Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, it was appalling yesterday to have the administration finally come forward with its plan for Amtrak. It is appalling that when the administration finally comes forward with its plan for Amtrak, it is basically to remember the system, arguing somehow that Amtrak should be self-supporting.

When this Congress and administration gave $3 billion to the airline industry, on top of the $11 billion for air traffic control, for an industry that has never shown a profit over its 75 years is a little bit disingenuous, to say the least.

Amtrak plays a critical role in our transportation system. To disappear it now, to privatize a few profitable lines and then walk away from our commitment when we have never, never provided the money that was authorized originally, would be a sad day.

Mr. Speaker, I yield.

An amendment to the motion to recommit, offered by Mr. SIMPSON, was agreed to by the Yeas—45

Not Voting—70

So the Journal was approved. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempero (Mr. SIMPSON). Will the gentleman from Florida (Mr. JEFF MILLER) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempero. The Chair will entertain 15 minutes per side.

COVETED TROPHY GOES TO REPUBLICANS AFTER 41ST ANNUAL ROLL CALL BASEBALL GAME, AND CHARITY IS THE BIG WINNER

(Mr. OXLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to hold the coveted Roll Call trophy for the victory last night at Bowie Baysox Stadium, where I want to thank our good friend, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the host of the evening, for a wonderful time, the 41st Annual Roll Call Baseball Game between the Republicans and the Democrats for charity.

The big winner last night really was charity. We raised over $90,000 for the Boys and Girls Clubs and for the Literacy Council. It was a well-played game.

I want to thank my cohort on the other side of the diamond, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. WATT), the pitcher for the Democrats, a consistent player, and all of the Republican team for a great victory.

Our MVP last night was the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SHIMKUS). He was extraordinary. I took him from behind the plate and put him on the mound. Nobody thought we could win after STEVE LARGENT left; but the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO), for once again being a great sportsman, and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT), the pitcher for the Democrats, a consistent player, and all of the Republican team for a great victory.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. SABO), for once again being a great sportsman, and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT), the pitcher for the Democrats, a consistent player, and all of the Republican team for a great victory.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, let me simply congratulate the manager and the Republicans on a well-played game... They played incredibly well. Their defense was good, and they hit the ball hard. We will be back next year, but congratulations for this year.

Mr. OXLEY. I thank my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota.

THE ADMINISTRATION’S APPALLING PLAN TO DISMEMBER AMTRAK

(Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, it was appalling yesterday to have the administration finally come forward with its plan for Amtrak. It is appalling that when the administration finally comes forward with its plan for Amtrak, it is basically to remember the system, arguing somehow that Amtrak should be self-supporting.

When this Congress and administration gave $3 billion to the airline industry, on top of the $11 billion for air traffic control, for an industry that has never shown a profit over its 75 years is a little bit disingenuous, to say the least.

Mr. Speaker, I yield.

INTRODUCTION OF H.R. 971, SUPPORT OF AMERICAN EAGLE SILVER BULLION PRODUCTION ACT

Mr. OTTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, joined by my colleagues, the gentleman from Idaho, (Mr. SIMPSON) and the gentleman from Nevada, (Mr. Gibbons), I introduced the Support of the American Silver Bullion Production Act. This bill will allow the U.S. Mint to continue its production of the American eagle silver dollar, the most popular silver coin in the world.

The Sunshine Mint Company in my district produces the blanks for these coins, and employs over 60 of my constituents. Idaho is the greatest silver producer in history, mining more than 1.1 billion ounces since 1884.

Passage of this bill into law will allow us, number one, to meet the worldwide demand for bullion; number two, to continue to build on the $256 million that this program has contributed to the deficit reduction; and, finally, to preserve the connection between Idaho’s Silver Valley and our Nation’s coinage.

PEACE CORPS CHARTER OF THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

(Mr. FARR of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, I would first of all like to welcome to the United States Capitol all the returned Peace Corps volunteers who have served this country overseas. Now, over 165,000 Americans have served in over 130 countries throughout the world, and they have come here to our Nation’s capital to celebrate the anniversary of the Peace Corps, which is 40 + 1 years old. We were going to have the 40th anniversary celebration last year, but 9-11 held it off to this year, so it is 40 plus one.

I had the honor yesterday of introducing a bill about the Peace Corps, H.R. 4979. It authorizes appropriations for the Peace Corps to double the number of volunteers in five years; it restates the independence of the Peace Corps; it reports to Congress on new initiatives and security for Peace Corps volunteers; it makes a commitment to recruit and place Peace Corps volunteers in countries where they could help promote mutual understanding, particularly in areas with substantial Muslim populations; it develops training programs for Peace Corps volunteers in areas of education and prevention of AIDS; it streamlines and empowers the Peace Corps Advisory Council and creates a fund to promote the work of returned Peace Corps volunteers; it increases the goals of the Peace Corps and in facilitating the world-wide support of peace.

I ask Members of Congress who are interested in this to cosponsor this great piece of legislation.

SUPPORTING LEGISLATION TO EXPAND THE SILVER MARKET

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for legislation to expand the silver market, which is being introduced by my good friends, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON) and the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER).

I am a proud cosponsor of this bill, which calls for the extending of production of the popular American eagle silver bullion coins. These coins were first minted in 1986 from a stockpile of silver held over since the Second World War. They became an instantly popular coin, and now the stockpile has almost run out. This bill will allow the U.S. Mint to buy silver on the open market, to continue the production of these patriotic coins. It also encourages the purchase of domestically mined silver, providing a great new market for silver mines, especially those in Nevada, the Silver State.

I thank my colleagues, the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. OTTER) and the gentleman from Idaho (Mr. SIMPSON), for their leadership on this bill, and encourage all of my colleagues to support this patriotic coin program.

LET US NOT FORGET OUR SENIORS AND THEIR PRESCRIPTION DRUG NEEDS

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, as we celebrate this weekend to go home to our districts, we are still burdened by the inertia of this Congress in dealing with a very serious issue, and that is, of course, the needs of the greatest generation, our grandparents and our parents.

We have, in the last 4 years, promised these hardworking Americans a Medicare prescription drug benefit. I wish we could do this in a bipartisan way, Mr. Speaker. I wish we could put forward a bill that really did respond to the needs of our senior citizens so they would not have to make the choices of paying rent and buying food or eliminating their prescription drugs.

The Democrats have a proposal that is clear: a $25 premium; the ability to assist those who cannot afford to pay for their prescription drugs; and a prescription drug policy that applies to all of their medical providers, so that two individuals who are a couple, who have worked and contributed to this Nation, will not suffer anymore.

It seems to me a crisis and a shame that we have a Republican bill that does nothing but play to the pharmaceutical industry. Let us work together for the Greatest Generation, to help our parents to live a good quality of life.

HONORING THE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE HAMPTON COUNTY WATERMELON FESTIVAL

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow marks the 6th anniversary of the Hampton County Watermelon Festival Parade. This parade will begin at 10 a.m. in Varville, and I am honored to be participating once again in this annual event.

The theme for this year’s festival is “Patriotism, the Spirit of America.” Last year, according to the South Carolina State Troopers, approximately 50,000 spectators attended the festival.

Mr. Speaker, this annual watermelon festival parade honors the dedication and sacrifices made by our farmers throughout South Carolina, who work so hard to feed so many Americans. Our farmers support rural economies and continue a tradition that has existed for centuries in America.

I would like to commend the efforts of this year’s festival chairman, Hugh Gray; and vice-chairman, Susan Hatcher, along with parade chairman Rodger Roberts and Otis Harrison; Mrs. Mary Ellen Bowers, the Estill congressional district office director; as well as the efforts of the South Carolina Farm Bureau and Ag First Farm Credit Bank in helping to feed America and make our country strong.

MORE GOODS IN STORES TO BE MADE IN AMERICA

(Mr. BALLenger asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLenger of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, on 9-11 I stood here and made a speech about the overvalued dollar and its bad effect on our trade, especially the textile industry. They came the vicious attack. Since that time, the President and the House leadership have promised to aid our beleaguered industry and have delivered on those promises. But in the long run, the weakening dollar will provide immediate aid in our ability to compete, to compete in the world market in textiles and steel and other important sectors of our economy. Our retail prices will increase; but now, more goods in the stores will be made in America.

NEXT WEEK’S INADEQUATE REPUBLICAN PRESCRIPTION DRUG BENEFIT PLAN FOR SENIORS

(Mr. McDermott asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McDermott. Mr. Speaker, next week is going to be a very interesting week. Probably the major issue that faces this Congress, that is, what do we do about prescription drugs for senior citizens, will be dealt with.

The Republicans have put a bill out here which is absolutely inadequate. Everybody knows it. The newspapers have reported that. It is clear to anybody who has looked at the data. Yet when the Democrats put something forward, they say that ours costs too much.

Now, some of us, many of us, said back in March when we passed $1.7 trillion worth of tax cuts that the day is going to come when we are not going to have the money to do this right. So now we have a bill which is going to come out here. It will pass. No one here has any doubt about that, because we know we have to have the press release: House Republicans Deal With Drug Problems for Seniors, or something like that.

But the fact is that the bill will not do what is necessary. It is a real shame that Members would rather cut taxes than take care of their mothers and fathers.
DEMOCRAT PRESCRIPTION DRUG PLAN TAKES CARE OF SENIORS' NEEDS, UNLIKE REPUBLICAN PLAN

(Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the committee has completed their markup on the prescription drug benefit last night, and what we are now confronted with is having to pass legislation that may or may not provide prescription drug benefits to the elderly of this country. It does not serve the interests of the plan that is made out of Swiss cheese is far different from the Republican guaranteed, and will be paid for. That of their lives will be there, will be of their illnesses in the twilight years need or their families need to take care were guaranteed, the drugs Members were asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, my comments are very brief, and it is about we need. We need to remember our seniors. We need to remember who they are, where they came from. We need to remember the kinds of work they have done in order to attain the age that they have.

My mother needs prescription drugs, and I think that what we have to look at, we need to look at everybody's prescription capsule, the container, and on the container is a label that says expiration date. We need to have a good prescription drug to address all the seniors of this country so that we do not need to worry about them, that they do not need to worry about whether prescription drugs are going to be too expensive or not. We need to take care of business, and we need to do it soon.

OIL IS CRITICAL ENERGY SOURCE

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, oil is a critical energy source for both the United States and the world, and for us it is a very uncertain energy future because there are only about 1,000 gigabarrels of known reserve of oil in the world. Certainly we will find more oil, and maybe the additional oil we find will be enough to take care of the additional demands for oil.

If we take this 1,000 gigabarrels of oil and divide it by the 80 million barrels of oil that the world burns, uses each day, this comes out to roughly 40 years. This is certainly not forever. Of this 80 million barrels that are used each day, the United States uses 20. That is about 25 percent of the total oil used in the world is used in the United States.

We have some reserves. They are off the Florida coast. They are under Lake Michigan, and they are in ANWR. Should we drill those? There are two arguments. One is that we need it. The other is we may need it more in the future. We have to determine when it would serve our interests best, to use it now or to wait for a rainier day, which will surely come.

MODERNIZE MEDICARE

(Mr. KIRK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, we need to modernize Medicare with a prescription drug benefit, and both parties agree. The difference is this: Our plan fits within the budget. It covers needy seniors and prevents a senior from losing their home due to high drug costs. Most importantly, it provides an immediate discount now on drug prices, not 2 years from now, as the minority plan offers.

The minority plan spends $1 trillion. In the middle of a war and an economic downturn, can seniors depend on that $1 trillion check from bouncing? Seniors count on the promises we make. They cannot count on a $1 trillion check that actually back out.

Our plan is affordable. It is a promise we can keep. It is a promise that seniors can count on.
PROVIDING PRESCRIPTION DRUG BENEFIT OUR SENIORS NEED

(Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, we come here each week to do the people’s business, and we come hoping that we will do those things that are important to the American people. One of those groups of people are our seniors. They are waiting, Mr. Speaker. They are waiting to see just what we are going to do in terms of prescription drug subsidies for our seniors. Many seniors are without prescription drugs, and yet we have sat, we have belabored this issue, and we have come to no conclusion.

I think if my colleagues look at the Democratic proposal, we will find the vast difference of the two between the Democrats and the Republicans. The Democrats are asking for a sound prescription drug proposal. The Republicans are not.

Mr. Speaker, it is high time for this body to do something for those who have done so much for our country, and those are the seniors. They are continuing to wait. They can wait no longer for us to do the business of this House, and that is providing the type of prescription drug benefit that our seniors need.

I yield back my time.

FARM POLICY

(Ms. SMITH of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to my colleagues’ attention to a meeting I had yesterday with Senator GRASSLEY. We talked about the fact that there is no limitation on payments in the farm bill. We talked about the danger and the inappropriate farm policy, the inappropriate public policy for this Congress to give most of the farm support benefits to a very small percentage of the farmers. We are now, because there is no real limit on those price subsidy payments, giving millions of dollars of payments to the very biggest farmers.

I think it is going to be bad for farmers in the long run, and what we are doing is we are giving larger advantage to those great superfarms at the sacrifice of the traditional family farms. Work with us as we look for ways in the appropriation bills or elsewhere to have some kind of limit on farm payments so that we bring back and support what should be in farm policy, and that is supporting the traditional family farm.

CONGRATULATING SOUTH FLORIDA REGIONAL CLEFT LIP AND PALATE CLINIC

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the South Florida Regional Cleft Lip and Palate Clinic at the University of Miami for its outstanding dedication in the treatment of those suffering from craniofacial malformations. I would like to especially recognize Dr. Seth Thaller, Dr. Magdalena Plewinska and Mrs. Maria Santiago, whose selfless devotion has made this clinic successful.

This clinic is the largest in South Florida, and it utilizes the expertise of community and university doctors, surgeons and dentists who graciously volunteer their time to treat their patients.

This outstanding treatment center is initiating a program entitled Adopt a Smile, which will allow corporate and private donors to identify patients and follow their treatment over the years.

The treatment of facial anomalies at the Cleft Lip and Palate Clinic at the University of Miami has improved the lives of those fortunate I congratulate all who are involved in it.

ARAFAT MUST GO

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, 31 innocent Israeli men, women, and children have been brutally murdered by Palestinian terrorists in the past 3 days, most recently a mother and her three children last night in their own home.

Yesterday, many of us felt the pain personally when we learned that Michal Franklin, age 21, the niece of Israeli’s Ambassador to South Africa, Tova Herzl, was one of the murdered on Wednesday in Jerusalem. My colleagues may recall that Ambassador Herzl served as congressional liaison here in Washington just a few years ago. We extend to Tova and her family our deepest condolences and condemn the barbaric and cowardly act.

Permit me to read yesterday’s Washington Post editorial, which states: “It is easy to understand why many Israelis would support the latest military campaign. There have now been at least 739 Israeli bombings in 20 months that have killed some 247 civilians and wounded thousands more as they rode buses, shopped, sat in cafes, danced in clubs, or celebrated religious holidays. No democratic country could be expected to tolerate such a sustained campaign of murder.”

Mr. Speaker, that Washington Post editorial succinctly sums up the critical Middle East situation, underscores why Mr. Yasser Arafat must go, and why President Bush must make the right decision at this time announce American support for any provisional Palestinian state.

RETIREMENT SAVINGS SECURITY ACT OF 2002

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 451, and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. Res. 451

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 4931) to provide that the pension and individual retirement arrangement provisions of the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 shall be permanent. The bill shall be considered as read for amendment. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on any time consumed to final passage without intervening motion except: (1) One hour of debate on the bill equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means; (2) the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution, if offered by Representative Matsui of California or his designee, which shall be in order without intervention of any point of order, shall be considered as read, and shall be separately debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent; and (3) one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by the purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purposes of debating the resolution, all time consumed.

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 451 is a modified closed rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 4931, the Retirement Savings Security Act of 2002, a bill that makes permanent the pension and IRA enhancements contained within President Bush’s 2001 tax relief program, the Economic Growth and Tax Reconciliation Act.

H. Res. 451 provides for 1 hour of debate in the House, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means. It also provides for consideration of the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Committee on Rules report accompanying this resolution. If offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSU) or his designee, which shall be considered as read and shall be separately debatable for 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.

H. Res. 451 waives all points of order against the amendment printed in the report and provides one motion to recommit, with or without instructions, to the Committee on Ways and Means, which will allow the House to work its will on the underlying bill, H.R. 4931. This legislation helps to provide for a new national strategy to promote more retirement security by providing a supplement to Social Security by enhancing employer-provided and non-working companies and individuals incentives to save more money for their retirement.
The underlying bill increases 401(k) contribution limits and IRA contribution limits and provides for enhanced flexibility by allowing employees to roll their pension savings from a prior employer to a new employer. These are just a few of the noteworthy benefits available to individuals looking to provide themselves with a more secure retirement.

H.R. 4931 also waives certain IRS user fees and enhances catch-up provisions to allow workers of any age to enter and leave the workforce when they have children or care for their families.

I urge my colleagues to approve this rule so that the full House can proceed to adopt H.R. 4931 in order to ensure that we encourage investment in the market and continue to encourage older and younger workers to prepare for retirement.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. (Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) for yielding me the customary 30 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, our constituents are reeling from the daily headlines that highlight the corporate impositions. Companies like Enron, Tyco International and Adelphia Communications, the owners of Wall Street 401(k) managers, are now threatening the retirement security of thousands of Americans. I know of which I speak.

Global Crossing’s North American headquarters were located in my district of Rochester, New York. I am sure my colleagues know Global Crossing. This is the company that plummeted from a net worth of $22 billion to just $750 million in a span of less than a year. One of its collapse, the lives of thousands in my district were shattered, all because promised safeguards failed at every level. My constituents got a hard lesson in how companies cheat, overstate or obscure their financial disclosures in an effort to charm analysts and manipulate investor expectations.

Many of our constituents were also stunned to learn the top executives from a large portion of these failing companies walked away with millions, while the pensioners and employees were left penniless. On March 9, I hosted a public forum in Rochester where 250 people came to share their experiences on Global Crossing. One of these constituents noted, “Many former employees have been economically devastated as a result of corporate greed and mismanagement of Global Crossing. People have spent their life savings and have had to cash in their deferred retirement 401(k) plans. Some former employees are now forced to file bankruptcy themselves while others may lose their homes and have had to drastically change their lifestyles and are barely surviving.

Since the collapse of Global Crossing, I have met with representatives of current and former Global Crossing and Frontier employees are not forgotten in the bankruptcy proceedings. Indeed, I have asked the court to order expedited lump-sum payments to these employees and to give employee stockholders priority status during the proceedings.

But, Mr. Speaker, fundamental reform is required. We have an opportunity today to tackle some of the most egregious outcomes of these bankruptcies. It is unconscionable that executives can walk away from failing companies where pension plans are depleted. Congress should tackle the double standard that exists between workers and their executives. The so-called golden parachutes are a slap in the face to the working men and women of this country.

If we are serious about enhancing pension participation, we must have confidence that Congress is doing all it can to protect them against corporate corruption. The substitute before us is an important step.

For starters, it would put a halt to executives receiving large severance packages while shareholders are left holding worthless stock. The substitute would extend the golden parachute excise tax to severances and retirement benefits when there is a large reduction in the employer’s stock or when the corporation goes into bankruptcy.

Moreover, the substitute would eliminate the ability of corporations to provide performance-based tax double deductions. If performance includes cost savings from raiding pension plans. Corporate executives should only receive tax deductible bonuses for real improvement of business operations, not fictitious improvements. And corporate executives should not be rewarded for cutting employees’ pension benefits through conversion of the pension plan to a less costly plan.

Finally, when a corporation incorporates overseas to avoid United States taxes, the ordinary shareholders are required to pay capital gains tax on the exchange of their old stock for their new stock. But guess what? Corporate executives are not required to recognize gain on their stock options. The substitute would require executives to pay taxes on their stock options when the corporation moves overseas just as share shareholders are required to do.

Mr. Speaker, much is at stake here. The stability of our financial markets and our economic health remains a perception of widespread corruption. This instability is hitting shareholders hardest, many of whom are middle-class workers whose only investment in the stock market is their 401(k).

Congress must once again take the lead. Since the 1970s, Congress has been an important proponent for expanded savings participation. The enactment of tax incentives to save, together with the establishment of new investment vehicles, such as the Roth Individual Retirement Account, has significantly enhanced the level of pension participation among a larger cross-section of the American workforce. But these interests have been shattered in a heartbeat if we do not take the serious and justifiable fears of our Nation’s workers into account.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mr. MATSUI).

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) for yielding me this time.

I am frankly kind of perplexed today. We come into session now, and we are taking up one bill, and that bill is to extend the Portman-Cardin pension legislation. Here we had Secretary Paul O’Neill, just 2 days ago, say that on June 28 of this year, next week, the Federal Government will reach the debt crisis. Because what is going to happen is we are going to meet the debt ceiling, and we are not going to be able to pay Social Security checks or veterans checks or meet our obligations.

At a time when most Americans are saying, what is the status of our Social Security benefit, because the President went out and scared everybody by wanting to privatize Social Security, we should be bringing up the Republican proposals to privatize Social Security so we can at least find out before November where Members stand and what their values are when it comes to income security for senior citizens.

We should bring a prescription drug bill that really does benefit senior citizens instead of the bill that passed at 2 a.m. in the Committee on Ways and Means Tuesday night and is still being worked upon in the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

But, instead, we are taking up a pension bill. A pension bill. What is ironic about this pension bill is that whatever we do today will not take effect until the year 2011, 9 years from now. It is 2001, and whenever this bill will take effect, 9 years from now. So we are not dealing with Social Security, we are not dealing with prescription drugs, we are not dealing with the debt crisis that we are going to see on June 28 that Secretary O’Neill has talked about.

We are also not dealing with another more fundamental issue as well. In Business Week of June of this year it has a front page story, and Business Week is not a liberal magazine, and it says, “Special Report: Restoring Trust in Corporate America.” This week’s Business Week, again not a liberal manager: “The Crisis in Corporate tax breaks for the wealthy, extend and expand the tax credit to help lower income savers and to repeal Portman-Cardin provisions that some firms are using to reduce benefits for middle-class and lower-income workers.

"In any event, it is certainly premature for Congress to take up the Portman-Cardin and make them permanent, just one year after their enactment and 9 years before" we need to.

I find it to be absolutely inexplicable that the greatest legislative body in the history of the United States would be spending time when we have a crisis on the debt, when we have a crisis in Medicare and Social Security, to be talking about something that will not take effect until 9 years from now and we know that the provision will hurt the average American and only help the Ken Lays of America.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the chairman of the Committee on House Oversight and Government Reform, and the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSUMO), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. ORTMAN) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) have worked long and hard on this. It is important for us to expand it beyond the year 2010, and I urge my colleagues in a bipartisan way to support both the rule and the legislation itself.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDERMOTT). (Mr. McDERMOTT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the letter from the University of Alabama signed by Dr. Stein, dated 20 June, 2002. The letter referred to is as follows:

Dr. Stein, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, AL, June 20, 2002.

Hon. Robert T. Matsui,
House of Representatives, Rayburn Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman Matsui: I understand that the House of Representatives is considering legislation making permanent certain temporary changes in the system that were enacted last year as part of the Portman-Cardin legislation. (The Portman-Cardin provisions themselves have a 10-year sunset provision.) Making the Portman-Cardin provisions permanent at this time is ill-advised and premature, for we do not yet know whether they are helpful or harmful. We should allow companies to go offshore to Bermuda and open up a post office in the next month or so whether to go offshore or not, if they want to save taxes. And that brings us right to Stanley Works. Stanley Works is going to move to Bermuda and open up a post office box so it can save $30 million in taxes. It will not go to their employees. It is going to go to top managers. Because we have seen that on Enron and we know that on Global Crossing, and we will see that on Stanley Works as well. But what is so offensive is not only that this bill that we are dealing with today will not take effect for 9 years, but this bill that we are dealing with today what is so offensive is not only that we have seen that on Enron and we saw the evidence on whether Portman-Cardin is helping or hurting is in.

The original Portman-Cardin bill was an unwieldy package of disparate measures cobbled together by the pension industry. On the second page and I read three short paragraphs: "Many of the bill’s provisions were so technically complex that their unlikely impact could only be determined by pension experts. Thus, many in Congress uncritically accepted the lofty expectations of Representatives PORTMAN and CARDIN (and industry lobbyists) and persuaded themselves that they were voting for a bill that would increase retirement security for middle-class Americans and particularly women. So far, there is no evidence that the bill has done any of that, but there is evidence that many of the technical provisions are being manipulated by pension planners to allow the most affluent Americans to greatly reduce their taxes and to reduce their contributions for middle-class workers. If any legislative action should be taken now, it should be to scale back Portman-Cardin’s one-sided

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Governance, a Special Report.” Fortune Magazine, this week, and I would urge my colleagues to read it: “System Failure, Corporate America. We Have a Crisis. Seven Ways to Restore Confidence.”

We are not dealing with these issues. Senator CORZINE and Senator SARBANES on the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs just this week passed legislation out of the Senate committee essentially trying to restore confidence in the soft market by dealing with accounting standards, by changing accounting standards so average Americans will understand when there is an Enron Corporation and they cannot cook their books, or when Arthur Andersen tries to manipulate books, it will not happen because there will be severe penalties under their legislation.

We are not dealing with that either. We are not dealing with that. We are ignoring it. In fact, the gentleman from California (Mr. AMYX), the majority leader of the Republican Party, says we should allow companies to go offshore if they want to save taxes.

And that brings us right to Stanley Works. Stanley Works is going to move in the next month or so whether to go to Bermuda and open up a post office box so it can save $30 million in taxes. It will not go to their employees. It is going to go to top managers. Because we have seen that on Enron and we know that on Global Crossing, and we will see that on Stanley Works as well. But what is so offensive is not only that this bill that we are dealing with today will not take effect for 9 years, but there is another aspect of it as well. I will not take effect for 9 years, but this bill that we are dealing with today what is so offensive is not only that we have seen that on Enron and we saw the evidence on whether Portman-Cardin is helping or hurting is in.

The original Portman-Cardin bill was an unwieldy package of disparate measures cobbled together by the pension industry. Although the bill included a few changes that were helpful to average American workers, its critics (of whom I was one) charged that most of its provisions would simply lavish further tax breaks on the most affluent Americans, who were hardly the group of workers most in need of governmental paternalism to help them save for their retirement. The only provision to help lower income workers save for retirement—a modest tax credit proposed by the Democrats—was watered down by House Republicans and is set to expire in the year 2007. (Ironically, this is the only provision that under the proposed Portman-Cardin extender would not be made permanent or even extended.) A benefit supposedly designed for women who return to the workforce late in life applies to men as well, regardless of whether they were out of the workforce, and in any event is only helpful to those few people who can afford to contribute at all to their 401(k) plan. Worse still, the bill included several provisions (supposedly to reduce regulatory burdens) that all but invite existing plans to reduce benefits for rank-and-file workers, while maintaining, or even improving, them for the owners of businesses and their most highly paid employees.

The sponsors of Portman-Cardin dismissed criticism of their bill. Instead, they argued that the bill would provide compelling new incentives for small businesses to adopt and expand their retirement plans. Congressman Portman and Cardin thus contended that the net effect of the bill would be to create thousands and thousands of new plans, whose very existence would benefit middle-class workers. Many of the bill’s provisions were so technically complex that their unlikely impact could only be determined by pension experts. Thus, many in Congress uncritically accepted the lofty expectations of Representatives Portman and Cardin (and industry lobbyists) and persuaded themselves that they were voting for a bill that would increase retirement security for middle-class Americans and in particular women.

So far, there is no evidence that the bill has done any of that, but there is evidence that many of the technical provisions are being manipulated by pension planners to allow the most affluent Americans to greatly reduce their taxes and to reduce retirement benefits for middle-class workers.

If any legislative action is to be taken now, it should be to scale back Portman-Cardin’s one-sided tax breaks for the wealthy and the tax credits to help lower income people save for retirement, and to repeal the Portman-Cardin provisions that some firms are using to reduce benefits for middle class and lower-income workers.

In any event, it is certainly premature for Congress to make the Portman-Cardin provisions permanent just one year after their enactment and nine years before their planned sunset. Before taking that step, Congress should at least wait long enough to study the real-world effects of Portman-Cardin, to determine whether it has helped or hindered the average American worker’s efforts to save for retirement. Instead of precipitously acting on the important questions of whether to modify, repeal, or make permanent the Portman-Cardin provisions, Congress should ask the General Accounting Office to engage in a study of Portman-Cardin’s effects on the retirement security of America’s working people. There will be time enough to act when the results of such a study are in hand.

Please note that my comments are my own and do not necessarily reflect the views of the University of Alabama School of Law.

Sincerely,

NORMAN P. STEIN, Professor of Law.

Mr. Speaker, this is the letter that was referred to by the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui). It is always interesting to come into the well of the House on a day like today. We are celebrating baseball victories. And we have a simple one-page bill here. I mean, it is nothing. My mother, my brother, my grocery woman who makes my coffee could read this bill and understand what it is about. It makes permanent the provisions of a bill we passed last year.

This has been a very interesting procedure we have done over and over again. We passed the bill and then we come into make it permanent the next year; so we get two votes on it. But the letter from the professor in Alabama lays out the case very well for why we should not be extending it permanently. If we realize that 70 percent of what happens for the pensioners in this country goes to the top 20 percent and 42 percent of what comes out of this bill goes to the top 5 percent, we realize that is not for ordinary pensioners. It is not for ordinary people or women or people who enter the workforce. This is a bill about giving more to the rich, letting them use the tax policy.

And why do they need the repeal today? Mr. Matsui acts as though we should be doing it or that it is a mystery why we are giving it to them now. It is because people who have a lot of money plan way out into the future. Most of us are living paycheck to paycheck and we do not know when we are going to be in 9 or 10 years, but if someone has $50 million in their family or whatever or if someone makes $150 or $500 million in Enron, suddenly they need time to plan to deal with how they are going to deal with all that money.

Those of us who go down and get our paycheck and spend it that month, and wait for the next one to spend it that month, do not need a bill that goes out 10 years into the future.

Those provisions would be bad enough if it was not for what has not happened here around the issue of Enron. Enron went in the tank. They manipulated the pensions and the 401(k)s of their employees, and 100 Enron executives recently got more than $300 million in severance pay while the employees suffered devastating losses in their income and retirement packages. Those people at Enron who were working there, all they have left is their Social Security, because they got no benefits, and we gave them a defined benefit plan, not even the simulation of a defined benefit plan, not even the shadow of a defined benefit plan, not even the semblance of a defined benefit plan.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I strongly support the rule. It makes in order the substitute that the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDermott) just talked about, which is very fair, and it gives us an opportunity to talk about the important project before us today, which is trying to make permanent these crucial changes in our pension system that we enacted a year ago.

I am concerned about the debate that I have heard so far this morning. We are going to have an opportunity during general debate to get into the specific details of the bill. Right now we are not talking about the provisions, but yet the other side of the aisle is taking this opportunity to, in a very partisan way, attack the legislation we passed last year with over 400 votes.

Those Members who have spoken are among the less than 10 percent of this Congress who did not vote for the legislation, and I sense that there is a fierce partisanship in this House in an election year that makes it very difficult for them to accept the fact that this legislation was developed over a period of 5 years on a totally bipartisan basis. All these issues were fully vetted with subcommittee hearings and full committee hearings. There has been ample debate on the floor. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cardin), who will speak in a moment, was the cosponsor of this legislation. There was support across the board from the Chamber of Commerce, the AFL-CIO, and the Building and Trades Council.

I know it is difficult for some Members on the other side of the aisle who would just like to attack each other and saying things like this bill is just about giving more to the rich. That is not the case here. That is not how this bill was developed. That is not the spirit in which the debate has been conducted over the past 5 years on this issue.

As we talk about this legislation, and we will have an opportunity to do that we do not get the rule debate. I hope we can have a more constructive debate sticking to the facts and sticking to what again in this case has been an unusual, admittedly, but important exercise of this Congress working across party lines to do what is best for the American people.

For those who think this is just about the rich, I hope they realize that half of America’s workers have no pension whatsoever today; no 401(k), no defined benefit plan, not even a simple pension program, like a SEP plan or so-called simple plan. Those are the Americans who will be helped by this legislation.

It has only been in effect since the first of the year, so we do not have year-end data yet, but all the evidence we have, including what was presented at a hearing yesterday of the Committee on Ways and Means Sub-committee on Oversight, indicated it is working to do that.

This is about helping where it is needed, which is in small businesses. With fewer than half of the workers covered by pensions that make less than $50,000 a year, it is helping those workers who are struggling.
among small businesses, it is less than 20 percent that have any kind of pension coverage. This is where those low-income workers are who we all want to see get more coverage.

By raising the limits and simplifying the tax code, we are helping the average worker. By letting the average worker work in small businesses more opportunities to be able to save a little money for their own retirement.

On the issue of planning, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDermott) said he lives paycheck to paycheck, and that is how most Americans live. That is fine, but I hope the gentleman is planning for his retirement, and I hope he is planning more than 9 years out. That is certainly what this Congress ought to encourage all Americans to do.

We need to encourage small businesses to get into the business of providing retirement savings. To do that, they need to know there is some certainty to continue. That is why we are not going to go from a situation where one can put $15,000 aside in a 401(k) plan to go back to where one can only put $10,000 and $500 aside; to get to a situation where people will know that they are eligible to put into their IRA accounts $5,000, and with a catch-up another $2,000, rather than going back to the situation where they can only put $2,000 aside. That is what would happen if this bill were repealed after 9 years, which is the current law.

So I would ask my Members on both sides of the aisle to view this differently than we usually do, particularly during an election year, and that is to focus on what is right and good for the American people and not try to use this issue to continue in that spirit today.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson-Lee).

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I think it is important as we debate this matter to be clear on the urgency of the underlying bill. These issues actually do not expire until 2010. I wish that we could deliberate more on the substance and what is needed by those of us who claim responsibility for governance of the United States of America.

I represent Houston, Texas, and in that representation have Enron in my congressional district. First, let me say that the employees remaining at the company are trying their very best to turn the tide and work on behalf of those who work for them. As their Representative, and they are my constituents, I wish them well. But we have a duty here in this Congress, and the American people have not been responded to; that is, for corporate response, corporate reformation, restoration, and reconfiguration. We must reform the corporate laws of America.

Now we have the best opportunity with this legislation, particularly in the substitute that the Democrats have offered. Every commentator, every American that is asked the question, has Congress done anything to avoid another Enron, answers, absolutely not.

Members should step in my shoes and travel throughout my district and see the pain and the misery: people who are not able to get medical care, houses being foreclosed, children not being able to go to college. Members would say those are the things that happen to folks. These are hard-working Americans and taxpayers who believed in a corporation and management and then behaved like a corporation, like executives who said that they had the best company in the world.

We have the opportunity in this legislation today to avoid corporations who run away from trouble and leave the employees behind. Golden parachutes for Enron executives who said that they had the best company in the world. We have the opportunity to avoid having deferred compensation with loopholes surounding the so-called nonqualified deferred compensation packages, which are retirement packages which are designed to be immune to creditors’ claims.

Mr. Speaker, my constituents on Friday witnessed $105 million given in retention bonuses. On Sunday, the company filed for bankruptcy; and on Monday, 5,000 of my constituents were fired.

We need to have corporate reform for America. I say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, we need to work together. Golden parachutes for Enron executives, and it is not just Enron, it is across America. Ever since Enron, one after another has toppled. Americans deserve better.

In the underlying bill, rather than helping poor people, this particular legislation takes away the only provision that will help low-income workers. In addition, it lifts the pension amounts for executives.

Mr. Speaker, as I close, there is too much of an opportunity here for this Congress to do something. It is a darn shame that we are a Congress that is doing nothing.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Weller), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

(Mr. WELLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time to speak on behalf of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule, and I rise in support of passage of this legislation. The permanency of the retirement savings provisions of what we call the Bush tax cut.

First, let me comment very briefly and to the point on my colleague’s rewrite. It is not just prior to tax day. I think it is simple. If those in business break the law, they should go to jail. If we are probusiness, we enforce the law, and lawbreakers are held accountable. Unfortunately, the ethics of the 1990s have come home to roost with Enron and Global Crossing and other companies which broke the law. Again, if they broke the law, they should be held accountable and should go to jail.

Today I speak in support of the Retirement Savings Act of 2002, legislation which is so meaningful because it has a real impact on working middle-class families on the south side of Chicago, which I have the privilege of representing. When the Bush tax cut benefits 100 million taxpayers who saw their taxes lowered. We eliminate the marriage tax penalty and the death tax. We increase opportunities for savings for education and retirement.

Today we are focused on making permanent the retirement savings compoment of the Bush tax cut.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Portman) and the Gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cardin) for their leadership on assembling this package which was included by President Bush in his package just prior to my speech. I think it is simple. If those in business break the law, they should go to jail.

Unfortunately because of an arcane rule over in the Senate, it had to be temporary. If you think about it, all the good things that we did in the Bush tax cut to help working middle-class families, they expire unless we do something.

It is interesting that in the Congress it is easy to increase taxes permanently, it is easy to increase spending permanently, but when you want to lower taxes or cut taxes, you can only do it on a temporary basis. That is just not right.

We believe that increasing opportunity for retirement savings should be permanent and that the increases in the contribution limits for individual retirement accounts from $2,000 to $5,000 should be made permanent. Otherwise it goes back down to $2,000. And the increases in retirement accounts, of 401(k) accounts, which benefit millions of middle-class workers across America, that go from 10- to 15-, that, if it expires, goes back to 10. Who is hurt? Working middle-class families. All the more reason we should make the Bush tax cut permanent, particularly the retirement savings component.

I want to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Portman) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Cardin) for their leadership on assembling this package which was included by President Bush in his package just prior to my speech. I think it is simple. If those in business break the law, they should go to jail.

my own family. My sister Pat is a teacher and for years has taught in public schools. When she and her husband Rich, who is a farmer, decided they wanted to have children, they had three kids, Matt and Sarah and Christy. The kids were born a year apart, and when the oldest two were old enough to go to school, they took time out of the work force and stay home and raise the children until they were old enough to go to school. What happened in that case is the family income was cut in half. They did not have any money to set aside in retirement savings. They were just basically making ends meet, so they were not able to set aside money for retirement savings.

Something that is really unique about this legislation is we allow people like my sister Pat and brother-in-law Rich, now in this case empty-nesters, or working women who go back into the work force, once they reach age 50 or older, we allow them to make what we call a catch-up contribution. They can put up to $5,000 into their individual retirement account to make up for what they missed. If they have a 401(k) account, they can put an additional $5,000 above the 15-, That is meaningful. If this expires, we lose that opportunity.

Second, I want to draw attention to something that benefits millions of building trades people, union members across this country. That deals with the 415 provision that is in the legislation. Go back to my story about Larry and Lori Kohr from Peru, Illinois, retired laborers. This 415 cap which said regardless of how much you contribute into your multiemployer pension funds, which is usually a building trade unions pension fund, that there is a cap on how much you can receive. That cap was originally put in place for high-paid executives and public employees. Over the years it was all removed, all those caps, working men and women in the building trades.

One of the priorities we in the Republican Congress made was removing that cap, so that people like Larry and Lori Kohr can get their full pension. They contribute more; they qualify for more, they should get their full pension. Prior to our cap, Larry and Lori Kohr only received about $19,500 a year, half of what they really should have received. Thanks to the Bush tax cut, by removing this provision, Larry Kohr now receives a $38,500 pension. His pension was almost doubled as a result of removing that unfair cap. Think about it. If this is not made permanent, Larry and Lori Kohr will see their pension cut in half once again.

So let us help working men and women. Let us help those who benefit from the 415 provisions, and the working moms, and the empty-nesters who benefit from the catch-up provisions by making this permanent. That is why I commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) for his leadership in bringing this legislation to the floor. It deserves overwhelming bipartisan support. Let us make the retirement savings provisions permanent.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

(Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California asked and was given permission to review and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, the President had it right soon after Enron when he was speaking down in Virtual Cafe and he said, "We’ve got to make sure that what’s good for the captain is good for the crew.

Last year prior to Enron, we passed this legislation, and this legislation clearly increased the disparities and the privileges to high-income earners within the pension system. Yes, we have done some things for those people at the bottom, for middle-class earners, but the fact of the matter is that in the corporate elite, they can put in an additional $500,000 into their individual retirement account to make up for what they missed. If they have a 401(k) account, they can put an additional $5,000 above the 15-, That is meaningful. If this expires, we lose that opportunity.

What we are finding out is it is really not about a violation of law. Many of these activities are sanctioned within the law. It is just happening to trouble middle-class Americans as they see this rush in the Congress to continue to stuff benefits to the wealthiest elite people in this country, whether it is in the pension system, whether it is in the 401(k) system, whether it is in the income tax system. There has been a rush by this Congress to stuff the money to the wealthiest people in this country before we hit the deficit wall and before America realizes that we are losing the Social Security Trust Fund. It is very much like the executives of Tyco and Enron and Adelphia and these corporations that in the months preceding their bankruptcy, they started paying off their debts. Now when we examine who they were paying off, their children’s real estate companies, their children’s travel companies, their wives’ auction houses and our small businesses. They are getting the money out of the corporation to get it into their friends’ hands before the bankruptcy.

So what was the end in Enron? One hundred forty executives walked away with 3- or $400 million, and the thousands of employees that were laid off walked away with $13,000.

We have an opportunity to reexamine this legislation and the pension plans of this Nation, and we refuse to do it. We are now coconspirators in that disparity between the captain and the crew. But as this ship starts to sink, and we start to take the Social Security Trust Fund with us, the Republicans are not even going to hit the emergency bell as they head for the lifeboats with their friends. They are just going to get in the lifeboats with the income tax cuts, with the estate tax cuts, with the pension cuts for the wealthiest people in this Nation, and they are going to sail away and watch everybody else go down with the ship.

Just to repeat, we are not really talking about the same bill here. What we are trying to do here today is simply to extend the provisions of the retirement savings law that was passed by this Congress last year. Congress got up legislatively with the post-Enron pension issues, and we passed that on a bipartisan basis. Congress just took up recently corporate governance issues related to Enron. We passed those on a bipartisan basis. We got down to these issues, but maybe we should do different things.

Again, the gentleman from California, it is good theater, but he is not talking about the facts. I am happy to go into the lifeboat with the people we are talking about helping.
Let me give you some actual statistics rather than just rhetoric. Of those people who are involved in pensions, 77 percent make less than $50,000 a year. These are middle-income workers. These are lower-income workers. Let me give you another statistic. There was a bill that was introduced here in this Congress. It was not part of the legislative process. It was developed in a partisan bill. I think that is difficult to strongly support that, Mr. Speaker.

Beyond that, we are trying to expand those pensions to people who do not have them now. Who are they? They are primarily middle- and lower-income workers. I am not worried about the high-income workers. They have nonqualified plans, meaning they are not even in the pension system. Those are increasing rapidly because we are not doing enough to help those in the pension system. That is what the legislation was about last year. That is why 400 Members of this House supported it.

I am happy to get in the lifeboat with those folks. I would hope my colleagues would share my sentiments.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN).

Mr. CARDIN. I thank the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat confused by some of the debate that we have heard on this rule. I would think that all Members would want to support the rule. First of all, it allows the Democratic substitute to be offered that deals with the issues that the gentlewoman from New York raised. These are very valid issues. It gives us a chance to debate on the floor today, or when this bill comes up, corporate governance issues are important issues. I agree with a lot of what the gentlewoman said, and the rule makes that in order.

The second thing the rule does is allow us to make permanent the provisions in the pension bill of last year. I strongly support that, Mr. Speaker.

Some of my colleagues have talked about the fact that this was truly a bipartisan bill. I think that is difficult for some people to understand, but it did go through the normal, regular legislative process. It was developed in a bipartisan way. It was developed by Congress. It was not part of the President's tax proposals. It came into the President's tax proposals because we had bipartisan support in this House and in the other body. It was well vetted.

My friend from California brings forward a letter from someone from Georgia. We have had congressional hearings on every one of the provisions in that bill. People were invited. In fact, my recollection is at one hearing we could not get anyone to testify against the bill; that everyone who testified said the provisions in the bill were well founded.

Let us talk about the specific provisions, and I think you will find that every one of them advances the issues of people having more opportunity to provide for their retirement. That is why the bill was supported by organized labor. That is why the underlying legislation was supported by small business. It provides more opportunities.

In all due respect, Mr. Speaker, Ken Lay' s retirement security is not based upon increasing the IRAs from $2,000 to $5,000 a year. That is not the type of people who benefit from the changes that are in the underlying bill. We make modest adjustments in the 401(k) and defined contribution limits. We do not even keep up with inflation. These are very modest changes that affect middle-income people, not the wealthy. That is why the cost of this bill is extremely modest. It does not affect the top 1 percent of this country. It is $6 billion over 10 years. The Democratic substitute, which does some things that I happen to like as far as the small savers credit, costs $30 billion, or five times more than the underlining bill. I just bring that up because I think the underlying bill is a good bill, and it is worthy of continued support.

Many of the people who have talked against it have consistently been against it. I understand that. But 185 Democrats joined a large number of Republicans with over 400 votes in favor of this bill on three separate occasions. There was good reason as to why Democrats and Republicans have worked together on this issue. Retirement security is an important issue for middle-income people. You cannot do it on Social Security alone. We need private savings. We need private retirement. The underlying bill helps advance those issues.

I urge my colleagues to support the rule and support the underlying bill.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

(Mr. STENHOLM asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule and opposition to a very good bill. The gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Maryland have stated factually the bill. My position with the plan that this bill is included in.

We are completely ignoring that last month, May, with a 20 percent increase in spending, a 19 percent drop in tax receipts, combined to result in a larger-than-expected budget deficit of $80.6 billion, the highest deficit in U.S. history. That eclipses last year's $27.9 billion shortfall and puts the government on course for a $200 billion deficit.

The economic game plan that we are under, some of us would like to work with our friends on the other side of the aisle to change, has got us on course to where next week you must vote to borrow an additional $X billion dollars, this Secretary of Treasury tells us that for $75 billion, borrow that money, without first fixing Social Security and Medicare. That is inexcusable. It is inexcusable for this body to continue to have our dessert without being willing to deal with the spinach problems of this country.

It has been over six months since Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill first wrote to Congress to request an increase in the statutory debt limit. Secretary O'Neill warned Congress that the Federal Government would be unable to meet its commitments and at risk of default if an increase in the statutory debt limit was not approved before June 28th.

Despite these warnings, the House Leadership has been unwilling to take responsibility for dealing with this issue.

The Republican leadership is trying to blame Democrats for the failure to increase the debt limit. The rhetoric blaming Democrats for inaction on the debt limit doesn't bear any resemblance to reality.

We repeatedly have offered to provide bipartisan support for a modest increase in the debt limit in order to avoid a default. The Republican leadership has rejected all of our offers and prevented us from even offering amendments which would provide for an increase in the debt limit linked to action on a responsible budget plan.

What we have refused to support is the administration's request for a $750 billion increase in the debt limit without a plan to put us back on a path toward a balanced budget.

We will not vote for any increase in the debt limit without a commitment to a plan to bring the budget back into balance.

DENNIS MOORE and I went to the Rules Committee again this week to ask that we be allowed to offer an amendment today which would deal with the debt limit in a responsible manner.

The amendment would provide an immediate increase in the statutory debt limit of $150 billion but limit future increase in the debt limit until the President and Congress agree on a plan to place our budget on the path to on-budget balance by FY 2007.

Unfortunately, the Rules Committee did not make our amendment in order.

The need to raise the debt limit should compel us to re-examine our ability to afford current tax and spending policies, just as credit and spending limits serve as tools to force families to examine their household budgets.

Congress and the President need to sit down, roll up our sleeves and have an honest discussion about what we need to do to put the budget back in order, with everything on the table.

But instead of figuring out how we are going to stop the tide of red ink and stop spending Social Security surplus dollars, the House leadership continues to bring to the floor legislation that will put us deeper into debt.

We do not understand the philosophy of folks who do not have a problem with leaving our children and grandchildren with a large debt just so we can have a tax cut or more spending today.
I hope that the members who are once again coming to the floor proudly supporting yet another tax cut will be willing to come to the floor next week and show just as much enthusiasm when the vote to borrow the money paid for their policies by raising the debt limit.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BRADY), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, back to the issue at hand, I rise today in support of this underlying bill to make permanent the pension reforms in the tax relief act. Before I do that, I want to congratulate my colleagues from the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) for their leadership on this.

Mr. Speaker, while this legislation would make permanent many good pension reforms we enacted last year, I would like to highlight one particular aspect of it. Many States, including Texas, have favorable laws that encourage pension portability, the ability to take your pension with you when you move jobs, especially for teachers and other public employees.

However, before the President’s tax relief plan, Federal law really frustrated that very helpful State laws. Virtually every State authorizes teachers and other public employees to purchase service credit, their work performed, for the years in which they were not eligible for pension.

For instance, people have a teacher that works 2 years in a State, moves to another that requires her to work 30 years. She works 28 and then goes back and purchases from the other State the 2 years that she worked. That way she has that pension. The problem is that purchasing back that service, those years, is very expensive. It can be up to $20,000. Most employees do not have that sitting around, but many do in a savings plan, their 403(b) tax deferred compensation plan, that they could use to buy back those years.

However, before the bill was put in place, they are prohibited from transferring this money to purchase service; and because of the quirk in the tax law, they could not do it pre-tax. Well, the tax relief bill, thanks to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), need to be emphasized, because before voting on this or any other matter, no matter how worthy, we need to consider all the consequences.

I think another way of putting it is that we have to evaluate each of these pieces of legislation, like the one in front of us, to decide whether we think it is so vital to spend that money that we are willing to borrow payroll taxes paid in for Social Security and use them for a different purpose. That is a pretty heavy test to meet, and I do not believe this piece of legislation meets it.

Let me say, I think there are some very good provisions in the law that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) sponsored last year. That is why I voted for it. I was among the many members of this body who felt that the provisions for 401(k)s and 403(b)s, the portability provisions that let workers take these pensions from one place to another, were sound provisions. They were the highly publicized provisions by which this bill won the support of many people here in the United States Senate.

The less publicized provisions, the fine print of that bill, contain the problems. It allowed more discrimination by the people at the top of pension plans against those at the bottom, the people who need retirement security assistance the most and who have done the least retirement planning. The fine print in that bill allowed some companies to stuff retirement plans with the least retirement planning. The fine print of that bill, contain the problems, and I do not want to make those misguided provisions permanent.

But even if you think those bad provisions are good and you like the Portman-Cardin legislation exactly as it was passed last year, what do you think will happen if today’s bill is defeated? Absolutely nothing. Those provisions will be the law of the United States until New Year’s Eve 2010.

The reason that we are taking up a bill today to affect something that will not make a bit of difference, however you feel about this bill, until New Year’s Eve on 2010, is because this Congress has little or no interest in standing up to special interests and doing anything about real retirement security.

We know that one executive after another is walking off with not a golden, but a platinum, parachute; meanwhile, many other people without a retirement plan are left to take the fall. This bill that passed last year did something for those people. It gave them a small “Saver’s Tax Credit.”

This credit expires on New Year’s Eve 2006. Is the benefit for the average worker extended? Is it made permanent in this bill? No. We had to extend the provisions that help those at the top that expire in 2010, but we are not extending those that expire in 2006.

If you look at this piece of legislation and you ask, “will it do anything to protect retirement security and prevent more employees being victimized, just like those were at Enron?”—the answer is “it does absolutely nothing.”

It is it is fiscally irresponsible, and it does not improve retirement security for those who need it the most.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this rule so we can get on with the underlying bill, which is a good bill and will pass.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio and Mr. MCOLLON changed their vote from ‘yea’ to ‘nay.’

Mr. WATKINS of Oklahoma changed his vote from ‘nay’ to ‘yea.’

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 451, I call up the bill (H.R. 4931) to provide that the pension and individual retirement arrangement provisions of the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 shall be permanent, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. MAULINER) each will control 30 minutes of debate on the bill.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS).
comfort, in the belief in security of those Americans within a decade of retiring, $6 billion is a very, very worthwhile investment.

Then we heard the argument under the rule that why are we doing this today? We have other really important things we need to do. This is not going to become law anyway. Well, we also heard that argument about a stimulus package that was before this House in March. Why are we doing this? It is not going to become law anyway. That measure passed the House with 417 votes, and the Senate moved it on to the President and it became law. If the 197 Democrats who voted for this measure last year vote for it this year, it will become law. And if they are going to hide behind the $6 billion price tag for 10 years, if they are going to argue one does not need to have this kind of knowledge to plan one’s retirement, then we need to understand it is politics. I find it ironic that we are going to see criticism of the cost that this somehow is for fat cats when in fact the Democrat substitute costs five times as much as this one.

So the debate today, just keep a couple of things in mind. This portion of the tax bill that became law is not like the other portions. People can with certainty plan. It is extremely difficult to plan without certainty. The Democrats almost gleefully announce they are going to deny those people who are within a decade of retiring some certainty about the way in which they can manage their financial affairs so that in their retirement years they can live a little bit comfortably; and if this measure does not pass and if it does not become law, I want every American who cannot plan the way they should be able to plan to remember there were certain people here who thought it was more important to have a game of chess to try to advance a pawn in their goal to reclaim the majority of the House by playing stunts with this measure than it was to assure seniors and near-seniors of certainty for their retirement.

That is the vote is all about. It is the ability to plan or the denial of the ability to plan. A “yes” vote lets Americans plan; a “no” vote denies them that opportunity. Let us see who will not let Americans plan their own futures.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. CARDIN, my colleague on the Committee on Ways and Means, and that he be allowed to yield said time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I might just say at a time when we have a crisis in corporate America, one of the reasons the stock market is not doing too well, very sluggish, is because basically investors are not sure what companies are doing well and what companies are not, because we cannot get it any longer from the books because obviously after Enron, Global, and a number of other corporations, we just do not know any longer what these books really mean because each individual accounting office like Arthur Andersen might decide on their own how to manipulate these accounts.

Business Week had a story Crisis in Corporate Governance, Special Report. Last week they had Restoring Trust in Corporate America, same Business Week. Fortune magazine this week talked about a System Failure in Corporate America. At a time when we should be talking about how we make sure that Stanley Corporation up in Connecticut does not move to Bermuda and open up a post office box basically to save $30 million, somewhat un patriotically, at a time when 120 management employees of Enron Corporation were able to take $330 million in terms of retirement benefits right before they decided to file bankruptcy and gave nothing to their thousands and thousands of employees, it would only seem logical that we would try to deal in some fashion with those issues instead of dealing with extending a pension bill that is fatally flawed and will hurt the ordinary worker, not now, but will not hurt until 2011.

We need to really understand this bill that is on the floor now will not take until the year 2011. One must ask what is the House of Representatives, this august, wonderful body, doing talking with some of the major issues that are facing America today?

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Did my colleagues hear it? Why are we doing what something that is 9 years away? For someone who has worked 40 years, what is 9 years in terms of planning? It may be everything.

The cynicism with which they simply disregard and do not take effect until 2011. The members of Congress passed this legislation which makes it easier for people to set more aside for their retirement. It increases contribution levels for IRAs, for 401(k)s, for other defined contribution plans. It increases the levels of benefits for defined benefit plans. It also simplifies the pension laws, takes away some of the costs, but burdens the liabilities of small businesses to offer more plans, and it allows for portability so that people can move in a defined contribution context from job to job, and as we listen to the debate today, and as we enjoy the working relationship with the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) on our side of the line.

The problem of the proof was that people have accepted their work product in a nonpartisan, nongimmicky environment by more than 400 votes, and with great difficulty, and with enormous courage, the gentleman from Maryland is supporting a position he knows to be right.

I hope there will be no permanent political damage done because I know his own leadership has changed the rules of the game to create significant pressure on him, and I just want to say it publicly that I admire someone who stands up on the floor and speaks with what they truly believe is right, rather than simply mouthing comments that are designed to advance a cynical, purely partisan position.

I want to say I am extremely proud of the members of the House of Representatives, one on our side of the aisle and one on the other side of the aisle, who want to make sure that those who want to plan for a retirement with dignity have those 9 years that some folks think are not worth anything.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN), and ask unanimous consent that the gentleman control the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, for yielding me the time and for the work he has done to get us to this point.

This is a very important debate we are having today because it is about extending legislation this House passed last year on a totally bipartisan basis by over 400 votes, which is very important, as the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) has said, to the retirement planning needs of America’s workers.

Let me just talk for a moment about what we are doing here. Last year, as part of the overall tax relief measure, Congress passed this legislation which makes it easier for people to set more aside for their retirement. It increases contribution levels for IRAs, for 401(k)s, for other defined contribution plans. It increases the levels of benefits for defined benefit plans. It also simplifies the pension laws, takes away some of the costs, but burdens the liabilities of small businesses to offer more plans, and it allows for portability so that people can move in a defined contribution context from job to job.
job without having to cash out on their pensions.

The need for these provisions is great. Right now, we know there are 70 million Americans, over half the work force, who have no retirement savings whatsoever through their employer, no pension plan of any kind. That is something that is even worse among small businesses, which is where a lot of lower-income, middle-income workers are.

Among smaller businesses, those with 25 or fewer employees, only 20 percent offer any kind of pension plan whatsoever. Unbelievably, there has been virtually no growth in pension plan coverage over the past couple of decades. At the same time, the baby boom generation, of which I am part and a lot in this House are, is beginning to retire, and we are finding that those baby boomers do not have adequate savings to be able to live a comfortable retirement, to have that kind of financial cushion and security that comes with having what someone needs through their retirement. In fact, baby boomers have put less than 40 percent aside of what they will need for a good retirement.

A major reason for this is because of what this Congress has done over the past couple of decades. Instead of responding to this by helping people save more for their retirement, Congress instead over the past 20 years has made pensions less generous by lowering contribution and benefit levels while making pensions more costly by increasing the burdens, costs and regulations. That has had a very bad impact. Let me give you a specific example.

From 1982 to 1994, limits on defined benefit plans were greatly reduced by Congress, and new restrictions were added, primarily for the purpose of generating more revenue, dealing with the deficit, not for pension policy. The effect as we all know is that it took effect, the number of traditional benefit plans ensured by the PBGC dropped from 114,000 in 1987 to only 38,000 in the year 2000.

Anyway that is what this body tried to do last year was to take some steps, some steps, not as big as some would have liked, but some steps in the right direction to begin to reverse these trends and begin to let people save more for their retirement.

First, we allowed people to put more aside in their own retirement plans, put more aside in their union multiemployer plans, their defined plans, other pensions, IRAs. We moved the IRA contribution, for instance, from $2,000 to $3,000 per year. This year alone, we can put another $1,000 in, another 50 percent, $3,000. By the way, the average income of somebody who does an IRA is less than $30,000 a year.

So as my colleagues hear the other side today, some Members of the other side talking about how this is primarily going to benefit the rich, remember that statistic. The biggest increase we have is in IRAs. Those who have IRAs on average have less than $30,000 a year in income.

We also did a lot in terms of 401(k)s, moving those limits from $10,500 a year to $15,000 a year by 2006. By the way, these provisions only restore the limits to where they were back in the 1980s in terms of IRAs if it is adjusted for inflation, or in the case of 401(k)s, we only adjust it back to where they were back in the 1980s. When, incidentally, Republicans were not in control of this House.

Secondly, we created these catch-up contributions. It helps workers over 50 to set aside more for their retirement. If someone is 50, we say they should be able to put more aside in their IRA, but, significantly, in their 401(k). This is because we know there are a lot of people out there, again, baby boomers, particularly women who have taken time off to take care of their families, raise their kids, coming back in the work force, who just do not have a lot of revenue coming from security and a nest egg. We want to encourage them to save more, so we allow for this catch-up.

We modernized the pension laws to adopt what we have learned of the realities of the modern work force. That is a reality in our country. People move jobs quickly. The old defined benefit model does not work as well as it used to because people do not stay long enough to get the benefit of that.

We decreased the vesting from 5 years to 3 years. This is extremely important and already having an enormous impact out there. We had some testimony in the Committee on Ways and Means yesterday at one of our subcommittees about this very fact, that just by changing that vesting helps a lot because a lot of people do not stay around for those 5 years to get vested, but now they stay around for 3 years, they are much more vested.

We also allowed for people to roll over from job to job, plan to plan. For instance, someone is a school teacher and they go into the private sector or vice versa, if someone is a government employee and they go into the private sector. Under the old law, a person could not roll over their defined contribution plan, the 403(b), their 457, 401(k) and vice versa. We allow for that. It is seamless. The gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. Pomeroy) who is here on the floor with us is really the author of that part of the legislation, worked hard on that over the years. It has been bipartisan, even nonpartisan.

Finally, we made it easier for employers, particularly small businesses, to be able to establish and maintain pension plans, again, by reducing these costs, burdens and liabilities. We did not do everything the small business community wanted. They wanted to get rid of the so-called top-heavy rules altogether, which incidentally Presi- dent Clinton’s Labor Department advisory group on this said we ought to get rid of altogether. They said it is like suspenders and belts, we already have the nondiscrimination testing in place, why do we need the top-heavy rules on top of that. We did not do that. We kept the top-heavy rules in place. We did simplify them somewhat to make it easier for small business to get into this game.

Again, think about the fact here that small businesses are not in this game in the way they should be. Only 20 percent of them are offering pensions now. We know from all the surveys that have been done, it is costs, it is burdens, it is liabilities that they are worried about. So we tried to address this in a way to be able to help people get more pension coverage, and we are seeing benefits. It has only happened this year. So we do not have the data from year end yet, but we do have anecdotal evidence, again as recently as yesterday in the Committee on Ways and Means.

We also modernized our pension laws by section 415 of the Tax Code. This is very important to people who are multiemployer plans, including union members who have worked hard. They have come to the point in their career and they need to retire, they suddenly find out that this 100 percent of compensation limit came into effect and kept them from getting the benefits that they deserved. We removed the section 415 limitation. This is extremely important because the way multiemployer plans adjust and calculate when they receive their pension benefits, the rule did not apply fairly to them. So we got rid of 100 percent of comp limit, which is very important.

We also got rid of something very important called aggregation limits. We also allowed for early retirement benefits. This is part of our modernization effort. It was consistent with what we have done through the bill, rolling up our sleeves, looking at these plans, trying to simplify them, trying to make more sense for the modern work force, and these provisions are helping working Americans.

Seventy-two percent of those making contributions to IRAs again have an income of below $50,000. The average is below $30,000; 77 percent of American workers participating in a pension plan make less than $50,000 a year, and when we expand retirement savings options, those who need to retire, they need it the most. Again, it passed the House already on a number of occasions, most recently with 407 votes.

So if we already passed this bill, why are we on the floor today? Why did I just talk all about these great benefits that we have already passed into law? Because of the arcane rule in the United States Senate, all of this goes away. Nine years from now it disappears. What would happen if that were to happen?

For starters, it make it very difficult, again, for people to plan for their retirement. For example, looking... at the chart here, workers can now save, under our IRA provisions, $3,000 a year on their IRA. Under the old law it was $2,000 a year. By 2010, we go up to $5,000 a person can save on their IRA. Remember, these are the lower- and middle-income people that we really need that for their retirement savings.

In the year 2011, it would go back to $2,000 a year if we do not extend this permanently. Does that make sense?

Who would want to do that in terms of 401(k)s? In 2002, we go from $10,500 to $11,000 on a dollar for dollar basis if they stick together on a bipartisan basis to get it done.

There are some areas where we disagree, and we are going to be able to talk to them in the context of the substitute. I do believe it is very important we have the discussion on the range of issues. As was mentioned by Mr. PORTMAN, the substitute would like to speak to which I think illustrates in a real way how this matters. We have a variety of defined contribution plans allowed under the Tax Code. 401(k) is the best known. Virtually identical, but a different structure, 403(b)s for those working in the nonprofit sector, and 457 plans for those working for State and local governments. As one goes through the workforce, you cannot roll your account from one into another; even though they are all defined contribution plans; they just have their basis in different provisions in the Tax Code.

It is important we give workers this kind of retirement account portability that they can do that. We have a couple that lump sum and spending it, they roll it into their retirement savings at their new place of work. Studies show pretty convincingly that the larger amount in the retirement account, the less likely it will be spent in nonretirement purposes. As we help the American workers save for retirement, it is important we facilitate this portability and allow them, in fact encourage our workers, to leave the money there for retirement purposes.

Again, these limits are not dramatic increases. They barely keep up with inflation the way we do it, and they do not keep up with the limits that were in place back in the 1980s when my friends on the other side of the aisle controlled the Committee on Ways and Means. When they controlled this Congress, they had higher limits than this and reduced them because they wanted to reduce the deficit, and they took it out of pensions.

So this is what is going to happen if we do not extend it. Does that make any sense? The catch-up contributions we talked about earlier, again, under the IRAs this year a person gets $500 more to put away if they are over 50. By 2010 they get $1,000 more. In the year 2011, nothing, no catch-up, zero, zip. In Bill's, a person gets $1,000 more this year; they get $5,000 more by 2010. If this legislation is not passed, do not extend it, 2011, zero, zip.

Very important for people to be able to plan. Very important for small businesses to be able to plan so that they can put together something that works for their employees. We will have some data later if people are interested about what small businesses are doing. They have advantage of these increases. They are changing their plans to allow people to save more for their retirement. They are doing it because they assume the Congress is going to do this indefinitely.

Now they are finding, because of this quirk in the Senate procedures, it may be stopped in 9 years. It does not make any sense. The expiration date, of course, will hit hardest on oldest workers because of these catch-up provisions. So these oldest workers, getting right up to retirement, are suddenly going to find they cannot do the catch-ups. If we fail to act as a Congress, these improvements simply will disappear and people will not have the peace of mind they need for their retirement.

Mr. Speaker, that is what the debate is about today. I know the Democrats have a substitute that deals with some other very important issues. I hope we will have a full debate on that when we talk about the substitute. I understand these are important issues on corporate governance, on executive pay; but let us be sure, as a Congress, we stick together on a bipartisan basis to move forward with what we started last year, to reverse this trend in Congress that was encouraging people to get out of the pension business and instead to get people into it so all Americans can save more for their retirement.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the amount of time each of us has at this time. I understand the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) still has 10 minutes remaining.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) has 9 minutes remaining, the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsu) has 1% minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) has 10 minutes remaining. Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY), the sponsor of many of the provisions in the underlying bill, including the portability.

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Sometimes in this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, we spend so much time talking about things that are not happening, and when we disagree on a lot, that we do not get around to evaluating where we agree and where we can agree.

We have just heard a very informed, technically adept exposition of the terms of this bill and why they were in the bill by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN). I certainly would like to commend him for his leadership in this area. It takes a lot of time to get that kind of command of the technical and fiscal necessity of the bill and for the gentleman from Ohio, along with his colleague from the other side of the aisle, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN), to give the best of what this Chamber can bring forward by way of making national policy as they have applied themselves over the years in understanding retirement savings as a major national priority and then even getting deeper into the technical details of how to get it done.

There are some areas where we disagree, and we are going to be able to talk about them in the context of the substitute. I do believe it is very important we have the discussion on the range of issues that is appropriate and appropriate policy responses to the troubled corporate governance issues that we have read so much about in the newspapers recently. What I worry about a little is that some of the debate on the substitute and the port is to the evaluation of the underlying bill. I want to tell my colleagues, Democrat and Republican alike, I believe the underlying bill is solid, bipartisan, constructive advancing of retirement policy; and I hope once the substitute vote is taken, we will be able to give this the kind of rousing endorsement that it got as we passed it when it was first considered.

I would like to leave a provision in the bill I would like to speak to which I think illustrates in a real way how this matters. We have a variety of defined contribution plans allowed under the Tax Code, 401(k) is the best known. Virtually identical, but a different structure, 403(b)s for those working in the nonprofit sector, and 457 plans for those working for State and local governments. As one goes through the workforce, you cannot roll your account from one into another; even though they are all defined contribution plans; they just have their basis in different provisions in the Tax Code.

It is important we give workers this kind of retirement account portability that they can do that. We have a couple that lump sum and spending it, they roll it into their retirement savings at their new place of work. Studies show pretty convincingly that the larger amount in the retirement account, the less likely it will be spent in nonretirement purposes. As we help the American workers save for retirement, it is important we facilitate this portability and allow them, in fact encourage our workers, to leave the money there for retirement purposes.

Although the bill, as was mentioned by the preceding speaker, moving vesting in defined contribution plans from 5 years to 3 years is a very big deal. This is a win that on its face we can all understand is important to those in a mobile society; that if they leave after 3 years, presently they do not acquire necessarily any benefit. These are provisions that ought to be endorsed and advanced, and I urge adoption of the underlying legislation.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Washington (Ms. DUNN), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Ms. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I stand in support of this vital legislation to provide certainty and predictability in pension retirement benefits for the people I represent at home in Washington State.

I want to compliment my two colleagues, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN), for taking leadership to help all women who are being very diligent in their effort to become independent as they plan for their retirement years. This bill enables millions of women to devote more money to retirement savings, to accumulate assets more quickly, and to maintain their benefits in one retirement plan as they go from job to job.

Women choose to leave the workforce for many reasons, including to raise a family or care for ailing parents. Often during those years they are unable to take full advantage of employer-sponsored pension funds. The retirement protections in our bill allow women to make catch-up contributions to their pension plans to make up for the time they spend away from the workforce.

Before this gentleman, it is actually very difficult to consolidate retirement funds from different plans into one plan. We took away these restrictions in our legislation to reflect the changing employment market. Today, we have more women working who tend to change jobs more frequently than do men. By enhancing the retirement benefits follow the employee as she changes jobs.

With more women working outside the home, Mr. Speaker, we have to modernize our retirement laws to take into account a more diverse workforce. We have now, for example, 70 percent of young mothers with young children still in the home in the workforce. It is about time we make up for them and create the much-needed further opportunity to gain self-reliance during retirement.

So I do not think we can afford the effort that is being made by some of our opponents to turn back the clock in 2011, and I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

I find it kind of interesting because I have a letter from Norman P. Stein, a professor of law at the University of Alabama, not the most liberal institution in the America, dated June 20, 2002. He basically says, and I will quote: “Many in Congress uncritically accepted the lofty expectations of Representatives PORTMAN and CARDIN and industry lobbyists and persuaded themselves that they were voting for a bill that would increase retirement security for middle-class Americans and in particular women,” as the gentleman from Washington State says.

H owever, in the next paragraph: “There is no evidence that the bill has done any of that, but there is evidence that many of the technical provisions are being manipulated by pension planners to allow the most affluent Americans to greatly reduce their taxes and to reduce the retirement benefits for middle-class workers.”

So I really question whether or not women are going to be helped. In fact, I really strongly women are going to be harmed by this. So what is the hurry about extending this package from 2010 to 2011 and beyond? This bill is in effect now. It has no impact for the next 8 years.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of New York, (Mr. HINCHELY), a member of the House Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HINCHELY. Mr. Speaker, when the specific provisions contained in this bill as before us this morning first came before the House in the 106th Congress, there were only a handful of us who voted against it, in spite of the fact that the bill was enormously complex, incredibly detailed, and hardly anyone, other than staff members, had any real idea of what was in it.

We voted against it because we thought that the bill would harm the retirement future of the vast majority of Americans, while, at the same time, it would provide ways in which those who were in charge of the retirement systems in individual companies could manipulate those systems in ways that would benefit them specifically, again, the vast majority of their employees.

When the bill came back last year, a larger number of people voted against it. It was contained in a larger bill. Why? Because I think people are beginning to realize very clearly what is going on here. The whole pension program in this country is under change; and in fact, the pensions of the vast majority of Americans are under assault.

The previously popular defined benefit plans, which most corporations had for most of their employees, have now essentially gone out the window. We have flexible plans, plans that are not defined, plans that are not clear as to what the benefits will be. And the enormous amounts of money, tens of millions, hundreds of millions, in some cases billions, of dollars that are tied up in pension programs in various places and in corporations around the country are being manipulated by the corporate executives for their own advantage, for their retirement situation, for their golden parachutes, for their specific needs, to the detriment of the vast majority of employees.

Now, what do we have in this bill that is before us this morning? In spite of the experience of the last several years, the Enrons, the Global Crossings, and on and on and on, in spite of all that experience recently, now we have a bill that would make permanent the most egregious provisions of the bill that was passed previously and does nothing whatsoever to make permanent the single provision in the original bill that benefitted low-income, middle-income employees, the vast majority of people who work for these corporations.

This bill is bad. We need to support the substitute and defeat the bill in chief.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

I am somewhat perplexed by the argument because most of the provisions, almost 100 percent of the provisions that are in the underlying bill, are in the Democratic substitute. So I am not sure what the arguments being made against the underlying bill are really about.

There is a very small difference, and we will get the chance to talk about that as it relates to the highly complicated test that really helps companies provide matches for their employees, which help modest-income people. The overwhelming amount of dollars in the bill go to the same provisions that are in both the Democratic substitute and in the underlying bill.

As I pointed out earlier, the Democratic substitute costs six times as much as the underlying bill. So I think the arguments being made may be reserved for the substitute, where there is a major difference between the Democrats and the Republicans and it is worthy of debate. But on the underlying bill and the importance of increasing the limits and increasing portability, helping women with the catch-up contributions, I am pleased to see that Democrats have incorporated in their substitute the same provisions as the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

I might just say that when the substitute is offered, actually by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL), he will outline the bill. Much of the provisions, such as the IRA expansion, the 401(k) expansion, they are in the main bill and also in the substitute as well.

We have one thing in our substitute that is in current law that the underlying bill, the Republican bill, does not have, and that is the tax credit for small savers, the nonrefundable tax credit for small savers. Why that was taken out remains to be seen, because that was probably the only thing for the average worker in that legislation last year. But, nevertheless, we have it in our bill and they do not have it in their bill.

I might just also say, Mr. Speaker, there are some provisions in the bill that we do not have in ours, that is, that are in the Republican bill that we do not have in ours, and that is the fine print. They are the provisions that will really give high-management, top-management employees greater benefits than the average worker. We will be talking about that during the motion on the substitute itself.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CAMP), from the Committee on Ways and Means.

(Mr. CAMP asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, I support the Retirement Savings Security Act, which has been introduced by my colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Portman).

The pension measures contained in the original Economic Growth and Tax Relief Act include many long-sought provisions for our Nation’s public sector employees and their State and local government-sponsored retirement plans. Twenty-eight national associations, representing State and local governments, government officials, and
Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, various Members who have spoken on this bill have talked about the fact that there are things that we agree with. I think all Members of Congress like the idea that we can put another thousand dollars in our IRA. Some of us who are over 50 can add an extra $500, if we did not do it before. Those benefits that benefit us, we certainly like them, and they are in the bill, and we like them. Nobody should want to hide that.

But what I want to bring this issue, and I think that somebody has to sometime explain to me the equity questions here, if 77 percent of the benefits go to people in the top 20 percent in this country, and 42 percent go to the top 5 percent in this country, where is the equity when we bring the bill to make it permanent and leave out the one piece that was there for the small savers?

Now, for the life of me, why for PR purposes would we want to give more to people at the top than to people at the bottom? It is that we were giving to people that expires in 2006, it does not even make it to 2010, but they took it away. They took it away. They said, we do not need those folks. Now, last year’s bill, let me provide a non-refundable tax credit for low- and middle-income workers who elect to contribute to either an employer-sponsored program, like a 401(k) at the Enron company, or an IRA. The maximum credit of $1,000 was available to taxpayers filing a joint return with an income up to $30,000, we are not talking about rich people here, $30,000 is below the average income in this country, that is all they have, or single filers up to $15,000.

Now, these would seem to me to be the people that the other side of the aisle would want to save. We would want to give them an incentive. We do not need to encourage people who have a lot of income to save. They have got it already; but they save some more, that is nice, and get it tax free.

But the people on the bottom, a husband and a wife making $15,000 a piec, that is a little over $1,000 a month, which means about $250, $300 a week. So they are not cleaning up. But the other side of the aisle has that provision, and it goes out to 2006, and then it is dropped. They are now going to make things permanent, and they now impose a lot of limitation. They have got it already; but they save some more, that is nice, and get it tax free.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDERMOTT) to respond.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear that they have an answer, although it seems inadequate to me that they have more hearings on the poor folks, but we do not need any more hearings on the people on the top. No, that is perfect.

The gentleman questions my number. The Joint Taxation and Economic Policy says 66.9 percent goes to the top 20 percent, 42 percent goes to the top 5 percent. That comes out in the Joint Tax Committee the same. The Joint Tax Committee has talked about income distribution over and over again. They are saying that 75 or more percent goes to the top of the scale.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McDERMOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I respond to the gentleman regarding where that data comes from for two reasons: One, as the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) and the other side of the aisle has just said, most of the money in this bill actually goes in the IRA. People on average make less than $30,000 a year, so the numbers could not be right.

Second, the gentleman does not understand the purpose of this bill if the gentleman thinks it is all about doing an income distribution. This is about expanding pension savings for low- and moderate-income Americans.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, the whole purpose of this legislation is to try to expand for those 76 million Americans who have no retirement savings at all right now, including those who work in small businesses where fewer than 20 percent of businesses offer a plan, to get them to offer plans. How do we do it? Yes, by increasing the deductions, very importantly by simplifying the plans, taking out some of the costs and taking out some of the burdens. That is what is going to expand coverage for low- and moderate-income Americans. That is the point of the bill. None of the income analysis of the gentleman is taking that into account.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PORTMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman is misstating what the point of the bill is. The point of the bill is to give people at the top more ways to save more money.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I should know what the point of the bill is since on a bipartisan basis we have spent 5 years putting it together, fully vetted by all committees of Congress, including the Committee on Ways and Means that had jurisdiction.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, under current law, Ken Lay and 109 others from Enron Corporation were able to give themselves pension benefits of $330 million. This is under current law. Basically what this legislation does is loosens it. Obviously, the high-income people are getting in on the money. The top 5 percent are going to get 42 percent, and the top 20 percent are going to get 77 percent.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, it is said that a rising tide lifts all boats. Certainly this tide lifts some boats. The yachts do pretty well. Over three-fourths of the tax reductions in this bill go to the wealthiest 20 percent of Americans. Almost half of the tax breaks go to the wealthiest 5 percent. The other 95 percent, most of whom are in rowboats, they remain anchored at the bottom.

The “Savers’ Credit,” targeted at low-income workers and the working poor who earned $30,000 or less, is the only provision that will not be permanently extended. It expires on New Year’s Eve of 2006, sooner than the provisions that are being extended. But for some unknown reason, we are told we need to study the working poor who lack retirement security now and do not have adequate retirement savings. We are going to study that and not extend it, but the top 5 percent, they get their benefits made permanent.

Under this bill, companies even get a tax incentive. That is right. Uncle Sam helps them with their taxes if they stuff their retirement plans with more company stock, the kind of problem that capsized the Enron employees. As if there were not already enough incentives for companies to put their stock into company plans, they get more in this bill.

What happens to the 95 percent who are anchored in the rowboats in a rising tide? Well, they get swamped; and it is the richest who already have some retirement plans who get to bailout. There is a word for this, and it has multiple meanings in this context. It is “dinghy,” and this is “dinghy” to extend this program on a permanent basis.

There are good provisions in this bill. There are so many such provisions in the bill that I voted for it when it was up for consideration in the last Congress. Some of the provisions that were less publicized and never noted in debate in the fine print of this extended bill, like the tax incentive for companies to put more of their own company stock into the company plan, were not publicized and were not well known, and a vote in favor of them is certainly not a vote to be proud of.

But I do not know many people that are now planning their New Year’s Eve party for this coming year. Yet the sponsors of this legislation, they are already thinking about New Year’s Eve in 2010, because if we take no action today, on New Year’s Eve of 2010, all of these benefits will be gone.

Of course there are a few Congresses that meet between now and 2010. And there are some problems that exist right now that cannot wait until 2010. There is the Enron problem where the people at the top are selling their stock through their stock options while at the same time they are telling the employees to keep the company stock and put more of it into the plan. That is what happened at Enron. What does this bill, or anything else this Congress has done, do to remedy that? Absolutely nothing. There is the problem of three out of four people in this country who earn less than $25,000 according to the Consumer Federation who do not have an adequate retirement. Yet this bill refuses to continue permanently their benefits.

Today is the longest day of summer, and the lobbyists are here telling us that they want to ensure that the sun never sets on the privileges they gained in this bill, but they do not care, about extending benefits to the people earning under $30,000. Do not be fooled. This is not about sunshine. The Members have been left in the dark about many features of this bill. It ought to be rejected.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I just want to remind my colleague that he voted for this legislation three times without any low-income saver provision in it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

(Mr. ANDREWS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I am one of the people who voted for the underlying bill. I think it is excellent in many ways. I agree with the gentleman from Maryland’s analysis and the gentleman from Ohio’s analysis of the underlying bill. But I am not going to vote for this extension today, and I would adopt the reasoning that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SCHOLZ) put forward just a few minutes ago.

Right now for every $100 that we are spending to run our government, we are bringing in $30 worth of revenue. We are borrowing the other $20. We are borrowing about half of it from the Social Security trust fund, and we are going to borrow the other half from the private capital markets. I have come to the floor in the last several weeks and voted against a lot of things which I would like to see happen. I would like to see more aid, but I voted against the Export-Import Bank reauthorization. I would like to see the marriage penalty permanently done.
away with, but I voted against the permanent cessation of it. I am one who favors the permanent repeal of the estate tax, but I did not vote for the permanent repeal of the estate tax. And as strongly as I feel about the merits of this tax, and they are not in any meritorious, I think the principle of doing anything that reduces revenue by borrowing from the Social Security trust fund and from the private capital markets that fuel our economy is a mistake.

It is painful to oppose things that one embraces, and I embrace these; and I certainly do not mean to imply that the supporters of this bill are fiscally irresponsible. Many of them would say that my judgment that the highest priority of this country at this time is to get back into the black. The highest priority, therefore, will lead me to oppose the bill.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, as we have been getting into this debate, a lot of the issues that have been talked about on corporate governance have been debated and enacted last year needs to be permanent. That will help Americans plan and save for their future. That is why we put that provision in the bill. That is why it was not controversial. It was never raised in controversy as it was considered.

We have heard who benefits from the bill. Most of the money goes into the 401(k)s and 403(b)s, modest-income people. We keep hearing the 20 percent figure. You know, 20 percent is $68,000. I do not happen to think that someone who makes $68,000 is particularly wealthy. It is not the Ken Lays of the world. They are modest people who are saving for their retirement. That is why we put that provision in the bill. That is why it was not controversial. It was never raised in controversy as it was considered.

We have heard who benefits from the bill. Most of the money goes into the 401(k)s and 403(b)s, modest-income people. We keep hearing the 20 percent figure. You know, 20 percent is $68,000. I do not happen to think that someone who makes $68,000 is particularly wealthy. It is not the Ken Lays of the world. They are modest people who are saving for their retirement. That is why we put that provision in the bill. That is why it was not controversial. It was never raised in controversy as it was considered.

top-management employees, who today could get 60 percent of the benefits and the workers only 40 percent of the benefits, that is under current law, they can get 70, 80, 90 percent and not pay a penalty as long as they paid the match. So your situation is that the top management gets 90 percent of the benefits, average workers get 10 percent of the benefits, it could be 15 of the top management people and 200 of the workers getting 15 percent to 85 percent, or 90 percent to 10 percent. That is why the top management gets so assuring this legislation. It does not cost the government any money, but I can assure you it will cost the American workers their retirement benefits. That is what is dangerous about this bill.

What is really odd, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that it is in effect. It has only been in effect a year. What we really ought to do is to extend it and make it in perpetuity. What we ought to do is make sure we correct some of the flaws in it. We will find flaws in this legislation. A GAO report will be done. We are going to do a lot of things to find out about this bill. We do not want to be embarrassed. We should not put ourselves in a position where we would not have to do something and we do extend it from 2010 onwards. We do not need to do this now. We need to vote "no" on the underlying bill, and we need to vote "yes" on the substitute when we have an opportunity.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, closing out the first part of this, which is talking about the underlying bill, I would encourage my friend from California to read the fine print again because he is inaccurate with regard to how the top-heavy rules work in this legislation. It keeps the top-heavy rules in place. It does encourage more matching contributions, which is a good thing. It allows us to simplify the rules so that people can offer more pension plans, particularly small businesses. It is supported by a broad spectrum, including the United States Chamber of Commerce, which will go to the record, by including by the Brotherhood of Carpenters, including by the Building and Trades Council of the AFL-CIO.

I encourage all my colleagues to support final passage and extend this good law.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, as a result of our arcane and complicated pension laws, 70 million workers have no pension plan. Unfortunately, Americans who work in small businesses are much less likely to have pension coverage than those who work for larger companies. Among companies with fewer than 100 employees, as many as 80 percent of the workforce have no retirement savings plan available to them.

The primary cause: small business owners find the cost and complexity of setting up and maintaining retirement plans to be overwhelming. So last year, Congress passed the Portman-Cardin pension reforms to help workers save for their future and enable small businesses to offer pension plans to their employees. The changes we made streamline and simplify the complex rules governing our pension system to ensure meaningful coverage of small business employees. They will reduce the administrative burden on small businesses and provide a way to help them establish plans for their workers, including cutting the IRS user fee small businesses have to pay to establish a pension plan and lowering premiums small businesses pay for their defined benefit plans to make that option more attractive.

Several years ago we adopted "SIMPLE" pension plans. That has enabled hundreds of small companies in my district to offer plans to their employees. This modernization of our basic pension law will expand and improve retirement options dramatically, which in the long run will allow working Americans will enjoy financial security in their retirement years. I urge passage of this legislation.

Mr. BLUMENTAVER. Mr. Speaker, it is getting harder to vote for tax legislation, even provisions that I actually strongly support. This bill is not marked by error but eliminate provisions for small savers and it continues an incremental approach to making permanent the massive tax cut of last year despite the changed economic and national security situation. Most troubling, is that we continue to ignore the moral responsibility that demand our attention in reforming the tax code. This bill does not speak to the highest priorities of the American public. It does not move us towards a fiscal framework that is necessarily sustainable and it is certainly not done in a context of long-term consequence. Congress must begin to address the most critical unresolved tax issues that will create fairness and fiscal stability.

Alternative Minimum Tax—Increasingly burdensome, this tax now affects millions of taxpayers, including more working Americans who are currently without coverage. It allows individuals 50 and older to make "catch-up" contributions to ensure they have a secure retirement.

In addition, the Democratic substitute provides pension security for all workers. In specific, the substitute permanently extends the tax credit for low- and moderate-income individuals in order to help them make contributions to their own retirement savings. In the next 15 years, 76 million Boomers will retire. It is time that Congress repeal the sunset provision, but it also includes corporate governance measures that will ensure that executives are held accountable and live by the same rules as rank-in-file workers. Specifically, executives should not be rewarded for moving their company overseas to avoid paying taxes when the nation is engaged in a war against terrorism. The Democratic substitute would ensure that corporate executives of expatriate companies pay their fair share.

I encourage all my colleagues to support final passage and extend this good law.

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I have been in a Medicare and prescription drug discussion for the last two years. Specifically, we owe our nation’s seniors a meaningful health coverage. Every Democratic amendment to improve seniors access to cheaper prescription drugs has been blocked by the Majority. The reason they give is that it costs too much.

I find it amazing than that we are here today organizing giving the richest people in this country another break. Over the next 10 years, millions of Americans will benefit from the increased pension contribution allowances this body passed last year.

I support all Americans saving for their retirement plan and believe over the next ten years they should do just that. However, by permanently extending these pension reforms so early, these same people may be devastated by astronomical health care costs when they retire. We do not have to make the decision on this legislation today. Ten years from now our elderly population is going to explode and we will have no wiggle room to ease their financial burden.

In addition, the huge budget deficit being run up by the federal government will only compound the problem.

Mr. Speaker, for upper-income Americans, this legislation will be a real bonanza and over the next ten years I hope everyone is able to enjoy the proceeds. We all know everyone will not. We have once again pulled out the government credit card and are back to the “buy now pay later” approach. I just want everyone here today to know that we will not feel the effects of this bill for ten years, but when we do it is going to be very bad.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4931, the Retirement Savings Security Act of 2002. I urge my colleagues to join in backing this appropriate measure.

Last year, the House passed sweeping tax reduction legislation. In addition to various tax repeal provisions, that bill also contained a number of improvements designed to strengthen both pensions and individual retirement accounts.

Those provisions included: Increasing the $2,000 IRA contribution limit, for both traditional and Roth IRA, to $5,000 by 2008; increasing annual individual contributions to 401(k) plans to $15,000 by 2006. The inclusion of “catch-up” contributions for workers aged 50 and over for certain types of 401(k)s and IRA, and a number of provisions to facilitate greater portability of pensions and pension portability between jobs.

Those provisions in the tax reduction legislation were intended to make it easier for more Americans to save for retirement. It has been estimated that almost 70 million workers, which is nearly half the nation’s workforce, have no pension plan. Many of these people work for small businesses, which frequently have found the cost and red tape involved in setting up such a plan prohibitive. In acting last year, Congress sought to reduce some of those barriers and subsequently encouraged more companies to set up pension plans and 401(k)s.

Regrettably, an arcane budgetary rule in the Senate required that all of these beneficial provisions sunset after ten years. The House took action to remedy this situation by including the permanent extension of the retirement provisions.

This legislation follows the same line of reasoning: The Portman-Cardin bill envisioned. Those provisions in the tax reduction legislation systems the need for increased personal retirement savings is greater than ever. By increasing the contribution limits for and portability of qualified 401(k) plans and pensions, the Portman-Cardin legislation will help Americans build assets to supplement their Social Security income in retirement. This will improve their quality of life for retirees and ensure that they have the financial resources needed to address any challenge that may emerge.

Congress would do the nation a great disservice by allowing these important reforms to expire. The new increases in personal retirement savings will not expire, and future generations should enjoy the same opportunity to save that the Portman-Cardin bill envisioned. Permanently extending these provisions is the responsible thing to do.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. NEAL OF MASSACHUSETTS

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMON). Mr. Neal? Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the permanent extension of the retirement provisions of the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001. Within the next 15 years, more than 76 million baby boomers will retire. Studies have shown that older baby boomers have less than 40 percent of the savings they will need to maintain their standard of living in retirement. Last year, Congress took action to remedy this situation by including the permanent extension of the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001, in the tax relief bill. I supported this action and believe that the increase in personal retirement savings it will bring about in the coming years will benefit millions of Americans.

The Department of Labor estimates that less than one in every three women are covered by a retirement pension plan. These plans are generally better benefits than Social Security, yet they are not readily available to most women and employees of small businesses. Last year’s bill addressed this concern by providing an immediate benefit—the “catch up” provisions—for working women and individuals age 50 and above.

These provisions are working to reenter the workforce, presumably after raising children, to contribute an additional $5,000 to their IRA. This will allow those approaching retirement age to save the extra money they need, while also allowing women who work intermittently to “catch up” for money not contributed because of time off. This is particularly helpful for working mothers who need to raise children and put them through college.

With the unfunded liability of many government retirement systems the need for increased personal retirement savings is greater than ever. By increasing the contribution limits for and portability of qualified 401(k) plans and pensions, the Portman-Cardin legislation will help Americans build assets to supplement their Social Security income in retirement. This will improve their quality of life for retirees and ensure that they have the financial resources needed to address any challenge that may emerge.

Congress would do the nation a great disservice by allowing these important reforms to expire. The new increases in personal retirement savings will not expire, and future generations should enjoy the same opportunity to save that the Portman-Cardin bill envisioned. Permanently extending these provisions is the responsible thing to do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 451, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Neal) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Portman) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Neal).

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise in support of our Democratic substitute and in opposition to the Republican proposal. This Congress should and can do more to help those workers who were practically left out of the pension bill last year. The gentleman from Ohio knows that my objections really have been fairly narrow largely based upon who is in and who is out of their proposal.

While we are providing these important retirement incentives for the rank and file, we should also try to clean up some of the abuses that have come to light since the demise of Enron and other enormous corporate giants. That is why this Democratic substitute makes significant strides forward for corporate responsibility, which, in the end, by the way, only helps corporations, provisions that are absent in the Republican bill.

Regarding our corporate governance provisions, we must address the issue of corporate expatriates who relocate offshore to avoid paying U.S. taxes.
Currently when a company moves to Bermuda, shareholders are subject to a capital gains tax when they trade their U.S. shares for foreign shares. Corporate executives, such as Stanley’s Tommy John’s Dennis Koslowki, or the other hand, are not required to recognize accrued gain on their stock options. What our substitute does is to require that executives of corporate expatriates are taxed on the accrued gains on their stock options. It is only fair for these executives, who are picking the pockets of the American taxpayer to the tune of $4 billion, to feel some of the pinch.

And what are the reasons that these changes have occurred for people at the everybody that they ship off to the other side, they don’t have to do receive the same benefits as the people at the top end are receiving? It is elementary. After the people at the top exhaust all of the money and set up loans for themselves, by the way, interest-free loans of millions and millions of dollars, there is no money left for the people at the bottom.

How many more abuses can we read of, how many more times do we have to be witness to what is happening to the the pension plans? What went wrong?
The reason we are trying to change, I am not saying we are trying change, but the other side is trying to change these pension rules, is to give more to the people at the top. I ask, as I have repeatedly on this floor, can we, can we, can we in this Congress do anything more to help the wealthy?
I tell you that when the closing days of this Congress occur, the slogan of this Congress is going to be ‘‘We are rich, and we are not going to take it anymore.”

How many times can we come to the assistance of those at the top, even in the face of the headlines we read day after day after day? Homes on Nantucket the shareholders had no idea of, loans of $20 million and $25 million that are interest free, and the boards of directors of these corporations respond by saying, ‘‘I had no idea. I had no idea this was happening.” Then the company goes under, the shareholders lose everything, directors have insurance to cover their problems.

We look at Enron. We look at Enron in this institution, where employees are encouraged to buy stock, told by company rules they cannot unload the people at the bottom, at the same time the heads of the corporation to the person sell off the stock. It is astounding what we witness here. It is as though it is amnesia when we move down the road on these topical challenges.

What this substitute does today is to require that executives of corporate expatriates are taxed on the accrued profits of their stock options. It is only fair, and I know that is a word that we do not use around here, because who wants to be fair to these folks when we can be favorable to them? They are picking the pockets again of the American taxpayer to the tune of $4 billion.
Is it not okay that they feel some of the pinch?

Second, the substitute closes the loophole surrounding executives’ non-qualified deferred compensation plans.
These plans are specifically designed to be out of the reach of creditors during default. During bankruptcy.

What do we say to those people at Enron? Who covered them during bank-r uptcy, when they lost everything? But there is never any money left to take care of those people.

One of the things I pride myself on,
Mr. Speaker, is where I grew up. We were not into stock options, and we were not into pension plans and sophisticated tax planning. But you know what, Mr. Speaker? There is not one example of where we have stood by and watched what happened at Enron. They had far too much honor. And we should not be defending those practices in this wonderful old House.

Now, third, there are some executives who manipulate pension plans in order to create illusory cost savings. Well, we have all read about what these cost savings mean and how they are done.

These phantom savings allow executives to meet performance goals which by the way, they quickly retreat from,
and then they receive large tax deduct-able bonuses. Tax deductible bonuses.

Well, the Democratic substitute demands today accountability from these companies and their executives by ensuring that tax deductible bonus pay is not, not, based on pension plan manipulation.

Finally, and I hope we can all listen to this, finally this week it was revealed that 109 Enron executives reap $330 million in severance pay at the same time the employees saw their retirement plans, their job security, their investment plans wiped out.
Their retirement plans are gone. And what do we want to do here today?
More for the people at the top by this proposal that the Republicans are offering.

These executives were rewarded for sinking the company and bad behavior.
This Congressional substitute today addresses this issue by applying an excise tax on the executives’ golden parachutes when they have steered the company and the employees down with the Hindenburg.

Now, let me if I can, and the gentleman from California (Mr. Matsui) or anybody else may if they would like to say something, let me turn to some of the changes we have made to improve and reform the pension provisions in the underlying bill. That is really what we are trying to do, to improve the bill.

First, the original bill included a saver’s credit, which is a nonrefundable

H3800  CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE  June 21, 2002
At the same time that President Bush is rightly asking for a $38 billion homeland security program, at the same time we are prepared to debate $48 billion more of defense spending, who is going to pay for it? We do not want to help these people with their pensions, but we want them to pay their taxes so they can support the defense buildup.

The motion to recommit we are going to entertain later on, Mr. Speaker, is going to include the first vote on the defense budget. If we are going to have an example opportunity during the course of the remaining days of this session for this House to be recorded on how people feel about Bermuda.

I must tell you that in this debate, in this discussion, there is an effort at any sort of class warfare as much as it is the essential argument over what constitutes fairness in American life, how we come to the aid of those kids that are over in Afghanistan, how we come to the assistance of those who sacrifice every day. If we are in a war, it is a question of national purpose, and we all rally around the challenge that is in front of us. My fondest hope is that wisdom will prevail in this institution and we will have an opportunity to vote on this.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman just talked about.

Why would we want to weaken these fairness rules? Why would we substitute in states these rules and close loopholes by preventing companies from double counting contributions.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when we get on a bit more in this debate this afternoon, I am going to provide an opportunity, the first of many, but I guarantee you an opportunity, before this session closes, to have Members of this Congress vote on these companies that are moving to Bermuda so they can avoid paying American taxes.

We are going to have a chance once and for all to follow the lead of the Senate, when it is the House, by the way, that is supposed to lead on these issues, to take on the issue and put our fingerprints on the Bermuda question.

We are going to sponsor a Bermuda Day here in the near future. We are going to get a vote on that issue before this session closes. In all the time, words and stories that we have generated on Bermuda is the time I wish to tell you I have received one letter against my position. One letter.

I would lay down the same gauntlet that I have done in the past. Put our Bermuda bill on the floor, put a Bermuda bill on the floor, and I guarantee you 300 votes to do something I wish these companies moving to Bermuda to escape American taxes.

At the same time that President Bush is rightly asking for a $38 billion homeland security program, at the same time we are prepared to debate $48 billion more of defense spending, who is going to pay for it? We do not want to help these people with their workers behind, increase the number of companies removing good white collar jobs out of this country. That could happen with some of this if we are not careful about that, because under our international tax laws as they are currently constructed, there is an advantage to being a U.S. company. We need to change that to be sure these companies stay in the United States. We do not want to do something; although well intended and important, that would encourage more companies to go offshore, particularly to get bought out by foreign companies, as was the case with DaimlerChrysler.

Now, there are a few provisions, three that I have been able to identify in looking at the substitute, that do relate to the underlying pension bill.

I will tell you this afternoon I believe that these provisions that relate to the complexity and to the burdens which have been discussed earlier will harm the very workers you say you want to help. Why do I say this? What do we do in a very rational way, a very moderate way, is go into these rules and complexities and try to deal with some of the incredible burdens that small companies face when they are trying to put together a pension policy.

The top-heavy rules are in addition to the nondiscrimination testing rules. Again, President Clinton's advisory group said repeal them. The small business community said repeal them. We said, no, we want to make sure that this bill is fair.

Fairness is about providing retirement security to low-income workers. That is what this bill is all about. You want to go in here and add those burdens and regulations back on. You want to discourage matching contributions, which I do not get. Why would you not want workers to be able to get matching contributions from their own employer rather than just putting their own money into 401(k)s? I do not understand why you would want to go back to the bad old days.

We talked about it earlier. For 20 years this Congress did all it could to discourage pensions by increasing burdens, costs and liabilities, and decreasing the benefits and the contribution levels. All we do in our legislation is go into these rules, which I do not get. Why would we want to discourage matching contributions, which I do not get. Why would we want workers to be able to get matching contributions from their own employer rather than just putting their own money into 401(k)s? I do not understand why you would want to go back to the bad old days.

Finally, these provisions that the gentleman just talked about are very far-reaching. Talk about complex, we spent 5 years, had a lot of hearings, a lot of vetting of the pension provisions that the gentleman and many Members are just now deciding they now understand and they are changing their minds on, but these have not been vetted. These have not been subject to hearings. These have not had the kind of time and effort into them that are necessary. The drain is not going to increase the number of companies that leave our shores, increase the number of companies that are leaving not well-meaning, not because there are not very important issues being discussed here on corporate governance, on executive compensation, and so on, but because they are not related to this underlying bill, they have not been voted as the underlying bill has been voted.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I believe that the gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the Democratic leader, is here, and I yield 2 minutes to her.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the substitute and commend the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSU) for his leadership on this very important issue.

Mr. Speaker, if we have learned anything from Enron, Arthur Andersen and others, it is that some corporations do not act in the best interest of investors, customers, and even of their own employees. We certainly do not paint all businesses with the same brush, but we must act to restore confidence in our financial system and in the stock market.

The Republican leadership has ignored the issue of corporate malfeasance. What little they have done to address the Enron crisis has actually weakened current law protecting employee pensions. The Democratic substitute on the floor today offers common-sense protections and reforms. It ends the practice of giving executives golden parachutes while workers in the companies they helped bankrupt are left to crash to the ground. The Democratic legislation would keep tax dollars from disappearing into the Bermuda Triangle by barring corporations from creating shell corporations in Bermuda or other offshore locations.

Under the Democratic bill corporate executives could no longer be able to protect their benefit gains while leaving employees with worthless stock, and the Democratic bill would help moderate and low-income individuals plan for their futures by extending a tax credit that encourages retirement savings.

Mr. Speaker, those who oppose reform claim that in reigning corporate excess, we will stamp out the entrepreneurial spirit that makes this country great. Coming from California where the entrepreneurial spirit is in the air and in the water, I see that the spirit to innovate, originate, and invent will not be crushed by a ban on lying, cheating, and stealing.

One of our Founding Fathers, James Madison, once noted that “if all men were angels, no government would be necessary.” Every day we see in the headlines that we are not angels. We in Congress have a responsibility to protect hard-working Americans. The Democratic substitute does just that, and I urge my colleagues to support the substitute of the aisle to support this commonsense substitute and oppose the underlying bill.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. McCrery), who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. McCrery. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the bill that is on the floor today has everything to do with retirement planning, with the average employee of a company, whether it is a big company or a small company in this country, being able to plan with some certainty his retirement benefits. It has nothing, nothing to do with Enron, corporate inversions, companies moving to Bermuda; nothing.

This bill that we are debating today and that we are trying to make permanent in the Tax Code is for the average worker in this country. We have heard the statistics today: Two-thirds of families have IRAs averaging less than $50,000 a year. We are not talking about fat cats, we are not talking about rich executives, we are talking about common people who are struggling to put aside something so that they will have some security in retirement.

The underlying bill gives those average people some added tools to use to supply that security. That is what we should be doing today, that is what we should be discussing today, just as this House did on a bipartisan basis several months ago with votes from this House of over 400 of our 435 Members. Really, this should be a rubber stamp today. We should just meet and say, gosh, that Senate rule that created this 10-year sunset is nuts, and we ought to say, Senate, use your 60 votes to override that silly rule, and let us make this good legislation that we passed on a bipartisan basis permanent.

That is what we should be doing today, but instead, some are taking advantage of the generosity of the Committee on Rules in giving 60 minutes of debate time to a substitute by the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSU), and then a motion to recommit. They are taking advantage of that generosity to highlight issues that they think are going to have some value from a political sense. That is fine. We are all in politics; we are in government. But in the audience, the public, whoever might be listening to this ought to know that is what is going on. It has nothing to do with the underlying bill. The underlying bill is good. Over 400 of us agree with that, and probably today, a few more maybe not 400, but a lot on both sides, are going to vote to confirm that.

But I am the chairman of the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the Committee on Ways and Means. The chairman of the bill committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas), has asked me to work with the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL) and to work with the gentleman from New York (Mr. McNulty), who is the ranking member of my subcommittee, to address some of the issues that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL) has brought up in the substitute, the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSU), and I agree with the gentleman.

I agree with the gentleman that there are problems in the Tax Code and in other parts of our Nation’s laws with respect to those issues that he brought up. I want to work with him and others to solve some of those problems. We are going to have our first hearing on corporate inversions next week in my subcommittee. The gentleman is on my subcommittee, and I am glad he is on there. He has introduced some legislation which I think has some merit; it has also some problems, and those are the kinds of things we are going to discuss at a hearing setting, which is where we should do it, not on the floor of the House on an unrelated bill.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the underlying bill and rejection of the substitute.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The Chair would remind Members to refrain from inappropriate references to the Senate or its procedures.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I have great regard for the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. McCrery). He is a bright guy and a very capable guy here. But I must tell my colleagues this: In 14 years here I have not heard a substitute referred to as the “generous spirit” of the majority toward the minority. This is an elementary legislative courtesy that we are supposed to extend to each other. If the House is constructed the way it is, unlike the European system where they face each other, this is done so that we can look at each other and at the same time listen to each other. I hope that we are not at the point of in this session where getting a substitute is generosity.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Bentsen).

(Mr. BENTSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I was an original cosponsor of the underlying bill, and I support the underlying bill. I think it makes a lot of sense. I think it is a bill about investment rather than consumption. While I have very deep concerns and opposed the 2001 tax cut, and I think it is undeniable that the reason we are back in deficits now and not paying down the debt is because, in large part, of that tax cut. I happen to think that it is good public policy to extend it.
But I am going to support the substitute that the gentleman from Massachusetts offers for one reason in particular. I want to reference what the gentleman from Louisiana just said.

As a lot of Members know, I am not going to be aloof in my remarks today, so I do not have a political issue that I am particularly concerned about. I am concerned about good public policy. I am deeply concerned about what is going on in corporate America today and in our general economy.

Today in Bloomberg’s Financial News, there is a story about global fund managers who are moving out of U.S. stocks and bonds and into European and Asian stocks and bonds. The principal reason for doing that is because they are concerned about the continuing crisis in corporate governance in America. I will read a quote from one of the bond managers who says, “Post-Enron, investors are searching for simple businesses they can understand without aggressive accounting policies.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have been involved in some of the corporate governance bills, and I hope to be involved with them as we move forward, and I think there is a lot to do. I think the Congress is still playing catch-up to where the exchanges are, to where the New York Stock Exchange went the other week with the proposal that they put out, and I think we have to do a lot more to restore confidence in our markets.

America has the most efficient, transparent, dynamic markets of anywhere in the world, but they are in trouble today, and, as a result, they are creating a malaise over our general economy, which means our recovery will be weak, which means our unemployment will stay high, and it means that shareholders, the American people, will be the ones that suffer.

The support the substitute of the gentleman from Massachusetts. It is the right thing for the Congress to make a statement on that today, and I hope that the House will follow suit and pass it.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before us today, H.R. 4931, deserves consideration by the House because of its potential benefit to the long term health of the economy. While I remain deeply concerned about the overall direction of the nation’s fiscal policy and return of deficits due in large part to the 2001 tax cut, the underlying bill, originally known as Portman-Cardin of which I was an original cosponsor, is aimed toward increasing savings which would have both fiscal and monetary benefits in the long run.

Furthermore, while there is merit in the argument that the provisions contained in this bill will not be repealed for nine years providing ample time to consider an extension in conjunction with our complete fiscal policy, these provisions are about savings, not consumption and long term in nature. Retirement planning is planning for the long term and the establishment of long term wealth.

That was our intent when the House adopted this legislation in 2000, long before the 2001 tax cut. Additionally, compared to the exorbitant costs of previous permanent extensions of the 2001 tax cut, this bill’s long term cost is a mere $6 billion.

The underlying focus of the Portman-Cardin bill was to increase incentives for Americans to save. For the past several years, our nation has under invested in retirement savings, which curtails our ability to have long term economic growth. In addition, a low or negative savings rate means that most Americans are not fully prepared for retirement at the same time that we know Social Security is facing financial and demographic pressures. I truly believe we should establish policies which encourage increased long term savings by individuals. In particular, we should work to encourage such savings among middle and lower middle income Americans, who are less likely to do so because of less disposable income. Providing monetary incentives can result in greater savings among these groups. The bill as enacted dramatically increases the amounts individuals and families can save tax free in individual retirement accounts and thrift savings plans like 401(k) accounts. It eases transfers among public sector thrift savings plans to private sector plans and corrects deficiencies in labor union sponsored 415 plans.

Portman-Cardin also included a provision authored by Representative BLUNT and myself to increase the availability of thrift savings plans for small employers. In effect, 64 percent of all individuals employed by small businesses are likely to have an employer matching plan compared to 64 percent of larger employers. Our bill, which was incorporated into Portman-Cardin, streamlined regulation and eased the creation of employer matching plans for employees. The bill allowed such employers to establish qualified small employer pension plans and requires employers to match employee contributions. While much has been said about the bill’s repeal of “top heavy” rules limiting benefits to senior management, it remains our intent to ensure that such provisions did not serve as an impediment for small employers to set up any plan at all. Furthermore, we should remember that under such qualified plans, the employer must match employee contributions.

I also understand the concern posed by my colleagues that the bill before us today does not extend the small saver tax credit, which I strongly support. This provision was originally designed as a five year pilot and was not subject to sunset due to Senate rules as other provisions that expired in 2001 tax cut were. So, while that was not the intent of the original bill, I am pleased that the Democratic substitute would extend this provision because I believe it will also yield increased savings among lower income Americans.

Mr. Speaker, while I support the underlying bill, I intend to support the Democratic substitute offered by Mr. NEAL because I believe the Congress needs to make a stronger statement on the conduct of corporate executives who have abused the trust of their employees and shareholders at the expense of market confidence. I believe that our equity markets and economy are suffering in part from a malaise associated to the excesses of a number of high profile corporate executives and their leaders, be they Enron, Xerox, Tyco or Adelphia. Not a day goes by that another accounting restatement is issued or an SEC investigation commenced. As corporate executives are shown the door by their boards of directors, all too often they are leaving with a hefty sum, while stockholders and employees are left paying the till. Market confidence has been damaged in this country, and now we are beginning to see the signs that foreign investors too are becoming skeptical of investing in our public companies. Just this morning, Bloomberg Financial News reported that foreign investors are moving out of investments in U.S. companies because of concern over corporate governance and accounting accuracy.

Given the size of our current account deficit, a decline in foreign investment will have detrimental effects on our long term growth. As the world’s strongest, most transparent and dynamic economy, we must not allow the acts of a few to wreak damage on us all. Yet if we fail to act, we will continue to suffer a loss of confidence which will be felt not just in the corporate board rooms but in pension plans and the general economy. I think that the substitute includes important provisions which hold corporate executives accountable, if not putting them on par with other shareholders and their employees. Given that the exchanges and major investors have already begun to take such steps, too should the Congress.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I support the substitute because of its statement on the need for improved corporate accountability. But, let me be clear to my colleagues, whereas I remain concerned about the budget busting effects of the 2001 tax cut, I do extend some of the more expensive items contained within it, without any real plan to bring the budget back into balance, I support the underlying bill because rather than increase deficits and consumption, it will have the effect of increasing savings, and ultimately growth in the economy.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER), a Member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the base bill; the Portman legislation, to make permanent the retirement savings provisions in what we call or label the Bush tax cut.

I am proud to say, Mr. Speaker, that there are good things in the Bush tax cut to help working class families save for retirement. We are going to hear some partisan rhetoric on the other side, but the bottom line is, the question before us is, do we make permanent the opportunity to set aside money in a voluntary way for retirement, particularly in a middle-class 401(k) plan in your IRA, and, if you are a building trades person, to be able to get more in your pension fund.

I would note in the legislation before us today that we increased the Bush tax cut to $2,000 to $5,000, the amount that one can set aside in an IRA. When this provision expires, we go back to $2,000. Also in the 401(k)s, we increase from $11,000 to $15,000 the amount that can be set aside in the 401(k). If we fail to make it permanent, that is gone as well. Something that benefits those who I call the working moms or the empty-nesters is that we allow those aged 50 and older to make an extra contribution to their IRA or 401(k). Someone in a 401(k) can add an additional $5,000. So if one is returning to the workforce when the kids are out of college, and you have a little extra money, you can make up those missed contributions. So if your income was a little less and you had a lot of expenses.

I also want to note that the building trades support making permanent the Bush tax cuts retirement savings provisions. They stand in support of this legislation. They have sent a letter to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) endorsing making permanent the Bush tax cuts provisions on retirement savings. The reason is because of provision in the Bush tax cuts which helps millions, almost 9 million working middle-class building trades people, members of building trade unions, carpenters and laborers and operating engineers, cement finishers and others, electricians, who, because of the level of shirk, have special legal protections in the case of financial distress. H.R. 4931 does nothing for the average American. H.R. 4931 represents a massive transfer of wealth from the working rank and file employees to self-serving executives. Vote for the Matsui substitute.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY), on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, today is an interesting day on the House floor, as the Democrats ladle hypocrisy from the Caldron of cynicism and political rhetoric. They are talking about a lot of issues other than the underlying issue. They are bringing up names like Tyco and Enron. I notice an absence of any mention of union pension funds that have been looted fraudulently by their own leaders. Do not accuse their advocates and allies of those kinds of crimes. Do not bring them up. Let us deflect the issue of the importance of this bill.

This bill is important, important to millions of Americans. It is about portability. H.R. 4931 will ensure that these reforms remain in place and that the barriers to pension portability do not return.

Under the bipartisan provisions of this bill, which were developed by my colleague, the gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. POMEROY), workers for the first time will be able to move retirement benefits between the different varieties of retirement plans offered by for-profit, not-for-profit, and State and local government employees.

In a provision especially important to public school teachers and other State and local employees who move between different States and districts, the tax law allows these workers to use the savings in their 403(b) and 457 plans to accrue greater pension benefits in the States in which they conclude their careers.

Mr. Speaker, provisions that this bill make today will make permanent to allow millions of Americans to keep more of their retirement savings in one place by allowing them to roll their tax-deductible IRA funds into the tax-advantaged retirement plan. Portability reforms also allow any after-tax contributions to the workplace plan to be rolled into an IRA.

The provisions we want to make permanent also help workers build meaningful retirement benefits. Quick- ly in today's mobile economy by reducing the period of time it takes for workers to take possession of the matching contributions their employers make to the 401(k) accounts. Under the 2001 tax law voted on by some 400-plus Members, employer-matching contributions will be vested either 100 percent after 3 years or in increments over 6 years.

For the sake of millions of American workers whose retirements will depend on the pensions they have worked hard to create, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4931 and reject the substitute.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to guarantee the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY), who is my friend, that I will verbally let any union official who union that steals any money from employees. But I hope we are not suggesting that what happened at Enron is akin to what has happened with unions here or there, where somebody has siphoned off money. At Enron, everybody at the lower end lost their pension benefits.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT).

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, there have probably been enough explanations of what is in this bill. The question really remains: Why should we deal with the gentleman from Massachusetts' proposal for some corporate governance changes?

I was reading the Bible recently, and I read in the second chapter of Luke about the fact that in the days of Cæsar Augustus, everybody went to their home village to be taxed. That is how come Jesus’ mother was riding on a donkey up the road 100 miles. The Roman Empire got unfair. It became unfair, and they had to tax everybody out in the bushes. Nobody was paying anything in Rome.

Well, we say, what does that have to do with us? Santayana said that if we do not learn from history, we are going to repeat it. We had the 1890s in this country, where the economy got way out of whack and we had a collapse. In the 1920s, we had the Roaring Twenties, and what did we get? We came right to the edge of going with the Soviet Union in communism. There was a lot of fear in this country. That is why when Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who was no great liberal, came into the Presidency, he said, hey, look, we have to make this place fair.
What we have done in the 1990s is go back to what we did in the 1890s and in the 1920s, and we are spreading out this country so that the people on the top have got all of it, or are getting more of it, I should say, and the people on the bottom are scraping to make it.

What is going on in Enron is not fair. If I cannot sell my stock because I work there, and the boss can sell his, that is not fair. That is why we are here. Members ought to vote for this proposal.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE).

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I would like to speak in support of H.R. 4931 and substitute.

One of the key features of the bill, as far as I am concerned, is portability of pension benefits. In my previous occupation, the average term that anyone had at one school was usually 3 years. Sometimes they left because they wanted to; most of the time they left because people did not want them around anymore. So, as a result, we had a lot of people at the end of their coaching careers that had absolutely no retirement benefits left. These were not necessarily wealthy people. These were usually assistant coaches, sometimes high school coaches. So since their population was more mobile, I think this really applies to a large percentage of our population.

Secondly, I would like to mention the fact that this bill is particularly critical for our young people. Both parties, whether they are Democrat or Republican, are certainly going to see to it that the Social Security retirement benefits are there for those who need them the most—those who are near retirement; but the future is not nearly as bright for those young people who are in their teens, in their twenties, or their thirties.

I think everyone can recognize over the next 50 years the proportion of retirees rises and the proportion of those paying Social Security taxes declines. Eventually we have a train wreck that is on the way. It is a pay-as-you-go system, so permanently increasing 401(k) and IRA limits is critical, particularly for our young people, because the main hope these young people have for any type of retirement security has to do with their long-term strategy, and 401(k)s and IRAs. So one cannot plan if this bill with Enron, that it has nothing to do with those corporations that renounce America and move off to Bermuda. They are absolutely right in those statements. That is what is wrong with this bill. That is why I am opposed to it, and every reason to vote for this substitute is a reason to vote against the underlying bill.

It is strange that Congress would meet today to solve a problem that is alleged to exist for people on New Year’s Eve of 2010, instead of dealing with the problems that American families face today in 2002. But I think there is a friend of mine down in Austin, Texas, who understands why this is true. His name is Willy Nelson. He sang a song that goes, ‘‘If you’ve got the money, honey, I’ve got the time.’’

Let me tell you something: the people who ‘‘got the money, they are the People who ran Enron and Congress. They keep setting an agenda to help the privileged few at the top and ignore the corporate misconduct that has occurred in this country, much of which would never have happened had they not enabled it to happen with the bills they passed and the bills they held up in committee.

This Democratic substitute addresses a real 2002 problem, not some mythical concern that our colleagues have made about corporations that renounce America to the ordinary taxpayer, and said, ‘‘it is akin to punishing a tax payer for choosing to itemize instead of taking the standard deduction.’’ It is that kind of callous attitude that we need a referendum on today—whether we are going to defend those corporations that renounce America and refuse to hold up their responsibilities at a time of national need or whether we are going to protect employees.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. GALLEGLY), a real champion of IRA expansion.

(Mr. GALLEGLY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak today in support of the underlying legislation and in opposition to the substitute.

I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN), the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN), and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) for reporting a bill that provides permanent retirement security for all Americans by allowing people to put more money into a traditional IRA or a traditional pension plan beyond 2011.

In addition, this important legislation will make permanent the provision of the Bush tax cut that increases IRA contributions. I have worked hard in the past legislation to increase IRA contributions for many years, which is so critical to retirement savings.

Mr. Speaker, middle-class Americans depend on traditional IRAs to supplement their retirement income. Seventy-two percent of people contributing to an IRA make less than $50,000 per year, and the average contributor earns approximately $30,000 per year. Many of these Americans do not have generous 401(k) plans or stock options to help them build a nest egg.

Prior to the enactment of last year’s tax cut, inflation had cut the value of IRAs sharply since 1981, the last time IRA contributions were increased. Saving for retirement requires long-term planning. Individuals and families need to save for many years in advance of leaving the workforce.

Although the tax cut enacted last year will now gradually increase the IRA contributions to $5,000 by 2007, without further action by Congress, this increase will expire in 2010 and the amount people can contribute to their IRAs will revert back to $2,000.

After taking into account inflation, this amount will fall well short of what is needed to save for retirement. By increasing the IRA contribution limit and making it permanent, we provide families with a certainty needed for their long-term retirement planning.

I strongly urge my colleagues to pass this measure.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN).

(Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, let me try to be clear what disturbs so many of us. First of all, my colleagues are making all of this permanent. There is a kind of rush to rashness, and therefore, they are really doing something that is illusory. They are digging this fiscal hole so deep that what they have made permanent will have to become temporary. The fiscal situation simply will not, in the end, allow this.

Secondly, it is so one-sided. They are making permanent the provisions that relate not only to the higher income, the predominantly higher-income people, but when it comes to the saver credit, they do not want to do that. They say it needs further study. So for those provisions that benefit lower-and middle-income families predominantly, they want something that is temporary, something that needs further study, but when it comes to a tax break that will benefit mostly the wealthy and the very wealthy, like the estate tax or, in this case, predominantly to those that are better off, they say they want to make it permanent.

So, therefore, there is a natural question raised: Whose side are my colleagues on? That is why the issue of Enron, that is why all of these issues come around because when it comes to breaks for the very, very wealthy, they say they are either silent or permanently to those who are better off. That is why the issue of Enron is not even putting before the country, and everyone else.

What we are really talking about here, this is not going to have any impact on the stock market. This legislation does not even take effect until 2011, 2011. That is what is so ironic, and our substitute, which is the same thing, would handle everything that the gentleman from Wisconsin, the previous speaker, was talking about. We talk about the bankruptcy of the Enron Corporation and the fact that is in our bill. So vote for our bill, and we could take care of all kinds of things, but they did not want to do that. What is really ironic, it will not have any impact until 2011.

On the other hand, when we talk about Enron Corporation and the fact that 100 Enron executives took $330 million just before they filed bankruptcy, when we talk about companies going out of business, putting up a post office box, still having all of their work in the United States, but saving hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes, we want to close that loophole, they say we are being political. They say, well, we are being political.

I have to say that I think we are trying to address the real problems of America. What I think is absolutely astounding is that after the Enron crisis last December, 7 months ago, we have three problems: One is corporate governance, which is accounting standards. We have not touched any of them in this body. We have not done anything to deal with the Enron Corporation. Instead, we want to pass a pension bill that will not take effect until 2011.

I wonder what the American public thinks of us. No wonder the American public believes that Congress is someplace in a parallel universe, and we are not even coming close to addressing that issue.

We just spent 3 1/2 hours on this bill that will not take effect until half the Members of this institution are totally gone. This is unbelievable. It is Alice in Wonderland. Vote for the substitute, and vote for our substitute to show the American public that we are not going to stand here and take this kind of nonsense.

Second, the House has already considered a number of bills in this regard. I do not know where the gentleman was a month ago when we passed the post-Enron reforms with regard to pensions. It was done on a bipartisan basis. I do not know where he was a month ago when we voted in this House on legislation regarding corporate governance. The Senate has not voted yet, that is correct, but the House has acted and voted.

Could we do more? Quite possibly. Maybe we should subject some of these issues to some hearings and some vetting from the public, try to hear from people who, as we did with the pension reform, on the underlying bill, we spent 5 years getting good testimony from all around the country.

So we have considered legislation. The one that has worked its way in the substitute is very complex, very far afield from pension policy and does not relate to the real problems facing America today. We do not know in corporate America today whether or not companies are solvent or not solvent. That is why there is a lack of confidence, but this bill, 2011 does not even come close to addressing that issue.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, we are being political. We are not going to stand here and take this kind of nonsense.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN), my distinguished colleague on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN), my distinguished colleague on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the floor of the House.

We have heard a lot of different issues being brought to the floor today. We have heard the issues surrounding Enron. We would like to inform my colleagues that we passed two pieces of comprehensive legislation dealing with Enron already in this Congress on the floor of the House.

What this issue is about today is about retirement, and I think in a valid point that has not been made, it is about our current economy. Mr. Speaker, the real economy is growing quite well right now. New housing starts are doing really well. Manufacturing is getting back on its feet. The real economy is growing except for the equity markets. Our stock market is very shaky right now, and if our stock market continues to be shaky going on for another 6 months, that is going to hit consumer confidence, and that is going to take a real pound of flesh out of our economy. So we have a problem in this economy, and that is that the equity markets are not responding well, and we may have some real problems that are going to hit consumer confidence in this economy if we do not respond.

This issue that we are dealing with today speaks directly to our equity markets. Twenty-six percent of our equity markets are held by pension assets. The new portion of our economy bond markets are held by pension assets. This issue speaks to the entire issue of retirement security, of pensions, of letting people save for their retirement, and the uncertainty in the tax law is creating uncertainty in our equity markets.

When the vast majority of bondholders and stockholders do not know whether it is going to be 20 years from now, that is producing a lot of uncertainty in our equity markets. For example, IRAs in 8 years, if this legislation does not pass, are going to be cut by 50 percent; 401(k) plans which we are trying to encourage, are going to be cut by a third in 8 years if this legislation does not pass. So it really is a matter of life or death for a lot of retirees. It is really a matter of whether we are going to get our economy on its feet and revive our struggling equity markets or not.

So I urge that we focus on the issue at hand, that we pass this issue before us, and, Mr. Speaker, that we deal with these other issues that we need to be dealing with when that legislation comes up. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. MATSUI).

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. NEAL) for yielding me the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I just have to say that it is almost like Alice in Wonderland on the floor of the House, or perhaps it is like the Ringling Brothers Circus where we are in the well here, and the audience is watching us, and the animals and the elephants and donkeys and everyone else.

What we are really talking about here, this is not going to have any impact on the stock market. This legislation does not even take effect until 2011, 2011. That is what is so ironic, and our substitute, which is the same thing, would handle everything that the gentleman from Wisconsin, the previous speaker, was talking about. We take care of 401(k)s, we do something on the 415. All that is in our bill. So vote for our bill, and we could take care of all kinds of things, but they did not want to do that. What is really ironic, it will not have any impact until 2011.

On the other hand, when we talk about Enron Corporation and the fact that 100 Enron executives took $330 million just before they filed bankruptcy, when we talk about companies going out of business, putting up a post office box, still having all of their work in the United States, but saving hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes, we want to close that loophole, they say we are being political. They say, well, we are being political.

I have to say that I think we are trying to address the real problems of America. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MATSUI). Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman and the visitors in the gallery are reminded they are here as guests of the House and are not to show favor or disfavor.
American companies here on our shores.

Finally, with regard to the pension provisions, and I think there are three of them as I look at the substitute, two of them relate to reducing the burdens and the third, which we have in the underlying bill. It takes us back to the bad old days where we were adding more burdens and liabilities. It actually decreases one of the compensation levels to below the amount it was during the 1960s when the Democrats put the bill up, and we do not even increase it up to where it was in the 1980s when the Democrats were in control of this House and the Committee on Ways and Means.

The other one discourages matching contributions. Why would my colleagues want to do that? We want people who are involved in pensions to have more contributions from the employer into their pension plan. People put money in their 401(k)s, that is great for those who have the means to get that employer contribution so people can actually build up a nest egg for their retirement.

Finally, I have heard today that we cannot vote for the underlying bill when we have to vote for the substitute because, as my colleague from Michigan said, we have a fiscal hole that is so deep that we cannot extend this underlying bill and make it permanent. Well, here are the facts. The underlying bill would result in $6 billion in additional spending, $6 billion. The substitute would result in $20 billion in additional spending. The substitute is five times as expensive as the underlying bill.

So as my colleagues on the other side who have come up time and time again and said my colleagues have got to support the substitute because, as my colleague from Michigan said, we have a fiscal hole that is so deep that we cannot extend this underlying bill and make it permanent. Well, here are the facts. The underlying bill would result in $6 billion in additional spending, $6 billion. The substitute would result in $20 billion in additional spending. The substitute is five times as expensive as the underlying bill.

Unfortunately, our friends on the other side of the aisle have failed to understand these needs. This year, despite all the scandal, despite all of the abuse, the Republican majority has blocked legislation that we have established these tough accounting industry standards, that would have imposed tough criminal penalties on corporate lawbreakers, that would have closed the unpatriotic Bermuda loophole to prevent corporations from going overseas to avoid paying taxes.

Their continued opposition to sensible reforms, their continued allegiance to corporate special interests that have gone wrong strongly suggests that this Republican majority is guilty of enabling corporate excesses that have done so much harm.

Today, we, together, have an opportunity to follow the lead in restoring faith and trust in free markets. Today, let us make it permanent for working Americans who need the help badly, and vote yes on this substitute.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), the distinguished minority leader here in the House.

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge Members to vote yes on the Matsui amendment.

In our country today, we face a crisis of confidence in corporate responsibility and accountability. Last year we witnessed the biggest bankruptcy in history that caused devastating financial losses for thousands of innocent employees. A few weeks ago I heard from some of these employees when I met them in Houston. In a meeting filled with emotion, employees of Enron explained that their pensions had disappeared, their health coverage was gone, their careers had been destroyed.

This week, I read our Nation's papers and magazine headlines with regard to the crisis of confidence in corporate accountability that all of us should find deeply disturbing. One of them said, Restoring Trust in Corporate America. That was Business Week. Another said, Corporate America, We Have a Crisis, in Fortune.

Another was: "Officials Got a Windfall Before Enron's Collapse." That was in The New York Times, which reported that Enron stock options and energy traders received more than $300 million in cash payments from the company in the year before the company's collapse.

Make no mistake about it, this is not the time to do business as usual. A great majority of corporations are law-abiding, responsible people serving their employees, their shareholders, and consumers effectively. But the United States Congress has a responsibility to ensure safeguards that will ferret out the bad actors and executives who destroy and hold those bad actors and executives accountable.

It is time for our House of Representatives to begin finally taking the steps to restore people's faith in the integrity of our corporations, the bedrock of our capitalistic system. We must set sound standards for the accounting industry. We need to protect people's pensions and their retirement security.

Unfortunately, our friends on the other side of the aisle have failed to understand these needs. This year, despite all the scandal, despite all of the abuse, the Republican majority has blocked legislation that we have established these tough accounting industry standards, that would have imposed tough criminal penalties on corporate lawbreakers, that would have closed the unpatriotic Bermuda loophole to prevent corporations from going overseas to avoid paying taxes.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by thanking the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) for yielding me this time; and, Mr. Speaker, as I have done so many times, let me pay my respects to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. PORTMAN) and to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) for their creative, responsible, responsive, thoughtful, and compassionate understanding of the needs and desires and hopes and prayers of Americans giving working men and women. This is, as it has been for all this time, such good legislation, so deserving of our respect, our admiration and our support. I would like to thank the gentle- man from Ohio and the gentleman from Maryland for their persistence. There is nothing more reassuring than seeing two good people get one good idea and be willing to stick with it no matter how many times people try to change the subject.

And if I might thirdly thank the two of them for their patience. How much they must have looked forward to coming to the floor of the House of Representatives today to talk about their legislature, their patience, much patience, that they must have looked forward to seeing two good people get one good idea, to have real hopes and dreams about their own retirement, to have their real savings enhanced and preserved for a longer period of time.

The last little mean-spirited, nasty little discourse if indeed this Congress quite rightly, we should have ignored a legislative instrument and, therefore, is not a political instrument. It is does not address that. This bill was not political noise out of poor little old Ber- muda. We have surely tried again, bless our little old hearts, particularly entertaining, in that we have this floor debate today has been par- ticularly disturbing to a lot of us, and we should have legislation that would be directed to that, and we will have legislation that removes the irrational tax that prompts this rational behavior that gives rise to so much irrational dis- cussion about something else. My com- plements to the two of them.

Mr. Speaker, I often caution myself not to take the floor debate because there is a tendency when one does to want to have to answer everything one hears. It is a far better thing to be con- soled by that wonderful expression, “The world will little note nor long re- member what we say in this body.” But this floor debate today has been par- ticularly entertaining, in that we have tried again, bless our little old hearts, to squeeze that last little drop of political blood out of Enron. We have surely squeezed on Enron.

Now, there is a lot of harping and whining and moaning that this bill does not address that. This bill was not written for that purpose. This, by the way, is not a political instrument. It is a legislative, a political instrument, and, there, quite rightly, we should have ignored most of what we have heard about the evils of Enron today.

And I guess I would not be particu- larly annoyed by all this Enron polit- ical discourse if indeed this Congress had not responsibly addressed the issues that were raised by Enron. We have, from this very committee, legis- lation that has passed this House that addresses the question of retirement security that have been addressed in the Enron case. We had from the Committee on Financial Services legis- lation that addressed the whole ques- tion of management that might have been raised in the Enron debacle.

So it is not as if we have not ad- dressed it and, in fact, acted upon it. It is just that we have not squeezed that last little mean-spirited, nasty little drop of political diarrheea out of the subject of Enron. But I console myself in the be-

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts moves to recommit the bill H.R. 4931 to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following recommendation:

At the end of the bill insert the following new section:

SEC. 3. PREVENTION OF AVOIDANCE OF QUALIFIED PLAN RULES THROUGH CORPORATE EXPATRIATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress hereby finds the following:

(1) Federal tax law provides that a deduction is allowed for pension and other deferred compensation benefits only in the context of contributions to a qualified plan.

(2) Federal tax law provides that assets set aside to fund pension and other deferred compensation can accumulate on a tax-free basis only in the context of a qualified plan.

(3) The qualified plan rules are structured to ensure that that line and file employees receive social retirement benefits as a condition for providing retirement benefits to highly compensated employees.

(4) Corporations reincorporating overseas (and their subsidiaries) can in effect receive both of the benefits described in paragraphs (1) and (2) outside the context of a qualified plan.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the amendment made by this section is to protect the retirement and other deferred compensation benefits by preventing the avoidance of the qualified plan rules through corporate expatriation.

(c) PREVENTION OF CORPORATE EXPATRIATION.

(1) IN GENERAL.—(Paragraph (4) of section 7701(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (defining domestic) is amended to read as follows:

(4) DOMESTIC.—(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subpart (B), the term ‘domestic’ with respect to any corporation beginning after December 31, 2000, includes a corporation which is a domestic corporation beginning after December 31, 2001, but only with respect to taxable years of the acquiring corporation beginning after December 31, 2003.

(B) CERTAIN CORPORATIONS TREATED AS DOMESTIC.—For purposes of paragraph (1) —

(i) IN GENERAL.—The acquiring corporation in a corporate expatriation transaction shall be treated as a domestic corporation.

(ii) CORPORATION EXPATRIATION TRANSACTION.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘corporate expatriation transaction’ means any transaction if—

(I) a nominally foreign corporation (referred to in this subparagraph as the ‘acquiring corporation’) acquires, as a result of such transaction, directly or indirectly properties held directly or indirectly by a domestic corporation, and

(II) immediately after the transaction, more than 80 percent of the stock (by vote or value) of the acquiring corporation is held by former shareholders of the domestic corporation by reason of holding stock in the domestic corporation.

(iii) LOWER STOCK OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENT IN CERTAIN CASES.—Subclause (II) of clause (ii) shall be applied by substituting ‘50 percent’ for ‘80 percent’ with respect to any nominally foreign corporation if—

(I) such corporation does not have substantial business activities (when compared to the total business activities of the expanded affiliated group) in the foreign country in which or under the law of which the corporation is created or organized, and

(II) the stock of the corporation is publicly traded, the principal market for trading of such stock is in the United States.

(iv) PARTNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS.—The term ‘corporate expatriation transaction’ includes any transaction if—

(I) a nominally foreign corporation (referred to in this subparagraph as the ‘acquiring corporation’) acquires, as a result of such transaction, directly or indirectly properties constituting a trade or business of a domestic partnership,

(II) immediately after the transaction, more than 80 percent of the stock (by vote or value) of the acquiring corporation is held by former partners of the domestic partnership or related foreign partnerships (determined without regard to stock of the acquiring corporation which is sold in a public offering related to the transaction), and

(III) the acquiring corporation meets the requirements of subsections (I) and (II) of clause (iii)."
Mr. Speaker, this proposal states that the retirement savings of all workers, including those who have had the misfortune of being employed by a corporate expatriate, that those savings should be protected and preserved. This motion would build in important protections for millions of employees who have decided to flee the country in order to avoid U.S. income taxes, many who snuck out in the dark of night even as the Nation pulled together after September 11.

My colleagues on the other side are going to say, “We’re holding hearings,” and I appreciate that. “We’re discussing legislation.” Then they are going to say, “Well, maybe we should stop the expatriates temporarily.” Then they are going to say, “Well, maybe we should enact a flat tax or a sales tax” or however else we reform the Code and pay for the war on terrorism.

The problem with that, Mr. Speaker, is that is what we were going to do 8 years ago. Once down in Bermuda, a country which has no developed or tested corporate common law, executives have the flexibility to no longer care about these irritating qualified plans. For U.S. companies, these requirements and pension protections are the only way that the rank and file gain access to tax-deferred retirement accounts. Without these pension requirements, or sticks, it will be impossible to no longer protect these retirement accounts. Without these pension requirements or sticks, it will be impossible to no longer protect the retirement savings of all workers, including those who have had the misfortune of being employed by a corporate expatriate.

We have learned that employees of 401(k) plans will be treated differently from executive plans in the circumstances of these corporate expatriates. The executives will be protected. The rank-and-file employees under the 401(k) plans will not be protected. This is just a further example of the outrage that is being perpetrated on the American taxpayer and on the American Government by these corporate expatriates. We have an opportunity today to say that that should not continue. We have an opportunity to say today that that should stop. I urge the House to take that opportunity.

Let me tell you what is involved here. The New York Times reported on the scope of this outrage, saying that even if the shares of the company rose 11.5 percent, the shareholders, the small ones in particular, would barely break even after taxes. Of course, expenses to apply to the executive plans. The CEO at Stanley Works stands to pocket an amount equal to 58 percent of every dollar the company would save in corporate taxes in the first year. That is $17.4 million out of an estimated $30 million in savings. And that CEO, in addition, if he exercised his options, would gain an additional $385 million. So while we have the executives of these corporations literally taking money out of the United States and putting it in their pocket, the rank-and-file workers are going to be paying capital gains tax and greatly diminishing the value of their 401(k) plans and their opportunity to retire.

Mr. Speaker, this is outrageous. This needs to be stopped, and it needs to be stopped today. I urge support for the gentleman from Massachusetts’ motion.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN).

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, this is a simple addition to the underlying bill to protect workers. I would urge my colleagues to support the motion and to support final passage.

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I think a concern that we have tried repeatedly to express, and I in particular have tried to express, is that this issue demands action in this institution today, based upon the headlines that we have all seen for weeks and weeks and weeks now across the country, we are headed toward a glided age. There is an opportunity for this Chamber to act responsibly, to shut down this outrageous loophole that we should be acting on immediately.

We have tried very hard, and I want to say to the Members of this body, I guarantee you this is the first of many votes until we succeed in shutting down the ability of these companies to move to Bermuda in a time, as the President has said, of war.

This motion to recommit does nothing. Why in the world is it in front of us? Because on page 6 there is one little tax hook, and that is all. As a matter of fact, I apologize; this is not a political dirty bomb, it is political hot air.

I ask for a "no" vote on the motion to recommit and a "yes" vote on the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

Mr. TERRY and Mr. SMITH of Michigan changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

So the motion to instruct was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Stated for purposes of the record:

Mr. WATERS, Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 247, I was unavoidably detained and could not reach the chambers to cast my vote. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

Stated against:

Mr. TERRY, Mr. Speaker, I was regrettably absent on Friday, June 21, 2002, and consequently missed a recorded vote on H.R. 4931. Had I been present, I would have voted "no" on rollcall vote No. 247.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes had it appear to have it.

RECORDED VOTE.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 308, noes 70, not voting 57, as follows:

[Roll No. 248]
Mr. DeFazio and Mrs. Clayton changed their vote from "no" to "aye." So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. Bilirakis. Mr. Speaker, I missed roll call votes numbered 246, 247, and 248 because I was traveling with the President of the United States and other members of the Florida delegation. I would have voted "no" on rollcall No. 246, "no" on rollcall No. 247, and "aye" on rollcall No. 248.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. Burton of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, during roll call votes Nos. 246–248 I was unavoidably delayed. Had I been here I would have voted "no" on roll call votes Nos. 246 and 247, "aye" on roll call vote No. 248.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 465

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to remove my name as a cosponsor from H.R. 465.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Ms. Pelosi asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of inquiring about next week’s schedule.

Mr. Armey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. Pelosi. I yield to the gentleman for the schedule. I am pleased to announce that the House has completed its legislative business for the week.

The House will next meet for legislative business on Monday, June 24, at 12:30 p.m. for morning hour, and 2 o’clock p.m. for legislative business.

I will schedule a number of measures under suspension of the rules, a list of which will be distributed to Members’ offices later today. Recorded votes on Monday will be postponed until 6:30 p.m.

On Tuesday and the balance of the week, I have scheduled the following measures for consideration of the House:

Mr. Speaker, conferees are also working hard to complete the work on the President’s emergency defense and homeland security supplemental, and I hope to schedule that conference report next week, as well.

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for the schedule. I know the Committee on Energy and Commerce worked long and hard on that last night and early this morning; and I believe that, in the case, we should have the bill on the floor Wednesday of next week.

Ms. Pelosi. Wednesday of next week. In relationship to fast track, will the House appoint conferees next week on the trade promotion act?

Mr. Armey. I thank the gentlewoman for her inquiry. If the gentlewoman will continue to yield, we are hopeful that we will be able to do that next week. Obviously, we want to make sure that we have a parity in the House and Senate position with respect to the full scope of the bill. And if we can have a rule passed that makes that possible, then we ought to be able to get to work on that in conference next week.

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman, will the rule be the same one as reported from the Committee on Rules this week?

Mr. Armey. I thank the gentlewoman for her inquiry. I must say that is under consideration. I will be in touch with the chairman of the Committee on Rules and make sure that if he has any news to share with us, we all get it as soon as possible.

Ms. Pelosi. I thank the gentleman. Continuing, Mr. Speaker, the leader said that the conferees are working hard to complete the President’s emergency defense and homeland security supplemental, I had some questions on that conference.

As the gentleman may recall, Democrats were united in opposing another increase in our Nation’s borrowing...
Mr. ARMEY. If the gentlewoman will continue to yield, it seems to me at this point most expedient for us to hope to have the debt limit increase in the emergency supplemental. In this instance, we would be able to pass it.

My concern is not over in what venue the vote is taken. My concern is in what venue the vote will pass. I believe it would be an unnecessary and undesirable distraction of American financial markets for us to in any way bring a debt limit increase to the floor and not pass it, and I am reluctant to do so.

If, on the other hand, I have heard the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) correctly, it seems to me that I may have found a new ray of hope. Because we have a certain number of Members of our own conference who are not willing to vote for the free-standing $450 billion increase in the debt limit, so we may votes from the other side of the aisle.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) has an association with a fairly large number of Members on his side of the aisle who perhaps might be willing to vote, in which case we could combine our electoral resources and bring the resolution of the Senate to the floor, pass it, and have this matter resolved, which would, I think, be a favorable resolution for all of the Nation.

If the gentleman would give me that assurance, I would certainly feel encouraged to take the Senate-passed measure to the floor.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I like the spirit of optimism that my friend, the gentleman from Texas, has taken. I would encourage him to look at the letter that a large number of Democrats have sent to the Speaker offering a considerable number of votes for a clean debt ceiling. A clean debt ceiling in order that we might avert a crisis and send unnecessary signals to the marketplace.

What we ask in return is not a blank check, but that we have a debt ceiling, and we revisit our budget in September when we come back after we have seen the reestimates.

As the gentleman knows, we are now currently estimating that the deficit this year is going to go over $200 billion, and we need some votes to lower the Social Security trust fund, all the Medicare, all the civil service, all the military retirement fund.

I would hope the gentleman would agree and would accept the hand that is coming from this side of the aisle from the minority leader as well as the Blue Dogs of saying that we are ready to work with the gentleman in that endeavor, and I hope he puts that as a third option.

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentlewoman from California would continue to yield, I will look for every avenue possible to make a reasonable increase in the debt ceiling that allows us to conduct the Nation's business with as little political consideration and interference as possible; and in that regard, I will reconsider the gentleman's letter. I thank the gentleman for his kind offer:

Ms. PELOSI. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER).

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, if I heard correctly, the gentleman is the majority leader of this body. Am I correct on that?

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentlewoman from California will continue to yield, I am more than happy to remind the gentleman that this is coming from this side of the aisle.

Mr. FILNER. The majority means that the gentleman has the responsibility of setting the agenda and running this floor. As I understood what the gentleman just said, he does not have a majority on his side to raise the debt limit.

I want to know, where is the responsibility for the governing party to do what is necessary for this Nation?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman will continue to yield, I thank the gentleman for his inquiry, and promise the gentleman that I will give his inquiry every bit of consideration, and that it deserves.

Mr. FILNER. I know the gentlewoman always does.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I have concern about another bill, the AmeriCorps bill.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. PELOSI. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the gentlewoman from California, for yielding to me.

In the distinguished majority leader's comments about outlining the calendar for next week, he did not mention this bipartisan initiative that has been reported out of the Committee on Education and the Workforce with overwhelming bipartisan support to support the increase of the President of the United States in both volunteers and resources for AmeriCorps.

We know that we have been very busy the last couple of weeks naming post offices, but we would hope that maybe next week we could get to AmeriCorps and do one of the bipartisan priorities and one of the President's priorities.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman will continue to yield, I think the gentleman for his inquiry. Let me just say parenthetically, it is my fond hope that there may be a time in the near future when I observe the behavior of this House as it names a post office after the gentleman himself. So for now, of course, we believe, an important business.

But the bill with respect to which the gentleman raises his inquiry is an important bill. The committee of jurisdiction has just reported the bill just past few days. I will be speaking with the chairman about it; and I am sorry to report I have no scheduling announcement to make at this time, but I do appreciate the gentleman’s interest and inquiry.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, does the majority leader think this is a priority for the House, since it is a priority of the President of the United States, to report this bipartisan bill to the entire House?

Mr. ARMEY. Again, I appreciate the gentleman’s inquiry. I would remind the gentleman that this majority leader has routinely, over the past several years, scheduled things for consideration in the House that he himself did not believe were a priority.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I just have one final question of the majority leader about the schedule. I understand for Members’ benefit that we will be coming in and voting after 6:30 p.m. on Monday and that we will be going through the week. Are there definitely going to be votes next Friday?

Mr. ARMEY. Again, I want to thank the gentlewoman for her inquiry. If she will continue to yield, I think it is prudent for all Members to be prepared to work through Friday.

At this time I have no expectation of any work in the ensuing weekend; but certainly, we should be prepared to be here working Friday. There are two very important appropriations bills, defense and military construction, to be begun on Thursday and to be completed before we complete business on Friday.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, can we assure Members that adjournment will be 2 o’clock on Friday, or will continue later than that?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman’s forgiveness. I am, unfortunately, not able to give Members that assurance at this time.

Ms. PELOSI. Did I hear an assurance in the gentleman’s voice that we would not go through the weekend? Is our schedule contingent upon completion of the work, or the calendar?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I do appreciate what the gentlewoman’s inquiry is. At this time, I have no reason to anticipate any work beyond Friday of next week.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, even if the agenda that the gentleman set forth is not finished?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentlewoman’s inquiry. We all have our July 4 district work periods. We are all anxious to have time with our constituents, and we will work with our committee and floor managers to expedite everybody’s ability to get home to do that important work and spend that important time with their families.

Ms. PELOSI. Yes, indeed, very important time, the birth of our country, Independence Day. So I thank the gentleman very much for responding to these questions.

Adjourning to Monday, June 24, 2002

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Monday next for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Hour of Meeting on Tuesday, June 25, 2002

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns on Monday, June 24, 2002, it adjourn to meet at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 25, 2002, for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Dispensing with Calendar Wednesday Business on Wednesday Next

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Periodic Report on National Emergency with Respect to the Western Balkans—Message from the President of the United States (H. Doc. No. 107-231)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 40(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit herewith a 6-month report prepared by my Administration on the national emergency with respect to the Western Balkans that was declared in Executive Order 13219 of June 26, 2001.

Continuation of National Emergency in Western Balkans—Message from the President of the United States (H. Doc. No. 107-232)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)), provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a Notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed Notice, stating that the Western Balkans emergency is to continue in effect beyond June 25, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication.

The crisis constituted by the actions of persons engaged in, or assisting, sponsoring, or supporting, (i) extremist violence in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and elsewhere in the Western Balkans region, or (ii) acts obstructing implementation of the Dayton Accords in Bosnia or United Nations Security Council Resolution 1244 of June 10, 1999, in Kosovo, that led to the declaration of a national emergency on June 26, 2001, has not been resolved. These actions are hostile to U.S. interests and pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared with respect to the Western Balkans and maintain in force the comprehensive sanctions to respond to this threat.

George W. Bush

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

Revisions to Allocation for House Committee on Appropriations

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Nussle) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. NUSSEL. Mr. Speaker, Pursuant to Section 314 of the Congressional Budget Act, Section 221 of H. Con. Res. 83, and Section 231 of H. Con. Res. 353, I submit for printing in the Congressional Record revisions to the 302(a) allocations and budgetary aggregates established by the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 2003, and Section 221 of H. Con. Res. 83.

As passed by the House, H.R. 4775, a bill making supplemental appropriations for fiscal year 2002 and extending emergency-designated appropriations. The fiscal year 2002 allocations to the Appropriations Committee were previously increased by $29,432,000,000 in new budget authority and $8,466,000,000 in outlays to reflect the amounts in the House-reported bill. I am adjusting the budgetary aggregates for the difference between the House-reported and House-passed measures. This adjustment equals—

$5,000,000 in new budget authority. (There was no change in outlays.) Accordingly, the 302(a) allocation for fiscal year 2002 for the House Committee on Appropriations becomes $735,427,000,000 in new budget authority and $736,420,000,000 in outlays. The budgetary aggregates for fiscal year 2002 become $1,708,599,000,000 in new budget authority and $1,707,073,000,000 in outlays.

Outlays flowing from fiscal year 2002 emergency appropriations increase the 302(a) allocation for fiscal year 2003 outlays. Under the procedures set forth in section 314 of the Budget Act, adjustments may be made for emergency-designated budget authority flowing from such budget authority in all fiscal years. The outlays flowing in fiscal year 2003 from H.R. 4775, as passed by the House, total $10,715,000,000. The 302(a) allocation for outlays to the House Committee on Appropriations for fiscal year 2003 becomes $735,427,000,000 in new budget authority and $736,420,000,000 in outlays. The budgetary aggregates for fiscal year 2003 becomes $1,784,073,000,000 in new budget authority and $1,783,073,000,000 in outlays.

Outlays flowing from fiscal year 2002 emergency appropriations increase the 302(a) allocation for fiscal year 2003 outlays. Under the procedures set forth in section 314 of the Budget Act, adjustments may be made for emergency-designated budget authority flowing through fiscal year 2002 and for the outlays flowing from such budget authority in all fiscal years.

The GAO report says that FERC does not even know how to carry out its mandate to ensure that interstate wholesale and electric power market prices are, as the law states, just and reasonable. If FERC does not know how to regulate power markets, who does?

We need a change because we do not need a repeat of the inaction we saw from FERC in 2000 that has drained the California Treasury of almost $50 billion and has created a severe deficit in our State’s budget this year.

Two years ago, California and the hands-off treatment it received from FERC was a canary in the gold mine. If I may say so, that is exposing the glaring fissures in our so-called energy policy.

The lack of action by FERC, or as it should be called the Federal Enron Rubber-Stamping Commission, hurt my constituents in San Diego County, and millions of other Californians lost billions during this crisis, and FERC reported no evidence of price-fixing.

Now FERC says it is waiting for the regional transmission organizations, the RTOs, to provide front-line monitoring for new, unregulated power markets. The problem is, Mr. Speaker, that it may take several more years for these RTOs to form, and even then, FERC may be unable to regulate them. FERC simply cannot let these markets go unmonitored for this length of time."

It is abundantly clear, Mr. Speaker, that there has been a lot of damage, and we need a fresh look, farther away from this administration, farther away from the FERC Commissioner, farther away from people tainted with association with Enron.

We need to know how Enron and other RTOs and the electricity cartel robbed California and eluded the oversight of the Federal Enron Rubber-Stamping Commission. This should lead, by the way, to every State in this country and other countries around the world to really questioning whether they should deregulate to the so-called private market electricity and other basic commodities that are necessary for our economic life.

There is no public oversight, as the GAO report shows, of what the so-called private market will do. They will rob us blind as they did to us in California. That is why I continue to call for the Attorney General to name a special prosecutor to look into this whole case.

My bill, H. Con. Res. 333, would make this request on behalf of our entire Congress. We must not have even the perception that the fox, that is, FERC, is guarding the hen house, that is, our electricity market.

This Congress must demand that this situation end and appoint a special prosecutor and figure out what happened and how we are going to proceed from here.

HIGH COST OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OTTER). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, I rise again today to talk about the high cost of prescription drugs. Importantly, the difference between what we in America pay for those same drugs and what they pay in other parts of the industrialized world.

I have a chart here, and again, I want to remind my colleagues that it is not my numbers. I did not invent this chart. This chart was developed by some people who have been studying this issue for decades, and disparities get worse by the year. And here we see some of the most commonly prescribed drugs for America. Let me point out a couple of them.

Cipro, a drug that we became very familiar with last year when we had the scare over the anthrax, and let me say that Tommy Thompson did a very good job in negotiating with the German maker Bayer, we sometimes call it Bayer, and we got a very good price for the Federal Government, but if someone is a normal individual and they need Cipro, they need that antibiotic, they need Cipro, and we got a very good price for $40.75. That same drug in Europe sells for half that price, less than half, $20.75.

Let us look at another drug that is important to diabetics, one of the most commonly prescribed drugs in the United States or in the world, Glucophage. The average price in the United States $124.65. That same drug made in the same plant under the same conditions in Germany $17.99. That is the same price for a 30-day supply of Glucophage in Europe sells for half that price, less than half, $4.07.

I think we should pay our fair share for prescription drugs. We ought to pay our fair share of the cost of developing those drugs, but I do not think we ought to have to subsidize the starving Swiss, and that is what is happening today. It is not shame on the pharmaceutical industry, it is shame on the FDA, and it is shame on us.

It has been said that consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds. Next week we are going to have two very interesting debates on the floor of this House, one about trade promotion authority. We are going to have people come to the well of this House, and they are going to talk about how important it is that we have free trade, that we ought to have open markets, that we ought to allow our markets to work. In fact, some of them may even quote former President Ronald Reagan when he said that markets are more powerful than armies.

FERC HAS NOT AND CANNOT DO ITS JOB

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to briefly discuss this week’s release by the General Accounting Office, the GAO, its study on actions needed by FERC to effectively monitor for new, unregulated power markets.

Some of those same people are going to come to the floor of the House the next day, and they are going to say, well, we need open markets, but not when it comes to pharmaceuticals, not where it can really save Americans billions of dollars. And it really is billions of dollars, because according to the estimates by the Congressional Budget Office, seniors over the next 10 years in the United States of America, that is, people 65 and over, are going to spend $1.8 trillion on prescription drugs. They cannot afford that, and neither can the taxpayers.

It is time to open the markets and allow Americans to have access to these world drugs at world market prices and let us talk about the savings.

The estimates that we have from independent experts is that Americans could save 35 percent minimum simply by opening up the markets and allowing Americans to have access to those drugs at world market prices. What does that mean? If we take $1.8 trillion, divide it evenly over the next 10 years, that is $180 billion a year. If we could save 35 percent, how much is that? That is over $50 billion a year, $50 billion a year, and we have arguments here on the floor about tax cuts.

How much good would we do if we gave Americans a $50-billion-per-year tax cut? That is what we are talking about if we simply open the markets. There is something wrong when we allow our own FDA to stand between American seniors and lower prescription prices that are cheaper on a fair basis, but we should not be held hostage to the big drug cartels that are exploiting their market opportunities here in the United States at the expense of seniors, at the expense of taxpayers, and incidentally, I had a meeting this morning, at the expense of the big corporations.

One of the largest corporations in the United States, one of the representatives told me today they spend $1 billion a year on prescription drugs. They are spending $1 billion a month on just one name-brand pharmaceutical each month, $1 million a month just on one drug. Even they are starting to say, wait a second.

We believe in open markets. We believe in free markets. We believe in competition. It is time to open the markets, create some competition so that we do not have these huge disparities between what Americans are required to pay for the same drugs, made in the same FDA-approved facilities in the same FDA-approved facilities.

Let us have that debate next week about free markets. I believe in free markets. Let us have that debate about making it easier for all Americans, not just seniors, to pay for the drugs they need. No senior should have to choose between food and prescription drugs. We can go a long way simply by opening markets, allowing world markets to work, allowing that thing that we talk about and will talk about next week, free trade, to work to the advantage of American consumers. We could save American consumers $50 billion a year.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. NORTON addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

SCHOOL FEEDING PROGRAMS DESERVE SUPPORT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. McGOVERN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, it has been my honor to support global school feeding programs as part of a strategy to reduce hunger among the world’s children and to increase their ability to go to school. Along with the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. EMERSON), I have introduced H.R. 1700, the George McGovern-Robert Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Act of 2001.

That bill, which has 116 bipartisan cosponsors, was established as a permanent program in the farm bill reauthorization which the President recently signed into law. If adequately funded, this program will purchase and allocate U.S. commodities and other resources to provide millions of hungry children around the world with a healthy, nutritious meal in a school setting.

Mr. Speaker, over 300 million of the world’s children are hungry. About 130 million of these children do not even go to school. School feeding programs clearly demonstrate that more families send their children to school when a meal is provided. U.S.-supported school feeding programs have documented significant increases in student enrollment, especially among girls. The children become more alert and more capable of learning when better nourished. School feeding programs also help in providing the next level of education, and they acquire skills that help them to be productive members of society.

The benefits of these programs are enormous, starting with the positive nutritional impact on children’s lives and helping them obtain the education necessary to improve their standard of living. There are also additional auxiliary benefits including economic development, strengthening social institutions, empowering women, and promoting stable democratic societies throughout the world. Clearly, these programs play a critical role in any strategy to provide education and improve children’s health.

Mr. Speaker, ending hunger among the world’s children is achievable. For U.S. Private Voluntary Organizations have long been involved in this effort, working on the front lines, delivering nutritious food to needy children around the world. Two members of my staff recently attended a conference on Indonesia school feeding programs. The conference sponsors included the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Land O’Lakes. My staff were able to review the Land O’Lakes school feeding model firsthand and to meet other U.S. PVOS involved in the school feeding effort in Indonesia, like Mercy Corps International, AC迪/VOCA, and International Relief and Development. Together, these organizations are feeding over 900,000 schoolchildren in Indonesia.

Land O’Lakes’ school feeding endeavor in Indonesia began in November of 2000, with USDA 416(b) commodity donations. Indonesia is the fourth most populous nation in the world, following China, India and the United States. It is also the world’s largest Muslim nation. As a result of the economic slowdown and decreasing resources provided to the national government for school feeding initiatives, the nutritional status of Indonesian elementary schoolchildren has deteriorated. The economic situation in the country has encouraged children to leave school early, with young girls being the first to go.

The Land O’Lakes Indonesia program is presently reaching over 450,000 schoolchildren in more than 2,900 schools on the islands of Java. It focuses on local capacity building, making sure all the products used in this program are processed locally. Land O’Lakes works with the three local processors who produce the fortified milk and wheat biscuits that are distributed to schools. This partnership exemplifies how this program can also be a catalyst for strengthening the local food industry.

Land O’Lakes works with Indonesian NGOs in the communities where target schools are located, involving local participation stimulates community empowerment and helps build sustainability and ownership in the implementation and oversight of these programs.

The Land O’Lakes model has been so successful it will be replicated in Vietnam and Bangladesh as part of the Global Food for Education pilot program.

Mr. Speaker, the benefits of these programs are enormous, starting with the positive nutritional impact on children’s lives and helping them obtain the education necessary to improve their standard of living. There are also additional auxiliary benefits including economic development, strengthening social institutions, empowering women, and promoting stable democratic societies throughout the world. Clearly, these programs play a critical role in any strategy to provide education and improve children’s health.

Mr. Speaker, ending hunger among the world’s children is achievable. For the first time, we have the instruments at hand to defeat this cruel enemy at a very reasonable cost. All we lack is the political will to do so.

In the weeks ahead, as we debate funding priorities for fiscal years 2003 and 2004, I urge my colleagues to provide the necessary funding for the George McGovern- Robert Dole International Food for Education program.

Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a memorandum on the recent school feeding trip in Indonesia:

INDONESIA SCHOOL FEEDING CONFERENCE TRIP REPORT—MAY 13th-17th

May 13th-17th 2002, The Indonesia School Feeding Conference was held in Jakarta and Bandung, Indonesia. It was an opportunity for participants to observe USDA funded school feeding programs and to meet other U.S. program sponsors, local NGO’s, private processors, government representatives and USDA officials involved in the school feeding effort.

U.S. Private Voluntary Organizations have been involved in this effort working on the front lines, delivering nutritious food to children in need areas around the world. In Indonesia alone, Land O’ Lakes, ACDI/VOCA and Mercy Corps, are directly involved in Indonesian school feeding. The Ministry of National Education, the U.S. program sponsor, local government officials, the Yayasan Bina Putra Sejahtera, Tetra Pak and local processors such as Indolakti, UltraJay Milk Industry and Trading Company and Prima Japfa Jaya. Additionally, those that collaborate and provide support to the school feeding programs are the American Soybean Association, The US Pea and Lentil Council, and Cindy Bulh and Keith Stern of Congressman Jim McGovern’s staff.

The first day of the conference was spent in Jakarta where participants familiarized themselves with the various participants involved in school feeding.

The Land O’ Lakes Indonesia program is presently reaching over 490,000 school children in more than 2,900 schools in Java, Jakarta, Bali and Lombok. Land O’ Lakes program methodology focuses on local capacity building by having all the school feeding products processed locally. Land O’ Lakes works with local government and the private sector to produce fortified UHT milk packages and wheat biscuits that are then distributed to schools and consumed by the children. This partnership exemplifies how this program can be a catalyst for food industry improve ment and growth.

Identifying established and viable community-based organizations and community based organizations is an important and necessary step to promote ownership of the program in communities where children are located. On Java, the partnering NGO Yayasan Bina Putra Sejahtera is Land O’ Lakes lead partner working with schools, government at the provincial and local government level to help program implementation go smoothly. Also they are responsible for compiling attendance data.

This demonstrates how this program can stimulate community empowerment and by involving local participation builds sustainability and ownership in the implementation and oversight of these programs.

The ACDI/VOCA/Mercy Corps program is working to produce and distribute a soy beverage to children in schools in Sumatra, Padang, Belukul and Lampung. The impacts of this program include improved attendance and nutrition of children in schools, opportunity for health and nutrition educational lessons for participants and enhanced local capacity.

The International Food and Development Program is currently implementing a pilot program that is targeting over 14,500 children in 122 primary schools. IRD produces and distributes wheat products and children use the USDA provided wheat and defatted soy flour. IRD works with American Soybean Association, US Wheat, Land O’ Lakes and YBB’s and local NGO’s.

Tuesday was a special day as the Yayasan Bina Putra Sejahtera hosted a School Feeding Conference in Jakarta. Program highlights were recounted for the media and Dennis Volbroil, agriculture attaché for the US Department of Agriculture, was recognized for his dedication to school feeding. Students picked as winners in the Yayasan Poster Conference were given school scholarships.

Tuesday evening the participants boarded a train for Bandung, the second largest city in Indonesia. While in Bandung, participants witnessed students consuming their milk in schools in the local government sponsored program to meet with school officials to discuss roles, responsibilities and results. Next, Participants toured the UltraJay Processing Plant where they observed package production.

On Thursday of the conference, Rolf Campbell of Land O’ Lakes International Division presented on the importance of applying food technology to school feeding programs. He described the role private sector plays to develop, promote, and distribute high nutritional value foods specifically positioned for nutritionally deficient populations, especially low income and at risk groups including those living with HIV/AIDS.

Mr. Campbell facilitated a panel discussion of private food industry representatives to highlight new products from dairy, soybean, wheat, and pea/lentil/rice. Each panel member covered the nutritional benefit and versatility of dairy products; the criteria used to develop products including costs; an introduction to two or three new products; and the vision of product “sustainability” in feeding and commercial markets.

The panel discussion ended with Rolf Campbell summarizing the importance of incorporating locally produced food industry resources are mobilized around food aid innovation and acting collectively.

On Friday of the conference, the day focused on the private sector, local government support and private sector involvement. Rolf Campbell summarized the importance of local capacity building and long term school feeding sustainability during the implementation and support from U.S. and other international donations are available.

The first speaker was Dr. Mankuni Muchlas, Secretary General, Department of National Education, Center for National Education of Indonesia. He stated his appreciation to the Government of the U.S. for providing comprehensive support school feeding programs to over 14,500 schools reaching on four islands of Indonesia. The fact that U.S. donations will continue and allow the expansion of feeding programs to make skills in entitlements programs, the Ministry of National Education, but also to the entire nation of Indonesia.

The second speaker of National Education, through Tim Pemabina Usha Kesehatan Sekolah plays the lead role in supporting the U.S. funded programs by identifying schools in need, the NGOs build the capacity of NGOs to carry out the task of identifications, coordinating all agencies with school feeding, and preparing the schools for administering and reporting results of the program.

The 17th Conference in Jakarta start ed a school feeding program with the focus of improving the level of primary school and Madrasah Ditdayiah children living in poor remote areas. This program is administered by the local government and has been quite successful. In a national level, it will be im portant to the PVOs and the DOD to see how the governments experience on how to successful reach schools in very remote areas. These communities have the greatest need of school feeding support.

The next presenter on the subject of local capacity building was Salvacion Bulatao, Director of National Dairy. The Department of Agriculture, Government of the Philippines. Ms. Bulatao’s main message is that “Milk does not only build strong bones, it builds a strong nation.” Through the Philippine School Milk Feeding Program, government support seeks to improve the nutritional well being of school children and identify how we can create additional sources of income for rural families. Clearly stated by Ms. Bulatao, school milk feeding accomplishments two objectives: provides healthy food for the children; and jobs and daily cash flows to farm families. Today, the Government of the Philippines is providing funding to feed more than 200,000 primary and pre-school children. The milk products to be distributed are purchased locally from processors and dairy cooperatives. The volume of milk purchased from the dairy industry was 1.08 million liters which had a value of $1.55 million. This translates to the individual farm worker’s milk sales of $3.71 per liter. May 21st of each year can generate the equivalent of U.S. $636.20 during two school feeding cycles. Ms. Bulatao strongly recommended that future U.S.-funded feeding efforts in strongly support the NDA model. She looks forward to a strong working partnership with Land O’ Lakes and Tetra Pak in the years to come.

Edgar Collins is President of Prima Japfa Jaya, a supplier of finished school milk feeding products distributed in the southwest of Java and soon to the island of Bali and Lombok through the Land O’ Lakes project. Mr. Collins spoke about the role played by the private sector to develop products that meet the tastes and nutritional demands of school children with targeted nutrients and quality control standards. The processor also has the responsibility in creating awareness of product goodness for school and after school children. Loosely packed and milk milk per day can generate the equivalent of U.S. $636.20 during two school feeding cycles.

poverty line. Just recently, the government of Pakistan announced new school meal program to target at least 500,000 schoolgirl ages 5 to 12. The amount of funding allocated for this is US$50 million. The Pakistan delegation encouraged U.S. school feeding implementers to work with the government’s new programs, expand feeding to the Madrassa schools and combine efforts with a strong focus on local capacity building of the dairy production sector with aims to increase the percentage of milk that is being used as part of the school feeding package. Everyone loses in this situation: farmers receive a more fair price per liter of milk that is clean; processors are able to fully utilize processing capacity and are guaranteed a safe, nutritious and affordable milk product.

Cindy Buhl from the office of Congressman Jim McGovern provided an overview of the current status of food community programs, the Executive Branch review of U.S. food aid programs and recommendations made by the Bush Administration on adjustments and their impacts of U.S. government food commodity programs. Many questions were presented to Ms. Buhl by participants of which most revolved around what can the international community (including NGOs, private sector) do to ensure congressional and Executive Branch support for the Global Food for Education Initiative. Ms. Buhl stated that first, school feeding implementers must continue their excellence in the field, improve monitoring and evaluation of program impacts and provide quantitative results in reports back to donors and congressional offices. She also strongly encouraged local governments to state their interest and support directly to the Bush Administrators Congress and USDA/USAID. Continuing and receiving U.S. government school feeding programs in their country. Ms. Buhl commented on the power of working on a program in action and seeing the exuberance and passion for learning and contributing to helping hundreds of thousands of school children reach their full potential and maximizing their contribution to society is an overwhelming experience. She highly recommended to the group to see examples of programs that have shared to Congress.

Mr. UDALL is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I want to take time today to recognize and express my deep appreciation to a gentleman who has worked for me since I came to Congress.

Professional staff, for the most part, work in the back stage of history, but their work is fundamental to our democracy. They are dedicated and professional public servants, and I commend them for their service to their country and their contributions to the House of Representatives.

Juan Luevano, who serves as my casework manager in my Santa Fe office, is retiring this year at the age of 63 after a remarkable career. He spent over 3 decades of his life serving the people of New Mexico in some capacity. I stand here today not only to recognize him but to also thank him on behalf of thousands of people that he has helped over the years.

Juan has had jobs ranging from being a fruit picker in California to being a DJ at a Spanish radio station in Albuquerque to serving in the nation’s military as a paratrooper in the U.S. Army. This diversity has given him a unique perspective on people and their personal situations.

His career as a Civil servant in New Mexico began in 1969, when he worked at the State Welfare Department. For 10 years, Juan worked tirelessly to help people with their claims for food stamps and Medicaid. From 1979 to 1983, he worked for Lieutenant Governor Roberto Mondragon. He remembers many successes as a caseworker in this profession, for example, helping clear up a $10,000 hospital bill for a destitute woman.

Juan stayed in this position from 1983 to 1987, while working for the next Lieutenant Governor, Mike Rybbeck. Juan then found himself working for the New Mexico State Senate Chief Clerk’s Office, where he worked on cases on behalf of State senators.

Juan began his governmental service when he came to work for my Democratic predecessor in 1991. Congressman Bill Richardson. It was in this position where Juan began helping his fellow New Mexicans resolve their problems with the Federal Government.

He had his first experiences with Social Security, the Veterans Administration, the Internal Revenue Service, and other agencies that make our governmental work. At any given time, he handled 250 cases. He stayed in this position until Bill Richardson left the Congress in 1997.

Before he came to my office in 1999, Juan worked for the Social Security Administration Tele服务中心 in Albuquerque. He assisted hundreds of people, often utilizing his outstanding Spanish skills, taking calls from Puerto Rico and all over the country. He also worked as a prison chaplain at the Estancia jail in New Mexico.

Juan has a natural gift for helping people during hard times. Our constituents that come to our offices for help are usually at the end of their rope and frustrated by miles of red tape and bureaucracy that they have had to endure. Wherever Juan absorbed his passion for service, it has been a fulfilling aspect of his life. As he once explained: “This is one place where you can really help people, and the most desperate is often the least. At least they can find an ear to let out their frustrations. To be able to make someone’s life more meaningful is a special privilege. People come to their Congressman with life-changing events. Their problems are serious. To me, all cases are important because they mean so much to the individual. The reward in this type of work is so much greater than money.”

For about 15 years, Juan has been commuting to Santa Fe from his home in Torreon, 4 hours round trip. Neither rain nor snow nor hail nor heat nor the gloom of night has kept him from faithfully doing his job.

I cannot begin to describe the casework successes that we have shared together. Juan has also earned several letters to the editor in various newspapers in New Mexico thanking him for his diligent work. Those examples speak volumes about Juan’s work ethic.

Juan is a veteran, a husband of 40 years, a father to 13 children, and a grandfather to 26. I know that more than anything he ever did in his professional career he is most proud of his loving family. He has a true passion for his Hispanic heritage.

He enjoys explaining to those of different backgrounds the traditions and the history of his people. He has helped me in my quest to provide justice to Hispanic land grant heirs of the Southwest.

He is a talented musician and takes great pride in performing with his family throughout New Mexico. He loves music and has written many corridos, Mexican ballads, during his life. Some of these songs are archived at the University of New Mexico Department of Music.

I applaud Juan for his great public service.

CONGRATULATIONS TO U.S. WORLD CUP SOCCER TEAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. Udall) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I do not know if any of my colleagues have done this, but I simply wanted to rise and extend congratulations to the U.S. World Cup soccer team.Over the last week, we have had the chance to watch a phenomenal group of individuals under the leadership of Coach Arena move all the way to the quarter finals. Mr. Speaker, I want to take time today to one by German. There is little doubt that the game that was played Juan has a remarkable career. He spent over 3 years as a prison guard in the state prison. At any given time, he handled over 250 cases. He stayed in this position until Juan began helping his fellow New Mexicans resolve their problems with the Federal Government.

today probably saw the best performance through the entire World Cup by the U.S. team.

So, Mr. Speaker, I just want to say from Friedel to Donovan to McBride, and all of the wonderful players on the U.S. soccer team, congratulations on a job well done. You represented the United States extraordinarily well.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY AND AMTRAK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I have come to address the issue of Amtrak, but I just cannot resist making some comments regarding one of the most bizarre and tortured speeches I have ever heard given by a Member who preceded me in the well.

Yes, it is true Americans pay more than twice as much as most people who live in industrialized nations around the world for our pharmaceuticals, many of those pharmaceuticals manufactured in the United States by United States-owned drug manufacturing firms and somehow exported from the United States and sold for half or 30 percent of the price overseas where they still make money. He said all we need is a bigger dose of the free market in the Republican approach to this bill.

We certainly do not want a government program like Medicare, that would actually rein in the price of drugs by negotiating it down using the market power of the 40 million people in Medicare, just like Blue Cross/Blue Shield does with their patients, just like the Veterans Administration does with their clients. Why? Because the pharmaceutical industry, who hosted the Republican fundraiser, the most successful in history, earlier this week, is bitterly opposed to that. They do not want the free market to work here in the United States.

But what he was really commenting on was the fact that overseas they control the outrageous price of these drugs and the companies still make a profit. So it was one of the more bizarre and tortured speeches I have ever heard trying to get around the fact their bill will do nothing about the outrageous price of pharmaceuticals, and that in fact they are introducing and passing legislation written by the insurance and pharmaceutical industry.

Now, on to Amtrak, another looming disaster. On Monday, the administration has a critical decision to make: Will they guarantee a loan for Amtrak to continue its operation, or will they kill Amtrak and kill our national rail system once and forever?

Will we become the only major industrialized Nation on Earth without a national rail system? What happens the next time there is a 9-11 when there is no rail alternative? Where are those people going to go? What are our alternatives?

This administration is rehashing again there another free market mantra. My God, Amtrak should not get subsidies. Well, yes, the trucking industry gets subsidies; automobiles get huge Federal subsidies; and, yes, the aviation industry got more subsidies in one day than Amtrak has gotten in 15 years. But Amtrak, no, they should not get a penny, because they compete with the regional airlines, and they are not liked by the freight companies.

So the administration is falling back on this: let us make it like the British rail system. That is as credible as the idea of modeling our electricity on the British system, which we have done. Deregulation, the disaster in California, was modeled on what they have done in Great Britain. And, in fact, what they are proposing for Amtrak is modeled on what they have done in Great Britain.

When I was over there earlier this year for aviation security issues, the paper was filled day after day after day with disasters, capacity problems, safety problems, crashes, dissatisfaction of the public. Divide off the rails from the actual providers of service. Yes, the Brits did that. It is a disaster.

No, this is plain and simple an excuse to kill the system. And if the administration does not sign this loan on Monday, they have just signed the death warrant of the national rail system in this country, which would be a horrible tragedy.

In my region, we have grown, with minuscule investment, rail passengers by 600 percent in 8 years. If we can turn it into a truly high-speed system, of course then it might compete with the aviation industry, we could get people to Seattle just about as quickly as they could get there and deal with the traffic problems coming to and from the airport in Oregon and the airline schedules.

But they do not want to have that kind of a system. They do not want that alternative. They do not want it to be successful. They want to kill it.

I challenged the administration on Monday, give them that loan guarantee and let Congress work its will in terms of reforming Amtrak, making it work better. We can do that, but do not just kill it with the lame excuse you want to make it like the failed British system.

Why should we emulate the failures of governments overseas when they are well known and well publicized? And if you want to kill it, just be honest about it and say you want to kill Amtrak, in particular because a few airlines are concerned about their routes in the east coast and other quarters where rail is actually carrying almost as many passengers, and in Europe where, in fact, on less than 400-mile flights they do carry more passengers. It is a more efficient way to get there. If that is what the agenda is, at least be honest about it.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Lord, we read the Bible and there it is: the persistently repeated admonition to give thanks. We know You well enough to know that You do not need the assurance of our gratitude. Surely, the need for thanksgiving must have something to do with our spiritual health. The psalmist said, “O Lord my God, I will give thanks to You forever.”—Psalm 30:12. In this life and in heaven, forever is a long time. Paul said, “In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God for you.”—1 Thess. 5:18.

In everything, Lord? Suddenly we know the secret. Thanksgiving is the memory of the heart. We have great memories of Your faithfulness. They become cherished memories as we tell You how grateful we are, not only for Your blessings, but, for You. We say with Joyce Kilmer, “Thank God for God!”

Most important of all, we know that when we thank You for all Your good gifts, the growth of false pride is stunted. And when we can thank You even for the rough and tough things in life, we really can let go of our control and trust You to bring good out of the most distressing things. And so, we give thanks! And we praise You for the Senate here who will be casting their votes today. Thank You for the privilege of living in this democracy. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable DEBBIE STABENOW led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Madam President, we have a vote that will occur immediately on the Murray amendment. The managers and leaders hope others will offer amendments today. We will have the opportunity to do that. This will be the last vote of the day.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 2514, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2514) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2003 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Murray/Snowe amendment No. 3927, to restore a previous policy regarding restrictions on use of Department of Defense facilities.

Mr. WARNER, Mr. President, Senator SANTORUM consulted with me yesterday at great length about his desire not to have this vote today. He wished to be present. He had to be absent for valid reasons.

I want to state for the record that were the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SANTORUM, present, he would vote in the negative.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 3927

Mr. REID. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The amendment (No. 3927) was agreed to.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am sure everybody is aware that this is the last vote we know our colleagues, both Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER, are interested, however, in continuing debate on the bill throughout the day and on Monday. We will be in session. We will be in a position to entertain amendments and to bring them to closure.

My hope is we can use these 2 days. I am inclined to press for a finite list, but we will not do that today. Senators should be aware that next week is going to be a very busy week. Those who want to wait until Tuesday or Wednesday should not count on having a lot of time to debate their amendments. We have 2 great days today and Monday—days to offer amendments. I hope Senators will do so.

There will be a vote Monday night—at least one and maybe more. So Senators should be prepared to vote on Monday after 4 o’clock. We will announce a time certain after consultation with the Republican leader, and Senators should be prepared to come back and vote on Monday so that we can begin a full day of work on the bill on Tuesday. Hopefully, we’ll complete our work Wednesday or Thursday.

I know the distinguished Republican leader has some comments and questions, I will yield the floor to him at this time.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I thank Senator DASCHLE for his comments and yield, so I can engage in a colloquy with him.

First, regarding the schedule and the majority leader’s intent to move forward, I certainly support what he is trying to do. I think good progress has been made this week on the Defense authorization bill. I think we have disposed of two or three issues that could have been very contentious. It took a little time, but we got them done without much difficulty. I assume that next week we will have not more than 4 days to finish this bill and maybe some other actions in addition to that.

I join the majority leader in urging Members, if they have a serious amendment, to identify it to the managers. This is aimed at both sides. Let’s not make up this fictitious list of grand designs where Senators say “I have 10 amendments” when everybody knows he or she has one or none.

Also, it seems to me, as I recall from studying the list, that there are about four other amendments that could take some time and could be somewhat controversial and require some votes. But there should not be a long list. I hope our managers will not have to sit here all day Monday begging Senators to offer amendments and nobody showing up, and then whine on Thursday if the majority leader has to file a cloture and say: I got cut out.

These managers are excellent and experienced and they are going to try to move forward. There has been good cooperation and we need to continue that. Hopefully, we can do effective work on Monday and get a list that we are really going to have to do, and avoid forcing the majority leader to have to deal with a list of amendments that are really going to have to do Tuesday afternoon if we don’t have some idea of how we are going to proceed. I used to get into that position, too. It is not always the majority leader’s choice.

I want to press the point that this is serious legislation. The country needs it, our military men and women need it. The majority leader did the right thing in moving to it. He has a right to expect us to work in good faith in bringing up amendments that are serious and not frivolous.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I was going to advise the leadership that the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Mr. SMITH, is prepared to address the Senate on his amendment. That could start between 4 and 4:30 and perhaps meet the hour designated with the leadership for a vote.

I also wish to request, respectfully, of the leaders to repeat the statements made yesterday by both leaders to the effect that the criteria be established by the distinguished chairman and myself is that the amendments must be relevant. Would the leader be kind enough to repeat that for the record so all can hear.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, let me reiterate what we did say yesterday for the record. Under the agreement we have now entered into, amendments have to be relevant—not necessarily germane, in the definition of Senate parlance, but certainly relevant. We have to the two leaders to determine that—not the Parliamentarians but the managers. They will be the arbiters of relevancy. They are fair and they are respected on both sides of the aisle. I respect their judgment and will stand behind the decisions they make.

Having said that, I hope we are limiting ourselves to relevant amendments, that Senators at least come forward with some understanding of what the amendments—relevant amendments—will facilitate this matter. With a finite list today, it would be helpful to know what relevant amendments Senators are intending to offer so that we have some ability to schedule for the remainder of the week.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, will the Republican leader yield?

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. LEVIN. First, I thank the majority leader and the Republican leader for their continuing efforts to move this bill along. Senator WARNER pointed out that Senator SMITH will be ready on Monday afternoon with his amendment. I understand Senator DAYTON, who is a co-sponsor of this amendment, will also be able to clear some amendments in the next few hours, we hope, and either take care of those today or Monday.

NOMINATIONS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I would like to make a couple of other points. We also need to move some nominations in the next week. Senator DASCHLE and I are trying to find a way to get that process moving. A lot of these are not controversial. They are Democratic and Republican, people such as Congressman TONY HALL, who is awaiting confirmation to be Ambassador for the United Nations Agency for Food and Agriculture. A number of these are U.S. attorneys and U.S. marshals.

I urge the majority leader to consider beginning to do packages as we go along so we do not have them all stacked up at the end on Thursday or Friday where one objection, unrelated to the record, Under the agreement, we deny all these people who have been waiting, some of them a good while, an opportunity to be considered.
Also, I am concerned that—I don’t know—11 or 12 judges are on the calendar. I think most of them are non-controversial. But if we have to have a recorded vote, that could run into a lot of time and could really delay some of our work, especially as we approach this very important joint resolution dealing with the Yucca Mountain site for nuclear waste disposal.

I add that the majority leader had previously stated his intent to proceed to a number of other important issues in July. We have a lot of important work that needs to be done and only 4 weeks in that time. Given the busy schedule, including the prospect of appropriations bills, it would be my hope that the Senate could consider this resolution even next week. I realize that would be contingent upon completing the Defense authorization bill, but I have a good feeling about how the Defense authorization bill may proceed next week. Maybe I am dreaming on this first day of summer to think we could actually finish it a little early, but I am hoping for the very best, and this resolution could possibly even be brought up on the same day.

If not then, we do need to get some indication of when we will proceed. It is governed by law. I ask the leader to consider scheduling this measure and giving advice to colleagues as to when he anticipates this matter will be considered.

I yield the floor to Senator Daschle for a response he wants to give.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have no intention at this point to bring it up certainly this coming week. As the distinguished Republican leader knows, I have made no secret of my opposition to the resolution, and I know that sentiment is shared by a large percentage of our colleagues on this side of the aisle.

It is, of course, within the right of any Senator without debate to move to reconsider the resolution under the law. This is not a Senate rule. This is a law promulgated in 1982. Any Senator can move to it, and when that occurs, the motion to proceed is voted upon, and then a 10-hour debate, wherein no amendments are authorized to ensue, with a vote to follow at the expiration of that 10 hours.

Every Senator has the confidence that, if he or she chooses to make that position, it will be respected, whatever is on the floor at the time. That is the prerogative, unfortunately in my view, of any Senator given the law. It supercedes all Senate rules. I hope we will not avail ourselves of these expeditious proceedings in the future. Senate procedure ought to be respected, but I can do nothing about the current circumstances.

As the Senator knows, clearly that is within his right or the rights of other colleagues interested in moving legislation. I would oppose it when or if it is offered, but that is certainly the right of a colleague to consider.

Mr. LOTT. Thank you, Senator Daschle, for your comments. I understand this issue is privileged. It is like conference reports. It does not displace anything; it just temporarily interrupts it, and we can go right back to the pending business. That is why I raise the subject.

I want everybody to understand that nobody is trying to shove this in an unfair way. There is a lot of consultation involved on both sides. We want to ensure all Members how it can proceed and what the issue is and also give Senators who have concerns in opposition full knowledge of what time and how this will come up. That is why I bring it up at this point.

I understand and appreciate Senator Daschle’s position and the statement he just gave our colleagues.

CONGRESSIONAL BASEBALL GAME

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, on a final happy note, I observe there was a baseball game last night, really outstanding game to retire the trophy. I am pleased to say the Romping Elephants were able to bring home the victory and retire the trophy. The score was 5 to 2.

Why would I bring that up in the Senate since usually it is the younger and more inexperienced House Members who play on these baseball teams? In fact, one of the stars of the game was the Senator from Nevada, John Ensign, who played a sterling game at shortstop and actually got a walk, a hit, scored a run, and I think snugged about eight balls.

So it just goes to show that Senators are older and more experienced but also perhaps more talented.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LOTT. With that glowing conclusion, I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. If the Senator will yield before he leaves, I will say a word in response.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. On a less serious note, the Senator from Mississippi got about as many hits as I did last night; right?

Mr. LOTT. Yes.

Mr. REID. The Senator did about as well as I did in the baseball game, which is not very well. We did not play. I have sat silently listening to the colloquy between the two leaders on an issue of importance to me, and that is the nuclear waste issue. There are eight elephants on these baseball teams. I spoke at great length with the majority leader—who believe the law that was passed stands Senate precedent on its head and there will be a concerted effort by a number of Republicans and a significant number of Democrats, with the majority leader saying it is such a bad precedent that the motion to proceed should not, of course, go forward.

While the two leaders are present, I wanted to make sure everyone understood this is not a slam dunk, that the motion to proceed or whatever we want to call this unique aspect of law that passed is certainly not assured of going forward.
Whenever a Republican decides to bring it up, there will be a vote on this so-called motion to proceed, and I am hopeful and cautiously optimistic that it will not prevail. I wanted to make sure everyone understood that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am sorry the Republican leader had to bring up the score of the game last night. He could have quietly and graciously noted that the Republicans won, by 137 to 124, and to announce publicly that we got trounced last night. But there is another day, another game, and we are going to try to level the playing field next year. In the meantime, we will try to do the best we can to win our victories on the Senate floor.

Mr. REID. If the leader will allow me to say this: We do appreciate very much that the Republicans did not bring on Hall of Famer Jim Bunning to pitch against the Democrats.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be discharged.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be continued.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORZINE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

In a few minutes I hope to address the Senate with regard to the NATO forthcoming enlargement issue, as well as those issues relating to other matters which are important. I have some visitors at this moment, so I will have to absent myself from the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Virginia. I will also be available in the event someone with an amendment comes to the floor. I have to leave also for a few minutes, but I will be available for some time to join you and welcome anybody who does come to the floor with an amendment.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert into the record a letter from S. Murkowski, is recognized.

YUCCA MOUNTAIN RESOLUTION

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I want to bring to the attention of my colleagues the development on the Yucca Mountain resolution, specifically what it means, and share a few realistic observations on just what we are talking about as we reflect on our obligation to address the waste in this country.

In the past 2 days, I have come to the Senate floor to speak in morning business on S.J. Res. 34. I have spoken generally on the need to move this resolution and the assurance under which the resolution will move. I was pleased to see that the two leaders had an opportunity to discuss this earlier in the day. I think it is fair to say that, clearly, we are left with the appropriate procedure, which simply mandates that any Member may bring this up upon recognition of the Chair at any time. So it is quite appropriate that the leaders related the parliamentary procedure.

I want to speak specifically about what the resolution does and does not do. This seems to be a point of contention in the minds of some. The resolution merely reaffirms the present recognition of the Chair at any time.

The resolution gives the Department of Energy weapon sites. It does none of those things. The resolution gives the Department of Energy the go ahead to begin the licensing process with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and that is simply all there is to it.

Now, I have already given, in a series of presentations, a little background of the fact that we have collected some $17 billion from ratepayers in this country, and that the Federal Government signed a solemn contractual commitment to take the waste in 1998. The Federal Government has breached the sanctity of that contract. It is estimated that the damages and suits against the Federal Government are somewhere in the area of $40 billion to $70 billion. That is an obligation to the U.S. taxpayers because the Congress of the United States has not forced, if you will, compliance of that contractual commitment.

A lot of people simply dismiss this as something we can put off. You can put it off all right, but you are going to do it at the cost all right, but you are going to do it at the expense of the American taxpayers because the Congress of the United States has not forced, if you will, compliance of that contractual commitment.

The amendment (No. 3961) was agreed to.

moves to Savannah. It moves to the Waste Isolation Plant, WIPP, where most of this is concentrated, but certainly not all of them. The point is, the waste has been moving around the country—military waste over a long period of time. There are no demonstrations, there are no particularly extraordinary methods.

In this photo, you can see the truck hauling the waste. It is in canisters that can withstand fire. At one time, we had the capability of designing a canister that could stand a free fall of 30,000 feet and it would not penetrate the interior. So we have built these canisters adequately and safely.

Some have indicated that these waste shipments are only a few. I think it is to the contrary. This chart shows spent fuel shipments regulated by the NRC from 1964 through the year 2000. We have had almost 3,000 shipments. We shipped over 1.7 million miles and we have defined the radiations in canisters. For low-level radiations, we have had 986 shipments, and we shipped about 900,000 miles. So we have a total of 3,800 shipments total, 2.6 million miles, with no harmful radiation releases.

We have the technology and, obviously, if we can build reactors to generate power, certainly we have the capability to transfer and transport the energy, the rods that go in the reactors. Nobody seems to say anything or have any concern about the reactor fueling process itself or how the fuel is shipped across the country. But we have this hue and cry that somehow it is dangerous to move this waste on our highways and railroads. We have that capability. We have responsible people—scientists, engineers—who are competent to move this. Some suggest we should resolve this in a town hall meeting atmosphere. We need experts, engineers, technicians. They are staking their reputation on it. Just as those who build the reactors, we have competent people in charge of this operation. Anything less would suggest we cannot move this waste is simply an excuse for inaction.

Every Member has to reflect on an obligation that after we set up a procedure to take the waste in 1998, certainly the Federal Government should honor the terms and conditions of that contract, and Members should not look for an excuse to simply punt on this issue.

The bottom line is, let’s face it. I say to my colleagues, and the simple reality is, nobody wants this waste. Politically, it is dynamite. We have waste stored in Hanford, the State of Washington, Savannah, we have waste stored up and down the east coast. Do we want to leave it there, where it is unprotected, or do we want to move it to one place on which we can agree? Let’s recognize the reality. We have expended the funds that made the commitments. Now it is time to move. We cannot dodge this for another Congress.

I thank the President for recognition and wish him a good day. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is in morning business.

AMTRAK

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, it is Friday. The weekend starts for most people today. It looks as if it is going to be a great weekend whether at the Delaware beaches or the New Jersey shore. Next weekend might start a little early for a lot of people in this country. For the thousands, for the millions of commuters from Trenton, NJ, to New York, Connecticut, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, and out on the west coast, L.A., and a lot of other places as well because right now it looks as if, starting in the latter part of next week, Amtrak will begin an orderly shutdown of its operations, which will be a serious effect that will also lead to disruption of commuter operations in all those cities and many others I did not mention.

Amtrak is running out of operating funds for this fiscal year. They expect to run out of operating funds sometime in early July. The new president of Amtrak has announced his intention to try to negotiate a loan from Amtrak from a consortium of commercial banks, which Amtrak has done any number of times in the past, for operating moneys to bridge a period of time until the new Federal grant comes through or to negotiate money for capital improvements to Amtrak.

I am mindful of the efforts he is making to avert what could be a disaster. They are efforts that are supported by many of our colleagues. A week or so ago, $2 of our finished projects for our state, $55 million as part of an emergency supplemental to enable repair work to begin on Amtrak locomotives, passenger cars, and sleeping cars that had been damaged in the week around the country, wrecks, frankly, not caused by Amtrak or Amtrak’s neglect, but because of problems with track bed outside the commuter service's Northeast corridor that led to a derailing.

That money is in the emergency appropriations bill passed by the Senate and is one of the items at issue in the conference. I’ve been led to believe the President has threatened to veto even those moneys as part of the emergency supplemental if they remain in the bill.
We are looking at a train wreck. It seems to me we look at a train wreck about every year close to this time. I wish to take a moment this morning to look back over time. I would like for us to go back to 1970. That was when Amtrak was created. Amtrak was created because our Nation's private railroads did not want to continue to carry passengers. They could not make money doing that. They wanted out of the business. Then-President Richard Nixon signed into law legislation creating Amtrak.

The deal was the private railroads would pony up some money to buy Amtrak stock. They agreed to turn over all of their old locomotives, their old passenger cars, their old dining cars, their old sleeper cars. They agreed to turn over their old track bed in the Northeast corridor between Washington and Boston, old overhead wires, old signaling systems, old repair shops around the country, old train stations, and some of the Amtrak stock. Somehow Amtrak, with a little seed money, was to make a go of, and begin turning a profit from, operations that the private sector could not make profitable. It did not happen. We should not be surprised that it did not happen because it has not happened in other countries either.

For those Americans who this summer are going to be traveling to places in Europe—England, France, Spain, Italy, Germany, up into Scandinavia—throughout Europe, they are going to ride on trains that will almost take their breath away, beautiful trains, trains that run at speeds of close to 200 miles an hour, trains where one can sit with a cup of coffee or a cup of tea on the table and it does not even rattle or vibrate.

Americans are going to be traveling to places in Asia this summer, and they will ride trains in Japan and other countries that radiate a similar image—quality, fast, dependable service. In those countries, the private sector does not operate that train service. The national governments of those nations have decided it is in their naked self-interest to invest their taxpayers’ dollars in national passenger rail service. They do not do it out of some sense of altruism. They do it because they realize that in order to relieve congestion on their highways and in their airports, passenger rail can make a big contribution.

Those countries, those governments, realize that in order to reduce their dependence on foreign oil and to reduce their trade deficits, passenger rail service can make a real contribution.

They are also worried about the air in those countries as well, and they realize, compared to the emissions that come out of their cars, trucks, and vans, that the emissions emitted by passenger trains are far less.

We have similar kinds of concerns in this country. We have congestion around our airports and on our Nation’s highways worse by far than we did in 1970. We have problems with air pollution that are as bad, or maybe worse, than the problems we faced in 1970, certainly with respect to global warming and carbon dioxide in our atmosphere. We have a trade deficit in this country that makes our trade deficit much higher than Japan or Germany or to any other country. Over half of our oil is imported, and that number is growing. In the 1970s, not even a third of our oil was imported.

National passenger rail service will not solve all of these problems for the United States, but it will help us to reduce the size of those problems. We can take a lesson from our neighbors, our sister nations in Europe and in Asia, and we ought to do that.

There are a whole series of things that need to happen this year and next. I want to mention those, and then I will close. We need to pass an emergency appropriatings bill that includes at least $55 million so the work can begin. We need to begin in order to provide service to people, especially the Auto Train south of Washington to Orlando, FL, where Amtrak actually makes money. We need to keep that money in the supplemental appropriations. It would be nice to grow it, but we at least need to keep that money.

The White House has, in my judgment, a moral responsibility. Having acted this week in a way that I believe enriched the Waubee Capital and Ameren, a private sector loan from a consortium of banks for $200 million to carry them through the end of this fiscal year, the administration should use their discretion, authorized under law, as I understand, through the FRA, to provide a loan guarantee so that Amtrak can obtain the money it needs to avoid the kind of disruption we are going to begin witnessing by next weekend if nothing is done.

We need to take up in the Senate the Amtrak reauthorization bill, which has cleared the Committee on Energy and Commerce by a vote, I think, of 21 to 3. Senator Hollings has been a champion for passenger rail service. He has authored very good legislation. Many of us have cosponsored it. We need to take it up, and we need to pass a motion to proceed and debate it.

If people want to offer amendments to it, that is all well and good. We debated amendments then up or down, and then move on to the bill. Fifty-two of our colleagues in the Senate have said: We believe Amtrak ought to be funded at $1.2 billion next fiscal year, and we need to go forward. As we take up the appropriations bill, we want to make sure that money through the appropriations process in the Senate and work with our colleagues in the House and in the administration.

Finally, we need a good, healthy debate on what the future of passenger rail service should be in this country. I realize that the heydays of passenger rail of the 1800s and the early 1900s are behind us, but there is still a huge need for the good that passenger rail service can provide us with respect to congestion, air congestion, highway congestion, with respect to reducing the emissions into our air, and with respect to reducing our reliance on foreign oil and trying to curtail, at least a little, our trade deficit.

What should the future passenger rail service be in this country? In my judgment, it ought to include making the Northeast corridor world class. As to the beautiful Acela Express train service that is now available, we are not harnessing the full potential of those trains from Washington to Boston because of the work that can and should be done to the track bed, to the overhead wires, to the signaling system, to enable the trains to go 150 or 160 miles an hour, which is faster than in many places they can now go.

We need to begin developing high-speed rail corridors in other parts of this country, the southeastern United States and Florida, in and out of Atlanta. The Northeast corridor finally should be extended at least into Virginia, maybe as far as Richmond. I know there are many in North Carolina who would like to see the Northeast corridor extended into North Carolina where they are investing in passenger rail service on their own.

There are any number of densely populated corridors such as out of Chicago, St. Louis, to Kansas City, to Denver, to Seattle, to Portland, to San Diego or maybe L.A. to Las Vegas, L.A. to San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Seattle, Portland-Spokane, Seattle-Vancouver, those are areas that are just ripe for high-speed passenger rail. The challenge for us is how to raise the money to put in place the infrastructure, the rail capability, the track bed, the overhead wires, the signaling, to be able to provide the service where it would be used.

The former chairman of the Amtrak board of directors who succeeded me on the Amtrak board, and preceded me on the Amtrak board, is former Wisconsin Governor Tommy Thompson, Secretary of Health and Human Services. He and I believe, as do many others, including many in this body, there needs to be a dedicated source of capital for passenger rail service in this country, to make world class the Northeast corridor, to begin developing, in conjunction and coordination with the right-of-way of freight railroads, the high-speed corridors in these densely populated areas of America.

I was struck to learn a couple of years ago that 75 percent of the people in America live within 150 miles of one of our coasts. Think about that. As time goes by, the density of our population, especially in those coastal areas, will not diminish, it will increase. The potential good that passenger rail service can provide for us will increase as well.

Not everybody wants to ride a train from one end of the country to the other. Some go to work, and others do, but a lot of people could benefit by riding a train in a densely populated corridor. A lot of people every day ride the longest train in the world, and that is the Auto Train that leaves just south of Washington, D.C., down near Orlando, FL, and back every day.

There are people who ride trains that go through spectacular parts of America. They go along the northern part of America, the Northwest, and the Coast Starlight from the west coast from one end of California up to the Canadian border. People are willing to pay good money to ride those trains.

I think one of the big questions we face is, What do we do with the other long-distance trains where Amtrak is unable to provide service and out of the farebox pay for the full cost of the service? I was always frustrated as Governor that when Delaware received Federal transportation monies, we did not have the discretion to use any of that money to help pay for passenger rail service in our State, which did not make sense.

For example, we could use our Federal congestion mitigation money in my State—other Governors could in their States—for freight railroads. We could use it for roads and highways. We could use that Federal congestion mitigation money for bicycle paths. We could not use it for passenger rail service, even if it made sense for our States. That is foolish. That ought to change. This Senate has tried to change it any number of times. We have not gotten the support we need from the other body. Sometimes we have not gotten the support we need from the Administration. We should give Governors and mayors the discretion to use a portion of their money to help underwrite the cost of long-distance trains that are not fully sustainable.

A number of years ago when I was on the Amtrak board, we started an experiment to see if Amtrak might partner with the freight railroads, when operating outside the Northeast corridor, to carry things other than people, such as mail packages, but also to carry other commodities, even perishable commodities, that are highly time sensitive in terms of getting where they are needed.

A lot of times, shippers will use trucks because they believe there is a greater reliance in terms of on-time performance, and especially in shorter distances, but a greater ability than trucking to provide on-time performance, and we started an experiment to see if maybe they could carry not only people’s commodities as we have in a specially designed cars attached to Amtrak trains. If Amtrak were able to make money carrying these commodities on the track bed of a freight railroad, Amtrak would share the profits with the freight railroads. Amtrak would have a way to supplement its costs and to underwrite its costs of the long-distance trains which, frankly, do not make money.

Amtrak has entered into an agreement with, I believe it is the Burlington Northern-Santa Fe Railroad, to be able to do that kind of thing, and it has attempted to negotiate with other freight railroads. That could be part of a solution. At least, as I see there is consensus in this body as to what the long-term passenger rail system should be in this country. I am not sure we know.

We do know if we do not do something, if the administration does not do something, by next weekend we are going to have a train wreck. Not a literal train wreck but a figurative train wreck. A lot of people who will want to go to work next Thursday or Friday will end up in traffic jams in and around their cities and communities, the likes of which they have not seen for a long time. Maybe on the brighter side, some people who didn’t want to go to work for the President Fray will get a long weekend. For them, maybe that is good. For our Nation, this is not good.

We need to address this issue. We need to address it today. The administration has that capability of addressing it today. The administration should use discretion as provided to the Federal Railroad Administration to use the loan guarantee to enable Amtrak to go forward for us to have an orderly debate over this fiscal year to determine the long-term course for passenger rail service in America.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I would like to respond to the comments made yesterday morning by the Secretary of Transportation in regards to Amtrak.

Frankly, I am puzzled by his remarks yesterday, puzzled because many of us in this body have been calling for the administration to take a position on Amtrak’s future since last July, when a group of us met with Secretary Mineta and Federal Railroad Administrator Rutter. Earlier this year, when the Commerce Committee prepared to mark-up the National Defense Rail Act, we again sought the administration’s input. The administration did not, that administration, and the bill was reported favorably by the committee by an overwhelming margin.

Indeed, the only thing we knew of the administration’s feelings toward Amtrak was that the Office of Management and Budget refused to release the $100 million in funding that the Congress appropriated late last year for improved security on trains and in stations.

After a full year of being AWOL on this issue, the administration suddenly announced that it would like to see massive, but vaguely defined, structural changes at Amtrak. And Secretary Mineta has said that without these big changes, whatever they may be, the administration will oppose Congressional attempts to increase funding for Amtrak. The Senate should not be subjected to this kind of bullying. The administration could have been a full partner in this process by raising these concerns last year, or even before the committee considered the National Rail Defense Act.

Instead, the administration has chosen to take a position that is diametrically opposed to the goals of the National Defense Rail Act, which now has 35 cosponsors. Rather than give Amtrak the resources it needs to run a forward-looking, national rail system, it seeks to tear down our national rail system and replace it with a model similar to the failed British model of rail privatization. The administration wants to strip every dollar from the system, based on a model that is universally derided for its inefficiency and its lack of safety. The British experience has shown us that safe, efficient, regional service can run on the cheap. But that kind of short-sighted penny-pinching is exactly what the President has in mind. This strategy could strip countless communities, including several in Massachusetts, of this vital service, further reducing transportation alternatives in those parts of our country.

Much as the administration would like to score philosophical points with conservative think tanks, the issue here is not who owns the trains and maintains the tracks. The fact is that the most important issue for Amtrak is funding, and whether we want to dedicate the sort of funds that will be necessary to maintain and enhance a national passenger rail network, and whether we want to try to build high-speed rail corridors into that network.

In his remarks yesterday, Secretary Mineta said, “The administration can afford to throw billions of Federal dollars at Amtrak and just hope its problems disappear.” He is right about one thing: We cannot wish away Amtrak’s problems. But Amtrak’s biggest problem is that, for 30 years, we have given it just enough funding to get by, but never enough to be truly viable. In his most recent review of the company’s finances, the Department of Transportation Inspector General used, “It’s larger that Amtrak knows how far.” While Amtrak has limped along on insufficient funding, our highways have become choked and our skyscrapers will soon be once again straining beyond their capacity.

Now we bear that Amtrak is prepared to shut down as soon as next week unless it receives immediate financial assistance. This will leave 22.5 million riders without train transportation. Let’s be clear: The administration, by virtue of its non-involvement in this issue, will bear the responsibility for this unprecedented blow to our national transportation network.
like to know how the administration will handle the immediate extra burden placed on other transportation modes. Rather than put $200 million into Amtrak, it appears they would prefer to continue to spend billions more on already-clogged highways and skyways.

We must remember that this Nation has spent less than 4 percent of our Nation’s transportation budget on inter-city passenger rail over the life of Amtrak. We spent more than $300 billion spent on highways, nearly $200 billion on airports and just $36 billion on inter-city passenger rail in 32 years.

As Amtrak’s ridership has increased despite its financial condition, that is not good enough anymore.

I would also add that Amtrak’s place in the $2-trillion Federal budget is tiny. We spend $150 billion per year on debt service alone, but just $521 million on its $26 billion passenger rail, on Commerce Committee’s bill. The company’s new president has already announced plans to restructure management. That is a positive step, but we cannot and should reserve judgment on the success of that restructuring until it is fully implemented.

Amtrak is not sufficiently insulated from Washington politics. That is also a legitimate concern, and one that must be addressed. Language inserted in the National Rail Defense Act would take a step toward ensuring that decisions about route terminations are made based on objective financial criteria. Still, we must do more to ensure that Congress provides oversight of the company, without unduly burdening it.

Clearly, the company’s fiscal problems have been exacerbated by the Congress’s unrealistic requirement that Amtrak meet an “operational self-sufficiency.” As a result, Amtrak explored a wide variety of revenue options, with varying degrees of success. The new CEO, David Gunn, has expressed a desire to return Amtrak to its fundamental mission of moving people.

As these changes in the company are implemented, I believe it would be a grave error to allow the administration to proceed with its plan to restructure management without Congressional oversight. And, as if these numbers are not tragic enough, there is one more staggering statistic: by the end of this decade forty-four million children will have lost their parents to AIDS.

And, as if these numbers are not tragic enough, there is one more staggering statistic: by the end of this decade forty-four million children will have lost their parents to AIDS.

The wasted billions over the last 30 years demonstrate that we must do more to ensure that Congress provides oversight of the company, without unduly burdening it.

THE PRESIDENTIAL INITIATIVE TO REDUCE AIDS TRANSMISSION

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, Wednesday I was asked to be a member of the press about the President’s announcement of an initiative to spend $500 million, including $200 million Congress has already approved for the current fiscal year, to fight the global AIDS pandemic by targeting the transmission of the disease from mothers to infants.

I applauded the President and his decision. His participation in the bipartisan campaign to combat this international health crisis is welcome and significant.

It is important to understand, however, that the President does not pledge any new resources until 2004. And the overall amount of resources he does commit to, while important, isn’t enough.

The human toll this health crisis has already inflicted on this country and the world is staggering.

Every twelve seconds, one person dies due to complications from AIDS. Every minute, one of those people is an infant.

Each day brings 14,000 new infections, with half of those infected under the age of 25.

There are currently 30 million people with HIV in Africa, and the National Intelligence Council estimates that number could double in the next five years.

And, as these numbers are not tragic enough, there is one more staggering statistic: by the end of this decade forty-four million children will have lost their parents to AIDS.

It is also important to understand that, as these statistics demonstrate, the international community doesn’t have the luxury of time in reversing the spread of HIV worldwide. Good intentions must be matched by commensurate resources if we are to reverse current trends.

Earlier this month, against the background of those horrific—and mounting—numbers, the Senate debated its version of the FY2002 emergency supplemental appropriations bill. Prior to the President’s announcement of this important legislation, a bipartisan group of Senators urged the Appropriations Committee to provide additional resources in this bill to combat AIDS so that funds to address this problem could be released right away.

The committee responded by including $100 million to fight AIDS and other diseases in the supplemental. And before the Senate could take up the committee’s work, a group of senators—Democratic and Republican—proposed that this bill not leave the Senate floor with less than $500 million for this purpose.

Regrettably, according to news stories, the White House feels $500 million is too much for AIDS this year.

Under pressure from the White House, several Senators withdrew their support for adding $500 million for AIDS this year, and the effort failed. The Senate was forced to settle for $200 million.

Just $200 million to fight a deadly disease that already infects 40 million people and is projected to infect millions more.

So, while I find Wednesday’s announcement an encouraging indication of a growing awareness within the administration of the need to engage in the battle against the international AIDS crisis, the resources it is willing to commit to this challenge still fall far short of what is needed. And far short of what I believe this great nation is capable of and should be doing.

As for availability, the President’s initiative sets aside $300 million in fiscal year 2004, 16 months from now.

Based on UN estimates, over those next 16 months, more than 1.1 million babies could contract HIV. The President’s plan aims to prevent just 146,000 infections in 5 years.

Again, these resources are welcome, but I cannot help but feel that we have just missed a tremendous opportunity.

When we wait to dedicate the resources necessary to fight this battle, we make our eventual victory against this threat harder—and more costly.

Does the administration truly believe that this $300 million could not be spent wisely and well now? If not, why?

So I come to the floor this afternoon to offer to work with the President and my colleagues to do two things with regard to this new initiative.

First, because the transmission of HIV from mother to child is an area where we know we can reduce the spread of HIV, it is vital that we increase funding in the area of mother-to-child transmission. But it is not enough to keep children from being infected with HIV in utero. We should commit to a major effort to treat the mothers and other family members already infected with the deadly virus so that children, free from the virus at birth, will grow up not as orphans, but with the support of their families.

Second, I do not believe we should wait until 2004 to put this initiative fully into action. We should include the full $200 million in this year’s supplemental, and we must find significant, additional resources in the next fiscal year.

On a bipartisan basis during the last two years, Congress has significantly increased the amount of resources the President has sought for the global HIV/AIDS battle. And we must do so again.

In announcing Wednesday’s initiative, President Bush said, “The wasted human lives that lie behind the numbers are a call to action for every person on the planet and for every government.'"

He is right.

Our nation has begun to heed that call, but our commitment to beating back this disease and our compassion for the millions who now suffer—compel us to do much, much more.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. CLEMENS). The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I thank the distinguished leader for the assistance he has given, together with the Republican leader, in moving this bill forward. I am going to address the Senate momentarily on an aspect of this bill. I say to the majority leader, and then he can give us guidance as to when this bill can be set aside.

Parliamentary inquiry: It is this Senator’s understanding the Senate is in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent we return to consideration of the bill so I may address certain sections of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. At the conclusion of my remarks, I request we again lay aside the bill and return to morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZA-TION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR
2003—Continued

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, periodically I have addressed the Senate on my concerns regarding the tragic strife in the Middle East. I did so on May 2 of this year and in the RECORD of that day I commented with regard to the situation as of that date. Regrettably, the situation has continued to worsen.

Our President is actively engaged with the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense. I have had the opportunity to speak to all of them about this situation and express my views.

I know of no conflict of recent times that is more serious, in terms of how its tentacles are far reaching throughout the world. It is affecting, in some way, our ability to pursue terrorism worldwide. It is affecting our ability to take further actions to bring about our goals in Afghanistan. It is affecting the planning that this Nation must make from time to time—not referring to war plans, but just planning—as to how we deal with Iraq. Iraq is continuing, under the leadership of Saddam Hussein, to manufacture and warehouse weapons of mass destruction. I think the threat is irreparable.

At the core of all of this decision making is this continuing conflict in the Middle East. I have said and I will say again today that I urge those in positions of authority—whether in this country, in Israel, or in the Palestinian Authority—to look at this daily loss of life on both sides and do all they can to bring about a cessation of this tragic conflict.

Eventually the two sides will sit down and try to work out some agreement for a lasting and permanent peace. A number of us have the opportunity to visit with President Mubarak when he came to Washington a few weeks ago, and others among us had the opportunity to visit with President Sharon when he recently visited. I recognize the Presiding Officer was involved in those consultations. However, it seems to this Senator that President Mubarak and President Sharon are miles apart in their views as to how to bring about a resolution of this conflict.

I read today that certain persons in our Government are trying to impress upon the Arab world that they have been actively involved in trying to bring about peace in the Middle East, to become more active—specifically with Arafat, to impress upon him the need to exercise his authority to stop this tragic killing.

At the same time, there are certain elements within the Israeli Government that want nothing to do with Arafat. So on the one hand, people are going to Arafat to try to get him to do something and, on the other hand, people are saying we would not deal with him even if he were to do something.

Much of his infrastructure has been eroded in this conflict. We know not, at least this country does not, what exactly is the political structure among the Palestinian people and their ability to convey through Arafat, or another leader, their views towards a cessation of hostilities.

But this brings me to the question regarding NATO and the admission of new countries. Yesterday I had the distinct privilege, along with other Senators, to welcome in the Senate all 19 Ambassadors from the NATO nations who have convened here in Washington for a series of meetings with our Government. It is a very interesting group.

I said to them, in all candor: I am now in my 24th year in the Senate and I am a strong supporter of NATO. I said that they are the trustees of the NATO alliance and are the future. That alliance has been the most successful military alliance in the contemporary history of mankind. It has achieved its goals.

On the 50th anniversary of NATO, the leaders of NATO convened here in Washington. At that time they added a provision to their charter which clarifies any doubt that NATO has the authority, subject to the concurrence of the member nations, to engage in this war on terrorism and to selectively go into areas of dispute to perform crisis responsibilities.

I said to them, quite candidly, that they should entertain the thought that, should NATO be invited by the Government of Israel, and such spokesmen or government as may exist amongst the Palestinians, to come in and provide a peacekeeping force, that they should seriously entertain whether or not NATO could carry out that mission.

NATO has done it with professional excellence in the Balkans, both in Bosnia and Kosovo. It is quite interesting that among the beneficiaries of those peacekeeping operations have been a significant proportion of the Muslim population. So NATO has established in Kosovo and Bosnia, an opportunity for the people in those countries to come together and begin to form a government that will improve their quality of life, certainly an improvement from what I witnessed when I first went there in the fall of 1991 and saw the ravages of war.

I explained this yesterday to those Ambassadors. I also said the following. I can remember the days right in this Chamber when there were hard debates, particularly after the dramatic fall of the Berlin Wall. That wall came down. Ronald Reagan is to be credited in history for being instrumental in getting that wall to come down, ending the cold war and helping the demise of the Soviet Union.

I can remember the people of the United States through their elected representatives saying, Should we not now lessen our contributions to NATO? And they are very significant dollar contributions, and leadership, manpower, and equipment.

In this bill that we are on right now is $200 million and a fraction of new taxpayer money—$235 million for the military budget of NATO. That follows approximately $50 million in assistance authorized and appropriated by this Chamber several months ago in the context of the Freedom Consolidation Act.

In this one fiscal year alone—it may be two, and I will have to check that—roughly $255 million. That is a significant contribution by our taxpayers. And, that doesn’t even begin to capture the costs the American taxpayers bear in keeping over 100,000 military personnel permanently stationed in the European theater.

I said to those Ambassadors that this year there will be strong support for the NATO budget, as there should be. NATO is doing a remarkable job in the Balkans and elsewhere. We are strong supporters.

But also in the Senate yesterday, history was made. The Senate is roughly 214 years old. It was the first time that in one hearing room—the Armed Services Committee where I was present—under the advise and consent procedure, we were hearing from a prominent four-star officer nominated to become commander in chief of the Northern Command—a joint command established primarily for the purpose of protecting the citizens of our 50 States, and coordinating the use of our U.S. military to protect our States. Stop think. This Nation has felt itself secure behind two great oceans for those 214 years of our Senate—secure because of the strong relationships we have to the north with Canada, and to the south with Mexico and our Central and South American neighbors. But our President has wisely concluded—and I commend and support him—we must set up a separate military command for the purposes of protecting the citizens of our 50 States.

In another hearing room was a distinguished civilian witness—Governor Tom Ridge, the President’s Homeland Security Adviser—introducing a proposed Department of Homeland Security, the head of which will have the responsibility of marshaling the assets of this Nation’s military, intelligence, police, National Guard, and all types of coordination required, again to protect citizens in their homes, in their towns, in their villages, and in the cities of the United States of America.

That was a profound day yesterday—a very profound crossroads in the history of this country.

As I talked with the NATO Ambassadors, I felt compelled to make the point that our country is placing additional taxpayers’ dollars towards the protection of the citizens of our Homeland Security, and this new Cabinet position, an entirely new entity of this Nation to the Arab world. It exploits the sense of discouragement that exists in the region and engenders more and more ferment, which is then directed at Israel and the West, but most specifically, at our Nation.

The conflict in the Middle East between Israel and the Palestinian people generates—I cannot quantify it, but it seems—hatred that grows and multiplies in the Arab world and is ultimately directed towards this country. That is why I think we should look at every single resource available to us to try to bring the entire population of those hostilities, while simultaneously encouraging governments in the region to bring truth, democracy and opportunity to their nations. I believe it would lessen some measure of the hatred being harbored in this land, which results in daily and weekly threats and warnings to the American people.

I believe NATO should examine for itself whether or not it could play a peacekeeping role to enable the two warring factions to sit down over a period of time to bring about the cessation of the violence, and to be the mediators in the Middle East.

That is what this Nation stands for. I cannot quantify it, but that sentiment generates hatred that grows and multiplies in the Arab world and is ultimately directed towards this country. That is why I think we should look at every single resource available to us to try to bring the entire population of those hostilities, while simultaneously encouraging governments in the region to bring truth, democracy and opportunity to their nations. I believe it would lessen some measure of the hatred being harbored in this land, which results in daily and weekly threats and warnings to the American people.

I believe NATO should examine for itself whether or not it could play a peacekeeping role to enable the two warring factions to sit down over a period of time to bring about the cessation of the violence, and to be the mediators in the Middle East.

Any nation aspiring to NATO membership that wishes to become involved in the Middle East should do so under the leadership of our troops, under the command of our military and intelligence, and with the support of the American people.

I believe NATO should examine for itself whether or not it could play a peacekeeping role to enable the two warring factions to sit down over a period of time to bring about the cessation of the violence, and to be the mediators in the Middle East.

That is what this Nation stands for. I cannot quantify it, but that sentiment generates hatred that grows and multiplies in the Arab world and is ultimately directed towards this country. MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now return to morning business.

YUCCA MOUNTAIN

Mr. REID. Madam President, I have been sparing in my comments the last several months about the Yucca Mountain situation. Everyone acknowledges that a Republican will bring this up in the next several weeks. We have had a series of people coming to the floor talking about nuclear waste. The Republican leader talked about it today. We have had Senator Craig and Senator Murkowski speak about it several times this week.

My colleague from Alaska, for example, this morning discussed the issue of nuclear waste and transportation. I can remember Senator Bryan and I, when we had the pleasure of serving together in the Senate, traveled to St. Louis. The whole purpose of our trip was to meet with local officials about the transportation of nuclear waste. We did.

We went to the governing body of St. Louis. We talked to them. We had a very nice visit. We visited an editorial board. We were on a radio station or two there.

As a result, the people who run the city of St. Louis passed a resolution saying: We don’t want nuclear waste transported through St. Louis.

If you can explain the issue to people, they recognize quickly it is not a good idea. So that is why I want to respond to some of the points raised by my friend from Alaska. He discussed, for example, the shipments of waste to the WIPP facility, the waste isolation project in New Mexico. Comparing those shipments to the proposed spent fuel shipments to Yucca Mountain is like comparing a squirt gun to the most modern tank in America. They are just completely different substances. The items being shipped to WIPP are things such as rags, tools, and laboratory equipment. These are not spent fuel rods, which would give you a lethal dose of radiation in less than 3 minutes if you stood near them. You could be exposed to it for a matter of seconds and get sick.

With the news of terrorists pursuing radioactive materials and weapons of mass destruction, now more than ever we need to be vigilant in protecting the welfare of the American people. The decision to approve or reject the Yucca Mountain site is the most important transportation decision of this new century. This decision could bring as much as 100,000 shipments of high-level nuclear waste by truck through our towns and communities, as many as 20,000 train loads. This year we learned they may ship some of it by barge—the 20,000 train loads. This year we learned nuclear waste by truck through our homes, our churches, our places of business.

It doesn’t make sense to ship this waste and allow terrorists to use any one of these shipments as the ultimate “dirty” bomb. A successful attack on a spent nuclear fuel shipping cask would be extremely dangerous. Each truck cask would contain up to 2 tons of deadly material and each rail cask up to 11 tons.

These casks are packed full of the most dangerous high-level nuclear waste known to man. They contain Cesium-137, Strontium-90, and Plutonium-239. A release of less than 1 percent will affect tens of thousands of citizens, resulting in hundreds of long-term cancer deaths. This could shut down an entire city.

My friend, Senator Conrad, was told by an expert that a “dirty” bomb would make Washington, DC, uninhabitable for 400 years.

Spent fuel shipments to Yucca Mountain would create a target-rich environment. DOE is already shipping hundreds of truck shipments by barge, truck, and train, all going to the same place. There would be as many as six to eight shipments each day. There are very few targets now. There would be hundreds of targets, thousands of targets if we go forward.

According to DOE, there have only been at most one or two shipments per week in the entire country over the past 10 years. Current shipments are harder to attack because they go to many different destinations. For the DOE to say we have never had an accident” isn’t true. If you pin them down, they will say we have had no “reported” releases. Again, DOE has proposed putting tens of thousands of these casks out on the roads, waterways, and railways without a transportation plan. It would not be as bad if they had a plan they had let the Congress and the American people scrub, and if they had done an environmental impact statement, but they have not even done that. Then, do not done an environmental assessment.

Don’t take my word for it; look at what the Secretary of Energy said on the subject:

The DOE is just beginning to formulate its preliminary thoughts about a transportation plan.

After 9-11, proceeding with Yucca Mountain without a transportation plan is reckless and irresponsible. The Congress has the responsibility to hold the Department accountable. There can only come from rejecting this reckless resolution.

I mentioned on the floor recently that there is a Web site which was started to educate the American people about these shipments. It’s www.mapscience.org. Anybody within the sound of my voice should go the way of the many fundraisers or the way of the many congressional fundraisers. They are not doing a good job.

This Web site is telling the American people what the Department of Energy does. If they don’t want them, the proposed shipments will go right by their homes, right by the places where they work, right by the places where their kids go to school. There has been a big response from the American people. This Web site has been up for 10 days, and there have been well over 100,000 hits.

There is no rush to move forward. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission Chairman has stated that if this Yucca Mountain project did not go forward today, it would be no big deal. He said it can be kept safely on site for decades.

More important, Yucca Mountain will never eliminate the waste that is stored around the country. Everybody within the sound of my voice should understand the big lie DOE and the nuclear power industry is projecting. The big lie is that the 131 sites where nuclear waste now will be reduced to one site. Well, the fact is, there will never happen. It will never happen because there are 46,000 tons there now. They can move 3,000 tons a year; but they produce 2,000 tons a year. So do the math. You will fill Yucca Mountain before it ever opens.

Remember, when you take out a spent fuel rod, 95 percent of the heat, the radioactivity is still in it. It is so hot the only thing they can do with it is contain it in water. They cannot cool it off. After 5 years, they can put it into a dry cask storage container. So this statement that they will only have one site is not true. It is a big lie. There will always be 131 sites, plus Yucca Mountain, plus all the trucks and trains. So instead of having one site, we are going to have hundreds of thousands of sites.

So when my friends march down here and say this is nothing, it is like moving the stuff to Nevada. I repeat my analogy of a squirt gun compared to the most modern tank in America; that is the comparison. The American people need to understand that the millions and millions of dollars spent by the nuclear power industry is money that has been spent to deceive and mislead the American people.

I hope my friends on the other side of the aisle will do the right thing and vote for the good of their constituents, not for the good of the big lobbying effort that has been conducted in Washington over the last 20 years, and not go the way of the many fundraisers or the way of the vacations that have been paid for by the Nuclear Institute, where they send people to Las Vegas for a week so they can look at the hole in the mountain. I hope they will vote in their constituents’ best interests.

Mr. Hall is a member of the National Academy of Engineering Committee on Combating Terrorism and was Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board from 1994 to 2001. This article appeared in the New York Times the day before yesterday. Among other things, he said:

Secretary Abraham has said there is plenty of time to create a transportation plan before the Yucca Mountain project. But safety issues will almost certainly get short shrift if they are not addressed before the repository site is approved. Congress needs to force the Department of Energy to reassess the dangers of transporting high-level nuclear waste and develop an alternative plan before proceeding with the Yucca Mountain project.

RUSSIAN URANIUM AGREEMENT

Mr. RINGAMAN. Mr. President, both the Department of Energy and the Department of State have made important announcements this week relating to the so-called “Russian HEU Agreement.” This agreement is not widely known, but it is enormously important to our national security, and I would like to take this opportunity to call it to the attention of the Senate.

Under the HEU Agreement, the Russian Federation is converting 500 metric tons of highly enriched uranium from dismantled nuclear weapons into low-enriched uranium fuel for nuclear power plants. The United States then buys the low-enriched uranium for nuclear power plants in this country to use to generate electricity.

The benefits of this program, which is sometimes called the “megatons to megawatts program,” are obvious. Nuclear weapons converted under the program can never be used against us. Weapons-grade uranium scrapped under the program is sometimes called the “megatons to megawatts program,” are obvious. Nuclear weapons are converted into low-enriched reactor fuel and consumed in power plants can never fall into the hands of terrorists or rogue states.

The United States and Russia entered into the HEU Agreement in 1993. The program will neutralize the equivalent of 20,000 nuclear warheads over its 20-year life. More than 150 metric tons of highly enriched uranium, the equivalent of nearly 6,000 nuclear warheads, have already been converted into low-enriched reactor fuel. Another 350 metric tons, the equivalent of 14,000 more warheads, are slated to be converted over the remaining 12 years.

Although the Russian HEU Agreement is a government-to-government agreement, it is being implemented for the Russian Federation by Tenex and for the United States by USEC Inc. USEC was originally established by the Energy Policy Act of 1992 to run the Department of Energy’s uranium enrichment plants as a business. When the Russian HEU Agreement was first executed, USEC was wholly owned by the United States Government and it was implementation of the agreement as the Government’s “executive agent.” In 1998, the Government sold USEC to private investors pursuant to the USEC Privatization Act, but retained the private company as its executive agent for the Russian HEU program.

Remarkably, USEC is able to conduct the Russian HEU program without cost to the Government. USEC pays the Russians for the uranium, and recovers its costs when it resells the uranium to nuclear utilities. The price paid by USEC was originally set in the HEU Agreement and has since been subject to negotiation between the parties. Some time ago, Tenex reached an agreement on a new market-based mechanism for determining the price USEC will pay Russia for future deliveries. Yesterday, the State Department announced that the Governments of the United States and the Russian Federation have approved the new pricing mechanism.

The new pricing mechanism puts the program on a more commercial basis. It does away with the need for the two governments to renegotiate the price periodically. By basing the price on market conditions, the new mechanism provides a more stable and predictable procedure for determining future prices and should help ensure the long-term success of the program.

In addition, this past Tuesday, the Department of Energy announced that it had signed an agreement with USEC that resolves a number of issues between them. Earlier, there had been talk of the Government replacing USEC as its executive agent under the Russian HEU deal or appointing multiple agents. Under the accord announced on Tuesday, the Department of Energy agreed to recommend that USEC continue as the Government’s sole executive agent, and USEC committed to meeting the annual delivery schedules in the Russian HEU agreement over the remaining years of the agreement.

The Russian HEU Agreement serves us well. Each Russian warhead that is dismantled and each ton of weapons-grade uranium that is converted to commercial reactor fuel reduces the risk of nuclear proliferation and enhances our security. Our government-managed enrichment program has made great progress implementing the program over the past 8 years. The two announcements made this week give us hope for further progress in the years ahead.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS IN COLOMBIA

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, I wish to take this opportunity to express our support to the Colombian people following the Presidential election in Colombia on May 26. I was pleased to cosponsor a resolution last week welcoming the successful completion of Colombia’s democratic elections in Colombia. It is a tribute to the Colombian people that despite significant threats and violence, both international and national election observers found the elections to be free and fair.

I am also pleased that the President-elect of Colombia, Alvaro Uribe Velez, has been invited this week to discuss U.S. support for counter-narcotics operations. The United States has already invested heavily in a unified effort to reduce the flow of drugs from Colombia, while simultaneously promoting human rights and economic development throughout the country. It is essential that we build on that investment during the new administration of President-elect Uribe.

Indeed, it is said that President-elect Uribe has said that he looks forward to the day when Colombia is not sending a single kilogram of cocaine to the United States. To make that a reality, we must ensure that coca growers and other farmers in the poor regions of Colombia have access to alternative economic opportunities, and that they take advantage of those opportunities to get out of the coca business for good. We must also promote human rights and the rule of law in Colombia; otherwise, the cycle of violence and narco-trafficking that is draining the livelihood of the country will ultimately lead to total state collapse, and to even more narco-trafficking and perhaps support for terrorism in the ruins of such a failed state.

With the visit to Washington this week of a new President-elect, this is an opportune time to reflect on some of the new directions in our bilateral relationship with Colombia. In particular, this provides an appropriate opportunity to step back and consider the effectiveness to date of our various policy objectives in Colombia. We must consider, for example, whether our initiatives have been effective in reducing the levels of violence in the country, in seeking accountability for grave human rights violations, and in cutting off the narco-traffickers who provide both financing and incentives for insurgent forces. We must also ask whether our policy in Colombia provides an effective balance of military assistance and soundly managed development support. And we have an obligation to the people of Colombia to consider the human and environmental effects of our ongoing fumigation campaign.

In reflecting on the situation in Colombia today, one thing remains absolutely clear: The status quo cannot be justified. The prolonged civil war, which is fueled by lucrative narco-trafficking, has created a volatile society, with untold suffering and a seemingly endless cycle of grave human rights abuses. The narco-traffickers have prospered, the guerrillas, and increasingly the paramilitaries, have offered the narco-traffickers hired protection, and they, too, are prospering from this deadly relationship. It is the people of Colombia, the average farmers and the honest citizens, who must pay the price of the war. That price can be counted in the number of lives lost or displaced in Colombia. But we must also count the lives lost to drugs and violence on our own streets in the United States. Such vast costs are wholly unacceptable.

So, where do we go from here? First and foremost, we must continue to scrutinize the relationship between the Colombian military and the paramilitary forces in the country. The Colombian military has been taking steps to sever its ties with the paramilitaries, but I am worried that those steps have not translated into meaningful progress on the ground. As the United States continues to support the counter-insurgency operations of the Colombian military, we must guarantee that Colombia takes seriously its obligation to seek out and prosecute the paramilitaries. And we must remember that by most accounts, the paramilitaries today are more responsible than any other terrorist group for the massive war crimes committed in the country.

We must also ensure that the Colombian government commits its resources to a more robust investment in its own institutions. We must never substitute our own assets or personnel for an appropriate level of investment by Colombia in its own future. This must include domestic support to institutions of justice, and for the protection of civilians, as well as responsible military support to defend the civilian population from rebel and paramilitary attacks.

Finally, we must do more to ensure that communities that have already been so hard-hit by the conflict have access to development opportunities to rebuild their lives. Alternative development must be a cornerstone of any effort to combat illicit drugs. Without alternative development, displaced communities will have only one rational economic option: to turn to the lucrative but illegal cultivation of the coca that drug lords are so eager to buy and protect. Quite simply, we must give battered rural communities a viable economic alternative to coca or poppy cultivation if we are ever to bring the wars in Colombia to an end.

To date, our investment in such development has been insufficient, and perhaps as a result, we have also made little progress in stemming the flow of drugs. Without more of a social investment in alternative development, I fear that the coca fumigation program that is being supported by the United States will merely shift drug cultivation into even more remote and ecologically sensitive areas of the country.

So I rise today to congratulate the people of Colombia on their successful Presidential election in May. I also congratulate the Colombian military for its strong leadership of Senator BIDEN, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Boxer in bringing this new treaty to fruition.

I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enforcement law campaign that urges parents to ask their neighbors and community members if they have a gun in the home before sending their child over to play. The Ask campaign helps to enable parents to protect their children from the danger of a gun that is not safely stored. This is a sensible step toward preventing gun violence. According to a political organization that promotes solutions to the problem of gun violence and sponsors the Ask campaign, over one percent of American homes with children have guns. Many of these weapons are kept unlocked and loaded. Child access to these firearms is one reason why children in the U.S. are more likely to die of gun violence than from all natural causes combined.

In recognition of National Ask Day, parents, children, community leaders, and neighbors across the nation planted flowers as a symbol of the more than 3,000 children that PAX estimates could be saved through the simple message of the Ask campaign.

It is critical that we do all we can to keep children from gaining unsupervised access to firearms. That is why I cosponsored Senator Durbin's Child Access Prevention Act. Under this bill, adults who fail to lock up loaded firearms or an unloaded firearm with ammunition could be held liable if a weapon is taken by a child and used to kill or injure him or herself or another person. The bill also increases the penalties for selling a gun to a juvenile and creates a gun safety education program that includes parent-teacher organizations, local law enforcement and community organizations. This bill is similar to legislation President Bush signed into law as Governor of Texas. I support this bill and hope the Senate will act on it.

I know my colleagues will join me in recognizing National Ask Day, and I urge them to support Senator Durbin's common sense gun safety legislation.

RATIFICATION OF NEW YORK TREATIES AGAINST THE SALE, TRAFFICKING, AND PROSTITUTION OF CHILDREN AND AGAINST THE USE OF CHILDREN IN COMBAT

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, it gives me great pleasure to hail the ratification of the Optional Protocol Against the Convention on the Rights of the Child, Prostitution, and Child Pornography by the U.S. Senate this week. I applaud the strong leadership of Senator BIDEN, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Boxer in bringing this new treaty to fruition.

The use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes is included in the universal definition of the worst forms of child labor in the International Labor Organization's Convention 182 which this Senate ratified in 1999 on a 96–0 vote. Therefore, it is altogether fitting and proper that we now follow through and adopt this new instrument of international law to crackdown worldwide against the despicable acts of trafficking and prostituting of children.

The Optional Protocol gives special emphasis to the criminalization of the sale and trafficking of children as well as child prostitution and pornography. It also stresses the importance of improved international cooperation and coordination to combat the sexual exploitation of children everywhere in the world, while also promoting heightened awareness, more information gathering, and public education campaigns to enhance the protection of children trapped in one of the worst forms of child labor.

For nearly a decade, I have been working hard to end the scourge of abuse, and I have come to recognize the tragic and disturbing fact that millions of children under 18 years of age currently endure slave-like conditions in brothels, back alleys, and hideaways that jeopardize their basic health, safety and well-being. These children are being tricked and sold outright for purposes of forced labor and exploitation in the commercial sex trade of prostitution and pornography.

In the European Union, the International Organization for Migration reports a marked increase in the number of unaccompanied minors trafficked for sexual purposes from Central and Eastern Europe, Africa and Asia.

In India alone, hundreds of thousands of children exist in slavery-like conditions that are causing significant recruitment of children for use in armed conflict, according to the U.S. Department of State Country Reports on Human Rights Practices.

UNICEF estimates that at least 200,000 children every year are trafficked into the Central and West African slave trade for purposes of forced labor.

In Mexico, a UNICEF study estimates that 16,000 children are victims of sexual exploitation—many of them are parted out in situations such as Cancun and Acapulco.

In the United States, experts within the Department of Justice estimate that at least 100,000 children are involved in the sex trade in any given year. Approximately 400 cases of Internet child pornography are prosecuted each year in the Federal courts alone. I am pleased to report, for example, that a crackdown on Internet child pornography was launched last year in Des Moines, the capital city of my own state.

A 1999 report issued by the Central Intelligence Agency estimated that up to 50,000 women and children are trafficked into the United States each year.

We must not stand by while millions of children are sold for purposes of forced labor and consigned to prostitution and pornography in order to satisfy adults who profit from their abuse. When we are discussing the dimensions of human trafficking in 2000, I joined 94 of my colleagues in the U.S. Senate to express both our outrage over the criminal behavior of child traffickers and our support for the victims of trafficking by passing the Trafficking Victims Protection Act.

This week we are taking more effective action through ratification of the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. It is an important victory in our effort to protect children everywhere. I look forward to continuing this effort with my colleagues in the weeks, months, and years to come. In approving this new standalone treaty, we are affirming that the American people believe that all children, given their vulnerability to adult coercion and greed, deserve special protection in international law and practice against sexual predators and exploiters.

I also want to take a moment to say how pleased I am that the Senate this week has ratified the Optional Protocol Against the Use of Children in Armed Conflict.

As you know, I worked very hard with Senator HELMS, in particular, to secure ratification of the International Labor Organization’s (ILO) Convention #182 to Prohibit the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Our bipartisan efforts paid off when the Senate in November, 1999 ratified that important new human rights treaty on a 96-0 vote.

Now included in the universal definition of the worst forms of child labor is the prohibition of forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict. Therefore, the Senate’s action this week on this Optional Protocol means the U.S. has followed through on our international commitment at a time that ILO Convention #182 was under negotiation and joined the world community in universally condemning and outlawing the recruitment and use of child soldiers.

It probably seems unthinkable to most Americans that young children have been recruited, trained, and turned into soldiers who are actively engaged in combat. The latest research estimates that more than 300,000 children under 18 years of age are participating in armed conflicts around the world. For example, there are an estimated 50,000 child soldiers in Burma alone. Hundreds of thousands more are members of armed forces who could be sent into combat at any moment.

Although most child recruits are over fifteen years of age, significant recruitment starts at ten years, and the use of even younger children is not uncommon.

Robbed of their childhood, child combatants are subjected to a cycle of violence that they are too young to understand or resist. While many of these young recruits may start out as porters or messengers, too often they end up on the front lines of conflict. Some are used in hazardous duty, such as entering mine fields ahead of older troops, or undertaking suicide missions. Some have been forced to commit atrocities against family members or relatives. Inexperienced and immature, these children suffer far higher casualty rates than their adult counterparts. Those who survive are often physically or psychologically scarred for life. Typically lacking an education or civilian job skills, their futures are often very bleak.

Ninety-three percent of Americans believe that combatants should be at least 18 years of age, according to a recent poll conducted by the International Committee of the Red Cross. Accordingly, I want to particularly salute the leadership of my colleagues, Senator BIDEN, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator HELMS, the Ranking Member of that Committee, as well as Senator WELLSTONE and the many others who have tirelessly worked for this treaty through to ratification. There is absolutely no justification for the forced or compulsory recruitment of children under 18 for deployment into combat anywhere in the world and I am proud that America is doing our part to end this egregious abuse of human rights and afford to common decency.

FIRST RESPONDER TERRORISM PREPAREDNESS ACT OF 2002

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise to urge my colleagues to support the First Responder Terrorism Preparedness Act of 2002 that I introduced along with the committee chairman, Senator JERKOWDS. This legislation is a huge step forward in providing the necessary tools for local and state first responders to prepare to respond to any act of terrorism.

We recognize that it is the local emergency responders who are on the scene first to rescue and help those who have been caught in a disaster. I visited the Pentagon and Ground Zero on a weekend visit and can tell you that these first responders are true patriots, and they live and serve us in every town and city across this great Nation. These local heroes, the type of first responders who made the ultimate sacrifice on September 11, are the embodiment of the American spirit—brave, selfless, and caring. They save lives and we should focus our resources to help them with their mission.

Prior to his confirmation to be the head of FEMA, nearly 9 months before the terrorists attacks on this Nation, I met with Joe Allbaugh to discuss FEMA priorities. Chief among the priorities we discussed was that of terrorism preparedness of our Nation’s first responders. Little did we know what this Nation would be facing less than 9 months down the road.

Since September 11, I have met with Director Allbaugh and his staff on several occasions, and the Environment and Public Works Committee, of which I am the ranking member, has held a number of hearings on this issue.

In January, I enthusiastically endorsed President Bush’s announcement of his first responder plan to be run by FEMA. This bill, the First Responder Terrorism Preparedness Act, mirrors the President’s proposal and represents months of work by the Environment and Public Works Committee flushing the President’s proposal with the aid of the Administration.

In brief, this bill will authorize a first responder grant program for 4 years at $3.5 billion per year. Each State will receive a minimum of $15 million with the remaining being distributed to States based on criteria set by FEMA but will include population, vital infrastructure, military installations and proximity to international borders. The money will be used for preparedness efforts including to purchase equipment, train, develop response plans, conduct exercises and provide for communication needs. We ensure that the money does not get tied up in bureaucracy and gets to the first responders.

The bill also requires that all the efforts at the State and local level be part of a broader national preparedness strategy as determined by the Office of National Preparedness (ONP). The ONP will put in place by the President over a year ago, a move I have been advocating for some time, and the President deserves a great deal of credit for that action.

This bill takes the additional step of establishing the ONP in statute. The ONP will help to coordinate preparedness efforts at the Federal level and be the point Federal office for the State and local responders. It is vital that we do not have thousands of independent preparedness plans and efforts—we need a local, state, regional and national strategy.

The bill will also enhance the capabilities of FEMA designated Urban Search and Rescue teams. Many of those teams were activated on September 11, but have had serious financial difficulties in maintaining adequate levels of preparedness. That certainly should not be the case and we address those needs.

We all entered a new world and a new reality on September 11, and we must be prepared for whatever may come our way. The President has done a tremendous job to dramatically reduce the vulnerabilities of this Nation and I, once again, applaud his effort to establish a new Department of Homeland Security. However, regardless of how much we work to prevent further attacks, we must be prepared if the unthinkable were to happen again. This will be an ongoing effort and this bill takes a very large step in providing the resources and direction to ensure that the effort is productive.

I thank the chairman of the EPW Committee for his leadership and for working closely with me on this important and bipartisan issue. It is my hope that our bill will make it to the President’s desk in short order.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO COL. DAVID R. CHAFFEE

Mr. THOMPSON. Madam President, today I pay tribute to a U.S. Air Force officer, Colonel David R. Chaffee. Colonel Chaffee currently serves as the Program Director of the Combat Air Forces Command and Control Systems Program office at the Electronic Systems Center on Hanscom Air Force Base. He will soon retire from the Air Force after 25 years of service. Today, it is my privilege to recognize some of Colonel Chaffee’s accomplishments, and to commend his service to the Air Force and our Nation.

Colonel Chaffee was born in Rockwood, TN, and began his Air Force career as a cadet at the U.S. Air Force Academy. Early in his career, he was an Aeronautical Developmental Engineer at Hanscom Air Force Base, OH, and later returned there as the Program Manager for the F100-PW-220 engine. After multiple, high-level acquisition positions at Headquarters in Washington, DC, he spent 2 years at the Oqden Air Logistics Center at Hill Air Force Base, UT as a Program Director before arriving in May 2000 at Hanscom Air Force Base for his current assignment.

Throughout his career, Colonel Chaffee was awarded numerous awards for performance in the Acquisitions career field, including the General O’Malley Memorial Leadership Award in 1987 and the Clements Award in 1985. Additionally, he was a Distinguished Graduate from Wright Patterson Air Force Academy and Staff College. He holds two master’s degrees, one in Aeronautical Engineering from the Air Force Institute of Technology and one in National Resource Strategy from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

At Hanscom Air Force Base, Colonel Chaffee’s leadership contributed to the Combat Air Forces Command and Control Systems Program Office being regarded as a center of excellence for command and control and air battle management. This office provides integrated mission critical command and control tools that help create air tasking orders, plan combat sortie missions, and analyze weather information for future missions. Colonel Chaffee’s support for improved processes and innovation led to significant increases in program office performance.

Colonel David Chaffee has made a difference during his service to the Air Force and our Nation. He displayed a commitment to the men and women in his charge and was well known for mentoring junior officers. In addition, throughout his demanding career, Colonel Chaffee has been a family man, as he and his wife, Ann, raised three daughters, Lauren, Katelyn, and Jillian. I urge my colleagues to join me in commending Colonel Chaffee and thanking him for his years of service.

JERRY BLOCKER: IN HONOR OF HIS “LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT AWARD” PRESENTED BY THE SOCIETY OF PROFESSIONAL JOURNALISTS

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, during the turbulent social unrest of the 1960s in the U.S. and particularly Detroit, Jerry Blocker—a “skinny little kid with the big voice’”—often dominated the radio and television news business. His rise and success in the industry has been attributed to an imagination fueled by a strong sense of drama, and his ability to craft a calm, orderly objectivity out of news ripe with discord, tension, and turbulence.

Born on the west side of Detroit on February 14, 1931, Jerry Blocker’s arrival on Valentine’s Day was unheralded during the height of the Great Depression. Known as a Depression, Jerry’s parents and family bestowed upon him the only gifts they could afford: an abundance of love and pride. Those generous gifts carried dividends the remainder of his life.

During his early years at Columbia and Sampson elementary schools, Jerry Blocker thrived while participating in school plays. Later, while attending McMichael Intermediate he became interested in all activities associated with radio. By the time he entered Northwestern University to study Aeronautical Engineering from the Air Force Academy, he was recognized that the “skinny little kid with the big voice” was destined for a future in the media. At Wayne State University in the mid-1950s, Jerry honed his broadcast skills but discovered that minority not to be found working in the broadcast business. His dream would have to wait. In the late 1950s Jerry became a teacher, first serving at Hampton Institute in Virginia, then with the Detroit Board of Education. His flair for the dramatic became evident as he staged plays, pageants, and festivals to the delight of hundreds of children.

In 1961, Jerry Blocker finally found employment in the radio industry when WCHD entered the general-format radio market as the first of many stations. In 1967, Jerry became the first black television news anchorman in the state of Michigan, working for WWJ-TV Channel 4, now known as WDIV-TV. He was hired as the television news director of Channel 4, after the 1967 Detroit riots and anchored weekend newscasts until 1975. After his departure from WWJ, Jerry Blocker was hired as the television news director of Channel 62, the first television station to actively recruit and program for Detroit’s African-American community. Jerry Blocker won several awards for his distinguished and accurate broadcast professionalism.

During his 10-year career in television, Jerry Blocker witnessed and reported the events which helped shape the city of Detroit—NAACP and the Detroit Board of Education, which was eventually settled by the U.S. Supreme Court, and the tremendous effect on the tri-county area and on all of Michigan by the election of Coleman Young, Jr., the challenge for the Democratic nomination, which was eventually settled by the U.S. Supreme Court, and the tremendous effect on the tri-county area and on all of Michigan by the election of Coleman A. Young, Detroit’s first black mayor.

In 1977, Blocker was named executive director of the Detroit branch of the...
Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam President, I am pleased to rise today to honor an outstanding organization located in my home State of Oregon. I would like to congratulate Guide Dogs for the Blind on its 60th anniversary of providing services to the blind and visually impaired community in Oregon and across the country.

Guide Dogs for the Blind is a non-profit, charitable organization that provides guide dogs and training to the visually impaired community throughout the United States and Canada. With approximately 10 million Americans categorized as blind or visually impaired, Guide Dogs for the Blind performs an essential service that deserves recognition in this body on its 60th anniversary.

The services provided by Guide Dogs for the Blind, and organizations like it, will only become more important in the coming decades. Statistics show that people 65 years and older are at high risk of suffering from poor vision. On average, 44 Oregonians benefit from guide dogs trained by Guide Dogs for the Blind every year, and as our population continues to grow, the need for guide dogs and organizations that train them will almost certainly grow.

The use of guide dogs has increased over the past several decades. Guide dogs can be recognized over the course of the last century. Although guide dogs existed prior to World War II, most visually impaired people could not take full advantage of such services due to existing federal and state laws restricting animals from entering buildings. But only three days after the most devastating attack in American history, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a law finally requiring government buildings to admit seeing-eye dogs. Today, during these trying times, it is important for all of us to note that despite the turbulent political situation he faced after Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt still prioritized the needs of the visually impaired community by signing that law.

Sixty years later, the program instituted by Guide Dogs for the Blind served the nation on its darkest day since Pearl Harbor. During the horrific attacks against the United States on September 11, a blind man working on the 78th floor of the World Trade Center was led to safety by a guide dog that had graduated from the Guide Dogs for the Blind program. Guide dogs, now an essential part of so many lives, can be remembered along with the selfless firefighters, police officers, and rescue workers who sacrificed so much to help others that day.

Each and every staff member and volunteer at Guide Dogs for the Blind is a hero to their communities and to the people who benefit from their services. I rise today to salute those associated with Guide Dogs for the Blind.

HONORING JACK JURDEN’S TALENT AND WIT

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I rise today to salute a man who has lamed pooned me more than anyone else in Delaware throughout my 30 years as a U.S. Senator. He has stuck me in the mud, dirtied by political campaigns. He has sketched me swimming in an inner tube fighting for NATO’s involvement in Bosnia. He has put me in my place in an over-sized chair to characterize my position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He has donned me in a wizard’s robe next to a giant cooking pot simmering over a fire.

Yes, today I rise to salute a man whose signature is a talking frog. Today I rise to salute a man who has made me laugh nearly every morning that I have opened my local newspaper for nearly the past 40 years and flipped to the editorial page.

Today I rise to salute long-time News Journal editorial cartoonist Jack Jurden. After nearly four decades of his whimsical, witty, thought-provoking, light-hearted, good-natured sketches, Jack Jurden is retiring. He is not quite putting his pencils and paper in a drawer permanently. Fortunately for us in Delaware, he has promised to produce a few editorial cartoons a year. But I and so many daily readers of Delaware’s leading newspaper have had the pleasure of seeing black and white sketches that have added so much color and laughter to our lives.

Jack joined the News Journal in 1952 as a photo engraver. His real love was drawing, so the News Journal decided to take a chance on him as the editorial cartoonist. In my opinion, that is the best decision that newspaper ever made.

Jack’s start in the newspaper business started long before his career with the News Journal. Like many of us, as a kid growing up, Jack was a newspaper delivery boy. Fresh out of high school in Allentown, PA, he put his artistic talents on hold to serve his country in World War II. As an army soldier, he was stationed in the Philippines and in occupied Japan.

Over the years, I am very fortunate to have gotten to know Jack well. His love for his craft, his country and his community are surpassed only by his love and loyalty to his family: his wife of 50 years, Faye; his daughter Jennifer and his daughter Jan, who is a Superior Court Judge in Delaware. These days Jack’s true love is his grandchildren.

I realize this is not your typical Senate debate. But I am proud of this man and his talent that I have many of his cartoons lampooning me framed in my office and in my home. So I will miss him. And I think I speak for thousands of others in Delaware who have laughed heartily every morning with their coffee, their coworkers, and their family as they scan his take on events in our State and our world, always looking for that little talking frog in the corner to offer some words of wisdom.

My very best wishes to him and his family.

RECOGNIZING IOWA STUDENTS WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE NATIONAL HISTORY DAY CONTEST

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, today I would like to recognize several remarkable young Iowans who put in an impressive showing at the recent National History Day contest. I am very pleased to announce that a total of eight entries from the great State of Iowa qualified for the national finals. Each of these talented young people represented their State with distinction and all Iowans can be very proud of these students.

Gabriella Green, who attends Alan Shepard Elementary in Long Grove, took first place with a junior individual documentary entitled “Solution to Hunger: Dr. Norman E. Borlaug and the Green Revolution”.

Amy Paul and Katie Pauley of Indian Hills Jr. High in West Des Moines took first prize in junior group documentaries for “Grace Hopper: Expanding Computer Horizons.” Stephen Frese of Marshalltown took the second place medal for his junior historical paper, “Wrestling with Reform: Iowa Coal Communities and the Transformation of Childhood.”

In addition, Cahill and Abigail Green from North Scott High School took fifth place in the senior group performance category with “The Works Progress Administration: Our Business of Relief” and Elyse Lyons took seventh place in junior individual performance with “Alice Hamilton: Friend of the Factory Worker.”

Johnston Middle School Student Abigail Bowman, who took eighth place in junior historical papers with “Mustafa Kemal Ataturk: Reformer of Turkey,” was invited to present her paper at the Turkish Embassy while she was in the Washington, DC area for the national competition. Laura Westercamp, a student at Kennedy High School in Cedar Rapids, took eighth place in senior individual exhibit with “Battle of the Bottle: The Woman, the Reaction, the Reform” and was able to present her project at the Smithsonian Museum of American History.

Lauren Appley, who attends Akron-Westfield School, took the ninth place award in junior individual papers with “Martha Graham: Revolutionary Genius of Modern Dance.”

I would like to congratulate each of these Iowa students. The number of quality entries by Iowans in this national contest demonstrates the importance Iowans place on education. I would also like to take this opportunity to recognize the State Historical Society of Iowa, which sponsors the National History Day program in Iowa, as well as the American Legion of Iowa Foundation, which provides funding for the program.

Again, congratulations to Gabriella, Amy, Katie, Stephen, Alex, Emily, Elyse, Abigail, Laurah and Lauren. You have done Iowa proud.

ROSWELL WINS ALL-AMERICA CONTEST

- Mr. RINGAMAN. Madam President, today I recognize the impressive civic achievements of Roswell, NM. These civic achievements have not only bettered this New Mexico community, but have earned Roswell the national honor of an All-America City Award. The All-America City Award is the oldest and most respected community recognition program in the Nation. This award recognizes communities, such as Roswell, whose citizens work together to identify and address community-wide challenges and achieve extraordinary goals. This year Roswell not only met, but exceeded the selection criteria of the contest through its enthusiastic public participation, its involvement of diverse perspectives of Roswell, and its community accomplishments which have significantly improved community life. Roswell met the challenge of the All-America contest by identifying its largest community challenges and displaying how the community has worked together to make those challenges areas of success. The people of Roswell identified their biggest challenges, lack of access to health care and unemployment, and then demonstrated how, as a community, they had worked to improve these areas over the past 3 years.

The city of Roswell highlighted three admirable projects that impacted their areas of challenge including “Incidentally Roswell,” the Youth Dental Initiative and Dress for Success. Through the “Incidentally Roswell” project the community has successfully used the historical extraterrestrial phenomenom of Roswell to better its economy. The people of Roswell have worked to use its historical exposure to increase tourism thus creating more jobs and bringing more money into the community. In their presentation of Roswell representatives made light of the situation by cleverly centering their presentation around questions asked by E.T. Holmes, a space alien detective. Along with the economy the people of Roswell have also been working to better the lives of the children in their community. Through the Youth Dental Initiative Roswell is using Medicaid money to provide children with dental care. The program includes a dental van that goes to schools to provide dental services to children. Since 1999 the Youth Dental Initiative the program has serviced a remarkable 4,000 children in Chavez County. Roswell’s dedication to the well being of their children is both impressive and commendable. And finally, Roswell presented their Dress for Success program, which aids children and adults to dress in an appropriate manner to achieve success in their schools. This program has shown especially good results in the Roswell school system through providing uniforms to the 86 percent of children who are in poverty in the area. Through eliminating the visual clothing differences among the students, Roswell is experiencing improved behavior, and increases in grade point averages, attendance and self-esteem. Equally impressive is the fact that this program is fueled by the generosity of the community for their children. The Dress for Success program shows Roswell’s great support of their children and their determination to help them succeed.

These three projects that strive for civic betterment are only a glimpse of the efforts Roswell is making in order to make their city a noteworthy part of the Nation. It is a great honor for Roswell, as well as for the entire state of New Mexico, for this community to receive the All-America Award. Through their dedication, patriotism, and hard work the people of Roswell have shown that American citizens can indeed make a difference in their communities. Roswell is a community that has taken great strides to overcome its challenges. I commend the citizens of Roswell for striving to achieve a high quality of life and thus helping the State of New Mexico continue to be the land of enchantment. I would like to congratulate Roswell on their great achievements and the well deserved recognition of their efforts.

JUNETEENTH INDEPENDENCE DAY

- Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, this week people all across the nation are engaging in the oldest known celebration of the ending of slavery. It was in June of 1865, that the Union soldiers landed in Galveston, TX with the news that the war had ended and that slavery finally had come to an end in the United States. This was two and a half years after the Emancipation Proclamation, which had become official January 1, 1863. This week and specifically on June 19, we celebrate what is known as Juneteenth Independence Day. It was on this date, June 19, that slaves in the Southwest finally learned of the end of slavery. Although passage of the Thirteenth Amendment in January 1863, legally abolished slavery, many African Americans remained in servitude due to the slow dissemination of this news across the country.

Since that time, over 130 years ago, the descendants of slaves have observed this anniversary of emancipation as a remembrance of our tragic periods of our nation’s history. The suffering, degradation and brutality of slavery cannot be repaired, but the memory can serve to ensure that no such inhumanity is ever perpetrated again on American soil.

All across America we also celebrate the many important achievements of former slaves and their descendants. We do so because in 1926, Dr. Carter G. Woodson, son of former slaves, proposed such a recognition as a way of preserving the African American historical contributions of a people of great strength, dignity, faith and conviction—a people who rendered their achievements for the betterment and advancement of a nation once lacking in humanity towards them. Every February, nationwide, we celebrate African American History Month. And, every year on June 19, we celebrate “Juneteenth Independence Day.”

Lerone Bennett, editor, writer and lecturer has reflected on the life and times of Dr. Woodson. Bennett tells us that one of the most inspiring and instructive stories in African American history is the story of Woodson’s struggle and rise from the coal mines of West Virginia to the summit of academic achievement:

At 17, the young man who was called by history to reveal Black history was an untaught coal miner. At 19, after teaching himself the fundamentals of the most daunting subject—mathematics, he entered high school and mastered the four-year curriculum in less than two years. At 22, after two-thirds of a year at Berea College (in Kentucky), he returned to the coal mines and studied Latin and Greek between trips to the mine shafts. He then went on to the University of Chicago, where he received bachelor's and master's degrees, and Harvard University, where he became the second Black to receive a doctorate in history. The rest is history—Black history.

In keeping with the spirit and the vision of Dr. Carter G. Woodson, I would like to pay tribute to two courageous women, claimed by my home state of Michigan who played significant roles in addressing American injustice and inequality. These are two women of different times who would change the course of history. The contributions of Sojourner Truth, who helped lead our country out of the dark days of slavery, and Rosa Parks whose dignified leadership sparked the Montgomery Bus Boycott and the start of the Civil Rights movement are Truthts spoken in the language of not only the history of this nation. Moreover, they are viewed with distinction and admiration throughout the world.

Sojourner Truth, though unable to read or write, was considered one of the most eloquent and noted spokespersons of her day on the inhumanity and immorality of slavery. She was a leader in the abolitionist movement, and a ground-breaking speaker on behalf of equality for women. Michigan recently honored her with the dedication of the Sojourner Truth Memorial Monument, which was unveiled in Battle Creek, MI on September 25, 1999.

Truth lived in Washington, DC for several years, helping slaves who had fled from the South and appearing at women's suffrage gatherings. She returned to Battle Creek in 1873, and remained there until her death in 1883. Sojourner Truth's words about the most troubling issues of her time. A testament to Truth's convictions is that her words continue to speak to us today.

On May 4, 1975, legislation was enacted which authorized the President of the United States to award the Congressional Gold Medal to Rosa Parks. I was pleased to coauthor this fitting tribute to Rosa Parks, the gentle warrior who decided that she would no longer tolerate the humiliation and de-moralization of racial segregation on a bus. Her personal bravery and self-sacrifice are remembered with reverence and respect by us all.

For seven years ago, in Montgomery, AL, the modern civil rights movement began when Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat and move to the back of the bus. The strength and spirit of this courageous woman captured the consciousness of not only American people, but the entire world. The boycott which Rosa Parks began was the beginning of an American revolution that elevated the status of African Americans nationwide and introduced to the world a young leader who would one day have a national holiday declared in his honor, the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr.

We have come a long way toward achieving justice and equality for all. We still however have work to do. In the names of Rosa Parks, Sojourner Truth, Dr. Carter G. Woodson, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and many others, let us recommit ourselves to continuing the struggle and the struggle for human rights.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT OF A CONTINUATION WITH THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO THE WESTERN BALKANS BEYOND JUNE 25, 2002—PM 96

The President Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report, which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)), provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a Notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed Notice, stating that the Western Balkans emergency is to continue in effect beyond June 25, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication.

The crisis constituted by the actions of persons engaged in, or assisting, sponsoring, or supporting, (i) extremist violence in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and elsewhere in the Western Balkans region, or (ii) acts obstructing implementation of the Dayton Accords in Bosnia or United Nations Security Council Resolution 1244 of June 10, 1999, in Kosovo, that led to the declaration of a national emergency on June 26, 2001, has not been resolved. These actions are hostile to U.S. interests and pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared with respect to the Western Balkans and maintain in force the comprehensive sanctions to respond to this threat.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DODD (for himself, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. TORRICElli, Mr. REED, and Mr. KERRY).

S. 2607, a bill to amend the Peace Corps Act to promote global acceptance of the principles of international peace and nonviolent coexistence among peoples of diverse cultures and systems of government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I rise today to introduce the Peace Corps Charter for the 21st Century Act, a bill which I believe addresses the needs and challenges of the Peace Corps of today, and lays a path toward bringing this celebrated organization into its next 40 years.

It was 41 years ago when President Kennedy laid out his vision for the future of American volunteer service. He spoke of a corps of committed and idealistic young volunteers, the Peace Corps, who would travel all over the world, "promoting world peace and friendship." He saw public service as an ideal to transcend political rhetoric. Volunteers were not to reflect particular Republican or Democratic ideology, but rather their service would be a manifestation of the core American values we all share. Their principal objectives in this endeavor would be to help in the development and betterment of the countries and communities they serve, to foster a greater understanding of American values and culture abroad, and to likewise foster a greater appreciation of peoples and cultures on the part of Americans. Four decades later, thousands upon thousands of Americans have volunteered for the Peace Corps and worked with diligence and compassion to achieve these objectives.

It is always with tremendous fondness and pride that I speak of the Peace Corps, as it gives me occasion to recall my own years as a volunteer in the Dominican Republic. I have often spoken of how those two years were invaluable to me, and truly brought home to me the value of public service.

Of course, my Peace Corps service was from 1966-1968, when it was a relatively new organization. Today, I am proud to note that the Peace Corps now sends more than 7,000 volunteers to 76 different countries every year. This means that there are 7,000 important American liaisons scattered around the world helping people, promoting American values, and showing the world the best of America. After all, these volunteers are really the heart and soul of the Peace Corps. They are the ones on the front lines, working hard, making one-on-one connections with the citizens of the countries in which they work. For 41 years, they have brought a wealth of practical experience to communities in Africa, Latin America, Asia, the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and the Pacific. Indeed, the enduring success of the Peace Corps is rooted in each volunteer's commitment to leave behind skills that allow people to take charge of their own futures.

As remarkable as the success of the Peace Corps has been, and as important a symbol and example it is of public service, in the aftermath of the tragic attacks on America of September 11, it has become something more. It has become a necessity. The terrorist attacks of last September have shown us that the world has become a much smaller place. United States can no longer afford to neglect certain countries, or certain parts of the world. We need to find ways to help developing countries meet their basic needs, and we need to do so now. We especially need to act in places where the citizens are particularly unfamiliar with or unfriendly to American values. Now, more than ever, Peace Corps volunteers play a pivotal role in helping us achieve a greater understanding of America abroad, especially in predominantly Muslim countries.

If we are to expand the aims of the Peace Corps, to broaden its scope, its charter, and to send our volunteers into more countries, then we must provide the Peace Corps with adequate resources to safely and effectively pursue these objectives. I believe that the legislation proposed in the Peace Corps Charter for the 21st Century Act will go a long way to meeting the Peace Corps' funding needs, while charting a course toward the future of this valuable organization. I would like to briefly outline the provisions included in this bill, and explain to my colleagues why I feel its enactment is so important.

First, my bill stresses the importance of maintaining the Peace Corps' independence from any political affiliation, party, government agency, or particular administration. This independence is critical to the continued success, credibility, and acceptance of the volunteers in the countries in which they serve. We must vigilantly preserve this success. Especially if we are to expand the number of countries now being served, and if we plan to send our volunteers into countries with significant Muslim populations, we must make sure that the Peace Corps' goals of friendship, peace, and grassroots development are in no way muddled or compromised by political objectives.

As you may know, Congress has called for an expansion of the Peace Corps to include 10,000 volunteers, and the President has called for a doubling of current numbers over five years. While I applaud the Administration's effort in these requests, we must not allow such an increase in quantity to in any way impinge on the quality of the Peace Corps experience, either for the volunteers themselves or the communities they serve. There are currently 7,000 volunteers abroad working under a budget of $275,000,000. Any expansion in staffing must include a commensurate increase in funding and support resources available to them. In fact, better access to the growing mandate and needs of the Peace Corps, this bill suggests the establishment of an Office of Strategic Planning, as well as a Peace Corps Advisory Council.

One of the most important parts of this bill, which I have already touched on here today, is the need to place a special emphasis on recruiting volunteers for placement in countries whose governments are seeking to foster a greater understanding by and about their citizens. There is to be a special authorization for the Peace Corps. I am particularly concerned about the countries with substantial Muslim populations. We must find ways to engage with these countries, and to foster a more open interaction and understanding between our citizens.

The Peace Corps has a time line requirement and procedures for new initiatives from the Peace Corps Director. Essentially, this increases Congressional oversight of new projects, programs, and initiatives. It also requires a description from the Director of current and future loan forgiveness programs available to volunteers, and a comparison with other government-sponsored loan forgiveness programs.

Another important provision in this legislation is the training mandated for volunteers in the areas of education, prevention, and treatment of infectious diseases such as HIV/AIDS, malaria, and tuberculosis, so that they may better meet the needs of the disease in the communities in which they serve. This training, in cooperation with the centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institutes of Health, the World Health Organization, the Pan American Health Organization, and local health officials, will prepare volunteers to promote a better grassroots approach to public health, safety, and disease prevention.

It is important to note, and this is also included in the bill, that we must utilize the insights and experience of returned volunteers to get them more involved in the promotion and support of Peace Corps programs. One way to do this is to provide federal grant monies to certain nonprofits in the District of Columbia. These nonprofits would be established for the purpose of using the knowledge, experience, and expertise of returned volunteers to help carry out the goals of the Peace Corps.

Returned volunteers are an amazing resource for the Peace Corps. They continue to make a difference here at home through their enduring community service, and their work to strengthen the appreciation of other cultures. Together they are building a legacy of service for the next generation, and it is my hope that the appropriations included in this legislation, for non-profit grant monies, will provide them with yet another outlet for continued service.

Finally, let me speak briefly to the funding level increases called for in this legislation. Over the next five years this bill calls for appropriations to be made in the following amounts: $465 million for fiscal year 2004, $500 million for fiscal year 2005, $560 million for fiscal year 2006, and $560 million for fiscal year 2007. In addition, and most importantly, this bill allows for additional appropriations to be made to address the specific funding needs of the Peace Corps as it seeks to increase volunteer strength. Again, we must not allow expansion to infringe on the quality of volunteer experience. We must ensure that we adequately provide for our volunteers and equip them with sufficient resources to best assist the communities in which they serve.

In conclusion, I believe that the Peace Corps Charter for the 21st Century Act will do an excellent job of modifying the Peace Corps Act to better meet the needs of both our volunteers and an expanding and changing world. The Peace Corps is a truly remarkable institution in America, a symbol of the very best of our ideals of service, sacrifice, and self-reliance. Our volunteers are to be commended again for their enduring commitment to these ideals, and for the way they are able to communicate the message of the Peace Corps throughout the world. They deserve the very best from us. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and the continued success of the Peace Corps. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2667
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Peace Corps Charter for the 21st Century Act’’.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Peace Corps was established in 1961 to promote world peace and friendship through the service of American volunteers abroad.

(2) The three goals codified in the Peace Corps Act which have guided the Peace Corps and its volunteers over the years, can work in concert to promote global acceptance of the principles of international peace and nonviolent coexistence among peoples of diverse cultures and governments.

(3) The Peace Corps has operated in 135 countries with 165,000 Peace Corps volunteers since its establishment.

(4) The Peace Corps has sought to fulfill three goals, as follows: to help people in developing nations meet basic needs, to promote understanding of America’s values and ideals abroad, and to promote an understanding of other peoples by Americans.

(5) After more than 40 years of operation, the Peace Corps remains the world’s premier international service organization dedicated to promoting grassroots development.

(6) The Peace Corps remains committed to sending well trained and well supported Peace Corps volunteers overseas to promote world peace, friendship, and grassroots development.

(7) The Peace Corps is an independent agency, and therefore no Peace Corps personnel or volunteers should have any relationship with any United States intelligence agencies that might be used to further other goals than the goals established by the Peace Corps Act.

(8) The Crisis Corps has been an effective tool in harnessing the skills and talents for returned Peace Corps volunteers and should be expanded to utilize to the maximum extent the pool of talent from the returned Peace Corps volunteer community.

(9) The Peace Corps is currently operating with an annual budget of $275,000,000 in 70 countries, with 7,000 Peace Corps volunteers.

(10) There is deep misunderstanding and misinformation about American values and ideals in many parts of the world, particularly those with substantial Muslim populations, and a greater Peace Corps presence in such places could foster greater understanding and tolerance of those countries.

(11) Congress has declared that the Peace Corps should be expanded to sponsor a minimum of 10,000 Peace Corps volunteers.

(12) President George W. Bush has called for the doubling of the Peace Corps volunteers in service in a fiscal year to 15,000 volunteers in service by the end of fiscal year 2007.

(13) Any expansion of the Peace Corps shall not jeopardize the quality of the Peace Corps volunteer experience, and therefore can only be accomplished by an appropriate increase in field and headquarters personnel.

(14) It would be extremely useful for the Peace Corps to establish an office of strategic planning to evaluate existing programs and undertake long-term planning in order to facilitate the orderly expansion of the Peace Corps from its current size to the stated objective of 15,000 volunteers in the field by the end of fiscal year 2007.

(15) The Peace Corps would benefit from the advice and counsel of a streamlined bipartisan National Peace Corps Advisory Council composed of distinguished returned Peace Corps volunteers.

By Mrs. HUTCHISON:

S. 2668. A bill to ensure the safety and security of passenger air transportation cargo and all-cargo air transportation; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I rise today to introduce legislation to close a dangerous loophole in our aviation security network. The attacks of September 11th to take a hard look at the way we screen passengers and luggage. Congress responded to the challenge with a comprehensive system to perform these tasks through the new Transportation Security Administration. We have required the TSA to check every passenger and every piece of baggage that is placed onboard a flight.

While I am confident that these measures have improved security, Congress must keep the back door open to terrorists with plans to disrupt passenger flights. We did not establish a similar regime to ensure the safety of cargo operations. This issue must be addressed. Twenty-two percent of all air cargo in the U.S. is carried on passenger flights, but only a tiny percentage of this cargo is inspected. There is no point to carefully screening every piece of luggage if the cargo placed aboard the same flight is not inspected.

My legislation would also tighten rules for known shippers. Under current procedures, any manufacturer, middleman, or receiver of goods can be classified as a known shipper, which allows the shipment to proceed without inspection. This is not sufficient to protect the public. We must be sure that companies claiming known shipper status are whom they claim to be and we must improve handling protocols to ensure that terrorists do not tamper with shipments while they are in transit. My bill would accomplish these goals.

The Air Cargo Security Act would create a comprehensive security process for shipment of cargo, particularly for shipments traveling on passenger flights. It would require that all cargo onboard passenger flights, including foreign-based flights heading for the U.S., be thoroughly inspected. The bill would also direct TSA to establish a ‘‘chain of custody’’ for air cargo that ensures that merchandise is never out of the control of a known shipper. Under these restrictions, cargo could be placed aboard aircraft with confidence that no tampering had occurred in transit.

The legislation would direct TSA to formulate a comprehensive system for certifying known shippers and assigning each one a unique encrypted identifier that must be produced to the air carrier before loading the cargo and cannot be counterfeited. All shippers, including haulers and middlemen, must be certified under the new system. If cargo has been handled in any way by an uncertified company, then it will not fly. The TSA would have to regularly inspect shipping facilities. To accomplish these tasks, the bill would provide TSA with additional manpower and equipment as needed.

I know that air cargo security presents a challenge nearly as large as passenger security. Forcing shippers and carriers to submit to inspection of all cargo would allow only 4 percent of the current volume to be processed. I want to ensure that these inspections do not harm airline operations.

However, if we fail to enact these reforms, we will allow security only half-finished. I fear that we will lose our aviation system if we suffer another successful attack on a passenger flight. I call upon my colleagues to take these concrete, measurable steps to ensure the safety of air passengers and those on the ground.

Mr. REID. Madam President, Senator CRAPAO is not in the Chamber. Circumstances don’t allow him to be here. This is something on which he has worked very hard. (A) represent an important part of the mining history of Idaho and the United States; and

INTRODUCING THE REALIZING THE SPIRIT OF IDEA ACT

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to introduce the Realizing the Spirit of IDEA Act.

For twenty-five years the federal government has made hollow promises to fully fund the Individuals with Disabilities in Education Act (IDEA). This legislation makes good on that promise; however, it does more than that. By linking funding to better outcomes, it also makes sure that the spirit of IDEA is truly realized for children with disabilities.

IDEA opened the school doors to children with disabilities; yet, more needs to be done in order to make special education work for disabled students. National statistics suggest that there is still a sizable disparity in the outcomes of disabled students when compared to students without disabilities.

When compared to students without disabilities, between 19 and 42 percent fewer disabled students are able to pass state proficiency examinations;

The drop out rate for disabled students is double that of students without disabilities;

Only 55 percent of disabled students receive a regular high school diploma (compared to 75 percent of individuals within the general school population);

Disordered individuals are 50% less likely to attend college than are individuals who are not disabled;

Disabled students often avoid the painful experience of school and their attendance suffers; and

The Census Bureau reports that 50% of individuals with disabilities are employed, compared with 84% of non-disabled individuals.

The under-funding of IDEA could help explain why students with disabilities fare so poorly on these critical outcomes. While Congress has doubled federal appropriations for IDEA over the last decade, federal funding for IDEA is less than half of what Congress originally promised.

Unfortunately, recent increases in federal funding have translated into very modest improvements in the overall outcomes of disabled children. This would suggest that we not only need more federal funding for disabled students, but we need to use our resources more wisely.

The Realizing the Spirit of IDEA Act will dramatically increase the financial support for children with disabilities. However, in order to receive increases, school districts must make sure disabled children are not left behind. In return for mandatory increases in funding for IDEA, school districts must help disabled students:

Increase their attendance;

Increase academic proficiency;

Lower the incidence of drop out;

Increase graduation rate; and Improve rates of post-secondary employment and education.

The bill will also provide mandatory increases in funding for research and development as well as for programs that help disabled infants, toddlers, preschoolers and their families.

Linking mandatory funding to accountability will profoundly change the way IDEA works by doing just that—making it work. The Realizing the Spirit of IDEA Act is needed to move away from the status quo. Our children, regardless of their ability or disability deserve more than a second-class education. We should accept nothing less than the best tools we have to help them succeed. Please join me in supporting the Realizing the Spirit of IDEA Act. It is about time we give meaning to the phrase, Leave No Child Behind.

IN HONOR OF CLAUDETTE MOODY, WHO LEAVES AFTER 17 YEARS OF PUBLIC SERVICE WITH THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY METROPOLITAN TRANSPORTATION AUTHORITY

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Claudette A. Moody, a Glendale, California resident who will be leaving as Director of Government Relations at the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority at the end of June 2002 after an exemplary 17-year career.

Moody joined the former Los Angeles County Transportation Commission (LACTC) in 1985 as the first full-time employee devoted to outreach with the Federal government, and she later assumed responsibility for State issues as well. She provided key support for the former Southern California Rapid Transit District (RTD) in securing the initial funding for the Metro Rail subway, including working on the joint appropriations document with the LACTC, RTD, Southern California Association of Governments, and the Greater Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Claudette has furthered the transportation interests of Los Angeles County by writing and advocating positions on countless pieces of reform legislation aimed at improving transportation throughout Los Angeles County, and she was the key staff member to work on Assembly Bill 152, creating the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA), including conceiving and writing provisions that won the support of smaller cities. In addition to recommending MTA Board positions on thousands of bills, Claudette served as the key staff person in efforts leading to the successful passage of Proposition C, Propositions 111 and 108, and Proposition 42 relating to transportation. Indeed, Claudette has served as a crucial member of a team that has brought billions of dollars to Los Angeles County for transportation purposes.

Claudette was the co-founder and first Chairperson of the African-American Employees Association, and initiated the agency's activities for Juneteenth Day and Black History Month. She also was co-founder and first Chairperson of the MTA Employee Association, was instrumental in developing the child-care center for the MTA and sat on the initial contract review task force. Claudette was a key staff member to liaison with Governor Gray Davis' office in developing projects to be funded through the Governor's Transportation Congestion Relief Program.

Claudette has served with distinction at the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority and I ask all Members of Congress to join me in recognizing her for her years of service to the LACTC, MTA, and to the citizens, residents, and users of transportation services in Los Angeles County, and further wish her success and the best of luck in all her future endeavors.

A TRIBUTE TO SAINT JOHN LUTHERAN CHURCH—AMELITH ON THEIR 150TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to sing high praise for Saint John Lutheran Church-Amelith in my hometown of Bay City, Michigan, as the congregation prepares to celebrate the church’s 150th anniversary. The church has been a spiritual beacon for Frankenlust Township and the surrounding community since its inception and its long and noteworthy history deserve tribute.

Since the middle of the 19th Century, the church has graced the community with its presence and brought family and friends into the light of Christian love and charity. Church members today share a bond and their faith with the small band of German Lutheran families from Gunzenhausen in Franken who came to Bay County in 1852 at the encouragement of a German businessman and man of faith named Friedrich Koch. When these settlers arrived, they used a large log cabin as a church on Sunday and a school during the week. Shortly thereafter, Saint John-Amelith and Saint Paul-Frankelust three miles to the north were two of the earliest congregations to form the new Lutheran Church Missouri Synod in 1853.

In the beginning, just a few families formed the foundation of the church. These families had such surnames as Link, Stengel, Burk, Raeschein, Eichinger, Heumann, Lutz, Rueger, Schmidt, Schnell and Stephan. After years of struggle, these settlers built a beautiful house of worship in 1870 to replace their log cabin church. However, by 1912, they also outgrew that church and built the brick church that still serves parishioners needs today. A true temple of God with its exquisite stained-

HON. THOMAS E. PETRI
OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002
Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, on May 1, 2002, Ruth Ann Strozinsky of Tomah, Wisconsin, retired after serving the State of Wisconsin for 21 years as a member of the Board on Aging and Long Term Care. During this time, Ruth Ann was dedicated to protect and preserve the rights of the elderly and disabled consumers as she strived to assure that they have the knowledge and support necessary for them to make informed long term care choices. She has upheld the spirit and intent of the Older Americans Act as well as the public policy of the State of Wisconsin. She has been a leader in contributing to the success of the Long Term Care Ombudsman Program and the Medigap Helpline Program as they continue to meet the ever-increasing public need for information and advocacy servdices.
Ruth Ann has provided leadership and direction to officials at every level of municipal, county and state government on issues of importance to Wisconsin’s senior citizens. She is a member of the Monroe County Services for the Elderly, has served as President of the Western Wisconsin Area Agency on Aging, and is a member of the governing board of the Coalition of Wisconsin Aging Groups. She has assisted in the development of legislative and regulatory proposals to identify and improve important public policy issues. In 1995, she was appointed by Governor Tommy Thompson as a Wisconsin delegate to the White House Conference on Senior Citizens and Aging.
This was her second appointment to the Conference, the first being in 1981.
In 2001 the Wisconsin State Legislature in the newly reorganized Committee on Aging, she is an executive member of the State Association of Senior Citizens. She has served many years on the Tomah Housing Authority and Community Block Grant Committee.
Ruth Ann does not tell her age, although it is believed that she is close to 100 years old.
She believes it isn’t how old you are but what you accomplish in your life that counts. She has certainly made her life count.
She is a retired high school English teacher who still gives of her time to help students earn their high school diplomas. Ruth Ann has also taught foreign students to improve their communication skills while they are in the United States. She has no children of her own, but has “adopted” many over the years—neighborhood children, her students and children from her church. She has shown a great love and concern for all these children.
Ruth Ann Strozinsky is a remarkable lady who is greatly admired by her colleagues and the people she serves. Her energy and caring efforts have been an inspiration to many. I consider it an honor and a privilege to know her. It is fitting that she receives recognition and praise for her achievements and successes and for the service she has rendered to her community and the State of Wisconsin.

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002
Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the life of Tiffany Taylor. Fifteen-year-old Tiffany was killed by random gunfire as she rode home with her friends after an evening at a Roseville roller skating rink. I am truly saddened and offer my deepest condolences to Tiffany’s family and friends.
It is hard to understand why this senseless act of violence has occurred. Even the strongest faith can be shaken when a young life is cut short. But at a recent gathering of Tiffany’s family, friends, classmates and neighbors, it was clear that this community has not lost its faith. They came together to honor Tiffany memory, and pledged to work together to end violent crime in our community so that nothing s family and friends.

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002
Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge my great appreciation for the work done in Congress by my colleague from Hawaii, Congresswoman Patsy Mink. Recently, I came across an article published in Outlook magazine in connection with the American Association of University Women, titled Title IX at 30: Making the Grade? written by Patrice
Gaines. The article observes Title IX’s 30th anniversary as part of the Education Amendments of 1972. As a co-author of this law, needed for information and advocacy serves. In the last 30 years, Title IX has dramatically changed many aspects of society, most notably the sports arena. Young women who once could only shoot hoops in their drivecways now earn sports scholarships to college and have opportunities—though limited—to become professional athletes. And nearly 50 percent of law school students and lawyers are women.
Yet progress under Title IX remains mixed.
While we can watch WNBA games on TV, in some less visible aspects progress is slower or has even come to a screeching halt.

IN RECOGNITION OF CONGRESSWOMAN PATSY MINK

IN RECOGNEMENT OF TIFFANY TAYLOR OF ROSEVILLE, MICHIGAN
...
Statistics show that across the board, blue-collar jobs pay more than pink. While the gender gap has narrowed in math and science, engineering and physics remain male domains, and the gap yawns in technology.

"Technology is the key to the future, but women have been left behind," says AAUW Directories on Equality Policy and Government Relations Nancy Zipkin, who co-chairs the coalition with AAUW Government Relations Manager Jamie Fueschel. According to statistics on women and girls in the New Computer Age (AAUW Educational Foundation, 2002), boys take computer advanced placement classes and pursue information technology degrees. Girls tend to use computers for data entry and e-mail. That leaves men with more than 80 percent of high-tech—and high-paying—jobs.

Other post-Titix hurdles remain: As you move up the career ladder in prestige or rank, you find fewer and fewer women. The coalition report highlights the second-class status of women working in educational institutions. While women account for almost three-quarters of school-teachers, for example, they make up only about 20 percent of high school principals and 12 percent of superintendents. In higher education, women are only 21 percent of full professors and 19 percent of university presidents.

And persistently, on all educational levels, the learning environment remains uneven. Male students attract more attention—positive and negative—than females. What that means females receive less encouragement and stay in secondary roles throughout their education," says Annexstein. This can condition females to accept a back seat in school as well as in career and adult roles.

That's just not bad for girls. Boys hear that they are trouble-makers and problem students, and realize the heat of the added attention uncomfortable.

Sexual harassment, too, continues to plague young women and men. Eight in 10 students in grades eight to 11 experience harassment during their student lives, according to Hostile Hallways: Bullying, Teasing, and Sexual Harassment in School (AAUW Educational Foundation, 2001), and more than a quarter say they experience harassment often. Girls are more likely than boys—83 percent versus 63 percent—to report they are likely to be harassed than were their counterparts in 1993.

Compared to this backdrop, there is a standard in the treatment of pregnant and parenting students. Before Title IX, high school students were automatically expelled if they became pregnant, and parenting typically signified the end of their formal education. Title IX now prohibits discrimination based on parental status, making automatic expulsion illegal. Yet while expulsion may be avoided, girls are more likely to stay in school, without more programs and assistance to help them, the results remain the same: A young woman is often forced to drop out of school, or be encouraged by school counselors to encourage pregnant students to leave or to attend one of the newer programs established specifically for young parents. But these newer schools generally lack academic quality.

PUSH FOR CHANGE

Still, Mink remains hopeful. She's seen how far women have come, though progress may be slow. A member of AAUW’s Puna, Hawaii, chapter, she says, "She and her brothers never dreamed that one day the daughter of a World War II veteran would be a world-class athlete but a surgeon, too. Through Title IX, we got the chance to learn that people appreciate athletic talent no matter the gender," she says. "That's the kind of respect every athlete wants: to just be the athlete, not the male or female athlete." But that's just the beginning.

"Title IX is all about education," says Richardson, a surgeon at Ray-Richardson Orthopedic Associates in Clermont, Florida. "It amazes me that people believe that Title IX means if you have a college football team for men, you have to have a football team for women. What it says is that female students must have equal opportunities to participate in educational programs and activities.

In a way, Richardson says, Title IX taught her to dream, creating opportunities she never imagined possible. The young Dot who longed to play Little League baseball with her brothers never dreamed that one day the best-selling Nashville Slugger bat would bear her name.

KEEPING TITLE IX ALIVE

Mink and Green's short amendment has created opportunities while making equality issues a part of the general consciousness of many more of those who have grown up since the amendment became law.

Consider the children of ABC News reporter and commentator Cokie Roberts: "My daughter went to Princeton and had a varsity letter in water polo. That would not have been possible without Title IX. But it would have been hard for her that she would not have equal education and access to everything. And her brother is appalled at the notion that things would be any different for her than they are for him.

Yet, warns Mink, people must be vigilant in guarding the law that passed so quietly.

"Most of the young people around today don't understand what it was like in the 50s and 60s," says Mink. "As the older women pass and the younger ones do not have the knowledge, there may be an attempt to water down Title IX."

I ask my colleagues to rise today and recognize our colleague, Pat Mink; a woman who has dedicated much of her time and efforts advocating the significance and achievements that women can and do contribute to this country.

TRIBUTE TO DR. JAMES HOWARD LARE

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. James Howard Lare, an outstanding citizen and resident of California’s 27th Congressional District, which I am proud to represent.

Dr. Lare, who lives in Pasadena, California, is retiring from the faculty of Occidental College in Los Angeles after 51 years of service. Dr. Lare began at the college as a student, and this year, the school celebrates the entirety of his 51 years of services as an under-graduate, alumnus, and distinguished member of the faculty.

Dr. Lare has been an active faculty member, serving numerous committees, as well as establishing and directing Occidental’s Master of Arts in Urban Studies Program. He chaired the Political Science Department, as well as the College Task Force on Relations with the Adjacent Neighborhoods, each for five years.

This expert also includes American National Government, European Comparative Politics, Public Administration, Urban Politics, and Public Policy. As a professor, he sent his students to City Hall, Sacramento, and Washington, D.C. to participate in and absorb the processes of government. His legions of internship students set a standard for community-based learning at Occidental College.

Dr. Lare has been an exemplary citizen by serving as a Colonel in the Civil Affairs Branch of the U.S. Army Reserve from 1957–1989, and as an Administrative and Technical Assistant in the U.S. Civil Service Commission from 1955–1956.

He has also been a committed civic leader participating in a myriad of community-based organizations such as the Pasadena Men’s Committee for the Arts, the Los Angeles World Affairs Council, the Sierra Club, the Northeast Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, the Town Hall of California, as well as other organizations dealing with urban planning, education, the environment, and the arts.

Dr. Lare has also written, co-authored, and edited numerous books and articles including, "The Essential Lippmann," "The New Democrat: Reassessment of the Democratic Ideal in American Political Thought," "The Five Public Philosophies of Walter Lippmann," "The Civic Awareness of Five and Six Year Olds," and "The Citizen’s Political World: A Longitudinal Perspective."

Dr. Lare’s hard work and dedication to his community and our country is to be commended, as his teaching students the value of political participation and involvement, thereby helping to nurture hundreds of aware and active citizens.

I would like all the Members of the United States House of Representatives to join me in commending Dr. James Howard Lare for his outstanding leadership as a faculty member of Occidental College and as a community leader.
Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor three individuals whose contributions to labor in the Saginaw Bay region of Michigan cannot be overstated. As Jack Hartupee, Don Elliott and Kathi Pilarski prepare to retire after many years of service to the Laborers’ International Union of North America, their hard work and dedication to advancing the cause of labor throughout the area deserve recognition.

Beginning in 1966, Jack Hartupee spent thirteen years as a laborer for Local 1098 before becoming the Local’s business manager in 1979. For the past 23 years, Jack has handled the business concerns of the Local, while also finding time to serve on various executive boards in other areas, including the board that oversees the Health Care Fund and the Laborers’ Political Action Fund. In addition, Jack was a delegate to the District Council. Jack’s many contributions and commitment to his union brothers and sisters have been second to none.

In 1973, Don Elliott also began his career as a laborer for Local 1247, which later merged with Local 1098 in 1985. Don became the business agent for the laborers’ union in 1996. Like Jack, Don also served as a delegate to the District Council. Don certainly has played a vital role over the years in ensuring the financial interests of his union and of his fellow laborers have been well-tended. His dedication to duty and his admirable work ethic stand as a model of diligence.

Kathi Pilarski, who has been on the job as secretary for Local 1098 since 1985 when she began work on a part-time basis. For the past 10 years, Kathi has worked full-time, but those who know the many hours she has put in on the job will understand that she has gone well above and beyond the parameters of her job description. Along with her many and varied duties in the office, Kathi also has been the driving force in making the annual dinner party a success each year.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in extending the gratitude of the United States Congress to Jack Hartupee, Don Elliott and Kathi Pilarski for their years of work on behalf of laborers. Our laborers are the backbone of the construction industry and these three individuals have fought the good fight by dedicating their lives to improving the working conditions of their union brothers and sisters. I wish Jack, Don and Kathi all the best in their retirements and I am confident they will continue to be strong advocates for labor well into the future.

CONGRATULATING THE STUDENTS OF RURAL POINT ELEMENTARY

HON. ERIC CANTOR OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate and honor seven outstanding students who participated in the Rural Point Elementary School’s Odyssey of the Mind team on the occasion of winning the World Finals Competition in Boulder, Colorado on May 25, 2002. These students from Hanover County, Virginia, participated in the Odyssey of the Mind program, which promotes problem-solving and team-building skills for students from elementary through high school. The Rural Point team won county and state honors before competing in the World Finals in Boulder, Colorado against 48 other teams. In the World Finals, they performed a skit entitled “The Os- trich Factor.” The students creatively designed a farm skit starring Leafy Romaine, Headlock Holmes, (Caulliflower), Big Cheese, carrot, potato, broccoli, and corn to answer the unsettling question of why apples are disappearing from the farm trees.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating the seven students on the team, Ben Davis, Tyler Bettett, James Thompson, Ted Westrick, Jonathan Bettett, Jimmy Thorne and Douglas Tibbett and their head coach, Annie Tibbett. Their creativity and team spirit have earned them this impressive honor and will undoubtedly serve them well in the future.

RE: ONLINE PUBLICATION OF LABOR-MANAGEMENT RECORDS

HON. DAN MILLER
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Secretary of Labor Elaine Chao and the Department of Labor for their commitment to openness with their plan to use Internet technology to increase the accountability of labor groups.

Beginning on June 13, the Labor Department began posting internal financial documents from hundreds of labor unions on its Web site. Included in these postings is information on union salaries and net assets. Disclosure of these labor-management records has been required of labor groups since 1959, when Congress passed the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act in an effort to improve financial accountability among unions. Yet prior to this measure, those seeking to know more about union finances had to visit a Labor Department field office in person in order to review the paperwork. Now, Americans have all of this information at their disposal with a simple click of the mouse. This action will empower individual union members to find out, from the comfort of their homes, exactly where their union dues are going. For too long, union members had obstacles to this information. Through this initiative, the Department of Labor has removed these barriers and brought disclosure into the 21st century.

Because these records were already public, this plan reflects the Labor Department’s sincere commitment to making more information available to the public. I thank Secretary Chao and her department for remaining vigilant to ensure that money is not being misused for political causes, and I hope that the agency’s latest initiative improves transparency of unions.

INTRODUCTION OF H.R. 4980, THE CITIZEN INVOLVEMENT IN CAMPAIGNS (CIVIC) ACT

HON. THOMAS E. PETRI
OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, I introduced, along with our colleague Paul Kanjorski of Pennsylvania, H.R. 4980, the Citizen Involvement in Campaigns Act (or the CIVIC Act). This bill is designed to encourage Americans who ordinarily do not get involved in politics beyond casting a vote every two or four years (that is, if they bother to vote at all) to become more active participants in our political process.

Most would agree that the ideal way to finance political campaigns is through a broad base of donors. But, as we are all painfully aware, the economic realities of modern-day campaigning virtually oblige many candidates to focus most of their efforts toward collecting funds from a few large donors. This reality alienates many Americans from our political system and opens us up to the now-familiar charge that we are “bought and paid for” by special interests.

While recent campaign finance reform efforts have focused on limiting the impact of large contributions, past reforms have been designed to enfranchise small donors. For example, from 1972 to 1986, the federal government offered a tax credit for small political contributions. This offered an incentive for average Americans to contribute to campaigns in small amounts while simultaneously encouraging politicians to solicit donations from a larger pool of contributors. Additionally, six geographically and politically diverse states currently offer their own tax credits for political contributions. These state-level credits differ in many respects, but all share the same goal of encouraging average Americans to provide a counterweight against the influence, real or perceived, of big-money special interests.

The CIVIC Act will reestablish and update this old tax credit program. Taxpayers can choose between a 100 percent tax credit for political contributions to federal candidates or parties (limited to $200 per taxable year) or a 100 percent tax deduction (limited to $600 per taxable year). Both limits, of course, are doubled for joint returns. As long as political parties and candidates promote the existence of these credits, the program would have a real impact and aid in making elections at all levels more grassroots affairs than they are now.

This is a limited tax credit for political contributions that can be a cost-efficient method for helping balance the influence of large donors in the American electoral process. Instead of driving away most Americans from participation in political life, we can invite them in. I encourage you to cosponsor my bill and join in this worthwhile effort.
30TH ANNIVERSARY OF AGNES FLOOD COMMEMORATED

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call the attention of the House of Representatives to the 30th anniversary of Hurricane Agnes. I would also like to bring attention to the approaching completion of the landmark Wyoming Valley Levee Raising Project in my district to provide protection to the people of the valley in the event of another flood of that magnitude.

On June 23, 1972, sirens sounded across much of my district in Pennsylvania, warning that the valiant effort to contain the surging Susquehanna River had been lost. Agnes poured 14 trillion gallons of water onto Northeastern Pennsylvania, causing the Susquehanna River to break from its boundaries and spread a layer of flood water 40 feet deep and 2 miles wide across a densely populated region in the Wyoming Valley. The damage caused by the unyielding rush of water was immense. Twenty-six thousand homes and more than 3,000 small businesses and factories were heavily damaged by flood waters and lost their homes completely. In all, 72,000 people were forced from their homes. Nearly 15,000 Wyoming Valley families lived in trailers provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, many of them for the better part of a year.

Luzerne County, located in the heart of northeastern Pennsylvania, suffered 69 percent of the total damage that Agnes caused in Pennsylvania. Property damage amounted to $1.3 billion, or more than $4 billion in today’s dollars, and another $300 million in road and bridge damage was incurred. Communities were faced with the prospect of rebuilding entire commercial and residential areas.

In the wake of this disaster, one of the worst natural disasters in the Nation’s history, a determined populace emerged. Residents of this region found courage among the ruins and forged ahead with an undying spirit to rebuild their communities. Agnes may have laid waste to their homes and businesses, but it could not extinguish their desire to live and raise their families in the “Valley with a Heart.”

The Red Cross and Salvation Army played a crucial role in providing emergency shelter and meals, not just in the first hours of the crisis but for weeks and months afterward. For example, that summer, the Red Cross spent $13 million locally on food, supplies and personnel, and the Salvation Army provided more than 4 million meals.

Meeting the challenge of recovery were several citizen action groups such as the Flood Victims Action Council under the leadership of Min Mathison, and the Flood Recovery Task Force, which was chaired by Judge Max Rosen. These groups were instrumental in the economic and social resurgence of the areas most damaged by the Agnes flood.

I had the honor of contributing to this effort as the volunteer legal counsel to the Flood Victims Action Council over a period of almost two years. While the hard work and determination of local community groups and area citizens played a role in this historic rebuilding of northeastern Pennsylvania, the recovery assistance provided by the Federal Government was truly phenomenal. Through the cooperative efforts of Congressman Dan Flood, State Senator Frank O’Connell, Bill Wilcox, Secretary of the state Department of Community Affairs working on behalf of Governor Shapp, and Frank Carlucci acting on behalf of President Nixon, the Government rushed approximately $1 billion in aid to the communities of the Wyoming Valley. When critics disparage the ability of government to do things for citizens, I recall that moment when the Federal Government made an enormous difference for the people of Pennsylvania, and look forward to the completion of the landmark project that will protect the people of the Wyoming Valley in the event of another Agnes-level flood.

In 1972, the existing levees were overtopped by several feet during the Agnes flood. In 1986, during my first term, Congress authorized the Wyoming Valley Levee Raising Project to modify the existing flood control projects to protect against a new flood of the same magnitude. We had a disturbing reminder of the need for the levee raising project during the January 1996 flood. At that time, the rapidly rising Susquehanna River prompted officials to order the evacuation of approximately 100,000 people living in the City of Wilkes-Barre and its neighboring communities in the Wyoming Valley. While the river peaked at nearly 13 feet above flood stage, it remained within the banks of the levees and caused relatively minor damage.

From my first term in Congress, I have made it one of my top priorities to provide Agnes-level flood protection to the Wyoming Valley, and it is heartening to see that day approaching.

Completion of the levee raising project will be a major step forward in transforming the Susquehanna River from a liability into an asset. One of the steps forward that we have already taken is the 1997 designation of the Upper Susquehanna-Lackawanna watershed as just one of just 14 American Heritage Rivers in the nation.

In the years ahead, I hope that we will continue our progress toward a cleaner Susquehanna that will provide recreation and an enhanced quality of life, not only for present-day residents but also for our children and grandchildren.

IN HONOR OF THE COLOMBIAN RALLY IN SUPPORT OF TEMPORARY PROTECTIVE STATUS

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the historic sacrifices and the noble struggle for peace that the people of Colombia are engaged in today. I rise in strong support of Temporary Protective Status (TPS) for the Colombians who reside in the United States and in the 13th Congressional District.

The Colombians who reside here have made, and continue to make, enormous sacrifices for the safety and well-being of their families. I know this because I know them. We look forward to the day, when their beautiful country, our historic friend and neighbor, Colombia, once again stands as the proud nation we know it to be—a peaceful nation, a nation free of conflict, free of the scourge of narcotics, and free to live in peace.

We admire the great spirit of the Colombian people. They area very generous and hospitable people, they are a gifted people with a great culture, and they are among the very best friends of the United States in this Hemisphere.

On the occasion of the Colombian rally in support of TPS on June 21, 2002 in Elizabeth, New Jersey, I want to say to directly to my Colombian friends: “Mis queridos amigos Colombianos: Conocemos bien su situación. La persecución, la violencia, los secuestros, el desplazamiento. Ayer, estuvo su presidente-electo, Alvaro Uribe Velezvisitando el Congreso. Juntos con él, apoyamos al TPS para Colombia. Que viva Colombia. Que viva los Estados Unidos. Y que viva la amistad de nuestros pueblos.”

The crisis of violence and economic strife in Colombia has caused tens of thousands of Colombians to flee their homes and seek out a safe haven elsewhere, including in the United States. Most are not so lucky. There are more than one million displaced Colombians inside of Colombia alone. As long as danger and conflict persists in Colombia, Temporary Protective Status would provide Colombians who are here a safe refuge in America.

I want also to congratulate the Colombian people for the free and fair election of President-Elect Alvaro Uribe Velez, and Vice President-Elect, Francisco Santos Calderon. I, along with all Colombians in the United States, expect and hope that President-Elect Uribe will request Temporary Protective Status for Colombians in the US. I have faith that the situation in Colombia will be better.

In the meantime, let TPS become a reality for Colombians, let us extend to Colombians the American hand of friendship and of humanity so that they may live without fear for their lives and those of their loved ones.

Today, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing the need for TPS for Colombians. Let us grant Temporary Protective Service to those in need, and let those fleeing Colombians have refuge in the United States.

CONGRESSIONAL WEB ACCESSIBILITY DAY: CELEBRATING THE ONE-YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF SECTION 508

HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the one-year anniversary of Section 508.
Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act requires federal agencies' electronic and information technology (IT) to be accessible to individuals with disabilities. It specifically requires that when federal agencies develop, procure, maintain, or use electronic and information technology, they ensure that it is accessible unless it would pose an undue burden to do so.

But the regulations do not apply to the legislative and judicial branches, state and local governments, or the private sector. If we truly are a government of, for and by the people, then every American must have access to it. Today, the Bipartisan Disabilities Caucus and the Congressional Internet Caucus teamed up with the American Foundation for the Blind, HIR, Microsoft, Adobe and Freedom Scientific to demonstrate how easy it is to comply with Section 508 in making websites accessible.

Today's "Congressional Web Accessibility Day" educated Members' staff and the American public on Section 508 and the importance of making government accessible. Through one-on-one sessions with HIR web experts and hands-on, interactive learning, this event was an important first step toward making government accessible.

Web accessibility is not just for the 54 million individuals with disabilities or for the millions of elderly Americans with diminished vision, hearing and other senses, but for any one of us who might one day need this technology. It also provides more options for a typical user who may prefer text over fancy graphics. With 68 million American adults using government agency websites, this typical user is evolving into a powerful "e-citizen." I hope that the Bipartisan Disabilities Caucus and the Congression Internet Caucus will mark the beginning of some exciting, new changes in Congress.

The time has come for us to make our websites accessible to our growing e-citizenry. The progress has begun in the federal agencies, and now Congress needs to follow suit.

CELEBRATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF TITILE IX

SPEECH OF
HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, June 19, 2002

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the 50th anniversary of the enactment of Title IX. Prior to the enactment of Title IX, educational and career opportunities were extremely limited for women. In 1971, less than 300,000 girls participated in high school sports compared to 3.5 million male athletes the same year. Today, this number has risen to over 2.4 million female athletes. Women have continued to demonstrate that, when given the opportunity, they, too, are fully qualified to be successful participants in athletics and education.

In the past 30 years, women have gained numerous other advantages from the passage of this historic legislation. Scholarships provided to women in increased numbers since passage of Title IX have opened avenues that were otherwise closed to women. In 1971, only 18% of women finished four years of college; today more female students than male successfully complete a four-year college education and go on to obtain a Master's degree. It is because of historic Title IX, which prohibits gender discrimination in federally funded schools, that women have been able to overcome these barriers.

While much has been accomplished since the enactment of this legislation, much still remains to be done. We need to be vigilant in our enforcement of Title IX and provide the funding needed to help our schools fully comply with the law. We need to fight for the passage of legislation that will ensure equality for all Americans on the basis of gender.

As a result of Title IX, women have been able to over 2.4 million female athletes. Women have been able to attend college and pursue careers they never believed they could have. Women have been able to join the military and serve our country.

Today, the Bipartisan Disabilities Caucus and the Congressional Internet Caucus teamed up with the American Foundation for the Blind, HIR, Microsoft, Adobe and Freedom Scientific to demonstrate how easy it is to comply with Section 508 in making websites accessible.

Today's "Congressional Web Accessibility Day" educated Members' staff and the American public on Section 508 and the importance of making government accessible. I hope that the Bipartisan Disabilities Caucus and the Congression Internet Caucus will mark the beginning of some exciting, new changes in Congress.

The time has come for us to make our websites accessible to our growing e-citizenry. The progress has begun in the federal agencies, and now Congress needs to follow suit.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF UNITED STATES ARMY SPECIAL FORCES

SPEECH OF
HON. GARY G. MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 18, 2002

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, today we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the United States Special Forces and honor a great American hero and "Father of the Green Berets," Colonel Aaron Bank.

Perhaps more than ever, our generation appreciates the unique and vital mission of the U.S. Special Forces. They are the elite, unconventional warfare arm of the United States military and our Nation is at a place in history where our greatest threat is from the unpredictable foes they are trained to fight.

In a time when many of us have fears and doubts about the vulnerability of our Nation to future attacks, we can continue to have hope in the shield provided to us by the Special Forces. In valor, courage, and fidelity, the Special Forces are the world's finest fighting force and I am thankful that they are in the business of protecting the United States of America and its citizens.

Due to the covert nature of many of their missions, both the measure of their sacrifice and their contribution to freedom here and abroad may never be known. However, today, I hope all Americans will join me in celebrating their 50th anniversary and thanking them for giving more to this country than could ever be repaid and perhaps, could ever be measured.

I wish to especially extend my appreciation to Colonel Aaron Bank, the founder and first commander of the Special Forces. As an operative in the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) during World War II, he led his team on missions to hunt down high-ranking Nazi leaders, search for missing allied prisoners in Indochina and lead counter-intelligence cell in Germany. It was clear there was a place for such operations using highly trained unconventional forces. So, when the OSS was disbanded after World War II, Colonel Bank began working to convince the U.S. Army to adopt a permanent unconventional warfare force. After tireless efforts, the U.S. Army launched its first Special Forces unit, the 10th Special Forces Group (Airborne) with Colonel Bank, appropriately, as its first commander.

Since then, the U.S. Army Special Forces has spawned special operations units from the other military branches such as the Navy SEALS, Air Force Combat Controllers, and the Marines' Force Recon. We have Colonel Bank to thank for emphasizing the strategic and tactical importance of such units, which he modeled in designing, implementing and commanding the Army's first Special Forces unit.

In passing H. Con. Res. 364, Congress not only recognizes the 50th anniversary of the Special Forces, but also acknowledges the invaluable contribution of a great American and outstanding soldier, Colonel Aaron Bank. At age ninety-nine, he is a living legend and I consider it an honor and privilege to participate in recognizing both his contribution and the legacy of his vision and foresight, the United States Special Forces.

My most sincerest gratitude goes out to Colonel Bank and his fellow Green Berets as they celebrate the 50th anniversary of the U.S. Army Special Forces.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MISSOURI OFFICERS ASSOCIATION ON 70TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. SAM GRAVES
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the outstanding work of The Missouri Officers Association, which represents over 900 Federal, State, and local police officers.

I would like to honor this organization in this, their 70th year, for their charitable work and dedication to scholarship and community. The primary focus of the officer's association is to provide low cost training to police agencies across the State of Missouri. Another very notable deed is the provision of an immediate $1000 death benefit to families of fallen officers.

Beyond their efforts in the law enforcement community, The Association organizes two scholarship programs. The first is a yearly college scholarship that awards $1000 to five Missouri students and the second is an essay contest for eighth grade students, which awards six students cash awards totaling $1000.

The philanthropic work of this organization also extends to the community through a variety of donations to groups such as Concern of Police Survivors, Ronald McDonald House,

The law enforcement community is of paramount importance to our cities, our states and our Nation. This organization represents some of Missouri’s finest members of the law enforcement community and is worthy of the esteem of this body. Mr. Speaker, please join me in recognizing the great work of The Missouri Officers Association on their 70th anniversary.

She has held membership in over 50 community, state, and national organizations, chaired over 20 commissions, committees and boards, received hundreds of awards and recognitions, and has been appointed to special task force projects by the governor of California and several Oakland mayors.

I am honored to congratulate Dezie Woods-Jones on all of her remarkable accomplishments. Her tireless dedication to education and her community have touched the lives of countless Oakland residents.

2ND LT. WILLIAM WOLBER, ONE OF THE GREATEST GENERATION

HON. SHERWOOD L. BOEHLERT
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, the freedoms we enjoy and the opportunities that abound for all Americans are the products of sacrifice on the part of so many. Today, to help address these challenges, I introduced the Health Benefits Claims Prompt Payment Act of 2002. We have heard a lot about the need to stop the declining payments from Medicare, especially since the proportion of patients on Medicare continues to grow. Further, doctors and hospitals face great uncertainty as to when they will be paid by health care plans for services they provide. In April, doctors and hospitals were granted an extension of the Medicare delay. The extension was granted due to the increased uncertainty associated with Medicare payments and the funding shortage from Medicare. The extension will allow doctors and hospitals to continue to provide care to patients while they address the decrease in Medicare payments to doctors and other providers by 5.4 percent this year. The extension also helps to address similar hospital funding shortfalls, especially in rural areas where hospitals are paid less than their urban and suburban counterparts due to the use of a biased and outdated formula. While these changes will not fully address the decline in payments and the funding shortages from Medicare that our providers face, they are a good first step.

However, the issue of Medicare funding problems is not the only concern. Doctors and hospitals need to be paid, and, on time, by the private group and individual health plans. On-time payments are critical for doctors to pay their own bills and for the long-term financial survival of medical practices and hospitals.

Several states have passed legislation to ensure prompt payment for health care claims. However, the shortsightedness of politicians in some states—as in my home state of Texas—has prevented such legislation from becoming law. Even in states where laws are on the books, doctors and hospitals face possible ERISA preemption of state laws—meaning that without a federal “prompt pay” law, health plans will continue to be able to manage their cash flow on the backs of doctors and hospitals.

Today, I introduced the Health Benefits Claims Prompt Payment Act of 2002. This legislation will ensure that doctors and hospitals are paid “promptly” for the health care services they provide to participants in private health care plans. Failure to pay such claims on time would result in interest penalties being imposed on health plans.

This bill also specifically protects a state’s right to provide doctors and hospitals with even more certainty—allowing states to impose harsher penalties or stricter standards on the payment of claims. The Health Benefits Claims Prompt Payment Act of 2002 is one way to help ensure that doctors and hospitals can focus on what they do best—treating patients and practicing medicine.

Racine Evans and I am a six grade student at the Milton L. Olive Middle School. My desire to be a teacher. I have been inspired by two powerful human beings, my mother, Theresa Johnson and my teacher Mrs. Deborah Charles. Mrs. Charles is always instructing me about the fact that knowledge is power. My mother Theresa is an assistant pastor and is also the Evangelist of my church. She also preaches to me how knowledge is power and knowledge is the key to life. I’m inspired by both my teacher and my mother to work with wisdom and inspiration. Between church and school, teaching seems to be my calling. When I have the opportunity to speak, I will make sure that I’ll share the wisdom that was passed on to me down to my students. I just want to be able to pass down my knowledge to someone else, because knowledge is a powerful thing. I am determined to be successful. I plan to come back to my community, and set an example for others. When they see that I have reached my goal, then they will know it’s possible for them to be successful as well.

NOTRE DAME BASEBALL AND THE COLLEGE WORLD SERIES

TOM ROEMER OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 2002

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, a columnist for the Omaha World-Herald wrote, “What do you get when you cross Notre Dame with the College World Series? Magic is what you get.”

This entire baseball season has been magical for the Notre Dame Fighting Irish baseball team. Behind a spirited team effort, the Irish return to one of the most storied events, the College Baseball World Series in Omaha, Nebraska for the first time since 1957. Not since Jake Kline was coach and Jim Morris batted .714 (10 for 14) in four games, a standing College World Series record, have the Irish traveled to Omaha to compete for the NCAA national championship.

Mr. Speaker, this has been a dramatic season for the Irish. Some people in South Bend have dubbed it the “boomerang season.” After starting 9-5, the Irish lost five of their next six games and losing their first four games in the Big East Conference, the Irish rallied with the heart and determination belting of a championship team. Down 5-0 to the West Virginia Mountaineers, the Irish rallied behind the solid pitching of Drew Duff, Martin Vergara, and Matt Buchmeier and the offensive productivity of Steve Stanley, Paul O’Toole, and Javier Sanchez to win the game 10-6 in ten innings. Following this inspiring comeback, the Irish dominated their competition, winning forty games and losing only fourteen.

The Irish’s regular season hot streak served as momentum for the Big East Tournament in Bridgewater, New Jersey three weeks ago. The Irish beat Rutgers University, 3-2, after Steve Sollmann’s clutch game-winning hit in the 10th inning with their first Big East Championship title. Ryan Kelita pitched seven shutout innings in relief. Senior clubhouse leader, Steve Stanley, was awarded the Big East Tournament’s Most Outstanding Player Award after batting 6-for-16 with one double, one triple, and one RBI in the championship game.

After winning the Big East championship, Notre Dame was rewarded as the host team for the NCAA South Bend Regional. The Irish made quick work of the South Bend Regional field beating Ohio State (8-6), South Alabama (25-1), and Ohio State again (9-6). The 25-1 drubbing of South Alabama was easily the most impressive victory margin of the year. The Irish batters swatted thirty-two hits, one more than the旁边的NCAA record for hits. Steve Sollmann went 6-for-7, Paul O’Toole batted 5-for-5, and Steve Stanley was 4-for-5 during the offensive explosion. The offensive dominance during the South Alabama game should not overshadow the brilliant pitching performance by former Irish star, John Johnson. Johnson faced only thirty batters while allowing one walk and one hit. Johnson became only the thirteenth pitcher in NCAA history to post a no-hitter or one-hitter.

With the NCAA South Bend Regional title in tow, the Irish advanced to the Super Regional in Tallahassee, Florida to take on the top ranked team in the nation, the Florida State Seminoles, in a best of three series. Against all odds, the Irish prevailed by upsetting the Seminoles in game one (10-4) and game three (9-5). The Irish halted Florida State’s twenty-five game winning streak which was one of the longest in NCAA history and earned a place in the College World Series.

Upon arrival in Omaha, Notre Dame became a crowd favorite as the underdog of the College World Series. After losing a close game to the Stanford Cardinal (4-3) in the opening game of the double-elimination tournament, the Irish trailed in their second game to the Rice Owls 2-3 with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning. A loss to Rice would end the season for the Irish. The bases were empty, consummate team leader Steve Stanely ripped a triple down the baseline. The next batter, Steve Sollmann, hit a clutch game-tying RBI single. With Sollmann on base, Brian Stavisky belted a game winning two-run homer. Coach Mainieri summed up the spirited comeback best, “I’m not sure I can adequately describe what we just witnessed. I’d like to say I’m surprised at what happened in the bottom of the ninth inning, but I really am not. I’ve watched these kids do it for the last three or four years.”

Notre Dame has head coach Paul Mainieri and his exceptional assistant coaches, Brian O’Connor, Dusty Lepper, and Wally Widelski, to thank for this successful season. Through the course of his eight years at Notre Dame, Coach Mainieri has won the right way by recruiting student athletes who represent our university in a positive light. Coach Mainieri has compiled a 353-140-1 (.716) record at Notre Dame making him one of the most successful skipper in Big East Conference history.

The eight seniors on this record breaking Irish baseball team must also be commended for their dedication and leadership. Matt Bok, Andrew Bushey, Paul O’Toole, Steve Stanley, Ken Meyer, Matt Strickroth, Matt Buchmeier, and Drew Duff compiled a four year record of 187-65-1 that ranks as the fourth-best four year winning percentage in school history. I would also like to acknowledge the other members of the baseball team who have brought the University of Notre Dame’s students, faculty, and alumni so much excitement.

SPEECH BY RACINE EVANS OF WYANDANCH, NEW YORK

HON. STEVE ISRAEL
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 2002

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I commend the following words to you and all of our colleagues, Racine Evans of Milton Olive Middle School in Wyandanch, New York delivered this speech on May 13, 2002.

Hello Congressman Steve Israel, Ladies and Gentlemen, Boys and Girls, my name is...
Wilkins, Mike Morgalis, Scott Bickford, Matt Laird, Tyler Jones, George Howard, Mike Miligan, Brandon Viloria, J.P. Gagne, and John Axford.

Mr. Speaker, although the Irish fell short of winning the College World Series this week, the players and coaches should be proud of this exceptionally successful season. I am reminded of a photograph of Hall of Fame pitcher, Bob Feller, said, “Every day is a new opportunity. You can build on yesterday’s success or put its failures behind and start over again. That’s the way life is, with a new game every day, and that’s the way baseball is.” After watching the determination and spirit of the 2002 Fighting Irish baseball team coached by Paul Mainieri, I am certain that college baseball fans across the country will come to know that Notre Dame fans already appreciate; a new baseball power is emerging from South Bend, Indiana. Thanks for a great season and go Irish! Watch out next year!

CENTRAL NEW JERSEY RECOGNIZES AND HONORS SMITH COLLEGE GRADUATE ANNE MARTINDELL

HON. RUSH D. HOLT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor the career and commitment of Former ambassador and Smith College graduate Anne Martindell.

Ambassador Martindell’s involvement in government is notable in itself. Her early support for women’s rights and principled objection to the Vietnam conflict were part of a long career of public service. She served four years in the New Jersey State Senate before being appointed director of the Office of Disaster Assistance. In 1979 she was appointed Ambassador to New Zealand and Western Samoa. She continues her involvement in US-New Zealand relations as founder of the United States-New Zealand Council.

Anne Martindell’s friends and family have always known her as a determined, energetic, and extraordinarily capable person. What brought these qualities to the attention of the general American public was her decision a few years ago to return to college to obtain her long-delayed degree—after nearly 7 decades. She was admitted to Smith College in 1932, but her parents removed her after her freshman year. Despite a lifetime of achievement, she felt this lack of a college degree, and returned to Smith College in the fall semester of 2000. She graduated this May 19th with a Bachelor of the Arts degree and received an Honorary Law Doctorate, certainly an unusual combination.

Ambassador Martindell’s commitment to education and public service should serve as a model for us all. In her unwavering commitment to education lasting 69 years, she should inspire us all to similar commitments to higher education. In the words of her Smith College advisor Prof. Daniel Horowitz “At the most profound level, Anne is a testament to the importance of education. It is an honor to represent Ambassador Martindell in congress.

Once again, I rise to commend Ambassador Anne Martindell for her long career of public service and her commitment to education. I wish her much success in her future endeavors, and I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing her accomplishments.

HUMAN RIGHTS CONCERNS IN KAZAKHSTAN

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce a resolution that expresses deep concern about ongoing violations of human rights in Kazakhstan. President Nursultan Nakazbaev, the authoritarian leader of this energy-rich country, has been flagrantly flouting his OSCE commitments on democratization, human rights, and the rule of law, and thumbing his nose at Washington as well.

In the 106th Congress, there was a near unanimous vote in the House for a resolution I introduced voicing dismay about general trends in Central Asia. We sent a strong signal to leaders and opposition groups alike in the region about where we stand.

Since then, the overall situation has not gotten better—throughout the region, super-presidents continue to dominate their political systems. But their drive to monopolize wealth and power while most people languish in poverty is finally producing a backlash. Today in Central Asia, things are stirring for the first time in a decade.

Even in quasi-Stalinist Turkmenistan, an opposition movement-in-exile led by former high ranking government officials has emerged which openly proclaims its intention of getting rid of dictator Saparmurat Niyazov. In Kyrgyzstan, disturbances in March, when police killed six protesters calling for the release of a jailed parliamentarian, were followed by larger demonstrations that forced President Akayev in May to dismiss his government. sent the money abroad because he worried that such a large infusion of cash into Kazakhstan would throw the currency into a tailspin. Although he never disclosed the secret fund to parliament, Nazarbayev used it twice to help stabilize the country during subsequent financial crises, Tasmagambetov said.

In an interview last week, a top government official dismissed the significance of the revelation and the resulting furor. "The so-called Kazakh-gate, the government officially explained," said Adrak Dosham, the deputy minister of information. "There was a special reserve account set up for a normal fund that can be managed by officials appointed by the government. It's not managed by individuals. The money that goes into it is state money and supposed to be used to meet the needs of the state."

Asked who knew about it, Dosham could identify only three men, Nazarbayev, the prime minister and the chairman of the national bank. Asked why lawmakers were never informed, he said, "It was impossible to raise this issue before parliament because it would have had grave consequences."

But opposition leaders and journalists said Nazarbayev finally revealed the account this spring only after they pushed Swiss prosecutors for information. The opposition and journalists said they believe the president announced the $1 billion fund only as a smoke screen to obscure other matters still under investigation by the Swiss and U.S. prosecutors.

"All around there is bribe-taking and stealing and mafia," said Serikbolsyn Abildin, the head of the Communist Party and one of two parliament deputies whose information request to prosecutors preceded the announcement. "It is common corruption in the presidential power."

"The closure of the $1 billion Swiss fund was designed to fool public opinion," he said. The disclosures have coincided with an escalating series of troublesome incidents for those who do not defer to the government. Just days before Tasmagambetov's speech to parliament, Kazakh authorities arrested opposition politician Mukhtar Ablyazov, while his colleague, Ghalymzhан Zhaqiyanov, avoided a similar fate only by leaving the embassy, and promptly was also sent of the West, a coalition against terrorism.

A TRIBUTE TO LANDON DONOVAN AND THE U.S. WORLD CUP TEAM

HON. JERRY LEWIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, the youth of San Bernardino County have now been treated to thrilling hometown performers twice in the course of a year. Derek Parra of San Bernardino shocked and inspired the world at the Winter Olympics with his record-breaking gold medal performance in speedskating, a sport long-dominat ed by cold climate European nations.

And now Landon Donovan, a product of Redlands youth soccer, has helped his team win against some of the elite teams of the World Cup. Please join me in thanking this team for showing Americans how entertaining soccer can be, and for reminding us all that with hard work and determination, anything is possible.

MILITARY PAY GAP

HON. SUSAN DAVIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure and respect for our men and women in uniform that I introduce legislation to ensure elimination of the pay gap that exists for our military personnel.

Since 1982, when military pay was last considered to have achieved “reasonable comparability” with the private sector, military raises have lagged behind those enjoyed by the average American. Legislation passed for FY2000 included a large pay raise and mandated pay raises of “inflation plus one half of one percent” through 2006.
Despite a series of generous raises, the pay gap will not be eliminated by 2006. My legislation would do two things. Extend the mandate from 2006 to 2013, when the gap would be eliminated, and then ensure that raises keep pace with inflation.

As our military personnel consider the very personal decision to stay in the military or move to the private sector, they do factor in future pay raises. From my own personal experience working with our service men and women, I know that they don’t choose to serve for financial gain. They serve because they believe in America and the freedoms that we all enjoy and are committed to serve. Like all of us here in this House, they understand that a lifestyle of service entails a certain amount of sacrifice. In exchange for all their sacrifices, they have a simple request: that their nation make a commitment to them that parallels their commitment to the nation.

Today I ask my colleagues to join in that commitment and support my legislation to permanently eliminate the military pay cap.

Hon. Edward R. Royce
California
In the House of Representatives
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend my congratulations to the principal, faculty, and students of Oak Middle School in Los Alamitos, California, on that school’s receipt of the U.S. Department of Education’s prestigious “Blue Ribbon School of Excellence” Award.

The Blue Ribbon Award is a highly competitive honor awarded to schools that are judged to be particularly effective in meeting local, state and national education goals. To qualify for this award, schools must undergo a rigorous selection process culminating in a decision made by a panel of educators from across the country selecting schools for recommendations to Secretary Paige.

I can think of no school more worthy of this award than Oak Middle School, which under the excellent leadership of Principal James Elsasser consistently produces well-educated and active students. Because of the vision and determination demonstrated by Mr. Elsasser and his committed faculty, Oak Middle School has been recognized by the Federal Government for its excellence—a recognition that I think is long overdue.

I congratulate Oak Middle School on its achievement, I encourage the students and faculty to continue their tradition of excellence.

Tribute to Mr. Leonard Hoffman

Mr. Hoffman has been a member of the faculty at Oak Middle School, which under the excellent leadership of Principal James Elsasser consistently produces well-educated and active students. Because of the vision and determination demonstrated by Mr. Elsasser and his committed faculty, Oak Middle School has been recognized by the Federal Government for its excellence—a recognition that I think is long overdue.

I congratulate Oak Middle School on its achievement, I encourage the students and faculty to continue their tradition of excellence.

Tribute to the Upper Peninsula Village of Bergland on the Occasion of Its Centennial Michigan
In the House of Representatives
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to call your attention and that of our House colleagues to a ceremony that will take place in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan on July 3–6. On those days, with all the fanfare and activities that local residents have been planning for a year, the community of Bergland will celebrate its centennial.

As Bergland residents frequently note for distant acquaintances, this is a small community that is easy to find on a map of Michigan. Just find Lake Gogebic, a lake in the western end of the U.P. that looks like an upside-down boot, and Bergland is at the toe. On the map, it’s just another black dot—you need to see Bergland as I have seen it so many times, passing through on my way west on M-28 to Ironwood or turning north on M-64 to go to Ontonagon. Then you would see a tidy village of wood-framed structures, tucked in the forest on the shore of a lake. It’s the kind of friendly community that says, “Why are you rushing by? Stop here a while, and your life will be enriched and at peace.”

Like so many northern Michigan communities, Bergland is a village created by the lumber industry. In 1902 Gunlek Bergland, then age 55, and his wife Hanna signed the Plat of the Village of Bergland, giving birth to a community that was located within the 18,000 acres of timberland Bergland had obtained. He had already constructed a sawmill and a short-line railroad into his timber holdings, and the new town's location along the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad ensured his wood products would find distant markets.

The town of Bergland was born at a unique time in Michigan’s lumbering history. Most of the virgin strand of giant white pine had been harvested, but the land Gunlek Bergland purchased was far enough away from the Lake Michigan shore that it had remained uncut. This North Woods stood at town’s edge. Charles Freed, a 12th grade graduate of Bergland's first school, built in 1904, once reminisced about this timber stand, saying, “Within a few feet of the rear of the building there stood a forest which had not yet been touched by the ax.”

It’s quite amazing, Mr. Speaker, when you consider that within the 20th Century and right in the Midwest, a community was being built on a forest frontier. It would not be frontier for long, because 20th Century changes were having an impact on the lumber industry. Witness the fact that Gustav Bergland built an actual town for families, which in itself was a change from the tradition of the 1800s, when lumberjacks spent all winter living in isolated lumber camps to do their work. In the 19th Century, logs were floated down rivers to communities like my home town of Menominee, where sawmills cut them and shipped the lumber south by water to growing cities like Milwaukee and Chicago. In the dynamic new 20th Century, railroads reached inland to small communities like Bergland to bring out wood products. Hardwood was now needed by the Upper Peninsula mines, and the growing auto industry needed lumber, too, as much as 250,000,000 board feet—a significant amount of wood, even by today’s standards.

Those boom days are gone, but Bergland and its forest heritage remain. Forest products are still an important regional industry, a managed industry that recognizes northern Michigan’s forests as a renewable resource, Bergland stands surrounded by the million-acre Ottawa National Forest, an area that is also rich in recreational opportunities.

Residents and former residents of Bergland will gather in July to celebrate this history, and they will also honor some of the community’s oldest residents. Among those to be honored are Walter Brown, 90, and Stan Lackie, 85, both of whom were born of Bergland pioneering families and have spent their entire lives in Bergland.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and our House colleagues to join me in wishing the best to the people of Bergland on this celebration of their centennial, and in saying a hearty, “Well Done,” to the Bergland Centennial Planning Committee of Gay Fulk, Junior Grantham, Winnie Boseth, and Tom Borseth. We hope many former Bergland residents are drawn back home for this celebration, so that families may be reunited, old friendships renewed, and a remarkable quality of life rediscovered.

H. CON. RES. 415, Recognizing National Homeownership Month and the Importance of Homeownership in the United States

In the House of Representatives
Friday, June 21, 2002

Ms. SCHAOKWSKY. Mr. Speaker, the House of Representatives passed a resolution that recognizes National Homeownership Month. Democrats and Republicans are united in their support for homeownership. However, we should not fool ourselves by claiming that this resolution is going to solve our affordable housing crisis.

We need to back up our words with action. Housing is not a top priority of this House or the Administration. HUD provides down payment assistance through several of its programs, yet without sufficient resources HUD will not be able to accomplish its homeownership goals. In fact in real dollars, HUD’s budget is one third of what it was during the Ford administration. This is unacceptable.

Yesterday the Financial Services committee marked-up the “Housing Affordability for American Act of 2002.” Several members of the majority voted against an amendment to create a national affordable housing trust fund. The approved amendment creates a trust fund that utilizes FHA surplus funds. By creating a housing trust fund we can provide the necessary resources to build and preserve 1.5 million units of rental housing over the next 10 years.

Also, predatory lending continues to be a serious problem for homeowners. The Coalition for Responsible Lending estimates that homeowners lose $9.1 billion annually due to predatory loans. Predatory lending is especially a problem in the subprime market. People who have trouble getting access to conventional mortgages often use the subprime market for mortgage assistance.

Predatory lending is disproportional prey on the elderly and minorities. In 2000, HUD completed a study that found that borrowers in upper income African American neighbor-and have made tremendous strides in the efforts to improve the quality of life in the Houston area. Under the leadership of Reverend Williams, the congregation has grown to more than 3,000 members with facilities on more than ten acres of property. Throughout his tenure as senior pastor, Reverend Williams, has a number of accomplishments that highlight his commitment and dedication to serving God, his congregation and the Houston community. Some of his many achievements include, the development of the ministerial staff concept, the Family Life Center, the Crisis Counseling Center, and the Violet P. Williams Educational Building. Reverend Williams has implemented more than twenty-five ministries and provides leadership to a number of dedicated and talented staffers.

Mr. Speaker, throughout his 34 years in the ministry, Reverend Williams' intelligence, enthusiasm, and integrity has served his congregations well. He brings a tireless energy, an unflagging drive, and an unparalleled passion to each of his endeavors, whether it's as a Pastor, a civic leader, or friend. His tremendous strength over the years is a testimony to the success of his efforts to address the needs of his congregations and community.

MISSOURI STATE HIGHWAY PATROL OFFICER OF THE YEAR

HON. IKE SKELTON
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, let me take this means to congratulate and pay tribute to Sgt. James E. Closson of Marshall, MO, who recently was named Officer of the Year by the Missouri State Highway Patrol. He has distinguished himself, the Missouri Highway Patrol, and the State of Missouri with dedicated service.

Sgt. Closson has been serving and protecting the citizens of Missouri for 28 years. He is respected by the members of Troop A for his diligence in ensuring assignments are met and completed without fail. His years in the Troop A area and as the zone sergeant of Zone 10 in Saline County have established him as a leader in the community.

Sgt. Closson is the son of a distinguished former Missouri Highway Patrolman, A.F. Closson.

Mr. Speaker, Sgt. James E. Closson has been dedicated to serving and protecting the citizens of Missouri for 28 years and is well deserving of this prestigious award. I am certain that my colleagues will join me in wishing Sgt. Closson and his wife, Jenny, all the best.

THE TREATMENT OF GIRLS AND WOMEN BY THE BURMESE ARMY

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to stand firm against the impunity with which the girls and women of Burma are raped, tortured, beaten, and killed as part of a systematic campaign by the Burmese army to terrorize and subjugate its people.

This week, a report was released detailing the heinous acts of rape and other forms of sexual violence carried out on the women and girls of the Shan State on the Burmese border with Thailand. Compiled from interviews with brave victims who would talk about their story, the report serves merely as a microcosm of the ongoing and endemic commitment by the Burmese army to thwart resistance and opposition by officially condoning the use of rape as a weapon of war against its civilian population.

Mr. Speaker, the reports that have surfaced describe how the overwhelming majority of these rapes are being carried out by officers, and usually in front of their own troops. Girls and women are being beaten mutilated, suffocated—tortured. A quarter of these rapes result in death, and in some incidences the victim's body is publicly displayed to send out a message of terror and fear to local peoples. These crimes against humanity are often times even taking place within military bases where some women have been detained for up to 4 months—only to be raped, even gang raped, repeatedly by soldiers.

TRIBUTE TO CAPTAIN FRED “POT LICK” CLAY CUTRER, JR.

HON. JOHN B. LARSON OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, June 21, 2002

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to Captain Fred “Pot Lick” Clay Cutrer, Jr., United States Air Force, of Mississippi, who was laid to rest on Thursday, June 6, 2002. Captain Cutrer had been missing in action in South Vietnam since August 5, 1964. Captain Cutrer was the first pilot to be killed after President Johnson's escalation of American involvement in Vietnam due to the Gulf of Tonkin. At the time Captain Cutrer’s plane went down he was only 29 years old.

Captain Cutrer and his navigator, Lieutenant Leonard Lee Kaster of Massachusetts, were flying a B-57B Canberra on August 5, attempting to land at a nearby base, when they were shot down by Viet Cong soldiers. Unfortunately, a rescue or recovery mission could not be attempted, as the area where the plane went down was deemed too dangerous. Both men were listed as Missing in Action and their names were on the Vietnam Wall when it was dedicated in Washington, D.C., in 1982. Captain Cutrer’s name can be found on Panel 1E, Line 60.

In August 1992, the Defense Department’s POW/Missing Personnel Office found the crash site with the help of a Vietnamese native who saw the plane as it crashed in Long Khan Province. Follow-up visits led to an excavation in March and April 1997 and recovery of Captain Cutrer’s remains. In January 1998, Captain Cutrer’s family was notified that his dog tags and remains had been found. He was given a full military burial at Arlington Cemetery on Thursday, June 6, 2002. Since Lieutenant Kaster’s remains were never found, he was buried with Captain Cutrer. He and Lieutenant Kaster were posthumously awarded the Purple Heart.

Captain Cutrer grew up in Mississippi in a loving family and alongside great friends. He was married to Shirley Cutrer, who was a First Lieutenant who was honorably discharged as an Air Force nurse in 1962 after becoming pregnant with the couple’s first of two sons, Fred III. She died September 10, 1998, when her car collided with an 18-wheeler in Pennsylvania. Later this summer, she will be exhumed and buried beside her husband’s plot.

On Thursday, June 6, many of Captain Cutrer’s friends and family met at Arlington to finally lay to rest their beloved friend and family member. Among those attending the funeral were Captain Cutrer’s two sons, Fred III and Dan, his brother Hugh Molse Cutrer and his two sisters, Lillie Cutrer Gould and Connie Cutrer Blair of Simsbury, CT.

Captain Fred “Pot Lick” Clay Cutrer, Jr. is a true American hero and I urge my colleagues to stand today to honor his memory.
