emergency preparedness at HHS. It creates an interdepartmental working group on bioterrorism that would include the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Secretary of Defense, Veterans Affairs, Labor and Agriculture, FEMA, the Attorney General and appropriate other Federal officials because all of these officials are called upon to respond in this type of attack, and we need to have coordination in a working group.

Additionally, Title II helps the Federal Government to better track and control biologic agents and toxins. The Secretary would be required to review and update a list of biologic agents and toxins that could pose a severe threat to the public and to enhance regulations regarding the possession, use and transfer of agents or toxins.

Remember, I was telling the story about the Rajneeshis and how they were able to obtain these biologic agents. This section deals with that. Violations of these regulations could trigger civil penalties of up to $500,000 and criminal sanctions could be imposed.

Title III, we need to improve State and local preparedness. Numerous reports in recent years have found that the Nation's public health infrastructure is lacking. For example, nearly 20 percent of local public health departments have no e-mail capability. Fewer than half of our public health agencies have Internet or broadcast facsimile capabilities. Think of that. Half of our public health departments do not have facsimile capability.

Before September 11 only one in five U.S. hospitals had a bioterrorism preparedness plan of any sort. Title III addresses this situation by including several enhanced grant programs to improve State and local public health preparedness.

Today, Secretary of Health and Human Services Tommy Thompson agreed. That is the former governor of Wisconsin. He knows what this is like. He knows how States are strapped for cash, how State public health departments have suffered, and how we need to do something to help.

So the worst grants given in this bill for those States. Activities funded under the grant would include conducting an assessment of core public health capacities, achieving the core public health capabilities and fulfilling preparedness plans. The bill would also establish a new grant program for hospitals, as I have mentioned.

Title IV, developing new countermeasures against bioterrorism. As I said, we need to expand our Nation’s stockpile of smallpox vaccine, critical pharmaceuticals. Title IV gives the Secretary authority to enter into long-term contracts with sponsors to guarantee that the government will purchase a certain quantity of vaccine at a certain price.

This problem with vaccines has been one that has vexed the government for a number of years. The pharmaceutical companies traditionally have not been interested in producing vaccines. It is not a major maker for them. Maybe one person in a million can suffer a serious problem, including death from a vaccine. It probably is closer to four to six people can suffer some serious permanent sequelae from a vaccine and one person might die out of a million. Consequently, there have been problems with lawsuits and liability related to that.

The lab that the government has wanted to produce the anthrax has had real problems with control and sterility and cleanliness. It is clear we need to devote some funds for this.

Title V deals with our Nation’s food supply. With 57,000 establishments under its jurisdiction, we have only 7-to-10 port inspectors, including 15 port inspectors for more than 300 ports of entry into this country. The FDA needs increased resources for inspections of imported food. There is no question about that. Secretary Tommy Thompson agreed with that today.

The President’s emergency relief budget included a request for 61 million to enable the FDA to hire 410 new inspectors, lab specialists and other experts, as well as to invest in new technology and equipment. We think that should be done.

Title V grants the FDA needed authority to ensure the safety of domestic and imported food. It allows the FDA to use qualified employees from other agencies. It makes sure that the FDA has authority to prevent port-shopping by marking food shipments denied entry at one U.S. port to ensure that they just do not show up at another U.S. port. It gives the FDA additional tools to ensure proper records are maintained, backwards traceability, process, pack, transport, distribute, receive food. It may debar a person who engages in patterns seeking to import contaminated food. A number of issues are involved.

There is one issue, for instance, local to my State of Iowa. We have in Ames, Iowa, the National Animal Disease Center. They deal with a lot of very powerful infectious diseases. We need to make sure that that facility is secure, and we need to make sure that it is updated and modernized in order to fulfill its function. My colleagues may remember that with these anthrax cases, the anthrax is being traced to a type of anthrax called the “Ames variety.”

So these are a number of things that are in the bill that the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Berry) and I will introduce tomorrow, the companion bill to the Senate bioterrorist bill, Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001. I would strongly encourage my colleagues to sign up as cosponsors for this. We already have a fair number of bipartisan cosponsors for this bill. We will be dropping this tomorrow sometime.

This is something that the language will be out there. People can look at it over Thanksgiving recess, and I would hope then that we could have a debate on this, both in the Senate and in the House sometime in the first 2 weeks of December. This is something, along with aviation security, that I think our constituents are demanding that Congress put aside partisan concerns and address as a national security issue.

Once again I recommend to my colleagues that they read this book on germs, become experts on this. We are going to get a lot of questions from our constituents at our town hall meetings. Sign up for this bill and we will be able to tell them some of the good things that we are going to be able to do to try to improve our ability to handle a potential epidemic or bioterrorist threat.

So with that, Mr. Speaker, I hope that we proceed with this in a timely fashion.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Forbes), pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly, at 6 p.m., the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker’s table and referred as follows:

4582. A letter from the Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting a draft bill entitled, “FDA Export and Import Fee Act of 2001”; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

4585. A letter from the Deputy Associate Administrator, Office of Acquisition Policy, General Services Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Federal Acquisition Regulation; Very Small Business Pilot Program (FAC 2001–01, FAR Case 2001–001; Item VI) (RIN: 9000-AJ16) received November 13, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Government Reform.

4589. A letter from the Deputy Associate Administrator, Office of Acquisition Policy, General Services Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Federal Acquisition Regulation; Acquisition of Commercial Items (FAC 2001–01; FAR Case 2000–303; Item II) (RIN: 9000-AI68) received November 13, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Government Reform.

4590. A letter from the Deputy Associate Administrator, Office of Acquisition Policy, General Services Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Federal Acquisition Regulation; Prompt Payment Under Cost-Reimbursement Contracts for Services (FAC 2001–01; FAR Case 2000–308; Item III) (RIN: 9000-AJ17) received November 13, 2001, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Government Reform.

A letter from the Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting a draft bill entitled, "HHS Bioterrorism Prevention and Emergency Response Act of 2001": jointly to the Committees on Energy and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS
Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. OXLEY: Committee on Financial Services. H.R. 2604. A bill to authorize the United States to participate in and contribute to the seventh replenishment of the resources of the Asian Development Fund and the fifth replenishment of the resources of the International Fund for Agricultural Development, and to set forth additional policies of the United States towards the African Development Bank, the African Development Fund, the Asian Development Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development; with an amendment (Rept. 107–291). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. OXLEY: Committee on Financial Services. H.R. 2871. A bill to reauthorize the Export-Import Bank of the United States, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 107–292). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

NOTICE
Incomplete record of House proceedings.
Today's House proceedings will be continued in the next issue of the Record.
The Senate met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Faithful Father, Your words to Joshua long ago sound in our souls as Your encouragement to us today: “I will not leave you nor forsake you. Be strong and of good courage.”

Thank You for the consistency and constancy of Your presence. Your love and guidance are not on again off again. We can depend on Your steady flow of strength. Just to know that You are with us in all the ups and downs of political life is a great source of confidence. We can dare to be strong in the convictions that You have honed in our hearts and courageous in the application of them to our work in government.

Grant the Senators a renewed sense of how much You have invested in them and how much You desire to do through them in the onward movement of this Nation. It is for Your namesake, Your glory, and Your vision that You bless them. You guide and inspire them as leaders because You have great plans for this Nation that You want them to accomplish. You have chosen them. May they choose to be chosen today and lead with spiritual self-esteem motivated by this sense of chosenness. Your word for the day is “Be not afraid, I am with you.” You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will conduct a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes. At 10:30 this morning, the Senate will consider the Agriculture appropriations conference report under a 1-hour time agreement with a vote on the adoption of the report at approximately 11:30. We also hope to consider the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations conference report during today’s session. There will be other business as well, perhaps including some additional nominations.

I have just consulted with Senator HOLLINGS in regard to the airport security legislation. He has indicated that negotiations continue. He was encouraged by the progress made overnight. I have discussed the matter at some length with Senator LOTT over the course of the last couple of days. It is his view, as it is mine, that we just cannot leave today, this week, until this matter has been completed.

I know a number of Senators have been interested in the schedule for the balance of the week. I am not able to give them a definitive schedule with regard to votes, either today or tomorrow, until I know the timeframe involved in completing our work on the airport security bill.

It is my hope and expectation that it would be done sometime today. If not, of course, we will then take it up tomorrow, and Senators would be required to stay for the vote on that very important legislation.

I ask Senators’ patience. As soon as the progress becomes more apparent, we will make a definitive judgment about the time involved in consideration of the conference report later this week.

I thank Senators for their attention and yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

Under the previous order, the Senator from Nevada, Mr. REID, will speak for up to 10 minutes. Under the order previously entered, the junior Senator from Nevada, Mr. ENSIGN, will be recognized to speak likewise for up to 10 minutes. The majority whip.

YUCCA MOUNTAIN

Mr. REID. Senator ENSIGN and I rise to address the Senate on something we believe is extremely important.

For 20 years now, there have been attempts made to place high-level nuclear waste in the deserts outside Las Vegas. We have always believed that the process has not been fair. Originally, there was supposed to be three sites selected under the 1982 act. Washington, Texas, and Nevada were the three sites chosen.

In 1987, for various reasons, the two other sites were eliminated, and so there is only one site now being focused. That is Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

Let’s assume that a person is charged with a crime and they learn later that the prosecutor and the person representing the accused were the same lawyer. People would be outraged. If you were in an automobile accident and you had a trial and you suddenly learned that the person representing you, the person injured, also represented the insurance company, that would be unfair. That is what we have just learned has been going on at Yucca Mountain.

We found that the attorney who was giving advice to Yucca Mountain and being paid up to $16 million, this law firm also was representing the nuclear power industry.

Senator ENSIGN will outline for anyone within the sound of our voices how this came about that we learned that there was one law firm representing both sides in effect.

Mr. ENSIGN. I thank the senior Senator from Nevada. Back in July of this year, one of the local Las Vegas Sun reporters, Ben Grove, brought out in a news report that there was a potential conflict of interest involving a law firm based in Chicago, Winston & Strawn, which was representing not only the nuclear power industry but also the Department of Energy at the same time. We sent a letter, dated August 1, to the Inspector General for the Department of Energy, asking that the inspector general look into this conflict of interest. Late yesterday afternoon, the Inspector General, the senior Senator from Nevada, announced that the Inspector General determined is that this is one of the most serious ethical violations they have ever found in that department.

The American people have spent millions of dollars on a biased report, biased advice given to the Department of Energy.

We can’t blame this on the Department of Energy. We blame them for a lot of things, but we can’t blame them for this conflict of interest. When they were filing an application to get this account, they asked questions such as: Do you have a conflict of interest? Do you represent parties in this case? Are you giving advice to Yucca Mountain? We think we need to put the brakes on all of this and take a whole fresh new look.

So, Mr. President, I say to the senior Senator from Nevada that I think we have some serious, serious matters before us that need the attention of quite a few people as we are going forward.

Mr. REID. If the Senator will yield. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Nevada has the floor.

Mr. REID. As the Senator, my friend, from Nevada has indicated, 14 employees working for this law firm were, in effect, doing work for the government at the same time that they were filing an application to get this account. We sent a letter together, dated August 1, to the Inspector General of Energy and the Nuclear Energy Institute. But during that time period, this law firm represented both the Department of Energy and the Nuclear Energy Institute.

Now, to paint what was going on there, the DOE had hired this law firm to give them advice on the licensing process and the legal process for building a permanent repository at Yucca Mountain. During the time that they were supposed to be getting unbiased information, they were being retained by the lobbying group that is pushing Yucca Mountain to be built. This is a clear conflict of interest.

There were over 14 employees, from what we have reported. This report was released this morning publicly at 8 o’clock. It is on the Internet. But there were 14 employees that had done work both for the Department of Energy and for the Nuclear Energy Institute.

Potentially, up to $16 million is the total amount of lawyer’s fees that the DOE could be paying out to Winston & Strawn for supposedly getting unbiased information. So I tell the senior Senator from Nevada, with this information that we have received—and I know that my friend, the junior Senator from Nevada, there should be a full investigation by the Department of Energy and by the Nuclear Regulatory Institute, and anybody else involved in the licensing of Yucca Mountain, of how severely tainted was the information they received on building Yucca Mountain. This is supposed to be unbiased science and legal information. Was the science biased now? Did the Department of Energy buy biased advice? They said, ‘We have obviously bought biased legal work.’ So there needs to be a full investigation of this whole process. We have some very serious questions to come before the U.S. Senate next year. The Department of Energy is ready to make their recommendation in a favorable fashion on the suitability for Yucca Mountain. We think we need to put the brakes on all of this and take a whole fresh new look.

So, Mr. President, I say to the senior Senator from Nevada that I think we have some serious, serious matters before us that need the attention of quite a few people as we are going forward.

Mr. REID. If the Senator will yield. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Nevada has the floor.

Mr. REID. The people of Nevada need a full accounting of how far this misconduct has spread. The junior Senator from Nevada is a scientist. He is a doctor of veterinary medicine. He knows how easy it is to misinterpret, misstate, misquote. It is easy to spin science the wrong way, if you choose to do so, and not be fair; is that correct?

Mr. ENSIGN. If the Senator will yield, I will go even further and say that, in science, one of the reasons you even do what are called double blind studies is so that you don’t prejudice yourself in going forward with a potential conclusion. What I mean by that—and I will try to give an example on this particular project—you would not want to have people who are saying upfront that Yucca Mountain is safe for a nuclear repository and, therefore, we are going to investigate it and prove that is true. You want people to look at it who are going to say: We don’t know whether Yucca Mountain is safe or not, but we are going to do the investigation to find out whether it is suitable.

That would be an unbiased view. And then on top of that, if you have people who have a financial interest giving you information, you can imagine how that can taint the whole process.

I say to the senior Senator from Nevada that the potential for bias here in a scientific realm is very great and causes me great concern adverse to the Clinton administration, now in the Bush administration. He is giving the best advice that he can give. What he has determined is that this is one of the most serious ethical violations they have ever found in that department.

The American people have spent millions of dollars on a biased report, biased advice given to the Department of Energy.
States, with train and truck traffic going through every one of those States. This is very serious.

Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seven minutes remain.

Mr. REID. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I want to point out a couple other items in this report. First, when the inspector general was giving us the briefing, one of the things that was pointed out to us was that Winston & Strawn had actually recognized in some of their internal documents a potential conflict of interest.

Some of their senior people said that we need to put up some firewalls within our firm to make sure if we have lawyers over here working one way, that they are in no way in concert with some of the lawyers working with DOE, say, versus the Nuclear Energy Institute.

Those firewalls were never put in place. Let me repeat, those firewalls which could have potentially stopped the conflict of interest were never put in place. Last year 14 lawyers worked on both sides. If this is not a conflict of interest, if this does not spark people's outrage, not only at this law firm—by the way, upfront this law firm was asked: Do you have any clients who would present a conflict of interest?

When we let government contracts, especially for law firms such as this, they are always asked that same question. From what I understand—and if the senior Senator, being a lawyer, will address this—there are people within law firms, there are ethical panels that review whether there are going to be problems representing one side or the other side to make sure that ethical violations do not occur simply because it is such a serious matter within the legal profession.

Will the senior Senator from Nevada address how that is set up within law firms, there are ethical panels that address this—there are people within the legal profession.

Mr. REID. I will be happy to respond to the question of the junior Senator from Nevada.

One of the things we discussed yesterday evening with the Office of the Inspector General when they were going over the report they released this morning is that law firms have built-in mechanisms to prevent conflicts of interest. These large law firms can develop conflicts of interest, so every time they take is submitted to a committee. Even the relatively small law firms in Nevada that have 40, 50, 60 lawyers have an apparatus within them where every new file they take is looked over for conflicts.

I am astounded that Winston & Strawn did not have such a program. If they did not have such a program, that is malpractice. If they did have a program and avoided it, that is an ethical violation. That is why I have said several times today, I think they need to find themselves a lawyer because what they have done is either criminal or unethical.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I want to point out some other item that is in this document to show what a conflict of interest we have. Winston & Strawn not only represented the Nuclear Energy Institute, but they also were representing a company that manufactured the nuclear waste containers. There is no company that would benefit more from having Yucca Mountain built than the company that builds these nuclear waste containers.

If they are representing people who are going to benefit financially from this project going forward—obviously, the Nuclear Energy Institute does as well—clearly the people who make the casks to store the waste are going to benefit hugely financially.

Those same lawyers representing this firm over here and also trying to give the Department of Energy unbiased information is so outrageous it is hard to even conceive.

I hope all our colleagues will take a fresh look at this issue because the Senate is about to be dealing with some very serious issues when it comes to Yucca Mountain over the next 12 months.

I hope, regardless of how people have voted in the past, that my colleagues will take this under consideration. Maybe we need a timeout on this issue.

About $7 billion has already been spent on Yucca Mountain. We appropriated another couple hundred million dollars this year. We are talking a lot of money that is potentially being wasted, being put down a rat hole. All of your colleagues need to take a fresh look at this because the GAO has said it is going to cost over $50 billion more to finish this project. That is serious money, and we need to take a fresh look.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired. Mr. ENSIGN. I yield the floor to the senior Senator.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, my final statement is, if this law firm, Winston & Strawn, had firewalls set up to see if there was a conflict of interest, these firewalls burned down. They burned to the ground. This law firm, in my opinion, should refund the money to the Department of Energy, and I think the State Bar Association of Illinois should look at proceedings against this law firm.

They have done grossly unethical things. They should refund the money to the Department of Energy, and I think the State Bar Association of Illinois should look at proceedings against this law firm.

What they have done gives not only lawyers a bad name but gives the entire process dealing with Yucca Mountain a bad name. With Winston & Strawn's malpractice, manipulation, and unethical actions, I think they should refund the money, I repeat, and find themselves a good lawyer for the other activities in which they have been engaged.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Veterans' Affairs Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 2540, and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2540) to amend title 38, United States Code, to make various improvements to veterans' benefits programs under laws administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I understand that Senators ROCKEFELLER and SPECTER have a substitute amendment at the desk. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time and passed, the amendment to the title be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD, all with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the several requests are granted. It is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2149) was agreed to, as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCES TO TITLE 38, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Veterans' Compensation Rate Amendments of 2001":

(b) REFERENCES TO TITLE 38, UNITED STATES CODE.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on December 1, 2001.
Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent in the order for the quorum call to be dispensed with.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

Mr. CRAIG. Under that of the ranking minority member, Senator COCHRAN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who is the ranking minority member?

Mr. CRAIG. Under whose time does the Senator seek recognition?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. With whose time does the Senator seek recognition?

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I suggest time be called.

Mr. CRAGG. Mr. President, I yield myself to the Senator from Wisconsin, Senator KOHL, to present for the Senate's approval the conference report on H.R. 2330. This conference agreement provides total new budget authority of $75.8 billion for the programmes administered by the United States Department of Agriculture, the Food and Drug Administration, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. These include programs that provide housing opportunities for low and moderate-income residents of rural America, that protect our Nation's food supplies against pests and diseases, assure the safety and efficacy of drugs and medical products, and provide nutrition assistance for America's children and working families.

This is the seventh conference report of the 13 regular fiscal year 2002 appropriations bills to be presented to the Senate this year for approval. This conference agreement has been approved by the House of Representatives by a substantial vote in that body, and Senate passage of the conference report today would be the final step necessary to send to the President for his signature. I am hopeful the Senate will approve the conference report and give our committee a vote of confidence in our efforts to resolve successfully the differences that existed between the Senate and House-passed bills.

We think we defended the Senate's interests aggressively, and we worked out a compromise that will serve the interests not only of the two bodies but of the American people as well.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who seeks recognition? Time is running.
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KOHL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

How much time do I have, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator BYRD has up to 20 minutes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair, Senator KOHL, who is also chairman of the agriculture appropriations subcommittee. I thank him for his good work on behalf of the people of his State, for his good work on behalf of the people of my State, and for his good work on behalf of the people of the Nation. He is an apt student of public service and of the legislative process. He is one of my favorites. When I speak in that term, I think of the legislative process and I think of this institution, the Senate.

I also thank Senator COCHRAN, who is the chairman of the subcommittee. I thank him for his service to the Nation and to his people to our people. Senator COCHRAN likewise does good work for the Nation and for the committee. He is a very able member of the Appropriations Committee.

This conference report includes $75.8 billion in total spending for fiscal year 2002. This amount is $3 million below the level passed by the Senate. Of the total amount provided, $16.0 billion is discretionary spending, and this amount is within the subcommittee's 302(b) allocation. This conference does not include one cent—not one copper penny—of emergency spending.

This conference report supports programs related to agricultural research, conservation, rural development, promotion of international trade, and many other traditional programs for which the agriculture bill has become so well known. This conference report also supports domestic food programs such as Food Stamps and the Women, Infants, and Children, WIC, program, as well as the other food safety and public health programs of the Food and Drug Administration and other agencies. The programs supported by this conference report serve the most basic needs of the American people in nearly every facet of their lives.

On September 11—another day that will always live in history, a date that will be a footnote in the annals of mankind—the American people were reminded of the importance of programs related to public health, food supply, and food safety. These programs have long been a part of the Agriculture Appropriations bill, and they are continued, and strengthened, by this bill.

I am particularly pleased that the conference report contains a number of provisions related to the treatment of animals. Creatures to which we speak for ourselves, those creatures without which mankind would perish. We should think of them, and we do think of them. There are two principle underlying statutes that provide authority to agencies under the jurisdiction of this conference report on the subject of animal treatment. They are the Animal Welfare Act and the Humane Slaughter Act.

The Animal Welfare Act was first authorized by Public Law 89–544, the Act of August 24, 1966, and is today carried out by USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). The primary purpose of this Act was to authorize USDA's Agriculture to regulate the transportation, sale, and handling of dogs, cats, and certain other animals intended to be used for purposes of research or experimentation, and for other purposes. Think of the service that those animals render to mankind. And they don't do it without a sacrifice to themselves. Today, in addition, this act is used to regulate individual dog breeders and handlers and larger operations such as circuses and zoos around the nation.

The Humane Act was originally passed in 1958, and requires that animals be rendered insensitive to pain before they are killed in a slaughterhouse. This Act is today carried out by USDA's Food Safety Inspection Service, FSIS.

For a number of years, the level of funding at APHIS for inspections and enforcement of the Animal Welfare Act had been held stagnant. More recently, this Congress has been able to provide significant increases for these activities, including $2.5 million provided through an amendment I offered in the supplemental appropriations bill that was signed into law on July 20, 2001.

In this conference report, additional increases are provided for these purposes. In this conference report that we are debating today, I say, additional increases are provided for these purposes.

This conference report includes an increase of $2.4 million above the President's request for animal welfare inspections and the conferences have directed the agency to hire additional inspectors and support staff to increase the overall number of inspections, and to conduct more repeat inspections of facilities found to be in noncompliance with the act. Let's go back and look at them again, if they are not complying with the act. This year's appropriation of $15,167,000—in addition to funds made available in the supplemental and other Departmental appropriations bills—that represents an increase of 60 percent since fiscal year 1999. So, at last, we are paying more attention—and we ought to pay more attention—to these animals and to the enforcement of the law in regard to their slaughter.

Increased inspections are logically followed by increased demand for investigations and enforcement. This conference report includes an increase of $1,852,000—that is in addition to funds made available in the supplemental for APHIS investigations and enforcement activities. In addition, Statement of Managers language directs the agency to hire additional inspectors to service the backlog of animal care investigations. I would like to mention that the conference committee became aware of reported violations of the Animal Welfare Act regarding treatment of polar bears by a traveling circus, and the Appropriations Committee directed the agency to investigate this matter, take appropriate action, and report to the Appropriations Committee.

Earlier this year, news accounts described incidents in meat slaughterhouses which were alleged premeditated violations—violations of the Humane Slaughter Act. As part of the $2.5 million amendment that I sponsored in this year's supplemental, an enhanced program of oversight within the agency has been initiated to ensure better enforcement of this act. Last month, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that it had begun this new initiative—using both funds provided by the supplemental and other Departmental funds—and had placed additional FSIS personal and field district offices to work closely with plant inspectors and veterinarians.

These individuals, who will be officially known as "Humane Handling Verification Experts and Liaisons"—let me repeat, these individuals, who will be officially known as "Humane Handling Verification Experts and Liaisons"—will work to tighten up enforcement and oversight of the Humane Slaughter Act.

We are talking about animals. I am not one of those who claim that man is an animal. Man was created a little lower than the angels but above the beasts of the field. Read the Scriptures. Read Milton's "Paradise Lost." Yes, the animals serve us every day in ways that we do not tend to remember. They serve us. But for those mankind would not exist upon the Earth, in all likelihood. Oh, you say, he might become a vegetarian, but what about the beasts of burden? The righteous man looks to the welfare of his beast. So, I intend to watch this initiative. You can bet on it. I intend to watch this initiative with keen interest and will look forward to making sure that resources are continually provided to make it an effective tool to stop inhumane treatment of animals.

I guess my little dog Billy has had a great deal to do with my attitude toward animals. I have a little sister named Bonnie. Billy Byrd is 15 years old. But if there is a creature on this Earth that is absolutely and forever unfailingly loyal and dedicated to me—there is—It is my little dog Billy, that Maltese terrier. He is an animal, but he feels pain. He must understand affection and love because he gives it to me and he gives it to Erma; and I give it and she gives it in return.

Yes, now does he let me leave the door for work that he does? He does not follow me to the last step. That is an animal. We are talking about animals that are slaughtered for the food that graces...
the table of men and women and children around the world—animals that we should treat humanely.

Mr. President, again I want to congratulate the chairman and the ranking member of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee on a job well done. Well done, Senator Kohl. Well done, Senator Cochran. I also thank all members of the subcommittee for their contributions to this final product. I thank the members of the staff on both sides of the aisle, without whom, where would we find ourselves. I thank them. I support this conference report, and I hope that all Senators will do the same.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise to offer for the record the Budget Committee's official scoring of the conference report to H.R. 2330, the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002, spending comparisons—conference report—Continued.

The conference report provides $16.018 billion in discretionary budget authority, which will result in new outlays of $33,847 million. When outlays from prior-year budget authority are taken into account, discretionary outlays for the report total $16.282 billion in 2002. By comparison, the Senate-passed version of the bill provided $16.137 billion in discretionary budget authority, which would have resulted in $16.118 billion in total outlays. The conference report is at its revised Section 302(b) allocation for budget authority and outlays. The conferees have met their target without the use of any emergency designations.

I commend Senators Kohl and Cochran for working together in a bipartisan manner with their House counterparts to complete in an expedited manner the conference to this very important piece of legislation, which provides funding for agriculture, conservation, rural development, and domestic food programs. I also commend Chairman Byrd and Senator Stevens, as well as House Chairman Young and Ranking Member Obey on the significant progress made by the two appropriations committees over the last couple of weeks in completing the 2002 appropriations bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table displaying the budget committee scoring of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DURBIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Nelson of Florida). Who yields time to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Three and a half minutes.

Mr. BYRD. I yield the 3½ minutes to the distinguished Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from West Virginia. First, I congratulate him on his excellent remarks. All of us who have owned pets and have developed a friendship and affection for them can certainly identify with his kind words about his beloved sister Bonnie. I say to Senator Byrd, I was not aware your dog had a sister. I am glad that has been reported formally in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

I also congratulate Senator Kohl because he has worked hard on the Agriculture appropriations bill that is before us. I am happy to serve on the subcommittee. I know the hours that have been put in by the Senator and his staff.

Let me highlight two aspects of this bill that we ought to keep in mind. It is known as the Agriculture appropriations bill, but it is so much more.

As important as agriculture is to America, this bill contains as much money or more for nutrition and feeding as it does for agricultural programs.

This morning a man by the name of Robert Forney came to my office. Bob is an old friend. He was head of the Chicago Stock Exchange. When he retired last year, Bob Forney became the CEO of a program known as Second Harvest. Second Harvest is the largest emergency food provider in America. They keep the canned goods and other items of food available for families who are struggling.

Bob came to tell me this morning that the challenge facing food banks across America and feeding programs is growing geometrically; 415,000 Americans lost their jobs last month. Many of them lost jobs that don’t qualify for unemployment insurance, and they are struggling to feed their children.

In this land of prosperity, children are going hungry and the numbers grow by the day. This bill, with its provision for WIC, for mothers, infants, and small children, as well as the provision for food stamps, addresses that. We ought to be mindful of the need to watch this closely. More money probably will be needed before the end of the next fiscal year. There is an important element in this bill about food safety. I salute Senator Byrd, who stood here yesterday and said: Let us put money into food safety at all levels, and our American families are worried about bioterrorism. We lost because colleagues from the other side of the aisle said this is not an emergency. We know better. America knows better.

This bill, which puts money into the Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture to make certain that our food is safe, provides funds, but the bill offered by Senator Byrd would have given the additional resources needed for more inspectors, better inspection, better peace of mind for people all across America. That bill was defeated. I hope we have a chance to debate that again.

What happened yesterday really turned this Chamber on its head. We are supposed to listen to the people we represent. We are supposed to speak for them and advocate for them. What Senator Byrd came forward with yesterday was spending so that we could produce vaccines to immunize America for a possible bioterrorist attack. Some have said: The Democrats go again, spending money right and left on porkbarrel. Vaccines to immunize our children and families in case of a bioterrorist attack is not porkbarrel or wasteful. It is prudent and thoughtful. I thank Senator Byrd for his leadership on that.

Putting money into law enforcement: We tried yesterday so that across Illinois and West Virginia and Wisconsin and across the Nation, our first responders, whether police or firefighters, will have the resources to respond to an act of terrorism.

Modernization for computers: The Senator from West Virginia may be stunned to learn, as I did recently, that a new FBI agent told me their computer system at the FBI does not have e-mail, nor does it have access to the Internet. That is the computer system of the premier law enforcement agency in America.

Senator Byrd put resources in that bill to modernize computers at the FBI and other important law enforcement agencies. The Republicans voted against it, saying it was not an emergency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield 30 seconds?

Mr. MCCAIN. I am always happy to yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

I thank Senator Durbin, the very distinguished and able Senator from Illinois, for his kind remarks and for his references to the amendment of yesterday. We will be back.

I again thank the distinguished Senator who yielded me the time.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, the Agriculture appropriations bill is fundamental to the Nation’s agricultural economy and supports foreign and domestic food programs. Unfortunately, porkbarrel interests also received remarkable support in this final conference report. While this final conference report included porkbarrel spending, we can say that the Senate bill passed just a couple weeks ago, it still includes $335 million in wasteful, unnecessary, and unreviewed spending which is $30 million more than the amount included in the final report passed last year. Every single appropriations bill we have passed so far has an increase in porkbarrel spending over last year. We are now up to $9.6 billion of wasted, unnecessary programs.

While the Senator from Wisconsin is on the floor, I saw one of the more egregious things happen the other night when there was a managers’ package which had 35 provisions in it. When we were about to vote on it, I asked: Does anybody here know what is in this package? No one did.

We found out what was in it. What was in it was a violation of a trade agreement just concluded with Vietnam. We found 15 porkbarrel projects identified by State for members of the Appropriations subcommittee. I tell the Senator from Wisconsin, I will not allow a vote again until the managers’ package is examined. That was an egregious act that was done by the Senate. My constituents deserve a lot better than what happened the other night with a managers’ package which was brought up without review.

When the Senate considered and passed the Agriculture spending bill a couple weeks ago, the typical porkbarrel trickery reached unprecedented levels. Midwinter legislative riders were surreptitiously slipped in unseen by a majority of the Senate. Egregious earmarks for special interest projects were tacked on—again, unseen and circumventing the normal committee process—and funding priorities in stark discord with that of the administration.

Many of my colleagues have spoken before the Senate about the economic struggle of America’s farmers. Commonly, the porkbarrel spending in this bill be directed towards supporting those Federal programs that most benefit farmers in need. Instead, special interests reign and millions of taxpayers’ dollars are diverted to funding research facilities, universities, and farming conglomerates.

Even emergency dollars provided by Congress for farmers do not reach intended beneficiaries. This porkbarrel bonanza includes millions for projects that administrations have proposed for elimination year after year. Yet generous benefactors on the Appropriations Committee keep the spigot open and continue to drain dollars from hard-working taxpayers.

This method of budget monopolization is ricocetting out of control. Let’s take a look at the top 10 porkbarrel earmarks in this final Agriculture appropriations bill.

No. 1. $2.2 million for the Center for Cool and Cold Water Aquaculture in Leetown, WV. I come from a pretty hot State. It is starting to cool off now. Maybe we could get some of that money out in Arizona for cool and cold water aquaculture rather than have it all be devoted to Leetown, WV.

No. 9. $600,000 for a joint peanut research project in Alabama. Naturally it is in Alabama, but it is tri-state.

No. 8. $600,000 for agricultural waste utilization in West Virginia. Nowhere else in America—$600,000 for agricultural waste utilization in West Virginia. I guess agricultural waste needs to be utilized more importantly in West Virginia than any other part of America.

No. 7. Increase of $750,000 for the Wisconsin Livestock Identification Consortium. We now have a consortium in Wisconsin to identify livestock.

No. 6. $2 million to pay for efficient irrigation in New Mexico and Texas—efficient irrigation in New Mexico and Texas.

No. 5. $100,000 for the Trees Forever Program in Illinois. Trees Forever. I have mentioned on the floor. I would like to see a cactus forever program. Perhaps the appropriators might vote that to my State of Arizona.

No. 4. $200,000 for the Iowa Soybean Association. Last I checked, the Iowa Soybean Association was a private organization composed of individuals who decided to join in this association in support of soybeans. Now we are going to give them $200,000.

No. 3. $4.5 million for the U.S. Vegetable Laboratory in Charleston, SC.

No. 2. $230,000 for animal waste management in Vermont.

No. 1. $100,000 for the Weed It Now initiative in Massachusetts, New York, and Connecticut. Weed It Now. Mr. President, we need a Weed It Now program on these appropriations bills. We need to weed out this outrageous dispensation of American tax dollars. I want to speak briefly about one of the concealed provisions slipped into the managers’ amendment just before the Senate passed this bill. This provision effectively bans all imports of Vietnamese catfish into the United States. The sly wording of this measure doesn’t mention Vietnam at all. But it does patently violate our solemn trade agreement with Vietnam, before the Vietnamese National Assembly has even ratified that agreement. The ink isn’t even dry yet, and we are violating that. Why? No doubt it was inserted on behalf of several large, wealthy U.S. agribusinesses that will handsomely profit by killing competition from Vietnamese catfish imports.

Whether you are a free trader or an opponent of harmful special interest riders hidden in big spending bills, you should be embarrassed by this sort of behavior to be a scandalous abrogation of our duty to the national interest. After preaching for years to the Vietnamese about the need to get government out of the business of micromanaging their affairs, we find ourselves handed to the Vietnamese National Assembly has even ratified that agreement. The ink isn’t even dry yet, and we are violating that. Why? No doubt it was inserted on behalf of several large, wealthy U.S. agribusinesses that will handsomely profit by killing competition from Vietnamese catfish imports.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Nov. 14, 2001]

ADD-ON SPENDING PROJECTS ARE ON COURSE TO ESCAPE THOSE OF LAST ADMINISTRATION

WASHINGTON.—After tough talk last spring, the White House appears to be retreating from its vow to stem the tide of year-end spending projects added by Congress to annual appropriations bills. Soon after taking office, the administration proposed to write off billions of dollars in existing pork-barrel projects as “one-time” expenditures. But as the legislative session draws to a close just the opposite is the case, and the number of so-called spending riders hidden in big spending bills, you should be embarrassed by this sort of behavior to be a scandalous abrogation of our duty to the national interest. After preaching for years to the Vietnamese about the need to get government out of the business of micromanaging their affairs, we find ourselves handed to the Vietnamese National Assembly has even ratified that agreement. The ink isn’t even dry yet, and we are violating that. Why? No doubt it was inserted on behalf of several large, wealthy U.S. agribusinesses that will handsomely profit by killing competition from Vietnamese catfish imports.

The action came as House and Senate negotiators approved a $75.9 billion agriculture bill adding scores of projects along with an amendment to help U.S. catfish growers fight off imports from Vietnam.
Hours later, still more earmarks were approved as part of a final $39.3 billion Commerce, Justice, and State Department budget that adds money for maritime loan subsidies that the White House wants to terminate.

The administration has raised objections, but Bush’s veto threat provides a threat over how much Congress can spend in response to the terrorist attacks. For example, in a recent five-page letter to negotiators on the HUD science bill, the issue of earmarks was almost the last issue raised by Budget Director Mitchell Daniels Jr. His Deputy, Sean O’Keefe, insisted yesterday that program is increasing incrementally, but on a bipartisan basis, House Appropriations staff say the administration has been little help in curbing the more earmark-prone Senate. “They’re a pain,” said James Dyer, chief clerk to the House Appropriations panel.

Last spring, the tone was very different, as the Office of Management and Budget tallied up more than 6,000 earmarks costing $15 billion in the last session’s bills approved by the departing Clinton administration. In trying to spend money for its own initiatives, including the president’s tax cut—OMB assumed cuts of $8 billion from such earmarks and other “one time” expenditures. Failure to enforce the spending discipline, partly, but not at all, came back to haunt the administration, which faces the prospect of rising costs because of terrorist strikes and a troubled economy.

The revised agriculture budget yesterday is the first sign of these pressures. As unemployement has risen, so has the gargantuan caseload next year for federal nutrition programs, and lawmakers had to add $211 million to Mr. Bush’s request to pay these bills. All of a time of inaction, the situation is less bitter relations between the Appropriations and OMB. Mr. Daniels is blamed by lawmakers in both parties for precipitating the bitter relations between the Appropriations and OMB. Merryfield says it is not likely that the administration and congressional leaders— including the president’s tax cut—OMB assumed cuts of $8 billion from such earmarks and other “one time” expenditures. Failure to enforce the spending discipline, partly, but not at all, came back to haunt the administration, which faces the prospect of rising costs because of terrorist strikes and a troubled economy.

The soaring costs of responding to the attacks—Congress has already approved $40 billion for the purpose—have done little so far to curb congressional appetites for court- houses, highways, dams, parks and other purely parochial items. According to congressional bills of such “ear- marks” in this year’s crop of spending bills is likely to approach or even exceed last year’s record number, which was estimated by the White House last month at 6,400 (a threefold increase from 1995).

Many of the earmarks, as in previous years, reflect political clout more than national need. Money is flowing disproporti- onately to the districts of Appropriations committee members and congressional leaders— including self-described fiscal conservatives such as Senator Ted Stevens (R., Alaska), who secured millions for projects in his home state of Mississippi.

“These deals hijinks are bad enough in peacetime,” Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) told the Senate last week, after noting acidly that on Sept. 13, while the Pentagon and the World Trade Center “still smoldered,” the Senate approved $2 million for the Oregon Groundfish Outreach Program. “America is at war . . . Congress should keep growing up on the basics of the domestic budget as a political Toys R Us.”

There is no shortage of examples: $310,000 for a chapel at Kaneohe Bay Marine Corps Base near Honolulu; $100,000 for a bird observatory at Lonesome Valley, Mont.; $300,000 for the Montana Sheep Institute. “Pork thrives in good times and bad times,” said Allen Schick, a congressional expert. He noted that while this year’s budget was a bit smaller, “the problem is not the individual project, but the cumulative effect . . . When you add up the total, it just blows your mind.”

Earmarks do not automatically swell the federal budget, because in some cases they merely direct government agencies to spend money for specific purposes within the limits of available funds. But many of this year’s items were added on top of President Bush’s budget request, sometimes in House-Senate conferences where they received little scrutiny. Successive administrations have in- stituted that such choices are better left to federal agencies, which says earmarks create upward pressure on the budget by crowding out more important needs.

Members of the appropriations commit- tees—who control all the education grants Congress authority over spending—say they can judge local needs better than federal bu- reaucrats because they have their ears to the ground back home.

Several congressional aides defended this year’s earmarks, observing that spending legislation was largely drafted—and in some cases vetted—on House and Senate committees before Sept. 11. They also noted that, whatever the particulars of individual bills, spending is on track to stay within the overall budget ceiling set by the Bush administration and congressional leaders last month.

There is little question, however, that the fat surplus projections of recent years, now fading into memory, have made up Congress to Congress to show restraint. White House budget officials now have it all but abandoned the quest he launched earlier this year to contain the practice of earmark- ing. “To be honest, the appropriators weren’t that receptive,” an administration official said.

Despite broad bipartisan agreement on the need to spend more to fight terrorism—law- makers have already approved $41 billion to pay for the White House to lift the $40 billion ceiling on emergency spending related to the Sept. 11 attacks—they have been reluctant to do so at the expense of pet projects back home.

During a House-Senate conference on the emergency water bill Oct. 26, for example, Rep. Chet Edwards (D-Tex.) offered an amendment that would have added $313 million for Energy Department projects to help Russia safeguard its nuclear materials. He was responding, in part, to a January warning by a department task force—chaired by the Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. ( Tenn.) and former White House counsel Lloyd Cutler—that lax nuclear secu- rity in Russia was “the most urgent unmet nonproliferation security threat to the United States today.”

But the congres- sional aide considered to have final say on these projects is Appropriations Chairman Dan Snow (R., Va.), the ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee. Snow has long been a critic of the “earmarking. „To be honest, the appropriators weren’t that receptive,” an administration official said.

The conference report was agreed to.
Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.
The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.
the American Government, while overseas, and three, this bill continues the numerous domestic programs that have had, and will continue to have, a positive impact on the American way of life.

First, this bill continues to fund the counter-terrorism programs under the Office of Justice Programs (OJP), Office of Domestic Preparedness (ODP). Most of these funds go directly to States in the form of formula grants for the purchase of equipment to respond to terrorist attacks at both the State and local level. The distribution of funds among State and local agencies is based on State plans that each State must submit to ODP prior to receiving grant funds. Funds provided to the office of domestic preparedness are also used to provide training to State and local law enforcement officials, as well as to provide real-time emergency exercises for first responders and Federal, State, and local executives.

The conference report provides a significant increase in funds over last year to ensure that agencies have the resources they need to prevent and fight terrorism. For example, the fiscal year 2002 bill includes a $250 million increase over last year for the General Bureau of Investigations and a $700 million increase for Immigration and Naturalization Services.

Second, as in past years, the conference report includes $1.3 billion for worldwide security upgrades and $458 million for Embassy construction—ensuring that our overseas facilities are adequately protected. U.S. citizens and overseas employees utilizing these facilities should be safeguarded against possible terrorist attacks—and the funding provided in this conference report will help assure that they are.

Finally, the conference report will also fund the overseas programs that have had a positive impact on the American way of life. It is imperative that the terrorist attack against this Nation does not force us to abandon the vital domestic programs that have made us a great nation. This conference report ensures that these vital programs are not neglected. It continues programs that make our Nation’s primary and secondary schools safer by providing grants for the hiring of school resource officers. Funds are provided to protect all Americans by increasing the number of police officers walking the Nation’s streets, providing additional funds to fight the growing problem of illegal drug use, guarding consumers from fraud and shielding children from Internet predators. In addition, people throughout this country benefit from weather forecasting services funded through this bill. These Americans include farmers receiving information necessary to effectively manage their crops, and families receiving life-saving emergency bulletins regarding tornadoes, floods, torrential rains, and hurricanes. This conference report continues to assist States in their efforts to manage overwhelming economic growth in our coastal communities. It also provides funds to preserve our few remaining pristine estuarine areas. Funding is provided to assist our small businesses, to gather economic statistical data, to modernize inspection technology; and to promote export of American products. All of these are vital programs that have contributed daily to the strength of this Nation.

In all, the conference report provides $39.3 billion in budget authority, which is $1.2 billion above the fiscal year 2001 amount. The Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, as well as the Judiciary, all receive significant increases over prior year appropriations. I would like to take a few moments to go over some of the specific funding highlights from the SJC bill the conferences are presenting to the Senate:

Once again, the FBI’s Preliminary Annual Uniform Crime Report released this month shows that these programs are working. According to the FBI’s report, in 2000, serious crime has decreased 7 percent from 1998, marking 9 consecutive years of decline. This continues to be the longest running drop in crime on record. Bipartisan efforts to fund DOJ’s crime fighting initiatives have impacted this reduction in crime during the past 10 years.

The conference report provides $3.5 billion for the FBI, which is $280 million above last year’s funding level. To meet the critical need of sharing and storing information within the FBI, the bill provides the FBI with $142 million for the FBI’s Computer Modernization Program. In addition, the conference report provides significant funding increases for vital programs such as the $6.8 million to improve intercep- tor capabilities; $7 million for counter-encryption resources; $12 million for major improvements of the $72 million for an annex of the engineering research facility, which develops and fields cutting edge technology in support of case agents.

The conference report provides $1.48 billion for DEA, $129 million above last year’s funding level. Increased funds are provided for technology and infrastructure improvements, including an additional $13 million for DEA’s laboratory operations for forensic support.

To help our communities reach our streets and our children, the conference report provides $32.8 million to fight methamphetamine and encourages the DEA to increase its efforts in fighting heroin and emerging drugs such as oxycotin and ecstasy. The conference report also directs the DEA to renew its efforts to work with Mexico in combating drug trafficking and corruption under the country’s new President Vicente Fox.

For the INS, the conference report includes $5.6 billion, $2 billion of which is derived from fees. This is an $800 million increase over last year’s funding level and provides the necessary resources to address border enforcement and processing.

For border enforcement, the bill provides $66 million for 570 additional Border Patrol agents, and $25.4 million for 346 additional land border inspectors. To better equip and house these enforcement officers, the conference report provides $2 million for Border vehicles, $22 million for Border equipment, such as search lights, goggles and infrared scopes, to improve border security upgrades and $126.4 million for Border patrol and detention facility construction and rehabilitation.

For INS’ benefits processing efforts, the conference report provides an additional $45 million to specifically address the case backlog and accelerate processing times.

This conference report includes $3.24 billion for the Office of Justice Programs, which is $425 million above the amount requested by the President. This bill provides for the funding of a number of important law enforcement programs.

The conference report provides $251.4 million to the Office of Domestic Preparedness for equipment and training of State and local law enforcement regarding counter terrorism activities. In addition, $2.4 billion has been provided for State and local law enforcement assistance grants. Within this amount; $594.4 million is provided for the Byrne State and Local Law Enforcement Program; $400 million is provided for the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant Program; $890.5 million is provided for Violence Against Women Act, VAWA, Programs, including programs to assist disabled female victims, programs to reduce violence against women on college campuses, and efforts to address domestic and child abuse in rural areas; and $565 million is provided for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program which reimburses States for the incarceration costs of criminal aliens.

Within the amount provided for the Office of Justice Programs, a total of $305.8 million has been included for Juvenile Justice Programs. These funds will go toward programs aimed at reducing delinquency among at-risk youth; assisting States in enforcing under-age drinking laws; and enhancing school safety by providing youth with positive role models through structured mentoring programs, training for teachers and families so that they can recognize troubled youth, and training for students on conflict resolution and violence reduction.

The conference report includes $1.05 billion in new budget authority, for the COPS Office which is $195.3 million above the President’s request. As in prior years, the Senate has provided up to $180 million for the Cops-In-Schools Program to fund up to 1,500 additional school resource officers in fiscal year 2002, which will allow for 6,100 school resource officers funded since Senator Gregg and I created this program in 1998.
The conference report reflects Congress’ continued commitment to providing grant funds for the hiring of local law enforcement officers through the COPS Universal Hiring Program. Although the President did not seek funding for this program in fiscal year 2002, the conference report has provided $150 million to continue to hire officers, as well as to provide much needed communications technology to the Nation’s law enforcement community.

Within the COPS budget, the conference report provides increased funding for programs authorized by the Crime Identification and Technology Act, CITTA. In fiscal year 2002, $197 million is provided for programs that will improve the retention of, and access to, criminal records nationwide, improve the forensic capabilities of State and local forensic labs, and reduce the backlog of crime scene and convicted offender DNA evidence.

And finally, the conference report has provided $70.4 million within COPS to continue the Cops Methamphetamine Initiative. These funds will provide for the clean-up of meth production sites which pose serious health risks to law enforcement and the surrounding communities. These funds will also be provided to State and local law enforcement to acquire training and equipment to safely and effectively dismantle existing meth labs.

A total of $1.3 billion is provided for the Department of Commerce in fiscal year 2002. This conference report focuses on the goals of improving departmental infrastructure and promoting the advancement of technology. The Department of Commerce consists of 37,000 employees working in agencies as diverse as the Economic Development Administration, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the Bureau of the Census. They are highly-trained experts who are responsible for a myriad of critical programs. These employees help minority businesses and small manufacturers flourish, run trade missions to open foreign markets to American goods, forecast hurricanes, estimate the Nation’s gross domestic product, set standards and measurements recognized and used world-wide, fly satellites, manage the Nation’s fisheries, conduct censuses, and process patents. These missions of the Department of Commerce are the glue that hold the Department together.

In terms of advancing technology, in addition to the satellite programs, research vessels, radio spectrum management systems and other programs that I mentioned earlier, the conference report includes $674.5 million for the National Institute of Standards and Technology, NIST. This amount aggressively funds scientific and technical research and services that are carried out in the NIST laboratories in Gaithersburg and in Boulder. The bill provides the current year funding level of $60.7 million for new R&D projects, industry-led, competitive, and cost-shared programs to help the U.S. develop the next generation of breakthrough technologies in advance of its foreign competitors. ATP contracts encourage companies to undertake initial high-risk research that promises significant widespread economic benefits. Over one-half of the ATP awards go to small companies.

In the aftermath of the bombings of Dar es Salaam and Nairobi, the Department of State focused more on the security of our overseas infrastructure and peacekeeping missions than on the “quality of life” needs of its employees. Secretary of State Colin Powell should be commended for taking the approach that the morale of his employees does not have to be compromised in the name of safety. The conference report before the Senate today takes a good first step in that same direction. The conference report provides $7.36 billion in the Department of State, an increase of $761 million above last year’s appropriated level of $6.6 billion. This funding level includes $95 million for the Secretary’s “new hire” initiative which will provide for an increase in 360 personnel, along with $12 million for training and recruitment, and $162 million in human resources enhancement.

As in past years, the conference provides funding for recruitment, spousal employment, and civil service mobility. Funding also is provided for an additional 186 security personnel and for the replacement of obsolete equipment and overseas vehicles. This conference report before the Senate today also addresses a significant weakness in the State Department’s information technology infrastructure. The worldwide web is essential to the conduct of foreign policy. Yet, at this moment, most of the State Department’s overseas posts are dependent on obsolete computers and communications equipment to process in-country and overseas mail, and to conduct business and small manufacturers.

Finally, full funding in the amount of $1.3 billion is provided for worldwide security upgrades and $458 million for Embassy construction. Again, under Secretary Powell’s leadership in the selection of General Williams to head the foreign buildings operations, millions of U.S. taxpayer dollars have already been saved in the re-evaluation of current construction projects. This prudent action should expedite the construction needs highlighted in the Crowe report and put us ahead of schedule in addressing the security needs of our vulnerable facilities.

Let me conclude my floor statement. This is a solid piece of legislation that addresses issues that affect the daily lives of all Americans. It is a good bill that balances the needs on many diverse missions, and the interests of members from both Houses. Every year, we face difficulties with respect to limited funding and multiple, sometimes competing, priorities. This year was no different. And, as in past years, the CJS conferences made those decisions in a bipartisan, bicameral, and judicious manner. This could not have happened without the assistance of Senator GREGG and the endless hours of work that both my staff and his staff put into drafting the conference report before the Senate today. Specifically, I would like to thank my clerk, Lila Helms, along with Jill Shapiro Long, Luke Nachbar, and Dereck Orr as well as Senator GREGG’s minority clerk, Jim Morhard, along with Kevin Linsky, Katherine Hennessey, and Nancy Perkins.

This is a great conference report before the Senate and with the help of my colleagues, I look forward to swift passage at the end of this debate.

I thank the distinguished Chair. I again thank my distinguished ranking member.
I yield the floor and retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, as I understood the regular order, the Senator from South Carolina has 15 minutes, I have 15 minutes, the Senator from Arizona has 15 minutes, and then we go to a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, does the Senator from New Hampshire seek recognition?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I inquire of the managers if I may have 5 or 6 minutes to raise a point.

Mr. GREGG. I will be happy to yield you 6 minutes of my time after I have finished.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Thank you.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I begin by congratulating the Senator from South Carolina for bringing this bill forward. He has done a superb job. This is a bill that has a lot of moving parts. It covers a broad sector of the agencies of the Federal Government, some of the most critical agencies, of course, being the Justice Department, the State Department, the Commerce Department, SEC, FTC, FCC, and SBA. The list goes on and on, so it is a complex bill.

As is typical of the Senator from South Carolina, he has handled it with great ability and acumen. As a result, we have before us what I think is an extraordinarily strong bill, and a bill which aggressively funds and promotes these agencies, and the primary roles of these agencies, as well as making a point of focusing on certain initiatives which are critical to better governance in this country, especially in light of September 11.

A large percentage of the terrorism dollars that are domestically oriented, and the initiatives that are domestically oriented, are tied up in this bill with over $1.1 billion of funding. The initiatives which are necessary in order to secure strong action on the part of the Justice Department and the State Department are also part of the policy in this bill.

So I congratulate the Senator from South Carolina for doing a superb job. But he did not have done it, and I could not have participated in this bill, without having exceptional staff. His staff, headed up by Lila Helms, has done an exceptional job. His staff has been extremely supportive of the efforts on our side of the aisle, and has worked with our staff, led by Jim Morhard, extraordinarily well. I specifically thank my staff people, including Jim Morhard and Kevin Linskey, Katherine Hennessey, and Nancy Perkins. They all work around the clock at the end of the year, and we very much appreciate it. We have produced an exceptional bill because of those efforts.

The Senator from South Carolina has highlighted what amounts to the key areas in the bill, but I do want to return to a couple items and make a point to reinforce the commitment that this bill makes in those areas.

First, this committee, as I mentioned, has focused a great deal on the issue of how we try to get ourselves up to speed to deal with terrorists, obviously, we were not up to speed when September 11 occurred. But in the past, this committee orchestrated the Central Command Center for Crisis Management at the FBI. It has orchestrated terrorist exercises overseas in order to try to improve our intelligence capabilities.

It was as a result of this committee that we undertook two major exercises in the area of terrorism, the top-off exercise, which specifically had cracks, but it also showed us where we needed to go. A lot of what is happening in the post-September climate is as a result of information we were able to develop especially out of the Denver bioterror exercise.

The bill specifically has in it the creation of a Deputy Attorney General for Combating Terrorism, the concept being there are a lot of different agencies, a lot of different moving parts just within the Justice Department that have responsibility for terrorism—the INS, obviously; the DEA; most importantly, the FBI; and the Justice Department itself. There needed to be a central person thinking solely about the issue of how Justice specifically manages the question of terrorism.

There were some questions as to how this individual would relate to the Attorney General, which specifically had Governor Ridge in his role. My view is that he complements Governor Ridge in that he or she will give Governor Ridge a single point of contact where he can get action within the Justice Department through red tape and turf. And, hopefully, as a result, this person will increase the capabilities of Governor Ridge as we try to manage the Federal response to terrorism. So I think it is an initiative which makes sense, and I understand that it has been worked out.

Secondly, I congratulate the chairman and his staff and the participation of our staff in the area of NOAA. This is an agency which is really one of the premier science agencies in our country; of course, specifically, science related to the atmosphere and ocean.

The maintenance of a series of vibrant NOAA programs is extremely important; and going to have to have the science we need in order to protect, preserve, and improve those resources, the ocean and our air, and manage issues such as hurricanes and tornados, and other potential God-driven catastrophes, and be ready for those events so that we can handle them more effectively as a Government.

In addition, as the Senator mentioned, we have made a huge commitment in the area of technology. This is a very important function for us, not only in the Justice Department but equally important in the State Department, and it is a commitment that is lagging in their technological capability. We think progress is being made in this area, rather dramatic progress, as well as, of course, as was mentioned, the attempt to upgrade our facilities overseas, and especially in light of the terrorist threat which they confront.

One area that was left out of this bill, which was not left out because of any actions by the chairman—it was left out because of the House Ways and Means Committee—was the issue of conflict diamonds. When this bill passed the Senate, it had language in it which would limit the use of conflict diamonds. But there were provisions which were critical to better governance in this country, especially in light of September 11.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I thank his staff, led by Jim Morhard and Kevin Linskey, Katherine Hennessey, and Nancy Perkins. They all work around the clock at the end of the year, and we very much appreciate it. We have produced an exceptional bill because of those efforts.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, does the Senator from New Hampshire seek recognition?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I thank the Senator for that.

Madam President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG for their leadership and efforts on the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill for fiscal year 2002.

Mr. HOLLINGS. It was just like President Lincoln, during the Civil War, when he put a vote to his Cabinet and all the Cabinet voted aye and President Lincoln voted no. And he said, the "no" vote prevails. That is what prevailed here.

I yield the remainder of our time under the agreement.

NATIONAL DOMESTIC PREPAREDNESS CONSORTIUM

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I thank Chairman HOLLINGS and Senator GREGG for their leadership and efforts on the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill for fiscal year 2002.
Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, I would like to take the opportunity to clarify language included in the conference report on the FY 2002 Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill for eliminating the provision that would allow the U.S. Department of Justice to fund the Choctaw detention facility. The amendment, sponsored by Senator HARKIN and included funding for the construction of the Choctaw jail in the Senate bill. I thank the conference committee for its inclusion of language directing the Department of Justice to fund the Choctaw detention facility. I would like to clarify, however, that it was the intention of the Senate to provide $16,300,000 for the construction of the Choctaw jail facility. Mr. HOLLINGS. Indeed, my colleague from Mississippi is correct. The Senate did include funding in the amount of $16,300,000 for the Choctaw Indians to construct their jail facility. It was the intention of the Senate that the tribe receive this needed funding for this project as noted in the conference agreement.

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, I thank the Senator for clarifying this issue and for his support of this project.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise to express my deep disappointment with the conference committee’s decision to eliminate the provision to fund construction of the Choctaw detention facility. This has created a large backlog of convicted inmates waiting to be placed in jail. The current facility is simply inadequate to meet existing needs and is projected law enforcement needs of the tribe and its growing population.

The tribe is in need of a new facility and the gentleman from South Carolina recognizes this requirement and included funding for the construction of the Choctaw jail in the Senate bill. I thank the conference committee for its inclusion of language directing the Department of Justice to fund the Choctaw detention facility. There are hundreds of millions of dollars in porkbarrel spending throughout this bill. The avalanche of unrequested earmarks buried in this measure will undoubtedly further burden the American taxpayers. While the amounts associated with each individual earmark may not seem extravagant, taken together, they represent a serious diversion of taxpayer dollars at the expense of numerous programs that have undergone the appropriate merit-based selection process.

I am amazed to see that we are more concerned about "pork" than supporting world-class research facilities.

Several items provided under funding for the State Department stand out for their questionable role in advancing American foreign policy interests. The report language directs the Department to make available $500,000 to the Northern Forum, which works to improve international communication, cooperation, and opportunities for economic growth in northern regions of countries around the world. I am from the Southwest, so perhaps I am geographically biased, but I have trouble understanding how this earmark serves the national interest.

There is also a $200,000 earmark for a conference in human trafficking at the University of Hawaii in this bill. I am pleased the conference report does not agree to language earmarking $9 million for the East-West Center, as proposed in the Senate bill, although it does contain a plus-up for the center of $500,000, and it does not include Senate language earmarking $5 million to the State Department for hosting an Asian Development Bank meeting.

Mr. MCCAiN. Madam President, I thank the conferees of this bill for their hard work. This legislation provides funding for fighting crime, enhancing drug enforcement, and responding to threats of terrorism. It further addresses the shortcomings of the immigration process funds the operation of the judicial process, facilitates commerce throughout the United States, and supports the needs of the State Department and other agencies.

This conference report spends at a level 4.9 percent higher than the level enacted in fiscal year 2001. In real dollars, this is $820 million in additional spending compared to the amount requested by the President, and a $1.9 billion increase in spending from last year.

Once again, however, I find myself in the unpleasant position of speaking before my colleagues about pork-barrel projects in yet another conference report. I have identified $1.8 billion in earmarks, which is greater than the cost of the earmarks in the conference report passed last year, which totaled $1.5 billion. So far this year, total porkbarrel spending has already hit a staggering $9.6 billion.

There are hundreds of millions of dollars in porkbarrel spending throughout the physical conditions of the NIST laboratories, home of two recent Nobel Prize winners.
Ms. Lila Helms on the majority side, and Mr. Jim Moran on the minority side, this dedicated crew stayed late and came in on weekends to help my distinguished colleagues put together a conference report that every one of us can vote for with pride.

Accordingly, I also wish to extend my congratulations to each member of Chairman Hollings’ staff, Ms. Lila Helms, Ms. Jill Shapiro Long, Mr. Luke Nachbar, and Mr. Dereck Orr, and to each member of Mr. Gregg’s staff, Mr. Mike Hennessy, Ms. Katherine Linsky, Mr. Kevin Linsky, and Ms. Nancy Perkins.

Ladies, gentlemen, my esteemed colleagues, I salute you all.

Mr. KERRY. Madam President, I am pleased to vote for the Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary, CJS, conference report today. This legislation is critical to our continuing efforts to fight terrorism and increase homeland security.

I am troubled, however, that the conference report appropriates only $14.4 million for the Police Corps Program, an amount which I believe is insufficient to adequately fund this critically important program. I strongly support the Senate version of the CJS appropriations bill, which was included in the Senate version of the CJS appropriations bill. The CJS conference report before us today slashes the budget of the Police Corps Program in half. It is more important now than ever before that we ensure that Americans feel safe within their communities and that our nation’s police forces have strong federal support.

The Police Corps Program helps police and sheriffs’ departments to increase the number of officers with advanced education and training. It provides Federal scholarships to highly motivated students who agree to serve as police officers or sheriffs’ deputies for at least 4 years. Participants in the program are assigned to areas of the country that are in the most desperate need for additional officers. All of the participants serve on community patrols.

The benefits of this program can be seen in many ways. By encouraging educated young men and women to enter into the police force, Police Corps improves the quality of law enforcement in towns and States throughout the country. Police Corps reduces the local costs of hiring and training new officers by providing Federal funding law enforcement training.

In addition, the Federal Government pays police departments that hire participants $10,000 a year per participant for the first 4 years of service.

Police Corps also offers a scholarship program for children of officers killed in the line of duty. Eligible children can receive up to $30,000 to cover educational expenses. There is no service or repayment obligation, and the application process is non-competitive. I can think of no time in our recent history more appropriate than now, in the wake of the terrible loss of police officers on September 11, to ensure that this program is adequately funded.

Every police department in the country is being called upon to increase their vigilance, to expand their duties, and to do more to respond to the threat of terrorism. Increased funding for the Police Corps Program would improve the quality and capabilities of police departments throughout the country by educating and training qualified, motivated young people. The whole country stands to benefit from this program. I deeply regret that the CJS conference report does not contain, at a minimum, level funding for the Police Corps Program and am saddened that the program has been so drastically cut.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I would like to draw attention to what I believe is an unconstitutional amendment that was recently added to the final conference report of the FY02 Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary Appropriations Act. This amendment, which was first offered by Senator Craig on September 10 in the Senate version of the bill, would prohibit any U.S. funds from being used “for the operation, maintenance, or support of the International Criminal Court or the Preparatory Commission.”

The Craig amendment, which was opposed by the Administration, seeks to prevent our government from having a role in shaping the definition of the crime of aggression and other key issues pertaining to the International Criminal Court, ICC. It is my belief that this attempt to curtail the power of the President to negotiate treaties is unconstitutional and I urge the administration to remain engaged in a process vital to our country’s national security.

In addition to highlighting the constitutional concerns raised by this amendment, I would also like this opportunity to raise a broader concern. The legislative maneuvering that led to the adoption of this amendment follows European Union and German requests that our government refrain from adopting anti-ICC legislation. In late October the Belgium Foreign Minister Louis Michel wrote on behalf of the European Union to Senator Daschle and Secretary of State Colin Powell expressing the EU’s strong support for the ICC. German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer wrote to the Secretary of State directly on October 31, noting that, “in view of the international effort against terrorism … it is particularly important for the United States and the European Union to act in accord in this field.” He continued, “The future International Criminal Court will be a valuable instrument for combating the most serious crimes. It will provide us with an important tool in the fight against terrorism, in particular with judicial means crimes such as the mass murder perpetrated by terrorists in New York and Washington on 11 September 2001.”

While Members of the Senate may have real questions and concerns pertaining to the ICC, now is not the time to be pushing legislation that undercuts the administration’s efforts to work with our closest allies in building a strong coalition against terrorism. In addition, the President has recently ordered military tribunals to be created for trials involving members of al Qaeda suggests that a long-term fight against terrorism will include a variety of legal structures ranging from local military type tribunals to the International Criminal Court. It is thus imperative that our government remains engaged in the development of the ICC. I strongly hope that the Bush administration will do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. Gregg. It is my understanding, Madam President, that the Senator from Arizona, who had the other 15 minutes, is willing to yield back his time. I believe that is correct. So I yield back my time on this side, and I understand we are setting the vote for 12:45.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the time is yielded back.

Mr. Hollings. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that all time on the conference report be yielded back and the Senate vote on adoption of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the final vote on the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report to accompany H. R. 2500. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. Reid. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Torricelli) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Carper). Is there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 98, nays 1, as follows:
The conference report was agreed to. Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote. Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. today. There is already an order in existence that the time we are in be morning business.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I certainly don't want to be an impediment to what the distinguished majority whip is trying to do. I do have a couple of speeches I want to make. I will go down to my office to get them. One has to do with Thanksgiving. The other has to do with another matter of great importance.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I could amend that request, we have from 3 to 4 o'clock for which the Chaplain has arranged for the Senate family to be together in the Russell Rotunda. I amend that request so that we end at 2 o'clock, or whenever Senator BYRD completes his remarks.

I was present last year and the year before when Senator BYRD gave his Thanksgiving speech. I hope I can be present this year when the speech is given. It is something I look forward to. It has become at least for me, kind of a Thanksgiving tradition to hear the things for which Senator BYRD is thankful because they always trigger in my mind the things I am thankful for, or that I should be thankful for. I renew my request.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

to opening this area. He has a 5,000-acre farm in Utah. I mention that to put things in perspective. A 2,000-acre footprint out of 19 million acres, that is what we are talking about.

I know America's environmental community is very much opposed to this. This is an issue that is far away. The American people cannot see it. They cannot see the good record of Prudhoe Bay or the contribution of the 27 years of production from Prudhoe Bay. It is an ideal issue for America's environmental community. It is like a cash cow, if you will pardon the expression. They have milked it for all it is worth, and they will continue to do so because it is warm and fuzzy. They throw in a polar bear. They do not tell you that you cannot take a polar bear for trophy, cannot shoot a polar bear in Alaska because they are protected marine mammals. You can go to Russia or you can go to Canada if you want to shoot one. They talk about the prairie dogs. They talk about the gwich'in people. But they do not tell you that the gwich'in in Canada are leasing their land for oil exploration. They are developing their corporation and their opportunity for jobs, a better economy, a better education, and so forth. They do not tell you that we have had experience with the central Arctic herd of caribou in Prudhoe Bay that was 6,000 strong in 1978 and that is now over 27,000 because you cannot shoot them, you cannot take them.

So every argument that the environmentalists use against opening ANWR is a bogus argument. These arguments are not based on sound science; they are based on emotion.

What is this issue really all about? It is not about replacing imported oil, if you will, but it is about reducing our dependence on imported oil. If we made a commitment in this body to open up ANWR, would it mean that we would here a better energy, a better economy, a little airport. These are real jobs. They have real hopes, real aspirations, a little school, a health care facility. It has a little school, a health care facility, a little airport. These are real people. They have real hopes, real aspirations. They are very disappointed that this body fails to recognize their cry for help. They feel wronged about this are refusing to go up and talk to them, to recognize that they are really there.

I am all for alternatives. I am all for wind and solar. But let's face it, America and the world moves on oil. We have no other means of transportation currently available. Our airplanes, boats, and trains all move on oil. There is no relief in sight. We use heating oil to fuel our homes. So until we develop a new technology, America is going to have a continued dependence on oil.

We have an opportunity here, in the stimulus package, to address a real stimulus. A real stimulus is opening up ANWR because here is what ANWR would do: It would provide at least 250,000 direct jobs.

This isn't something the Federal Government has to underwrite or the taxpayer has to basically contribute to. These are private sector jobs, skilled labor, welders, pipe fitters, Teamsters, you name it. These unions support this. They are in contrast to the environmentalists who are opposed to it. This is the biggest jobs issue in the stimulus package.

What is the value in this proposal? There is an opportunity for the Federal Government to garner about $3.3 billion in bonus bids as a result of this 1002 area being put up for lease. That is a lot of money. That can offset some of the stimulus cost addressed in response to terrorism, the cost of the war, security. There are lots and lots of things that we can use this revenue for.

If you look at the jobs, if you look at the revenue and recognize that none of this is going to cost the taxpayer one red cent, we should consider the real merits of a stimulus package that contains a provision to provide the authority to open up this area.

We have brought this to the floor time and time again. We have proposed opportunities for committee action. As the ranking member on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, I can only express my disappointment in the markers chairman has taken away from the authorizing committees, the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and the chairman, the ability to address the formation of an energy bill in the committee. For some reason there is a terrible fear to have a vote on this issue in committee or, for that matter, on the floor.

I know there are several Members from time to time who have ideas of Presidential aspirations. This body and the American people have a right to have an energy bill debated on the floor of the Senate and voted upon. The President has asked for it continually. He deems it as a stimulus. We don't seem to be able to move.

What happened is—as a member of the Energy Committee, I am obviously pretty close to it—I thought we could proceed, have a markup in the committee, vote it out of committee, and take it to the floor. The Democratic leader intervened, took the authority away from the chairman of the committee. We have been waiting for the majority leader to come up with an energy bill and present it to us. He has not done it. We know it will not include ANWR. There is absolutely no question about that.

Yet, here we are with a situation that is ongoing. Time runs and nothing is done. We face a crisis associated with our vulnerability and dependence on imported oil.

Let me add a couple more points that bear some reflection. Currently we are importing almost 1 million barrels of oil a day from Iraq. How can we justify on the one hand becoming more dependent on a source that was our enemy just a few years ago? We fought the war in the Persian Gulf and on the other hand, importing oil from that country and enforcing a no-fly zone over Iraq on a daily basis? We are putting the lives of our men and women at risk in enforcing that. We occasionally take out targets in Iraq. I have said it before and I will say it again: We take their oil, put it in our airplanes, and enforce a no-fly zone. They take our money, develop missile capability, a biological capability, and are it that our ally Israel. We don't know what they are doing because we don't have inspectors over there anymore. It is a grossly inconsistent policy.

We have differences of opinion, of course. I respect my colleagues with regard to issues such as this. I find it ironic that the spokespersons who stand before this body communicating directly their feelings on the issue have never been up there. They have never taken the time. Each year Senator Stevens and I offer trips to ANWR. They don't come. Yet they are experts.

Members have opinions on this, but they don't go up and see for themselves. They don't evaluate. They don't talk to the people who live there. My Native and Eskimo people have rights, too. There are 95,000 acres of private land that they own in the 1002 area, the 1.5 million acres in question. The Native and Eskimo people have no access. They can't even drill for gas to heat their homes. Is that democracy? Is that fair and equitable? Should they not have the same rights as any other American who owns private land? This is a terrible travesty on the people of my State. It is unjustified.

We are a big piece of real estate with a small population. We have real people and have a voice in the area. Some people say: This pristine area, it is an extraordinary area. It is a huge area. To suggest that a 2,000 acre footprint suddenly is going to have a disastrous activity associated with it is absolutely inconsistent with reality.

We have a village there of 300 people. It has a little school, a health care facility, a little airport. These are real people. They have real hopes, real aspirations. They are very disappointed that this body fails to hear their cry for help. They feel wronged about this are refusing to go up and talk to them, to recognize that they are really there.
I have said this before, as we look at terrorist activities, as we look at vulnerability, let’s look at the Mideast for a moment. Look at Saudi Arabia. Some individuals predict that Saudi Arabia is setting itself up for what happened a few decades ago in Iran, the fall of the Shah, America’s ally.

Bin Laden’s terrorist activities in the oilfields of Saudi Arabia could wreak havoc. What you would see is the price of oil skyrocketing. A couple of tankerers in the Straits of Hormuz taken out by terrorist activities could accomplish the same effect.

These are the real risks associated with our increased dependence. If you look at the terrorists who we can identify with the Trade Center disaster, a lot of them had Saudi Arabia citizenship, including bin Laden. Where does the money come from? You and I are associated with the business community. We know where it comes from. It comes from oil. That is the wealth of the Arab world feeds terrorism. Make no mistake about it.

A good friend of mine, a Member of this body for many years, Mark Hatfield, is a pacifist. He said: I would vote for ANWR any day than send another man or woman of our Armed Forces to fight a war on foreign soil, a war over oil.

This Senator has been a good soldier. I have been here 21 years. I have lived with this issue for 21 years. I have asked for votes. We passed this bill in 1995 in both the House and the Senate. It was vetoed by President Clinton. It is not going to be vetoed by the White House this time around. The point is, we can’t get the leadership to bring it up.

I am going to have to filibuster something around here. There are a few things left to get some kind of a commitment from the Democratic leadership to get a vote on this issue in a timely fashion. We have that right. All we want is a vote. We will take our lumps. But they don’t want to vote on it.

They don’t want to vote on it, even to the point where they are fearful if I were to bring this up in committee and prevail, that somehow it would pass and it would represent a position of strength.

Let me conclude by alerting Members that we are not going to let this issue go away. We are going to force a vote. If I have to force a filibuster, I will. This time this issue is going to come up before this body and be addressed once and for all.

I thank the Chair for the time. I thank my colleague for his indulgence. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am pleased to follow my distinguished colleagues from Alaska, who has been here for 21 years. I can personally attest to that and take an affidavit to that fact because I came here on the same day that he did. We have worked together over the years and we have a curious relationship, in the sense that he is senior to me in the Republican caucus because it was done alphabetically, and “M” comes before “S.” I am senior to Senator Murkowski in the Senate because I come from a State that is closer to Alaska geographically but not geographically. But it is always a pleasure to follow Senator Murkowski on the floor or any other time.

TRYING TERRORISTS AS WAR CRIMINALS

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to comment on a couple of subjects today. First is a subject that is very much in the forefront of the news, which is the proposal to try terrorists in military tribunals as opposed to trials in U.S. courts of law. The Attorney General of the United States is quoted in this morning’s press as saying that the administration believes would require this change in procedure, and it is a matter that I believe ought to be considered by the Congress, because under the Constitution the Congress has the authority to establish military courts and trials dealing with international law.

I have written today to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee suggesting that prompt hearings be held on this subject. We are going to begin, after the Thanksgiving recess, and we will have a chance to look into this matter. Events are unfolding very rapidly now in the war in Afghanistan, with major advances being made by the Northern Alliance, with U.S. commandos on the ground, moving in an effort to find Osama bin Laden. I have predicted consistently since September 11 that we would find him and, as President Bush has said, we would either bring bin Laden to justice, or we would bring justice to him. So the issue of military courts is something that may be upon us sooner rather than later.

The Constitution provides that the Congress is empowered to define and punish violations of international law, as well as to establish courts with exclusive jurisdiction over military offenses. Under articles of war, enacted by Congress, and statutes, the President does have the authority to convene military commissions to try offenses against the law of war. Military commissions could be convened to try offenses, whether committed by U.S. service members, civilian U.S. citizens, or enemy aliens, and a state of war need not exist. So there has been a delegation of authority by the Congress. But under the Constitution it is the Congress that has the authority to establish the parameters and the proceedings under such courts.

In World War II, in the case of Ex parte Quirin, 317 U.S. 1, eight German saboteurs were tried by a military commission for entering the United States by submarine, shedding their military uniforms and conspiring to use explosives on unknown targets. After their capture, President Roosevelt proclaimed that all saboteurs caught in the United States would be tried by military commission. The Supreme Court of the United States decided otherwise but noted that holding that trial by such a commission did not offend the Constitution.

In World War II, we obviously faced a dire threat. The decision was made, understandably at that time, to have that kind of trial procedure and not in regular civil Federal courts. Our current circumstances may warrant such action at the present time, but I do believe it is something that ought to be considered by the Judiciary Committee.

I note the presence of the distinguished chairman of the committee in the Chamber. I just commented, Senator Leahy, that I have signed a letter to you on this subject. I thought it would be appropriate to let you know and to talk about this subject because I believe it is a matter of very substantial importance.

Mr. Leahy. If the Senator will yield for a moment, I haven’t seen the letter, but I am very pleased to have you send it to me and asked me about it. I told them I totally agree with you on that, that we should have hearings on this—actually a number of these steps. One of the difficult things, as the Senator knows, is getting the Attorney General to come up here and testify. I think the last person to be able to even ask him a question in our committee was the senior Senator from Pennsylvania during the terrorism bill.

I only heard part of what the Senator was saying, but his usual fashion is to lay out the law and the history very clearly. I do believe we should have hearings. I intend to have a meeting with the FBI Director this afternoon, I want to go to the Attorney General on this and a number of other issues, including some about which the Senator has expressed concern to me. He really should come up here before we finish for the year. We should discuss some of these issues.

I think the Senator from Pennsylvania is absolutely right in raising this. I appreciate him doing it. He does us all a service.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Vermont for those comments. I think the Attorney General would come up on an invitation. We are due back here on the 26th. I think it would be in order to make this the first order of business of the committee on the 27th. That would be 12 days’ notice.

I note that there is a very extensive Executive Order implementing this procedure. This matter is not something which burst upon the scene yesterday. It has been under consideration.

I noted that a key Member of the House of Representatives was quoted in this morning’s press as not having been consulted. I noted the chairman is also...

quoted in the press as having not been consulted. That is the President’s right. He can take his action, but under the separation of powers we have our own rights. The Congress has the authority to make those determinations. As the Constitution says, we have the authority to decide how those trials will be conducted. Of course, we are in a very difficult situation. We face a struggle for survival with what happened on September 11. The executive branch is entitled to greater latitude in terms of what is to know the reasons for the President’s order and its scope. Such a military tribunal need not have a trial by jury, which would be expected. Not to have a trial by jury is a military court-martial. There is no explicit privilege against self-incrimination. That is something we have to consider.

There is even no right of the defendant to choose his counsel. I don’t think that would be the case in every tribunal. The powers and the latitude are very broad, and just as we found it necessary to take some time on the terrorist bill, our job is to take a look at it. And the executive will be immeasurably strengthened if the Congress backs the President.

Mr. LEAHY. If the Senator will yield on that point, first off, I could not agree more with him. I think his last point is one that bears emphasis—how they might be strengthened. The Senator from Pennsylvania and I have served here longer than most Members of this body. I think it is safe to say that we have seen more bipartisan—virtually nonpartisan—support for the President in the last 2 months than we have for any President, Republican or Democrat, during the times he and I have been privileged to serve together in this body. That can be very helpful for the President.

However, it raises one certain danger. Unfortunately, in our common goal to fight terrorism and to protect our fellow citizens in this country is good, but if it goes beyond that, and nobody has a question, ultimately the Presidency is hurt, the Senate is hurt, and the country is hurt. I think we have to ask these questions. You have a question of basic rights such as counsel, jury trial, and whatnot. Obviously, there are exceptions. We understand that. But if the exception becomes the rule, then all of us suffer. We have seen that. But if the exception becomes the rule, then all of us suffer. We have seen that. But if the exception becomes the rule, then all of us suffer. We have seen that. But if the exception becomes the rule, then all of us suffer. We have seen that.

The war against terrorism is a very vital war. Some suggestions have been made there might be a concern about convicting Bin Laden, but I remind them, he has been under indictment since 1998 for killing Americans in Mogadishu in 1998 and the blowing up of our embassies in Africa in 1998, and there evidence against him linking him to the attack on the U.S.S. Cole. So there is considerable evidence. However that may turn out, this is a matter which should receive deliberation by the Judiciary Committee because there are very weighty issues to be considered.

There is not a great deal of time. We are scheduled to have a recess later today on what is happening in Afghanistan. I ask this unannounced consent to print in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a CRS Report for Congress, dated October 29, 2001, on “Trying Terrorists as War Criminals,” which outlines some of the key considerations.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TRUMPETING TERRORISTS AS WAR CRIMINALS
(By Jennifer Elsea, Legislative Attorney, and Daniel Christman, Legislative Attorney)

Summary: In the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, the question of whether to try the attacks as war crimes and the ramifications of applying the law of war rather than criminal statutes to prosecute the alleged perpetrators, particularly from Afghanistan and Iraq—on the war—which outlines acceptable reasons for engaging in armed conflict, as well as the acceptable conduct of combatants in armed conflict, as in bellum, or law in war, which refers to the rules by which combatants are bound to abide.

At the risk of oversimplifying the concept, three principles derived from the law of war may be applied to assess the legality of any use of force for political objectives. Military necessity. If the use of force is justified, that use must be proportionate in relation to the anticipated military advantage or as a measure of self-defense. The principle applies to the use of force, weapons and methods. This principle, however, does not apply to unlawful acts of war. There can be no excuse of necessity if the re- source for unjustified or a means of the wrong. Humanity. Lawful combatants are bound to use force discriminate. In other words, they must limit targets to valid military objects and must use means no harsher than necessary to achieve that objective. They may not use methods designed to inflict needless suffering, and they may not target civilians.

Chivalry. Combatants must adhere to the law of armed conflict in order to be treated as prisoners of war and captured civilans, and avoid behavior such as looting and pillaging. Combatants do not disguise themselves as non-combatants.

Although these principles leave a great deal of room for interpretation, there can be little doubt that much activity was simply viewed as acts of war, that the attacks of September 11 were not conducted in accordance with the law of war. Even if one considers the Pentagon to be a valid military target, the hijacking of a commercial airliner is not a lawful means for attacking it.
Acts of bioterrorism, too, violate the law of war, regardless of the nature of the target.

Constitutional Bases for Establishing military Commission. The Constitution empower Congress to define and punish violations of the law of war as well as to establish courts with exclusive jurisdiction over military offenses. United States law recognizes that creating military commissions to deal with ‘‘offenders or offenses designated by statute or the law of war.’’
Under the former Articles of War and subsequent statutes, the President has authority to convene military commissions to try offenses against the law of war. Military commisions could be convened to try such offenses as were committed by U.S. ser-vicemembers, civilian citizens, or enemy aliens. A declared state of war need not exist.

Precendent. Although the current crisis cannot be titled the typical mold associated with war crimes committed by otherwise lawful combatants in obvious theaters of war, there is precedent for convening military commissions to try accused saboteurs for conspiring to commit violations of the law of war outside of the recognized war zone. In the World War II case of Ex Parte Quirin, eight German saboteurs (one of whom was purportedly a U.S. citizen) were tried by military commission for entering the United States by submarine and creating military undermari-ning and conspiring to use explosives on unknown targets. After their capture, President Roostvelt proclaimed that all saboteurs caught in the United States should be tried by military commission. The Supreme Court denied their writs of habeas corpus, holding that trial by such a commission did not offend the Constitution.

Power of the Military Commission. As a legislative court, a military commission is not subject to the same constitutional requirements that apply to Article III courts.
Defendants before a military commission, like defendants before a court-martial, have no right to a jury trial before a court estabished in accordance with rules governing the judiciary. There is no right of indictment or presentment under the Fifth Amendment, and there may be no protection against self-incrimination or right to counsel. While Congress has enacted procedures applicable to courts-martial that ensure basic due process rights, no such statutory procedures exist to codify due process rights to defendants before military commissions.

Congress has delegated to the President the authority to convene military commissions, set rules of procedure, and review their decisions. This authority may be dele-igated to a field commander or any other commander, and there may be no protection against self-incrimination or right to counsel. While Congress has enacted procedures applicable to courts-martial that ensure basic due process rights, no such statutory procedures exist to codify due process rights
to defendants before military commissions.

little time remaining, and the summary will explain in some greater detail the reasons, and also a copy of the proposed amendment which Senator Santorum and I are considering offering when the stimulus package comes before the Senate.

Reclassification of Scranton-Wilkes Barre-Hazelton, Williamsport, and Scranton-Wilkes-Barre Statistical Areas

Many of Northeastern Pennsylvania’s hospitals faced operating losses over the last few years, a troubling reality felt all across the country. In the region, the area hospitals of the most aged communities in the country, therefore, the region’s hospitals are extremely dependent on Medicare reimbursement.

The region has also seen one of the most rapid and dramatic shifts to managed care in the country: over the last five years, managed care grew nonlinearly to presence to almost 50% of the commercially insured population and 20% of the Medicare population.

While the hospital in the region has seen little unemployment, the area costs of operating its large tertiary care facility, Geisinger has been reclassified to the Harrisburg MSA. (Its original classification was part of the rural area of Pennsylvania.)

Therefore, Geisinger Medical Center is being reimbursed based on a wage index that is currently more than 12% higher than the wage indexes of the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre-Hazelton MSA and the Williamsport MSA. This results in unsustainably low Medicare reimbursements within those MSAs, particularly since the costs of living are similar to those in Geisinger’s area.

From 11/13/01 Citizen’s Voice (Hospitals’ Numbers): Medicare Payment per Case in Scranton-Wilkes-Barre-Hazelton — $6,010 compared to: Monroe County: $7,390; Allen- town: $6,171; and Harrisburg: $6,359.

The Scranton-Wilkes Barre MSA wage index has been steadily falling, reduced from 0.857 last fiscal year to 0.8573. The actual wage index for the area is around 0.80, but federal law does not permit an MSA to go below the state’s rural rate, which will be 0.8473.

Nursing Shortages Intensifies: The Hospital Association of PA has identified Northeast PA as the area in the state with the worst shortages. Moreover, other skilled and care givers remain in very short supply. These shortages drive up the cost of healthcare and the need to increase wages—something which these hospitals have done.

Sharon, PA, in the Northwestern part of Pennsylvania, faces similar difficulty hiring skilled workers, due to an unacceptably low reimbursement that has no need to compete with bordering areas which qualify for higher wage indexes.

Sharon Regional Medical Center, UPMC Horizon and United Community Hospital are located in the Sharon MSA. Sharon Regional Medical Center is 1 mile from the Ohio border.

However, further reductions in the wage index will make it impossible for the hospitals to retain or recruit all the caregivers that the communities require. Nearby regions, including Newburgh, Allentown and Harrisburg, continue the Scranton skilled workforce. Furthermore, it must compete with the Erie area to the North and Youngstown to the West.

All of the hospitals in the Sharon MSA compete with Youngstown for nurses, pharmacists, radiology technicians, and other allied health professionals. Youngstown pays nurses $2-$3 more per hour than hospitals in Sharon, yet those hospitals receive nearly the lowest area wage index in Pennsylvania (.850). Youngstown is a larger city/region with a much higher area wage index.

An MSA reclassification for Sharon, PA is crucial because it would retain their ability to provide quality health care to its citizens.

A National Solution is Still Years Away: These hospitals cannot afford to wait for this.

The amendment we intend to offer seeks to remedy this disparity. Our language would reclassify for a period of three years the Williamsport MSA for Pennsylvania; all of the counties within Scranton-Wilkes Barre-Hazelton MSA into the Newburgh, NY MSA; and the Sharon MSA into Youngstown, OH.

At the end of title IX, add the following:

SEC. THREE-YEAR RECLASSIFICATION OF CERTAIN COUNTIES FOR PURPOSES OF REIMBURSEMENT UNDER THE MEDICARE PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, effective for discharges occurring during fiscal years 2002, 2003, and 2004, for purposes of making payments under subsections (d) and (j) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww) to hospitals (including rehabilitation hospitals and rehabilitation units under such subsection (j))—

(1) in Columbia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Wyoming, and Northumberland Counties, Pennsylvania, such counties are deemed to be located in the Newburgh, New York-PA Metropolitan Statistical Area;

(2) in Northampton County, Pennsylvania, such county is deemed to be located in the Harrisburg-Lebanon-Carli. Pennsylvania Metropolitan Statistical Area; and

(3) in Mercer County, Pennsylvania, such county is deemed to be located in the Youngstown-Warren, Ohio Metropolitan Statistical Area.

(b) Rules.—The reclassifications made under subsection (a) shall be treated as decisions of the Medicare Geographic Classification Review Board under paragraph (10) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)), except that payments shall be made under such section to any hospital reclassified into—

(1) the Newburgh, New York-PA Metropolitan Statistical Area as of October 1, 2001, as if the counties described in subsection (a)(1) had not been reclassified into such Area under such subsection;

(2) the Harrisburg-Lebanon-Carli. Pennsylvania Metropolitan Statistical Area as of October 1, 2001, as if the county described in subsection (a)(2) had not been reclassified into such Area under such subsection; and

(3) the Youngstown-Warren, Ohio Metropolitan Statistical Area as of October 1, 2001, as if the county described in subsection (a)(3) had not been reclassified into such Area under such subsection.

REHABILITATION, PRESERVATION, AND IMPROVEMENT OF RAILROAD TRACKS

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I wish to make one more point before yielding the floor, and that is another amendment which I am considering offering on the stimulus package. That is an amendment which has been pending in the House of Representatives on this subject which has more than 100 sponsors. Legislation is pending in the Senate which has 7 sponsors. This would be a tremendous stimulus because it would immediately put many people to work on the reconstruction of the short-line railroads in the short run, providing very extensive jobs, and in the long run, by improving the infrastructure which would be enormously helpful to the economy of Pennsylvania and similarly to other areas where there are short-line railroads.

At my request, the McNamara Group prepared an extensive analysis of proposed railroad costs to be included in the Federal stimulus package. Because of the shortage of time, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a limited portion of this report be printed: The executive summary and the third page of the summary, together with a summary of factors in support of this amendment and a copy of the amendment itself.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

PROPOSED RAILROAD COSTS TO BE INCLUDED IN THE FEDERAL ECONOMIC STIMULUS PACKAGE, OCTOBER 31, 2001

Background

At the request of Senator Arlen Specter, the Keystone State Railroad Association conducted a survey of member Pennsylvania railroads to ascertain the degree of infrastructure improvements needed across the Commonwealth’s rail system. Respondents were asked to provide information related to project readiness, safety and infrastructure conditions, security and insurance cost estimates, and estimates on the number of jobs that could be created if listed projects were undertaken.

Summary of Findings

Pennsylvania railroads responding to this survey indicate more often than 60% of the short line and regional railroad infrastructure is in need of extensive rehabilitation, including more than 170 bridges. Excluding the Bessemer & Lake Erie and Delaware & Hudson railroads, both of which have heavy load infrastructures, the short line and regional railroads are capable of handling the heavier 266,000-pound loads on only 70% of their infrastructure. The funds needed to upgrade these lines and the related bridge infrastructure will exceed many preliminary cost estimates. Many customers are beginning to command the use of more and more longer cars, which will dramatically escalate funding needed for these rail lines even further.
The cost of most extensive bridge repairs can easily exceed $1 million each for smaller spans. Short line and regional railroads also indicate that more than 300 rail crossings are in need of rehabilitation and construction.

Projects that could be undertaken to address Pennsylvania railroad infrastructure needs could employ at least $1.2 billion in projects, construction could be initiated on 44% of them, totaling more than $120 million, in the next six months.

While it is not possible to quantify, a clear correlation undoubtedly exists between derailments and rail infrastructure conditions. Railroads indicated that more than 350 derailments occur each year, resulting in only nine worker injuries. This is a tremendous testament to the railroad industry’s excellent safety record. A major contributor to their extremely low accident rates is the spending patterns.

In the aftermath of the tragic events of September 11, business and government are taking a much harder look at ways to improve the nation’s transportation system. A group of Class I railroads has already met to discuss a series of security measures that the industry is considering. Any Class I railroads will also need to be addressed by regional and short line railroads. The costs of acquiring manpower at critical points along the system can be extremely prohibitive to many small and medium-sized operators.

The September 11 disaster has already escalated insurance costs in most sectors. Several railroads have been warned that their risks and their rates will be re-evaluated. Some railroads may not even qualify for any affordable insurance coverage. It is conceivable that railroads receiving funding for infrastructure projects will be forced to spend an equivalent amount in additional security and insurance costs in coming years. An ad hoc panel provides an overview of current insurance conditions, as it relates to the railroad industry.

There is no doubt that investment in the nation’s railroad infrastructure is warranted. The American Short Line and Regional Railroad Association (ASLRRA) recently surveyed members nationwide and indicated that Pennsylvania railroads are prepared to undertake, today, tasks that would require substantially higher investment in the near future. The engineering associated with the tie and rail supply industry.

The amendment would provide $350 million in track rehabilitation funds for short line railroads. It would be distributed based on the criteria established in S. 1220, pending legislation that would authorize this expenditure. This is a fair and reasonable way to help our small railroads.

The funding of railroad infrastructure projects also creates powerful economic stimuli as they impact the purchasing power of many Americans. The nation’s steel industry, for example, is influenced by the cost of raw materials, coal, industrial raw materials, and large quantities of goods. It is clear that an investment in an improved rail infrastructure is an investment in the country’s economic future.

their rates will be re-evaluated. Some railroads may not even qualify for affordable insurance coverage. As small railroads are hit with higher and higher insurance costs, they will have less and less to invest in needed habilitation.

POUNTS RELATED TO PENNSYLVANIA

Sixty percent of Pennsylvania's short line and regional railroad infrastructure is in need of habilitation, habilitation of more than 170 bridges. Over 300 rail crossings require significant habilitation. Excluding the Bessemer & Lake Erie and Delaware & Hudson railroads, both of which have heavy load infrastructures, almost one third of Pennsylvania's short lines and regional cannot carry the heavy, 250,000 pound cars that are becoming the new standard in the industry.

A recent survey of the state's short lines indicates that many need habilitation. The most modest forecasts for the movement of hazardous materials (such as chlorine, industrial raw materials and bulk commodities, including investment in rail infrastructure is an investment in the country's economic future.

AMENDMENT NO.—

(Purpose: To provide additional funding for capital grants for rehabilitation, preservation, or improvement of railroad track of class II and class III railroads.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 3006. There is appropriated to the Department of Transportation for the Federal Railroad Administration for fiscal year 2002, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $500,000,000 for capital grants to be made by the Secretary of Transportation for rehabilitation, preservation, or improvement of railroad track (including roadbeds, bridges, and related track structures) of class II and class III railroads. Funds appropriated by the preceding section shall remain available until expended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. We are recessing at 2 p.m. Has the Senator completed his statement?

Mr. SPECTER. I have. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 4 p.m. Senator BYRD be recognized to speak in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess until 4 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 1:59 p.m., recessed until 3:59 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. BYRD). The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS CONVENTION-NUCLEAR ARMS TREATIES

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Nation's attention is focused on the threat of biological weapons. The pernicious nature of these types of weapons has been shown in anthrax-laced mailings that were sent to the office of Tom Daschle, NBC News in New York, and American Media in Florida, which have resulted in contamination of a number of post offices in Washington, D.C., New Jersey, Florida, and perhaps elsewhere.

One question is on all American's minds: how can we defend ourselves against a threat that is literally microscopic? In the days of the Cold War, we became accustomed to being able to quantify the threats posed to the United States: we could count the number of Soviet missiles, bombers, tanks, and soldiers, and respond by increasing the capabilities of our own military.

But now, the threat to our security has changed. We can not quantify this threat and we can not track its movements until it might be too late. Building up our military will not affect our security from these weapons. We must adjust our thinking on how to deal with these abhorrent weapons of pestilence.

Mr. President, remember that Jesus said, You shall hear of wars and rumors of wars, but do not be terrified. For nation will rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom. There will be famines and pestilences and earthquakes.

Pestilences, that is what I am talking about; germ warfare, viral warfare, anthrax. Building up our military, I said, will not affect our security from these pestilences. We must adjust our thinking, I say again, on how to deal with these abhorrent weapons of pestilence.

We do not yet know for certain whether the anthrax attacks were carried out by foreign or domestic agents, by someone across the seas or someone in our midst. We also do not know when the next biological weapons attack might happen, what type of germ or viruses might be used, or who might be planning it. But the U.S. must take action. The time is right now, in the midst of intensified international cooperation, to form international regimes to eliminate the manipulation of nature for violent purposes.

Over 140 countries have signed the Biological Weapons Convention of 1972. It is one of the simplest arms control treaties in existence. Parties of the agreement to not develop or retain any biological toxins or agents that are to be used for other than peaceful purposes. There are no means to verify this binding commitment, but the Convention is supported by limited number of parties by confirming among most of the world that biological weapons are abhorrent to all mankind.

Negotiations began in 1995 on how to add a binding protocol to the Biological Weapons Convention to create a regime that would verify compliance with the treaty. Parties to the Convention would thereby submit themselves to the same kind of inspections that are conducted at nuclear facilities under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and chemical facilities under the Chemical Weapons Convention.

The purpose of these inspections would be to allay the whole wide worries that potentially dangerous microbes, which are needed to conduct scientific and medical research, are handled in a safe manner, and are not being diverted to nefarious purposes.

Representatives at the last conference on the Biological Weapons Convention, which took place in July, hoped to gain consensus on the final text of the protocol, which may open for signature at the end of May. The results of that conference were disappointing. Rather than negotiating toward the resolution of many outstanding issues on the protocol, the Bush Administration took the view that no protocol was preferable to a negotiated protocol. Like much of the world, I was left wondering whether this Administration takes arms control seriously.

I am pleased to see that on November 1, the Administration unveiled a number of proposals to complement the Biological Weapons Convention. These voluntary measures are well-intentioned and they make sense. However, they do not go far enough. I am wary of adding to our urgent and serious national security concerns simply through voluntary measures by foreign countries. With no formal multilateral protocol to spell out exactly what each country's responsibilities are, I fear that the future of international ban on biological weapons will be a patchwork quilt of full compliance, none-compliance, half-measures, and more talk and less action. This could ultimately leave us even less secure than we are from these horrific weapons.

There are other important treaty matters before our country. We are closing in on an agreement with Russia for sharp reductions in our nuclear stockpiles, and negotiations will continue on altering the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972 to allow increased national missile defense testing. These deals, if concluded, would be a major development in our relationship with Russia and there are many reasons to be encouraged by the fact that there will be less of the constant worrying about; germ warfare, viral warfare, anthrax. Building up our military, I said, will not affect our security from these threats. We must adjust our thinking, I say again, on how to deal with these abhorrent weapons of pestilence.

Mr. President, remember that Jesus said, You shall hear of wars and rumors of wars, but do not be terrified. For nation will rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom. There will be famines and pestilences and earthquakes.

Pestilences, that is what I am talking about; germ warfare, viral warfare, anthrax. Building up our military, I said, will not affect our security from these pestilences. We must adjust our thinking, I say again, on how to deal with these abhorrent weapons of pestilence.

As we weigh the threat to our security, I am not against reducing the nuclear stockpile. I am not against reducing the number of missiles, the number of warheads. I am not against that. But, as important as this agreement would be, I am shocked by the President's view that an agreement on arms reductions need not be on paper. Legally and technically he is right. It need not be on paper. But, Mr. President, it ought to be on paper. The President said that he was content to conclude arms reduction talks with nothing more than a handshake. Nothing more than a handshake.

Now, that is troubling me. If I sell a piece of property or if I buy a piece of property, I will shake hands with the person who buys my property. I will shake hands with the person from whom I buy property. But there will also be documents which will be registered at the courthouse in the county where the property exists. There will be a handshake—that is fine. A handshake carries with it the indication of honor. "It is an honor to deal with you—it is a pleasure, I have enjoyed doing business with you." But it is that deed that is in writing that assures my grandchildren, and their children if necessary, that that property, that transfer of property is on record.

So I say to the President—what the President said—he is reported to have said that he was content to conclude arms reduction talks with nothing more than a handshake. Are you? Are you, the people who are watching this Senate floor through the monitors or listening through the speakers, the Presiding Officer, are you content? Are you content that arms reduction talks be concluded with nothing more than a handshake?

We are down in on a historic compact, and I cannot understand why this agreement should not be done as a formal written treaty. That would require a two-thirds vote, yes. But a simple handshake leaves many questions unanswered. I would like to see one or both Houses of the Congress having some say in that, and backing up that handshake, if needed, with their votes, the representatives, the elected representatives of the people.

A simple handshake leaves many questions. What will happen to the nuclear warheads once they are removed from their missiles? I must note that in this year's budget request, the Administration cut more than $131 million from the programs that keep these powerful weapons from falling into the wrong hands. How will we verify? How will we verify that Russia carries out its arms reductions, and how will Russia, how will President Putin verify that we carry out ours? That we are carrying out our arms reduction? It was Ronald Reagan himself that said, "Trust, but verify." In other words, yes, shake hands. But verify.

And what will happen to the agreement when President Bush and President Putin leave office? President Bush under the Constitution can serve 3 more years after this year, and if he is then elected again, he can serve 4 more years. But who knows what the attitude of his successor will be. If there is no treaty, no formal agreement, either on our part or on the part of the Senate and House—whatever type of agreement it might be—has been able to put a stamp of approval, who knows what his successor might say. Or who knows how the successor to Mr. Putin might feel about it. A written treaty could provide clear answers to each of these important questions.

It would be a real mistake to make such an important international agreement in any other form. I think, than a treaty. We do not need fly-by-night arms control. We need arms control measures that are carefully examined to support our national security. We do not need hush-hush agreements with other nations about their nuclear weapons. We need public confidence in our military and foreign policy. Lacking the full confidence of the public, an informal agreement on nuclear arms and national missile defense is not worth the paper that it is—or is not—written on.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt once said, "Treaties are the cornerstones on which all relations between nations must rest." Treaties are useful in clarifying responsibilities of each party, and formal ratification of treaties indicate a country's full acceptance of those responsibilities. The Founding Fathers of this country The Founding Fathers who wrote this Constitution were very clear about treaties in that Constitution, understood that, and that is why they secured for the Senate advice and consent responsibilities to any treaty made by the President.

We should not turn away from this treaty-making process for the simple convenience of the executive branch.

The Kings of England make treaties. The Kings of England have always made treaties. But this country has no King. This Republic has no King. Gentlemen's agreements on matters as important as international security or the control of weapons of mass destruction are simply not sufficient to inspire the confidence of the public in this or any other countries. By making treaties, with the advice and consent of the Senate, the United States shows itself to be a reliable ally to our friends, and a principled actor to our opponents.

We should also consider the President's role in conducting our foreign policy, and his role as commander-in-chief. Is his hand in conducting future negotiations with Russia, in the case of the ABM Treaty and nuclear arms reduction, or with the other nations of the world, in the case of the Biological Weapons Convention, the Kyoto Protocol, and a host of other treaties, strengthened if he concludes these types of agreements without the advice and consent of the Senate?

Is his hand strengthened if he doesn't have the advice and consent of the United States standing behind him? No. I don't think his hand would be strengthened. I would think just the opposite.

The Senate approval or ratification of important international agreements is a signal to all the world that our nation not just a branch of our government approves of and will carry out those agreements negotiated by the President. Senate approval of important treaties, such as a protocol to the Biological Weapons Convention or a new strategic agreement with Russia would strengthen the Chief Executive's hand to negotiate from a position of strength. These matters, such as the Kyoto Protocol, possible NATO expansion, and future arms control treaties.

So I say that legally and technically, the President might not need to have it written on a piece of paper. Legally and technically, he may be able to do it with a handshake.

Let me say again that I am not proposing that we shouldn't reduce our nuclear weapons stockpile. I am not proposing that at all. I think the MX missile, for example, is old, and we shouldn't continue to keep that around. But a handshake is not enough. I don't rest easy. Do you, Mr. President? I am saying to the Presiding Officer, and I am saying to other Senators, would you rest easy with just a handshake in a matter of this nature?

The two issues I have just discussed, the Biological Weapons Convention and our strategic situation with regard to Russia, are very important to the security of our country. The United States must take a leadership position on these issues to crack down on the use of germs and viruses as weapons, and to clarify our relationship with the nations that has emerged from our Cold War confrontation. This cannot rest on voluntary measures or unwritten pacts. I urge the Administration to pursue formal agreements on these issues in order to recognize their importance to Americans and the world.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceed to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THANKSGIVING

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, nearly 4 centuries ago, a courageous little group of people left their homeland, boarded a small, flimsy sailboat—it was not a steamboat; it was a sailboat, a sail ship—and they journeyed across a mighty ocean, and settled in an inscrutable unfriendly wilderness. They did all of this, took all of these risks, to find out if they or their posterity could put down roots in a land which was not a part of the known world. It was not a new land, but the "New World." It was not a new land, but the "New World." They did not have any cell phones. They did not have any radios. They did not have any weather predictors. They did not have any newspapers to tell them what might lie ahead or what the weather conditions might be 24 hours away. They did not have any hospitals nearby. But they had faith. They had the guiding light of God's word. Many of them took all these risks so that they could go to church, the church of their choice. Think about it. How many of us today have difficulty getting up on Sunday morning in order to go to church? I do. Ah, how I like to lie in bed on Sunday morning. My little dog Billy gets me up many times, thank goodness. I think I would like to go back to bed on Sunday morning. Can’t do it on Monday, you see. Can’t do it on Tuesday. But Saturday and Sunday—who, Sunday.

How do you not like to walk those few blocks or drive those few miles to go to church? But here were the Pilgrims, crossing a vast ocean—2,500 miles, 3,000 miles—a vast body of water, facing the darkest of unknowns. They did not know what would lie in wait for them. They knew it would be a long time before they could get back home, and perhaps there would not be friendly winds that would bring their sail ships back home. They faced the darkest of unknowns just to preserve the sacred right to worship as they pleased, or not to worship, to go to this church or that church, the church of their choice. Many of them came for that reason only.

Stop and think about it. Doesn’t one stand in awe, absolute stark awe, as one thinks of the courage of those men and women to strike out across the stormy deep, in awe of their courage and their devotion to God? One cannot help but be awed by that courage that they displayed, and the odds that they faced, and the toll it would exact. Whosoever would have thought that those few blocks or drive those few miles to go to church? I do. Ah, how I like to lie in bed on Sunday morning. My little dog Billy gets me up many times, or that alarm clock does. But I like to go back to bed on Sunday morning. Can’t do it on Monday, you see. Can’t do it on Tuesday. But Saturday and Sunday—who, Sunday.

They did not know what would lie in wait for them. They knew it would be a long time before they could get back home, and perhaps there would not be friendly winds that would bring their sail ships back home. They faced the darkest of unknowns just to preserve the sacred right to worship as they pleased, or not to worship, to go to this church or that church, the church of their choice. Many of them came for that reason only.

The journey was not easy. Turbulent weather, rough water, strong currents, forced the Pilgrims to anchor at Cape Cod, MA, far north of their destination and well outside the boundaries of their patent. This meant that, once on land, there would be no legal authority or government over them.

Therefore, before disembarking, the Pilgrim leaders assembled together all the adult men who made the journey on the Mayflower in order to formulate a government.

It was a covenant. One might call it a contract. I prefer to call it a covenant. Drawing upon their church covenant which vested religious authority in the congregation, they established a form of self-government.

It seemed to sound enough, but little could these men aboard the Mayflower that fateful November night in 1620 have realized the mighty forces that they were unleashing. By binding themselves together as a civil body politic, by giving themselves the power to enact laws for the common good, and obligating themselves to obey such laws, the Pilgrims were establishing the fundamental, the basic principles of democracy in America, namely a belief in self-government, the rule of law, and government by mutual consent.

The Pilgrims had also established that the government of their new world would be a government under God. The Mayflower Compact states: ‘This intent perfectly clear as it read, in part:

‘In the name of God, amen, we whose names are underwritten . . . Having undertaken for the Glory of God . . . Do by these Presents,立为政府。因此，在决定上船之日的前一个晚上，the Pilgrims had made the makings of a great feast. Hot diggity dog, they had it, didn’t they. They had something good to eat. Yes, indeed. So they invited their neighbors to join them in a day of celebration and worship and in a common giving of thanks.

Two years later, in 1623, the Pilgrims made this day of thanks, feasting, and worship a tradition. The spirit of that glorious day, which some people recognize as the first official Thanksgiving, was captured and attributed to Governor Bradford. That proclamation read in part—let us read it together:

Inasmuch as the Great Father has given us this year in an abundant harvest of Indian corn, wheat, peas, beans, and garden vegetables, and made the forest to abound with game and the sea with fish and clams, and inasmuch as he has . . . spared us from the pestilence and the want of worship, God according to the dictates of our own conscience, now I, your magistrate, do proclaim to all ye Pilgrims, with your wives and ye little ones, do gather at ye meeting house, on ye hill, between the hours of nine and twelve in the daytime on Thursday, November ye 29th, of the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and twenty-three, and the third year since ye Pilgrims landed on ye Plymouth Rock, there to listen to ye Pastor and render Thanksgiving to ye all Almighty God for all his blest blessings, and praying for the mirth, happiness, and prosperity of this colony, have thought fit to issue this Thanksgiving Proclamation and designating Thursday, November 26, as a ‘day of public thanks-giving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many favors of Almighty God.’ This is by order of the General Court. Byr.}

During the American Revolution, following the important victory over the British at the Battle of Saratoga in October 1777, which marked a turning point in the war, the Continental Congress approved a resolution proclaiming December 1 as a day of ‘Thanksgiving and praise. You see, our fathers did not forget. Our fathers and mothers remembered the great God of heaven. They remembered the God who had watched over them through that perilous trek across the deep waters and had protected them in their homes and the forests, had provided food and sustenance for them. They remembered. They gave thanks to him.

Following the establishment of the new Government of the United States in 1789, President George Washington issued a ‘Thanksgiving Proclamation’ designating Thursday, November 26, as a ‘day of public thanks-giving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many favors of Almighty God.’ This is by order of the General Court.

“Thanksgiving day,” wrote President John Kennedy, “has ever since been part of the fabric which has united Americans with their past, with each other, and with the future of mankind.”

Thanksgiving has become one of America’s oldest and most beloved holidays. It is one of our most important holidays. It has become a day devoted to turkey, mashed potatoes, cranberries, family togetherness, football games, parades, and the beginning of the Christmas holiday season. But it also remains a day that should be devoted to God and country because it always has been.
aside the last Thursday of November "as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father." This was Lincoln, not ROBERT BYRD. "In the midst of a civil war of unequal magnitude and severity," President Lincoln proclaimed the country should take a day to acknowledge—listen to his words—the "gracious gifts of the most high God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy."

Two towering Presidents, Washington and Lincoln, humbled themselves to call upon God's name and to give him thanks.

This year, as was 1863, has been a year of tragedy and adversity for our Nation. We again find ourselves at war. Because of this, on this Thanksgiving, as in 1863, there will be too many empty chairs at the table. Nevertheless, as in 1863, we should recognize that there is so much for which to be thankful.

While I recognize that today, as in 1863, we live in a time of uncertainty and danger, we should all be thankful that the American people have the steadfastness and the determination to move forward.

While I recognize that many young American men and women will spend this holiday in harm's way protecting our country and protecting the values we hold dear, we can all be thankful we do have the best, the bravest, and the most determined Armed Forces—and always have been the world, Armed Forces that are now fighting the scourge of terrorism. I am thankful we live in a country that can confront a crisis with strength and moral certainty, without forcing us to abandon the very principles and values that we hold most dear.

Like President Washington, I am thankful for "the many favors of Almighty God," including a government that ensures our "safety and happiness.

Like President Lincoln, I am thankful for the "gracious gifts of the most high God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins"—and there are many—"hath nevertheless remembered mercy."

Finally, I am thankful for those men and women, who, 381 years ago, had the courage, the faith, and the devotion to God to challenge the most difficult and dangerous of journeys and face the darkest unknown. They left friends and homes and warm hearths to launch out upon a dangerous, deep journey, led and guided only by the faith they had in a higher power and a desire to create a new home where they could go to the church of their choice. Thank God for them.

On this Thanksgiving, let us remember:
Our fathers in a wondrous age.
Ere yet the Earth was small.
Ensured to us an heritage,
Ere yet the Earth was small,
That we, the children of their heart,
Which then did beat so high,
In later time should play like part
For our posterity.
Then fretful murmur not they gave
So great a charge to keep.
Nor dream that weastretch time shall save
Their labour while we sleep.
Dear-bought and clear, a thousand year
Our fathers toil in peace.
Make we likewise their sacrifice.
Defrauding not our sons.
Mr. President, I yield the floor.
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAYTON). The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

SIGNIFICANT STRATEGIC ISSUES
Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I compliment the distinguished leader—and I am still my leader—the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator BYRD, on his speech and his remembrance relative to Thanksgiving.

I also rise to compliment him on his speech that I only heard in my office relating to some regulating of a limited missile weapons. Quite frankly, I am a little embarrassed. I thought he was going to make the Thanksgiving speech first. I wished to be here for his comments on what is going on now in Crawford, TX, with President Bush and President Putin.

Today, I think we all agree we have an opportunity to reach a reasonable agreement with the Russians on the three most significant strategic issues of our times: strategic arms reductions, and nonproliferation. Senator BYRD and I and others have had a chance to meet with Mr. Putin in a larger group. Based on private discussions with him and on reports of what he has said in his meetings with President Bush, it seems as though genuine progress has been made in the summit this week between President Bush and President Putin.

I respectfully suggest—and I believe the President would probably agree—that much more needs to be done. It seems to me that, in conjunction with what Senator BYRD said earlier, it is vital for us to continue to make progress, and it is equally vital that the United States refrain from actions that would make further agreements on these vital issues difficult, if not impossible.

President Bush has made clear—in the ten months since he has been President—his determination to proceed on the development of a limited missile defense system, despite any limitations in the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972. Now, we have had very conflicting accounts from his representatives in the administration before the Intel- ligence Committee, the Armed Services Committee, and the Foreign Relations Committee as to whether or not they were "prepared to break out of the ABM treaty" based on planned testing, or needed testing, to further determine the feasibility of a limited missile defense.

But one thing has come through consistently: President Bush has stated his determination to do whatever it takes to develop a limited missile defense. Obviously, Russian officials have heard him, and they understand his determination to proceed.

But—and it is a big but—President Putin, in his discussion with some of us Senators and in his public statements, has made it clear that he still considers the ABM Treaty a critical element in the agreements that govern strategic relations between the United States and his country.

President Bush and President Putin seem to have achieved a personal rapport over the last 6 months that bolsters President Putin. That is why we mean no harm to Russia. I have said before, somewhat facetiously but only somewhat, that as a student of history—although not to the extent of my friend from West Virginia, and I mean that seriously—I cannot think of any Russian leader, other than a tsar Peter the Great, who looked further west than this gentleman, Mr. Putin, seems to be looking.

He seems to have made a very fundamental and significant decision that the future of his country lies in the West. He has taken some political chances at home. How significant they are, we do not know, but nonetheless, he has, to use the vernacular, stiffed both the browns and the reds, the nationalists and the former Communists, in making such a dramatic statement about his intentions to live and thrive in the West. He has even dismantled Russia’s listening post in Cuba as a demonstration of the lack of feeling of hostility toward the United States.

I will say that President Bush has succeeded in communicating to the President of Russia that we mean no harm: that the Cold War is over. In fact, Secretary Powell said in Asia that the post-Cold War is also over. This is the opportunity for a fundamental new beginning. But the beginning does not necessarily mean the end, to the ABM Treaty. President Putin appears to have internalized President Bush’s assertion that he is not an enemy and that Russia is not an enemy—but President Putin is still unwilling to bend the ABM Treaty.

He is willing, however, to let the United States proceed with the testing and development of missile defense, so long as the ABM Treaty remains in force. That seems to me to be a sensible arrangement.

The part that gets difficult is the part to which the Senator from West Virginia spoke. If, in fact, we are, in practical terms, about to amend the ABM Treaty—this is a government with equal branches—that is something about which we in the Senate get to have a say. We should be in on that deal, as Russell Long used to say. That is a deal we should be in on.

I am very happy the President appears not to be intent at this moment on withdrawing from the ABM Treaty, which I think would be a tragic mistake—not only substantively as it relates to arms control but diplomatically as it relates to our relations around the world. I am anxious to hear what the President has in mind, however, in terms of how, in effect, to ratify—I do not mean ratifying this, but I am paraphrasing—we can do this on a handshake.

Handshakes are great—and I admire and I trust the President’s resolve and I trust his sense of honor and I believe he means what he says and will stick to it when he shakes hands. I am even prepared to acknowledge that is probably true with President Putin as well—but a handshake is not the stuff upon which these kinds of agreements should be based.

The goal of our policy should not be to withdraw from the ABM Treaty, as some continue to urge. I think they miss the point. The goal should be to maximize our national security interests to win some degree of leverage over the relevance of arms control agreements in this post-cold-war era.

With regard to strategic weapons, President Bush announced this week that the United States will reduce its force level over the next 10 years to somewhere between 1,700 and 2,200 deployed warheads.

The devil is in the details—for example, “deployed warheads.” To date, I have not gotten an explanation of what is going to happen with “all the other warheads”—roughly 4,000 additional warheads, not just ours, but the Russians as well, because President Putin promised to do the same thing, to cut his forces as well. But I assume—and this is a little premature—but I assume he is also talking about “deployed” nuclear weapons, as opposed to all the nuclear weapons in your possession.

That is excellent progress as far as it goes, Mr. President, and I do not mean to sound as if I am trying to rain on the President’s parade. I think what he is doing is very helpful. Now, though, it seems to me—and obviously to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee—President Bush and Putin should agree on a means by which they can verify that each country is complying with its promise.

Even if the Lord Almighty came down and stood in the well of the Senate and said: I guarantee to all you Senators and all America and all the world that both Putin and Bush will keep their agreements, that would not be quite good enough for me. God willing, Presidents Bush and Putin will remain healthy, and I am sure President Bush will remain in power for 4 years beyond his term. But it may be that he will not be President in 3 years, and Mr. Putin may not be President in 3 years. For great countries to have such fundamental decisions rest upon personal assurances between two honorable men is not sufficient—not because the men are not honorable, not because they are not intent on keeping their promises, but because they are not immortal, they are not going to be around forever.

It seems to me they should make sure, whatever each side is promising, that it is able to be determined with some objectivity. This would avoid signiﬁcantly the kind of doubts and inadequacies that I, remind my colleagues, have plagued us in the past regarding the Russian promises on tactical nuclear weapons made a decade ago.

U.S. force planners beneﬁt from predictability in Russian strategic forces. The more we know about what is going on in the Russian nuclear force posture, the easier it is to determine how we should deal with them, how we should counter them. With a handshake, unordered President Putin says to the press or in private to President Bush. That is all we know.

With a written agreement, we have speciﬁc commitments. U.S.-Russian relations will beneﬁt from knowing what each has promised—and what we and they have not promised.

I go back to the promises made by both Presidents Gorbachev and Yeltsin. In fact, what happened was that Gorbachev and Yeltsin made an agreement they intended to keep, and they may, in fact, have kept it.

In January of this year, I remind my colleagues, some of our friends who do not like arms control agreements and were much less trusting of Russia than we seem to today raised questions over whether Russia had violated its 1991 and 1992 promises to cut back on tactical nuclear weapons. That was an issue before this body in the beginning of this year, discussed in this town among our friends. But you and I—and many think-tanks who are whispering in his or her ear saying: Hey, they are not keeping the deal.

The same problems can and do occur regarding strategic weapons. How will we know if Russia has reduced its weapons numbers? Will it remove them from launchers and silos, or only say that certain weapons are no longer operational? How will we know? That was the basis of a big debate not too long ago. I remind my friend—although I do not have to remind my friend—from West Virginia. That was the basis of a big debate.

How are we going to know? What is Russia really promising to do? The only misunderstanding that is worse than one that was intended is one that was unintended. Maybe they are going to be keeping their word, but how will we know?

I promise, there will be many voices questioning whether the Russians are keeping the agreement, and if there is no independent means to verify it, our questioning then geared distrust as to whether or not the Americans really are looking for a way out: Are they really with us? Did they really mean to enter into this?
What is Russia really promising to do? That, I hope, will be made clear, because even that is in question.

It is not wise to make assertions that you will reduce weapons to between 1,700 and 2,000. I guarantee there will be people in this Chamber saying the Russians could cut to 1,700 by such and such a date, and there are 2,000.

I might add, what is going to happen to those warheads that are not deployed? For that matter, how will Russia or the American people know if the United States reduces its arms? What are we promising to do? Are we promising to destroy the weapons, as the START agreements require us to do, such that when we get the force numbers down, we get rid of the rest? Or are we only promising we will decommission them in the sense that we will put them in a barn, we will put them in a hangar, able to be reloaded, but we are not going to have them on station and training?

Will Russia change its training doctrine in the absence of a formal treaty? I remind people when Gorbachev and Yeltsin agreed with the first President Bush to reduce tactical nuclear weapons, they said this would be a formal agreement that they could not change Russian training.

What does that have to do with anything? Rather than deciding they were going to act as if they had decommissioned these weapons, but yet look at the manual, their scientists say they have nuclear weapons, what did they do? They continued to train Russian forces to make war with the weapons they said were no longer deployed. So what then happened?

I am sure my colleagues from West Virginia and Montana and I must have attended intelligence meetings where we would be told the following: They said they had decommissioned these weapons, but yet look at the manual; their manual says they said the weapons to plan to use them. So that must mean they have not decommissioned them. How do we know? And yet Gorbachev and Yeltsin had said at the start, without a verifiable agreement we are not going to change our manual because we may have to pull those suckers out of storage and use them if you guys turn out not to keep your side of the deal.

What will we do? Will we, too, train our troops to make war with our weapons we say we no longer deployed? Will other countries take heart because we have fewer deployed weapons, or will they look at our total stockpile and say that our reductions are a sham?

Again, I have no doubt that President Bush was acting in the right thing, but we cannot, in my view, expect other countries to have as much trust in us as we have in ourselves.

I will never forget the first time I was sent by the man who is now the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and who was then the leader of the U.S. Senate—he may remember—asked me as a relatively young Senator in 1979, when the SALT II agreement was under consideration, to lead a group of new Senators who were uncertain about whether or not they were for this new arms control agreement. It was in the face of this scare that the Russians had bases in Cuba, and we were trying to get them out of there. The Carter administration wanted it. I led a delegation of 10 or 12 Senators—great Senators who are no longer in the Senate, Bradley, Boren, Pryor, and a number of others, because they were just returning from the tour with Leonid Brezhnev, who was the Russian President at the time. Brezhnev came into their Cabinet room. We were all on one side, and Brezhnev and Kosygin on the other side, and it opened the following way: He welcomed us. We had contemporary translation.

Brezhnev looked at me, and he said: "Let's get two things straight, Senator. The first thing is, when I was 22 years old, what was my job?" He went on to tell me his job, along with Kosygin, was to supply Leningrad in the siege of Leningrad, making it clear "you are a young man, Senator." He wanted me to know he had been important for a long time. I got the message. This is important because this is literally what he said: "Let's agree that we do not trust each other, and we have good reason not to trust each other."

He went on to say: "You Americans believe, with every fiber of your being, that you would never use nuclear weapons." You believe you would never use them against us first. But I hope you understand why we think you might. Then he went on to say: "You are the only nation in the history of mankind that has ever used nuclear weapons. You used them against the Japanese people."

He quickly added: "I am not second-guessing you, but you used them. So you have to understand we might think you might use them again." A point well taken. No matter how well intended either side is, we cannot expect other nations to trust our resolve as much as we trust our resolve. So if we want others to trust us and we want to be able to trust Russia in the years to come, we should remember Ronald Reagan's advice: Trust but verify.

In war I am encouraged by President Bush's statement, following his force reductions announcement: If we need to write it down on a piece of paper, I would be glad to do that.

He should, I hope he will. I also hope that piece of paper contains your way for us to take a look at. A new START III treaty would not be difficult to draft. It would ensure not only rigorous verification but also proper respect for the constitutional role of the Senate regarding international agreements.

There are also grounds for hope regarding the problem of proliferation and Russia's relations with Iran and Iraq. For the first time, Russians are saying there is no longer a strategic rationale for putting trade above non-proliferation in Russia's relations with Iran and Iraq. The question now is: Is it wise to put Russia's place in the world at risk? That is clearly with us in the West and in opposition to proliferation whereas we and our allies can provide the money that Russia needs to maintain economic growth and well-being, in return for new Russian policies and actions that reflect the elimination of nuclear weapons in that part of the world.

We can offer Russia debt relief on its Soviet-era obligations to the United States and other countries. Russia could use a significant proportion of the proceeds of that debt relief on non-proliferation programs to secure its sensitive materials and to provide new, civilian careers for its many weapons scientists who could otherwise become prey to offers from rogue states or terrorist groups.

Senator Lugar of Indiana and I have encouraged the Administration to consider this option. We also have legislation to authorize such debt relief, which the Foreign Relations Committee has approved unanimously.

The U.N. could authorize a major increase in the Iraqi Oil for Food program—which would revitalize Iraq's oil production infrastructure—in return for devoting the proceeds to payment of Iraq's foreign debt, especially its debt to Russia. That would free Russia to pursue the issue of United Nations inspections on the basis of strategic concerns alone.

Senators DOMENICI and LUGAR propose that we provide loan guarantees to Russia in return for Russia reducing its fissile material stockpiles.

Missile defense, strategic arms and non-proliferation affect not only Russia and the United States, but the future of the whole world. The opportunities for U.S.-Russian cooperation—if we seize them—hold the promise of a transformed world in which international cooperation is the norm, with Russia and the United States leading the way.

But we must seize those opportunities.

And we must not waste those opportunities by engaging in purely ideological actions, like withdrawing from the ABM Treaty when there is no rational need to do that.

I conclude by saying that I compliment my friend from West Virginia who is, as usual, the first person to come to the floor and speak to this issue. It is vitally important. I hope the President and the administration listen to his advice. I think he is dead right.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Delaware for his statement. I well remember in 1987, with respect to the INF Treaty, the Reagan administration sought to reinterpret the provisions of the ABM Treaty—to reinterpret those provisions because the Reagan administration did not want to live up to the ABM Treaty. They wanted to get away from that ABM Treaty. There was some question in that administration who sought to reinterpret the ABM Treaty. But as we prepared for the subsequent approval by this U.S. Senate of the ratification of the INF Treaty, the distinguished Senator from Delaware was advocating the view that there had been an amendment written to provide that there be no reinterpretation of any treaty by a subsequent administration; that the treaty had to be interpreted based on the four corners of the treaty plus interpretation of the treaty as explained by witnesses of the administration in power at the time the treaty was ratified. Any new understanding would have to be agreed upon by the executive branch and the legislative branch.

The distinguished Senator from Delaware rendered a great service in that instance, as did the then-Senator from Georgia, Mr. Nunn, who was chairman of the Armed Services Committee; the then-Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. Boren, who was chairman of the Intelligence Committee; and the then-chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Pell.

Mr. BIDEN. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. Those three Senators and I insisted on having it in writing from the Soviets. And Secretary of State Shultz went to—I guess it was Paris—went to Europe, at least, and worked with Mr. Shevardnadze, I believe, and came back with a document in writing saying that all parties agreed that that would be the interpretation, that there would not be any subsequent reinterpretation by any administration, any subsequent President. Because if that were the case, how could we ever depend on our own security as having credibility, if a subsequent administration could reinterpret it according to its own wishes?

How would a subsequent administration interpret an “understanding” that was entered into by a handshake? All the more reasons for wanting to see it in writing and having it debated by the elected representatives of the people. I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. BIDEN. I ask unanimous consent to speak for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, to reaf- firm what the Senator says, I do not think anyone should read in this that the Senator from West Virginia and I aren’t happy that the President wants to bring down the number of nuclear weapons.

Mr. BYRD. No.

Mr. BIDEN. We are very supportive of the way that they have to make sure when it is done, it is done.

Mr. BYRD. It is done.

Mr. BIDEN. And we know it is done.

I thank the Senator and I thank the Chair, and I particularly thank Senator BAUCUS for his kindness in allowing us to proceed.

Mr. BYRD. I join in the thanks.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I compli- ment you on your leadership in 1993, West Virginia as well as the Senator from Delaware. They as well as many others over the years have provided terrific service to our country, keeping their eye on this ball with respect to the former So- viet Union, current Russia, and the key question as to the key question is that Congress has an active role in trade negotia-

The problems I have outlined also make clear why any new grant of fast track negotiating authority must address the concerns of Congress on issues like preservation of U.S. trade laws. I must also assure that Congress has an active role in trade negotia-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The STIMULUS PACKAGE

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, while we are waiting for some intervening Senate business, I wish to make a couple of comments about international trade. I am inspired to do that by my colleague from Montana.

Before I do that, let me compliment my colleague, Senator BAUCUS, on the work he has done on the stimulus package. I told him yesterday in a private conversation how impressed I was with what he brought to the floor dealing with taxation and other issues to try to provide some lift and recovery to this country’s economy. I think it was the right bill. It was the right thing. I commend him for his leadership, and I appreciate his leadership on that.

I was sorely disappointed that there was a point of order raised against that which prevailed last evening because I think Senator BAUCUS, along with Senator DASCHLE and others of us who were pushing very hard to get this done, had put together a piece of legis-

We are not in a position where we can just decide to stand around and wait and see what happens. I mentioned earlier that we had a trade his-

I thank the Senator and I thank the Senator.

Mr. BIDEN. I ask unanimous consent to speak for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, to reaf- firm what the Senator says, I do not think anyone should read in this that the Senator from West Virginia and I aren’t happy that the President wants to bring down the number of nuclear weapons.

Mr. BYRD. No.

Mr. BIDEN. We are very supportive of the way that they have to make sure when it is done, it is done.

Mr. BYRD. It is done.

Mr. BIDEN. And we know it is done.
Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me talk just for a moment about international trade because there has been a trade conference in Doha, Qatar. I expect the people who run the WTO chose that place largely because they did not want to have a trade conference where there were not a lot of hotel rooms. Experiences in trade conferences in recent years have not been good. Thousands and thousands of people from around the world have come to demonstrate and express concerns about one thing or another. They decided to have a ministerial conference in Doha. My understanding is there are so few hotel rooms in Doha that they had to bring in cruise ships in order to provide lodging for visitors to Doha.

Because of other business this week, I didn’t pay a lot of attention to what they did at Doha. I do know that all these trade folks converged and they had a long visit. I watched part of a similar visit in Mexico. I watched part of the visit they had in Seattle. So I know they all get together. They have the same background, and they talk the same language. They actually have shorthand for all the trade lingo that they develop. Apparently now, from the experience of recent days in Doha, they have decided they have reached some agreements on a new round, and so forth.

So I want to point out just a couple concerns I have about where we are with international trade.

I have a chart that shows a series of balloons that represent the very serious trade problem confronting us in this country. It is a trade deficit that is ballooning, year after year after year. It is the largest trade deficit in human history.

We spend a lot of time worrying about the fiscal policy budget deficit that is $300 billion a year. There was hand-wringing and teeth gnashing and people wipping their brow, and they would come to the floor of the Senate, saying they wanted to change the Constitution, they wanted to do this and that. Why? Because we had this growing budget deficit, this tumor that was growing in the fiscal policy of this country. It was going to hurt this country.

It is interesting, if you ask economists, they all give you different answers: It is because the dollar is too strong; the dollar is too weak; productivity isn’t high enough; price competitiveness isn’t high enough. It depends on the economist who you ask.

Having both studied and taught economics in college, I understand that the field of economics is certainly not a science. I consider it psychology pumped up with just a little bit of heuristics. All you have to do is ask, and you get an answer. It does not mean it is an informed answer. There are 100 different answers as to why our deficit is out of control. Ask any economist. They don’t have the foggiest idea. We had a $449 billion merchandise trade deficit last year in this country.

Now let me describe some of the details of trade. It is interesting that everybody talking about trade, especially those at the ministerial conferences, point to the same picture: global trade. They never want to talk about specifics. So here is a specific.

We trade with Korea, which is a good friend of ours. This chart shows that last year Korea sent 570,000 automobiles to the United States to be sold in the United States. Do you know how many 570,000 cars could be sold in the United States and then we were able to export 1.7 million cars to Korea? Get a Ford Mustang convertible here in the United States, sell it to Korea, and it costs twice as much for a Korean consumer. Why? Because Korea does not want our cars. They do not want our cars coming in and competing. They have all kinds of mechanisms and devices to discourage our ability to move a car to Korea. The result is, 570,000 Korean cars in the United States, 1.7 million United States cars sold to Korea. Fair trade? I don’t think so.

Is that something we ought to correct? In my judgment, it is because these numbers translate to jobs. A working family, a man or a woman getting a job on an assembly line in a manufacturing plant, a job that pays well, a job with security, a job with benefits, these are good jobs. This means we export these jobs to other countries that produce products and send them to us and then they close our market closed to our products, which means fewer manufacturing jobs in the United States.

I have another chart I did not bring to the Chamber. It shows T-bone steaks in Tokyo. Do you know that 12 years after the last beef agreement we reached with Japan, the conclusion of which resulted in feasting and rejoicing by everyone engaged in the trade negotiations—you would have thought they just won the gold medal in the Olympics. The result is that today the beef trade deficit is higher than last year. What a wonderful agreement. Twelve years later, by the way, every pound of American beef sent to Japan has a 38.5-percent tariff attached to it—every single pound. Is that fair trade with Japan? No. Fair trade would be more T-bone steaks to Tokyo, in my judgment. But we have a 38.5-percent tariff on every single pound.

Going back to Korea: What about potato flakes to Korea? Up in my part of the country, in the Red River Valley, where the Presiding Officer also represents some potato growers, those potatoes are cut into flakes. Those potato flakes are sent around, and they are put in chips in fast food. Potato flakes are used for fast food. Well, that is probably a pejorative. I shouldn’t say “fast food.” I should say “snacks.” Potato flakes are used for snacks.

If you raise a potato in the Red River Valley and then turn it into potato flakes and send it to Korea, guess what happens to it? Korea slaps a 300-percent tariff on potato flakes.

Are potato flakes going to threaten the Korean food market? I do not think so. Is it fair to an American potato farmer to confront a 300-percent tariff? Where I live, it is not fair.

I could spend a lot of time talking about these things.

China: We have a huge trade deficit with China. We also have a huge trade deficit with Japan. We have a big deficit with Europe. We have a huge deficit with Canada and Mexico. But China sent 12 American movies into China in the last year. Why? That is all China would let into their country, 12 movies. Fair trade? I don’t think so.

Or how about this? In the last trade agreement we negotiated with China, we sent our negotiators to China. Now, presumably, these are the best negotiators we have. We sent them to China. I do not know how we sent them there, probably not on a slow boat, as the saying goes; probably in an airplane.

They got to China and negotiated a bilateral agreement with China, which was the precursor to allowing China to join the WTO. They brought back the bilateral agreement, which we did not vote on because we do not have a vote on a bilateral trade agreement with China. Guess what we discovered?

Let me give you an example. Automobiles: After a long phase-in, we have decided we are negotiating with the Chinese negotiators—we would have a 2.5 tariff on Chinese vehicles being sent into the United States, and China could have a 25-percent tariff on the United States vehicles sent to China. In other words, our negotiators sat down with the Chinese, with whom we had a $60 billion deficit, and we said to them: OK, we will agree to this deal. You go ahead and impose a tariff on U.S. cars sent to China that is 10 times higher than the tariff we will impose on Chinese cars coming into the United States, and we will sign that agreement. That is what our negotiators said. So that is our agreement.
I don’t know, my feeling is these negotiators need to wear jerseys. They do in the Olympics. The jerseys should say: USA. At least they could look down, from time to time, and understand on whose behalf they are negotiating. They can say: Oh, yeah, that is who I represent. That is whose interests I represent, and not be bashful about standing up for our economic interests.

By what justification ever should we agree to this sort of one-sided agreement? We be an illegal entity in this country, a state-sponsored monopoly that sends durum wheat into this country to undercut American farmers’ prices, and then thumbs their nose at us when we say we want to see the proof that you are selling because we believe they are violating our trade laws. I could spend a long time talking about that, about the day I went to the Canadian border with Earl Jensen in a 12-year-old, orange, 2-ton truck.

All the way to the Canadian border we met 18-wheel trucks carrying Canadian durum south into the United States.

So we got to the Canadian border, after meeting truck after truck, bringing Canadian durum south. We had 200 bushels of durum in Earl’s little, orange truck, and the Canadians said: No, you can’t come into Canada with 200 bushels of durum. Why not? Just because you can? It is just the way life is. It is a one-way track across that border with durum wheat.

I will not go on further. I know my colleague wants to speak. That is all I need to say on this.

My colleague, Senator BYRD, the other day, spoke about trade protection authority or fast track. In my judgment, what we ought to do is decide that we are going to stand up for this county’s economic interests in international trade.

Don’t give anybody any fast-track trade authority. Say, go negotiate some good trade agreements, bring them back here, and we will sign up to vote for them. First thing in the morning, count us as supporters. Go negotiate bad agreements, which you have done time and time again, and understand they won’t see the light of day here because we are sick and tired of it.

I will not support fast track. We have been fast-tracked right into a huge hole, a trade deficit that has ballooned now to a $450 billion merchandise trade deficit. I will not support fast track.

I agree with my colleagues, Senator BYRD and others: We need expanded trade. There is no question about that. I want to see global markets that are fair. I want to see opportunity for our farmers and our manufacturers around the world. But I also demand that we move forward, and protect this country’s interests requiring fair trade. It is not fair trade with respect to movies in China, durum in Canada, high-fructose corn syrup with Mexico, cars in Korea, potato flakes in China, that is not fair trade with autos in China. None of that is fair trade. There ought not be anybody who is nervous or worried about standing up and demanding fair trade with our trading partners around the world.

I have not spent much time on this, but I intend to in the coming days, if the House and the administration, buoyed by the success in Doha, Qatar, decide they want to try to bring enhanced trade authority to the Senate.

There is no problem at all negotiating trade agreements without fast track. The last administration wanted fast track. They didn’t get it. But they said they negotiated 300 trade agreements, which means you can negotiate trade agreements without fast track. You just need to be careful to negotiate good ones because if you don’t, you won’t get them through the House and Senate.

The inability to have fast track actually promotes more responsibility on the part of those who are required to negotiate these trade agreements.

I wanted to follow on the remarks of Senator BYRD of 2 days ago on the subject of fast track. He and I and others will work very hard to try to see if we can’t make some sense out of this mess, this trade problem that is now choking this country with very large trade deficits and is destroying manufacturing jobs and injuring this economy. We can do better than this even as we expand opportunities, even as we expand international trade. We can do better than that by standing up for fairness for American producers and farmers.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I did not intend to speak on this subject, but after the Senator from North Dakota has raised it, it is important to put all of this in perspective. Matters could be much better, but they are not quite as bleak as outlined by my good friend from North Dakota, not in my judgment. It is clear that other countries still intend to take greater advantage of America in trade matters than we do of them.

We are a country of the world. There are other countries of the world. We have our views. They have their views. We have to live with those. They have theirs. It is incumbent upon us to find a way to be effective in protecting our American interests.

Because the Senator from North Dakota might find this interesting, I would like to talk about beef, and beef with Japan and Korea, for that matter. I have forgotten how many years ago—it must have been maybe 10, 12 years ago—Japan had a quota on foreign beef imports, a strong, tight quota, on the order of about 28,000 tons of hotel/restaurant cut beef. That is a quota on all beef coming to Japan. That is American, Australian, and Argentine beef. That amounted to one 6-ounce steak per person per year. I mean, that is a very strong, tight quota against American beef sales in Japan.

At the same time, we Americans imported considerably more pounds of beef than we exported worldwide. We imported far more beef worldwide—lower cut grades for hamburgers and other things—than we exported.

I decided I wanted to do something about the problem with Japan. I tried everything under the Sun. I remember in the Mike Mansfield Room—Senator Mansfield was Ambassador to Japan, very highly regarded, very revered—I said: Why don’t I invite the Japanese diplomatic corps up to the Mansfield Room and we will show to them how good Montana beef is. We will do all we can to get that quota reduced or eliminated.

That was naive. Nothing happened. I might say, one member of the Japanese Parliament had the audacity to say the reason they have a quota on foreign beef is that their digestive system can’t handle foreign beef. It is total nonsense.

At the same time, maybe a few years earlier, we had a difficult time importing American skis into Japan, and their excuse then was: Well, Japanese snow is a little different. That is why we can’t take American skis. They were totally ludicrous arguments.

I decided I had had it with the Japanese on beef. So I had a press conference over in the Hart Building, and about 20 Japanese journalists showed up. I had a button on me. The button said: “I have a beef with Japan.” And I said to the Japanese, very respectfully, trade has to be a two-way street. I can’t think of two-way street. I can’t think of one way. As you can see, it is one way. It is not right, and I am going to do what I can to stop that.

At about that time, there was legislation on the Senate floor called domestic content legislation. That legislation required a certain percentage of content, manufacturing, and assembly of autos in America to be American content, not foreign. It was domestic content legislation. At that point, I did not favor that legislation. I thought it was prescriptive. It was wage-price controls—too controlling—although I agreed with the purport and the direction it was going.
I said: If you don’t take American beef, I am going to go right to the Senate floor and do all I can to get that domestic content legislation passed because that will be two way; that will be fair.

My gosh, I could see scribbling of all kinds of notes, cameras going on. The next day there was a big article about my statement in the Japanese newspapers. My photo was in the Japanese newspapers. I can’t read Japanese, but I know what that I had said.

Guess what. Within a couple of weeks, the Japanese sat down at the bargaining table. Mike Armstrong was our trade negotiator at the time. They needed to negotiate, and they agreed to eliminate that quota entirely. But they did replace it with a 70-percent tariff. That is pretty high, but at least our industry said: That is great; the quota is eliminated. We can start importing beef into Japan.

I go over to Japan a couple, three times. I know about two words in Japanese. I learned this one. It is “Oshii,” which means delicious. I would stand in front of the Japanese cameras and say: This is Oshii beef. That is delicious. At the same time, a Japanese polling company showed that the Japanese housewives and Japanese citizens of Tokyo wanted American beef by far. Under the Japanese constitution, because the rural districts had disproportionate voting power, they want to protect themselves. That is why they had that quota. The quota was eliminated, replaced with a 70-percent tariff.

We also agreed to bring that tariff down. The Senator from North Dakota says it is now down to around 28 percent. That could well be. It is my recollection that eventually that tariff will be gone. The point is that we have made progress with Japan. We now, by the way, export more beef overseas than we import. That line was crossed about 2 years ago. So there is progress.

There are things that are more complicated than meets the eye. But we certainly have a lot more to do and further to go. As in the Korean situation, Korea had this provision—this was about 2 years ago—called the shelf law. They wouldn’t let boats unload beef products, canned beef, for over 2 weeks. Their distribution system wouldn’t let boats unload beef products. As in the Korean situation, Korea had this provision—this was about 2 years ago. So there is progress.

I yield the floor.

(Ms. CANTWELL assumed the Chair.)

Mr. REID. Madam President, I thank my friend. I extend my appreciation to the chairman of the Finance Committee, the senior Senator from Montana, who is so important to this institution.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 1552

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that we now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 204, H.R. 1552, the Internet tax moratorium bill; that when the bill is considered, it be under the following limitations: that there are no amendments for general debate on the bill, with that time divided as follows: 5 minutes each for the chairman and ranking members of Senate Committees, or their designees; that the only floor amendment in order be the following: an Enzi-Dorgan amendment regarding extension, on which there will be 60 minutes for debate prior to a vote in relation to the amendment; that if the amendment is not tabled, then Senator GRAMM of Texas be recognized to offer a relevant second-degree amendment to the Enzi-Dorgan amendment; that there be 20 minutes for debate prior to a vote in relation to the Gramm of Texas amendment, with no amendments in order; that all time equally divided and controlled between the proponents and opponents; that upon the disposition of all amendments, the use or yielding back of all time, the bill be read the third time, the Senate vote on passage of the bill, with this action occurring with no further intervening action or debate.

I further seek unanimous consent that the Enzi-Dorgan and Gramm of Texas amendments, which are at the desk, be the amendments under the provisions of this agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Reserving the right to object, and I say to the whip that I will not object, I want to be clear that on the record tonight the Senate, in wrap-up, will proceed to Calendar No. 191, S. 739, the Homeless Veterans Improvement Act, which Congressman LANE EVANS and I have worked on for the last 3 weeks. There has been an anonymous hold. My understanding is that tonight this will pass in wrap-up without any objection.

Mr. REID. The Senator has our assurance that will be handled in wrap-up. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

INTERNET TAX NONDISCRIMINATION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title. The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1552) to extend the moratorium enacted by the Internet Tax Freedom Act through November 1, 2003, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. MCCAIN. Since I see the Senator from North Dakota here, I suggest that perhaps we could make our opening statements as part of the 60 minutes of debate on the Dorgan-Enzi amendment. If that is agreeable, I would be glad to do that. I move to modify the agreement that we move immediately to the Enzi-Dorgan amendment with the 60 minutes of debate equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, reserving the right to object—

Mr. MCCAIN. I withdraw that. I will proceed with my statement. I was trying to save the Senate some time. Obviously, we will take more time in discussing whether I was saving the Senate time or not.

First, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Statement of Administration Policy concerning H.R. 1552, the Internet Tax Nondiscrimination Act, from the President of the United States.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

H.R. 1552—INTERNET TAX NONDISCRIMINATION ACT

The Administration supports Senate passage of H.R. 1552. The Administration believes that government should be promoting Internet usage and avenues for commerce with access taxes and discriminatory taxes.

As passed by the House, H.R. 1552 extends the Internet tax moratorium enacted by the Internet Tax Freedom Act for two years. While a five-year extension would be preferable, a two-year extension will provide additional time to analyze the impact of e-commerce on local and State tax receipts while ensuring that the growth of the Internet is not slowed by new taxes.

The moratorium expired on October 21, 2001. The Administration supports rapidly re-instituting the moratorium. The Administration encourages the Senate to pass H.R. 1552, without amendment, to enable its expeditious enactment into law.

It basically says that the administration supports Senate passage of H.R. 1552. He concludes by saying that the administration encourages the Senate to pass H.R. 1552, without amendment, to enable its expeditious enactment into law.

On Sunday, October 21, the Federal moratorium on Internet taxes expired.
State and local taxing jurisdictions, reportedly over 7,000 of them, are now free to tax Internet access, and to impose multiple and discriminatory taxes on e-commerce.

I strongly support H.R. 1552, which would extend the moratorium on Internet access taxes for 2 years. This proposal for a simple, short-term extension of the moratorium is supported by diverse interests, including, among many others, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the United States Conference of Mayors, the Information Technology Association of America, the American Electronics Association, and the National Association of Manufacturers.

I urge my colleagues to support this measure that has already passed the House of Representatives, and to oppose the Enzi/Dorgan amendment. Let me explain why.

There is broad consensus that the moratorium on the imposition of access taxes should be extended. This has not been based on the separate issue of the collection of sales taxes on remote transactions. A number of Senators believe that this separate issue must be addressed if the moratorium is extended for more than a few weeks.

State and municipal governments are concerned that they will lose significant revenue as more and more consumers buy goods on-line. Most of these consumers are required by state laws to file returns on the separate issue of remote transactions, but they seldom do. While the loss of tax revenue from remote catalog sales has been of concern to states for many years, the prospect of many more untaxed on-line transactions has worried main street merchants and state and local governments that rely on sales tax revenue to support critical functions including education and emergency response. Their concerns are legitimate.

A group of Senators have tried, literally for years, to address these concerns. Senators Dorgan, Enzi, Kerry, Voinovich, Hutchison, Wyden, and Allen, among others, have held countless meetings to try to balance concerns about loss of State and local revenue with concerns about imposing unwarranted and perhaps unbearable burdens on remote transactions. I have participated in many of these meetings at which countless drafts of legislation have been circulated, and I have been convinced at times that these committees have been productive, creative, and open to compromise. These Senators have been.

Unfortunately, however, there is not yet a consensus on how or if Congress should permit states to collect sales taxes on remote transactions. After the events of September 11 refocused efforts, it became clear that we would not resolve this issue before the moratorium on Internet access taxes expired.

While we are much closer to an agreement on legislation relating to the collection of sales taxes we are not yet there. In the past, Congress has held protracted debate on the question of Internet taxes. Although the issue is extraordinarily controversial, we don’t have time to thoroughly consider the still-divergent proposals. This controversy, however, should not prevent us from proceeding on the separate, and non-controversial issue of extending the moratorium on Internet access taxes.

Just as there is agreement that the moratorium on Internet access taxes should be extended, there is also agreement that, to be valid, it must be radically reconciled and simplified to remove both practical and legal barriers to remote collection and remission.

This simplification, however, has not yet occurred. And it is not the Federal Government’s responsibility to see that it does.

Recognizing the need for simplifications, thirty-two states last year joined the Streamlined Sales Tax Project, which simplifying remote sales and use tax collection. The National Conference of State Legislatures has since undertaken to develop model legislation to create uniform definitions and remove the burden of remote retailers of collecting and remitting sales taxes. Next month, the 20 states that have passed legislation this year indicating their intent to proceed on sales tax simplification will meet in Salt Lake City to do this.

Although this process is underway, the simplification is complex and will not happen overnight. Reconciling definitions among states of what is or is not taxable, and resolving the allocation of tax revenues among localities within states will not happen in 8 months. Frankly, it probably will not happen in 2 years. Nevertheless, I think that substantial progress toward simplification can be made in 2 years, and Congress will be in a much better position to determine whether to consent to allowing states to require out-of-state retailers to collect and remit sales taxes on remote transactions.

In the meantime, I think it is imperative that we extend the moratorium on the separate issue of Internet access taxes.

The recent economic success experienced by the United States, the longest economic expansion in U.S. history was due, in part, to the Internet. Now the businesses tied to this vehicle of growth are experiencing troubled times and the nation is spiraling into recession. During times of economic uncertainty, we must restrain ourselves from further burdening an already ailing sector, particularly one which provides both the opportunity and promise for successful recovery and further growth.

Prior to September 11, the high tech sector began to suffer dramatic losses. Since the beginning of this year alone, revenue for U.S. Technology sales, including computers, semiconductors, and communications equipment, had fallen by 35 percent. Mass layoffs plagued the sector with 479,199 high tech jobs eliminated since the beginning of the year, 47,250 of which were eliminated in September alone.

Industry leaders such as AOL, Sun Microsystems, and Intel have seen both stock prices and profits plunge. According to the research firm of Thomsen Financial/First Call the high technology companies on the Standard & Poor’s 500 are expected to see fourth quarter profits fall to 58 percent of last year’s levels.

This grim picture is expected to decline further, with tech profits expected to fall sharply in the first quarter of 2002, before recovering by the end of next year. Allowing access and multiple discriminatory taxes on electronic commerce will inevitably lead to harder times for an ailing industry.

We are now faced with the choice, will we allow the Internet tax moratorium to remain expired, further hampering the recovery of the high tech sector and the entire economy, or will we act now to extend the moratorium and support the recovery of this economy?

Again, I reiterate my appreciation to the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. Dorgan, who has, along with myself, the Senator from Oregon, the Senator from Virginia, and others, had countless meetings. We have tried to come to an agreement. I believe there will come a time when we reach agreement. There will come a time when there are enough States that have come together to come up with a simplified system of sales taxes that can be fair to everybody. But we are not there yet.

Other colleagues of mine will make arguments on both sides of this issue. I wish we could reach that stage because I am fully aware that State and local revenues are being unfairly diverted, or not collected because of the failure to have any taxes imposed on Internet transactions. But we are not there yet. I believe the time will come a time when we are in an economic situation that is clearly unpleasant, it would not be the time for us to impose taxes on the Internet which is already in a state of fragility.

Madam President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used his time. Who yields time?

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, who is controlling time?

Mr. McCAIN. May I ask the parliamentary situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona has consumed his 5 minutes. There is 5 minutes to the chairman of the Commerce Committee and 5 minutes each to the chairman and ranking member of the Finance Committee.

Mr. McCAIN. In other words, there is no time available under the unanimous consent agreement, so we would have to move to the amendment in order for other Members to speak; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 1 hour available on the first-degree amendment.
Mr. MCCAIN. On the amendment, Madam President, parliamentary inquiry. I suppose the next speaker will then be taking time on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the amendment is called up, time will be available on the amendment.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I understand I have 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I will try to make the best use of those 5 minutes.

Madam President, I rise in support of a simple 2 year extension of the Internet Tax Freedom Act. In my judgment, a short-term extension represents a reasonable, bipartisan compromise.

While I support a clean 2-year extension, we should be firm in our resolve that this will not be the first of an endless line of moratorium extensions. If we make a strong plea that this be the last time we impose a moratorium without taking the meaningful steps needed to bring interstate tax rules into the 21st century.

While progress has been made on the issue of sales tax simplification, state and local governments will certainly need more than 6, 12, or even 18 months to come up with a system that works.

Moreover, we do not need a quick fix; we need a real solution. Let us continue to keep the parties at the table long enough to make a meaningful change that works.

The debate and negotiations that occur from this point forward must be about resolving issues regarding taxation of the Internet and not about the length of any future extensions.

More importantly, the focus must be on how the traditional tax rules should apply to “new economy” businesses. These issues the Finance Committee has been and will continue to examine.

The States have been working hard to create a model simplified sales and use tax system. A limited extension of the moratorium for 2 years is needed in order to provide an adequate time to assess their progress.

More importantly, as chairman of the Finance Committee I represent the State of Montana, which does not have a sales tax.

As a Senator from Montana, I will work to ensure that any simplification plan will not place a undue burden on Montana businesses. Sales tax simplification should also be truly simple, and easy for businesses to comply with.

Hopefully, by making this a short 2-year extension, we can encourage the States and the business community to move expeditiously to resolve outstanding issues and design a truly simplified sales and use tax system.

This debate is not only about the structure of State controlled use taxes. There is also concern with how States assert a direct tax liability on an out-of-State company.

States impose business activity taxes—corporate income and/or franchise taxes—on corporations that have property or employees in the State. The businesses that pay these taxes receive some governmental benefits and protections afforded by that State.

A similar situation exists internationally, where foreign jurisdictions impose a direct tax liability on businesses operating within the country. Therefore, all the rules for sales and use taxes are simplified, it is also important that we pay special attention to the rules regarding business activity taxes.

What we used to think of when we heard “property,” “goods,” or even “employees,” is now very different in a world of digital goods, bits of electrons, and telecommuters.

I stress the need to sort through these issues because I am certain that the rules we establish for “interstate” commerce will be the model for “international” commerce.

We need to be very careful we do not set up a system that makes U.S. companies a tax collector for every jurisdiction around the world.

On Internet access taxes, I believe we should look for ways to reduce barriers to access, including taxes.

If our intention is to make Internet access tax-free, we must be certain that an appropriate definition of access is developed. Moreover, it is important to ensure that otherwise taxable products provided over the Internet are not inappropriately shielded from tax.

I appreciate the hard work of my friends, Senators ENZI, GROHAM, DORGAN. They have worked hard. They have a proposal which may have merit. But the devil is always in the details, and the details have not been examined by the Finance Committee, or any committee for that matter.

In fact, there have been no hearings on the Dorgan-Enzi amendment to give Internet access. Academic, and Members of the Senate the opportunity to discuss the consequences of this legislation and assess the workability of this bill.

This amendment may be a reasonable starting point, but as with all legislation of this magnitude, the Senate, through its committees, should give it careful consideration.

Some people may say that we have talked too much already. They say that the parties have already had three years to iron out their differences.

That may be, but we must be very careful because this bill raises more questions than it answers.

For example, how does this legislation make sure that the uniform rates among states stay uniform over time?

Does the definition of Internet access allow for incidental content, such as music and movies, to be provided tax free if bundled with Internet access?

Are business activity taxes adequately addressed?

These are difficult issues, and they deserve serious and deliberative consideration.

It is for this reason, that I encourage my colleagues to support a short, 2-year clean extension of the Internet Tax Freedom Act.

In my judgment, 2 years is adequate time to give the Finance Committee an opportunity to address these important, but difficult, issues.

I emphasize that the work remaining involves tax issues that must be resolved by the Finance Committee. There is a long-term precedent of the Senate Finance Committee having jurisdiction over issues involving the taxation of the Internet.

A 2-year extension of the Internet Tax Freedom Act is a reasonable compromise and deserves the support of the Senate.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to add my support to promoting electronic commerce and keeping it free from discriminatory and multiple State and local taxes.

I strongly support the Senate quickly passing H.R. 1552 to extend the Internet tax moratorium for 2 years.

Last month, I was pleased to join the senior Senator from Oregon and the senior Senator from Arizona as an original co-sponsor of the Internet Tax Moratorium Extension Act, the Senate counterpart to H.R. 1552. I commend Senator Wyden and Senator McCain for their continued leadership on Internet tax policy.

Although electronic commerce is beginning to blossom, it is still in its infancy. Stability is key to reaching its full potential, and creating new tax categories for the Internet is exactly the wrong thing to do.

E-commerce should not be subject to new taxes that do not apply to other commerce.

Indeed, without the current moratorium, there are 30,000 different jurisdictions around the country that could levy discriminatory or multiple Internet taxes on e-commerce.

Let’s not allow the future of electronic commerce, with its great potential to expand the markets of Main Street businesses, to be crushed by the weight of discriminatory taxation.

Many Vermont companies have contacted me in the last month and weeks in support of extending the moratorium, including Green Mountain Coffee Roasters, the Army & Navy Store in Barre, and the Vermont Teddy Bear Company.

Cyberselling is working for Vermonters.

We also need a national policy to make sure that the traditional State and local sales taxes on Internet sales are applied and collected fairly and uniformly. This 2-year extension of the current moratorium gives our Governors and State legislatures time to simplify their sales tax rules and reach consensus on a workable national system for collecting sales taxes on e-commerce.

Indeed, the National Conference of State Legislatures has endorsed our legislation to extend the Internet tax moratorium for two more years to give States time to complete work on sales tax simplification. I must also raise some serious questions about the approach of some Senators to pass legislation to waive Congress’s authority to carefully review and modify interstate compacts. As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which has jurisdiction over interstate compacts, I cannot understand why we should recede congressional authority to approve an interstate compact on sales tax issues if 20 States join any compact.

Despite good intentions of its proponents, this approach is asking the Senate to buy a pig in a poke.

I am a strong supporter of interstate compacts where appropriate, such as the Northeast Dairy Compact, but the Senate should not approve of any interstate compact without carefully reviewing its details first. When the Northeast Dairy Compact was approved by the Senate, every detail and every aspect of it was known far in advance.

It also raises constitutional questions for legislation to mandate that Congress automatically approve an interstate compact on sales taxes without any action since the constitution explicitly requires Congress to approve interstate compacts.

The Enzi amendment allows 11 jurisdictions to continue to tax Internet access, but permanently bans Internet access taxes elsewhere in the country. By permanently prohibiting taxation of Internet access in some States, but approving of such taxation in other States, the Enzi amendment may violate the “uniformity clause” in Article 1, 8 of the United States Constitution.

The uniformity clause states that “all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.” The uniformity clause requires that Federal legislation levying taxes follow a consistent plan and apply in all portions of the United States where the subject of the tax is found.

In United States v. Ptasynski, the Supreme Court held that it will subject geographic distinctions in Federal taxation to heightened scrutiny. In a unanimous decision, the Court stated that “Where Congress does choose to frame a tax in geographic terms, we will review its classification closely to see if there is actual geographic discrimination.”

The Enzi amendment proposal to lock in discrimination between States in taxation of Internet access raises questions under the uniformity clause that require careful consideration.

In the case of a temporary moratorium, such as the one in the House bill, the grandfathering of Internet access taxes in a limited number of States may be explained as freezing the status quo while Congress comes up with a permanent solution to the Internet tax issue. Thus, it is unlikely to raise the geographic discrimination problem the Supreme Court discussed in Ptasynski, and would survive heightened scrutiny.

In contrast, the Enzi amendment’s permanent discrimination on the basis of where an Internet user lives is much harder to explain under the heightened scrutiny required by the Supreme Court. If courts treat the Federal Government’s establishment of a discriminatory regime of taxation by the States as raising the same uniformity clause issues as the Federal Government’s levying of discriminatory taxes, the potential for permanent Internet access tax moratorium will be ruled unconstitutional.

As a result, this amendment appears to raise serious constitutional concerns.

E-Commerce is growing, our moratorium law is working, and we should keep a good thing going. I am proud to cosponsor the Internet Tax Moratorium Extension Act to encourage online commerce to continue to grow ever since the Senate decided to allow the States to move ahead with sales tax simplification efforts.

I urge my colleagues to vote for a straightforward 2-year extension of the Internet moratorium.

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, Internet commerce, multiple, confusing and inconsistent State tax rules impose an incredible burden on interstate commerce and the economy, and therefore it is imperative that the Senate move quickly to extend the Internet moratorium and to continue protecting electronic commerce from multiple and discriminatory taxation.

As a result of the U.S. Senate’s failure to extend the moratorium before it lapsed on October 21, 2001, it is now possible for the more than 7,600 State and local taxing jurisdictions to impose multiple and discriminatory taxes on electronic commerce and taxes on Internet access.

On October 16, the House adopted H.R. 1552 under expedited floor procedures. This bipartisan legislation would extend the current moratorium created by the Internet Tax Freedom Act for 2 years. H.R. 1552 is supported strongly by a wide range of groups, including the entire high-tech business community, the National Conference of State Legislatures, State and local municipal groups, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, other business and retail groups that have put aside their differences in support of a clean, 2-year extension of the moratorium.

Given recent events and the current economy, this is the wrong time to sadden consumers with Internet access taxes or with multiple and discriminatory State taxes on electronic commerce. Enacting H.R. 1552 now would provide us with additional time to continue to work together to try to reach consensus on clear and simple Internet tax rules for a borderless marketplace.

We should not be focusing on how to make our tax codes less cumbersome for the purposes of Interstate sales tax collection, especially at this late hour. That is why I ask that my colleagues table this amendment.

SECTION 5(a)(8)

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I would like to have a conversation with the managers that I hope will clarify the meaning of an important element of this legislation. Section 5(a)(8) of the bill calls for “State administration of all State and local sales and use taxes” to be part of the streamlined process that would allow States and localities to be able to collect taxes due on remote sales. I believe it is important to make clear—in the legislation itself—that the requirement for “State administration” applies only to those taxes on out-of-State remote sales. The fact that, in a particular State, a single locality might on its own continue to collect local taxes on other sales would not affect that State’s ability to be part of the streamlined compact.

By way of example, the city of Chicago has a number of local use taxes that are imposed on different types of transactions. The city both imposes a use tax that collects those taxes wherever they are located in the State of Illinois. While the city and the State might agree to State administration of out of State remote sales, I would not want to see this legislation mandate that only the State of Illinois could collect these taxes on other sales.

I believe that this interpretation is intended by the legislation. Section 5(a) call for States and localities to work together to develop a streamlined tax system “in the context of remote sales.” However, I am concerned that this intent is not clearly enough spelled out. When the legislation returns from conference, I hope that this intent would be made absolutely clear.

This could be done by changing section 5(a)(8) to read “State administration of all State and local sales and use taxes on remote sales.” It would also help to add a general use clause that would state that “nothing shall be construed to divest the authority of local governments to collect taxes on sales other than remote sales as defined in this Act.”

Would the managers agree to this interpretation and assure me that the final legislation will make this interpretation absolutely clear?

Mr. DORGAN. I thank the Senator for his observations. I agree with his interpretation in that requirement of State administration of sales and use taxes applies only to remote sales. While I believe that this is the intent of the current wording, I will work in conference to assure that this point is absolutely clear.

Mr. ENZI. I am in agreement with both the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from North Dakota. I also agree that the requirement for State administration of sales and use taxes applies only to remote sales, and that this is the intent of the current wording. However, I will join with the Senator from North Dakota in working to further clarify this language in conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired. Who yields time? The Senator from Wyoming.

AMENDMENT NO. 2155

(Purpose: To foster innovation and technology, to provide for sales and use taxes on sales and use taxes)

Mr. ENZI. Madam President, apparently under the unanimous consent agreement, that brings us to the amendment itself. As such, I yield myself 8 minutes, and I call up amendment No. 2155.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wyoming (Mr. ENZI), for himself, Mr. DORGAN, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. HUTCHISON, and Mr. CARPER, proposes an amendment numbered 2155.

Mr. ENZI. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today’s RECORD under “Amendments Submitted.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Madam President, 2 years ago we passed a simple extension of the moratorium. That is exactly what we did 2 years ago, and now we are saying there have been no hearings held on it and there has been no committee work on it.

There have been individuals working on this 2 years ago there were a number of us who were deeply concerned about what was going to happen to revenues for cities, towns, counties, and States and have been working on it in the meantime. We have been working with people from the committees. We have been having groups come in.

I particularly want to mention Senator DORGAN of North Dakota, Senator GRAHAM of Florida, Senator WYDEN of Oregon, Senator VOINOVICH of Ohio, Senator ALLEN of Virginia, and Senator CARPER of Delaware. A lot of us have been working and meeting with any group that would meet with us to talk about how we could handle this sales tax issue.

There is pain out there, there is agony out there, and through a process—not a popular process because this amendment does not wind up with what any one group wants. Usually the process around here is to say: This group has enough votes to pass this, and I am going to join that group and we will build in what we can for other people and expand the vote. That is not what can happen because it does not put in any degree of fairness for anybody in this system.

So what we tried to do with this bill was go into a leveling process, one that would provide for sales tax collections so sales tax revenues would not go down. It would take care of an extension of the access tax, and it would provide some encouragement for the States to do something to streamline and simplify their sales tax system.

A very important provision in this provision is one that protects start-up and small businesses, and that is an exclusion from having to collect any tax, even should the Congress at a future date say that needs to be done, on sales less than $20,000. That is not the start-up business. That is not a small business. So what this amendment actually does is extend the access taxes, in a very conservative way, so we would not overreach on access taxes, but so we would put a prohibition on access taxes.

Then it gives some encouragement to the States to simplify their tax systems. It does not agree it will be done. It does not put any tax into effect. It gives the States an opportunity, and that is something Congress has not been giving them for the last 2 years. We have not been giving them encouragement, other than a few meetings we have had with them to see what kind of work they can do, and they have been meeting. They have been working with realtors. They have been working to come up with a system that will make it possible for people to collect the sales tax in a way that will benefit the States and the marketers.

I hope my colleagues will take a look at the bill. I know this is something that has been talked about, reviewed by a lot of people, particularly since we turned in this last version of the bill, but through all of the versions that we have worked on. I know the guidelines have been seen that are outlined for the States. There is some flexibility for the States yet, and that is a necessity while they finish out their work, but this bill contains some guidelines for them, to vote the different groups on their provision when they get 20 States together, if they can get 20 States together. That is a pretty large group of people to be able to get into a compact. The encouragement for them to join the compact is, even if Congress approves the compact, they cannot have remote sales tax collections without joining the compact. So we have some requirements we have asked for them for the simplification, and then each State they can have 20 States—20 States together—and again, I want to mention how hard that is—the Congress will vote on whether they have simplified or not, whether they have met criteria that we have imposed either in the bill or in our minds since that time. If we require vote of Congress, and that complies with Federal and Supreme Court direction we have had before.

I have a bill. I am pleased with the support. I do want to mention it has been very difficult process. We have worked with the National Governors Association. We have worked with the National League of Cities. We have worked with the International City-County Management Association. We have worked with the National Association of Counties and the Council of State Governments. All of those folks have endorsed what we have done and asked the Congress to take this step of extending the moratorium with encouragement.

In their letter they state, irrespective of previous letters on the Internet tax moratorium and contrary to some dear colleague letters circulating in this Senate, we do express to reinstate the Internet tax moratorium for 2 additional years. The letter is from those groups I mentioned.

Besides those groups, we have been working with retailers from virtually every State. We have been working with direct marketers and the Direct Marketing Association. We have been working with realtors. They have a huge stake in this whole process as well.

I have to say there are no provisions in this bill that satisfy any one of those groups, but they recognize the need to do this in order to get the States in a position where they can provide for the kinds of services they have to provide in localities. I reserve the remainder of my time, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Madam President, as the original Senate sponsor of the Internet Tax Freedom Act, I have spent 18 months trying to find common ground on this issue. For hour after hour, we have gone at it, because obviously the technology sector is being pounded and local governments are understandably concerned about their revenues. Today, however, and I want to emphasize this to the Senate, many in both camps are in agreement on what the Senate should do. Groups as diverse as the American Electronics Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures are in agreement.

There ought to be a simple 2-year extension of the current Internet Tax Freedom Act. It would be a mistake not to support the substitute, although well-intentioned, by the Senator from Wyoming. The current Internet Tax Freedom Act makes it illegal to discriminate against electronic commerce, and to no jurisdiction in the country has been able to show that they have been hurt by their inability to discriminate. I want to emphasize to our colleagues tonight, a vote for the Enzi substitute means millions of Americans could be hit with new taxes for clicking on a Web page.

The substitute is bad news because it changes the definition of Internet access so if Internet access includes receipt of content or services then Internet access can be taxed. That would mean millions of Americans, the first thing they would get when they get on to the Web, news or weather or sports, that could be taxed. If this were not damaging enough, the substitute actually makes it possible to inflict those taxes retroactively to 1998.

I am of the view most Senators believe there ought to be a permanent ban on Internet access taxes, that Internet access taxes widen the digital divide, and yet the substitute goes in the opposite direction.

Our first economic responsibility ought to be to do no harm, but the substitute creates new opportunities for economic mischief.

For many Americans, basic Internet access is about plugging the computer into a plain old phone line, dialing an Internet Service Provider, such as Erol’s or Earthlink, and logging on to the Internet. Obviously, the blank screen does no one any good; most people when they click on to the Net get a Web page and start receiving information and content on that Web page. For that, the substitute opens those millions of people up to new taxes.

The second flaw with the substitute is it would not prevent every tax jurisdiction from imposing new taxes on the Internet. Any of the 7,600 taxing jurisdictions in America could go out and concur for the life of this Congress. I cannot figure out why that would be good for the economy right now.

The third flaw in the substitute is it allows discrimination against remote and on-line sellers, forcing them to pay different tax rates than in-State businesses. The substitute permits the remote seller to be taxed differently than an in-State business and, as a result, millions of small businesses will face significant large, new burdens trying to navigate a system of multiple and varying tax rates.

For example, in one part of Colorado there are five distinct tax rates within a single zip code. No software exists today that can help the small business owner navigate the sea of bureaucracy and red tape, and I hope the Senate won’t force that daunting task on unsuspecting small businesses.

I will conclude with this comment.

Tonight, the Senate is being presented with two different views of Federal policy towards the Internet. The first, which is contained in the underlying bill, stipulates that there ought to be a short, clean extension of current law barring discriminatory taxes on electronic commerce and nothing else. The substitute—the Senate Finance chairman is absolutely right, and I am grateful for his support on this—hasn’t had a hearing. It exposes millions of Americans to the prospects of new taxes, creates the possibility of a crazy quilt of Internet regulation throughout the country, and looks to the possibility that we would see scores of forms and paperwork that would chew up a vast amount of time in compliance.

I have my colleagues will support the underlying bill, will reject the substitute, and join a diverse coalition that includes the American Electronics Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures, two groups that, on this issue, have in the past disagreed again and again. Those two groups, the American Electronics Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures, are united saying the way for the Senate to proceed is for a clean 2-year extension of this moratorium and reject the substitute.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I request the Chair please notify me when I have used 4 minutes.

Madam President, we need to decide what this debate is about and what it is not about. This is not a debate about a new tax. It is not a debate about a new tax. My colleague referred to that. That is not accurate, and I would be happy to have a long and extended debate about that. But let’s understand what it is and is not.

I support the Enzi-Dorgan substitute. I think it is an important piece of legislation. Let me describe what it does.

We have two problems. One of the problems is that more and more sales in this country are conducted by remote sellers—Internet, catalog, and so on. On Main Streets of our communities we have sales being conducted by small business men and women. When they make those sales, they collect the tax. They compete against remote sellers who makes a sale but does not charge the tax, even though a tax is owed on the transaction. The tax is owed on a transaction with the remote seller, but it is never paid because it is a use tax and people don’t file millions and millions of use tax returns. The result is State and local governments are losing a substantial amount of money—$13 billion it is estimated this year; by the year 2006, $45 billion, most of which goes to the States: You go ahead and develop this process and submit it to us later, and we will then make a judgment on whether we will allow you to impose this collection. But our judgment will be based on whether you substantially have simplified your systems. That is what the Enzi substitute does, and that is why I support it.

That is the choice, and I hope we make the right choice tonight.

Let me make one final point. When we pass the Enzi substitute, we have not done anything except say to the States: You go ahead and develop this process and submit it to us later, and we will then make a judgment on whether we will allow you to impose this collection. But our judgment will be based on whether you substantially have simplified your systems. That is why I support it.

That is the choice, and I hope we make the right choice tonight.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ALLEN. Madam President, I yield myself 8 minutes off the time of the opponents of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 8 minutes.

Mr. ALLEN. Madam President, the reality is, if we pass the Enzi-Dorgan amendment, the substitute, what we are in effect doing is imposing Internet access taxes and allowing discriminatory taxes on the Internet. This is a measure on which I know Senator Enzi and Senator Dorgan have worked hard. Nevertheless, it has been changing almost by the day and certainly almost by the hour in recent weeks. There has not been any scrutiny to it.

I would especially like to associate myself, though, with the remarks and observations of Senator WYDEN of Oregon. This does complicate the Tax Code. It is a very complex issue which actually makes it worse. There are unfair taxes that could occur even within a State if this were adopted and, indeed, it has added taxes.

If we allow this amendment to be put on, let’s have no doubt about it; the House of Representatives will have this expired moratorium continuing. There are already States that have access taxes that are grandfathers. These are taxes, such as the Spanish-American war tax that was put on to convergence, and this will have this expired moratorium continuing. Once taxes are put on by a State or locality, it is very hard to get them off.

There are two sides. There is a choice Senators are going to need to make. The opponents are for a tax-free Internet. The other side is on the pro-tax-collector side. The first decision we need to make is whether we extend the Internet access tax moratorium or do we vote for the Enzi-Dorgan amendment which would result in allowing Internet access taxes and discriminatory Internet taxes.

The opponents of this amendment side with individuals. We side with entrepreneurs rather than siding with the tax-collecting bureaucrats.

We have heard that this is a loophole, the fact that someone who has no physical presence in a State, gets no benefits from fire or police services, that they do not have to collect and remit sales and use taxes to 7,000 jurisdictions—that that is not a level playing field, or it is a loophole.

I look at the Internet as an individualized enterprise zone where the consumer is an individual, the human being is the one making the decision not tax-collecting bureaucracies.

As far as this level playing field, let’s assume you wanted to get your son or daughter a Harry Potter CD. If you ordered it on line, it would cost $16.26. That is including shipping and handling. That would be getting it in 3 to 5 days in shipment. It would be 5 times more in cost of shipping if you wanted it overnight. Off line, at a store, it would be $14.62.

With the velour dress, here are cowboy boots and a computer. Let me go through the specification on each of these to show how this playing field is relatively level and, in fact, you actually save money by going to a store, as well as convenience. Amazon.com on line, total price, shipping and handling, is $16.26. If you go to Best Buy in Springfield, VA, paying a sales tax, it is $15.72. Savings by going to the store is $1.54. Again, we took the lowest shipping and handling.

Again, this is where we take the lowest shipping and handling.

Let’s assume you wanted to buy yourself or someone else a dress. There is a velour dress from Spiegel.com, on line, at $89. The price at the store is actually a little more. At Tyson’s Corner, at Macy’s, it is $95. But when you put in the tax versus shipping and handling, you save money by going to the store.

Say you wanted to buy yourself some boots. This is what it would cost on line—$120. It is $121 at the store in Springfield. But, again, the savings is $5.50 if you go to the store over shipping and handling.

If you buy a Dell computer on line, the price is exactly the same price as it is the stores. Let’s say $1,000. If you buy it at Circuit City in Charlottesville, VA. But you would have money in that the sales tax is $71. Shipping and handling is $95. You would save approximately $24.

Put all of that into context. If you are buying a dress, or buying some boots, you may like to try them on. You may want to put them on to see if they fit. That is the advantage those in the stores have over somebody buying on line. You can touch it. You can feel it. You can see how they fit. If there is a problem, you bring them right back to that store. You don’t have to pay handling and shipping and go through all that annoyance and aggravation of handling and shipping.

Say you wanted to buy your son or daughter the Harry Potter soundtrack but didn’t want to wait 5 days. Maybe you wanted to get an Allen Jackson soundtrack and listen to it driving home. You would want to get it right away. Again, the convenience is there.

The point is, there is competition. The idea that this is not a level playing field is not just borne out by the facts. While this is all very well intentioned, the solution is not burdening the free enterprise system. The solution is not harming the Internet, and the capabilities and potential and possibilities of the Internet for education, communication, and commerce.

Indeed, what is being tried here with the Enzi-Dorgan amendment is to abrogate and negate a settled constitutional law from Supreme Court decisions, whether it was the Quill decision or whether it was the Bella Hess decision, which say there cannot be taxation without representation.

I would like to work with the proponents of this amendment to find a system where the folks who care about their local schools, as Senator DORGAN said, can pay those use taxes. But I am going to stand on the side of freedom—freedom of the Internet, trusting individuals and entrepreneurs—and not on the side of making this advancement in technology easier to tax for the tax collectors. I reserve whatever time I may have remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Madam President, I yield myself 4 minutes.

Madam President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by my colleagues, Senators ENZI and DORGAN. Most experts agree that this explosion in electronic commerce, made possible through the Internet, helped fuel our most recent economic surge and contributed to the greater sustained period of growth in our nation’s history. However, most would agree that the current framework of thousands of state and local tax jurisdictions is now well-built for this “new economy.” Technology has made it possible for commerce to transcend traditional local, state and even national borders.

The issue here is how can we continue to grow the Internet while at the same time preserving state’s rights to collect revenues on sales that traditionally would be generate sales taxes. Frankly, I believe that no state is in favor of creating new taxes so as to cripple the growth of the Internet. But I also feel that states should be able to collect taxes on legitimate transactions that have a substantial nexus with their state so that they would be able to collect sales taxes on those transactions if they were to physically take place in their state.

And many other organizations agree. This legislation is supported by the National Governors Association, National League of Cities, Council of State Governments, International City and County Management Association, National Retail Federation, National Association of Retailers, E-Fairness and Competition Committee, Compaq, VerticalNet, Walmart, Target, Home Depot, and Circuit City.

This issue is truly about federalism—the delineation of the role the federal government plays relative to state and local governments and the people.

With regard to sales taxes, there are currently 45 states that rely on some form of sales tax. These states receive, on average, almost 33 percent of their annual operating budgets from sales taxes. In my state of Ohio, it’s 31.4 percent.

Our States are in a very serious situation. A recent study prepared by the University of Tennessee shows that states could lose nearly $440 billion in sales tax revenue over the next decade in Internet tax revenues if Congress does not empower our states to collect revenues from remote sales. These are revenues that would not be available to build schools, pave roads, pay for emergency services or meet other fundamental responsibilities.

In my home state of Ohio, our state government will lose more than $475 million in fiscal year 2002 and Ohio is projected to lose $596 million in fiscal year 2003 in revenue forgone from their ability to raise funds from Internet sales.

And as our economy moves more and more towards E-commerce, the fiscal impact on Ohio and other states will continue to damage the abilities of our states to fund their own services. This lost revenue merely exacerbates the difficult fiscal challenges Ohio and other states face as they suffer revenue losses from the current economic downturn.

For the federal government to shield Internet sellers from state tax collection responsibilities would usurp the autonomy of the states to cut services and/or raise revenue elsewhere through additional taxes or fees.
In my view, preempting the states in such a critical area as e-commerce without addressing the state and local revenue needs suggests that Congress is not as committed to the principles of federalism. Any such action would force the states to come to Washington in order to make up the funds we have taken away from them. For those concerned about the growth of the federal government, as I am, it will be very difficult to say “no” when states argue for more money if Congress has action taken away a revenue source.

That is why this amendment by Senators Enzi and Dorgan is so important. It provides a permanent extension of the moratorium on Internet access taxes, and extends the moratorium on multiple and discriminatory taxes for five years.

In addition, this amendment encourages states to develop a streamlined system of sales and use taxes that provides a centralized multi-state registration system for sellers; uniform rules for attributing transactions to particular taxing jurisdictions; uniform procedures for exempt purchases; uniform software certification procedures; uniform tax return and remittance forms; consistent electronic filing and remittance methods; and protections for consumer privacy.

This amendment will also allow Congress to remain involved before any state legislatures would allow taxing Internet transactions. Once 20 states have developed and adopted an Interstate Simplified Sales and Use Tax Compact, the states will submit the Compact to Congress.

Our State and local governments are not interested in putting a damper on the expansion of the Internet; they want it to prosper like all of us.

The real question before us is: how can we ensure that our businesses and our nation are able to compete in this new, e-commerce, electronic economy without sacrificing the principles of federalism which have served us well for over 200 years? State economies benefit from the healthy and unfettered growth of electronic sales. All they and traditional retailers ask is fair treatment.

Federalism can adapt and even flourish when we remember to work as partners with our state and local governments. That is why I urge my colleagues to support the Enzi-Dorgan amendment. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I yield myself 5 minutes in opposition to the Enzi amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may proceed.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you very much, Madam President.

I rise in strong opposition to the Enzi amendment, and I hope we will defeat it by a very strong bipartisan vote.

I have read this amendment over and over. It has changed mightily during the last month or so. But it is very clear to me that if this amendment were to become law—by the way, the House would never allow it to become law. But let’s say it could become law. I think it would wreak havoc on Internet commerce. Let me tell you why.

Look at section 3 of the amendment. Look at section 3, and look at paragraph A. There is a 1, which clearly states that Internet service providers could be forced to go back retroactively to 1998 and remit Internet access taxes.

Can you imagine the burden that would put on this country at a time in our history when we are in a major recession?

Second, Senator Enzi’s amendment would not prohibit new taxes on Internet access and, although it would keep the moratorium on “discriminatory and multiple” taxes, it may not prevent “new” taxes on electronic commerce.

Finally, I want to state that these are statements made by my friend and colleague from Oregon, Ron Wyden, in a far more articulate way than I. I am trying to underscore what he said.

If you look at page 4, you see that the amendment would allow taxes on Internet commerce. It is very clear that the moratorium on Internet access taxes would no longer apply to Internet content.

Can you imagine people connecting to the Internet and suddenly being charged every time perhaps they connected to the Web?

In my view, this is a very dangerous kind of amendment because if it does become law it will wreak havoc on business on the Internet, and not only business, but just the right to get on the Web and read content and be able to do that without extra charges. This is not the time for that.

Madam President, this was updated as of October 5, 2001. The Wall Street Journal has printed 30 pages of companies that have gone out of business. I will give you some of them. AdMart: announced plans to shut down, lay off 334 employees. Advertising.com: announced plans to lay off 72 employees, or 25 percent of its staff. And it goes on and on and on.

You will remember some of these companies. We remember the Websvan that went out of business. But it just goes on and on. You would recognize some of them.

Is this a time, I would ask my colleagues, to go after this industry? It is the wrong time. It is the wrong time, and it is a dangerous time. I will give you some more examples.

Barnes & Noble.com said in February 2001 it will cut 350 jobs, or 60 percent of its workforce.

Beautyjungle.com, a cosmetics seller, laid off 60 percent of their workforce as well.

I will go on. eToys: In January 2001, it said it would lay off 700 people, or 70 percent of its workforce. In February 2001, it said it would let go the remaining 293 employees by April. Later in February, it said it would file for bankruptcy protection.

Here is the Webvan Group story. Cut staff in April 2001 by 30 percent or 885 employees. They also closed operations in Sacramento, CA, and in Atlanta, the company’s headquarters. On July 4, 2001, they announced plans to close all remaining operations and terminate 2,000 employees.

The general economy is in trouble. We have seen more layoffs in 1 month than we have in 21 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds to conclude my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. So, in closing, this amendment is flawed. It will allow new Internet access taxes. It will force the collection of Internet access taxes going back to 1998. It will allow taxing on content. And it comes at a time when the economy is tanking.

For goodness sakes, we cannot even get an economic stimulus package passed, and the first thing we do, late on a Thursday night, is look at ways to get more people laid off.

I hope we will vote, in a bipartisan way, against the Enzi amendment.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, this is the most important vote that we are going to take in this Congress, first or second session, on education, on public services, and on fundamental fairness in America’s marketplace.

I make that statement because, first, State and local governments are very dependent on the sales tax in order to fund their basic public service responsibilities, specifically education, police, and fire.

Let me just give you some examples. The city of Boston: 10 percent of its revenue comes from its local sales tax. That represents approximately half of its annual cost of its police and fire services.

The city of Detroit: 10 percent of its total revenue comes from its local sales tax. That represents two-thirds of the cost of its police and fire services.

In Milwaukee, 23 percent of the local revenue comes from its sales tax which represents almost 100 percent of the cost of its police and fire.

At a State level, to use my State of Florida as an example, 73 percent of our general revenue comes from the sales tax, and 70 percent of that general revenue is used to finance education and the public emergency services, such as State police and our judicial system.
Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, there are a number of issues that are raised by this amendment which are very significant. It comes to us tonight without having any hearings, without having any airing in the public sector of any significance. Yet it addresses some of the most fundamental issues of constitutional law, and the relationship between States and between the Federal Government and States, that we could confront as a Congress. It is simply precipitous to pass this amendment in this rushed format.

The amendment would go right at the heart of what has been a long history of case law settled by the Supreme Court and reverse it. It would reverse the Bella Hess case and the Quill case which, essentially, are cases which said that there must be a nexus between the seller of the goods and the State in which the goods are sold before a tax can be assessed against the seller of the goods.

This amendment would reverse that. That is the purpose of this amendment. It does not affect just Internet transactions. There is an equally large effort here to reverse the issue as it has been dealt with in catalog sales. Yet the proposal is going to be dealt with in 2 hours in the Senate Chamber. Clearly, it is precipitous because the implications are huge.

The second major constitutional problem with the amendment is that it creates this regime where 32 States can bind the other 30 States. This is truly an excess of the minority over the majority. It reverses the concept of federalism and turns it on its head and says if 20 States reach agreement, then the rest of the 30 States have to follow that agreement. If you are going to change constitutional law, you have to have a three-fifths vote. There is no way you can do it with 20 States. And yet that is the attempt here.

This is a roundabout way of trying to amend what is essentially a constitutional procedure without using the appropriate constitutional procedures. If it were passed, it would truly set up a precedent which would fundamentally harm the concept of federalism. If it is used here, I can see this concept of 20 States getting together and ganging up on the rest of the States being used unfairly regularly.

The amendment itself on the issue of substantively is wrong and inappropriately presented. It certainly is wrong on the issue of the manner in which it has been brought forward in that it should have gotten more hearings. If this idea makes sense, it should go through a proper hearing process before it comes to the floor. It would create an atmosphere where 7,000 different jurisdictions across the States could end up taxing the Internet. That would fundamentally undermine this engine of prosperity and economic growth which we had and which we continue to have and which we continue to lead the world in, which is the Internet.

Those are the substantive reasons why this is a bad idea at this time. There is probably an equally, if not more important procedural reason. If this amendment passes, it is a poison pill. It will kill the Internet tax moratorium. It will mean that there will be no moratorium for the next 2 years.

The House has said it is not going to take this language. It is not going to conference this language. So as a practical matter, the Internet tax moratorium is dead. The underlying bill here would cause a 2-year tax moratorium. And if the language of this amendment makes sense, that will give us more than ample time to go through the proper course through the proper hearing procedure to listen to the arguments for this proposal. It can be passed any time during this next 2 years.

What can’t be done during the next 2 years, if we don’t have an Internet tax moratorium, is put back together Humpty Dumpty because we will literally have thousands of jurisdictions which will put in place taxes against the Internet as soon as they have that opportunity, as soon as it is clear that there is going to be no moratorium. We will have chaos which we will never be able to sort out.

The amendment, although obviously sincerely principled and aggressively pursued, has serious substantive problems. I hope we will not pass this amendment because it will represent a poison pill and it will end up killing the Internet tax moratorium.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Miller). Who yields time?

The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment and yield myself 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may speak.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, Delaware is one of five States that has no sales tax. One might think as a result we have no dog in this fight. We do. I think we all do, whether we happen to like it. We don’t have a hearing on that.

Colleague who spoke immediately before me said we haven’t had hearings on this proposal. We have had discussions in this Chamber, in the House, in State houses across the country, certainly in Governors’ meetings for the last 3 years. We don’t need a hearing to know that States are under stress. Their economies are struggling. Their revenue growth is down and in some cases negative. Spending is up. Unemployment is up. Out-of-pocket costs for health care for Medicaid are up, and they are in between a rock and a hard place.

We have been debating this week how can we help those States in their time of need. Some have said: Let’s increase the Federal share for Medicaid. Others have said: Let’s provide an extension of unemployment insurance and pay for it with Federal dollars. Others have said: Let’s pass a stimulus package. Maybe we should provide a sales tax holiday and let the Federal Government pay for them. Something I don’t think is a good idea, but that has been put forward.

A much better idea is the Enzi-Dorgan amendment that lies before us today, the product of many years work between the States, between Governors, mayors, county executives, legislators here, and previous administrations as well as the current administration. What does it do? Anybody listening to this debate has to be confused.

The amendment provides for extensions of bans on multiple and discriminatory taxes for 5 years, and it extends the ban on access taxes permanently. That is what it does. What it also does is it empowers the States to work among themselves to see if 20 States can agree on a simplified approach toward collecting taxes from remote sellers. If they can come to an agreement and provide that kind of a simplified approach, then that plan would come to us and we would have the opportunity to vote yes or no as to whether or not States can actually proceed. If we vote no, they can’t proceed.

Our voting for this amendment today, even if it ended up in the final bill signed by the President, would not authorize the collection of a sales tax by remote vendors. It simply sets in motion a process which could lead to another vote by us somewhere down the line.

My last point: If you happen to be a brick and mortar vendor in a State and you have a sales tax and you are required to collect a sales tax and are selling a piece of luggage or a shirt or wallet, a CD player, and you have to charge more for those items and there is somebody who is buying it remotely from another State, where are people going to shop? More and more they are shopping on the Internet. They are not going to the local vendor. It is not fair to those who are collecting the taxes that pay for the schools and public safety and transportation and other things. It is just not fair.

One aspect of this amendment I am not comfortable with deals with Amazon.com and the eBay issue which I have discussed with Senators Enz and Dorgan. I hope when we get to conference, we will have an opportunity to address those issues.

I yield to Mr. Enz for whatever time he consumes.

Mr. ENZI. I thank the Senator from Delaware, particularly since he is from a non-sales-tax State, for supporting this issue and realizing how important it is to other States. I will definitely work to get that done. What we are trying to do is have an even playing field. I will work to get that as part of the definition and clarification.

Mr. CARPER. I thank the Senator for his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I rise as an opponent to the amendment and yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to this amendment because e-commerce is at the very heart of our economy. It brings billions of dollars in revenues, provides huge surpluses to local, State, and Federal coffers throughout the country. Why, particularly in an economic slowdown, would we want to saddle an industry with huge new tax increases and heavy bureaucratic and regulatory burdens? It does not make sense.

The National Bureau of Economic Research concludes that imposing these multibillion dollar tax increases and government burdens would result in a 30 percent reduction in purchases over the Internet. Think of that what would do to the economy. It would have a devastating effect.

For the first time in history, government bureaucrats in one State will have the power to tax the people in another State. That is not right. The hours and capital required to comply with the Tax Code from the IRS and State and local taxing agencies are going to be overwhelming under this amendment. Not only would business owners be under the glass with the usual suspects, but now they are going to be open to thousands of bureaucratic agencies looking into their business to get a cut.

I can assure you if a State or local official spends money to come across the country to audit you, he is going back with some money. In New Hampshire, we don’t have a sales tax, and I believe it is a regressive tax that disproportionately affects the poor and working class. It is a State’s decision as to whether they want to impose the tax. Under this legislation, New Hampshire residents would have to pay these taxes to businesses all across the country. Due to the increased costs of paying these out-of-State taxes, and the flood of audits, our residents would pay substantially higher prices for goods and services.

So allowing State and local governments the power to target taxpayers outside their own State, where those people have nothing to say at the ballot box, would set a horrible precedent. Frankly, I believe it is unconstitutional.

States would then be able to use this new sword to target businesses and States that were competing with their own. Of course, with local businesses and consumers in an uproar, States would have to retaliate. Then we come to lawsuits. At some point, the Federal Government is going to step in and be called to set regulations and taxing levels, and here we go on down the road with another multibillion dollar sales tax. They would then have the venue they needed to have a national sales tax.

Some have argued for a national sales tax, but this would be on top of the State sales tax. If you don’t like the income tax, you are not going to be too happy about having a sales tax on top of it.

This is a multibillion-dollar increase, a regulatory monster, and it must be stopped. I urge my colleagues to vote against the Enzi amendment and support Main Street and freedom.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, we are moving to wrap this up. I want to come back to a couple points because I think there is confusion, for example, on the Internet access charge issue. There is a sense among some Senators that this is something that would have to be approved by this body. That is not correct. This amendment—the substitute—changes the definition of Internet access, and it can be applied to millions of Americans without any further action by this Senate.

In particular, what the amendment says is that it would be possible to “tax content or services.” That is virtually everything. Nobody wants a blank screen on their computer. Of course, they are going to have a Web page with news, weather, and basic information. The fact is that the substitute means that millions of Americans could be hit with new taxes just for clicking on a Web page, and this could be done without any further action by the Senate.

I think most Senators believe there ought to be a permanent ban on Internet access taxes, that Internet access taxes widen the digital divide. Yet the substitute on the Internet access tax issue goes in just the opposite direction. A lot of Americans think Internet access is plugging the computer into a phone line, dialing up the Internet provider, and logging onto the net. Then you would get a blank screen. Of course, the person who wants information and content. People need to know, as they move to this vote, that they could be taxed for getting those kinds of services that many of them believe are essential, such as the weather.

At the end of the day, I pledge to continue to work with the Senator from Wyoming. He has been extremely sincere and extremely dedicated. However this vote comes out, I want to make it clear that I will work closely with him, Senator Dorgan, and all the others who see this differently than I, Senator Baucus, Senator McCain, and others. We are going to have to stay at it.
When you vote tonight, you are talking about two very differing approaches with respect to Internet policy. One approach that we advocate tonight is backed by the American Electronics Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures. The other approach is backed by virtually all of the technology groups in the country.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I yield myself 3 minutes.

I thank all of those people who have been dedicated in their work on this issue. There have been innumerable meetings, and Senator MCCAIN, Senator DORGAN, Senator KERRY, Senator WYDEN, and I have been the primary people. We have met with these different groups to see what parts of the Internet were their interests.

This bill is as close as we can come to pulling everybody to the center. No, it doesn’t please everybody. Does it please most of the people? I certainly hope so, and we will have a vote to determine whether it does or not. But this does make permanent the Internet access tax provisions that I think is something that Gateway, VerticalNet, Compaq, and other high-tech folks have wanted and do want.

This bill does not have new taxes in it. This bill has a provision so that States would want as many people as possible to continue to operate, continue to have revenues that are on a declining basis at the moment, and this is something so they would put a bill together, solve their problem, bring them a solution. Have there been hearings? Everybody says there have not been hearings. There have been a lot of meetings. There has not been a bill produced other than what we have here.

This is a promise we made to local and State governments 2 years ago. This is some action we can take on it. It doesn’t make anything final, but it provides incentive to get people together and see if they can come up with a solution that is necessary. Cities, towns, and counties, not to mention States, have been put under some unusual circumstances just since September 11. We need to have a mechanism for them to be able to fund themselves. We have not promised funding for everything. We have made them do a lot. This gives them an opportunity to work out a system whereby they can continue to operate, continue to have revenues that are on a declining basis at the moment, and this is something so they would put a bill together and solve their problem, bring them a solution.

We had to take a look at the Internet sales tax issue for people who might be using legislative vehicles to develop huge loopholes in our current system. We need to preserve the system for those cities, towns, counties, and states that rely on the ability to collect the sales tax they are currently getting. I believe that the moratorium on Internet access taxes and multiple and discriminatory taxes on the Internet should not be extended without addressing the larger issue of sales and use tax collection on electronic commerce.

Certainly, no Senator wants to take steps that will unreasonably burden the development and growth of the Internet. At the same time, we must also be sensitive to issues of basic competitive fairness and the negative effect our action or inaction can have on brick-and-mortar critical economic sector and employment force in all American society. In addition, we must consider the legitimate need of State and local governments to have the flexibility they need to generate resources to adequately fund their programs and operations.

As the only accountant in the Senate, I have a unique perspective on the dozens of tax proposals that are introduced in Congress. In addition, my service on the State and local levels and my experiences as a small business owner enable me to consider these bills from more than one viewpoint. I understand the importance of protecting and promoting the growth of Internet commerce because of its potential economic benefits. It is a valuable resource because it provides access on demand. Therefore, I do not support a tax on the use of the Internet itself.

I do, however, have concerns about using the Internet as a sales tax loophole. Sales taxes go directly to state and local governments and I am very leery of any Federal legislation that bypasses their traditional ability to raise revenue to perform needed services such as school funding, road repair, and law enforcement. I will not force States into a choice between new exemptions.

While those who advocate a permanent loophole on the collection of a sales tax over the Internet claim to represent the principles of tax reduction, they are actually advocating a tax increase. Simply put, if Congress continues to allow sales over the Internet to go untaxed and electronic commerce continues to grow as predicted, revenues to state and local governments will fall and property taxes will have to be increased to offset lost revenue or States who do not have or believe in state income taxes will be forced to start one.

Furthermore, State and local revenues and budgets are especially critical now as these governments are responding to protect the security of all of our citizens and businesses. Any action to extend the current moratorium without creating a level playing field would provide a fundamental and ignore a growing problem that will gravely affect the readiness of the nation.

After months of hard work, negotiations, and compromise, this amendment has been filed. I would like to commend several of my colleagues for their commitment to this solution. I know this amendment is the solution. The amendment makes permanent the existing moratorium on Internet access taxes, but extends the current moratorium on multiple and discriminatory taxes on Internet commerce.

Throughout the past several years, we have heard that catalog and Internet companies say they are willing to allow and collect sales tax on interstate sales, regardless of traditional or Internet sales, if states will simplify their tax collection system. While those who advocate a permanent loophole have the authority extended in the bill to prohibit from gaining benefit from any new exemptions, you need to be aware that states are prohibited from gaining benefit from the authority extended in the bill to require sellers to collect and remit sales and use taxes on remote sales if the States have not adopted the simplified sales and use tax system. I think the States should have some responsibility for redistribution not a business forced to do work for government. Therefore, the amendment would put Congress on record as urging states and localities as described in streamlined sales and use tax system, which would include a single, blended tax rate with which all remote sellers can comply. You need to be aware that states are prohibited from gaining benefit from the authority extended in the bill to require sellers to collect and remit sales and use taxes on remote sales if the States have not adopted the simplified sales and use tax system.

Further, the amendment would authorize states to enter into an Interstate State and Use Tax Compact through which they could adopt the streamlined sales and use tax system. Congressional authority and consent to enter into such a compact would expire if it has not occurred by January 1, 2006. The amendment also authorizes states to require all other sellers to collect and remit sales and use taxes on remote sales once Congress has acted to approve the compact by law within a period of 120 days after the Congress receives it.

The amendment also calls for a sense of the Congress that before the end of the 107th Congress, legislation should be enacted that would address the appropriate factors to be considered in establishing whether nexus exists for State business activity tax purposes.
I strongly support this amendment because I do not think there is adequate protection now. It is very important we do not build electronic loopholes in the Internet, an every-changing Internet, one that is growing by leaps and bounds, one that is finding new ways to avoid the tax every day.

Mr. President, I recognize this body has a constitutional responsibility to regulate interstate commerce. Furthermore, I understand the desire of several senators to protect and promote the Internet commercially. I am very concerned, however, with any piece of legislation that mandates or restricts State and local governments’ ability to meet the needs of its citizens. This has the potential to provide electronic loopholes that will take away all of their revenue. This amendment would designate a level playing field for all involved—business, government, and the consumer.

The States, and not the Federal Government, should have the right to impose, or not to impose, consumption taxes as they see fit. The reality is that emergency response personnel, law enforcement officials, and other essential services are funded largely by states and local governments, especially through taxes. Passage of an extension of the current moratorium without taking steps toward a comprehensive solution would leave many states and local communities unable to fund their services. I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

In the current definition in §1104(5) of the ITFA:

The term “Internet access” means a service that enables users to access content, information, electronic mail, or other services offered over the Internet, and may include access to proprietary content, information, and other services as part of a package of services offered to users. Such term does not include access to services provided by wireless companies that are considered “telecommunications services from the definition of access. In doing so, the language could be interpreted to exclude Wireless Web Access because all services provided by wireless companies are considered “telecommunications.” Thus, Internet access purchased from one company might be exempt, but it could be taxable if purchased from a different provider. I know our intent is not to discriminate among Internet access providers, but that is the effect of current law.

If we don’t continue to work on this definition, we will go contrary to the findings in the legislation we are considering. If we allow the current definition of Internet access to remain unchanged, we will be authorizing the disparate treatment of identical products depending on whether the sale occurs online or not. In simplest terms, the current definition of Internet access would exempt the sales of many products and services that would be taxed if sold in any other way. Besides the fiscal problem this would cause for states, this is also fundamentally unfair, and should be prevented. I think formulating a good definition of Internet access presents a host of opportunities that we should not let pass by. It gives us an opportunity to define a critical component of the infrastructure of our new economy—and, in doing so, provide a definition that allows all new economy companies to have the opportunity to insinuate themselves on a level playing field. It provides us with an opportunity to provide a clear definition that reduces the probability of litigation over the exact meaning of the statute. And, it provides us with an opportunity to insinuate ourselves into no harm to the fiscal stability of many levels of government—while providing a positive environment in which business can survive.

I hope to continue to work with my colleagues at a later date to develop a definition of Internet access that preserves the tax-exemption for access to the basic services and resources of the Internet.

The Internet is such a powerful tool of education and commerce that we should do everything we can to make sure that each American can take advantage of it. At the same time, we need to insure that our goal assisting in the provision of basic access is not subverted by an overbroad definition of access that allows a host of digital goods and services to be bundled together and sold tax exempt. Such subversion would only serve to weaken state and local governments at this important time in our nation’s history.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the National Governors Association, National League of Cities, International City/County Management Association, National Association of Counties, and Council of State Governments be printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HON. THOMAS A. DASCHLE, Minority Leader, U.S. Senate, The Capitol, Washington, DC.

HON. TRENT LOTT, Minority Leader, U.S. Senate, The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DASCHLE AND SENATOR LOTT: Irrespective of previous letters on the Internet tax moratorium and contrary to some “Dear Colleague” letters circulating in the Senate, we do not support legislation to reinstate the Internet tax moratorium for two additional years. Four organizations listed below support legislation by Senator Enzi (S. 1567) that would create a level playing field so that remote and Main Street sellers receive equal treatment. The National League of Cities is working closely with Senator Enzi and believes that S. 1567 represents a promising opportunity to resolve this critical issue.

Sincerely,

RAYMOND C. SCHIEFFEL, Executive Director, National League of Cities. WILLIAM H. HANSELL, Executive Director, International City/County Management Association. LARRY MAZE, Executive Director, National Association of Counties.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. BOXER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I think we are in agreement the major aspects of this legislation have been decided. So I do not think, unless someone desires it, that we need another recorded vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. If there be no amendment to be offered, the question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill (H.R. 1552) was ordered to a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The bill having been read the third time, the question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill (H.R. 1552) was passed.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I appreciate the debate. I appreciate the efforts made on both sides of this very difficult issue. The closeness of it really dictates that we do sit down and work something out on this issue with Senator DORGAN, Senator KERRY, Senator ALLEN—all of those with whom we have met in numerous, countless hours on this issue. Clearly we need to come to some kind of agreement rather than go through moratorium after moratorium.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the Senate is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senate will come to order.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I conclude by saying I think we should begin meetings as soon as possible so we can resolve this issue so there is a reasonable resolution. I know the proponents of this amendment which was just defeated spent great labor and effort on it. I congratulate them for their arguments, I look forward to working with them. This is an issue that needs to be resolved.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from Arizona, we spent a lot of hours working through this with Senator ENZI, Senator DORGAN, Senator MCCaIN, myself, and many others. This was a very difficult vote for many of us. We do not support any tax on the Internet itself. We don’t support access taxes. We don’t support content taxes. We don’t support discriminatory taxes. Many of us would like to see a permanent moratorium on all of those kinds of taxes.

At the same time, a lot of us were caught in a place where we thought it important to send the message that we have to get back to the table in order to come to a consensus as to how we equalize the economic playing field in the United States in a way that is fair. I hope the Senator from Arizona will follow up with us, so we can come back to that table to do what is sensible and fair. I look forward to the chance to do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WyDEN. Mr. President, before the Senator from Massachusetts leaves, I want to say that the original Senate sponsor, I want to re-double my efforts to work with him and Senator EnZi and all of our colleagues. We may be able to see that there is a technological fix here that is going to make it possible to collect taxes owed.

There is a lot of good will on both sides. This is by no means the end of the issue. I am very pleased the Senator from Massachusetts is ending this discussion in a conciliatory way because we are going to have to stay at it. He has my pledge as the original sponsor of this effort to do it.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, as an original author and cosponsor of the moratorium, which I believe in, I appreciate the comments. I had hoped, and in many ways thought this was not ripe for a vote, but I think it was important for us to have gone through the process. I look forward to seeing if we can come up with a sensible resolution.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. I thank my colleagues, who have just spoken, for their comments, for the effort they put forth. I thank all the people for allowing the debate that happened. That had to be done by unanimous consent.

Now we know our work is cut out for us. Two years ago we passed a moratorium. Tonight we passed a moratorium. Hopefully before 2005 we will have done something that will solve the problem. I appreciate the commitment of the chairman of the Commerce Committee to make that happen. I am sure all the people who are involved in this issue will be extremely happy that some work will be done. The hearings will be held. The consensus will be arrived at because it is necessary for our cities, towns, counties, and States. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCaIN. Mr. President, I have been involved in a number of issues in my time here. I know of no two people who have worked harder on an issue than the Senator from Wyoming and the Senator from North Dakota.

That renews my commitment to try as hard as I can to come to an agreement because I believe we have an all-out effort on an issue on which we are fundamentally in agreement.

I thank the Chair. I thank my colleagues. I yield the floor.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I suggest that the absence of a quorum.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank all of those Senators who were involved in the array of legislative items that have been taken up today. This has been quite a busy day, with a lot of coordination and a tremendous amount of work. I think we have accomplished a good deal today.

I also report that the Commerce Committee has completed its work. I compliment the chair and ranking member of the Commerce Committee for their work on the aviation security bill. We will be addressing that bill a little later.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to executive session to consider Executive Calendar Nos. 547 through 566, and 568, and the nominations thereon be printed in the Record, that the nominations be confirmed, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, and the Senate return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered and confirmed are as follows:

THE JUDICIARY

Odessa F. Vincent, of the District of Columbia, to be an Associate Judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for the term of fifteen years.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Raymond F. Burghardt, of Florida, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Commonwealth of The Bahamas. Argyros, Sr., of California, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Kingdom of Spain, and to serve concurrently and without additional compensation as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Andorra. Larry Miles Dinger, of Iowa, a Career Member of the Foreign Service, to be Ambassador to the Federated States of Micronesia. Darryl Norman Johnson, of Washington, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Austria. Lyons Brown Jr., of Kentucky, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Austria. William D. Montgomery, of Pennsylvania, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Italy. Charles Lawrence Greenwood, Jr., of Florida, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, for the rank of Ambassador during his tenure of service as Coordinator for Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation in Europe, with the rank of Ambassador. Ernest L. Johnson, of Louisiana, to be an Alternate Representative of the United States of America to the Fifty-sixth Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. William J. Hybl, of Colorado, to be Representative of the United States of America to the Fifty-sixth Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Nancy Cain Marcus, of Texas, to be an Alternate Representative of the United States of America to the Fifty-sixth Session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. Robert M. Pollard, of Ohio, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, for the rank of Ambassador during his tenure of service as Head of Mission, Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), Bosnia and Herzegovina. Charles Lester Pritchard, of Virginia, for the rank of Ambassador during his tenure of service as Special Envoy for Negotiations with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) and United States Representative to the Korean Peninsula Energy Development Organization (KEDO).

AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Cynthia Shepard Perry, of Texas, to be United States Managing Director of the African Development Bank for a term of five years.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Jose A. Fourquet, of New Jersey, to be United States Executive Director of the Inter-American Development Bank for a term of three years.

UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Constance Berry Newman, of Illinois, to be an Assistant Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development. John Marshall Jinguito, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development.
up. I will begin with one, and there will be others that will be addressed. All the matters, of course, in wrap-up will be offered in consultation with the Republican leader and have his consent.

HOMESTAKE MINE CONVEYANCE
ACT OF 2001

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Environment and Public Works Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 1389, and the Senate proceed to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1389) to provide for the conveyance of certain real property in South Dakota to the State of South Dakota with indemnification by the United States Government, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 261

(Purpose: To provide a complete substitute)

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered and agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 261) was agreed to.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am delighted that the Senate has approved a modified version of S. 1389, the Homestake Mine Conveyance Act of 2001.

This important legislation will enable the construction of a new, world-class scientific research facility deep in the (About) 2,000 foot Homestake Mine in Lead, SD. Not only will this facility create an opportunity for critical breakthroughs in physics and other fields, it will provide unprecedented new economic and educational opportunities for South Dakota.

Just over a year ago, the Homestake Mining Company announced that it intended to close its 125-year-old gold mine in Lead, SD, at the end of 2001. This historic mine has been a central part of the economy of the Black Hills for over a century, and the closure of the mine was expected to present a significant economic blow to the community.

In the wake of this announcement, you can imagine the surprise of South Dakotans to discover that a committee of prominent scientists viewed the closure of the mine as an unprecedented new opportunity to establish a National Underground Science Laboratory in the United States. Because of the extraordinary depth of the mine and its extensive existing infrastructure, they found that the mine would be an ideal location for research into neutrinos, tiny particles that can only be detected deep underground where thousands of feet of rock block out other cosmic radiation.

Recently, I received a letter from Dr. John Bahcall. Dr. Bahcall is a scientist at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, NJ. He was awarded the National Medal of Science in 1998, and is a widely recognized expert in neutrino science and an authority on the potential of an underground laboratory. In a recent letter to me, he explained, “There are pioneering experiments in the fields of physics, astronomy, biology, and geology that can only be carried out in an environment that is shielded from the many competing phenomena that occur on the surface of the earth. These experiments concern such fundamental and applied subjects as: How stable is ordinary matter? What is the dark matter of which most of our universe is composed? What new types of living organisms exist in deep underground environments from which sunlight is excluded? How are heat and water transported underground over long distances and long times?’’

This research, as well as other research that could be conducted in the mine, has potential to answer fundamental questions about our universe. The National Science Foundation is already considering a $281 million proposal for the construction of this laboratory.

I want to thank all of those who have been involved in the development of this legislation. I particularly appreciate the hard work and support of Governor Bill Janklow of South Dakota and officials with the Homestake and Barrick mining companies, who helped us to reach agreement on this legislation. I also want to thank my colleague, Senator JOHNSON, a cosponsor of this bill, for all of his work. In particular, Senator JOHNSON’s ability to secure the $10 million in transition funds that will help bridge the gap between the Homestake’s closure and the establishment of the laboratory has been critical to this effort.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Dr. John Bahcall be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PROFESSOR JOHN N. BAHCALL, INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY,

THE Hon. TOM DASCHLE,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DASCHLE: I would like to summarize for you the scientific importance of the National Underground Science Laboratory to be located in the Homestake Gold Mine near Lead, South Dakota.

There are pioneering experiments in the fields of physics, astronomy, biology, and geology that can only be carried out in an environment that is shielded from the many competing phenomena that occur on the surface of the earth. These experiments concern such fundamental and applied subjects as: How stable is ordinary matter? What is the dark matter of which most of our universe is composed? What new types of living organisms exist in deep environments from which sunlight is excluded? How are heat and water transported underground over long distances and long times?

American scientists have been among the world leaders in research in these underground studies. But we have had to travel to Japan, to Italy, to Russia, to South Africa, to Finland, to India and to other countries in order to carry out our experiments. During the past year, I had the privilege of chairing a national committee of distinguished research scientists that was charged with the task of recommending whether or not the United States should develop its own national laboratory for underground scientific work of physicists, astronomers, biologists, and geologists. We were also asked to make a recommendation as to whether the expenditure of funds for this purpose would, in a highly constrained budgetary situation, be beneficial to the scientific enterprise.

The committee had many meetings in this country and in other countries where major underground scientific facilities are currently active. The committee reached two conclusions. First, it is in the best interest of the United States to develop a national underground science laboratory only if this facility would be the best in the world. Second, the Homestake Gold Mine could be converted into the premier underground laboratory in the world. The recommendations of the committee have been endorsed by panels of scientists representing different disciplines. I hope that these remarks are useful to you and to your colleagues.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN BAHCALL,

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, as amended, be read a third time, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and that any statements thereon be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 1389), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, we have a number of other items to be taken up.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—H.R. 2873

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I understand that H.R. 2873, which was just received from the House, is at the desk, and I now ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2873) to extend and amend the program entitled Promoting Safe and Stable Families, under title IV-B, subpart 2 of the Social Security Act, and to provide new authority to support programs for mentoring children of incarcerated parents; to amend the Child Care Improvement Program under title IV-C of that Act to provide for educational and training vouchers for youths aging out of foster care, and for other purposes.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I now ask for its second reading and object to my own request on behalf of my colleagues.
HEATHER FRENCH HENRY HOMELESS VETERANS ASSISTANCE ACT

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 191, S. 739.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The clerk reported as follows: A bill (S. 739) to amend title 38, United States Code, to improve programs for homeless veterans, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as "the "Heather French Henry Homeless Veterans Assistance Act".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.
SEC. 2. FINDINGS; DEFINITION.
SEC. 3. NATIONAL GOAL TO END HOMELESSNESS AMONG VETERANS.
SEC. 4. Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans.
SEC. 6. Evaluation of programs and activities regarding homeless veterans.

SEC. 8. Dental care for homeless veterans.
SEC. 10. Various authorities.
SEC. 11. Life safety code for grant and per diem providers.
SEC. 12. Assistance for grant applications.
SEC. 13. Extension of homeless veterans reintegration program.

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as "the "Heather French Henry Homeless Veterans Assistance Act".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.
SEC. 2. FINDINGS; DEFINITION.
SEC. 3. NATIONAL GOAL TO END HOMELESSNESS AMONG VETERANS.
SEC. 4. Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans.
SEC. 6. Evaluation of programs and activities regarding homeless veterans.

SEC. 11. Life safety code for grant and per diem providers.
SEC. 12. Assistance for grant applications.
SEC. 13. Extension of homeless veterans reintegration program.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS; DEFINITION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On the field of battle, the members of the Armed Forces who defend the Nation are honor-bound to leave no one behind. Likewise, the Nation is honor-bound to leave no veteran behind.

(2) The Department of Veterans Affairs report known as the Community Homeless Assessment, Local Education, and Networking Groups (CHALENG) assessment, issued in May 2000, reported that by 1999 there were an estimated 344,983 homeless veterans, an increase of 34 percent above the 1998 estimate of 256,872 homeless veterans.

(3) The 1996 National Survey of Homeless Assistance Providers and Clients found that, although veterans constitute only 13 percent of the adult population, veterans comprise 23 percent of homeless clients.

(4) Homelessness among veterans is persistent despite unprecedented economic growth and job creation and general prosperity.

(5) While there are many effective programs that operate to help veterans to again become productive and self-sufficient members of society, current resources provided to such programs and other activities that assist homeless veterans are insufficient to provide all needed essential services, assistance, and support to homeless veterans.

(b) DEFINITION.—In this Act, the term "homeless veterans" means a veteran who is homeless (as that term is defined in section 103(a)(2) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 11302(a)).

SEC. 3. NATIONAL GOAL TO END HOMELESSNESS AMONG VETERANS.

(a) NATIONAL GOAL.—Congress hereby declares it to be a national goal to end homelessness among veterans within a decade.

(b) COOPERATIVE EFFORTS ENCOURAGED.—Congress hereby encourages all departments and agencies of the Federal Government, local governments, quasi-governmental organizations, private and public sector entities, including community-based organizations, and individuals to work cooperatively to end homelessness among veterans within a decade.

SEC. 4. ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON HOMELESS VETERANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

§ 5346. Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans.

(1) There is established in the Department the Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Committee").

(2) The Committee shall consist of not more than 15 members appointed by the Secretary from the following:

(A) Veterans service organizations.

(B) Defense (or a representative of the Secretary); Community-based programs.

(C) Community-based organizations.

(D) Previously homeless veterans.

(E) State veterans affairs officials.

(F) Experts in the treatment of individuals with mental illness.

(G) Experts in the treatment of substance use disorders.

(H) Experts in the development of permanent housing alternatives for lower income populations.

(I) Experts in vocational rehabilitation.

(J) Such other organizations or groups as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(3) The Committee shall include, as ex officio members—

(A) The Secretary of Labor (or a representative of the Secretary); and

(B) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (or a representative of the Secretary).

(C) The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development (or a representative of the Secretary).

(D) The Secretary of Veterans Affairs (or a representative of the Secretary).

(4) The Secretary shall determine the terms and conditions of service of the members of the Committee (including compensation and expenses incurred in performance of official duties).

SEC. 5. MEETINGS OF INTERAGENCY COUNCIL ON THE HOMELESS.

(a) In GENERAL.—Section 502 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

(4) Homelessness among veterans is persistent despite unprecedented economic growth and job creation and general prosperity.

(b) Cooperatively.—Congress hereby encourages all departments and agencies of the Federal Government, local governments, quasi-governmental organizations, private and public sector entities, including community-based organizations, and individuals to work cooperatively to end homelessness among veterans within a decade.

(c) COOPERATIVE EFFORTS ENCOURAGED.—Congress hereby encourages all departments and agencies of the Federal Government, local governments, quasi-governmental organizations, private and public sector entities, including community-based organizations, and individuals to work cooperatively to end homelessness among veterans within a decade.

SEC. 6. EVALUATION OF PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES REGARDING HOMELESS VETERANS.

(a) In GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

§ 5344. Evaluation of Programs and Activities.

(1) The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(b) In GENERAL.—The Secretary, with the assistance of the Committee, shall conduct an annual review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(c) Review.—The Committee shall submit to the Secretary a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(d) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(e) Review.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(f) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(g) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(h) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(i) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(j) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(k) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

(l) Report.—The Secretary shall, on a regular basis, and with the assistance of the Committee, submit to the Senate and House of Representatives a report containing a comprehensive, biennial examination, an account of ongoing programs and activities, and a review of the progress made in reducing homelessness among veterans.

SEC. 7. PER DIEM PAYMENTS FOR FURNISHING SERVICES TO HOMELESS VETERANS.

(a) In GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

§ 5342. Per Diem Payments for Furnishing Services to Homeless Veterans.

(1) The Secretary may provide per diem payments to nonprofit organizations, veterans service organizations, and faith-based and community organizations for furnishing services to homeless veterans.

(b) In GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide per diem payments to nonprofit organizations, veterans service organizations, and faith-based and community organizations for furnishing services to homeless veterans.
Committee shall set forth in the report the following:

“(1) The results of the evaluation.

“(2) Any recommendations that the Committee considers appropriate to improve the outreach activities of the Department with respect to homeless veterans, including recommendations for enhanced interagency cooperation and enhanced coordination between the Department and appropriate community organizations and recommendations for additional activities to complement, supplement, or otherwise eliminate deficiencies in the outreach activities.

“(3) Not later than 90 days after the receipt of a report under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall transmit to the Committees on Veterans’ Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a copy of the report, together with any comments and recommendations concerning the report that the Secretary considers appropriate.

“(4) The Committee may also submit to the Secretary such other reports and recommendations as the Committee considers appropriate.

“(5) The Secretary shall include with each annual report submitted to Congress pursuant to section 292 of this title a summary of all reports and recommendations of the Committee submitted to the Secretary since the previous annual report at the Secretary submitted pursuant to that section.

“(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall apply to the activities of the Committee under this section.

“(2) Section 14 of such Act shall not apply to the Committee.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of this chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

“546. Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans .”

SEC. 5. MEETINGS OF INTERAGENCY COUNCIL ON THE HOMELESS.

Section 202(c) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (title 42 U.S.C. 11312(c)) is amended to read as follows:

“(c) MEETINGS.—The Council shall meet at the call of its Chairperson or a majority of its members, but not less often than annually.”

SEC. 6. EVALUATION OF PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES REGARDING HOMELESS VETERANS.

(a) EVALUATION CENTERS.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall support the continuation within the Department of Veterans Affairs of at least one center for evaluation to monitor the structure and outcome of programs of the Department that address homeless veterans.

(b) ANNUAL REPORT ON PROCESSING OF BENEFITS CLAIMS.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress on an annual basis a report on the programs and activities of the Veterans Benefits Administration in processing of claims for benefits of homeless veterans during the preceding year. Each report shall include, for the year covered by such report, the following:

(1) Information on costs, expenditures, and workload of Veterans Benefits Administration claim evaluators in processing claims for benefits of homeless veterans.

(2) Information on the filing of claims for benefits by homeless veterans.

(3) Any other information that the Secretary considers appropriate.

(c) ANNUAL REPORT ON HEALTH CARE.—The Secretary shall submit to Congress on an annual basis a report on programs of the Department addressing the needs of homeless veterans. The Secretary shall include in each such report the following:

(1) Information about expenditures, costs, and workload of inpatient and outpatient health care for homeless veterans provided by the department.

(2) Information about the veterans contacted through the program.

(3) Information about processes under the program.

(4) Information about program treatment outcomes under the program.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, as chair of the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs, I urge the Senate to pass S. 739, the proposed “Heather French Henry Homeless Veterans Assistance Act of 2001,” a bill that enhances VA’s efforts to combat homelessness among our Nation’s veterans.

On July 19, 2001, the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs held a hearing on S. 739 as originally introduced by my good friend and colleague on the Committee, Senator WELLSTONE, the Chair. The Department of Veterans Affairs and homeless advocate shared their views on what could be done to help VA treat the unique problems faced by homeless veterans. Witnesses testified that homelessness remains a prevalent problem among veterans, with roughly one-third of the total homeless population consisting of veterans. Members of the Committee were told that more needs to be done to help these men and women get back on their feet.

I would highlight a couple of the provisions included in the bill and refer my colleagues to the report accompanying this legislation for more detail.

The pending measure contains many provisions seek to enhance programs that VA, Congress, and other federal agencies provide to homeless veterans, most notably the Grant and Per Diem Program. This program offers grants to nonprofit community-based organizations that serve homeless veterans. Specifically, the bill authorizes up to $55 million a year in funding for the program.

In addition, the bill would link the daily per diem rates provided to these community-based organizations for the care of homeless veterans to the rate already provided to state veterans homes for domiciliary care. This would increase the daily rate from $19 to $24, giving those who are truly combating homelessness the appropriate resources with which to do so.

Another important aspect of this legislation is the establishment of an Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans within VA. This 12-15 member committee would evaluate and report to the Secretary on the performance of VA’s programs. In closing, I would like to acknowledge the hard work and dedication of the namesake of this bill, Miss America 2000, Heather French Henry. Her focus on homeless veterans during her reign and subsequent to the end of her tenure as miss America brought significant attention to this important issue. Ms. Henry’s advocacy for homeless veterans is truly admirable.

It is my sincere hope this bill will give VA greater ability to treat homeless veterans, and thereby contribute toward eradicating this national shame. I urge my colleagues on the House Veterans’ Affairs Committee who have also been active on this issue, to work with Senator WOLLSTONE, the other members of our Committee, and VA to support the legislation which I believe will help for our country and now need our help.

I ask unanimous consent that a summary of S. 739 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF S. 739: THE HEATHER FRENCH HENRY HOMELESS VETERANS ASSISTANCE ACT OF 2001

The Committee bill incorporates provisions from S. 739, as originally introduced. It seeks to enhance and provide additional support for VA programs that combat homelessness among veterans.

The following is a summary of key provisions in the Committee bill, S. 739:

Programmatic Expansions: Authorizes VA to expand grants up to $55 million per year for transitional housing grants and per diem program. Requires VA to establish at least five new comprehensive service centers for homeless veterans in those metropolitan areas found to have the greatest need. Extends the Homeless Chronically Mentally Ill and Comprehensive Homeless Programs until December 31, 2006.

Advisory Committee on Homeless Veterans: Establishes a Committee that will examine and report to the Secretary on no less than five comprehensive homelesness programs provided to homeless veterans.

Interagency Council on the Homeless: Requires annual meetings of the Interagency Council on the Homeless, as the Council has yet to get underway.

Evaluation on Homeless Programs: Encourages the continued support of at least one evaluation center to monitor the effectiveness of VA’s various homeless programs.

Requires VA to report on both the benefits and health care aspects of combating homelessness.

Life Safety Code: Requires that real property grantees under VA’s homeless Grant and Per Diem program meet fire and safety requirements applicable under the Life Safety Code of the National Fire Protection Association.

Technical Assistance Grants: Authorizes the Secretary to conduct a technical assistance grants program to assist nonprofit groups in applying for grants relating to addressing problems of homeless veterans. Provides $750,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2006 for these purposes.

Homeless Veterans Reintegration Program: Extends the Homeless Veterans Reintegration Program and authorizes $50 million per year for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE ECONOMIC STIMULUS PACKAGE

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, yesterday’s action by the Senate to block the consideration of an economic stimulus package was unfortunate, untimely, and unnecessary. For the third time in my long tenure as a senator, I missed an opportunity to bring desperately needed assistance to unemployed workers. We were also blocked from providing tax relief to businesses to encourage new investment, and we were not even permitted to consider a homeland security initiative to meet the safety needs of our homes and communities.

But the resumption of negotiations on an economic stimulus package between congressional leaders and the administration is a positive sign. I say “resumption of negotiations” because there were productive talks last month between administration officials and congressional leaders. These talks resulted in an agreement on the size of the stimulus package and consensus was beginning to build.

The Democratic and Republican leaders of the Budget Committee also agreed upon a set of guidelines to develop this legislation. They said it should be immediate, that it should provide a temporary stimulus. They also said it should focus on those who would be most likely to spend the money, and all that was left was to fill in the details.

Unfortunately, the sensible process was abandoned. The House of Representatives pushed through a tax bill that was not temporary, did not provide immediate stimulus, and did not put money into the hands of those most likely to spend it. The House bill was bloated well beyond the size of the package that had been agreed upon, and the permanent changes it would make to the Tax Code would return us to the days of deficit spending and high interest rates.

The bill passed by a slim margin on a partisan vote. The fact that the administration has endorsed this effort is a grave disappointment. Now that we are back at the negotiating table, it is time to return to the bipartisan Budget Committee principles. It should be stimulatory, immediate, and temporary.

Nobody can doubt that our economy is in trouble. The employment rate jumped 5.4 percent in October; nearly 8 million workers are unemployed. We must rise above our differences and focus on the priorities that unite us. As the President has recognized, the actions we take are of paramount importance. It is important that we get business growing again. There are a variety of good tax cut proposals for businesses on the table. They would cause immediate investment and growth without busting our budget. Identifying the best set of incentives should not be a difficult task. But it is also important that we invigorate consumer demand. Both sides of the aisle have proposed tax rebate checks to those Americans who did not get a rebate earlier this year. We know that a $300 rebate to low-income persons would create economic activity because this money will be spent to make ends meet. But it is also important to provide temporary assistance to those who have lost their jobs. As we have in previous recessions, Congress should extend unemployment benefits.

The claim that these benefits would be a disincentive to workers is absurd. I am open to these ideas. The important thing is that we not add millions of workers to the ranks of the unemployed and uninsured.

We should also take care that our actions do not compound the fiscal woes of our State and local governments. Many States were already experiencing large budget deficits even before September 11. Since the attacks, there has been a sharp reduction in revenues. There has been an increased burden on essential Government services. If the Federal tax cuts we enact result in a reduction in State revenue, we must find a way to fill the gap for our States.

If we stay focused on our core priorities, we can come to an agreement. We can also be sure that we don’t bust the budget in the long run. Economists have warned us that if we abandon fiscal discipline, we will force long-term interest rates to rise. If we push up home mortgage rates, then other stimulus we provide will be futile.

Keeping interest rates low is especially important in my State. Missouri has one of the highest rates of home ownership in the country. Seventy-four percent of Missourians own their own homes, and they are counting on us to act responsibly. They are counting on our national leaders to step forward.
The President has shown bold leadership in the war against terrorism, and now they are counting on him to show bold leadership on the economic front as well.

A bipartisan agreement in the Senate is within reach. It is up to the President to bring all parties together for a sensible, balanced economic package that is good for America. That is the challenge. Americans are watching and waiting. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in motion not to be in session for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL DAY OF RECONCILIATION

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I will not take the full period of time. I want to make an announcement and inform the Senate family of something. Last night, we cleared through the Senate a national day of reconciliation to take place in the Senate and the House on December 4.

When we come back, hopefully we will not be in session too much past that, but at least on December 4, there will be a gathering between the House and Senate, and hopefully members of the Cabinet, as a time to support one another and to reconcile.

History, this was done 100 years ago, in particular at this time of the year, between Thanksgiving and Christmas. We will try to see the minor differences that have separated us and see if we really cannot make amends with each other, and seek amends with our Creator, if there are things that separate us from Him as well. This is going to take place on December 4. It has passed the House and the Senate as a concurrent resolution. There is a group of senators working on working together to do this, along with the Chaplains of the two bodies.

I wanted to announce that to the Senate. Hopefully, there are people who will want to participate in this gathering. It is voluntary. It will be a private session. Nobody from outside the House, the Senate, or the administration, other than the two Chaplains, will participate. There will be no media present. It is a private, closed session. It will be in the Rotunda.

It will take place between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. on December 4. I hope people will mark it on their calendars. This can be a special time given the nature of what has happened in our country.

This will be an effort for us to do just that—to reconcile with one another, to reconcile with our Creator. I think it is an important model for us to show to the Nation. I hope people can participate in that as well.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

JAMES A. MCCCLURE FEDERAL BUILDING AND UNITED STATES COURTHOUSE

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 220, S. 1459.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the President is authorized, on such terms and conditions as the President may determine, to provide educational and health care assistance for the women and children living in Afghanistan and as refugees in neighboring countries.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION.—(1) In providing assistance under subsection (a), the President shall ensure that such assistance is provided in a manner that protects and promotes the human rights of all people in Afghanistan, utilizing indigenous institutions and non-governmental organizations, especially women's organizations, to the extent possible.

(2) Beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, and at least annually for the 2 years thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit a report to the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on Appropriations and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives describing the activities carried out under this Act and otherwise describing the condition and status of women and children in Afghanistan and the persons provided assistance under this Act.

(3) Funds made available under the 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States (Public Law 107–38), shall be available to carry out this Act.

AUTHORIZING TESTIMONY, DOCUMENT PRODUCTION AND LEGAL REPRESENTATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 181, introduced earlier today by the majority and minority leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 174) expressing appreciation to the United Kingdom for its solidarity and leadership as an ally of the United States and reemphasizing the special relationship between the two countries.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I extend my congratulations to the Presiding Officer for this resolution. It was sponsored by the Presiding Officer. It is certainly timely. America does not have a better friend anywhere in the world than the people of Great Britain.

I ask unanimous consent that the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements related thereto be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 174) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. Res. 174

Whereas the United Kingdom has been a stalwart and loyal ally to the United States;

Whereas in response to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks on the United States, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Tony Blair, declared that "America is our closest ally and friend. The links between our two peoples are many and close and have been further strengthened over the last few days. We believe in Britain that you stand by your friends in times of trial just as America stood by us";

Whereas the United Kingdom has worked with the United States to build and consolidate an international coalition of countries determined to defeat the scourge of terrorism;

There be no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, this resolution concerns a request for testimony in a criminal action in Idaho District Court for the County of Kootenai.

In the case of Senate of Idaho v. Joseph Daniel Hooper.

Whereas Prime Minister Tony Blair and other senior officials of the Government of the United Kingdom have personally traveled to foreign capitals, including Moscow, Islamabad, and New Delhi, as part of the effort to build this international coalition; and Whereas military forces participated in the initial strikes against the Taliban and the Al Qaeda terrorist network and continue to fight side by side with United States forces in this war against terrorism: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—
(1) extends its most heartfelt appreciation to the United Kingdom for its unwavering solidarity and leadership as an ally of the United States; and
(2) reaffirms the special relationship of history, shared values, and common strategic interests that the United States enjoys with the United Kingdom.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING NATIONAL PEARL HARBOR REMEMBRANCE DAY

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. Con. Res 44, and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the concurrent resolution by title.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 44) expressing the sense of the Congress regarding National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

AMENDMENT NO. 2159

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my understanding Senators FITZGERALD and DURBIN have an amendment at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Reid], for Mr. FITZGERALD, for himself, and Mr. DURBIN, proposes an amendment numbered 2159.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Congress regarding National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day)

Strike all after the resolving clause and insert the following:

"That the Congress, on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of December 7, 1941, pays tribute to—

(2) the service of the American sailors and soldiers who survived the attack.""

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2159) was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution, as amended, be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the concurrent resolution be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 44), as agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. CON. RES. 44

Whereas on December 7, 1941, the Imperial Japanese Navy and Air Force attacked units of the Armed Forces of the United States stationed at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii;

Whereas 2,403 members of the Armed Forces of the United States were killed in the attack on Pearl Harbor;

Whereas there are more than 12,000 members of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association;

Whereas the 60th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor will be December 7, 2001;

Whereas on August 23, 1994, Public Law 103–308 was enacted, designating December 7 of each year as National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day; and

Whereas Public Law 103–308, reenacted as section 129 of title 36, United States Code, requests the President to issue each year a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day, to fly the flag of the United States at half-staff each December 7 in honor of the individuals who died as a result of their service at Pearl Harbor; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress, on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of December 7, 1941, pays tribute to—

(1) the United States citizens who died as a result of the attack by Japanese Imperial Forces on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; and

(2) the service of the American sailors and soldiers who survived the attack.

SMALL BUSINESS INVESTMENT COMPANY AMENDMENTS ACT OF 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 149, S. 1196.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

A bill (S. 1196) to amend the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment, as agreed to in conference, be in effect at the President's desk by voice vote in April and retained in the final budget resolution. Unfortunately, the appropriators had very tough decisions to make and the funding agreed to in our budget amendment was not included in the appropriations process. Despite my disagreement, I am supporting S. 1196 and joining Senator BOND in offering this amendment because if we want to continue this program, it must be funded entirely through fees, which forces us to authorize the fee change.

For the record, let me state that the National Association of Small Business Investment Companies testified before both the Senate and House Committees on Small Business in favor of increasing the program level from $2 billion to $3.5 billion. As I just explained, this legislation makes that possible.

The provisions strengthen the oversight and authority of the SBA to take action against bad actors, protect the integrity of the program, and streamline operations.

Mr. PRESIDENT, I rise today to urge my colleagues in the Senate to pass the “Small Business Investment Company Amendments Act of 2001,” S. 1196. This bill is important for one simple reason: once enacted it paves the way for more investment capital to be available for more small businesses that are seeking to grow and hire new employees.

There has been a significant growth in the small business sector of the U.S. economy over the past two decades. Today, small businesses make up over half of the entire U.S. economy. Over 99 percent of all employers in the United States are small businesses. They employ over 50 percent of the wage and salary workers, and provide 75 percent of the new net jobs each year. Small businesses generate 51 percent of the Nation’s private sector output. In light of the ongoing dip in the U.S. economy with the accompanying retrenchment by many businesses, both large and small, S. 1196 will serve as part of the solution to move us toward a recovery.

Before voting on S. 1196, I will offer an amendment that will permit the Small Business Administration to increase fees paid by Small Business Investment Companies up to 1.38 percent. When the Committee on Small Business unanimously approved the bill on July 19, 2001, the Committee adopted a fee increase from 1.0 percent to 1.28 percent. At that time, some members of the committee believed they could obtain an appropriation for the SBIC Participating Securities Program that would offset part of the fee increase. At this time, it is unlikely that the Conference on the Commerce Justice State Appropriations bill will approve any funds for the SBIC program. Consequently, it is critical that the Senate approve a fee increase to 1.38 percent, as required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990; otherwise, the SBIC Participating Securities Program will be shut down.

In 1968, Congress created the SBIC program to assist small business owners in obtaining investment capital. Forty years later, small businesses continue to experience difficulty in obtaining investment capital from banks and traditional investment sources. Although investment capital is generally available to large businesses from traditional Wall Street investment firms, small businesses seeking investments in the range of $500,000–$3 million have to look elsewhere. SBICs are frequently the only sources of investment capital available to large businesses from traditional investment sources. And it is important to focus on the significant role that is played by the SBIC program in support of growing small businesses. When Fortune Small Business compiled its list of 100 fastest-growing small businesses in 2000, 6 of the top 12 businesses on the list received SBIC financing during their critical growth years.

The SBIC program has helped some of our nation’s best known companies. It has provided a financial boost at critical points in the early growth period for many companies that are familiar to all of us. For example, Federal Express received a needed infusion of capital from two SBA-licensed SBICs at a critical juncture in its development stage. The SBIC program also helped other well-known companies, when they were not so well-known, such as Intel, Outback Steakhouse, America Online, and Callaway Golf.

What is not well known is the extraordinary help the SBIC program provides to Main Street America small businesses. These are companies we know from home towns all over the United States. Main Street companies provide both stability and growth in our local business communities. A good example of a Main Street company is Steelweld Equipment Company, founded in 1932, which designs and manufacturers utility truck bodies in St. Clair, Missouri. Steelweld is mounted on chassis made by Chrysler, Ford, and General Motors. Steelweld provides truck bodies for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Texas Utilities, Paragon Cable, GTE, and GE Capital Fleet.

Missouri Steelweld is a woman-owned corporation. The owner, Elaine Hunter, went to work for Steelweld in 1966 as a billing clerk right out of high school. She rose through the ranks of the company and was selected to serve on the board of directors. In December 1995, following the death of Steelweld’s founder and owner, Ms. Hunter received financing from a Missouri-based SBIC, Capital for Business, CFB, Venture Fund II, to help her complete the acquisition of Steelweld. CFB provided $500,000 in subordinated debt, Senior bank debt and seller debt were also used in the acquisition.

Since Ms. Hunter acquired Steelweld, its manufacturing process was reengineered to make the company run more efficiently. By 1997, Steelweld’s profitability had doubled, with annual sales of $10 million and 115 employees. SBIC program success stories like Ms. Hunter’s experience at Steelweld occur regularly throughout the United States.

In 1991, the SBIC program was experiencing major losses, and the future of the program was in doubt. Consequently, in 1992 and 1996, the Committee on Small Business worked closely with the Small Business Administration to correct deficiencies in the law in order to ensure the future of the program.

Today, the SBIC Program is expanding rapidly in an effort to meet the growing needs of small business owners for debt and equity investment capital. And it is important to focus on the significant role that is played by the SBIC program in support of growing small businesses. When Fortune Small Business compiled its list of 100 fastest-growing small businesses in 2000, 6 of the top 12 businesses on the list received SBIC financing during their critical growth years.

The “Small Business Investment Company Amendments Act of 2001,” as amended, would permit the annual interest fee paid by Participating Securities SBICs to increase from 1.0 percent to no more than 1.38 percent. In addition, the bill would make three technical amendments to the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (‘58 Act) that are intended to make improvements in the day-to-day operation of the SBIC program.

Projected demand for the Participating Securities SBIC program for FY 2002 is $3.5 billion, a significant increase over the FY 2001 program level of $2.5 billion. It is imperative that Congress approve this relatively small increase in the annual interest charge paid by the Participating Securities SBICs before the end of the fiscal year. The fee increase included in the bill, 1.38 percent, will allow the program to operate at its authorized level—$3.5 billion—an amount needed to help supplement SBICs before the end of the fiscal year.

The “Small Business Investment Company Amendments Act of 2001” would also make some relatively technical changes to the ‘58 Act that are designed to improve the operation of the SBIC program. Section 3 would remove the requirement that the SBA take out local advertisements when it seeks to determine if a conflict of interest exists involving an SBIC. This section has been recommended to the SBA, that has informed me that it has never received a response to a local advertisement and believes the requirement is unnecessary.

The bill would amend Title 12 and Title 18 of the United States Code to insure that false statements made to the SBA under the SBIC program would have the same penalty as making false statements to an SBIC. This section would make it clear that a management official of an SBIC, or even a person as a management official, is subject to the same penalties for the purpose of influencing their respective actions taken under the ‘58 Act would be a criminal violation. The courts could then assess civil and criminal penalties for such violations.

Section 5 of the bill would amend Section 313 of the ‘58 Act to permit the SBA to remove or suspend key management officials of an SBIC when they have willfully and knowingly committed a substantial violation of the ‘58 Act or any regulation, rule, or order promulgated by the SBA under the Act, a cease-and-desist order that has become final, or committed or engaged in any act, omission or practice that constitutes a substantial breach of a fiduciary duty of that person as a management official.

The amendment expands the definition of persons covered by Section 313 to be “management officials,” which includes officers, directors, general partners, managers, employees, agents or other participants in the management or conduct of the SBIC. At the time Section 313 of the ‘58 Act was enacted in November 1966, an SBIC was organized as a corporation. Since that... time, SBIC has been organized as partnerships and Limited Liability Companies (LLCs), and this amendment would take into account those organizations.

Time is of the essence. We need to act promptly and pass the Small Business Investment Company Amendments Act of 2001 today, so that the House of Representatives has time to act before the Congress adjourns in the coming weeks.

The bill was read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 1196

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Small Business Investment Company Amendments Act of 2001".

SEC. 4. PENALTIES FOR FALSE STATEMENTS.

(a) Criminal Penalties.—Section 1014 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "as defined in section 103 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (15 U.S.C. 661) or the Small Business Administration in connection with any provision of that Act" after "small business investment company";

(b) Penalties.—Section 951 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1833a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (d) through (g) as subsections (e) through (h), respectively; and

(2) in subsection (g)—

(A) by striking "(1)" and inserting "(2)"; and

(B) by striking "(2)" and inserting "(3)";

(c) Effective Date.—This section shall become effective on October 1, 2001.

SEC. 5. REMOVAL OR SUSPENSION OF MANAGEMENT OFFICIALS.

Section 313 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (15 U.S.C. 667e) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 313. REMOVAL OR SUSPENSION OF MANAGEMENT OFFICIALS.

(a) Definition of Management Official.—The term 'management official' means an officer, director, general partner, manager, employee, agent, or other participant in the management or conduct of the affairs of the licensee, or both.

(b) Removal of Management Officials.

(1) Notice of Removal.—The Administrator may serve upon any management official a written notice of its intention to remove that management official whenever, in the opinion of the Administrator—

(A) such management official—

(i) has willfully and knowingly committed any substantial violation of—

(D) this Act;

(ii) any regulation issued under this Act; or

(iii) a cease-and-desist order which has become final;

(ii) has willfully and knowingly committed or engaged in any act, omission, or practice which constitutes a substantial breach of a fiduciary duty of that person as a management official; and

(iii) the violation or breach of fiduciary duty is one involving personal dishonesty on the part of such management official.

(2) Contents of Notice.—A notice of intention to remove a management official, as provided in paragraph (1), shall contain a statement of the facts constituting grounds for therefor, and shall fix a time and place at which a hearing will be held thereon.

(3) Hearings.—

(A) Timing.—A hearing described in paragraph (2) shall be fixed for a date not earlier than 30 days nor later than 60 days after the date of service of notice of the hearing, unless an earlier date is set by the Administrator at the request of—

(i) the management official, and for good cause shown; or

(ii) the Attorney General of the United States.

(B) Consent.—Unless the management official shall appear at a hearing described in this paragraph in person or by a duly authorized representative, that management official shall be deemed to have consented to the issuance of an order of removal under paragraph (1).

(4) Issuance of Order of Removal.—

(A) In General.—In the event of conviction under paragraph (3)(B), or if upon the record made at a hearing described in this subsection, the Administrator finds that any of the grounds specified in the notice of removal has been established, the Administrator may issue such orders of removal from office as the Administrator deems appropriate.

(B) Effectiveness.—An order under subparagraph (A) shall—

(i) become effective at the expiration of 30 days after the date of service upon the subject licensee and the management official concerned (except in the case of an order issued upon consent as described in paragraph (3)(B), which shall become effective at the time specified in such order); and

(ii) remain effective and enforceable, except to such extent as it is stayed, modified, terminated, or set aside by action of the Administrator or a reviewing court in accordance with this section.

(C) Authority to Suspend or Prohibit Participation.—

(1) In General.—The Administrator may, if the Administrator deems it necessary for the protection of the licensee or the interests of the Administration, suspend or prohibit the participation in any manner in the management or conduct of the affairs of the licensee, or both, any management official referred to in subsection (b)(1), by written notice to such effect served upon the management official.

(2) Effectiveness.—A suspension or prohibition under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) become effective upon service of notice under paragraph (1); and

(B) unless stayed by a court in proceedings authorized by paragraph (3), shall remain in effect—

(i) pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to a notice of intention to remove served under subsection (b); and

(ii) until such time as the Administrator shall dismiss the charges specified in the notice, or an order of removal or prohibition is issued against the management official, until the effective date of any such order.

(3) Judicial Review.—Not later than 10 days after any management official has been suspended from office or prohibited from participation in the management or conduct of the affairs of a licensee, or both, under paragraph (1), that management official may apply to the United States district court for the judicial district in which the home office of the licensee is located, or the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, for a stay of the suspension or prohibition pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to a notice of intention to remove served against the management official under subsection (b), and such court shall have jurisdiction to stay such actions.

(D) Authority To Suspend on Criminal Charges.—

(1) In General.—Whenever a management official is charged in any information, indictment, or complaint authorized by a United States attorney, with the commission of or participation in a felony involving dishonesty or breach of trust, the Administrator may, by written notice served upon that management official, suspend that management official from office or prohibit that management official from further participation in any manner in the management or conduct of the affairs of the licensee, or both,

(2) Effectiveness.—A suspension or prohibition under paragraph (1) shall remain in effect until the subject information, indictment, or complaint is finally disposed of, or until terminated by the Administrator.

(E) Authority Upon Dismissal or Other Disposition.—If a judgment of conviction with respect to an offense described in paragraph (1) is entered against a management official, then at such time as the judgment is not before the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, for a stay of the suspension or prohibition pending the completion of the administrative proceedings pursuant to a notice of intention to remove served against the management official under subsection (b), and such court shall have jurisdiction to stay such actions, the Administrator may issue and serve upon the management official an order removing that management official, which removal shall become effective upon service of a copy of the order upon the licensee.

(F) Authority Upon Dismissal, or Other Disposition.—A finding of not guilty or other disposition of charges described in paragraph (1) shall not preclude the Administrator from therefor instituting proceedings to suspend or remove the management official from office, or to prohibit the management official from participation in the management or conduct of the affairs of the licensee, or both, pending such proceeding as may be necessary to further investigate the matter.

(G) Notification to Licensees.—Copies of each notice required to be served on a management official under this section shall also be served upon the licensee.

(H) Procedural Provisions; Judicial Review.—

(1) Hearing Venue.—A hearing provided in this section shall be—

(A) held in the Federal judicial district or in the territory in which the principal office of the licensee is located, unless the party afforded the hearing consents to another place; and “(B) conducted in accordance with the provisions of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

“(2) ISSUANCE OF ORDERS.—After a hearing provided for in this section, and not later than 90 days after the Administrator has notified the parties that the case has been submitted for final decision, the Administrator shall render a decision in the matter (which shall include findings of fact upon which its decision is predicated), and shall issue and cause to be served on each party to the proceeding an order or orders consistent with the provisions of this section.

“(3) AUTHORITY TO MODIFY ORDERS.—The Administrator may modify, terminate, or set aside any order issued by the Administrator under this section—

“(A) at any time, upon such notice, and in such manner as the Administrator deems proper, unless a petition for review is timely filed therein;

“(B) PARTICULAR FOR REVIEW.—Any party to a hearing provided for in this section may obtain a review of any order issued pursuant to paragraph (2) (other than an order issued with the consent of the management official concerned), or an order issued under subsection (d), by filing in the court of appeals of the United States, as provided in paragraph (4)(B), and thereafter until the record in the proceeding has been filed in accordance with paragraph (4)(C); and “(C) UPON SUCH FILING OF THE RECORD, WITH PERMISSION OF THE COURT.

“(4) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Judicial review of an order issued under this section shall be excluded, except as provided in this subsection.

“(B) PETITION FOR REVIEW.—Any party to a hearing provided for in this section may obtain a review of any order issued pursuant to paragraph (2) or an order issued with the consent of the management official concerned, or an order issued under subsection (d), by filing in the court of appeals of the United States for the circuit in which the principal office of the licensee is located, or in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, not later than 30 days after the date of service of such order, a written petition praying that the order of the Administrator be modified, terminated, or set aside.

“(C) NOTIFICATION TO ADMINISTRATION.—A copy of a petition filed under subparagraph (B) shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Administrator, and thereupon the Administrator shall file in the court the record in the proceeding, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

“(D) COURT JURISDICTION.—Upon the filing of a petition under subparagraph (A)—

“(i) the court shall have jurisdiction, which, upon the filing of the record under paragraph (C), shall be exclusive, to affirm, modify, terminate, or set aside, in whole or in part, the order of the Administrator, except as provided in the last sentence of paragraph (D)(B);

“(ii) review of such proceedings shall be had as provided in chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code; and “(iii) the judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the judgment and decree shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

PATENT, COPYRIGHT AND TRADE-MARK LAW TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House to accompany S. 320.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 320) entitled “An Act to make technical corrections in patent, copyright, and trademark laws”, do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

(a) REMAINING OFFICERS.—(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), title 35, United States Code, other than section 210(d), is amended—

(i) by striking “Director” each place it appears and inserting “Commissioner”; and

(ii) by striking “Director’s” each place it appears and inserting “Commissioner’s”.

(B) Section 3(b)(5) of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking “Director” the first place it appears and inserting “Commissioner”.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate concur with the House amendment with a further amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2162) is agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today’s Record under “Amendments Submitted.”)

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH AND EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 2001

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 208, H.R. 717.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill (H.R. 717), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

PROVIDING AUTHORITY TO THE FEDERAL POWER MARKETING ADMINISTRATIONS TO REDUCE VANDALISM AND DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY

Mr. REID. Mr. President, finally, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. R. 2924 that was recently received from the House and which is now at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2924) to provide authority to the Federal Power Marketing Administrations to reduce vandalism and destruction of property, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read three times, passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating thereto be printed in the Record, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill (H.R. 717), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 717) to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research with respect to various forms of muscular dystrophy, including Duchenne, Becker, limb girdle, congenital, facioscapulohumeral, myotonic, oculopharyngeal, distal, and Emery-Dreifuss muscular dystrophies.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 717) which had been reported from the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions with an amendment, as follows:

On page 16, after line 21, insert the following:

SEC. 7. STUDY ON THE USE OF CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE AT THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.

(a) REVIEW.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall enter into a contract with the Institute of Medicine for the purpose of conducting a study and making recommendations on the impact of, need for, and other issues associated with Centers of Excellence at the National Institutes of Health.
The American people want action by Congress too. They strongly support our Democratic proposals to provide unemployment insurance and health insurance to unemployed workers, and Federal assistance to States. They know it’s an emergency in the economy and they know it is an emergency for the hundreds of thousands of men and women without unemployment insurance or health insurance.

Yet, some of our colleagues in Congress oppose this action. Instead, they support a bill that would retroactively repeal the corporate minimum tax and give the largest corporations $25 billion in direct payments from the U.S. Treasury. We don’t think laid-off workers who can’t afford, or don’t have, health insurance are an emergency. Instead, they support spending $120 billion to accelerate the reduction of upper income tax rates, 80 percent of which won’t go into the economy until after next year.

Our economy is in trouble. There is no denying it. Just ask the men and women who have lost their jobs and have to tell their families every week that they cannot find new employment. They will tell you how hard it is to put food on their families’ tables each week. They will tell you how hard it is to watch their bills piling up with no end in sight.

If that’s not enough, look at the numbers.

Only 38 percent of unemployed workers receive unemployment insurance. This figure is down from 75 percent in 1975. And, the figure is much worse for low-wage workers. According to a recent study by the National Campaign for Jobs and Income Support, only 20 percent of unemployed low-wage workers will qualify for benefits during a recession.

These workers are least likely to qualify for unemployment benefits, and they are most likely to be laid off. They are struggling to keep a roof over their families’ heads and to afford food for their children. We know that the number of hungry children has grown in recent years. Unless we do more to help, the number will continue to grow.

Yesterday, America’s Second Harvest released the largest, most comprehen-the past year. A reduction in the purchase of health care services has an effect on the economy similar to that of other reductions in consumer spending, it dampens economic activity.

Finally, a federal stimulus package will do no good if State governments make spending cuts or raise taxes. The current recession is already having an impact on state budgets. In fact, 35 States have reported budget shortfalls—a shortfall that already totals more than $15 billion. If States have to borrow to make spending cuts or raise taxes, the current recession is already having an impact on state budgets. In fact, 35 States have reported budget shortfalls—a shortfall that already totals more than $15 billion. If States have to borrow to make spending cuts or raise taxes, the reduction in the long-term Federal deficits would be automatically offset by new Federal tax cuts, on top of the nearly $2 trillion in tax cuts enacted earlier this year, would actually hurt the economy now, by raising the cost of long-term borrowing and discouraging the kinds of investment that our nation needs now. The House of Representatives passed, by the narrowest of margins, a so-called stimulus package that will not stimulate economic growth in the short term, and will not be affordable in the long term. It merely repackages old, unfair, permanent tax breaks, which were rejected by Congress last spring, under the new label of “economic stimulus.” The American people deserve better.

Our plan provides financial assistance to States to help avoid devastating cuts in Medicaid, cuts that will harm economies and reduce health coverage. States would receive $5.5 billion through an increased Federal Medicaid matching rate, providing an immediate influx of cash into States suffering from the recession-driven budgetary shortfalls. The Senate Republican alternative is unacceptable. It fails to address aid to States, health care or unemployment insurance in any meaningful way.

The Democratic plan is a fair balance between tax incentives and spending incentives for the economy. The tax incentives in the plan meet the three essential criteria for a stimulus: They will put money into the economy now; they do not impose substantial long-term costs on the federal budget; and they treat fairly those who are most in need.

Seventy percent of Americans today pay more in payroll taxes than in come taxes. Yet many of them received no tax rebate earlier this year. The rebate unfairly ignored these low and moderate income families. A one-time rebate of payroll taxes to them now will immediately inject $15 billion into the economy. The dollars could be used in the hands of people who are likely to spend them immediately. Economists tell us that families with modest incomes are likely to spend the extra money they receive right away on needed consumer goods, which speeds economic activity and by economic forces beyond their control. As we work together to get our economy moving again, we can also work together to see that none are left behind.

The American people are meeting this challenge, and we must demonstrate to them that Congress is capable of meeting it too. The time now is to pass a stimulus package that truly lifts the economy, and lifts it fairly and responsibly. We do have an emergency, and we must address it. The American people are watching this debate closely, and they are waiting for our answer.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, President Bush has asked us to send him an effective, anti-recession stimulus package. In the spirit of bipartisanship and good faith, he proposed a series of provisions that enjoyed bipartisan and Democratic support. After much foot-dragging, the Democratic majority has finally produced a bill. Unfortunately, it appears to be nothing more than a collage of special interest wish lists, from livestock assistance to new entitlements—with very little if anything that will actually stimulate the economy.

It is fat on claims but thin on data. It struts around in the light of day as a bipartisan package, but makes deals in the dark of night to secure votes. The bill before us is an embarrassment to the Senate; it is no good for our country, and it is certainly no good for our economy. There may be many good political reasons for Congress to pass an economic stimulus package, but when pet projects trump fiscal prudence, we miss a historic opportunity to help the American people during a time of great need. We must improve the incentives to work, save, and invest—the real catalysts of economic growth—and the Democratic bill fails on all three counts.

Instead, Democrats insist that increased Government spending serves as the primary tool for boosting economic activity. But look what they are spending money on—sugar beet disaster programs, rural telecommunications infrastructure, and water-treatment and waste disposal facilities. It is no mystery, leading economists, although the colleagues across the aisle will tell you otherwise, that the better approach is to lower tax rates and the tax burden on labor and capital to improve...

incentives for workers and business owners. This produces more jobs and generates higher incomes, which in turn translate into higher investment and consumer spending.

Democrats prefer to add new healthcare programs, increased pork-barrel spending items rather than accelerate tax cuts for businesses and individuals. Given the amount of money that would be spent under this bill, we would be better off passing no bill at all. The majority strongly supports the President's proposal, and has crafted a bill that reaffirms his principles for economic recovery. As such, criticism of the Republican bill is direct criticism of the President, because it is his bare-bones proposal we introduced. To my Democratic friends, I say, don't take refuge in calling Republicans partisan; if you object to our bill, criticize the President—it's his proposal. The truth is: he's right, and you're wrong.

The American economy is starved for business investment. The President's proposals are designed to stimulate business investment. My Democratic friends say rich people don't spend, only poor people do. Now that is real voodoo economics. Alternative Minimum Tax relief for a business provides money for reinvestment. Neither rich people nor corporations hide their money in a mattress. They invest it, which does . . . what? It creates jobs. What would they create today? Create jobs. And what happens when we do that? People have more money to spend. I would rather people have a job than an unemployment check. I would rather they spend their paycheck than an unemployment check.

I recently read an article in which a key Democratic political operative said, in effect, we will stand with the President in the war, but on the domestic front, we'll use issues to our political advantage. Righting our economy is critical to our war effort. We shouldn't be playing politics with it.

So let's stop the political games. Time is short. The President has asked us to produce a bill for him by the end of the month, and the minority intends to do so. We have already come a good distance toward the other side. It is time for Democrats to do the same, and converge upon what the President and the American people think is best.

MS. GRACE M. MARGOLIS. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Economic Recovery and Assistance to American Workers Act. This legislation is about security, economic security and physical security. This bill will help us achieve two national priorities: homeland defense and economic growth.

I have four principles for economic stimulus. First, any measure should have a strong, immediate impact. Next, economic recovery provisions should be temporary, sunsetting within one or two years. The overall package should be fiscally responsible to ensure long-term interest rates are not negatively affected. And, lastly, the proposal should be focused on those who need the help the most.

I also have four principles for homeland defense legislation. First, it must give law enforcement the tools they need to prevent attacks. Next, it must give first responders the tools they need to respond to an act of terrorism. Also, it must improve security of our infrastructure. Lastly, it must provide for greater public information, since information is the antidote for panic. The Administration is considering today meets my principles.

Our Nation is fighting a war against terrorism. This war is on two fronts: in Afghanistan, and in every community in America. Our military has the right stuff to defeat our enemies. They have honor, courage and patriotism. They also have the best training, best intelligence, best equipment.

Yet on the home front, our communities are fortifying. They are forced to choose between keeping communities safe from both homeland and traditional threats, and keeping key infrastructure safe—like bridges, power plants and stadiums.

I recently held a hearing in the VA-HUD Subcommittee to hear the mayors of our communities. What did we learn at the hearing? We learned that our local governments are on the front lines of homeland defense. We learned that they are responsible for the protection of our infrastructure, our communities, and the public. In the recent terror attacks, our local governments took the lead in response, our police and fire fighters.

Yet their resources don't match their responsibilities. What will happen if we don't pass this homeland security bill?

Costs are shifted to local governments who must forage for funds from local programs. That means higher local taxes and lower security across our Nation.

What does this legislation do? It provides the resources we need to secure our homeland. Local law enforcement is essential to our fight against terrorism. They are our front line of defense. There are 650,000 local police officers and more than 11,000 FBI agents. This legislation will provide $2 billion that will go to states to be used for counter-terrorism training for police to train them to prevent and respond to terrorist attacks and for new equipment.

We are talking about protecting our first responders. We must protect the protectors. Simply put, that means making sure they have the equipment they need to save lives. Yet fire equipment is very expensive. A new fire engine costs $150 million. A new rescue vehicle costs $50 million. A suit of protective gear for our firefighters costs $1,000 and wears out quickly.

Each year we provide funds for grants to local fire companies, but the funding has been spartan and skimpy. Over 30,000 fire companies requested almost $5 billion dollars worth of equipment this year, including $400 million just for personal protection equipment. In Maryland, 198 fire companies applied for funds so far this year, and yet only 5 received funding.

Clearly, we need to do better. Even before the tragedy of September 11th, I was fighting for our firefighters. We were able to increase funding for the Department of Homeland Security to $150 million in the VA-HUD bill. The Homeland Security bill does even better by providing $600 million for our firefighters.

The Homeland Security bill provides $6 billion for our nation's bioterrorism preparedness and response needs. Our country's ability to recognize and respond to a bioterrorist attack depends on a strong, coordinated public health system. This bill gives state and local public health departments additional resources to prepare for this new germ warfare. State and local public health departments have already been stretched thin. This bill gives them the resources to detect, respond, and contain a possible bioterrorist attack.

This bill is vital for a bioterrorist attack, this bill upgrades State and local public health departments; expands laboratory capacity and surveillance at the State, local, and Federal level; and trains first responders to recognize the signs and symptoms of a bioterrorist attack. The bill also improves State and local communications systems; ensures that hospitals and emergency rooms have the expertise and equipment to handle a surge in patients from a bioterrorist attack; increases our nation's supply of antidotes and vaccines against possible biological agents; and, provides significant new resources so that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) can protect the quality and safety of our nation's food supply with more inspectors and additional tools.

Investments in the fight against bioterrorism will help in our battles against infectious disease and antimicrobial resistance. Our nation's public health system is on the front lines of this new biological war. This bill will make sure they are combat ready and fit-for-duty.

Our Coast Guard used to focus on drug smuggling, migrant interdiction, and search and rescue. Today, it's primary role is national security by keeping our ports safe, patrolling around power plants and under bridges, and searching suspicious vessels.

This bill provides $177 million in operating funds. These funds will be used to improve training, and allow for increased patrols without forcing the Coast Guard to cut back on its other missions.

To protect our rail system. This bill provides $177 million in operating funds. These funds will be used to improve training, and allow for increased patrols without forcing the Coast Guard to cut back on it's other missions.

To protect our rail system. We can not let them find these weaknesses on our nation's railroads. We must ensure the safety of all the components of our rail system. This means providing... tunnel security which means preventing people from entering tunnels. It includes terminal safety—the fact that most terminals are intermodal, bringing together different forms of transportation which means that it’s hard to screen passengers. It means providing adequate lighting, proper ventilation, and there is not safety standards. They do not have adequate lighting.

Rail safety requires Federal help. Yet Federal funding for Amtrak has been cut by eighty percent in the last three years eighty percent. Annual appropriations for Amtrak is frozen at $521 million. That’s only about half of what Congress authorized in the TEA–21 bill. What does this legislation do? It will enable Amtrak to enhance security of their overall network by providing $300 million and enabling Amtrak to upgrade it’s most dangerous tunnels by providing $760 million for tunnel safety.

As stated before, I have four principles for economy recovery. These principles have been widely adopted. When I compare the different proposals for economic recovery to these principles, it’s clear what we need.

The Economic Recovery package proposed by Senator Baucus meets my principles and provides real and effective measures for economic recovery. This package provides real economic recovery that benefits working Americans who have lost their jobs, helps businesses recover from the recent attacks and the economic downturn, and provides real the boost that this economy needs.

The Economic Recovery bill will provide tax relief to nearly 44 million working Americans who were left out of the last round of rebates. This bill will provide the same $300 checks to individuals or $600 checks to married couples who tend to pay only payroll taxes. These are the people who live paycheck to paycheck. These are the working Americans who will benefit most from a rebate check.

Often, these hard working Americans are the trouble making end meet. This Democratic proposal will help them make ends meet thus ensuring that the vast majority of these rebates will actually be spent which will help provide the real boost this economy needs.

The Democratic proposal also contains provisions that would help businesses invest in the new equipment and infrastructure needed to rebuild, would help small businesses acquire new equipment and would provide rebates to companies quickly.

The Economic Recovery bill will also help unemployed working Americans by providing a 13 week extension of the period during which they can collect unemployment insurance, by increasing the amount that unemployed workers can collect, and by including more displaced workers in the unemployment insurance program.

I am sure that many will ask how does this help the economy recover? These Americans do not even have a paycheck to live on anymore. But they still have to meet their basic needs of food and shelter. For example, the average unemployment benefits in Maryland and the average rent in Baltimore is about $500/month, and the average grocery bill for a family is about $475. Thus, under the current benefit levels families are falling behind and could not continue their health care at an estimated average cost of $650/month in my State.

Unemployment Insurance is an essential part of the valuable social safety net. In every recession over the past three decades unemployment insurance and the layoff of airport personnel. We have seen that since the terrible events of September 11th. The terrorists thought they would cripple us, but they have only made us stronger. We want to help those in need.

Yet volunteers and philanthropy cannot take the place of public policy. The Economic Recovery and Homeland Security bill puts our values into action to help our fellow citizens to get back on their feet and to protect our citizens from the evil acts of our enemies.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on a matter that should be intertwined with any economic stimulus package that passes this Congress—providing airline depreciation on the sale of new and refurbished aircraft.

The aviation industry and the industry’s employees have been hit especially hard in the aftermath of the September 11th attacks. The economic woes reach far beyond slowing ticket sales and the layoff of airport personnel. These difficult times are stretching to 12 months for workers to continue health insurance through their former employer’s plan. It allows States to cover the remaining 25 percent of the premium for low-income workers.

For unemployed workers who are not eligible for COBRA, it gives States the additional leverage for these workers for up to 12 months. These proposals are temporary; they end on Dec. 31, 2002.

Under the Democratic Economic Recovery plan, unemployed workers will get the health care they need, temporarily, and this will help stimulate the economy. Unemployed workers with health insurance will have more money to spend on other items because they won’t have to pay high out-of-pocket health care costs.

For example, a mom or dad in Prince George’s County can afford to buy a refrigerator to replace the broken one or buy school clothes for their growing child because they did not have to pay long insurance to take their child to the emergency room for a severe earache.

Unemployed workers will spend money on health care because if you have health insurance, you are more likely to go to the doctor to get the treatment you need.

Finally, the Democratic proposal temporarily strengthens the Medicaid safety net when unemployed workers will need it the most. States across the country are facing budget shortfalls and the states at the same time more unemployed workers will need health care through Medicaid. This provision provides additional resources to states so that states don’t have to resort to serious cutbacks in their Medicaid program in order to balance their budgets this year. This provision is important to Maryland and has the strong support of the National Governors’ Association.

During times of crisis, our Nation comes together. We have seen that since the terrible events of September 11th. The terrorists thought they would cripple us, but they have only made us stronger. We want to help those in need.

Yet volunteers and philanthropy cannot take the place of public policy. The Economic Recovery and Homeland Security bill puts our values into action to help our fellow citizens to get back on their feet and to protect our citizens from the evil acts of our enemies.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.
the heart of the aviation industry, to the companies that manufacture, reconstruct, and refurbish aircraft.

By providing a depreciation allowance for the aviation industry, we will avert the loss of more jobs in this major industry.

Kansas is a state that has a tremendous interest in the aviation industry.
Boeing, Cessna, Raytheon, and Bombardier, which all have major plants based in the state, employ tens of thousands of Kansans. While the airline bailout package will go a long way toward preventing immediate mass layoffs, it is not doing enough to ensure that the sale of aircraft will rebound from their current levels.

If we provide a depreciation allowance equal to 40 percent of the adjusted basis for the qualified property acquired by those purchasing aircraft, we will provide a strong incentive for individuals and corporations alike to increase their purchases from the aviation industry. In so doing, we would provide an immediate boost to the economy, while at the same time providing secu-ritv for aviation-industry employees beyond the 1-year period of the airline bailout.

Moreover, it is important that we extend this depreciation allowance to include not only new orders, but also aircraft that have been purchased or taken in a trade and refurbished or reconstructed, and sold to a third party.

By taking such steps, production orders will increase, and we will be able to ensure that hard-working Americans have the best possible time-table of the airline bailout package.

This is good for America. It is good for Kansas, and it is something that I will be working to see implemented as part of an economic stimulus package.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I was hoping to make a statement yesterday on this important subject, but I was tied up chairing the Agriculture Committee in consideration of our new farm policy that would like to speak briefly on the subject of bioterrorism and the economic stimulus/homeland security proposal considered by the Senate.

The defeat of this legislation on a budget point of order was especially disappointing to me because it included a crucial $4 billion initiative to combat bioterrorism. Senator SPECTER and I worked closely with Senator BYRD to develop this funding proposal, which is a comprehensive plan to better protect America's airways, smallpox, and other bioterrorism threats.

I have the privilege to chair the appropriations subcommittee which funds our health programs. Our subcommittee has for the past several years increased funding for combat bioterrorism. We have made real progress as a result. However, much more remains to be done. To determine what additional steps are necessary, our subcommittee has held three hearings during the past 2 months.

We heard from our top Federal officials, including the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the head of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and head of FBI bioterrorism efforts. We also heard from distinguished State and local officials and top scientists from the public and pri-cate sectors. Their testimony made plain that we were not adequately prepared for this threat. We do not have enough vaccines to respond to an attack. Our public health system has been allowed to decay, and needs more help to detect an outbreak quickly, to treat a large number of infectious patients, and to vaccinate large parts of the country.

As I said before, to put the state of our public health system into military terms, our troops are ill-trained, our radar is out of date, and we are short on ammunition.

The plan we developed and which was included in the stimulus package is a thoughtful, bipartisan approach. It closely follows the 7 point plan I outlined last week. It says that it is not enough to acknowledge the threat, but to double the resources of the President's to bolster our Nation's defenses against a bioterrorist attack.

In contrast to the President's plan, our proposal prioritizes funding to the Disease and Prevention Center and local level. We have put the bulk of the funding, $1.3 billion, into improving our public health departments, beefing up local lab capacity and expanding the Health Alert Network. We desperately need to make these investments if we want to quickly identify, track and contain a bioterrorist attack should we ever be confronted with one. The President's plan neglects this vital piece of our response system.

Our proposal also includes funding for the production of enough smallpox vaccine for every American should that ever be necessary. As we have seen in recent press reports, the administration's request is too low to produce enough smallpox vaccine for all Americans.

We also allocate $116 million for research on new vaccines. Earlier this month my subcommittee heard testimony from Dr. Fauci at NIH about the promising future of antivirals against smallpox. The administration's plan devotes no money to developing these new drugs.

Our plan also provides more money than the President to bolster the work of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. We need to upgrade their overburdened lab capacity and their disease surveillance systems.

It also includes $650 million to improve safety and to safeguard our animal disease labs.

I would like to thank Chairman BYRD for the opportunity to work with him on this important funding package.

Our Nation’s public health system is now the front lines in our war against terrorism; it should be prepared accordingly.

I believe that we cannot leave this year without addressing the bioterror-ism threat. Whether our package is included in the stimulus plan or another appropriations bill, we must get it done.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about the stimulus package we recently considered in the Senate and the disturbing new definition of patriotism that was associated with it.

As I think most of my colleagues are aware, the bill we considered was laden with rewards for wealthy donors.

Now, I think these days we would hard-lly try to recognize a stimulus pack-ge, or any kind of emergency spending, if it weren't loaded down with provisions designed to benefit special interests. This practice certainly isn't new. But what is new, is the attempt to cloak these giveaways in a kind of patriotism.

A recent Washington Post editorial quoted a lobbyist for Pricewaterhouse Coopers, who has been pushing tax breaks in the bill that would profit clients such as GE and IBM, noting that “It’s perfectly patriotic to not be responsible” and even un patrioti for him to behave otherwise.

Patriotic to push for a taxbreak for major corporations? I never thought I'd see the day. But here we are, in the war on terrorism, trying to stop a deepening recession, and we were faced with a stimulus package that was designed to reward wealthy interests, but did very little to boost the economy. And now, to add insult to injury, we’ve been told that this isn’t merely pork barrel politics, but that it is downright patriotic. I find that appalling, and I’m sure many of my colleagues did as well.

Because today this country is briming with real patriotism, and I think many of us draw strength from that shared sense of pride in our country.

But some versions of the stimulus bill were nothing to be proud of.

At this moment I believe that we may well need a stimulus package. But that's not what we were considering;

instead we were faced with the same kind of pork-barrel spending we have seen year in and year out, except that now these provisions were dressed up in red, white and blue. That kind of opportunism, at a time like this, is an affront to the American people, and it should be unwelcome in this Chamber.

The stimulus bill, and in particular, the House-passed version of the bill, represents a lost opportunity for the Nation, and I think the American people have the right to ask what went wrong. How, at a time when the Nation needs a strong stimulus package, did we end up with this pile of pork? And when I say pile of pork, I'm being kind.

The St. Louis Post Dispatch called it chicken manure. From time to time I like to call the Bankroll on legislation, and talk about the potent mix of money and influence that results in the kind of legislation that's before us now. I think it's important to review the donations given by the Interest that could reap such tremendous benefits from this bill.
According to information from Common Cause and Citizens for Tax Justice, just 14 corporations alone would reap a $6.3 billion windfall from the retroactive repeal of the alternative minimum tax in the House-passed package. Enron, which has given more than $2 million, General Electric gave $1.3 million, and they’ll get $671 million. And this list goes on. Billions upon billions of dollars being funneled back to big donors at a time when more and more Americans are out of work, lacking health care coverage and struggling to pay their bills.

The House package also gave a temporary tax break to multinational corporations on some profits from their foreign operations. As the Washington Post pointed out, “it’s hard to see how this measure, which would encourage firms to keep money outside the country, would do anything to stimulate the American economy.” This measure rewards some of the biggest donors in the business and financial insurance industries. Some of the biggest donors in these industries include Merrill Lynch, which has given more than $2.2 million in soft money over the last 10 years, and Citigroup, which has given more than $2.1 million during the last 10 years, according to Common Cause.

The House-passed package even included Medical Savings Accounts, which soft money donor Golden Rule Financial Corporation and other insurance interests have lobbied for for many years. Golden Rule gave just shy of $1.3 million in soft money in the last ten years.

The stimulus bill should have been an opportunity to stimulate the economy; instead it turned out to be a chance for special interests to add the provisions they’ve been pushing for all these years. Wealthy interests haven’t hesitated to take this difficult period for the country and exploit it for their own gain. And if this version of the bill ever passes, they will reap an enormous financial windfall.

In the last few months, the Nation has endured a great deal, and we will continue to face enormous challenges. As a Congress, we must address the issues before us with the kind of integrity that these challenges will demand. But we can’t meet those challenges when the legislative process is hobbled by the clout of special interests. The stimulus bill was a sobering example of a bill that went through that process, and fell far short of its goal.

The stimulus bill was a missed opportunity that the Nation may pay dearly for down the road. We’ve missed an opportunity, but we don’t have to miss another one. I hope when Congress returns next year, we will rise to meet the next challenge before us: getting campaign finance reform to the President’s desk. The Nation is closely watching our work here, more now than ever in the wake of September 11. And bills like the stimulus package would make any American wonder whether we are truly conducting the people’s business.

We must restore integrity to legislative process, and restore the people’s faith in us and what we do.

I think we can start by voting against this bill, if it comes to us in a form similar to this. But we must do much more, we must abolish soft money and shut down the issue ad loophole, and it can’t wait another year. Campaign finance reform should be one of the first orders of business when we return next year. The American people are looking to us for leadership, and I believe that this Senate can provide that leadership. We can show the American people that we have the courage and leadership they seek, and we can pass a meaningful campaign finance reform the law of the land.

TRIBUTE TO KEVIN P. POWER
NASA FELLOW
Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I take this opportunity to recognize and say farewell to an outstanding NASA Manager, Kevin P. Power, upon his departure from my staff. Mr. Power was selected as a Congressional Fellow to work in my office because of his knowledge of the aerospace industry. NASA programs, and the John C. Stennis Space Center in my home State of Mississippi. It is a privilege for me to recognize the many outstanding achievements he has provided for the U.S. Senate, NASA, and our great Nation.

During his NASA fellowship, Mr. Power worked on legislation affecting NASA and the aerospace industry. He worked hard to ensure that the NASA appropriations bill for fiscal year 2002 included legislative provisions that will support specific programs aimed at fostering the development of a robust U.S. space propulsion industry, which includes rocket engine testing at Stennis Space Center. Specifically, he helped ensure that NASA’s rocket engine test facilities are ready to provide continued support for testing under NASA’s Space Launch Initiative.

Mr. Power also worked to ensure that adherence to past legislative provisions affecting land remote sensing data buys are being met to continue the stimulation of a private sector remote sensing industry without competition from the U.S. Government.

Mr. Power graduated from the University of New Orleans, where he received a Bachelor of Science degree in Mechanical Engineering, prior to beginning his engineering career with the U.S. Navy in Annapolis, MD, as a civilian engineer working on submarine acoustics. He went on to an aerospace career as a contract engineer supporting Space Shuttle launches at NASA’s Kennedy Space Center in Florida and then joined NASA shortly after the Shuttle’s return to flight following the Challenger disaster.

As a project engineer with NASA, he supported various propulsion development programs at Stennis Space Center, including the Air Force’s New Launch System, NASA’s Advanced Solid Rocket Motor, the NASA/Air Force National Aerospace Plane, and the NASA X-33 Aerospike Engine. During this time he attended Florida Tech, where he received a Master of Science in Management degree and eventually transitioned to a job with more responsibilities as a NASA project manager for Boeing’s Evolved Expendable Launch Vehicle and NASA’s Rocket Based Combined Cycle test facility.

Mr. President, Mr. Power is married to the former Susan Foreman of Crowley, LA. They have two children, a 7-year-old son Brandon and a 5-year-old daughter. Additionally, they are expecting their third child next year in March. Mr. Power will return to NASA Stennis Space Center to continue his endeavors in the area of rocket propulsion testing. I will truly miss his experience and ability. Since he has proven to be one of the best in the business and I wish him all the very best as he helps NASA advance its efforts in the areas of space propulsion and remote sensing in the 21st century.

RECLASSIFICATION OF SCRANTON-WILKES BARRE-HAZLETON, WILLIMANTOWN, AND SHARON METROPOLITAN STATISTICAL AREAS
Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I wish to thank the senior Senator from Pennsylvania for working with me on this very important issue of Medicare provider payment policy, particularly in light of the unique financial pressures he has faced as the hospitals in Scranton-Wilkes Barre, Willimantown, and Sharon metropolitan statistical areas, MSAs, which emanate in part from some glaring disparities in Medicare’s payment formulas.

As I travel across the Commonwealth, many health care leaders have conveyed to me their continued concerns about the impact of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, BBA, on their health care delivery operations. Our Pennsylvania constituents, who represent rural, urban and community hospitals and systems, have shared with us detailed information about the financially strained health care delivery environment under the BBA.

We are all aware of the administrative and financial challenges that health care providers all across the country face, particularly in their service to our Nation’s elderly population. But the environment that hospitals in these three areas of Pennsylvania are seeking to deliver quality health care to their respective communities is even more challenging given that their MSAs contain areas or border areas from which higher compensated providers, with similar health care delivery costs, draw their patients, and more importantly, their workforce. Facilities located in these areas must compete for workers and patients against hospitals in neighboring MSAs with drastically higher wage indices, even when labor and health care delivery costs are virtually identical. This situation is simply not sustainable.

And these problems are only exacerbated by our Nation's ongoing nursing shortage, and the scarcity of other skilled care givers. Health care workforce shortages, particularly in the rural portions of the Commonwealth, and they have the effect of driving up the cost of health care and precipitating the need to increase wages. And although these hospitals have taken the step of increasing wages, further reductions in the wage index will make it impossible for the hospitals to retain or recruit all the caregivers that the communities require.

Other regions near the Scranton-Wilkes Barre-Hazleton MSA, including Northeastern Pennsylvania counties into the Newburgh, NY—Potsdam area, including parts of New York and Pennsylvania. These areas require reductions in the wage index will make it impossible for the hospitals to retain or recruit all the caregivers that the communities require.

Likewise in the Sharon MSA: All of the hospitals in the Sharon MSA compete with the Youngstown, OH, MSA for many of the same workers—pharmacists, technicians, and other allied health professionals. As Senator SPECTER had mentioned, Youngstown pays nurses $2 to $3 more per hour than hospitals in Sharon, yet those hospitals receive the lowest area wage index in Pennsylvania.

I have been working on this unique Medicare payment problem for more than 2 years now, seeking to enact at least a temporary reclassification of several Northeastern Pennsylvania counties into the Newburgh, NY—Pennsylvania MSA: Northumberland County into the Harrisburg-Lebanon-Carlisle MSA; and Mercer County into the Youngstown-Warren, OH, MSA. As Senator SPECTER had mentioned, there are other areas around the country where glitches such as these can be found. And what we seek to do with the submission of this legislative language is to put our colleagues on notice that we are determined to work on a bipartisan basis to bring much needed relief to our negatively affected hospitals, and to do the same for other areas around the country where these circumstances have caused similar problems and merit similar response.

I have spoken directly with Senate Finance Committee Ranking Member GRASSLEY about this very issue, and my strong desire to achieve a legislative fix as soon as possible. I am also a strong supporter of legislation to set the rural wage index nationally at a uniform and higher rate. However, whether or not Congress considers a national solution to this area of Medicare law is unclear, and our hospitals cannot afford to wait for a national solution that may be a year or two away.

In closing, I wish to relay to our colleagues that achieving this financial relief for these hospitals in Pennsylvania is of utmost importance to myself and Senator SPECTER. We are willing to work with our colleagues in any way in order to bring about stability in the funding of these community health care providers and to ensure that the people living in the Commonwealth have access to needed care.

HONORING MONTANANS FACING THE SEPTEMBER 11TH TRAGEDY

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, some time has passed since the tragic events that took place in New York, Washington, DC, and Pennsylvania. Nevertheless, I want to reflect upon the events of that day and draw attention to the tremendous good that has evolved in the face of evil. Since that time, it has become evident that the American public is the most patriotic and resilient group the world will ever know. Those who have gone through this tragedy, and to commend and honor those who have devoted their soul to working to restore tranquility and normalcy to the Nation. From firehouses to schoolhouses, from New York City to San Francisco, Americans have demonstrated their capacity for compassion.

During this trying time, I want both to express my heartfelt condolences to the families of those who lost their lives on Flight 93. I cannot begin to comfort them in their grief, but I must say that they have every reason to be extremely proud of the bravery shown by those on Flight 93. Their efforts are commended by all who stand here in Congress. As Americans, we all recognize, that we owe your family a debt that cannot be repaid.

Montanans have been deeply affected by this tragedy; they have contacted me with their grief, their hope for victory, and their desire to aid in the relief effort. Tragically, Adam Larson of Choteau, MT, was an employee of Aon Corp., located on what was the 103rd floor of the World Trade Center. In the midst of the attacks, he phoned his wife Patti and told her the building was being evacuated and he was on his way to safety. He was last seen by his co-workers following them down the stairs to exit the building, a building he never escaped. Adam Larson was 37 years old, and senior vice president for Aon. Many of the circuits in the development world, and even those in this country who are less-than-appreciative of the importance of international trade.

THE WTO MEETING IN QATAR, TAIWAN'S ACCESSION TO THE WTO, AND TRADE PROMOTION AUTHORITY

Mr. MURkowski. Mr. President, I rise to note that yesterday the WTO concluded its fourth ministerial meeting in Doha, Qatar.

Circumstances leading to this meeting were not auspicious. There is a war on, after all, and the Middle East is not the most comfortable place for the champions of globalization and progress.

With the global economic slowdown, protectionism is on the rise. Not exactly the best time to undertake talks to expand global trade.

Many of us remember that in 1999, the WTO met in Seattle in very difficult circumstances. The city was rocked by rioting, the participants failed to reach consensus, and the basic assumptions underlying international trade were left in tatters. In sharp contrast against some tough odds, the WTO ministerial meeting was a great success.

The WTO initiated a new Round of international trade negotiations, setting forth an ambitious agenda to overcome difficult objections from the EU, the developing world, and even those in this country who are less-than-appreciative of the importance of international trade.
I believe United States Trade Negotiator Robert Zoellick and his team deserves much of the credit for the success of Doha.

By skillfully engineering compromise where compromise did not appear possible, Ambassador Zoellick has helped to set the stage for important gains to come in international trade.

Thanks to Ambassador Zoellick and President Bush’s leadership on trade, the future for US agricultural exporters is brighter, prospects for improvement in currency undervalues are better, and the commitment of all nations to help end the scourge of HIV/AIDS and other is more secure. The liberalization of international trade is back on track.

He and his staff were also instrumental in achieving the accessions of China and Taiwan at the Doha Ministerial Meeting. I also want to highlight two important other achievements of the Doha Ministerial.

First, China acceded to the WTO. This culminates the more than 20 years of economic reform in that country, and, I think, places China squarely on the path toward greater political reform. We should congratulate Ambassador Zoellick for his leadership on that score.

Finally, I want to say a special word of congratulation to the people of Taiwan for achieving WTO accession at Doha. Taiwan’s membership in international organizations such as the WTO is an important recognition of her current and future contributions.

Taiwan is a critical member of the international community. The WTO, and other global institutions, are better off for Taiwan’s membership.

Ambassador Zoellick and Assistant USTR Jeff Bader deserve special recognition for ensuring Taiwan’s entry into the WTO over the potential objections of the other newest member of that organization.

This was a good week for international trade. I hope that the United States Congress will follow up on the successes of this week and provide the President with the authority he needs to negotiate new trade agreements.

We need to capitalize on the gains made at Doha, and Trade Promotion Authority for the President is the critical tool he needs to do just that.

I am hopeful that the House will act on a bill to provide the President TPA this session, and that the Finance Committee will have the opportunity to mark-up that bill for a vote on the floor before we leave for the holidays.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crime legislation 1 introduced with Senator Kennedy, in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred Aug. 24, 1997 in Leesburg, FL. A man allegedly punched a woman in the face because of her sexual orientation. The assailant, Kevin Earl Bilbrey, was armed with aggravated battery and a hate crime.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against, the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Violence Act of 2001 would allow local authorities that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

DIGNA OCHOA

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to express the deep sadness and anger that I and many of my Vermont constituents feel about the senseless, cold-blooded murder of Mexico’s most respected and courageous human rights lawyers, Digna Ochoa y Placido.

On October 20, 2001, Ms. Ochoa was shot at near point blank range in her office. At her side was a note that threatened her and activists who have defended environmentalists, labor leaders, or other unjustly imprisoned or tortured by the Mexican army and police. A former nun, Ms. Ochoa was a role model for all human rights defenders, because of her extraordinary dedication, and commitment to some of the most disadvantaged members of Mexican society.

Ms. Ochoa frequently put the people she represented ahead of her own personal safety, and was an easy target for those who represent the worst of society, who would threaten or kill the downtrodden to protect their own crimes. She had received many death threats, and in 1999 she was kidnapped twice. During these abductions, her kidnappers tied her to a chair, opened a gas canister, and left her to die as the fumes slowly filled the room—from which she narrowly escaped.

Digna Ochoa’s death is a tragedy for all Mexicans. But it is particularly outrageous because it could have been avoided. Although it was widely known that threats and acts of violence were being carried out against her and other human rights defenders, Mexican officials failed to investigate or prosecute those crimes.

It would be hard to overstate the optimism I felt when Vicente Fox was elected Mexico’s President after 70 years of miserable by the PRI. This election meant that Mexico could begin to overcome years of official corruption, police brutality, injustice and poverty suffered by the fast majority of Mexican society.

When President Fox took office, he promised to end the long history of abuses by the Mexican army and police. No one expected miracles. No one expected him to transform those secretive, corrupt and brutal institutions overnight. But it is the Government’s first duty to protect its citizens, and people did expect him to make justice a priority, get rid of the old guard, and demand accountability.

The past has not happened, at least not yet, and Digna Ochoa’s death has, tragically, focused attention again on this festering problem. There are undoubtedly many others who have suffered similar fates—faceless Mexican who have not been widely known to have been threatened or murdered, or who languish in prison without access to justice.

To his credit, on November 9 President Fox ordered the release from prison of two ecologists, represented by Ms. Ochoa in the past, who never should have been imprisoned in the first place. For possessing the courage to try to stop the destruction of forests where they lived, they were arrested and allegedly tortured.

The destruction of tropical forests is an urgent problem from Indonesia to Latin America, as logging companies compete for profits until the forests are completely destroyed. Often, the ecologists who are directly involved in these destructive, yet lucrative, schemes, and who do not hesitate to kill or frame those who get in their way because they have known only impunity.

In addition to releasing these two men, the Mexican Government has done little to respond to Ms. Ochoa’s death. A truth commission to examine past human rights abuses has not been established. That is presumably because it requires challenging some of the most entrenched, powerful, and dangerous forces within Mexican society. Nevertheless, President Fox made this promise, and that is what is urgently needed.

Another troubling case is the imprisonment of Brigadier General Jose Francisco Gallardo, who was convicted of corruption based on evidence that is, at best, inconclusive. Many observers feel that the main reason he is in prison and the Mexican government continues to oppose his release is because he spoke out about abuses in the military. President Fox must deal with this case immediately.

I am convinced that President Fox is the right leader for Mexico at this critical time, and I have confidence in him and his advisors. I do not minimize the herculean tasks they face—political, economic and social reform on a national scale. But there is no way democracy can succeed in Mexico without the rule of law. And there is no better place to start than by tracking down Digna Ochoa’s killers, and bringing them to justice for all to see.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a piece written by Digna Ochoa, about her life, which was included in Kerry Kennedy Cuomo’s extraordinary book “Speak Truth To Power,” be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

DIGNA OCHOA

I am a nun, who started life as a lawyer. I sought a religious community with a social commitment, protection of human rights is one of the things that my particular community focuses on. They have permitted me to work with an organization that fights for human rights. Centro Pro is a human rights organization promoting me economically, morally, and spiritually. This has been a process of building a life project, from a social commitment to a spiritual one.

My father was a union leader in Veracruz, Mexico. In the sugar factory where he worked, he was involved in the struggles for potable water, better work conditions, and securing certificates. I studied law because I was always hearing that my father and his friends needed more lawyers. And all the lawyers charged so much. My father was unjustly jailed for one year and fifteen days. He was then disappeared and tortured—the charges against him were fabricated. This led to my determination to do something for those suffering injustice, because I saw it in the flesh with my father.

When I first studied law, I intended to begin practicing in the attorney general’s office, then become a judge, then a magistrate. I thought someone from those positions could, if my path were to open up, hire me. I became a prosecutor. I remember a very clear issue of injustice. My boss, who was responsible for all of the prosecutions within the attorney general’s office, wanted me to charge someone whom I knew to be innocent. There was no evidence, but my boss tried to make me prosecute him. I refused, and he proceeded himself.

Up until that time, I was doing well. The job was considered a good one, because it was in a coffee-producing area and the people there had lots of money. But I realized that I was doing the same thing that everyone did, serving a system that I myself criticized and against which I had wanted to fight. I decided to quit and with several other lawyers opened an office. I had no litigation experience whatsoever. But I was energized by leaving the attorney general’s office and being on the other side, the side of the defense.

The first case I worked on was against judicial police. I had been accused in the illegal detention and torture of several peasants. We wanted to feel like lawyers, so we threw ourselves into it. Our mistake was to take on the case without any institutional support. I had managed to obtain substantial evidence against the police, so they started to harass me increasingly, until I was threatened. They sent telegraphic messages telling me to drop the case. Then by mail came threats that if I didn’t drop it I would die, or members of my family would be killed. Centro Pro then went public with what I had discovered and my life was threatened. My first reaction was to feel cold. I went to the kitchen with a faxed copy of the threat and said to one of the sisters in the congregation, “Luz, we’ve received a death threat and they said it was because of me.”

And Luz responded, “Digna, this is not a death threat. This is a threat of resurrections.” She was right—after I read the threats, I felt a sense of protection. Later that day another of my lawyer colleagues, Pilar, called me to ask what security measures I was taking. She was—rightfully—worried. She knew my life was threatened. Luz was quoting me. She didn’t really know karate, but they definitely thought I was going to attack. Trembling inside, I said sternly that if they laid a hand on me, I would call my siblings, and seeing that they drew back, saying, “You’re threatening us.” And I replied, “Take it any way you want.”

By 1995. Once again it was me who was being threatened. My first reaction was to feel cold. Shivers. I went to the kitchen with a faxed copy of the threat and said to one of the sisters in the congregation, “Luz, we’ve received a death threat.” She was right—after I read the threats, I felt a sense of protection. After some discussion, I left, surrounded by fifteen police officers. Meanwhile I had managed to record some interesting conversations. They referred to "the guy who was in jail a term that was very important. I took the tape out and hid the cassette where I could. The police called for hospital security to come, using the argument that I needed to be permitted to have the tape and the recorders inside the hospital. I handed over the recorder. Then they let me go. I was afraid that they would kidnap me outside the hospital. I took several taxis, getting out, changing, taking another, because I didn't know if they were following me. If I went to Centro Pro, I would inhale. I could share all of my fear. If the police knew that I was terrified when they were surrounding me, they would have been doing something against me.

Sometimes, without planning and without being conscious of it, there is a kind of group therapy among the colleagues at Centro Pro. We show what we really feel, our fear. We cry. There's a group of us who have suffered physically. On the other hand, my religious community has helped me manage my fear. At times of great danger, group prayer and community has helped me manage my fear.

The REAL NEW WORLD ORDER

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today to commend Charles Krauthammer for his fine article in the November 12 issue of The Weekly Standard, titled "The Real New World Order." Not only does Mr. Krauthammer's article present the flawed assumptions and philosophical underpinnings of the foreign policies of the Clinton administration—particularly his denunciation of that administration's fealty to the notion of an overriding international order defined by treaties and designed to insulate the world from the burden of American hegemony—but also the demands placed upon the administration of George W. Bush in the wake of the events of September 11. It is a compelling piece, and deserves notice.

Krauthammer's article was written prior to the dramatic events of the past week in Afghanistan. That some of his analysis is out of date in light of the battlefield successes of the so-called Northern Alliance does not, however, detract from the validity of the main thesis which is a typically articulate and knowledgeable style. Krauthammer argues that the United States, as a result of the terrorist attacks that killed thousands of Americans, is confronted with an epochal opportunity that, if seized, will facilitate one of the most far-reaching transformations in the history of international relations. Rather than facing the rising tide of anti-Americanism postulated to be the natural result of the United States' unique status as the world's only superpower, the United States has actually aligned itself with U.S. interests in the face of an elusive enemy brandishing an apocalyptic view of the current global structure, radical Islamic fundamentalism.

The developments of the past several days have caught many of us off guard. Little that was known about the Taliban indicated that it would counter the United States' unique status as the world's only superpower, the United States has actually aligned itself with U.S. interests in the face of an elusive enemy brandishing an apocalyptic view of the current global structure, radical Islamic fundamentalism.

The momentous reaction of the world's major regional powers, as well as of governments throughout the Middle East, to the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon will prove ephemeral should the United States fail to wage this war, and to define its parameters, with the determination and clarity evident in the President's splendid address to the nation before the joint session of Congress.

I commend Charles Krauthammer for this thoughtful and compelling article, and highly recommend it to my colleagues in the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Krauthammer article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

From The Weekly Standard, Nov. 12, 2001
I. The Anti-Hegemonic Alliance

On September 11, our holiday from history came to an abrupt end. Not just in the trivial sense that the United States finally learned the meaning of physical vulnerability. And not just in the sense that our illusions about the permanence of the post-Cold War peace were shattered.

We were living an even greater anomaly. With the collapse of the Soviet Union in the early 1990s, and the emergence of the United States as the undisputed world hegemon, the inevitable did not happen. Throughout the three and a half centuries of the modern state system, whenever a hegemonic power has emerged, a coalition of weaker powers has inevitably arisen to counter it. When Napoleon France reached for empire in the 19th century, Russia, Prussia, Austria, and Germany emerged to stop it. Similarly during Germany's two great reaches for empire in the 20th century. It is an iron law: Hegemonic power, once it has emerged, is confronted with an epochal opportunity that, if seized, will facilitate one of the most far-reaching transformations in the history of international relations. Rather than facing the rising tide of anti-Americanism postulated to be the natural result of the United States' unique status as the world's only superpower, the United States has actually aligned itself with U.S. interests in the face of an elusive enemy brandishing an apocalyptic view of the current global structure, radical Islamic fundamentalism.

The expected anti-American Great Power coalition never materialized. Russia and China flirted with the idea repeatedly, but never consummated the deal. Their summits would issue communiques denouncing hegemony, unipolarity, and other euphemisms for American dominance. But they were unlikely allies from the start. Each had more to gain from its relations with the United States than from the other. It was particularly hard to see why Russia would risk building up a more populous and prosperous next-door with regional hegemonies that would ultimately threaten Russia itself.

The other candidate for anti-hegemonic opposition was a truncated Russia picking up pieces of the far-flung former Soviet empire. There were occasional feints in that direction, with trips by Russian leaders to former allies like Cuba, Iraq, even North Korea. But for the Russians this was even more a losing proposition than during their first go-round in the Cold War when both the Soviet Union and the United States had more to offer each other than they do today.

With no countervailing coalition emerging, American hegemony had no serious challenger for over a decade, beginning with the dissolution of the Soviet Union in December 1991. It is now over. The challenge, long-awaited, finally de- clared open on September 11. The invasion of Afghanistan has not yet achieved, however, remains. The momentous reaction of the world's major regional powers, as well as of governments throughout the Middle East, to the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon will prove ephemeral should the United States fail to wage this war, and to define its parameters, with the determination and clarity evident in the President's splendid address to the nation before the joint session of Congress.
terrorists around the world lack an address. And a fixed address—the locus of any retaliation—is necessary for effective deterrence. Moreover, with the covert support of some rogue states, terrorist networks demand unconventional weapons and unconventional tactics, and is fueled by a radicalism and a suicidal fanaticism that one does not normally associate with adversary states.

This radicalism and fanaticism anchored in religious ideology only increased our shock and disorientation. We found ourselves being held up to make a kind of universal enforcement bureaucracy going around the world checking biolabs, which would have zero effect on the bad guys.

This decade-long folly—a foreign policy of norms rather than of national interest—is over. The exclamation mark came with our attempt to convince Pakistan and India to shore up relations for the fight with Afghanistan. Those relations needed shoring up because of U.S. treatment of India. India was conducting nuclear tests. Because they had violated the universal nonproliferation norm, the United States automatically imposed sanctions, blocking international lending and aid, and banning military sales. The potential warming of relations with India after the death of its Cold War Soviet alliance was put on hold. And traditionally strong U.S.-Pakistani relations were cooled as a show of displeasure. After September 11, reality once again set in, and such refined nonsense was instantly put aside.

This foreign policy of norms turned out to be not just useless but profoundly damaging. During the eight Clinton years, the United States was writing paper, the enemy was planning and arming, burrowing deep into America, preparing for war.

When war broke out, eyes opened. You no longer hear that the real issue for American foreign policy is global warming, the internal combustion engine, drug traffic, AIDs, or any of the other transnational trends of the ‘90s. On September 11, American foreign policy acquired seriousness. It also acquired a new organizing principle. We have an enemy, radical Islam; it is a global opponent of worldwide reach, armed with an idea, and with the tactics, weapons, and ruthlessness necessary to take on the world’s hegemon; and its defeat is our supreme national objective, as overt as they were the defeats of fascism and Soviet communism.

That organizing principle was enunciated by President Bush in his historic address to Congress. From that day forth, American foreign policy would define itself—and define itself as opposed to us or against us in the war on terrorism. This is the self-proclaimed Bush doctrine—the Truman doctrine with radical Islam replacing Soviet communism. The Bush doctrine marks the restoration of the intellectual and conceptual simplicity that many, including our last president, wishfully (and hypocritically) said they missed about the Cold War. Henry Kissinger’s latest book, brilliant though it is, published shortly before September 11, is unfortunately titled Does America Need a New Foreign Policy? Not only do we know that it does. We know what it is.

III. The New World Order

The post-September 11 realignments in the international system have been swift and tectonic. The Powers that had confusedly fumbled their way through the period of unchallenged American hegemony in the 1990s began to move toward one of the great revolutions in the post-Cold War, and over time relations with the United States might have come to full flower. None-theless, September 11 made the transition instantaneous. India, Pakistan-related terrorism in Kashmir, immediately invited the United States to not just its airspace but its military bases for the campaign. Afghanistan, which had ended in a flash. Nonalignment was dead. India had openly declared itself ready to join Pax Americana.

The transformation of Russian foreign policy has been more subtle but, in the long run, perhaps even more far-reaching. It was symbolized by the announcement on October 31, 2001, that after 37 years during its massive listening post at Lourdes, Cuba. Lourdes was one of the last remaining symbols both of Soviet global ambitions and of reflexive anti-Americanism.

Now, leaving Lourdes is no miracle. It would likely have happened anyway. It is a natural combustion engine, drug traffic, AIDs, or any of the other transnational trends of the ‘90s. On September 11, American foreign policy acquired seriousness. It also acquired a new organizing principle. We have an enemy, radical Islam; it is a global opponent of worldwide reach, armed with an idea, and with the tactics, weapons, and ruthlessness necessary to take on the world’s hegemon; and its defeat is our supreme national objective, as overt as they were the defeats of fascism and Soviet communism.

The transformation of Russian foreign policy has been more subtle but, in the long run, perhaps even more far-reaching. It was symbolized by the announcement on October 31, 2001, that after 37 years during its massive listening post at Lourdes, Cuba. Lourdes was one of the last remaining symbols both of Soviet global ambitions and of reflexive anti-Americanism.

Now, leaving Lourdes is no miracle. It would likely have happened anyway. It is a natural ...flying deterrent effect of American power, will be fatally threatened.

Which is why so much hinges on the success of the war on terrorism. Initially, success might be measured by one expects a quick victory over an entrenched and shadowy worldwide network. Success does, however, mean that the United States has the will and power to enforce the Bush doctrine that governments will be held accountable for the terrorists they harbor. There is no example of the Taliban. Getting Osama is not the immediate goal. Everyone understands that it is hard, even for a superpower, to give the enemy what it wants. Toppling regimes is another matter. For the Taliban to hold off the United States is an astounding triumph. Every day that they remain in place is a rebuke to American power. Indeed, as the war drags on, their renown, particularly in the Islamic world, will only grow.

After September 11, the world awaited the show of American might. If that show fails, then the list of countries lining up on the other side of the new divide will grow. This is particularly true of the Arab world with its small, fragile states. Weaker states invariably seek to join coalitions of the strong. For obvious reasons of safety, they go with those who are aboard the International coalition (Great Powers, on the other hand, tend to support regimes of the weak as a way to create equilibrium. Thus Britain was forever balancing in support of the regime of Saddam Hussein). Jordan is the classic example. Whenever there is a conflict, it tries to decide who is going to win, and joins that side. In the Gulf War, it first decided wrong, then switched to rejion the American side. That was not out of affection for Washington. It was simply realpolitik. The impending pro-American Gulf War coalition managed to include such traditional American adversaries as Syria because an accurate Syrian calculation of who could overawe the region.

The Arab states played both sides against the middle during the Cold War, often abruptly changing sides (e.g., Egypt during the 60s and 70s). They lined up with the United States against Iraq at the peak of American unipolarity in the 1990s. But with subsequent American weakness and irresolution, in the face both of post-Gulf War Iraqi defiance and of repeated terrorist attacks on the most feckless American military responses, respect for American power declined. Inevitably, the pro-American coalition fell apart. The current pro-American coalition will fall apart even more quickly if the Taliban prove a match for the United States. Contrary to the current delusion that the Islamic states will respond to American demonstrations of solicitude and sensitivity (such as a halt in the fighting during Ramadan), they are waiting to see the success of America's own postcommitting themselves. The future of Islamic and Arab allegiance will depend on whether the Taliban are brought to grief.

The assumption after September 11 was that an aroused America will win. If we demonstrate that we cannot win, no coalition with moderate Arab will long survive. But much more depends on our success than just the allegiance of that last piece of the geopolitical puzzle, the Islamic world. The entire new world alignment is at stake.

States line up with more powerful states not out of love but out of fear. And respect. The fear of radical Islam has created a new, almost visceral interest among the Great Powers. But that coalition of fear is held together also by respect for American power and its ability to provide safety under the American umbrella. Should we succeed in the war on terrorism, first in Afghanistan, we will be cementing the New World Order—the expansion of the American sphere of influence to include Russia and India (with a more neutral China)—just now beginning to take shape. Should we fail, it will be so monumental that other countries—and not just our new allies but even our old allies in Europe—will seek their separate peace. If the guarantor of world peace for the last half century cannot succeed in a war of self-defense against Afghanistan!, then the whole post-world War II structure—open borders, open trade, open seas, open societies—will be in jeopardy.

The first President Bush sought to establish a New World Order. He failed, in fact because he allowed himself to lose a war he had just won. The second President Bush never sought a New World Order. It was handed to him on Sept. 11. To maintain it, however, he has a war to win.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

GIVE IT UP FOR BUCK O'NEIL

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, today I rise to honor a true hero on the occasion of his 90th birthday. John Jordan O’Neil was born on November 15, 1912, in Carrabelle, FL. Over the years he has been given many nicknames including Jay, Foots, Country, Cap, even Nancy and Old Relic, but the one that endures is Buck.

As a teenager, he worked in the Sarasota celery fields. The job was miserable, tolling in the oven-hot dirt and muck. He knew there had to be something better, and fortunately for us, he was right. Buck O’Neill loves baseball. It’s that simple. In his own words he describes what a wonderful thing baseball is. “There is nothing greater for a human being than to get his body to react to all the things one does on a ballfield... It’s as good as music. It fills you up.”

Buck, by studying the history of baseball one discovers a great deal about the sport’s hidden history. Biographer Ken Burns said, “By lifting the rug of our past, we find not only the sins we hoped we had concealed beneath it, but also new and powerful heroes who thrived in the darkness and can teach us much about how to live in the light.”

Living through the bitter experiences that our country reserved to men of his color, Buck reflected on coalitions, out of despair and suffering. He knows he can go farther with generosity and kindless than with anger and hate. He knows what human progress is all about.

When asked to tell of his journey from the Negro Leagues to the Majors, Buck’s eyes light up. Though he has been telling the story for the past fifty years, he never tires of recounting the playing days and the men who lived it—men like Satchel Paige, Josh Gibson, Cool Papa Bell. Like many a good story and storyteller, it’s interesting to see how much they’ve improved over the years.

THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S11938
When others would have preferred to live in a more enlightened time, Buck has no regrets. “Waste no tears on me,” he says. “I didn’t come along too early. I was right on time.” What a lesson we can learn from this great hero. “Give it up,” Buck’s way. “Don’t be so formal. Don’t hide behind polite conversations. Don’t be afraid to show someone some love. Show what’s in your heart, always; don’t keep it inside. On this special occasion I urge us all to “Give it up.”

The following executive report of a committee was reported on November 15, 2001:

By Mr. BIDEN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations:

TREATY DOC. 106–41 PROTOCOL RELATING TO THE MADRID AGREEMENT (EXEC. REPT. 107–1)

TEXT OF THE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDED RESOLUTION OF ADVICE AND CONSENT Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein).

SECTION 1. ADVICE AND CONSENT TO ACCESSION TO THE MADRID PROTOCOL, SUBJECT TO AN UNDERSTANDING, DECLARATIONS AND RESERVATIONS.

The Senate advises and consents to the accession by the United States to the Protocol Relating to the Madrid Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Marks, adopted at Madrid on June 27, 1989, entered into force on December 1, 1995 (Treaty Doc. 106–41; in this resolution referred to as the “Protocol”), subject to the understanding in section 2, the declarations in section 3, and the conditions in section 4.

SEC. 2. UNDERSTANDING.

The advice and consent of the Senate under section 1 is subject to the following declarations:

(1) The Protocol is not SELF-EXECUTING.—The United States declares that the Protocol is not self-executing.

(2) TIME LIMIT FOR REFUSAL NOTIFICATION.—Pursuant to Article 3(2) of the Protocol, the United States declares that, for international registrations made under the Protocol, the time limit referred to in subparagraph (a) of Article 5(3) is replaced by 18 months. The declaration in this paragraph shall be included in the United States instrument of accession.

(3) NOTIFYING THE CONCURRENCY OF PROTECTION.—Pursuant to Article 5(2)(c) of the Protocol, the United States declares that, when a refusal of protection may result from an opposition to the granting of protection, such refusal may be notified to the International Bureau after the expiry of the 18-month time limit. The declaration in this paragraph shall be included in the United States instrument of accession.

(4) FEES.—Pursuant to Article 8(7)(a) of the Protocol, the United States declares that, in connection with each international registration in which it is mentioned under Article 3 of the Protocol, and in connection with each renewal of any such international registration, the United States chooses to receive, instead of a share in revenue produced by the supplementary and complementary fees, an individual fee the amount of which shall be the current application or renewal fee charged by the United States Patent and Trademark Office to a domestic applicant or registere of such a mark. The declaration in this paragraph shall be included in the United States instrument of accession.

SEC. 4. CONDITIONS.

The advice and consent of the Senate under section 1 is subject to the following conditions:

(1) TREATY INTERPRETATION.—The Senate reaffirms condition (8) of the resolution of ratification of the Document Agreed Among the States Parties to the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE) of November 1990 at Vienna on July 31, 1996; approved by the Senate on May 14, 1997 (relating to condition (1) of the resolution of ratification of the INF Treaty, approved by the Senate on May 27, 1988).

(2) NOTIFICATION OF THE SENATE OF CERTAIN EUROPEAN COMMUNITY VOTERS.—The President shall notify the Senate not later than 15 days after any non-consensus vote of the European Community, its member states, and the United States within the Assembly of the Madrid Union in which the total number of votes cast by the European Community and its member states exceeded the number of member states of the European Community.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire:

S. 1705. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for the establishment of a homeland security academic centers for public health preparedness network; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Mr. HARKIN:

S. 1706. A bill to provide for the enhanced control of biological agents and toxins; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Mr. JEFFFORDS (for himself, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. KYL, Mr. KERRY, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. FRIST, Mr. WARNER, Mr. HELMS, Mr. HARKIN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. SHELBY, Ms. SNOWE, and Mrs. MURRAY):

S. 1707. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to specify the update for payments under the Medicare payment schedule for 2002 and to direct the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission to conduct a study on replacing the use of the sustainable growth rate as a factor in determining such update in subsequent years; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. MCCONNELL (for himself and Mrs. LANDRETH):

S. 1708. A bill to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to ensure the continuity of medical care following a major disaster by making private for-profit medical facilities eligible for Federal disaster assistance; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire:

S. 1710. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide that tips received for certain services shall not be subject to income or employment taxes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. CAMPBELL:

S. 1711. A bill to designate the James Peak Wild and Scenic River Area in the State of Colorado, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. NASSSLEY (for himself, Mr. KOHL, Mr. HATCH, Mr. CARPER, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. SPECTER):

S. 1712. A bill to amend the procedures that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. MCCONNELL:

S. 1714. A bill to provide for the installation of a plaque to honor Dr. James Harvey Early in the Williamsburg, Kentucky Post Office Building; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. BOND, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. BAYH, Mr. COLLINS, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. DEWINE, Mrs. CARNAHAN, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Mrs. CLINTON, Mrs. HUTCHINSON, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. ROBOTS, Mr. DODD, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. WARNER, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. RIEDE, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANBORN, and Mr. TORRICELLI):

S. 1715. A bill to improve the ability of the United States to prepare for and respond to a biological threat or attack; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. HOLLINGS, Ms. ISOUYE, and Mr. ARNYA):

S. 1716. A bill to speed national action to address global climate change, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. LOTTO):

By Mr. SCHUMER (for himself and Mrs. CLINTON):

S. Res. 84. A concurrent resolution providing for a joint session of Congress to meet in New York City; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 900

At the request of Mr. ENZI, the name of the Senator from Nevada (Mr. ENZI) was added as a cosponsor of S. 900, a bill to provide for protection of gun owner privacy and ownership rights, and for other purposes.

S. 990

At the request of Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, the name of the Senator from Montana (Mr. Baucus) was added as a cosponsor of S. 990, a bill to amend the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act to improve the provisions relating to wildlife conservation and restoration programs, and for other purposes.

S. 1022

At the request of Mr. WARNER, the name of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Torricelli) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1022, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow Federal civilian and military retirees to pay health insurance premiums on a pre-tax basis and to allow a deduction for TRICARE supplemental premiums.

S. 1149

At the request of Mr. HATCH, the name of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Bond) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1140, a bill to amend chapter 1 of title 9, United States Code, to provide for greater fairness in the arbitration process relating to motor vehicle franchise contracts.

S. 1163

At the request of Mr. CORZINE, the name of the Senator from Nevada (Mr. Ensign) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1163, a bill to increase the mortgage loan limits under the National Housing Act for multifamily housing mortgage insurance.

S. 1298

At the request of Ms. MIKULSKI, her name was added as a cosponsor of S. 1248, a bill to establish a National Housing Trust Fund in the Treasury of the United States to provide for the development of decent, safe, and affordable, housing for low-income families, and for other purposes.

S. 1323

At the request of Mr. LIEBERMAN, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. Boxer) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1324, a bill to provide relief from the alternative minimum tax with respect to incentive stock options exercised during 2000.

S. 1349

At the request of Mr. SPECTER, the names of the Senator from Delaware (Mr. CARPER), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. ENZI), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. HUTCHINSON), the Senator from Arkansas (Mrs. LINCOLN), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. McCONNELL), the Senator from Kansas (Mr. Roberts), the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SANTORUM), and the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. THOMPSON) were added as cosponsors of S. 1343, a bill to authorize the President to award posthumously the Congressional Gold Medal to the passengers and crew of United Airlines flight 93 in the aftermath of the terrorist attack on the United States on September 11, 2001.
At the request of Mr. Rockefeller, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kerry) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1503, a bill to extend the Foster Care Independence Act of 1997 to provide for educational and training vouchers for youths aging out of foster care, and for other purposes.

S. 1562
At the request of Mr. Santorum, the name of the Senator from Utah (Mr. Hatch) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1562, a bill to amend title 39, United States Code, with respect to cooperative mailings.

S. 1571
At the request of Mr. Lugar, the names of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Torricelli) and the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Bingaman) were added as cosponsors of S. 1571, a bill to provide for the continuation of agricultural programs through fiscal year 2006.

S. 1593
At the request of Mr. Jeffords, the name of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Bingaman) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1593, a bill to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to establish a grant program to support research projects on critical infrastructure protection for water supply systems, and for other purposes.

S. 1643
At the request of Mrs. Muray, the name of the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Specter) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1593, a bill to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to establish a grant program to support research projects on critical infrastructure protection for water supply systems, and for other purposes.

S. 1646
At the request of Mr. Bingaman, the name of the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Inouye) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1646, a bill to identify certain parts of the Ports-to-Plains Corridor, a part of the Ports-to-Plains Corridor, and this bill to provide federal reimbursement to State and local governments for a limited sales, use and retailers’ occupation tax holiday.

S. 1648
At the request of Mr. Bingaman, the name of the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Inouye) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1648, a bill to identify certain parts of the Ports-to-Plains Corridor, a high priority corridor on the National Highway System.

S. CON. RES. 41
At the request of Mr. Stevens, the name of the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Inouye) was added as a cosponsor of S. Con. Res. 41, a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress regarding National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS
By Mr. Bond:

S. 1705. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for the establishment of a homeland security academic centers for public health preparedness network; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. Bond. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill I call the "The Homefront Medical Preparedness Act."

In the past century we have witnessed unprecedented advances in science, technology and medicine and have seen limitless potential to improve the human condition, cure disease, and advance human health in ways that were once unimaginable. Yet, at the same time we have seen some of these very advances have spawned new threats, threats that were simply inconceivable 100 years ago. The recent outbreaks of anthrax in Florida, New York City, and Washington, DC, coupled with the terrorist attack of September 11 have brought to light the compelling need to properly prepare our communities for the threat of bioterrorist attacks.

A strong public-health infrastructure is the best defense against any bioterrorism attack. As a Nation we remain highly vulnerable, not because we are unprepared, but because we are under-prepared. The Department of Health and Human Services has made tremendous advances over the past few years. However, while significant progress has been made, there are still large gaps in our current approach. Our goal must be to eliminate these gaps and reduce the risk to our Nation and our communities. As a nation, we must prepare our communities, and improve our capacity to respond. Central to an effective response to a bioterrorist attack are detection, treatment and containment of a disease epidemic and our Nation’s public-health system is on the front line of this effort.

The Nation’s public health system is a complex network of people, systems, and organizations working at the local, State and national levels. The Nation is served by more than 3,000 county and city health departments, more than 3,000 local boards of health, 59 State and territorial-health departments, tribal-health departments more than 160,000 public and private laboratories. Current estimates suggest that the public sector concludes that 500,000 professionals employed at the local, State and national levels. According to the Health Resource and Services Administration in 1989 only 44 percent of these 500,000 workers had formal, on-the-job training in public health and those with graduate public health degrees were an even smaller fraction. As of 1997, 78 percent of local health departments executives did not have graduate degrees in public health. Changes on the public health system have brought the public-health department workforce and identified a need for additional training and education. Many public-health workers do not have the necessary skills and knowledge base to meet the needs of the emerging public-health system and public-health threats. These statistics highlight the critical need to provide these professionals with the most up-to-date training, technology, and tools necessary to meet the increasing demands and emerging needs.

An important first step has already been taken. The Centers for Disease Control has created Centers for Public Health Preparedness across the country. There are currently 14 total: 7 Academic Centers, 4 Specialty Centers, and 3 Local Exemplar Centers. The Academic Centers link schools of public health, State and local-health agencies and other academic and community health partners to foster individual preparedness on the front line. The Speciality Centers focus on a topic, professional discipline, core public-health competency, practice setting or application, the core of the AGIOL. And finally, the Local Exemplar Centers develop advanced applications at the community level in three areas of key importance to preparedness for bioterrorism and other urgent health threats: integrated communications and information systems across multiple sectors; advanced operational readiness assessment and comprehensive training and evaluation.

In Missouri we are fortunate to have not one, but two centers of excellence. The St. Louis University School of Public Health: an Academic Center the Heartland Center for Public Health Preparedness as well as a Specialty Center. The Center for the Study of Bioterrorism and Emerging Threats. The School of Public Health at St. Louis University has clearly been on the forefront of this issue. I was honored to have secured Federal appropriations dollars necessary for startup costs for the Center for the Study of Bioterrorism and Emerging Threats. The only sector with a primary focus on bioterrorism in the country. The center provides public-healthcare providers and healthcare facilities with the tools needed for preparedness, response, recovery, and mitigation of intentional or naturally occurring outbreaks. Under the leadership of Dr. Evans, the center has developed training curriculum that is being used nationwide to train healthcare providers and public-health department personnel. In fact, the Center’s training materials were used by the CDC to train emergency health personal, healthcare providers and other public-health workers in New York to respond to the September 11 attack.

But more can and must be done. Today I introduced legislation which will expand the national network of Centers of Public Health Preparedness by adding new centers across the country as well as funneling more valuable resources to existing centers to meet unique, but common needs in St. Louis. This bill will authorize $50 million and would instruct the Director of the Centers for Disease Control to establish a national network of Centers for Public Health Preparedness utilizing the existing Centers for Public Health Preparedness Program to train and to prepare the national public-health workforce, healthcare providers and the general public to respond to bioterrorist threats.

Each center, housed at an accredited school of public health will: 1. provide training and education to local and state health department staff, emergency first responders, and primary and acute-care providers on the best practices necessary to protect against, and respond to the array of potential threats facing the American public, including bioterrorism, infectious disease and weapons of mass destruction; 2. provide information to healthcare providers and other components of the healthcare industry to protect against and respond to the threat of bioterrorism, infectious disease and weapons of mass destruction; and 3. provide information on relevant bioterrorist threats to the public.

Under my legislation each center, both new and existing, will receive at least $1 million per year, but may receive additional sums per year if the CDC national resources are necessary to carry out regional or national training activities at a particular center.

I believe that our schools of public health across the country, working in conjunction with the CDC can provide training and education to local and state health department staff, emergency first responders, and primary and acute-care providers on the best practices necessary to protect against, identify and respond to the wide array of potential threats facing the American public, including bioterrorism, infectious disease and weapons of mass destruction. The capacity and competency of our healthcare workforce is a critical component of the basic public health infrastructure necessary to protect our communities. As with our military, our public-health system must be prepared at all times to ward off threats and respond to crises. Our national public-health infrastructure is the first and in some cases the only line of defense. Like our military, our public-health system must be at a constant state of readiness nationwide and this legislation will enable our public health system to better achieve this goal. If the public-health system is fully prepared then communities across the country will be better protected.

By Mr. HARKIN:

S. 1708. A bill to provide for the enhanced control of biological agents and toxins; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, in May 1995, Larry Wayne Harris of Ohio ordered three vials of the bacterium that causes plague, which he claimed to be from a company in Rockville, MD. At the time, all he needed was a credit card and letterhead. He invented both the letterhead and the lab he claimed to be from. In fact he was a member of a white supremacist group who would later tell of plans to kill hundreds of thousands of Americans with the plague. But when he was arrested with the vials, he was only charged with mail fraud, for misrepresenting himself. No Federal license, registration, or even notification was required to obtain, own, or work with the plague.

Partly as a result of this incident, Congress passed provisions in the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act to close the specific loophole. This bill required the Secretary of Health and Human Services to regulate transfer of a select list of biological agents. But it did not regulate possession or use of the agents. The subsequent regulations incorporated safety standards for labs receiving these agents, but set virtually no security standards to make sure these agents don’t end in the wrong hands. They did not require background checks, including all certified clinical laboratories. And they included little means of enforcement.

I think most Americans would be shocked to learn that we still have no idea how many anthrax, plague, or other biological agents are in their freezer. Labs have had to register only if they have sent or received one of the agents since 1996. We know the recent attacks with anthrax used the so-called ‘Ames’ strain, which was identified at Iowa State University some decades ago, but we don’t know how many labs in the United States have samples of this strain today. If we had that information before the next attack, especially if a less common agent or strain were used, it could be the starting point for the next investigation.

We can and we must do better. We have long had relatively tight controls on materials that can be used in nuclear weapons. We have license from the NRC or an agreement state to possess these nuclear materials. There are strict safety and security requirements on the licensees, and a small army of inspectors to make sure they comply. Licensees must report all shipments and receipts, and report any losses from their inventory of a gram or more of the most dangerous materials. Bioweapons have been called “the poor man’s nuclear bomb” because they could cause similar devastation, but are easier and cheaper to obtain. It’s time we place reasonable controls on biological agents too.

That is why I am introducing the Bioweapons Control and Tracking Act of 2001. This bill would for the first time impose five important controls on dangerous biological agents and toxins to reduce the risk of an accident or terrorist attack. First, the bill would direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to regulate the possession and transfer of the biological agents as well as their transfer.

Second, the regulations would require registration with the Department for possession, use, and transfer of select agents and toxins. The registration would include known characterization of the agents, such as the strains, in order to facilitate their traceability. The Department would be required to maintain a database of locations and characterizations of the agents using the registration information.

Third, the regulations would also have to include safeguards and security standards, as well as safety standards. Labs would be required to restrict access to the agents to people who need to handle them. And a process would be set up to screen people who do have access to the agents. Fourth, the bill requires that any exemptions from these regulations be consistent with public health and safety. Any exemptions from registration requirements would have to still allow a complete database of agents of concern, but exemptions could be allowed even for a lab that only temporarily possesses the agent or for samples that could not be useful for making a weapon. These exemptions are intended to avoid an unnecessary burden on thousands of clinical labs that require diagnostic samples for testing, and if the test is positive for a select agent, quickly pass the sample on to a government lab or destroy it.

Fifth, the bill includes strong enforcement measures. The bill specifically authorizes inspections to ensure compliance. To give teeth to the enforcement, it enacts a civil penalty for violating the regulations of up to $250,000 for an individual of $500,000 for a group. And it enacts a criminal penalty up to 5 years in prison for possession or transfer of select agents by someone who is not registered, and also for transfer to a person who is not registered.

In addition, the bill exempts information about specific labs from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act to prevent one-stop-shopping for information by would-be bioterrorists. It also makes biennial review of the list of biological agents and toxins of concern. And it codifies the law in Public Health Service Act, maintains current regulations until the Secretary issues new ones, and sets a deadline for the registration and associated penalties.

I have been working with several of my colleagues on a $1 billion package to strengthen our response to a possible bioterrorism attack, so that we can stop a terrible attack from becoming a national or world calamity. We need these funds to strengthen the public health infrastructure, monitor food safety, and build our capacity for vaccinations. But for just a few millions dollars we may be able to prevent an attack to stop bioterrorists before they even get hold of the necessary agents. We must not delay.

By Mr. MCCONNELL (for himself and Ms. LANDRIEU):

S. 1708. A bill to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to ensure the continuity of medical care following a major disaster by making private nonprofit medical facilities eligible for Federal disaster assistance, to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Parity in Emergency Preparedness and Response Act of 2001. The horrific attacks of September 11 and subsequent anthrax exposures have focused our attention on the need to prepare and respond to emergencies, whether they result from acts of nature or the misdeeds of man. The legislation I introduce today will correct a provision in current law that prevents many hospitals from working with the Federal Government to prevent and respond to disasters. When tragedy strikes, the most important consideration shouldn’t be a hospital’s tax status, but rather its ability to care for the injured.

In 1974, Congress enacted the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, commonly referred to as the Stafford Act. This important legislation helps States and communities plan for emergencies and take steps to minimize the damage inflicted by natural disasters. After a disaster strikes, the Stafford Act authorizes the President to provide communities the resources they need to respond quickly and recover completely. While the Stafford Act has helped countless communities respond to disasters, it has one glaring shortcoming: it prohibits the President and Federal Emergency Management Agency, FEMA, from offering assistance to hospitals that are owned or managed by private companies. As a result, there are 36 hospitals in my home State of Kentucky which are ineligible to receive Federal disaster mitigation and recovery funds.

I find it incomprehensible that the Federal Government would deny needed disaster assistance to a county hospital, simply because of its ownership, management structure, or tax status. Is a tornado any less devastating in one community than another, simply because of a local hospital’s tax status? Are they any less deserving of the Federal Government’s support? I think not.

What I find most troubling about this disparity is that it disproportionately affects rural communities. When a hospital is frequently owned by the community but operated by private companies. Many small towns and rural counties prefer this sort of relationship because it allows them to ensure their citizens have access to needed health care services, while relieving themselves of the burdens of operating a modern hospital. In the rural Kentucky communities of Caldwell, Cumber- land, Crittenden, Fleming, Marshall, Monroe, Robertson and Bell counties, the community owns the hospital but contracts with a private management firm to direct the hospital’s day to day operations. As a result of this relationship, these publicly owned hospitals are not eligible for Federal disaster mitigation or recovery assistance.

Hospitals are critical community resources which must be able to provide services in an emergency, regardless of their ownership or management structure. That is why I will introduce the Parity in Emergency Preparedness and Response Act with my colleague from Louisiana, Ms. LANDRIEU. This legislation would eliminate the disparity which exists between publicly owned and privately owned hospitals and allow all eligible hospitals to apply for disaster mitigation and recovery funds. Our bill does not create an entitlement for hospitals that are owned or operated by private companies. The Stafford Act is clear in stating the President “may make contributions” to help damaged hospitals respond to and recover from an emergency, and this legislation does nothing to diminish the President’s discretion in this regard.

Since September 11, 2001, the need to ensure that our Nation’s public health infrastructure is capable of responding to unanticipated emergencies has received renewed attention in Congress. In fact, the Senate will soon consider comprehensive legislation to address the growing threat of bioterrorism and protect the safety of our food supply. While I strongly support the intent of this legislation, it will be woefully incomplete if it does not allow all hospitals, including investor-owned hospitals, to apply for disaster assistance. Hospitals play a vital role in responding to emergencies, regardless of their ownership or management structure. I look forward to working with Ms. LANDRIEU and my colleagues in the Senate to pass this legislation and ensure that all of America’s hospitals are prepared to respond to disasters.

I ask unanimous consent that a list of hospitals which are public be eligible for disaster assistance under my legislation be printed in the RECORD, and I ask unanimous consent the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1708

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Parity in Emergency Preparedness and Response Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. ELIGIBILITY OF PRIVATE FOR-PROFIT MEDICAL FACILITIES FOR FEDERAL DISASTER ASSISTANCE.

(a) ELIGIBILITY OF PRIVATE FOR-PROFIT MEDICAL FACILITIES FOR ASSISTANCE AVAILABLE TO PRIVATE NONPROFIT FACILITIES.—Section 102(9) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122(9)) is amended—

(1) by striking “and facilities” and inserting “facilities”; and

(2) by inserting before the period at the end the following: “including hospitals and long-term care facilities”.

(b) CLARIFICATION OF ELIGIBILITY OF MEDICAL FACILITIES FOR EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS ASSISTANCE.—

(1) DEFINITION OF EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS ASSISTANCE.—Section 902(a)(1) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5196(a)(1)(A)) is amended by inserting “and public non-profit facilities” before “(including hospitals and long-term care facilities)”.

(2) FUNCTIONS OF FEMA.—Section 611(j)(1) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) is amended by adding at the end the following: “including the preparation of private nonprofit and for-profit medical facilities (including hospitals and long-term care facilities) to withstand major disasters”.

(c) DEFINITION OF LONG-TERM CARE FACILITY.—Section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(10) LONG-TERM CARE FACILITY.—Long-term care facility’’ means—

“(A) any skilled nursing facility (as defined in section 1319(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1319(a))); and “(B) any other long-term care facility, such as an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded.”.

ELIGIBLE HOSPITALS Bluegrass Community Hospital, Versailles, KY; Bourbon Community Hospital, Paris, KY; FHC Cumberland Regional Medical Center, Hopkinsville, KY; Kentucky Children’s Hospital, Louisville, KY; Kentucky Children’s Hospital, Somerset, KY; Lincoln Trail Behavioral Health System, Radcliff, KY; Logan Memorial Hospital, Russellville, KY; Mayfield Regional Hospital, Mayfield, KY; MidCity Rehab-Bowling Green, Bowling Green, KY; Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center, Paintsville, KY; Ridge Behavioral Health System, Lexington, KY; Rivendell Behavioral Health Services, Bowling Green, KY; Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, KY; Ten Broeck Hospital, Louisville, KY; Ten Broeck Hospital DuPont, Louisville, KY; Three Rivers Medical Center, Louisa, KY; Caldwell County Hospitals, Princeton, KY; Crittenden Health System, West Marion, KY; Cumberland County Hospital, Burnsville, KY; Fleming County Hospital, Flemingsburg, KY; Jennie Stuart Medical Center, Hopkinsville, KY; Marshall County Hospital, Benton, KY; Muhlenberg Community Hospital, Greensboro, KY; Ohio County Hospital, Hartford, KY; and Pineville Community Hospital, Pineville, KY.

By Mr. CAMPBELL:

S. 1711. A bill to designate the James Peak Wilderness and the James Peak Protection Area in the State of Colorado, and for other purposes; to the SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “James Peak Wilderness, Wilderness Study, and James Peak Protection Area Act.”

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act—

(1) BOARD.—The term “Board” means the Colorado State Land Board.

(2) FOREST SUPERVISOR.—The term “Forest Supervisor” means the Forest Supervisor of the Arapaho National Forest and Roosevelt National Forest.

(4) PROTECTION AREA.—The term “Protection Area” means the James Peak Protection Area designated by section 4(b).

(5) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Agriculture.

(6) SPECIAL INTEREST AREA.—The term “special interest area” means the land in the Protection Area—

(A) on the north by Rollins Pass Road;

(B) on the east by the Continental Divide; and

(C) on the west by the 11,300-foot elevation contour, as depicted on the map entitled “Proposed James Peak Wilderness Area”, dated September 2001.

(7) STATE.—The term “State” means the State of Colorado.

SEC. 3. WILDERNESS DESIGNATION.

(a) JAMES PEAK WILDERNESS.—Section 2(a) of the Colorado Wilderness Act of 1993 (Public Law 103–77; 107 Stat. 756) is amended by adding at the end the following:—

“(2) JAMES PEAK WILDERNESS.—Certain land in the Arapaho National Forest and Roosevelt National Forest comprising approximately 16,000 acres, as generally depicted on the map entitled “Proposed James Peak Wilderness”, dated September 2001, and which shall be known as the ‘‘James Peak Wilderness’’—

(b) ADDITION TO THE INDIAN PEAKS WILDERNESS AREA.—Section 3 of the Indian Peaks Wilderness Area, the Arapaho National Forest, and the Roosevelt National Forest generally designated as the “James Peak Protection Area Act” (Public Law 95–450; 92 Stat. 1095) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(c) ADDITIONAL LAND.—In addition to the land described in subsection (a), the Indian Peaks Wilderness Area shall include—

(1) the approximately 2,232 acres of Federal land in the Arapaho National Forest and Roosevelt National Forest, as generally depicted on the map entitled ‘Ranch Creek Addition to Indian Peaks Wilderness’, dated September 2001; and

(2) the approximately 963 acres of Federal land in the Arapaho National Forest and Roosevelt National Forest, as generally depicted on the map entitled ‘Fourth of July Addition to Indian Peaks Wilderness’, dated September 2001.’’.

(c) MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a map and legal description of the Protection Area.

(2) EFFECT.—The map and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act.

(d) MANAGEMENT.—The Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in the map and legal description.

(4) AVAILABILITY.—The map and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection—

(A) at the office of the Chief of the Forest Service; and

(B) at the office of the Forest Supervisor.

(5) MANAGEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the Secretary shall manage and administer the Protection Area in accordance with the management plan.

(2) GRAZING.—Nothing in this Act, including the establishment of the Protection Area, affects grazing on land in or outside of the Protection Area.

(3) WITHDRAWALS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to valid existing rights, all Federal lands in the Protection Area (including land and interests in land acquired for the Protection Area by the United States after the date of enactment of this Act) are withdrawn from—

(i) the operation of the mineral leasing, mineral materials, and geothermal leasing laws;

(ii) the Secretary’s discretionary authority under this Act to grant or sell public lands for mineral development or to grant or sell public lands for geothermal development; and

(iii) the Secretary’s discretionary authority to withdraw land for the purposes described in paragraphs (i) through (iii) of this subsection.

(B) EFFECT.—Nothing in subparagraph (A) affects the discretionary authority of the Secretary under Federal law to grant, issue, or renew any right-of-way or other use authorization consistent with this Act.

(4) MOTORIZED AND MECHANIZED TRAVEL.—
SEC. 5. ACQUISITION OF LAND.
(a) BOARD LAND.—The Secretary may acquire by purchase or exchange land in the Protection Area owned by the Board.
(b) JIM CREEK DRAINAGE.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may acquire by purchase or exchange land in the Jim Creek drainage in the Protection Area.
(2) CONSENT OF LANDOWNER.—The Secretary may acquire land under this subsection only with the consent of the landowner.
(c) JAMES PEAK FALL RIVER TRAILHEAD.
(1) STUDY.—Not later than 3 years after the date on which funds are first made available to carry out this section, the Secretary, in consultation with interested parties, shall complete a report concerning any agreement or arrangement for the acquisition of land under—
(A) the Jim Creek drainage in the Protection Area; and
(B) the James Peak Special Interest Area.
(2) REQUIREMENTS.—The report required by subsection (a) shall include—
(A) whether it is possible to acquire the land under—
(i) the Jim Creek drainage in the Protection Area; and
(ii) the James Peak Special Interest Area; and
(B) whether the additional funds needed to be appropriated or otherwise made available to the Secretary for the acquisition of the land.
(d) MANAGEMENT OF ACQUISITIONS.—Any land acquired under subsection (c) of this section shall be added to the Wilderness or the Protection Area, respectively.

SEC. 6. JAMES PEAK FALL RIVER TRAILHEAD.
(a) SERVICES AND FACILITIES.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—Following the consultation required by subsection (c), the Forest Supervisor shall establish a trailhead, facilities, and services for National Forest System land that is located—
(A) in the vicinity of the Fall River basin; and
(B) south of the communities of Alice Township and St. Mary’s Glacier in the State.
(b) PERSONNEL.—The Forest Supervisor shall—
(1) establish a Forest Service office to provide appropriate management and oversight of the area specified in subsection (a)(1).
(2) CONSULTATION.—The Forest Supervisor shall consult with the communities of Clear Creek County and with residents of Alice Township and St. Mary’s Glacier in the State regarding—
(A) the appropriate location of facilities and services in the area specified in subsection (a)(1); and
(B) appropriate measures that may be needed in this area—
(i) to provide access by emergency or law enforcement vehicles;
(ii) for public hearing; and
(iii) to address concerns regarding impeded access by local residents.
(c) REPORT.—As soon as practicable after the consultation required by subsection (b), the Forest Supervisor shall submit to the Committee on Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate a report regarding the amount of any additional funds required to implement this section.

SEC. 7. LOOP TRAIL STUDY.
(a) STUDY.—Not later than 3 years after the date on which funds are first made available to carry out this section, the Secretary, in consultation with interested parties, shall complete a study of the suitability and feasibility of establishing, consistent with the purposes described in section 5(a)(2), a loop trail for mechanized and nonmotorized recreation that connects the trail designated as “Rollins Pass Road” and the trail designated as “Rogers Pass”.
(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—If the results of the study required by subsection (a) indicate that establishment of a loop trail would be suitable and feasible, the Secretary shall establish the loop trail.

SEC. 8. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.
(a) NO BUFFER ZONES.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—The designation by this Act or by any amendments made by this Act of wilderness areas under section 3 and the Protection Area in the State shall not establish any express or implied protective perimeter or buffer zone around a wilderness area or the Protection Area.

SEC. 9. DESIGNATING LOCAL LAND.—The fact that the use, or conduct of an activity on, land that shares a boundary with a wilderness area or the Protection Area may be seen or heard on a wilderness area or the Protection Area shall not, in and of itself, preclude the conduct of the use or activity.
(b) ROLLINS PASS ROAD.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If requested by 1 or more of Grand, Gilpin, or Boulder Counties in the State, the Secretary, with respect to the repair of Rollins Pass road in the counties, shall provide technical assistance and otherwise cooperate with the counties to permit 2-wheel-drive vehicles to travel between Colorado State Highway 119 and U.S. Highway 40.

(2) CLOSURE OF MOTORIZED ROADS AND TRAILS.—If Rollins Pass road is repaired in accordance with paragraph (1), the Secretary shall close the motorized roads and trails on Forest Service land indicated on the map entitled “Rollins Pass Road Reopening: Attendant Road and Trail Closures,” dated September 2001.

SEC. 9. WILDERNESS POTENTIAL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this Act precludes or restricts the authority of the Secretary to—

(1) evaluate the suitability of land in the Protection Area for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System; or

(2) make recommendations to Congress on the inclusion of land evaluated under paragraph (1) in the National Wilderness Preservation System.

(b) EVALUATION OF CERTAIN LANDS.—As part of the first revision of the management plan carried out after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) evaluate the suitability of the special interest area for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System; and

(2) make recommendations to Congress on the inclusion of land evaluated under paragraph (1) for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. KOHL, Mr. HATCH, Mr. CARPER, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. SPECTER):

S. 1712. A bill to amend the procedure that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the “Class Action Fairness Act of 2001.” I am pleased to be joined by Senators KOHL, HATCH, CARPER, THURMOND, CHAFEE and SPECTER.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 will help curb class action lawsuit abuses and protect consumers who find themselves as potential members of class action lawsuits. At the same time, the bill will preserve class action rights for those which were disproportionately represented or who have a vested interest in the outcome.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 will help curb class action lawsuit abuses and protect consumers who find themselves as potential members of class action lawsuits. At the same time, the bill will preserve class action rights for those which were disproportionately represented or who have a vested interest in the outcome.

Today, we are introducing the bill that the Senate Judiciary Committee agreed to in the last Congress, with minor modifications. We have also included a few more provisions that will better protect class members. I am hopeful that in this Congress, the Senate will consider this bill promptly and enact the much needed changes to the current system.

Presently, the class action system is awash with problems. More and more class action lawsuits are being filed to the benefit of attorneys, where attorneys have a financial incentive to give them huge fees while their clients get little of value or nothing. A 1999 Rand Report on class actions found that state courts often give most of the money in a settlement to the lawyers, not the class members they supposedly represent. The Judiciary Committee held hearings where we heard about settlement after settlement where class members got coupons or nothing, but the lawyers got millions of dollars in fees. The courts award class members being awarded restrictive coupons for airline tickets, as well as class members who received a lawyers’ bill that was higher than the compensation for their injury. But the lawyers got all the money in fees. Is this fair? I thought the lawyers were supposed to represent their clients, not themselves. I am not saying that attorneys should not be paid for their work, but it seems to me that lawyers have found class actions to be an easy way for them to make money.

The Judiciary Committee also heard that lawyers game the class action rules to keep class actions in certain states and courts that are that there are no rules to keep class actions in certain states and courts that are quiet with adequately considering the interests of all class members or courts. It seems to me that lawyers have found class actions to be an easy way for them to make money.

what is going on in a class action or settlement, or not being clear as to what their rights are, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 has a provision that notice to class members needs to contain an explanation of their rights and other matters concerning settlement terms and conditions, written in a plain and easy to understand language.

To address the problem where class members get nothing and attorneys get millions, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 provides that notification of any proposed settlements must be given to the State attorneys general or the primary regulatory or licensing agency of any State whose citizens are involved. This is so that the State attorney general or responsible agency can intervene in the case to ensure that settlements are fair. To address the problem of special bounties that unfairly impact the absent members of a class, the bill contains a new provision that would prohibit the payment of bounties to class representatives that are disproportionately larger than that provided to absent class members. To address the problem of discrimination between class members based on geographic location, the bill contains a new provision that prohibits courts from approving settlements that award some class members a larger recovery than others based on geography.

To start responding to the issue of attorneys' fees, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 asks the Judicial Conference to report back to Congress in a year after studying attorneys' fees in class actions and how judges can do a better job in making sure that class action settlements are fair. The bill also includes new provisions that protect class members against net losses and require the courts to make specific findings as to the fairness of coupon and other non-cash class action settlements.

To respond to the problem where plaintiff lawyers game the system to improperly keep class action cases in State court, or where similar class action suits are being filed in different State courts, or where State courts are imposing their laws on citizens of other States and formulating national policy, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 loosens diversity and removal requirements so that class action cases with high potential for bounties can be heard in Federal courts and similar class actions can be consolidated. The bill is crafted so that it will not harm federalism or deprive State courts of their ability to adjudicate cases for their own citizens. That is because there is a constitutional basis for class actions to proceed in Federal court. Clearly, the Federal courts are a better forum for these kinds of cases that are of nationwide importance.

In conclusion, there is substantial evidence that class action abuse is going on and we should do something about it. I think that the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 is a good, balanced bill that addresses some of the problems that we've identified. Moreover, there has been a lot of compromise to address concerns about the bill. We have also improved the bill by adding additional consumer protections. So, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001 will not stop the class action process, but put a stop to the more egregious abuses in the system.

In addition, I'd like to thank my friend Senator Kohl, who has worked so closely with me over the years in bringing the issue of class action abuse to the forefront. We both share a deep concern over protecting the rights of consumers, while making sure that the due process rights of all litigants are preserved. I'd also like to thank Senator Hatch, chair of the Judiciary Committee last year, and worked on improvements to the bill.

I urge all my colleagues to join Senators Kohl, Hatch, Carper, Thurmond, Grassley and Specter in supporting this important piece of legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

8, 1712

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, and by the authority of the same, in accordance with the Constitution of the United States, to provide for consolidating certain class actions:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2001".

(b) REFERENCE.—Whenever in this Act reference is made to an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 28, United States Code.

(c) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; reference; table of contents.
Sec. 2. Findings and purposes.
Sec. 3. Consumer class action bill of rights and improved procedures for interstate class actions.
Sec. 4. Federal district court jurisdiction for interstate class actions.
Sec. 5. Removal of interstate class actions to Federal district court.
Sec. 6. Report on class action settlements.
Sec. 7. Effective date.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Class action lawsuits are an important and valuable part of the legal system when they permit the fair and efficient resolution of legitimate claims of numerous parties by allowing the claims to be aggregated into a single action against a defendant that has allegedly caused harm.

(2) Over the past decade, there have been abuses of the class action device that have—

(A) harmed class members with legitimate claims and defendants that have acted responsibly; and

(B) undermined public respect for our judicial system.

(3) Class members often receive little or no benefit from class actions, and are sometimes harmed, such as where—

(A) counsel are awarded large fees, while leaving class members with coupons or other awards of little or no value;

(B) unjustified awards are made to certain plaintiffs at the expense of other class members; and

(C) confusing notices are published that prevent class members from being able to understand and effectively exercise their rights.

(4) Abuses in class actions undermine the national judicial system and the concept of diversity jurisdiction as intended by the framers of the United States Constitution, in that State and local courts are—

(A) keeping cases of national importance out of Federal court;

(B) sometimes acting in ways that demonstrate bias against out-of-State defendants; and

(C) making judgments that impose their view of the law on other States and bind the rights of the residents of those States.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are to—

(1) assure fair and prompt recoveries for class members with legitimate claims;

(2) restore the intent of the framers of the United States Constitution by providing for Federal court consideration of interstate cases of national importance under diversity jurisdiction; and

(3) benefit society by encouraging innovation and lowering consumer prices.

SEC. 3. CONSUMER CLASS ACTION BILL OF RIGHTS AND IMPROVED PROCEDURES FOR INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part V is amended by inserting after chapter 113 the following:

"CHAPTER 114—CLASS ACTIONS

Sec. 1711. Definitions.
Sec. 1712. Judicial scrutiny of coupon and other non-cash class action settlements.
Sec. 1713. Protection against loss by class members.
Sec. 1714. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location.
Sec. 1715. Prohibition on the payment of bounties.
Sec. 1716. Clearer and simpler settlement information.
Sec. 1717. Notifications to appropriate Federal and State officials.

"1711. Definitions.

"In this chapter:

(1) CLASS.—The term 'class' means all of the class members in a class action.

(2) CLASS ACTION.—The term 'class action' means any civil action filed in a district court of the United States under rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or any civil action that is removed to a district court of the United States that was originally filed under a State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by 1 or more representatives as a class action.

(3) CLASS COUNSEL.—The term 'class counsel' means the persons who serve as the attorneys for the class members in a proposed or certified class action.

(4) CLASS MEMBERS.—The term 'class members' means the persons named or unnamed who fall within the definition of the proposed or certified class in a class action.

(5) PLAINTIFF CLASS ACTION.—The term 'plaintiff class action' means any civil action in which class members are plaintiffs.

(6) PROPOSED SETTLEMENT.—The term 'proposed settlement' means an agreement regarding a class action that is subject to court approval and that, if approved, would be binding on some or all class members.
§1712. Judicial scrutiny of coupon and other noncash settlements

The court may approve a proposed settlement under which the class members would receive noncash benefits or would otherwise be required to expend funds in order to obtain part or all of the proposed benefits only after a hearing to determine whether, and making a written finding that, the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate for class members.

§1713. Protection against loss by class members

The court may approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater sums to some class members than to others solely on the basis that the class members to whom the greater sums are to be paid are of a closer geographic proximity to the court.

§1714. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location

The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater sums to some class members than to others solely on the basis that the class members to whom the greater sums are to be paid are of a closer geographic proximity to the court.

§1715. Prohibition on the payment of bounties

(a) In General.—The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of a greater share of the award to a class representative serving on behalf of a class, on the basis of the formula for distribution to all other class members, than that awarded to the other class members.

(b) Rule of Construction.—The limitation in subsection (a) shall not be construed to prohibit a payment approved by the court for reasonable time or costs that a person was required to expend in fulfilling the obligations of that person as a class representative.

§1716. Clearer and simpler settlement information

(a) Plain English Requirements.—Any court order approving a proposed settlement shall require that any written notice concerning a proposed settlement of the class action provided to the class through the mail or publication in printed media contain—

(1) at the beginning of such notice, a statement in 18-point or greater bold type, stating: LEGAL NOTICE: YOU ARE A PLAINTIFF IN A CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT AND YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS ARE AFFECTED BY THE SETTLEMENT DESCRIBED IN THIS NOTICE;

(2) a short summary written in plain, easily understood language, describing—

(A) the subject matter of the class action;

(B) the class;

(C) the legal consequences of being a member of the class;

(D) if the notice is informing class members of a proposed settlement of the class action provided to the class through the mail or publication in printed media contain—

(i) the benefits that will accrue to the class due to the settlement;

(ii) the rights that class members will lose by virtue of the settlement;

(iii) obligations that will be imposed on the defendants by the settlement;

(iv) the dollar amount of any attorney’s fee class counsel will be seeking, and if not possible, a good faith estimate of the dollar amount of any attorney’s fee counsel will be seeking; and

(v) an explanation of how any attorney’s fee will be calculated and funded; and

(E) any other matter material.

(b) Tabular Format.—Any court order approving a proposed settlement shall require that the information described in subsection (a)—

(1) be placed in a conspicuous and prominent location on the notice;

(2) contain clear and concise headings for each item of information; and

(3) provide a concise form for stating each item of information required to be disclosed under each heading.

(c) Televised or Radio Notice.—Any notice provided through television or radio (including transmissions by cable or satellite) to inform the class members in a class action of the right to be excluded from a class action or a proposed settlement, if such right exists, shall, in plain, easily understandable language—

(1) describe the persons who may potentially become class members in the class action; and

(2) explain the failure of a class member to exercise his or her right to be excluded from a class action will result in the person’s inclusion in the class action.

§1717. Notifications to appropriate Federal and State officials

(a) Definitions.—

(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL OFFICIAL.—In this section, the term ‘appropriate Federal official’ means—

(A) the Attorney General of the United States; or

(B) in any case in which the defendant is a Federal depository institution, a State depository institution, a depository institution holding company, a foreign bank, or a non-depository institution subsidiary of the foregoing, the term is defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813), the person who has the primary Federal regulatory or supervisory responsibility with respect to the defendant or the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation or supervision by that person;

(2) APPROPRIATE STATE OFFICIAL.—In this section, the term ‘appropriate State official’ means the person in the State who has the primary regulatory or supervisory responsibility with respect to the defendant, or who licenses or otherwise authorizes the defendant to conduct business in the State, if some or all of the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation by that person.

(3) any proposed or final notification to class members residing in each State and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of such members to the entire settlement to that State’s appropriate State official; or

(4) any proposed or final class action settlement;

(5) any settlement or other agreement contemporaneously made between class counsel and counsel for the defendants;

(6) any final judgment or notice of dismissal;

(7)(A) if feasible, the names of class members residing in each State and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of such members to the entire settlement;

(8) any written judicial opinion relating to the materials described under subparagraph (A); and

(9) any other material necessary.

(b) Tabular Format.—Any court order approving a proposed settlement shall require that the information described in subsection (a)—

(1) be placed in a conspicuous and prominent location on the notice;

(2) contain clear and concise headings for each item of information; and

(3) provide a concise form for stating each item of information required to be disclosed under each heading.

(c) Televised or Radio Notice.—Any notice provided through television or radio (including transmissions by cable or satellite) to inform the class members in a class action of the right to be excluded from a class action or a proposed settlement, if such right exists, shall, in plain, easily understandable language—

(1) describe the persons who may potentially become class members in the class action; and

(2) explain the failure of a class member to exercise his or her right to be excluded from a class action will result in the person’s inclusion in the class action.

§1718. Notifications to appropriate Federal and State officials

(a) Definitions.—

(1) FEDERAL AND OTHER DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—In any case in which the defendant is a Federal depository institution, a depository institution holding company, a foreign bank, or a non-depository institution subsidiary of the foregoing, the notice requirements of this section are satisfied by serving the notice required under subsection (b) upon the person who has the primary Federal regulatory or supervisory responsibility with respect to the defendant or the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation or supervision by that person.

(2) STATE DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—In any case in which the defendant is a State depository institution (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813)) of the State in which the defendant is incorporated or chartered, if some or all of the matters alleged in the class action are subject to regulation or supervision by that person, and upon the appropriate Federal official.

(b) Tabular Format.—Any court order approving a proposed settlement shall require that the information described in subsection (a)—

(1) be placed in a conspicuous and prominent location on the notice;

(2) contain clear and concise headings for each item of information; and

(3) any proposed or final notification to class members residing in each State and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of such members to the entire settlement to that State’s appropriate State official; or

(4) any proposed or final class action settlement;

(5) any settlement or other agreement contemporaneously made between class counsel and counsel for the defendants;

(6) any final judgment or notice of dismissal;

(7)(A) if feasible, the names of class members residing in each State and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of such members to the entire settlement; and

(8) any written judicial opinion relating to the materials described under subparagraph (A); and

(9) any other material necessary.

(b) Tabular Format.—Any court order approving a proposed settlement shall require that the information described in subsection (a)—

(1) be placed in a conspicuous and prominent location on the notice;

(2) contain clear and concise headings for each item of information; and

(3) any proposed or final notification to class members residing in each State and the estimated proportionate share of the claims of such members to the entire settlement to that State’s appropriate State official; or

(4) any proposed or final class action settlement;
authority of, or impose any obligations, duties, or responsibilities upon, Federal or State officials.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1335(a)(2), for purposes of part V is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 113 the following:

"114. Class Actions .......................... 1711."

SEC. 4. FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT JURISDICTION FOR INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) APPLICATION OF FEDERAL DIVERSITY JURISDICTION.—Section 1332 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (a) as subsection (e); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:

"(d)(1) In this subsection—

"(A) the term 'class' means all of the class members in a class action;

"(B) the term 'class action' means any civil action filed under rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or similar State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by 1 or more representative persons as a class action;

"(C) the term 'class certification order' means an order issued by a court approving the treatment of some or all aspects of a civil action as a class action; and

"(D) the term 'class members' means the persons (named or unnamed) who fall within the definition of the proposed or certified class in a class action.

"(2) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action in which the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $2,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is a class action in which—

"(A) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State different from any defendant;

"(B) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state and any defendant is a citizen of a State; or

"(C) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State and any defendant is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state.

"(3) Paragraph (2) shall not apply to any civil action in which—

"(A) the number of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is less than 100;

"(B) any plaintiff class member is a class member that is a psychological patient, or the primary defendants are citizens of the United States in which the action was originally filed; or

"(C) any member of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is less than 100.

"(4) In any class action, the claims of the individual class members shall be aggregated to determine whether the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $2,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

"(5) In any class action described under subparagraph (A), the court shall apply to any class action before or after the entry of a class certification order by the court with respect to that action—

"(a) any order relating to a defendant removing a case to the State court from which it was removed shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise, of the initial written notice of appeal by such class member, through service or otherwise, of the initial written notice of appeal by such class member;

"(B) that relates to the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and that arises under or by virtue of the laws of the State in which such corporate or business enterprise is incorporated or organized; or

"(C) that relates to the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating, except that notwithstanding section 1457(d), an order remanding a class action to the State court from which it was removed shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

"(f) EXCEPTION.—This section shall not apply to any class action that solely involves—

"(1) a claim concerning a covered security as defined under section 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and section 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;

"(2) a claim that relates to the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and arises under or by virtue of the laws of the State in which such corporate or business enterprise is incorporated or organized; or

"(3) a claim that relates to the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating to or created by or pursuant to any security as defined under section 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 and the regulations issued thereunder.

"(g) REVIEW OF ORDERS REMANDING CLASS ACTIONS TO STATE COURTS.—Section 1447 shall apply to any removal of a case under this section or section 1453 of this title, except that notwithstanding section 1447(d), an order remanding a class action to the State court from which it was removed shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

"(h) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections for chapter 89 of title 28, United States Code, as set forth in the last paragraph of section 1453 of this title, shall be deemed tolled for the period during which this paragraph is in effect.

"(i) Periods on all reasserted claims shall be deemed tolled for the period during which the dismissed action was pending.

"(j) As used in this section, the term 'class action' means any case described under subparagraph (A)(ii).

"(k) Nothing in subparagraph (A) shall apply to any civil action described under subparagraph (A)(i).

Title 11. INSOLVENCY, MISCELLANEOUS

PART V. BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS AND REMEDIATION

CHAPTER 113. REMOVAL TO FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT

SEC. 5. REMOVAL OF INTERSTATE CLASS ACTION

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 89 is amended by adding after section 1462 the following:

"11453. Removal of class actions.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms 'class', 'class action', 'class certification order', and 'class member' shall have the meanings given such terms under section 1332(d)(1).

"(b) IN GENERAL.—A class action may be removed to a district court of the United States in accordance with this chapter, without regard to whether any defendant is a citizen of the State in which the action is brought, except that such action may be removed—

"(i) by any defendant without the consent of all defendants; or

"(ii) by any plaintiff class member who is not a named or representative class member without the consent of all members of such class.

"(c) WHEN REMOVABLE.—This section shall apply to any class action before or after the entry of a class certification order in the action.

"(d) PROCEDURE FOR REMOVAL.—Section 1446 relating to a defendant removing a case shall apply to a plaintiff removing a case under this section, except that notwithstanding section 1447(d), an order remanding a class action to the State court from which it was removed shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

"(e) EXCEPTION.—This section shall not apply to any class action that solely involves—

"(1) a claim concerning a covered security as defined under section 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and section 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; which counsel succeeded in obtaining full redress for the injuries alleged and the time, expense, and risk that counsel devoted to the litigation; and

(b) the class members on whose behalf the settlement is proposed are the primary beneficiaries of the settlement; and

(c) the actions that the Judicial Conference of the United States has taken or intends to take toward having the Federal judiciary implement any or all of the recommendations contained in the report.

(c) AUTHORITY OF FEDERAL COURTS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter the authority of the Federal courts to supervisory attorneys’ fees.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply to any civil action commenced on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to join Senators GRASSLEY, HATCH, CARPER, and THURMOND in introducing the Class Action Fairness Act of 2001. This legislation addresses the growing problems in class action litigation, particularly unfair and abusive settlements that shortchange plaintiff class members.

We have worked together on this legislation in past Congresses. In fact, last year a similar version of class action reform passed the House of Representatives as approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Unfortunately, the session ended before we could bring it to a vote of the full Senate.

The problem that this bill addresses is simple. Too often, the class action process is being hijacked by unscruulous parties who are more interested in making a dollar for themselves than helping the plaintiff class members remedy a legitimate harm. Let me give you just one well known example of the unfairness this bill attempts to correct.

A few years ago, a class action lawsuit was begun against the Bank of Boston. Martha Preston from Baraboo, WI was an unnamed class member of that suit, although she was a mortgage company. The case involved allegations that the bank had overcharged its mortgage customers and had kept excess money in their escrow accounts. It was ultimately settled. Ms. Preston was represented by a group of plaintiffs’ lawyers who she had never met.

The settlement they negotiated for her was a bad joke. She received four dol-ars and change in the lawsuit, while her attorneys pocketed $3 million in fees.

Soon after receiving her four dollars,
Ms. Preston discovered that her lawyers helped pay for their fees by taking $80 from her escrow account. Naturally shocked, she and the other plaintiffs sued the lawyers who in turn sued her in Alabama. Ms. Preston had never vicinated, for $25 million. Not only was she $75 poorer for her class action experience, but she also had to defend herself against a $25 million suit by the very people who took advantage of her in the first place.

In response to this case and many more like it, we developed a measured, reasoned response to protect class action plaintiffs against a system which is subject to abuse. As in past years, the bill can be divided into three main sections, all of which provide enhanced protections for individual plaintiffs.

First, the bill provides that every class action notice be written in plain, easily understandable English. Too many of the class action notices are written in legalese, designed to make it impossible for the average American to comprehend his or her rights and responsibilities as a member of the plaintiff class.

The bill requires that a statement be included at the beginning of the notice written in large, bold type alerting the plaintiff that he is involved in a class action lawsuit and that his legal rights are affected by the contents of the notice. This means that every class member will understand the subject matter of the case and his rights and responsibilities as a participant in the lawsuit.

Further, if the case were settled, the notice to the class members would clearly describe the terms of the settlement, the benefits to each plaintiff and a summary of the attorneys fees in the suit were to be calculated. Currently, none of this information is clearly communicated to the class members.

Second, the bill requires that notice be given to State Attorneys General or the appropriate State regulatory au-torities about proposed class settlements in Federal court which affect their constituents. This encourages a neutral third party to weigh in on a whether and how to alert the court if they do not believe that it is. The Attorney General review is an extra layer of security for the plaintiffs and is designed to ensure that abusive settlements are not approved without a critical review by one or more experts.

Third, the bill makes it easier to move State class action cases to Federal court by changing the diversity rules governing these actions. Class action cases often join multiple implic-tions and are joined by plaintiffs from many, if not most, States. Currently, class actions are frequently heard by a State court judge in a venue chosen by the plaintiffs’ attorneys to maximize the chance that the class action will be certified.

For class actions, the certification process is usually more than half the battle. Once a set of plaintiffs succeeds generally to certify them as a class, the defendants are often faced with extraordinary costs associated with preparing for trial and dealing with a multitude of plaintiffs. So, the defendants settle the case at terms in favor of the plaintiffs’ attorneys, often at the expense of the plaintiffs themselves.

A recent study on the class action problem by the Manhattan Institute demonstrates that class action cases are being brought disproportionately in a few counties where plaintiffs expect to be able to take advantage of lax cer-tification rules.

The study focused on three county courts, Madison County, TX; and Palm Beach County, FL, that have seen a steep rise in class action filings over the last several years that seems disproportional to their populations. They found that Madison County and Palm Beach County ranked sixth and ninth, respectively. As plaintiff attorneys found that Madison County was a welcoming host, the number of class action suits filed there rose 1850 percent between 1998 and 2000.

Another trend evident in the research was the use of “cut-and-paste” complaints in which plaintiffs’ attor-neyes file a number of suits against different defendants in the same industry challenging standard industry practices. For example, within a one-week period earlier this year, six law firms filed nine nearly identical class actions in Madison County alleging that the automobile insurance industry is de-framing Americans in the way that they calculate claims rates for totaled vehicles.

The system is not working as intended and needs to be fixed. The way to fix it is to move more of these cases currently being brought in small state courts like Madison County, IL to Federal court.

The Federal courts are better venues for class actions for a variety of reasons articulated clearly in a RAND study. RAND proposed three primary explanations why these cases should be in federal court. “First, Federal judges scrutinize class action allegations more strictly than State judges, and deny certification in situations where a State judge might grant it improperly.
Second, State judges may not have adequate resources to oversee and manage class actions with a national scope.
Finally, if a single judge is to be charged with deciding what law will apply in a multistate class action, it is more appropriate that this take place in federal court than in State court.”

We all know that class actions can result in significant and important benefits for class members and society, and that most class lawyers and most state courts are acting responsibly.
Class actions have been used to desegegrate racially zoned schools; to obtain redress for victims of employment discrimination, and to compensate individuals exposed to toxic chemicals or defective products. Class actions increase access to our civil justice system because they enable people to pursue claims that collectively would otherwise be too expensive to litigate.

The difficulty in any effort to improve a basically good system is weed-out the abuses without causing undue damage. The legislation we propose attempts to do this.

Let me emphasize the limited scope of this legislation. We do not close the courthouse door to any class action. We do not require that State attorneys general do anything with the notice they receive. We do not deny reasonable fees for class attorneys. And we do not mandate that every class action be brought in Federal court. Instead, we simplify and clarify scrutiny of class actions and class settlements.

Right now, people across the country can be dragged into lawsuits unaware of what is happening on the legal battlefield. What our bill does is give back to regular people their rights and representation. This measure may not stop all abuses, but it moves us forward. It will help ensure that unsuspecting people like Martha Preston don’t get ripped off.

We believe this is a moderate approach to correct the worst abuses, while preserving the benefits of class actions. It is both pro-consumer and pro-defendant. We believe it will make a difference.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there is little doubt that serious problems exist within our Nation’s judicial system, especially in the way that interstate class action lawsuits are handled and administered in local courtrooms across this country. Increasingly, parties to class actions have taken to forum shopping to pick sympathetic courts where, more and more often, plaintiffs are offered coupon settlements and lawyers are awarded enormous fees.

According to recent studies, while Federal class action filings over the past 10 years have increased over 300 percent, class action filings in State courts have increased over 1,000 percent. However, interstate class actions involve more citizens in more States, more money, and more interstate commerce ramifications than any other type of civil litigation. They are the paradigm of what our Framers envisioned when they invented Federal diversity jurisdiction, as reflected in Article III of the Constitution. These State court statistics are even more troubling in light of the fact that many State courts have crushing caseloads and far fewer resources available to them than their Federal counterparts to manage these important and complex cases.

The primary reason that interstate class actions have remained in State court despite their complex nature is because it is relatively easy for plaintiffs’ class attorneys to defeat both the statutory “complete diversity” requirement by adding non-diverse parties and the $75,000 “amount in controversy” requirement by aggregating individual claims to be less than this amount. Interestingly, the “complete diversity” requirement was adopted by Congress in the late 1700s, well before the development of modern class action litigation.

Simply put, the Class Action Fairness Act would allow Federal courts to adjudicate class actions where the collective amount in controversy is more than $2 million, and where any member of the class of plaintiffs is from a different State than any defendant. This means that many State class actions may be removed to Federal court. Nonetheless, the bill does not extend Federal jurisdiction to intrastate class actions, where the claims are governed primarily by the laws of the State in which the case is filed and the majority of the plaintiffs and the primary defendants are citizens of that State. There is no federalism issue here. All the bill does is to protect constitutionally mandated diversity jurisdiction—“suits between Citizens of different States.”

I am aware that there are those that say that the bill would “flood” Federal courts. But again, according to Article III of the Constitution and our Founding fathers, these cases belong in Federal court. Critics making the judicial overload argument also ignore the fact that this bill does not require that interstate class actions be heard in Federal courts. It simply provides the option for either side. In jurisdictions where the State courts provide a relatively level playing field, there is no reason to believe that all class actions will be removed to Federal court.

I should also point out that this bill would not prohibit any class action from being filed. It is merely a process or procedural bill. It simply determines the court in which interstate class actions with significant national implications should be adjudicated—that is, in Federal court.

I urge my colleagues to adopt this common-sense legislation.

By Mr. MCCONNELL:

S. 1714. A bill to provide for the installation of a plaque to honor Dr. James Harvey Early in the Williamsburg, Kentucky Post Office Building: "In honor of Dr. James Harvey Early, representative of the United States Post Office in Williamsburg, Kentucky Post Office Building located at 1000 North Highway 23 West, Williamsburg, Kentucky 40769."

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the following be inserted in the Record:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. INSTALLATION OF PLAQUE TO HONOR DR. JAMES HARVEY EARLY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The United States Postmaster General shall install a plaque to honor Dr. James Harvey Early in the Williamsburg, Kentucky Post Office Building located at 1000 North Highway 23 West, Williamsburg, Kentucky 40769.

(b) CONTENTS OF PLAQUE.—"The plaque installed under subsection (a) shall contain the following text:

‘Dr. James Harvey Early was born on June 14, 1806 in Knox County, Kentucky. He was appointed postmaster of the first United States Post Office that was opened in the town of Whitley Courthouse, now Williamsburg, Kentucky. A monument to be erected in the Kentucky Legislature. Dr. Early married twice, first to Frances Ann Hammond, died in Rockhold, Kentucky on May 24, 1885 at the age of 77.’"

S. 1715. A bill to improve the ability of the United States to prepare for and respond to a biological threat or attack; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today on behalf of myself, Senator KENNEDY, and a number of our colleagues to introduce vital important legislation, the “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001.” This bipartisan bill, which represents the very best effort of a number of our colleagues in the Senate, responds to the threat that bioterrorism poses to our Nation’s efforts to prevent, prepare for, and respond to any future bioterrorist attacks.

Events of recent weeks have made clear the danger we currently face. In the aftermath of the September 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, terrorists have used the mail to deliver anthrax to communities across America. In doing so, they have also spread fear across our great nation and have underscored the threats that bioterrorism poses. If they had employed a more sophisticated delivery mechanism, or weaponized smallpox or another communicable virus, our health care system may have been overwhelmed.

Last year, Congress enacted bipartisan legislation to revitalize our public health defenses at the local, State and national levels. The Frist-Kennedy Pandemic and Emerging Threats Act of 1999, 115 Stat. 196 (1999), which authorized $1.6 billion for disease preparedness and response, has been overwhelmed. CDC, improve the training of health professionals to diagnose and care for victims of bioterrorism, enhance our research and development capabilities, and take additional steps necessary to prevent our efforts to respond to biological attacks.

Today’s legislation, the “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001,” builds on the foundation laid by the Public Health Threats Act, a foundation built on prevention, preparedness, and response.

The “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act” takes a number of steps to prepare our Nation for these threats. It includes important measures to improve our health system’s capacity to respond to bioterrorism, protect the Nation’s food supply, speed the development and production of vaccines and other countermeasures, enhance coordination of federal activities on bioterrorism, and improve the Nation’s capacity to respond to bioterrorism at the local, state, and national levels. The legislation would authorize approximately $3.2 billion in funding for Fiscal Year 2002 (and $3.2 billion in years thereafter) toward these activities.

Title I—National Goals for Bioterrorism Preparedness

Title I of the “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act” states that “the United States should further develop and implement a coordinated strategy to prevent and, if necessary, to respond to biological threats or attacks.” It further states that it is the goal of Congress that this strategy should: (1) provide federal assistance to state and local governments in the event of a biological attack; (2) improve public health, hospital, laboratory, communications, and emergency response preparedness and responsiveness at the state and local levels; (3) rapidly develop and manufacture needed therapeutic and medical supplies; and (4) enhance the safety of the nation’s food supply and protect its agriculture from biological threats and attacks.

Title II—Improving the Federal Response to Bioterrorism

Title II requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) to report to Congress within one year of enactment, and biennially thereafter, on progress made toward meeting the objectives of the Act. It provides statutory authorization for the strategic national stockpile program, provides additional resources to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to carry out education and training initiatives and to improve the nation’s federal laboratory capacity, and establishes a National Disaster Medical Response System of volunteers to respond, at the Secretary’s direction, to national public health emergencies (with full liability protection, re-employment rights, and other worker protections for such volunteers similar to those currently provided to those who join the National Guard).

The bill further amends and clarifies the procedures for declaring a national public health emergency and the authority of the Secretary during the emergency period. In declaring such an emergency, the Secretary must notify Congress within 48 hours. Such emergency period may not be longer than 180 days, unless the Secretary determines otherwise and notifies Congress of such determination. During that emergency period, the Secretary may waive certain data submittal and reporting deadlines.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office raised concerns about the lack of coordination of federal anti-bioterrorism efforts. Therefore, the bill contains a number of measures to enhance coordination and cooperation among federal agencies. Title II establishes an Assistant Secretary for Emergency Preparedness at HHS to coordinate all functions within the Department relating to emergency preparedness, including preparing for and responding to biological threats and attacks. Title II also creates an interdepartmental Working Group on Bioterrorism that includes the Secretaries of HHS, Defense, Veterans Affairs, Labor, and Agriculture, the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and the Secretaries of the Treasury, the Department of Commerce, the United States, and other appropriate federal officials. The Working Group consolidates and streamlines the functions of two existing working groups first established under the “Public Health Threats and Emergencies Act of 2000.” It is responsible for coordinating the development of national preparedness and response, research on pathogens likely to be used in a biological attack, shared standards for procurement to determine priorities, other matters.

The bill authorizes roughly $3.2 billion in fiscal year 2002 emergency funding toward these critical activities. I believe it is important that this funding be considered in the context of the existing agreement limiting overall appropriations this year to $586 billion in addition to the $40 billion emergency supplemental appropriations bill. I will work very hard to ensure that the priorities outlined in this authorization legislation are included within this framework.

The “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001” is a comprehensive bill that takes a major step toward better preparing our nation to respond to the special challenges posed by biological weapons. We have worked diligently with many of our colleagues and the administration on the several weeks, and I believe that the product of these efforts represents a strong bill that includes some of the best ideas of both Republicans and Democrats.

I know the bill is stronger due to the input of so many of our colleagues and the leadership and guidance of the administration, and I would like to thank several of my colleagues for their efforts. Specifically, I would like to thank Senator COLLINS for her contributions regarding food safety and the appropriate oversight of children; Senator HUTCHINSON for his assistance with the provisions related to vaccine development and production; Senator ROBERTS and Majority Leader DASCHLE for their contributions to this bill in the area of agricultural safety, and many of our other colleagues who contributed in a bipartisan way—Senators GREGG, HAGEL, DEWINE, HATCH, MIKULSKY, DODD, and CLINTON.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to see that this important legislation becomes law this year.

I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

Summary—The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001

The “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001” is designed to address gaps in our nation’s bioterrorism and surveillance systems and our public health infrastructure. This new legislation builds on the foundation laid by the “Public Health Threats and Emergencies Act of 2000” by authorizing additional measures to improve our health system’s capacity to respond to bioterrorism, protect the Nation’s food supply, speed the development and production of vaccines and other countermeasures, enhance coordination of federal activities on bioterrorism, and improve the Nation’s capacity to respond to bioterrorism at the local, state, and national levels. The legislation would authorize approximately $3.2 billion in funding for Fiscal Year 2002 (and $3.2 billion in years thereafter) toward these activities.
TITLE IV—DEVELOPING NEW COUNTERMEASURE AGAINST BIOTERRORISM

To better respond to bioterrorism, Title IV expands our nation’s stockpile of smallpox vaccine, biological pharmaceuticals, and services. The bill also expands research on biological agents and toxins, as well as new treatments and vaccines for such agents and toxins.

Since the effectiveness of vaccines, drugs, and therapies for many biological agents and toxins often may not be ethically tested in human clinical trials, the Department of Health and Human Services’ Food and Drug Administration (FDA) will finalize by a date certain its rule regarding the approval of new countermeasures on the basis of animal data. This new authority will also be given enhanced consideration for expedited review by the FDA.

Because of the lack of or limitations on a market for vaccines for these agents and toxins, Title IV gives the Secretary of HHS authority to enter into long-term contracts with sponsors to “guarantee” that the government will purchase a certain quantity of a vaccine at a certain price. The government has the authority, through an existing Executive Order that sponsors through these contracts will be indemnified by the government for the development, manufacture, and use of the product as prescribed in the contract.

Title IV also provides a limited antitrust exemption to allow potential sponsors to discuss and develop new countermeasures, and to produce new countermeasures, including vaccines, and drugs. Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice approval of such agreements is required to ensure such agreements are not anti-competitive.

TITLE V—PROTECTING OUR NATION’S FOOD SUPPLY

With 57,000 establishments under its jurisdiction and only 700-800 food inspectors, including 175 import inspectors for more than 300 ports of entry, FDA needs increased resources for inspections of imported food. The President’s emergency relief budget included a request for $61 million to enable FDA to hire 410 new inspectors, lab specialists, and other experts, as well as invest in new technology and equipment to monitor food imports.

Title V grants FDA needed authorities to ensure the safety of domestic and imported food. It allows FDA to use qualified employees from other agencies and departments to help FDA inspect the food. It authorizes the use of any domestic or foreign facility that manufacturers or processes food for use in the U.S. to register with FDA. Importers must provide at least four hours notice of the food, the country of origin, and the amount of food to be imported. FDA also receives authority to prevent “port-shopping” by making food shipments denied entry at one U.S. port to ensure such shipments to do reappear at another U.S. port.

The bill gives additional tools to FDA to ensure proper records are maintained by those who manufacture, process, pack, transport, distribute, receive, hold, or import food. The bill grants the FDA the authority to determine that products are adulterated due to a threat of serious adverse health consequences or death to humans or animals. Importantly, the bill also enables FDA to detain food for inspection for a limited period of time if such food is believed to present a threat of serious adverse health consequences or death to humans or animals. The FDA may also debar imports from a pertinent food after an inspection for a limited period of time if such food is believed to present a threat of serious adverse health consequences or death to humans or animals.

The FDA’s ability to inspect such records and the chain of distribution of food and will strengthen their ability to trace the source and prevent crop and livestock diseases from spreading to the field and feedlots.

It also authorizes emergency funding to update and modernize USDA research facilities at the National Animal Disease Laboratory in New York, the National Animal Disease Laboratory in Iowa, the Southwest Poultry Research Laboratory in Georgia, and the National Veterinary Services Laboratory in Ames, Iowa. Also, it funds training and implements a rapid response strategy through a consortium of universities, the USDA, and agricultural industry groups.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a privilege to join my distinguished colleague, Senator FRIST, to introduce this bipartisan legislation to respond to one of the most severe dangers of terrorism, the grave threat of bioterrorist attacks. I commend Senator FRIST for his impressive continuing leadership on this vital issue.

We are all well aware of the emergency we face. In recent weeks, 15 animal diseases have threatened our health care system to the breaking point. A larger attack could be a disaster for entire communities of Americans. The anthrax attack of the past weeks has sounded the alarm. The clock is ticking on America’s reserve for a future attack. We’ve had the clearest possible warning, and we can’t afford to ignore it. We know that hundreds, even millions, of lives may be at stake—and we’re not ready yet.

The needs are great. A summit meeting of experts in bioterrorism and public health concluded that $835 million was needed just to address the most pressing needs for public health at the State and local levels.

The National Academy’s Association has said that states need $2 billion to improve readiness for bioterrorism. John Hopkins is spending $7.5 million to improve its ability to serve as a regional bioterrorism resource for Baltimore. Equipping just one hospital to this level in each of 100 cities across America would cost $750 million.

Clearly, our legislation is an important downpayment on preparedness. But we must make sure that our commitment to achieving full readiness is sustained in the weeks and months to come.

Since September 11, the American people have supported our commitment of billions of dollars and thousands of troops to battle terrorism abroad. But Americans also want to be safe at home. We have an obligation to every American that we will do no less to protect them against terrorism at home than we do to fight terrorism abroad.

The need for help at the State and local level is especially urgent. In the first 3 weeks of October alone, State health departments spent a quarter billion dollars responding to the anthrax attack. Many departments were forced to put aside other major public health responsibilities.

Hospitals across the country have immediate needs. According to the American Public Health Association, hospitals are hard-pressed even during the busy flu season, and could not cope with a lethal contagious disease like smallpox.

The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act we are proposing will address these deficiencies. It provides new resources for bioterrorism preparedness to the Food and Drug Administration that are needed to help to each State. These resources will be available to improve hospital readiness, equip emergency personnel, enhance State planning, and strengthen the ability of public health agencies to detect and contain dangerous disease outbreaks.

Federal stockpiles of antibiotics, vaccines, and other medical supplies are an essential part of the national response. We have a strategic petroleum reserve to safeguard our energy supply in times of crisis. We have a strategic pharmaceutical reserve as well, to ensure that we have the medicines and vaccines stockpiled to respond to bio-terrorist attacks. Our legislation establishes this reserve, and authorizes the development of sufficient smallpox and other vaccines to meet the needs of the entire U.S. population.

The legislation will also help protect the safety of the food supply, through increased research and surveillance of dangerous agricultural pathogens.

Every day we delay means that States can’t buy the equipment to improve their labs and hire the personnel they need. It means another day in which hospitals can’t purchase stocks of antibiotics or add emergency room capacity. It means further delay in building up pharmaceutical stockpiles and producing essential vaccines. We face an extraordinary threat, and we must take immediate action to combat it.

Our legislation builds on the work and suggestions of numerous colleagues on both sides of the aisle. One of the important areas addressed in the legislation is the threat of agricultural bioterrorism. Deliberate introduction of animal diseases could pose grave dangers to the safety of the food supply. Such acts of agricultural bioterrorism would also be economically devastating. The outbreaks of “mad cow” disease in Europe cost over $10 billion, and the foot and mouth outbreak cost billions more. We must guard against this danger.

Protecting the safety of the food supply is a central concern in addressing the problem of bioterrorism. Senator CLINTON, Senator MIKULSKI, Senator HARKIN, Senator COLLINS and Senator DURBIN have all contributed thoughtful perspectives on this subject. Our bill will enable FDA and USDA to protect the Nation’s food supply more effectively.
We're grateful for the leadership of other Senators who have made significant contributions to this legislation. Senator Bayh and Senator Edwards contributed important proposals on providing block grants to states, so that each state will be able to increase its preparedness. Their proposal ensures that each state will receive at least a minimum level of funding.

We're also grateful for the contributions that many of our distinguished colleagues have made to address the special needs of children. Senator Dodd, Senator Collins, Senator Clinton, Senator DeWine and Senator Murray have emphasized the crucial needs of children relating to bioterrorism. The legislation includes important initiatives to provide for the special needs of children and other vulnerable populations.

The events of recent weeks have shown the importance of effective communication with the public. Our legislation includes its early proposals on improving communication offered by several of our colleagues. Senator Carnahan has recognized the importance of the Internet in providing information to the public. The legislation includes the proposal to legislate to establish the official Federal Internet site on bioterrorism, to help inform the public.

Senator Mikulski also contributed provisions on improving communication. The bicameral blue ribbon task force can provide vitally needed insights on how best to provide information to the public. Senator Mikulski also recommended ways to ensure that states have coordinated plans for communicating information about bioterrorism and other emergencies to the public.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have a leading role in responding to bioterrorism. Senator Cleland has been an effective and skillful advocate for the needs of the CDC. Our legislation today incorporates many of the proposals introduced by Senator Cleland in his legislation on public health authorities.

Hospitals are also one of the keys to an effective response to bioterrorism. We must do more to strengthen the ability of the nation's hospitals to cope with bioterrorism. Senator Corzine has proposed to strengthen designated hospitals to serve as regional resources for bioterrorism preparedness. I commend him for his thoughtful proposal, which we have incorporated into the legislation.

We must also ensure that we monitor dangerous biological agents that might be used for bioterrorism. There is a serious loophole in current regulations, and we are grateful for the proposals offered by Senator Durbin and Senator Feinstein to achieve more effective control of these pathogens.

In a bioterror or attack, mental health care will be extremely important. We are indebted to Senator Wellstone for his skillful and compassionate advocacy for the needs of those with mental illnesses. In the event of a terrorist attack, thousands of persons would have mental health needs, and our legislation includes key proposals by Senator Wellstone to address these needs.

Mobilizing the nation's pharmaceutical and biotech companies so that they can fully contribute to this effort is critical. Senators Leahy, Hatch, DeWine and Biden have made thoughtful contributions to the antitrust provisions of the bill, which will encourage a helpful public-private partnership to combat bioterrorism.

This legislation is urgent because the need to prepare for a bioterrorist attack is urgent. I look forward to its prompt passage so that the American people can have the protection they need.

Mr. Biden, Mr. President, I am proud to be an original cosponsor of the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act, a comprehensive package of measures to improve our Nation's capability to respond to a future biological weapons attack against our country. This bill, introduced by Senators Kennedy and Frist, would authorize $3.25 billion in funding for fiscal year 2002, a substantial boost in resources for the measures outlined in the bill. I applaud Senators Kennedy and Frist for coming together in a bipartisan spirit and putting forth a bill that takes the first important step towards truly protecting our Nation against future acts of bioterrorism. When Sam Nunn testified in early November before the Foreign Relations Committee, he was very clear, bioterrorism is a direct threat to the national security of the United States and we need to invest the necessary resources to counter this threat accordingly.

As troubling as the recent spate of anthrax by mail attacks was, we were very fortunate that this was a comparatively small-scale attack. Seventeen Americans contracted inhalation anthrax; unfortunately, four individuals died. The next time a biological weapons attack occurs, we may not be so fortunate in dealing with a small number of victims who emerge over a period of weeks. Instead, we may face thousands of victims flooding local emergency rooms and overwhelming our hospitals in a matter of hours. Let's be real here, the anthrax attacks of the past weeks as they have been, have greatly stressed our national public health infrastructure. One out of every eight Centers for Disease Control and Prevention employees at their headquarters in Atlanta is working on the anthrax outbreak, forcing the CDC to sideline other essential core activities for the time being. Folks, what we have just been through is small potatoes compared to what we potentially will face. Plain and simple, we cannot afford to be so underprepared in the future.

Among Sam Nunn's recommendations for countering biological terrorism, he declared, "We need to recognize the central role of public health and medicine in this effort and engage these professionals fully as partners on the national security team." There are many good things in this bill, ranging from the expansion of the Pharmaceutical Stockpiles to efforts to enhance food safety, but I am especially pleased that the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act provides direct grants to improve the public health infrastructure at the state and local level. Our doctors, nurses, emergency medical technicians, and other public health personnel are our eyes and ears on the ground for detecting a biological weapons attack. We can't afford not to do everything we can to make sure they have the necessary tools and resources in containing any BW attack. This bill goes a long way towards fulfilling that core commitment.

So I strongly support the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act and I look forward to its early passage and entry into law before the Congress adjourns for the year. But I am deeply concerned that the bill ignores the international aspects to any effective response to potential bioterrorism. As chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, I know that we cannot address the threat of bioterrorism within the borders of the United States alone.

Let me be clear, a biological weapons attack need not originate in the United States to pose a threat. A dangerous pathogen deliberately released anywhere in the world can quickly spread to the United States in a matter of days, if not hours. The scope and frequency of international trade, travel, and migration patterns offer unlimited opportunities for pathogens to spread across national borders and even to move from one continent to another. Therefore, we need to view all infectious disease epidemics, wherever they originate, as a potential threat to all nations.

It is for this reason that Senator Helms, the distinguished ranking member on the Foreign Relations Committee, and I worked together in seeking to insert provisions in this bill to enhance global disease monitoring and surveillance. With Senator Kennedy's strong backing, we wanted to ensure the full availability of information, i.e. disease characteristics, pathogen strains, transmission patterns, and international infectious epidemics overseas that may provide clues indicating possible illegal biological weapons use or research. Even if an infectious disease outbreak occurs naturally, improved monitoring and surveillance can help contain the epidemic and tip off scientists and public health professionals to new diseases that may be used as biological weapons in the future.

The World Health Organization, WHO, made available a worldwide network last year, called the Global Alert and Response Network, to monitor and track infectious disease outbreaks in every region of the world.
The WHO has done an impressive job so far working on a shoestring budget. But this global network is only as good as its components, individual nations. Many developing nations simply do not possess the personnel, laboratory equipment or public health infrastructure to track disease patterns or detect traditional and emerging pathogens. In fact, these nations often just seek to keep up in treating those who have already fallen ill.

Doctors and nurses in many developing countries only treat a small fraction of the patients who may be ill with a specific infectious disease—in effect, they are only witnessing the tip of a potentially much larger iceberg. According to the National Intelligence Council, governments in developing countries in Africa and Asia have established rudimentary or no systems at all for disease surveillance, response or prevention. For example, in 1994, an outbreak of plague occurred in India, resulting in the loss of billions of dollars of economic damage as trade and travel with India ground to a halt. The plague outbreak was so severe because Indian authorities did not catch the epidemic in its early stages. Authorities caught the disease after the patients had already fallen ill.

Without shoring up these nations’ capabilities to detect and contain disease outbreaks, we are leaving the entire world vulnerable to either a deliberate biological weapons attack or an especially virulent naturally occurring epidemic.

Therefore, Senator HELMS and I worked together in proposing language for this bill to authorize $150 million in fiscal year 02 and fiscal year 03 to strengthen disease surveillance and monitoring at the international level. Without shoring up these nations’ capabilities to detect and contain disease outbreaks, we are leaving the entire world vulnerable to either a deliberate biological weapons attack or an especially virulent naturally occurring epidemic.

The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act would put in place a comprehensive national strategy to combat bioterrorism. This legislation would improve preparedness at the Federal, State, and local levels. It would increase investments in public health surveillance systems and public health laboratories to improve our ability to detect an attack. Moreover, the Act would strengthen our ability to contain the spread of a bioterrorism attack by increasing the Nation’s stockpile of vaccines and treatments.

One critical component of a national strategy on bioterrorism is communication between the government and the public. Americans have questions about what bioterrorism is and how they can protect their families. They need a reliable source of information where they can go to get accurate answers to their questions. The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act would put in place a comprehensive national communications strategy in the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act. This legislation calls for the creation of a single website containing information on bioterrorism that would serve as the official federal government source of information for the public. This website will provide “one-stop shopping” for people who need to find answers to questions about bioterrorism. For example, the fear of bioterrorism is a fear of the unknown. Knowledge is power, and the more knowledge we have about terrorism, the more power we have to overcome our fears.

I am hopeful that a majority of my colleagues will recognize we cannot leave the rest of the world to fend for itself in combating biological weapons and infectious diseases in general if we are to ensure America’s security as well. Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act. I am proud to join Senator KENNEDY, Senator FRIST, and Senator ORRIN as a co-sponsor of this timely bipartisan legislation. Senator KENNEDY and Senator FRIST have been leaders on this issue even before the events of September 11. In June of 2000, they introduced the Public Health Threats and Emergencies Act, which was enacted into law last year.

The recent anthrax attacks have shown that Congress must do much more to prepare our country for possible future bioterrorism attacks. We need to ensure that all of our communities across the country, both rural and urban, are equipped to respond to a bioterrorism attack in the event that such an unfortunate event should occur.
food supply need accurate information on bioterrorism. This website would include information geared specifically towards the needs of agricultural workers and the unique challenges they might encounter in the event of a bioterrorism attack on our food supply. I encourage all segments of this website as soon as possible.

The Bioterrorism Preparedness Act also contains other provisions aimed at protecting our food supply. It recognizes that the Nation’s food supply cannot be left vulnerable to a terrorist attack. The bill would authorize funds to increase the Food and Drug Administration’s authority to perform food inspections. It would also authorize funds to improve security at facilities belonging to the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Health and Human Services, and universities across the country, where potential animal and plant pathogens are housed or researched.

I know the farmers in Missouri, as well as across the country, are concerned about protecting their crops and livestock. A terrorist attack on these targets has the potential to not only disrupt the food supply in the U.S., but throughout the world. The potential economic impact on farmers’ livelihood would be devastating to them and their families. The food safety provisions in this bill go far in protecting this essential national resource.

Another component in dealing with bioterrorism is providing states with the resources to be equipped to respond. The bill would award block grants to states for improving preparedness and coordination in the event of an attack. These grants would allow States to improve their surveillance and detection capabilities. Further, they would allow states to bolster their public health infrastructure to best protect the public from an attack.

These funds are especially important because when it comes to protecting our nation from terrorism, the Federal Government cannot do it alone. We need the cooperation and support of State and local governments to protect the citizens at all levels. These funds will help ensure that State governments have the resources they need to prevent and respond to a bioterrorism attack.

This bipartisan legislation would allow us to improve its ability to prevent, detect, contain, and respond to a possible bioterrorist attack. In this time of uncertainty, preparation is our best defense. This bill provides the necessary resources to strengthen that defense throughout all levels of government—Federal, State, and local. I urge my colleagues to support the “Bioterrorism Preparedness Act” and to act on it expeditiously.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, along with Senator Frist, Senators, COLLINS, BOND, HAGEL, SMOWE, DEWINE, and other colleagues, I rise today in support of the Bioterrorism Preparedness Act of 2001.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

heard from automakers designing the technology for more fuel efficient cars. The Commerce Committee has jurisdiction over the Corporate Average Fuel Economy, CAFE, program and will continue a series of hearings on the issue delayed by the attacks of September 11. The United States must assert itself as a leader in research, development and deployment of these and other technologies.

The Global Climate Change Act of 2001 would move us up our own curve of scientific understanding, research, policy innovation and technological innovation. The bill will complement other legislation under consideration in other Senate committees for reducing our greenhouse gas emissions, as well as legislation to improve CAFE in the Commerce Committee. The Global Climate Change Act of 2001 will also provide a solid technical basis upon which to build in future greenhouse emissions tracking, reduction, or trading programs.

The bill contains provisions aimed at bringing the world-class science, technology, and planning expertise of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, NIST, and other Department of Commerce programs to bear on this problem, whether it is in climate observation, measurement and verification, information management, modeling and monitoring, technology development and transfer, or hazards planning and prevention.

First, the bill would endorse the elevation of climate change issues in the Administration, identifying the Office of Science and Technology Policy, OSTP, as the coordinating entity in the White House. An interagency task force on global climate change action chaired by the Secretary of Commerce would be responsible for developing a multi-department climate change action strategy, including development of mitigation approaches.

Second, it would create an emissions reporting system to ensure accurate measurement, reporting, and verification of greenhouse gas emissions, which is essential to any efforts to reduce our emissions. The bill utilizes the technical capabilities of the NIST and NOAA to establish uniform and credible new measurement methods and technologies. It establishes a mandatory reporting system for greenhouse gas emissions for entities operating in the U.S. with significant emissions. The system will maximize completeness, accuracy and transparency and minimize costs for covered entities. It will be designed to ensure interoperability of any U.S., state or international system of reporting and trading greenhouse gas emissions. It would also require Commerce to issue annual reports showing greenhouse gas emissions and trends, including areas where reductions have occurred.

Third, the bill would ensure that we in Congress get the best independent scientific and technical expertise in our climate change oversight role. The bill would create a Science and Technology Assessment Service that would provide ongoing science and technology advice to Congress. Since the Office of Technology Assessment, OTA, has been closed, the bill agrees that Congress has suffered from lack of ongoing, credible advice. While some objected to the OTA structure, all agree that expert technical advice for Congress is essential to ensuring we hold up our commitment to make progress on this important issue. Congressional requests for advice are overburdening the National Academy of Sciences and threatening to compromise its independent stature. The bill would economize on resources and personnel by utilizing the administrative services of the Library of Congress and the expertise of the National Research Council, and provide an ongoing separate service to Congress that will not threaten compromise NAS’s independent role.

Fourth, the bill revises the Global Change Research Act of 1990 and the National Climate Program Act, so that interagency and Commerce Department funding for detecting and monitoring the climate system, the oceans are capable of dramatic climate surprises we stand the oceans, the engines of climate. I am glad to report that the research accomplished under the National Global Change Research Act has led to increased understanding of global climate change, as well as regional climate change. We have better understood of how the Earth’s atmosphere, ocean and land surface function together as a dynamic system, but we cannot stop there. Only recently, NOAA measured an important increase in temperature in all the world’s oceans over a 40 year period. We need to understand the causes and how that will affect us. All research ensures that federal and state decision-makers get better information and tools to cope with such climate related problems as food supply, energy allocation, and water resources.

While we have learned an astonishing amount about climate and other earth/ocean interactions in only a decade, we have other critical questions that require further research to answer. Many of these questions are relevant not only to improving our scientific understanding, but also to contributing to our future social and economic well-being. For example, climate anomalies during the past two years, most directly related to the 1997–1998 El Nino event resulted for over $30 billion in impacts worldwide. When impacts from the recent floods in China are included, these direct losses could rise to $60 billion. This most recent El Nino claimed 21,000 lives, displaced 4.5 million people, and affected 82 million acres of land through severe floods, drought, and fire. When we better understand the global climate system, and its relationship to regional climate events like El Nino, we may be able to find ways, such as improved forecasting and warning—to avoid some of the severe impacts.

Understanding these and other impacts of climate change at the regional level is a critical step in preparing for these changes. We must maintain our commitment to research and further refine our existing modeling capabilities. The second critical need is planning for sea level rise and other inevitable results of climate change. It is costly in human lives and real dollars to manage these problems in a “business-as-usual” mode. Just as we needed to modernize our National Weather Service, we need to strengthen and modernize our National Climate Service, which can help the U.S. predict and plan for climate events. This includes establishing a national ocean and coastal observing system using the expertise and resources of a variety of federal agencies. In addition, this bill will help our coastal communities at risk from future climate change prepare for such an event by using the expertise of the National Research Council, NRC, has been forced to expand its role in providing research and information to Congress. However, the NRC studies have their limitations. The reports, often slow and expensive, provide limited opportunity for formal input and review by affected parties. As the National Academy complex, NRC makes specific recommendations rather than laying out a range of alternative policy options.

The problems addressed by Congress are becoming increasingly complex. Science and technology play a crucial role in addressing problems in energy, defense, aviation and the environment. Without a permanent, non-partisan source of independent scientific and technical policy analysis, Congress become lost in the wealth of information provided by scientists, think tanks, and interest groups. The Global Climate Change Act of 2001 addresses this problem by creating a service that would provide ongoing science and technology advice to Congress, but avoid the criticism leveled at OTA. It would economize on resources and personnel by utilizing the administrative services of the Library of Congress and the expertise of the National Research Council. Congressional requests for advice are overburdening NRC and threatening to compromise its independent stature as it is increasingly asked to fill the role of OTA. This provision would refer to NRC as the source of outside, unbiased advice and expertise, and it would provide a separate service to Congress. This service would also be asked to review the report of the Climate Change Action Task Force.

The Global Climate Change Act of 2001 demonstrates that the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation is serious about climate change, and I commend this Act to you.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 181—TO AUTHORIZE TESTIMONY, DOCUMENT PRODUCTION AND LEGAL REPRESENTATION IN STATE OF IDAHO V. JOSEPH DANIEL HOPPER

Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. LOTTY) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

WHEREAS, by the privileges of the Senate of the United States and Rule XI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, no evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate by the judicial or administrative process, be taken from such control or possession but by permission of the Senate;

WHEREAS, when it appears that evidence under the control or in the possession of the Senate may promote the administration of justice, the Senate will take such action as will promote the ends of justice consistently with the privileges of the Senate; now therefore be it

Resolved That Elizabeth Kay Tucker, or any other current or former employee of Senator Craig’s in connection with the testimony or documents production authorized in section one of this resolution.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 84—PROVIDING FOR A JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK CITY, NEW YORK

Mr. SCHUMER (for himself and Mrs. CLINTON) submitted the following concurrent resolution which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

WHEREAS, on September 11, 2001, the United States was victim to the worst terrorist attacks in American history; four American airliners were deliberately crashed into the World Trade Center towers in New York City and the Pentagon outside of Washington, D.C.;

WHEREAS, the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center towers located in New York City have resulted in the deaths of over 5,000 individuals and the destruction of both towers as well as adjacent buildings;

WHEREAS, these attacks were by far the deadliest terrorist attacks ever launched against the United States, and by targeting symbols of American strength and success, the attacks were an attempt to violate the freedoms and liberties that have been bestowed upon all Americans;

WHEREAS in 1789 the first meeting of the United States House of Representatives and Senate was held in New York City; and

WHEREAS in this time of crisis it would be appropriate that a special one-day joint session of Congress be convened in New York City as a symbol of the Nation’s solidarity with the New Yorkers who exemplify the human spirit of courage, resilience, and strength: Now, therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in New York City as a symbol of the Nation’s solidarity with the New Yorkers who exemplify the human spirit of courage, resilience, and strength:

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED AND PROPOSED

SA 2149. Mr. REID (for Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself and Mr. SPECTER)) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2540. An act to amend title 38, United States Code, to provide a cost-of-living adjustment in the rates of disability compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities and the rates of dependency and indemnity compensation for survivors of such veterans.

SA 2150. Mr. REID (for Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself and Mr. SPECTER)) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 2540, supra.

SA 2151. Mr. BOND submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, supra, to provide tax incentives for economic recovery; which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 2152. Mr. DeWINE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 2153. Mr. BOND submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 2154. Mr. SMITH, of New Hampshire submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, supra, which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 2155. Mr. ENZI (for himself, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. HUTCHISON, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. BREUX, Mr. HUTCHISON, and Mr. CARPER) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 1552, to extend the moratorium enacted by the Post-9/11 Tax Freedom Act through 2006, and for other purposes.

SA 2157. Mr. McCAIN (for himself, Mr. ALLARD, Mr. LIBERMAN, Ms. SOWE, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. MURkowski, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. NIENHOFF, Mr. LANDRIEU, Mr. BURNS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. SESSIONS, and Mr. DEWINE) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, supra, to provide tax incentives for economic recovery; which was ordered to lie on the table.

SA 2158. Mr. REID (for Mr. HUTCHISON) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1573, to authorize the provision of educational and health care assistance to the women and children of Afghanistan.

SA 2159. Mr. REID (for Mr. FITZGERALD (for himself and Mr. DURBIN)) proposed an amendment to the concurrent resolution S. Con. Res. 44, expressing the sense of the Congress regarding National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day.

SA 2160. Mr. REID (for Mr. BOND (for himself and Mr. Specter)) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1196, to amend the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, and for other purposes.

SA 2161. Mr. DASCHLE proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1369, to provide for the conveyance of certain real property in South Dakota to the State of South Dakota with indemnification by the United States Government, and for other purposes.

SA 2162. Mr. REID (for Mr. HATCH) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 330, to make technical corrections in patent, copyright, and trademark laws.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCES TO TITLE 38, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Veterans Compensation Rate Amendment of 2001".

(b) REFERENCES TO TITLE 38, UNITED STATES CODE.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be to the section or other provision of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 2. DISABILITY COMPENSATION.

(a) INCREASE IN RATES.—Section 1114 is amended—

(1) by striking "$98" in subsection (a) and inserting "$103";

(2) by striking "$188" in subsection (b) and inserting "$199";

(3) by striking "$288" in subsection (c) and inserting "$306";

(4) by striking "$413" in subsection (d) and inserting "$439";

(5) by striking "$589" in subsection (e) and inserting "$625";

(6) by striking "$743" in subsection (f) and inserting "$790";

(7) by striking "$937" in subsection (g) and inserting "$982";

(8) by striking "$1,087" in subsection (h) and inserting "$1,127";

(9) by striking "$1,299" in subsection (i) and inserting "$1,342";

(10) by striking "$1,525" in subsection (j) and inserting "$1,572";

(11) in subsection (k);

(A) by striking "$76" both places it appears and inserting "$80"; and

(B) by striking "$2,333" and "$3,553" and inserting "$2,661" and "$3,773", respectively;

(12) by striking "$2,893" in subsection (l) and inserting "$2,991";

(13) by striking "$2,794" in subsection (m) and inserting "$2,963";

(14) by striking "$3,179" in subsection (n) and inserting "$3,376";

(15) by striking "$3,553" each place it appears in subsections (o) and (p) and inserting "$3,773";

(16) by striking "$1,525" and "$2,271" in subsection (r) and inserting "$1,621" and "$2,413", respectively; and

(17) by striking "$2,333" in subsection (s) and inserting "$2,422".

(b) SPECIAL RULE.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs may, in his discretion, authorize administratively, consistent with the increases authorized by this section, the rates of disability compensation payable to persons within the coverage of Public Law 88-409 who are not in receipt of compensation payable pursuant to chapter 11 of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 3. ADDITIONAL COMPENSAATION FOR DEPENDENTS.

Section 1115 is amended—

(1) by striking "$17" in clause (A) and inserting "$24";

(2) by striking "$201" and "$61" in clause (B) and inserting "$213" and "$64", respectively;

(3) by striking "$80" and "$61" in clause (C) and inserting "$84" and "$64", respectively;

(4) by striking "$80" in clause (D) and inserting "$800";

(5) by striking "$22" in clause (E) and inserting "$234"; and

(6) by striking "$186" in clause (F) and inserting "$199".

SEC. 4. CLOTHING ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN DISABLED VETERANS.

Section 1315 is amended by striking "$56" and inserting "$560".

SEC. 5. DEPENDENCY AND INDEMNITY COMPENSATION FOR SURVIVING SPouses.

(a) New Law Rates.—Section 1311 is amended—

(1) by striking "$881" in paragraph (1) and inserting "$905"; and

(2) by striking "$191" in paragraph (2) and inserting "$202".

(b) Old Law Rates.—The table in section 1311(a)(3) is amended to read as follows:

of dependency and indemnity compensation for survivors of such veterans.'

SA 2151. Mr. BOND submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 3090, to provide tax incentives for economic recovery, which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. 4A. FAIR AND EQUITABLE RESOLUTION OF LABOR INTEGRATION ISSUES.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to require procedures that ensure the fair and equitable resolution of labor integration issues, in order to prevent further disruption to transactions for the combination of air carriers, which would potentially aggravate the disruption caused by the attack on the United States on September 11, 2001.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this Act:

(1) AIR CARRIER.—The term `air carrier' means an air carrier that holds a certificate issued under chapter 411 of title 49, United States Code.

(2) COVERED AIR CARRIER.—The term `covered air carrier' means a transaction that would have been an acquisition of control of an air carrier by September 11, 2001.

(3) COVERED EMPLOYEE.—The term `covered employee' means an employee who—

(A) is a member of a craft or class that is subject to the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.);

(B) involves the transfer of ownership or control of—

(i) 50 percent or more of the equity securities (as defined in section 101 of title 11, United States Code) of an air carrier; or

(ii) 50 percent or more (by value) of the assets of the air carrier;

(c) CREDITS FOR EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVE COMPONENT PERSONNEL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart D of part IV of chapter 1 (relating to business-related credits) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

SEC. 45G. RESERVE COMPONENT EMPLOYMENT CREDIT.

(1) MAXIMUM CREDIT.—The credit allowed by section 38(c) for purposes of this section is in addition to any deduction otherwise allowable with respect to the self-employed taxpayer.

(2) DEDUCTION ALLOWED WHETHER OR NOT TAXPAYER ELECTS TO ITEMIZE.—Section 62(a)(2) (relating to certain trade and business deductions of employees) is amended by adding after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

`(k) DEDUCTION ALLOWED WHETHER OR NOT TAXPAYER ELECTS TO ITEMIZE.—The term 'covered employee' means an employee who, for the taxable year, participates in qualified reserve component duty during the taxable year, including time spent in a travel status.''

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001.

(c) SELF-EMPLOYMENT CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The self-employment credit of a qualified self-employed taxpayer for any taxable year is equal to 50 percent of the excess, if any, of—

(A) the self-employed taxpayer's average daily self-employment income for the taxable year, and

(B) the average daily military pay and allowances received by the taxpayer during the taxable year, while participating in qualified reserve component duty to the exclusion of the taxpayer's normal self-employment duties for the number of days the taxpayer participates in qualified reserve component duty during the taxable year, including time spent in a travel status.

(2) AVERAGE DAILY SELF-EMPLOYMENT INCOME AND AVERAGE DAILY MILITARY PAY AND ALLOWANCES.—As used with respect to a self-employed taxpayer—

(A) the term 'average daily self-employment income' means the self-employment income (as defined in section 1402) of the taxpayer as a member of a reserve component of the Armed Forces of the United States.

(B) the amount paid to the taxpayer during the taxable year as military pay and allowances, and

(C) the term 'average daily military pay and allowances' includes—

(i) the amount paid to the taxpayer during the taxable year as military pay and allowances, and

(ii) the number of days the taxpayer participates in qualified reserve component duty during the taxable year, including time spent in a travel status.

(3) QUALIFIED SELF-EMPLOYED TAXPAYER.—The term 'qualified self-employed taxpayer' means a taxpayer who—

(A) has net earnings from self-employment during the taxable year, and

(B) a member of the Ready Reserve of a reserve component of an Armed Force of the United States.

(4) CREDIT IN ADDITION TO DEDUCTION.—The employment credit provided in this section is in addition to any deduction otherwise allowable with respect to compensation actually paid to a qualified employee during any period during which the employee participates in qualified reserve component duty to the exclusion of normal employment duties.

(d) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) MAXIMUM CREDIT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The credit allowed by subsection (a) for the taxable year—
"(i) shall not exceed $7,500 in the aggregate, and
"(ii) shall not exceed $2,000 with respect to each qualified employee.

(1) CONTROLLING PERSONS.—For purposes of applying the limitations in subparagraph (A)— "(i) all members of a controlled group shall be treated as persons, and.

"(ii) such limitations shall be allocated among the members of such group in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe.

For purposes of this subparagraph, all persons treated as a single employer under subsection (a) or (b) of section 52 or subsection
(m) or (o) of section 414 shall be treated as members of a controlled group.

"(2) DISALLOWANCE FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH EMPLOYMENT OR SELF-EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS OF MEMBERS OF THE RESERVE COMPONENTS OF THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES.—
No credit shall be allowed under subsection
(a) to a taxpayer for—
"(A) any taxable year in which the taxpayer fails under a final order, judgment, or other process issued or required by a district court of the United States under section 3323 of title 30 of the United States Code with respect to a violation of chapter 43 of such title, and

"(B) the two succeeding taxable years.

"(3) DISALLOWANCE WITH RESPECT TO PER-SONS ORDERED TO ACTIVE DUTY FOR TRAIN-ING.—No credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) to a taxpayer with respect to any period in which such person on whose behalf the credit would otherwise be allowable is called or ordered to active duty for any of the following types of duty:

"(A) active duty for training under any provision of title 10, United States Code,

"(B) training at encampments, maneuvers, outdoor target practice, or other exercises under chapter 5 of title 32, United States Code,

"(C) full-time National Guard duty, as defined in section 123(d)(5) of title 10, United States Code.

"(f) GENERAL DEFINITIONS AND SPECIFIC RULES.—

"(1) MILITARY PAY AND ALLOWANCES.—The term 'military pay' means pay as that term is defined in section 101(21) of title 37, United States Code, and the term 'allowances' means allowances payable to members of the Armed Forces of the United States under chapter 7 of that title.

"(2) QUALIFIED RESERVE COMPONENT DUTY.—
The term 'qualified reserve component duty' includes only active duty performed, as designated in the reservist's military orders, in support of a contingency operation as defined in section 102(a)(13) of title 10, United States Code.

"(3) NORMAL EMPLOYMENT AND SELF-EMP-LOYMENT TAXES.—No credit shall be deemed to be participating in qualified reserve component duty to the exclusion of normal employment or self-employment duties if the person is not engaged in or undertaken any substitual activity related to the person's normal employment or self-employment duties while participating in qualified reserve component duty unless in an authorized leave status or other authorized absence from military duties. If a person engages in or undertakes any substantial activity related to the person's normal employment or self-employment duties at any time while participating in a period of qualified reserve component duty, unless during a period of authorized absence from military duties, the person shall be deemed to have engaged in or undertaken such activity for the entire period of qualified reserve component duty.

"(d) CERTAIN RULES TO APPLY.—Rules similar to the rules of subsections (c), (d), and (e) of section 52 shall apply for purposes of this section."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 38(b) (relating to general business credit) is amended by—
"(1) by striking "plus" at the end of paragraph (14),

"(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (14), and

"(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(15) the reserve component employment credit described in section 45G(a).

"(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the section relating to section 43P the following new item:

"Sec. 45G. Reserve component employment

SEC. 5. STREAMLINED SALES AND USE TAX SYS-TE.

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF STREAMLINED SYS-TEM.—It is the sense of Congress that States and localities, working together to de-develop a streamlined sales and use tax system that addresses the following in the context of remote sales:
(1) A centralized, one-stop, multi-state reporting, submission, and payment system for sellers.
(2) Uniform definitions for goods or services, the sale of which may, by State action, be included in the tax base.
(3) Uniform rules for attributing transactions to particular taxing jurisdictions.
(4) Uniform procedures for-
(A) the treatment of purchasers exempt from sales and use taxes; and
(B) relief from liability for sellers that rely on such State systems.
(5) Uniform procedures for the certification of software that sellers rely on to determine sales and use tax rates and taxability.
(6) A uniform format for tax returns and remittance forms.
(7) Consistent electronic filing and remittance methods.
(8) State administration of all State and local sales and use taxes.
(9) Uniform audit procedures, including a provision giving a seller the option to be subject to an audit per year using those procedures; except that if the seller does not comply with the procedures to elect a single audit, any State can conduct audits under those procedures.
(10) Reasonable compensation for tax colcollection by sellers.
(11) Exemption from use tax collection requirements for remote sellers falling below a de minimis threshold of $5,000,000 in gross annual sales.
(12) Appropriate protections for consumer privacy.
(13) Uniform enforcement criteria and a process for ensuring compliance by those States that adopt the streamlined sales and use tax systems.
(14) A process for resolving conflicts of law among States in the interpretation or application of statutory or regulatory provisions implementing this Act.
(15) Other features that the States dean warranted to promote simplicity, uniformity, neutrality, efficiency, and fairness.
(b) STUDY.—It is the sense of Congress that a joint, comprehensive study should be commisioned by State and local governments and the business community to determine the cost to all sellers of collecting and re-mitting State and local sales and use taxes on sales made by sellers under the law as in-effect on the date of enactment of this Act
mitting State and local sales and use taxes.

SEC. 6. INTERSTATE SALES AND USE TAX COM-PACT.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—In general, the States are authorized to enter into an Interstate Sales and Use Tax Compact. The Compact shall develop a uniform, streamlined sales and use tax system consistent with section 5(a), and shall provide that States joining the Compact must adopt that system.
(b) EXPEDITED.—The authorization in subsection (a) shall expire if the Compact has not been formed before January 1, 2005.

SEC. 11. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) STATE.—The term "State" means any State of the United States of America and includes the District of Columbia.

(2) GOODS OR SERVICES.—The term "goods or services" includes tangible and intangible personal property and services.

(3) REMOTE SALE.—The term "remote sale" means a sale in interstate commerce of goods or services attributed, under the rules of the Act, to the State or place of performance specified for the such sale.

(4) LOCUS OF REMOTE SALE.—The term "particular taxing jurisdiction", when used with respect to the location of a remote sale, means the State and the local taxing jurisdiction in which the business activity related to the sale occurred.

SEC. 12. USE-TAX RATES THROUGH AVER-

AGE OF THE SALES TAX RATES.

The term "average of the sales tax rates actually implicable to the sale made in the State", when used with respect to a sale made in the State, means the weighted average of the sales tax rates actually implicable to the sale made in the State, as determined for the month in which the sale was made, based on the applicable sales tax rates that were in effect at the time of the sale.

(1) STATE.—The term "average of the sales tax rates actually implicable to the sale made in the State", when used with respect to a sale made in the State, means the weighted average of the sales tax rates actually im-

(A) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term “Administrator” means the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency; (B) AFFILIATE.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “affiliate” means any individual, partnership, association, limited liability company, or any other type of business entity; (B) INCLUSIONS.—The term “affiliate” includes a director, officer, or employee of an affiliate; (C) EXCLUSIONS.—The term “affiliate” includes an institution, agency, officer, or employee of an entity; (D) FUND.—The term “Fund” means the Environment and Project Trust Fund established under section 4; (E) HOMESTAKE.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “Homestake” means the Homestake Mining Company of California, a California corporation; (B) INCLUSION.—The term “Homestake” includes— (i) a director, officer, or employee of Homestake; (ii) an affiliate of Homestake; and (iii) any successor of Homestake or successor to the interest of Homestake in the Mine; (F) INDEPENDENT ENTITY.—The term “independent entity” means an independent entity selected jointly by Homestake, the South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources, and the Administrator— (A) to conduct a due diligence inspection under section 4(b)(2)(A); and (B) to determine the fair value of the Mine under section 4(a). (G) INDIAN TRIBE.—The term “Indian tribe” means the tribe of the Mine to the Mine; and (H) LABORATORY.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “laboratory” includes the conveyance of the Mine to the Mine; and (B) INCLUSIONS.—The term “laboratory” includes operating and support facilities of the laboratory.

(9) Mine.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “Mine” means the portion of the Homestake Mine in Lawrence County, South Dakota, proposed to be conveyed to the State for the establishment and operation of the laboratory. (B) INCLUSIONS.—The term “Mine” includes— (i) real property, mineral and oil and gas rights, shafts, mains, structures, broken rock, fixtures, facilities, and personal property to be conveyed for establishment and operation of the laboratory; (ii) any water that flows into the Mine from any source; (C) EXCLUSIONS.—The term “Mine” does not include— (i) the feature known as the “Open Cut”; (ii) any tailings or tailings storage facility (other than backfill in the portion of the Mine described in subparagraph (A)); or (iii) any waste rock or any site used for the dumping of waste rock (other than broken rock in the portion of the Mine described in subparagraph (A)); (D) PERSON.—The term “person” means— (i) an individual; (ii) a trust; firm, joint stock company, corporation (including a government corporation), partnership, association, limited liability company, or any other type of business entity; (E) a State or political subdivision of a State; (F) a foreign governmental entity; (G) an Indian tribe; and (H) any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States.

(11) Project sponsor.—The term “project sponsor” means an entity that manages or pays the costs of 1 or more projects that are carried out or proposed to be carried out at the laboratory. (12) SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY BOARD.—The term “Scientific Advisory Board” means the entity designated in the management plan of the laboratory to provide scientific oversight for the operation of the laboratory.

(13) STATE.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The term “State”, means the State to which the Mine is conveyed under this Act. (B) INCLUSIONS.—The term “State” includes an institution, agency, officer, or employee of the State.

(4) CONVEYANCE OF REAL PROPERTY.
(A) IN GENERAL.— (1) DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS.—Subject to paragraph (2) and subsection (b) and notwithstanding any other provision of law, on the execution and delivery of Homestake of 1 or more quit-claim deeds or bills of sale conveying to the State all right, title, and interest in and to the Mine, title to the Mine shall pass from Homestake to the State.

(2) CONDITION OF MINE ON CONVEYANCE.—The Mine shall be conveyed as is, with no representations as to the condition of the property; (b) REQUIREMENTS FOR CONVEYANCE.— (1) IN GENERAL.—As a condition precedent of conveyance and of the assumption of liability by the United States in accordance with this Act, the Administrator shall accept the final report of the independent entity under paragraph (3). (2) DUE DILIGENCE INSPECTION.— (A) IN GENERAL.—As a condition precedent of conveyance and of Federal participation described in this Act, Homestake shall permit an independent entity to conduct a due diligence inspection to determine whether any condition of the Mine may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment. (B) CONCLUSIONS.—The conduct of the due diligence inspection, Homestake, the South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources, the Administrator, and the independent entity shall consult and agree upon the methodology and standards to be used, and other factors to be considered, by the independent entity in— (i) the conduct of the due diligence inspection; (ii) the scope of the due diligence inspection; and (iii) the time and duration of the due diligence inspection.

(3) REPORT TO THE ADMINISTRATOR.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The independent entity shall submit to the Administrator a report that— (i) describes the results of the due diligence inspection under paragraph (2) and (ii) identifies any condition of or in the Mine that may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment. (B) PROCEDURE.— (i) DRAFT REPORT.—Before finalizing the report under this paragraph, the independent entity shall— (I) issue a draft report; (II) submit to the Administrator, Homestake, and the State a copy of the draft report; (III) issue a public notice requesting comments on the draft report that requires all such comments to be filed not later than 45 days after issuance of the public notice; and (IV) during that 45-day public comment period, conduct at least 1 public hearing in Lead, South Dakota, to receive comments on the draft report. (ii) FINAL REPORT.—In the final report submitted to the Administrator under this paragraph, the independent entity shall respond to the Administrator’s request incorporate necessary changes suggested by the comments received on the draft report.

(4) REVIEW AND APPROVAL BY ADMINISTRATOR.— (A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after receiving the final report under paragraph (3), the Administrator shall— (i) review the report; and (ii) notify the State in writing of acceptance or rejection of the final report. (B) CONDITIONS FOR REJECTION.—The Administrator may reject the final report only if the Administrator identifies 1 or more conditions of the Mine that— (i) may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment, as determined by the Administrator; and (ii) require response action to correct each condition that may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment identified under clause (i) before conveyance and assumption by the Federal Government of liability concerning the Mine under this Act.

(C) RESPONSE ACTIONS AND CERTIFICATION.— (i) RESPONS ACTIONS.— (II) CERTIFICATION.— As a condition precedent of conveyance and of Federal participation described in this Act, Homestake shall permit an independent entity to conduct a due diligence inspection to determine whether any condition of the Mine may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment. (B) CONCLUSIONS.—The conduct of the due diligence inspection, Homestake, the South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources, the Administrator, and the independent entity shall consult and agree upon the methodology and standards to be used, and other factors to be considered, by the independent entity in— (i) the conduct of the due diligence inspection; (ii) the scope of the due diligence inspection; and (iii) the time and duration of the due diligence inspection.

(3) REPORT TO THE ADMINISTRATOR.— (A) IN GENERAL.—The independent entity shall submit to the Administrator a report that— (i) describes the results of the due diligence inspection under paragraph (2) and (ii) identifies any condition of or in the Mine that may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment. (B) PROCEDURE.— (i) DRAFT REPORT.—Before finalizing the report under this paragraph, the independent entity shall— (I) issue a draft report; (II) submit to the Administrator, Homestake, and the State a copy of the draft report; (III) issue a public notice requesting comments on the draft report that requires all such comments to be filed not later than 45 days after issuance of the public notice; and (IV) during that 45-day public comment period, conduct at least 1 public hearing in Lead, South Dakota, to receive comments on the draft report. (ii) FINAL REPORT.—In the final report submitted to the Administrator under this paragraph, the independent entity shall respond to the Administrator’s request incorporate necessary changes suggested by the comments received on the draft report.

(4) REVIEW AND APPROVAL BY ADMINISTRATOR.— (A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after receiving the final report under paragraph (3), the Administrator shall— (i) review the report; and (ii) notify the State in writing of acceptance or rejection of the final report. (B) CONDITIONS FOR REJECTION.—The Administrator may reject the final report only if the Administrator identifies 1 or more conditions of the Mine that— (i) may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment, as determined by the Administrator; and (ii) require response action to correct each condition that may pose an imminent and substantial threat to human health or the environment identified under clause (i) before conveyance and assumption by the Federal Government of liability concerning the Mine under this Act.
SEC. 5. ASSESSMENT OF PROPERTY.

(a) VALUATION OF PROPERTY.—The independent entity shall assess the fair value of the Mine.

(b) FAIR VALUE.—For the purposes of this section, the fair value of the Mine shall include the estimated cost, as determined by the Administrator under subsection (a), of replacing the shafts, winzes, hoists, tunnels, ventilation system, and other equipment and improvements at the Mine that are expected to be used at, or that will be useful to, the laboratory.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than the date on which each report developed in accordance with paragraph (b) is submitted to the Administrator, the independent entity described in subsection (a) shall submit to the State a report that identifies the fair value assessed under subsection (a).

SEC. 6. LIABILITY.

(a) ASSUMPTION OF LIABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), notwithstanding any other provision of law, on completion of the conveyance in accordance with this Act, the United States shall assume any and all liability relating to the Mine and laboratory, including liability for—

(A) damages;

(B) reclamation;

(C) the costs of response to any hazardous substance (as defined in section 101 of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601)), contaminant, or other material on, under, or relating to the Mine and laboratory; and

(D) closure of the Mine and laboratory.

(2) CLAIMS AGAINST UNITED STATES.—In the case of any claim brought against the United States, the United States shall be liable for—

(A) the cost of response actions, or the response action that will be completed as part of the final closure of the Mine, identified under that item.

(b) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.—None of the funds deposited into the Fund under item (aa) shall be used to pay the costs of the long-term response action, or the response action that will be completed as part of the final closure of the Mine, identified under that item.

(c) CONTRIBUTION BY HOMESTAKE.—The total amount that Homestake may spend, pay, or deposit into the Fund under subsection (I) and (II) of clause (i) shall not exceed—

(I) $75,000,000; less

(ii) the fair value of the Mine as determined under section 5(a).

(d) CERTIFICATION.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—After any response actions described in clause (i)(I) are carried out and any amounts are deposited under subsection (h)(I), the independent entity may certify to the Administrator that the conditions for rejection identified by the Administrator under paragraph (b) have been corrected.

(II) ACCEPTANCE OR REJECTION OF CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 60 days after an independent entity certifies under paragraph (b)(I), the Administrator shall accept or reject the certification.

(e) PAYMENT OR INDEMNIFICATION.—For the purposes of the conveyance, the requirements of this section shall be considered to be sufficient to create any requirement of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

SEC. 7. INSURANCE COVERAGE.

(a) PROPERTY AND LIABILITY INSURANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To the extent property and liability insurance is available and subject to the requirements described in paragraph (2), the State shall purchase property and liability insurance for the Mine and the operation of the laboratory to provide coverage against the liability described in subsection (a) and (b) of section 6.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

(A) TERMS OF INSURANCE.—In determining the type, extent of coverage, and policy limits of insurance purchased under this subsection, the State shall—

(i) periodically consult with the Administrator and the Scientific Advisory Board;

(ii) consider certain factors, including—

(I) the nature of the projects and experiments being conducted at the Mine;

(II) the availability and cost of commercial insurance;

and

(iii) the amount of funding available to purchase commercial insurance.

(B) ADDITIONAL TERMS.—The insurance purchased by the State under this subsection may provide coverage that is—

(i) secondary to the insurance purchased by project sponsors; and

(ii) in excess of amounts available in the Fund to pay any claim.

(c) INDEMNIFICATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, on completion of the conveyance in accordance with this Act, the Administrator may provide coverage that is—

(1) additional insured; or

(2) otherwise provide that the United States is primary to, or is additional insured to, any insurance obtained by the State.

Sec. 4361. The Administrator and the Scientific Advisory Board shall—

(a) pay the costs of, such response actions as are necessary to meet any requirement of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) or any applicable Federal environmental law, as determined by the Administrator.

(b) LIABILITY PROTECTION.—On completion of the conveyance, neither Homestake nor any person shall be liable to any person or the United States for injuries, costs, injunctive relief, reclamation, damages (including damages to natural resources or the environment), or expenses, or liable under any other claim (including claims for indemnification or contribution, claims by third parties for death, personal injury, illness, or loss of or damage to property, or claims for economic loss), under any law (including a regulation) for any claim arising out of or in connection with contamination, pollution, or other condition, change, or increase in the level of, or exposure to, any contaminant, or other material on, under, or relating to the liabilities disposed of in a civil action brought under—

(A) the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq.);

(B) the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6901 et seq.);

(C) the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.); or

(D) any other applicable Federal environmental law, as determined by the Administrator.

(c) INDEMNIFICATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, on completion of the conveyance in accordance with this Act, the Administrator may require, as a condition of approval of a project for the laboratory, the project sponsor to provide property and liability insurance or other applicable coverage for natural resources or the environment.

(d) TIMING FOR ASSUMPTION OF LIABILITY.—If the conveyance is effectuated by more than 1 legal transaction, the assumption of liability, liability protection, indemnification, and waiver of sovereign immunity provided for under this subsection shall apply to each legal transaction, as of the date on which the transaction is completed and with respect to such portion of the Mine as is conveyed under that transaction.

(e) EXCEPTIONS FOR HOMESTAKE CLAIMS.—Nothing in this section constitutes an assumption of liability by the United States, or relief of liability of Homestake, for—

(1) any unemployment, worker’s compensation, or other employment-related claim or cause of action of an employee of Homestake that arose before the date of conveyance;

(2) any claim or cause of action that arose before the date of conveyance, other than an environmental claim or a claim concerning natural resources;

(3) any violation of any provision of criminal law; or

(4) any claim, injury, damage, liability, or reclamation or cleanup obligation with respect to any property or asset that is not conveyed under this Act, except to the extent that any such claim, injury, damage, liability, or reclamation or cleanup obligation arises out of the continued existence or use of the Mine subsequent to the date of conveyance.
SEC. 8. ENVIRONMENT AND PROJECT TRUST FUND.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—On completion of the conveyance, the State shall establish, in an interest-bearing account at an accredited financial institution located within the State, the Environment and Project Trust Fund.

(b) AMOUNTS.—The Fund shall consist of—

(1) an annual deposit from the operation and maintenance funding provided for the laboratory in an amount to be determined—

(A) by the State in consultation with the Administrator and the Scientific Advisory Board; and

(B) after taking into consideration—

(i) the nature of the projects and experiments being conducted at the laboratory;

(ii) available amounts in the Fund;

(iii) any pending costs or claims that may be required to be paid out of the Fund; and

(iv) the amount of funding required for future actions associated with the closure of the facility;

(2) an amount determined by the State, in consultation with the Administrator and the Scientific Advisory Board, and to be paid by the appropriate project sponsor, for each project to be conducted, which amount—

(A) shall be used to pay—

(i) costs incurred in removing from the Mine or laboratory equipment or other materials related to the project;

(ii) claims arising out of or in connection with the project; and

(iii) if any portion of the amount remains after paying the expenses described in clauses (i) and (ii), other costs described in subsection (c); and

(B) may, at the discretion of the State, be assessed—

(i) annually; or

(ii) in a lump sum as a prerequisite to the approval of the project;

(C) the interest earned on amounts in the Fund, which amount of interest shall be used only for a purpose described in subsection (c); and

(D) all other funds received and designated by the State for deposit in the Fund.

(c) EXPENDITURES FROM FUND.—Amounts in the Fund shall be used only for the purposes of—

(1) waste and hazardous substance removal or remediation, or other environmental cleanup at the Mine;

(2) research development and material no longer used, or necessary for use, in conjunction with a project conducted at the laboratory;

(3) a claim arising out of or in connection with the conducting of such a project;

(4) purchases of insurance by the State as required under section 7;

(5) payments for liability costs relating to liability described in section 6; and

(6) closure of the Mine and laboratory.

(d) FEDERAL PAYMENTS FROM FUND.—The United States—

(1) to the extent the United States assumes liability under section 6—

(A) shall be a beneficiary of the Fund; and

(B) may direct that amounts in the Fund be applied to pay amounts and costs described in this section; and

(2) may take action to enforce the right of the United States to receive 1 or more payments from the Fund.

(e) NO REQUIREMENT OF DEPOSIT OF PUBLIC FUNDS.—Nothing in this section requires the National Science Foundation to make a payment as a condition of the assumption by the United States of liability, or the relief of the State or Homestake from liability, under section 6.

SEC. 9. WASTE AND REMEDIATION.

After completion of the conveyance, the State shall obtain the approval of the Administrator before disposing of any material quantity of laboratory waste rock if—

(1) the disposal is on land not conveyed under this Act; and

(2) the State determines that the disposal could result in commingling of laboratory waste rock with waste rock disposed of by Homestake before the date of conveyance.

SEC. 10. REQUIREMENTS FOR OPERATION OF LABORATORY.

After the conveyance, nothing in this Act exempts the laboratory from compliance with any law (including a Federal environmental law).

SEC. 11. CONTINGENCY.

This Act shall be effective contingent on the selection, by the National Science Foundation, of the Mine as the site for the laboratory.

SEC. 12. OBLIGATION IN THE EVENT OF NON-CONVEYANCE.

If the conveyance under this Act does not occur, any obligation of Homestake relating to the Mine shall be limited to such successful action or remediation as is required under any applicable law other than this Act.

SEC. 13. PAYMENT AND REIMBURSEMENT OF COSTS.

The United States may seek payment—

(1) from the Fund, under section 3(a), to pay or reimburse the United States for amounts payable or liabilities incurred under this Act; and

(2) from available insurance, to pay or reimburse the United States and the Fund for amounts payable or liabilities incurred under this Act.

SEC. 14. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act.

SEC. 15. TANF BONUSES TO REWARD DECREASE IN ILLEGITIMACY RATIO.

(a) RESCISSION.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, $100,000,000 of the amount appropriated under subparagraph (D) of section 403(a)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(a)(2)) is rescinded.

(b) BUDGET SCORING.—Notwithstanding section 257(b)(2) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 907(b)(2)), the Director of the Congressional Budget Office and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall project the baseline assumption with respect to the amount of bonus grants that shall be made under section 409(a)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 609(a)(2)) for fiscal year 2003 and each fiscal year thereafter without regard to the amount rescinded under subsection (a).

HONORING PATTY BURKHOLDER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the significant contributions of a member of the community in Durango, Colorado, Patty Burkholder, who was recently honored by her coworkers for thirty years of involvement and leadership in the banking industry. Not only has Patty helped improve the banking industry locally, but she has also spent a great deal of her time and effort providing for the needs of the area in many capacities.

Patty moved to Durango in 1993 where she assumed the position of President at the local Wells Fargo Bank. She worked her way up through several different banks holding positions that ranged from secretary to personal banker and vice president to president. The employees at the new Wells Fargo Bank recognized the special relationship that Patty had with them as well as the customers that has influenced the success of the business. She is a team player who consistently supports and encourages her staff to perform at the highest level, giving staff the flexibility to perform at their best.

Not only has Patty given to the Durango community through her role at the bank, but also she actively participates in other local organizations. She is a member and past President of the La Plata Development Action Partnership, and is past President of the Durango Area Chamber and Resort Association and served in several other local volunteer positions.

Mr. Speaker, Patty Burkholder has played an important role in shaping the community of Durango, Colorado. It is my pleasure to recognize Patty for her significant contributions both to the banking industry and to the community. Patty is a role model for us all as an active and responsible member of the community.

TRIBUTE TO AN AMERICAN HERO
BRYAN JACK, PASSENGER ON AA FLIGHT 77

HON. RALPH M. HALL
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor the life of Dr. Bryan C. Jack, a passenger on American Airlines Flight 77, which terrorists hijacked and crashed into the Pentagon on September 11, a day that we will long mourn and never forget. Bryan grew up in Tyler, TX, in my Congressional district, and his parents live there still. We join them in mourning the loss of this wonderful and gifted young man.

Bryan was an exemplary scholar and native Texan who had faithfully served his country at the Pentagon since 1978. He represented the best of America—an incredibly talented individual who selflessly devoted his gifts to public service. At the Pentagon he was known for his brilliance with numbers, in addition to being a caring friend and coworker. Bryan’s official position was as a budget analyst, heading the Defense Department’s programming and fiscal economics division.

He was responsible for overseeing the capital budget, an immense and complicated task. He took the Defense Secretary’s policy decisions, worked them into the budget and made sure that the numbers added up. He also had oversight over the Defense Department’s school in Monterey, California. He made several business trips a year to Monterey and was on his way there on September 11, when the terrorists hijacked his plane. He had planned to stop over on his return trip to visit his parents, Helen and James Jack, in Tyler.

Growing up in Tyler, Bryan attended Moore Middle School and Robert E. Lee High School. Both of Bryan’s parents were teachers—his father was a retired colonel from the U.S. Air Force and Bryan was always an exceptional student. He graduated among the top in his high school class and had been a state debater. He attended the University of Maryland.

Just weeks before his tragic death, Bryan had married Barbara Rachko, an artist from New York. In addition to his parents and wife, he is survived by a brother, Terry, who lives in Denver.

Both in Washington and Tyler, Bryan leaves behind memories of a kind, caring and intelligent individual. He was an exemplary ambassador for the Fourth District of Texas and will be truly missed by his family, friends and coworkers at the Pentagon—but his memory will live forever as one of those who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country on September 11. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to pay my last respects in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to this outstanding American and a true American—Bryan Jack—and to all those who lost their lives during this tragic day in America’s history.

COMMENDING DAW AUNG SAN SUU KYI ON THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF HER RECEIVING THE NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

SPEECH OF
HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD OF GUAM
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 13, 2001

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support today of H. Con. Res. 211, which commends Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi on the 10th anniversary of her Nobel Peace Prize. I would also like to commend and extend my thanks to Congressman Peter King for his leadership in introducing this resolution.

Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi is indeed a heroine to her country and to democratic nations around the world for her leadership of the nonviolent movement for human rights and democracy in Burma. She was born into public service in 1945 as the daughter of General Aung San, a national leader who was assassinated 2 years after her birth, and Daw Khin Kyi, her mother who was appointed in 1960 as Burma’s ambassador to India.

In pursuit of higher education, the Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi went on to study abroad in England, Japan, and India and worked in various capacities for the United Nations and as a fellow and scholar at several educational institutions. In 1988, she traveled back to Burma to help her ailing mother while massive pro-democracy demonstrations against the repressive military regime arose. Later that year, she led the charge calling for a democratic government in Burma. Despite the military reestablishment of control and the crushing force that retaliated against the pro-democracy supporters, she continued to demonstrate for the establishment of a democratic government. In 1989, she was placed under house arrest by the military regime that reclaimed the power from the pro-democracy supporters. Despite her detention that year, the NLD won a landslide victory in the general elections of Burma with 82% of the seats. However, the military regime refused to recognize the result of the election and she remained under house arrest.

On October 14, 1991, Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi was awarded the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize and $1.3 million, which she used to establish a health and education trust in support of Burmese people. Throughout the years of her detention and after her release from house arrest in 1995, she has continued to assert the rights of her people and move forward the struggle for democracy and the national reconciliation of the Burmese government. Last year, President Bill Clinton conferred the Presidential Medal of Freedom Award, America’s highest civilian honor, to Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi for her tireless leadership for her country.

It is only fitting that today Congress pay tribute and honor to Daw Aung-San Suu Kyi for her inspiring leadership and remarkable contributions to bring peace and democracy to Burma. I urge my fellow colleagues to join in support in the passage of H. Con. Res. 211.

NECESSITY OF STRONG MILITARY

HON. BOB SCHAFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SCHAFER, Mr. Speaker, defense of the American way of life is no less than the
IN HONOR OF JOSEPH SIMUNOVICH

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Joseph Simunovich for his extensive corporate, governmental, and entrepreneurial genius and expertise. On Friday, November 16, 2001, Mr. Simunovich will celebrate his official retirement with family, friends, and former colleagues. The celebration will take place at the White Beaches Golf & Country Club in Haworth, New Jersey.

Joseph Simunovich’s remarkable career in corporate America spans four decades. In 1962, he began his distinguished career working in the Sales and Marketing Management divisions at the New York Telephone Company. After 16 years of remarkable service, Joseph Simunovich left the New York Telephone Company to become Marketing Manager for major accounts at Bell Atlantic New Jersey, now Verizon. While at the former Bell Atlantic, he quickly rose the corporate ladder becoming Director of Sales in 1985. As Director of Sales, he supervised and coordinated a renowned sales team that led Bell Atlantic sales for 8 of the 10 consecutive departures from Bell Atlantic. Mr. Simunovich joined United Water New Jersey-New York as Senior Vice President for Business Development, External Affairs, and Corporate Communications. In addition, Mr. Simunovich has served as Chairman of the Board of Directors during his nine dedicated years at United Water New Jersey, New York.

Mr. Simunovich has also played an influential and active role in New Jersey politics. In 1986, he was appointed by Governor Kean to be a Member of the New Jersey Economic Development Authority (EDA). He has been re-appointed to the EDA for six consecutive terms and currently serves as EDA Vice Chairman. In addition, he is Chairman of the Bergen County Economic Development Corporation and served 12 years as a Hudson County Freeholder.

Joseph Simunovich is a resident of Bergen County, New Jersey. He is married and has two children and four grandchildren. As a result of his hard work, Joseph Simunovich has helped improve the quality of life for thousands of families living throughout New Jersey.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Joseph Simunovich for his commitment to helping others and for his years of distinguished service to the people of New Jersey.
activities are indeed worthy of praise. Their leadership benefits our community and they serve as role models for their peers.

Also, we must not forget the unsung heroes, who continue to devote a large part of their lives to make all this possible. Therefore, I salute the families, scout leaders, and countless others who have been generous of their time and energy in support of scouting.

It is with great pride that I recognize the achievements of Gregory and bring the attention of Congress to this successful young man on his day of recognition, Saturday, November 24, 2001. Congratulations to Gregory and his family.

CONGRATULATING KRISTIE THOMPSON

HON. RALPH M. HALL
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize today Ms. Kristie Thompson of Rockwall, Texas, who this past summer succeeded in hiking the 2,167 miles of the Appalachian Trail. This hike from Springer Mountain in Georgia to Katahdin in Maine is a trek completed by fewer than 500 people each year. What makes Kristie’s accomplishment even more outstanding is the fact that she hiked the distance in only four months instead of the usual six—and she did it away from her family.

Since childhood, Kristie has had a love for the outdoors and a sense of adventure. A schoolteacher at Maurine Cain Middle School in Heath, Texas, and the mother of two teenage children, she used her summer break to fulfill this ambitious, lifelong dream. Kristie and her sister, Melanie Musser, began the journey on April 15, but 800 miles later, Melanie decided she could not be away from her family for another two months. Kristie understood—for she, too, missed her family—but she decided to go on alone.

Kristie awoke each day to begin hiking by 7 a.m. and did not stop until 6 p.m. That is an average of eighteen miles every day, much of it through mountains, carrying a pack of about 40 pounds. Often hiking as many as thirty miles in one day, Kristie noted that the mental challenges were equally as great as the physical ones. Her emotions ranged from elation to loneliness to frustration. She tells that more than three months along the trail—but still 300 miles from her destination—she stopped, stared down at the trail and burst into tears. But then, scratched in the dirt, was a message left for some other mother: “Good job, Mom.” This message gave her the inspiration and resolve to complete the arduous journey.

Support from family and strangers saw her through. Every few days she would pick up food and supplies that her parents would send to towns along the way. Her children sent postcards and provided words of encouragement when she called. They followed her progress on a map. Along the way she slept in shelters or under a tarp or tent. On the last five miles of the hike, Kristie was joined by her father, Emmett Howe, who shares her family’s immense pride in this accomplishment.

Kristie’s ambition and perseverence certainly will serve as sources of inspiration for her family, students and friends in Rockwall. Her feat took resolve, extraordinary willpower and courage—as well as meticulous planning and resourcefulness. She said the trip made her stronger in her resolve to tackle difficult challenges in life and reinforced what mattered most to her.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to recognize this outstanding young woman from my hometown of Rockwall—Kristie Thompson—and to congratulate her for this extraordinary achievement in hiking the Appalachian Trail.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO CHARLIE BOLLINGER

HON. SCOTT McNINIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McNINIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with a solemn heart that I would like to take this opportunity and pay tribute to an icon of the Pueblo, Colorado community who recently passed away. Charles Bollinger, who was fighting Alzheimer’s disease and a brief illness, died at the age of 85 and as his family and friends mourn his loss, I think it is appropriate that we remember Charlie for his many contributions throughout his life.

Charlie owned and operated Bollinger’s Confectionary, a magazine/bookstore located in Pueblo. Bollinger’s Confectionary began as a candy store that was started by his uncle in 1927. In 1946, Charlie bought the business and moved it to its current location. While there, he added the magazine collection that made Bollinger’s a favorite store in the community.

Charlie was an adament sports fan throughout his life. He was a longtime, devoted Denver Broncos fan and his love of sports was clearly reflected in his store magazine selections. His legendary collection included over ninety titles covering sports from football to baseball, and outdoor sports including hunting and fishing.

Mr. Speaker it is with profound sadness that we remember the life and memory of Charlie Bollinger. He will be remembered for his kind heart and the gentle demeanor he displayed throughout his life. As family and friends mourn his passing, I would like to recognize the wonderful life Charlie lived. We will miss you Charlie.

TRIBUTE TO TOKO FUJII

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in tribute to Toko Fujii, one of Sacramento’s most notable citizen leaders. Toko was regarded as one of the most well respected and positive figures in the Sacramento Japanese American community. I ask all of my colleagues to join me in saluting one of Sacramento’s most outstanding citizens.

Toko was born in Stockton, California on May 11, 1920. The eldest child of Kinji and Miodor Fujii. As a youngster in Oakland, where his parents owned a billiard hall, Toko demonstrated his trademark independence at very early age. He would often stop by a neighborhood restaurant to purchase a bowl of oatmeal for breakfast before walking to school each morning. In 1927, Toko and his parents, along with younger sister, Chizue, moved to Sacramento, where he attended Lincoln School for elementary and junior high years before attending Sacramento High School.

While in high school, Toko was an active member of the Japanese Student Club, Math Honor Club, and the prestigious California Scholarship Federation. In his spare time, Toko was involved in the Buddhist Church Youth Organization. It was in high school French class that he first met Sayoko Akune, who eventually became his wife and had been for the last 58 years.

When World War II broke out, Toko and Sayoko were sent to the Tule Lake Internment camp. During the internment, he kept busy by writing a column for the camp newspaper. Toko and Sayoko eventually left camp in the summer of 1943 and the young couple moved to Sacramento City, where they were married on July 3, 1943. While majoring in Business Administration at the University of Utah, Toko displayed his innate talent for bringing people together when he organized a basketball team of Japanese Americans from the university.

Upon graduation, Toko moved to Denver before returning to Sacramento. During these years, Toko further enhanced his ability to bring people together. Toko organized his first fundraiser to raise money for uniforms and traveling costs for the Japanese American All Star Basketball Team. Toko also played an instrumental role in the establishment of the Buddhist Church Basketball League and the Northern California Nisei Athletic Union. Before the integration of Little League Baseball, he played a major role in organizing the Northern California Church League, a Nisei baseball league.

In his professional life, Toko first ran the Sun Hotel and shortly thereafter he became a real estate and insurance broker before he went on to manage the El Rancho Bowl in 1960. In 1964, Toko and his business partner, Kay Hamatami, started Victory Trophies, which he successfully operated until 1996. In addition to being a small business owner, Toko also contributed to the community by serving in various capacities to help bring people together.

In his personal life, Toko remained very active with various community causes. He served as the acting office manager for the Japanese American Citizen’s League since the early 1990’s. In early 1991, he spearheaded the project to exhibit the story of Japanese American’s in the Greater Sacramento Valley. After the unexpected death of the project’s organizer, Toko assumed full responsibility of the project and fulfilled the mission to introduce their story at the Sacramento History Museum for six months in 1992.

Toko was also affectionately known as “The Man” in the local community when it comes to fund raising for special causes. Toko played a key role in securing $200,000 for the Sacramento Japanese American Citizens League’s Endowment Fund in 1990. When the National Japanese American Memorial Foundation was organized in 1999, Toko stepped up to the plate and organized a local fund raising campaign that raised $120,000. He never forgot the importance of giving back to his community. Toko’s tireless commitment to serving his community was truly an inspiration and example to his fellow citizens.
Mr. Speaker, as Mr. Toko Fuji’s friends and family gather to celebrate and honor his legacy and many contributions, I am honored to pay tribute to one of Sacramento’s most well respected citizens. His successes are unparalleled, and it is great honor for me to have the opportunity to pay tribute to his accomplishments. I ask all my colleagues to join with me in celebrating the deeds of an extraordinary leader.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO DEBBIE JOHNS
HON. SCOTT MCGINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McGINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Debbie Johns and thank her for the contributions she has made to the School District 51 Board in Clifton, Colorado. Debbie has served on the school board for over sixteen years, and though she will be dearly missed, I am happy to congratulate Debbie on her retirement.

Debbie was elected to School District 51 Board in 1985. She ran for office because of concerns she had over school redistricting and how it would affect her children’s lives. Since then, Debbie has been elected three more times to the board with the help of her campaign staff and her family. She has been instrumental in many changes that have occurred to the district during her tenure. While in office, six new schools have been built and another twenty have undergone renovations.

When not meeting with the board, Debbie can be found distributing her time between managing a doctor’s office and caring for her family. This is no easy task considering Debbie works an average of seventy hours per week in her management position. Despite her newfound freedom, Debbie already plans to fill the void by donating her time to the Mesa County Public Library literacy program.

Mr. Speaker it is a great privilege to honor Debbie Johns and wish her the best as she steps down from the School District 51 Board. She has dedicated her energy and time to the community for the last sixteen years and certainly deserves the praise and admiration of this body. Debbie, thank you for your dedicated service.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO DEBBIE JOHNS
HON. SCOTT MCGINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the fifth annual Westfield Works Wonders event which is being celebrated in shopping malls across the nation. Over the last five years, this wonderful charity event has raised millions of dollars for national and local non-profits and charities.

First implemented in Connecticut in 1997, the Westfield Works Wonders program began as a project to benefit local non-profits and charities. In just three years, the event achieved outstanding results raising upwards of one million dollars and attracting more than 120,000 shoppers to the four centers in Connecticut. Due to its local success in Connecticut, Westfield Wonder Works was rolled out as a national program in 1999. In its two-year national history, malls across the nation have raised almost three million dollars in contributions for thousands of non-profits and charities.

The simplicity of the program is one of its greatest benefits. Westfield Works Wonders is a one-day three hour event held in November when shoppers are ready to begin their holiday shopping. For a five dollar donation, shoppers enjoy a private evening at Westfield Shoppingtowns with special discounts, instore promotions, prize giveaways, entertainment, celebrity appearances, free photos with Santa, and more. All ticket proceeds are donated directly to participating organizations. In Connecticut alone, over sixty non-profits and charities will receive invaluable funding.

It is important to recognize the dreams and wishes that are made a reality by this special event. The money raised helps thousands of children and families receive much needed services. Hospitals, schools and a variety of national and local charities all benefit from the generosity of the over half a million people who attend this event nationwide. With a small donation, people can make a real difference in the lives of many.

I am proud to stand today to recognize the tremendous contribution Westfield Shoppingtowns are making to communities across the nation. I am honored to take this opportunity to extend my thanks and appreciation to all of those—from Westfield America to the thousands of retail employees—who make this evening possible. Your efforts are truly inspiring.

UNUNITED THROUGH IT ALL
HON. HENRY E. BROWN, JR.
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. BROWN of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit the following poem for the RECORD.

UNITED THROUGH IT ALL

(Entry Mike Allen and Randall Bayne)

On an island in the harbor,
Lady Liberty’s darkest day,
Terror rose against our land.
Evil had its way.

We witnessed two strong towers
As they came crashing down,
Innocent lives were sacrificed
In rubble on the ground.

We stood in awe, in disbelief
Souls of thousands fell,
In the horror of the picture,
In the midst of this hell.

We bound our spirits in resolve
To answer freedoms call.
This is America,
We’ll rise above it all.

We’re united in our victory,
United in our cause.
We’ll stand against all enemies,
Liberty has no walls.

We’re stronger than those towers,
This country will not fall.
We are Americans,
United through it all.

We’ll bind our wounded.
Grieve for those who died.
Praise the heroes’ efforts.
And sing out with pride,
“America, America
God shed his grace on thee,
And crown thy good
With brotherhood.”

For we’re united in our victory.
United in our cause.
We’ll stand against all enemies.
Liberty has no walls.
We’re stronger than those towers,
This country will not fall.
We are Americans.
United through it all.

UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARDS HAITI
HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my deep concern regarding current United States policy towards Haiti.

Haiti’s human and development statistics are alarming. The life expectancy of the average Haitian is only 53 years, and this number is certain to decline as the HIV/AIDS epidemic in the country becomes even more severe. According to UNAIDS, the United Nations agency responsible for addressing the HIV/AIDS pandemic, more than 5% of the adult population is HIV-positive, and some sectors of the population have infection rates of over 50%. In other human development categories, Haiti’s record is just as lamentable. Half of Haitian adults are illiterate, and more than 1 in 4 children under the age of 5 are malnourished. Haiti ranks 152nd out of 174 on the United Nations Development Program’s Human Development Index, below such countries as Bangladesh and Sudan.

In previous years, the United States pursued a constructive relationship with Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. Between FY 95 and FY 99, the United States provided $884 million in critical development assistance funds to support agricultural development, democracy and governance, teacher training, health care, and many other programs. The United States also supported multilateral institutions that worked to improve the lives of ordinary Haitians. More recently, however, the United States has pursued a myopic policy towards Haiti and has used its veto power to prevent the disbursement of funds from multilateral institutions such as the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB). The board of directors of the IDB has already cut $146 million in social sector loans for Haiti, but because of United States policy, these funds have been blocked from improving the lives of 8 million Haitians. This policy must change.

In order for the living standards and life chances of ordinary Haitians to improve, international development assistance is critical. The United States must change its current policy towards Haiti so that it may receive multilateral funds for pressing development needs.
IN HONOR OF THE PUERTO RICAN ASSOCIATION FOR HUMAN DEVELOPMENT, INC.

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ OF NEW JERSEY IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to the Puerto Rican Association for Human Development, Inc. (PRAHD). PRAHD is a non-profit organization in Perth Amboy, New Jersey, dedicated to providing health, educational, and social services to low-income residents of Middlesex County, New Jersey. Since 1974, PRAHD has emerged as one of the premier non-profit organizations in the State of New Jersey. This dynamic organization provides a wide range of social services essential to low-income and elderly residents of Middlesex County. PRAHD currently sponsors pre-school child care programs, HIV/AIDS educational services, substance abuse prevention classes, and health care services for homebound senior citizens.

The outstanding success and efficiency of this organization can be attributed to its committed staff, which is working tirelessly to ensure that adequate social services are provided for residents in Middlesex County. PRAHD, which is governed by a Board of Directors and is managed by an Executive Director, currently employs 38 full-time and 74 part-time staff. It is also supported by the diligent efforts of numerous community leaders, who volunteer their skills and services.

As a result of its hard work, PRAHD has vastly improved the standard of living for thousands of New Jersey families.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring PRAHD for its service to the community of Perth Amboy and for its countless acts of kindness and compassion.

HONORING VERNE L. WIKERT

HON. SCOTT McINNIS OF COLORADO IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Verne L. Wikert and his contributions to this country. Verne began his service to this nation in the 1940’s, serving as a Merchant Marine in the Pacific theatre during World War II.

Mr. Wikert joined the Merchant Marines at the age of seventeen. Tasked with the position of oiler aboard the S.S. Coast Trader, Verne and his crew were responsible for supplying the Pacific theatre with troops and supplies throughout the war. On June 7, 1942, a Japanese submarine torpedoed his ship. Following the attack, Verne fought his way from below deck to escape the sinking ship. This event put the crew through a five-day ordeal, fighting for their survival off the coast of the state of Washington. Upon rescue, Wikert, in a coma, was near death.

Mr. Wikert recovered from this experience and continued his service to his country, surviving two more torpedo attacks before the end of the war. As is customary in the Merchant Marines, he received no awards or decorations for his contributions to the war effort, but is worthy of the praise of this body of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to honor Verne L. Wikert for his service to this country. He served selflessly during a time when the country was in great need. His actions have brought great credit to himself and his nation.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT PRESIDENT ISSUE PROCLAMATION RECOGNIZING A NATIONAL LAO-HMONG RECOGNITION DAY

SPEECH OF HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD OF GUAM IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, November 13, 2001

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Con. Res. 88, a resolution urging the President to issue a national proclamation recognizing the important contributions of Hmong and Laotians to our great nation.

Unfortunately, few Americans know that many Hmong and Lao people came to the United States fleeing genocide, slavery, and persecution for fighting against the spread of communism in Laos, a country once part of the French colony known as Indochina, which also encompassed Cambodia and Vietnam.

Following the French rule over Indochina from 1863 until 1954, the United States became involved in the struggle for democracy and independence for Indochina from 1955 to 1975. During this period which became known as the Vietnam War, the United States recruited Hmong and Lao people to fight against the communist Vietnamesse Army and the Pathet Lao. Hmong and Lao soldiers flew thousands of deadly combat missions in support of the U.S. Armed Forces and the Central Intelligence Agency, and fought in conventional and guerrilla combat clashes with extreme casualties against communist Vietnamesse and Pathet Lao. More than 35,000 Hmong and Lao soldiers lost their lives in defense of democracy and many more were seriously injured and disabled.

After the United States pulled out of Vietnam in 1975, many of the Hmong and Lao soldiers and their families were forced to live in communist concentration camps known as ‘reeducation camps’ by the Pathet Lao. While in these camps, thousands of Hmong and Lao people were subjected to chemical bombings, tortures, and genocidal murders. Many eventually escaped to refugee camps in Thailand and some refugees fled to the United States. It is estimated that between 1975 and 1995, the communist Pathet Lao government killed more than 300,000 people in Laos, including the Royal Lao family.

Only in recent years have we begun to recognize and commemorate the contributions of Hmong and Lao Americans who have made during the period of the Vietnam War. In the 106th Congress, Congress passed the Hmong Veterans’ Naturalization Act introduced by our esteemed congressman colleague the late Congressman Bud Vento, which expeditiated naturalization procedures for Hmong and Lao refugees who fought in the special guerrilla units in Laos.

Today nearly 195,000 Hmong and 135,000 Lao Americans live in the United States. Large Hmong and Lao communities have been established in parts of California, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Colorado.

In closing, I would like to congratulate Congressman Tancredo for his work on this legislation. I urge my colleagues to stand in strong support for the passage of H. Con. Res. 88.

68TH ANNIVERSARY OF FAMINE-GENOCIDE IN UKRAINE

HON. BOB SCHAFFER OF COLORADO IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, as Co-Chair of the Congressional Ukrainian Caucus, I rise today to commemorate the memory of millions of innocent victims ruthlessly murdered at the hands of Joseph Stalin and other Soviet communists. This year marks the 68th anniversary of the Famine-Genocide perpetuated by Stalin in an attempt to subjugate the people of Ukraine.

In order to achieve his vision of a strong independent Soviet Union, Stalin sought to force Ukraine into compliance. However, his policy of forced collectivization was strongly resisted by the freedom-loving peasantry. In an effort to break the spirit of the Ukrainian people, Stalin used food as a weapon, starving between six and eight million people to death, while confiscating and exporting massive quantities of grain. This was a naked act of genocide against Ukraine and her people.

The famine was entirely the creation of Stalin’s totalitarian policies. The Communist State’s prohibition of private land ownership and Stalin’s excessive seizures of agricultural products created an intolerable life for the Ukrainian peasantry. This situation escalated when state-sanctioned production quotas could not be filled. The quotas were designed to guarantee failure. The failure of quota fulfillment was interpreted, by Stalin, as anti-Soviet behavior, as treason, and acted upon accordingly.

Stalin ordered the Soviet secret police, the GPU (State Political Directorate), later the NKVD (People’s Commissariat for Internal Affairs), to enforce his quotas by whatever means necessary. The GPU, with the help of local party officials, seized all the available food and seed, rendering the peasantry incapable of producing even enough to feed themselves in the most fertile regions of Europe and Asia. As a result of mass migration of peasantry looming, many sought a chance for survival in the cities, others merely brought their children to urban areas and left them in the hope they would survive, returning, themselves, to their villages to die.

To prevent the migration, the “social parasitism” Stalin implemented a passport system, which forced the peasantry to remain in their villages. Those caught hiding food were either deported to Siberian labor camps or shot. Often, the grain collected would begin to rot before it waited for pickup. Those trying to steal food and seed, rendering the peasantry in-under penalty of death, the peasants starved to death.

The fate of these victims is a lasting testament to the failure of the Soviet system. Sta-lin’s quote, “a single death is a tragedy, a million are just a statistic,” responding to a question about the reported deaths of millions of Ukrainians, is evidence of the horror Ukraine faced.

In 1986, the U.S. Congress appointed a Commission on the Ukraine Famine. After two years, the Commission confirmed these terrible events did occur and constituted an act of genocide against Ukrainians. Over two hundred courageous Ukrainian survivors testified before the Commission. Their testimony is preserved in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.
These terrible events must not be forgotten.
Because of the courage of survivors and the commitment of those who remember and commemorate this tragedy, they will not be.

PROCLAMATION FOR JAMES LEHANE

HON. STEVE ISRAEL
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to recognize one of New York’s outstanding young students, James Lehane. This young man has received the Eagle Scout honor from their peers in recognition of their achievements.

Since the beginning of this century, the Boy Scouts of America have provided thousands of boys and young men each year with the opportunity to make friends, explore new ideas, and develop leadership skills while learning self-reliance and teamwork.

The Eagle Scout award is presented only to those who possess the qualities that make our country great: commitment to excellence, hard work, and genuine love of community service.

Becoming an Eagle Scout is an extraordinary award with which only the finest Boy Scouts are honored. To earn the award—the highest advancement rank in Scouting—a Boy Scout must demonstrate proficiency in the rigorous areas of leadership, service, and outdoor skills; they must earn a minimum of 23 merit badges as well as contribute at least 100 man-hours toward a community oriented service project.

I ask my colleagues to join me in congratu-ating the recipients of these awards, as their activities are indeed worthy of praise. Their leadership benefits our community and they serve as role models for their peers.

Also, we must not forget the unsung heroes, who continue to devote a large part of their lives to make all this possible. Therefore, I salute the families, scout leaders, and countless others who have given generously of their time and energy in support of scouting.

It is with great pride that I recognize the achievements of James and bring the attention of Congress to this successful young man on his day of recognition, Friday, January 4th, 2002. Congratulations to James and his family.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO PAUL JORDAN

HON. SCOTT MCNIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McNISS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Paul Jordan for his contributions to this country. Paul began his service to our nation in 1942 by reporting for duty as a new army recruit at Fort Logan, CO. Following his training, Paul was assigned as a tank assistant gunner for the invasion of Sicily, Italy in June of 1943.

Mr. Jordan’s company supported cover for the 45th Division and served in the initial invasion of Sicily. The Allied success brought Paul to the invasion of Salerno in September of that same year. It was during this invasion that Paul had his first tank destroyed by enemy fire. Paul survived and later was reunited with his company and assigned a new tank. After fighting for three months near Monte Cassino, Paul was assigned to yet another invasion force, this time the invasion of Southern France. Fighting near Cannes in 1944, Paul’s tank was again destroyed by an enemy attack.

Evading enemy forces once again, Paul was promoted to tank commander upon reaching his unit. The war ended for Paul in Strasborg, France close to the German border in 1945.

Mr. Jordan returned to Colorado in November 1945. He married his sweetheart Ellen and raised three children. He went on to work in the Delta County School District for almost 30 years. Paul and his wife Ellen recently traveled back to France to visit a small village his unit liberated during the war, and to visit a me-orial to five of his comrades who died during the fighting.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to recognize and pay tribute to Paul Jordan for his service to his country during World War II. He served selflessly in a time of great need, bringing credit to himself and this nation. Paul is one reason that our country enjoys the freedom that we hold so high today.

TRIBUTE TO EDDIE BOLAND

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a dear friend and former colleague Eddie Boland. By his own choosing, he loyally served this body for 36 years with minimal national attention. And yet despite his best efforts to remain known only to his constituents and his colleagues, his name carries a familiar ring to a vast number of Americans.

While it was his role as Chairman of the House Select Committee on Intelligence that brought him household recognition, Eddie Boland stood for more than the namesake amendments that helped set the stage for the Iran-contra affair. To his constituents, he was a friend, a steadfast supporter of civil rights and simply unbeatable when it came to the poles. To members of ich, he was an honest, sincere and dedicated man who came to Washington to serve his district and did it well.

HONORING SERGEANT JOSEPH BUONOME ON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENT

HON. ROSA L. DELAURO OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today to pay tribute to Sergeant Joseph Buonome who recently resigned from the East Haven Police Department after three decades of dedicated service.
Sergeant Buonome led an exemplary career and has left a legacy that will not soon be forgotten.

Joining the East Haven Police Department as an Auxiliary Officer nearly thirty years ago, Sergeant Buonome was soon sworn in as a full time officer. Appointed Court Liaison and Police Spokesperson ten years ago, Sergeant Buonome played an integral role in maintaining the Department’s relationship with the local community. Throughout the course of his career, he also took on the duties of Hostage Negotiator, Supply Officer and Airport Liaison.
His outstanding service has been recognized with more than ten Commendations and two Citations for performing above and beyond the call of duty—a reflection of his unwavering commitment to serve and protect the residents of East Haven. Sergeant Buonome has certainly been a hero to our community.

Sergeant Buonome’s compassion and generosity extends well beyond his professional career. As a member, Secretary, Vice-President and President for the Police Union Local 1662, he worked hard to ensure the safety and security of his fellow officers and their families. Sergeant Buonome has also served as the Vice President of the Connecticut Police Association as well as Vice President and President of the Order of Centurions devoting countless hours to these fine organizations.
Dedicated to enriching his community, he has also served as Co-Chair of many chariti-table events. His commitment to the East Haven community, professional and otherwise, is unquestionable and he has made a real diffERENCE in the lives of many.

Too often we take for granted the role of our law enforcement officers; men and women who face risks few of us can truly comprehend. Each day, they must be ready to perform under intense pressure—literally in life or death situations. It is an honor for me to stand today to express my deepest thanks and appreciation to Sergeant Joseph Buonome for his outstanding service to the Town of East Haven and to extend my very best wishes to him and his wife, Barbara; daughter, Cheryl and her husband, Michael, and his grandchildren, Gabrielle and Christopher as they celebrate his retirement.
WELCOME IMAM HENDI AND COMMENCEMENT OF RAMADAN

HON. NICK J. RAHALL II OF WEST VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to extend a warm welcome to Imam Hendi. He is here with us today as guest chaplain and here to observe the commencement of Ramadan—the Islamic holy month of fasting and spiritual renewal.

Imam Hendi has spent his life educating and working with youngsters and students to guide their spiritual development and to educate them on the tenets and faith of Islam.

He was the first Muslim chaplain designated by Georgetown University where he currently serves.

Back in 1991, I was the first Member of Congress to invite an imam to pray before the House.

Today we share again the rich religious diversity of America by welcoming Imam Hendi.

This morning, at the commencement of Ramadan we send our greetings as our Muslim citizens and Muslims around the world prepare for this holy month of spiritual renewal.

Islam is one of the largest world religions, and one of America’s major religions.

Muslims from all over the world are valued members of our American communities.

And this Muslim community comes together in the United States from all corners of the world: the Middle East, Indonesia, Southeast Asia, and Africa to celebrate their faith in our country.

In this month of introspection, faith, prayer, and cleansing, together we share the horror of American Muslims felt when they witnessed criminals use their sacred faith as an excuse for their crimes.

While we will not excuse the criminal acts of September 11, so too can we never excuse them on the tenets and faith of Islam.

While we will not excuse the criminal acts of September 11, so too can we never excuse their crimes.

And we must not, as a Nation, tolerate acts of violence and hatred directed towards those who seek to blame Muslims as a whole for the acts.

Nor will we, as a Nation, tolerate acts of violence and hatred directed towards those who practice Islam.

This has been made clear, from the President on down.

There can be no battle between the United States and the Muslim world, because the United States is part of the Muslim world.

Today we have millions of Muslims in the United States, and that number continues to grow.

We welcome our Muslim citizens, and we value them, and we send them our best wishes.

I would like to close by stating my support as a cosponsor of Congressman John Falfile’s resolution, H.Res. 280, to express solidarity and support for members of the Islamic community in the United States and around the world while commending them for their faith in Islam.

HONORING GENE PARKER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize a truly dedicated volunteer, Ms. Gene Parker, from Southwest Colorado. Gene has spent over a century of her life working to help better understand previous cultures and the archeological preservation of the Anasazi culture.

Ms. Parker began her work as a volunteer for the Bureau of Land Management’s Anasazi Heritage Center in Dolores, Colorado. Her duties include the inventorying of the center’s collections, where she is relied upon to verify that each piece was properly documented for its historical study. Gene has also volunteered her services to the center’s library, assisting with special events as they occur. She is also a member of the Anasazi Historical Society.

Gene has dedicated her time and effort for two days a week for the past fifteen years. Following recovery from a broken hip in 1999, Gene remained committed to continue her duties where she has amassed 1,814 volunteer hours.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to recognize Gene for her service to help preserve the artifacts of the ancient Anasazi culture. Her dedication to a worthwhile cause certainly deserves the praise of this body. Because of her efforts, many will now be able to better understand the Anasazi culture.

ST. JOSEPH’S HIGH SCHOOL’S FOOD DRIVE COMMITTEE

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to the Food Drive Committee at Saint Joseph’s High School in Metuchen, New Jersey. For over thirty years, this Food Drive Committee has provided Thanksgiving food baskets for thousands of needy families throughout New Jersey.

This charitable food drive was inaugurated under the guidance of Brother George Woodburn. Currently, the Food Drive Committee operates under the auspices of the Saint Joseph’s Student Council. Annually, this food drive provides hundreds of Thanksgiving food baskets to various food shelters and organizations for distribution to families in need.

The success and longevity of this event is due to the compassionate efforts of Saint Joseph’s dedicated administration, faculty, and students. As a result of Saint Joseph’s kindhearted efforts, this month-long food drive enables hundreds of needy families to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner.

For four decades, Saint Joseph’s has also been dedicated to the education and leadership development of young men residing in Central New Jersey. This institution prepares young men for post-secondary academic success, while also enabling them to acquire the skills and values essential to become responsible young adults.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Saint Joseph’s High School for its dedication and commitment on behalf of needy families throughout New Jersey.

DULCE AND DECORUM EST

BY JAMES F. CAHALAN, PH.D.

HON. HENRY E. BROWN, JR.
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. BROWN of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit the following poem for the RECORD.

DULCE ET DECORUM EST

JIM CAHALAN, MAY 5, 2001

They once were boys, like you and me, Just little boys, not heroes then; Just small and ordinary.

No one could have known that when Their country called them overseas They’d give their all, more than could bear We who stayed in tranquil leas, Gave out their lives in the blaze.

We must engrave this one bold truth Of noble men who give their all, Keep us free from harm, forsooth, Safe, content, and out of thrall.

Who leave behind their homes and wives All to brave those hellish places, Sacrifice their very lives, Saving our eternal glories.

And work to make much, much the less Of strife and human misery: Dulce et decorum est Pro patria vivere.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO BERNICE ELAINE FORCE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to the life and memory of Bernice Elaine Force who recently passed away in Glenwood Springs, Colorado on October 25, 2001. She began her life in Kalamazoo County, Michigan, born to Fred and Bessie Bishop Barber, where she attended the University of Michigan School of Nursing. After her marriage to Jack Force in 1932, the couple moved to Mesa, Colorado.

Throughout her life, Bernice was dedicated to providing healthcare services to those who were in need. She served in several hospitals throughout the state including Veterans Hospital in Grand Junction, Faith Hospital in Collbran, and Valley View Hospital in Glenwood Springs.

In her free time, Bernice enjoyed various activities and interacting with others who were in her life. Her most cherished time was spent with family. She was a dedicated wife, mother of three, grandmother to five, and great-grandmother of four. Bernice enjoyed gardening, fishing, baking and cooking. She was also an active member of her church.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that we mourn the loss of Bernice Elaine Force. She devoted most of her ninety years to others and will be missed by those she touched. Her family and friends are grateful for her dedication and service to Glenwood Springs.

As we mourn her passing, our thoughts are with those who knew her.
TRIBUTE TO HOUSING OPTIONS & GERIATRIC ASSOCIATION RESOURCES, INC.

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Housing Options & Geriatric Association Resources, Inc., an organization dedicated to improving the lives of homeless, elderly, mentally ill, physically challenged and HIV/AIDS infected individuals in the Bronx. This invaluable organization celebrates the grand opening of its Scattered Site Housing Program and Supported Housing Unit on November 15, 2001.

H.O.G.A.R.’s mission is not only to raise awareness of the housing and health issues facing burdened groups of society, but also to provide ways of dealing with these issues. Not only does H.O.G.A.R. spread the word that a number of individuals diagnosed as mentally ill end up on the streets each year, but it also maintains a program to find housing for these people and has even opened a 12-bed supported housing unit that emphasizes community reintegration.

Mr. Speaker, H.O.G.A.R. also recently implemented its Scattered Site Housing Program for HIV/AIDS infected people. This program provides relocation assistance, access to counseling services, access to primary health care, recreational activities, daily life skills training, and classes in healthy meal preparation to name just a few things. Essentially it is a program to ensure that people living with AIDS, actually have some quality of life. Often those who are sick and poor are left to the community reintegration.

An amazing group of men and women give H.O.G.A.R. its heart and soul and continually fuel its efforts. It is because of them that H.O.G.A.R. exists and succeeds in its mission.

We will never be able to accurately assess exactly how many lives H.O.G.A.R. has saved or how many lives they have helped give meaning and hope to. We can only be sure that any addition to this organization is worthy of great celebration. That is why my son, Councilman elect, and myself are so honored to be named special guests of H.O.G.A.R.’s grand opening of these two new program units.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the H.O.G.A.R. directors and staff for their immeasurable contributions to those most in need and most overlooked and in thanking them for their ceaseless efforts.

THE FOREIGN GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP ACT OF 2001

HON. W. J. (BILLY) TAUZIN OF LOUISIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, last week, Senator McCain and I joined together to introduce legislation to emphasize the prohibition on foreign government ownership of American telecommunications and broadcast infrastructure. This is not a new concept. It has been the law for more than fifty years in order to protect the American national interest.

We have been dismayed this year by the FCC’s approval of the Deutsche Telekom acquisition of VoiceStream Wireless Communications and the SES-Astra acquisition of GE Americom Communications. For several years, we have repeatedly expressed the most serious reservations about the Commission’s interpretation of the foreign government ownership provisions of Section 310 of the Communications Act. We have repeatedly pointed out that companies controlled by foreign governments are too often motivated by political considerations that may be against the interests of the United States rather than by the working of the competitive marketplace.

Notwithstanding our stated concerns, the Commission approved the Deutsche Telekom acquisition of VoiceStream in April of this year, revealing the clear differences between the Congress and members of the Commission about the meaning and application of Section 310. The proposal of SES-Astra to acquire GE Americom presented the same concerns, and I asked the Commission to conduct a ‘vigorous review’ of the proposed acquisition to assure that our national interests were protected. However, instead of the vigorous review that was needed and requested, the Commission allowed the International Bureau to rapidly approve this significant acquisition in a pro forma manner. Indeed, once that approval had been given, SES-Astra revealed that it had not fully revealed the substantial extent of foreign control in the company, but the FCC staff again gave its prompt pro forma approval with no public notice.

Commissioner Michael J. Copps issued a statement noting that SES-Astra’s failure to reveal the full extent of its foreign ownership and stating that the Telecommunications Act required the FCC to provide the opportunity for public notice. We agree. We believe the Commission has exceeded its authority in this area, and has not weighed fully the full national interest considerations in foreign government ownership of our telecommunications infrastructure, especially in the wake of recent events that have heightened our concerns about the security of our homeland.

Accordingly, we introduced legislation to make it clear that foreign governments are not allowed to own or control American telecommunications, satellite, or broadcast networks, whether directly or indirectly. This legislation does not break new ground, but rather simply reaffirms, in no uncertain terms, that the telecommunications, broadcast, and Internet facilities that underlie our freedom of speech and our economy cannot be made vulnerable to the actions of foreign governments.

We suggest that it serves neither the public interest nor the interest of the applicants for the FCC to approve any mergers of this type, or for that matter to allow the SES-Astra acquisition of GE Americom to go forward without the full Commission seriously addressing our concerns.

take advantage of National tragedies on notice that they will pay and pay dearly for their unscrupulous acts. This bill shows that we will not tolerate the manipulation of Americans' goodwill at times of National tragedy.

I wholeheartedly support the American Spirit Fraud Prevention Act and I strongly urge its passage.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO DAVID POLLARD

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize David Pollard of Cedar ledge, Colorado, and thank him for his contributions to the people of Kosovo. For the past year, David has been involved with the "Youth With A Mission" organization that helps people throughout the world by building homes and fostering relief projects in troubled areas around the world.

David began his work with YYWAM after training in Trinidad, Colorado for several months. His first assignment was to be sent to Kosovo as a member of the outreach team. The team's duties included building housing for families that have been displaced or lost their homes in the recent conflict in Kosovo.

Living with a host family, David contributed to his team by providing labor to construct these homes. David reached out further to the communities by interacting with locals and spreading moral messages based on the Bible and the Koran.

David ended his first mission to Kosovo last summer. Since, he has returned to Trinidad and assisted in the training of more teams to continue with YYWAM's mission. After his second round of training, he was instrumental as a co-leader for a new team of volunteers and accompanied them back to Kosovo. Some people might say that two missions are enough in a place that has experienced such devastation and hardship for so long, but David continues his assistance to Kosovo. He is now planning to return to the country, on his own, at his own expense. Once arriving, David hopes to find work with relief organizations and continue his service to the people of Kosovo.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to honor David Pollard and his contributions to a country in a time of need. Like other members of "Youth With A Mission," David has provided his services without compensation. His volunteering efforts are well appreciated and bring great credit to himself, his family, and his community. Thanks David.

IN HONOR OF CARL J. GOLDBERG

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to Carl J. Goldberg. On Friday, November 16, 2001, Mr. Goldberg will be the Honoree at the Deborah Hospital Foundation's 15th Annual Children of the World Humanitarian Award Dinner-Dance. The event will be held at the Sheraton Meadowlands Hotel in East Rutherford, New Jersey.

Carl Goldberg has enjoyed an extensive and successful real estate career that spans over two decades. In 1979, he joined the prestigious real estate firm Bertram Associates as a Project Manager for the development of single-family homes. While at Bertram, he quickly climbed the corporate ranks and became Operating Partner. As Operating Partner, he was instrumental in the construction of more than 2,000 homes throughout New Jersey.

In 1994, Carl Goldberg left Bertram Associates and founded the Roseland Property Company. Since its formation, Roseland has played a major role in the development of company communities throughout the Northeast. Under Carl Goldberg's guidance, Roseland builds over 1,500 residential units a year. Currently, Carl Goldberg serves as a member of the National Association of Homebuilders and is the former President of the Community Builders' Association.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Carl Goldberg for his years of distinguished service on behalf of New Jersey residents.

HATE CRIMES IN AMERICA

SPEECH OF

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, November 14, 2001

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I want to rise to lend my voice to those who have spoken here today on the issue of hate crimes directed toward those who are Muslims, of middle eastern descent, or who are perceived as belonging to either group. As Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, I know that hate crimes are not new. They are as old as lynching and as real as bombings. Racial, religious and ethnic minorities have been the victims of hate crimes for a very long time in America and yet we all know that these acts of cowardice are rarely punished, routinely ignored and the victims are often considered the cause of the horror aimed at them.

I know that in other moments of crisis in this country, we have allowed fear to overcome reason and official actions to lead to unfair deprivations. The interment of the Japanese Americans, the treatment of the Native Americans and the slavery and segregation of African Americans were all caused by the intercession of reason and violent action. In the new millennium, this country cannot afford to resort to old patterns of behavior.

In my district, the day after the September 11th attack, there were reports of people who shot into mosques in attempts to harm or terrorize. At that time, I issued a call for calm and reminded my constituents that this country must never resort to vigilante violence. In the wake of the horror that has been visited upon this country, we cannot allow ourselves to forget what it means to be an American. We must not forget that inclusion, diversity and respect for people regardless of race, religion, gender, sexual orientation and national origin is the cornerstone of America's foundation and the undergirding of our greatness.

The American dream must be kept alive and well within our current nightmare. I am deeply disappointed to hear of the many instances of hate crimes that have occurred throughout the nation. I know that America is greater than this and I know that as always, the forces of fairness will overcome every domestic and international evil because the moral arc of the universe may be long, but it always bends toward justice.

TRIBUTE TO TOM J. DONOHO

HON. CHARLES H. TAYLOR OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to rise and commend one of Western North Carolina's and Buncombe County's finest citizens, the late Tom J. Donoho. "The big man with the big heart." He passed away on June 8, 2001. He was a personal friend of mine for many years, and he will be sorely missed.

Born in Greenville, South Carolina, Tom's family moved to North Carolina where he graduated from Biltmore High School in 1952. After a couple of years at the University of North Carolina, saving the school from destruction became a pet project of Tom's in recent years. Last June the WNC Historical Association acquired the deed, and Tom sought my help for $300,000 for the "Biltmore School Museum," which was provided in the 2002 Interior Appropriations.

After high school, Tom joined the United States Army and twelve years in the National Guard and Reserves. He was a man who loved his country, his community, and his people. Tom supported the East Asheville Youth Program for the past 47 years, giving freely of his time, materials, labor and money to this program, not for recognition but because he loved young people. Together, Tom and his wife Betty founded Ashevile Electric forty years ago, building it into a thriving business, of which Tom was President, employing about 35 people.

When the new Reynolds High School was built, it was Tom Donoho who offered to wire the school, and he drove to Kansas to get the famous "Rocket"—an Army surplus "Honest John" rocket—which he helped mount at the entrance to the school and is the school's mascot. Tom provided the lighting for the school’s football and baseball stadiums.

Tom took an active part in politics in Asheville and Buncombe County. For many years he contributed to the campaigns of good men and women who ran for public office and stood as a candidate for Asheville City Council in 1989. He was well known for donning an apron and cooking at fundraisers for local candidates.

In addition to being a well-known businessman, Tom served two four-year terms on the Asheville Regional Airport Authority. During that time he served as vice-chairman, chairman of the building and grounds committee, and employee relations committee. He was also a Shriner with the Oasis Temple and a member of the Biltmore Masonic Lodge, Asheville York Rite, and the Ancient Scottish Rite.

Tom married Betty Brittain 43 years ago, they reared two children: Susan Donoho Martin of Asheville and Daniel Woron of Florida.
Tom Donoho was a big man with an even bigger heart. WNC and Buncombe County have lost a very good friend and we will miss him. I know that my colleagues will join me in saluting this fine man and community leader.

HONORING NASA ADMINISTRATOR DANIEL GOLDIN

HON. DAVID L. HOBSO
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding public servant—the outgoing NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin. In his nine years with the agency, Mr. Goldin has been instrumental in shaping all aspects of NASA’s mission for the challenges of the 21st Century. He brought a welcome new management style and instituted reforms for NASA to operate “Faster, Better, and Cheaper.” Through these aggressive and innovative management changes, NASA achieved a necessary balance between the aeronautics and space programs. At the same time, Administrator Goldin made the safety of the Space Shuttle and Space Station crews the top priority for our space missions.

Mr. Goldin led the Shuttle Operations transition from an inefficient government bureaucracy to a private contractor, which significantly reduced the cost of human space flight. The cost savings realized in human space flight operations allowed NASA to dedicate additional resources for science research and aerospace technologies. This is a particular interest of mine since Glenn Research Center in Cleveland, Ohio, has developed preeminent capabilities in aeropropulsion systems, aerospace power and electric propulsion, aerospace communications, and combustion and fluids physics.

As anyone who knows Dan Goldin will tell you, he is not afraid to lead and direct his employees and his agency to higher levels of achievement. He has done so at NASA, and our aeronautics and space programs reflect his drive for innovation. As a Member of the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee, I have enjoyed working with Administrator Goldin over the past nine years, and wish him the best in his future endeavors.

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I am indeed honored and pleased to serve as Congressional Co-chair for National Bible Week, November 18–25, 2001. As we celebrate another blessed day of remembrance, Thanksgiving, we are to be thankful to be living in a country where the Holy Bible can be read and where we have the freedom to practice what the Bible teaches without fear of repression or punishment, and to worship as we believe.

Our 4th Commandment commands us “Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.” We attend the church of our choice on that particular day and read from the Bible during service, then unfortunately place it on a shelf until the next attendance. However, daily reading of the Bible should be encouraged. It is a wonderful source of comfort, spiritual guidance, uplifting spirits, and the religious history of our existence. From Genesis to Revelations, the Bible covers our moral laws, how to receive salvation and the promise of everlasting life. It is truly our daily bread.

Our great country was established on the teachings of the Bible. The Pilgrims landed on our shores with the Bible in their hands. Our founding fathers were rooted in the Bible. Leaders from our first president to our present legislators quoted verses at speaking events. The Bible contains an answer for every life situation to help us cope and strengthen our resolve. I strongly encourage everyone to read the Bible daily, and to begin during National Bible Week I congratulate the National Bible Association for its role in arousing interest in the Holy Bible.

HON. SCOTT MCDONNELL
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. MCDONNELL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the students of Roy Moore Elementary School of Silt, Colorado and thank them for their dedication to helping the children of Afghanistan. The students, led by their student council, have begun efforts to raise money for America’s Fund for Afghan Children. They began their effort following President Bush’s call to help the Afghan children caught in the current conflict.

The students have been occupied with finding the means to earn dollars and donate money to the fund for some time. Several students have donated allowances and found chores to earn money and contributed from their savings. The school has raised more than $200.00 for the children in Afghanistan.

The students of Roy Moore Elementary have shown great kindness and compassion by their efforts. More importantly, they have realized that the children in this conflict are not responsible for the attacks on this country and that they too, are victims in this struggle. Their efforts can act as a model for other schools around the country participating in this worthy endeavor.

Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to recognize the students of Roy Moore Elementary School for their efforts to such a noble cause. The students and faculty have brought great credit to themselves for dedicating their resources to those in need. As we all look for a way to help, Roy Moore Elementary deserves the praise and admiration of this body as we commend them for their contributions.

HONORING UNITED PARCEL SERVICE, FRESNO DISTRIBUTION CENTER

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor United Parcel Service (UPS) and their Fresno employees for their dedication to answering the needs of the local business community. Their hard work and ability to adapt quickly have kept Fresno businesses competitive with those in other areas.

UPS, which is the world’s largest package distribution company, transports more than 3 billion parcels and documents annually. Using more than 500 aircraft, 149,000 vehicles and 1,700 facilities to provide service in more than 200 countries and territories, they have made a worldwide commitment to serving the needs of the global marketplace.

Recently, UPS has added next-day ground service to their delivery options out of their Fresno distribution center. The addition of this service has opened the door for Fresno businesses. The ability to make ground deliveries overnight gives Fresno businesses the same advantage that Southern California businesses have, next-day delivery.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to honor the UPS Fresno Distribution Center for its commitment to the financial prosperity of Fresno and the Central Valley. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing the UPS Fresno Distribution Center many more years of continued success.

NATIONAL OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE WEEK

HON. TED STRICKLAND OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, November 17 is National Osteopathic Medicine Week, a week when we recognize the more than 47,000 osteopathic physicians (D.O.s) across the country for their contributions to the American healthcare system. This year, we celebrate D.O.s commitment to preventative medicine and end-of-life care.

During National Osteopathic Medicine (NOM) Week, D.O.s and patients celebrate the benefits of preventative health care by looking at the simple things that can be done to live healthier lives. As physicians who focus on treating the whole person and not just their symptoms, the nation’s osteopathic physicians are dedicated to helping maintain health through a whole-person patient-centered approach to healthcare. And, within that principle, they recognize death as the legitimate endpoint to the human lifecycle and respect the dignity and special needs of both patients and caregivers.

During NOM Week, D.O.s everywhere will explore multidisciplinary perspectives on end-of-life care, the ethical debate of pain management and the means to reduce communications barriers in the physician-patient relationship at end of life. Activities also educate Americans about end-of-life care and related topics, such... as advances in pain management, cultural sensitivities toward final stages of life, organ donation, advance directives, and end-of-life care options and financing. For more than a century, D.O.s have made a difference in the lives and health of our fellow citizens in every corner of the United States. Over 3,300 D.O.s in Ohio, the 416 students at Ohio University College of Osteopathic Medicine, and the over 64,000 D.O.s represented by the American Osteopathic Association for their contributions to the good health of the American people.

ON THE PASSING OF FORMER VIRGINIA CONGRESSMAN TOM DOWNING

HON. FRANK R. WOLF OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, we honor today the memory of Thomas Downing, a former congressman of the Virginia First Congressional District from 1959 to 1977. While Congressman Downing's record of public service and work in the House of Representatives preceded most of today's Members, including myself, the impact and achievements of his career will long be remembered. I would like to say a few words today to acknowledge the career of this dedicated public servant.

A graduate of Virginia Military Institute, Congressman Downing, who was an Army captain, led an Army reconnaissance team in World War II. On August 11, 1944, his unit in northern France was ambushed by the German troops. After the initial exchange of gunfire, two of his troops were injured. Congressman Downing immediately rescued them, and received the Silver Star, which said, "Captain Downing, without hesitation and with utter disregard for his personal safety, ran to the aid of his men among a hail of bullets."

After his service in the Army, Tom would return to school to earn his law degree from the University of Virginia. He practiced law in Newport News and was instrumental in the yard's acquisition of the North Yard for its expansion. As a senior lawmaker on the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Tom had significant expertise in maritime issues and played a major role in crafting legislation. On that Committee, he was a strong advocate for building a strong and modern U.S. Merchant Marine Service for this country's national security. Tom served as Chair of the Merchant Marine Subcommittee. As Chair, he presided over and helped to craft major legislation to overhaul and modernize the merchant marine.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1970 was the product of his signature piece of legislation and was designed to renovate the American Merchant Navy by 1980. In addition to his work on merchant marine issues on that Committee, he also played a prominent role in crafting legislation that sought to preserve the resources of our oceans and waterways. He played a leading role in the implementation of the Ocean Dumping Convention and in extending U.S. fishing rights to the 200 mile limit bill. He also played a role in crafting the Deep Water Port Act, as well as legislation to save the Great Dismal Swamp from mining. At the time of his retirement from the House, one of his colleagues called him the "premier expert on the problems of the Nation's maritime commerce and its commercial fisheries industry."

As the Chairman of the NASA Oversight Subcommittee of the then Space Science and Technology Committee, his interests in scientific research made him a national leader of the space effort. On that Subcommittee, he also represented the interests of NASA Langley Research Center located in Hampton, Virginia.

Tom Downing also made a gift to future generations of Virginians and North Carolinians through his efforts to create the Assateague Island National Seashore Park and the Great Dismal Swamp National Wildlife Refuge.

In the Ninety-Fourth Congress, his colleagues called upon him to chair the prominent Select Committee on Assassinations that launched new investigations into the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. He had been a leading critic of the Warren Commission and was the author of the 1976 legislation to reopen investigation into both cases. Even knowing of his retirement, his colleagues could think of no other Member who could have served in that post with his ability and integrity during the nation's time of turmoil.

As the dean of the Virginia Delegation at the time, Tom Downing helped to set the tone and tradition of our delegation today. He consistently sought and achieved joint action by Republicans of the delegation, irrespective of party affiliation, to deal with matters affecting the entire State. Today, we still honor that tradition and work together as a delegation to speak with one voice for Virginia's interests.

Even after his lengthy service in Congress, Tom Downing continued his commitment to public service. He served on the Board of Visitors of the Virginia Military Institute from 1985 to 1993 and served as President of the Board of Directors of The Mariners' Museum.

Mr. Speaker, Tom Downing had this book inscribed to the true statesman and Virginia gentleman. He was a good friend to everyone on the Virginia Peninsula and he will be sorely missed.

FORMER REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS N. DOWNING

HON. ROBERT C. SCOTT OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in paying tribute to former Congressman Thomas N. Downing.

Tom represented Virginia's First Congressional District from 1959 to 1977. He represented part of what is now the First and Third Congressional Districts, and part, at one time, of the Second.

Tom began his public service career in the military. In 1940, he graduated from Virginia Military Institute. From 1942 to 1946, he served as the troop commander of the Mechanized Cavalry with Third United States Army and commanded the first troops in the Third Army to invade Germany. For his exemplary service involving the rescue of two of his men during a reconnaissance operation in Northern France, Tom was awarded the Silver Star. The citation accompanying the Silver Star read in part "Captain Downing, without hesitation, and with utter disregard for his personal safety, ran to the aid of his men among a hail of bullets."

After his service in the military, Tom would return to school to earn his law degree from the University of Virginia. He practiced law in Hampton for 11 years and also served as a substitute judge of the municipal court for the City of Warwick prior to his election to the Eighty-sixth Congress in 1958. He would serve eight succeeding Congresses with little opposition. While in Congress he was a member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and the Space Science and Technology Committee.

During his tenure in Congress, he represented the Commonwealth and the First Congressional District with distinction. He worked to ensure the future of Newport News Shipyard and was instrumental in the yard's economic impact the Newport News shipyard had on his district and on the state of Virginia.

During his tenure, the shipyard added the area known as the Northyard, making it easier and more cost-effective to build some of the largest ships in the world.

Congressman Downing is also remembered nationally for his work following the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. During the 94th Congress he served as the chairman of the select Committee on Assassinations.

Finally, Congressman Downing made significant achievements in strengthening and modernizing the U.S. Merchant Marine Service. As chair of the House Merchant Marine Subcommittee, he helped craft major legislation to overhaul and modernize the merchant marine. The Merchant Marine Act of 1970 was a significant promotion of our national security interests.

In short, Congressman Downing served the Commonwealth of Virginia and the country with distinction. Again, on behalf of the entire House, we would extend our condolences on his passing and extend our friendship to his family and friends.

Tom Downing is also remembered for his dedication to his district, especially Newport News Shipbuilding. He recognized early on the great interest and work ongoing to make sure that the yard's future was secure.

Mr. Downing was first elected in 1958, and is especially remembered for his dedication to his district, especially Newport News Shipbuilding. He recognized early on the great interest and work ongoing to make sure that the yard's future was secure.
IN MEMORY OF FORMER U.S. REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS DOWNING

HON. JO ANN DAVIS OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, today I take the opportunity to honor the memory of former United States Representative Thomas Downing, who passed away Tuesday, November 6, 2001.

Tom Downing was a strong and effective representative of Virginia’s First District, and served the people well. He was a true friend of the military and an American patriot. Tom was loved by both Democrat and Republican alike. His passion was not about partisan politics—it was about Virginia, and he served the Commonwealth well.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great honor to represent the First District, which Tom did admirably with class, passion and an unyielding love for country. Representative Downing will be remembered not only for his service in Congress, but for his devoted exemplary service as well.

A true war hero, Tom will be missed, but we will never forget his contributions to Virginia, and to our nation as a whole.

IN MEMORY OF VIRGINIA CONGRESSMAN THOMAS N. DOWNING

HON. J. RANDY FORBES OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in honoring the memory of a former Member of Congress and pivotal Tidewater politician, Thomas N. Downing.

Congressman Downing represented Tidewater Virginia for eighteen years. He was well-known for his affability with his colleagues and his tenacity in representing his constituents. In particular, he was a staunch supporter of Newport News Shipbuilding, which was and is a cornerstone of the Tidewater economy and of our nation’s military readiness. It was Tom Downing’s support and assistance that helped to expand and improve that company’s ability to contribute so much to national defense and local jobs.

His interest in Newport News Shipbuilding was far more than parochial, it was patriotic. Tom Downing was a graduate of Virginia Military Institute (VMI), a decorated veteran of World War II, and a patriot in the truest sense of the word. He graduated from VMI in 1940 and four years later was commanding mechanized cavalry troops and Army reconnaissance during the liberation of France and sweep across Germany. Tom Downing’s personal bravery in rescuing two of his men who were injured during a German ambush earned him the Silver Star.

His legacy in Congress is no less impressive. Newport News Daily Press summed his service in these hallowed halls up best: “[In Congress] he truly hit his stride. He was a natural. Pennsylvania hath no peer. He had the perfect combination of skill and substance. He was articulate and personable. Few congressmen have served their constituents better. Just ask the shipyard. Or NASA. Or the watermen. Or any of thousands of individuals and institutions that Mr. Downing helped during his eight terms. Fiscally conservative? Of course. Integrity? From head to toe. But it was the kindness of the man that most recall about Tom Downing. He liked people and vice-versa. . . .”

His memory lives on in Tidewater’s strength and in the lives of those his service touched. Tom Downing will be missed, but not forgotten.

HONORING CONGRESSMAN THOMAS DOWNING

HON. EDWARD L. SCHROCK OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SCHROCK Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in honoring, the life of Congressman Thomas Downing. Congressman Downing served Virginia’s First District as a member of this body from 1959 to 1977, and represented parts of the First Congressional District which certainly merits special recognition on this occasion.

Congressman Downing brought with him to Congress a keen, first-hand knowledge of the military and the need for readiness. He was a decorated veteran and hero, having commanded some of the first troops to invade Germany. He was awarded the Silver Star for saving two of his countrymen after an ambush by German troops.

During his service in Congress, he used this knowledge of the military to help create a military more prepared for combat. He helped Newport News Shipbuilding expand and build the North Yard, which allowed them to build larger ships and to allow for a stronger and more prepared American Navy.

Congressman Downing is perhaps best known for his work following the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King. During the 94th Congress, he served as the Chairman of the Select Committee on Assassinations. His own curiosity in the matters fueled a vigorous investigation and numerous new theories to explain the circumstances surrounding President Kennedy’s assassination.

Following his retirement from the House, Congressman Downing continued to serve the Commonwealth of Virginia and our nation, as a member of the Board of Visitors for his alma mater, the Virginia Military Institute, and as President of the Board of Directors of the Mariners’ Museum.

Throughout his life and during his service as a member of this House, Congressman Thomas Downing was a true public servant and a great Virginian. Our nation, the Commonwealth, and Hampton Roads will all miss him.

THE PASSING OF FORMER VIRGINIA CONGRESSMAN TOM DOWNING

HON. TOM DAVIS OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a gracious friend and champion of the citizens of the Virginia Peninsula, former Congressman of Virginia’s First Congressional District, Tom Downing.

Tom was a true gentleman and a great patriot. Representing the Peninsula in Congress from 1959 to 1977, he helped Newport News Shipbuilding gain approval for expansion, which made it easier and more cost effective for the shipyard to construct some of the largest ships in the world.

Tom was also well known for his firm belief that Lee Harvey Oswald did not act alone in assassinating President John Kennedy. He convinced Congress to open a second investigation into the death of the President. While he retired before the panel began its work, Tom remained convinced until his recent death that the footage on the Zapruder film held the answers.

Born in Newport News, Virginia on February 1, 1919, Tom was a graduate of Newport News High School, received a B.S. degree from Virginia Military Institute and a law degree from the University of Virginia. He served in World War II as a combat troop commander of Mechanized Cavalry with Gen. George Patton of the Third U.S. Army and commanded the first troops in the Third Army to invade Germany. He received a Silver Star for gallantry in action in France when his unit was ambushed by a German patrol. He rescued two of his men who were wounded during the initial exchange of gunfire.

Tom Downing was re-elected to Congress eight times, with little trouble and often unopposed. During his tenure in Congress, Tom recognized more than anyone the great economic impact the Newport News shipyard had on his district. He twice considered running for higher office—U.S. Senate in 1966 and governor a few years later—but decided against both. This body benefited greatly from those decisions.

Mr. Speaker, I mourn the recent loss of our friend and former colleague. Tom lived his life with exuberance and passion for serving his beloved Virginia. He was a true leader on behalf of all Virginians and Americans.

HON. BOB STUMP OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an exceptional leader and American Patriot, LTC Edward S. Gryczynski, U.S. Army, Retired, in recognition of an outstanding career in service to his country.

LTC Gryczynski has a truly distinguished record, including over 22 years of commissioned service in the U.S. Army uniform, which certainly merits special recognition on the occasion of his retirement from his position as Director of Personal Affairs for The Retired Officers Association.

He entered the Army in June 1961 through LaSalle College’s ROTC Program and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Defense Artillery. In 1965, he transferred to the Adjutant General Corps and was integrated in the regular Army.

Colonel Gryczynski served in a variety of positions in the administrative and personnel management fields, including assignments as Mankind has waged many types of war—wars fought for land, wars fought for superiority, wars fought for riches, wars fought for independence. Most wars only impact the opposing forces and are often not remembered long in history. Some wars, however, are of such magnitude that they change the course of history. These wars are usually fought between good and evil. The heroes, who fought World War II, fought such a war. Without victory for the Allies, the world, as we know it, would be a much different place.

There is no doubt that the Normandy Invasion was a turning point in World War II. The Normandy veterans from the Fourth Congressional District were there, but, perhaps, at the time they did not know they were changing the course of history. These heroes were busy fighting, watching their brothers perish and surviving to fight another day. And like the title fighting, watching their brothers perish and surviving to fight another day. And like the title fighting, watching their brothers perish and surviving to fight another day. And like the title fighting, watching their brothers perish and surviving to fight another day.

Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Fiscal Year 2002, VA/HUD appropriations bill. The Appropriations Committee has put together a bill that is truly bipartisan. I am proud to rise in strong support of this measure which funds many important programs as well as provides needed housing initiatives, and key environmental programs. This measure also provides resources to assist state and local governments with infrastructure improvement and economic development needs.

The Central Naugatuck Valley in my district has been undergoing a major water/sewer infrastructure upgrade. I am pleased that under the State and Territorial Assistance Grant Program, $485,000 has been appropriated for this much needed purpose.

The City of Waterbury, which operates the hub of the region’s sewer system, has been burdened by the majority of the cost for these improvements. Therefore, $260,000 (of the total $485,000) will go to the City of Waterbury for wastewater infrastructure improvements including the cost of the new sewage treatment facility in the City which new funds, together with the $750,000 made available through the FY 2001 VA/HUD Appropriations Act, are to be used so as to lower the sewer rates charged to system customers.

The Town of Wolcott, Connecticut is partially served by the water system of the City of Waterbury. However, the Clinton Hill Road neighborhood of Wolcott relies on well water and septic systems for their water needs. This area of town has been experiencing well failures and contamination. Under this legislation, the Town of Wolcott will receive $250,000 (of the total $485,000) towards the extension of the water distribution system to the Clinton Hill Road neighborhood, together with $250,000 made available through the FY 2001 VA/HUD Appropriations Act. The Town of Middlebury is served by dangerously inadequate rock wells. In 1999, several of the town wells went dry and MTBE contamination was discovered. The town has already secured significant state funds to extend a twelve-inch water main to the affected area. Under this legislation, the Town of Wolcott will receive $125,000 (of the total $485,000) towards the extension of the water distribution system in the Town of Wolcott.

Finally, I would like to also point out that $100,000 has been appropriated for the City of Derby to assist with the restoration of the historic Sterling Opera House. Built in 1889, the Sterling was the first structure in Connecticut to be placed on the National Register of Historic Places. Today, the Opera House is suffering from 35 years of neglect. The State of Connecticut and the City of Derby have already committed a substantial sum of money to begin this restoration. The money in this bill will help the City to restore the Sterling Opera House to its original grandeur.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to support this measure not only because of what it means to my District, but also for what it means to America’s veterans, our environment, and those who receive vital housing assistance in order to partake in the American Dream.

CONGRATULATING DR. VINCENT PETRUCCI

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Vincent Petrucci for receiving the 2000 Agriculturist of the Year Award. The award is given by the Greater Fresno Area Chamber of Commerce to an individual who exemplifies leadership and integrity in California’s Central Valley agricultural business community.

Dr. Vincent Petrucci, a native of California, studied at U.C. Davis where he earned a BS degree in pomology and a MS degree in horticulture. In 1994 he was honored with an honorary degree of Doctor of Science by California State University, Fresno (CSUF).

During his 45-year tenure at CSUF, he developed the viticulture and enology programs at Fresno State, including the curriculum and facilities. Dr. Petrucci has served as a consultant to more than 34 different grape-growing countries around the world, including the former Soviet Union and the People’s Republic of China. He has participated in the International Office of the Wine and Grape (O.I.V.) and has served as vice president of the International Group of Experts on Raisins and Table Grapes for O.I.V.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate Dr. Vincent Petrucci on his 2000 Agriculturist of the Year Award. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Dr. Petrucci and wishing him many more years of continued success.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2500, DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

SPEECH OF HON. LUCILLE ROYBAL-ALLARD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, November 14, 2001

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2500, the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Appropriations Conference Report. I’d like to thank our Chairman, FRANK WOLF, and our Ranking Member, JOSE SERRANO, for putting together such a fair conference report under the significant funding constraints faced by the Committee.

As my colleagues know, one of the most critical functions of this bill is to provide resources for our law enforcement to assist them in enforcing the laws of our nation and keeping our citizens safe. The CJS bill contains the majority of funding for federal law enforcement personnel, and funds critical grant programs which get the resources out to the local law enforcement agencies which work so hard to keep our communities safe.

While we know that additional resources will be needed in the future, the bill provides significant funding to make sure that our federal law enforcement agencies, such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Border Patrol, have adequate funding to do the tough jobs. In light of the tragic events on September 11th, I am particularly pleased that the bill provides important, much-needed increases for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, including an increase in the number of border patrol agents and INS inspectors, while at the same time dedicating an additional $45 million above base funding in order to tackle the existing backlog in the processing of immigration cases.

While I am pleased with the overall bill, I am disappointed that the Senate provision permanently extending Section 245(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act was not included in the final conference report.

245(i) allows certain eligible immigrants to apply for green cards in the United States, rather than returning to their home countries to apply. Without Section 245(i), people fully eligible for green cards will be forced to return to their countries of origin and barred from returning to the United States for up to ten years—ripping families apart and causing many employers to lose qualified and well-trained employees. The issue is not whether these immigrants are eligible for legal residency, nor when they can adjust, but rather from where they can apply to become permanent U.S. residents.

As my colleagues know, the LIFE Act, which passed last year, provided a window of just four months for people to file applications with the INS or Department of Labor. For various reasons, thousands of qualified immigrants were unable to benefit from this short extension by the April 30th 2001, deadline. In the rush to comply, many eligible applicants had their files returned by the INS because of technical mistakes after the deadline expired. In addition, many immigrants did not have their papers filed properly, or even at all, by unscrupulous individuals purporting to be immigration lawyers.

Many members, including myself and the membership of Congressional Hispanic Caucus, believe that Congress should pass a permanent extension. Section 245(i) is critical. Some may disagree with this view, but it is clear that some sort of extension is long overdue. President Bush, the AFL-CIO and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have all publicly supported an extension of this important provision.

The Senate passed a temporary extension of 245(i) more than 2 months ago, and the House was set to vote on this legislation on September 11th. It is my sincere hope that the leadership of the House will re-schedule a vote on this critical legislation as soon as possible. I look forward to working with Chairman Wolf and Ranking Member Serrano to ensure that an extension of 245(i) is passed before Congress adjourns for the year.

Mr. Speaker, having expressed my concern about the omission of section 245(i), let me now focus on some of the positive aspects of this bill. I applaud why I will support the bill. For example, I am very pleased that the conference committee was willing to provide funding for a variety of initiatives and projects that are of importance to Los Angeles and California.

The Los Angeles Conservancy works with a variety of community based groups and developers on rehabilitation and restoration projects. The funding in this bill will assist the L.A. Conservancy with their renovation of historic St. Vibiana’s Cathedral. In addition, the conservancy’s Broadway Redevelopment project will rehabilitate theaters in the historic area of Los Angeles. Both projects fit into an exciting downtown redevelopment plan that is strengthening the economic foundation of this once neglected area of downtown Los Angeles.

In addition to economic development funding, I am also pleased by the number of projects that have been included to help our nation’s kids through the Department of Justice’s juvenile justice programs and community-oriented police (COPS) programs. In Los Angeles, several groups working with teenagers will receive support for their promising efforts. The East Los Angeles Community Union (TELACU) operates a family-based gang violence prevention program, Project JADED—the Juvenile Assistance Diversion Effort—is a well-regarded community-based organization working to expand its juvenile crime prevention program. Para Los Niños provides intervention for first-time juvenile offenders and their families, including after-school programs for at-risk youth. Another program included in our bill is LA’s Best, a nationally recognized after-school program that operates in schools throughout the city of Los Angeles.

I was also pleased to work in cooperation with Governor Davis and Republican and Democratic members of the California delegation to acquire funding for other projects of regional and statewide importance.

One of the proudest achievements of the California delegation is a project that honors the longtime service on the Commerce-Judiciary-State Subcommittee of our late colleague, Julian Dixon. Funds are provided to assist Julian’s law school alma mater, Southwestern University School of Law, with construction of its state-of-the-art Julian Dixon Courtroom. The courtroom will facilitate the teaching of advocacy and litigation skills. It will also provide Southwestern, which serves a significant population of minority law students, with a community resource for jurists and lawyers. The university has committed to a better than one to one match for the federal funding.
Mr. Speaker, there are not many issues where 100 percent of the diverse 52-member California House delegation come together, but support for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program is one of them. A united and unanimous delegation is responsible for seeing that $565 million was provided for this important program that reimburses California and other impacted states for the costs associated with incarcerating illegal aliens.
Several other California projects also received attention. The California Center for Integrative Coastal Research. CI-CORE, is a new research initiative pulling together the strengths of several California State University campuses, including San Jose, San Francisco, Hayward, Monterey Bay, San Luis Obispo, Sacramento, Long Beach, Los Angeles, and San Diego. With the increased burden placed upon their coastal resources due to agiculture, industry and urban development, better understanding of the oceans and our coastal region is imperative in making informed commercial, recreational and environmental policy decisions. CI-CORE will provide timely and appropriate environmental data to regulatory agencies that are responsible for the development and enforcement of management policies.
The University of California’s textile research program will receive funding and designation as one of the member institutions of the National Textile Consortium (NTC). California is the leading manufacturer of apparel in the U.S. and is the largest employer in the apparel and textile trade, yet until now, no Caliifornia university was included in the NTC. The inclusion of its research program, whose strengths include polymer science, fiber mechanics, fabric performance, and fashion the-nology, is long overdue.
The California Spatial Reference Center at Scripps Institute will also receive special attention. The center’s research and activities support an accurate spatial reference system in California that is integral to decision-making by policy-makers at the local, state and federal level. As California faces significant seismic and geologic activity each year, an up-to-date spatial reference system is central to our ability to perform environmental monitoring, manage our civil infrastructure, and respond appropriately to emergencies of all kinds.
And finally, a modest amount of funding is provided to support the Central California Ozone
Stud is a collaborative effort by the California Air Resources Board, local governments, and industry, and has already received over $8 million in state and local contributions. In light of the change in federal air quality standards for ozone, the deregulation of utilities in bringing new power generation to California, and the on-going process of developing State Implementation Plans for air quality, the Central California Ozone Study is a vital ingredient to ensure the cleanest air possible for all Californians.

I have enjoyed working with our chairman, ranking member and all the members of the Commerce-Justice-State-Judiciary Subcommittee this year on the wide variety of programs and agencies within our jurisdiction.
Our work is a constant balancing act, but I believe a good balance has been achieved. I urge support of the conference report.

CONDOLENCES TO BETRU FAMILY
HON. DIANE E. WATSON
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001
Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, as a fellow American, I extend my deepest sympathies and condolences to Yeneneh Betru’s friends and family, as well as the numerous and untold victims of the tragedies that occurred on September 11th. Dr. Betru was aboard the American Airlines Flight 77 bound from Washington Dulles Airport to Los Angeleses which crashed into the Pentagon.
A native of Ethiopia who was raised in Saudi Arabia, Yeneneh Betru came to the United States for an education. “Ever since he was a little kid, he always wanted to be a doctor” said his brother Sirak, “he always wanted to help people.” Yeneneh realized his dream before his life tragically ended. Dr. Betru was a pioneer in the hospitalist movement and he personally trained hundreds of hospitalists.
His passion and legacy was a project distributing dialysis equipment to Ethiopia.
May we honor his legacy and cherish his memory forever and always.

HON. LOIS CAPPS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to acknowledge Sunday, November 18, 2001 as a Day of Understanding. In a society where so many diverse ethnicities and beliefs coincide with each other every day it is important that we take the time to realize and appreciate all the different cultures that are represented throughout the United States.
The County of San Luis Obispo in California has resolved that November 18th be recognized as a Day of Understanding, in order to promote understanding among many different faiths. As a nation, we need to take this opportunity to listen and learn about one another’s beliefs, and to understand different cultures and practices.
Religious intolerance and lack of understanding has long contributed to wars between different groups throughout the history of mankind. It is time to recognize and appreciate cultural differences instead of condemn and remain ignorant about them. In a free society, peoples of divergent faiths should endeavor to understand and respect one another’s different religious and spiritual heritages, beliefs, hopes and dreams, and it is my hope that by acknowledging the Day of Understanding we are taking a first step toward peace.
I encourage you to pause this Sunday, No-dember 18, and take the time to ask a neighbor, friend, or co-worker about his or her culture or religion that may be different than yours. We should all attempt to learn more about and appreciate the multitude of cultures that surround us every day, and I am so pleased that the citizens of San Luis Obispo have taken the initiative in creating this wonderful Day of Understanding.

HON. SILVESTRE REYES
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an important member of the El Paso community.
Mr. Tedd Richardson, an El Paso businessman, is well known around the city for his gracious contributions to the under-served. He conducts an annual Christmas dinner to serve the less fortunate and to spread the word of Christmas and God’s love to the neediest.
Mr. Richardson recently expanded his Christmas tradition to my home community of Canutillo. Mr. Richardson recently initiated the Cinco de Mayo Dinner at the Canutillo Church.
He was so impressed by the progress of their school grounds improvement project that he made a generous donation to the school fund and future the progress of the project.
Mr. Richardson also vowed to help raise the $19,000 necessary to complete the project, and in addition has challenged other local businesses and individuals to match his contributions. This project is not only significant to the students and is teaching a life lesson in the importance of civic responsibility. Mr. Richardson has promised to continue working hand-in-hand with the Bill Childress Elementary School.
Mr. Tedd Richardson is an exemplary citizen. He believes in helping people to help themselves. I believe that Tedd Richardson is a model citizen who insists that his contribution to his community be more than average.
His dedication to education and establishing a future for El Paso children has not only made him an individual of distinction, but has also earned him a special place in the minds of families and schools all over the city. I am proud to recognize Mr. Richardson, and hope the model of his citizenship reflects in all peoples around El Paso.

HON. WAYNE BEMIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RADOVANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Wayne Bemis on the occasion of his retirement as Deputy Director of the California State Forest Service.
Mr. Bemis was born in New Hampshire. At the age of eight, he and his family moved to San Diego, California. In 1953, he graduated from Grossmont High School. After completing a two-year forestry program at Lassen Junior College, he enrolled at California State University, San Diego. He interrupted his college education for two years when he joined the Army, where he served at Fort Bliss, Texas. After proudly serving his country in the U.S.
army, Bemis continued his college education and graduated in 1963. He then enrolled at California State University, Humboldt, where he earned a Masters Degree in Forest Management.

After completing his formal education, Mr. Bemis served the U.S. Forest Service for 12 years as a professional forester, and silviculturist. His 12 years with the U.S. Forest Service provided Wayne with a variety of valuable on-the-ground experiences that he went on to share with students at Reedley College. During his teaching career at Reedley College, he developed an outdoor laboratory at Sequoia Lake, where thousands of forestry students have received their first practical experience in the woods. The program he developed uses Reedley College Forestry students to manage the forest resource for the YMCA.

Wayne and his wife, Pat, have one son, Scott.

Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to pay tribute to Wayne Bemis for his dedicated public service and distinguished teaching career over the past 38 years. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Wayne Bemis a pleasant retirement and many more years of continued happiness.

TRIBUTE TO DR. LEE HARTWELL

HON. ADAM SMITH OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Dr. Lee Hartwell, president and director of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle, Washington and professor of genetics and medicine at the University of Washington, on his outstanding research on yeast genetics which earned him the prestigious Nobel Prize in physiology or medicine for 2001.

It is with great pride that I extend my congratulations to Dr. Hartwell whose dedication and hard work in the area of genetic research has not only enabled many lives to be saved, but has provided the groundwork for many others to go on and make countless advances of their own.

Though I don’t pretend to be an expert on cell division in eukaryotic (nucleated) organisms, I am well aware that Dr. Hartwell’s dedication and innovative study, beginning over 25 years ago, has made an enormous difference in the understanding of how cells divide and the vast medical advances we can derive from such knowledge. Dr. Hartwell’s research was the first to harness the tools of genetics to study how cells function, thus determining which genes cause cells to divide—without his efforts, this critical information could very well remain a mystery.

His hard work and persistence is to be commended, and I am pleased that the Nobel Assembly in Sweden has selected Dr. Hartwell for this honor, which is so richly deserved.

Congratulations, Dr. Hartwell, and thank you for your dedication and contribution not only to the biological and medical sciences, but ultimately to people both here and throughout the world who will so greatly benefit from your discoveries.

FOOD RATIONS, CLUSTER BOMBS AND NATION BUILDING IN AFGHANISTAN

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, today we have been bombing Afghanistan for one month. During that time, we have also dropped about 1.1 million humanitarian daily rations. I find it unfortunate that, from the entire spectrum of colors, both the cluster bomblets and the food rations we are dropping are bright yellow. Though recent reports from the Pentagon stated that the food rations would be changed to blue packages, apparently this color will not work either. Radio broadcasts from our psychological operations planes that are trying to explain the color discrepancy because many Afghans neither hear the broadcast nor trust them, will not solve this problem. I can only hope that the Pentagon will soon find a solution, before innocent Afghani children try to pry open a cluster bomb, hoping to cure their hunger but killing them instead.

There are many problems associated with this war, and there go beyond the similar color of food rations and cluster bomblets.

Six years ago, the use of cluster bombs was prohibited during the 1995 bombing campaign in Bosnia by Air Force General Michael Ryan, then-commander of Allied Air Forces Southern Europe and NATO’s air campaigns in Bosnia. The logic behind this decision was simple. General Ryan recognized the inherent danger from cluster bombs to Bosnian civilians, the very people whom we were supposedly fighting to protect. He knew that cluster bomblets landed in villages and near hospitals, that dud cluster bomblets were picked up and played with by children and that innocent Bosnians were being killed. An Air Force study on cluster bomblets stated “the problem was that the fragmentation pattern was too large to sufficiently limit collateral damage and there was also the further problem of potential unexploded ordnance.”

Despite General Ryan’s wise action, cluster bomblets were again used in Kosovo and now again in Afghanistan. Nonetheless, little has changed, and the array of problems and dangers with cluster bomblets continues to exist. In Kosovo, the first casualties to peacekeeping forces occurred when two British soldiers attempted to disarm an unexploded cluster bomblet. The International Committee of the Red Cross found that, in one year’s time, there were over 200,000 civilian casualties in Kosovo from cluster bomblets. In 1999, the Pentagon admitted that more than 11,000 unexploded cluster bomblets remain in Kosovo. In Afghanistan, the United Nations has reported that villages near the City of Herat feel food rations because little yellow cluster bomblets litter the ground. Or perhaps they’re yellow food rations, who knows... .

Cluster bomblets are neither safe, nor are they humane. They can be dropped from nearly any Marine, Navy or Air Force plane, without ejection, cluster bomblets can be released 200 to 2000 bomblets, which fall to the ground and cover football field size areas. As many as 10% of these bomblets don’t explode, and end up scattered across the ground, waiting for a farmer to plow it, a child to play with it, or an unknowing hungry mother to pick it up. As a United Nations mine clearance expert noted “it is highly likely that many in Afghanistian will not know the difference between aerially delivered food aid and aerially delivered munitions.”

But, Mr. Speaker, the situation in Afghanistan only gets worse. It is estimated that 724 million square meters of land in Afghanistan are tainted with landmines. Unexploded cluster bomblets will only expand this area, undoubtedly to include farms, villages and holy sites. Further, winter is coming soon in Afghanistan, and as snow falls in the mountains, cluster bomblets will become buried and frozen, silently waiting for an unsuspecting civilian or allied soldier to walk by.

It is no surprise that Human Rights Watch has called for a global moratorium on the use of cluster bombs. They realize that unexploded cluster bomblets become in effect landmines. A recent report by the group finds that cluster bombs “have proven to be a serious and long-lasting threat to civilians, soldiers, peacekeepers, and even experts, because of the high initial failure rate of the bomblets, because of the large number typically dispersed over large areas, and because of the difficulty in precisely targeting the bomblets.” For these same reasons, many believe that the use of cluster bombs is a violation of the Geneva Convention’s prohibition against weapons that cause superfluous injury and suffering. If we can’t guarantee that only military targets will be hit, and if we can’t guarantee that all cluster bomblets will explode, then we simply should not use them. I have written President Bush to urge him to end the use of cluster bomblets, and I anticipate his response.

Our use of cluster bomblets leaves much to be considered for when the bombing in Afghanistan ends. Will the United States work to cleanse the landscape of cluster bomblets as it tries to build a new government in Afghanistan? I have no doubt that landmines and cluster bomblets will be cleared from areas that Unocal wants to build its pipeline. The oil giant’s consultant, Dr. Henry Kissinger, may well use his vast influence to protect Unocal’s interest, to have cluster bomblets removed from a swath through southern Afghanistan leading from Turkmenistan to Pakistan. But I wonder about their opinion of cluster bomblets elsewhere. Will Unocal and Kissinger see cluster bomblets as a buffer, insulating their interests from the threat of angry, anti-American Afghans? Will it serve the oil company’s interest to have a maimed population and to restrict the Afghan government? Time will only tell... .

What ever the case may be, the need for the U.S. to take the lead in ending its use of cluster bombs has never been more apparent. We need to protect the Afghan citizenry and install trust with the people; we need to protect the Afghan land and insure a viable economic future; and we need to assist in developing a government for Afghanistan that will bring peace in the region, not profits abroad. Cluster bomblets only serve a short-term goal of death, and have no role in the long-term strategy of peace.
HONORING THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN INSTITUTE

HON. MARK UDALL
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the important energy and environmental research and achievements of the Rocky Mountain Institute (RMI), located in Snowmass, Colorado.

Over the last two decades, RMI has compiled an outstanding record of achievement—and it is poised to make even greater contributions now, as we address the interrelated problems and opportunities of energy policy, environmental protection and national security.

Resource analysts Hunter and Amory Lovins, who still lead it, established the RMI in 1982. It began as a small group of colleagues focusing on energy policy, and has grown into a broadbased institution with more than 45 full-time employees, a 50 million budget, and a global reach.

RMI focuses on a wide range of pressing and important issues—such as energy efficiency, resource productivity, market-oriented solutions to resource problems, and unlocking the positive power of corporate structures. But its principal concern has been to disentangle the root causes of scarcity (wasteful, counterproductive activities) and devise cost-effective, profit-generating responses that result in greater efficiencies, fewer environmental impacts, and greater economic and national security.

In short, RMI and its team of researchers ask more probing questions that in turn lead to the creation of exciting new techniques for more profitable and sustainable living, while also increasing awareness and understanding of the impacts of bad habits and practices.

The creation of RMI came in response to a well-remembered energy crisis—the oil embargo of 1973—a time of challenges in some ways similar to those we face today. At that time of high gas prices, long lines at the gas station and a war in the Middle East, most of the country was focused on how we could become more energy independent by increasing our traditional energy supplies.

Amory Lovins was also thinking about this problem, but he came at it from a different perspective. Instead of trying to find solutions to feed our existing consumption, he was asking more broad-based questions, such as: What are the activities for which we need energy? Can we find other energy sources to supply these needs? What are the cheapest ways to supply that energy? From this thinking arose a whole new era of looking at energy issues from the end-use/least-cost approach—the core focus of RMI. Since then, Amory and his team of researchers, which includes his wife Hunter Lovins, have examined the whole range of energy consumption, supply and delivery systems and considered ways to achieve the same social goals at lower costs and lower impact.

They have been the leaders in promoting the more effective use of buildings (over 30 percent of America’s total energy usage is tied to buildings; as RMI notes, weatherizing homes, using energy-efficient appliances and harnessing the natural heating and cooling effects of the sun and earth can lead to dramatic reductions while also resulting in increased productivity and enhanced living environments). They have been leaders in the promotion of highly efficient light bulbs (about 20 percent of our electricity generation goes for lighting; as RMI notes, if the country fully utilized the now commercially available efficient light bulbs, we could displace 120 Chemocly-sized power plants).

And, they have been leaders in the development of new transportation technologies to reduce oil consumption (transportation needs comprise nearly two-thirds of our oil consumption, and RMI notes that if we increased the average fuel efficiency of vehicles by just 10 miles per gallon from today’s current 19 mpg, we could displace all of the oil we import from the Persian Gulf).

Also in the transportation arena, RMI researchers introduced the Hypercar concept in 1992. This car was built using the same basic concept, whole-systems thinking used in all of RMI’s work—they imagined what a car could be if designed from scratch. Not losing sight of consumer needs and the demands placed on cars, they produced a car composed of sturdy and light components that is aerodynamic and uses electricity to achieve remarkable fuel efficiency. This past spring, RMI unveiled the “Revolution”—an actual working prototype employing Hypercar concepts.

The Hypercar, like all of RMI’s other work, is not based on science-fiction, or environment-friendly utopian precepts. RMI’s work is based on real world, practical techniques that are available today. In fact, as can be attested to by the many companies that RMI consults for, the whole-system approach can result in tangible benefits that increase productivity and, ultimately, profits.

But perhaps RMI’s most important contribution is that it has particular importance for today’s world has been to highlight the connection between energy use and national security.

In their probing, and, unfortunately, prescient 1982 book, “Brittle Power: Energy Strategy for National Security,” Amory and Hunter Lovins made a convincing case that our reliance on centralized, concentrated distributed power systems is inherently insecure. Potential terrorists can take advantage of this system by targeting power grids, pipelines and production facilities to cause major power and energy disruptions. The authors then argued that a more secure energy system is one that is dispersed, diverse and involves more locally produced energy—in addition to the simple techniques of reducing consumption altogether. Given the events of September 11th, we would be well advised to reengage in these issues and begin to seriously consider the recommendations outlined in this book.

As the work of RMI continually points out, enhancing our national security, does not only involve a reexamination of our energy infrastructure, consumption and resource supplies. It also involves creating strong and healthy communities.

As Amory and Hunter Lovins note, “Security also derives from a society in which people are healthy and have a healthful environment, a sustainable economy, a legitimate system of government, and abundant cultural and spiritual assets.” This again involves looking at the problem from a whole-system approach. An example the authors use to underscore this point is the costs of maintaining our military forces to keep oil flowing from the Middle East oil fields. They note that if we simply weatherize our homes, businesses and office complexes and increase gas mileage of our cars, we can eliminate oil imports from all sources. Again, it is this kind of thinking that we need now to address our security needs.

These are but a few examples of the critically important work of the RMI—RMI not only produces abstract analyses, but it also puts its ideas into practice. A prime example is the RMI office building in Snowmass, Colorado. The 4,000-square-foot building is passive-solar, super-insulated, and earth-sheltered. It has no heating system in the traditional sense, but is kept comfortable even at 20 degrees below zero by passive solar gain through super-insulated windows. Savings of 99 percent in space-and water-heating energy and 90 percent in household electricity repaid the cost of building the RMI in 10 months.

RMI can even grow bananas in its greenhouse—in the high mountains of Colorado. More importantly, the RMI building demonstrates to homeowners that this level of efficiency is possible and cost effective.

This work—and more—now has spanned the past twenty years. It has been highly praised and recognized with a number of awards, including the Right Livelihood Award (the “alternative Nobel Prize”) in 1984, the Onassis Foundation’s fist Delphi Prize (one of the world’s top environmental awards) in 1989 for its energy work, and Amory and Hunter Lovins were named “Heroes of the Planet” by Time magazine in 2000.

As we seek solutions for the vast array of energy and national security issues we are now confronting, we would do well to draw upon the ideas and approaches being explored, tested and implemented by the people at RMI. I look forward with anticipation to RMI’s next twenty years and the exciting contributions and innovative ideas they will no doubt produce.

HONORING WILLIAM M. MAGUY

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of William M. Maguy for his faithful dedication to improving the lives of others. Mr. Maguy died in his home on February 17, 2001, of a massive heart attack.

William had an extensive education. He earned a BA and an MA in Philosophy from the Aquinas Institute of Philosophy, an MA in Theology from the Aquinas Institute of Theology, and he was a Ph.D. candidate in Education from the University of Chicago.

From 1961 to 1963 William served as a Professor of Theology, a Dean of Students, a Religious Education Instructor, and an Informal Liaison Officer of Catholic Church and International Organizations in Bolivia. From 1963–1966 he served as the Director of the Aquinas Institute in Illinois.

In 1967 he began his service at Proteus, Inc., a company that focuses on improving people’s ability to become...
HONORING JOHN JORDON “BUCK” O’NEIL ON HIS 90TH BIRTHDAY

HON. KAREN McCARTHY OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. McCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a man some call “Mr. Kansas City”, Mr. John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil. “Buck” is a man who has come to embody the ideals we share as a nation. As he celebrates his 90th birthday on November 13, 2001, I am proud and honored to celebrate the lifetime achievement of our hometown hero.

John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil was born November 13, 1911 in Carrabelle, Florida. He developed a love of baseball at an early age and his family called him “Buck” after the owner of the Miami Giants, Buck O’Neil. Though a segregated America denied Buck the opportunity to grace the diamonds of the Major Leagues as a player, he was able to showcase unmatched talent with the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro Leagues. He joined the Monarchs in 1938, and played for them until 1943, at which time he went to serve his country in World War II. Recognizing his patriotic responsibility to our country, he entered the United States Navy and was stationed in the Philippines from 1943 until his discharge in 1946. Buck was named player/manager for the Monarchs in 1948 and continued his association with the team through the end of the 1955 season.

As a player, Buck had a career batting average of over .400 for four 300-plus seasons at the plate, and led the Kansas City Monarchs to victory in the 1942 Negro World Series. After 12 years as a player, Buck changed hats and managed the Monarchs to four more league titles in six years. Following his career with the Kansas City Monarchs, Buck joined the major leagues as a scout for the Chicago Cubs. In 1962 the Chicago Cubs made him the first African American to coach in the Majors. Buck is credited with signing Hall of Fame baseball greats Ernie Banks and Lou Brock to their first professional contracts, and is achieved to have sent more Negro League athletes to the all white major leagues than any other man in baseball history.

Today he serves as the Board Chairman for the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum in Kansas City, and spends his time promoting the achievements of African American baseball players who played for the love of the game, despite the color barriers at that time that kept them out of the Majors. He is also actively involved in utilizing the Museum to assist in the education of youth in the community through programs such as “Reading Around the Bases”, where elementary school students learn from community readers about the pioneers of the Negro Leagues. I was honored to be asked to read from “second base” to a group of students as part of celebrating Buck’s 85th birthday party. Our “Hometown Hero” is very active in various charitable causes within the community. He lends his name and energy to sponsor the Buck O’Neil Golf Classic, a fundraiser for the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum and The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. In the past three years, the event has raised nearly $350,000 for the organizations. For the past six years, the Kansas City Securities Association, Inc. Educational Endowment Fund has given four-year scholarships to graduating high school students in honor of Negro Leagues players, one in honor of Buck O’Neil. He participates in the Negro Leagues Museum’s “Night of the Harvest Moon” program on Halloween night. It provides area children a safe alternative from the traditional to door to door trick or treating. More than 14,000 children have participated in the event over the last four years.

Buck has risen to national prominence with his moving narration of the Negro Leagues as part of Ken Burns’ PBS baseball documentary. Since then he has been the source of countless national media appearances on “Late Night with David Letterman,” and “Late, Late Show with Tom Snyder.” Last week he gave an interview to Jim Rome, who has a nationally syndicated sports radio program. Mr. Rome said he could have talked to Buck for the entire three hour show because Buck had such rich experiences to share about various baseball players, and baseball in general. He ended his comments by saying that Buck was one of the most interesting interviews he had ever had on his show.

Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to assist deserving organizations even in celebrating his birthday. While talking about baseball, Buck mentioned that his “birthday present” would be to raise ninety thousand dollars for the programs of the Negro Leagues. Starting almost immediately after his interview ended, the staff of the Negro Leagues Museum was inundated with calls and e-mails for nearly four hours.

On his 90th birthday, the City of Kansas City, Missouri named a street in his honor on the Rock N Roll and Vine area which houses the Negro Leagues Museum as well as the Jazz Hall of Fame. The street’s new name is John “Buck” O’Neil Way. In honor of his 90th birthday on November 13, I requested a flag be flown from my Capitol office window. This was presented to him at a dinner ceremony in Kansas City, Missouri on November 14. At this ceremony he was recognized for his heroic and patriotic accomplishments by the President of the United States, the House and Senate, and local and state officials. I look forward to seeing you in the future when the Baseball Hall of Fame Veterans Committee recognizes our hometown hero for his accomplishments on and off the baseball field and approve his induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

In addition to his work in Cooperstown and at the museum in Kansas City, Buck is finding new and exciting ways to enjoy life and spread his infectious charm and warm spirit. He is a local hero whose recognition for service is recognized at home and nationally. He was given the Trumpet Award in 1999 by the Turner Broadcasting System, saluting him for achievements to African Americans. The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International conferred on Buck its “Paul Harris Fellow” in appreciation of “…furthering better understanding and friendly relations among peoples of the world.” Kansas State University bestowed upon him the “Lifetime Leadership Award” in “recognition for leadership, community involvement, commitment to diversity, and life long recognition to the public.” Buck has received numerous awards in recognition of his work in the community and assistance to various organizations. Some of these awards are: recognition by the United States Army for “outstanding support of Army recreation programs in Kansas City,” the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce honored him with its “Centurion Leadership Award;” he was accorded the “Distinguished Service Award” by the State Historical Society of Missouri; and on November 10, 2001 Buck was given the “Ewing Kaufman Outstanding Achievement Award” from the Jewish Community Center.

As an award winning baseball player, esteemed baseball manager and scout, decorated veteran, and humanitarian, Buck exemplifies excellence in public service and his career serves as a beacon with generations to come. He symbolizes the spirit of American patriotism and is a role model for us all.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in saluting John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil. It is an honor and a privilege to join in the 90th birthday celebration of an American hero, a symbol of African American pride, and one of Kansas City’s favorite sons. Buck’s favorite song is “The Greatest Thing in All My Life, is Loving You.” Buck, I love you, salute you and your heroic accomplishments, and am delighted to serve as a ambassador to generations to come. Thank you, Buck.

A TRIBUTE TO PAUL WEEDEN FOR 29 YEARS OF DEDICATION TO FEDERAL LANDS

HON. JERRY LEWIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like today to pay tribute to Paul Weeden, the Deputy Forest Supervisor of the San Bernardino National Forest in my district, who recently retired after 36 years of service in the National Parks and National Forests. Like many of the dedicated employees who work for the agencies that manage and protect our national lands, Paul Weeden began his service as a seasonal employee. Beginning in 1965, he worked summers as a fishery biologist aide, park ranger and a fire prevention technician. He became a full-time forester for the Forest Service in 1977, serving for 10 years in Arizona and Nevada.

From 1987 to 1990, Mr. Weeden was assigned to the Fire and Aviation Management Staff in Washington, D.C., coordinating the Forest Service response to natural disasters in the United States, and serving as an advisor to the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance.

He became Deputy Forest Supervisor of the San Bernardino National Forest in 1990, and has helped make the San Bernardino and San Gorgonio Mountains and San Bernardino National Forests part of a successful urban use forests in the nation. Located within easy driving distance of the 8 million people who live in Southern California, the forest’s campgrounds, hiking trails, ski resorts and other recreation activities attract millions of visits each year. The forest is also home to thousands of constituents in my district, who see the Forest Service as their largest neighbor and in many cases their landlord.

Although the national forest has seen a number of dramatic wildfires in the past decade, the Forest Service under Mr. Weeden has helped limit the losses of property and wildlife habitat in each case. The agency has increasingly worked with local officials to provide maximum recreation opportunities while protecting the natural beauty that attracts the visitors. As manager of a 440-person agency with a $24 million budget, Mr. Weeden has helped guide the forest into the 21st Century as a verdant oasis in one of the largest urban areas in the world.

Even as he watched over the San Bernardino National Forest, Mr. Weeden in 1998 coordinated American aid to Mexico in response to the worst wildland fire season in that nation’s history. He has since provided guidance and leadership to Mexico’s firefighting, detection and prevention programs, as well as helping in the restoration of important natural lands.

Mr. Speaker, Paul Weeden retired last month to take a job in the private sector, although he and his wife Barbara remain residents of Highland, California, in my district. I ask you and my colleagues to join me in thanking Mr. Weeden for his three decades of service, and wishing him well in his future endeavors.

BLOCKING AID TO HAITI

HON. MAXINE WATERS OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, Haiti is the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. Yet the U.S. government is blocking aid to Haiti in order to expand the influence of a single political party that is supported by less than four percent of the Haitian electorate.

Meanwhile, the people of Haiti are facing a serious humanitarian crisis. Haiti’s per capita income is only $460 per year. Four percent of the population is infected with the AIDS virus, and 163,000 children have been orphaned by AIDS. The infant mortality rate is over seven percent. For every 1000 infants born in Haiti, five women die in childbirth.

Not only has the U.S. suspended development assistance, the U.S. is also blocking loans from international financial institutions. U.S. policy has effectively prevented Haiti from receiving $146 million in loans from the Inter-American Development Bank that were already approved by that institution’s Board of Directors. These loans are desperately needed by the people of Haiti.

It is time for the United States to end this political impasse and restore bilateral and multilateral assistance to this impoverished democracy.

Klamath Basin Emergency Operation and Maintenance Refund Act of 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. PETER A. DEFAZIO OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, November 13, 2001

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, Nobody could have foreseen the devastating drought that has besieged Oregon over the past year. The lack of water has adversely affected agriculture, energy generation, recreation, and fish and wildlife habitat. The Klamath Basin in Southern Oregon and Northern California has suffered particular hardship through this drought. The snowpack and rainfall that supply the Basin with life-sustaining water are critical to the economic viability of the Basin, and have been significantly below normal. Because the federal government, through the Bureau of Reclamation, has encouraged the Basin’s dependence with nearly a century of promised federal water allocation, this Congress has an obligation to take further steps to provide further funding for relief and mitigation.

This bill, H.R. 2828, will provide further assistance to the farmers of the Klamath Basin by reimbursing them for operations and maintenance costs. Farmers receiving federal water pay these fees to the government for upkeep of the infrastructure of the Klamath Project. Many of the farmers in the project did not receive federal water this year. Therefore, those farmers should not have to bear the cost of maintaining the federal infrastructure. Representative Walden has taken every precaution to ensure that this modest reimbursement is fair and equitable. Only irrigation districts receiving severely limited water supplies will be reimbursed, and districts who have already been reimbursed by California will not be eligible for the funds in this bill.

I am pleased to be working with Mr. WALDEN, and many members of the Oregon and California delegations, to find reasonable and long term solutions to the situation in the Basin. This bill will provide farmers in the Basin with much needed economic assistance by simply refunding their O&M costs. Passing this bill is fair, and the right thing to do for the farmers in the Klamath Basin. I urge adoption of H.R. 2828, the Klamath Basin Emergency Operation and Maintenance Refund Act of 2001.

IN HONOR OF LT. COMMANDER ERIC CRANFORD

HON. BOB OTHERIDGE OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. OTHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Lt. Commander Eric Cranford, who lost his life in service to our nation on September 11th. A Navy rescue pilot, Lt. Commander Cranford knew danger, he knew sacrifice— and courage could have been his middle name. If Eric had not been in the Pentagon that fateful day, he would have been one of those who shed his blood and gave his life for his country. Eric Cranford showed us that the American warrior is the most potent force on the face of the earth. Millions of men and women served bravely in the first and second World Wars, the Korean Conflict, the jungles of Vietnam, and the sands of Desert Storm. But many who served did not come home. They came from every walk of life. They were our friends, neighbors, mothers, fathers, sons, daughters, sisters and brothers. They were ordinary and extraordinary, all at once, and all Americans should honor their sacrifices. Freedom is not free. But freedom is worth fighting for. On Veterans Day, and every day, let us salute Lt. Commander Cranford and all our nation’s veterans. May God Bless America, now and forever.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained in my District on Tuesday, November 13, 2001, and would like the Record to indicate how I would have voted had I been present.

For rollcall vote No. 436, a bill to enhance the accountability of special agents and provide limited authorities to uniformed officers responsible for the protection of domestic Department of State occupied facilities, I would have voted "aye."

For rollcall vote No. 437, a bill to enhance the accountability of special agents and provide limited authorities to uniformed officers responsible for the protection of domestic Department of State occupied facilities, I would have voted "aye."

IN MEMORY OF MAMON POWERS, SR.

HON. PETER J. VISCOSKY OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. VISCOSKY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sorrow and a heavy heart that I offer my heartfelt condolences to the family of a pioneer in the communities of Northwest Indiana. Mr. Mamon Powers, Sr., a construction worker and owner of Powers and Sons Construction Company, died on Tuesday, November 13, 2001, following a long struggle with illness, and will be laid to rest on Saturday, November 17, 2001. Mr. Powers was 80 years old.

Mamon Powers, Sr. was born of humble means in the small town of Churchill, Mississippi. The son of a preacher and homebuilder, Mamon learned the virtues of hard work and strong faith at an early age. Although African-American, he was only allowed to attend school through eighth grade in Churchill at that time, Mamon refused to be encumbered by the bonds with which society attempted to restrict the rights of African-American citizens. He continued his education by attending Campbell College, now known as Jackson State University, and by serving his country in the United States military.

To the benefit of Northwest Indiana, Mamon Powers, Sr. came to the city of Gary after serving with the military. He went to work in the steel mill, but quickly learned that he would not be successful because racial barriers prohibited many African-Americans from joining the union. However, Mamon’s love for the community and his determination to succeed led him to work for Means Developers. With the addition of Mamon’s knowledge of construction and his desire to make the city of Gary a better place, Means Construction developed one of the city’s finest neighborhoods, Means Manor.

Mr. Mamon Powers, Sr., began his own construction company in the early 1950’s and eventually became one of the first African-American members of a union in the city of Gary. Over the years, he developed his business into the most successful African-American construction company in the state, and one of the 10 largest in the country. Powers and Sons Construction Company was also recognized nationally by the Small Business Administration in 1997 for its minority business development initiatives. He was responsible for the construction of hundreds of private homes in Northwest Indiana, as well as the construction of many commercial buildings. His professional career made an impact on the community that cannot be measured simply by the number of buildings he created. His love for his work was revealed in his creations, and it inspired the citizens of Gary to take pride in their community.

While Mamon was dedicated to his work, his love for his family and his community remained his top priority. He was committed to his wife, Leolean, and their six children, Mamon, Jr., Mark, Demetrius, Claude, Florita, and Marquila. He served on the Methodist Hospital Board of Directors and as a member of the Lake County Community Development Committee. In 1989, he was inducted into the Steel City Hall of Fame for his outstanding contributions to Northwest Indiana. Earlier this year, the Frontiers Service Club nominated Mamon for the prestigious Gary Drum Major Award for extraordinary set-vice in the community.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my other distinguished colleagues to join me in offering our condolences to the family of Mr. Mamon Powers, Sr. Mamon was a true inspiration to everyone who knew him, and his work in Northwest Indiana will survive as a tribute to his memory. He impacted the lives of many in our community, our state, and our country, and I am proud to have had the opportunity to represent Mamon Powers, Sr. in Congress.

INTRODUCTION OF HOMESTAKE MINE CONVEYANCE ACT OF 2001

HON. JOHN R. THUNE
OF SOUTH DAKOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce a bill very important to the world of science, our nation, and my state of South Dakota.

Thirty years ago, the Homestake Mine was host to scientists studying neutrinos, particles with virtually no weight and possessing no electrical charge that are everywhere around us. Scientists believe these mysterious particles hold secrets that can provide us with important insights into the fundamental nature of the universe.

This legislation, which I will introduce today, envisions an underground neutrino telescope that extends pioneering research begun three decades ago.

While the potential scientific benefits of studying neutrinos is clear, this agreement is also vital to the economies of South Dakota, the Black Hills and the city of Lead. If Homestake were to close, its absence would have a tremendous economic and cultural impact on our state. The Mine has been an integral part of the Hills culture since it opened over 125 years ago. The miners and their families have contributed so much to the area.

However, with the cost of mining gold increasing, Homestake has decided to terminate its operations in Lead. The introduction of a national physics laboratory is a fitting substitute. The lab will employ a number of the current Homestake employees to maintain the integrity of the mine and to make improvements to the structure of the lab there. Additionally, the lab will employ many scientists and support staff bringing new diversity to the South Dakota economy.

The legislation I will introduce today is a companion bill to S. 1389, introduced by Senator Tom Daschle and is the result of months of negotiations between the Homestake Gold Mine, the State of South Dakota, the South Dakota congressional delegation and others. Recently, those negotiations were concluded, and late last week this bill was completed.

The purpose of the bill is to set the terms of land conveyance from Homestake to the State of South Dakota for the establishment of a National Underground Science Laboratory. The Homestake Mine would continue to operate and the lab and the experiments that would take place there. Third, it requires insurance coverage by the State of South Dakota, which would be the managing entity, and any group conducting experiments in the mine. These provisions will provide the needed protection of the environment and the taxpayers that I believe is necessary for this agreement.

This legislation is one piece of the puzzle that will make this lab a reality. I look forward to working with the House leadership, the Committees of jurisdiction, my colleagues in the House and Senate and the Administration to see this bill enacted into law.

CONSTITUTIONAL AND CIVIL LIBERTIES ISSUES

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am growing increasingly concerned about a series of recent actions taken by the Bush Administration... which raise important constitutional and civil liberties issues. Many of these concerns are set forth in the attached letter I forwarded yesterday to Chairman Sensenbrenner requesting that the Judiciary Committee hold hearings on these matters, as well as an excellent editorial written today by William Safire of the New York Times.

I am also attaching a copy of a letter I wrote last January detailing my opposition to the nomination of John Ashcroft as Attorney General. The Attorney General’s recent actions threaten to undermine the stated goal of his nomination only to exacerbate the concerns mentioned in this letter. I also question the timing and need for the Attorney General’s recent actions undermining Oregon’s assisted suicide law and California’s medical marijuana laws. Both of these actions raise important constitutional and civil liberties issues. Many of these concerns are set forth in the attached letter I forwarded yesterday to Chairman Sensenbrenner requesting that the Judiciary Committee hold hearings on these matters, as well as an excellent editorial written today by William Safire of the New York Times.

DEAR DEMOCRATIC SENATOR: I am writing to inform you that as the Ranking Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee and the Senate Democratic Caucus, I am unalterably opposed to John Ashcroft’s nomination to be Attorney General of the United States.

I have reached this decision with much regret and great consternation. In my 38 years in Congress, I have never before publicly opposed a nominee for Attorney General. However, in the present case, my reservations about Senator Ashcroft’s ability and inclination to support and uphold the law in such critical areas as civil rights, reproductive rights, choice, and gun safety are so grave, and his pattern of misleading and disingenuous responses to his confirmation hearing so serious, that I believe it is in the national interest that his nomination be withdrawn, or be rejected by the Senate. I am also concerned that Senator Ashcroft’s personal lack of responsiveness to me foreshadows a pattern of conscious avoidance or, at best, benign neglect, of me and my Democratic colleagues in the House.

I have several specific concerns in the area of civil rights. First, I am troubled by the fact that notwithstanding Senator Ashcroft’s public statements in support of civil rights enforcement, his refusal to accept my written questions from Senator Carl Levin asking whether he would commit to withdrawing his support for an anti-choice law as Attorney General is simply too disabling to his nomination.

In the Missouri desegregation cases. How-
Not content with his previous decision to permit police to eavesdrop on a suspect's conversations with an attorney, Bush now strips the alien accused of even the limited rights afforded unto martial.

His kangaroo court can conceal evidence by citing national security, make up its own rules, find a defendant guilty even if a third of the officers disagree, and execute the alien with no legal or civilian court.

No longer does the judicial branch and an independent jury stand between the government and the accused. In lieu of those checks and balances central to our legal system, non-citizens face an executive that is now investigator, prosecutor, judge, jury and jailer or executioner. In an Orwellian twist, Bush's order is the Soviet-style abomination “a full and fair trial.”

On what legal meat does this our Caesar feed? One precedent the White House cites is a military court after Lincoln's assassination. (During the Civil War, Lincoln sus-dended habeas corpus; does our war on terror require illegal imprisonment next?) Another is a military court's hangings, approved by the Supreme Court, of German saboteurs landed by submarine in World War II.

Proponents of Bush's kangaroo court say: You don't see on-terror, due-process types know how métier? Have you forgotten our 5,000 civilian dead? In an emergency like this, aren't extraordinary security measures needed to save citizens' lives? If we step on a few toes, we can apologize to the civil libertarians later.

Those are the arguments of the phony-tough. At a time when even liberals are debating the ethics of torture of suspects—weight of the evidence against them. But the need to save innocent lives—it’s time for the need to save innocent lives—it’s time for conservative iconoclasts and card-carrying hard-liners to stand up for American values.

To meet a terrorist emergency, of course, the leaders of the House of Representatives have a nuclear power companies that earned more than $1.4 billion to IBM, $830 million to General Motors, $2.3 billion to Ford Motor Company, and only a fraction for genuine "stimulus.”

The views of these Nobel laureates and others should guide us in crafting a genuine stimulus bill that helps hurting Americans instead of enriching the richest taxpayers and for corporations. I submit for the RECORD these views.

ECONOMISTS' STATEMENT—AN OPEN LETTER TO SENATORS TOM DASCHLE AND TRENT LOTT

The current state of the U.S. economy justifies further fiscal stimulus by the federal government. But the stimulus package passed by the House of Representatives will do little to assist a near term recovery and is likely to undermine growth in the long term.

The basic principles in designing an economic stimulus are: (1) that it be targeted to increase spending immediately; and (2) that it be temporary, phasing out when the economy recovers.

The package passed by the House should be rejected by the Senate and replaced with temporary measures, such as further expanded unemployment benefits, that will increase spending now.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to place an article from Burning Punjab on the detention of Mrs. Khalra into the RECORD at this time.

[From the Burning Punjab News, Nov. 2, 2001]

MRS. KHALRA HELD
(Our Correspondent)

Amritsar, November 2—The police today early morning arrested Mrs Paramjit Kaur Khalra of the Khalra Mission Committee to prevent disturbance of the peace in the state. She reportedly was arrested at 4:30 a.m. hours before the arrival of the Prime Minister at 10 a.m. today reported from her residence here. The police also rounded-up six others, including Kirpal Singh Randhwa PHRO vice-president.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. PORTER J. GOSS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, on the afternoon of November 14, I had to depart early for a previously scheduled meeting at the White House. As a result, I was not able to be present when we voted Nos. 439 and 440. If I had been present, I would have voted “yes” on both measures. I request that this statement appear at the appropriate place in the RECORD.

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT CORNEL NELSON OF ILLINOIS

HON. BOBBY L. RUSH OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 15, 2001

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Speaker, it was with great sadness that I learned last night of the death of one of the giants of the labor movement in Illinois—Robert Cornel Nelson. Bob died in his sleep on November 7, 2001, just two days shy of his 52nd birthday. He was laid to rest today in Glenwood, Illinois.

At the time of his death, Bob Nelson was national vice president of the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) seventh district, which encompasses Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, and was recently elected to the position of vice president of the Illinois State AFL-CIO.

Bob began his union career as a member of AFGE’s local 375 at the Railroad Retirement Board, and throughout the years, he held a number of union offices, including second vice president, first vice president, and ultimately, president.

From 1974 to 1980, Bob also served as president of the Chicago Area Council of AFGE locals and in 1974 was elected president of the AFGE Railroad Retirement Board Council—a position which he held until he was elected to the seventh district national vice president’s position in October 1986, and was reelected to that position five times.

As national vice president of the seventh district, Bob sat on AFGE’s national executive board and chaired both the legislative and legal rights committees. Every two years, Bob held a legislative breakfast here in Washington, where the AFGE members from his region would come to Congress to press their legislative agenda. But, Bob was active and engaged in the legislative process 365 days of every year.

This past summer, I reconvened the First Congressional District’s Labor Task Force and convened a meeting on a very warm day in Chicago. Bob was one of the first union representatives to confirm his attendance and he was there, struggling to walk with a leg brace and a walker that was the result of earlier surgery on his leg. He was looking forward, he said, to getting out of the brace and walker, to be able to get on with his union’s business and the business of the larger labor family at his previous speed. Bob’s previous speed often rivaled the speed of light, and even with the leg brace, we struggled to keep up with his pace.

Mr. Speaker, I will greatly miss Bob’s dedication, unfailing humor and support. My prayers and heartfelt condolences go out to his wife, Judy, and his brother, Ron, and his children: Robert, Jr.; Aaron; Daron; Eric; Cornelia; Erica; and Shannon.

Chicago, and the Nation, have lost a labor giant.

BEST PHARMACEUTICALS FOR CHILDREN ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. DOUG BEREUTER OF NEBRASKA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 13, 2001

Mr. BEREUER. Mr. Speaker, this Member wishes to comment on H.R. 2887, the Best Pharmaceuticals for Children Act, and would like to commend the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. GREENWOOD, the sponsor of this bill, and the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. TAULIN, the Chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, for bringing this legislation to the House Floor today.

Mr. Speaker, this Member is unaware of any Member of Congress who opposes the appropriate testing, evaluation and proper labeling of prescription drugs for use in children. We need to ensure that medicines are safe and effective for both children and adults. The only question for debate is how to accomplish this critical public health objective.

As you are aware, the Best Pharmaceuticals for Children Act would continue a program that grants prescription drug companies an additional six-month patent exclusivity, as an incentive for them to test their drugs on children. Particularly among adults, rather than those drugs which pediatricians need more information. It appears that brand name drug companies are receiving six months of exclusivity for testing a drug on children, even when that testing is of minimal value because it is for an indication that rarely occurs in children, such as ulcers, hypertension, or Type II (adult-onset) diabetes. However, there seems to be adequate provisions which would cause companies to initiate such testing to gain an additional six-month patent exclusivity only upon FDA request.

Furthermore, pediatric exclusivity provides little incentive to test drugs that are still under patent, but do not result in high profits. It appears that pediatric exclusivity leaves many drugs unstudied in children, because the drug companies believe they will not make enough from six months of additional patent protection.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to place the Rediff.com article on the Babra case in the Record for the information of my colleagues.

[From Rediff.com, Nov. 10, 2001]

CANADIAN SIKH FORCED TO REMOVE TURBAN AT LA GUARDIA

(By Ajit Jain)

Surjit Babra, president of the $100 million portfolio SkyLink, “was forced to remove his turban” at LaGuardia airport in New York, allegedly as part of a security inspection.

In a press release, Indo-Canadian Member of Parliament Gurbax Malhi, himself a turbaned Sikh, said that “while understanding and sharing the terrible circumstances that have led to this point”, the United States should “train and educate security personnel so that they will respect the right of people of the Sikh religion to wear turbans and not subject them to this undignified and unnecessary procedure”. Rediff.com tried to reach Babra several times, but he wouldn’t respond to telephone calls.

Businessman Garry Singh, a close friend of Babra, recounted that it was on Wednesday evening, when he was going through security before boarding his flight to Toronto at LaGuardia, that the incident took place.

Babra was asked to remove his turban by the security guard. The Sikh businessman suggested that the guard use a hand-held scanner to scan his turban. If he were still not satisfied, he would then remove his turban.

The security guard wouldn’t accept that and made him remove his turban immediately.

Malhi said, “In Canada we have learned to respect religious symbols.” The Royal Canadian Mounted Police has changed its rules to allow Sikhs to wear turbans on duty.

Barbra’s SkyLink moves U.N. peacekeeping personnel and equipment to various countries in the world.
