CUBAN BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I call to the attention of the Senate a shocking Associated Press story that was filed yesterday afternoon. I have not had a chance to read the papers today, so I don't know in which papers it was printed. This is a headline:

U.S. Official Says Cuba May Be Helping Rogue States With Biological Weapons.

I am going to read the first two paragraphs of this AP story:

The Bush administration said yesterday it believes Cuba has at least a limited offensive biological warfare program and may be transferring its expertise to other countries hostile to the United States.

We are concerned that such could support biological warfare programs in those States, said U.S. Under Secretary of State, John Bolton.

This is of grave concern to the Nation. If the Bush administration has hard evidence that Cuba is exporting biological weapons to our enemies, then the Bush administration should not just be making speeches about it. They ought to be planning an action in consultation with the Congress under the War Powers Act as to what to do about exporting biological agents to our enemies in this war on terrorism.

This would be absolutely unacceptable. What will the action be? That is where the consultation ought to be going on with Congress as to what the administration is planning. Don't make a speech that the AP story says was made to the Heritage Foundation. But, instead, let us talk about what the means are of stopping the exports of biological weapons and biological agents that would be going from Cuba to other terrorist states which are clearly out to do ill will to the interests of the United States.

Could it involve something more other than stopping the exports of biological weapons? Yes, it could. But that is what the planning ought to be about instead of just making speeches to think tank foundations.

I think this is a matter of gravest concern. Certainly, we have suspected, since Cuba is on our list of terrorist states, that this kind of activity might be going on. But, if it is, under the Constitution there ought to be consultation with the appropriate committees about any plans to protect the interests of the United States and not the Assistant Secretary of State making a speech to the Heritage Foundation.

I wanted to call this to the attention of the Senate. It has apparently not gotten much attention up to this point. I think it is of grave concern to the United States. It is clearly in the interest of the United States, if these weapons of mass destruction through biological agents are being produced or researched in Cuba, that it be stopped forthwith, and certainly any export to other countries that would do us harm should be stopped dead in its tracks.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LUGAR. Madam President, I commend the distinguished Senator from Florida for his statement. The whole area of weapons of mass destruction is one of interest to me and to many Senators. Very clearly, the war against terrorism contemplates that we will be vigorous in trying to find the al-Qaida and other associates. But at the minimum, we must make certain they do not have access to materials, laboratories, or weapons of mass destruction, which would be catastrophic, whether it be from Cuba or countries in the Middle East, the Far East, Africa, or wherever.

Many of us have commented—including the distinguished Senator from Florida—about the worldwide extent of their war effort. The President has commented that it may be a long war for that very reason. I commend him for his statement.

I am hopeful the relevant committees have been informed. Perhaps the leadership of the Senate has been informed. But if not, that should occur quickly.

MANIPULATION OF ENERGY MARKETS

Ms. CANTWELL. Madam President, I rise today to discuss the documents that were released yesterday, which illustrate how Enron has manipulated energy markets in California and in many Western States. Based on yesterday's revelations, I believe ratepayers deserve prompt relief from Enron's trading practices. I think these documents show Washington State electricity consumers what they have suspected all along, that prices have been manipulated and they have, as a result, paid higher energy prices, many up to double-digit rate increases.

Many of you may have seen the articles. I want to have several of these printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. They emphasize the information that is being provided in documents I think my colleagues from California had printed in the RECORD.

The New York Times, the headline was:

Enron Forced Up California Energy Prices, Documents Show.

Another article that was printed in the LA times:

Memo Shows Enron's Role in Power Crisis. Energy: "Smoking gun" document by company lawyers reveals tactics used to create electricity shortage in California, then drive up prices.

Another in the Washington Post:

Papers Show That Enron Manipulated California Crisis.

I ask unanimous consent these be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, May 7, 2002]

ENRON FORCED UP CALIFORNIA ENERGY PRICES, DOCUMENTS SHOW

(By Richard A. Opiel Jr. and Jeff Gerth)

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Electricity traders at Enron drove up prices during the California power crisis through questionable techniques that company lawyers said "may have contributed" to severe power shortages, according to internal Enron documents released today by federal regulators.

Within Enron, the documents show, traders used strategies code-named Fat Boy, Ricochet, Get Shorty, Load Shift and Death Star to increase Enron's profits from trading power in the state—techniques that added to electricity costs and congestion on transmission lines.

The documents—memorandums written in December 2000 by lawyers at Enron to another lawyer at the company—also describe "dummied-up" power-delivery schedules, the submission of "false information" to the state, and the effective increasing of costs to all market participants by "knowingly increasing the congestion costs."

The memos, which provide the first inside look at the complex trading strategies Enron used in California, give strong ammunition to state officials who have long argued that Enron and other power marketers manipulated the state's market and played a crucial role in the crisis that cost California consumers and utilities tens of billions of dollars in 2000 and 2001. The documents state that other power companies used similar techniques.

Tonight, Senator Dianne Feinstein, Democrat of California, said she would ask Attorney General John Ashcroft "to pursue a criminal investigation to determine whether in fact federal fraud statutes or any other laws were violated" by Enron's energy-trading activities. Federal prosecutors are already conducting an inquiry into Enron's accounting, which falsely increased reported profits but ultimately led to the company's filing for bankruptcy protection in December.

Enron agreed to sell its energy-trading unit earlier this year to UBS Warburg, a division of UBS, Switzerland's largest bank. Nearly all of Enron's senior executives, and most of its board members, have departed in the last nine months.

Enron's senior management learned of the documents in late April, and the company's board decided during a meeting on Sunday to waive attorney-client privilege and turn the memos over to investigators at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, a person close to the company said. The company has also informed the Justice Department, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the attorney general of California about the documents.

At a noon meeting today, lawyers for Enron gave the memos to investigators from the regulatory commission, which is examining whether Enron manipulated energy markets in the West. The agency released the documents a few hours later. Officials at the commission declined to comment, but they are continuing their investigation into Enron's effect on power prices and asked the company today to provide additional documents on its electricity and natural-gas trading activities.

In a letter sent by officials at the commission today to Enron, investigators at the agency said the documents described how Enron traders were "creating, and then 'relieving,' phantom congestion" on California's electricity grid. The documents also detail what investigators described as "megawatt laundering," in which Enron bought power in California, resold the power out of
