The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

I hereby appoint the Honorable John Boozman to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL) for 5 minutes.

STATES NEED FLEXIBILITY IN WELFARE REFORM

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, we have passed welfare reform out of this body; and as a result, we are putting more people to work. Welfare rolls have been cut in half in many States. With these successes in mind, now is the time to look at what is working and what is not.

One of the biggest problems is how reform is impacting the rural areas of America. In rural America, where there are not many job opportunities, we are telling people to leave their homes and move to the city. In rural New Mexico, many people have been tied to the land and their homes for generations. Forcing people to move is not good public policy, and it is undermining the vitality of rural America. The solution is flexibility for States to design their programs, and the solution is transportation. Transportation should be a key part of any welfare reform.

Another issue relates to the jobs people are losing. Is this the kind of employment where an individual can move up the economic ladder and support a family? Many times these are minimum-wage jobs with no real future. So we must provide meaningful job training so that an individual not only gets a job, but that that job opens the doors to better future opportunities.

Welfare recipients want to work, but they also want to take care of their children. This is the common dilemma faced by welfare parents, many of whom are single mothers with children. The last thing we should do in the name of reform is send parents to work and leave the children without adequate nurturing and care. That is why child care is a critical component of a successful welfare reform effort.

If we have learned anything in this reform effort, it is that States should have the flexibility to meet the goals of putting people to work in good jobs, while children get good quality day-care. Inner cities and rural areas face enormous challenges because frequently jobs do not exist nearby. With flexibility, States have been able to achieve big strides. Without flexibility, States will fail in these important tasks.

Unfortunately, the administration bill that the House is going to consider this week fails to recognize why we have made progress. It undercuts the flexibility of the States. It provides for rigid Federal mandates which are good political talking points, but bad public policy. The Bush administration also fails to recognize we are in different times. In 1995 the economy was expanding. We had unprecedented job growth. Now we have high unemployment, and it is sluggish growth. It is essential that the States receive adequate resources to do the job.

The administration shortchanges these reforms at a time when State budgets are in deficit. The administration bill imposes massive new mandates and additional costs on States that cannot be met. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the new work requirements in the bill will cost the States up to $11 billion over 5 years. Yet this bill contains no new funding.

Governors, State legislators, mayors, welfare directors and poverty experts have all indicated that these mandates cannot be met. Forty-seven out of 47 States surveyed by the National Governor's Association indicated that the bill requires fundamental changes in their welfare programs. Why would an administration which supports States rights craft a bill with so many Federal mandates and so little State flexibility?

Just a word on how we deal with these bills. I would urge the Republican leadership to have a full and open debate on the issue of welfare reform and temporary assistance to needy families. Too many times in recent days we have taken up bills where no amendments are allowed by the minority. Many times no opposition bill is even allowed on the floor, or a motion to recommit. That is not a democratic process. It does not serve this body well. It does not serve the country well.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge the Republican leadership to bring this bill before this body under an open rule, allow full debate, and allow the House to work its will.
MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, this week we are discussing two important pieces of legislation which is coming to the floor, a product of the Committee on Ways and Means, legislation which is entitled H.R. 4626, Encouraging Work and Supporting Marriage Act of 2002. Essentially this legislation does two things: it expands and reforms the welfare to work; and clearly the Work Opportunity Tax Credit, a hiring incentive to give those on welfare an opportunity to go to work.

Yesterday, I stood with President Bush in Chicago at the United Parcel Service facility where he highlighted his plans to bring hundreds of thousands of Chicago residents to go from welfare to work; and clearly the Work Opportunity Tax Credit, which was a creation of Ronald Reagan, is one of those provisions which is working as we see our Nation’s welfare rolls cut in half and 9 million Americans move from welfare to work.

The other important piece of the Encouraging Work and Supporting Marriage Act of 2002 is legislation which much more quickly phases in the marriage tax relief provisions which are part of what we nicknamed the Bush tax cut signed earlier this year.

Over the last several years, I have had the opportunity to come to this floor and talk about the unfairness of our complicated Tax Code and how our current Tax Code historically has punished marriage, a very basic institution in our society. In fact, I believe the most important institution in our society is marriage. Unfortunately, up until President Bush’s signature signing the Bush tax cut into law, our Tax Code punished marriage.

Let me give an example of what the marriage tax penalty is and was. Under our Tax Code prior to the Bush tax cut, 43 million married working couples paid on average $1,700 more in higher taxes just because they were married. I do not believe that is right; I do not believe that is fair. And I am proud to say that House Republicans made it a priority to work with the President to eliminate the marriage tax penalty.

I am proud to say that this House under the leadership of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FOSSELLA), and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and the persistence and convictions of the House Republican majority, we have voted in the House to make the Bush tax cut permanent because we do not want to see couples such as Jose and Magdalena Castillo of Joliet, Illinois, have to pay that marriage tax penalty again. It is wrong; it is unfair. And it is wrong that under our Tax Code, married couples paid higher taxes just because they are married.

My hope is before the end of this year that we will be able to obtain bipartisan support in both the House and Senate for adoption of a permanency for the Bush tax cut, for marriage tax penalty relief, for elimination of the death tax, for across-the-board rate reductions, for retirement savings as well as the opportunities to save for college education.

Those are good things; but unfortunately, they are temporary. Unless we make the Bush tax cut permanent, all of those things, marriage tax penalty relief, death tax repeal, retirement savings opportunities by increased contributions to IRAs and 401(k)s, an opportunity to see taxes lowered overall because of rate reductions for everyone, those taxes are going to go back up. Let us make the Bush tax cut permanent. Let us help couples such as Jose and Magdalena Castillo see their income taxes lowered permanently.

We get the Senate and the House to make the Bush tax cut permanent.

I think it is wrong. Thanks to the Bush tax cut. Jose and Magdalena Castillo of Joliet, Illinois, saw their marriage tax penalty eliminated. Of course, we are going to have legislation this week which is going to help low- and moderate-income married couples. It will head off phase in on marriage in the low- and moderate-income range will see much quicker marriage tax relief.

But I would also note, unfortunately because of the arcane rules of Congress, not of the House but of the other body, that the Bush tax cut was forced to be temporary which means it expires at a certain point; and the 100 million American taxpayers who have seen their taxes lowered, which is everybody who pays income taxes has seen their income taxes lowered, and 3.9 million families with children have been totally removed from the income tax rolls, which means thanks to the Bush tax cut, they no longer pay income taxes. They will see their taxes reimposed unless we make permanent the Bush tax cut.

Now for couples like Jose and Magdalena Castillo of Joliet, Illinois, they are going to see their marriage taxes repressed; and they will be suffering it once again unless we make the Bush tax cut permanent.

I am proud to say that this House under the leadership of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. FOSSELLA), and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and the persistence and convictions of the House Republican majority, we have voted in the House to make the Bush tax cut permanent because we do not want to see couples such as Jose and Magdalena Castillo of Joliet, Illinois, have to pay that marriage tax penalty again. It is wrong; it is unfair. And it is wrong that under our Tax Code, married couples paid higher taxes just because they are married.

My hope is before the end of this year that we will be able to obtain bipartisan support in both the House and Senate for adoption of a permanency for the Bush tax cut, for marriage tax penalty relief, for elimination of the death tax, for across-the-board rate reductions, for retirement savings as well as the opportunities to save for college education.

We get the Senate and the House to make the Bush tax cut permanent.
come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. LAMPSON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

OVERDUE BOOKS AND CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I read in the paper recently about a woman from Hazelton, Pennsylvania, who was thrown in jail because she had three overdue library books. Theresa Keller’s husband used her library card to check out three library books 2 years ago and never returned them. Well, not long afterwards, Mrs. Keller found herself living in a domestic violence shelter. She did not even know about the books. Nevertheless, the judge through her in jail for several days for failing to pay her library fines.

Now, whilst all of this was happening, the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that virtual child pornography was legal. It seems the Supreme Court thinks that everyone has a constitutional right to child pornography on the computer. So my question is this: How is it that the American judiciary would allow the work of evil to be done to children in contact with the customers through e-mail and in some more extreme cases through actual meetings. They put children in great danger both psychologically and physical.

I urge Members to join the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY) and me and work to end this horrendous practice.

DON VONARX AND KEN WHITTLER, STARS OF LIFE

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, last week I had a wonderful opportunity to meet two exceptional emergency technicians from Reno, Nevada: Don Vonarx and Ken Whittaker.

These two Reno EMTs were recently granted the Stars of Life Award which is the highest honor given in their professional field. Don and Ken are tremendous examples of tenacious, compassionate, and remarkable individuals who have shown courage and leadership in their professional commitment.

Whether training hundreds of emergency care providers, deploying life-saving equipment to those in need, or designing specialty EMT classes for people of every age, these gentlemen have shown extraordinary success in helping to save lives throughout Nevada. Their success is reflected in both their accomplishments and especially in their professional and personal relationships with student and colleagues.

We are truly blessed to have both Don Vonarx and Ken Whittaker working as emergency medical technicians in my home town of Reno, and I am honored to know them both.

HONORING THE SUFFOLK COUNTY POLICE DEPARTMENT

(Mr. ISRAEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to welcome to Washington and into the people’s House the brave men and women of the Suffolk County Police Department who join with us today as part of a national commemoration at the National Police Memorial. And I want to thank them for the heroic and dedicated work they do.

On September 11, my district on Long Island lost over 102 people in the World Trade Center attack. On September 11 we realized that we had heroes among the most modest. It should not have taken September 11 for us to understand just how vitally important they are. We should celebrate that every day. And I am glad that the men and women of the Suffolk County Police Department could join us on this day.

TRUTH IN DOMAIN NAMES ACT

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, the Internet can be a force for good or a force for evil. At its best the Web is used to disseminate information and provide educational materials to children. Teachers and parents often encourage children to turn to the Internet for research on school projects; but certain Web sites, Mr. Speaker, intentionally use misleading names to lead children into exposure to pornography.

Last week I sought to address this problem on the Internet with H.R. 4658, the Truth in Domain Names Act. The bill would punish those who use misleading domain names to attract children to pornographic Internet sites, who can be fined up to $250,000 or face 2 years in prison.

The Good Book tells us that whoever commits one of the least of these little ones to sin ought to have a millstone tied around his neck. While we cannot legislate that retribution, Mr. Speaker, surely we can pass the Truth in Domain Names Act. It penalizes those who would lead children to view this prurient material. I urge my colleagues in this institution to join many of us on both sides of the aisle to support the Truth in Domain Names Act.

ABOLISH NUCLEAR ARMS

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, seemingly when the United States and Russia would get together to announce an arms reduction treaty, that would be important news for the world. I think any time the United States and Russia sit down and talk about what can be done to eliminate nuclear weapons is an important moment. However, the announcement by President Bush and Vladimir Putin that they will sign a nuclear pact needs to be scrutinized very carefully.

If you read today’s New York Times you see they say that “the proposed treaty sets no pace for dismantling weapons over the next decade, as long as the total number of strategic weapons does not exceed 2,200 in 2012. It permits the United States to stockpile the dismantled weapons in a form that would allow them to be reinstalled on missiles or aboard nuclear armed submarines in case of an ugly turn of events with any major nuclear power. In short, it is an agreement filled with escape clauses.”

The only way that we can really protect the world against nuclear arms is to work for complete nuclear abolition. That is something that this administration has taken a path away from. It has taken a path towards deconstructing the nonproliferation treaty towards building new nuclear weapons and towards nuclear proliferation. This treaty that has been described does not do anything to bring the world one step away from the abyss.

DISASTER RELIEF FOR MONTANA

(Mr. REHBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REHBERG. Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of American farmers and ranchers to ask this Congress to support disaster relief assistance this year.

Montana’s farmers and ranchers are entering their fifth, and some cases their sixth, straight year of devastating drought conditions. When floods ravage the Southwest or when hurricanes touch down along the coastal regions of the United States, this Congress has acted forcefully and rightly to offer immediate and substantial financial assistance to those families and businesses most in need.

On behalf of producers of food in more than a dozen States suffering from the most severe disaster conditions in more than a generation, I ask this Congress to act with equal diligence to offer immediate assistance before it is finally too late.

HONORING THE NATIONAL GUARD

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker. In May we celebrate National Military Appreciation Month. This month we are reminded to actively honor and support all of our men and women in uniform who voluntarily risk their lives so we may achieve peace through strength.

I would like to give special recognition to America’s oldest military branch, the National Guard, which has celebrated 365 years of service. As a son of a World War II veteran, myself a colonel in the South Carolina Army National Guard with three sons in the military, I have seen the service the Guard provides in defense of America’s homeland.

My colleagues are extraordinary people who train year-round and are ready at a moment’s notice to leave their families and jobs to defend liberty. In South Carolina we are fortunate to have dedicated leadership with Adjutant General Stan Spears.

Most recently in the war against terrorism, over 50,000 Guardsmen and women have been called to duty. Today’s National Guard continues its historic dual mission: protecting life and property within our borders while providing units trained, equipped, and ready to defend the United States and its interests all over the globe.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Speaker signed the following enrolled bill on Friday, May 10, 2002:

H.R. 2646, to provide for the continuation of agricultural programs through fiscal year 2007, and for other purposes.

"(d) CONSERVATION PLAN REQUIREMENT.—Section 4(e) of the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966 (16 U.S.C. 768dd) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(5) The Secretary shall include, in the comprehensive conservation plan for each refuge under this subsection, a description of the activities that may be conducted in the refuge, and the lands, waters, and facilities of the refuge that may be used, under concession contracts awarded under section 5(a)."

"(e) PRIOR AMENDMENTS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any amendment made by section 6 of the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966, as in effect before the enactment of this Act, or any provision of law amended by such section.

"(f) EXPENDITURE OF FEES AND OTHER PAYMENTS.—Nothing in this Act shall be considered to affect any amendment made by section 6 of the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966, as in effect before the enactment of this Act, or any provision of law amended by such section.
Furthermore, with a maintenance backlog of over $630 million, property used for a concession operation will never become a priority. During committee consideration, we learned there are about 20 wildlife refuges with concession services to the visiting public. These services range from canoe rentals, bookstores, nature guides, and ferries to remote refuge areas. In almost every case concessionaires are using property owned by the Fish and Wildlife Service that has been passivated in perpetuity.

In addition, refuge managers have signed a number of creative legal arrangements with concessionaires. These have included contracts, special use permits, leases and cooperative agreements. In some cases, these agreements stipulate the obligations of each party, but regrettably these details are lacking in a majority of those arrangements. This means that decisions can be arbitrary by the refuge manager at times. The potential for concessions to damage essential habitat.

This legislation will solve those problems by establishing for the first time a workable, consistent and defensible refuge concession policy. Under H.R. 1370, the Fish and Wildlife Service will be allowed to credit a concessionaire for any fees they pay in the future. This money will be retained at the local refuge and it can be used to build, maintain and repair structural problems in the habitat and to protect refuge resources. The Service will determine if a certain repair is necessary, and they will obtain estimates for any proposed work.

In addition, the bill requires the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service to establish a standardized concession contract within 18 months of the enactment of this bill. This contract will be used by all new and existing concessionaires in the future.

The provision provides consistency throughout the refuge system, stipulates that contracts are issued under a competitive bidding process and clarifies the financial obligations that an entrepreneur must agree to before undertaking a concession.

Finally, the bill requires an annual report on the number of refuge units with concessions, a description of services offered, an accounting of fees paid by the concessionaires and a summary of all improvements made in both visitor services and structures within the refuge system. This is similar to the concessions policy Congress developed and passed and is now law regarding our National Park System. It is way past time that we do the same for our Fish and Wildlife System.

I believe this legislation will encourage improvements within our refuge system. It will foster the growth of additional concession services, and it will enhance the public's ability to appreciate the natural wonders of our National Wildlife Refuge System.

I want to thank all of my colleagues, especially the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCREST), for their hard work on this important legislation, and I urge an immediate vote on H.R. 1370.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, the bill that is before the House today is considerably different than the legislation introduced last year. It reflects the hard work of my colleague the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) and the careful consideration of the Committee on Resources, and as presently amended, H.R. 1370 has the potential to enhance the visiting public's experience at our national wildlife refuges. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

The National Wildlife Refuge System is presently saddled with a significant $1.3 billion operations and maintenance budget backlog. Concessionaires which operate in the refuges and offer a wide variety of services, such as we have heard, are uniquely affected by this backlog.

Presently, most concessionaires pay annual franchise fees to the National Wildlife Refuge Fund. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which runs the refuge system and owns the land and facilities, is responsible for maintaining all facilities. However, the Service gives low priority to concessionaire facilities when faced with other competing budget demands within the system. This inferior status leaves concessionaire facilities lacking and discourages concessionaires from using the refuges and providing services to visitors.

This legislation would allow the concessionaires to make necessary maintenance repairs or visitor facility improvements. Payment for improvements for concession fees and would address simultaneously the budget backlog and improve the quality of visitor facilities.

The scope of this new permissive authority has been limited to maintenance backlog projects and other types of small scale improvement projects that increase the visitor's experience. Also, repairs or improvements would be required to be made at the refuge or refuge complex where the concession operates. I note that this legislation would not authorize the construction of any new facilities.

H.R. 1370 has been further amended to address the presently haphazard administrative process by which the Service permits concessionaires to operate within the refuge system. This legislation would require the Service to develop a new standardized concession contract for all national wildlife refuge concession activities. All concession operations would be required to be enrolled under these new contracts within 3 years.

The Service also will be required to award all contracts through competitive bidding, although the bill would exempt small scale retail operations run by nonprofit volunteer organizations, and to ensure accountability the Service will be required to report on the number of refuge units with concessions, a description of services offered, an accounting of fees paid by the concessionaires and a summary of all improvements made by concessionaires will remain with the Federal Government. Furthermore, H.R. 1370 states explicitly that concessionaires do not acquire any compensable interest in the property and facilities they operate or in any repair or improvement they might make.

In closing, H.R. 1370 will provide additional financial flexibility to address the chronic maintenance backlog hindering visitor services at refuges. This legislation will bring much needed coherence to the administration of concession contracts, enhance the public's enjoyment and appreciation of our National Wildlife Refuge System and prevent the future establishment of concession activities that are incompatible with the refuge system's wildlife first mission.

I want to once again commend our colleague the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) on this legislation. I urge Members to support it and to improve our national wildlife refuges.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1370, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966 to establish requirements for the award of concessions in the National Wildlife Refuge System, to provide for maintenance and repair of properties located in the System by concessionaires authorized to use such properties, and for other purposes." A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NUTRIA ERADICATION AND MARSHLAND RESTORATION ACT

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4044) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide assistance to the States of Maryland for implementation of a program to eradicate nutria and restore marshland damaged by nutria, as amended.
The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4044

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Wetlands and tidal marshes of the Chesapeake Bay and in Louisiana provide significant cultural, economic, and ecological benefits to the Nation.

(2) The South American nutria (Myocastor coypus) is directly contributing to substantial marsh loss in Louisiana and Maryland on Federal, State, and private land.

(3) Traditional harvest methods to control or eradicate nutria have failed in Maryland and have succeeded in the eradication of nutria in Louisiana. Consequently, marsh loss is accelerating.

(4) The nutria eradication and control pilot program authorized by Public Law 106-383 is to develop new and effective methods for eradication of nutria.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide financial assistance to the State of Maryland and the State of Louisiana for a program to implement measures to eradicate or control nutria and restore marshland damaged by nutria.

SEC. 2. NUTRIA ERADICATION PROGRAM.

(a) GRANT AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of the Interior (in this section referred to as the ‘‘Secretary’’), subject to the availability of appropriations, may provide financial assistance to the State of Maryland and the State of Louisiana for a program to implement measures to eradicate or control nutria and restore marshland damaged by nutria.

(b) GOALS.—The goals of the program shall be to:

(1) eradicate nutria in Maryland;

(2) eradicate or control nutria in Louisiana and other States; and

(3) restore marshland damaged by nutria.

(c) ACTIVITIES.—In the State of Maryland, the Secretary shall require that the program consist of management, research, and public education activities carried out in accordance with the report published by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service entitled ‘‘Eradication Strategies for Nutria in the Chesapeake and Delaware Bay Watersheds’’, dated March 2002.

(d) COST SHARING.—

(1) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the costs of the program may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the program.

(2) IN-KIND CONTRIBUTIONS.—The non-Federal share of the costs of the program may be provided in the form of in-kind contributions of materials or services.

(e) LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Not more than 5 percent of financial assistance provided by the Secretary under this section may be used for administrative expenses.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For fiscal years under this section, there is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $1,000,000 for the State of Maryland program and $2,000,000 for the State of Louisiana program each of fiscal years 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, and 2007.

SEC. 3. REPORT.

No later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary and the National Invasive Species Council shall—

(1) give consideration to the 2002 report for the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries titled ‘‘Nutria in Louisiana’’, and the 2002 report entitled ‘‘Eradication Strategies for Nutria in the Chesapeake and Delaware Bay Watersheds’’; and

(2) develop, in cooperation with the State of Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries and the State of Maryland Department of Natural Resources, a long-term nutria control program, as appropriate, with the objective to significantly reduce and restore the damage nutria cause to coastal wetlands in the States of Louisiana and Maryland.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) and the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER).

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The sponsor of this legislation, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST), the Subcommittee on Fisheries Conservation, Wildlife and Oceans chairman, has been working on this issue for many years. In fact, in 1998 Congress enacted a law he sponsored to expand the Nutria Control Pilot Project, and let me briefly, for those who are not aware, as I was not, this is a nutria. It is basically a South American, somewhat of an overgrown rat, smaller sized groundhog, but it is one species that is destroying the environment in certain areas of our country.

Since that time, Federal, State and local partners have worked together to develop an eradication and control method on how to address the tremendous amount of environmental destruction that is being caused by an increasing population of a semi-aquatic, non-native rodent known as nutria. This partnership has conducted various studies on the rate of wetland destruction, the reproductive capacity of nutria and alternatives to control or eradicate this species from the Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge, the Fishing Bay Wildlife Management Area and Tudor Farms.

The results of these studies were shocking. Nutria have no natural predators in Maryland and they have already consumed nearly half of the wetland marshlands at the Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge. The remaining acreage is in serious peril. Unless nutria are stopped, they will continue to destroy wetlands at Blackwater, the other eight wildlife refuges on the Delmarva Peninsula and marshlands throughout the Atlantic Coast. One of the problems we have often in the Fish and Wildlife Service is when the action of humans alter the environment, such as bringing in non-native species, we often have to intervene to bring back the national environment which would be destroyed.

H.R. 4044 will authorize Public Law 105-322, and it will implement the next step in the process, which is the eradication of nutria and the restoration of the wetlands which are vital to the survival of millions of migratory waterfowl, bald eagles, gulls and terns, and many other species. In their testimony, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service stated that: ‘‘The Service recognizes the need to continue cooperative efforts to eradicate nutria in the Chesapeake Bay region and will continue its commitment as a key Federal member of the nutria eradication partnership.’’

At the full committee markup of this legislation, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUSIN) successfully offered an amendment to expand the scope of this measure to address nutria in the State of Louisiana. According to the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries, these people have damaged or destroyed over 100,000 acres of wetlands in their State. Despite extensive efforts and the consumption of thousands of nutria by American alligators, Louisiana’s attempt to control their growing nutria population have proven ineffective.

Under the terms of the modified bill, the Secretary of the Interior will undertake steps to control or eradicate nutria in the two States and together with the National Invasive Species Council develop a long-term nutria control and eradication program.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4044 is a carefully crafted bill that will help to solve a serious problem facing Maryland’s Eastern Shore and Louisiana’s marshlands. I urge an ‘‘aye’’ vote on H.R. 4044.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4044, legislation that would authorize financial assistance to the States of Maryland and Louisiana to support efforts to eradicate nutria and restore marshland ecosystems.

There is little doubt that nutria, a large member of the rodent family introduced from South America into the United States in the 1930s, has significantly ruined or destroyed coastal wetland habitats in both Maryland and Louisiana.

The range of distribution of this invasive species continues to expand ominously as it searches out new marsh habitat for forage, shelter, and breeding. The need for direct action to address this environmental threat is pressing and compelling.

H.R. 4044 builds upon the measured success of a pilot program authorized in 1998 which helped develop new methods and strategies for the eradication of nutria and the Chesapeake and Delaware Bay watersheds.

It is hoped that the management, research, and public outreach activities authorized in this bill will enable wildlife biologists in both Maryland and
WACO MAMMOTH SITE AREA INTERIOR STUDY ACT

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1925) to direct the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of designating the Waco Mammoth Site Area in Waco, Texas, as a unit of the National Park System, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of designating the Waco Mammoth Site Area in Waco, Texas, as a unit of the National Park System, and for other purposes, as amended.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. STUDY AND REPORT REGARDING WACO MAMMOTH SITE AREA.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of the Interior, in consultation with the State of Texas, and other appropriate organizations, shall carry out a special resource study regarding the national significance, suitability, and feasibility of designating the Waco Mammoth Site Area located in the city of Waco, Texas, as a unit of the National Park System.

(b) STUDY PROCESS AND COMPLETION.—Section 8(c) of Public Law 91–383 (16 U.S.C. 1a–35(c)) shall apply to the study and completion of the study required by this section.

(c) SUBMISSION OF STUDY RESULTS.—Not later than 3 years after funds are first made available for this section, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report describing the results of the study.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) and the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER).

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 1925, introduced by my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS), directed the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of designating the Waco Mammoth Site Area in Waco, Texas, as a unit of the National Park System.

Located near the confluence of the Brazos and Bosque Rivers, the Mammoth Site has become internationally known, as it contains the remains of the largest known herd of Colombian mammoths, along with the wooly mammoth, dying from the same event. To date, 22 mammoths have been found at the site that date back 26,000 years.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is supported by the majority and minority of the committee. In addition, the bill is supported by the administration, with the ongoing caveat that the maintenance backlog be addressed first.

I would like to add my personal congratulations and interest in this. When I was student body president at Indiana Purdue, Fort Wayne, through the geology club they promoted the nickname “The Mastedons.” It was my honor to drive through, over the objection of many, most of the school name, which has stood for over 30 years. They are kind of big cousins to the mammoths.

So I am glad to see we are working to preserve this site so that we can have this for future generations to understand better the natural processes that occurred in this country and the creatures that were here before us. So, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1925, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1925, introduced by my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS), directed the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of designating the Waco Mammoth Site Area in Waco, Texas, as a unit of the National Park System.

The Waco Mammoth Site is believed to contain the remains of the largest concentration of mammoths killed during a single event. The site is located close to the confluence of the Brazos and Bosque Rivers in the city of Waco, Texas. The discovery of these mammoth remains has received international attention and Baylor University in the City of Waco have been working to protect the site.

In hearings before the committee on Resource, we received testimony on the unique paleontological resources found on this site. The study called for by H.R. 1925 will examine what role, if any, that the National Park Service can play in the protection and interpretation of these resources.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS). I support the bill, as amended, and look forward to its passage by the House today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the sponsor of the bill, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS).

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I want to first thank the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN) for yielding me this time and for her courtesy and leadership on this legislation. I also want to commend and thank my colleague from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER), for his courtesies, his comments, as well as his leadership and long understanding of the importance of these types of historic sites in our country as a way to educate future generations of young people in America about our history.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1925 is called the Waco Mammoth Site Study Bill; and as mentioned, it authorizes the study by the National Park Service to consider including the Waco Mammoth Site as a unit in the National Park System. Since there are numerous different designations in the National Park System, one of the goals of this study would be to determine the best fit for this historic site.

Mr. Speaker, as we have also heard, the Waco Mammoth Site is the largest concentration in the world of prehistoric mammoths dying from the same event. That is what makes this particular site unique and so historically significant. It is found entirely within the city limits of Waco, Texas, my hometown, which also happens to be a suburb of the community of Crawford, Texas, a well-known central Texas community today. It is located at the confluence of the Brazos and Bosque Rivers.

The site was first discovered in 1978; and since 1984, Calvin Smith, director of the Streckers Museum at Baylor University, has been leading the effort to drive through the mud. I think there are even up to 24 mammoths so far. We would not be here today had it not been for the vision and dedication of Calvin Smith, and I want to thank him for his role in this legislation.

What makes this site unique, as I mentioned, is the fact that so many, in fact this could be twice the size of any previous mammoth deaths at any one site for any given cause. What I find absolutely fascinating about it is that the mammoth remains dated back 28,000 years ago, we now have the remains of a 55-year-old bull and a 45-year-old female mammoth as they tried to lift their young calves above the flood that consumed them all. It is my understanding that this is the first recorded in history of parental instincts being shown in a prehistoric setting such as this.

This discovery has received worldwide attention. Experts such as Dr. Gary Haynes at the University of Nebraska have said this site is a valuable and unique treasure that should not be lost. Dr. Haynes states the mammoth site, and I quote, "is a part of America’s rich heritage from the far past, when a much more diverse animal community populated the continent.’”

This site can be valued as a learning tool for school children across Texas and our country, as well as a site for study by professionals. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House to approve this bill, thus bringing an invaluable archeological find one step closer to being part, as I hope, and as it should, a unit of the National Park System.

I thank all of my colleagues for their courtesy, again, their leadership; and finally, Mr. Speaker, if I could just say that nothing ever happens positive in this Congress without a real team effort, and there were a lot of folks back home as well as here in Washington that worked on this. I want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), the chairman of the Committee on Resources, for his support; the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), the ranking member, for his support; the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH); the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HIEFTHEY); theVirgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN); and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER). Again, we would not be here today without their leadership.

And back home, those who first had this vision and have worked to protect this site for years without Federal help so far, the city of Waco, its leadership, represented by Mayor Linda Etheridge and the Waco City Council and staff; people such as Margaret Mills; my friend Sam Jack McGlassen, now deceased, who originally donated this property to the city of Waco, Baylor University, for its important role in this effort; and people such as Allen Samuels and Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Bostick and many others, who care about preserving our important history for future generations.

I urge, Mr. Speaker, the House to vote in support of H.R. 1925.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material in the Record on the three bills just considered, H.R. 1370, H.R. 1925, and H.R. 4044.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana.

There was no objection.

REGIONAL PLANT GENOME AND GENE EXPRESSION RESEARCH ACT

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2051) to provide for the establishment of regional plant genome and gene expression research and development centers, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2051

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act—

(1) the term “Director” means the Director of the National Science Foundation;

(2) the term “institution of higher education” has the meaning given such term in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001); and

(3) the term “nonprofit organization” means a nonprofit research institute or a nonprofit association with experience and capability in plant biotechnology research as determined by the Director.

SEC. 2. MATCHING FUNDS.

The Director may establish matching fund requirements for grantees to receive grants under this Act.

SEC. 3. PLANT GENOME AND GENE EXPRESSION RESEARCH CENTERS.

(a) In General.—The Director shall award grants to consortia of institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations (or both) to establish regional plant genome and gene expression research centers. Grants shall be awarded under this section on a merit-reviewed, competitive basis. When making awards, the Director shall, to the extent practicable, ensure that the program created by this section examines as many different agricultural environments as possible.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the centers established pursuant to subsection (a) shall be to conduct research in plant genomics and plant gene expression. A center’s activities may include—

(1) basic plant genomics research and genomics applications, including those related to cultivation of crops in extreme environments and to accumulation of crops with reduced reliance on fertilizer;

(2) basic research that will contribute to the development or use of innovative plant-derived products;

(3) basic research on alternative uses for plants and plant materials, including the use of plants as renewable feedstock for alternative energy production and nonpetroleum-based industrial chemicals and precursors; and

(4) basic research and dissemination of information on the ecological and other consequences of genetically engineered plants.

(b) PURPOSE.—Grants awarded under this section shall be used for support of research in plant biotechnology targeted to the needs of the developing world. Such activities may include—

(1) basic genomics research on crops grown in the developing world;

(2) basic research in plant biotechnology that will advance and expedite the development of improved cultivars, including those that are pest-resistant, produce increased yield, reduce the need for fertilizers, or increase tolerance to stress;

(3) basic research that could lead to the development of technologies to produce pharmaceutical compounds such as vaccines and medications in plants that can be grown in the developing world; and

(4) research on the impact of plant biotechnology on the social, political, economic, and environmental conditions in countries in the developing world.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation $9,000,000 for fiscal year 2002, $13,500,000 for fiscal year 2003, and $13,500,000 for fiscal year 2004 to carry out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) and the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) will each control 20 minutes.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, does the gentlewoman from Texas claim time in opposition?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentlewoman from Texas oppose the motion?

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. No.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Ohio oppose the motion?

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed, and I seek to claim the time in opposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) controls the time as a true opponent of the motion.
Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2051, the Regional Plant Genome and Gene Research Expression Act. H.R. 2051 has been a collaborative effort between me and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Science, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH). I also thank the gentleman from New York (Chairman BOEHNER), and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL), the ranking member, for their leadership in bringing this important piece of legislation to the floor.

This legislation was developed last fall because I believe we are only just beginning to unlock the potential of agricultural biotechnology. We have witnessed some of the benefits genetically improved crops have brought to American farmers, and it is time that farmers around the world are also able to enjoy the benefits of agricultural biopesticide about the partnership aspect of this legislation fills an important funding gap in our current research environment. The witnesses also were enthusiastic about the partnership aspect of this legislation because collaborative research projects between the U.S. and developing world scientists will help develop the scientific capacity of developing nations as well as expand partnership opportunities for U.S. scientists.

The potential of basic research on developing world crops is enormous, and scientists have already produced some encouraging results. Many of us are familiar with a newly developed strain of golden rice that was developed by plant scientists to have increased Vitamin A and iron content. Golden rice was developed because Vitamin A deficiency causes childhood blindness, which causes more than 1 million childhood deaths each year and is the single most important cause of childhood blindness among children in developing countries. Golden rice is only the beginning of the potential benefits of biotechnology for the developing world. Biotechnology can help develop crop varieties that are resistant to insects, viruses, that can be grown in drought-stricken lands with only minimal amounts of water, that have improved nutritional content, and that will help us to stave off life-threatening illnesses.

Dr. Norman Borlaug, a distinguished professor at Texas A&M University, father of the Green Revolution, and recipient of the 1970 Nobel Peace Prize, stated in yesterday’s Wall Street Journal that “Africa desperately needs the simple, effective, high-yield farming systems that have made the First World’s food supply safe and secure.”

Improving agriculture in the developing world often ranks low on the list of our Nation’s priorities. Yet I can think of few things that are more important to our Nation’s security and future prosperity than fostering stable, productive economies throughout the world. Such global stability will not take place as long as hunger, malnutrition, and disease ravage the majority of the world’s population. Fortunately, we are at a time and a place where we can take positive steps to improve the lives of people around the world, and I believe H.R. 2051 makes a small, but important, contribution to this struggle.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) for working with me in a collaborative, bipartisan effort on this bill. I urge Members to vote in favor of the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I call the House’s attention to a document from the Southern African Seed-Initiative which states in part with regard to the restoration of sustainable agriculture in the future, “We are appealing to the regional international community and to organization in disaster relief and development assistance to provide: 1, to prevent the importation of inappropriate seeds to the southern Africa region which can undermine agrobiodiversity and food security for years; and 2, to support efforts to reconstitute locally adapted planning material and quality seed material/variety, like indigenous landraces or farmers’ varieties appropriate to the various ecosystems” this sheet goes on to claim: “Food aid, combined with the introduction of often poorly adapted seed varieties, can lower yields and keep them low for years."

This information from the Seed Initiative from Southern Africa is very instructive, and reflects most seriously on the matter at hand because the truth of the matter is that all of us in this House who are very concerned about reducing hunger in the world must be careful not to create a circumstance that in our desire to use technologies that seemingly could reduce hunger, that we inadvertently use technologies which are poorly adapted to seed varieties that can end up actually increasing hunger.
Mr. Speaker. I oppose H.R. 2051, the Regional Plant Genome and Gene Expression Research Act. The bill before us is well-intentioned, but I believe it is based on an erroneous assumption. The legislation assumes that unproven technologies will solve the very severe international problem of world hunger. Technologies like genetically engineered food may have a limited role, but economics and the politics of repressive political regimes remain the significant barrier to a consistent food supply for the poor and hungry from our countries.

The development of expensive genetically engineered foods may only exacerbate the situation. There are better alternatives. Agroecological interventions have had significantly more success in helping developing nations feed themselves with higher yields and improved environmental practices, all within reasonable costs for developing countries.

These alternatives do not further enrich a consolidated agricultural industry, but they can provide the poorest citizens of a nation the opportunity to survive on their own means. Next week I am introducing the Real Solutions to World Hunger Act of 2002, which is a type of program that can quickly and effectively save millions of lives. The legislation before us today promotes a technology which is incompatible with the world's need to feed itself.

The cause of world hunger has more to do with distribution than food production. The world today produces more food per inhabitant than ever before. Enough food is available now to provide 4.3 pounds for every person each day. That information from Food First Institute for Food and Development Policy.

The poor nutrition of millions is not due to a shortage in food, but rather to problems of distribution. Why was Ethiopia exporting food during its famine in the 1980s? In an economy that is becoming increasingly market driven, food is sold to the highest bidder. But at a more fundamental level, appalling land distribution policies favoring large landowners leave land idle preventing people from growing their own food. The landless poor are at the mercy of the cash economy to buy food.

This legislation follows the biotechnology industry strategy by employing a mistaken view of distribution. Genetically altered plants and stacked genes for herbicide tolerance and insect resistance account for 7 percent, this according to the International Service for the Acquisition of Agribiotech Applications.

When added up, that leaves no commercial crops that provide any benefits for the poor and developing nations. I quote from a statement made to the United Nations by delegates from 24 African states in 1998: "We object strongly that the image of the poor and hungry from our countries is being used by giant, multinational corporations to push a technology that is neither safe, environmentally friendly, nor economically beneficial to us. We do not believe that such companies or gene technologies will help our farmers to produce the food that is needed in the 21st century. On the contrary, we think that it will destroy the diversity, the local knowledge, and the sustainable agricultural systems that our farmers have developed for millennia; and it will thus undermine our capacity to feed ourselves."

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I agree with much of what the gentleman from Ohio says, because that is part of our concern in this bill. What it calls for is more research. More research is going to include not only the basic research that is key to increasing the safety of any resulting product.

The gentleman mentioned that a lot of the private research so far in this area has been to simply increase profits. That is the kind of private research in genomics that have been directed at plant products that can be sold because they increase yield or they reduce the cost for the farmer. If we are going to have the kind of research that helps people, then we must see that both the basic research that is performed focuses on what developing countries perceive their own needs to be. Additionally, the bill allows for research on the impact of plant biotechnology on the social, political and environmental conditions in countries in the developing world. This provision will allow researchers to investigate many of the claims that my colleague from Ohio raises.

This bill does not force farmers in developing countries to adopt fancy technologies. It does not force the importation of genetically altered foods outside the country. On the contrary, it seeks to encourage the adoption of the very simple technology of a better seed that was developed in conjunction with scientists from the developing world.

All of us here recognize that world hunger is an enormously complex problem with no simple solution. This bill does not hold the answer. What this bill does is provide the means for scientists in the United States and in developing countries to work together to contribute to the much larger solution to the very serious problem of hunger, malnutrition and disease in the developing world.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 6 minutes. I want to thank the gentleman from Michigan and the gentlewoman from Texas for their commitment to trying to deal with this problem of world hunger. We have differences of opinion about how we can deal with it effectively.

I want to point out that the research which is called for in part of this bill, Mr. Speaker, has already been done. As a matter of fact, in the AgBioForum, volume 2, number 3 and 4, summer and fall of 1999, pages 155 to 162, an article by Miguel Altieri and Peter Rosset, thoroughly researched article, I might add, that claims over 38 academic sources for their conclusions, states the following in the abstract. It says:

‘Advocates of biotechnology affirm that the application of genetic engineering to develop transgenic crops will increase world agricultural productivity, enhance food security, and move agriculture away from a dependence on chemical inputs helping to reduce environmental problems. This paper challenges such assertions by first demystifying the Malthusian view that hunger is due to a gap between food production and human population growth. Second, we expose the fact that current bioengineered crops are not designed to increase yields or for poor small farmers, so that they may not benefit from them. In addition, transgenic crops pose serious environmental risks, continuously underplayed by the biotechnology industry. Finally, it is concluded that there are many other agro-ecological alternatives that can solve the agricultural problems that biotechnology aims at solving, but in a much more socially equitable manner and in a more environmentally harmonious way.’

In a different article which is entitled Ten Reasons Why Biotechnology Will Not Ensure Food Security, Protect the Environment and Reduce Poverty in the Developing World, Altieri and Rosset point out, number one, there is no relationship between the prevalence of hunger in a given country and its population. For every densely populated and hungry nation like Bangladesh or Haiti, there is a sparsely populated and hungry nation like Brazil and Indonesia.

The second point they make, number two, most innovations in agricultural biotechnology have been profit-driven rather than need-driven. The real thrust of the genetic engineering industry is not to make Third World agriculture more productive, but rather to generate profits.

Number three, the integration of the seed and chemical industries appears destined to accelerate increases in per acre expenditures for seeds plus chemicals, delivering significantly lower returns to growers.

Number four, recent experimental trials have shown that genetically engineered seeds do not increase the yield of crops. A recent study by the United States Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service shows that in 1998 yields were not significantly different in engineered versus nonengineered crops in 12 of 18 crop region combinations.

Number five, many scientists claim that the ingestion of genetically engineered food is harmless. Recent evidence, however, shows that there are potential risks of eating such foods as the new proteins produced in such foods could, one, act themselves as allergens or toxins; two, alter the metabolism of the human plant or animal, causing it to produce new allergens or toxins; or, three, reduce its nutritional quality or value.

In this article, Ten Reasons Why Biotechnology Will Not Ensure Food Security, Protect the Environment and Reduce Poverty in the Developing World, the authors as their sixth point indicate transgenic plants which produce their own insecticides closely follow the pesticide paradigm, which is itself rapidly failing due to pest resistance to insecticides.

Number seven, the global fight for market share is leading companies to massively deploy transgenic crops which in 1998, millions of 30 million hectares in 1998, without proper advance testing of short- or long-term impacts on human health and ecosystems.

The next point that the authors make, number eight, there are many unanswered ecological questions regarding the impact of transgenic crops.

Number nine, as the private sector has exerted more and more dominance in advancing new biotechnologies, the public sector has had to invest a growing share of its scarce resources in enhancing biotechnological capacities in public institutions.

And, number 10, much of the needed food can be produced by small farmers located throughout the world using agro-ecological technologies. In fact, new world development approaches and low input technologies spearheaded by farmers and nongovernmental organizations are already making a significant contribution to food security at the household, national and regional levels in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The gentleman from Ohio and the gentlewoman from Texas and I, agree on a lot of these issues. The plant genome and gene expression centers will take plant biotechnology research into the next phase, beyond simply mapping and sequencing genes and toward a better understanding of gene expression.

We have got the Aradopsis plant. We have cataloged those genes. We have determined the folding of several of those genes to learn more about what particular genes do. But there is a tremendous void in the information that we need to make sure the new plants are safe.

Let us not argue against having more research. Let us not argue against maybe having government do a little bit of this research instead of leaving it to the private sector. We need to have some kind of financial rewards for what they do. The centers are going to expand on NSF’s current activities in gene research by providing central locations for multidisciplinary interdisciplinary approaches to plant biotechnology research. This will allow researchers to develop the kind of research to allow development of safe and beneficial plant varieties and plant-derived applications.

Specifically in this bill, I would say to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH), the centers will conduct research in plant genomics related to the development of the kind of information that can lead to new varieties of enhanced crops, including those grown in nontraditional environments and those grown with reduced reliance on chemical fertilizers. These may include releasing plants that are resistant to diseases and conditions or not requiring use of inputs that are not environmentally friendly.

The centers are also going to expand on current biotechnology efforts that have primarily been focused on improving the production and the cost and the quantity. And exactly like the gentleman from Ohio, I say, we are going to move away from that to the kind of research that is going to give us better information.

I believe we are on the threshold of a new era in food production. Biotechnology will be especially important to poor subsistence farmers across the globe who struggle against the odds to bring in a good crop each year.

To address this problem, H.R. 2912 authorizes a program creating plant biotechnology partnerships for the developing world. This bill is based on H.R. 2912, introduced by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON). The plant biotechnology partnerships will provide the fundamental research needed to build on the current plant biotechnology base to address specific agricultural problems in the developing world.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, it has been stated over and over here that the interest here is in just research. However, we cannot separate the kind of research that will be done here from the logic that is driving to this conclusion, because this bill states that for-profit companies can be involved in this research.

Now, I agree with my friend from Michigan that we do not want to just leave it to for-profit companies, but it is in the bill. So I would just say that if we do not want for-profit companies involved, I would certainly be willing to entertain a unanimous consent request to strike that provision from this bill.

In addition to that, the total of this bill is $36 million.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KUCINICH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the language in the bill was not for-profit companies, it is for nonprofit organizations to be involved, so the nonprofits that are interested in something beside profit.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, re-claiming my time, may I ask the gentleman to make sure that he and I have the same copies of these bills, because often there are reprints and newer iterations, I have here under section 4: “Partnerships for Plant Biotechnology in the Developing World,” under number (2), which is line 8. I am going to read it to the gentleman: “In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an institution of higher education or eligible nonprofit organization designated by the Secretary shall enter into a partnership with one or more developing nations and may also include for-profit companies involved in plant biotechnology.”

I will ask the gentleman again, I would certainly entertain the gentleman’s willingness to strike that language there so that we can certainly keep the for-profit companies out of this, because, Mr. Speaker, the for-profit companies had a $50 million advertising campaign to try to promote biotechnology, glossing over all the concerns that scientists around the world have, and they get $36 million out of this bill if left to the language of this bill. They could get if that much.

I would be happy to have my good friend respond.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the gentleman will yield further, this is part of the language of the bill of the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) originally. It does not give them the names of the grant. They still go to the universities to make the decision of whether there is going to be any private involvement. That is one thing we have lacked as we searched for money, is trying to get more money in. But certainly they should not be allowed to dictate the kind of research to be done. I certainly appreciate that.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to modify the motion.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself one more minute.

Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as my unanimous consent request was objected to, it is very clear that there are Members of this House, certainly not the gentleman from Michigan, but there are members of this House who are looking to give the biotech firms a handout under the guise of helping to feed the poor.

Most genetically engineered food products and almost all research funding for the development of genetically engineered food target developing nations’ agriculture. Developing countries cannot afford this technology and therefore are vastly ignored.

If the biotechnology industry believes they could help mitigate hunger concerns, then, by definition, the access to technologies that could make available the necessary resources for this purpose is appropriate.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON).

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, my late father was a plant geneticist. He spent his entire career developing cotton plants and cotton seeds that could be used as food. I wish we would have helped him when he was alive so he could have participated through grants at Texas A&M or the University of Texas to forward this very worthwhile research endeavor.

Mr. Speaker, I very strongly support the gentlewoman from Texas and the gentleman from Michigan in their noble endeavor.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would announce the unanimous consent to strike the language of the U.S. prohibition on any intervention in a developing nation’s effort to mandatorily license a genetically engineered crop.

Fourth, establishing the Sustainable Agriculture Trust Fund with a small tax on a biotechnology company’s profits. This trust fund will fund the activities in this bill.

To understand how this bill before us, the one we are going to be voting on today, will fail to help anyone except for the biotechnology companies, I think we should ask ourselves what is the real thing. In our nation, our own farming practices and our domestic hunger challenges.

The United States of America, the wealthiest Nation in the world, grows substantial amounts of genetically engineered foods. Our farmers plant approximately 100 million acres a year in genetically engineered crops. However, in this great wealthy Nation of ours, plenty of families go hungry every day. Approximately 4 million low-income children go hungry under the age of 12 every year, and an additional 9.6 million children are at risk of hunger.

The proponents of this legislation before us believe that genetically engineered foods will solve world hunger. But I question this rationale when we have so much hunger in our own Nation. This technology has not helped a single hungry family in our Nation. These hungry families need a better economy, better paying jobs, access to child care, and a decent education to solve the economic trap that leads to hunger.

It is clear that hunger is something that we must eradicate, but promoting false solutions to provide great public relations for a troubled industry does a great disservice to those who need our help the most. We all want to help resolve the hunger crisis in other nations, but only the legislation I will introduce soon will begin to deal with the hunger problem in our country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would announce that each Member has 1 minute remaining, with the gentleman from Michigan having the right to close.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, one more time let me say that the gentleman from Ohio has made the case for this bill. This bill speaks to research partnerships, including developing-nation participation. There is nothing in this bill that requires any kind of deportation to these developing nations. It provides a way by which the United States can be part of research that will provide them foods that will probably help with immunizations, extra vitamins, but only after the research is done with the involvement of scientists from the developing countries.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge the passage of the bill. I think that the opponent has misunderstood the bill.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the agriculture and biotechnology industries are driving the research; and as such, they have ignored a tremendous amount of work that has been done by independent scientists that challenges the research industry itself.

There are serious issues that need to be addressed, that relate to food security as a fundamental human right. The philosopher and human rights activist of India, Vandana Shiva, has said that the reduction in diversity food is being grown and less is reaching the poor and hungry. She quotes Senator Feinstein of California, "Agriculture and Biotechnology Industries have misunderstood the bill. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

well quick, so I hope that she does so very soon.

Our first great civil engineer in this country was the man that we now know as the Father of our country, George Washington. George Washington was a civil engineer who made living in between serving as a military commander in the militia, the British forces before the Revolutionary War, surveying and doing engineering work in what is now Virginia and going west, west of the Mississippi River.

In 1852, we founded what is now called the American Society of Civil Engineers. If we had been alive at that point in time, the first great project that civil engineers would have worked on for this Nation would have been the Transcontinental Railroad. Can we imagine, if people came to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE) and myself, or the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL) today and said they need to build a Transcontinental railroad, could we do it? I doubt it. But the civil engineers of that time said, not a problem, and even as the Civil War was going on, they were racing to build what we now call the Transcontinental Railroad, and they hammered in the golden spike in 1869 and bound our great Nation together.

What would we have done if around the turn of the century, President Roosevelt, not Franklin Roosevelt, but Teddy Roosevelt had come and said, 'I want you to build the Panama Canal to bring together for the first time the Isthmus of Panama, the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. I do not think many of us could, but the civil engineers of that era did that. What about during World War II, if President Franklin Roosevelt had come and said, we need to build a great port infrastructure and we need to improve our highways and need to build pipelines, could we have done that? I do not think many of us could, but the civil engineers of that time could.

What if in the 1950s President Eisenhower had come and said, Congressman Bart, I want you to build an interstate highway system. I do not think many of us could have done that, but the civil engineers of the 1950s did that.

I could go on and on. But as we begin to move into the 21st century, there are several civil engineering projects to be done, and luckily for us today in the United States, we have over 125,000 members of the American Society for Civil Engineers, registered, professional engineers who have made it their life's work to build a better America.

We tend to think of engineers as kind of nerdy people with pencils behind their ears and slide rules in their pockets. Nothing could be further from the truth. They are people helping people. They are building the projects that bind this great Nation together and, more and more, binding this great world together.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am delighted, along with the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MOORE), my good friend, to sponsor this resolution honoring the 150th anniversary of the American Society for Professional Engineers, because they have truly helped to build a better America.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON) for his good work on this bill. I also want to join my colleague from Texas in thanking the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT), the chairman of the committee, and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL), the ranking member.

I am very, very pleased to be here today with the gentleman from Texas to honor 150 years of service by the American Society of Civil Engineers to their profession, our country, and the world. ASCE is the oldest of engineering societies and clearly one of the best in the whole world.

Civil engineers literally have built America. One hundred and fifty years ago, there were no skyscrapers. There were wooden bridges and no one would have dreamed of spanning the Chesaapeake Bay or the San Francisco Bay. Railroads were just beginning. Roads were at most two lanes and perhaps were even built of planks. Manned flights came over 50 years later.

Now, we have an interstate highway system, an intercontinental railroad system, an network of local and international airports that are the backbone of United States commerce. Small dams have been replaced, Mr. Speaker, with huge ones that provide large volumes of electricity. Human health has been enhanced by improved sanitation with sanitary landfills, waste water treatment facilities, and distribution systems for clean water.

How much of this would have been possible without civil society? Civil engineers? Well, we cannot know for sure, but they certainly deserve much of the credit. ASCE has encouraged generations of bright Americans to enter the profession. It has helped develop educational standards and continuing education opportunities for civil engineers, and it has established a series of institutes and a research foundation to advance the knowledge base of the profession.

ASCÉ is the publisher of civil engineering information in the world, much of which is at the fingertips of the ASCÉ membership through its website. The American Society of Civil Engineers has even gone international and is dedicated to promoting the professionalism of civil engineers in almost 50 countries.

The small group of engineers who banded together in 1852 would not recognize today's organization. ASCÉ now has 125,000 members, more than half of the civil engineers in this country, organized in sections, branches, and student chapters and clubs.

ASCÉ is not resting on its laurels, though. It is aggressively adding new services for its members. It has ambitious programs for working with the Congress, the government at all levels, and the public at large to place the programs and policies needed to improve our built environment. Priority areas for 2002 include clean water, infrastructure financing, math and science education, natural hazards impact reduction, and smart growth.

I ask my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, to join me in approving the Concurrent Resolution 387 that congratulates and honors the American Society of Civil Engineers on 150 years of service. This is a spectacular beginning and I will bet we have not seen anything yet.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that several years ago the American Society for Civil Engineers made me one of their engineering fellows. It is a distinguished achievement award that they really give to engineers who have made a lifetime in civil engineering and have outstanding features. They gave it to me primarily because I am one of the few registered professional engineers in the Congress, but it is one of the high honors that I have received as a Member of the House, and the certificate is now in my office, and I am very, very proud of that.

For that and many, many reasons I think this is a resolution that is very worthwhile passing for this body because of the fine work that civil engineers have done for the last 150 years. So I hope that when the time comes to vote, we can pass it with unanimous consent.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply say that this resolution we hope to pass by unanimous consent today and send to the other body and pass it over there so that it actually can be signed by the President and presented to the leadership of the American Society for Civil Engineers sometime this fall when the actual calendar anniversary occurs for the 150th anniversary. It is very, very worth doing, and I hope that we can do it in a very bipartisan fashion.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for the opportunity to join my colleagues in commending the American Society of Civil Engineers for their 150 years of service to our country. I also want to thank the Gentleman from Texas, Mr. BARTON, and the Gentleman from Kansas, Mr. MOORE, for introducing this resolution.

It is difficult to imagine an area of our lives that has not been touched by civil engineers. They ensure that when we turn on the tap, we have clean water to drink. Civil engineers designed the massive transportation systems that make it possible for us to move freely and efficiently across this vast country. Moreover, civil engineers design technologies and practices to help clean up polluted water and to ensure that our natural resources are preserved for future generations.
Americans benefit from the expertise and hard work of engineers everyday, but rarely acknowledge or recognize our debt to them. I am lucky enough, however, to have a different experience with engineers. During my time on Science Committee and especially as Chairman, I have come to rely on ASCE as a valuable resource. I may not be making headlines here, but we in government do not know everything all the time.

After the tragedy of September 11, we immediately began to look for lessons we could learn from this horrible event. FEMA put together a team, led by ASCE, to investigate the World Trade Center collapse. The team set out to discover exactly why the building collapsed, if the buildings could have stood longer, and if more lives could have been saved. I cannot even begin to fathom the work this team did, but in eight months they delivered an important report to Congress detailing the sequence of events that led to the buildings’ collapse. This work will go a long way toward saving lives. Now, we are working closely with ASCE with legislation that will hopefully make their jobs, on further building investigations, easier.

Mr. Speaker, I am very proud of the work that civil engineers do for our country and I am ever grateful for the service that ASCE provides to this Congress and to me personally. I congratulate ASCE on 150 years and I look forward to many more.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELE) to the rule, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) in the chair.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELE), to the rule, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) in the chair.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3694) to provide for highway infrastructure investment at the guaranteed funding level contained in the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3694
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Highway Funding Restoration Act”.

SEC. 2. FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY PROGRAM OBLIGATION CEILING.

Section 1102 of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (23 U.S.C. 104 note; 112 Stat. 115, 113 Stat. 1753) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(k) RESTORATION OF OBLIGATION LIMITATION FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for fiscal year 2003, the obligations for Federal-aid highway projects, as defined in section 102(b)(8) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (90 Stat. 347), for the construction, including the planning and design, of any projects or activities that are subject to the obligation limitation set forth in subsection (a)(6)—

“(1) shall be not less than $27,746,000,000; and

SEC. 3. RESTORATION OF OBLIGATION CEILING.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the adjustment made pursuant to section 1102(h) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century for fiscal year 2003 shall be deemed to be zero.

SEC. 4. ADJUSTMENTS TO GUARANTEE FUNDING LEVELS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all adjustments made pursuant to section 251(b)(1)(B) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 to the highway category and to section 831(a)(5) of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century for fiscal year 2003 shall be deemed to be zero. This section shall apply immediately to all reports issued pursuant to section 254 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 for fiscal year 2003, including the discretionary sequestration preview report.

SEC. 5. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING REVISED ALIGNED BUDGET AUTHORITY.

It is the sense of Congress that the revenue aligned budget authority provision in section 251(b)(1)(B) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 should be amended in a manner to accurately align highway spending with highway revenues while maintaining predictability and stability in highway funding levels.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION FOR HIGHWAY PROJECTS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, projects and activities designated on pages 82 through 92 of House Report 107-308 shall be eligible for fiscal year 2002 and be made available for the program for which each project or activity is so designated.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. YOUNG of Alaska asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act. This bipartisan bill has 316 cosponsors in the House of Representatives and the other body companion measure, S. 1917, is co-sponsored by 74 Members of that body.

I want to particularly thank the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELE), the chairman of the Committee on the Budget, for his support for the restoration of highway funding. The gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELE) included in the House budget resolution a provision for the outlay of these funds. I support enforcement of the budget resolution adopted by the House.

Mr. Speaker, I am working with the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELE) to address in the future a better method of calculating the Revenue Aligned Budget Authority, which we refer to as RABA. We need to more accurately align highway spending with highway revenues, while maintaining predictability and stability in highway funding levels.

The House has agreed to this expedited process. I am confident that the Senate will also take timely action on the bill before the fiscal year 2003 appropriations cycle is well underway.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is vitally necessary for three reasons. First, State Departments of Transportation cannot absorb the proposed cut of $8.5 billion below the level of funding received in the fiscal year of 2002, a 27 percent program reduction.

Second, transportation spending keeps people employed. More than 180,000 family-wage jobs are associated with the $4.4 billion funding restoration in this bill.

Third, cash balances in the Highway Trust Fund, the dedicated revenue source for highway and transit construction, are sufficient to accommodate this funding restoration.

Again, I want to thank the full committee ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR); the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PERRIN), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Highways and Transit; and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI), the subcommittee ranking member, along with the full membership of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, and all of the other 242 Members of the House urging immediate passage of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, again, I cannot stress the importance of the bill. It does restore the funding level where it should be to build our highways so that we can keep the 180,000 people employed and, more than that, increase the infrastructure necessities in this country and keep them on the right track.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, let me first thank the distinguished ranking member of the full committee, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), for his hard work in this measure. I also want to commend our chairman, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr.
Mr. Speaker, restoring the highway funds under the firewall is supported by every nation’s governors, mayors, industry and labor interests alike. I join with my chairman, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), full committee ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERTSTAR), the Subcommitte on Highways and Transit committee ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI), and the more than 300 co-sponsors and supporting H.R. 3694, and I urge its immediate passage.

Mr. OBERTSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORSTON).

Ms. NORSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished ranking member for yielding me time. I thank the gentleman and the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), as well as our subcommittee chair and ranking members, for working so well and so closely together to bring this bill to the floor today.

One thing we have enough money for in this time of war-time priorities, this time of recession is to continue to build our roads and bridges. Thank goodness for the trust fund. Have trust in the trust fund. It would be absurd to let the technicality of a flawed formula keep us from doing what we always do in times of recession: we build and we make jobs.

We are told, of course, that we are coming out of a recession. Well, I want you to look at our unemployment rates: February, 5.5 percent; March, 5.7 percent; April, 6 percent. Surely Congress can do more with rising unemployment than make it worse.

We have heard about stimulus all last year. This is the stimulus bill. That is what this bill is, and it would destimulate the economy if we were to pull it. Remember, we are not restoring what we had hoped to achieve, but only what we guaranteed to achieve.

Mr. Speaker, I include in the Record the job loss by State if there were an $8.6 billion cut in the Highway trust fund, Mr. Speaker.

!TABLE 2.—FY 2003 FEDERAL HIGHWAY FUNDS AND EMPLOYMENT LOSS RESULTING FROM $8.6 BILLION HIGHWAY INVESTMENT CUT
Mr. Speaker, I indicate that we are not putting the whole thing back. It is 4.4 billion because that is all they had a right to expect. They did not have the right to expect that we would exceed it. They had a right to expect what we guaranteed them when we passed TEA 21. But if we did what the administration wanted, it would be a grand total of 360,961 jobs lost. Nobody wants to do that in this Congress.

Interrupting highway construction would have a particularly chaotic effect on States which are having to cut every other program. They now have to cannibalize some highway projects in order to finish others. It would exacerbate the budget cutting already going on in every State of the Union; and, worse, it would reduce the baseline next year when we reallocate the surface transportation bill. In other words, we would hurt the past because we are trying to catch up. We would hurt the present and we would hurt the future.

We are getting somewhere in infrastructure. I can remember just a few years ago we were sliding back so badly that we wondered if we would ever catch up. We are catching up. This is no time to turn around and go down. We are catching up. This is the time to keep moving ahead.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to address one thing that has been brought up by the previous speakers. I do believe this is, in fact, a stimulus package. It is not as large as we would like to have it. There has also been mention, about the President's budget cut, and I will have to say that is true; but I also say I have been under seven Presidents since I have been in this body, probably more than my good friend, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Oberstar).

Under our Constitution the President, regardless of what party, has the responsibility to submit a budget. And as I tell every constituent that comes into our office, that is his responsibility. But it is our responsibility as a House of the people to write the budget. We write the budget. We raise the money for it from the people, and we designate how it shall be spent. That is our role. I am extremely pleased that 317 Members of this Congress decided in this case that it was more important to, in fact, restore the guaranteed money for the construction of highways and bridges and improving our

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds to say I concur with my distinguished chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER).

Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I too rise to support H.R. 3694 and to thank the chairman and the full committee ranking member and the subcommittee chairman and ranking member for their leadership to put forward the Highway Funding Restoration Act.

I am proud to be a co-sponsor of this legislation and am proud of the bipartisan way the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has worked together to bring this bill to the floor. This bill will restore $373 million for highway projects in California and allow projects we desperately need to move forward, including adding carpool lanes to I-680/80, widening Highway 4, and developing the Oakland Airport interconnector.

This does not replace all the money President Bush cut out of California’s transportation budget, but it is a good first step. It translates to saving more than 15,000 good-paying jobs across our State. Commuters in the Bay Area face some of the worst congestion in the country, and we are also facing a sluggish economy.

Now is not the time to be cutting Federal funding for highway projects. This bill will fund California’s section of the highway account at $2.3 billion for the next year. While this amount was authorized in TEA 21 for the next year, it is not sufficient to meet California’s needs. I will continue to push for more money to be used from the trust fund which has $18 billion in cash just sitting in it.

In addition to restoring money, this bill restores the integrity of the budget for freight projects in TEA 21 and the realigned budget authority mechanism called RABA. These provisions will ensure that local communities can plan transportation projects knowing that the Federal Government will be a predictable partner throughout the life of a project.

Every community in America depends on transportation to keep its people and local economy moving. I urge Congress to support this bill and keep America’s transportation improvements on track.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in appreciation of yielding to the next gentleman, I will yield to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), but I just wanted to point out that the gentleman was the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Highways and Transit in the last Congress when we authorized TEA 21. I want to acknowledge the superb role the gentleman played in the crafting of that legislation and the many hours of personal endeavor he gave to the crafting of what became known as TEA 21, and his solid grasp of the issues that we fought over in this body and in the conference.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL).

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) and our ranking member on the full Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure for yielding me the time and for his very kind words. I also join in commending the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman, for his leadership; the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), ranking member; the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSEI), the ranking subcommittee member; and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRIN), the ranking subcommittee chairman, for their leadership, not only in bringing this legislation to the floor but for last year’s invaluable leadership, the last time we did TEA-21, for their leadership in that legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act, does have broad bipartisan support. It will restore, as we have heard, at least $4.4 billion to the Federal aid program from the amount the administration had requested. These brutal cuts would have sucked the life out of our highway program in southern West Virginia.

Keeping our new highway construction and existing road improvements on track is our number one need at this moment. This vital work saves lives and brings new jobs, especially in the southern part of West Virginia, as we are once again experiencing the devastating effects of floods that have ravaged through our area in the last couple of weeks.

We have $18 billion sitting in the Highway Trust Fund. If anything, we need to pour more of it into building the roads our people desperately need, not less. Today, we will set a funding level of $21.7 billion for fiscal year 2003. This will help to ensure that each of the 50 States gets the highway funding they need so they will not have to restructure their transportation systems.

In West Virginia, we are working on many highway projects to enable our citizens to participate in interstate commerce and to open up West Virginia to new business opportunities, including the Coalfield Expressway, the King Coal Highway and upgrading the safety of Route 10.

The West Virginia DOT cannot afford to lose Federal funds necessary to plan, build and maintain these roads. I know the debate will be vocal about the impact of the funds that did one, the then Bureau of the Budget, that said we need to cut funds in order to dampen inflation, build up a bit of a surplus to offset the burgeoning surplus at the beginning of the Vietnam War, and as the chairman observed, it is an old adage that the President proposes but the Congress disposes.

As astute and an early observer as Edmund Burke, the noted British historian, political science writer, a century ago observed that a presidential budget is the hand of a monarch. Speaker is worth little more than the paper on which the words are written. Well, we intend to do what Burke observed, to assure that those are just simply numbers on paper and that the intent of TEA–21 is carried out.

It will restore $4.4 billion of the President's 27 percent cut in the Federal-aid highway program. Important for year-by-year reasons: the Members of this body have noted, this cut itself will, or this restoration will affect 180,000 jobs, but the original budget cut proposed would affect 360,000 jobs over the next 5 years. Worse, it will result in a budget surplus in the Highway Trust Fund of $34 billion and extend it out over a decade. It will reach a nearly $30 billion surplus in the Highway Trust Fund.

By way of comparison when we started with TEA–21 in January of 1998, there was a $29 billion surplus in the Highway Trust Fund. We would be going backward. In fact, if we do not make this restoration the last year of funding for TEA–21 will be less than the first year of TEA–21. That is not the direction in which the American people want this country to move or expect this committee to move in.

We do not establish a ceiling for the highway program. The bill says highway funding should be at least $27.7 billion. As the process goes forward, I hope we will be able to restore even more than that as we get into the final process of the budget and the supplemental appropriations bill with the other body.

The Highway Trust Fund now can support $30 billion in outlays. By the end of this process, I hope we will have achieved an outcome that expends every last penny of that Highway Trust Fund. We did not just do this as an accident when we crafted TEA–21. That was a hard fought bill here on this floor till 2:30 in the morning on the budget process in 1997, and then all the way through the committee and into 1998, and we had an overwhelming vote, and that went to conference and we had a 2-month conference with the United States Senate. Every piece of that legislation was fought through.

The other body did not want to have a guaranteed account. The other body did not want to have the levels of authorization that we set forth in what became TEA–21, and this committee, standing for this body, fought for the guaranteed account and for the revenue adjusted budget authority, and we got it in there. We cannot let a presidential or OMB dictum take it away from us and from the people of this country.

The extraordinary history of TEA–21 has been that in the 42 years of the interstate highway program we invested $114 billion of Federal funds to build the 44,000-mile interstate highway system. In 4½ years of TEA–21, we invested $114 billion. We did in 4½ years what it took 42 years of the interstate highway program, and in the process of doing the good jobs, the jobs that buy the homes and buy the cars and buy the household appliances and put the kids through school, jobs that have sustained the economic expansion of the last 7 years, until it hit the body with that recession that we are trying to creep out of.

The Highway Trust Fund is a dedicated account. It cannot be used for any other purpose. It can only be used for highway and transit funding. It can support more funding, and when we crafted TEA–21, we knew that the year-by-year levels that we authorized would be less than what could be spent. Now we provide roughly $34 billion in outlays. The year-by-year levels that we authorized for TEA–21, the average of authorizations over and above the amount specified year by year.

There is enough in the Highway Trust Fund now. There is a surplus of roughly $20 billion, and let us acknowledge that maybe 6 or $7 billion of that is already spoken for by forward funding of the States, but there is enough in there to support the level of funding that we authorized for this coming fiscal year for TEA–21, and we ought to do it. We do not have to stimulate TEA–21. No other reason, the cost of congestion, the congestion tax in just 68 major metropolitan areas of the United States is $78 billion last year as verified by the Texas Transportation Institute in its report on congestion. This is a bargain, $3.6 billion restored or $4.4 billion that we are trying to do in this bill. That is a bargain to help buy down the cost of congestion.

A key element of this bill is a sense of Congress that we will work together in a reauthorization to ensure that the revenue alignment mechanism of RABA is fine-tuned to more accurately align highway fund spending with highway revenues so as to have greater predictability and stability in highway funding.

I understand also that our chairman, gentleman from Alaska, has reached an agreement with the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to attach the language of this supplemental appropriations bill instead of language that would have declared that the RABA mechanism shall have no force or effect. Now that is very serious language that would have had a very, very bad effect, and I think striking that language and supplanting our bill is a good agreement.

That agreement also has a dark side, and the dark side is that we also have to agree to authorize projects that were earmarked in the Transportation Appropriations Act for this fiscal year that are ineligible for funding. I do not want to debate the merits of those particular projects, but I just want to focus on process.

This is the example of legislative process that is spinning out of control. In the last several years we have moved away from deliberative consideration of legislation, including transportation appropriations bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LaHOOTER) of the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) has expired. The gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) has 12 minutes remaining.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) for his generosity.

I know the Members of this body did not serve in this body in prior years when there were different rules that now are routinely waived. We had transportation appropriations conference reports submitted to us at 7 a.m. on the day the bill is to be considered, the last day before the Members of the majority or the minority to evaluate what is in those bills. Members were lucky if they saw a copy, let alone have an idea of what was in it. Similarly, the other body no longer passes appropriation bills with numbered amendments, so that when they come over here from conference there is no opportunity to stand up and challenge a particular numbered amendment in an appropriation bill.

In 1998, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations brought the transportation appropriation conference report with 63 amendments in disagreement. We could challenge each one of those. We no longer can do that.

We no longer even have the time to consider in appropriate fashion what has been sent from the other body, whether in a conference report or otherwise.

Now we ought to know before we vote what we are voting on. We should know that bills that earmark interstate highway funds for projects that are not on the interstate are pending before us; we ought to know that the bill before us commits public lands funds for projects that do not involve Federal land; that scenic byway funds are for a project that is not on a scenic byway; that bridge replacement funds are dedicated to a project that does not replace a bridge.

We are in the position in this committee of voting without having an opportunity to know what we are voting on and, therefore, to object to what we are voting on. We need to restore the deliberative process to this body's consideration of appropriation bills.

I know that I speak for myself, I know I speak for the Members on the Democratic side, and I know that I express the frustration that the chairman and members of our committee on the majority side have as well. Let us restore a deliberative process so that we can do the public's business in a fair and effective way.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding this time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consider.

Mr. Speaker, the statements of my good friend, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), are absolutely true. I am hoping we can convince the leadership on this side of the aisle, and, of course, the leadership on that side of the aisle, that what is sent to us from the other body in the waning hours of any session has been done inappropriately and that we have to have the time to make sure we are actually following their procedures. And that we do not rush to leave this body and leave, very frankly, some things done inappropriately, as were done last year in October, because we do have to rectify that now.

I have let it be known to Members that went back to their districts and made statements of what they had achieved, and they had not achieved that, that I understand their dilemma. So this is a one-shot deal for them, and I hope everybody watching this in their office who are on that list makes sure they understand this is the only time they are going to get a chance to get projects agreed to, as it goes through our committee, or at least in consultation with the chairman and myself, and of course the ranking member. Because that is the appropriate way to do it.

The other body, the only way we can control that body is to reject what they send to us, and that takes a great deal of courage. I am hoping we have the courage to say no, not until we take the time to do what is right legislatively, with a great deal of deliberation, and the ability to do the job that we have been elected to do. This has been going on for about 4 or 5 years, and I think it is time the House stands up and says no, this is not going to happen, you are not going to send us a great big bill, bigger than that room itself, and not know what is in it.

My staff and myself have spent time, primarily my staff, and I will admit that, just researching what was done last year to find out what projects were put in that were not authorized and, very frankly, took monies from projects that were authorized; and we do not think that is the correct way to go.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman that for not only yielding me this time, but for his leadership on this issue, and I also commend the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

I just simply rise in support of this bill, H.R. 3694, because this bill, the Highway Funding Restoration Act, is going to restore no less than $66.5 million in highway funding in my State of Maryland, and that is going to represent 2,725 jobs. So I urge passage of the bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I insert for the Record an exchange of letters between the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. NUSSELL), Chairman of the Committee on the Budget, which I referred to earlier. in the president’s Budget will decimate State transportation programs, delay efforts to decrease road congestion and deny the traveling public all of the benefits that would result from reduced congestion—shortened travel times, increased productivity and economic growth, and improved safety.

This shortfall will have a severe negative impact on New Mexico and will result in a decrease of $69 million for the New Mexico State Highway and Transportation Department. For many in the Intermountain West, it is not unheard of for people to commute 70 miles or more to get to work. As a result, the trans- portation on our roadways is absolutely crucial. A loss of $69 million will cause the postponement of several important highway construction projects, as well as reductions in money spent on road maintenance. In addition, it is projected that New Mexico will lose an estimated 2,700 jobs as a result of the shortfall.

I am sure many other states will face similar funding and job losses if these monies are not restored for FY 03. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to join me in support of H.R. 3694 and avoid a devastating shortfall in state transportation budgets.

Mr. MATHESON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my full support to the passage of H.R. 3694, this is vital legislation, needed not just for our roads, bridges, and interchanges but also for our towns, our state, and our national economy.

There is no doubt that our economy is not expanding as it was just a couple of years ago. Unemployment is at a six year high and consumer confidence is low. There is a way, however, to provide good jobs, expand commerce, and make lasting investments in our country and that is to restore highway funding.

This year’s budget has an $8.6 billion cut to federal-aid highways. The swings in our economy have translated into a wild swing in how we administer highway funding. Just last year, the Treasury Department predicted a $4.5 billion increase in funding levels, only to be faced with a $4.4 billion drop. We must now carefully choose our funding priorities.

Within the restoration of this monies we will only exacerbate the economic downturn. In my home state of Utah, where highway funding is at a premium, these cuts mean a $55 million dollar shortfall in roadway funds. This means the loss of jobs and contracts-over 3,000 jobs in Utah alone and 180,000 jobs across the country.

Finally, we have already collected the taxes for the trust fund—it was paid by every person who filled a gas tank, rode a bus, or drove a car last year.

Mr. Speaker, this is a short-term fix. While the idea of Revenue Aligned Budget Authority has worked well in the past, it is clear that we need to adjust the formula to prevent future cuts from happening.

This is a uniquely bi-partisan and bicameral bill that will immediately help all of our constituents and ensure that we continue to make good sound investments and create good, well paying jobs.

Mr. BERETTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member rises in strong support of H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act.

This Member would like to begin by commending the distinguished gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the Chairman of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, and the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking Member of the Committee, for their hard work in bringing this bill to the Floor. With 317 cosponsors, it is clear that the vast majority of House Members recognize the importance of H.R. 3694.

Mr. Speaker, Americans who pay the gas tax at the pump expect those dollars to be used for roads and other transportation expenses, and they expect that the money will be made available promptly. Any budget decision to spend less on road construction and maintenance will have an important impact as we attempt to move from an economic recession. It would be a serious mistake to cut infrastructure spending at this critical time.

The bill would restore a minimum of $4.4 billion for highway programs in the budget. This would bring highway funding back to the level anticipated when the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA-21) was enacted. For the State of Nebraska, this legislation would result in the restoration of $32 million.

The Highway Trust Fund contains a surplus of about $20 billion—money already paid in gas taxes. Motorists deserve to have these funds used expeditiously for transportation purposes, rather than to accumulate huge trust fund surpluses.

Mr. Speaker, as an original cosponsor of this bill, this Member urges his colleagues to support H.R. 3694.

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act. This bill restores $6.4 billion in transportation funding and brings us back to the TEA-21 floor of $27.7 billion. It also ensures that this funding will be used to repair decrepit roads and bridges by placing it behind TEA-21’s firewalls.

Every state in America will be affected by this shortfall. In Nebraska, this legislation would result in the restoration of $32 million. This would bring highway funding back to the level anticipated when the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA-21) was enacted. For the State of Nebraska, this legislation would result in the restoration of $32 million.

The Highway Trust Fund contains a surplus of about $20 billion—money already paid in gas taxes. Motorists deserve to have these funds used expeditiously for transportation purposes, rather than to accumulate huge trust fund surpluses.

The President and this Congress have the authority to restore this critical funding, and I am pleased that we are here today to take the first step. H.R. 3694 sets a funding floor of $27.7 billion, a $4.4 billion improvement over President Bush’s budget proposal. However, I believe that we can and must do better.

I understand that the Senate is considering doing somewhat better and restoring $5.7 billion. Such an increase can be sustained by the Trust Fund. It will bring our surplus to $70 billion and projected receipts. I urge the House to work with the other body to achieve at least that amount.

The $8.8 billion reduction contained in the President’s budget request would result in a $37 billion decrease in funding for my state, H.R. 3694 restores about $22 million leaving a $15 million difference. Maine’s transportation needs are significant, and the backlog of roads and bridges in need of repair continually grows. Harsh winter weather and extensive use by both tourists and heavy trucks take their toll on our roads.

Currently, Maine needs to repair 4,000 miles of its estimated 8,300 highway miles. In its biennial budget, only 200 of these miles can be repaired. At this rate Maine will finish its arterial highways in 8 years, and major collectors in 34 years. That pace is obviously insufficient to maintain the safe and reliable transportation network that is crucial to my state’s economic future.

Closing the remaining $15 million deficit would allow the repair of approximately 30 additional miles. While this number may seem small, 30 miles can be critical in providing safe access to rural Maine communities.

Mr. Speaker, I also support Section 6 of this bill which specifically authorizes 49 projects which encountered eligibility problems. Three of these projects are located in Maine. It is absolutely critical that this funding go forward to assist the communities of Brewer, Portland and Aroostook County.

I want to reiterate that the funding level we are setting here today is a floor, not a ceiling. I am supporting this legislation as a first step in ensuring that the infrastructure needs of our communities in Maine and throughout the country can be met. I hope that we will work closely with the chair and other Members of this Committee, for their hard work in bringing this bill to the Floor. With 317 cosponsors, it is clear that the vast majority of House Members recognize the importance of H.R. 3694.

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act, critical legislation introduced by my friend and colleague, Mr. YOUNG.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, under TEA-21, funding for the federal-aid highway program was linked to highway user fee revenues directed into the Highway Trust Fund (HTF). This was achieved in part by a budgetary mechanism called RABA, the Revenue Aligned Budget Authority, which adjusts the guaranteed amount of highway funding available to reflect the most recent estimates of HTF revenues. Due to the unexpected downturn in highway revenues (attributable to a decline in gas, tire, and truck sales, and the overall economic recession), the President’s FY 2003 budget proposed an $8.6 billion, or 27 percent cut in highway funding. H.R. 3694 restores $4.4 billion of the highway program work to go beyond this floor and restore the remaining funding that our states need and deserve.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, rise in strong support of H.R. 3694, the Highway Funding Restoration Act, critical legislation introduced by my friend and colleague, Mr. YOUNG.

Some have argued that since highway programs benefited from RABA in previous years, that they must now suffer the negative consequences, too. While this seems a logical argument, there are some important variables that come into play. Perhaps the most glaring is the impact that such a large cut would have on states. Many DOTs are already facing funding constraints while they are also struggling to maintain existing roads and provide solutions to reducing the growing levels of traffic congestion. Second, transportation spending keeps people employed building infrastructure critical to economic growth. Cutting highway spending by 27 percent would lead to significant job loss and threaten our economic recovery. Finally, there is already a cash balance in the Highway Trust Fund of roughly $20 billion that could be used to help restore the $4.4 billion proposed in this bill.

In the upcoming year Congress will begin reauthorizing TEA–21. This will be an important opportunity to re-examine federal transportation policies and funding levels, including the RABA provision. I encourage my colleagues today to work together and help restore the much-needed highway funding that will help states meet their transportation needs, keep the economy growing, and help to build more livable communities.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I was proud to serve on the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee that authored the 1998 Federal surface transportation funding bill entitled TEA–21 (the Transportation Equity Act for the Twenty-first Century). This legislation provided record levels of guaranteed funding for highways, bridges, transit, and enhancement programs. In addition to funding, it also created a policy framework that prioritizes good planning, with a focus on public participation and environmental goals. All of these factors are critical tools to building more livable communities—where families have choices about how they travel and where they live.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the bill before us.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, Federal investment in transportation is critical to moving our nation’s people, goods, and economy. Maintaining and meeting our federal commitment to transportation spending is an important first step.

I was greatly concerned when earlier this year, the Bush Administration proposed in its fiscal year 2003 Budget a significant decrease in transportation spending from what Congress approved last year. This cut of $8.6 billion, or a 27 percent reduction in highway funding, is based on the Revenue Aligned Budget Authority (RABA) provision of TEA–21. The need for infrastructure management, improvement, and new capacity has only increased and this funding is critical to the transportation plans in many states. In Oregon alone, the impact is a loss of almost $51 million.

As an original co-sponsor of H.R. 3694, I was proud to join with other members of Congress in sending a strong signal that our federal commitment to transportation infrastructure must be met. This bill would increase fiscal year 2003 highway funding by at least $4.4 billion above the level requested in the President’s Budget.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW) and the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsu) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW).

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on Mother’s Day the Nation honored the love and daily sacrifices of our mothers in raising us and unstintingly giving of their selves both in the workforce and at home. Not just our mothers, but all women play an essential role in advancing our Nation’s economic success and the American spirit, which is why it is so important to take the steps we can to enhance the Social Security benefits that are so crucial to women’s retirement income security.

Many of the changes in the Social Security program over time were specifically designed to help women such as the addition of the wives’ and widows’ benefits in 1959, mothers’ benefits in 1960, divorced women’s benefits in 1965, and disabled widows’ benefits in 1967. By providing spouse and survivor benefits, lifetime inflation-adjusted benefits, and a progressive benefit formula, Social Security helps keep millions of women out of poverty today.

Although we face significant choices ahead in strengthening Social Security’s financing for future generations, both Republicans and Democrats agree and disabled widows that mothers and grandmothers can have better benefits but not at the expense of their daughters and their granddaughters.

Some have proposed not meeting this bipartisan tradition, proposing even more expansive increases in women’s benefits and guarantees that minimum-wage workers do not retire into poverty. My legislation, the Social Security Guarantee Plus Act, saves Social Security for 75 years and beyond; and it includes provisions to increase widows’ benefits, reduces the penalty women pay who temporarily leave work to care for young children, expands eligibility for young disabled widows, but without repercussion, Social Security’s financial challenges. To pay for the benefits, the general income tax receipts are transferred into Social Security in amounts that would be available if we increase the top tax rate.

There is more we need to do for women, and we will. The President’s bipartisan commission proposed increasing widows’ benefits and guarantees that minimum-wage workers do not retire into poverty. My legislation, the Social Security Guarantee Plus Act, saves Social Security for 75 years and beyond; and it includes provisions to increase widows’ benefits, reduces the penalty women pay who temporarily leave work to care for young children, expands eligibility for young disabled widows, but without repercussion, Social Security’s financial challenges. To pay for the benefits, the general income tax receipts are transferred into Social Security in amounts that would be available if we increase the top tax rate.

Another reason women earn less than men over their lifetimes is time spent outside the workforce caring for children or other family members. Of workers first receiving benefits in 1999, women worked a median of 32 years, while men worked a median of 44 years. The difference in time spent in the workforce is projected to narrow in the future, but women are still expected to work fewer years than men on average because of family-care responsibilities. Social Security’s progressive benefit formula protects women who have less labor force participation and lower wages than their spouse by paying spousal benefits.

While vital to women’s economic security, some aspects of the Social Security program have not kept pace with changes in women’s participation in the workforce and trends in marriage and family care. For example, two-earner couples receive lower benefits than one-earner couples with the same total earnings and age at retirement; parents who take time out of the workforce to care for a child receive no credit toward retirement benefits for those years; and a person who has been married 10 years to qualify for benefits as a divorced spouse, even though the median length of a marriage ending in divorce is around 7 years. Numerous proposals have been made to update and improve Social Security for women, ranging from minor adjustments to spouse, divorced spouse, and survivor benefits, to credits for years spent caring for young children.

While many proposals to strengthen Social Security for women would reduce Social Security’s long-term ability to pay benefits and are best considered as part of comprehensive legislation to strengthen Social Security, there are a number of ways to remedy current inequities in benefits and eligibility criteria with little or no effect on Social Security’s finances. Once implemented, H.R. 4069 would improve benefits for women who rely on Social Security for much of their retirement income. Moreover, these provisions have solid bipartisan support.

Furthermore, this bill continues the subcommittee’s traditional process of making cost-increasing changes within the Social Security System at the expense of other retirees or workers. We insisted on that when we repealed the earnings penalty and enshrined the梯级立法。

According to the Social Security actuaries, this bill succeeds in increasing benefits without affecting the financial picture for the program. That means that mothers and grandmothers can have better benefits but not at the expense of their daughters and their granddaughters.

Some have proposed not meeting this bipartisan tradition, proposing even more expansive increases in women’s benefits and guarantees that minimum-wage workers do not retire into poverty. My legislation, the Social Security Guarantee Plus Act, saves Social Security for 75 years and beyond; and it includes provisions to increase widows’ benefits, reduces the penalty women pay who temporarily leave work to care for young children, expands eligibility for young disabled widows, but without repercussion, Social Security’s financial challenges. over 120,000 Americans according to estimates by the Congressional Budget Office, by improving benefits for divorced spouses and certain elderly and disabled widows.

SCONNEDETTIA ACTION

The Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security held hearings on February 3, 1999, February 28, 2002, and March 6, 2002 devoting to the topic of the need to enhance Social Security benefits for women. The course of these hearings 31 witnesses provided testimony regarding the importance of maintaining and improving Social Security benefits for women and the particular importance of women’s long-term financing challenges and options to address those challenges have discussed the unique needs of women and the particular importance of spouse’s and survivors benefits, the progressiveness benefit formula, and lifetime inflation-adjusted benefits.

The Committee on Ways and Means, Subcommittee on Social Security worked with the Social Security Administration to identify provisions that would help improve benefits for women. In addition, testimony from the Commissioner of Social Security, the General Accounting Office, Members of Congress, and experts on women’s health, welfare, and witness appearances on Social Security’s long-term financing challenges and options to address those challenges have discussed the unique needs of women and the particular importance of spouse’s and survivors benefits, the progressiveness benefit formula, and lifetime inflation-adjusted benefits.

PRESENT LAW

These provisions serve both to enhance women’s retirement income security and as the first steps toward a bipartisan dialogue on ways to strengthen Social Security for all Americans, and are supported by women’s advocacy and senior’s organizations, including AARP, Independent Women’s Forum, National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, United Seniors, Women Impacting Public Policy, and Women’s Institute for a Secure Retirement.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION AND COMPARISON WITH CURRENT LAW

SECTION 2. REPEAL OF 7-YEAR RESTRICTION ON ELIGIBILITY FOR WIDOW’S AND WIDOWER’S INSURANCE BENEFITS BASED ON DISABILITY SIMULTANEOUS RETIREMENT

A disabled surviving spouse (including a disabled surviving divorced spouse in some cases) of a deceased insured worker can be paid monthly benefits if the surviving spouse is age 50-59 and becomes disabled before the latest of: Seven years after the month the worker died; seven years after the last month the surviving spouse was previously entitled to the worker’s earnings record as a surviving spouse with child in care; or seven years after the month a previous entitlement to disabled widowers benefits was ended because the disability of the widower( )ended.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

This provision would eliminate this time requirement for entitlement as a disabled surviving spouse or disabled surviving divorced spouse.

REASON FOR CHANGE

The current law provision leaves gaps in the protection of some disabled widow(er)s, because the 7-year period may not afford all of their need to qualify for disability benefits based on their own work history. Eliminating the 7-year deadline would improve the benefit protection for disabled widow(er)s who currently fail to meet criteria for the current 7-year deadline, regardless of whether they qualify for disability based on their own work history. For those widow(er)s who are able to qualify for benefits based on their own work history, it would improve protection by allowing them to get potentially higher survivor benefits.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Effective for benefits for months beginning after November 2002.

SECTION 3. EXEMPTION FROM 2-YEAR WAITING PERIOD FOR SURVIVING BENEFITS UPON OTHER SPOUSE’S REMARRIAGE

Present Law

If a worker has reached age 62 and is eligible to receive Social Security benefits (but has not applied for them), his or her divorced spouse can become entitled to divorced spouse benefits based on the worker’s earnings record if the divorced spouse meets all the following conditions: The divorced spouse is age 62 or older; the divorced spouse is not married; the divorced spouse had been married to the worker for at least 10 years before the date of application; and the divorced spouse has filed an application for divorced spouse benefits; the divorced spouse is not entitled to a retired or disabled worker benefit or beneficiary insurance amount that equals or exceeds one-half the worker’s primary insurance amount; and the divorced spouse has been divorced from the worker for at least 2 years.

In addition, if the worker is subject to the earnings test, divorced spouse benefits would be commensurately reduced, unless the divorced spouse meets the aforementioned conditions.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

Under the provision, if the worker remarries someone other than the divorced spouse, then the duration of disqualification is deemed to be met as the date of the remarriage.

REASON FOR CHANGE

The 2-year waiting period was included as part of a provision enacted in 1983 that allows divorced spouses to collect benefits as the former spouse of a worker who is eligible for Social Security benefits, but who has not applied for them or is having benefits withheld because of the earnings test. In contrast, a married spouse cannot receive spousal benefits unless the worker is also receiving benefits, and may have spousal benefits reduced if they are subject to the earnings test.

The 2-year waiting period was included to discourage couples from divorcing in order to circumvent restrictions on spousal benefits. However, the waiting period is not appropriate in cases where the worker remarries someone else.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Effective for benefits for months beginning after November 2002.

SECTION 4. MONTHS ENDING AFTER DECREASED INDIVIDUAL’S DEATH DISREGARDED IN APPLYING EARLY RETIREMENT RULES WITH RESPECT TO DECREASED INDIVIDUAL FOR PURPOSES OF LIMITATION ON WIDOW’S AND WIDOWER’S BENEFITS

Present Law

Under present law, the benefits of a widow or widower are subject to a limitation if the deceased spouse had applied for and received benefits before attaining the normal retirement age. This limitation, referred to as the widow(er)’s limit, restricts the benefits of the deceased spouse to a certain amount of money if the deceased worker would have been receiving if still alive (but not less than 82.5 percent of the primary insurance amount). The intent of the widow(er)’s limit is to maintain some degree of reduction in the benefits of the surviving spouse as a result of the deceased worker having become entitled to benefits before attaining the normal retirement age. If the deceased spouse’s death occurs before the normal retirement age, no adjustment to the computation of months in which contributions are made is made in computing the widow(er)’s limit to account for months the worker did not receive benefits due to the worker’s death. (However, adjustment is made to the widow(er)’s limit to account for months the worker did not receive benefits due to earnings exceeding the exempt amount under the retirement earnings test.)

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

Under this provision, if the deceased spouse’s death occurs after he or she attains the normal retirement age, the widow(er)’s limit would be recomputed at the time the deceased spouse would have been entitled to benefits before attaining the normal retirement age. The recomputation of the widow(er)’s limit would exclude the month of death and all subsequent months in determining the benefit reduction amount applicable for the benefit the deceased worker would be receiving if still alive. This would give the widow(er) a potentially higher benefit based on the deceased worker’s earnings history.

REASON FOR CHANGE

In general, widow(er)’s benefits are limited to reflect the longer period of time the worker was required to work before attaining the normal retirement age. However, the widow(er)’s limit is beneficial for the rest of his or her life, even if the deceased spouse had been subject to the earnings test for a few months before dying. This results in an unequal treatment of widow(er)s whose spouses received benefits for the same amount of time before they attained the normal retirement age, but who retired at different ages. This provision would base the widow(er)’s limit on the number of months the worker was required to work before attaining the normal retirement age, rather than the number of months between the age of retirement and the normal retirement age, thus equalizing the benefit of widow(er)s of workers who collected benefits for the same number of months before the normal retirement age. (Also, this change is consistent with the worker’s limit is now adjusted to exclude months before normal retirement age in which the worker did not receive benefits due to earnings exceeding the exempt amount under the retirement earnings test.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Effective for benefits for months beginning after November 2002.

AARP, Washington, DC, April 18, 2002.

Hon. E. CLAY SHAW, Jr., Chairman, House Committee on Social Security, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN SHAW: AARP supports H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancement Act of 2002. The following recommendations for improvements for widows and divorced spouses will help ensure that Social Security continues to provide valuable economic support to older women who rely on Social Security for much of their retirement income.

The Association has long championed improved benefits for older women that are consistent with the Social Security solvency needs. Over a decade ago, in hearings before this Subcommittee regarding older... women and Social Security, we testified in favor of eliminating the requirement that widower/ers become disabled within seven years after their spouse died to qualify for disability benefits. We are pleased that the change has been included in H.R. 4069. The proposed readjustment in the benefits of widows whose spouse retires and dies before reaching the Normal Retirement Age by repealing the two-year waiting period for benefits for a divorced spouse whose former mate continues working is also long overdue.

The Social Security Benefits Enhancement Act will help Social Security continue as the guaranteed floor of income protection for working and their families. The bill is broad, bipartisan support, and we urge prompt House action.

AARP will urge the Senate to adopt similar legislation to improve women’s benefits under the current system. Enactment of this legislation would send a strong message to the American people that Congress can act in a bipartisan fashion to improve the Social Security system.

Sincerely,

William D. Novelli

UNITED SENIORS ASSOCIATION—NEW SOCIAL SECURITY LEGISLATION A “REAL WINNER FOR WOMEN”

WASHINGTON, DC—United Seniors Association Chairman and Chief Executive Charles W. Jarvis wholeheartedly endorsed the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act, H.R. 4069, recently introduced by Congressman Clay Shaw, the chairman of the House Ways & Means Social Security Subcommittee.

“This is a real winner for senior women. It shows Chairman Clay Shaw’s dynamic leadership in the House on senior issues,” said Mr. Jarvis. “It will lift unnecessary barriers to full retirement and during their retirement years. It will also help women nationwide without negatively affecting the Social Security Trust Fund and the future financial stability of the Social Security system.”

United Seniors Association member Anna Janis of Colorado testified February 26th before Chairman Shaw’s Subcommittee hearing on “Women and Social Security.” Chairman Shaw’s legislation is the direct result of those successful hearings. H.R. 4069 improves fairness and eligibility requirements for women by: Increasing the unfair benefit limit on widows whose spouses both retire and die before the full retirement age; updating the requirements for disabled widows to ensure consistency with earnings requirements in current law; eliminating a two-year wait for some divorced spouses to receive benefits; and providing for the three provisions contained in your legislation, H.R. 4069 the Social Security Benefit Enhancements of Women’s Act.

We understand that H.R. 4069 would improve benefits for widows of early retirees who die before reaching the Normal Retirement Age by repealing the current provision that subjects the widow’s benefit to the early retirement penalty. Your bill would also repeal the 7-year period of eligibility for widows who are at least 50 but not yet 60. Under a current law a widow must be at least 60 years old to collect widows benefits. However if she was at least 60 years old when she became disabled and provided that she became disabled within 7 years of her spouse’s death.

Finally H.R. 4069 would eliminate the requirement that a divorce must have been in place for two years for the divorced spouse who is at least 62 to collect full spousal benefits, whether or not the working spouse is collecting benefits or is affected by the earnings limit.

Over 100,000 women will benefit from these three important improvements. We sincerely hope these are the beginning steps in efforts to rectify benefit inequities affecting all women. For those it does help the improvements are most welcome.

We appreciate your leadership on this issue. We urge all members to vote in support of H.R. 4069.

WOMEN’S INSTITUTE FOR A SECURE RETIREMENT,

WASHINGTON, DC, April 4, 2002.

Hon. E. Clay Shaw, Chair,
House of Representatives, Subcommittee on Social Security, Committee on Ways and Means, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Representatives Shaw and Matsui:

The Women’s Institute for a Secure Retirement (WISER) is a non-profit organization that seeks to ensure that poverty among older women will be reduced by improving the opportunities for women to secure retirement benefits. WISER works with community based organizations, advocates and policymakers to ensure that women benefit from both federal and individual policies.

We are gratified that you are introducing the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act of 2002 during this session to improve benefits for elderly women. While the provisions of H.R. 4069 are modest, the 120,000 older women who will become eligible for benefits or receive higher benefits are the women who are most likely to live in poverty—widows, disabled widows and divorced women.

Poverty among the elderly has greatly declined over the last two decades, but older women are particularly at risk. Today, nearly 60 percent of older women in America are single: 45.3 percent are widowed and 7 percent are divorced. In contrast, only 26 percent of elderly men are widowed or divorced.

We are heartened that the introduction of H.R. 4069 may be the first step toward enhancing Social Security benefits to ensure the long-term economic security of American women. We urge your colleagues to support this bill to improve Social Security benefits for older widows, disabled widows and divorced spouses.

Sincerely,

Cindy Housnell,
Executive Director,

WOMEN IMPACTING PUBLIC POLICY,

Hon. E. Clay Shaw, Jr.,
House of Representatives, Committee on Ways and Means, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Shaw: We are writing to inform you that the more than 250,000 members of Women Impacting Public Policy (WIPP) support H.R. 4069, The Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act of 2002.

H.R. 4069 addresses several key issues that have long been of major concern to WIPP members; increasing the unfair benefit limit on widows whose spouses both retire and die before the full retirement age; updates eligibility requirements for disabled widows to ensure consistency with earnings requirements in current law and eliminate the need less two-year wait for some divorced spouses to receive benefits.

WIPP member Niesha Wolfe, a CPA based in Clarksville, Tennessee, provided compelling testimony before your committee in February on these issues and others related to the unfair Social Security benefits women have been subject to for years.

WIPP, a national bi-partisan public policy organization, appreciates your efforts and fully supports H.R. 4069.

INDEPENDENT WOMEN’S FORUM,

Hon. E. Clay Shaw,
Chairman, House Ways and Means Committee, Subcommittee on Social Security, Rayburn House Office Building, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman Shaw:

The Independent Women’s Forum strongly believes that comprehensive reform to strengthen our Social Security system and to make safe the retirement of America’s working women and men.

In February, I had the opportunity to appear before you and the House Subcommittee on Social Security to affirm the need for overall reform and to discuss some current inequities in the system. I specifically pointed out that women are financially disadvantaged under the current Social Security system. Women who interrupt their careers for family obligations, women who earn more than their husbands, and widows of wage earners fall into these disadvantaged categories.

You are attempting to correct inequities toward women through the introduction of H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act of 2002. We commend you, Mr. Chairman, for your recognition of these and other problems and we hope that your leadership will show the way to a newly reformed and significantly strengthened Social Security system.

Sincerely,

Nancy Mitchell Potempa,
President.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Hon. Matsui. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

First of all, I would like to congratulate the gentleman from the State of Florida, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Social Security of the Committee on Ways and Means, for bringing forth this bill; and I appreciate the fact that he has taken the opportunity to do so. I think it is a step in the right direction.
Obviously, the bill before us today is a good piece of legislation. It will, in fact, increase benefits for 120,000 additional widows, basically widows in which the other spouse, the spouse that passed away, took early retirement. It deals with widows who have been disabled. It obviously deals with widows that were divorced in terms of shortening the time in which they may be able to collect benefits. So this is a good piece of legislation.

We do more; and I introduced a bill 2 weeks ago that would actually provide greater benefits. Instead of 120,000 widows, our bill would in fact cover and increase benefits for 4.7 million additional widows by guaranteeing these widows a 75 percent benefit of what they previously had when both spouses were alive.

Right now, under the Social Security Act, widows receive only about 50 to 65 percent of what they received when the other spouse was still alive. We all know from studies that when one spouse dies, even though the income goes down, the day-to-day fixed costs, like rent, like house payments, like food, remain very high. In fact, we estimate that the average cost is about 80 percent of what they expensed prior, when they were both living.

So when one spouse dies, it does not drop to 50 percent. It only drops down by 20 percent. So 80 percent of the expenditures still exist. Our bill would basically give every widow in America at least 75 percent of what both spouses had before one of the spouses passed away. So this is a guaranteed benefit. There is no question.

The bill that some would like to offer today as an amendment, as I said, would take care of 4.7 million widows instead of 120,000. Unfortunately, because of the way the situation has been set up, this being a suspension calendar, we cannot offer that amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I did offer it in subcommittee. It failed on a partisan vote. Five Democrats voted for it; seven Republicans voted against it. It was never taken to the full committee, so we could not bring it there for a vote; and now we are left without an opportunity to bring it again for a vote. It is unfortunate. The bill of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Shaw) does move us in the same token, I wish we would have had before one of the spouses passed away. It is once we move down the road to privatization after the November election, we are going to be cutting benefits. The gentleman’s bill will cost over the next 20 years $8 trillion in general fund and Social Security and Medicare system. We do not have that. We do not have even a trillion dollars in general fund money available. How are we going to come up with $8 trillion in general fund money? That being the case, there is no question. We are going to be cutting Social Security benefits. We cannot offer that amendment.

As a result of that, we need to take care of these widows today. We will not take care of them when we do Social Security reform if in fact we move as the President wants to move in the direction of privatization of Social Security. That will not take care of these widows. As a matter of fact, it will result in significant massive benefit cuts.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD letters in support of my legislation.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO PRESERVE SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE, Hon. ROBERT MATSUI,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Social Security, Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE MATSUI: On behalf of the millions of members and supporters of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, I wish to express our support for the provisions contained in your legislation. The Social Security Widow’s Benefits Guarantee Act.

We are pleased that your legislation would increase the current law for surviving spouses to 75 percent of the combined benefit received by two spouses when both were living. Under current law, widows are effectively limited to 50 percent of what the couple had been receiving jointly. This change would have a dramatic positive impact on benefits for as many as 5 million American who are overwhelmingly women. As you know, four out of ten widows rely on Social Security for over 90 percent of their income. Thank you for your leadership on this issue. We look forward to working with you to advance this legislation in the 107th Congress.

Cordially,
BARBARA KENNELLY,
President and CEO.

NWLC URGES SUPPORT FOR INCREASES IN WOMEN’S SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS
(Washington, D.C.) The National Women’s Law Center praised a bill introduced by Congressmen Clay Shaw and Robert Matsui with bipartisan support.

“Poverty among the elderly is overwhelming a women’s problem, and a majority of poor elderly women are widows. Increasing Social Security survivor benefits would significantly help this large and economically vulnerable group of women,” said Entmacher.

Your legislation will correct the inequalities that millions of Americans who have lost their spouses now face under the Social Security system. Nearly 5 million American widows and widowers currently live in poverty. This is a national scandal that must be corrected. By adjusting the Social Security benefit rates that widows and widowers will receive, your legislation will directly improve the quality of life for millions of older Americans.

The Alliance for Retired Americans stands ready to work with you so that this legislation can become law as quickly as possible.

Sincerely yours,
EDWARD F. COYLE,
Executive Director.

LEADING WOMEN’S GROUPS SUPPORT THE “WIDOW’S SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT GUARANTEE ACT OF 2002”
(Washington, DC, May 7, 2002).—The National Council of Women’s Organizations, the oldest and largest coalition of the nation’s 150 major women’s groups, announces its support for legislation to strengthen Social Security for widows. The important bill is being introduced today by Congressman Robert T. Matsui (D-CA), Ranking Member of the House Ways and Means Subcommittee. The Matsui bill will improve survivor’s benefits (most often for widows who outlive their husbands) by increasing benefits to 75 percent of what would be kept up during the month in which the spouse died. These provisions will help the thousands of elderly widows who have been living on less than half of their deceased spouse’s Social Security benefits. The bill will also treat the months the retired worker held or reduced because of the retirement to qualify for benefits on the basis of disability. It also treats the months the retired worker met the work test for purposes of adjusting the limitation on widows and widowers benefits. Finally, it waives the two-year duration of divorce requirements if worker remarries during that time. These provisions will help 120,000 people.

STATEMENT BY AFL–CIO PRESIDENT JOHN J. SWEENEY IN SUPPORT OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY WIDOW’S BENEFIT GUARANTEE ACT OF 2002

One out of every seven elderly widows in this country lives in poverty, in spite of Social Security. These are women who worked their whole lives supporting their families in paid and unpaid work, raising children and grandchildren, caring for loved ones. Shortchanging widows is not consistent with the fundamental purposes of Social Security, and it is high time we fix the problem.

We strongly support the Social Security Widow’s Benefit Guarantee Act introduced by Representative Matsui today. His bill would address the critical needs of these women. Specifically, it increases the widow benefits under Social Security to 75 percent of what a couple’s total benefit is before a husband dies, up to $1,000 per month. Under the bill, the widows get at least as much of the couple’s benefit and none get more than two-thirds of the combined benefit. Rep. Matsui’s bill addresses this shortfall in Social Security by increasing benefits for approximately 5 million elderly widows.

Congress could more than pay for these new protections by capping future income tax cuts for the highest income earners. For example, freezing the top federal income tax rate at 36.6 percent would be enough to provide increased benefits for widows. Under the terms of last year’s tax cut legislation, the top income tax rate was lowered from 39.6 percent and is scheduled to fall farther to 35 percent by 2006. This part of the Bush tax cut benefited only the wealthiest individuals, affecting just the top 0.6 percent of taxpayers. They make, on average, more than $1 million a year. That’s more than 133 times a poverty-level income for an elderly widow.

With Representative Matsui’s bill, Congress has a chance to get its values straight. American voters don’t want more tax cuts for millionaires as the Republican leadership in the House pushed through last month—and they don’t want politicians to gamble with their retirement security—such as the bill would do by draining trillions of dollars out of Social Security to pay for privatization. Congress should do the right thing, and support the Social Security Widow’s Benefit Guarantee Act.

Mr. Speaker, preserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have a copy of my bill. The gentleman has criticized my bill. The gentleman has been asked to give constructive comment to my bill. Now what we are talking about is not the bill before this committee, but when we start hearing the word privatization, the gentleman knows full well there are those in this House who will abuse the word privatization. Privatization is simply defined as taking something run by the government and turn it over to the private sector.

The gentleman from California knows full well that my Social Security reform bill leaves the Social Security system totally intact. We take not one dime out of Social Security trust fund or the payroll taxes.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say, so there is no misconception here, that the Social Security Administration under two Presidents, a Democrat and a Republican, estimate that by doing nothing–by doing absolutely nothing–which is the only bill that I have heard coming from the other side to save Social Security, is going to cost $27 trillion over 75 years. Whereas the Social Security Administration, assuming that we need money necessary to make up the shortfall in Social Security under my particular bill, that it will all be paid back and over that 75 years will create a $1 trillion surplus. Which does the gentleman want? It is time that we work together.

There are those in this body that absolutely shamelessly use the word privatization when we are not going to privatize Social Security. Mr. Speaker, as long as I am chairman of the Subcommittee on Social Security, it is not going to be privatized; but we are desperately looking for some assistance from other side of the aisle. We need constructive engagement.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and thank him for his leadership in bringing this bill to the floor today. I support my colleague the ranking member for supporting this bill. We recognize this is a first step, and it is a good first step.

I rise in support of H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act of 2002. This bill makes commonsense corrections to Social Security law that will benefit widows, disabled widows, and divorced spouses. Social Security has been one of our Nation’s greatest success stories, and particularly so for women. We make up roughly half of America’s population, yet they account for more than 60 percent of the Social Security beneficiaries. Three-quarters of the unmarried and widowed elderly women rely on Social Security for more than half of their income. This legislation will help. The annual cost-of-living adjustment often does not amount to a great deal of money per recipient. However, it is often a crucial sum for seniors trying to make ends meet in each of our congressional districts. Even if it helps one, that is great. This will help 120,000 plus. Social Security must be strengthened for the future. It must be done in a bipartisan fashion, and passage of legislation of shared concern like this bill is a very good place to start.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, the bill the gentleman has is a privatization bill. The gentleman can call it anything he wishes, but it is a privatization bill.

Dr. Peter Orszag, a professor at the University of California Berkeley, currently at the Brookings Institute, has studied the gentleman’s bill, the DeMint-Armey bill and the three proposals presented by the President through his commission; he said all of them are privatization bills.

What the bill of the gentleman from Florida does, it deals with arbitrage. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of improving Social Security benefits for women, all women in this country. That is one of the reasons we supported the bill today, because we were encouraged by the leadership today of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW). But we should be clear, this modest improvement in Social Security benefits for women should be considered nothing more than a downpayment of what we must do to help women who face very, very hard in and out of the home, in and out of the office, in and out of all of the workplaces of America, the chance to receive their fair share of retirement security.

Mr. Speaker, four out of every 10 women who are retired today rely on Social Security for 90 percent of all of their income. And 75 percent of all... women rely on Social Security for half of all of their income. Clearly Social Security is extremely important for women, more so than it is for men.

While we have done a tremendous job of decreasing poverty among our elderly, over the last 20 years or so, we have seen a decrease of some 29 percent of poverty within the senior ranks in our country to something around 8.5 percent today of our seniors in poverty. When we look at widows, we find that their poverty rates are twice as much for the widow in this country. We must do more.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I stand proudly to support the legislation of the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui), H.R. 4671, which would give women, widows, widowers their fair share within Social Security retirement benefits. What the Matsui bill does, which the Shaw bill does not do, it covers in a meaningful way Americans who deserve to have a meaningful opportunity in retirement, in community and security; 5 million people would be affected by the Matsui bill. We have about 120,000 women who would be helped by the Shaw bill. We should do it, but we have millions more who are out there waiting to receive their due. It is time for us to do this.

We cannot do retirement security on the cheap. We cannot continue to say that we will place Social Security first among all our priorities and not do it the right way. We cannot continue to say that we believe men and women should be able to retire in safety and security without doing it the right way. It is time for us to do this. We should pass this legislation. It is not enough. We should have had hearings on the Matsui legislation because, quite honestly, the American people deserve to know that we will protect our men and women in their retirement.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. Thurman).

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, first of all, let me say I do not know that anybody is not going to support this piece of legislation before us. What I do want to point out is this is a huge issue for a lot of people in and around this country. So often I have women who come to me because generally women live longer, who come to me and say my prescription drugs are going up. Everything is happening around me; and quite frankly, I cannot live on my Social Security alone. And I am not getting anything from my husband's Social Security.

The fact of the matter is, what concerns me most about this legislation today is there is going to be somebody who writes the story, and somebody is going to believe they are going to get something new or better than what they have gotten. The fact of the matter is, if you are seeing here are these are some very technical changes, changes that are not going to affect the same people that I think the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui) and others, including myself, have in fact sponsored. We could actually be helping about 5 million elderly widows instead of a small portion.

I might just say it is my understanding that, and is unusual, it would eliminate the 7-year deadline for the onset of the disability in order to be eligible for benefits as a disabled widow or widower. The proposal would allow divorced spouses benefits to be paid before the 2-year period has expired if the former spouse has remarried, and the proposal would limit the widow's actual reduction to the number of months the worker usually received in benefits.

That is not the 5 million elderly widows and widowers that need the help. That is a very small amount of folks in this country. I think that is the real debate that we need to be having here and hopefully will happen in this committee. We have two very reasonable Members, but we have not had the opportunity to have the Matsui bill be heard.

Mr. Speaker, we are seeing trends for women. The last 7 years of life, we live longer, we have personal health care needs, we are hearing in the committee about the overpricing of medicines, all of those things that they no longer can pay.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Sandlin).

Mr. SANDLIN. I thank my good friend and colleague from California for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act. This bill will help more than 120,000 Social Security beneficiaries. We wish it could be more, something like 4.7 million beneficiaries. It will provide enhanced Social Security benefits to widows' survivors, better benefits for certain widows, by permitting more disabled widows to qualify for disabled widow benefits, and by allowing certain divorced spouses to receive their benefits sooner.

As has been indicated by my good friend from California, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act addresses the challenges women face, especially widows, when it comes to Social Security. Women on average earn less than men throughout their lives and therefore have less to live on during their retirement years. The vast majority of Social Security beneficiaries are women. Women make up some 60 percent of Social Security recipients over the age of 65 and roughly 72 percent of all beneficiaries over the age of 85. Additionally, women lose an average of 14 years of Social Security earnings because of time out of the workforce spent to raise children or to care for an ailing parent or an ailing spouse. Further, women generally have a higher incidence of part-time employment and therefore have less of an opportunity to save for retirement. Privatizing Social Security is not the cornerstone of our Nation's retirement system. This is especially true for women. Without these benefits, nearly three-fifths of women over the age of 75 in this country would live in poverty. Privatizing Social Security, we, would undermine many of the benefits that women receive through the current system. A plan to privatize Social Security is a plan that will jeopardize women's Social Security benefits and will jeopardize the entire Social Security system.

Women live on average 6 to 8 years longer than men and therefore must make retirement savings stretch over longer periods of time. Women depend considerably upon Social Security's progressive, lifelong, inflation-indexed benefits. There is no plan to privatize Social Security that will safeguard account balances from erosion due to inflation. Privatizing Social Security would be a mistake for all Americans. Mr. Speaker, the Social Security system is at risk. More than 32 million Americans collect benefits from Social Security today.

Mr. Speaker, May is Older Americans Month. It is critically important for us to honor our older Americans and shore up Social Security.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I support the gentleman from Florida's legislation. I think it is a good piece of legislation. It will take care of 120,000 additional women and I think that is a step in the right direction. I only wish we had an opportunity to discuss this, and certainly with the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui) and others, as to the importance of this whole issue on disability and Social Security and widowers' benefits.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Sandlin).

Mr. SANDLIN. I thank my good friend and colleague from California for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act. This bill will help more than 120,000 Social Security beneficiaries. We wish it could be more, something like 4.7 million beneficiaries. It will provide enhanced Social Security benefits to widows' survivors, better benefits for certain widows, by permitting more disabled widows to qualify for disabled widow benefits, and by allowing certain election in terms of the whole issue of privatization. The real danger I see is that once we embark upon that direction we are not going to be able to take care of these 4.7 million widows that my bill would take care of because we are going to be cutting benefits. I do not think there is any question about that.

The President's bill, for example, has three alternatives. One of the alternatives would require $6 trillion of general fund moneys or cuts in benefits. The gentleman from Florida's bill is a riverboat gamble essentially.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Pelosi), the Democratic whip.

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and I thank him for his leadership on this very important issue, for calling to our attention the distinction between the bill before us today, which we will all support, and what we could really mean for widows in our country who are on Social Security.

Social Security is one of America's proudest achievements in social policy. No other program has brought so many people out of poverty, enabling millions to live with dignity. For millions of senior citizens, it is a lifeline. Unfortunately, the lifeline is severed for the elderly women who rely on it for their financial survival, and the concerns of women must be a priority in the on going discussion about how to strengthen the provisions of this bill, for example, has no opportunity to comprehensively address this need. However, the Republican leadership did not follow the regular committee process and now we have no opportunity to strengthen the provisions of this bill on the floor today.

Given what the Republican budget does to the Social Security surplus, the small steps forward being proposed today are even less adequate. Both parties promised that protecting Social Security would be the top priority. Yet the Republicans' budget breaks that promise by spending $1 trillion of the Social Security surplus over the next 5 years. My plan to preserve Social Security would cost another $1 trillion over the next decade.

Democrats have asked repeatedly for the opportunity to debate the Republican privatization plan and last month on this floor, it does not even seem like it has been last month, it seems like just a couple of weeks ago, every Democrat voted for a motion to say that the Republican proposal to make the tax cuts permanent could not proceed unless the Congressional Budget Office said that it would not affect the solvency of the Social Security Trust Fund. Every Democrat voted for that. Every Republican voted against it. The looming retirement of the baby boom generation means that we cannot irresponsibly push this issue aside for another day.

This debate, like all debates on Social Security, has a disproportionate impact on women, who live 6 to 8 years longer than men and constitute 60 percent of Social Security recipients. Many women continue to earn less than men and are less likely to have an employer-sponsored pension plan. Thus, the benefit structure of Social Security, which partially corrects disparities in income, is particularly important for women. Women are also more likely to work part-time and take time out of the workforce, 14 years on average, to raise their children and to care for aging parents or spouses. As a result, they have less time to save for retirement.

Social Security must be protected for the elderly women who rely on it for their financial survival, and the concerns of women must be a priority in the ongoing discussion about how to strengthen the provisions of this bill. I yield myself such time as I may consume. I will sum up by making one other observation. I see the gentleman from Florida has a pay-for in his legislation. His bill will cost $4 billion over the next 10 years. The interesting thing about the pay-for, however, is that it comes directly out of the Taxpayer Bill of Rights legislation in which he used the same pay-fors to pay for the revenue offsets in the Taxpayer Bill of Rights which passed in the sunset bill about the middle of April.

In addition to that, I understand the bill that is coming up tomorrow, the task force that we are using to come up with the offsets to pay for that as well. So it will be kind of interesting to see how they really use their pay-fors in order to actually make this bill fully funded.

I might just finally point out that our bill does not take any money out of the Social Security Trust Fund. It comes out of general revenues, the same general revenues that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have predicted would be available last year when they passed the first GOP stimulus bill, in which 16 of the largest low-taxed corporations in America would have gotten an immediate tax break of $7.4 billion basically that would have been retroactive to 16 years of the alternative minimum tax. Altogether it was $25 billion in tax reduction for major corporations in America that really do not need it, including $254 million to Enron and $1.4 billion to IBM. All of these would have received this break that would have taken our pay-for out of the same source that the gentleman would have given major tax cuts to.

I see he paid for his. On the other hand, it is coming from the taxpayers Bill of Rights or tomorrow's welfare reform package, so I find it somewhat inconsistent in terms of where his pay-for is actually going to come from. We support this bill. We wish we could move forward our bill in the form of an amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I would like to just comment briefly on the observation that the gentleman just made. There is an old saying that there are two things in life that are certain, one is death and the other is taxes. I think we can add to that the provision that bills are going to languish in the Senate and will not be taken up, so I would guess that these pay-fors are going to be used over and over again in this House until the Senate finally passes something, which the people really would like to see them do and like to see us work together to do these things.

I would also like to say that this particular bill in the pay-for is a budget function. It does not take any general revenue and put it into the Social Security system as the gentleman from California's bill does.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to at this time correct a figure that I gave the House earlier. I said that the cost of doing nothing was $27 trillion. That figure is actually $27 trillion over 75 years. When I look, and as I see and as I have heard and read from the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) and from the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui), they do not think that we have to do anything. They do not think we have to forward fund Social Security. Let me just run a couple of statistics by the House. I hate to take this time on this particular bill because it is peripheral to it, but in the bill of the gentleman from California keeps talking about in his bill are in my Social Security bill or my bill to save Social Security, I think it does have some justification to be discussed and particularly since my Social Security bill has been discussed at length as a privatization bill, which it is clearly not.

When Social Security first came online many, many years ago, there were 40 some workers per retiree. Now we are down to a little over three. Soon it will be a little over two. A pay-as-you-go system has served us well and as long as we had a lot of workers at the bottom and few retirees at the top, it was fine. It worked great.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt).
money that can bring down an entire economy.

So I say to my friend from California and other Members that think there is no need to do something, we are going to be faced with a dilemma and we had better start facing it. Do we want to cut benefits by one-third? I doubt it. But that is what we are going to have to do if you are going to maintain benefits and keep it as a pay-as-you-go system.

Do we want to increase payroll taxes by 50 percent? I am sure we do not. But that is what we are going to have to do if you are going to maintain benefits and keep it as a pay-as-you-go system.

Or do we want to rack up a deficit of $25 trillion over the next 75 years? I am not making these figures up. I do not come to this floor unprepared with these figures. It is a question of what the administration has said through the Social Security System, now through a Democrat and a Republican administration.

So I think it is time that we quit the talk about privatization, quit the talk about raiding the trust fund, all of these sorts of things. It is pure nonsense, because we do not raid the trust fund, because there is no money in the trust fund. There are only Treasury Bills, and you cannot raid the Treasury Bills.

I would also say that over the years when the Democrats controlled this House and the Senate and spending was very much the red line, that the Democrats did not raid the Social Security trust fund, because the system just does not work that way. But those are great words to really worry our seniors.

The seniors of this country have paid into a Social Security system as they know it today, and this Congress or no Congress should touch it. We should maintain the system and the integrity of the system as exactly what they have paid into.

However, it is time for us to begin to think ahead. If we do not want to raise payroll taxes, if we do not want to cut benefits, then we had better start planning ahead for the next generation, instead of just the next election. All we have heard about from the other side is the next election. Let us be responsible legislators and get together and save Social Security. Let us be concerned about our grandkids and our kids.

They are the most important. I think about every one of my 13 grandchildren at every time I think about where are we going to leave this country and this great retirement system. These little bitty kids are going to be seniors some day and they are going to be facing the possibility of poverty. They are going to pay into a Social Security system all of their working years.

They deserve better, Mr. Speaker. They deserve a responsible Congress that will go ahead and put all this rhetoric aside and reform Social Security. Unfortunately, I do not think we are going to see that until after this election, because there are some in this House that would rather have the issue that might change the majority of this House rather than saving Social Security for their kids. That is a sad commentary, Mr. Speaker.

With that, I would like to end on a positive note and urge that all of the Members of this body vote ‘yes’ on H.R. 4069 which is before this House. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER pro tempore

Mr. LAHOOD. The Chair would remind all Members that it is not in order to cast reflections on the Senate.

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, but it is with my extreme disappointment.

Mr. Speaker, five million widows currently experience a drastic reduction of benefits of up to 50 percent after their spouse dies. The poverty rate remains a staggering 15 percent for widows. That is simply wrong. America’s seniors should not have to be confronted with a dramatic reduction in their Social Security income at the same time their beloved spouse dies. It should not happen.

That is why we are debating legislation today that would guarantee Social Security benefits for elderly widows. But we are not.

Instead, we are debating a totally inadequate Republican proposal that would cover only 125,000 widows. The Republicans would leave over four million widows—four out of ten of whom depend on Social Security for 90 percent of their income—with severely cut benefits.

But it is a small step in the right direction. Covering 125,000 widows is better than covering none, which is our only other alternative and which is why I will support this weak bill. But let’s not fool ourselves into thinking it is enough. We could do more. Democrats want to do more.

Our substitute, which was not allowed to be considered today, would have helped approximately 4.5 million elderly people—one million of whom now live below the poverty level. It would have addressed this problem in a meaningful way that helps our seniors out of poverty.

Instead, the Republicans are trying to fool the electorate into think they care about this issue by offering something, anything. The fact is that the Republicans find no problem with denying over four million widows Social Security benefits while they look forward to spending $8 trillion to privatize the system.

Mr. Speaker, we should be doing more. Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the legislation we are considering today. H.R. 4069, the Social Security Benefit Enhancements for Women Act of 2002.

This bill makes a modest attempt to address current deficiencies in the manner that Social Security compensates some widows. The facts are that women are more likely than men to be dependent on Social Security for their retirement. Because of the kind of jobs they are more likely to hold, the responsibilities they face with children and the work interruptions that result from family commitments, women tend to have lower earnings than men, are less likely to have pensions and therefore are more reliant upon Social Security for their retirement.

The bill we are considering today rectifies a few inequities in the system that are faced by certain widows whose benefits are unfairly reduced by the rigidity of the system. However, if the Majority wants to truly begin to address the failings in the system for widows we should be considering Representative MATSU’s more comprehensive legislation today—H.R. 4671, the Social Security Widow’s Benefit Guarantee Act.

Representative Matsu’s bill, which I proudly cosponsored, would go much further than the bill on the floor and grant real retirement security to widows. More than one million widows would be guaranteed a benefit equal to 75 percent of the combined benefits the couple had been receiving prior to the death of the spouse.

Guaranteeing a livable retirement benefit for widows is critical because they tend to be overwhelmingly dependent on Social Security.

As a group, 75 percent of elderly non-married women, including widows, rely on Social Security for half of their income.

In the short-term these women deserve the guarantee Mr. Matsu’s bill would provide. In the long-term, we need to make sure benefits are available as promised and not risk the future of the system by privatizing it.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Shaw) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4069, as amended.

The question was taken. The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, on that, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.
As you can see from this picture, the abaya and head scarf cover the entire body from head to toe. Our female servicewomen stationed in Saudi Arabia are wearing this and having the most radical of Islamic beliefs imposed upon them, even though the Department of State does not require any of its employees to wear the abaya. It does not require its employees to wear abayas while on duty precisely because they are representing the United States of America. Not even the spouses and dependents of U.S. Department staff wear the abaya, nor did Mrs. Cheney or former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright during their visits to Saudi Arabia.

The Government of Saudi Arabia itself does not require non-Muslim women to wear abayas. My colleagues may be interested to know that even General Schwarzkopf did not issue any mandate requiring the servicewomen to wear abayas during the Gulf War. Service members are not required to wear the abaya, grow beards or embrace any Islamic religious beliefs in this way, so neither should women. Forcing our female service troops to wear the abaya has a negative impact on our recruitment and diminishes morale, unit cohesion and the chain of command headed by female servicemembers. Most of all, this practice is completely unnecessary.

Mr. Speaker, this is about leadership. This bill we consider today will prohibit the wearing of the abaya garment by female service members. Most of the Islamic world recognizes women make important contributions to their societies. That is why America must affirmatively reject subjecting our military servicewomen to this discrimination and that is why I have fought to bring this bill to the floor today.

I urge my colleagues to join me, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HOSTETTLER), and the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON) in passing this legislation and ending the demeaning practice of making only American servicewomen wear the abaya.
Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Kansas for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to join the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. LANGEVIN) and the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. Wilson) in sponsoring H.R. 4714, a bill to require the Secretary of Defense to end the mandatory regulation of the land and naval forces involved in operations in the Persian Gulf region to require the Secretary of Defense to cease the mandatory regulation of the land and naval forces involved in operations in the Persian Gulf region.

It is those kinds of policies that we should not have to remind anyone in this Congress about the American military. It is those kinds of policies that we should not have to remind anyone in this Congress about the American military. It is those kinds of policies that we should not have to remind anyone in this Congress about the American military. It is those kinds of policies that we should not have to remind anyone in this Congress about the American military.

This important legislation informs our allies that while our presence in their country is advantageous to their security, we are not to defend their values, but the values of America. Some of those are women who have volunteered to put their lives on the line for our liberties.

The time is now for the Congress to take control of this issue, given our responsibilities under Article I, section 8 of our Constitution; and H.R. 4714 does just that. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4714. Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKEFFINGTON), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. Speaker, the United States Constitution requires the Congress to raise and maintain the military and also to establish the rules and regulations thereof. Through my years in Congress, I have had the opportunity to do both and particularly, in writing rules and regulations insofar as military education is concerned and insofar as the structure of the military is concerned, which resulted in what we now call Gold Star Mother's Day.

Mr. Speaker, this is the right thing to do. The Americans are in Saudi Arabia, have been in Saudi Arabia, were there to make sure that Saddam Hussein's troops did not come down south and into that country. They are there for the protection of that country. This is a very appropriate thing to do, to not make the American women of the military abide by anything but the American rules.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. Wilson), a member of the Committee on Armed Services.
The abaya is traditional Muslim garb. It is as inappropriate for the Department of Defense to order servicewomen to wear traditional Muslim garb, most of whom are Christians or Jewish who do not share the faith of women who choose to wear that dress, as it is to inappropriately compel service members to wear religious clothing, pure and simple, and it is likewise inappropriate to strongly encourage that they do so.

This legislation is very clear in its language. It prohibits formally or informally compelling service members to wear the abaya. That covers all of the synonyms for “strongly encouraged” so that they could not just change it to “strongly recommend” or “highly recommend.” They are prohibited from informally or formally compelling them. There is only one exception, and that exception is force protection. This House has rejected the DOD’s spurious arguments about force protection, and that is exactly what they are.

The only exception is very narrowly crafted, and that is if it is essential to the conduct of the military mission and, in sitting on this floor with my colleagues talking about what that might mean, if there was a serious civil unrest in Saudi Arabia and we had soldiers who are downtown in a building and we needed to extract them without local people knowing who they were, or for some reason for a special forces operation or to move people around, we may need to hide who our people really are. Those are the essential kinds of things that might justify such an order. Nothing else does.

I commend the gentleman from Rhode Island and the gentleman from Indiana for their leadership. This House will make a statement tonight that we will not tolerate this kind of policy from the Department of Defense, and we are strong enough and united enough to stand up for them.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

(Mrs. MALONEY of New York asked and was granted permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I thank him for his leadership on this important issue, and the gentleman from New Mexico also, who served in the military and who brings a great deal of knowledge and understanding to this issue. I thank her for her very impassioned statement before Congress today.

Our country is at war. Our troops overseas are risking their lives to protect our lives and our rights as United States citizens. Unfortunately, in Saudi Arabia we have seen servicewomen who have lost their rights to wear their military-issued uniforms as they are protecting our rights. Instead, while fighting to protect our freedom and democracy, these women are being encouraged and sometimes required to wear and adopt a dress code that is not familiar with it, it is a long black robe that covers a woman from head to toe.

Requiring women to wear this garment discriminates against them and violates their religious freedom by forcing them to adopt another faith’s garb. It does not increase the safety and security of U.S. interests. Instead, it works against them. By discriminating against women in the military, we undermine the authority of officers stationed in Saudi Arabia and diminish morale among servicewomen.

Last December, Lieutenant Colonel Martha McSally, the highest ranking female fighter pilot in the Air Force, brought this issue to the attention of senior commanders for its practice of requiring servicewomen stationed in Saudi Arabia to wear this black garment, ride in the back seat of cars, and be accompanied by a man when off base. In response to her courageous suit, I sent a letter to Secretary Rumsfeld, along with 18 other Members of Congress, urging him to revoke this discriminatory policy against women serving in Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Speaker, I will include for the RECORD the referenced letter.

Mr. Speaker, let me be clear. The Government of Saudi Arabia does not require non-Muslim women to wear abayas and the State Department does not require them or even encourage any of its employees to wear this garment. Our Armed Forces should show the same amount of respect for its employees.

The bottom line is that our servicewomen are fulfilling a very difficult job in Saudi Arabia, and they deserve to be treated with respect. They must not be forced into a subservient position.

Mr. Speaker, U.S. servicewomen are valued, respected, capable members of our Armed Forces. It is the duty of the United States Government and its military to demonstrate to other nations how much we value our servicewomen serving overseas.

The United States must set a standard for equality around the world and stop this discriminatory treatment against American servicewomen. I congratulate my colleagues on the committee for putting forward this bill. I support it strongly. It is an important statement in support of our women serving overseas in Saudi Arabia and other countries.

Hon. Donald H. Rumsfeld, Secretary of Defense, Office of the Secretary, Pentagon, Washington, DC.

Dear Secretary Rumsfeld: We are very troubled to learn that American servicewomen stationed in Saudi Arabia are required to wear abayas and ride in the back seat of cars when off base, and that they cannot go off base unless accompanied by a man. We are conscious of the need to maintain good relations with Saudi Arabia, particularly during this time of war, but we also understand that servicewomen are the only federal employees stationed in Saudi Arabia who are obliged to follow the abaya mandate.

Our servicewomen are fulfilling a very difficult job in Saudi Arabia, and they deserve to be treated with respect. By requiring servicewomen to adopt a subservient position, the military is sending the very clear signal that they are not deserving of equal respect.

This has a particularly significant impact on officers, who are being asked to subserviently carry out orders under their command. It is very difficult for those officers to maintain the same degree of authority if they must adopt a subservient role off base.

We urge you to revoke this policy and to treat servicewomen with the same dignity afforded other federal employees in Saudi Arabia.

Sincerely,

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as a result of the concerted efforts of several members of the Committee on Armed Services, this bill expresses the views of many Members of Congress regarding the wearing of the abaya by our military personnel serving in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Moreover, it affords the commanders the latitude necessary to educate service members about the threats and allows such force protection measures as may be dictated by a unit’s mission and location. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to just take a minute to thank the gentlemans from New Mexico (Mr. HOSTETTLER) once again for their leadership and determination. I think that this bill sends a very clear message about how we expect our soldiers to be treated overseas and in this country.

Mrs. WILSON of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4714, a bill to prohibit members of the Armed Forces in Saudi Arabia from being required or formally or informally compelled to wear the abaya garment. I commend the views of many Members of Congress regarding the wearing of the abaya by our military personnel serving in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

Mr. HOSTETTLER of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4714, a bill to prohibit members of the Armed Forces in Saudi Arabia from being required or formally or informally compelled to wear the abaya garment. I commend the views of many Members of Congress regarding the wearing of the abaya by our military personnel serving in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

This legislation will end a Defense Department policy affecting servicewomen stationed in Saudi Arabia.

It is a sad commentary that this legislation is needed at all. This policy should not have been implemented in the first place; it should have been changed rapidly when it was brought to the attention of senior commanders and the Pentagon; and the revised policy is still flawed.
This bill would have been part of the Defense Authorization bill this year, and it may be incorporated into that legislation in conference committee. It is my hope that the Defense Department won’t be forced to do the right thing.

Our vote today is to send a message to the Defense Department loud and clear: your policy requiring or strongly encouraging servicewomen stationed in Saudi Arabia to wear the abaya is without merit and is offensive to the American people. You need to change it, or the threat will change it for you.

Mr. Speaker, those who choose to serve our country, regardless of gender, should be treated with respect by their commanders. There’s a lot of talk about loyalty from the top down. But loyalty from the top down is more important, and more rare. Since the beginning of the Republic, Americans, both men and women have done their duty to secure the liberties that we enjoy. Women make first-class soldiers and should not be treated like second-class citizens.

But this legislation goes far beyond issues of class and respect for women in the service. The abaya is a garment that covers a Muslim woman from head to toe with only the eyes showing. It is associated by others and by servicemen with the Muslim religion. Forcing American servicewomen—most of whom are Christian or Jewish—to wear traditional Muslim dress is deeply offensive to their religious beliefs and possibly unconstitutional.

But the Defense Department just doesn’t seem to get it. They would never force American servicemen to wear a yarmulke in Israel or a crucifix in order to avoid harassment or be sensitive to the local culture. Indeed, the same regulation that ordered women to wear the abaya prohibits servicemen from wearing local Saudi dress for men.

The Defense Department has never seemed to be troubled by this double standard that directs servicemen to dress conservatively while prohibiting the wear of local dress, and presumes that young servicemen could not or would not follow similar command guidelines and ordered them to wear the abaya.

The Department’s modified policy that “strongly encourages” women to wear the abaya only seems to have been written in the military. When an officer “strongly encourages” any young troop to do something, that is not optional. It means you darn well better do it if you value your career in the military. It means if you don’t do it, you risk being branded as an attitude problem, a troublemaker, someone deserving extra (and certainly unwanted) attention that is likely to make your life a whole lot harder and possibly downright miserable. Every veteran in this body knows what I’m saying is true.

DOJ’s strong policy of “strongly encouraging” wearing the abaya was clever as a public relations move, but not included in this bill.

What we have included is a much narrower exception that says the commander of the United States Central Command may require the wear of the abaya in “specific circumstances” that “constitute an operational requirement essential for the conduct of the military mission.”

First, the Commander of USCENTCOM may not delegate this authority to anyone else below him. Second, he may not do so based on any general need for “force protection” or “safety.” The only time he may do so is if it is an operational requirement to complete the military mission.

In crafting this exception, we had in mind very unusual circumstances like special operations requiring concealment, an unusual need to move people in-country without the knowledge or of the edge of the conflict so as to avoid widespread civil unrest to extract service members from a dangerous situation without detection or provocation.

Mr. Speaker, I hope this House will be heard today and that we send a resounding message to the Department of Defense. Your policy on wearing the abaya is inconsistent with our values as a nation and we insist that it be changed.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, while I support this legislation, I would like to make a few observations. It is unfortunate that we are in a position where we must act on such legislation. Because of our unwise policy of foreign interventionism, which has placed thousands of American service members in the Middle East including in Saudi Arabia, we are placed in a no-win situation. Either we disregard and mock the customs and culture of Saudi Arabia by refusing to adhere to dress codes that they have adopted, or we subject American women to a dress code that is offensive to our own women and customs. This is the choice they are making for this country. What a choice, Mr. Speaker?

I am voting for this bill because I believe, on the whole, that it is preferable to place containment on our own country than those whose homeland is being defended by American troops. Young Americans join the all-volunteer military as an act of patriotism in hopes of defending their country and their constitution. We in Congress must honor that sacrifice. It is bad enough that our troops are sent around the world to defend foreign soil. Asking them to comply with foreign customs which violate basic American beliefs about freedom in order to appease the very governments our troops are defending adds insult to injury. I do not believe a single female member of the armed forces enlisted “choice” of wearing an abaya while defending the House of Saud or that one single male member of the armed forces enlisted in order to force his female colleagues to wear an abaya.

The fact remains that we continue to maintain a presence in a place where they are not needed. It is the consequences of this dangerous policy that concern me most. Isn’t it time to return to a more sound foreign policy, one that respects the culture of others by not intervening in their affairs? Is it not time to bring American troops and American citizens back to America, rather than continuing to station them in far-off lands where the protection they offer is not needed?

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this bill to prohibit the Department of Defense from requiring female service members to wear the ‘abaya’, a long black robe covering the body from head to toe, worn with a head scarf and often a veil.

Currently, the DOD requires U.S. service-women to wear the abaya when they leave bases in Saudi Arabia. DOD policy also mandates that servicewomen cannot sit in the front seat of a vehicle when traveling off-base. I am outraged that DOD would not only tolerate, but perpetuate, this type of discriminatory treatment against American servicewomen. Our women in uniform are performing their duty to protect the interests of both the United States and of the host country. It is unfortunate that the Saudi government has so little appreciation for the contributions of U.S. servicewomen as to allow harassment of them to take place at the hands of the Saudi religious police. But it is inconceivable that our own government should uphold this institutionalized disrespect of women by requiring that Americans conform to these standards.

U.S. servicewomen are valued, respected, capable members of our armed forces. It is the duty of the U.S. government, including its military, to demonstrate to other nations the high regard in which we hold them.

It is important to note that official Saudi policy does not require non-Muslim women to wear the abaya. Similarly, the U.S. State Department allows its female employees to use their own best judgment when deciding how to dress when they go outside the embassy. The Department of Defense should show the same degree of trust in its employees, and end this backward order regarding the abaya. This legislation would do just that, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas, Mr. Speaker, I have further suspensions, and I yield the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER pro tempore. The Sports Agent Responsibility and Trust Act provides a separate Federal remedy for States Attorneys General to prosecute sports agents who attempt to exploit student athletes across State lines. I urge my colleagues to join the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. GORDON) and me as we try to protect intercollegiate athletics from unsavory sports agents.

CUBA'S DEVELOPMENT OF BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Sports Agent Responsibility Act provides a separate Federal remedy for States Attorneys General to prosecute sports agents who attempt to exploit student athletes across State lines. I urge my colleagues to join the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. GORDON) and me as we try to protect intercollegiate athletics from unsavory sports agents.
In fact, Mr. Speaker, Fidel Castro shows only his open hostility to the United States by pursuing biological warfare research. He has what are considered to be the most sophisticated biomedical capabilities in Latin America. Cuba stands on one of theGeneva Convention"s very poor, who plays a significant role in drug and biotechnology activities.

Mr. Speaker, there is evidence that Cuba is experimenting with anthrax, as well as a number of other deadly pathogens. I believe that Cuba is even capable of making genetically modified germ weapons that are able to defeat vaccines and antibiotics.

Unfortunately, the possibility that a rogue nation only 90 miles from our shores is producing biological weapons is not the worst of our problems. Mr. Speaker, intelligence officials have evidence that Cuba may be selling its bioterrorist knowledge to other nations hostile to the United States.

Last year, Castro visited Iran, Syria and Libya, three nations that occupy spots on the State Department's terrorism list, along with Cuba and three nations that are currently attempting to develop weapons of mass destruction. During his visit to Tehran University, Castro stated that together Iran and Cuba could "bring America to its knees." An unnerving thought when we consider that Cuba is closer to the United States mainland than Washington, D.C., is to my home in New Jersey.

Mr. Speaker, it is time that we put the debate about Cuba and the Castro regime into the proper perspective for the American people. Too often people are only willing to see the economic benefit of trade with Cuba and lifting the trade embargoes. They do not understand that by lifting the embargo, without agreements by Castro to stop biological weapons production and without commitments on human rights or civil liberties, Cuba is not the country we are giving Castro exactly what he wants.

Mr. Speaker, it is time we see Castro and his regime for what they really are, a continued threat to the security of the United States.

RURAL TANF

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow this body will take up the reauthorization of the 1996 welfare law. Much has been said about this bill and no debate will go on for some time. However, remarkably little has been said about one aspect of it, the rural aspect.

It will not be surprising to Members of this body that there is a difference between urban and rural areas. In fact, let me note that 20 of the 250 poorest counties in the United States in 1998 were nonmetropolitan, and that persists today.

One-half of rural American children and female heads of household live in poverty. Rural workers are nearly twice as likely to earn the minimum wage and 40 percent less likely to move out of low wage, entry level positions. Six out of 10 rural people in poverty do not own a car. The rural urban earning gap persists and actually has widened through the latter part of the 1990s. There is a gap of 73 to 70 percent.

Mr. Speaker, at making work an essential part of the welfare effort, and I believe that work should be, in fact I think work is very honorable and we should encourage everyone to find the satisfaction as well as the responsibility of doing something that is valuable to themselves but also will have income, but the reality is this: Labor markets in rural areas are often very limited. There is a high unemployment rate in rural areas because the opportunities are gone down.

The third exemption from time limits for counties with high rates of unemployment failed, let me say that again, failed to address the problem adequately in more rural areas. Official unemployment statistics underestimate the true rate of unemployment. There are many discouraged workers with few opportunities that do not even bother to go to the unemployment office or go seeking assistance because they know there are so little job opportunities. They know jobs do not exist, and therefore they do not even bother.

So if we use the known statistical data, that in itself is false, but also what we do know is that there is a lack of opportunity, and if indeed we wanted to find how States were responding to that, I have just submitted an amendment to the Rules Committee they ought to have to require each State governor to say to the Secretary in their people's home, can you ensure there are job opportunities if or there are work opportunities, training opportunities, are there day care opportunities, transportation. All of that means new resources. So if we are not making meaningful progress in adding any new resources to rural areas, we are putting the governors in the States throughout the United States, putting them in a decisive difficult fiscal position, and we should ask them how they propose to meet that obligation that they are given.

So, in fact, in some rural areas the true unemployment is double. For example, the official unemployment rate of Indian reservations often are 20 and 30 percent. However, according to the Department of Labor, it is sometimes higher than that, and yet we are requiring that individuals in those communities will have the same rate for those living in poverty.

Therefore, provisions of the legislation that are based on the official statistical data of unemployment is a false premise in order to give the governors the response to make a way. We need to find other ways of speaking to that.

So there needs to be a recognition, Mr. Speaker, that child care that is so essential for mothers to leave their children and go to work, that is not available in rural areas. Unless we are willing to provide for education and training, transportation, day care, the rural community will not be able to respond to the citizens who need that help, and the current proposal that is before this House has nothing in there. In fact, I will be asking for unanimous consent that we add that provision to the bill on the floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CUMMINGS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.

RAISING THE DEBT LIMIT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, tonight we want to come again before the body and talk about raising the debt limit.

It is fascinating, having been around this place for now almost 23 years, to hear and to see how various Members of this body react to certain situations that come up, depending on whether they are in the minority or in the majority. And there is no question that we have a serious problem facing our Nation coming up beginning this week, and then about June 28 it becomes of crisis proportion. Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill has formally requested Congress to increase the statutory limit on the publicly held debt by $750 billion, and that is billion with a "b," up from the current level of $5.95 trillion to $6.7 trillion.
Just today, Secretary O’Neill wrote the Congress again telling us that he will use up our borrowing authority by the end of this week and that we will have to begin juggling with the books in order to avoid a default, and by the end of June, at the latest, he will run out of the $500 billion borrowing authority he will get it, but with conditions.

Last week, the Congressional Budget Office issued a report indicating that revenues are coming in much lower than expected and the deficit will be much higher than anyone projected the earlier this year. It is likely that we will borrow the entire Social Security trust fund and then some and still have a deficit of over $150 billion this year.

The need for an increase in the debt limit of the magnitude requested by the administration cannot be explained by the economy and cost of the war. The administration projects that under the President’s budget policies the national debt will be roughly $2.75 trillion more debt than was projected at the beginning of the year, before the President submitted his initial budget proposal in January. Last August, the administration indicated that it expected that the debt limit would have to be increased in 2003, 5 years earlier than it projected when the budget was submitted. Well, a year ago, the administration indicated that we would need to raise the debt limit for 7 years and actually claimed that there was a danger that the government would actually pay off the debt held by the public too quickly.

The Blue Dogs warned about the danger of making long-term commitments for tax cuts or new spending programs based on projected surpluses and proposed setting aside half of the on-budget surplus for a cushion to protect against unforeseen changes. In fact, we supported a budget here about a year ago that would have been much more conservative than the budget that was passed and signed into law; but we, being in the minority, lost.

It is interesting when one listens to the leadership of this body, and here let me give a little quote. When President Clinton asked for a new bill to increase the debt limit, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARMED), now the majority leader of this body, said: “He will get it, but with conditions.” That was January 23, 1996. The same majority leader of this body, responding on April 9, called the debate over raising the debt limit “an academic question” and described the whole idea of a debt ceiling as “political.” He said, “My recommendation is to take the President’s number and move it. Whatever number that is, I don’t care.” On January 23, 1996, the majority leader said, “House Republicans insist that any increase in the debt limit must be tied to substantial concessions by the White House in discussions of the Federal budget.” On April 10, 2002, the same majority leader of this body said, “Congress and the House of Representatives should quickly approve President Bush’s request for a $750 billion increase in the on’s borrowing authority.”

Now, I agreed with Majority Leader Armenty 6 years ago when there was a Democrat in the White House that was not putting forward a plan that would bring us into balance as quickly as we needed to. I agreed with the majority leader then, but I disagree with him tonight; and I disagree with the leadership of this body in refusing to put forward a plan to get us back on a balanced budget.

That is what the Blue Dogs wrote the Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), last Friday. The leadership of our Blue Dogs sent a letter to Speaker Hastert in good faith to work with our colleagues on the other side of the aisle to put together a blueprint, a new budget, if you please, that would get us back on a path of balancing our budget and getting out of the Social Security crisis.

Now, I do not know why the leadership of this House has suddenly taken such a turn that we have seen taken over the last several years in which very seldom are ideas from this side of the aisle ever taken into serious consideration. Just last Thursday, we had the defense authorization bill on this floor, supported tremendously in a bipartisan way, as they always are. But we had a situation there that I do not believe we are going to have in fiscal year 2003, which Members on this side of the aisle had amendments but were denied the opportunity to have their amendment taken up and voted on on the floor of the House.

My colleague who will join me in just a moment, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), had a couple of not unreasonable amendments. He felt very strongly that this body, the Congress, and the House of Representatives had a responsibility to take a position in the Congress come back, the new Congress come back, the new Congress to bring that subject up and talk about it. I hope that changes also.

Tonight we just want to again renew our call to the House, the Blue Dogs majority of this body that before we increase our debt ceiling, let us take another look at the budget plan that we are operating under. If my colleagues on the other side want votes on our side, we have already said we will give those votes to increase the debt ceiling, but not $750 billion with a blank check.

We are perfectly willing to give an increase in the debt ceiling that will get us to September 30 of this year. Let us put it on the calendar, in a bicameral way, Social Security reform, it pains me quite a bit to see that we cannot even bring that subject up and talk about it.

What the gentleman was saying is, this body, the House of Representatives, has been the envy of most of the rest of the world since our very creation, in which individuals have the right and the opportunity to bring up their ideas and have them discussed on the floor of the House and voted upon. What is so unusual about that and what is it that seems now that in most cases we do not have the kind of committee hearings, we do not have a rule that gives us the kind of opportunity to express themselves on this floor?

Well, tonight, we take this hour to talk about our willingness on this side of the aisle to work with our colleagues on the other side that are interested, in restoring fiscal sovereignty, fiscal strength to the budget of the United States of America. We say this and we are prepared to offer some suggestions. In fact, it is interesting, there are very few of these suggestions that are new. They have all been tried. It matters not which side of the aisle. So this is what we want to talk about tonight.

We would like to see, before we vote to increase how much money our country will be borrowing, we would like to see a new plan, because the current plan is now telling us that we will have deficits as far as the eye can see. And as one Member who has spent a good part of the last 6 years trying to work in a bipartisan way, in a bicameral way, on Social Security reform, it pains me quite a bit to see that we cannot even bring that subject up and talk about it.

I hope that changes also.
the unforeseen war on terrorism and economic downturn have had an impact on the budget in the short term, we do not believe that these events should be used to justify a return to chronic, long-term deficits or hide a $750 billion increase in the debt ceiling.

The leadership of this body has indicated that they plan to shift language into the supplemental appropriation bill that will allow them to hide an increase in the debt limit in an omnibus conference report without any debate or vote. We do not believe that we should use a spending bill to fight the war on terrorism to hide or justify a long-term $750 billion increase in the debt ceiling absent a plan to improve our long-term fiscal position.

Members on the other side were very willing to stand up and take credit when we were passing legislation that put us into the situation we face today and made an increase in the debt limit necessary. They should be willing to stand up and be counted now that it has come time to pay the bills by raising the debt limit.

We need a plan. Before Congress votes to raise the debt ceiling by $750 billion, the President must work with Congressional leaders to establish a fiscal agenda in order, just as a family facing financial problems must work with a bank to establish a financial plan in order to get approval to refinance their debts. We will not vote to approve an increase in the debt limit to allow the government to continue on the current course of deficits as far as the eye can see.

Let me quote another leader of our House, my fellow colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), when he said, ‘We said from the beginning of this Congress that we want to negotiate with the President. But we cannot negotiate with a President that does not want to balance the budget. We do not want to negotiate over whether to balance the budget or not, we want to see a balanced budget. We want to see that balances by CBO, which he called for. We will negotiate with him in the parameters of a balanced budget and negotiate over the priorities within that balanced budget. But if the President cannot submit one, how do we negotiate apples with oranges? You know, the saying goes, if at first you do not succeed try, try again.’

Here again, this is one Member that agreed with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) back when he was talking to a different President. We agree tonight. And I do not believe that we should have a confrontation with this White House over this matter. I think the confrontation is right here within the House of Representatives. And that is why the Blue Dogs are offering again, the willingness to work with our friends on the other side of the aisle to come up with a new budget plan that does get us back into balance.

Mr. Speaker, with those opening remarks I turn to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) and yield to him to continue this discussion.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I am sure the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) will note that in the 6 years that our Republican colleagues in the House, despite the talk of desiring a balanced budget, they have scheduled but once a vote on a balanced budget amendment. I regret to say they are not as serious about a balanced budget as they promised the American people. And then again, they make a lot of promises that they do not keep.

I remember this one in particular. I remember flying up from my district in 1995 around Christmas when there was a government shutdown going on. The children of folks who had a mom or dad in a veterans’ hospital were concerned. People in the shipping business wanted to know if the channels were going to get open. And there were a lot of concerns about shutting down the government.

One of the ways that the Republican leadership tried to mislead the American public that everything was fine, they ran this ad. This is Haley Barbour, the former head of the Republican National Party, a fellow Mississippian. It starts off, heard the one about the Republicans cutting Medicare, and he is holding a check for a million dollars, your name here.

It says, ‘The fact is the Republicans are increasing spending by more than half. I am Haley Barbour, and I am so sure of that fact that I am willing to give you this check for a million bucks if you can prove me wrong. Sounds simple, right?’

So here is the challenge. Here is why you have no chance for the million dollars, and it is a form to be filled out. It says, ‘The Republican National Committee will present a cashier’s check for $1 million to the first American who can prove the statement is false: In November, 1995, U.S. House and Senate passed a balanced budget bill. It increases total Federal spending on Medicare by more than 50 percent from 1995 to 2002 pursuant to the Congressional Budget Office standards.’

Responses must be postmarked by December 20, 1995.

I guess I am one budget wonk. I do follow these things, and I knew from the beginning that that ad was a lie. You see, the budget that passed in 1995 was projected to be $200 billion in deficits; and let us remember, we are not talking a small amount of money. A lot of Americans pay $1 a month; and the President was saying that he did not keep the money, so I am going to give it to the University of Southern Mississippi to train people to be better mathematicians than you are. That was in December of 1995.

At the time Mr. Barbour said this, our Nation was $4.973 trillion in debt, but he promised the American people to have passed a balanced budget bill. At the end of that year, their budget added $250 billion to the deficit. A year later, $190 billion more. A year later, $113 billion more. A year later, $146 billion more; all of the way up to year 2000, another $20 billion.

What particularly irks me is after answering Mr. Barbour’s challenge, and after all the other folks in the country did so, the Republican National Committee, instead of saying gee, we misled you or maybe admitting they made a mistake, they sued us. I had to hire a lawyer to defend myself for filling out their form. The case is still now in court, interestingly enough. But Mr. Barbour, not only did you not balance the budget, but since the passage of that bill, we have added over $1 trillion to the national debt.

Like the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM), I was appalled when a year ago a lot of my colleagues, the Speaker of the House, the majority leader, the majority whip were running around saying Washington is awash in money. Huge surpluses as far as the eye can see. We do not know what to do with the money; therefore, we have to pass these tax cuts.

When the President said that a year ago right now, our Nation was $1.7 trillion in debt, with the passage of the tax cuts, the debt has increased by $323 billion. For those following this debate, I am going to do something a little different than what the Speaker or the majority leader and the President of the United States did. I am going to ask Americans to check my numbers. They are available to every American at www.publicdebt.treas.gov, and see for yourself just how broke America is.

What is particularly galling, for those with teenagers who have a job, and who look on their pay stub and say, What is this FICA?, that is your Social Security taxes; and they are taken with the solemn promise that they are to be spent on nothing but Social Security.

If we could find the mythical lockbox that a lot of presidential candidates talked about, and opened it up, all that would be there is an IOU for $1.260 trillion.

Further down on the pay stub we see money is deducted for the Federal health insurance program, Medicare. In that lockbox all we would find is $263 million.
billion is owed. The money has been spent on other things.

If you work for the Department of Defense and wanted to find their so-called lockbox, $167 billion is owed to it. The Civil Service Retirement Fund, a lot of people work for our Nation, border agents, people in the Customs Department, Coast Guard, $327 billion is owed to their trust fund right now.

Mr. Speaker, you have been the Speaker for almost 4 years. You come from the party that claims to be for fiscal responsibility. Yet in the 4 years you have been Speaker, you have not scheduled one vote on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Almost every city has that.

When I was a city councilman down in Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, I remember the city attorney telling me next month we are going to put together the budget and it has to balance. If it does not balance, you and other council members are personally liable for the difference between what is collected in taxes and what is spent. I assure Members we balanced the budget.

A couple of years later I was elected to the State senate. Mississippi has a balanced budget amendment to its constitution. Again we were informed that if we spent more money than we collected, that we could be thrown out of office. Those are good rules. They are very good rules because it prevents this kind of nonsense from happening.

What is particularly distressing about this $5.984 trillion debt that the President wants to raise by another $750 billion, if the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) were on this floor on January 1, 1980, that number would have been less than $1 trillion. What is particularly disturbing you is that the children of the greatest generation, if they do not change the way they are doing things, could be remembered as the worst generation. I do believe that my generation was the best. They survived the Great Depression, got us through World War II, Korea, Vietnam, built the highway systems, the Intercoastal Waterway; and they did it all for less than $1 trillion in debt.

As a matter of fact, if we went all of the way from the time George Washington became President until Ronald Reagan became President, our Nation was less than $1 trillion in debt. Now 20–something years later, we are almost $5 trillion in debt, and yet we cannot have a vote on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I know you are a busy man, and I know the time on this floor is very busy. But you know what, today is the time to debate the Nutria Eradication Act, and it is important to protect the marshland on the Chesapeake, it is important to those folks, and I know that they are doing a lot of damage to the marsh; but you scheduled a debate on the Nutria Eradication Act, and yet we cannot have a vote on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

You scheduled another vote on concessions maintenance and wildlife refuge repair, and wildlife refuges are very important to a lot of Americans and seeing that they are properly maintained is important. You scheduled 40 minutes of debate on that, and yet you cannot find the time to have a debate on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

We found time to talk about the Waco Mammoth Site Area Study. They wanted to put a park there, they wanted to put a park there. You scheduled 40 minutes of debate, yet you cannot find time to have a debate on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

As a matter of fact, you found time for all of those things, yet you did not have time to let this body decide whether or not we wanted to vote to kill the whole base closure process.

I particularly think base closures is a particularly dumb idea. It is not saving the taxpayers a dime; it puts a heck of a lot of people out of work. It has lost us vital defense installations like Cecil Field outside of Jacksonville, Florida. Three 8,000–foot runways, another 10,000–foot runway. Now our military is looking for a place to put the new Joint Strike Fighter, they are looking for a place to put the F–18 E and Fs, and they are going to spend billions of tax dollars to build a brand new field for the F–35. Cecil Field would have been a perfect match. The problem is that a previous round of base closures closed Cecil Field, and we gave the property away.

That was not done just once or twice; it was done over a hundred times around the United States of America. Places like the Presidio in San Francisco, given away. Places like Governor’s Island off New York City, just a month ago the President gave it away. It was a waste of land. It is probably worth half a billion dollars. The President gave it away.

Time after time, the so-called savings of BRAC were not; but there was one thing they did not tell the American public, before they gave these properties away, they had to clean them up. And we spent over $13 billion of money to clean up bases that were given away so that the local governments could do what they wanted with them. In many instances, they sold them off.

Mr. Speaker, you find time for a lot of fund-raisers and charitable events, and that I applaud. I would hope in the time remaining when you are Speaker, and you are guaranteed to be Speaker until December 31, that you would find time for this House to vote on a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution so this generation can start digging itself out of the label of being the worst generation.

There are 60 million Americans who would walk into the local Cadillac or BMW dealership and say, I want the most expensive car on the lot, and you can bill my 5-year-old 20 years from now when they are working, and let them pay the interest on it, too. There is not one American who would say I want the most expensive house in the county. I do not care what it costs because I have a 4-year-old grandchild, let alone a 20 or a 24-year-old grandchild. Precisely what this generation of Americans is doing by running up $5 trillion worth of debt in the past 22 years. There is no end in sight.

Mr. Speaker, if you care about kids and grandchildren, if you really care about the future of this country that so many other Americans sacrificed their lives for, why not schedule a vote to see that it is here for our kids and grandchildren? What is so terrible is not only owing that money, but until it is paid off, every single day, $1 billion of the taxpayers’ money is squandered on interest on that debt; and one-third of that interest is owned to German and Japanese lending institutions.

The thought of two lending institutions of two foreign countries owning one-third of the American debt and being in a position to wreck our economy anytime they want, if that does not frighten the gentleman, I am sorry. It should frighten the gentleman.

I applaud the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) and the Blue Dogs for writing the Speaker and asking for a vote on a balanced budget amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I am putting you on notice right now: I will not vote to raise the debt. Enough is enough.
Our programs if it is part of a comprehensive plan that puts everything on the table and makes tough choices across the board. This seems to escape a lot of people. There are those that believe we should not spend one penny in subsidizing our farmers. They completely ignore what is happening out there in the world. When other countries have the advantage of a weak currency compared to our strong dollar, I do not care whether you are producing cotton, wheat, corn, sugar, widgets, airplanes, you name it, it is very difficult to compete when we have as strong a dollar as we have and other countries have weak currency. That is a temporary phenomenon. It was kind of like seemingly that our income, our tax incomes were going to go up as far as the eye could see because we have come through a very, very good period of economic growth. The 1990s were unprecedented in economic expansion and growth in this country. Some believed, I guess, that it would continue to operate that way, but then, large deficits quite abruptly went up and started coming down and tax revenues came down and it should not have taken a nuclear physicist to figure that out. But from the standpoint of agriculture we are still out there receiving from that marketplace and it is tough going right now.

But I made the argument last week when we passed that bill with 280 votes on the floor of the House that perhaps it is not a good investment for the American taxpayer to spend a few pennies of their hard-earned money to support an agricultural system that has given America the most abundant food supply, the best quality of food, the safest food supply at the lowest cost to our people of any other country in the world, warts and all, subsidies and all, expenditures and all. No other country in the world’s people are fed within 1.5 percent of the GDP, gross domestic product, that country as well as Americans are, including the cost of the farm bill.

Could we do better? I will never say that we could not do better. But I think that some of the criticism that we are receiving from that is criticism that should not be given with a full mouth, because many of those who are criticizing are completely ignoring the fact that our grocery stores are full, the prices at least as far as the farmer is concerned, are competitive in the international market. No other country is saying that is not true, as far as the cost of food to the American people, no other country in the world is fed within 1.5 percent of the gross domestic product, and I submit to you tonight that it is because of farm policy that we followed in the past.

Things like the conservation title of this farm bill, the largest single increase in the history of our country in one bill. Yet some who purport to be environmentalists are criticizing it. It is quite obvious that the way they wanted it done. There again, that is the American way. Everyone is entitled to their opinions.

The research, another strong part of this farm bill, continuing to put some investment of our taxpayer dollars into research in finding new and better ways and safer ways to grow our food.

Rural development. Out in rural America there are real things, not just the image of health care, whether it be education, whether it be jobs, all are directly dependent upon a sound and healthy farm income and we do not have one. That is why I think almost two-thirds of this House and two-thirds of the Senate passed and why the President signed the bill yesterday.

But I repeat, tonight we are talking about the debt ceiling and I am not about to stand on this floor and be as two-faced as some of the leaders of this body are when they say one thing when they are talking 6 years ago and they say another thing today. Increasing the debt limit is serious business. Having a budget game plan for this country that will get us back into a surplus is a good idea. It is not going to be surpluses although I would like to see us run a surplus and pay down a little more of our debt, and I would like to see us address the problems of Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security and do that before we have an economic collapse in this country. There is a budget plan that we are now talking about doing with the current economic game plan. We are not tonight suggesting to play politics with the debt limit, and we are certainly not trying to force a crisis. You were right Mr. Speaker, we, at least a good number of us on this side of the aisle, are prepared to vote to increase the debt ceiling, but not $750 billion, and not until we have a new economic blueprint in place. We do not think that is unreasonable. It is exactly what you as the majority party were saying when it was a Democrat in the White House, exactly what you were saying then. You were right then. I repeat, you were right 6 years ago when the President signed the Balanced Budget Act. You were right then. Why are you insisting on being so wrong today?

We are willing to support a temporary increase in the debt limit to meet the expenses of the war and allow government to meet its obligations, but hold off on a long-term increase in the debt until we have a plan in place. We do not want to put the country on the debt, but we do want to use this debate as an opportunity to reexamine our long-term budget policies. It would be irresponsible to provide a blank check for increased borrowing authority without taking action to protect taxpayers from even further increases in the national debt.

The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Taylor) spoke about the need of scheduling another vote on the balanced budget constitutional amendment. The gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Brown) and others, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Istook) on the other side of the aisle, are pushing for just that. I hope we will see that vote later this year. We also would like to see some strong budget enforcement rules. They are just as important a component in restoring fiscal discipline and making sure the budget remains in balance once we have done the hard work necessary to bring it back into balance. The provisions of the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990 expire this year. Unless we renew our budget discipline, Congress will continue to find ways to break its own rules and pass more legislation with less money than we have on hand, still more red ink on the national ledger.

Enforceable spending limits will serve as a fiscal guardrail to keep our spending within the Nation’s fiscal means. The Blue Dog ABC’s plan includes legislation introduced by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL) which would extend and strengthen the provisions of the Budget Enforcement Act that are set to expire this year. This legislation is similar to budget enforcement legislation introduced by Budget Committee Chairman JM Nussle, but extends budget enforcement for 5 years and adds several provisions to improve enforcement of budget rules and increase accountability in the budget process.

I know what Chairman Nussle wants to do. I think there are some areas that we can in fact have some bipartisan support for because having meaningful caps on discretionary spending, all 13 appropriations bills, meaningful so that the Subcommittee chairmen, is something that is good budget policy and will help be a significant part of this new budget plan that we have talked about.

Again, I repeat, those of us on Agriculture do not ask for an exemption. Far from it. We believe that we should be part of any changes in the budget process, including the criticism that is coming of our farm bill from some of our foreign friends, competitors. We have no intention, at least the bill that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Stenholm), he is certainly no intention by the President of the United States and no intention of the House Committee on Agriculture that we would not live up to the agreements that we have signed and agreed to live within and under in previous trade negotiations. What we said this time, though, is that we intend to have our negotiators negotiate from strength. We are allowed to spend in support of our agriculture in this country $9.1 billion per year. We do not intend to spend $19.11 billion, or less if necessary, and I hope it is necessary that we spend less, because one thing I hope the general public understands, the only reason we are having spending at the level that we are today in support of agricultural products is the fact that we have Depression-era prices.

Cotton is selling for 30 cents a pound and less; wheat, less than $3 a bushel; and corn, about $2 a bushel. These are the same price levels that we saw back in the 1950s. If one’s salary was 1950s vintage, one had better be a lot more productive today than you were then, or you would not be making too good of a living today. That is why, if prices go up, the amount of subsidization goes down.

Certainly I think the whole world would be better off if the amount of subsidization goes down, not up. We are perfectly willing, in the next round of negotiations, assuming the Senate will get on with doing their job in passing the treaty with the trade authority and we can get on with the negotiating, to reduce the amount of eligibility of subsidization in the United States on a par basis with other countries. The same is true on the budget.

Mr. Speaker, before I yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PHelps), let me just conclude by saying that there are a significant number of Democrats who would be willing to support an increase in the debt limit as part of a plan to restore fiscal discipline. The approach outlined by the Blue Dogs, an immediate, temporary increase in the debt limit with a larger increase allowed as part of a plan to put the budget on a path to balance, along with strong budget enforcement legislation, provides a road map for a bipartisan solution to our fiscal problems and gridlock on the debt limit.

That is our offer. We think it is a reasonable offer. We would like very much to be included in being part of the solution, because borrowing another $750 billion on our grand-children’s future is not the best option for us to be considering in this year of 2002, one of those years divisible by 2. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PHelps).

Mr. PHelps. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. The experience and wisdom that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Stenholm), my good friend, brings to this body is invaluable, and I have watched him very closely since I have been a Member of Congress, almost 4 years now, and I have followed his lead as a member of the Committee on Agriculture and our standing leader and ranking member there, and one cannot go too wrong if one follows the reasoning and the thinking of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Stenholm). So I thank the gentleman for his input tonight. As a member of the Blue Dog organization and one of the leaders of that group that the gentleman founded, I thank the gentleman for giving me the opportunity to speak tonight on such an important issue.

I now that we have been here week after week, night after night as a group to try to drive a message home, one that many times is not all that popular and not easy to accept. But when we took on the 10th of May, 1 for one, took it very seriously to make sure that the citizens in my district, in my State, and in this Nation absolutely understand the truth and the numbers that we are dealing with and that the decisions we make each day reflect that accuracy is all about, and that we project that on to the taxpayers, to the voters, to the general public.

The Blue Dogs have consistently focused on fiscal discipline, having always advocated honesty and responsibility in the budgeting process. When Congress considered the budget last year, the Blue Dogs warned about the dangers of making commitments for tax cuts or new spending programs based on projected surpluses. Now, in less than a year’s time, we have seen a dramatic reversal of the once promising budgetary outlook. We now face projecting continued and increasing debt for the rest of the decade that far go beyond the temporary impact of the economic downturn or cost of the war on terrorism, which we all support and which we must address and do quickly and effectively.

Congress and the President, as the gentleman from Texas said, need to sit down, roll up our sleeves, and have an honest discussion about what we need to do to put the budget in order, starting with the program that the Blue Dogs have outlined over the last several weeks, the ABCs of Fiscal Discipline. Remember, we are here to deal with the truth. The numbers that come into this Capitol coffeehouse to the U.S. Treasury should be clear. There should not be all that much confusion on what we have on hand, what we have obligated to spend, and what we are thinking about embracing for future costs.

There are a lot of things that have happened in the last year, in the last several months that have been unpredicted. Who would have thought we would have had the horrific events of September 11 that hurt our Nation in many ways, and it affected us in an economic way. But we have other things that have happened: the recession, the tax cuts, and other spending that has been proposed and on the table now that was not in that is within our control, and that is why I think people send us here to Congress to represent them.

My father is 81 years old, sitting out there now just recovering from a heart attack not quite 2 weeks ago. I remember his words and his generation, the elders of my church and the people that I think deal with wisdom more so than many of us in this generation. If you do not stand for something, you will fall for anything. And I know that a country music artist would come along and make $1 million on that. If I had known that, I would have written the song if I had thought of it. I say to the gentleman. But it is so true that one is not going to pursue that goal in all the honesty and the fortitude that one can muster up, things go wrong. A lot of things come along that will divert you this way and that way, distract you from the real goal, from the real truth.
Mr. Speaker, it is hard to accept sometimes what the real truth is, but the fact of the matter is, we have a huge debt, and we have to assure the American people that we will be honest and accountable. People out there that work hard and play by the rules every day, and they say to their elected officials such as us that are here in this body can afford them accountability and honesty in dealing with the numbers.

The Congressional Budget Office has reported numbers; the Office of Management and Budget, the administration’s fiscal reporting group, offer some other numbers. Remember, I come from the State of Illinois, but make no mistake, I live almost 400 miles south of Chicago. So it is really a different world which I represent, largely rural, small farming area, coal mines, small businesses, people that are just dedicated to generational hand-me-down businesses, people that are just dedicated to their means. Those that are not stay within their means have the credit card debt stacked up; they have marriages falling apart because of financial problems that they brought on themselves. What I have found in life is that most of the problems that come their way are not from some uncontrollable force, but we put them on ourselves. That is what we have done here. Maybe it has taken decades and generations before us, other people that have served, and other administrations, but we collectively, all of us, have to take responsibility. So now collectively, let us admit we have problems. We had September 11, we had recession, and we had tax cuts that gave 55 percent of the returns back. When we added it all up, we now have a problem. Where is the new plan? Where are the people that want to be responsible enough to step forward and say, let us sit down together as reasonable people on both sides of the aisle or both sides of the Potomac to look at what it would cost to balance the budget, and work out of this mess. Not hope for the best and keep our blinders on, but what shall we do? Well, we need a balanced budget constitutional amendment, which I have signed on as a cosponsor and feel should require the President and Congress to submit and to enact a budget that is balanced, without using the Social Security surplus. This amendment could be waived, of course, in special times when we conflict or threats of national security. But for the first time, all of the other balanced budget constitutional amendments have been presented without addressing whether or not we would use Social Security. This amendment intends us to say, forthwith to say we should not use the Social Security Trust Fund. We should balance the budget, and if we borrow from our children and our grandchildren, then we get ourselves in a deeper mess.

So I hope that the Balanced Budget Amendment, constitutional amendment, excluding the Social Security Trust Fund, would be one way that we can show, one way that we can have a plan as to how we intend to get our fiscal house in order.

I could say much more, there are so many other parts of the ABCs, but in order the give time for other Members before we close out our time, I will yield back.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remaining 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. ISRAEL).

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I am so proud to be a member of the fiscally responsible Blue Dog Coalition and to be fighting with the gentleman, along with my other Blue Dog colleagues, for simple common sense in budgeting. A lot of people think there is a lot of complications and complexities with respect to how we budget in Washington, but the way we do it should be no different than any household in America budgets, how any small business budgets. We have to make sure that we have the revenues. We have to make sure that the books are balanced. We have to make sure that the checkbook is reconciled at the end of the month. If we do not have revenues, somehow we increase them. I voted for every single tax cut we could because the American people need that kind of relief, but when one cut expenses, what is there to cut? Are we going to cut prescription drugs? Are we going to cut Social Security? Are we going to cut defense budgets? Nobody supports that. Others say we should borrow the money.

But there is another thing that we can do. We do not want to borrow the money. We do not want to ask our children to shoulder the burden for the fiscally irresponsible decisions we make in Washington. There is another alternative. Once again it was brought to our attention in today’s New York Times in a story by Paul Krugman called The Great Evasion. We are losing $70 billion in revenues by irresponsible and unpatriotic American corporations who rush off to Bermuda, open up mail drops in Bermuda, say that they are now doing business as foreign corporations and do not have to pay their fair share of taxes. Now there are colleagues on both sides of the aisle who have had enough of this kind of irresponsible behavior. Rather than increasing taxes, which so few of us want to do, and rather than gutting important programs, which so few of us want to do, it is time for the administration to step up to the plate and say, enough is enough.

We are not going to allow American corporations to run to these Bermudan tax havens, flee their fair share of taxes. No American family is permitted to do that. No American family was able to register themselves in Bermuda to escape their fair share of taxes. We should not allow American corporations to do that as well.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

IMMIGRATION REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. TANCREDO) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader. Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, before I get into the main topic of this evening’s discussion, that being immigration and immigration reform issues, I am compelled to respond to some of the comments made by our colleagues on the other side with regard to the budget dilemma that we all face here this evening. It is the dilemma faced every year, I suppose, and has for many many decades; and that is that we will always be spending more money in this body than we take in, or at least that was the case for all of the time, for at least 40 years prior to the time that the Republicans took control of this body.

The Democrats, of course, ran an imbalanced budget for many, many, many years. And I am concerned with those Members of the Democratic Party who say that is an improper way to run government; that, in fact, we should be looking more to how businesses and industries run their business and States run theirs by having balanced budgets every single year. And I certainly completely and wholeheartedly agree. But I must say that as I listen to, on one hand, what I believe is an effort for a balanced budget and, on the other hand, an articulate excuse for a vote for the farm bill which we just passed, it is hard to reconcile those two concepts.

That is not, of course, one of the, in percentage-wise, the greatest increase in any domestic policy program in, I think, history. I am not sure, but certainly in a long, long time. Widely criticized for being what it is, an incredible pork-laden boondoggle, and then to say in the next breath we have to do something about government spending, we have to control government spending.

And, if I may be so bold, I had to ask a staff person, because I am not really familiar with the various shades of different colors, and I asked one of the staff here a few minutes ago, What is the palest blue there is? And the young lady told me it was cornflower. Cornflower is the name of the color, I guess, blue.

So I would suggest that the Blue Dog Democrats think about changing their names to the Cornflower Blue Democrats because they are not really Blue Dog Democrats. They are not really stuck to this issue of balanced budgets. What they are saying, I think, is that, and there are exceptions to this rule, that we are going to establish today, and, yes, I will yield to the gentleman who I assume is coming up to ask for that particular motion.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the good humor in which the gentleman is approaching the cornflower blue. But let me point out that the farm bill, the $73.5 billion, the gentleman is correct, voted for that budget that provided the $73.5 billion that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. COMBEST) and I, the speaker tonight, and others then proceeded to mark-up the bill. It was not called those critical comments when it passed as a budget, but it is only after we have put together the policy in which the criticism comes.

I would appreciate the gentleman acknowledging that as I was talking about this budget, that I included farm spending in any reductions in spending that must accompany any kind of a new budget. That is what we are saying, and I do not think that is inconsistent at all.

Mr. TANCREDO. Reclaiming my time, and I appreciate the gentleman’s observations, it is, of course, true that I have voted for a budget resolution that I wish we could hold to and this is a way in which we can all, I think, contribute to that possibility; and that is a vote against appropriations bill that does not conform to that budget resolution. Any budget, any appropriations bill that puts us outside of that scope which I intend, that is the way in which I intend to vote and have in the past voted.

I mean, we have to be, as I say, consistent with this because it is difficult for people who listen to this debate to understand why they voted for the budget and we call for fiscal constraint, which I appreciate the gentleman has in the past and certainly even today has been a strong supporter of that issue, but we cannot accept that mantle of a fiscal conservative while at the same time doing the way he says. But because of our issues, our individual concerns, the gentleman was very articulate in explaining the problems of the farm community in America, and no doubt his observations are accurate. But do you not see, every single person who is connected to any one of the various 13 appropriations bills we have here can come up, and do regularly, talk about the particular issue. It is the problem with education in America that involves the Federal Government. And the gentleman, I must ask and I will yield for his response, what is the constitutional role of the Federal Government? Where in the Constitution does it set out a purpose for us to be the primary support for that farm, for the agricultural community? As I would say the same thing, by the way, in the area of education and Health and Human Services, I believe it is not there. I look at the Constitution. I do not find it. I find only a relatively narrow role for us, especially in the area of defense. Other than that, we could use that. That is the way we could defend our vote against these pork-laden, constituent-driven pieces of legislation that put us every single year in the position of saying, My stuff is okay. My stuff is appropriate. Everybody else’s is out of the question and is a budget-busting bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Let me say, in the Constitution there is a little part of it that says “promote the general welfare.” And I appreciate the gentleman’s pointing out that it is difficult to find support for our farmers in the Constitution.

I do not stand on the floor and say that we are special or we are different than anyone else. Well, I guess I do. That was not a correct statement. I do believe that American agriculture and the producers have done a pretty good job of feeding America and a good part of the rest of the world and do believe as we argued strenuously for the amount of money that was passed. So I guess, yes, I do. But I also believe very strongly that anyone else that has an opinion should have the opportunity to stand and make the same arguments. If I can get 217 of my colleagues to agree with me, it passes, and that is our system. If I might just continue. I want to get back, I agree with the gentleman, on the 13 appropriations, and that is why if the gentleman heard what we were talking about a moment ago, we think we ought to put a meaningful, reasonable cap on discretionary spending as part of the budget process. I think the gentleman and I will find, no, not an agreement on the amount, but at least that we would find an agreement on the policy and procedure that we should follow to have a little bit of restraint.

I appreciate the gentleman’s generosity. I appreciate the gentleman admitting that he voted for the budget that provided for the $73.5 billion. So I take a little bit of offense when the gentleman stands on the floor as he did starting tonight by decrying this $73.5 billion when he was the one joining, not with me because I did not support this budget, but he said $73.5 billion was not an obscene amount of money for the budget we operate under.

Now times have changed; and, therefore, we are saying now let us take another look at the budget. If we need to trim, let us trim; but let us trim across the board.

Mr. TANCREDO. Reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for his observations. Of course, times have changed and exactly that. First of all, we are talking about a $73 billion money versus a $40 billion budget. That is a big difference there. It could go to $140 billion. That was not in the budget resolution. And so to say that I have voted for the latter as opposed to the former is inaccurate, and I would also suggest that the gentleman is absolutely correct. If one can get the required number of votes in the House, one can pass anything. And I guarantee you, we have done it year after year, time after time. And it is the way, I understand entitlements vary by the process is run. But I suggest that it should be perhaps incumbent upon all of us as we approach all of these bills coming up, the supplemental, I do not know. I think this week sometime, and a variety of other spending bills. I will watch for the Democrat and the Cornflower Blue Democrats to see how they vote because I will be voting “no” on all of them because I believe we should stick inside the budget. I thank the gentleman for his cordial relationship and his willingness to discuss this issue with me tonight.

I also remember thinking while I was listening to the discussion earlier here there was a comedian during the 70’s and it was Robin Williams. And he used to say “The devil made me do it.” And he used to end his little skit with that all of the time. And of course, what he was saying was I did not want to do all of these bad things, it was the devil made me do it, so it is okay.

I listen to all of this discussion about how bad it is to have these horrendous expenditures and budget-busting bills all over the place for which my colleagues on the other side voted for most of the time as far as I can remember. And then to say, The devil made me do it. I do not know how we got here but this is bad, and somebody has got to impose some fiscal discipline on me. Somebody has got to make me behave. Somebody has got to make me say, you know what, I do not think we should vote for all this stuff. If everybody imposes a balanced budget amendment, then I will be able to take my medicine.

I am all for a balanced budget amendment, Mr. Speaker, absolutely. I will vote for it anytime, anywhere, anyplace. It is okay with me. But I think it is just the funniest thing in a way to listen to people who, as I say, from the other side of the aisle especially, and talk about budget constraint and fiscal responsibility, the devil must have been making him do it here for 40 years before he came in control in this body and now they want to seek forgiveness. Well, the Lord says that that is possible. So who am I to suggest that they are not truly repentant?

On to another issue, the issue of immigration and, specifically, immigration reform. In the past several weeks we have passed legislation in this body, and, as a matter of fact, yesterday the President signed a piece of legislation into law that will have the effect of tightening down on what heretofore can have been described only as the most liberal immigration policy in the world of any country in the world. It is almost a misnomer to indicate there is an immigration policy in the United States because that implies, of course, that we have control over the process; that we establish how many people are going to come into the country every year like every other nation in the world does. We control it. We know who is coming in. We know how many. We know what they are doing here. We know when they leave. I say that is the implication of saying you have an immigration policy.

The reality, of course, is we do not. We have not. And even the passage of this recent legislation euphemistically called the Border Security Act, we will not have accomplished the goal of border security.

A couple of weeks ago the House passed a bill by an overwhelming margin that was designed and is often referred to as the abolishment of the INS and the creation of a new body. Well, of course, it really was not all of that. As is often the case here, we have a tendency to name things, I guess, a little euphemistically and to create these illusions about what we are doing here.

Now, the reality is we passed a very tepid bill designed to reform the INS, the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Much more needs to be done to actually reform that organization, much more than what we did in our bill in the House. In fact, what has to happen is that we must take from every agency presently charged with responsibility for border control, that being the Customs under the Treasury, Agriculture, and the like, the kind of agencies that have control border responsibilities, of course Border Control under the INS. The Forest Service has some responsibilities in areas. We have national forests that adjoin international borders, and we have agencies that border security.

Unfortunately the water is so far above their competencies, but my colleagues on the other side voted for me. I know they are supposed to be doing and know that they have the full support of this Nation in that endeavor. That agency should be put into the Homeland Defense Agency, should be run out of Tom Ridge’s shop or whoever is the subsequent head of that organization. That is what we should do. That is what everyone who studies this area understands needs to be done. Now, we did not do that. We did not do that in the bill we passed in this House. We will call it whatever is which is going to pass. It is okay with me. But I think it is a really bad idea. It is going its own way, and that is a problem, and it will not be solved by the bill we passed in the House.

Here is the rub with that particular bill. It is going to the other body and it will not be improved. It will not be better. We will see a conference report on this. It will pass and it will be something far short of what we passed in the House, and then we will all walk away from here and tell our constituents not to vote for it.

Okay. That is the problem. That is a big problem, and I ask my colleagues to think about it. It is going to be a minute over here, that the INS today, regardless of what we pretended to do in the House, abolishing the INS, that was the way it was presented to us, regardless of that, one of the things we understand reality is that they will not be doing two separate responsibilities. They will be doing one, competent to do the job and it is just the funniest thing in a way to think about. We have passed legislation in this body and now they want to seek forgiveness. Well, the Lord says that that is possible. So who am I to suggest that they are not truly repentant?

On to another issue, the issue of immigration and, specifically, immigration reform. lot of money, and we said, okay, well, never mind, we are going to try again. Try again when students were not coming to class, when they were not educated anymore in the course work. That will be good. I am all for it. Another thought.

It will create a database that will allow various agencies of the Federal Government, the FBI and the INS and everybody, to identify potential terrorists or people who pop up on a terrorist list. We will be able to go and this name will come up, and it will say, oh that guy came into the United States, or lady as the case may be, on such and such a date and he is here or he has gone, and that is good. I am glad.

We will still have, by the way, Mr. Speaker, we will still have the visa application that anyone can go to the Web site for the State Department and look this up. I love it. This is great. I always think it is a metaphor for the entire INS debate. It is called the temporary visa and it says about the third or fourth question, I am paraphrasing only slightly. It says are you a terrorist; are you planning to come into the United States and blow things up and commit acts of terrorism; have you ever been the victim of terrorism in other countries; are you a member of the Nazi Party. It is all one series of questions, and then the person checks over one box, yes or no.

So this potential terrorist says, yeah, I am, and the application, I am a member of Al Qaeda and I am coming in to blow up a building or distribute some sort of biological warfare agent, and at the bottom of this visa, because of the efforts of a Member of the other body from Massachusetts, very big Member of the body, there is an additional little asterisk and it says, after you answer yes or no to this question, are you a terrorist, if my colleagues go to the bottom and it says answering yes does not mean that you will be denied access to the United States.

So we still have that, but now that is okay because we will know if the terrorists come in, they will sign up. Naturally, they will say of course I am coming in. I am a terrorist, here I am and here is my terrorist credentials, and I am coming in to do a lot of damage.

Now, for those folks who admit to being terrorists this is a good idea that we have, everybody. I am all for it, but supposing, just supposing, I mean, I know this is a great hypothetical, but just supposing a potential terrorist decides to come into the United States and not sign up as a terrorist, not actually apply for a visa, now my colleagues say that cannot be because of course everybody coming into the United States applies for a visa, comes here as a visitor, a guest of the United States, tells us who they are, where they are going to be and for how long. I say these things of course, with a tongue in cheek because everybody knows that our borders are porous and that only our most honest people in the world for the most part say they are coming in, especially to apply through the regular process, but of course millions and millions of others come in a different way. They do not wait, they do not waste time filling out visas, requests for application to the United States. They come across the border.

These are two pictures of the border along the Arizona-Mexican border near Nogales, Arizona. We took them a couple of weeks ago when we were down there. This is a barbed wire fence, if it can be distinguished on the television. I am not sure, here, that is separating Mexico on the other side of this fence from the United States. Down here, same thing, barbed wire fence, but there is only a cattle guard separating Mexico from the United States.

This part of our border is actually more demarcated, more defined than many parts of the border that have absolutely no distinction, here and on the Canadian border. We have 1,900 miles in Mexico of the border and 4,000 miles on the northern border.

I guess I ask my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, when I hear people on the other side, people on our side in the administration, people talking about the fact that we should not try to connect immigration to terrorism, because most people come into the United States and they are completely and entirely looking, they are mostly looking to send some money home, and they are not looking to do us damage, and this is absolutely true. Undeniably true, but of course, there are people who come into the United States for other reasons, and when they come into the United States for other reasons, may I ask my colleagues if they think it is logical for us to assume that they are all going to come via a visa process, especially when we start to tighten it up.

The 19 hijackers who committed the atrocities here in the United States in September were all here on visas. Some of them of course overstayed their visas. Some were here fraudulently, but they were all on visas. If we make it tougher for those people, Mr. Speaker, which I am all for, I am all for asking if you are a terrorist, please, let us know on this document, sign up right here, tell us you are a terrorist, and we can keep track of you. I am all for doing that.

But just supposing, I mean wildest stretch of your imagination, supposing they choose not to tell you that they are a terrorist and not to sign up that way on the visa, why, may I ask, is it so hard to understand that there is a connection? Why is it so hard to understand that they would in fact come in a very easy portal, that they would walk across the desert.

Here, this one on the bottom, the cattle guard, at least that protects us from illegal cattle coming into the United States. This one does not even protect us from that because there is no cattle guard. It is just a big deeply rutted road. And by the way, this road is not on any Forest Service map. It does not exist on any map you have ever seen because, of course, it is just illegals coming into the United States.

And this is the greatest thing of all, Mr. Speaker. You know, you can go to our Web site, it is www.House.Gov/ im- so, then you go to the immigration part of it and you will see all this stuff in greater detail, and I encourage you to do it because it is hard to see this. But here is a sign that is facing our side of the border, and it says here: ‘All persons and vehicles must cross the United States at a designated port of entry only. This is not,’ underlined this is not, “a designated port of entry. Any person or vehicle entering at this point is in violation of the U.S.”

Mr. Speaker. You know, you can go to our Web site, it is www.House.Gov/ immi as we were down there. This was there and just as we were leaving a fire started, again by someone coming across illegally. They believe it is UDAs, that is the way it is referred to, undocumented aliens, because it is in the very remote areas; and it had consumed 35,000 acres in less than a day.

I do not know where it is now. I do not know if it is contained. I do not know when it is going to be put out. It could be the most up-to-date methods of fire suppressants. We cannot drop slurry because there is so many illegals going through the forest that it actually may harm them. They may get some stuff on them so they do not drop it. And they only fight the fire during the daytime, because in the nighttime they have had fire crews up there and the crews have confronted armed men, people carrying M-16s, because they are the people protecting the people carrying drugs; and they are coming in huge bands 20, 30, 40, 100. The forest is being destroyed.

Here, people who are hiking, picnicking, whatever, around the national forest, now are mistaken entering into Mexico, you see, because there are no signs telling you, like this one, be careful, you are leaving the United States, you are going into Mexico. And they do. They go into Mexico. And the reason why is, and I started mentioning this last week in the wake of the illegal immigrants tearing down the signs time after time, we have actually put up over here, just a little further inside here, two metal posts, two big metal posts with a metal sign. That had been cut out. The Mexicans could not mistake what that nighttime torch and cut the sign down, because they want people to wander over, then nab them and throw them into the local hoosegow and then extort money from them. It is a way of making a few bucks down there. They want people to wander in so that they can then say you are here in Mexico illegally and we are going to make you pay the price.

But there is no connection, Mr. Speaker, no connection whatever; and how can we even talk about things like immigration reform and terrorist activities? How could we suggest that there is anything related here, just because you can walk across this border with great impunity? And believe me, hundreds of thousands of people a year come through right here, millions of people across the border, both north and south. By the way, this is not unique in any way, shape, or form to Mexico. Of course the greatest numbers come from Mexican nationals. But nonetheless, we have the problem on both our borders and in our ports of entry on both coasts.

Recently, 25 suspected Middle Eastern terrorists evidently came in on cargo ships. They are here someplace. We do not know where. I do not know exactly how we found out about it, but I am glad we at least know they are here. Makes me feel a lot better. And hopefully they will be caught. I know we are judiciously looking at everyone in the United States who is now correctly being illegally and returning them to their country of origin, so certainly in a short time we will have them.

We have a huge problem, Mr. Speaker. It is a national security issue. To suggest anything else is to be naïve to the ultimate. And to suggest that we cannot clamp down on this kind of situation, we cannot in fact protect our own borders, even if it means putting troops there, we will be found to be insulting to Canada and Mexico, to suggest that trying to enforce our own borders and protect the lives and property of the people in this Nation is an act that would turn certain constituencies in the Nation is an act that would turn certain constituencies in the Nation into something that defies the imagination. It defies anyone's ability to actually and appropriately characterize such a position.

There are people in the United States of America, regardless of their ethnic background, who are opposed to their own government trying to protect them and their property? I want to hear that. Because most of the people, Mr. Speaker, I guarantee you, by magnitudes that are actually astounding to me, number, number, number, tell me that they are asking more from their government in terms of protecting them, and they are asking us to do something to cut down on illegal immigrants.

And, Mr. Speaker, this is not just something that white WASPish Americans are asking for. This is something all Americans are asking for. Everybody. Because everybody here who has come here legally, who believes in the sovereignty of our own country is saying to us, What are you guys doing up there? And I mean we are talking Asian Americans and we are talking Hispanic Americans. I do not care what the ethnic background. By and large these people support our efforts to try and actually do something about border security and to reduce even the amount of immigration.

A vast majority of the people in this country recognize that this is necessary. It is not racism. It is not racially motivated. This is a matter that strikes at the heart of everything we should be doing here in this Congress. We should be looking, first and foremost, at the security of the Nation. And you cannot go in front of your constituents, I do not care who you are or where you are from, Brooklyn or Timbuktu, no, strike that, Brooklyn or Ray, Colorado, you cannot go in front of your constituents and say that we have in fact done anything to significantly increase the protection of our borders and, therefore, your safety. Because we have not.

I repeat: the tepid bill we passed here on INS reform will be destroyed, I predict. And by the time we see it in a conference, it will be something totally different and much much less effective than it was even leaving here, and that was not much.

I also predict that unless we do this, unless we actually reform the INS, actually create an agency that has the resources and the direction to protect our borders, and the commitment internally, the people working for it who know why they are there, who are on our side when it comes to whether or not we should be letting people in here illegally, and our side means saying no, unless we do that, we have not done anything to improve security.

All of the other stuff we have done, including the bill the President signed yesterday, which I supported because it was that life boat, and I am all for adding another life boat to the Titanic, but it will not keep the boat from sinking. Signing a bill and calling it border security packages is misleading the country how much. It is not security if we have an agency that is completely and totally incapable of actually providing that security.

We must reform the INS first. And I mean real reform. Then all the other things we do, all of the other jobs we do, we give it in terms of tracking, all of the other responsibilities we give it in terms of protecting the borders, expanding our observation and control of the border activity, all of those things become second order. But I believe an agency committed to that task. Because I know this, Mr. Speaker, and I will tell you, I have spent many hours with the folks who we give the responsibilities of being on the ground down here, and they want to be supported by us. They want clear lines of authority. They want to be able to protect America. But they are working for an agency which is incapable of providing them with the leadership, direction, and resources to get the job done.

They will tell you that time after time after time, of the horrendous frustration they feel in trying to deal with this issue and do their jobs, do their jobs for their own families and for America. They want to do their jobs, but they are prevented from doing so because the agency itself is so incredibly, incredibly incompetent.

We will move just for the next few minutes to one final issue about which I am greatly concerned, and that is the issue of amnesty. I ask about all that we have done in this body to protect the borders; but every single time we reconstitute, regenerate support for amnesty, every time that the other party brings it up, we are doing great damage to our ability to actually control the borders; and we are doing great damage to the moral character of the United States of America.

I do not know why I say that. We call ourselves a Nation of laws. We tell the world to emulate us. We tell every country how important it is to disavow the rule of man and to accept the rule of law as the philosophy of government that all people should abide by and hand down. And you suggest that 11 million people who are here illegally, who broke our laws coming into this country should be forgiven for that and given citizenship, in fact, rewarded.

Put them in line for citizenship ahead of all those millions of people around this world who are reading the words on the Statue of Liberty: “Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,” and say how do I do that, I want to go there, I believe that the principles of the United States and America are the principles I want to live by. I do not want to leave my country, I want to disavow any relationship, political relationship that I have with the country of my birth, and I want to start a new life in America, as perhaps your grandparents did.

We are telling all of those people every time we give them amnesty, we are telling all of the people who are waiting that they are suckers, and that the better way to get into the United States is to sneak in, stay under the radar screen long enough, and we will give you amnesty. It is a slap in the face to the people who have done it the right way, filled out the paperwork and waited the appropriate length of time, learned the language, learned our history, things we actually require of people coming into the United States. They did it right, and we are telling them, you are suckers. You should sneak in.

I know the allure is on our side. It is like the drug issue. We say there is the demand, there is always going to be the supply. There is the demand for cheap labor; and, therefore, they are going to come. I understand that part of the equal representation for any attitude on the part of the government, we have the laws, it is illegal to hire people who are not citizens of the United States or not here on the appropriate visa. It is illegal. Recently we finally started actually cracking down. I know Tyson Foods and a couple of other big employers who acted covertly to bring workers into the United States for cheap labor are being fined. I would try to dry up the demand, but that does not excuse the supply. It does not excuse the illegal immigration here legally. We cannot reward them for that.

I am concerned because Monday, yesterday, President Vicente Fox said in a speech in New York, it may have been just a couple of days ago, President Fox of Mexico said the number one litmus test of our relationship with Mexico will be our willingness in the United States to give amnesty to the people who are here illegally. The number one litmus test.

One needs to ask himself, why would a President of one country demand from a President of another country the complete revaluation, if you will, of our own laws? Why would they demand that we ignore our own laws as a litmus test for their friendship, while at the same time, Mr. Speaker, at the same time they are asking for our friendship and declaring themselves to be the best friends of America on the continent?

We are witness to, a slide presentation I was witness to when I went down to Douglas, Arizona. The briefing was presented by something called the HIDA, High Intensity Drug Area, and it is all of the agencies that get together and try to control the flow of drugs into the United States. This is the slide of illegals into the United States.

In their presentation they showed me this slide, and it says “Calendar year 2001, Mexican Government Border Incursions.” I said Mexican government border incursions. What are they talking about? There were nine from the Mexican military and 14 from the Mexican police for a total of 23 in 2001. When I had a little more discussion about this, it turns out this is not the year 2001; we have had over 100 such incursions over the last 7 or 8 years. The hundred have been documented. Many others go undocumented, we are told by the border police.

Some of these incidents have resulted in shots being fired by the Mexican military. Some have resulted in confrontation when guns were drawn on both sides, and finally people backed off. You have to ask yourself, what they were doing. Some were members of the Mexican military and Mexican federal police doing in the United States of America?

I called the State Department, and they said they were probably lost. Probably anyone wonders why we have 4,000 miles of border with Canada, much less defined, we have 1,900 miles with the border of Mexico, and we have at least 100 of these incursions by the Mexican military on the southern border, and I called the Canadian desk in the State Department and the Canadian Embassy and said, How many times have we had Canadian military wander into the United States getting lost because they could not find the line? They said never.

I said, How many times has the Canadian Mounted Police come riding across the border chasing someone and we found them in Detroit because they just got too far? It is not happening.

I will tell Members why it is happening on the southern border. Unfortunately, a large part of the Mexican military and the Mexican police establishment are corrupt, and they are involved in narcotics. Ask, in your district, any member of our service on the border, any member of the border patrol there on the spot, ask them why it is happening, and they will say they are coming across to protect large shipments of narcotics coming across the border. Sometimes I come across to create a diversion pulling our people away from where that shipment is coming through.

Mr. Speaker, 90,000 pounds, and this is another slide. This is a gentleman coming across carrying several bags in these makeshift backpacks carrying drugs. This is Coronado National Monument, Arizona. This is May 7, 2001. Most come 20 or 30 or 40 protected by armed guards. In calendar year 2001, 11,300 seizures amounting to 2,476 million pounds of marijuana; cocaine, 42,000. That is just in this particular area, and I am just talking about the Coronado National Forest area.

So here is the question, of a friendly country? Why are we facing this because President Fox, who I believe is a man who is trying to do a good job, I think he is an honest person; but, unfortunately, I do not believe it is having the right government. He certainly does not control some of the most important parts of it, including his own military. Corruption is so endemic, it is so bad that the President of that country cannot guarantee the actions of his own military and/or federal police. It is a sad commentary. I am sorry for him.

If I could wave a magic wand, Mexico would be a place with enormous wealth and a driving middle class, with every body having the same chance to achieve their dreams and goals. But there is nothing about that, there is nothing that this body or the President of the United States can do to change the situation in Mexico.

The corruption is so endemic and it is connected to a government that still has connection to a socialist economic theory. The government still owns the oil company, for heaven’s sake. While that is the case, while you have this combination of socialistic thought and socialistic economic thought and internal corruption, the economic prosperity of the nation will never, ever be achieved; and there is nothing we can do about it. No matter if we open the border tomorrow and walk away from every port of entry, which some would like us to do, even take away the barbed wire fence, for what little good it does, and walk away from the border. That is what some people want. Members know it is true. But it will not change the situation in Mexico. It will not be something that improves the lives of the people down there.

I am concerned because the Mexican government is not doing what is necessary to help us control our own borders. I am concerned that they are not helping us as the President asked them to do so. The President said, if you are not with us, you are against us. Then why are they not patrolling their own borders to stop incursions? Frankly, people are coming in through Mexico, not just Mexicans looking for jobs, other nationalities, Middle Eastern. One hundred ten Iranians were captured on a guy’s ranch in Texas all dressed in string ties, white shirts and black pants thinking they could blend in, I guess.

This is a terrible problem connected to our own national security. It is also connected to the kind of country we will be, how much we invest here, the kind of environment we are going to leave for our children. Will it all be the environment that is today part of the United States.
that national forest which has been destroyed? Is that the kind of legacy that we want to leave? I think not.

We have to reduce immigration into this country. We have to reduce legal immigration to a manageable number: 150,000 a year is plenty. We have to put the same amount of effort into the protection of our borders as we put into the prosecution of the war in Afghanistan and around the world. We have to put the same degree of resources and the same degree of commitment into the defense of our own borders as we do to the prosecution of the war halfway around the world.

That may mean, as a matter of fact, troops on our border and demands to our neighbors, Canada and Mexico, to help us patrol it. It is incumbent upon us to do it, Mr. Speaker. It is our responsibility and no one else's. The States cannot do it. The Congress and the President must provide the leadership and the American people are demanding. We and the administration have to stop turning a deaf ear to the pleas of our countrymen to protect and defend our borders.

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding. We had scheduled it for 9:30. It is about 9:30. As you described, we made an offer and we actually had an agreement this evening to have an Oxford debate about the resolution. As many people are watching around the world as Members, we know that our normal debate that we have is not really debate. People almost read statements and they read them to each other and there is no discourse. I think those of us who supported it sat through literally several hours of debate and at some level a great deal of frustration, because people say things that there really is no opportunity to ask them to respond to try to clarify their position or really even ask them to defend their position. So we had set up this where under the House rules there is an opportunity for an Oxford style debate to interact with Members. We offered that opportunity and again, I guess there were 21 Members that sat against the resolution and 29 that did not vote. It is less than 15 percent of the membership of the House, but a sizable number of people.

We had the opportunity to cancel this evening or go forward, and what we thought we might do is in a sense maybe try to even literally re-read some of the arguments that the opponents of the resolution made and really in an attempt to maybe flesh out what their thoughts were. I think those of us who will be defending the resolution obviously find it hard to articulate their positions. Maybe they are in fact positions that cannot be articulated.

I would like to start maybe this evening or go forward, and what we thought we might do is in a sense maybe try to even literally re-read some of the arguments that the opponents of the resolution made and really in an attempt to maybe flesh out what their thoughts were. I think those of us who will be defending the resolution obviously find it hard to articulate their positions. Maybe they are in fact positions that cannot be articulated.

Perhaps the gentleman from Pennsylvania will yield, I think there are so many parallels between the 17-year-old that straps dynamite to his or her chest and the 17-year-old that might have been taken as an innocent victim. But the fact of the matter is that that suicide bomber, that homicide bomber, is bringing the Palestinian people further, not closer, to their objective of having a homeland. I do not think any of us would argue in this body that if the Palestinians announced and did more than announce, they actually began to operate without violence and to sit down and really negotiate for a Palestinian homeland, if they would have done that arguably years and years ago, it would be a reality today.

We have to recognize one thing that some of my colleagues did not recognize in the debate. Someone who blows themselves up and anyone around them blows them to bits is not engaged in political speech. They are not engaged in debate. They are not furthering the cause of bringing the two sides together. What they are doing is murdering people.

We have to recognize what sometimes often gets overlooked is this notion that someone who is engaged in suicide bombing is acting out of desperation that was created by another set of instances. There are all kinds of circumstances in the world that have been resolved without suicide bombing. In fact, most political conflicts in the world, thank God, do not result in one group attacking the civilians of the other side.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Would the gentleman agree that the whole phrase of suicide bombing is also missing the point here? When I hear the phrase "suicide bomber," I think one person committed suicide. I think the gentleman used a separative phrase a minute ago that is a lot more illustrative of what is actually happening here.

Mr. WEINER. Let me give an example and the gentlemen in their most recent visit, I am sure, visited some victims in the hospital. I had the opportunity to visit a 15-year-old girl who was the victim of a homicide bomber. She was not killed, thank God, but she showed me that included 18 hexagonal nuts that was packed around dynamite that were used as projectiles projected into her young body. This is savagery. This is not something that brings the debate any closer. It is not something that brings the two sides closer.

Mr. DEUTSCH. If I could interject, again I am trying to bring quotes in from the debate against the resolution and this is again from a very esteemed colleague of ours, someone whom all three of us I know respect a great deal, but his statement was, and I am quoting, "Generations of Palestinians and Israelis have suffered in the region, but the violence of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict cannot be examined or addressed in isolation of decades of occupation of millions of Palestinians."

I think it ties directly to what you are saying, that in some way occupation justifies suicide bombings.

Mr. HOEFFEL. We heard similar language throughout some quarters of the Arab world in reaction to September 11, is that this is what happens if you do not have an energy policy we like or a foreign policy or an agricultural policy, we send 15 suicide bombers to murder 3,000 Americans. We have to recognize, and we have to be able to separate. This is at its fundamental element a complex and gut-wrenching dispute over land. It is difficult. We have different subtexts, the Biblical subtexts. We have historical subtexts. But these things cannot be resolved in an environment where one side is attacking the other side in the most savage and most despicable ways.

Mr. DEUTSCH. I think one of the interesting things, just in response to that exact point is that at the Camp David negotiations the Israelis were willing to give up and, in fact, offered 97 or 98 percent of the West Bank and Gaza and if you include some of the territories, the Negev, the Negev and about 98.9 percent of the land mass that is in a sense occupied. That was offered and it was rejected. So if the cause of the disturbance is occupation, the Israelis offered to end the occupation.

Mr. WEINER. I would go even further than that. You do not need to go to Camp David at September of 2000. You can go to the Oslo process that began in 1993 that had the Israeli government in a process to end the occupation, to not only begin to foster democracy in the Palestinian region but to fund it. Many of the guns being used against Israeli soldiers today were provided by the Israelis because the Palestinian Authority paid for those firearms and the police force. The Israelis not only gave them uniforms and gave them funding but gave them the actual guns. You can go back to 1948, the birth of the Jewish state, where it was the Israelis who were prepared to say, listen, we will take a divided neighborhood, essentially, if it guarantees us peace. You can look at the Wye River agreement. You can look at the Mitchell plan. You can look at the Tenet plan. You can go back to before the plan where it was the Israelis who said yes, and it was the Palestinians who said no. But they said no because the only thing that it really was predicated on was peaceful coexistence, which leads one to believe that ultimately the Palestinian people themselves have to make a decision. They have to make a decision, do they want to continue to cross swords or do they ultimately want their own state?

I think the Members who are here on the floor would agree that if this was a peaceful plan the Israelis should have resulted in a Palestinian state generations ago.

Mr. DEUTSCH. It is funny, not funny but tragic, that if it was a Martin Luther King instead of a Yasser Arafat or a Gandhi instead of an Arafat, I think you are absolutely correct because the majority and even with the vote by the Likud Central Committee, which I think was a political statement, I as recently as today read polls of the Israeli public, the majority of Israelis support a two-state solution because they understand that is a solution, that there is a puzzle fit that works. That in time will happen when there is a partner to engage in that solution.

The chart that I have up, one of the things, had we been in an Oxford debate and had the other side showed up, was really the first chart that I was going to put up for today, and it is hard to read and hopefully the television camera is focusing in on it. But the Israeli incursion occurred on March 31. Prior to March 11, 27 people were killed. When my colleagues remember, starting literally 11 days or 12 days or 13 days before, there was a series of suicide bombings actually starting in March; March 2, March 5, March 7, March 9, March 17, March 20, March 21, March 27 was the so-called second encounter. The Netanya, where 27 Israelis were killed; and then the 29th, and then actually on the 31st was in Haifa, the restaurant that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) and I visited or, actually, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON) and I visited. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) was actually at another place in that period and we were told that we were visited on that trip that occurred on the 31st. Then after that series of suicide killings, killing over 100 people, I could count them up, close to 100 people, maybe 150 people during that amount of time, one of the numbers that I have talked about on several occasions, and I will put this chart up just to reiterate that, Israel in terms of population is about one-sixtieth, one-fiftieth, one-sixtieth the size of the United States of America. We are about 300 million plus people, 5 million plus, and the equivalent, just in terms of population, when 50 Israelis are killed, it is the equivalent of 9-11 to the United States of America. I am describing March. It was the equivalent of September 11.

Now, we know what the United States did after September 11. We sent 6,000 miles to a country and appropriately, and I do not think there is a Member of this Chamber who did not support it. I do not think effectively as Americans we did not support what we did. Can we expect anything less for the Israelis to do, when three September 11ths occurred in the month of March in their country. I think that is the justification, I mean if a country is not protecting its citizens from death, from terrorism; I mean that is our fundamental role as government, and that is what they did. In a sense, they did not have a choice. The Israelis do not want to be in Bethlehem or Nablus or Jenin any more than the United States wants to be in Afghanistan. We do not want to be in Afghanistan, but we are there for the reason that we have to be there, the same way they have to be there.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, something else that is important to keep in mind, in that period from October 2000 to today the Israeli government and the Israeli people have not only been fighting terror by military means, almost at the same time and, frankly, almost in a counterintuitive way, given the way we have handled our attack since September 11, is that they have continued to do the democratic thing.

For example, when former Senator George Mitchell, who has some experience in negotiating peace in difficult parts of the world, when he traveled there, he came up with some principles of a plan, essentially to start a framework to get back to peace. It was the Israelis who said, although it asked for very difficult concessions from the Israelis, including lifting up the roots of many Israeli families and moving them out of their homes, the Israelis accepted it.

The Palestinians who did essentially one thing, which was to stop bombing and stop firing, they said no.
Then we sent CIA Director Tenet over to the area to see if they could perhaps get the wheels started to the Mitchell plan. Once again, asked tough things of the Israelis, including loosening up border crossings at a time when terrorists were walking through those borders, Israelis said yes and the Palestinians said no. Even when Vice President CHENNY and Secretary of State Powell visited the area to try to negotiate peace, it was the Israelis who made a willingly and the Palestinians who would not relent in their violence. In fact, some of the worst violence in the area on the part of the Palestinians have come when U.S. emissaries, trying to negotiate peace, have been there.

So at the same time, while a great deal of attention has been called to the fact of Israel going door to door trying to rout out terrorism, it should not be ignored that even in that context, even in the context of all of the carnage over the last couple of years, the Israelis and their government have still said, do you want to make peace? We are ready to do it. I think that is to their great credit.

Imagine for a moment if bin Laden or Mullah Omar represented himself next week and said, you know what? I want to negotiate. I want to negotiate the peace here. Maybe if the United States gives up Texas and Louisiana, I will leave you alone, and I do not just say that because they are Republican areas. I would say to the Speaker, we are prepared to have a negotiation. We would laugh at it. Yet, in Israel, despite the carnage that they have had, they have been negotiating at the same time, hoping against hope that the Palestinian people would choose peace over violence.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, if I could give the gentleman an individual example of what spirit of the Israelis, that willingness to remain positive and to maintain their humanity in the face of this horror, let me tell my colleagues about Gila Weiss, a former constituent of mine who graduated from high school in my district in 1988 when she was known as Jennifer Weiss. Her parents still live in my district, Fred and Susan Weiss. Jennifer moved to Israel, changed her name to Gila, and is making her life there. On April 19, 2002, she was shopping at the Jewish market before Sabbath, when terrorists in the photo of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH) and I visited the hospital on our trip to Israel, Gila was there to greet us, showing incredible spirit, and leaders of the Palestinian Authority leaders that bomber to that bus stop in Jerusalem.

When I returned from my trip, I gave a report to my district and asked Mrs. Weiss, Susan Weiss, to be with me. She talked about the injuries and the terrible ordeal that Gila had been through, and her parents, and then Susan Weiss, uncompromised, told the assembled press corps in the suburbs of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania that she harbored no animosity, that she felt that we had to move forward and try to bring this process to peace. Some, how to return this process to peace. Recognizing the need for defense now, recognizing the need for safety now, the security of Israel being paramount, but both Gila and her mother were prepared for the worst kind of experience with terror, prepared to move forward to try to reach peace.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, one of the things that is important about the story that the gentleman has just told, is that it is not the Israeli people, because of their fundamental belief in democracy, something that our country shares and something that over 373 Members of Congress recognized when the resolution passed, on the other side of this debate is a group of people, the Palestinians, who, in their schoolbooks, in their classrooms, even on their television screens, are preaching hatred.

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH) made the mention of Nelson Mandela as a peacemaker. One does not have to go that far. One can look in that same region of the world not so long ago and look at the courageous stand of Anwar Sadat. One of the first things he did when preparing the Egyptian people who had been in a hateful, passionate war with the Israelis, one of the first things that he did when preparing the Egyptian people who had been in a hateful, passionate war with the Israelis, one of the first things that he did was as a sign of his courage that ultimately led to his death, is he turned to his own people in a statement that is important, and he said, look, it is in our interests to make peace. We do not do it because we like them. We do not do it because we like their presence in the area, but it is because it is in our interests.

On the other hand, despite the requirement in the Oslo Accords that they stop teaching hate in their schoolbooks, they stop teaching hate to their children, the seeds of hate keep getting planted every day. This morning, if you flip on Palestinian TV during the cartoons, aimed at young children that have a playful song that says, put down your books, take up your arms, directed at young children. We see protests in Nablus. We have parents with their children on their shoulders, children like in all of our districts, except in these cases they have pretend suicide bomb belts around their waists.

Someone said that from the floor of this Chamber not that long ago, a week and a half ago, I see the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER) shaking his head no. Now he has an opportunity to respond.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman from Florida, and this is something, this, easily verified, there has not been a single instance in the history of the conflict where, with the possible exception being the preemptive strike in the war of 1967 that the Israelis have initiated violence. When we see these images on television of kids throwing stones at Israeli soldiers and Israeli soldiers responding, invariably those are organized efforts by Palestinian protestors to engage in a highly publicized exchange.

There is not anyone who believes, for example, that the Israeli military had any interest in going into Ramallah, for example, knocking on doors looking for terrorists, had it not been for the fact that there had been horrific slaughters of many of the victims of noncombatants, and both sides of the conflict have engaged in the slaughter of innocents.”

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman can yield for a second, trying to keep this in somewhat of a debate without another side being here, which I almost feel we should have an empty chair like they sometimes do in political debates when the other side does not show up. But it is interesting, much has been made in terms of who voted against it, why they voted against it, but there were Democrats and Republicans. Again, less than 15 percent of the Congress, 15 percent of the Congress voting to quote from one of our Republican colleagues and the quote is, “If we are going to bring peace to that troubled region, we must be scrupulously honest. There are piles of bodies in the area, one can look in that same region of the world not so long ago and look at the courageous stand of Anwar Sadat. One of the first things he did when preparing the Egyptian people who had been in a hateful, passionate war with the Israelis, one of the first things that he did was as a sign of his courage that ultimately led to his death, is he turned to his own people in a statement that is important, and he said, look, it is in our interests to make peace. thought of, thoughtful colleagues who have made these statements that I am reading word for word out of the Congressional Record on the debate. When the Israelis went into Jenin or for that matter Ramallah or for that matter anything, because I talked to a couple of minutes ago about the reason for the incursion, that there was this horrific activity occurring at monumental levels in their society.

One of the things that we witnessed in our visit was in a sense the proof on the other side, and this is one of many pictures that we have. One of the opportunities we had was to view just a fraction of the weapons that were seized during the incursion, about 10 percent of the weapons. In this Chamber, if we added all the weapons that we saw, it would probably fill this entire Chamber. Weapons of mortars, and I will show some additional pictures of machine guns and sniper rifles. But I think the most evil was literally witnessing suicide vests, and they are not kids creating suicide vests. I mean as we saw them, and my colleagues can see in the picture, they are commercially made. We actually saw different versions, spring versions, summer versions, autumn versions so that they would not be seen. But, in a sense, that is the proof of why.

I guess the frustration that an intelligent person could make a statement like that or make some of the other statements that I have read, not to distinguish; in the United States, we call it collateral damage. In our military action, in fact our ongoing military action in Afghanistan, there have been innocents who have died. We did not go house to house in Tora Bora. We bombed, as we should, absolutely as we should, as was appropriate and with the knowledge that there would be some collateral damage because of the risks involved, because the morality involved in terms of doing it, it was absolutely appropriate. The Israelis could have attacked Jenin the way we attacked Tora Bora. They could have bombed from the air without risking lives. There is no question that a number of Israelis, a significant number of Israeli soldiers died because of the effort that they made. I do not doubt, and in fact I am sure, there were innocents who were killed in the action in Jenin. But I think not to understand there is a fundamental difference between someone being killed in that action where, by all accounts, the Israeli defense forces’ efforts to make sure that civilians were not killed are minimized. I mean there are just so many specific accounts. In fact, before the soldiers went into the battle, their orders were to do everything possible, put their own lives at risk in terms of avoiding collateral damage. One thing also, I mean there is a whole different viewpoint when it does occur. The attitude of the defense forces is just remorse, but it is a horrific situation. It is tragic. There is no words that can possibly compensate.

But the entire attitude is a totally different attitude. The efforts of a megaphone to tell people to get out. Give them another chance to get out. Give them a third chance to get out. Tell them what is going to happen if they do not get out, every opportunity to get out. And yet we are hearing colleagues say that is the same as a murder bomber.

Mr. HOEFFEL. If the gentleman would yield, what our colleague is missing is the morality behind the actions. The actions of the Palestinians when they commit terror, they are intending to kill innocent civilians and the Israelis are intending to defend themselves. That is the fundamental difference.

The action that the gentleman describes and both colleagues have referred to, the military incursion into Jenin and other areas of the West Bank first was to stop the terror from continuing to come against Israel. It certainly was taken at great risk to members of the Israeli defense forces and 22 Israeli soldiers died in Jenin and had the Israelis chosen to bomb, there certainly would have died. But it also uncovered an extraordinary number of weapons, as the gentleman has mentioned, most of them in complete violation to the Oslo Accord that the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiner) described.

The Palestinian police under Oslo were allowed to maintain handguns, rifles and AK-47s.

Mr. DEUTSCH. If the gentleman would yield, this is as he witnessed himself, and this is just a very small cache of mortars which obviously are illegal under the Oslo Accord. Mr. HOEFFEL. Exactly right. That is a very good picture illustrating the point.

What the Israelis seized were anti-tank missiles, rocket-propelled grenades, mortars, rockets, all in complete violation of the Oslo Accord. All there, one gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), said, who identified himself as a sportsman, not there for sporting purposes, not there for hunting game during the doe season with a license from your local State government, but they are to kill people. That was the purpose of those weapons.

And the suicide vest that the gentleman identified a few pictures ago was the exact type of vest used in an attempt to kill Gila Weiss and that did kill six of the people that she was standing around with, total strangers.

Mr. DEUTSCH. Again, I will try to use some of these posters today, but this again is a sample of literally weapons, just a fraction of the weapons collected that could fill this Chamber, machine guns, sniper rifles, mortar guns, anti-tank weapons, none of which were allowed under the Oslo agreement.

Mr. WEINER. If the gentleman would yield for a question. Perhaps you can offer a little bit more explanation.

One of things that came up frequently on the floor among the opponents of the resolution was that we have to foster an environment where the moderate Arab nations could help a peace take hold in the Middle East. Perhaps the gentleman could explain to the members how these weapons came from. Did they not come from a so-called moderate Arab state? And I am curious as to whether it seems like the export of someone who is interested in peace in the region.

Mr. HOEFFEL. I am not sure. As our friend, the gentleman allowed under the Oslo agreement. Most of them were American weapons stolen or gotten through a third party. A lot of them were smuggled either through the tunnels from the Sinai into Gaza. Some of them, Israelis have very good information to believe that they were actually smuggled in Yassar Arafat’s helicopter. So the weapons came from a variety of different sources.

Mr. WEINER. What about the Karin-A?

Mr. DEUTSCH. The Karin-A is a totally different issue which we can talk about. I think it is a significant issue as well. As the gentleman is well aware, the Karin-A was a ship that Israeli commandos captured that had $20 million of weapons in it and had some very sophisticated weapons right off the shelf from Iran, including rocket launchers, rockets, not just mortars but rockets. The equivalents of our TOW missiles.

I actually have some pictures because we reviewed not just the weapons, these were weapons that were seized in the West Bank up to this point; they were weapons that were literally seized during the military incursion and that is exactly what these weapons are success or proof of the right and the necessity of the incursion because the suicide belt we saw in the previous picture, that suicide belt was not made to be put in a museum. It literally was made to be used. And the capture of that one belt prevented that one belt from being used, and we do not know how many lives and how many tragedies, and literally the tragedies are each one is as painful as we can possibly imagine in terms of human condition.

Did the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) want to add something to that?

Mr. HOEFFEL. Well, the enormity of this, it is hard to appreciate unless you see the weapons. And the great variety, from brand-new modern weapons never used before seized from the Karin-A with an attempt to smuggle them in from Iran, to old battered, well-worn weapons that the Palestinians have obviously been using for years and years to homemade weapons, weapons made from sections of water pipe and slingshots for the firing pins to set off these homemade weapons. An absolutely staggering commitment to mayhem, to using violent means to try to win their political goals.

The enormity of the terror is hard to grasp unless you see the weapons, unless you talk to the families of the victims, unless you see the locations of the terror bombings in Jerusalem as we did on our walking tour. And when we hear the stories of the families and the human tragedies of innocents dying, not soldiers dying in combat for their country, but innocents.

We have heard the story of Michael and Malka, two 15-year-old friends, inseparable, went to school together, lived next door to each other, had known each other since both were babies, 15 years old. They snuck off to get some pizza last August at the Sbarro restaurant in downtown Jerusalem and got blown to kingdom come. Their parents buried them side by side where they will rest forever.

That is hard to understand. It is hard to appreciate the horror for those families and hard to understand how anybody can justify such action. You can have the world’s most difficult grievance, and you can be ticked off about something, and feel that the other guy is causing you a lot of aggravation, but how can you ever justify murdering innocent civilians?

Mr. WEINER. If the gentleman will yield, there is a broader political point here as well. And that is the Israelis have arguably tried everything under the sun to deter these kinds of attacks. That did not work. Now they are doing what some other countries have done.

Some in the Chamber last week or 10 days ago in arguing against the resolution said perhaps we should recognize the grievance of the suicide bomber, sit down at the table and negotiate with them.

What lesson does that send to the next guy who is going to fly a plane into a tall building in the United States? What lesson does that teach the person who is sitting at home in Nablus or in Jenin about whether or not they should go and take up violence, not only against Israel but against the United States or anyone else with whom they might have a grievance.

We have to be very careful when we do what sometimes happens in the State Department here in the United States and we offer this sense of kind of understanding where they are coming from when they blow up a bunch of children in a shopping center. I believe we embolden further attacks. I believe we make it steadily, piece by piece, part of the political debate. It was truly mindboggling for me to listen to the rhetoric of many Members of Congress. The gentleman showed pictures of his visit to Democrats, to Republicans, overwhelmingly from all regions of this country, this House and stood up and said we understand what Israel is facing. We support her in perhaps one of the strongest pro-Israel resolutions this House has ever passed.

Imagine for a moment if we did it. Imagine if we were a little more lukewarm and said, maybe we see the beef that the Palestinians have when they engage in suicide bombings. That creates more violence. I remember distinctly in June of 2001, Tel Aviv discotheque terrorist event. Someone gets in line at a discoteque on a Saturday night, teenagers all around, blows themselves up, blows up over a dozen young people around them. Quickly the United States, even the European community, which has never made a sophisticated operation that the United States and the Israelis and the world has not denied that Yasser Arafat’s direct involvement in the purchase and the logistics of these weapons.

The sophistication of the weapons in a sense is highlighted by this container. All of the weapons that were seized on the Karin-A were actually in containers like this, which are water-tight containers. In fact, some of the weapons that the Israelis seized showed that they could fit inside these containers. And the containers themselves were very sophisticated in that they had a specially built compressed-air-water compartment that would actually be able to hold the containers set at a certain depth in the Mediterranean Sea so they could then be picked up later on with this buoy attachment. And that in fact could have escalated the conflict dramatically. Every weapon there was in violation of Oslo. Every weapon that was there is in violation of Oslo.

Mr. HOEFFEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I could not agree more. The violation of law and the agreement represented by these weapons really goes a long way towards showing the attitude of the Palestinians toward the agreement that they made and their intention for their future use in the Middle East.

The other thing that was quite pertinent to our government, the documents that the Israelis seized from the Palestinian Authority offices in the West Bank during the military incursion. Documents were seized in Arabic showing how the terrorists are funded, showing how the Saudis make payments to the terrorists and the families of terrorists, showing how Yasser Arafat’s organization submits memos to him recommending that payments be made to a list of what they euphemistically call freedom fighters. That would be in American English “terrorists.” And how Yasser Arafat signs off on those memos asking for certain levels of funding.

In most cases he reduces the payments to be made to each individual, but there are signed documents showing to my satisfaction certainly, that Arafat has been directing terror. Certainly through the Fatah organization, the Tanzim and Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades that he commands as head of Fatah, and these documents and the
Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, I think the issue of the day and I think in a sense maybe if we move beyond the resolution and I think in a sense we have debated against an empty seat and we have debated successfully.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Would the gentleman agree we won the debate?

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, I think in the environment we are at won when we entered the Chamber and I think it is important, and I hope there is a discourse because clearly a number of our colleagues, again less than around 10 percent or so, articulated a position which I am just disappointed, and it is by lack of information, it is a lack of thought, lack of really thinking through the actual conditions of what occurred.

We would not talk about moral equivalency with the United States war in Afghanistan, and the similarity was parallel, I think, in this case, the Israelis are doing, and as we both have said, there should be a Yasser Arafat exemption to the war on terrorism?

I would like to follow up though, and really, the issue of the day is should the Israelis continue to negotiate with Yasser Arafat? Is he the negotiating partner to try to get to the resolution of the conflict, and as the gentleman said, not only did the Israelis seize a huge amount of sophisticated weapons in their incursions and suicide belts and other things, but a huge amount of documents, which at this point in time no one is refuting the authenticity.

In fact, we met the parents of a soldier who actually downloaded some of the documents and was killed in a subsequent action, and he told his parents about it. So I do not think there was a scam of him telling his parents about what he did.

No one at this point is really questioning literally the authenticity of the document that is blown up on this chart and in Yasser Arafat’s handwriting, which again no one is questioning at this point in time, is exactly what is described. It is a request to Yasser Arafat from a senior Fatah activist, Hassan al Sheik, for payments of $2,500 for three known terrorists. I mean, people who are on Israel’s most wanted list who the Israelis knew were involved in previous terrorist actions, in fact, through the Israelis, subsequently eliminated, and a request for $2,500. Chairman Arafat, as my colleague had mentioned, says allocate $600 to each of them in his own handwriting directly involved in that payment.

There are other documents. This is a longer list of 12 people who were involved in terrorist activities and for this group, I do not see the exact amount, but again, with Arafat’s signature, it is a $350 payment for terrorist activities.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, let me ask the gentleman, does he think those payments were for putting a roof on Arafat’s house?

Mr. DEUTSCH. I think what is clear is they are what they are.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Can there be any question about what those payments are authorized for, what the purpose behind them is?

Mr. DEUTSCH. They are what they are. Arafat, he was not a terrorist 10 years ago or 5 years ago or a year. He is still a terrorist. He was engaged in terrorism activity continuously, and his words might sound nice at this point in time, but it is not ancient history to go back.

Here is a document, a request from the Al Aqsa Martyr troops for money to pay to the Palestinian Authority and for suicide bombers, there is a specific request for 700 shekels, and I am reading it directly, this is for detonators for suicide bombers. We need every week five to nine. Five to nine explosive charges every week, 700 shekels per week, directly to the PA by Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigade, people who are literally perpetrating the suicide bombings.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, the documents do indeed speak for themselves and leave one just no choice but to conclude that Yasser Arafat has directed terror, that he has in the past and he presently is, and the question is for this House, for this country what needs to be done in order to stop this activity.

It seems to me, I know the gentleman and I have discussed this, that there must be a recognition that there are other Palestinians and Arab leaders of the Arab league must declare that terror must be renounced, that violence must be renounced and they must do it in word and deed. They have done it in word, but the documents that the gentleman has and the photographs of the weapons indicate that indeed they are still involved in terror and in financing terror.

Mr. DEUTSCH. This is going to be the last document and there is more, that there are other documents, another one is dated March 24, 2002, and during the stage of these operations, and this is a copy of minutes of a meeting in Haifa was owned by an Arab Israeli and about half the victims were Arabs, not Jews, Arabs and Jews. The screws and the nuts and the ball bearings do not discriminate and, too, they are going to use them and kill.

The reality of how bad and awful that is, Yasser Arafat and the Palestinian Authority have been as bad and maybe even worse to their own people, indiscriminately killing people in just no type of civil process at all, destruction of an economy, corruption at levels which is untold, probably unmatched almost anywhere in the world the level of corruption, and that in a sense is the entity that the United States is supporting in its efforts to stop terrorists with global reach whether they be in Iraq, in Syria or North Korea. There is no daylight between us, but I think there are many in this Chamber, in this country unfortunately who disagree with some of President’s policies in terms of trying to say, well, Yasser Arafat and these activities really are not as evil as they are.
One of the great things about President Reagan was when there was an evil empire he called it an evil empire and the Palestinian Authority is an evil empire, and we can call it white and we can call it black. If we call black white, it does not make it white, and the speaking to any of the leadership and these other things, the entity itself is evil, is corrupt beyond comprehension. We both heard stories that I would not say on this floor of some of the activities of the Palestinian Authority itself. This is a reprint of a New York Times article April 20, 2002, and they interviewed a printer in the West Bank who had an ongoing contract with the Palestinian Authority to, after every suicide bomber who was killed, to automatically within several hours with information about that suicide bomber print up 1,000 posters to then be put up. This is just a sample form. That is the entity, the glorification of the suicide bomber is what we have seen.

Mr. HOEFFEL. We face the reality of what the people in this country can be expected to go forward, before the United States government can be expected to go forward. We all want peace. There is no question about it. Even the Members that voted against this resolution are willing, is it to be made, is it to be done, is it possible to make it happen.

I have stated, too, I am sure the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, to tonight I want to talk about children and the topic of education. I believe it is the most important issue that we have and that deals with how we look out into the future of America and where we are headed. My colleagues who preceded me had a very excellent discussion, the tenor of which I certainly concur with and agree. And I guess I would ask colleagues to consider this same debate or similar debates years and years from now, when the children of today are the leaders of tomorrow and are debating these important matters of international peace and security and all the topics that we deal with here in the Congress.

I would invite my colleagues who may be monitoring today's proceedings, if they are interested in engaging in this discussion or participating in it, to come join me here on the floor. The topic today is, again, education, and particularly with respect to the proposal of education tax credits. This is something our President has mentioned frequently. This is a topic that has become well-known in several States that have preceded this Congress in exploring the topic of education tax credits, and it is an innovative idea and a way to try to get new dollars, additional dollars to children for the purposes of expanding and broadening their academic horizons.

I am one who believes here, Mr. Speaker, if our children really are important, and I believe they are, that this Congress ought to be prepared to spend whatever it takes to give them the kind of quality education that they deserve here in America, an education that is second to none. Unfortunately, we do not have that today. We have not had that in the past. Unfortunately, we do not have that today. Yet we can spend almost every dollar we can dream up here in Washington and take from the taxpayers in order to spend on education. We have spent considerable amounts of money on the Federal education system, and that is magnified even to a far greater degree when we consider the billions of dollars, in fact the trillions of dollars that have been poured into education around the 50 States and through local school districts.

At least at the Federal level, for the amount of money that we have spent, about $125 billion over the last 10 years to be precise, we should have better results, and we should certainly expect those results to be far improved over and above the indications of today. Our President understands this, and that was the basis of the legislation he persuaded this Congress to pass last year. His first major legislative initiative was all about education, and that was the core of his campaign for office. He proposed doing for the country what he managed to accomplish in Texas, and that was to first take into account the huge numbers of dollars that have been spent on education and then start asking questions, like what do we get for the money.

The governor of Texas at the time, our current President, was led to establish a testing strategy for the State of Texas throughout the country, and the President suggested we should do the same thing for the whole Nation, and the Congress, by a pretty overwhelming margin, agreed with him. Democrats and Republicans joined together to study it. We have been shown that has turned out to be a higher set of expectations for the Nation, a system of national testing.
I want to start there, because what the President actually proposed up front was not only a testing strategy, that was just a portion, and in fact a smaller portion of his proposal, but he also proposed greater flexibilities for the States, the most important element, the core of the President’s proposal, was school choice. Unfortunately, the school choice provisions were ripped out of the bill even before it came up for its first hearing here on the House floor. The flexibility provisions were removed too, by the time the bill got through over on the other side of the Capitol, and all the President was left with was this the smaller portion of the bill which dealt with testing mandates on States.

In order to get the institutions of the bureaucracy of education to go along with the President’s idea, even one-third of his idea, we had to feed the beast that has to have an outflow of cash. We had to give more money to the Department of Education and all of the institutions associated with it in order to get them to comply or to go along. But as I said earlier, money is really important, and I believe they are, we should be able to be prepared to spend whatever it takes in order to improve their education opportunity, and we certainly did that in H.R. 1. We expanded the Department dramatically in exchange for the new accountability that goes along with it.

But we have not lost sight of the core element of the President’s proposal, and that is the school choice element. Tax credits give us an opportunity to expand the Department dramatically in exchange for the new accountability that goes along with it.

They are excited, Mr. Speaker, because they have managed to see how tax credits work in a handful of States. There are six States, to be exact, that have tax credit legislation on their State law books and they are seeing the fruits of that. What I mean is they are realizing that by manipulating the Tax Code, taxpayers are eager to contribute money to the schools and to do so in a way that provides new kinds of education choices to children who have not had choice in the past.

Education choice is not such an important issue to those who are wealthy, because they can afford to buy it. They can afford to forego the property taxes, the income taxes, the sales taxes that they are paying right now, in generous proportions, I might add, to government-owned schools, and, instead, pay additional dollars for the tuition that it may cost to attend a private institution. So if you have money, school choice is really not something that is out of reach. By if you are poor in America, you do not have school choice because there is a handful of places where these tax credits exist; or in some places where vouchers exist, which is something entirely different than what is being discussed tonight, still a good idea but different; and in places where others have banded together to try to raise money to provide scholarships for low-income children.

That exists in almost every State, these student tuition organizations, as they are called in our legislation education investment organizations. They exist in all 50 States today, and they exist because of the generosity of many, many Americans who want to contribute their earnings and pay back to society in some way that offers real hope and opportunity for young children.

I have some letters from some of the children who have benefited from these investment organizations, these scholarship funds and from some of them. They are pretty inspiring and I think speak to why we need to be aggressive about achieving this legislation this year. But what we are really here to propose and to discuss is the legislation that is in the works right now that will be introduced within just a couple of weeks that will provide a change in the Tax Code to make it easier for Americans to contribute to these scholarship funds and to contribute directly to children’s education. That is the core of the President’s proposal, to lobby our colleagues and persuade them that this is the right thing to do, that the experience in the States that have education tax credit legislation is an experience worth considering and even worth duplicating here in Washington.

I received a letter from somebody in Fort Collins, Colorado, they did not give me permission to use their name so I will not, but in the letter he says, one of my constituents says, “Education tax credits have the greatest potential to significantly and instantly affect change in our current educational system. As parents know best, children’s strengths, needs and efficiencies, this tax credit would ensure that money spent would be used in the most beneficial and targeted way possible. With this legislation, parents would be empowered to ensure that their children are equipped with the academic and educational tools necessary to improve their quality of education. Also, as this tax credit is for all educational expenses, parental involvement in their child’s education would increase, and employers would know that tax credits would ensure that economic considerations will never again keep lower-income children from receiving an all-important supplemental education at home. The quality of our children's education stands to be greatly enriched by this legislation, just as millions of children across the United States would be affected as well.

While this is a profoundly compelling testimony, it again comes from one of my constituents. And I may raise this with him at another time to see if I can use his name publicly. I do not have that permission now, as I mentioned. But this is the kind of letter that many of us are sending to Congress. Here is that not the only one I have received in my office. Again, this debate is taking place in my home State, so people are in tune with it there.

As I mentioned, in some of the States that have passed tax credit legislations, and the best examples are Arizona, Pennsylvania, Florida, and Minnesota, there has passed a tax credit bill. What are they seeing in those States is really dramatic and remarkable. Here is some testimony that was delivered in front of one of the committees that took place in one of our States in terms of the fact that these scholarship funds are having. This is from a student named Sasha. She said again in prepared testimony, "My family applied for a scholarship for me to be able to study at the school that I consider a very special place.

Let me stop there. That really is the key because the definition of quality of education today under the bureaucratic model that we have established for the country falls into the hands of the bureaucrats who run the bureaucracy. Let us say you have a 5-year-old that is going to kindergarten, or maybe you have older kids and you move into a new neighborhood. You call the school district and say, Johnny is ready to go to school, what are my options?

The first question you will get is what is your address. When you deliver your address to the person on the other end of the phone, they will say your address corresponds to a particular neighborhood school. If they have a lot of money where the school is, they will choose if you had unlimited resources at your disposal.

With a tax credit, the goal is to move away from trusting somebody who does not know the name of your child with placing your child into a school that they think makes sense for this child that they do not know. Tax credits leave this decision to people who know the child better, the parents.

Sasha wrote, "My family applied for a scholarship for me to be able to study at the school that I consider a very special place. It is special because it is where I learn the most and where I enjoy learning. It is a place where I can dream, and have that feeling that I am going to be successful in my life, successful because of what I am learning right now. In the past, my mom tried to put me in Catholic schools, but she could not afford the tuition for very long. Last year in the same school because of the scholarships she has secured for my sisters and me. I will be very happy if I can stay at my school and have the same good friends as long as possible. They are special."

Sasha goes on, "I think school is important because I have learned a lot of stuff that I did not know. I have just learned how to add, subtract, multiply and divide fractions. We will be doing geometry soon. I know I am learning all of this because algebra is coming. I think that might be fun. Going to Blessed Sacrament is important because the work is challenging, not easy. The most challenging subject is math because of the concept of algebra. At first I thought it was hard. I really try hard to get good grades." Sasha goes on and describes her experience in the school that she was able to choose as a result of her scholarship.

The reason tax credit legislation is relevant to this student is because manipulating the Tax Code to reduce the tax burden on Americans who contribute to such scholarship organizations will result in a massive cash infusion in the school system, and it will result in the same kinds of positive experiences for more and more children across the country, just as the experience occurred to the student I just referred to.

Here is testimony from a teacher. This was given to the Colorado State legislature, testimony before that legislature. This teacher’s name is Maureen Lord. She is the supervisor for a group called Save Our Youth. She was there to testify about a particular student named Joe Ray. "Joe Ray was designated learning disabled at the local public school. At the end of his fifth grade year, he was reading between a second and third grade level, hated writing anything. His distraction level was extremely high. To complicate things more, he had some fine motor problems. Being an elementary educator myself, I knew that Joe Ray would never be at grade level, and much less able to function in a public school system where he only received an hour of special attention during each school day. His future looked dismal for accomplishing the basic skills he needed to go on to middle and high school.

Let me point out that this experience is not unique throughout the country, but it is also not the rule in most public schools. I would bet that if Joe Ray lived in a wealthy neighborhood, that Joe Ray would receive the kind of attention that he needed; but Joe Ray does not live in a wealthy neighborhood. Joe Ray goes on, "I think school is important because I have learned a lot of stuff that I did not know. I have just learned how to add, subtract, multiply and divide fractions. We will be doing geometry soon. I know I am learning all of this because algebra is coming. I think that might be fun. Going to Blessed Sacrament is important because the work is challenging, not easy. The most challenging subject is math because of the concept of algebra. At first I thought it was hard. I really try hard to get good grades."

Joe Ray also testified before the Colorado legislature. He said, "I am really glad I do not have to go to my old school anymore. There were always people selling drugs there. I was afraid to go to school because I didn’t want to get beat up any more at my old school. They gave me the answers to the CSAP test, which is the State standardized test. That is pretty common. I hear that not only in Colorado but in several States.

"They were not very helpful to me with math, reading and writing. I did not like my old school at all. I like my new school because they help me better. They teach me in a way that is right for me. The teacher is nice to me, and there are so many other school kids. I also like that I do not have to switch classes. I like Dove Christian schools. I go on field trips that are really fun. I am so glad I was able to come back again. The new school I go to does help me a lot more. Dove Christian Academy does different things to help me learn. I read a lot better now, and I think my math and writing are better, too. I really thank ACE and the money they have given me. I am so glad I was able to come to the school and learn. Now I have a chance to get a good education and maybe even go to college."

Pretty powerful testimony in one State that has an experience with education tax credits. We can do this for the whole country. We have a chance..."
to accomplish this in all 50 States and amplify the good record that is taking place in a handful of other States across the country.

This is a topic that is not one that belongs to Democrats or Republicans, conservatives. I happen to be a Republican, but this is a proposal that has been advanced by Democrats and State legislators around the country. It is supported by Democrats here. It is one that has been proposed in my State in the Colorado State senate, and a liberal one at that, and at the same time was being carried in the State House of Representatives by a very conservative Republican.

It has the ability to bring people together of different political persuasions because at its focus is America's school children. I have to confess when it comes to the education debate in Washington, too often children are the last individuals considered. We talk about them and I think there is no doubt about that. We get nice pictures of them up here and try to suggest to the country and the world that the children are at the center of the debate, and I think they are in our hearts. We care about the kids, there is doubt about that. But at the time the bills make it to the floor of this House and over to the other side of the Capitol, the lobbyists take over, and they watch every line item in these bills and make sure that their organizations and their members are not affected by the ideas that we advance to try to help children. The children are at a disadvantage because they do not have lobbyists here. Their parents vote for us as Congressmen and Senators, and sometimes Members get replaced when they do not fight hard enough. That does happen from time to time. The lobbyists watch much closer here. They fight hard to maintain and preserve the bureaucracy and the unions that go along with America's education system.

When you cross these powerful groups, the consequences are sometimes very, very dangerous because they have millions of dollars to spend against you. They have big political campaign war chests that they use to try to persuade people that if you do not persuade your constituents back home if you are not fighting hard enough for the bureaucracy, for the institution or the union, that means you are not a team player and you should be replaced. They have a far more successful ratio of replacing Congressmen who do not stand up for the bureaucracy than the children do and their parents when children fail to be the objective of education debates.

Here is why this is true. This chart on my right explains how money gets down to a child. At the top is a hardworking taxpayer who pays his cash, a portion of his earnings through taxes. It is not voluntary. It is confiscated from his paycheck, Washington, D.C. to the Treasury Department. The Treasury Department takes account of all of these dollars, tracks how these dollars are coming in, so that politicians, me and my colleagues in Congress, we make decisions on how to spend these dollars, we spend a pretty sizable portion of our time as the United States Department of Education. They occupy some large buildings. We allocate a big chunk to the Department, and it goes to those buildings two blocks away. Once it gets there, it is distributed and redistributed to all 50 States, all 50 States and territories and districts, the District of Columbia as well. At the State level the politicians there, the State legislators, they divvy up the dollars that come from the Federal Government, as well as State and local dollars. They redistribute the funds to the State Department of Education and that whole bureaucracy.

The State Department of Education gives those dollars to the school districts in all 50 States. In Colorado there are 176 school districts. The school districts, of course, they are run by elected school board members, and they meet with all the interest groups that they have to deal with and they decide how to spend these dollars and apportion them for the various schools within a school district. Once the principals and the teachers at the school level have decided how to prioritize those funds, then these dollars finally get to the child way down here. By the time the taxpayer's dollar goes through this school vexus of bureaucracy and politicians, the proportion of the actual money that might go to the child is very, very small. In fact, it has been estimated that somewhere around 30 to 40 percent of the tax dollar taken from the hardworking American for the purpose of education ever makes it down to the child.

That explains the politics of education in America, which has as much to do with the necessity of education tax credits as the positive outcome of tax credits themselves. I have tried, as many of my colleagues have, Mr. Speaker, to try to change this system from within. I came here to Washington because I have got five kids of my own. I kind of feel that my children and children as you should be replaced. They have a far more successful ratio of replacing Congressmen who do not stand up for the bureaucracy than the children do and their parents when children fail to be the objective of education debates. I have tried, as many of my colleagues have, Mr. Speaker, to try to change this system from within. I came here to Washington because I have got five kids of my own. They have a far more successful ratio of replacing Congressmen who do not stand up for the bureaucracy than the children do and their parents when children fail to be the objective of education debates.

Here is how the tax credit model works. The hardworking taxpayer donates directly to the needs of a child. Again, they do this through a change in the Tax Code. And this is a change in the structure of the bureaucracy. The Tax Code allows this taxpayer to make a donation based on what strikes him or her as a good idea, a local priority, an urgent need, and to donate to that cause rather than continue to shovel dollars through this process, you get a big political fight on your hands. It is a fight worth engaging, do not get me wrong. I enjoy doing it. It is the right fight. My kids matter enough that I am willing to take it on and suffer whatever political consequence might occur. But sometimes we win. Sometimes we lose. Usually we lose. Anybody who wants to change this system usually loses, because the relationship between these agencies matters more to politicians in Washington and politicians in the States and ultimately to school board members than the child does down here in the bottom. I hate to admit that, but that is the absolute truth. I would defy anyone to try to deny that and would welcome a vigorous debate on that point.

Again, I am willing to admit we all talk about the kids down here, but when this debate takes place in the House floor it is all the people who run these agencies that count the most, unfortunately. They are the ones who are heard the loudest. Their voices tend to drown out the child down here at the bottom and they drown out the expectations of the taxpayer, too.

Rather than try to tamper with all this in a tax credit bill or an education proposal, keep in mind that trying to improve this system is the primary function of the Education Committee and we are working on that, but that really is a separate debate than the proposal that we are rallying around now. Because rather than amend this or change it or do anything to this, we are going to leave it alone and try to bypass this process with new money, not the old money. We are going to continue to feed cash to this system in America. It is already budgeted this year. Mark my words, when the appropriation bill passes, we are going to grow the size of this bureaucracy because it does not matter who is in charge, it does not matter whether Republicans are in charge or Democrats are in charge, we are going to grow the size of this bureaucracy. That is the track record. That is the way it is. We have got to accept that, I finally have. But I am trying to find a way to get this guy's dollar to that child and tax credits is a way to solve this problem.

Here is how the tax credit model works. The hardworking taxpayer donates directly to the needs of a child. Again, they do this through a change in the Tax Code, not a change in the structure of the bureaucracy. across the country, this is what Americans prefer. Taxpayers like this guy have expressed to me, just as my cousin did last week, that even though she does not have children who are in schools anymore, she would love to have the advantage of a tax credit so that she could contribute to the education cause in her neighborhood, for somebody else's child, for a poor child whose future will not be so bright unless we are willing to put the cash forward. It is little freedom. It is a little liberty that wealthy parents can afford. It is not just the individuals who can contribute. Our tax credit proposal also entails corporate contributions, because we have heard from businesses around the country as well that if given the chance they would prefer to invest in an academic program in their neighborhood that is designed by a school board member perhaps or maybe by a superintendent or maybe by a church or a synagogue or maybe by a nonprofit organization, they would rather invest in something they believe in locally than continue to send exorbitant amounts of money here and have it filtered through this process that I described.

And they like the idea that tax credits allow us to begin to measure the fairness in education by the relationship between individuals rather than the relationship between these political entities. It is the simplicity of it that is how we measure education fairness in America today. Schools keep track of how much each school receives. School districts keep track of how much school districts receive. They compare themselves to each other. Every State has got a lobbyist in Washington, by the way. Not the elected officials. I mean, they hire lobbyists to come here. Every State has lobbyists back here. The lobbyist's job is to make sure that Colorado or any of the other States is receiving generally the same amounts of money that Kansas is or Wyoming or any of our neighboring States. You have got this 50 times over as these lobbyists are measuring education fairness by the relationship between their political jurisdiction in their States. And then, of course, up here at the Federal level, agencies and departments, they just do not like to lose money. If a program received a billion dollars last year, the people who run the program say, boy, we want to make sure that they receive at least a billion dollars next year, too. And if they have fewer students that they serve, that does not matter. If they do not serve students well, that does not matter. They just want the same amount of money or more, because that is how they get the plagues on their wall suggesting that they are good bureaucrats, good managers. These people work hard, they care, they have been trained well to operate within the system. In fact they have got this down pat. They never sit in the meetings that I get to sit in on, you will learn about this whole new language that exists in the education bureaucracy. They have got all these agencies and programs that are called by their initials, these terms that relate to my kids that we do not use at home but if you want to be involved in discussions about this, you have got to pay attention to all of that kind of irrelevant and makes no sense to the taxpayer up here at the top or the child down there at the bottom. Once again, that is fine for all the people who work in this system, but do not care about the kids anymore. Fairness should be measured by the relationship between programs or States or school districts or individual schools. Fairness should be measured by the relationship between children down here at the bottom. That is what the tax credit proposal really allows us to begin to do.

We get to start thinking about some of these students that are referred to in this testimony I read. We even had some of these students who came to Washington here and testified in front of the Education Committee. When you hear from the children who speak in terms of their future and their hope and learning about algebra and getting back to grade level and going to college, students who have been written off in the past, when you hear these kinds of stories, you begin to care about the kids again. You do not care so much about the comfort of the bureaucracy anymore. We will acknowledge that the bureaucracy is a big organization. They have got lots of lobbyists. They have got a lot of political firepower. We are going to leave them alone. We are going to find a new way to change the child's life and help children achieve their academic dreams.

This chart is one that refers to just one scholarship organization that exists today, and this is the kind of scholarship organization that a tax credit would utilize in order to reach children. It is a rather large one, it is called the Children's Scholarship Fund. I pulled this off of the Children's Scholarship Fund's website. This shows the concentration of applications that this scholarship organization received from throughout the country. The blue areas are places in America where children apply to receive scholarships from one nonprofit organization in order to attend schools that the children and their parents wanted their children to attend. This is broken down based on geographic concentration. It will not go through the whole chart here, but the light blue is anywhere where you have from 1 to 99 applicants in a State; the red dots, these large cities, Detroit, Chicago, New Orleans, we can see Atlanta, New York, Washington, D.C., Los Angeles. These are places where between 10,000 and 80,000 people who are interested in scholarships might live. Now, these are where the applications came from, and there is a pretty broad level of interest from throughout the country.

Unfortunately, the Children's Scholarship Fund, again, a private organization, not a government institution; it gives scholarships out based on how many people want to contribute to the scholarship fund out of their own free will as a donation; they do not have unlimited resources. They cannot give these scholarships to all of the children who want academic freedom, who want a little liberty in their lives, who want to be treated as well as wealthy children are who can choose the kind of school they want to attend. So all of these applicants applied, but only a fraction of them actually walked away with a scholarship and ended up with some of the success stories that I read about a little earlier.

The second chart shows us the distribution of recipients, and it is broken down by counties. We can see that the scholarship fund, this particular organization, the Children's Scholarship Fund does a great job. They reach thousands of children around America, but there is a lot that are just overlooked by this one organization.

What a tax credit will allow is for every taxpayer in America to contribute to an organization like the Children's Scholarship Fund. This would be one of their options. As I say, this is a large one that has kind of a national emphasis, but every one of our States, Mr. Speaker, has an organization similar to this one in it, at least one. The State of Arizona has about 70 of them.

The reason Arizona, if I can use Arizona as an example, the reason Arizona has so many scholarship organizations in it is because Arizona as a State passed education tax credit legislation 3 years ago. As time goes on, more and more people are deciding to send their State tax dollars to these scholarship organizations to help children. The impact that it is having on Arizona's children, especially the poor, is rather remarkable. In fact, it has been studied pretty extensively.

I have the analysis of the Arizona tax credit plan, the Arizona scholarship plan. This is a report that was written by 2 researchers, Carrie Lips and Jennifer Jacoby. In fact, Carrie Lips now works here for the House of Representatives and the Republican Policy Committee. What this report shows is really remarkable. It shows that between 1998 and 2000, the tax credit in Arizona generated 32 million new dollars and funded almost 30 scholarship organizations. Now, that is $32 million in the education system of Arizona that was not there before. It is $32 million that did not come from Arizona's public education system, but scholarships to all of these kids who get scholarships out of Arizona on a voluntary basis. Because the Tax Code in Arizona makes it easier for people to invest in the number 1, most important industry in America, which is education. They believe that in Arizona, Mr. Speaker, 15,000 scholarships. People care about this. They have made a huge difference in the lives of students there.
I have heard similar stories around the country in some of these other States that have embarked on tax credit legislation at the State level, in Pennsylvania and Florida, just to name a few. More than 80 percent of those scholarship programs were revealed to recipients who were selected on the basis of financial need. Every scholarship representative reported financial need is considered in the allocation process. What I mean by that is every one of the organizations, I think there are 70 organizations now in 2002 that distribute these funds, they all report that financial need is a consideration of allocation of spending. The taxpayers with the power here are the donors who recognize this. The media does too. Again, I want to stress that financial need is a consideration. The students who go to nonprofit-owned schools as a result of the Arizona plan actually save money for the public schools and institutions, and it is just staggering. In the year 2000, in Arizona, 37,000 citizens voluntarily contributed to scholarship programs like the one I described, and again, this is just one State, one State’s example, one State’s experience, one more reason why education tax credits need to be considered here in Washington; one more example why our President has committed to lend his support and the power and might of the President’s office to get a tax credit proposal through this Congress.

Mr. Speaker, it is not just politicians and children and the donors who recognize this. The media does too. Again, I mention the media. In Denver, “neighborhood rich in diversity with new immigrants, the home to many monolingual Spanish speaking children and parents who need special education services.” It goes on and on about the children in these neighborhoods and how they will benefit from education tax credits, a proposal that is similar to the one in Arizona, Florida, Pennsylvania, and Illinois, and it talks about how Colorado’s proposal, if it were to pass, would have an even more positive impact there.

Here is one from the Fort Collins Coloradan, and this is probably one of the most liberal newspapers in the entire State of Colorado; in fact, probably in the entire country, and they agree. “Tax credit for low-income programs are needed.” Helping children value education and stay in school, and they talk about how Hispanic organizations and Hispanic leaders, minority leaders are rallying around this tax credit proposal, but there is a lone opponent. It says, “nor do we agree with Ron Brady, President of the CEA,” which is the Colorado Education Association, that is the local regiment of the NEA, the National Education Association, and it is the largest political lobbying, political special interest group in America, and very powerful. They have a good record of crushing bills that help poor children like this. So this is the fight that is taking place in Colorado. Hopefully, hopefully, the poor children will win and the tax credit bill will pass.

Then, here is the article from the Coloradan. “Bill-boosting education organizations draws debate. Hispanics praise it, but school officials call it detrimental.” That is the debate I would anticipate here in Washington as well. We do have support from our Department of Education and our leadership there. We have support from our own President; we have lots of support here in the Congress. But once again, the many, many thousands of employees who work in these various political entities and organizations, they are the ones who oppose these efforts to reach out to poor children in the States; they are the ones who have expressed the greatest amount of resistance here in Washington. It is the right fight, though, for children.

For those of us who came here to Washington to try to beat this bureaucracy, to try to shape it into something that benefits kids in the end, it is another good fight. I think the strategy of this makes a lot of sense, because we are not going to touch any of this. We are going to leave the bureaucracy in place. We are going to bypass it through the Tax Code and allow the hard-working taxpayers to contribute to the academic dreams of America’s schoolchildren.

It is a good plan.

Just as I close, in terms of strategy for those of our colleagues who are interested in the legislation and have their staff members investigating it, we have had all the meetings with the Committee on Education and the Workforce, with the Committee on Ways and Means and we are trying to get as many considerations taken into account as we get the final drafts passed. We intend to get a draft that will move through committee rather quickly. We have a commitment from our leadership to accomplish that in June and bring a bill to this floor. We are working with our friends in the Senate as well, and we have some cause for optimism on the Senate side. It is, again, because of the track record of the States that we have seen and the enthusiasm of so many outside groups and organizations that care about education that this really is a high point that warrants real excitement. Children are going to win. Taxpayers are going to win. The country is going to win, and those are the kind of victories we all need to celebrate and get behind.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the recognition this evening.

Incomplete record of House proceedings.

Today’s House proceedings will be continued in the next issue of the Record.
The Senate met at 9:30 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Honorable MAX CLELAND, a Senator from the State of Georgia.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Hear God's word in Proverbs 3:3-4:

Let love and faithfulness never leave you; bind them around your neck, write them on the tablet of your heart. Then you will win favor and a good name in the sight of God and man.

Let us pray:

Thank You, dear God, for this reminder of what is ultimately important to You. We commit this day to love You with all our minds and hearts. When love for You is our primary motivation, life becomes a delight and not a drudgery. The strain and stress are gone. We are free to work with one commanding goal: to do everything we do to glorify You. Faithfulness flows naturally. We are accountable to You. Help us to remember that every action, word, and decision is open to Your judgment. Bless the Senators today with the profound peace of trusting You completely and serving You with the profound peace of trusting Your leading. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable Max Cleland led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,

To the Senate:

ROBERT C. BYRD, President pro tempore.

Mr. Cleland thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The Acting President pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Reid, Mr. President, the Chair will shortly announce that we will in a period for morning business until 10:30 a.m. today, with the first half controlled by the Republican leader and the second half under the control of the majority leader, or their respective designees. At 10:30 a.m. we will resume consideration of the trade bill, with 10 minutes of debate prior to a vote in relation to the Baucus-Grassley amendment regarding investors. Following disposition of the Baucus amendment, Senator Dayton will be recognized to offer the Dayton-Craig amendment regarding unfair trade practices. We will recess from 12:30 p.m. to 2:15 p.m. today for our weekly party conferences.

Mr. President, there is a lot of interest in this legislation. There will be a significant number of amendments offered. The majority leader has indicated he wants Senators to have that opportunity to offer amendments. We hope Members will do that. We also hope we can work on time agreements on these amendments and move this legislation forward. This legislation has the interest of both leaders in the Senate. The President has spoken about it often. It is legislation we have to move. And remember, a week from Friday we go into our Memorial Day recess. We have a lot of work to do prior to that time, and one of the items we have to dispose of is this legislation before we can do other things. Noting that, I look forward to a very productive day.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each. Under the previous order, the time until 10 a.m. shall be under the control of the Republican leader or his designee.

Mr. President, the Chair will announce that we will move forward on the trade bill. I hope we can move quickly. It is one of the more important issues before us, of which there are many. I say again, I hope we can take a look at this bill in terms of what it is designed to do, and that is to provide for the President an outline of how he may negotiate trade agreements and bring those
FEDERAL HIGHWAY TRUST FUND

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I wish to speak about a different issue that is very important to all of us, certainly in Wyoming where we have long distances to travel. As we say, we have low population and small towns with very long streets.

Transportation and highways are very important to us. Highways, of course, have generally been funded by a combination of Federal funds and State funds. Federal funds being very important and to continue to be even more important as time goes by. What we do with State highways and State highway funding becomes one of the principal issues with which we have to deal.

Several years ago, we had the 21st century TEA-21, which was an appropriation and a plan for highway funding. Last week, the Finance Committee held a hearing regarding the status of the highway trust fund. This highway trust fund, it seems to me, is very important because as a member of the Environment and Public Works Committee, I helped craft this Transportation Equity Act, or TEA-21, as it is called, which provides more dollars for the States than in the past and has a very good distribution system which basically allocates money to the States and lets them decide how those dollars are going to be spent.

As we all know, TEA-21 most significantly funded the Federal highway needs. As a result, people across the country had opportunities to improve the surface transportation system to make it safer and more efficient and to keep up with the times.

More importantly, as I mentioned, TEA-21 provided States and local governments more flexibility in controlling the use of those Federal funds which, frankly, is one of the issues we should deal with constantly; that is, in the distribution of Federal assistance, how we can achieve accountability on one hand and on the other hand recognize the difference that exists in various places. I am certain highway moneys are used for different needs in Wyoming than in Delaware. We need to have the flexibility to recognize those differences.

The panelists who testified at this hearing on the funding mechanisms—that is their job; funding of the highway trust fund is what we rely upon. This hearing addressed a $1.4 billion shortfall in trust fund which is due to the negative revenue alignment budget. Economies are somewhat lower, and these dollars are lower under the formula. We are in the process of trying to replace the $1.4 billion so we do not have that loss and hopefully at least most of that can be done.

In addition, however, the panelists detailed the tax disparity between gasoline and ethanol blend, gasohol. Currently, gasohol is taxed at 13.1 cents and gasoline is taxed at 18.4 cents. This tax disparity is something that has to be reviewed. That is where the money comes from for highway funds. When we have less money coming in, obviously we are going to have less to spend.

The discrepancy between the fuels is causing a great debate not only in the context of the highway trust fund but in terms of our national energy policy as well. Pending before the conference committee is the energy bill which has substantial increases and requirements for increases in ethanol, which has helped. As we do that, we are going to reduce the availability of highway funding, then we have to take a look at a system that allows that to happen.

The General Accounting Office estimates the tax disparity between gasohol and gasoline will cost approximately $1.21 billion in the next 11 years, and this is a pretty serious issue in terms, again, of funding our national highway program.

As my colleagues know, the Senate passed the energy bill that mandates 5 billion gallons of ethanol by 2012.

As a result of this, of course, we will have an increased reliance on gasohol. So we need to take a look at this. I am not suggesting any particular bias one way or the other, other than the fact that by making this change in the use of fuel, we have a change in the revenue that will be available if we continue to have the same formula for doing that.

Gasohol, which of course is the ethanol, is taxed at 13.1 cents a gallon; gas fuel is 18.4 cents. As to the trust fund, under the gas arrangements we have now, 15 cents of it goes into the highway fund; under the gasohol-ethanol, it is only 7 cents.

So we find ourselves with a substantial change, a substantial differential, in terms of how we will be funding our highways. I hope that in the course of the committee activities we can take a long look at it.

SENATE AGENDA

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I will share some general thoughts I have. It seems to me as we look forward to the remainder of this session, the time is getting pretty short. In a couple of weeks we will begin our Memorial Day recess, and then we will be moving on to our Summer recess, of course. So between now and the time we adjourn for this year, we do not have an awful lot of time remaining.

We collectively ought to see if we can figure out how we are going to accomplish many of the things that have to be done. Obviously, that is the responsibility of leadership, but we have not moved very quickly. We spent a very long time on energy—6 weeks. We have spent more time now on this trade bill, and it looks as if the prospect is we will be spending even more time than we had anticipated.

We have a lot of things facing us. I hope we can wrap up the trade bill. I think it is very important. I think it is part of our future economy.

As we do these things, I hope we can have a little vision of where we want to be when we are through. What do we want to happen with trade, for example, in the next 10 years? Do we want to bring back some of the trade prowess, with hopefully having fair trade around the world which will increase our opportunities to export?

Thirty to thirty-five percent of our agricultural production has to go into exports. As we do that, we think about what it takes to accomplish that goal, if that indeed is our vision.

We are going to be dealing with permanent removal of the estate tax. That has been promised by one of the things that comes up on the floor. So we have that to deal with.

Immigration and border security is out there. That is very important, particularly important now because of terrorism and very important in terms of the future: Where do we want to be in the future on immigration? How do we want to handle these things? And what are we doing that will cause us to arrive at where we want to be?

We get a little inclined to look at the politics of the election and look at the politics in the Senate instead of having a vision of where we want the United States, our States, our families and our communities to be in the future, and then testing whether what we are doing now leads us there.

The bankruptcy issue is out there. We have been talking about that for a very long time. There are some real problems that need to be resolved. We have not managed to get it to the floor. We do not have a budget. We were supposed to have a budget prior to now. We have none. The budget is very important. If we are somewhat concerned about spending and having an opportunity to at least limit spending and have a minimum to get that job done, we do not even have a budget, and, frankly, there is no sign of one appearing.
Whether we like it or not, we are going to have to spend some time on the cloning issue. It has been promised that cloning and research—not an easy issue—would be before us. Then there is educational funding. We talk about education all the time. We have not even gotten to that. That is one issue that is going to be out there.

Certainly, we have the issue of reinsur- surance for terrorism, an issue we keep talking about, but it is still not here. This is very difficult.

Nuclear storage is an issue I am cer- tain we need to handle. Obviously, again there are some problems pertaining to that issue. One can ignore it if they choose, but the fact is we do have nuclear waste stored around the country in a very unsafe way and we need to find a place to put that, particularly if nuclear energy is going to be part of our future. I hope it is. If one likes clean air, then nuclear generation is one of the ways to do that.

We spent 6 weeks debating energy. Now we have not even moved into our conference committee.

Frankly, I am a little disappointed about the fact that we have all of these things out there, and we recognize these are issues with which we must deal.

Appropriations may be one of the most important things we do, not only in terms of funding the government but in terms of giving great direction to where we want to go. The appropri- Appropriations may be one of the most important things we do, not only in terms of funding the government but in terms of giving great direction to where we want to be. The appropri- Appropriations process has a good deal to do with whether we want huge government involved in every issue or whether we want to limit government. Appropriations has something to do with that, and they are very important. We are not there by any means.

So we have a great deal to do, and I hope we can find ourselves in a position to move forward to accomplish these things. There are many more issues, I suppose, but these have already been listed as things we are going to do, as has been said, before we adjourn.

We have fiscal problems to deal with. I hope we can move quickly to address these issues and find some suitable remedies for them.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent to be recognized in morning business.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I listened carefully to the comments of my colleague from the State of Wyoming and the discussion about the Senate agenda. I could not agree more. There are certain issues the Senate should take up and take up as quickly as possible. We face some serious challenges, not the least of which relate to Social Security and Medicare.

The Social Security trust fund, which many of us made solemn oaths and pledges never to touch, is about to be invaded by both political parties at this point in time because of the deficit we face.

We are in a deficit situation after several years of the good experience of surpluses and reducing our national debt and reducing the debt of the Social Security trust fund because, frankly, we have run into some bad situations and some bad decisions. We could forecast that the recession would go on this long, but it has. We certainly didn’t anticipate September 11, which has been very costly to our government. Last year the President convinced a majority of the Senate and the House to vote for a tax program which, in fact, has virtually decimated the surplus which had been predicted. The President said at the time we had $5.2 trillion in surplus over the next 10 years we are down to $1.2 trillion, whereas $4 trillion in projected surplus in 1 year.

How did we lose it? For those three reasons: the recession, the war against terrorism, and the tax policy. So we find ourselves now trying to put together a budget and not raid the Social Security trust fund. That is why we are tied up in knots. It was a tax program pushed by the President which came too fast, without enough thought. It took away our surplus. It took the money out to deal with the challenges facing America.

I did not vote for it. I think that is fairly obvious from my comments. But now, as many other Members of the Senate, I am facing the reality we have to try to put the budget together, even with this deficit situation. The President comes to us and says we need additional resources to fight the war against terrorism. He is right. He will get support from Congress for that, both for the Department of Defense and for homeland security.

Of course that money is going to come out of the Social Security trust fund because we are in a deficit situation again. Many of us are concerned, too, because the President has said: Incidentally, I want more tax cuts. The one last year were not enough. We should take last year’s tax cuts and add on to them. If you look at the President’s proposal, what it would do is once again threaten the Social Security trust fund. That does not make sense because we are just facing the possibility—in fact the reality—of the baby boomers show- ing up for Social Security. Should we not be thinking ahead, making certain Social Security is strong when all of these thousands and millions of Americans who have paid into Social Security their entire lifetime show up and say I am here. Where is my Social Security check?

No, the President says: Think, instead, of additional tax cuts.

Take a look at those tax cuts, incidentally. If you happen to be making over $300,000 a year, those tax cuts for you average about $40,000 a year in the President’s new tax cut round, but if you are making, say, $100,000 a year, it is worth $200 or $300 a year. So there is a great disparity in who will benefit from this tax cut.

But we know who will lose. The American families who have been counting on Social Security are not going to have as strong a Social Security trust fund as they should have because of the last tax cut and his proposed tax cut. You cannot keep going to the same well again and again at the expense of senior citizens, at the expense of workers today who, dutifully, every paycheck, put their money down for Social Security and now perhaps realize that when they need Social Security, the system will not be as strong as it should be.

Let’s reflect for a moment also on Medicare. The Medicare situation is one that is very troubling. I have traveled across my State of Illinois talking to doctors and nurses and hospital administrators. I have talked to people who are on Medicare. They are concerned. They need to be concerned. For reasons I cannot explain, this White House will not take a serious look at the dangerous state of affairs when it comes to Medicare. In fact, the House of Representatives recently proposed not only cutbacks in Medicare reimbursement for doctors but also further cutbacks to pay for a prescription drug program.

Not surprisingly, hospitals have said if you are going to cut more deeply into Medicare, many of us will be forced to close. So in both Social Security and Medicare we have crisis situations looming and the administration refusing to show leadership. In fact, when it comes to Social Security, the administration is moving in the wrong direction, calling for permanent tax cuts which would amount to a crisis threat to Social Security in the future.

I will take just a moment on prescription drugs, if I can. As I travel around my State of Illinois, I find a lot of people, senior citizens in particular, cannot afford prescription drugs. It is understandable if you have taken a look at some of the costs of the drugs being prescribed. The average American has a hard time paying for them. Certainly a person who is retired cannot come up with the resources to pay for prescription drugs, so making hard choices as to whether they fill prescriptions that the doctors recommend. I hope our Medicare situation is not another Social Security act of malfeasance.
what they are supposed to take. These are tough calls for a lot of senior citizens.

When we take a look at the issue of prescription drugs, it is not just a question of whether a senior under Medicare would have the accessibility to these drugs; it is a question of the price of these drugs. Consider this for a minute. The pharmaceutical companies are spending a lot of money—perhaps you see it everywhere you turn—advertising their industry, their product. They advertise their industry by saying: We put good research into new drugs and we find cures. They are right. Thank goodness they do, and we want to encourage that.

Then they go on, of course, to advertise specific drugs. Take this drug and you will be able to hop through a field of flowers without sneezing. Take this drug and you will not be depressed. Take this drug and it will deal with osteoarthritis. Take this drug and it will deal with pulmonary seizures. Take this little purple pill and go to our Web site and you'll feel better already.

Take this Viagra—and so on and so on. How much are these drug companies spending when it comes to advertising? They are spending two to three times as much as they do on research. They are spending more money on advertising their drugs than on research on finding new drugs.

To put it in comparison, do you remember Claritin, the drug for allergies? Schering-Plough spent more money in 1 year advertising for Claritin than Pepsi-Cola spent advertising Pepsi the same year; or Anheuser-Busch spent advertising Budweiser. Merck did the same thing with Vioxx.

So when the drug costs keep going up and up, it is possible for us to ask the question whether these companies are putting too much money into advertising and not putting enough into research; whether the costs are out of control. I think it is something we have to address. We have to address the accessibility of drugs and their affordability as part of a prescription drug program. We certainly cannot go the route of the House Republicans of raiding Medicare in order to pay for a prescription drug program. That is what they have suggested.

These are challenges we face. They are challenges which we are going to have to live up to, to make certain we keep a balance with seniors and others who are counting on Social Security and Medicare to be there when they need it.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The SENATE PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TAX RELIEF AND SPENDING

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, in the remaining minutes over which we have control, I wish to respond to a couple of things my friend from Illinois indicated.

One was his being very critical of tax relief and tax reduction. It seems to me in a time when one of the real issues before us is the economy, what could you be doing better to help the economy than to reduce taxes? I think that is why the President has pushed that. That is why more conservatives have pushed that. But to be critical of that when we are trying to do something with the economy seems to be a little out of context.

It also is difficult to wonder why the folks who are the big spenders here are worried about the deficit. We passed a bill that changes the National Security $56 billion more than the previous in agriculture. We did not have any concern about that. So we have people over here who think Government ought to be involved in everything and everyone's lives, and dollars ought to be spent for everything in terms of any program you can think of—and then to hear some concern about the deficit?

I point out, as we talk about problems, there are two sides to these issues and you have to take a little look at what it is you want. If you want a better economy, then you probably need to do something about having taxes be too high. If you don't want to spend so much, you probably ought to take a look at some of the spending bills that you are pushing.

There is a conflict here, but to get up on the floor and complain about reducing taxes yet wanting our economy to be stronger, to get up here and talk about a deficit and then be a great supporter of all the big spending bills—there is a certain conflict there and I think we ought to measure a little bit what we want in terms of what we do in the interim.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CORZINE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. CLINTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Under the previous order, the time until 10:30 a.m. shall be under the control of the majority leader or his designee.

The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. Thank you, Madam President.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND WOMEN

Mr. CORZINE. Madam President, this morning I rise to speak on perhaps the most important long-term domestic issue facing our Nation—the future health and security of our Social Security system. Today, I want to focus on proposals to privatize Social Security and the special threat privatization poses to women in America.

Last December, late on a Friday afternoon, before Christmas, President Bush's Social Security Commission revealed its recommendations for changes in the Social Security system. The Commission's report did not get much media coverage because of the timing of its release, and I think that was obviously by design, if you read the report.

The recommendations of the Bush Commission are dramatic and damaging, if implemented, for the future of all Social Security beneficiaries but particularly for women. They involve deep cuts in guaranteed Social Security benefits—cuts of 25 percent or so for those currently working and up to 45 percent for future workers. Undoubtedly, these proposals would force millions of American women out of context.

Few members of the public actually have heard of the Bush Commission—how they simply have not talked or debated the recommendations. And fewer have any idea that the Commission is calling for drastic cuts in guaranteed benefits, the type that I opposed.

Americans need to know about these plans, and they need to consider them and debate them in a serious way, making sure they know the implications of taking these recommendations to fruition.

Unfortunately, so far, the administration says it wants to put off any discussion of these proposals until after the election. That is unfortunate and, frankly, it is wrong. We have to be debating this issue openly and publicly before the American people, on the Senate floor and certainly before the voters in this November's elections.

To that end, I intend to continue to raise this subject and its implications for the American people as much as I can to make sure that the American people understand what the Bush Commission is recommending to the American public. This Senator thinks it is too important to be decided among closeted policy wonks and politicians in the dark of the night.

Today, I specifically want to raise those aspects of privatization that are damaging to women. I know this is an issue that is near and dear to the Presiding Officer.

Women have a reason to be especially concerned about privatization proposals because they would be among the biggest losers if Social Security is privatized and benefits are cut.

As Joan Bernstein, president of the organization known as OWL, notes in her introductory letter to OWL’s Mothers’ Day report, “Social Security Privatization: A False Promise for Women”:

Social Security is a women’s issue. I would go so far as to say that it is the retirement security issue for tomorrow.

OWL notes that today women represent 58 percent of all Social Security recipients—slightly more than 50 percent. They represent 71 percent of beneficiaries aged 85 and over.

Without regular cost-of-living adjustments for guaranteed benefits, more than half of all older women would be living in poverty. Let me repeat—more than 50 percent. If you look at Hispanic women, it is about 68 percent. If you look at African-American women, it is 61 percent.

I note that Social Security is important not just to older women but also to children and nonretired adults who constitute one-third of current Social Security beneficiaries. These include many men and women who benefit from benefits resulting from the death or disability of a family member.

For a caregiving mother, cutting these benefits is unthinkable.

For these reasons, women have a special stake in Social Security and their stake in protecting guaranteed benefits should be obvious given women’s historic position—sometimes I think unfortunate historic position—in the economic system.

Finally, women earn less than men. There is a wage gap on average, 73 cents on every dollar a man earns. Also, they are not compensated for the 12 years, on average, they spend on unpaid caregiving, whether for their children, parents, spouse, or other relatives. And when women work as caregivers, they are often in the informal system as part-time workers, so that their average pay is significantly lower.

The way Social Security is calculated, you look at 35 years of working level—the highest average—and women come up short. The average payout of Social Security benefits for women is about $756 per year. For a man, it is just shy of $1,000 a year.

All this pulls together as women often save less during their working lifetime and are less likely to be eligible for pensions as well. They are denied private pensions. If they do have private pensions, it is often generally less generous, the same way Social Security is less generous for women. In fact, average private pension benefits for women are only about half of those for men. And for most women, their Social Security benefits will also be lower, because of those average lower earnings that I talked about. It works doubly—in the pension system and also in Social Security.

Finally, and most importantly, women tend to live longer than men—6 years longer on average. That makes Social Security especially critical for women, since the program, unlike private savings, protects against the risks of outliving your savings and, certainly, ongoing rising inflation.

Privatizing Social Security would undercut many of the program’s benefits for women, whether it is retirement security or the social insurance about which we spoke.

Taking trillions of dollars out of the Social Security trust fund will force a cut in these guaranteed benefits—25 percent or more, as I noted earlier, for current women and 6 percent for those who enter the workforce later. That is unacceptable.

It will also undermine Social Security’s role in the social insurance area, leaving women less protected against a variety of risks.

I know many people around here are convinced that we need to cut Social Security benefits to make sure that Social Security meets its long-term financial objectives and its long-term fiscal sustainability. Most Americans do not believe that. I want you to know, I do not believe that. We can save Social Security without cutting it. The truth is, the American people are right. It is a matter of our principles.

Consider these two figures: First, the long-term Social Security shortfall is $3.7 trillion. It is about $74 billion a year if you factor it out over the 75-year actuarial life we are talking about. The long-term cost of last year’s tax cut is $8.7 trillion over the same period. Remember, $3.7 trillion to fix Social Security; $8.7 trillion in our tax cuts. In other words, the tax cut will cost more than twice as much as the entire Social Security shortfall.

I don’t get it. Where are our priorities? What is important? I hope my colleagues will remember that the next time someone says we have no choice but to cut benefits, that they and I will put that into the framework of what we need to be thinking about as we deal with fiscal policy in this country.

We certainly could, and should, consider—congressional action—postponing some of the remaining tax cuts to deal with Social Security’s fiscal needs first. That is a priority. Social Security should come first.

Last week, as I said, I attended a press conference with the leaders of OWL, a grassroots membership organization that focuses on the needs of midlife and older women. OWL developed an excellent report called “Social Security Privatization: A False Promise” for which I sent copies to every Senator’s office, and I hope my colleagues will take a look at it. There are individual stories inside this excellent report. There are details about how the financial structure of Social Security is in complete disarray that pulls together an overview.

It makes in clear and compelling terms the case that privatizing Social Security would be extraordinarily bad for women. They do that on a personal level, they do that on a political level, and they do it in ways and terms that I believe the American people can understand.

That is the message all women and all Americans must understand and debate before the election. We need to understand what is going on with the Bush recommendations. We need to understand what will happen if we follow and implement those recommendations.

I believe we ought to be looking for ways of strengthening Social Security. We can deal with some of those from a fiscal policy standpoint, but we need to strengthen Social Security, not cut benefits. We need to figure out how we look at women’s participation in the workforce and the calculation of their benefits.

We ought to be getting on with that debate now, before the elections. After all, I repeat, the future of Social Security is too important to be decided behind closed doors. This is an issue that affects all Americans—the financial security of all Americans, and particularly the financial security of women. Let’s get on with that debate. Let’s have that debate.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the executive summary of the OWL report be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY
SOCIAL SECURITY AND WOMEN

The Social Security system is an embodiment of the long-standing American principle of social insurance, providing nearly universal coverage for workers and their families through a pooling of resources benefits and risk.

One-third of the program’s beneficiaries are not retirees but include children, widows, and people with disabilities. Social Security offers an unmatched set of insurance protections for workers and their families, providing protection against poverty in the event of death, disability or old age.

Women comprise the majority of Social Security beneficiaries, representing 58 percent of all Social Security recipients at age 65 and 71 percent of all recipients by age 85. Without Social Security, more than 80 percent of older adults living in poverty, women are more vulnerable in retirement. During this time they must need the stability of a guaranteed source of income—the Social Security check. Without it, 52 percent of white women, 65 of African American women, and 61 percent of Latinas over the age 65 would be poor.

WOMEN’S REALITIES AND RETIREMENT CONSEQUENCES

For women, poverty in old age is often rooted in the realities that shaped their lives early on. The reality of the wage gap, the reality of caregiving, and the reality of flexible jobs that offer few benefits, especially pensions.

Almost 40 years after the Equal Pay Act was passed, women still earn only 73 percent of what men earn. You can’t save what you don’t earn.

Caregiving directly affects women’s retirement security, as they often take more flexible, lower-wage jobs with few benefits or stop working altogether to provide unpaid caregiving services. In fact, women spend, on average, 12 years out of the work force for family caregiving over the course of their lives.

Older women are less likely than older men to receive pension income (28 percent of 43 percent); when they do, the benefit is only about half the benefit men receive.

Women live an average of six years longer than men. Women’s longer lifespans make them much more vulnerable to the impact of inflation and to the risk that they will outlive their money.

THE GREAT SOLVENCY DEBATE

Social Security is a “pay-as-you-go” system. It not only secures the personal and family benefits of supporting our nation’s vulnerable seniors, but also know that they are covered by the same set of social insurance protections.

Changing demographics mean that the system will eventually have to use trust fund dollars to cover out-going benefits. This situation was predicted and addressed by Congress in 1983, when it adjusted the system to build up the trust fund for the retirement of the baby boomers.

The trust fund consists of U.S. Treasury bonds, considered the safest investment vehicle available to individual or institutional investors worldwide.

Experts do have suggestions about how to plan for a potential financing shortfall. There are many proposals that preserve the integrity of the system while setting it up for the future. These stand in stark contrast to private accounts, which would speed insolvent Social Security.

Social Security is based on the principles of ensuring that Social Security benefit cuts that are implemented, for women, obviously, is Social Security and private investments.

I commend the OWL report because it shows that the detrimental effect Social Security privatization would have on women is severe, it is important, and it is relevant. I hope every Member of this body will take the time to read this report, to reflect on its findings as we contemplate the recommendations for structural changes to the Social Security program.

I yield the floor, and I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yield time?

Mr. CORZINE. Madam President, will the Senator from Michigan entertain a question?

Mr. LEVIN. I will be happy to.

Mr. CORZINE. Did I hear the Senator indicate that roughly 51 percent of women would be the case? Was it did they not have a Social Security system?

Mr. LEVIN. The figure I used was 52 percent of white women and a larger percentage of African-American and Hispanic women.

Mr. CORZINE. If I am not mistaken—maybe the Senator from Michigan can refresh my memory—with Social Security we have something less than 10 percent of Americans now living out of poverty. That is what the whole design of the program was, to provide a fundamental foundation—‘social insurance’—I think was the term the Senator used. Is that the way the Senator from Michigan understands both the number and the reality of how it has worked?

Mr. LEVIN. The Social Security system, along with Medicare, is probably the reason that only, as I understand the number, 1 out of 20, about 5 percent, of seniors live in poverty. My number may be a little low. But the point is that 20 percent of American children live in poverty, and yet approximately 5 percent of seniors live in poverty. It is shameful that 20 percent of Americans live in poverty, but one of the main reasons a smaller number of seniors live in poverty than kids is Social Security and Medicare. The Senator from New Jersey is exactly right.

Mr. CORZINE. We have a lot to do, if at least my analysis and others of the Social Security benefit cuts that are imposed by the privatization process are implemented, for women, obviously, but Americans broadly and, quite frankly, a number of children because Social Security is a program for disability, spouses, and children survival benefits.

I was interested to hear the Senator talk about transaction costs and privatization. I remember we had a presentation by a Member of Congress at one of our briefings on Social Security. Did I recall hearing that there is a privatization scheme in Britain where 40 percent of the dollars that are allocated for savings in this privatized account go to transaction costs alone?

Mr. LEVIN. I think that was the number I heard. My memory is very similar to that. It is an astounding number that the people who recommend privatization don't even factor.

There are a lot of other things they don't factor, by the way; some of them are even more focused. They don't replace the money. They don't say how they will replace the money which would be lost to the Social Security system by people not contributing to it and supporting folks who are retired or near retirement. They never talk about that huge hole in the general fund that would be created. They don't talk about the uncertainty of private accounts as much as they should, the fact that the market over time may go up depending on what time period you look at, but not for everybody.

Even within that long window, there will be winners and losers. Maybe most people will win, but what about the losers? They don't talk about that as much as they should. The thing they never talk about are these administrative costs, these transaction costs which, as the Senator has pointed out, are apparently a very significant percentage of the money.

Mr. CORZINE. If the Senator from Michigan will give me the grace of making sure my arithmetic is right, if you add a 25-percent cut for people who are now working plus 40 percent in administrative costs, that 65 percent out of the total amount of benefits from Social Security seems to be a big chunk out of how one would have their retirement security. Certainly it would go a long way to eroding the base of benefits that people have come to expect from Social Security.

Mr. LEVIN. It would, indeed. It makes that enticement of private accounts, when you analyze it, a lot more superficial. The reality is a lot more negative than that superficial glow of riches.

Mr. DAYTON. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. LEVIN. Sure.

Mr. DAYTON. Contrary to what most people in this country probably believe, the Social Security Administration is extremely efficient, and, in fact, less than 1 percent of Social Security goes for administrative costs. The Senator cited some of the figures from the OWL report, which is an excellent document, about the disparities between men and women. I have seen the statistic that one-quarter of the retirees in America today don't receive any pension fund whatsoever.

My experience in Minnesota would be that probably 80 or 90 percent of those women, particularly older women who are widowed and often, with the older pensions, lose any benefit payments whatsoever once their husband dies. I wonder if the Senator from Michigan has had that same experience. Would the Senator say in Michigan that number applies?

Mr. LEVIN. I don't have a very large percentage. I don't have it directly in my mind, but it is a large percentage of people, particularly women, who rely exclusively on Social Security. We encourage people, of course, to have private accounts whenever they have nuclear pensions. That three-legged stool Senator BINGAMAN talked about of Social Security and private pensions and private savings is a one-leg stool for a large percentage of our seniors and a larger percentage of women.

Mr. DAYTON. The Senator is absolutely right. That is exactly the dilemma, the predicament in which so many elderly women find themselves. There is only one leg to that stool. As the Senator from New Jersey pointed out, with the average Social Security payment for women being only $750 a month, that is not much money on which to live. I think that creates part of the lure of the personal privatization scheme which the President Commission has now come forward with, which, obviously, someone receiving that little amount of money would be tempted, enticed by something else. As the Senator pointed out very well, there is no reward without risk.

I wonder if the Senator—certainly the Senator from New Jersey who spent a career in financial pursuits—is aware of anywhere where there is that potential for reward in the private sector without commensurate risk.

Mr. LEVIN. There will be winners and losers. It turns Social Security into a social insecurity system.

Mr. DAYTON. I compliment the Senator from New Jersey in bringing this important report to the Senate. He is to be commended. It is a very important topic, as we look ahead to the future of Social Security.

Mr. LEVIN. One last word: I have met with the women who are active in the OWL commission. They are very keenly aware of the problems with the President's Commission and the uncertainties it would create for women in particular who are seniors. And I think the opposition to the President's Commission's findings is very strong and is growing.

Mr. CORZINE. Will the Senator from Michigan yield for a moment to say, I am very appreciative of the discussion you have had, the contributions the Senator from Minnesota made with regard to raising this issue so we can have a debate about it. This debate ought to be had before the election, not after the election. People ought to have to make a statement about how they feel about these recommendations since they would impact on Americans lives, particularly women in America. That is what the OWL report was about. I very much appreciate the contributions my colleagues have made to this discussion.

Mr. LEVIN. One additional word. I hope we will actually not only consider the recommendations of the President's Commission but actually vote on them. We ought to put them to rest. There is a lot of concern in the country about those recommendations, that they would totally make the Social Security system much less secure. I think we ought to try to address the concerns by voting on those recommendations. I believe they will be voted down, as they should be, so that the people out there who are not only retired but in their forties and fifties, who rely on Social Security, want it to be there, don't want the uncertainty that will be created by the recommendations being reduced—which is what would happen without any idea of where the replacement funds would come from—I think it would be healthy for the country not just to debate it but, if possible, before the election to vote up or down on those recommendations. I hope and believe that all of them will be rejected.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time for morning business is closed.

ANDEAN TRADE PREFERENCE EXPANSION ACT—Resumed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 3009, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3009) to extend the Andean Trade Preference Act, to grant additional trade benefits under that Act, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Baucus-Grassley amendment No. 3401, in the nature of a substitute, voted down.

Baucus amendment No. 3405 (to amendment No. 3401), to clarify the principal negotiating objectives of the United States with respect to foreign investment.

AMENDMENT NO. 3405

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 10 minutes debate in relation to the pending Baucus amendment. Who yields time?

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, is there a time allotted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be 10 minutes debate in relation to the pending Baucus amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. It is my understanding that the Senator from Massachusetts will have 5 minutes and the other 5 minutes will be allotted to Senator GRASSLEY and myself. I will take 2½ minutes of that.

I rise once again to urge my colleagues to support the amendment that I laid down yesterday on behalf of myself and Senators GRASSLEY and WYDEN.
The amendment is a short but very important clarification to the trade bill’s negotiating objective on investment. When we negotiate investment agreements, our primary objective is to ensure that U.S. investors abroad have rights and protections comparable to the rights they enjoy under U.S. law or regulation. In fulfilling that objective, we generally undertake reciprocal obligations with respect to foreign investors.

Our amendment makes absolutely clear that rights we extend to foreign investors must not exceed the rights we afford our own citizens. I expect that this is not the end of our debate on investor-state dispute settlement. As the debate goes forward, it is important to understand that we are trying to achieve a balance. In taking steps to protect U.S. investors abroad, we must not sacrifice the sovereignty of Federal, State, and local governments here at home. Striking the right balance precisely what we have done in the trade bill. When it was brought to our attention that we might improve that balance, we did so in the amendment laid down yesterday.

In the days ahead, it is important that we strike the right balance. We have carefully crafted a foundation for future investment agreements. I strongly urge my colleagues to support that foundation and to support the Baucus-Grassley-Wyden amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my 2½ minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Madam President, I appreciate enormously the efforts of the chairman and ranking member to move what is always a very difficult issue through the Senate. They have done a good job of trying to resolve a great many issues. I don’t oppose this amendment of theirs, but, in fact, I urge my colleagues to vote for the amendment.

I emphasize to my colleagues that this amendment does not fix the chapter 11 problem that still exists with respect to the sovereignty of American businesses and the rights of Americans and of our communities to be able to be protected. I am very grateful for the chairman’s willingness to try to respond, but substantial disagreements still exist with respect to how we best protect businesses and our communities, according to our rights.

As our colleagues know, it is clear that the NAFTA investor-State dispute resolution process, which is known as chapter 11, is going to be the model on which future agreements are predicated. And chapter 11, in its current form, is a flawed model. It is not a failed model; it is simply flawed. We have the ability to be able to fix it.

Last night, Senator Baucus referred to letters written by several organizations that urged correction of the no-lessers-rights language, which is precisely what will happen in this particular amendment. I appreciate his response, but let me point out that in those letters he referenced, there are a whole set of other issues that are unaddressed in this amendment. Specifically, from the National League of Cities, they say: We are concerned that future trade negotiations, particularly for a proposed free-trade area of the Americas, could include provisions that expand the definition of a regulatory taking. As evidenced by disputes under chapter II of NAFTA, vague expropriation language has allowed new developments of course for foreign investors to challenge current State and local ordinances.

So we are allowing a foreign investor to come in and actually undo the intent of our local and State communities to enforce certain kinds of health or other kinds of restraints.

From the National Association of Towns and Townships:

In particular, we are troubled that a claim by a foreign company that a local government’s regulation or zoning laws constitutes a taking against the company will make it impossible for the locality to enforce that law or regulation.

From the National Conference of State Legislators:

The bill does not adequately and explicitly guarantee that trade agreements negotiated under this authority will respect State sovereignty, nor incorporate well defined and constitutional Fifth Amendment takings principles.

Regrettably, the Baucus-Grassley amendment does not, despite what they claim in the no-greater-rights-than language, address the shortcomings of the chapter 11 model. Adopting their language without other needed changes is still going to allow future chapter 11-like tribunals to rule against legitimate U.S. public health and safety laws using a standard of expropriation that goes well beyond the clear standard that the Supreme Court has established in all of its expropriation cases.

The amendment before us does not give assurances that the due process claims of the Constitution will be respected, nor does it provide safe harbor for legitimate U.S. public health and safety laws.

I will propose an amendment, and we will debate this amendment over the course of the next couple of days. I urge my colleagues to adopt a policy that will fully protect the constitutional rights of American businesses and the constitutional right of our States, the expropriation laws and standards of the Supreme Court. I urge them to vote for this amendment recognizing this does not complete the task.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, the amendment that is before us was introduced by Senator Baucus and myself and is designed to make it crystal clear that the constitutional right of our States, the expropriation laws and standards of the Supreme Court, foreign investors are not to be granted any greater rights in the United States than our own U.S. investors have rights within the United States. This provision builds upon the already strong improvements to the investment objectives within this bill. These provisions strike a very careful balance between the needs to protect U.S. citizens from arbitrary takings of their property overseas and the need to ensure that the investor-State dispute settlement process is not abused.

Critics of the investment provisions insist that the investor-State dispute settlement process has somehow run amok. Not true. The fact is that no U.S. environmental, health, or safety regulations have ever been overturned by the international investment arbitration. Only 13 investor-State claims have been filed under NAFTA chapter 11 in the entire 8 years of its existence. Meanwhile, U.S. investors continue to face discriminatory and arbitrary government action in most of the developing world. We need to maintain U.S. investors’ ability to get redress in impartial tribunals while ensuring that the investor-State dispute settlement process continues to protect our own investors overseas. This simply is what the Baucus-Grassley amendment does.

I urge support for this amendment and support for the Baucus-Grassley compromise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

AMENDMENT NO. 3408

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Minnesota is recognized to offer an amendment.

Mr. DAYTON. I call up amendment No. 3408.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment (No. 3405) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment as is follows:

Purpose: To limit the application of trade authorities procedures.

At the end of section 2109(b), add the following:

(4) LIMITATIONS ON TRADE AUTHORITY PROCEDURES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the provisions of section 151 of the Trade Act of 1974 (trade authorities procedures) shall not apply to any provision in an implementing bill being considered by the Senate that modifies or amends, or requires a modification of, or an amendment to, any law of the United States that provides safeguards against unfair foreign trade practices to United States businesses or workers, including—

(i) imposition of countervailing and antidumping duties (title VII of the Tariff Act of 1930; 19 U.S.C. 1671 et seq.);

(ii) protection from unfair methods of competition and unfair acts in the importation of articles (section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930; 19 U.S.C. 1337);

(iii) relief from injury caused by import competition (title II of the Trade Act of 1974; 19 U.S.C. 2251 et seq.);

(iv) relief from unfair trade practices (title III of the Trade Act of 1974; 19 U.S.C. 2411 et seq.); and

(B) POINT OF ORDER IN SENATE.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—When the Senate is considering an implementing bill, upon a point of order being made by any Senator against any provision of the described bill that contains material in violation of subparagraph (A), and the point of order is sustained by the Presiding Officer, the part of the implementing bill against which the point of order is sustained shall be stricken from the bill.

(ii) WAIVERS AND APPEALS.—Before the Presiding Officer rules on a point of order described in clause (i), any Senator may move to waive the point of order and the motion to waive shall not be subject to amendment. A point of order described in clause (i) is waived only by the affirmative vote of a majority of the Members of the Senate, duly chosen and sworn.

(iii) APPEALS.—After the Presiding Officer rules on a point of order under this subparagraph, any Senator may appeal the ruling of the Presiding Officer on the point of order as it applies to some or all of the provisions on which the Presiding Officer ruled. A ruling of the Presiding Officer on a point of order described in clause (i) is sustained unless a majority of the Presiding Officer, the part of the implementing bill against which the point of order is sustained shall be stricken from the bill.

(iv) DEBATE.—On appeal from the ruling of the Presiding Officer under subparagraph (iii) the time shall be equally divided between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader, or their designees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk as a second-degree amendment, for Senator Baucus and myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment (No. 3405) was agreed to.

The plank of the amendment has been the Trade Act of 1974. Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, the amendment (No. 3405) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have sent a second-degree amendment to the desk in place of the Dayton amendment. I am going to debate that in just a little while, but I want everybody to know the situation.

Also, Senator Baucus and I are going to visit with various people to see if there is a smooth way of handling both the substitute as well as the original amendment. We may not be successful, but that is our desire. We are going to be talking while this debate is ongoing, and I will be back to give the specifics of my amendment in just a short period of time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, the amendment Senator Craig and I have introduced is one that I think has great importance to this legislation. It is one I am very proud to sponsor with the senior Senator from Idaho, someone with whom I have had the good fortune to work on this and other matters relating to trade as they affect our two States.
I also am very pleased that this amendment is cosponsored by 26 of our colleagues, 13 Republicans and 13 Democrats. They reflect a broad spectrum of views on many issues, yet they agree on the need for this amendment. Is it because all of us are against trade, as our detractors have charged?

The answer is an emphatic “no.” We support this amendment because we recognize that there is more than one side to the U.S. trade equation. There are a great many citizens in our States who have benefited from the liberalization of international trade during the last 20 years. However, there are also a great many Americans who have been harmed by the results of recent trade agreements.

The proponents of more free trade acknowledge only the winners. Their reports cite only the businesses, the jobs, and the revenues from increased exports as a substantial gain; however, they form only one side of the trade ledger. On the other side are thousands of bankrupt businesses and farms in the United States, many thousands of lost American jobs, and the massive shifting of U.S. production to other countries.

This Dayton-Craig amendment is on behalf of Americans who have been, are being, or will be harmed by continuing trade liberalization. They are hard-working citizens who nevertheless will lose their livelihoods, which in turn will cause lost homes, lost health insurance, lost pensions, lost retirement security, lost hope, and even lost lives. They are not isolated occurrences. They are growing in number across America.

They are victims of trade policies and trade practices which are out of balance. In the year 2000, the United States trade deficit for goods and services was $376 billion. In goods alone, the deficit was $452 billion. In 1990, the total U.S. trade deficit was $51 billion. In 1980, it was only $19 billion.

Our country’s trade deficit, that imbalance in the value of our exports and the value of our imports, was 4½ times greater in 2000 than in 1990, and 20 times greater in 2000 than in 1980.

A March 18, 2002, Business Week article began:

How much longer can the United States rack up giant current account trade deficits?

The article cited a Goldman Sachs Global Economic’s Research report, which called the current trend “unsustainable.”

Another recent report stated:

America’s ballooning trade deficit may be the worst economic problem we face—and no one wants to talk about it.

What is driving these soaring trade deficits? Is it that U.S. exports are not expanding. In many sectors they are growing at a very strong rate, and the last administration worked hard to open foreign markets to U.S. goods and services, as did its predecessors. It’s the explosion in imports which is far exceeding export gains.

From 1990 to 2000, total U.S. exports in goods and services almost doubled to just over $1 trillion. However, during that decade, total U.S. imports more than doubled—in fact, increased by 133 percent, to almost $1½ trillion. The increase in imports was $295 billion more than the growth in exports.

If you ask critics in our economy, you see this pattern. Exports expand. Imports explode. Trade deficits multiply. This serious imbalance has cost the jobs, farms, businesses, and livelihoods of too many Americans.

Even in agriculture where growth in imports has far exceeded the growth in exports. Farmers and national commodity organizations, including many coming right out of Minnesota, have been among the biggest supporters of trade liberalization in their hopes that increased exports would lead to higher prices and decent profits in the marketplace. From 1990 to 2000, total U.S. agriculture exports did grow by $10.5 billion, a 26-percent increase. However, agriculture imports increased by over $46 billion during that time. Today, the U.S. balance of trade in all agriculture commodities is still positive; however, that margin is shrinking.

Two major causes of our huge trade deficits have been Mexico and Canada. Today, we are seeing the result. Look at what has happened to U.S. trade with our neighbors since NAFTA took effect on January 1, 1994.

In 1993, the last year before NAFTA, all United States exports to Mexico totaled $31.6 billion. Imports from Mexico totaled $38.9 billion, leaving the United States with a $7.1 billion trade surplus with Mexico.

During the next 7 years, United States exports into Mexico grew to $111 billion, a 167-percent increase in 7 years. However, Mexican imports into the United States exploded to $136 billion, a 240-percent increase, and the United States balance of trade with Mexico went from its 1993 surplus to a $25 billion deficit in the year 1999.

Our trade with Canada followed a similar pattern. United States exports into Canada increased by $69 billion from 1993 to 2000. However, our imports from Canada grew by $120 billion, almost double the growth in exports. In 2000, our trade deficit with Canada was $52 billion.

Looking at one key sector, automobiles, the total automobile imports from Mexico into the United States increased more than the number of autos in 1993 to almost 1 million per year. Cars imported from Canada into the United States increased by 56 percent during that time to 2.2 million automobiles. Those 3 million autos used to be—or would have been—manufactured in the United States by American automobile workers.

Agriculture is another big loser under NAFTA, as too many Minnesota farmers have painfully realized. Canadian wheat, Mexican sugar, milk protein concentrate, starch molasses via Canada, and other trade imbalances have caused domestic commodity prices to plummet. The average price of a bushel of corn in the United States in the year 2000 was $1.35, well below the price of $3.11 for a bushel of corn in 1980, 20 years previously. For a bushel of wheat, the price in 2000 was $2.65 per bushel; in 1980 it was $3.91. For soybeans, a bushel in 2000 averaged $4.75; in 1980 that price averaged $12.40 per cwt. In 2000, compared to $13.05 per cwt. in 1980. Turkeys brought 40.7 cents per pound in 2000; 41.3 cents per pound in 1980.

All of those prices are in current dollars. After adjustment for inflation, their drops are even more severe. Last year, the U.S. farm price index, the value of all U.S. agriculture products divided by the cost of producing them, dropped to its lowest level since the Great Depression. That index has fallen by 20 percent during the last 10 years. So much for the benefits of NAFTA and international trade liberalization on American agriculture.

Similarly, in the nonfarm private sector, the average hourly wage paid U.S. workers in real dollars was less in the year 2000 than in 1990. It was less in 2000 than it was in 1980, and less than it was in 1970. Only by more spouses working more hours have average families made real gains. Who are they and how does that affect American families or moved slightly ahead in the U.S. economy during the last 10, 20, and 30 years.

Thus, U.S. trade policies and practices, in balance, are doing many Americans more harm than good. And when the harm is increasing more than the good.

The response of free trade proponents to this predicament is more free trade. More opening our doors to the largest marketplace in the world, the U.S. economy, which still produces 23 percent of the world’s GWP, accounts for 12 percent of world exports, and 18 percent of world imports.

Who, then, does benefit from this U.S. trade policy? Primarily, it has benefited continuing deregulation, the enormous cost advantages afforded U.S. corporations who shift production out of the United States into low-wage low-cost countries. Deregulation of the world’s product and financial markets has enriched a world class of investors, entrepreneurs, and professionals. At the very top, the accumulation of wealth has been extraordinary.

In 1996, the United Nations reported that the assets of the world’s 350 billionaires—that is, 350 individuals in this world who are billionaires—exceeded the combined incomes of 45 percent of the world’s population, almost 3 billion people.

Let me say that again. The assets of the wealthiest 350 people in the world exceeded the total assets of over 3 billion of our world’s citizens. But the larger promise made by the proponents of this unregulated world marketplace—particularly to the people of the United States—will do a living standard for the rest of America will also rise. That promise has not been realized. As trade and financial markets have been flung open, incomes have risen not faster, but more slowly. Income equality among nations has not improved, and within nations, including the United States, income inequality has worsened.

But this seems not to matter to the promulgators of rapid deregulation of the global economy, the so-called neo-liberals, and their solution to whatever problems afflict us is, of course, more trade liberalization. Ironically, many of them spent the last 30 years associating only to-called “social” with social failure. In this instance, they may prove themselves correct.

Nevertheless, it is the considered judgment of this administration and of the House of Representatives, albeit by a single vote, to continue in that direction. I expect this body will join with them by passing this trade promotion authority legislation.

Thus, the Dayton-Craig amendment represents one of the last opportunities for Congress to assert its priority for the economic well-being of the American people over the capital-serving efficiencies of liberalized world markets. This amendment preserves Congress’ ability to look out for the best interests of all Americans, especially the people on the losing side of the trade equation. And if we don’t look out for them, it is a near certainty that no one else will.

The Dayton-Craig amendment applies only to called trade remedy laws. They were enacted and put into law by previous Congresses and Presidents to protect American business owners, workers, and farmers from illegal or unfair trade practices, and to assist those Americans whose lives and livelihoods were irrevocably damaged by them. These trade remedy laws include safeguards in section 201, which provide for temporary duties, quotas, or other restrictions on imports that are traded fairly but which threaten serious injury to a domestic industry. They include anti-dumping remedies for the destructive effects of imports sold on the U.S. market at unfairly low prices, and countervailing duty relief from the negative impact of imports receiving foreign government subsidies. They also include section 301, which authorizes the United States Trade Representative to investigate trade agreement violations and illegal foreign trade barriers which are harmful to U.S. businesses and exports, and to remedy those violations.

All of these remedies are already subject to the rules established under the World Trade Organization and under the North American Free Trade Agreement, or the United States and other WTO members must adhere to the Uruguay Round Stipulations on subsidies and countervailing measures. This is hugely important. This is the first time the United States has ever agreed to subject its regulatory regime to an international organization. The former who decried the Trilateral Commission and so-called one-world government, those who condemn the coordination of U.S. military forces with NATO, and those who oppose any U.S. adherence to international agreements, are strangely silent about U.S. subjugation to the economic dictates of the World Trade Organization. Heretofore, the WTO, has operated largely as the creature of its members and not what it was intended to be. However, now that it is fully established and empowered with the unanimous consent of the participating countries and whose rules can only be altered by the same, any sovereign powers negotiated trade agreements that are agreed to by this body will not be redeemable, which is all the more reason why Congress should be vigilant over them.

The Dayton-Craig amendment says that Congress, along with the President, enacted these trade remedy laws, and only the President and Congress may eliminate them. They cannot be negotiated away by an unelected trade negotiator, albeit one selected by the President, which is a far greater perspective than Congress, who has the specific objective to secure further trade agreements, and who may not share this body’s perspective and concerns. Since a letter from 62 Senators and 31 Representatives the trade remedy laws in future trade negotiations was ignored, there is no reason to expect otherwise when those negotiations finally occur.

So, when a new trade agreement comes to Congress, to the Senate, with the trade remedy laws of the United States altered, with their protections weakened, and with Congress’ prior enactment of them overridden, then, if this trade promotion authority law is in effect—as it is written now without the Craig-Dayton amendment—we will be faced with a take it or leave it proposition. We will have no discretion or latitude. It will be all or nothing.

This amendment will permit—not require—Congress to separate those provisions in a proposed new trade agreement which alter existing trade remedy laws, allow the rest of the agreement to proceed along fast track, and then consider those trade remedy changes under regular Senate rules and procedures. Then, Congress can decide, as only Congress should decide, whether they must be given up for some larger gain. Then, we, or our successors, will be able to look our constituents in their eyes and tell them that we have acted in their collective best interests.

Trade negotiators look at those trade remedy laws and they see words, or bargaining chips, or perhaps even nuisances to get rid of. Our people, our constituents, who elected us and who depend upon us to look out for their interests. So when words which protect them are going to be removed, those decisions should be reviewed by their elected Representatives. Last week, the trade ambassador said that you cannot for this amendment and be for trade. There is great irony in an unelected official in the executive branch, which has no constitutional authority over trade, telling 335 elected Members of Congress, to whom the Constitution assigns the full responsibility for foreign trade, essentially to butt out of his domain. He was quoted as saying:

"You..." in the heart, of whether the Congress is going to try to negotiate with 435 Members of the House and 100 Senators, whether they want to go over to Brussels and sit around together, or whether they are going to have the Executive Branch negotiate.

My reply, Mr. Ambassador, is: You negotiate and then Congress will exercise its responsibilities under the United States Constitution. If our trading partners question those procedures, show them a copy of our Constitution. We bring government officials from all over the world here to learn about our system of government. This is another teaching opportunity. Under our Constitution we do not permit one person—no matter who he or she is—to bargain away our laws. No one—not even the President of the United States—has that authority. And no one who understands our Constitution should seek that authority.

While our country’s future trade policies are debatable, the right of Congress to participate actively in setting those policies is not. For anyone to try to usurp that authority is seriously misguided. If it succeeds, Congress has failed, failed its responsibility, failed the Constitution, and failed the people of America.

By adopting this amendment, the Senate upholds that right and that responsibility.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, as a co-sponsor of the Dayton-Craig amendment, I wish to speak on several moments about the constructs of the amendment itself and applaud my colleague and partner in this amendment, the Senator from Minnesota, for a very thorough and well-thought-out explanation as to the reason for this amendment.

I need not repeat the statistics. I need not repeat the facts that have been so eloquently spoken about a problem that exists in our country today that begs for a remedy and, at the same time, demands that we move forward in the area of expanding trade amongst our trading partners around the world.

The elements of fairness, the elements of transparency, the elements of the right hand knowing what the left hand is doing are absolutely critical in any trade relationship.

By the character of a developing economy, by the uniqueness of a resource-directed economy, by the uniqueness of a population economy, all international rules and regulations have differences. And those differences have values. And those countries that sense those values work to protect them or in some way assure that they will not be traded down or effectively destroyed by the very governments that are destined to protect them.

As a result of that, from the very beginning, and from the beginning of the debate, very substantially coming with the Kennedy Round over trade years ago, when we first established the fast-track concept, we knew our trade negotiators, once they were at the table of international negotiations, would have to have flexibility to propose legislation to the Congress as a whole package. But that whole package had to be representative of the laws of the country of which they were diplomats.

We have struggled with that over the years. Congress has consistently passed fast tracks, and we have worked to move progressively and to liberalize our trade laws. We, the United States, have been the world’s promoters of trade. It is quite simple why we would want to be that.

In my State of Idaho, nearly a third of every acre planted of agricultural produce has to sell in world markets to maintain some degree of value in a domestic market. My State was built on potatoes, potato chips. Now it is being built on computer chips. And those products have to sell in world markets. Clearly, the DRAMs that are produced by Micron, a large portion of those move into international sales and to be applied to new technologies being developed in those markets that then again sell in the world market.

Clearly, in my State, trade has expanded dramatically in the last several decades. But while the hi-tech economy has grown very well with a substantial amount of profitability, the agricultural economy has floundered. And while trade has been extremely beneficial in some areas, I would have to argue the Senator from Minnesota has, that in other areas it appears to have been less than fair and, in many instances, not fair at all.

There is a bit of a classic struggle going on between the United States and Canada in our forest products industries, forest products industries that are in part supply, publicly owned in the sense that the timber comes from public lands. Whether it is the Federal lands of the U.S. Forest Service or the lands of the provinces, whether it is crowned and provincial timber in Canada, the reality of placing values on those rough products as they move to the market is substantially different.

Over the years we have fought mightily to create balance. But as a result of some of what we believed to be unfair practices between Canada and the United States, we have seen the rights of our policies go out and our men and women walk away with empty lunch pails. And women, as usual, were aggressively laying and dumping in our markets. Just this year our President had to use trade remedy laws to stop the very process I have just defined. He stood up and he spoke out and he placed a tariff against Canadian lumber until such time as they can come back to the table and balance out with us a relationship and an agreement that does not put our men and women out of work in the very process by which they have to work and still allows the beneficial reality of Canadian and U.S. sticks, 2 by 4s, being at the local lumberyard to build the homes of Americans.

That is called balanced trade. That is called fair trade. The 201 process that brought about the investigation by our government, which was open and transparent, and that led our President to move is known as a trade remedy law passed by the U.S. Congress, passed by a majority vote out of this body—in other words, reflective of the constitutional responsibility of every Senator and every U.S. Member of Congress representing their States but, most importantly, taking an oath right there in that well of the Senate and we see in that oath that we hold the Constitution of the United States.

The argument is simple and the argument has been made already today by the administration in a letter to all of our colleagues that fast track is simply a process and we hold all of those proposals and we make all of these changes and all of them come back for a vote in this Chamber and they are correct—one vote, up or down.

The problem occurs with the anticipation in the process that will happen in an overall trade package once negotiated because they are never quite negotiated in a vacuum. The process goes on for years and years, as you have round after round and finally they conclude; there is a lot of attention and the world finally says, Oh, here it is, here is a trade package, a product of WTO, a product of aggressive negotiations, probably a product of the new round launched last year in Doha. The pressure is on in the public by the general economic conditions in the current package that we are alleging we will know if they are there without ever having to look because 90 days prior, under the law proposed, the negotiators would have to announce proposals of changes in the law. That is part of what came out of the House. That is part of what the Finance Committee, Chairman Baucus and Senator Grassley agreed on. And that is appropriate. It is appropriate that the legislative branch of our government, the Congress, understand that changes in the laws that they have written are being proposed. What we are saying today is that there ought to be the next step and that next step is quite simple—to allow a simple majority vote of the constitutional officers of this body—us, U.S. Senators—to say whether those changes are right.

Now, here is the next step, though: but to do so without dragging the whole trade package down. Not all the trade packages are changes in our laws. They are expansions of authority. They are adjustments in other laws—ours and Let me go through the letter in the context of what I have just talked about, about the flexibility of negotiations. Before I do that, let me drop back a moment to something I think is important, and it is a frustration that our negotiators deal with, where they are in the business of negotiating.

I had the opportunity a couple of years ago to be part of an observer team at the Hague at a climate change conference. The head of the team of the Clinton administration that was there said at the beginning of that conference: We will not propose laws that will damage the economy of the United States. And he said: No agreement is better than a bad agreement. The conference began and the pressure built.

During that time I had the opportunity to have a dialog with some of our counterparts from different Par-laments around the world. For the first time, I began to understand that they don’t understand us. They didn’t realize that a treaty negotiated by an administration and signed off on by an administration was not law until the Senate ratified it. Why? Because you are a member of a parliamentary body and you are elected and then you, if you are in the majority party, elect the Prime Minister out of that, that Prime Minister and the parliamentary body must agree. And so we have a different scenario they were viable even though under a different day and time the long-term constitutional responsibility of these Senators. So from Minnesota and Idaho, pass go, because the whole is so much more important than the parts. We are here today to tell you that the parts are darned important. They are constitutionally important.

And now let me try to set another stage for you about the pressures involved. Our trade remedy process, countervailing duty, antidumping, 201 is transparent. It is a public process. If you, Mr. President, are a manufacturer in your State and you feel you are being dramatically harmed by a product coming in under a trade agreement, you have a course of action. Now, it takes a couple of years. It is open, it is public. It will cost you money because you will have to get the attorneys and you will have to make the argument. If it is dramatic dumping and dramatic competition, you might be out of business. You get a remedy, but the remedy is still there. It is still public. What we have tried to do and what our negotiators have tried to do since the Kennedy round forward is to convince other countries of the world to make their processes more transparent.

Now, over time, there has been a shift. The shift has been away from their duties and away from their pennalties toward antidumping provisions, not unlike ours. They are not transparent. They are cast or administered in the dark of night. And so what our trading partners are telling our trade negotiators, or at least our trade negotiators believe, is that we have to get rid of what we have to cause them to get rid of what they are getting or they have got as it relates to trade remedy laws. In other words, we walk the plank first and maybe they will follow. In the meantime, what happens to the manufacturers and the work-groups and the economies of Idaho and Minnesota? Do they have to shift to the new paradigm? Do the old economies have to go away even though under a different day and a different scenario they were viable and producive? Well, I guess I am frustratted by it all. I am a public process. If you

Let me talk about what happened in No-

November of 2001 at Doha, Qatar, when our trade negotiators were involved in a round that we worked very hard to get, that was a product of the rollout of the very tragic round that occurred in Seattle, which basically fell apart as a result of national and international disidents and disruption. In Doha this past November, our administration agreed to reopen negotiations on agreements of implementation of article 5 of the GATT—that is called on anti-dumping and countervailing duties—and on subsidies and countervailing presently. The World Trade Organization had already ruled a number of times against our domestic trade remedies under these agreements and stated: the stated purpose of almost every other WTO member in securing these remedies is to further weaken U.S. trade law; in other words, further weaken the ability of the U.S. Government to protect its work force and its producers and its industries from what might be dumping, what might be clearly antidote or unfair trade.

The Japanese Government was elated by that action. They said: We are satisfied. This constitutes a major victory for their efforts. It on our trade laws. Those are the words of the Japanese economy, trade and industry minister. He said: “We are 120 percent satisfied that that’s where the Bush administration wants to go.”

The U.S. sacrificed our anti-dumping and countervailing duty laws in order to get a new round of talks at the table—not yet; they simply put them on the table.

Now, here is where I think the Senator from Minnesota and I agree and we also agree with our Trade Ambassador. There is nothing wrong with putting those issues on the table. When you are sitting at a negotiating table, everything ought to be negotiable, if the goal is to move from here to here and the benefits that will accrue as a result of that proposal are positive for our economies. So, our Trade Ambassador, put it on the table.

But: The U.S. trade law is not law, not to craft an agreement with which we couldn’t live. Ultimately, they could not agree with the parliamentarians of Europe, and they came home.

Is that the reality of where we are at the moment. That is why it is important to understand the frustrations our trade ambassador has when he goes to the table and they say: Why can’t you just negotiate something? That has an absolute measure of what we want. That is the TPA or fast track over the years. It is why we originally gave it.

But from the 1960s to 2002, the world and the economies of the world and the economies of this country and the economies of Idaho and the economies of Minnesota have changed dramatically in part because of trade, both positive and negative.
I believe it is right and proper that we debate this issue today, that we don’t sweep it under the rug, that we ask our colleagues to choose whether we ought to have a point of order and whether we ought to have a simple majority or a supermajority. There is no need to choose the trade remedy laws of our country as proposed by the trade agreement that is on the floor at the time or if we should retain the existing law.

In the letter sent this morning by the administration, they say that they are proposing by the trade agreement that major vote on the need to change the majority vote if the trade agreement subject to the majority vote, exactly the point of order, at which we are here today suggesting we make some subtle changes in the law.

"We have been committed not just to preserving U.S. trade laws but, more importantly, to using them." This is the administration talking in the letter. You are right; they have. And yet we are saying: we want to preserve them if it fits for you to use. They are saying, no; no; they can be negotiable or at least we want the right to negotiate.

We are not denying that right. I have said it once. The Senator from Minnesota has said it. We are not denying the right of negotiation at all. If we are bright and clear and articulate in what we do, we will not sour the debate or the environment in which those negotiations occur because if I were a negotiator, I would say: you bet, we will talk about it. We will put it on the table. It will require a simple majority to pass. But then the whole agreement will.

In all fairness to the administration, they recognize in the letter 41 Senators are a minority blocking this process. We offered to the administration yesterday that we would make some modification. They did not see fit to accept that. We went ahead. The Senator from Minnesota, when he offered the amendment this morning, modified it so it is not a two-thirds. It is a simple majority on the point of order, exactly the same vote it takes to pass the whole package. I believe that is a reasonable and right approach and a fair approach toward this issue.

A minority ought not be allowed to block trade law or any law for that matter. We rule by a majority procedurally. We deal with supermajorities on occasion, and we have done it here on occasion, and with cloture and other issues to protect trade laws.

Mr. DAYTON. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CRAIG. I am happy to respond. Mr. DAYTON. The Senator will recall—I would like the Record to show I ask the Senator, I received a call from a colleague on a matter this morning and indicated a desire to change a modification and to make it more acceptable to the administration. I would like to ask if that was the Senator’s intent, to make this one that would be more acceptable to the administration?

Let me parenthetically that, as a member of the other political party, I do not intend this amendment in any respect to be something that is referenced to this particular administration. I respect the role the administration has taken, that the trade ambassador has taken with regard to the steel products, as the Senator indicated. I thought it was a very strong position the President took with regard to the lumber coming from Canada; that, as the Senator said, this administration is more aggressive than its predecessor in that regard, and also with regard to Canadian wheat. My concern in offering this was not with regard to any particular administration. My interest was in protecting this Congress for many administrations to come on this matter. I ask the Senator, is this attempt on our part one that came out of the Senator’s negotiations and discussions with the administration?

Mr. CRAIG. It is that. I thought that was a right and reasonable approach. We should not ask for a supermajority on issues that can be passed or should be passed by a majority of the body.

The Senator from Minnesota listened to those arguments, accepted those arguments today. I was pleased that his amendment could be modified for that purpose.

In the administration’s letter there is another argument. They say: Secondly, the amendment would jeopardize our current options, especially the new global trade liberalization mandate launched in Doha last November.

My reaction to that is, it does not. They go on to say: This is not a hypothetical observation. The failure to launch a global trade negotiation at Seattle in 1999 was due in significant part to a refusal even to discuss trade laws.

Well, that was then. This is now. I have just said—the Senator from Minnesota has just said—discuss trade laws. Put them on the table. Look at the fact that they might need adjustment or change, that laws we have written in the 1960s might need some change.

All we are saying is, when the package comes back, it will require, if a point of order is brought against a change that you have already reported to us, Mr. Ambassador, a 50-percent plus one of those present and voting.

The conversation in Doha on the next round of this process. While the Congress of the United States is giving us new expanded trade authority and negotiation authority, it also recognized the strong desire on the part of the citizens of our country to protect some process of trade remedy and trade remedy laws that are currently on the books of the United States. So any changes that we would make in them or propose to be made, we are certainly willing to discuss those and talk about them, as we also want to talk about you, Spain, or you, France, or you, Germany, or somewhere else’s trade laws—will be subject to the same vote as required for passage of the trade package.

Instead of going with alarm, the ambassador ought to go with a very clear, matter-of-fact statement, and then roll up his sleeves and get at the business of negotiating in a way that I hope will help American agriculture and a lot of our industries.

Trade remedy laws are not off limits. Those are the words used in the administration’s letter today: Not off limits at all; available for full discussion, full debate, negotiation and subject to a majority vote of the Senate. I think that is right, that is proper, and that is what we ought to be about.

Their fourth argument was the WTO negotiations launched in Doha will not impair our ability to enforce U.S. trade laws. I think our explanation stands. If the ambassador brings back a package and in it there is substantive law change proposed and the dynamics of the package are such that the world and the economy of this country is saying pass it, pass it, pass it, there will be no opportunity because the law would not require, unless this amendment is adopted, us to make those adjustments if collectively the Congress of the United States felt the negotiators had gone beyond what we believe to be right and proper protection under those laws.

(Mrs. CARNAHAN assumed the chair.)

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator from Idaho yield for a question?

Mr. CRAIG. I will be happy to yield. Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I would like to propound a question to my colleague. I believe this is one of the most important amendments we will be dealing with on the trade promotion authority legislation. I am pleased to be a cosponsor, and I will be pleased to speak in support of it at some point. I ask the Senator from Idaho, is it the case that much of the angst that exists with respect to recent trade agreements—U.S.-Canada, NAFTA, and others—is that when we see areas of clear trade problems, clear manipulation of the markets, clear abuse of trade practices, we cannot ever get much of a remedy?

We have all these trade agreements, but we cannot get a remedy; we cannot get a problem solved. Why? At least one of the reasons, in my judgment, and I am sure of the Senator from Idaho if he feels the same way—is that we have weakened all these remedies to the point that no one wants to use them because they believe they are ineffective. For example, section 22 is pretty much gone. In many ways, section 301 is made much weaker by subsequent negotiations. The result is, it does not matter whether it is wheat from Canada or high-fructose corn syrup from Mexico or a dozen items I could mention. We just cannot get anybody to tackle a remedy to say: Yes, this is unfair, and we will stand up on behalf of our deal with it. That is why this amendment makes so much sense.

If the Trade Representative negotiates a new trade agreement and that agreement further weakens remedies that now exist, my understanding is the amendment allows that to come back to the Congress for an up-or-down vote. I think that is one of the most important provisions that we could adopt under this bill. I ask the Senator from Idaho, is it the case that the biggest problem these days has been we cannot get a remedy for anything in international trade?

Mr. CRAIG. The Senator from North Dakota has explained it very well, and that is the essence of this amendment. Again, a simple majority vote of this body will do so. Let me complete my comments. I have spoken long enough. There are others who wish to speak on this issue.

I close by speaking to the second-degree amendment the Senator from Iowa has just proposed, and I hope at some time we appropriately will move to table second-degree amendment. Let me tell my colleagues why.

There is nothing in that amendment with which I disagree as part of process and procedure. You bet we should have talked about proposed substitutes and changes from Mr. Grassley, I call it the catchall title to the advanced title, to a higher priority as it relates to the direction we give our negotiators and ambassadors, the principles of negotiation and the objective of those principles.

The second-degree amendment, though, takes away the point of order. It says, here is how you negotiate, but it does not deny the right of the Senate to speak. I hope at the appropriate time, early afternoon, we will offer a motion to table that amendment. I do believe we need a good straight up-or-down vote on the Dayton-Craig amendment. It is an important amendment.

I yield the floor. Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, at this time I am not going to address either my amendment or the amendments from Senator McCain and the Senator from Idaho. I do wish to speak generically about the issue before us, to which the amendment of the Senators from Minnesota and Idaho are very central, and to remind my colleagues what trade promotion authority is all about.

First, as all my colleagues know, nothing can be done under the Constitution about trade unless the Congress of the United States does it, because one of our explicit powers in the Constitution is to regulate interstate and foreign commerce. It is our authority, and Congress rightfully and according to our oath of office ought to protect our constitutional responsibilities, and we ought to perform our constitutional responsibilities.

For the first 150-year history of our country, when all Congress had to do in regard to trade was put on tariffs, up or down. That is one of those matters. It was very appropriate for Congress to initiate and finalize action as far as the regulation of interstate and foreign commerce was concerned.

Since the 1930s, we have been involved in cooperative efforts with other countries to reduce tariff and nontariff trade barriers because it was seen then and today as mutually beneficial to all nations to do so. We have been involved in international agreements and international fora to accomplish those goals.

One can imagine how impossible it would be then in an international forum to have 335 Members of Congress, negotiating with the Congress of the United States speaking for the United States. It is almost impossible for Congress to reach an agreement among its Members without, in the process, trying to negotiate with 142 other governments. For the last 25 years, or some people would say in different ways since 1935, we have given the President permission to negotiate agreements with other countries.

In a sense, the United States, through this legislation and previous legislation, has set up a contract with the President of the United States saying we would like to have him negotiate for the Congress of the United States, where the constitutional power lies, some agreements under strict authority that we would give the President, and with Congress having final authority to adopt what was negotiated if we agreed to it.

We are talking about giving the President the power to negotiate for us because it is an impossibility for the Congress to enter such a forum.

The basic question to our colleagues as they consider Dayton-Craig and other amendments is: Do they want the President of the United States to have this authority? This is not blanket authority given to the President of the United States. It is very confined to subject matter. It is very confined to the President reporting to the Congress of the United States on a regular basis of what has been done and to get our feedback so that the President carries out the intent of Congress in the negotiations.

Finally, the President of the United States has come to an agreement with 142 countries. Remember, that is not done by a majority vote of those 142 countries. That is done by consensus. So if the President of the United States feels the interests of the United States are not adequately protected, all the President has to do is walk away, and there is no new WTO agreement.

Eventually, if the President decides U.S. interests are being harmed and he reports to it and the other 142 countries agree to it, then it comes to us to make a decision whether or not the interests of the United States are adequately protected as the President negotiated with us, and it takes a major decision by the Senate, the 142 countries to become part of that agreement.

The basic question before the Senate in the Dayton-Craig amendment is whether or not they want the President of the United States to be credible at the bargaining table. The issue is whether or not the President will be credible if, when he reaches an agreement, there is opportunity in the Senate to have separate votes on separate parts of the agreement so some can be done and others not done?

Do my colleagues think the other 142 countries of the WTO are going to negotiate with our country on that basis? Do you think there will be a final agreement? No. The Dayton-Craig amendment undoes the pattern of this contract between the President of the United States and the Congress over the last 25 years.

So we all have to ask ourselves: Has the United States prospered over the last quarter of a century by the process that is once again before us to set up a contract with the President of the United States to negotiate? I have come to the conclusion this process has been good, but I am a Republican. Maybe Democrats would question my judgment of whether or not this is a good process.

So I have said before in this debate, and I want to say again, listen to what Mr. Grassley said as he correctly bragged about the agreements he finalized—that started in previous administrations—during his first year in office. The North American Free Trade Agreement and the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trades were finalized during his first months in office.

He says as a result of those agreements, and I suppose he would say, too, predecessors to those agreements, that more than 22 million jobs have been created during his administration—during his first year in office. The North American Free Trade Agreement and the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trades were finalized during his first months in office.

He says as a result of those agreements, and I suppose he would say, too, predecessors to those agreements, that more than 22 million jobs have been created during his administration—during his first year in office. The North American Free Trade Agreement and the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trades were finalized during his first months in office.
process ought to be continued. Our colleagues are suggesting that would put a kink in this machine, and that might not be the thing to do. I raise those questions with my colleagues.

I also raise the questions with my colleagues. Do we not want the present trade remedies working, which I heard a few minutes ago. Well, what do they think the steel agreement is all about? The President is looking out for our basic industry, to give it some help through transition. The President looked at that and decided that other countries dumping steel in the United States was not right, and our economy was being hurt by it. I think, in a very strong way, to protect our interests.

I think of the 201 process where the previous President stepped in, in the case of lamb coming into the United States from New Zealand and Australia. I suppose there are a lot of others I ought to refer to, but our Presidents, Republican and Democrat, have been willing to use the tools that are on the table. Other nations are beginning to learn from the United States and are willing to take action to protect their industries in a way that is going to eventually hurt us.

We have been the pioneers of trade remedies for a long period of time, and other nations have somewhat resented our using it, and they are beginning to learn from us and use it. Now they are doing it in a way that is not as transparent as the United States. They do it probably in a way not as transparent as the United States. They are saying we ought to let the rest of the world adopt these measures, and we are saying we cannot compete, we will not impose fair trade quotas and are willing to take action to protect our industries in a way that is going to eventually hurt us.

Now, are we going to say we should not be looking out for our interests on trade remedy legislation? I think what they are saying is we ought to let the rest of the world adopt these measures, even if they hurt the United States. Some other colleagues, other nations are beginning to learn from the United States and are willing to take action to protect their industries in a way that is going to eventually hurt us.

I probably have implied very much that Dayton-Craig is a bad approach. My point is to simply say I hope my 99 other colleagues will look at the practice of the last 25 years, which has been a credible approach for the United States to be at the negotiating table, and say: Do you want to change that? Do you want to change the creditability of the President of the United States at the negotiating table?

I yield the floor to the PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, of course the Senator from Iowa is correct; the Constitution provides in article I, section 8, that the Congress shall have the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations—not the President, not the trade ambassador, but the Congress. That is in the Constitution of this country.

The Congress has, over some period of time, tried to put handcuffs on itself so these handcuffs would prevent it from being involved in any trade negotiation or trade agreement that came back to the Congress. If it did not like a provision, if it thought a provision was not in accordance with its instructions, the Congress will have said, by fast track or trade promotion authority, no, we are not allowed to offer amendments to that trade agreement. Congress has done that on previous occasions. I do not support that. I do not believe it is appropriate.

What the Senators from Minnesota and Idaho are saying with respect to fast track, or trade promotion authority, which will tie the Congress’s hands, at least in regard to the issue of providing trade remedies for trade abuses that exist, that our businesses and our employees in this country have to try to deal with, at least with respect to those trade remedies, Congress ought to give a say in that if someone negotiates a trade agreement that weakens those trade remedies.

We have had plenty of examples: Section 22 was largely negotiated away; section 301 has been diminished in importance. So we have had examples where the trade remedies are not available.

My colleague from Iowa cited some of the trade abuses that I could cite. On high-fructose corn syrup I could cite. On wheat, Do not blame us. Let us not blame America for trade abuses that are imposed by other countries.

Unfair wheat subsidies or unfair wheat trade flooding into this country from Canada, that is a problem. That is not our fault; it is Canada’s fault. The high-fructose corn syrup, that is Mexico’s fault.

I could go on to give a dozen such examples, but let’s not blame our country for trade agreements that are committed by other countries. Let’s make sure businesses in our country and their workers know that when another country does that, when it tries to rig the marketplace with a trade practice that is abusive, then we have a remedy against it.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said that common sense is genius dressed in work clothes. When we deal with trade abuses that are imposed by other nations, we are not present, the American people are
Mr. REID. Madam President, the Senator from South Carolina has asked to speak.

Under the previous order, we are to go out in 1 minute. I ask unanimous consent the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS, be recognized for up to 15 minutes, and this will be for debate only. At that time, we would go out for the party caucuses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I thank the distinguished leader and the two distinguished sponsors of this particular amendment, the Senator from Minnesota and the Senator from Idaho.

There is nothing better than a clean-cut, cut-clean little amendment, this particular provision. It simply says: Wait a minute, we don’t want just an up-or-down vote on an overall patchwork of all kinds of trade measures, and all kinds of articles, and everything else of that kind.

Somebody might not like what they got on prunes. Somebody might not like what they have on textiles and everything else.

We are not disturbing whatever the negotiations are of our special Trade Representative, or the President. They tried to label it as either you are for the President or against the President. That is baloney.

What it says is: Wait a minute, before you have to vote up or down to just bring a whole trade bill down, let’s make certain the basic laws are right. Here is how it reads:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law (it) . . . shall not apply to any provisions in an implementing bill being considered by the Senate that modifies or amends, or requires a modification of, or an amendment to, any law of the United States that provides safeguards from unfair foreign trade practices to United States businesses or workers—imposition of countervailing and antidumping duties . . . national security import restrictions—

It goes down and lists those things that they are trying to safeguard from unfair trade practices.

Even then, only on a point of order will the majority vote up or down. So you do not have to argue the entire trade measure that they have spent months and months, sometimes years and years on. You can just bring it to a majority vote.

If I were the President or anybody else were the President, they would say please put that in there. We are not trying to superimpose this kind of authority over the treaty. Under Article I, section 8, of the Constitution says that the Congress has that responsibility. It is not the responsibility of the Special Trade Representative, not the Supreme Court, not the President—we have the responsibility. What I am trying to do is protect that responsibility. The administration should want me to protect the Constitution.

What really is happening is that people do not understand the fix. Let me explain what I call the fix.

If you go back to the early 90s to the enactment of NAFTA, the North American Free Trade Agreement, the trade treaty with Mexico, it was a very interesting thing.

The New York Times published an article, after the vote was cast, about the 26 freestates that President Clinton did, to put on the fix in order to pass that particular measure. He gave two golf rounds, one in California, and another one somewhere in Arkansas for votes; he gave two C-17s to another Congressman; he gave a cultural center to Congressman Pickle, down in Texas, for a vote.

At least those freebies, in order to fix the vote, got some people some jobs. Look the golf matches at least got somebody a job to cut the grass.

Let’s clear the air and understand what is going on right now. Under Mr. Bush’s plan, we would not be allowed to debate and consider these trade measures—except in a limited way. The Senators from Minnesota and Idaho, said: Heavens above, let us have at least the national security laws, countervailing duties, and antidumping laws—where a point of order will give you an up-or-down vote and you do not have to vote up or down the entire trade measure.

There is a very interesting article here—the unmitigated gall of the proponents of fast track.

Let me read it:

The Bush Administration indicated that the President might veto trade legislation if the Senate adds a provision that would allow Congress to amend foreign trade agreements the President negotiates. This week, the Senate is considering granting Bush fast track trade powers. Under fast track, Congress could approve or reject trade pacts but could not amend them. However, Senators Mark Dayton, Democrat of Minnesota, and Larry Craig, Republican of Idaho, are pushing an amendment that would allow Congress to change trade pacts. They say Congress must have the power to make changes.
to protect U.S. workers, Commerce Department officials said that would defeat the purpose of fast track and they would recommend that Bush veto the legislation.

In short, yes, the President does not have the authority under the Constitution. The Congress, under article I, section 8, has the authority and the responsibility. The President, and his little minion, Robert Zoellick, the Trade Representative—he runs around and smiles and grins in all of these places, and he can amend anything. He can amend the laws. But, oh, they bring and amend the laws with respect to our national security, with respect to countervailing duties and antidumping provisions. He can amend it. But the Congress can’t even consider it on an up-or-down vote.

Can you imagine the polls in such a situation as this. That Grassley amendment ought to be tabled immediately and we should not wait for 2:15. There isn’t any question in my mind that this thing has gotten totally out of hand. The trade laws are not successes. The distinguished Senator from Iowa points out that everything has been coming up roses. But the fact is, we have run out of business because of NAFTA we lost 53,900 textile jobs alone in the little State of South Carolina, 700,000 around the country—not just 20,000 steelworkers. So we lost all those jobs. And we are going out of business. And the Congress of the United States, our thrift, our re-training, our high-tech, global competition. The President says you don’t understand it.

We understand it. We retrain. I told the story—I will repeat it right quick—of the Oneida mill in Andrews that made the little T-shirts. At the time of the closing, they had 487 workers there. The average age was 47. The next morning they did it the President’s way. They retrained the employees. They said, yes. They are now 487 skilled computer operators.

Are you going to hire a 47-year-old computer operator or a 21-year-old computer operator? You are not taking on the retirement costs, you are not taking on the health costs of the 47-year-old. So it is a real problem.

Here we have the responsibility, and this crowd will not even let us do our job. The arrogance of this K Street crowd who writes these trade measures is unbelievable. And the President of the United States went over on the House side, and by one vote he promised—what?—he would do a fundraiser. So he has been down to Greenville to show up at a fundraiser.

It is money that talks, that controls here. You do not argue the trade measure, whether it is in the best interests of our country or not. This thing has gotten totally out of hand. And to come here and say whether this President likes it or that President likes it, well, this Senator does not like it at all.

We have many other measures, too. I noticed that Nick Calio, and his minion at the White House, said we have to get on, we can get rid of this bill this week and we can get it to conference, and everything else like that. We have barely been able to get on this particular amendment to discuss it. And then they say, well, we will put in a little plank that we will fix that vote. And we will not even have it, even when they have changed it from a 60-vote point of order down to just a majority vote up or down. They will not even let you have a majority up-or-down vote. The majority of the United States under the responsibilities of the Senate.

They say that past Presidents like it. Past Presidents don’t go back down to Arkansas—they move to New York. They don’t sell this trade bill as being good for farmers in Arkansas, I can tell you that. They won’t run for election down there. And they won’t do it in my State of South Carolina, either.

It is a hearty development to find the distinguished Senator from North Dakota—they know that agricultural business extremely well. They are now joining in because they are losing all the agriculture. The 3½ million farmers that we have alone will lose 700 million farmers in China. That is why we have a deficit in the balance of trade with respect to corn.

They tell me that now China is shipping to Japan and Korea some of their wheat. We won’t continue to appear as if they are taking our wheat. But we are going out of business there. And we will not have the wonderful export of America’s most productive production; namely, America’s agriculture.

So I hope we will slow down, stop, look, and listen, and understand that all we are trying to do is our job. And our job is to regulate foreign commerce. Please let us have a vote up or down. Do not come in and say, you cannot have a down vote on the antidumping substantive law, that you can repeal it. Because once they repeal it in Doha, or any other foreign land, we’re in trouble. When the trade reps meet to discuss agreements they don’t go to places like Seattle any more, where people can go to and demonstrate and tell about our trade experiences here in the United States. No, they pick a place that no one ever heard of. You can’t find it on the map. The next trade negotiation will be in the Antarctic. I have been down there. It is hard to get there. That is where they will have the next trade negotiation, where nobody can be heard. And they will get the fix, and then they will come back and do exactly what is happening on this.

There is a fix. In this particular case it is not golf games and not C-17s, it is not cultural centers like it was on NAFTA, but it is welfare. It does not employ anybody. It says: Well, we give you a little welfare, you close your mouth, shut, so you can go back home and run for reelection. It is not about trade, not about jobs.

We have the job of creating jobs. They are exporting them faster than we can possibly manage it. And now they are not only exporting their manufacturing, they are exporting the executive office to Bermuda.

So here, in a time of war, when you should be saying that we will only sell the ‘sacrifice,’ they put the President on TV, who says: Don’t worry. Take a trip. Go to Disney World. Take your family. And what we ought to do is cut some more taxes to run the debt up.

You are going to hear about that because by this time next month we will be in desperate circumstances. We have to increase the debt limit, but they will not say they will increase the debt limit. They will try to say it is the war, as to why we need to borrow money. Oh, no, it is not the war. It is the trillions of dollars they have lost. And now they want to lose another $4 trillion.

Larry Lindsey—he doesn’t like me referring to him—but he is the one who opposed what we had going with President Clinton and Secretary Summers to stop all of these offshore locations from avoiding taxes. They even had a bill, reported out of the committee over on the House side, that did that.

You would think, by gosh, we would be raising taxes to pay for the war, certainly not escaping our civic duty in a time of war. But that is the hands that we are dealt. The wonderful Business Roundtable, the Conference Board, the National Association of Manufacturers, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce—oh, they will all tell you what is good for the country. What they are saying is wrecking the economy. They don’t want to pay for anything. All they want to do is just help everybody buy the different elections.

I see my time is up. I hope that at 2:15, when they move to table, Madam President, that the people will sober up and come to the floor and give us a chance on that vote to table the Grassley amendment so we can do our job. We don’t say one way or the other; we just say, give us an up-or-down vote to consider the security, consider the antidumping provisions, as the Dayton-Craig amendment calls for.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 having arrived, the Senate will now stand in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:46 p.m., recessed until 2:16 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. Breaux).

AMENDMENT NO. 3408

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, as soon as we have someone here from the other side, I will move to table the amendment now pending. We have had a good debate. The debate was very constructive all morning. It is time to test the strength of the second-degree amendment and find out what we are going to do.

As we proceed through this trade legislation, we should have more debates such as we had this morning. We should vote as we have had debate. Of course, a motion to table can be offered at any time. It is high time we did this on this amendment.

I was talking to some Democratic Senators this morning. Between the two Senators they have six or seven amendments. So there is a lot that needs to be done on this legislation. If someone does not have an opportunity to speak on one amendment, they can certainly do it on the other.

I hope we can continue to move this legislation. I know Senator DAYTON and Senator CRAIG have waited for days on offering their amendment.

I say to my friend from Minnesota, I appreciate very much his patience in waiting a set to get to the test the strength of what is happening.

I have been told that the Dayton-Craig amendment has at least 60 votes in favor of it. I certainly think we should find out if that is the case. There have been some who have been trying to prevent Senators DAYTON and CRAIG from having a vote on their amendment. I suggest that is not the way we should do things. Something this complex and this important we should move as quickly as possible.

I therefore move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. STARENOW). Is there a sufficient second?

There is not a sufficient second. Mr. GRAMM. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I renew my request to table the amendment. I was told that the Senator from Nevada, Mr. NICKLES, I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting, the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) would vote “no.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 61, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

Reps.

The motion was rejected.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I rise today to discuss U.S. trade remedy laws—anti-dumping, anti-subsidy, and safeguard laws.

Senators DAYTON and CRAIG have offered an amendment on this important issue. I want to say a few words about our trade laws. While much of this year’s debate over fast track has centered around labor and environment, there has been less talk about the equally important issue of U.S. trade laws. Specifically, however, this will ensure that these laws are not weakened in future trade negotiations. This is not an academic issue. In Doha last November, our trade negotiators put U.S. trade laws on the negotiating table. I believe that was a mistake. And I want to make it clear now that this Senate and this Congress will not tolerate weakening changes to our trade laws.

It is a grave mistake to suggest that the United States must weaken its trade laws to be a participant in future trade negotiations. There is virtually no political support for such a position. The last tabling motion showed that. There were 61 Senators who voted not to table the underlying amendment. This point was made clear in the letter sent to the President last year by nearly two-thirds of the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this letter be printed in the Record. There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE PRESIDENT, The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: We are writing to state our strong opposition to any international trade agreement that would weaken U.S. trade laws.

As American trade laws, including anti-dumping law, countervailing duty law, Section 201, and Section 301, are a critical element of U.S. trade policy. A wide range of agricultural and industrial sectors has successfully employed these statutes to address trade problems. Unfortunately, experience suggests that many other industries are likely to have occasion to rely upon them in future years.

Each of these laws is fully consistent with U.S. obligations under the World Trade Organization (WTO) and other trade agreements. Moreover, these laws actually promote free trade by countering practices that both distort trade and are condemned by international trading rules.

U.S. trade laws provide American workers and industries the guarantee that, if the United States pursues trade liberalization, it will also protect them against unfair foreign trade practices and allow time for them to address serious import surges. They are part of a political bargain struck with Congress that the American people under which the United States has pursued market opening trade agreements in the past.

Congress has made clear its position on this matter. In draft fast track legislation considered in 1997, both Houses of Congress have included strong provisions directing trade negotiators not to weaken U.S. trade laws. Congress has restated this position in trade negotiations for years. There is virtually no political support for such a position.

Unfortunately, some of our trading partners, many of whom maintain serious unfair trade practices, continue to seek to weaken these laws. This may simply be posturing by those who oppose further market opening, but whatever the cause, the United States should no longer use its trade laws as bargaining chips in trade negotiations nor...
agree to any provision that weaken or undermine U.S. trade laws. We look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Bob Baucus, DeWine, Specter, Rockefeller, Reid, Harkin, Shelby, Lieberman.

Mr. BAUCUS. Our trading partners should also understand this point. There are many countries that want to weaken U.S. trade laws. Why? Because they want to be able, if you will, to dump subsidized products—ship products that violate the basic principles of WTO—into the United States. It is very difficult for us to protect ourselves if we don’t have our anti-dumping and countervailing duty and section 201 trade laws.

I must say almost every country in the world, and particularly many in South America, are eager to negotiate free trade agreements with the United States. There are many South American countries that want to do so. Unfortunately, a thorn in our side and a thorn in the side of the countries in our joint effort to try to reach agreement on FTAA, for example, I say very respectfully, is the country of Brazil.

I think it is important to step back and ask why countries such as Brazil want us to weaken our trade laws. The answer, of course is pretty simple: their companies and their workers will benefit—at the expense of ours.

In the last couple of years, there has been considerable debate regarding the use of trade laws in the context of the steel import crisis. Last year, the administration and the Senate Finance Committee worked together to initiate a “section 201” investigation, which allows relief where an industry has been seriously injured by imports. The case of steel is well known—international overcapacity and unfair trade practices have been the norm for decades. But unfair trade practices are not limited to the steel industry. Foreign governments to undercut other strategic U.S. industries—including semiconductors, consumer electronics, and supercomputers.

That last point is important—so I want to emphasize it again. Foreign governments have sought to harm American companies and workers. Opponents of dumping laws often suggest that if a foreign company wants to sell us a product cheaply we, should take advantage of that. After all isn’t that what, competition is all about? But that perspective is simplistic. Companies can succeed in dumping over an extended period of time only if supported by government policies—trade barriers, subsidies, lax enforcement of their own antitrust laws. Profits gained in protected foreign markets allow foreign companies to slash prices in the United States in order to gain market share. Indeed, efficient American mills must compete with foreign steel regardless of need. Foreign steel mills often act as little more than subsidized work programs.

I might digress slightly. The same is true with subsidized lumber in Canada. They are not supposed to subsidize work programs and subsidized timber production in the lumber industry to such a great degree. In 1999, for example, foreign over-capacity was more than two times as great as the total annual steel consumption in the United States.

With other export markets largely closed, there is an overwhelming incentive to send underpriced steel to the open U.S. market. Let me repeat that point. We want to hide their markets to companies and countries that dump steel or subsidize steel production. So what happens? That steel tends to be diverted to the United States because we, by comparison, have such an open market compared with other countries that otherwise import steel.

So without fair trade laws, investment dollars would simply not flow to American companies. For example, why would anybody invest in a U.S. company, even a highly efficient one, that could so easily be undercut by unfair foreign competition?

So it is not only a matter of workers, employees getting jobs in the United States, but it is also foreign investment and domestic investment in American companies in the United States.

A smart investor would invest in a company where its government protected its property.

Still, the point is argued, why not just allow consumers to take advantage of cheap products? It certainly is true there may be a short-term advantage for consumers and consuming industries. But over the long term, we risk gutting our manufacturing base and gutting the technological edge of American companies.

Just think about it a second. If other countries dump, how can we invest in the United States to gain and maintain a technological edge?

For any consuming industry complaining about the use of our trade laws in the steel industry, just ask yourself what their reaction would be to foreign governments targeting their industry.

But beyond economic rationale, we risk losing the political support for trade. Trade laws are part of the political bargain. If free trade is not perceived as fair, Americans will not support it. Why would Americans support free trade if the perception is that it exposes them to foreign governments’ unfair trade practices?

Consider also the consequences if we do not have effective trade laws. Trade laws ensure uniform treatment. In bad economic times, there will always be calls to take action against imports. Without consistent and transparent trade laws, those calls will come for general trade barriers against imports.

The internationally negotiated trade laws we currently follow seek to provide an objective set of criteria. I might add, our trade laws are totally WTO consistent, a point some critics forget.

Some have also asked whether we really need to worry about our laws being weakened in international negotiations. Recent history demonstrates why we should be concerned.

I might say, NAFTA’s dispute resolution procedures under chapter 19 have significantly undermined our enforcement of U.S. trade laws. Both the GATT Tokyo Round and the Uruguay Round weakened our antidumping and safeguard rules; that is, it happens, it is not just theory. And our laws continue to be attacked and weakened by dispute panels exceeding their authority.

Some have suggested we use negotiations as an opportunity to address due process and transparency concerns in the application of other countries’ trade laws. But remember that fast track is only used to change U.S. laws. If we are only looking at the laws of foreign governments, we can resolve these differences outside of the U.S. implementing legislation.

As for difficulties encountered by U.S. exporters facing foreign countries’ trade remedy actions, those are problems of compliance with the existing WTO rules, not problems requiring us to revisit the rules themselves.

Let me now turn to the Senate bill. I want to make sure my colleagues appreciate the strong provisions protecting U.S. trade laws.

First, as was the case in the House legislation, our bill provides that the President must not undercut U.S. trade laws and should also seek to put an end to the foreign practices that make trade laws necessary in the first place. Section 2102(c)(9) of the bill states, first, that the President shall:

(A) preserve the ability of the United States to enforce rigorously its trade laws, including the antidumping, countervailing duty, and safeguard laws, and avoid agreements that lessen the effectiveness of domestic and international disciplines on unfair trade, especially dumping and subsidies, or that lessen the effectiveness of domestic and international safeguard provisions.

Pretty strong stuff.

Second, the bill states the President shall—I underline the word “shall”:

(b) address and remedy market distortions that lead to dumping and subsidization including overcapacity, cartelization, and market barriers.

In addition, the Senate bill makes important additions to the House bill. Under this legislation, the Secretary of Commerce must form a strategy to
And in that humbling moment of 1934, where everything we did related to trade and the economy was wrong, there was a rare bipartisan consensus. It occurred because the country was in so much trouble, and because there was a recognition that we had created our own problem. At that moment in 1934, Republicans and Democrats got together and passed what was called the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. That Act allowed the President to negotiate trade agreements between 1934 and 1945. We literally were the leader in starting up world trade again.

As world trade was reigned, as our economy started to grow, and as we fought and won World War II, the bipartisan consensus on trade grew. And we saw that trade is a good thing that promotes jobs, growth, opportunity, prosperity, and freedom. The bipartisan consensus expanded to the point where in 1948 we adopted the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, known as GATT. And that was the procedure that we had in place until 1994, when the fast-track provisions expired.

Since then, we have found that few countries in the world are willing to negotiate with us, negotiate with the United States, because a trade agreement negotiated could be amended in Congress. Obviously, countries are not willing to make concessions that bind them when our concessions would not bind us should Congress decide to change them.

As a result, there are some 130 trade agreements worldwide that we in the United States are not a part of. For example, Europe has negotiated an expanded trade agreement with South American nations. We have no such agreements. Canada has negotiated free trade agreements with South American nations. We have been unable to have such agreements. So today, appliances that could be produced cheaper and better in the United States are being sold in Chile today by Canadian manufacturers because their manufacturers have a free trade agreement over ours; they have a free trade agreement that means lower tariffs. Chilean consumers could buy better American appliances cheaper, but without a trade agreement, they can’t buy them without having to pay a tariff in Canada benefits from that trade, and we do not.

We have come here today to try to set this situation straight. We have come here today to try to give the President the authority to promote American exports and to engage in trade liberalization around the world.

Without getting into a long harangue about it, let me say that Republicans have been asked to pay a tremendous toll of tribute to get to this point. The President asked the Senate for an up-or-down vote on trade promotion authority. That request was denied. Instead, the majority has said that to get a vote on trade promotion authority, we must add a trade adjustment assistance bill to it, and that bill must contain a new provision requiring the government to pay 70 percent of the health care costs of people who lose their jobs because of trade, even though many Americans have no health care benefit when they are working.

Moreover, we have been asked to agree—and to this point we reluctantly have agreed—that if you are a worker whose job is affected by imports and is not competitive, you get not only 2 years of unemployment and 70 percent of your health care benefit, but you get part of your wages paid for by the government. Let’s say you lose your job in the steel mill but you have always wanted to be a batboy for the Pittsburgh Pirates. If you take the lower-paying job as a batboy, we will supplement your wages to make up half the difference of what you lost in salary from the steel mill wages as compared to the Pirates bat boy wages. Meanwhile, if you lose your job because a terrorist destroys the factory you work in, you get 6 months unemployment and you get no health care.

It is fair to say that there are 45 Republicans in the Senate who are adamantly opposed—adamantly opposed—to those provisions. We have created two new entitlements that are unfunded and that nobody knows what they cost. We are creating the incredible entitlement that we will be taxing people who are working and who don’t have health insurance in order to subsidize 70 percent of the health care costs of certain people who are unemployed but had health insurance when they worked. They now will be getting a taxpayer subsidy, even though the people paying the subsidy don’t have health care themselves. And we are being asked to sign on to a system where the American Government for the first time is going to get into wage guarantees. There is no sense beating this old dead horse, but let me say that these are the same kinds of deals that Europe is desperately trying to get out of. They can’t create jobs because they can’t cut old jobs because they have to pay all these benefits. Yet in this tribute we are having to pay to get the trade bill, we are going in the direction that the Europeans are actively trying to get out of. We are going in the direction of imposing heavy socialistic programs in an attempt to have a stabilizing effect on the budget.

And now, in the midst of a bill that already has all these provisions that 45 Republicans hate, that will drive up the deficit, that will make the economy less competitive, and that create a terrible injustice in the system, we now are presented with an amendment before us that will literally undo fast track authority by allowing Congress to change the deal.

Can you imagine if in buying and selling a house, or any other commonplace negotiation, you suddenly are told you must pay more than you negotiated to pay? Can you imagine how commerce would break down when deals can be renegotiated after the negotiations are done?

The whole purpose of paying this heavy tribute, and adopting all this legislation, is to get to get the positive effect of fast track whereby there is an up-or-down vote on accepting the negotiated deal. But now in comes the Dayton-Craig amendment that says to the President, OK, you can negotiate, you can give, you can take, but when the time comes back, if you have negotiated in areas where Congress has written laws to hinder trade, then we get to vote on those provisions separately. And if you cannot get 51 votes, then those provisions are taken out.

What country in the world is going to be foolish enough to negotiate with us when they know there is going to be a separate vote on the parts of the agreement that we in the United States like the least, whereas we never negotiate with another country under circumstances where their legislative body could take out the parts of the negotiation they did not like but leave in the parts we did not like?

This amendment kills trade promotion authority because it is counter to the very thesis that underlies it. What is trade promotion authority about if it is not about an up-or-down vote on a trade agreement, without amendment, which allows part of an agreement—the part that is likely to be least popular in the United States—to be voted on separately? How can anybody be confused that this amendment absolutely kills trade promotion authority?

As the Dayton-Craig amendment has been debated, people have gotten the idea that this amendment has to do only with unfair trade practices. But most of this amendment has nothing to do with unfair trade practices. And even where it does, it is obvious on its face that if we could negotiate agreements to fix those practices both here and in our trading partners’ countries, we would want to do it.

Let me now go through the provisions of law that would be affected by the Dayton-Craig amendment.

First, the Dayton-Craig amendment says that Congress would have the right to strike, by majority vote, any provisions from trade agreements that have anything to do with unfair trade practices. And even where it does, it is obvious on its face that if we could negotiate agreements to fix those practices both here and in our trading partners’ countries, we would want to do it.

The amendment, if adopted, will be that there will never be another trade agreement that has anything to do with reducing export subsidies. And of all the nations on Earth, we would be the biggest beneficiary of such an agreement. What country in the world can outproduce Iowa in agriculture? We could sell billions of dollars of agricultural products in Europe if we could negotiate an end to foreign subsidies. Why should we not be negotiating with the Europeans, the Koreans, or the Japanese to suggest that we all reduce the amount of subsidies that we are paying to dump steel on the world market? Why don’t we all agree to reduce the subsidies that are resulting in overproduction of agricultural products?

The net result of this provision will not be to protect American manufacturers and farmers from losing their market. The amendment, if adopted, will be that there will never be another trade agreement that has anything to do with reducing export subsidies. And of all the nations on Earth, we would be the biggest beneficiary of such an agreement. What country in the world can outproduce Iowa in agriculture? We could sell billions of dollars of agricultural products in Europe if we could negotiate an end to foreign subsidies. Why should we not be negotiating with the Europeans, the Koreans, or the Japanese to suggest that we all reduce the amount of subsidies that we are paying to dump steel on the world market? Why don’t we all agree to reduce the subsidies that are resulting in overproduction of agricultural products?
eliminating our ability to protect our producers from unfair trade, protects us right out of being able to eliminate unfair trade.

The second provision of the Dayton-Craig amendment refers to our anti-dumping laws. Now, on its surface, the amendment seems good. The President would not be able to negotiate anything that would prevent America from protecting its producers from dumping. In other words, we will not be dumped upon. But what does dumping mean?

First of all, dumping means all these low-price quality items Americans can buy for their families at department stores. But forget for a moment that American families enjoy a better quality of life from low-price imports. Why shouldn't we negotiate an agreement that says why should we subsidize products to dump on your market and why should you subsidize products to dump on our market when we could get together and negotiate an armistice whereby we both stop dumping?

When one listens to the rhetoric of supporters of the Dayton-Craig amendment, gosh, it sounds appealing. They say, do not eliminate our protections against dumping. But when we protect our market and our right to protect ourselves against dumping, we effectively eliminate our ability to negotiate for a world where we stop dumping by everybody. That just does not make sense to me.

The second law covered by the Dayton-Craig amendment is Section 337, which relates to U.S. patents and copyrights. From listening to the rhetoric, you might think the amendment says that anything the President might do that weakens American patents and copyrights will require a separate vote.

But who owns all the patents and copyrights in the world? What nation in the world has tried to write language into its treaties or agreements on respect for copyrights? From 1948, the United States of America. We are the only country in the world that wants to talk about copyrights and patents. Why? Because we own copyrights, and we own patents. Why in the world would we want to bar the President from holding negotiations in the very areas where the United States will benefit the most? If we, who hold the vast majority of the copyrights and patents in the world, could negotiate an international agreement on respecting copyrights and patents, would we not be the principal beneficiary of it?

Mr. DAYTON. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DAYTON. I agree with the Senator that it is necessary to negotiate on copyrights and patents, but what if we had negotiated a contract that I would buy your house, but we wrote into the contract that I had the ability to change one part of the contract to suit me but that you did not have a right to change a part of the contract to suit you? No party to a contract would agree to that.

I am not talking about changing copyrights and patents unilaterally. I am talking about reciprocal commitments. Congress has passed resolutions again and again demanding that trade agreements require our trading partners to change their copyright and patent laws. It has been something we have trumpeted, it is in our interest, and we should be promoting it everywhere. But how are we going to get countries to change their laws when as an example they can be voted on separately? As much as I might want your house, and even if I offer a very good price, if I can come back after the contract is signed and change the price, you are not going to negotiate with me.

Mr. DAYTON. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DAYTON. I agree with the Senator that under the terms of the amendment which the Senator describes, my understanding of the law is that if there were an agreement and the United States, by an act of this body, changed the terms of that agreement, the agreement would not be valid; the agreement would not apply.

I certainly agree with the Senator there would be no country that would want to sign and agree to something that can be changed unilaterally and still apply. My understanding is the entire agreement would have to go back to the negotiating nation, or wherever, to be renegotiated.

Mr. GRAMM. Let me make up an example. Let's say we are negotiating with the Chinese on a trade agreement, and one of the provisions we want is for them to recognize and respect our patents and copyrights on everything from books to CDs to DVDs. If you go to China, you will see that while you cannot bring them back with you because they are being sold and for good reason, everywhere in China you can buy pirated CDs, DVDs, books, and the like. Let's say we could work out an agreement with them that required enforcement against patent infringe-ments in return for their patent term on an AIDS medicine or on some broad spectrum antibiotic that is important to their population's general health. Even if we had to compensate the United States patent holder because of the takings provision, there might very well be a good deal in the making there. Yet, we could not make that deal if a separate vote were allowed.

My example may be somewhat unrealistic, and I am sure if Ambassador Zoellick were here he would have 100 good examples, but I think it makes the point.

Let me go to the next provision of the law that would be covered by the Dayton-Craig amendment. The third area that this amendment has to do with section 201. The proponents of this amendment say over and over that we cannot negotiate away our protections against unfair trade. Yet Section 201 has nothing to do with unfair trade. Section 201 simply is a remedy whereby American producers can get relief if foreign competition is successful and if the injured American producers can show they are losing jobs because of imports. It has nothing to do with unfair trade. In a sense, it has to do with successful trade. Granted, we are concerned about Americans losing their jobs, and we have assistance programs to help them. But is there anybody here who cannot imagine that we might be willing to eliminate those protective barriers in return for the elimination of similar barriers in Europe, Japan, Korea, or China? Or that we might find a better way to compensate and protect injured companies, perhaps through trade adjustment assistance?

This whole debate, the whole title of the amendment, the whole preamble to the amendment, is trade. Yet probably the most important laws covered by this amendment has nothing to do with unfair trade.

Am I in favor of unilaterally waiving every 201 right in America? The answer is no. But my point is that if we could eliminate similar barriers against American exports, can no one imagine the possibility there might be an agreement that would be advantageous to everybody? Yet no such agreement could ever be consummated under the Dayton-Craig amendment because nobody would negotiate the elimination of their protective safeguard against American exports unless we eliminate or modify our Section 201 provision. Negotiation in this area would be a nonstarter.

As I said when I started my remarks, our need for fast track arose in the Kennedy Round, when President Kennedy and many of his allies went to the Congress pleading that trade was no longer tariffs but domestic laws that limited trade. It was when he tried to change those laws that Congress came in and changed the deal. The Kennedy Round went into effect because of the President being a party to it, all because of the issues that are raised by the amendment before the Senate. The Round died for exactly the issue that is listed here in the Dayton-Craig amendment. The recognition that you cannot change a negotiated deal after the fact is what led to enactment of fast track. Senator BAUCUS and I were involved in negotiations the other day. There are a lot of things in that final deal I really do not like. But I do not have the right to go back and say to Senator BAUCUS gave up on items A, B, C, D, and E, which is great, but I want to renegotiate and change our deal. I do not have a right to do that. A deal is a deal. That is the very issue the Senate is dealing with.

The next provisions of law covered by the Dayton-Craig amendment are chapters 2, 3, and 5 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974. This is the fourth so-called unfair trade protection provision. Yet as original proponents, we said nothing to do with unfair trade. They simply have to do with the assistance provided to companies and workers negatively affected by imports or by a company’s shift in production. Some may not favor shifts in production, but when did it turn into an unfair trade practice? Every day, Americans are moving investments from one country to another. We are the world’s largest investor. In fact one of the things we are trying to do in the underlying bills is to get other countries to allow investment in America and allow greater freedom for American investments in their country.

Even if a shift in production were an unfair trade practice, how could we say to countries that we want to negotiate away prohibitions you have against producing in the United States, but we are not willing to do the same? Remember when we had the big battle with Japan? We wanted them to produce some of their automobiles in America, and we negotiated over it, and in fact they did increase production here. But why would they ever negotiate if we have said in advance that we are not willing to eliminate prohibitions against plant relocation in our own country? Why should the Japanese allow companies to move out of Japan or set up programs that impede the process if we are not willing to do it?

I could go on at length about the other laws covered by this amendment. The amendment is written very broadly. It may list 5 bills in particular, but it is written so broadly that in my opinion it covers at least 18 other laws that are part of current trade law: for example, section 1317 of the Omnibus Trade and Competitive Act of 1988; the Antidumping Act of 1916; the Continued Dumping and Subsidy Offset Act of 1980; the Uruguay Round Agreement Act of 1994; section 205 of the 1990 Steel Adjustments Act; sections 201 and 202 of the 1980 Import Trade Act; sections 201 and 202 of the 1990 Trade Act; section 129 of the Uruguay Round Agreements Act; and the list goes on. The plain truth is, given the way it is written, not even the authors of this amendment truly know what it does.

I warn members of the Senate of some final points. I understand the need for consensus. We do not get to write these bills by ourselves. It requires give and take. My belief, and the belief of the vast majority of members of the Republican Conference in the Senate, is that we have given. We gave on health benefits that are not paid for, that we think represent bad public policy, that take away from poor working people to give to relatively high income, non-working people. We gave on 2 years of insurance benefits. We gave on wage insurance benefits. We are getting to address in conference. But over and over bills have gotten worse, not better, in conference. But over and over bills have gotten worse, not better, in conference. If you are for trade promotion authority, you have to pass this bill. And yet we have an amendment that changed any of these laws. There are many ways we can enhance the ability of Members of Congress to be involved and yet get advance notice to allow them build political opposition. I hope those who want to pass this will find a way to get around this dilemma.

If the two Senators who offered the amendment wanted to be on the oversight committee, I would be willing to write the bill to make sure that were put on it. I don’t have any objection to oversight and I am for notice. Then, if people were getting ready to vote against a fast-track trade agreement, they could then make sure they were on the committee. And then, if the President makes these changes, he is jeopardizing my vote. And they would have 90 days to build up an alliance to lobby against it.
When “lobbying” is mentioned people say oh gosh, that’s terrible, terrible. But making your voice heard is a good thing guaranteed under the Constitution.

But what we cannot agree on without killing the underlying bill is Congress’ ability to change the trade agreement once it has been negotiated. The President must be able to say to our trading partner that a deal is a deal; not that wait, it was a deal, but the part we agreed to that we did not like is not a deal because the Members of the Senate decided to amend it.

I accept and am for the process whereby 51 Members of the Senate can defeat the implementing bill for a trade agreement. I have never voted against an implementing bill, although I can imagine a trade agreement that I would think was so bad that it was not worth it. I believe I ought to have the right to vote no. And I have that right under fast track or trade promotion authority, which is a single vote on the deal, and then be for an amendment that allows votes to amend the deal. I don’t see why the people who are for this amendment don’t simply vote against the bill and let those who are for it have a chance to vote for it. The Dayton-Craig amendment would gut that process. It would leave the Senate in the unhappy position of having a fast track bill that includes an amendment that undoes fast track.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON). The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I have listened intently to my colleague, the senior Senator from Texas. The reason I do that and have done that for a good many years, I always learn a great deal. I am always extremely cautious to get on the floor and debate in opposition to a position held by my colleague from Texas, with his skill but, most importantly, his knowledge in this area. It is very important. I hope all listen.

I was taking notes as if I were a student and I was told that I am an economics professor. In fact, that is what we heard today, a rather professorial statement about the ideals of trade in an ideal environment. I disagree not with that statement.

I also agree with the historical perspective that he offered from the 1960s through the 1970s and the Kennedy Round and the circumstances the world found itself in and the need for us to change from being the exclusive holder in a constitutional Republic of the right to negotiate international commerce flows to one where we delegated that thought by law to the executive, in a great more detail. That, of course, is what we did with fast track. That was the 1960s and the 1970s. Through that period of the 1970s and the 1980s and the 1990s, the world changed a great deal—really all for our betterment in the broad sense. As economies changed in world economies, there is no question that the economic engine of the United States drove the world and took a lot of poor countries and made them more prosperous. Part of it was because we allowed our markets while at the same time we promoted their markets and invested in their countries. All of that is true, and it will be every bit as true tomorrow and a decade or two from now as it was then. I don’t disagree with that.

What I am suggesting is in the year 2002, as we once again search for a way to promote trade, we take a nearly 40-year-old model and say it works, it fits, it is the right thing to do again. Is it the right thing for us to—almost in an-compulsory way—deny authority to the executive branch in an area that is constitutionally ours? I believe it is. I believe it is with certain conditions that are very limited and very direct. I don’t believe they change the dynamics of a relationship and ultimately a negotiation.

It is very difficult to blend a parliamentary government’s negotiators and what they understand their role is with that of a constitutional Republic. I know; I have been there. I have seen the frustration of the European parliamentarian who cannot understand why the President’s men or women cannot speak for the United States and cut a deal and confirm it and that is the way it will be if the President signs off on it.

The reason they can’t is because of us and because of a little item we call the Constitution. While we have delegated that authority by law, we have also said come back here on an up-or-down vote. What Senator DAYTON and I do is go a slight step further and say that in those areas that are fixed by law, law that we created, you have to come back to us. And not under this sweeping environment and nostalgia and euphoria of trade package that is going to spin the world into greater economies we are going to pick apart an agreement. What we are saying is simply this: Mr. President, and your team must come back as advocates and sales men and women. As you sell the whole package, you have to sell a few of the parts.

I hope, ultimately, when we see a conference report, it has a 90-day notification in it that sets the Congress to task in the sense that it notifies that they will be making some change in current law and we are preparing ourselves, we are looking at it, we are making decisions, and the President’s team must come back and change the Hill advocating and saying: It is a quid pro quo: For a reduction here, we get this here; for a reduction in our subsidies in agriculture, the Europeans are going to reduce their subsidies, they are going to take away some of their hidden barriers, and we are going to have greater access to markets.

I think that would sell here in the Senate. I think it would work. I think you could find 50 plus 1 who would support that.

But you have to sell it. We have delegated the authority of negotiation, but we have not delegated the authority and the conditions of final passage. That alone is ours under the Constitution. That is why this is an important debate and, while it may change the character from the historic perspective of fast track, I do not believe it nullifies. I do not believe it causes our negotiators more encumbrance as they sit down at the table. That is because right upfront the terms are understood. It does not deny them the right to everything. Everything is on the table. What it does say to the executive branch of Government is: Come home and sell your product. Come home and convince Congress you have done the right thing and here are all the tradeoffs and the advantages. Because the whole Congress agrees with the Senator from Texas: Trade for the whole of our economy and for job creation is very important.

Earlier in the day when I was debating the initial Dayton-Craig amendment as offered, I talked about Idaho’s economy. We have to have trade. I know we have to have trade. I am going to work to get trade. But I want to tell the Senator from Texas that a good number of years ago a young man from Texas came to Idaho. He had been from Idaho originally but was working in Texas at a company called Texas Instruments, a little old high-tech company that became a big old powerful, powerful, and valuable high-tech company. He came home to Idaho, and he convinced a group of investors to go with him and his brother because they had a better idea about how to build memory chips.

They got a group of investors together, and they built a fab, and they started producing memory chips—late 1980s, early 1990s. They were doing a great job building a DRAM memory chip, selling it to the world, and then suddenly came the Japanese aggressively into the market. Having bought the market, they went to market with them the right to negotiate anything. They left a group of investors to go with him and his brother because they had a better idea about how to build memory chips.

if we lost this and gave it away to the Japanese, we would never have this new economy.

The then-President Bush stepped in and said: You are right, and he stuck an antidumping clause against the Japanese on. At that time, a fledgling company in Idaho and they bought a fab in Virginia.

But for a moment in time, the President of the United States used anti-bribes in the 1990s, in part, shifted the world. From that moment through the decade of the 1990s, until today, this country has led in the area of new technologies. It truly was the economy of the 1990s, in part—a small part but an important part—because we helped shape a marketplace and we disallowed government-sponsored, government-supported manufacturers in other countries from dumping in the world market and, most importantly, in our market.

That is why these tools are important. If they are negotiated away, then it is phenomenally important for this Congress to speak to it. Nowhere do we say that we cannot go to the table. Where does the Dayton-Craig amendment say they cannot be negotiated. It simply says to the negotiators, our negotiators: You have a job to do. You have a very important job to do, and that is to sell it. And the same logic that sells the whole trade package, 50-plus-1 votes here in this body, blocks a point of order on any changes in trade law. That seems to be reasonable. That seems to be common sense.

We can go through all the provisions, and the Senator from Texas did that and expanded on them and talked about intellectual property and copyrights.

People come to the United States for the purpose of inventing so they can own a piece of their invention and profit from it. That is why we have had copyright law. That is why we have led the world in inventions, in new technologies, largely because those who create those products—through thinking, and that materializes in the form of a usable object in the market, in the laboratory, in the manufacturing unit—can profit by that for a period of time. We protect them.

Yes, we will negotiate those items. But what we will not do is negotiate our way. We are going to try to make the world a transparent place. I am amazed that as the world shifted from tariff to antidumping, counter-vailling duty, and remedy laws, as is being argued here today, we would want to back ours off. I understand trading. I understand quid pro quo: You do this and we will do that. But what you do must be transparent, what you do must be enforceable, because what we do as a representative republic, by the very character of our country and the character of our laws, is open. It is done in the public eye. It is done in the arena of the international trade debates.

At the Commission downtown—I have been there to testify; so has the Presiding Officer—we have talked about trade issues. We have talked about policy. We have argued before the Commissioners to make sure that the findings are correct and they are right. We have been there on Canadian-related issues.

The only reason we are allowed to go is that we have the law so that ultimately, if wrongdoing is found, if dumping is found, there is a remedy. That remedy usually allows us to cause the other country to comply, to come into balance with us. That is what is important here, isn’t it? That is what helps our farmers. It doesn’t protect them, it helps them. It allows competition in a fair market. It doesn’t protect and isolate our manufacturing jobs. It balances it. We hope it makes them competitive.

We had a vote just a few moments ago, and 60 Senators at least disagreed with the motion to table the Dayton-Craig amendment. Here is probably the reason. Let me read this for the record, and then I will step down because others are here to debate.

During the Doha Round of the WTO in Qatar last year, we know our trade ambassador largely believed he was forced to put on the table, as a negotiable item, our trade remedy provisions. We in the Senate were concerned about that. On May 7 of last year, here is what we said:

Dear Mr. President:

We are writing to state our strong opposition to an international trade agreement that would weaken U.S. trade laws. Key U.S. trade laws, including antidumping law, countervailing duty law, Section 201, and Section 301, are a critical element of U.S. trade policy. A wide range of agricultural and industrial sectors has successfully employed these statutes to address trade problems. Unfortunately, experience suggests that many other industries are likely to have occasion to rely upon them in future years.

Why? Because of a changing, growing, maturing world economy there will be competitors out there. Let’s make sure they are fair.

Each of these laws is fully consistent with U.S. obligations under the World Trade Organization and other agreements. Let me repeat: Each of these laws is consistent with U.S. obligations under the World Trade Organization and other trade agreements.

Moreover, these laws actually promote free trade by countering that both distort trade and are condemned by international trading rules.

U.S. trade laws provide American workers and industries. I want to emphasize that, if the United States pursues trade liberalization, it will also protect them against unfair foreign trade practices and allow time for them to address serious import surges. They are part of a political bargain struck with Congress and the American people under which the United States has pursued market opening trade agreements in the past.

Congress has made clear its position on this matter. In draft fast track legislation that the Senate consider in 1997, Congress have included strong provisions directing trade negotiators not to weaken U.S. trade laws.

Some of those provisions are in the current document before us, on the floor to which we are offering an amendment.

Congress has retested this position in resolutions, letters, and through other means.

Unfortunately, some of our trading partners, many of whom maintain serious unfair trade practices, continue to seek to weaken these laws. This may simply be posturing by those who oppose future market opening. Whatever the reason, the United States should no longer use its trade laws as bargaining chips in trade negotiations nor agree to any provisions that weaken or undermine U.S. trade laws.

We look forward to your response.

Sincerely—

And it is signed by 62 Members of the Congress, Democrat and Republican alike.

What we are offering today in the Dayton-Craig amendment is fully consistent with the letter we sent to the President last May 7. The vote we had an hour or so ago to table the Dayton-Craig amendment is almost to the vote similar to this letter. I do not believe the Senate has changed its mind. I think the President has a very clear message.

But what is most important is not our President. We want him to negotiate. We want him to put the items on the table. We want him to engage the world. We want to trade. We want our producers to produce for a world market. What we do not want is an agreement struck that is impossible to take. What do we want is for the rest of the world to know that in some ways, protect and provide for the American, the U.S. economy in a way that allows us to prosper while allowing other countries entry into our economy, and we hope they will allow us into theirs, and in fair, balanced, and equitable processes.

That is what is at issue. I believe that is the essence of the debate. Idealism has its place. Academic arguments are critically important. But today we talk about the practical application of the law and our constitutional responsibility, and the impact it has on my farmers and my ranchers and my working men and women, who, like me, believe they have to trade in a world market to stay economically alive. I yield the floor.

Mr. DAYTON. Will the Senator yield for a brief question?

Mr. CRAIG. Yes, I am happy to yield.

Mr. DAYTON. The Senator raised an excellent point which I had not thought of until the Senator made the point: 62 Senators signed that letter. Sixty-one Senators voted today in support of the Craig-Dayton amendment.
May 14, 2002

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

S4317

And the one Senator who was necessarily absent was a cosponsor of that amendment.

So does the Senator believe, then, this sends a message when 62 Senators sign a letter that they mean what they say?

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the Senator from Minnesota. The point is well taken.
I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask my friend from North Dakota to yield to me without losing his right to the floor.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Nevada without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I very much appreciate my friend for yielding.

What I want to say is that we have an amendment now before the Senate.
I believe we should act on this matter.
I have told my friend, the Senator from Iowa, we are not going to do anything as long as he is on the floor. But I would say, through him to my friend from Texas, my dear friend, Senator GRAMM, that if he wants to filibuster this amendment, he is going to have to have a real filibuster. He is not going to be able to come and go from the floor because we have to move on.

I know his heart is in the right place.

“his heart” meaning Senator GRAMM’s heart is in the right place. But we have evaded a vote this morning that shows 61 Senators are in favor of this amendment. It would seem to me we should move on this amendment and go on to some minimum wage.

I spoke to the Senator from North Dakota earlier today. He has at least four or five very substantive amendments. I think we should get to those.
I have spoken to other Senators who have amendments. I know there are approximately 10 amendments from the other side. And it is being held up.

I repeat, if the Senator from Texas wants to conduct a filibuster, he is going to have to conduct a real, honest filibuster. Not just tell us he is going to talk a lot on this. If I did not have the relationship I have with my friend from Iowa—and I hope we can work something out—we would have moved the question when the Senator—not this Senator, way off the floor but when the Senator from Texas was off the floor.

So I hope we can move forward.
There are a number of people who are not real anxious to move this legislation at all. And my friend from Texas, who claims he is in favor of it, is working into the hands of those who do not want to move the legislation. It is kind of a unique twist of logic, as far as I am concerned. I know my friend from Texas is very logical. He has the mind of an academic. And I understand that.

But being very base about all this,
there are certain parliamentary rules in the Senate, and we are going to stick to them. We are not going to have a gentleman’s filibuster. It is going to be a real filibuster or no filibuster.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Nevada makes an interesting point about the difficulty of geting a vote even on amendments that have wide support.

Nearly a week ago and a half ago I offered my amendment dealing with chapter 11 of NAFTA, to deal with the issue of secret multinational tribunals that consider trade cases behind closed doors. This was an amendment that was bipartisan, and had wide support.
I offered my amendment, and there was a tabling motion. We had 67 Members of the Senate vote against tabling, and then we could not get the amendment adopted. A number of days elapsed where we just could not get the amendment adopted.

It appears the same thing is happening here. The same Member of the Senate is doing it. He certainly has a inght to do that, but as the Senator from Nevada says, if somebody wants to filibuster this, then let him come to the floor and bring a pitcher of water, got some comfortable shoes on, and stand here for a few hours.

But what I hope we will do is adopt the Dayton-Craig amendment. It is quite clear, from the evidence of the vote on tabling a while ago, that this amendment will pass by a very significant margin. And the sooner the better.

I tell you, I listened, at great length, to my friend from Texas. I must say that I actually taught economics in college for a couple years, but I was able to overcome that experience and go on to lead a different life.

The issue that is before us is not about economic theory. It is about the reality of trade relationships we have with other countries—and what real remedies we have to address that unfair trade.

I am sure there are people listening to this debate or watching this debate, and they think this all sounds like a foreign language: CVD, antidumping, 201, 202, chapter 11.

But trade issues can and should be discussed in terms of how they impact real people. This debate is about real people in our country that decide to form a company, to produce a product and market it, and then have to contend with foreign competition. I have no problem with fair competition—I welcome it. But when our producers’ competitors overseas are exploiting the labor of a 12-year-old for 12 cents an hour locked in a garage 12 hours a day, is that fair competition?

Take a person who works in a manufacturing plant and has worked there 22 years, is an honest employee, has committed his or her life to that employer, only to discover that next month the identical product is coming in from Bangladesh or Sri Lanka or Indonesia, produced by children working 12 hours a day or 24 hours a day, getting just cents per hour. Fair competition?

American workers are told that they cannot compete. You, Mr. and Mrs.
America, can’t compete because working in this factory have 12-year-olds who will work for less money than you will. They live in countries where it is all right to work them 12 hours a day and pay them $2 at the end of a day.
This is not fair competition.

The issue is, what are the remedies?
What can we do about that? Should we be able to do something about it?
Should our trade laws allow our companies and our workers to do something about trade that they think is fundamentally unfair?

The answer clearly is not. We are not just going to lose the past 100 years of history dealing with labor and other issues.

There are people who died on the streets in America in the early 1800s, after decades of struggle, who wanted a chance to live a decent life. We have people who are being paid $2 an hour and who are working 12-year-olds in the coal mines?

The fact is, we worked on all of these issues for a long time. Over a century this country had to digest these issues.
Should we have a requirement for a safe workplace? Should we have child labor laws so people aren’t putting 8 and 10 and 12-year-olds down in the mines? Should we have a requirement that considers the minimum wage? How will we have the right to organize as workers? The answer to all of those issues has been
yes. But it was never an easy yes. It took this country decades to get through those discussions and debates.

As I said, there were some people who died on the streets during the violence that ensued over those debates.

A century later we have some who say, let’s just get a big old pole and pole vault over all those issues and act as if they don’t exist. Because you can start a company and you don’t have to worry about that. You don’t have to worry about whether you hire kids.
Just go to another country and hire kids. You don’t have to worry about paying a decent wage. You can go somewhere else and pay them 24 cents an hour to put together canvas bags so they can be shipped to Fargo or Los Angeles or Pittsburgh. You don’t have to worry about dumping chemicals and pollutants into the streams and the air. You can go somewhere else where they don’t have environmental laws, laws that protect the drinking water and the air. You can CRAIG, have offered an amendment. It may be tempting to turn back globalization. It is not fair trade.

Globalization. What are the rules for a globalized economy? The question is what are the rules for fair trade. That is not theory. Those are broken dreams. Somebody coming home from work having to say: Honey, they told me I have lost my job today because I can't compete. I can't compete with 50 cents an hour wages, working 12-hour days and they don't have to worry about pollution. That is what antidumping laws try to remedy.

What Senators DAYTON and CRAIG say with this amendment is very simple: If you want to negotiate an agreement, Mr. Trade Ambassador, that negotiates away our antidumping laws, then Congress has a right to have a separate vote on that provision pertaining to our trade laws. Because this Congress is not any longer going to allow you to dilute or delete the protections and remedies which we have to deal with unfair trade.

I have spoken at length in this Chamber about my concern about our trade policy. We have a trade deficit that is growing, every year, and no one cares what is going on. Oh, and the other day, they will bring it back here and say: you have one vote on it, yes or no, and it deals with a broad range of issues and you cannot get at the antidumping provision we traded away because you just get a yes or no on the entire product. That is why Senators DAYTON and CRAIG say this is not the right thing to do.

I was interested to hear, this morning, one of my colleagues talk about all of the trade problems we have, as if to suggest we should blame ourselves for the problems. We have trouble getting high-fructose corn syrup into Mexico. So that is our problem? No, I do not think so. That is Mexico's fault. Grain coming in from Canada by the Canadian Wheat Board unfairly subsidized, that is our problem? No, it is not. That is Canada's unfair trading practice. I could go on and list a dozen more. Seventy percent tariff on wheat flour into Europe, is that fair? I do not think so.

I cannot even begin to talk about our trade problems with China. And it's not unfair trade, it's also about badly negotiated trade agreements.

A year and a half ago, we negotiated a bilateral agreement with China. The United States agreed that after a long phase-in with respect to automobiles, any Chinese cars that are sent to the United States will be subject to a 2.5-percent tariff on them. Any U.S. cars that are sent to China will be subject to a 25-percent tariff.

So we have a 2.5-percent tariff on the Chinese cars coming into our market, but the Chinese can impose a tariff that is 10 times higher on U.S. cars into China. You ask: How did that happen? Because our negotiators negotiated away the store. It is the same squishy-headed nonsense our negotiators have done before.

Will Rogers once said—"I have told my colleagues this many times—the United States of America has never lost a war and never won a conference. He surely must have been thinking of our trade negotiations. They seem to manage to lose within a week or two of leaving our shores.

Whenever I talk about trade, someone will call my office and say: you are a protectionist. I am not. If protectionism means standing up for America’s economic interest, then count me in, sign me up, that is what I want to do but I am not asking for anything special for anybody. I want all our people to have to compete—famously, the Japanese, the Koreans, and others. But I want the competition to be fair, and if the competition is not fair, then I want the remedies available to address that unfairness. Those remedies have been weakened dramatically, and they will be weakened further, mark my words, in the next set of negotiations.

This amendment is not in any way, as some have said, a killer amendment. That is not what this amendment is about. Our competitors want to stand up for American jobs and demand fair trade and demand the remedies that will get you to fair trade, then it seems to me they have an obligation to support this amendment.

I voted with the last tabling vote because it showed an overwhelming number of Members of the Senate understand this issue and are no longer going to sit quietly by and say: You all just negotiate, put on an airplain, go someplace, roll up your shirt sleeves, and negotiate. Whatever you come back with, that is fine, we will handcuff ourselves. You can negotiate away our antidumping laws; you can trade away our remedies; and we will agree to handcuff ourselves and not have a vote on it.

I believe the Senate is finally saying to those who will listen: We are not willing to do that.

I did vote against providing fast-track trade authority to President Clinton, and I do not support giving it to President Bush. I say to this administration, as I said to the past administration: Negotiate agreements and you will get our support. But on this amendment, I hope you will negotiate good agreements for our country, agreements that stand up for our economic interest, and agreements that demand that the rules for that competition be fair. Then come back, and when you see an unfair trade, be willing to stand up, have the guts to stand up for this country’s interest.

The reason there is so much anger about trade these days—we see it in the streets during these ministerials, and we hear it in the debates—is because we are so anxious to negotiate the next agreement and so unwilling to enforce the last agreement.

We have many agreements with Japan that nobody can even find the agreements. USTR cannot find all the agreements the United States has with Japan, let alone enforce them. We have sometimes had to have some people in the Department of Commerce enforcing our trade agreements with respect to China. The same is true with respect to Japan, eight or nine people. Why? Because this country is not serious about enforcing trade laws. This country is serious only about negotiating the next agreement and not caring how many people lose their jobs because of unfair trade that results from that agreement.

My beef with trade is that, A, we negotiate bad agreements and, B, we consistently fail and in most cases refuse to enforce the agreements we do negotiate.

I will conclude by saying this: We have, for the 50 or so years following the Second World War, largely dealt with trade as a matter of foreign policy. For the first 25 years after the Second World War, it was not a problem dealing with trade as foreign policy. This country could tie one hand behind its back and at any time in almost anything in international trade. So our concessions in trade to almost every country were concessions that reflected the struggle that economy was having and our ability to help them in that struggle.

The second 25 years after the Second World War, our competitors became shrewd, tough international negotiators. Our trade policy must change. Our trade policy must change in almost anything in international trade. So our concessions in trade to almost every country were concessions that reflected the struggle that economy was having and our ability to help them in that struggle.

I was pleased with the last tabling vote because it showed an overwhelming number of Members of the Senate understand this issue and are no longer going to sit quietly by and say: You all just negotiate, put on an airplain, go someplace, roll up your shirt sleeves, and negotiate. Whatever you come back with, that is fine, we will handcuff ourselves. You can negotiate away our antidumping laws; you can trade away our remedies; and we will agree to handcuff ourselves and not have a vote on it.

I believe the Senate is finally saying to those who will listen: We are not willing to do that.

I did vote against providing fast-track trade authority to President Clinton, and I do not support giving it to President Bush. I say to this administration, as I said to the past administration: Negotiate agreements and you will get our support. But on this amendment, I hope you will negotiate good agreements for our country, agreements that stand up for our economic interest, and agreements that demand that the rules for that competition be fair. Then come back, and when you see an unfair trade, be willing to stand up, have the guts to stand up for this country’s interest.

generic drugs that are being either produced or can be produced in their own country or in another country, and that has been very much an issue. This amendment, which I would offer myself with a number of our colleagues, would make it very clear that if the country itself issued what is called a compulsory license, based upon the critical need and public health disaster they are facing, it could not be considered to be in violation of the trade laws, and they would be able to either develop that within the country or, for example, if we were talking about Botswana, which has a high incidence of HIV and AIDS, be able to make contracts with other countries and purchase a generic, which they would be interested in doing, as I understand, with Brazil or other nations.

It is perhaps, in many respects, one of the most important clarifications in terms of the health care crisis of HIV and of AIDS. This provision will make a very different kind of cloudiness that currently surrounds this issue will be eliminated with this amendment. The amendment is very simple. It ensures those countries hit hardest by the AIDS crisis and other public health emergencies will have access to the affordable medicines to address these crises. It does this by expressing support for the Doha declaration on TRIPS and the public health as adopted by the World Trade Organization last November.

The Doha declaration was supported by Ambassador Zoellick, the pharmaceutical industry, and thousands of public health advocates and religious leaders. It is one of the most important global health issues we face today, and I am pleased we could address it in a bipartisan manner.

I will submit a more complete statement for the RECORD, but I acknowledge and thank the chairman, Senator BURBANK, Senator GRASSLEY and their staffs for their willingness to consider this amendment.

I am not going to ask that the current amendment be temporarily set aside, but I had the opportunity to talk with the chairman earlier—the ranking member was not present—with his staff, and so at an appropriate time—and I will leave it up to the managers to work out what is the appropriate time—I hope this amendment might be considered by this body should ensure we retain our authority and obligation to fully deliberate and debate and proposed changes to U.S. trade remedy law. The amendment would provide a critical channel through which Senators could act to prevent such undesirable agreements as the one made—in spite of our strong and vocal opposition—at the latest WTO negotiations in Doha: In May 2001, 62 Senators sent a letter to the President specifically opposing any weakening of trade remedy laws in international negotiations; in a subsequent Hill appearance USTR Zoellick made a public commitment to Senator ROCKEFELLER that the administration would not permit this to happen.

At Doha however, other WTO members demanded U.S. trade remedy laws be put on the table as a condition of beginning the new round. So, despite the word of the Administration that this would happen—it did. The administration broke its word to us and our trade remedy laws are on the table. With this amendment, we will send a strong message directly to other WTO countries and the administration that the U.S. Senate will not tolerate any weakening of these critical laws.

Oddly enough, while the administration continues to allow our trading partners to rewrite U.S. trade remedy laws, China refuses to even discuss trade remedies, and because this issue is a priority for U.S. trading partners, the amendment would lead these countries to refuse to negotiate at all. This statement should make it clear to all that not only this administration believe certain countries are willing to trade with us only if they are able to weaken or undermine our trade remedy laws; but that it intends to accommodate them. By preserving a point of order against any trade agreement provisions that change our trade laws, this amendment provides an extra level of protection for these vitally important safeguards. These laws have been effectively employed in a variety of sectors to address trade imbalances or to give domestic producers vital time to address major import surges.

Our spring wheat farmers in Minnesota have been struggling for years to win effective relief against cheap imports from Canada. And its not that Minnesota wheat producers cannot compete with their Canadian counterparts—it is that the Canadian system is run so very differently from ours that direct competition simply doesn’t occur. The Canadian Wheat Board enjoys monopoly control over their domestic wheat markets. Its ability to set prices months in advance effectively insulates Canadian wheat farmers from the commercial risks that Minnesota growers are routinely exposed to, and gives their product a built-in advantage right here in our own American market. Unfortunately our softwood lumber producers have faced many of the same obstacles in dealing with their Canadian counterparts. Of course we are disappointed that we were unable to informally resolve our differences with our close friend and ally. But at least we have meaningful trade remedy laws we can fall back on. The International Trade Commission and the Department of Commerce found earlier this month that our lumber industry is threatened with material injury from subsidized Canadian imports. As a result, countervailing duty and antidumping duties will be issued on these products.

Another Minnesota industry that has been immeasurably helped by these trade remedy laws is that of sugar beet production. Together with our hard working neighbors in North Dakota, our beet sugar industry is the largest in the country—an estimated $1 billion in economic benefits flows from it each year. Yet without the protection of our trade remedy laws, this industry could be in jeopardy. Currently, our trading partners in the EU are one of the largest exporters of beet sugar in the world yet it is well-known that they have been heavily subsidizing their production. Our industry cannot and should not be forced to compete with such heavily subsidized imports. This is why there are antidumping and countervailing duty orders currently in effect on imported European beet sugar. As Minnesota beet sugar producers know all too well, these orders are entirely appropriate and very necessary counterparts to the substantial subsidies that EU producers enjoy.

We cannot expect our producers to be able to compete with the unreasonably low prices that subsidies or closed, monopolistic systems produce. We look forward to the day when there is a more level playing field. But until that day comes, it is vitally important that we protect and maintain these trade remedy laws that all too often represent their only hope for much-needed relief.

As we have learned over the past decade, trade liberalization has increased the opportunities for unscrupulous countries or industries to manipulate markets by anti-trade practices. With major new agreements like thePTAA on the horizon, it is imperative that we maintain these important laws so that they can continue to be used to protect our workers and companies from the risks posed by those who seek to distort and manipulate the very markets we are seeking to open to free and fair competition.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the Dayton-Craig amendment. I hasten to point out that the sponsors of the Dayton-Craig amendment have nothing but the best intentions. They believe that they are protecting the interests of the American public by waiving off our Nation's trade remedy laws.

Senators Dayton and Craig believe that the Congress should take a special look to determine whether a particular trade agreement undermines our trade remedy laws. These important protections include the anti-dumping and countervailing duty laws. I understand what my friends, Senators Dayton and Craig, are attempting to do with their amendment. But it is hard to disagree with the trade promotion authority bill before us today already addresses their major concern—the weakening of our domestic trade laws.

The bill before us already gives clear direction to our U.S. negotiators to "avoid agreements that lessen the effectiveness of antidumping and countervailing duty laws on unfair trade." This includes dumping, subsidies, and safeguards.

Under the provisions of the Dayton-Craig amendment, a minority of this body could work to defeat future trade agreements. By raising a point of order objection, any one Senator could slow the chance for any future trade agreement and 41 Senators could effectively kill it. This bill, passed by the House and supported by a majority in the Senate, for any reason— even one totally unrelated to trade laws—as long as the implementing bill contained any change, no matter how minor, to a U.S. trade law.

If this amendment were to pass and become law, the United States' negotiating position would be severely weakened in any future trade talks. Our trading partners will view this amendment as a vulnerability—in essence, by passing this amendment we are outlining to our potential trading partners our greatest negotiating weakness.

If we declare U.S. trade laws off limits, it is not the best way to encourage other countries to bring their trade laws up to U.S. standards which, most would agree are the gold standard that all countries strive to meet? But sometimes you can't get there from here immediately, and you have to take intermediate steps along the way.

While I believe that the United States has enacted and plays by a fair set of rules with respect to trade remedy laws, we should never send a signal to our neighbors that our laws cannot be improved and should not be the subject for discussion.

I have absolute faith that the President, Secretary Evans, and Ambassador Zoellick would never do anything to fundamentally undercut our trade remedy laws.

And what if I am wrong, and the administration gave away the store in a negotiation on our antidumping laws? The remedy would be simple—the Congress would not adopt the trade treaty. The President would quickly get the message and would learn how far is too far.

While this would be harsh medicine, it would be what the doctor ordered. The Constitution gives the Congress an active role in the development of international trade policy. We are not to be a potted plant or a rubber stamp.

There is good reason to believe that we will not do what the administration wants. The Congress will refuse to discuss their own trade laws without our consent.

Let me be clear, as part of granting fast track authority to the President, Congress naturally will expect extensive consultation and notification procedures.

Success in passing TPA will require a close partnership between the executive and legislative branches of our Government. The Constitution grants the Congress the authority to promote international commerce. However, the Constitution also gives the President the responsibility to conduct foreign policy. Thus, the very nature of our Constitution requires a partnership between the executive and legislative branches of government in matters of international trade negotiations. That is what the trade promotion authority bill is all about—a partnership between the executive and legislative branches of government to enable U.S. consumers, workers and firms to be effectively represented at the negotiating table.

The current TPA bill already establishes extraordinary powers for congressional consultations and review of negotiations involving U.S. trade remedy laws. Under the procedures outlined in this bill, the President must give an advance report to the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees at least 90 days before the United States enters into a trade agreement. This report must outline any amendments to U.S. laws on antidumping, countervailing duties and safeguards that the President proposes to include in a trade implementing bill.

After the President notifies Congress of his trade negotiation intentions, the chairs and ranking members of the relevant committees must meet with their respective chambers on their own assessments as to the integrity of the proposed changes to the TPA's objectives.

The effect of these provisions would be to assure that the President and the Congress are on the same page regarding proposals in trade negotiations on subsidies, dumping, and safeguards.

I might add that one need not look beyond the day far to prove of the President Bush's administration in upholding our trade laws. Just this year the President took action to save the U.S. steel industry and made a bold move to slow the unfair import of softwood lumber.

This is not an administration, in my opinion, that is looking to weaken our trade laws.

Here is what the administration has said about the Dayton-Craig amendment: . . . the amendment details TPA without justification. The Bush administration has demonstrated its commitment to U.S. trade laws not through talk but through action. We have been committed not just to preserving U.S. trade laws, but more importantly, to using them. The administration has called on the world to vigorously uphold our trade laws, in Canadian lumber and other cases, sends the clearest signal of U.S. interest in defending these laws in the WTO.

This administration takes the trade protection laws very seriously. The administration has also warned us about what may very likely happen if we adopt this seemingly good-government amendment.

Here is what Secretary Evans, Secretary Venezen, and Ambassador Zoellick are worried about, if we adopt this misguided amendment: the rest of the world will determine that the U.S. Congress has ruled out even discussion of a major topic. Other countries will refuse to discuss their own sensitive subjects, unraveling the entire trade negotiation to the detriment of U.S. workers, farmers, and consumers.’"

It seems to me that this is a dynamic that we ought to worry about.

And an agreement could very well extend to places where it can materially injure American leadership in high technology. As Ranking Republican Member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, I am particularly concerned that some nations might remain derelict, for example, in their responsibilities for implementing the TRIPS provisions of GATT. These are the intellectual property provisions relating to international trade.

It is the TRIPS provisions that govern such valuable intellectual property as patents and copyrights. We know that a great deal of American inventive capacity is tied to the software, information technology, entertainment, and biotechnology industries. We are the world’s leaders in these vital areas. We should not encourage or allow other nations to unilaterally enact their own Dayton-Craig-type provisions that act to allow them to delay TRIPS implementation.

All I need to do is to read the latest USTR report on special 301 with respect to intellectual property to see the potential scope of the problem. This lays out which countries need to do better in meeting their obligations under TRIPS with respect to intellectual property.

Just so everybody knows, the priority watch list countries are: Argentina; Brazil; Colombia; the Dominican Republic; the EU; Egypt; Hungary; India; Indonesia; Israel; Lebanon; the Philippines; Russia; Taiwan; and Uruguay. In addition to these countries, Ukraine continues to be listed as a priority foreign country because it has been determined by USTR that it has a particular record in this area.

Dayton-Craig can only send a signal to these priority watch list countries that they can try to avoid their intellectual property responsibilities by saying that they want to take aspects of their IP laws off the table just like saying that they want to take aspects of their IP laws off the table. If Congress should essentially get a second bite of the apple when it comes to the trade remedy laws.

I have no doubt of the good intentions behind this amendment. But seems to me that you either believe, or disbelieve, in the wisdom and integrity of the fast track process. Either we have to have one common vote on the whole package or we don’t. We should not be picking and choosing in a way that invites interminable debate and innumerable amendments.

If you don’t like an agreement—for any reason, not just the trade remedy laws but for the old-fashioned reason that it is just not a good thing for your state and your constituents, then by all means, vote against it.

The Dayton-Craig amendment if adopted, will invite similar responses from our trading partners. If we try to take these matters off the table, we can only guess what matters they will deem as inviolate.

Let the trade negotiators negotiate. I have faith that no USTR—in either a Republican or Democratic administration—will ever give away the store on trade remedy laws. And, in the unlikely event that this occurs—the Constitution gives the Congress the final word.

TPA is an essential tool for sound trade expansion policy, a tool we have been without since its expiration in 1994. For over a decade, the United States has too often sat on the sidelines while other nations around the world continued to form trade partnerships and lucrative market alliances. The lack of fast track has put the United States at a disadvantage during trade negotiations.

I submit that this amendment does nothing to stop our trading partners from trading to block future agreements that are overwhelmingly in America’s interests.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the Dayton-Craig provision. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. What is the regular order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Further debate on Amendment No. 3408. Mr. BAUCUS. I ask for a regular order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 3408. The amendment (No. 3408) was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3411 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3401
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Is it appropriate to send my amendment to the desk?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an amendment numbered 3411 to amendment No. 3401.

Mr. KENNEDY. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To include the Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health as a principal negotiating objective of the United States)

Section 2010(b)(4) is amended by adding the following new subparagraph:

(C) to respect the Declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and Public Health, adopted by the World Trade Organization at the Fourth Ministerial Conference at Doha, Qatar on November 14, 2001.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, sometimes Democrats and Republicans can stand shoulder to shoulder with health advocates and industry representatives, find common ground, and develop constructive ideas to address some of the world’s most pressing problems.

We can do this today by supporting the World Trade Organization’s Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health, adopted at its Fourth Ministerial Conference last November in Doha. ‘‘TRIPS’’ stands for Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property. The TRIPS Agreement is one of the agreements maintained by the World Trade Organization. TRIPS is the final word when it comes to international patent issues.

In recent years, there has been some confusion over the TRIPS Agreement and the ability of poorer countries to gain access to affordable medicines to fight some of the worst plagues of our age—including malaria, tuberculosis, and AIDS. Many health advocacy groups, including Doctors Without Borders and the World Health Organization, as well as faith-based and secular groups like Oxfam, expressed concern that dying people in impoverished nations could not receive medicines because their countries were not being afforded the flexibility in the TRIPS Agreement to acquire them cheaply.

Developing nations facing health emergencies reported political pressure was applied to them to employ compulsory licensing—that is, the temporary suspension of a drug’s patent and an order to a manufacturer to produce that drug at a lower cost—or parallel importing, looking for the lowest price of a branded drug on the global market. The nations encountered threats of litigation through the WTO for trying to save the lives of their citizens. The poorest countries felt that our international trading system, with its TRIPS content of lifting people out of poverty, were now being used against the poorest and most vulnerable when they needed them most.

After the anthrax scare here in Washington and the East Coast the United States raised the possibility of issuing a compulsory license for Cipro—the drug proven to kill anthrax, to ensure that an adequate supply of the drug was available at a reasonable cost.
HHS Secretary Thompson discussed publicly the steps that would be taken, pursuant to the TRIPS, to issue and implement such a license. Few people in the United States would question such a move to protect our nation’s public health.

Four people died from the recent anthrax outbreak in the United States. If an outbreak that results in four fatalities and another dozen infections is an emergency, what do we call a situation in which nearly 14,000 people will die every day from AIDS, tuberculosis, or malaria? If the TRIPS has the flexibility to accommodate the richest country in the world, it must be able to accommodate the poorest as well.

The threat of anthrax may be short-term, but today is unprecedented. The World Health Organization reports infectious diseases are the leading killer of young people in developing countries. These diseases occur primarily among the poorest people because they do not have access to the drugs and commodities necessary for prevention and cure.
Approximately half of infectious disease mortality can be attributed to just three diseases—HIV, tuberculosis, and malaria. These diseases cause over 300 million illnesses and more than 5 million deaths each year.

The WHO also reports that the economic burden is enormous. Africa’s gross domestic product would be 32 percent greater if malaria had been eliminated 35 years ago. A nation can expect a decline in GDP of 1 percent annually when more than 20 percent of the adult population is infected with HIV. Of the nearly 40 million people infected with HIV worldwide, roughly 28 million of them live in Africa. If we are serious about promoting wealth across the globe, global health must be at the forefront.

Many poorer countries have shown that effective disease fighting strategies can reduce tuberculosis deaths five-fold. HIV infection rates can be reduced by 80 percent. Malaria death rates can be halved. But when a country has a health care budget of less than $50 per capita, the cost of the tools needed to fight these diseases is to often beyond reach. As a result, many studies estimate that 90 to 95 percent of people infected with HIV in the developing world do not have acto the medicines they need for treatment or prevention.

Recognizing the staggering global health crisis the world is now facing, the trade ministers of 142 countries decided to provide clarity in the TRIPS Agreement that was desperately needed. To ensure that all nations have access to lifesaving medicines, the WTO issued the Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health. Among other things, it said: ‘‘We agree that the TRIPS Agreement does not and should not prevent Members from taking measures to protect public health. Accordingly, while reiterating our commitment to the TRIPS Agreement, we affirm that the Agreement can and should be interpreted and implemented in a manner supportive of all WTO Members’ right to protect health, and in particular, to promote access to medicines for all.’’

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the Declaration on TRIPS and Public Health be printed in the RECORD at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without
objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. KENNEDY. The declaration was immediately heralded across the globe as a tremendous achievement. It struck an honest balance between the legitimate interests of intellectual property protection and the preservation of public health. US Trade Representative Robert Zoellick said immediately after Doha, ‘‘The adoption of the landmark political declaration on the TRIPS Agreement and public health is a good example of developed and developing nations advancing common goals by working through issues together.’’ He later added, ‘‘We were pleased with this process . . . and we believe this declaration affirms that TRIPS and the global trading system can help address pressing public health concerns.’’

Alan Holmer, the president of the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America also welcomed the declaration, saying, ‘‘The Declaration recognizes that TRIPS and patents are part of the solution to better public health, not a barrier to access. Without altering the existing rights and obligations under TRIPS, the declaration provides assurances that countries may take measures consistent with the agreement to protect the health of their citizens.’’

I was very pleased with the adoption of this landmark declaration. Never before had the World Trade Organization taken such a bold stance that the protection of public health, particularly among the poorest in the world, was paramount. I want to commend U.S.
Trade Representative Robert Zoellick for the leadership he displayed in ensuring this declaration’s adoption, and WTO Assistant Trade Director Michael
Moore for his tireless efforts in communicating the message of the declaration across the globe.

In order to ensure that the U.S. trade negotiators fully support the implemation of the Doha Declaration in future negotiations, this amendment adds a single sentence to the section on negotiating objectives for intellectual property issues—‘‘respect the Declaration on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) to be of the Agreement, which was adopted by the World Trade Organization at the Fourth Ministerial Conference at Doha, Qatar on November 14, 2001.’’ This amendment directs our trade negotiations to support the dec-nation without exception.

This amendment, as critical as it is to the health of millions around the globe, is merely a small step in adressing this overwhelming issue. The United States must play a more active role in fighting these diseases in the developing world. We must contribute significantly more to the global AIDS fund at the United Nations. We must do more to help develop the health service infrastructure in poor countries so they can deliver and administer treatment and prevention programs.
We must provide more resources to USAID and private organizations to enhance micro-enterprise efforts, build local economies, and empower individuals so they can take care of them-

I’m pleased that this amendment can be accepted unanimously, because some issues are too important to be partisan. I want to extend special thanks to Senators BAGDASARIAN and GRASSLEY and their staffs for their leadership, and for their willingness to work so closely with me on this issue.
They know we don’t always see eye-to-eye on trade issues, but they recognize the importance of this issue and I know they share my concerns. I look forward to working closely with them in the future on this critical issue.

EXHIBIT 1

WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE, FOURTH SESSION, DOHA, 9–14
NOVEMBER 2001

DECLARATION ON THE TRIPS AGREEMENT AND PUBLIC HEALTH—ADOPTED ON 14 NOVEMBER 2001

1. We recognize the gravity of the public health problems affecting many developing countries, and least-developed countries, especially those resulting from HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other epidemics.

2. We stress the need for the WTO Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS Agreement) to be part of the wider national and international action to address these problems.

3. We recognize that intellectual property protection is important for the development of new medicines. We also recognize the concept about its effects.

4. We agree that the TRIPS Agreement does not and should not prevent Members from taking measures to protect public health. Accordingly, while reiterating our commitment to the TRIPS Agreement, we affirm that the Agreement can and should be interpreted and implemented in a manner supportive of WTO Members’ right to protect public health and, in particular, to promote access to medicines for all.

In this connection, we reaffirm the right of WTO Members to use, as provided in the provisions in the TRIPS Agreement, which provide flexibility for this purpose.
5. Accordingly and in the light of paragraph 4 above, while maintaining our commitments in the TRIPS Agreement, we recognize that these flexibilities include:

(a) the customary rules of interpretation of public international law, each provision of the TRIPS Agreement shall be read in the light of the object and purpose of the agreement, as expressed, in particular, in its objectives and principles.

(b) Each Member has the right to grant compulsory licenses and the freedom to determine the grounds upon which such licenses are granted.

(c) Each Member has the right to determine whether a national emergency or other circumstances of extreme urgency, it being understood that public health crises, including those relating to HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other epidemics, can represent a national emergency or other circumstances of extreme urgency.

(d) The effect of the provisions in the TRIPS Agreement that are relevant to the exhaustion of intellectual property rights is to leave each Member free to establish its own regime for such exhaustion without challenge, and its public and national treatment provisions of Articles 3 and 4.

6. We recognize that WTO Members with insufficient or no manufacturing capacities in the sector could face difficulties in making effective use of compulsory licensing under the TRIPS Agreement. We instruct the Council for TRIPS to find an expeditious solution to this problem and to report to the General Council before the end of 2002.

7. We reaffirm the commitment of developed-country Members to provide incentives to their enterprises and institutions to promote and encourage technology transfer to least-developed country Members pursuant to Article 66.1 of the TRIPS Agreement. We instruct the Council for TRIPS to take the necessary action to implement this provision of Article 66.1 of the TRIPS Agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, it is my intention to back the amendment. This amendment makes an important contribution to the underlying trade promotion authority bill.

Before addressing the substance of the amendment, I put it in context. The Doha ministerial held in Qatar last year represented a profound breakthrough for the United States and the World Trade Organization. For the first time in many years, over 130 nations came together to launch a new round of international trade negotiations. This is no small achievement, as virtually every action taken during the Doha ministerial had to be done by consensus. These nations strongly believed a new round of international trade negotiations was in their best interests. I agree it is in their best interests, and it is in the best interests of the United States. I also think it is in our best interests to get these negotiations underway and give the President the authority he needs to negotiate the best deals for our workers and small and large businesses.

During the WTO ministerial at Doha, the members of the organization adopted a political declaration that highlighted the provisions in the TRIPS agreement that provide members with the flexibility to address public emergencies, such as the epidemics of HIV, tuberculosis, and malaria. The objectives on intellectual property, which are part of this bill, were drafted before completion of the Doha ministerial. Senator KENNEDY’s amendment updates these objectives to take into account the important declaration on public health made at the Doha meeting.

It is a good addition to the bill. I am pleased to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I highly compliment the Senator from Massachusetts. This is an extremely important statement. Millions of people in the world are suffering from HIV/AIDS, and the current patent the companies have, as important it is, is a measure that should not kill people in many parts of the world get assistance.

The amendment recognizes the special declaration pertaining public health that was adopted last November in Doha. The special declaration provides assurance to poor countries facing the immense challenges of dealing with public health emergencies caused by pandemics of infectious diseases like HIV/AIDS, that measures necessary to address such crises in these countries can be added to the WTO TRIPS Agreement, the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights.

This assurance complements the numerous commitments that the United States Government, and its public and private sectors have made to help these countries cope with the HIV/AIDS pandemic.

WTO members also used the declaration to reaffirm their commitment to effective intellectual property standards as those in the TRIPS Agreement. The declaration recognizes that effective intellectual property standards serve an important public health objective of stimulating development of new drugs.

I highly recommend this amendment to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY, numbered 3411. The amendment (No. 3411) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. I move to reconsider the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. The majority leader asked me to announce there will be no more rollcall votes today.
import more than $300 million and $34 million of Montana products with China, Japan, Germany, and the United Kingdom next in line.

With new trade agreements that open markets to Montana products and reverse the current trade inequities, my State's economy stands to grow and prosper.

Within this same context, the principle trade negotiating objective of the fast-track legislation calls on our negotiators to remove barriers that decrease market opportunities for Montana exports or distort imports that put producers at an unfair advantage. These barriers include governmental regulatory measures such as price controls and reference pricing which deny full market access for United States products.

Take, for example, the Canadian Wheat Board. The Government of Canada grants the Canadian Wheat Board special monopoly rights and privileges which amount to U.S. wheat farmers and undermine the integrity of the trading system.

These rights insulate producers from commercial risk because the Canadian Government guarantees its financial operations and has been accused of dumping its borrowing credit sales to foreign buyers, and initial payments to farmers. As a result, the Canadian Wheat Board takes sales from U.S. farmers and prices drop.

The negotiating authority granted the President that fast track is aimed at stopping these unjust trade practices.

Some folks say they don't want any new trade agreements until the old ones are fixed, I like the ring of that, but sometimes it is not terribly practical. I say, you can't fix something from the sidelines, you must be at the table. Fast track is a means to that end. If you want to fix an old agreement, clearly the other side is going to want to fix the old agreement from its perspective, too. It is never a free lunch.

The bill also strives to ensure that trade agreements afford small businesses equal access to international markets, equitable trade benefits, expanded export market opportunities, and provide for the reduction or elimination of trade barriers that disproportionately impact small business.

Let me illustrate what effective negotiations at the WTO mean for Main Street Montana.

A company in Bozeman could be able to ship more trailers for mining equipment to Latin America.

Discussion on pharmaceuticals could help companies like All American Pharmaceuticals in Billings and Technical Sourcing International in Missoula.

Montana's tech corridor in Bozeman could seek clarification on European manufacturing standards for electronics, increasing market opportunity for small technology businesses.

Aviation firms such as Blue Sky Aviation in Lewistown, Garlick Helicopters and Tamarak Helicopters in the Bitterroot Valley could see a normalization in requirements for aviation products.

And Lawyer Nursery could spend less time fighting phytosanitary barriers and focus more on providing seeds and seedling trees to developing nations.

The bottom line is that good jobs will be created in Montana if we are willing to give our negotiators the strong hand needed to secure sound trade agreements.

In addition to small business owners, Montana's agricultural industry stands to benefit from sound trade agreements. For agriculture, the goal is to obtain competitive opportunities for U.S. exports of agricultural commodities in foreign markets substantially equivalent to the competitive opportunities afforded foreign exports in U.S. markets.

The fast-track bill includes a concrete set of trade objectives for agriculture that targets my five key concerns.

First, we must reduce tariffs to levels that are the same as or lower than those in the United States. These are the same tariffs that block Montana beef exports to Korea and Japan.

Second, we must eliminate all export subsidies on agricultural commodities. It is time for Montana farmers and ranchers to have fair and export credit programs that allow the U.S. to compete with other foreign export promotion efforts. As you well know, the EU maintains the lion's share of export subsidies—60 times more than the United States. How can we ever expect a level playing field if we are undersold time and again by government-backed competitors?

Third, we must allow the preservation of programs that support family farms and rural communities but do not distort trade.

Currently we are engaged in passing a new farm bill. This bill seeks to reflect and respond to the counter-cyclical nature of our farm economy. It strives to limit production through sound conservation programs and maintains trade provisions, including the Export Enhancement Program and Market Access Program, which help our products overseas.

The U.S. dollars over $53 billion last year. However, our trade policy will only be effective if the commodity support and conservation programs of the farm bill are balanced. We cannot afford for one leg of the stool to be weaker than the others. Without family farmers, increased trading opportunities are irrelevant.

Fourth, we must eliminate state trade enterprises wherever possible. Montanans know far too well the effects of competition with the Canadian Wheat Board. As I mentioned earlier, we must bring price transparency and competition to the marketplace. The Canadian Wheat Board is nothing close to that. Anything short of this flies in the face of fair trade.

And fifth, we must develop rules to prevent unjustified sanitary or phytosanitary restrictions not based on sound science. For three decades we have tried export market to Pacific Northwest wheat due to TCK. That was a real struggle. I spent a lot of time on that. It was difficult to get the Chinese to listen to us. They finally cracked open a little bit. Now we are struggling with markets in Chile and Russia that place phytosanitary barriers on U.S. exports of beef, pork, and poultry.

I will closely monitor any upcoming trade negotiations to ensure that these goals are met. Further, I will not hesitate to call for the repeal of fast-track trading authority or pursuing a resolution to limit fast track, at any time during the process if these objectives are not met.

Let me share a few more points that make the case for fast track in my State. In order to address and maintain Montana's competitiveness in the global economy, the bill directs the President to preserve the ability of the U.S. to enforce rigorously its trade laws, including antidumping, countervailing duty, and safeguard laws.

Montana has benefited from these laws. These laws have been used against unfair, or a surge in, imports of softwood lumber from Canada and lamb from Australia and New Zealand. In addition, our wheat industry is considering launching a case against the Canadian Wheat Board.

These laws are not protectionist. Far from it. They simply ensure that Montana workers, agricultural producers, and firms, can compete fully on fair terms and enjoy the benefits of reciprocal trade concessions.

These laws are designed to help other countries play fair. If all countries were fair, our trade laws would not be necessary. They are there only to help make sure that when other countries are not playing by the rules of the road we have ways to protect ourselves against unfair foreign trade barriers. All our trade remedy laws, as you know, Mr. President, are totally WTO legal. They are totally consistent with WTO.

On a related note, I am often approached about the problem of a strong dollar for commodity farmers and manufacturers. The overvalued dollar is certainly a problem, and I do not have the perfect solution today that balances these concerns with Treasury's intent to maintain a strong economy and control inflation.

As is within this bill, the administration is directed to work with our trading partners to draw up a blueprint to deal with the trade consequences of significant and unanticipated currency movements and to scrutinize whether a foreign government is engaged in a pattern of manipulating its currency to promote a competitive advantage in international trade.
Rest assured, I recognize these concerns, and I believe this is a step toward finding a solution and not an easy one to resolve but certainly a major step forward.

In Montana we know the value of preserving our environment while optimizing the use of our natural resources. At the same time, we cannot afford to compete with shoddy worker and environmental rights.

This measure brings that message to the world recognizing that trade and environmental policies are mutually supportive: That we should seek to protect and preserve the environment and enhance the international options of doing so, while optimizing the use of the world’s resources. And, it promotes respect for worker rights and supports efforts to crack down on the exploitative child labor.

This bill is different from past fast-track legislation because it is the first to ever seek provisions that aim to ensure that the agreements not weaken or reduce the protections afforded in their domestic environmental and labor laws as an encouragement for trade. It is a first, and major development. It also works to establish rules and labor laws as an encouragement for trade. It is a first, and major development.

As an example, the 221 employees who lost their jobs as a result of the closure of the trucking and mineral processing industries in the Seeley Lake area. They are learning everything from design to print ads for its sophisticated electronic devises. Thirteen Mile Lamb and Wool Company is designing new garments for manufacture by contract knitters, and Pyramid Lumber is improving its milling efficiency.

Without TAA for firms, we would see closed signs on many business doors. Unfortunately, more worthy projects exist than funding to support them. For that reason, I support significantly increased funding in order for this program to continue and expand its good work.

Additionally, this trade adjustment assistance bill includes a new provision that will offer up to $10,000 in cash assistance to Montana farmers and ranchers injured by imports. Let me be clear, this is a real opportunity to retool and reform a family farming operation, to make it competitive and sound, for generations to come. Like trade adjustment assistance for firms, this program is a means to keep an operation in business and keep our Montana families working.

One final item tucked neatly away in the TAA title is a provision to protect Montana sugarbeet growers from unfair trade practices. We all recall the black eye that sugar molasses gave the industry, and we cannot afford to suffer from such blatant circumvention again. This provision allows the Secretary of Agriculture to monitor imports of sugar to ensure that they do not circumvent the existing quota.

If they do not, we will report to the President who can then “snapback” the offending commodity into the appropriate tariff line. This should send a clear message that America will no longer tolerate efforts to manipulate the trading system to the disadvantage of our sugar producers.

The package before us today will help Montana move toward a greater role in the global economy. I hope my colleagues will feel the same about their own constituencies and lend their support to this important matter.

Mr. President, I thank you for listening. I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak therefor a period not to exceed 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CARTER, MISSION TO CUBA

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, many of us have anticipated the trip of former President Carter to Cuba with a mixed sense of hope and concern. We had hoped that he would use this unique opportunity to help bring ideas of freedom, democracy, and the oppressed people of Cuba, just 90 miles off our shores.

However, it was amazing and disappointing for many of us to learn of Mr. Carter’s visit to a Cuban biotechnology facility. It is a first and major development, at face value, of the assurances of communist Cuban officials that the facility is engaged solely in medical and humanitarian pursuits.

Mr. President, I am here to report that former President Jimmy Carter was accorded the same privilege and courtesy extended to former Presidents who have requested top-secret intelligence briefings and situation reports on global areas of interest of the United States.

In the post-9/11 world, it is important that we as a united country protect the safety and security of our people.

Instead, what we have in Mr. Carter’s visit to this biotechnology facility is former President—whom himself was once responsible for our foreign policy and the safety of the American people—dismissing the concerns of his own government, revealing information to whom he was privy in top-secret briefings, and buying wholesale the assertions of the dictator Fidel Castro and his minions.

The words and actions of Mr. Carter at this facility are a breach of trust, and it is made even worse, in that the individual involved in that breach is one in whom the American people once placed the ultimate trust and responsibility of the Presidency.

Rather than spending his time with Fidel Castro and his henchman, I would suggest the name of at least one person Mr. Carter would be better advised to get to know.

Just a few short days ago I joined the Congressional Cuba Political Prisoner Initiative. As part of this initiative, I have decided to sponsor or “adopt,” if you will, a Cuban political prisoner named Francisco Chaviano Gonzales, and to advocate on his behalf, and on behalf of the thousands of others being held in Cuba in clear abuses of their basic human rights.

Francisco Chaviano is president of the National Council for Civil Rights, an organization dedicated to promoting democratic practices, racial equality and human rights. He was arrested after government agents broke into his home and confiscated documents revealing human rights abuses in Cuba—specifically information about the Castro government’s sinking of a tugboat that claimed the lives of 41 men, women, and children who were attempting to escape to freedom.

Chaviano was arrested and detained in prison for 1 year, and although a civilian, he was tried by military tribunal and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

He has been confined in isolation and deprived of basic medical care for long periods of time. After being allowed to visit him for the first time in eight years, his wife reported that he is in very poor health. Other members of the civil rights organization have followed in Carter’s footsteps and continued to press the Cuban government for democratic reforms, at great peril to themselves.

Jimmy Carter is a man who is often praised in the media as a “model ex-President” or a “statesman” for his work with Habitat for Humanity. I do believe there is still time for him to make a more positive contribution to the plight of the Cuban people and to American foreign policy regarding Fidel Castro.

Mr. Carter is scheduled to deliver a speech to the Cuban people tonight. His remarks have the potential to do enormous good or to cause further harm. Rather than legitimizing a tyrant and a man who is not capable of producing the greatest degree of prosperity for the Cuban people, he could advocate positive change for the beleaguered Cuban people.

If Mr. Carter in his speech tonight is looking for a road map to freedom and prosperity for the Cuban people, he need look no further than the words and principles of freedom written by George Mason in the Virginia Declaration of Rights. This document, adopted on June 12, 1776, helped form the basis of our Declaration of Independence and 15 years later in our Bill of Rights as the first amendments to our Constitution.

I would read a few excerpts from George Mason’s historic words from various articles of the Virginia Declaration of Rights, which I think are instructive.

Article 1: That all men are by nature equally free and independent and have certain natural and unalienable rights, among which is the right of acquiring and possessing property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety.

Article 2: That all power is vested in, and consequently derived from, the people; that magistrates are their trustees and servants and at all times amenable to them.

Article 3: That government is, our ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community; of all the various modes and forms of government, that is best which is capable of producing the greatest degree of happiness and safety and is most effectually secured against the danger of maladministration.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred April 3, 1991 in Boston, MA. A Northeastern University student was arrested for making anti-Semitic and anti-homosexual death threats. The student, Garrett McAdams, was accused of threatening to kill a Jewish Realtor and bomb the offices of a gay student organization.

Mr. Carter has the power to either to fan the flames of those passions and aspirations of the Cuban people, or to throw cold water on them. The choice he needs to make is clear. Do not flinch. Stand strong for freedom!

Thank you. I yield the floor.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT
Oct. 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation. I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year, the Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred April 3, 1991 in Boston, MA. A Northeastern University student was arrested for making anti-Semitic and anti-homosexual death threats.

The student, Garrett McAdams, was accused of threatening to kill a Jewish Realtor and bomb the offices of a gay student organization.

Mr. President, I will close with more of a personal nature that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I urge him to support the Varela Project, which is a petition drive that has collected the 10,000 signatures needed under Castro’s so-called “constitution” to force a referendum on whether his government should be allowed to continue.

I call on Fidel Castro to heed the concepts first enunciated by George Mason 226 years ago in the Western Hemisphere, and I also call upon him to schedule free and fair democratic elections on the island of Cuba within the next year. Mr. President, I will close with more words from George Mason, who said:

There is a passion to the mind of man, especially a free man, which renders him impa- tient of a restraints.

Mr. Carter has the power to either to fan the flames of those passions and aspirations of the Cuban people, or to throw cold water on them. The choice he needs to make is clear. Do not flinch. Stand strong for freedom!

Thank you. I yield the floor.

One small step we can take to begin to repay that debt is ensuring that our men and women in blue are equipped with the tools they need to protect themselves from the constant dangers they face; and that police departments around the country have the additional resources they need meet new demands placed on them.

In the past several months, their responsibility have only grown larger. From the first moments our country saw NYPD officers at the base of the World Trade Center towers, the role of police officers around the country was changed forever. The September 11 terrorist attacks put communities around America on the frontlines in our war against terrorism at home, and our local public safety officers must now be prepared for the unimaginable: biological and terrorist attacks.

We pay tribute to the hard work and sacrifice of our police officers not just this week but every day of our lives as we move freely about our communities, largely uninhibited by fear and danger. We should take a moment to recognize the peace of mind that our local law enforcement officers provides us, and life’s precious gifts that come with that assurance.

Public service is one of our country’s most noble callings and law enforcement captures that spirit of sacrifice and devotion to community. We thank the families of police officers for their ever present courage and selflessness.

Mr. President, I wish to explain my abstention yesterday’s vote on the nomination of Paul G. Cassell to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Utah. After spending yesterday working with con-TRIBUTE TO HARRISON WILLIAMS

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, last November when our former colleague Harrison Williams passed away, I don’t believe anyone could have anticipated his legacy and the accomplishments were recognized by this body. And I wanted to remember my friend, the enormously popular Senator from New Jersey.

I have the privilege to serve with him for 15 of his 23 years, and he achieved more than most people will ever realize because he worked the old-fashioned way: making headway, not headlines.

Like all of us he was not perfect, and he paid a price. But this Senator will forever be remembered because of him. We have greater accessibility in millions of people’s lives.

The good mass transit systems we have in our Nation today we have because Pete was mass transit’s champion. Americans have the best safety and environmental working conditions in the world because he created the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. We have pension protections because of him. We have greater accessibility for the handicapped because of him. He believed that workers should have the right to organize, to work in conditions, or working conditions, he had his hand in.

All of us who were not perfect, and we paid a price. But this Senator will remember my friend, the enormously popular Senator from New Jersey.

I want to thank Morristown Hospital for supporting such an important and effective program. It is not enough to simply make health information available to our young people. That information needs to be made available in a setting that is comfortable for teenagers to access. This is exactly the environment that TeenHealthFX.com has created.

TeenHealthFX.com represents the type of creative thinking and collaboration that our communities must undertake if we are going to improve the health and health habits of teenagers and young adults. Again, congratulations to Morristown Hospital and thank you for your continued commitment to improving health care for all New Jerseyans.

STATMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BURNS:

S. 2510. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to accept the donation of certain lands previously disposed of from the public domain, together with certain mineral rights on such land, in the Mineral Hill-Greenville Mountain Mining District in the State of Montana, to be returned to the United States for management as part of the national public lands and forests, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I am pleased to announce the introduction of the Mineral Hill Historic Mining District Preservation Act of 2002. The purpose of this act is for the Forest Service has agreed to the transfer and management of the land and has been actively involved in this process. The Gardiner Chamber of Commerce supports the project, as do the Commissioners of Park County. The Greater Yellowstone Coalition also supports the donation. Simply put, this legislation is in the public interest. On behalf of the people of Montana, I look forward to its passage.

By Mr. BIDEN (for himself and Mrs. CLINTON)

S. 2513. A bill to assess the extent of the backlog in DNA analysis of rape kit samples with the improve investigation and prosecution of sexual assault cases with DNA evidence; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the DNA Sexual Assault Justice Act of 2002, a bill that guarantees prompt justice to victims of sexual assault crimes through DNA technology. 99.9 percent, that is how accurate DNA evidence is. 1 in 30 billion, those are the odds someone else also committed the crime. After a rich and storied history, the Mineral Hill Mine is played out and the opportunity to extract minerals has passed. The property is in very good condition and is being reclaimed in accordance with a reclamation plan approved by the Montana Department of Environmental Quality. The Forest Service has been closely involved in the reclamation planning and implementation processes to make certain that the property will remain in the excellent environmental state it is in today. As an added guarantee, the United States will also be the beneficiary of a $10 million insurance policy paid by TVX to clean up the site in the unlikely event that hazardous materials are discovered in the future.

The Mineral Hill Mine is located in the historic Jardine Mining District which was the site of one of Montana's greatest mining booms. Many of the buildings at the site go back to that time period. Some of the buildings will be preserved for interpretation purposes and will be available to the public. In addition, the site will be used in cooperation with Montana Tech of the University of Montana for mining and geologic education.

The Mineral Hill property is being donated by TVX to the Government without the possibility of a payment. There will be ongoing permits issued by the State of Montana and by EPA for monitoring of water discharge. This bill allows for those permits to be upheld and for the water processes to be maintained.

In a letter to my office dated June 25, 2001, the Greater Yellowstone Coalition observed that “we believe that there would be no adverse impact to the agency and indeed would be a benefit to the public that this donated land is conveyed with the obligation to maintain the NPDES permit already in force.” This is exactly what the bill provides in section 11.

I am pleased to say that this is a bill with the support of all key parties. The Forest Service has agreed to the transfer and management of the land and has been actively involved in this process. The Gardiner Chamber of Commerce supports the project, as do the Commissioners of Park County. The Greater Yellowstone Coalition also supports the donation. Simply put, this legislation is in the public interest. On behalf of the people of Montana, I look forward to its passage.
Just 10 years ago DNA analysis of evidence could have cost thousands of dollars and taken months, now testing one sample costs $40 and can take days. Ten years ago forensic scientists needed blood the size of a bottle cap, now DNA testing can be done on a sample the size of a pinhead. The changes in DNA technology are remarkable, and mark a sea change in how we can fight crime, particularly sexual assault crimes. The FBI tells us that since 1998 the national DNA database has helped put away violent criminals in 4,179 investigations in 32 states. How? By matching the DNA crime evidence to the DNA profiles of offenders. Individual success stories of DNA “cold hits” in sexual assault cases makes these numbers all too real.

For instance, in Florida, Kellie Green was brutally attacked and raped in the laundry room of her apartment complex. Because of lack of funds, her rape kit sat on the shelf for three years until a persistent detective had it analyzed. The evidence matched the profile of a man already incarcerated for beating and raping a women 6 weeks before the Green assault. For the state of Missouri in 1996 case in St. Louis where two young girls were abducted from bus stops and raped at opposite ends of the city. The police were unable to identify a suspect. In 1999, the police decided to run the DNA testing to develop new leads. By January 2000, the DNA database matched the 1996 case to a 1999 rape case, and police where able to identify the perpetrator.

Just days ago, the New York Police Department arrested a man linked to the rape of a woman four years ago. In 1997, a woman was horribly beaten, robbed and raped, there were no suspects. Several months after, the perpetrator submitted a DNA sample as a condition of probation after serving time for burglary. That DNA sample matched the DNA from the 1997 rape.

Undoubtedly, DNA matching by comparing evidence gathered at the crime scene with offender samples entered on the national DNA database has proven to be the deciding factor in solving stranger sexual assault cases, it has revolutionized the criminal justice system, and brought closure and justice for victims.

In light of the past successes and the future potential of DNA evidence, the reports about the backlog of untested rape kits and other crime scene waiting in police warehouses are simply shocking.

Today I am introducing legislation, “The DNA Sexual Assault Justice Act of 2002”, to strengthen the existing Federal DNA regime as an effective crime fighting tool. My bill addresses five, the huge, pressing issues.

First, exactly how bad is the backlog of untested rape kits nationwide? A 1999 government report found over 180,000 rape kits were sitting, untested, on the storage shelves of police department and laboratories all across the country. While recent press reports estimate that the number today is approaching 500,000 untested rape kits, I am told that there is no current, accurate numbers of the backlog. Behind every unprocessed rape kit is a victim who deserves recognition and justice. Accordingly, my legislation would require the Attorney General to survey every single law enforcement agency in the country to assess the extent of the backlog of rape kits waiting to undergo DNA testing. To combat the backlog of rape kits, it is imperative to know the real numbers, and how best to utilize federal resources.

Second, how can existing Federal law be strengthened to make sure that State crime labs have the funds for the critical DNA analysis needed to solve sex assault cases? To fight crime most effectively, we must both test rape kits and enter convicted offender DNA samples into the DNA database. There has been explosive growth in the use of forensic sciences by law enforcement. A government survey found that in 2000 there were 11,000 sexual assault cases, a 47 percent increase from almost 21,000 cases in 1999. In addition, the labs received 177,000 convicted offender DNA samples, an almost 77 percent increase from 100,242 samples in 1999.

All across the country, laboratories report being “swamped” in the face of this overwhelming work. According to this same government survey, on average, there are 6 employees in a state crime lab—a lab that must not only test DNA for hundreds of cases, but also run forensic tests on blood, fingerprints or ballistic evidence. The bill I’m introducing would: 1. increase current funding levels to both test rape kits and to process and upload offender samples; and 2. allow local governments to apply directly to the Justice Department for these grants. I thank my colleagues, Senators Joe Biden, Virginia McCaskill, and Lindsey Graham, for their support. The DNA Sexual Assault Justice Act of 2002 would create a new grant program to encourage DNA testing.

Third, what assistance does the FBI need to keep up with the crushing number of DNA samples which need to be tested or stored in the national DNA database? The current national DNA database, known as the Combined DNA Index, or “CODIS”, is nearing capacity of convicted offender DNA samples. My bill would provide funds to the FBI to 1. Upgrade the national DNA computer database to handle the huge projections of samples; and 2. process and upload Federal convicted offender DNA samples into the database. Efforts to include more Federal and State convicted offenders in our database just makes plain sense to fight crime. We know that sexual assault cases are among the highest rates of recidivism, and that many sexual assault crimes are committed by those with past convictions for other kinds of crime. Their DNA samples from prior convictions help law enforcement efforts enormously.

Fourth, what additional tools are needed to help treat victims of sexual assault? One group that understands the importance of gathering credible DNA evidence are forensic sexual assault nurse examiners, who are sensitive to the trauma of this horrible crime and make sure that patients are not revictimized in the aftermath. These programs should be in each and every emergency room and play an integral role in police departments, bridging the gap between the law and the medical profession.

Likewise, tapping the power of DNA requires well-trained law enforcement who know how to collect and preserve DNA evidence from the crime scene. Training should be a matter of course for all law enforcement. No rape kit evidence will lead to the perpetrator if the DNA evidence is collected improperly. The DNA Sexual Assault Justice Act would create a new grant program to train sexual assault examiner programs and training. And it would train law enforcement personnel in the collection of evidence, including drug-facilitated assaults, and the collection and use of DNA samples for use as forensic evidence.

Fifth, what can be done to ensure that sexual assault offenders who cannot be identified by their victim are nevertheless brought to justice? Profound injustice is done to rape victims when delayed DNA testing leads to a “cold hit” after the statute of limitations has expired. For example, Jeri Elster was brutally raped in her California home, and for years the police were unable to solve the crime. Seven years later, DNA from the rape matched a man in jail for an unrelated crime. Yet the rapist was never charged, convicted, or sentenced because California’s statute of limitations had expired the previous year.

The DNA Sexual Assault Justice Act of 2000 would change current law to authorize Federal John Doe/DNA indictments that will permit Federal prosecutors to issue an indictment identifying an unknown defendant by his DNA profile within the 5-year statute of limitations. Once a DNA indictment is filed, the DNA indictment would permit prosecution at anytime once there was a DNA “cold hit” through the national DNA database system.

John Doe/DNA indictments strike the right balance between encouraging swift and efficient investigations, recognizing the durability and credibility of DNA evidence and preventing an injustice if a cold hit happens years after the crime. The law must catch up with the technology. I started looking at this issue almost two decades ago when I led the drafting of the Violence Against Women Act. In fact, it is the Violence Against Women Act that provided the first funding to sexual assault nurse examiner programs. The DNA Sexual Justice Act of 2000 is the next step, a way to connect the dots between the extraordinary strides in DNA technology and my commitment to ending violence against women. We must ensure that justice delayed is not justice denied.

By Mr. WELLSTONE (for himself, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. DAYTON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. CLINTON, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mrs. BOXER):

S.J. Res. 37. A joint resolution providing for congressional disapproval under chapter 8 of title 5, United States Code, of the rule submitted by Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services within the Department of Health and Human Services relating to modification of the medicare upper payment limit for non-State government owned or operated hospitals published in the Federal Register on January 18, 2002, and submitted to the Senate on March 15, 2002; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a Resolution of Disapproval to reverse a rule submitted by the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services. The rule, which takes effect today, lowers the Medicaid Upper Payment Limit for non-State government owned or operated hospitals. It reduces the Federal Medicaid match, or Medicaid Upper Payment Limit, from 150 percent of the Medicare rate to 100 percent. According to the administration’s budget, the rule will cut $9 billion over 5 years, money currently targeted to public hospitals and other “safety net” health programs, the most vulnerable sector of our health care system. At a time when Medicaid programs in the States are struggling, we simply can’t afford to take this amount from our health care safety net. Too many people will be hurt.

The regulation will mean a loss of about $30 million for Minnesota’s public health care system this year, potentially more in future years. Hennepin County Medical Center alone stands to lose about $10 million this year. This is a hospital that provides essential, emergency and primary care to people for whom our public hospitals are struggling just to survive, we ought not to be taking resources away from them like this.

CMS Director Scully has attempted to justify this damaging reduction by pointing to instances in the past where States did not use the program’s money for health care purposes. Director Scully is certainly correct. The program should be used for health care, not for anything else. But slapping the Upper Payment Limit means that none of the program’s money is going to the care that doesn’t make any sense. The loopholes that existed in the program have already been closed. The rule is a $9 billion transfer away from those who desperately need health care, purportedly in order to solve a problem, but the problem has already been fixed. The rule is not needed and will cause great harm. I urge colleagues to support this resolution of disapproval.

STATEMENTS ON SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 267—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES AT THE 54TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL WHALING COMMISSION

Mr. KERRY (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. REED, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. FITZGERALD, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. LUGAR, Mrs. BOXER, and Mr. KENNEDY) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 267

Whereas whales have very low reproductive rates, making whale populations extremely vulnerable to pressure from commercial whaling;

Whereas whales migrate throughout the world’s oceans and international cooperation is required to successfully conserve and protect whale stocks;

Whereas in 1946 the nations of the world adopted the International Convention for the Regulation of Whaling, which established the International Whaling Commission to provide for the proper conservation of whale stocks;

Whereas the Commission adopted a moratorium on commercial whaling in 1982 in order to conserve and promote the recovery of whale stocks;

Whereas the Commission has designated the Indian Ocean and the ocean waters around Antarctica as whale sanctuaries to further enhance the recovery of whale stocks;

Whereas many nations of the world have designated waters under their jurisdiction as whale sanctuaries where commercial whaling is prohibited, and additional regional whale sanctuaries have been proposed by nations that are members of the Commission;

Whereas two member nations currently have reservations to the Commission’s moratorium on commercial whaling and 1 member nation is currently conducting commercial whaling operations in spite of the moratorium and three nations;

Whereas a nonmember nation that opposes the moratorium against commercial whaling is seeking to join the Convention, on the condition that it be exempt from the moratorium;

Whereas the Commission has adopted several resolutions at recent meetings asking member nations to halt commercial whaling activities conducted under reservation to the moratorium and to refrain from issuing special permits for research involving the killing of whales and other cetaceans;

Whereas 1 member nation of the Commission has taken a reservation to the Commission’s Southern Ocean Sanctuary and also continues to conduct customary lethal scientific whaling in the Southern Ocean and in the North Pacific Ocean;

Whereas the Commission’s Scientific Committee has repeatedly expressed serious concerns about the scientific need for such lethal research;

Whereas one member nation in the past unsuccessfully sought an exemption allowing commercial whaling of up to 50 minke whales, in order to provide economic assistance to specific vessels, now seeks a scientific permit for these same vessels to take 50 minke whales;

Whereas the lethal take of whales under scientific permits has increased both in quantity and species, with species now including minke, Bryde’s, and sperm whales, and new proposals have been offered to include sei whales for the first time;

Whereas there continue to be indications that whale meat is being traded on the international market despite a ban on such trade under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, and that meat may be originating in one of the member nations of the Commission; and

Whereas engaging in commercial whaling under reservation and lethal scientific whaling undermines the conservation program of the Commission. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

1) at the 54th Annual Meeting of the International Whaling Commission the United States should—

(A) remain firmly opposed to commercial whaling;

(B) initiate and support efforts to ensure that all activities conducted under reservations to the Commission’s moratorium or sanctuaries are ceased;

(C) oppose the proposal to allow a nonmember country to join the treaty with a reservation that exempts it from the moratorium against commercial whaling;

(D) oppose the lethal taking of whales for scientific purposes unless such lethal taking is specifically authorized by the Scientific Committee of the Commission;

(E) seek the Commission’s support for specific efforts by member nations to end illegal trade in whale meat; and

(F) support the permanent protection of whale populations through the establishment of whale sanctuaries in which commercial whaling is prohibited;

2) at the 12th Conference of the Parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, the United States should oppose all efforts to reopen international trade in whale meat or downlist any whale population;

3) the United States should make full use of all appropriate diplomatic mechanisms, relevant international laws and agreements, and other appropriate mechanisms to implement the goals set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2); and

4) if the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the President, under section 8(a)(2) of the Fisherman’s Protective Act of 1967 (22 U.S.C. 1978(a)(2)), that nationals of a foreign country are engaging in trade or a taking which diminishes the effectiveness of the Convention, then the United States should take appropriate action steps at its disposal pursuant to Federal law to convince such foreign country to cease such trade or taking.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, as Chairman of the Oceans, Atmosphere and Fisheries Subcommittee, I rise today to submit a resolution regarding the endangered United States’ position at the upcoming 54th Annual Meeting of the International Whaling Commission, IWC. I wish to thank the Ranking

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a Sense of the Senate Resolution expressing support for Medicare Reform and the addition of a prescription drug benefit. I am pleased that Senator THAD COCHRAN and Senator JAMES INHOFE are joining with me in this effort today.

The Medicare program is of vital importance to our Nation's seniors and has been providing them dependable, affordable and high quality health care for over 35 years. Despite this, I think we would all agree that the system has not been providing modern medicines or coverage available to those covered by private insurance. The practice of medicine has changed dramatically since the inception of the Medicare program. The many new technologies and drugs that are available to our seniors today weren't even an option 35 years ago.

No senior should have to worry about whether he or she can afford the medicine they need to stay healthy. I am well aware that the rising cost of prescription medicine and prescription drug coverage is a great concern for today's seniors and tomorrow's retirees. Indeed, in some cases, prescription drugs are as important as the doctor's care. It is this reality that makes it so critical we focus our efforts on finding a solution.

As discussion continues, it is crucial we develop effective options for simultaneously modernizing and securing Medicare. We can not afford to add an expensive new comprehensive benefit without real reform to the program and we need to focus our attention on the necessary steps to ensure Medicare reform is dependable and sustainable.

This is why I am choosing to submit this Sense of the Senate Resolution expressing support for a prescription drug benefit and Medicare modernization. I am looking on this date to pass legislation on this issue before September 30, 2002 and to give current and future seniors the benefits they deserve. Included in this resolution are principles that I believe should be included in any Medicare or prescription drug legislation that passes this year. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting these principles and working towards the goal of passing substantial Medicare reform.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we worked hard today. There were some good debates. There are Senators who have a lot of amendments they say they want to offer, and we need to move on those as quickly as we can. We ask Senators to be aware of what is going on in the Chamber and to be ready at any given time to come and offer their amendments. The majority leader has indicated he wants this debate to proceed on this bill in the form of amendments being offered, but I think there will come a time when we are going to have to move on. I do not know if that means he would have to file a motion to invoke cloture, but I would assume so. So I hope Senators will realize they have a finite amount of time to offer amendments and we should move forward on these as quickly as possible because for people who wait for a day that may be more convenient to them, that day may be too late.

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

MAJ. GEN. DANIEL JAMES III
SENATOR GEORGE ONORATO RECEIVES PUBLIC SERVICE AWARD

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Senator George Onorato, who is this year’s recipient of the “Public Service Award” from the Kiwanis Club of Astoria/LONG ISLAND CITY. Senator Onorato’s numerous contributions during his career have helped shape the face of this great city. It is a pleasure to pay tribute to this esteemed public servant.

Senator George Onorato was elected to the New York State Senate in a special election in June of 1983, when he won a highly contested three-candidate race. During his first year in the Senate, the Senator was the Prime Co-sponsor of the used car ‘lemon’ law. Since his election, Senator Onorato has been actively involved in tenants rights issues and landlord equity.

A tenacious advocate of Senior Citizen issues, the Senator worked tirelessly toward implementation of the Elderly Pharmaceutical Insurance Coverage Program (EPIC), and has consistently co-sponsored legislation that would make prescription medication affordable to our Senior Citizens. Through his position as a member of the Senate Minority Task Force on Waterfront Development, Senator Onorato has been deeply involved in the redevelopment of the Hunter Point area.

The Senator also continues to be supportive of numerous civic and community renewal groups and their projects. He has served with the Riker’s Island Liaison Group that monitors conditions and takes unified action to respond to problems associated with community proximity to Riker’s Island. He is also a member of the New York State Senate Democratic Puerto Rican and Hispanic Task Force. As a determined member of the Senate Minority Task Force on Vietnam Veterans and the Acting Ranking Minority Member of the Senate Committee on Veterans’ Affairs, Senator Onorato sponsored legislation providing for student aid to Vietnam veterans, and in 1997 introduced legislation to increase the level of such funding. He sponsored and supported legislation requiring identification of handicapped children of Vietnam veterans in order to assist in developing a data base for research on dioxin-related birth defects.

Greatly concerned over air quality, Senator Onorato continues to be involved in negotiations that would help limit the emission of pollutants by power plants. His district in Queens has some of the dirtiest power plants in Queens. Understanding the health impacts on his constituents, Senator Onorato has been a leading proponent for cleaning up the dirty plants.

As an active participant in community affairs, Senator Onorato has served as Chairman of the Board of Directors of one of the most prominent Democratic clubs in New York City, the Taviet Population Democratic Club. A lifelong resident of Astoria, Senator Onorato is a proud father of three and grandfather of six. He received a Presidential Citation while serving in the United States Army, 116th Medical Battalion from 1950–1952.

Senator Onorato has always proudly sported his Italian heritage, and has promoted and championed good relations between Italy and the United States. He has traveled on numerous occasions to Italy, meeting with numerous dignitaries and businessmen in Tuscany to promote trade and government relations between our two countries.

In recognition of his many outstanding achievements, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Senator Onorato.

IN HONOR OF THE ADDITION OF SHERIFF JOACHIM MATTHEWS TO THE NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT MEMORIAL

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Sheriff Joachim Matthews. Sheriff Matthews, who was killed in the line of duty ninety-two years ago this December 1, will be added to the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial here in Washington, D.C. today.

Joachim Matthews served Macomb County as Sheriff for nearly four years, from 1906 until his death in 1910. Responding to a report of malicious activity on a farm, Sheriff Matthews was shot by a young man who mistook him for a robber. An investigation into the incident ruled the shooting to be accidental.

Sixty years of age at the time of his death, Sheriff Matthews left behind a wife and five children. Many of his descendants still live in the Mount Clemens area.

It is only fitting that a public servant like Joachim Matthews is recognized on the National Law Enforcement Memorial for his service to the citizens of Macomb County. He paid the ultimate price while fulfilling the duties of his office. Truly, he represents the best ideals of law enforcement: dedication, devotion, and duty.

Sheriff Matthews’ name will be added today to the National Law Enforcement Memorial at a candlelight vigil. As he is remembered through this distinction, we should also honor his memory by praying for the safety and security of all men and women in law enforcement.

EXPAND ALASKA NATIVE CONTRACTING OF FEDERAL LAND MANAGEMENT

HON. DON YOUNG OF ALASKA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation to expand Alaska Native contracting of Federal land management functions and activities and to promote hiring of Alaska Natives by the Federal Government within the State of Alaska.

The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (ANILCA) was enacted on December 2, 1980 and Public Law 96-487. Since then, Congress has passed several public laws which have amended ANILCA. The 1980 ANILCA amendments expanded the federal refuge and park systems in Alaska for the purposes of protecting habitat for fish and wildlife, to conserve fish and wildlife populations, and to provide the continued opportunity for subsistence uses by local Alaska Native residents and to protect archaeological sites associated with Alaska Native cultures.

Many rural Alaska native communities are located within close proximity of the refuges and serve an important part of the culture and ways of Alaska natives and other residents in rural Alaska. Congress, through sections 1307 and 1308 of the 1980 ANILCA amendments, directed the Secretary of the Interior to establish programs whereby Alaska natives were to be given preference in hiring, and to establish programs whereby Native lands were given preference for siting of conservation service unit facilities. The provisions also recognized that the Natives whose front and back yards were now part of the federal parks and preserves systems were the best individuals to be involved in the administering of the lands because of their special knowledge or expertise concerning the natural or cultural resources of such areas.

Public Law 106-488 authorized demonstration projects in four areas in northwest Alaska: (1) Bering Land Bridge National Preserve; (2) Cape Krusenstern National Monument; (3) Kobuk Valley National Park; and (4) Noatak National Preserve in fiscal years 2000 and 2001. No demonstration project has been entered in either fiscal years 2000 or 2001 with the above named four areas at the Department of the Interior.

It has been twenty two (22) years since the 1980 ANILCA amendments were enacted, and the contracting and native hires provisions remain unfilled by the Department of the Interior. This bill would remedy this by directing the Department of the Interior to enter into demonstration projects with no less than six eligible Alaska Native tribes or tribal organizations in fiscal years 2003 and 2004.

This bill is a result of the legislative council of the Alaska Federation of Natives to address the contracting and hiring preference for Alaskan native entities pursuant to the 1980 ANILCA amendments.

IN HONOR OF THE ADDITION OF DEPUTY SHERIFF CLARENCE LACROIX TO THE NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT MEMORIAL

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of Deputy Sheriff Clarence LaCroix. Deputy LaCroix, who was killed in the line of duty seventy-seven years ago this August 25, was added to the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial here in Washington, D.C. today.

Deputy LaCroix served Macomb County as Deputy Sheriff on motorcycle patrol for a short time before his death. While riding on duty, Deputy LaCroix’s motorcycle wasbrushed by an automobile that turned in front of him. Both motorcycle and rider were thrown into a ditch, killing Deputy LaCroix. An investigation into the matter ruled the incident to be accidental.

Just twenty-nine years of age at the time of his death, Deputy LaCroix left behind a wife and two small children. Some of his descendants still live in the St. Clair Shores area.

It is only fitting that a public servant like Clarence LaCroix is recognized on the National Law Enforcement Memorial for his service to the citizens of Macomb County. He paid the ultimate price while fulfilling the duties of his office. Truly, he represents the best ideals of law enforcement: dedication, devotion, and duty.

Deputy LaCroix’s name will be added today to the National Law Enforcement Memorial at a candlelight vigil. As he is remembered through this distinction, we should also honor his memory by praying for the safety and security of all men and women in law enforcement.

HONORING THE WOODBRIDGE SENIOR CENTER ON ITS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. ROSA L. DELAURO
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today to join the Woodbridge community in celebrating the 25th Anniversary of the Woodbridge Senior Center. As the center for senior activities, the Woodbridge Senior Center has become a landmark in our community.

With the establishment of a local Commission on Aging in 1977, there was an assessment of the needs of the elderly in Woodbridge. Almost immediately, the Commission found that there was a lack of space for a place for seniors to gather. Under the remarkable leadership of Patricia Gilbert and the founding members, the Commission on Aging successfully negotiated for space at Center School, adopted a budget, completed a needs assessment survey, formulated policies, opened the lounge and office, developed a volunteer transportation service and established several programs—all within nine months.

In the years since its inception, the Woodbridge Senior Center has developed a very unique relationship with the community. Through the Woodbridge Awareness to Crime and Home Safety (WATCH) Council, the Senior Center and the Woodbridge Police Department joined together to develop programming aimed at reducing fear of crime and improving the quality of life for seniors. Each year, the Senior Center sponsors an afternoon tea at which they honor the many volunteers who assist them throughout the year. Working with the town officials, the Senior Center was able to secure a handicapped accessible van which provides transportation to the senior and disabled community. These are only a few of the many outstanding programs the Center has offered to Woodbridge in the past.

Our seniors deserve to have a place in each of our communities where they can socialize as well as access much needed programs. In the quarter of a century since the Senior Center was established, the efforts of the staff and volunteers has greatly improved the quality of life of Woodbridge’s Senior Citizens. Providing invaluable programs and services, they have made a real difference in the community as a whole. Even today, the Senior Center continues to grow and expand—enriching the community and the lives of many seniors.

Today, as they celebrate their 25th anniversary, I am honored to stand and join the Woodbridge community in congratulating the staff and volunteers, past and present, of the Woodbridge Senior Center, on this milestone. Their commitment, dedication, and advocacy has left an indelible mark on our community and I would like to extend my deepest thanks and appreciation to them for all of their good work.

HONORING DR. JAMES CLARK of ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. James Clark for his years of service in the educational system. Dr. Clark, who retires this year, has served as the Superintendent of the Joliet Township High Schools since July 1, 1996.

Dr. Clark started his career in Marion, Indiana where he taught speech, drama, and English. He has since taught in Harvey and Lockport High Schools. In 1999 Dr. Clark was appointed Assistant Superintendent for Educational Services at the Joliet Township High Schools. In 1996, he received the appointment as Superintendent. Dr. Clark is also an Adjunct Instructor at Aurora University and Governors State University.

Being a generous person, Dr. Clark is also involved with the community. He is active in Rotary, serves as a member of the Joliet Area American Cancer Society Board of Directors, on the Joliet Area Chamber of Commerce and Industry Board of Directors, as vice-chair of the American Heart Association Heart Walk, and in various professional school administrator organizations.

Dr. Clark and his wife Linda are the proud parents of two sons and one grandson. Dr. Clark is revered throughout the Joliet community. In fact, the City of Joliet declared Monday, May 13, 2002, as ‘‘Dr. James H. Clark Day’’.

Mr. Speaker, I urge this body to identify and recognize others in their own districts whose actions have so greatly benefitted and strengthened America’s communities.

RECOGNIZING THE OUTSTANDING SERVICE OF COMMANDER KARL VAN DEUSEN

HON. C.W. BILL YOUNG of FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to praise and commend this military officer, Commander Karl Van Deusen, who has served with distinction and dedication during the last year as a Navy Appropriations Liaison Officer in the Assistant Secretary of the Navy’s (FM&C) Appropriations Matters Office. It is a privilege for me to recognize his many outstanding achievements and commend him for the superb service he has provided to the Department of the Navy, the Congress, and our great Nation.

During his tenure in the Appropriations Matters Office Commander Van Deusen provided the members and staff of my Committee on Appropriations, and our Subcommittee on Defense, with timely and accurate support regarding Department of the Navy plans, programs and budget decisions. His valuable contributions in the Defense Subcommittee and the Department of the Navy to strengthen its close working relationship and to ensure the most modern, well-trained and well-equipped Naval Forces attainable for the defense of our great nation.

In addition to his professional relationship with my Committee, Karl has become a family member to Beverly, to me, and to my sons. He is a constituent from St. Petersburg, Florida and he has served as a role model for my sons, who have aspirations to pursue careers in the United States Navy and Marine Corps.

Karl is also a recognized hero. He was recently awarded the Navy Commendation Medal for his courageous actions immediately following the September 11th attack on the Pentagon. Without regard for his personal safety, Karl time and time again helped bring fellow service members and civilians out of the burning building that terrible day.

Mr. Speaker, Commander Van Deusen is the epitome of a United States Naval Officer. He now embarks on the dream job of any sailor, taking command of a ship and her crew. As he assumes command of the USS Gonzales, one of our nation’s newest destroyers, I know the many friends he has made in working with the Congress will miss him greatly.

Of course, our loss is his new crew’s gain, and I am confident that Karl will be a great Captain who will ensure that his ship and crew are ready for whatever lies ahead.

I join with my colleagues today in wishing Commander Van Deusen, his wife, Beth, and their five children, Bonnie, Jon, Margaret, Todd, and Cora the very best in one of the best jobs in the world. This great American family has made many sacrifices during a time of national security. As a Distributed himself with an unselfish service that exemplifies the Navy’s core values of honor, courage and commitment. Clearly Commander Van Deusen is one of the best our nation has to offer and as he departs the Pentagon to return to sea duty, I wish to express my gratitude and good wishes for Karl and his family every success and “fair winds and following seas” for the captain and crew of the USS Gonzales.

MAY 28 REPUBLIC DAY

HON. DAN BURTON of INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of my remarks is to congratulate, on behalf of myself and my colleagues, the Republic of Azerbaijan on the May 28 Republic Day. After the break-up of the Soviet Union, we have seen Azerbaijan’s strife not only to occupy its rightful place in the international community, but, first and foremost, to preserve its sovereignty, independence, and territorial integrity. Over the years, we have been proud to support projects on which we are the Caspian, as well as to establish relations of friendship and cooperation with the United States and the European nations.

Now we consider Azerbaijan to be one of the strongest U.S. allies among the post-Soviet countries. The reforms in Azerbaijan, both economic and political, as well as this nation’s role in the international antiterrorist campaign, prove its dedication to the democracy, free market economy, its intention to pursue cooperation that is not confrontational and I extend my congratulations to President Aliyev and the people of the Republic of Azerbaijan and express my belief that the bilateral relations between our two countries will further develop and strengthen for the well-being of both our peoples, and the purpose of furthering the U.S. interests in the South Caucasus, where Azerbaijan has become a stabilizing force.

IN RECOGNITION OF MARGO CATSIMATIDIS

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
of NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Margo Catsimatidis on the occasion of the 11th Annual Hellenic Times Scholarship Dinner. Ms. Catsimatidis’s contributions to the Hellenic community have touched countless lives. It is a pleasure to pay tribute to this illustrious community leader.

Ms. Catsimatidis is Vice-Chairperson and one of the founders, as well as the Hellenic Times Scholarship Fund, which this year will be granting $150,000 in scholarships to young Greek-American students from across the country. Established in 1990 for the education of Greek-American students, the Hellenic Times Scholarship Fund has awarded over $700,000 to more than 400 students to date. Ms. Catsimatidis joined the staff of the Hellenic Times in 1979 as head of Advertising and assumed her current position as co-publisher in 1993. In 1984, Ms. Catsimatidis founded MCV Advertising Associates, an advertising agency specializing in retail print advertising whose accounts appear in all major New York City print media. She is also the television spokesperson for Gristede’s Supermarkets in New York City.

As a civic leader, Ms. Catsimatidis served as the Coordinator of the annual Columbus Avenue Festival from 1979–1991. The 30 block festival draws a crowd in excess of one million, raising funds for the West Side of Manhattan for various schools and community projects on the West Side of Manhattan. She was also one of the founders and coordinators of the Amsterdam Avenue Festival and is a member of the West Side Chamber of Commerce.

Volunteering much of her time in an effort to better the lives of others, Ms. Catsimatidis is active on numerous committees, serving as Chairperson of the National Alzheimer’s Foundation Dinner and Chairperson of the Parkinson’s Disease Foundation Dinner. In addition, she serves on the Executive Committee of New York Hospital and the Police Athletic League (PAL), which helps 60,000 underprivileged inner-city children.

Ms. Catsimatidis and her husband, John, have used their own resources to benefit communities in need and others. Ms. Catsimatidis... and her husband built a computer and science school in Jerusalem. Recognizing that Camp David had no religious sanctuary of its own, they have helped build the first Chapel at Camp David. The couple was also instrumental in building a home for the aged in New York.

A proud resident of Manhattan and mother of two, Ms. Catsimatidis is a member of the Leadership 100 for the Greek Orthodox Church and served as Chairperson of the Children’s Luncheon raising funds for cancer-stricken children.

In recognition of these outstanding achievements, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Margo Catsimatidis. Ms. Catsimatidis’s spirit and dedication to our community serves as a model of commitment to us all.

IN HONOR OF NATIONAL NURSING HOME WEEK AND THE NURSING HOMES OF THE 10TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I’d like to recognize today National Nursing Home Week and honor the many great nursing homes located in the 10th Congressional District. This year is the 35th annual year of National Nursing Home Week and the theme is Celebrating the Seasons of Life.

I believe that this theme is indicative of all that the nursing homes of Macomb and St. Clair Counties have to offer. They strive to provide their residents a high quality of life and treat those in need with dignity and respect. The nursing homes of the 10th Congressional District work hard to provide their residents quality care, and I have met with many of those whose lives have been improved by living in nursing homes.

I have seen first hand the importance nursing homes and their staff play in the lives of residents and the families of those residents. It is hard for families when a loved one enters a nursing home, but with a caring and compassionate staff these thoughts are quickly forgotten.

Unfortunately, I have heard first hand about the burdens that Medicare and Medicaid reductions have placed on nursing home facilities. As a nation, we should be doing everything that we can to promote good, long-term care for our citizens, not compromising the care that our parents and grandparents receive. These reductions make it hard for nursing homes to continue providing quality care to those who need it.

During National Nursing Home Week, it is important to remember that our loved ones—our parents and grandparents—deserve the best in their later years. We need to ensure that our nursing homes and their staff have the resources and support to continue to provide quality care for all.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, this evening, Cross cites problems.

Terry Cross, Executive Director of the National Indian Child Welfare Association. (San Antonio Express News, Sunday, July 1, 2001 Article).

I believe these FY 2002 ICWA amendments to be acceptable legislation which will protect the interests of prospective adoptive parents, Native extended families, and most importantly, American Indian and Alaska Native children.

The Committee on Resources will seek additional input from the Department of Justice, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Health and Human Services. I am hopeful that these agencies will again embrace this legislation so that we can affirm this country’s commitment to Protect Native American families and promote the best interest of Native children.

I urge and welcome support from my colleagues in further clarifying the ICWA to ensure no more American Indian or Alaska Native children are lost.

HONORING PATRICIA McKEE OF WACO, TX

HON. CHET EDWARDS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, this evening, Tuesday, May 14, 2002, the people of Waco and Central Texas will gather to celebrate a 44-year association that has enriched the lives of people and improved the lives and futures of young men and women.

Patricia McKee became a Camp Fire volunteer in 1958, when her daughter, was a Bluebird. Pat continued as a volunteer for twelve years providing for visitation or contact between tribes, natural parents, extended family and an adopted child.

Extends ICWA to cover children of state-recognized Indian tribes (in some cases), and children who reside or are domiciled on a reservation and are the child or grandchildren of a member, but who are not eligible for tribal membership.

I think it is appropriate that Congress further clarifies the ICWA to protect that American Indian and Alaska Native children are not snatched from their families or tribal communities without cause. In July of 2001, the Child Welfare League of America offered American Indians something they have longed to hear for more than three decades: an apology for taking American Indian children.

It was genuinely believed that Indian children were better off in white homes,” said Terry Cross, Executive Director of the National Indian Child Welfare Association. (San Antonio Express News, Sunday, July 1, 2001 Article).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation with my colleagues, Congressman J.D. HAYWORTH of Arizona to amend the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA). This clarifies Congress’s intent with regard to ICWA.

Many of the bill’s provisions are included in direct response to tribal comments on H.R. 2644, an ICWA bill I introduced last year in response to tribal concerns. H.R. 2644 was drafted with the input of the Association on American Indian Affairs, Tanana Chiefs Conference, National Indian Child Welfare Association, National Congress of American Indians, the American Academy of Adoption Attorneys, various tribes and other concerned organizations. The changes that the present bill makes to H.R. 2644 also reflect input from each of these named organizations, although the American Academy of Adoption Attorneys has not had the opportunity to review a number of these.

It has been my policy to have all affected parties participate in the legislative process to help finalize a bill for passage. With this in mind, it is my intent to include the American Academy of Adoption Attorneys later in the legislative process.

In 2002, we still have American Indian and Alaska Native children being adopted out of families, tribal rights unseen and states. We continue to have this problem in Alaska and I have been asked to introduce amendments to further clarify the ICWA. The amendments include, among others, the following provisions:

Requires detailed notice to Indian tribes in all voluntary child custody proceedings and to parents and tribes in all involuntary proceedings.

Clarifies right of Indian tribes to intervene in all voluntary state court child custody proceedings, provides that a tribe files a notice of intent to intervene or a written objection within 45 days of receiving notice of a voluntary termination of parental rights or within 100 days of receiving notice of a particular adoptive placement, and certifies that a child is a member or eligible for membership at the time of its intervention.

Requires notice to extended family members and recognizes their right to intervene in state child custody proceedings.

Requires attorneys, public and private agencies to provide detailed information to Indian parents of their rights under ICWA.

Extends ICWA to cover children of state ICWA violations may be reviewed by federal courts and provides for federal review of state ICWA compliance.

Provides for criminal sanctions for anyone who assists a person to lie about their Indian ancestry for the purposes of applying the ICWA.

Clarifies tribal jurisdiction in Alaska. Allows state courts to enter enforceable orders providing for visitation or contact between tribes, natural parents, extended family and an adopted child.

Requires ICWA, as a member or eligible for membership at the time of its intervention.

Makes it easier for adoptees to gain access to their birth records.

I think it is appropriate that Congress further clarifies the ICWA to protect that American Indian and Alaska Native children are not snatched from their families or tribal communities without cause. In July of 2001, the Child Welfare League of America offered American Indians something they have longed to hear for more than three decades: an apology for taking American Indian children.

It was genuinely believed that Indian children were better off in white homes,” said Terry Cross, Executive Director of the National Indian Child Welfare Association. (San Antonio Express News, Sunday, July 1, 2001 Article).

I believe these FY 2002 ICWA amendments to be acceptable legislation which will protect the interests of prospective adoptive parents, Native extended families, and most importantly, American Indian and Alaska Native children.

The Committee on Resources will seek additional input from the Department of Justice, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Health and Human Services. I am hopeful that these agencies will again embrace this legislation so that we can affirm this country’s commitment to Protect Native American families and promote the best interest of Native children.

I urge and welcome support from my colleagues in further clarifying the ICWA to ensure no more American Indian or Alaska Native children are lost.

Defines the circumstances under which state ICWA violations may be reviewed by federal courts and provides for federal review of state ICWA compliance.

Provides for criminal sanctions for anyone who assists a person to lie about their Indian ancestry for the purposes of applying the ICWA.
years, and then in 1970, became Executive Director of the Camp Fire USA’s seven-county Tejas Council.

What followed was thirty-two years of energetic service and determined leadership in her community. Pat began by conducting a community needs survey to find ways that Camp Fire could help. She established an after-school program for children in Waco Independent School District. Camp Fire has offered parenting education, conflict resolution seminars, nutritional courses and money management classes at three of the city’s public housing developments. And, in 1977, the Camp Fire Activity Center opened to provide a safe place for children to go after school.

Mr. Speaker, during her tenure, Pat McKee has established partnerships with more than forty community agencies to develop programs that help young people grow into productive, contributing members of society.

She has been recognized with national Camp Fire USA awards for such innovative programs as Kids Care, Teen Leadership Waco, Teen Volunteers Center, Life Enrichment Programs and Campus Camp. Those remarkable achievements on behalf of others have not gone unnoticed elsewhere. Former Governor Ann Richards recognized Pat with the Yellow Rose of Texas Award. She is a recipient of the Community Builder Award from the Masonic Grand Lodge, and the Pathfinder Award from YWCA.

Now, after forty-four years of service, Pat has retired to rest and travel with her husband, Goodson, although everyone who knows her is certain that she will be volunteering her time to some nonprofit organization very soon.

Mr. Speaker, Pat McKee’s life has defined service to others. While the Waco community is sad to see her retire, we are, at the same time, delighted for her. And, most importantly, we are all better people for having known her.

JOHN S. LAWS INSTITUTE GRADUATION

HON. JAMES P. McGOVERN OF MassACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I join the community of Worcester, Massachusetts in celebrating the graduation of ten young adults from the Dynamy John S. Laws Institute. I would like to recognize the graduates: Lieu Chau, Jason Dobson, Samir Gandulla, Jamie Glenn, Melissa Jaquez, Ryan Novack, Jordan Topi, William Torres, Iram Tariq and Jovon Turner.

The John S. Laws Institute was created over a decade ago in 1989 to aid talented low-income and culturally diverse students in the Worcester Public School System. The John S. Laws Institute is a four-year after school program designed to give students the tools they need to complete high school and succeed in college. As part of the program students take part in internships, leadership training, community service and other skill and character building activities. Students who graduate from the institute are eligible for full scholarships from the Colleges of the Worcester Consortium. Ninety-eight percent of graduates from the John S. Laws Institute are accepted into college.

Mr. Speaker, I commend these young adults for taking an active role in improving their education and I wish them the best of luck in their future endeavors.

GEORGE NAPOLITANO NAMED “MAN OF THE YEAR”

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to George Napolitano, who will be honored as “Man of the Year” at the Holy Name Society Immaculate Conception Parish 10th Annual Dinner Dance. Mr. Napolitano is one of the nicest people I have ever worked with. His understated manner and sincerity make him enormously well-liked in the community.

George Napolitano was born and raised in the Little Italy section of New York City. He attended St. Patrick’s Old Cathedral School and All Hallows High School before attending St. John’s University.

Following his study at St. John’s, Mr. Napolitano began his career in the financial sector. In 1960, however, he left the career he had begun on Wall Street to serve his country in the military. Stationed in Ft. Rucker, Alabama he was placed in charge of the Officers Payroll Department. He coached the base’s Little League team to a State Championship. Mr. Napolitano was granted an honorable discharge as Sergeant and completed an additional four years reserve training.

After his service, Mr. Napolitano returned to his career in the private sector working again in the financial district before beginning his career in real estate and insurance. Shortly thereafter he also began his career in politics.

He worked as a legislative aide to Assemblyman Denis J. Butler for ten years. He currently runs my Queen office, and I am proud to have George Napolitano as a member of my staff.

Mr. Napolitano has made a lifelong commitment to community service. He is a member of the Tri-State Italian American Congress, a charter member of the Sons of Italy in Manhattan and a charter member of the Knights of Columbus where he was instrumental in coordinating the Youth Program. He is Treasurer of the Powhatan Democratic Club and Chairman of the Parents’ Association of St. Vincent Ferrer High School. For his work as a Lector and Eucharist Minister and his commitment to the Holy Name Society he has been honored by the Brooklyn Diocesan Union. During his tenure as President of the Holy Name Society, the organization experienced unprecedented growth. Furthermore, he has co-chaired all ten Holy Name Society dinner dances which have raised funds for grants for graduating students. His hard work and selfless dedication has made a difference in the lives of many young people and community members.

Along with his many other commitments, Mr. Napolitano also operates his own real estate and insurance business in Queens, New York, where he lives with his wife, Carol, and their two daughters, Deana and Denise. He also has another daughter, Catherine, a son, Robert, and three lovely grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, for his many accomplishments and contributions I ask that my colleagues join me in saluting George Napolitano. He exemplifies the fine American tradition of voluntarism.

HONORING THE GIRL SCOUTS OF AMERICA ON THEIR 90TH ANNIVERSARY AND PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE RECIPIENTS OF THE 2002 GOLD AWARDS

HON. ROSA L. DELAURIO
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Ms. DELAURIO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today to join the Connecticut’s Girl Scouts, and troops nationwide, as they celebrate the 90th anniversary of the Girl Scouts of America and the presentation of the Girl Scouts highest honor, the Gold Award. This tremendous organization has provided a unique and important experience to millions of young women in America and abroad.

1912 a group of eighteen girls assembled and, with a idea well before its socially acceptable time, Juliette Gordon Law called to order the first meeting of what has grown to become one of the most well-known and respected organizations for girls in the world. Today, the Girl Scouts can boast of a membership of just under four million young girls and adults.

The Girl Scouts organization promotes an important message for young women: that all girls should be given the opportunity to develop physically, mentally, and professionally. Girl scouting empowers our young women to realize their full potential while making a contribution to our communities. The variety of activities and programs that they participate in teach them invaluable life lessons—lessons that they will carry with them into their adult and professional lives. Reaching beyond socioeconomic and geographic barriers, the Girl Scouts of America have touched the lives of millions of young women—many some of our nation’s most vulnerable citizens. The self-confidence and determination that all Girl Scouts develop is truly invaluable.

Perhaps the most important idea that these young women take away from their girl scouting experience is the value in serving their communities. Our communities would not be the same without the efforts of those who volunteer their time and energy to its enrichment. I am always amazed at the consistency of the stories I read of our local troops actively involved in reshaping the many towns and cities of my congressional district. Whether volunteering to raise funds for a new playground or mentoring at-risk girls, they have a direct and positive impact on our community—one of which they should all be very proud.

The Gold Award is the highest distinction earned by a Girl Scout and each of those honored today should be proud of their accomplishments. These young women have demonstrated a strong commitment to their communities through the service programs in which they have participated. This recognition reflects their hard work and dedication to the Girl Scouts and to improving the lives of their friends and neighbors.

The Girl Scouts of America have left an indelible mark on our nation as well as across the globe. For 90 years, the Girl Scouts have given our communities an invaluable resource for young girls. I am proud to join today in expressing my sincere congratulations to them on this incredible milestone as well as to all of those who will be honored with the Gold Award.

HONORING SEVEN ACRES JEWISH SENIOR CARE SERVICES

HON. KEN BENTSEN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Seven Acres Jewish Senior Care Services, which celebrated the Sara Feldt Memorial Annual Older American’s Day on May 12, 2002, in recognition of Older American’s Month. This event pays tribute to those in our aging population that play a vital role in our communities. Many expend countless hours on behalf of hospitals, schools and philanthropic organizations.

Seven Acres began in 1943, when a small, determined group of men and women of the Jewish faith purchased a frame house on Branard Street in Houston. Their vision was to create a warm, friendly Jewish environment for fourteen elderly citizens. As the concept and the need grew, there were milestone expansions. In 1954, a new facility, with broader capabilities, was built on Chimney Rock Road, initially serving 31 and eventually accommodating 98 residents. During the 1970s, planning began for a new and innovative facility. In 1998, a major renovation created today’s modern campus and was dedicated to the mission of “Honoring thy Father and thy Mother.” Throughout its history, Seven Acres has promoted a sense of satisfaction with life, so that the humanity, dignity, independence, and strengths of each resident are realized to the fullest.

Older Americans Month presents us with the opportunity to draw attention to the remarkable longevity of our population and to the challenges and opportunities which will accompany population aging in the next millennium. This month highlights the fact that many of us are living longer, fuller, more satisfying lives and that we are growing stronger in the process. Seven Acres prides itself on recognizing that aging can and should be a positive experience, and that we can take charge as we prepare for our own longevity, regardless of our age today.

Mr. Speaker, at a time when America is aging and our parents are growing older, it is imperative that facilities like Seven Acres continue to provide the highest quality of care for our aging community. Our elderly are our foundation and a great source of talent and inspiration. I commend them for their good works and Seven Acres for its great contributions to the Houston community.

BOB STUMP NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

SPEECH OF
HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, May 9, 2002

The House in Committee on the Whole on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 6546) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, and for military construction, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2003, and for other purposes:

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to speak on the Edwards amendment to the DOD Authorization bill, restoring $30 million to a nonproliferation program included in the President’s Budget and designed to provide an alternative to Russian reactors that generate weapons-grade nuclear materials. This amendment was unfortunately ruled not to be in order.

The Defense Authorization Act, as currently proposed, cuts by $30 million this critical national security work. If this $30 million is not restored in full, it would mean at least a one year delay in shutting down these plutonium production reactors, which translates into 1.5 additional tons of weapons grade plutonium that will be produced by Russia, which is equivalent to nearly 200 nuclear weapons.

Mr. Chairman, the dissolution of the Soviet empire ushered in a new post-Cold War period with unclear, mobile, and not easily identifiable threats and a new and very real sense of urgency, instability and insecurity. During the Cold War, the enemy was clear and identifiable. Regrettably, that is not the case today. In addition to the traditional nuclear weapons proliferators such as North Korea, Pakistan, and China, countries such as Libya, Iran, Iraq, and stateless terrorist organizations such as Osama bin Laden’s al-Qaeda, are out there and are actively in search of their next deal on nuclear weapons technology and components. It is this latter type of threat—the unclear, mobile, and not easily identifiable source of threat—that compels us to continue and increase our efforts to secure Russia’s nuclear weapons and materials.

In the past 11 years, while much as been done to dismantle Russia’s and the former Soviet Republics’ nuclear weapons, the dangers persist, and in some cases have increased. In a January 2001 report to the DOE, former Senator Howard Baker and Lloyd Cutler called the proliferation risks created by nuclear materials in the former Soviet Union the “greatest unmet national security need” for the United States.

In a speech at the National Press Club on March 29, 2001, former Senator Sam Nunn addressed the need to continue to build upon existing programs such as the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction program, when he said, “As we enter the second decade of the post-Cold War world...the most significant, clear and present danger to the national security of the United States is the threat posed by nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction. Nothing else comes close. The public perception of the threat is low; the reality of the threat is high. There is a dan-gerous gap between the threat and our response. To close this gap, we must make a fundamental shift in the way we think about nuclear weapons, the spread of weapons of mass destruction, and our national security.

The world has changed, and with it so too have the threats. We cannot afford to cut back on such worthwhile programs. We cannot ignore or minimize these very real threats.

Significant progress has been made thus far through the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction program and various State Department and DOE programs. There is still much work to be done. Efforts to defund or reduce these vital programs are detrimental to our ability to protect Americans against the very real threat from weapons of mass destruction. The President’s request and Congressman EDWARD’S amendment to fund a critical program in Russia was a step in the right direction.

SOLIDARITY WITH ISRAEL

HON. JERRY WELLER
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Res. 392, expressing solidarity with Israel in its fight against terrorism.

The United States Congress must stand in solidarity with Israel, a front-line state in the war against terrorism, as it takes necessary steps to provide security to its people. The United States and Israel are engaged in a common battle against terrorist groups who threaten our countries. Israel must fight against terror just as the United States must fight and destroy al-Qaeda and other terrorist groups.

At a time when much of the world turns its back on Palestinian terrorism and condemns Israel for exercising its right of self defense, the U.S. Congress must stand in solidarity with Israel. The ongoing wave of terror threatens the survival of Israel as a free, democratic and civilized society, and risks engulfing the entire Middle East in chaos and war. Israel also needs additional resources to meet these new threats, it must be able to protect its people from the threat of weapons of mass destruction.

H. Res. 392 reaffirms our support for Israel’s right to defend itself; supports additional U.S. assistance to help Israel defend itself; acknowledges Israel’s role as a front-line state in the war against terrorism; condemns the campaign of suicide bombings and terror coordinated by Arafat and other Palestinian leaders, and demands that they fulfill their commitments by once and for all dismantling the terrorist infrastructure.

I urge all parties in the region to pursue vigorous efforts to establish a just, lasting, and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.
BOB STUMP NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

SPEECH OF
HON. HOWARD P. “BUCK” MECKO
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, May 9, 2002

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration H.R. 4546 to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, and for military construction, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2003, and for other purposes:

Mr. Meeks. Mr. Chairman, there are three simple reasons why Congress should support H.R. 4546. America is at War. We must accept the fact that terrorist groups like al-Qaeda have one goal and that is to destroy America and our way of life. As such, we must protect ourselves aggressively. More importantly, we must support our President in his efforts to root out the terrorists.

Our troops must continue to receive excellent training, but that alone won’t ensure victory. We have to equip our troops with the most advanced equipment available. This legislation helps to do just that.

The programs funded in the bill are helping to win the war on terrorism. We have funded initiatives that the men and women on the front lines say work.

For example, the bill fully funds Global Hawk—this is something the good people in my district know something about.

I know how important this program is to our national security. But don’t take my word for it. Listen to the people leading the fight in Operation Enduring Freedom: Theatre Commander General Tommy Franks called Global Hawk “invaluable”. Air Component Commander, General Mosley said “I could use a dozen Global Hawks right now.”

While the legislation has funded a number of significant program needs, we also understand that those systems are useless without the brave men and women that operate them. As the son and daughter of the armed services fight for our freedom, we must fight for their families. We can say we value our troops and the sacrifices they make all day long, but those words mean absolutely nothing if not backed by action. After years of neglect, we finally have an administration dedicated to supporting our military and their families.

This administration and this Congress have taken steps to finally give the military the support that they deserve. By including a 4.1 percent pay raise, this legislation shows our troops that we value them and their sacrifices.

Mr. Chairman, I also am pleased that this legislation bears the name of my friend and colleague Bob Stump. It is truly a deserving colleague.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
HON. LYNNE C. WOOLSEY
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday during rollcall No. 131 my voting card did not register my “yea” vote. Instead, I was recorded as “not voting.” I ask that this state-which leads kids to believe that no one cares about them, especially in the system of social rehabilitation services.

YouthBuild honors community. YouthBuild has just experimented unheralded contributions to its community, and the residents are proud of its participants. And it’s one of the many programs. There are 250 something YouthBuilds nationwide, and there is a proposal for more money. We are in the process of doing a HUD grant to get more money for those programs.

I know, from my experiences, that it is unlike any program I have been in, in terms of juvenile offenders, and that is why I speak about this as I do. I know that the system that deals with juvenile offenders is basically a “first-come, first-serve” basis, that you need to be referred to by programs like Spectrum or the Department of Corrections. Now, for kids that would like to intervene on negative pathways, we need to have programs available for kids to want to enroll for themselves, alternative programs, as well. Instead of, like, CSE is a program and Pathways is a program in jail for sexual offenders and drug addicts. There should be a way to intervene, to offer programs for kids that just need positive reinforcement. These programs can’t just possibly apply to everybody’s need area.

But, everybody needs to listen. Problems exist everywhere, and we see them and we try to solve them. Our current juvenile system doesn’t respect individual cases. There are other programs available for kids that just need positive reinforcement. These conditions need to improve. I know it cannot be done in a six-minute segment, a six-year or a 600-year projection. The minute segment, a six-year or a 600-year proposal. I know it cannot be done in a six-year or a 600-year proposal. I know it cannot be done in a six-year or a 600-year proposal. These conditions need to improve. These conditions need to improve. These conditions need to improve.

REGARDING CREDIT CARDS

KELLY GREEN. I would like to begin by asking if the people who plan on attending college would raise their hand. Thank you.

How many of you have a credit card at this time?

Thanks.

Two-thirds of you that raised your hand for going to college will have a credit card while you are there, according to Keeping An Eye on Junior’s College Habits by Terry Savage. The average undergraduate will leave college about $12,000 in credit debt. This is due to the fact that the student’s average balance left on a credit card is $2,200. You most likely won’t just own only one credit card either. The average number is three cards.

As a high school junior with college in my near future, these statistics scare me. Not only am I paying more than double what my parents paid, but I also now have to worry about a bad credit record, luring manageable “first-come, first-serve” basis. That you need to be referred to by programs like Spectrum or the Department of Corrections. but George Bernard Shaw said it long ago: ‘Why? I prefer to see things as they might be, and ask ‘Why not?’ That is what the framers of our constitution had in mind so long ago. Our participation in that process in the 21st Century is essential to ensure that the Constitution continues to withstand the many and varied assaults from those who criticize it, misunderstand it, or challenge it. We can begin participating in small ways such as reading a daily newspaper or weekly newsmagazine. What we will begin to notice is that it will become a habit, and we will start participating in bigger things as writing letters to public officials, investigating the qualifications of political candidates, exercising our right to vote, and attending meetings where important local, regional, and national issues are being discussed and deliberated. So you see, even in little ways, we must take a more active role in the government—that, time travelers, is the real journey!

Our Founding Fathers, in the words of Justice Hugo Black, ‘...dreamed of a country where the mind and spirit of man would be free; where there would be no limits to inquiry; where men would be free to explore new knowledge; and where the greatest truths would be the most deeply rooted beliefs and principles...’

Today, on flight U.S. 1-7-8-7, we have traveled back in time to the formation of The Constitution of the United States. Our itinerary included a basic knowledge and understanding of the constitution; an appeal to engage our constitutional rights responsibly; and finally, a call to participate in our government. Here in the 21st Century, the flight crew tells me that we have been cleared for landing. We have people on hand waiting to assist you in your efforts to continue the good work of our Founding Fathers. Remember that "We the People" is much more than a fantastic journey in to the past, it is a reminder of your responsibility for the future.

TRIBUTE TO JANET C. WOLF
HON. JIM SAXTON OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Janet C. Wolf, who retires on June 1, 2002 after serving as Project Director of the National Park Service’s New Jersey Coastal Heritage Trail Route since its inception in 1988.

A new idea for the National Park Service, instead of using traditional ownership, the Trail supports resource protection and awareness by linking destinations owned and managed by others through a series of interpretive theme trails: Maritime History, Coastal Habitats, Wildlife Migration, Historic Settlements, and Relaxation and Inspiration. Ms. Wolf shepherded this historic project from concept to reality.

New Jersey’s Coastal Heritage Trail includes portions of eight counties and six congressional districts. Almost 70 destinations, welcomed by 120 local Information Centers have been designated to date, with two additional themes under development. Janet’s experience, determination and creativity enabled the partnerships to prosper. She also worked on developments for the Pinelands National Reserve and two Waterways and Scenic Rivers in southern New Jersey.

After 34 years of service with the National Park Service, half of which has been devoted to the New Jersey Coastal Heritage Trail, Janet retires with the gratitude of the community for her commitment to the implementation of one of our state’s most treasured resources, our Coastal Heritage Trail.

TRIBUTE TO MARY KONRAD
HON. MICHAEL BILIRAKIS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mrs. Mary Konrad for her philanthropic deeds to this country and to her community.

Mary was one of the first women in her era to leave home to attend college. While enrolled at University of Illinois, she worked for a local doctor to pay her way through school. When World War II started, Mary decided she would help the war effort by working in a defense plant making bombs. Her work entailed lifting shells several hours a day. She finished college and graduated with a degree in sociology.

Following graduation, Mary moved out west and settled in California, becoming a social worker for the Red Cross. Her successful job ethics and determination earned her the “Red Cross Social Worker of the Year” award. After moving back to Chicago, she continued devoting her time to the Red Cross on weekends. After raising two fine children, she and her husband moved to my district in Clearwater, Florida where she became active in a number of philanthropic ventures. She helped fund and start the program “Children in the D’Zone” for diabetic children at Morton Plant Hospital. She knew first-hand the trials and tribulations of raising a diabetic child and wanted to help others in addition to this venture, she has supported many other programs at Morton Plant Hospital.

At Christmas, Mary helps fund the City of Clearwater’s “Christmas Cheer Program” by providing all of the bicycles, helmets and locks for the needy children in the inner-city core. Supporting the arts and introducing children to the joys of the theater is another way she shows her love for those most vulnerable. Each year, Mary provides several scholarships to gifted students. Her support gives needy students an opportunity to attend performances during the year and summer programs at the Performing Arts Center at Ruth Eckerd Hall. Finally, Mary’s newest love is the Clearwater AHEPA Home for which she and her husband are dedicating a Hellenic Cultural Library.

It is therefore fitting and proper that we honor her today for her long and distinguished record in community service and for her tireless efforts to improve the lives of so many children.

HONORING EMERGENCY MEDICAL PROFESSIONALS
HON. DAVID WU OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. reminded us that “everyone can be great because anyone can serve.”
I am pleased to rise today to honor six heroic and dedicated men and women who responded to this call of greatness. These six individuals have dedicated their lives to helping others in need by working in the emergency medical and ambulance services profession.

Whenever we face a medical emergency, whether it is a family friend or co-worker, the first thing we do is call for an ambulance. According to some estimates, there are almost 960 million ambulance trips made each year in the United States.

And the first people to respond to these emergencies are the millions of emergency medical professionals whose skills and training significantly improve the survival of the patient. As a result of their selfless acts, these courageous and devoted men and women save the lives of thousands of Americans each year. While these professionals do not expect to receive recognition for their work, they deserve our sincere gratitude.

I am fortunate to have met with a number of medics from Oregon and have heard firsthand accounts of their tireless efforts to serve their communities on a daily basis. They are truly America’s health care safety net.

For the past nine years, the American Ambulance Association (AAA) has recognized those emergency, medical and ambulance service professionals who exemplify what is best about their field, and bestow upon them the Stars of Life award. These appropriately designated Stars of Life have been selected by their peers to represent them in Washington, DC as part of pre-National EMS Week activities. The highlight of their visit to our Nation’s capital is an awards banquet where they are presented with this prestigious award. The American Ambulance Association is honoring 113 Stars of Life this year.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that, of these 113 Stars of Life, 6 are from my congressional district in Oregon. They are: Victor Hoffer, Randy Johnson, Dawn Poetter, Candy Schneider, Frank Wallender, and Bill Wildman.

Our Nation is blessed by people like Victor, Dawn, Randy, Candy, Frank, and Bill who made a decision to devote their lives to helping other people and serving their communities.

I am immensely proud of all of their accomplishments. I hope that they are also beaming with pride in what they have achieved. Oregon is privileged to be protected by such devoted and courageous men and women.

Dr. King reminded us that everyone can be America’s most important leader. This year, along with upholding that mission, the race will take on another important function, The 2002 race’s theme, “Running Against Asthma” is particularly important to South Bronx residents where the rate of asthma among children is twice the national average. It is wonderful that Bronx Community College is focusing on this important issue and raising awareness.

The 10K race tradition continues under the stewardship of Dr. Carolyn G. Williams. Dr. Williams has contributed to this race since her inauguration and has not only continued the tradition started by Dr. Brown to promote physical fitness and highlight higher education, but has added the raising of awareness of important community issues.

I can recall both level of energy and community involvement when I ran the Hall of Fame 10K race. The race has attracted well over 400 runners each year and I’m sure this year will see an even larger number of participants. People of all ages and physical ability will be able to take part in the Bronx Community College events on May 11, 2002. Along with the 10K race, there will be a Hall of Fame Excalibur One Mile Boys and Girls Youth Challenge and a 2 Mile Fitness Walk.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing individuals and participants who are making the Bronx Community College’s 24th Annual Hall of Fame 10K run possible.

HONORING HERRMANN SPETZLER, HUMBOLDT COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Spetzler also has provided vision and leadership in the development of collaborations that support the health of rural communities at the local, state and national levels, including the California State Rural Health Association, Community Health Alliance, California Primary Care Association and North Coast Clinics Network.

Mr. Spetzler has earned distinction as President of the Humboldt Child Care Council and founder of the Northern California Rural Round Table for Health Care Providers. He is highly esteemed for his successful efforts to develop high quality facilities to meet community health care needs with a focus on health education, access to care and prevention.

Mr. Spetzler has also served the people of California as Statewide Chair of the Expanded Access to Primary Care Committee. He is a member of the Statewide Primary Care Advisory Group to the State Health Director and a member of the Rural Health Care Forum Advisory Group to the Office of Statewide Health Planning. He is a member of the Advisory Task Force for State Facilities Financing Authority and a Board Member of the California Human Service Organization. Mr. Spetzler is esteemed by his colleagues as a leader and innovator in the field of health care.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate at this time that we recognize Herrmann Spetzler for his vision, leadership and commitment to healthier communities and for his extraordinary record of public service to the people of the North Coast of California.

BBC EXPOSES MILITANT HINDU VHP

HON. DAN BURTON
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the British Broadcasting Company recently ran an expose of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP), a fundamentalist, militant Hindu nationalist organization. The VHP is an organization, which operates under the umbrella of the pro-Fascist Rashtriya Swayamsewak Sangh (RSS). The RSS is the parent organization of the ruling BJP.

The BBC notes that the VHP has promoted Hindu supremacy and has engaged in violent acts against minorities. These acts include the murder of missionary Graham Staines and his two young sons while they slept in their jeep.

The report states that the VHP, which it identifies as “a hardline Hindu outfit”, rarely makes a “distinction between fellow (Muslim) citizens of the present and (Muslim) ‘raiders’ of the past.” It further reports that “the ambition of establishing a resurgent Hinduism by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common ‘Hindu spirit’ is very much central to the VHP.” Moreover, it exposes the VHP’s support for a militant Hindu’s project to build a Hindu temple on the site of the most revered mosque in India, which was destroyed by the BJP.

Since the BJP is also part of the RSS umbrella, it is critical to help ensure the rights of others in India. Tens of thousands of Sikhs and other minorities have been held in illegal custody as political prisoners for many years.
killed by the Indian governments regardless of the political party in power. It is time to stop American aid to India and to support self-determination for all the people of South Asia in the form of a plebiscite on independence so that their rights are not subject to the whims of militant Hindu nationalists.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to place the text of the BBC report into the RECORD at this time.

[The British Broadcasting Co., Mar. 8, 2002]

PROFILE: THE VISHWA HINDU PARISHAD
(By Rajyasi Rao)

The Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) was founded in 1964 by a group of senior leaders from the Hindu organisation, the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS), to give Hindus what they believed would be a clearly defined sense of religious identity and political purpose.

HINDU HARDLINERS HAVE GROWN MORE VOCAL

Its founders felt the need to present Hinduism in a rigorous though simplified form which would be comparable to most other world religions. The superiority of other faiths was believed to stem from their being far less diversified and more uniform than Hinduism.

But the VHP, a hardline Hindu outfit with unmistakably close ties to its parent organisation, the extremist RSS, whose objective to ‘hindulise’ the Indian nation, it shares.

Central to the RSS ideology has been the belief that real national unity and progress will come only when India is ‘purged’ of non-Hindus, when members of other communities subordinate themselves ‘willingly’ to ‘Hindu superiority.’

LINKED GROUPS

The VHP has tended to tone down the rhetoric of Hindu supremacy and even make an occasional distinction between fellow (Muslim) citizens of the present and (Muslim) ‘marauders’ of the past.

But the ambition of establishing a resurgent Hinduism by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common Hinduism by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common religious identity by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common Hindu spirit is very much central to the VHP.

THE TEMPLE PROJECT ENJOYS A LOT OF SUPPORT

This is also something it shares with the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), which currently leads the Indian Government at the Centre.

Earlier known as the Bharatiya Jana Sangh (BJJS), the BJP was established in 1951 as a political wing of the RSS to counter rising political revulsion after the revered independence figure Mahatma Gandhi was assassinated by a former RSS member.

Some commentators say the party came close to obliteration in the 1960s with the Congress led by the charismatic and secular Jawaharlal Nehru. But the ambition of establishing a resurgent Hinduism by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common Hindu spirit is very much central to the VHP.

Following the success of their campaign, senior VHP leaders announced at a religious meeting in 1984 their programme to ‘liberate’ Ayodhya from an ancient mosque to make way for a temple to the Hindu god Ram.

THE TEMPLE CONTROVERSY

Some ‘moderate’ Hindu leaders support the VHP.

Analysts say this announcement heralded a turning point in the history of the Hindu nationalist movement.

The VHP has since then claimed that the site belongs rightfully to Hindus, to those who believe that the mosque stood on the birthplace of the god, Lord Ram. Although the claim does not stand up to substantial archaeological or historical scrutiny, the VHP and BJP are seen to have made possible the creation of a shared Hindu symbol that cuts through most divisions in Hindu society.

IN SUPPORT OF NATIONAL HOSPITAL WEEK

HON. PATSY T. MINK OF HAWAII

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of National Hospital Week, a yearly event that focuses public attention on the numerous contributions hospitals make to our communities.

National Hospital Week began in 1921 when a magazine editor suggested that more information about hospitals might alleviate public fears about “shrouded” medical institutions that used “unusual” equipment and procedures.

This year’s National Hospital Week theme, “Where Miracles Happen Every Day,” recognizes health care workers, volunteers, and other health professionals dedicated to making hospitals open to our communities 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

In my state of Hawaii, the health care workforce was one of the few sectors of the economy that grew in the 1990’s. Due to the dramatic growth in this area, one out of every 15 employed Hawaii residents works in the health care industry. The State of Hawaii has 2.5 physicians per 1,000 residents (compared to 2.1 nationally). Unfortunately, the number of nurses declined during the nineties, and they now shoulder even larger burden as they work to help everyone who must visit our hospitals.

As a result of the hard work by these people, my state has achieved a health status that is the envy of many other states. The State of Hawaii has longer life expectancies, lower physician and nurse shortages. Number one in the nation.

Many women have joined the hardliners’ campaign.

But it didn’t really emerge as a political presence until the early 1980s.

A series of events in that decade including the mass conversions of ‘lower-caste’ Hindus to Islam pushed the BJP’s close affiliate, the VHP, to the forefront.

Historians say the VHP-led Hindu right considered the mass conversions of ‘lower-castes’ or ‘lower-caste’ Hindus to Islam to be an unforgivable insult.

The dalits, for centuries beholden to the Hindu caste system, have long been边缘化达利特（Dalits）and discriminated against. But the ambition of establishing a resurgent Hinduism by inculcating what some historians call a carefully constructed common Hindu spirit is very much central to the VHP.

HON. HONE ROGERS
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the accomplishments of Mrs. Lucile Sugden of Lansing, Michigan, who will be honored on Sunday, June 2, 2002, by South Baptist Church and the Lansing community for her years of service, including 75 years of faithfully serving as a Sunday School teacher.

For 35 years, Mrs. Sugden and her late husband, Dr. Howard Sugden, ministered to the members and community of South Baptist Church in Lansing. During her years of serv- ice, Mrs. Sugden’s witness has inspired and motivated many Christian families.

Even today, Lucile Sugden, who celebrates her 95th birthday on May 31, 2002, continues to teach a weekly Sunday School class at South Baptist. She also leads a weekly Bible study at her apartment complex.

Described by those who know and love her as a true Woman of God, Mrs. Sugden is a role model for staying active in our golden years. She swims regularly in a local pool and even evangelizes those she meets in the hot tub. She has also been seen each summer in recent years zipping around on a jet ski watercraft on Lake Michigan.

Long before her jet ski days, Lucile Sugden became a dedicated Tiger baseball fan. Twice honored at Tiger games in Detroit, she is fiercely loyal and devoted to her Tigers.

Today, we extend our admiration and respect to Lucile Sugden of Lansing, Michigan. Her life truly reflects the direction of II Timothy 2:15 which tells us: “Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.”

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, September 11 showed us the horror of terrorism. But it also showed us the good in human nature. Americans have been incredibly generous with their time and money in response to the terrorist attacks. Numerous charitable organizations were started within hours of the attacks to help the families whose lives were suddenly torn apart. People took it upon themselves to assist with feeding the emergency rescue crew digging through the rubble. And over $1 billion dollars has been raised to assist in these efforts.

...Last fall, we debated proposals to stimulate our economy. ...My legislation is very similar to the proposal that was enacted in H.R. 7 earlier this year. However, unlike the proposal in H.R. 7, my amendment does not put an arbitrarily low cap on the dollar amount that can be deducted. In...stead, it would follow current law for taxpayers who itemize their deductions. Specifically, this means that standard deduction taxpayers can deduct charitable contributions up to 50% of their adjusted gross income.

...On April 15, more than 30 million taxpayers who itemized deductions on their tax returns were able to claim tax deductions for any con...tributions made to their favorite charities. The effect of the deduction was to lower the tax-...payer’s cost of giving one dollar by amounts ranging from 15 cents to almost 40 cents.

...This same benefit should go to the millions of taxpayers who also generously contribute to charities but are not eligible for a charitable deduction because they claimed the standard deduction instead of itemizing deductions on their tax returns.

...I am proud that President Bush endorsed my proposal on April 11. I urge all of my col...leagues to support this very important bill as well. We have the opportunity to enact legislation that will not only encourage charitable giving but will help stimulate our economy as well.

HONORING HENRY A. ROSENBERG

HON. BENJAMIN L. CARDIN OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Henry A. Rosenberg, Jr., industrialist, philanthropist, civic leader, proud American and friend.

Henry Rosenberg, Jr. is a Baltimore native. While college studies, business and travel have taken him out of town, he has always returned to his roots—those of his family and his business. As Chairman of the Board of Crown Central Petroleum Corporation and Rosental, Inc., Mr. Rosenberg has guided his family business. Begun by his grandfather who sold oil from the back of a horse and cart in the streets of Baltimore, Crown Central is today a regional powerhouse operating two refineries and 329 gas stations. But it is not just corporate and financial success that drives Mr. Rosenberg. He comes from a family that believed civic involvement and philanthropy was important as the petroleum business.

His business success led others to rely on Mr. Rosenberg for leadership. Mr. Rosenberg has served on the boards and/or held officer positions on the Greater Baltimore Committee, Signet Banking Corporation, The Pride of Balti-

IN HONOR OF THE CITY OF GLENDALE’S 50TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. DIANA DeGETTE OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Ms. DeGETTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the City of Glendale’s 50th Anniversary. I am indeed gratified to have the privilege of representing this outstanding community in the United States Congress. The City of Glendale was incorporated on May 22, 1952 and will celebrate its 50th anniversary on May 18, 2002.

The City of Glendale has grown from a rest stop and watering hole on the major stagecoach route along the Cherry Creek Trail in the 1800s, and has become a city with a rich tradition of hospitality, vitality and amenities for residents and visitors alike, and has become a true “urban village,” with an ethnically diverse population of 45,272 residents whose heritage is celebrated as part of Glendale’s annual National Night Out festivities; and Glendale has also become a prominent business center, with approximately 12,000 people employed by the more than 300 businesses occupying nearly 2.2 million square feet of office space in this conveniently located community.

The City of Glendale’s 41-member Police Department and 29-member Fire Department safeguard the health and safety of residents, visitors and those employed in the City. Its Public Works Department is responsible for maintaining 35 acres of parks and open space, 6.9 miles of City streets, as well as 25 miles of sidewalk, 1.3 miles of trail, and two bridges spanning Cherry Creek, and operating the City’s water treatment facility.

Glendale also offers a variety of recreational activities in two community recreation centers and in conjunction with the Cherry Creek School Districts. The City offers a Head Start program and kindergarten enrichment program at Glendale’s Agnes Riddle Education Center. The Education Center also houses a Computer Lab where residents of all ages learn the latest computer software in free classes taught in both English and Russian. The City of Glendale, in conjunction with the Cherry Creek School Districts, also offers a after-school tutoring/homework help program at the Glendale Community Center during the school year.

Glendale also has the opportunity to salute Glendale on the occasion of its 50th Anniversary. As a result of the current law, the National Park Service is severely limited in acquiring lands to trade with the DHHL and has not been able to acquire land within Kalaupapa. The DHHL has recently advised that it is not limited to accepting surplus federal property only within the State of Hawaii. As a result, the Governor of Hawaii has been moved to amend PL 96–565, and allow the federal government to finally acquire precious lands within Kalaupapa National Historical Park. I urge my colleagues to support the passage of this bill.

INTRODUCTION OF THE NURSING HOME STAFFING IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2002

HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Nursing Home Staffing Improvement Act of 2002.

In March of this year, HHS provided Congress with the results of a decade-long study on staffing in our nation’s nursing homes. HHS researchers concluded that 90% of nursing homes have staffing levels that are too low to provide adequate care. The researchers also identified specific minimum staffing levels that would substantially improve the quality of care received by nursing home residents.

The Bush Administration has chosen not to implement these much needed minimum staffing levels, even going so far as to limit public distribution of the study. In order to ensure that this important research is not ignored, the Nursing Home Staffing Improvement Act of 2002 would establish the minimum nurse staffing levels identified by HHS researchers. The bill requires that nursing homes comply with HHS-identified staffing levels for registered nurses, licensed nurses, and certified nurse aides. These staffing levels would require that all nursing home residents receive between 4.1 and 4.85 hours of nursing care each day. The bill increases resources to nursing homes to comply with these staffing levels by reinstating the Boren Amendment and increasing the federal Medicaid match to states for payment of health care services by 1.5%

There is an urgent need for this bill right now, as demonstrated by the findings of the HHS study and investigative reports issued by the minority staff of the Government Reform Committee. At the request of House members, the Government Reform Committee minority staff has written over 25 reports on nursing home conditions around the country. These reports have found that large numbers of nursing homes are being cited for violations of federal standards relating to pressure sores, preventable accidents, improper medical care, malnutrition, dehydration, and abuse. These reports also have found a clear relationship between more staffing and better care.

The Bush Administration claims that more research is necessary before we can establish minimum staffing standards. We have already had a decade of research from some of the foremost experts in the field. Now is the time for action.

We in Congress have a responsibility to do all we can to protect our nation’s seniors. They helped us get to where we are, and we must help them when we needed their help. And now it’s our turn—and our obligation—to provide them with the highest quality of care.

ERIE OTTERS WIN THE ONTARIO HOCKEY LEAGUE TITLE

HON. PHIL ENGLISH OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the Erie Otters hockey team for their recent triumph over the Barrie Colts in the Ontario Hockey League Championship Series. On Friday, May 10, Erie center Sean Courtney snapped the series-clinching shot off a Colts defenceman to give the Otters a 2–1 win 14 minutes into the overtime period. The Otters, coached by Dave McQueen, pulled off their first OHL championship by “crushing the Colts” 4 games to 1. Erie’s own league-ending playoff scorer, center Corey Pecker, pulled off the game late in the first period. The game remained tied until Courtney’s clutch game winner in OT. Otters’ captain Brad Boyes was later named the OHL playoffs’ Wayne Gretzky 99 Most Valuable Player.

The Otters arrived in my hometown of Erie in 1996, and have since featured some of the most dynamic young hockey players in the world. The Ontario Hockey League has produced world superstars like Mario Lemieux, Joe Sakic, Ron Francis, Scott Stevens and Patrick Roy. Friday’s win marks the first time that the Otters have won the highly-regarded OHL championship and gives the young Otters an opportunity to battle for the Canadian Hockey League’s Memorial Cup. The Memorial Cup is an 84-year-old “final four” tournament that crowns the year’s best Junior hockey team in North America. The Otters, combining a strong work ethic and spectacular skill, should be a dominant force at the Memorial Cup tournament. The tournament begins May 18th in Guelph, Ontario. I would like to conclude by congratulating Erie’s hockey heroes and wishing them the best of luck in their quest for the Memorial Cup trophy.

HONORING THE MILPITAS ROTARY CLUB FOR 50 YEARS OF EXEMPLARY SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize The Milpitas Rotary Club on its 50th anniversary. For 50 years now, members of the Milpitas Rotary Club have committed themselves to serving the community, the country, and the world.

The Rotary Club is a major force in the community and significantly improves the lives of children and families in Milpitas by sponsoring Interact Clubs at Milpitas and Calaveras Hills High Schools, granting both academic and technical scholarships, holding community events, and sending high school students to a week-long summer youth leadership training camp.

The Milpitas Rotary Club’s tradition of service began with its chartering on June 24, 1952, at a dinner in St. John's Church Hall. Charter officers included President Joseph Gagliardi, Vice President Irving Crabb, Secretary William Barleson, Treasurer Thomas Cardoza, Sergeant-at-Arms Ray Madruga, and Charter Board Members Sal Cracolice, Ben Rotterers, and Smith.

For years, the club held its meetings on Mondays at noon at the Cozy Kitchen on Main Street in Milpitas. In the 1980’s, the Big Yellow House and Calamity Jane’s were the meeting sites, until the Holiday Inn Hotel, now the Crowne Plaza Hotel, became the club’s home. An active member of the Rotary District 5170, which consists of 55 clubs in Alameda, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties, the Milpitas Rotary Club’s former president, Denny Weigberger, served as District governor in 1999-2000.

I am proud to recognize the Milpitas Rotary Club on its 50th anniversary. I am confident this club will continue to improve our community, as well as the country and the world, for years to come.

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, Kazakhstan, the largest country in Central Asia, is a relatively new friend of the United States, but they have become staunch allies with strong economic and political ties to America. They work side by side with us in the war against the terrorists, and their commitment to democracy is part of the fiber of their society.

Kazakhstan has been helpful in many ways during the recent fighting in Afghanistan, and today is looking at this neighbor.
support and encouragement for their efforts to achieve treatments and a cure.

INTRODUCING THE “AMATEUR RADIO EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS CONSISTENCY ACT”

HON. STEVE ISRAEL OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the “Amateur Radio Emergency Communications Consistency Act,” a bill that seeks to ensure the continued viability of a volunteer public safety resource which has been instrumental in providing our nation emergency communications services during times of disaster and crisis. I am pleased that the gentleman from Oregon, Representative WALDEN, and the gentleman from Texas, Representative SESSIONS are co-sponsors of this bipartisan legislation. Radio amateurs, more commonly known as “ham” operators, provide emergency communications when regular channels are disrupted or disabled. These federally licensed operators operate at their own expense in aiding government and private relief agencies. State and local governments, as well as disaster relief agencies, could not possibly afford to replace the services that radio amateurs dependably provide for free. For the hundreds of thousands of amateur radio licensees, there is a growing challenge to their ability to provide these public services.

Developed communities, such as retirement communities and planned unit subdivisions, are an increasingly popular housing option throughout the country that provide a wide range of convenient housing choices. Unfortunately, the governance of these communities has led to inconsistent and at times burdensome regulations on amateur radio operators, making it extremely difficult for these operators to continue providing their valuable services. The legislation I am introducing today will simply ensure consistent application of these regulations.

The Amateur Radio Emergency Communications Consistency Act is based upon a 1985 ruling by the Federal Communications Commission, which stated that homeowners, seeking to install some form of antenna on their own property, must work with state and local land use officials to determine the most appropriate size antenna. Good faith negotiations ensure that amateur radio operator’s technical needs are met, while preserving the aesthetics and interests of a neighborhood. Under current law, the FCC does not commonly known to ensure that every student need is fulfilled and nurtured. In 1987, she implemented the school’s mission statement, and over the past 13 years, she has furthered the relationship between Moreau Catholic and the Brothers of Holy Cross, and strengthened the school’s relationship with its Catholic elementary schools.

During her tenure, the school received maximum accreditation from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges in 1993, 1994, and 2000. In 2000, Patricia Geister implemented the school’s Expected Schoolwide Learning Results.

I am honored to join the colleagues of Patricia Geister in commending her for many years of dedicated service to the Moreau Catholic High School. Her commitment to excellence in education is truly an inspiration to all.

CRYSTAL APPLE AWARD

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct honor to commend seven dedicated teachers from Northwest Indiana who have been voted outstanding educators by their peers for the 2001–2002 school year. These individuals, Joyce Abbott, Laura Marzotto, Danny Chapman, Carole Selund, Patricia Premetz, Ben Geesa and Kay Hammes will be presented with the Crystal Apple Award at a reception sponsored by the Indiana State Teachers Association. This event will take place at the Anchor Restaurant and Steakhouse in Schererville, Indiana, on Wednesday, May 15, 2002.

Joyce Abbott, from the Crown Point Community School Corporation, has taught music for 17 years at Solon Robinson Elementary School. The love and passion that Joyce has for music, both personally and professionally, is demonstrated through her creativity and enthusiasm that she projects, in order to inspire not only the students, but also the teachers at Solon Robinson Elementary School.

Laura Marzotto has only been with the Hanover Community School Corporation for three years, but she is a great addition to Hanover Central High School. When Laura first came to Hanover Central as a teacher in the Business Department, a marketing program was non-existent. Yet, as a result of her efforts, a marketing track has been initiated, a program through which students can take a variety of marketing courses. Additionally, students are able to receive college credit through Ivy Tech State College after successfully completing required proficiency exams.

A professional educator for thirty-six years in the Lake Central School Corporation, Carole Selund is a valuable asset. Carole has taught both Spanish and English to freshmen and sophomores at Lake Central High School. Since Carole is conscientious about having her students meet the standards expected of them, she returned to college to earn a Master’s degree in Reading and created the first curriculum in the Lake Central School Corporation to address individual reading problems in the student population. Carole is very active in the School Corporation. She has co-chaired a number of committees for the Performance Based Accreditation Committee and served on the North Central Accreditation Committee.

Twenty-three years ago, Patricia Premetz was hired to teach honors Geometry at Munster High School. She is described by her peers as an outstanding professional and dedicated teacher. For the past three and one-half years, Patricia has been the Department Chairperson and is now teaching honors PreCalculus. Her enthusiasm and subject matter, as well as her teaching style, has withstood the test of time. Patricia makes learning an enjoyable experience, for she blends her creative spirit and her willingness to experiment with new ideas and techniques to better foment mathematics concepts in the minds of her students. Patricia’s compassion for others is exhibited by her thoughtfulness towards both students and teachers.

Ben Goesa came to the Newton School Corporation 27 years ago, after serving his country in the United States Air Force. Since technology plays a vital role in the world and the economy, Ben was instrumental in starting the first computer education classes at North Newton High School. Ben is known as the computer “guru” throughout the corporation, as he helps to troubleshoot computer problems. His peers know him as a dedicated teacher and he is a continuous source of enthusiasm for his students as well as his co-workers.

Kay Harness is a fine example of the tenets embodied by those who have dedicated their lives to educating America’s youth. Kay hails from the Tri-Creek School Corporation, where she has greeted her students and colleagues with a genuine smile for over 33 years. She has been active in all aspects of the school environment and has given continued support to the Parent Teacher Organization. Kay strives to be approachable and communicates well with administrators, fellow teachers, students, and parents.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my distinguished colleagues to join me in commending these outstanding educators on their receipt of the 2001-2002 Crystal Apple Award. The years of hard work they have put forth in shaping the minds and futures of Northwest Indiana’s young people is a true inspiration to us all.

INTRODUCTION OF THE MEDICARE CHRONIC KIDNEY DISEASE MANAGEMENT ACT

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Medicare Chronic Kidney Disease Management Act. My bill would expand Medicare eligibility for uninsured patients with chronic kidney disease before their condition advances to End-Stage status. The bill would provide access to healthcare and most importantly disease management and End Stage Renal Disease-prevention services (ESRD). It would improve the quality of life for those suffering from kidney disease and could provide real savings for the Medicare program by helping chronic kidney disease patients avoid or delay the costly dialysis treatments and kidney transplants associated with the end stage of the disease.

ESRD patients are the only group eligible for Medicare enrollment due to their medical diagnosis. ESRD is characterized by a permanent loss of kidney function, which results in the need for weekly dialysis treatments to cleanse impurities from the blood. ESRD patients are subject to a 30-month waiting period following diagnosis before Medicare benefits begin, which leads to further deterioration of health prior to being able to access care under Medicare. The decline in health that occurs during this waiting period reinforces the need for disease management interventions to preserve maximum health and delay advancement of the illness. It is known that early diagnosis and treatment of kidney disease can prevent certain future complications including progression to end stage status and development of heart disease, a common outcome of kidney disease. By allowing this vulnerable population to access care during the 2 years prior to qualifying for Medicare due to an End Stage Renal Disease diagnosis, this bill wisely and appropriately addresses a critical unmet health need.

Under the Medicare Chronic Kidney Disease Management Act, uninsured, pre-ESRD chronic kidney disease patients would be eligible for full Medicare coverage and ESRD prevention services. To be eligible, a physician would need to certify a chronic kidney disease patient as likely to need dialysis or a transplant in the next two years under accepted clinical standards. Individuals eligible under the bill would provide access to healthcare and most importantly disease management and ESRD-prevention services provided by this legislation include counseling on treatment options, the viability of a kidney transplant, disease management, and nutrition. These new services would also be available to current Medicare enrollees who become diagnosed with chronic kidney disease.

Today, more than 300,000 people receive dialysis. By 2010, it is expected that 650,000 individuals will be receiving weekly dialysis treatment. In 2001, Medicare spent $14.4 billion to care for ESRD patients, which averages more than $20,000 per member, which far exceeds the average 2001 Medicare expenditure for non-ESRD beneficiaries, $6000. The National Kidney Foundation, who has endorsed this bill, estimates that 20 million...
Americans have kidney disease. Many of these Americans do not know they suffer from this condition and therefore do not take advantage of beneficial prevention measures. In February 2002, the National Kidney Foundation called for earlier screening for kidney disease in reaction to the near doubling of the illness in the U.S. in the last decade. Their screening campaign focuses on those at high risk for developing chronic kidney disease including people with diabetes, high blood pressure, a family history of the disease, older Americans, African Americans, Asian and Pacific Islanders, American Indians, and Hispanics.

Expanded prevention services for chronic kidney disease patients are long overdue. The preventive measures in this bill will minimize the damaging impact of this chronic illness and allow Medicare to slow the growth of the ESRD population. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the Medicare Chronic Kidney Disease Management Act so we can make these vital improvements to the Medicare program for those who suffer from chronic kidney disease.

While continuing to seek a better life for her family, Mary moved her family west to Southern California. She spent time in Los Angeles before moving and settling in the Inland Empire. Mary continued her commitment to civil rights while in the Inland Empire, by participating in the “Gates Must Go” and “Tyja-Mirah Miller” campaigns. She then served as President of the Fontana/Rialto NAACP, where she fought to reinstate the jobs of countless people of color who had been arbitrarily laid off. Mary also spearheaded the establishment of a Police Review Board in Rialto, which helped reduce the number of civilian shootings by Police and led the way for the first Black Police Chief of Rialto.

Mary had a clear political gift, and she later served as President of the Inland Empire Democratic Club. She was not afraid of hard work and contributed greatly in my office by volunteering during my years as a newly elected California Assembly Member.

Mary is survived by her only son, Stephan Collins, four daughters, Karen Collins Lewis, Remelle Lumpkins, Terry Hunter and Carolyn Gullex, 15 grandchildren and 9 great grandchildren.

Mary has left behind a wonderful legacy of social justice and community activism. She will be missed by family and friends alike. Mary touched us all with her kind deeds and leadership in our community. Barbara and I extend our deepest condolences to her family and may God bestow his comfort upon them at this time.

DAM SAFETY AND SECURITY ACT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, MAY 14, 2002

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce legislation that will prevent us from repeating the past. Specifically, the National Dam Safety and Security Act reauthorizes a program that has directly helped the states and protects the citizens of this great country.

Dams provide tremendous benefits including water supply for drinking, irrigation and industrial uses; flood control; hydroelectric power; recreation; and navigation. At the same time, dams also represent one of the greatest risks to public safety, local and regional economies, and the environment. Historically, some of the largest disasters in the U.S. have resulted from dam failures. The 1928 St. Francis Dam failure killed more than 500. During the 1970’s the Buffalo Creek, Teton and Toccoa Creek dam failures collectively cost 175 lives and more than $1 billion in losses.

One dam failure hits a little closer to home for me. On May 31, 1889, the 72-foot high South Fork Dam above Johnstown, Pennsylvania, burst. Twenty million tons of water took its natural course, dropping 480 feet in 14 miles, at times 70 to 75 feet high and reaching speeds of 40 miles per hour. In 40 minutes, three miles of water drained into the valley below.

At 4:07 on the chilly, wet morning the inhabitants heard a low rumble that grew to a roar like thunder. I never saw anything until the 36-foot wall of water, already boiling with huge chunks of debris, rolled over them at 40 miles per hour, consuming everything in its path. Making the wave even more terrifying was the black pall of smoke and steam that hung over—it—the “death mist” remembered by survivors. Almost 113 years ago to the date, more than 2,209 people lost their lives when the dam failed. In their memory, we must not let this happen again.

Unfortunately, even today many dams are not maintained properly. Dams require ongoing maintenance, monitoring, frequent safety inspections, and rehabilitation. More than 90 percent of the nation’s approximately 100,000 dams are regulated by the states. Further, many dam owners, including most private dam owners who own over half of all dams, lack the resources necessary to perform dam maintenance or to make significant repairs.

In the past two years more than 520 dam incidents, including 61 dam failures, were reported to the National Performance of Dams Program. As a matter of fact, the number of high-hazard potential dams whose failure would cause loss of human life is increasing, due to development of downstream land.

Today there are 9,921 high-hazard potential dams. Even more alarming, states presently report approximately 2,100 “unsafe” dams, which have deficiencies that leave them highly susceptible to failure.

The combined effect of rapid downstream development and aging or noncompliant structures, coupled with a predicted increase in extreme events, demands fully funded and staffed State dam safety programs as well as substantial and proactive funding for dam repairs.

In an effort to ensure dam safety, Congress passed the National Dam Safety Program in 1996. Under this program, State dam safety agencies have received grants totaling $7 million to assist them with improving dam safety regulatory programs by procuring equipment, implementing new technology, and enabling more frequent inspections. The program also provided opportunities for continuing education to dam safety engineers and funding for research to advance the technology of investigations, construction and rehabilitation of dams.

I am pleased to report that this program was successful and deserves to be continued. It is important to note that this model program sent the money directly to the States—where it was used, to educate, inform and help protect the people.

My State of Pennsylvania has been at the forefront of the nation’s dam safety efforts over the last two decades and our program has been cited as a role model for other States in developing new and expanded programs. Of the three thousand two hundred dams in Pennsylvania, ninety hundred and fifty are now classified as high-hazard potential structures, meaning their failure could cause loss of life or substantial damage to properties. This determination helps our State dam officials identify which dams deserve regular inspection and those that require more frequent inspection. In conversations with the Pennsylvania State dam officials, they confirmed that they couldn’t have done it without the National Dam Safety Program.

My bill reauthorizes this successful National Dam Safety and Security Act by updating and fine-tuning the underlying language and providing a modest boost to the funding for research and development. Importantly, my legislation will provide States the technical assistance necessary to maintain security for the nation’s dams.

Specifically, the program will:

- Ensure new and existing dams are safe through the development of technologically and economically feasible programs and procedures for national dam safety hazard reduction;
- Encourage acceptable engineering policies and procedures to be used for dam site investigations, design, construction, operation and maintenance, and emergency preparedness;
- Encourage the establishment and implementation of effective dam safety programs in each State based on State standards;
- Develop and encourage public awareness projects to increase public acceptance and support of State dam safety programs;
- Develop technical assistance materials for Federal and non-Federal dam safety programs;
- Develop mechanisms with which to provide Federal technical assistance for dam safety to the non-Federal sector; and
- Develop technical assistance and encourage appropriate security for the nation’s dams.

I want to point out that this program is truly a State-based program—because that is where the money goes and is used. The money in this program is not swallowed up in some nameless and faceless bureaucracy here in Washington, the money goes directly to the States.

It is also important to note that this program does not provide funds for constructing or fixing dams due to the cost of such activities. These funds are to identify and educate the public and dam owners about dam safety and conduct necessary research to ensure dams are as safe as possible.

For less than $10 million, this program authorizes:

- Provides $6,000,000 per year 2003–2006 National Dam Safety Program;
- Provides $500,000 per year for National Dam Inventory;
- Provides $500,000 per year for Dam Safety Training;
- Provides $1,500,000 per year for research; and
- Provides $600,000 per year for staff.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind everyone how important dams are to this country. Dams provide hydroelectric power to almost every State in the union, habitats for fish, birds, and other animals, recreational activities from bird watching to water sports, flood control and are a source of water. Maybe because of the positive impacts of dams more and more people are building downstream from dams. This is not dangerous, as long as the dams are monitored and maintained.

For these reasons, and in memory of the lives lost one hundred and thirteen years ago in Johnstown, I ask that the House favorably consider this legislation.

NATIONAL HOSPITAL WEEK

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 2002

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the “National Hospital Week” (NHW). This year, the theme is “Where Miracles Happen Every Day”. That theme portrays the uniqueness and necessity of the field of healthcare. This period of time will recognize and honor health care professionals, volunteers, and other health professionals for their continued dedication to healing our communities. The Celebration of National Hospital Week began in 1921. A magazine editor developed an idea to place more information about hospitals in communities to help erase public fears and uncertainties about healthcare at that time. Since NHW’s origin, it has developed into the nation’s largest health care event.

This prestigious event is sponsored by the American Hospital Association (AHA). The AHA has been in existence since 1899. It started as an association of Hospital superintendents with a mission to facilitate discussion among hospital administrators. Overtime, its members and mission has developed into a membership which embodies all health care workers and a mission that stresses leadership in public policy, representation and advocacy, and services. Today, the AHA focuses on enhancement of health status, health promotion, ongoing care and rehabilitation of patients, education, research, and that all these activities are conducted with an overriding concern for the values and dignity of patients.

As I stated earlier, I am an advocate of this celebration. This week will help us to focus on universal health coverage by allowing health care workers across our nation to share ideas and thoughts on the coverage issue and others. In a time of state budget cuts and medicaid cuts, this week will display the need for adequate funding of the health care system. In the past year in Illinois, hospitals grappled with medicaid funding cuts of $340 million. Nursing homes in Illinois dealt with medicaid funding cuts of $170 million.

Additionally, this week will help us attack the issue of health care access as grassroots discussions take place and solutions are developed from individuals at the forefront of health care.

In the 7th Congressional District, there are twenty-five community health centers, twenty-three hospitals, three veteran hospitals, and four medical schools. These institutions help sustain my district. I urge my colleagues and constituents to join me in this celebration which is vital to the health of our Nation.
