It is important to recognize the challenge of funding military preparedness. Therefore, we wish to cause any confusion in the procurement process that could affect our role, especially at the local level. The amendment requires the Army to track any changes in the use of bundled contracts, sometimes called consolidated contracts, as a result of this new procurement agency, as well as track small business access to procurement personnel.

Let me be clear. Removing contracting authority from Army installations and centralizing it will result in less small business participation, but steps can be taken to overcome this. These steps must be proactive and represent a real commitment to maintaining small business access to procurement opportunities. And while I do not believe Congress should dictate every detail of how the Army chooses to structure itself for procurement purposes, Congress must be concerned about the consequences of that structure.

I look forward to working with the Secretary to ensure that an appropriate level of small business participation in Army procurement is maintained. Once again, I would like to thank Senator BOND and Senator CARNAHAN for their support on this issue, as well as Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER for accepting this amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I am pleased that Chairman LEVIN and I have been able to come to agreement on my amendment to restore $814 million that the President can allocate to anti-terrorism and on Chairman LEVIN’s second-degree amendment.

Prior to their approval, I would like to offer some clarifying remarks concerning the intent and effect of these two amendments.
The underlying Warner amendment takes advantage of the fact that the Office of Management and Budget is undertaking a midyear reassessment of the inflation assumptions built into the administration’s fiscal year 2003 budget. I was informed 2 weeks ago that the Office of Management and Budget, based on the Levin-Warner colloquy, that if the Levin-Warner amendment would be adopted, the funds provided in the underlying Warner amendment, if appropriated, could be expended on missile defense and other activities determined by the President.

Sincerely,
MITCHELL E. DANIELS, JR.

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, the second degree amendment which I have offered expresses the determination and decision of Congress that the war on terrorism should be “the top priority” for spending the additional funds identified by the pending Warner amendment. The amendment specifies two possible purposes for the expected additional funds following the inflation recalculation in the midsession review. The first specified purpose is ballistic missile defense programs and the second specified purpose is combating terrorism at home and abroad.

My amendment is based on the large number of unmet needs in our war against terrorism, including those identified by the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. We should put additional resources where the greatest threats exist, and the terrorist threat is clearly the number one threat that we face.

There have been a number of efforts in the last twenty-four hours to persuade me to weaken my amendment or to dilute its intention away from focusing resources on combating terrorism. I, along with my colleagues, including Senators HARRY REID and JACK REED, have resisted these efforts. We will soon determine whether my amendment is adopted by voice vote or whether there will be a rollcall on it. But whichever way we decide to proceed, one thing needs to be clear, which is the primary intent of my amendment is that Congress speak clearly as to what it views as the top priority for the expenditure of any additional funds from the inflation recalculation. That priority is “combating terrorism at home and abroad.”

I urge my colleagues to support my second-degree amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator LEVIN’s amendment No. 4046 be agreed to; Senator WARNER’s amendment No. 4007, as amended, be agreed to; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that the preceding all occur without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, not to object, I just ask unanimous consent that Senator DOMENICUS be added as a co-sponsor to my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is there objection to the request?

Hearing none, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4046) was agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4007), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I would like to take a few moments to discuss an important issue that is covered in this bill: the need for the Department of Defense, as well as the entire Federal Government, to have the capability to continue essential operations after a direct attack on primary facilities. The importance of ensuring Continuity Of Operations (COOP) is a lesson that we all elevated in priority after September 11, 2001. Many of us in this room had begun to recognize the vulnerability of our critical infrastructures—especially our information networks—to disruption or destruction, prior to 9/11. I had even initiated an information assurance scholarship program to begin developing a cadre of professionals in DOD to address this potential problem area.

There were, however, many in private industry that learned this same lesson almost 10 years earlier, and as a result, were far more prepared than the Federal Government when terrorists attacked the World Trade Center.

The financial services industry is one that has historically handled an extraordinary amount of information. They track and record every financial transaction that occurs each day on Wall Street. In addition to an enormous amount of information, the financial services industry deals with information that is extremely critical in nature.

After the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center in May, 1993 this industry asked the question: “What if the terrorists had been successful in bringing down these buildings?” Their conclusion was sobering. It would have resulted in an extraordinary disruption of the U.S. economy for years.

Accordingly, the New York financial institutions tasked the data storage industry to develop a technology that would allow information to be stored, in a second-by-second identical state, in two geographically separate locations. The goal was for each financial entity to have a primary data center in the city and a secondary center in another State. If there was ever an outage at the primary location, no financial transaction would be lost, and all of the systems and networks could “fail-over” to the secondary center outside of the city and immediately put to use.

In 1994 this technology was developed, validated and delivered. For the first time, information of all types, coming from computer systems of all sorts, and models could be replicated between two geographically separate locations. The “mirrored” data center, using sophisticated remote data storage technologies, had been born.

No one ever envisioned that this remote data storage technology would be tested to the degree it was on September 11, 2001. The financial services industry’s dedicated focus to protecting Wall Street’s financial information resulted in that industry being more prepared than any other to handle the man-made disaster. As the World Trade Center towers collapsed, tragically ending the lives of thousands of hard working
Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, I commend ranking member WARNER for his stewardship of the fiscal year 2003 defense budget process in the Senate. We face many challenges to our national security in this day and age and I am thankful for his leadership.

One of those emerging challenges we face is the terrorist threat to our food supply, specifically U.S. agriculture. On the Federal, State, and local level, we need to establish procedures to detect, deter, and respond to large scale coordinated attacks against livestock and agricultural commodities.

Mr. DODD. I thank my good friend for bringing this issue to the attention of the Senate. This research area is important to the Navy and the defense of the United States. Technology being developed to support this capability is currently planned to be ready for transition to Navy aircraft in the fiscal year 2006 timeframe, but can be completed sooner with additional funding in fiscal year 2003. The House of Representatives included $9 million for this purpose in its version of the Defense authorization bill.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. That is my understanding, however, is that at least $12 million in fiscal year 2003 funding is needed to fully accelerate this program.

Mr. DODD. As I mentioned earlier, the House bill includes $9 million for this purpose. My understanding, however, is that at least $12 million in fiscal year 2003 funding is needed to fully accelerate this program.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. That is my understanding as well. In light of recent hostilities, this technology area is an excellent example of the things the military will need to defeat a highly mobile enemy. We certainly hope that we can work with the distinguished chairman to provide necessary funding to the development of these capabilities when we conference this bill with the House.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I am aware of the value of time critical to strike the war fighter and look forward to working with my good friends from Connecticut on this important issue as we move to a conference with the House.

Mr. DODD. I thank my good friend for her support for this program.
Armed Services Committee in a colloquy regarding the extending authorization of pilot programs for revitalizing Department of Defense laboratories. I seek to clarify the congressional intent of Section 241 of the bill before the Senate.

Mr. LEVIN. Section 241 is part of the Senate’s continuing efforts to improve the Department’s labs and test centers. This pilot program expands and authorizes a number of innovative business and personnel demonstrations that are very important to developing the technological superiority that our military needs. The legislation will extend the time period for the pilot program authority for three years. This extension is consistent with the Department of Defense’s legislative proposals that the Armed Services Committee received. I would like to thank Senator LANDRIEU, chair of the Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee, for taking the lead in developing this legislation.

Ms. MIKULSKI. The language stipulates that not more than one partnership may be established as a limited liability corporation, or LLC. Has that site been designated?

Mr. LEVIN. If he choose to establish an LLC as part of the program, the Secretary of Defense will designate its location from among the DoD organizations participating in the pilot program.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I understand that the Aberdeen Test Center in Maryland has invested great effort into pursuing this opportunity. I also note that the Secretary of the Army has approved Aberdeen’s LLC program as one of the new initiatives under the Army’s Business Initiative Council to improve efficiency in business operations and processes.

Mr. LEVIN. I am familiar with the Aberdeen proposal and this legislation could be used to implement their plans, if the Secretary of Defense designates it.

Ms. MIKULSKI. How will the membership from the private and academic sectors be determined?

Mr. LEVIN. A competitive process will be used to select participants in any of the partnerships established by the legislation.

Ms. MIKULSKI. The legislative language permits the members of the LLC to “contribute funds to the corporation, accept contribution of funds for the corporation’s use, provide services, and use of facilities for research, technology, and infrastructure of the corporation,” if doing so will improve the efficiency of the performance of research, test, and evaluation functions of the Department of Defense.

Mr. LEVIN. Yes, you are correct. The committee believes that innovative partnerships, better business practices, and the continuation and expansion of the innovative personnel demonstrations authorized in this and other programs are all important for the revitalization of the Department’s labs and test centers.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the chairman for his support on this important issue.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I support the Hutchinson-Bingaman amendment and the motion to recommit the bill to the current session. While “BRAC 2005” leads people to believe that we have several years before we have to worry about this, the truth is that the criteria must be published prior to the end of 2003, and hence we should provide our input in 2002; two, this legislation, sponsored by Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHINSON sets up criteria that must be met before consideration in closing a military facility. We are not eliminating the ability of DoD to run the process, we are pursuing legislation that will change the process. To bring the process out into the open allowing us all to see how a decision was derived and these are decisions that affects thousands of people and cost many millions or billions of dollars.

It is time to bring—businesslike competitive accounting into the consideration process when dealing with issues of BRAC. The Hutchinson legislation will accomplish that by simply establishing some criteria, and articulated standards to be used in making major decisions. Some of these issues are: environmental costs, costs of Federal and State environmental compliance laws; costs and effects of relocating critical infrastructure; anticipated savings vs. actual savings; current or potential public or private partnerships in support of Department activities; capacity of State and localities to respond positively to economic, and the bill requires the SecDef to publish the formula to which different criteria will be weighed by the DOD in making its recommendations for closure of realignment of military installations.

Not only do I support this move on its stand alone merit of bringing accountability and transparency to major defense and economic decisions, I also support it as a Senator who has had personal experience with the secretive BRAC process as it affects my own constituents and friends.

The Portsmouth Naval Shipyard is a national asset to the defense industry and naval service. It has a long history of supporting the U.S. Navy, yet despite this long history, it has appeared on the DoD BRAC list. Having seen the work this facility and its people contribute I will continue to support and work to enhance PNSY’s capabilities. Its outstanding work performance, value to the Navy, and value to the American public in ensuring national defense, and continue to examine innovative roles PNSY can perform in addition to its critical job of keeping America’s nuclear submarines at sea.

If the Secretary of Defense chooses to examine facilities across the country, he may do so and I encourage his attempts at streamlining DoD and enhancing its financial practices—to make sure the taxpayers get the most for their hard-earned dollars. However, clearly defined standards of accountability, and the decisionmaking process itself, should be open to congressional scrutiny and openness.

NINTH CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS DECISION

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I yield the floor to the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I wanted to ask this of my friend from Connecticut, who I think has variously served in so many different role models to the Senate, variously described as the Senator who is the conscience of the Senate, as the主席 of the Finance Committee, as a former attorney general of his State, someone who understands the legal ramifications of arguments such as this.

In my earlier comments today, I had said that I thought there was in law, and the development of law, and the development of the Constitution, which you and I both quoted from, the Declaration, a clear distinction, as the distinguished Senator has noted, of the freedom of religion. And that part of that body of law that would make up that freedom, that religious freedom, would be a freedom to worship as one would want, if at all, and that that is a right we jealously protect, just as we protect the other freedoms—freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, and so forth—and that when you look at this freedom, there is a different distinct, as the case law has developed, has defined church and state which would embody the idea that we don’t cram religion down anybody’s throat, that we leave it up to them individually to express their own beliefs, if they want to at all, and to believe as they want to, if at all. That is the concept of separation of church and state, as distinguished from there not being necessarily a separation of the state and of God.

Quite to the contrary, of these historical documents, as I pointed out in that statement above the center door, in the fact that we elevate the Chaplain in the opening prayer, in the very formal and dignified opening ceremonies of the Senate, that the Chaplain is elevated over the Chaplain, while the Chaplain offers the prayer, is on a lower level, the fact that we have minted in our coins, “In God we trust.”

I would ask the distinguished Senator from the Great State of Connecticut if he would share with us his commentary about that separation of those two concepts.
Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank my friend from Florida.

We have worked our way along a jurisprudential path that has taken us in our time to a result that I believe was totally unintended by the Framers of the Constitution, by the writers of the Declaration of Independence, by the drafters of the Bill of Rights particularly. This decision today is the most extreme and senseless expression of it. We have the separation of church and state. We believe in freedom of religion. We believe in every individual's freedom to observe and worship as he or she is moved in his or her heart to do so. We have always respected nonbelievers. But we have not asked that the great majority of Americans who may approach the altar from different paths, nonetheless worship the same God, that we not be deprived of our rights to do so, and to do so in a public place that is sanctified by the rights of any one of us but enlarges and strengthens the rights of the whole. That has been the gift of this country.

I heard it once described, I read it once described by someone, as America's civic religion, nondenominational, deistic, God centered, inclusive, and tolerant. There is a great book that had a profound effect on me, written by Father Neuhaus, which was called 'The Naked Public Square.' It commented on some of the earlier generation of decisions that had put the expressions of this civic religion, this shared faith in God, out of our public place and said we would suffer country that because the vacuum doesn't remain for long; other forces, less humane, less moral, less unifying, tend to fill the public square.

I always believed this pledge with this reading, with this decision of a state-run religion, that this is unalienable rights.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights.

Mr. Lieberman. I accept the challenge and the opportunity. We will work on that together.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Yes, I will.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I would hope also, as he has accurately outlined the legal course of appeal, that there would be a constitutional amendment. I would hope also that they should rule that it was constitutional; then we could start our process here of adding to the Constitution that would allow that.

I just want to associate my thoughts with those articulated so eloquently by the Senator from Nevada, which comes from a different faith perspective than mine but with whom we are joined in the historical development of this Nation to which, as he pointed out, so many people fled from a country of established religion, and, indeed, even documented in the Mayflower Compact, and then memorialized in the Declaration of Independence, that there was something different about this country. It was not going to have a state religion; rather, it was going to be an enclave, an oasis, a place to which people of all faiths could come, and those with no faith, and within the protection of the laws they could believe and express their beliefs as they so chose.

As a result, we have this wonderful, and sometimes messy, experience of democracy. Sometimes we make mistakes, but we have the ability under this document to correct those mistakes, because all of the checks and balances that are inherent within this document.

So I appreciate very much the Senator's comments. They will mean a lot to the rest of us.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank my friend from Florida very much for his leadership and eloquence. I will yield to the Senator from Nevada in a moment.

Mr. WARNER. Before the Senator yields the floor, I would like to associate myself with his colleague, before we close this extraordinary chapter of Senate history.

I say to my colleagues, let us not wait for the Supreme Court to act. Why don't we go ahead and formulate this amendment, put it together, have it in place, presumably with all 100 U.S. Senators, and they can take judicial cognizance of what is about to happen. I think that might not be a bad idea. The Senators have initiated it, so let us join and we will start the reciting today.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I accept the challenge and the opportunity. We will work on that together.
Ninth Circuit Court decision is what they meant? No, our founding fathers explicitly ensured the free exercise of religion. Do we think that the Founders believed that a Pledge of Allegiance saying that our Nation is “under God, or that here “I put my trust,” or that we see on our money “in God we trust,” that was a State-established religion?

The beautiful thing about our Creator is that he gave us the freedom to worship him or not. In America, we have the freedom to worship or not, according to what our conscience tells us.

But to somehow say that having a child listen to the Pledge of Allegiance is establishing religion and impeding on an individuals free exercise of religion, is outrageous.

Let me read from part of the dissenting opinion of the circuit, according to Judge Fernandez:

Such phrases as “in God we trust” or “under God” have no tendency to establish a religion in this country, or to suppress anyone’s free exercise of religion, except in the fevered eye of persons who most fervently would like to drive all tincture of religion out of public life or our polity. Those expressions have not caused any real harm of that sort over the years since 1791, and are not likely to do so in the future.

I think it is up to this body to take it upon itself to correct what the Ninth Circuit has done. I agree with the senator from Virginia that we need to reestablish in this country what this document—the Constitution of the United States—really says and really was about. Part of that is studying the history of the founding of this country.

What did the Founders intend when they wrote this document? Based on their practices, they did not want the state to say this is how you will practice a religion. The Baptists are not going to be our official state religion, nor the Methodists, who came from Europe, where they had an official state religion. They, our Founders, wanted the free exercise to practice their religion, not according to how the state dictated or recognized that individuals have rights given by our Creator to worship as they, as individuals, see fit, as they were given by our Creator.

To say that these Founders would have somehow said that it would be against the Constitution they were writing to recognize the rights given to an individual by the Creator is outrageous.

So I hope that all Americans will be as outraged as I am by this decision. I think they are going to be. I was on an aircraft carrier last weekend talking to a lot of the sailors that sacrifice so much for this country. It was during the middle of a training session on the U.S.S. Constellation that I was visiting with them. Like we in Congress do, they said, let’s defend the Constitution. I would have liked to have heard what their opinions would have been regarding this judicial decision.

As my father taught me when I was a young man, there are no atheists in foxholes. Any time our young men and women go in to battle, God is there to comfort them. We have chaplains in our military to counsel people because we recognize that during times of battle and war, people need spiritual guidance, not to establish a religion, but to understand that we have a Creator who has blessed this country and that we need His guidance.

In conclusion, Madam President, I believe this country needs to reestablish that we are one nation under God.

Madam President, you experienced in New York City on September 11. We were all there and the rest of the people in the United States turn to God for guidance. We saw posters everywhere: “One nation under God,” “Under God, we stand, under God.”

This country recognizes its history, and because we have been established under God, and remain under God, we have been blessed. If we abandon that now and allow the courts to abandon that, I believe this country will be in trouble. We simply cannot allow that to happen.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I wanted to come to the floor to share with our colleagues my intent to bring a resolution to the floor this afternoon expressing our strong disagreement with the decision the Senator from Nevada has just addressed.

I will now proceed with my unanimous consent request to bring the resolution to the floor and to have a rollcall vote and then to allow Senators to express themselves once the vote has been cast. Just as soon as we can get agreement to set the time—I would like to do it within the next 15 or 20 minutes, if we can reach an agreement with the managers of the bill.

Madam President, I have not had the opportunity to hear all of what the Senator from Nevada said, but this decision is nuts. We ought to recognize that there are those who differ with the overwhelming sentiment expressed by Americans of all stripes, of all regions of the country, young and old.

We added the language, “under God” in 1954. Then-President Dwight Eisenhower said:

In this way, we are reaffirming the transcendence of religious faith in America’s heritage and future; in this way, we shall constantly strengthen those spiritual weapons which forever will be our country’s most powerful resource in peace and war.

I agree with President Eisenhower. I agree with the overwhelming number of people who have already expressed themselves in the hours since this decision.

The resolution we are propounding this afternoon really will state two things: First, our strong disagreement with the decision; and, second, it will authorize the counsel of the Senator to intervene on behalf of the Senate in the Supreme Court when the case comes before the Court. This is not unprecedented; we have done it before.

I hope overwhelming support will be demonstrated on both sides of the aisle. I hope we can do this quickly. I think we need to send a clear message that the Congress disagrees, the President is going to intervene, the Congress is going to do all it can to live up to the expectations of the American people.

We have been drawn together to face a tremendous tragedy in the last 9 months. In part, that healing process has come by our belief in the Supreme Being and our belief in the faith that comes in the strength that we draw from our faith.

I hope our colleagues will support the resolution. I hope we can address it within the next few minutes. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I congratulate our distinguished leader, and the Republican leader will soon come to the floor and join him on this matter. We had a marvelous little debate here. The distinguished Senator from Connecticut, the distinguished Senator from Florida, my distinguished colleague from Nevada, and I suggested that this body take action and take it fast. And here we are, ready to act.

I respectfully and humbly ask that my name be added as a cosponsor because my colleagues backed me up, and my colleague from Florida, wherever they might be on the roster, and those rallying to the cause.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I simply wish to respond to the Senator from Virginia and thank him for his kind words and tell him I will be happy to add his name as a cosponsor to the resolution.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I have listened with some interest to what has been discussed on the floor with respect to the Ninth Circuit Court opinion. I have great respect for courts in this country, but it raises the question: Is there one ounce of common sense left when you hear a decision announced today that suggests that the Pledge of Allegiance is in contravention to the principles of the Constitution of the United States?

I do not understand for a moment how a majority of that court could have made this ruling. Some people need their collective heads examined when we hear opinions like this.

We had a celebration on the 200th birthday of the writing of the Constitution in that room in Philadelphia. Fifty-five people went back to that celebration. I was selected to be 1 of 55. Two hundred years before, 55 white men were in that room in the hot summer of Philadelphia, and they wrote the Constitution. Two hundred years later, 55 of us went back—men, women, minorities—and we had a ceremony and a celebration of the 200th birthday of the writing of that wonderful document.

As my colleague from West Virginia, I think the President of the Supreme Court, knows, in that room sits the chair where George Washington sat as he presided over the Constitutional Convention, and Ben Franklin sat on one side, and Mason, and Madison. They debated during that summer the provisions of a constitution for this country.

I sat in that room that day and thought to myself: What a remarkable thing it was for a man from a town of 300 people in a farming community in southwestern North Dakota to be able to sit in that room and celebrate with 54 of my colleagues the 200th birthday of the writing of the Constitution.

I do not know the Constitution as my colleague, Senator Byrd, does. I have read it and studied it as best I can, but I guarantee you, there is not any way to creatively read that document that allows a court to say that somehow the Pledge of Allegiance abridges that document called the U.S. Constitution.

As my colleague said, that is just plain nuts. I do not for the life of me understand where common sense has gone. Is there not a shred of common sense left when we hear these kinds of decisions coming out of a court, in this case the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals?

I am very pleased my colleague from South Dakota, the majority leader, will bring a resolution to the floor. I will ask to be a cosponsor and to speak on that resolution. We ought to not waste a minute in saying to that court, in responding to that opinion that says: No; absolutely not; that this Constitution was in the Pledge of Allegiance and read what it says and understand what it says.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. Byrd. Madam President, it would be my suggestion that this judge go back and read the Declaration of Independence. I wonder if he can hold that Declaration to be unconstitutional—the Declaration of Independence.

This is what it says:

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature’s God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

Let that judge read further. “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed,—by whom?—‘by their Creator.’ It is in the Declaration of Independence, ‘by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.’”

Let that same judge go a little further and read in this same Declaration of Independence, in case he has not read it lately, and let him declare it unconstitutional, the reference to “the Supreme Judge of the World.” Who is this “Supreme Judge of the World?” Certainly, not some atheist. Nor is it a judge who sits on the Ninth Circuit and whose name is Goodwin.

The final words of the Declaration state, “with a firm Reliance on the Protection of divine Providence.” Let atheists find something to bring before that judge in this Declaration of Independence. Let that atheist lawyer do that. Let that judge sit in his black robe and address the court and the Constitution and the people of the United States as to whether or not the words I have quoted from the Declaration of Independence are unconstitutional.

Here are these words printed in the Declaration of Independence, “with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence. That judge should stand up, and I say, or that atheist lawyer, and I say, or that judge, and I say, that judge, and I say, ‘We will not stand for that in this Senate, while I am a Mem-er of it, for any promotion. He will be remembered. Let him declare this Declaration of Independence unconstitutional. Do the words I have quoted offend the Constitution? I am the only Member of Congress today, bar none, in either body, who was a Member of the House on June 7, 1954, when the words ‘under God’ were included in the Pledge of Allegiance. Coincidently, or, on that same day, June 7, one year later, 1955, the House of Representatives voted to inscribe the words ‘in God we trust’ on the currency and coin of the United States. Some of the coins already bore the inscription, but on that date, June 7, 1955, the House of Representatives, of which I was a member, voted to make that the national motto and to have it inscribed on the currency and the coin. Let that judge come before this Senate while I am a Member, and he will be blackballed—if Senators know what ‘blackballed’ means—fast.

I say the sooner we can pass a resolution—and I want my name to be third because I am the only Member of Congress—let him who would challenge that stand—in either body today who was in Congress on the day we voted to include the words ‘under God’ in the Pledge of Allegiance. That same judge ought to go back and read the Mayflower Compact.

Mr. Reid. Will the Senator yield for a unanimous consent request?

Mr. Byrd. Yes. Mr. Reid. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that when the resolution is presented, Senator Byrd’s name appear third following the two leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Byrd. Madam President, I thank the distinguished Democratic whip.

That is all I have to say for now. I hope the Senate will waste no time in throwing this back in the face of this stand judge.

Think of the history of this country, the men and the women who have shed their blood for this country. The men who founded this country, who wrote the Constitution in Philadelphia, George Washington, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin—what would they say if they were living today?

A country that was founded by men and women who believed in a higher power—we do not all have to be Baptistians. But the people by and large who founded this country, who hewed the forests, who dredged the rivers, who built the bridges and who created a country from sea to shining sea believed in a higher power.

What is this country coming to? What is it coming to? ‘Blessed is the Nation whose God is the Lord.’ He can be your Lord. He can be mine. What are we going to do about God’s name? Let them put me in jail. I will read that Bible right here on this desk. I have done it before. I will do it again. I have recited the pledge and so has every other Member of this body time and time again. Come, Judge Goodwin, in the Ninth Circuit, put us in jail.

I say the people of America are not going to stand for this. I, for one, am not going to stand for this country’s being ruled by a bunch of atheists. If they do not like it, let them leave. They do not have to worship my God, but I will worship my God and no athe-ist and no court is going to tell me I cannot do so whether at a school commencement or anywhere else. I say let's let the people speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from West Virginia, the distinguished Member of this body, I have had the good fortune that two of my sons have been law clerks for the chief judge of the Ninth Circuit. In fact, one of my sons was his administrative assistant. He was a judge from Nevada, served in the very prestigious Ninth Circuit. I have had calls from my sons today. They are embarrassed about what has taken place in that Ninth Circuit. They said: Dad, don't worry about it because the court will meet en banc and reverse it.

These are the two most liberal members of the court. They come up at random. It was by chance Goodwin and Reinhardt were thrown together, but they are mischief-makers. They have been encouraged to embarrass every lawyer in America, every judge in America except those two, and the people of this country are repulsed.

I have great fear that court will reverse. I hope they sit en banc. If they do not, I applaud the majority leader, whom I now understand has the support of the Republican leader, to move forward expeditiously tonight to let the world know the Senate is not going to stand idly by while these people—I had a little dialogue with Senator LIEBERMAN on the floor today, with his experience as attorney general, being the legal scholar that I believe he is, said without question that what they did was illogical.

I agree with what the Senator from West Virginia said—it is stupid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, this is, indeed, a shocking culmination of a decade-long trend of liberal activist courts that have been misreading the first amendment of the Constitution. The first amendment protects the free exercise of religion. That is what it says. It says Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of a religion nor prohibiting the free exercise thereof. There is no word in the Constitution, the document ratified by the people of the United States, about a wall. There is nothing in the Constitution that says we cannot have any reference in public life in America to a higher being.

As the Senator from West Virginia has eloquently stated, our founding documents make multiple references to God.

Indeed, the Declaration says we are created with certain inalienable rights. We did not create ourselves but were, indeed, created by a higher being. That is a strong part of our belief as a nation.

Our courts have been on the wrong track for a long time. They have consistently gotten this thing wrong. Not one does not like the Declaration of Independence, if someone does not like the Constitution, they do not have to read them. If someone does not believe in the Pledge, they do not have to recite it. That is clear constitutional law.

This is a big mistake by the court. I hope this Senate will take action to express the views of the people of the United States. I hope we will not hear talk that this is something that will be dismissed. It is a serious, pernicious, and dangerous trend and a trend in America by the courts to eliminate from public life any reference to a higher being and anybody who reads the newspapers or reads court opinions knows that is true.

The Ninth Circuit is the worst. One year 27 out of 28 cases were reversed. They have consistently been reversed more than any other circuit in America.

The New York Times, in writing about the Ninth Circuit, says a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States considers the Ninth Circuit to be a rogue circuit.

I have been the most outspoken Member of this Senate in the years I have been here, over 5 years, in expressing my concern about some of these trends in the court, particularly in the Ninth Circuit. I have talked about the issues in the Ninth Circuit. President Clinton and I encourage President Bush to send nominees to that circuit who will bring it back into the mainstream of American law.

I hope on full rehearing en banc, the court will reverse the opinion. I am not absolutely sure it will, because there are others on that court I have no doubt will join in this opinion. Then it will go to the Supreme Court of the United States. They are going to have to wrestle with this a little bit more. They have not yet fully thought through their position on the free expression of religious faith in American life.

It is a difficult thing. We have to cherish our freedom of religion, our freedom to practice religion, as well as our freedom not to have someone coerce any American into any religious belief. That is so much a part of our life that so much distinguished America from nations that want to have a government founded strictly on their view of faith. That is unhealthy.

I hope we can adopt an expression in this Senate of our disapproval of this decision, but, at the same time, we do not need to treat it lightly. We need to go back to the grassroots, the initial heritage of faith in America. We need to look at some of these decisions of the court that have gone beyond prohibiting the establishment of a religion, to prohibiting any expression of religious faith at all.

I remember Judge Griffin Bell, a great judge on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, President Carter's Attorney General. He was speaking to an Alabama Bar Association meeting when President Reagan was in office, not long after he left as Attorney General. The bar members asked: Judge Bell, what do you think about this litmus test that President Reagan is supposed to be applying to judges? I will never forget, he walked up to the microphone and said: We need a litmus test for judges. We don’t need anybody on the Supreme Court who does not believe in prayer at football games.

That is where we are. We have the courts of the United States prepared to send in the 82nd Airborne to some high school that allows a voluntary prayer to be said before the ball game starts—an expression that there is something more important than who is the biggest, meanest, and toughest out on the football field.

I think we have a serious problem with the understanding of the first amendment. I am glad this body is taking it seriously, we can do something about it, but it is going to take a long time effort.

I yield the floor.

EXPRESSION OF SUPPORT FOR THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I indicated a few minutes ago that it was our intention, after consultation with the Republican leader and our colleagues, to offer a resolution immediately on the matter of the Ninth Circuit Court decision. That is our intention at this point.

I will propose a unanimous consent request that allows us to go to a vote. I know a number of other Senators wish to be heard, but I think it would be appropriate for scheduling purposes for us to have the vote and then accommodate those who wish to be heard. We will certainly allow the floor to be available for purposes of additional comment by our colleagues.

Let me ask Senators to vote from their desks on this particular vote. I think it would be appropriate, given the strength of feeling we have on the issue, that we draw a distinction between this and other votes. I ask Senators to vote from their desks.

I also note as we have already announced, our cloakrooms, every Senator will be listed as a co-sponsor unless they ask to be removed from that list. So Senators will automatically be listed as a co-sponsor. We have had so many requests on both sides of the aisle, it was our view it would be appropriate for us to do that.

I also ask unanimous consent that the resolution be submitted and stated for the record, prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution at the desk earlier introduced by myself and Senator LOTT regarding the Pledge of Allegiance, that no amendments or motions be in order, the Senate immediately vote on passage of the resolution, that any statements thereon appear in the RECORD as though read.

Mr. President, I object only for parliamentary inquiry, is it the majority leader’s intent to put the vote immediately?

If I could, under my reservation, then I will make a motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I certainly support this effort. I have no intent at all of objecting, I am very pleased the Senate is going to act so quickly on this matter.

Senator DASCHLE and I have been talking about it the last few minutes. We have developed what I think is very good language to address this outrageous decision by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Just as the Supreme Court has recognized that elected officials may invoke God’s blessing on their work as we do here every day and as the House Chamber they have over the Speaker’s chair, “In God We Trust,” for our children to be allowed to invoke God’s blessing on our country in the Pledge of Allegiance is certainly something we want to do.

If there is ever a time when we need this additional blessing, perhaps it is now more than ever in our lifetimes. I have seen that and felt that as I have gone around, not only my own State but this country. So I think it is essential the Senate speak immediately in clarification. I hope the Ninth Circuit will have an en banc panel that will reverse this decision; failing that, the Supreme Court will act on it expeditiously.

In our resolved clause, we state that we disapprove of the decision by the Ninth Circuit and that we authorize and instruct the Senate legal counsel to seek to intervene in the case to defend the constitutionality of the Pledge of Allegiance.

Be it resolved, the Senate should consider a recodification of the language that was passed in 1954. There was no uncertainty, or ambiguity about what was done in 1954. The Congress, in fact the American people, spoke through their Congress. We should make it clear.

I commend you, Senator DASCHLE, for moving this matter forward aggressively. For the Senate to have this vote is absolutely the right thing to do. I know the American people agree with that decision.

I withdraw my reservation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. I compliment the Senator on his remarks. I appreciate very much his cooperation in the last couple of hours.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the resolution.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 292) expressing support for the Pledge of Allegiance.

Whereas, this country was founded on religious freedom by founders, many of whom were deeply religious;

Whereas, the First Amendment to the Constitution embodies principles intended to guarantee freedom of religion both through the free exercise thereof and by prohibiting the government establishing a religion;

Whereas, the Pledge of Allegiance was written by Francis Bellamy, a Baptist Minister, and first published in the September 8, 1892, issue of the Youth’s Companion;

Whereas, Congress in 1954 added the words “under God” to the Pledge of Allegiance;

Whereas, the Pledge of Allegiance has for almost 50 years included references to the U.S. flag, the country, to our country having been established as a union “under God” and to this country being dedicated to securing “liberty and justice for all”;

Whereas, the Congress in 1954 believed it as acting constitutionally when it revised the Pledge of Allegiance;

Whereas, in accordance with decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court, public school students cannot be forced to recite the Pledge of Allegiance without violating their First Amendment rights;

Whereas, the Congress expects that the U.S. of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit will re-hear the case of Newdow v. U.S. Congress, en banc;

Resolved, That the Senate strongly disapproves of the ninth circuit decision in Newdow v. U.S. Congress, and that the Senate hereby votes to support the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

Mr. DASCHLE. Again, I ask Senators to vote from their desks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) would vote nay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 99, nays 0, as follows:

I yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, over the weekend I had the experience and the pleasure of narrating Aaron Copeland's "Lincoln Portrait" in a presentation by an orchestra back home in Utah. I had not done that before.

Aaron Copeland took some of Abraham Lincoln's most stirring words and accompanied them with music, and it is a great opportunity for those of us who don't have as much musical ability as some others to participate in that kind of a presentation.

I was interested that one of the things in the "Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copeland is a quotation from the Gettysburg Address, when Abraham Lincoln prophesied that this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people and by the people and for the people shall not perish from the Earth. That is the right thing to do. I am very pleased we were able to say it as strongly as we have on a bipartisan basis that we have today.

Senator plans on speaking, I have no desire to limit them, but I would like to get an idea.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Not very long for me.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Five minutes.

Mr. BURNS. If it is 5 minutes each, that is fine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise as a Senator from California, a member of the Judiciary Committee, and one who has been trying to hold together the Ninth Circuit. I find this decision, at best, very embarrassing.

I am a member of the Judiciary Committee, and the dissenting author from California is recognized.

Do you want to take a look at the dollar bill? On the back of it is the symbol of this country, the eagle, and, of course, the eternal eye. This is a value-based society, and to say those who are sheltered from being removed from office, unless the crime is really something, but just for an opinion such as this, I find that unbelievable.

We are a nation founded upon the acknowledgement of a Creator. It has been that way since day one, or even when the flame of freedom was ignited in the mind of a man for the first time. Men and women have died, given their lives, on the field of battle to protect it, just as they have another symbol of this country called our flag.

It doesn’t make a lot of sense. Of course, there are a lot of things that do not make sense in this world. I always refer to this place as 17 square miles of logic-free environment. Nonetheless, whenever you jump across the street, we find another logic that I fail to understand. So I will stand here and tell America that those values—this being one of them—that those men and women did not die in vain. And it did not take very long for this body, that represents constituencies across the width and breath of our country, to react to it. That has to tell you something about who we are and what we are and how we got here.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I wish to add my voice to all of those who have risen in the last several hours to express my feelings and the feelings of people from Louisiana about this unfortunate ruling.

It is clear to most of us at least that we believe God is infallible, but clearly these judges are not. This case and this decision are very disappointing to those who have served and fought for our country. This Nation has caused a great deal of anxiety, anguish, disappointment, and anger.

We remember all too well the Dred Scott decision that relegalized African Americans to a status as property, and the Plessy v. Ferguson decision that disgracefully upheld the Jim Crow laws of this Nation. In these cases the American judiciary unfortunately demonstrated its ability to be just plain wrong; and today is another one of those occasions.

A wonderful aspect, however, about our democracy is that when we make mistakes, those mistakes can be corrected, and there are a variety of ways that can happen today.

I thank Senator Daschle, our leader, and Senator Lott for so quickly assembling a resolution in which we all have joined as coauthors stating our position in the Senate, but I believe the overwhelming views of the American people. The force of that resolution will have a very positive impact.

I also understand that the entire Circuit Court will hear this case en banc, and I am almost certain, or at least very hopeful, that this decision will be reversed and this wrong righted.

There have been many beautiful things read into the Record that remind us of our heritage, that remind us of why this country is so great, is so wonderful, is so unique, and so special; from the eloquent remarks of the Senator from West Virginia to the Senators who have recently spoken.

I thought it might be appropriate at this time to read into the Record for this occasion a wonderful quote from Abraham Lincoln—one of our greatest Presidents, if not our greatest on what he had to say about our relationship to God and our Creator as a nation and as a collective people. It was on the occasion of the first President’s resolution to set aside at least 1 day for a national day of prayer and fasting. This was established many years ago in 1863.

In this statement, Abraham Lincoln called for our Nation to come together in prayer and to address this resolution to God and to acknowledge a Supreme Being and our Creator. He said:

We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of Heaven. We have been preserved, these many years, in peace and prosperity. We have grown in numbers, wealth and power, as no other nation has ever grown. But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten that gracious hand which preserved us in peace, and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us; and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made us.

It behooves us then, to humble ourselves before the offended Power, to confess our national sins, and to pray for clemency and forgiveness.

This is just one of the many writings—hundreds—by Presidents, Senators, Congressmen, Governors, council members, mayors, elected officials, leaders of this great country that we call America acknowledging that we as a nation stand under God, acknowledging His presence, although we worship Him in different ways, we may call Him by different names, and we strongly support the rights of those in our society to not acknowledge His presence. But we collectively as a nation will in no way back down from acknowledging His presence and His divine creation.

Madam President, I wanted to submit my thoughts on this issue for the must understand that this country, in the very beginning, starting with the Virginia Company, which was a commercial venture—it was still a crown colony, as were all the colonies, and as such it was associated with the Church of England. The Church. People were compelled to pay taxes to that church whether they wanted to go to that church or not.

The statute of religious freedom was a novel idea. It was a radical idea because what you had in the 1700s and before then were monarchies, theocracies in effect. The monarchs were ruling because of bloodlines not because of merit or popular will. They also had a single church and that church was given that exclusive monopoly in that they would then say that those monarchies were given divine guidance and divine right. In all of these monarchies, the idea that people could believe as they saw fit and not be compelled to join a church or be compelled to support a church was a very radical idea and upsetting the tyrannical monarchs because that upset their whole justification for being in power in the first place.

The Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom took 7 years to pass in the Virginia General Assembly. Good ideas still sometimes take a long time. Mr. Jefferson was the Minister to France when James Madison finally got this Statute through the Virginia General Assembly.

The Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom states very clearly, in article I, section 16, of the Virginia Constitution, “That religion, or the duty which we owe to our Creator and the manner of discharging such duty, are free exercises, and cannot be enforced by law.”

Many of us are outraged to learn today that a divided three-judge panel of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals believed it knew better than the properly exercised wisdom of the people and their duly elected representatives in striking down the Pledge of Allegiance and stating that the Pledge of Allegiance is unconstitutional. These judges ignored the very basis of our democracy and representative Government. They have ignored, right before Independence Day, the spirit of our country that Mr. Jefferson, in the Declaration of Independence, proclaimed to the British monarchy, which had an established religion, that our rights are God-given rights.

He stated in the Declaration of Independence that we are endowed by our Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.” All of this came from the Virginia Declaration of Rights which expressed the same sentiments.

Let’s understand, if these judges do not understand, with their judicial activist decisions such as this, the judges are to interpret the laws, they are not to write the laws. The laws on the Pledge of Allegiance and the laws for the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in our schools are passed by State legislatures all across our country. They are reflecting the will, the desire, and the value of the people in their States and in their communities.

Let’s also understand that these activist judges, like the two involved in this majority decision of the Ninth Circuit, often cite the first 10 words of the Establishment Clause, which says:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion . . ."

But they too often forget the six words that follow: or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

To understand the history of religious freedom in this country, one where, is that it allows, in accordance with the founding documents of our Nation, the ability of the majority to express their values and their wisdom. If somebody somehow does not want to recite it, they are not compelled to do so.

So the Establishment Clause, as well as our Bill of Rights, and our Declaration of Independence, are all modeled on the Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, and the Virginia Declaration of Rights.

The Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom, as drafted by Mr. Jefferson and then carried forward by James Madison and adopted in 1786, counsels against the impious presumption of legislatures and rulers, civil as well as ecclesiastical, who being themselves fallible and uninspired men who have assumed dominion over the faith of others.

The Virginia Declaration of Rights holds that all men are equally entitled to these exercises according to the dictates of their conscience. Minimal reference is made to a non-denominational creator or natural rights or God and that is consistent with the values and the desires of the people. This is in the laws we are, fortunately, in this regard, in step with our society and the views of the people, as they have been throughout our history.

It is my hope, and it is not without basis, that this decision of the Ninth Circuit will be handily reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

I remind the Senate that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has by far the most dismal reversal rate in the Supreme Court of any court of appeals in our land. In recent years, the reversal rate has hovered around 80 percent compared to about 50 percent for the next highest circuit, which is the Eighth Circuit. In one recent session of the Supreme Court, astonishing 28 out of 29 decisions of the Ninth Circuit Court were overturned. That is 97 percent. What ruling from the Ninth Circuit will come next? Are they going to white out passages of the Declaration of Independence? Will it be improper to recite on public grounds the Declaration of Independence because it refers to our Creator giving us unalienable rights? Will the Ninth Circuit order currency and our coinage to knock out the insidious message of “In God We Trust”? Will they insist that all coins have to be destroyed and melted down? Will they imprison school choirs and have the school directors imprisoned because the children are singing “God Bless America”? Who knows what is next out of the Ninth Circuit.

At some point, though, a proper respect for the rights of the people, their desires, and also common sense and reason must be guiding our courts, especially this particular circuit court, and today’s activist, offensive decision.

Today’s action by the Ninth Circuit is hit-and-run jurisprudence. It is smug judicial activism at its rankest. It is outrageously out-of-touch with the desires and values of the American people. It is striking down the basic concept that laws made by Congress or by State legislatures, unless they are clearly unconstitutional, ought to be respected.

I am proud today, only days before the 230th anniversary of our Nation’s birth, of our Declaration of Independence, where we ceded from the monarchy of Britain, that we are going to stand for what is right. We are going to stand for the flag and the principles of freedom and justice and with our Pledge of Allegiance.

I thank my colleagues for their united, bipartisan stand for what is right about America and what is right for our schools and our youngsters, and that is stating the Pledge of Allegiance to our flag.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I rise today to discuss this recent Federal court of appeals ruling on the Pledge of Allegiance and to express with my colleagues the universal outrage of the court’s ruling today, and the delight with how we have joined together so quickly, and I express this on behalf of all Americans that we believe, as the Senate Chamber, “In God We Trust.”

We believe that this is a nation under God. We believe in what is placed on the mantel above the Senate Chamber, “In God We Trust.” Our very Constitution itself signs off using the word, “Lord.”

Can we declare the Constitution unconstitutional? Our Declaration of Independence refers to God multiple times including saying that our certain unalienable rights are endowed by our Creator.

George Washington’s Farewell Address, which is read in the House and Senate each year, refers to God and faith and religion. Abraham Lincoln’s Gettysburg Address uses the word “God,” proclaiming that this Nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom. Booker T. Washington repeatedly referred to God when speaking. Even Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Sojourner Truth referred to God in their writings and speeches. Will it now be unconstitutional to teach American history to our children, to require them to read some of the words of the great men and women of our Nation because they mention God? Will those have been left out from all of the speeches of Lincoln and Washington and Martin Luther King? Will it have to be taken out of the Declaration of Independence? According to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, this could indeed be so. After all, if saying the Pledge of Allegiance violates the establishment clause of our Constitution, how can these others not do so as well?

What I think we are in a real problem here—which has the motto “In God We Trust” on it, or the fact that every day we open Congress with a prayer, maintain full-time Chaplains on each side of the Capitol Building, and in the very Chamber in which we sit, which says “In God We Trust.” Do we have to get the putty out and fill them in?

Consider the very founding of our Nation. At that time, the brave men and women trusted in God and believed we owed our success to him. In fact, the first act of the first Continental Congress was a public prayer. As Sam Adams noted then in support of the idea, he was no bigot and could hear a prayer from any gentleman of piety or virtue, time was a friend of his country. And so on September 7, 1774, the first official prayer before the Continental Congress took place when an Episcopal clergyman read aloud Psalm 35 from the Book of Common Prayer—a now unconstitutional act that he performed in 1774, the first Continental Congress. In 1779, the Congress urged the Nation “humbly to approach the throne of almighty God,” to ask “that he would establish the independence of these United States upon the basis of religion and virtue.”

Just 2 years later, Congress passed “The Congressional Decree of 1781”:

Whereas, it hath pleased Almighty God, the father of mercies, remarkably to assist and support the United States of America in their important struggle for liberty, against the long continued efforts of a powerful nation: it is meet and proper to observe and thankfully acknowledge the interpositions of his Providence in their behalf. Through the whole of the context, from its first rise to the consummation of Divine Providence, may be clearly perceived in many signal instances, of which we mention but a few.

An unconstitutional act? The founders also inscribed on the seal of our nation the Latin phrase, “Annuit Coeptis”—translated as “God favors our undertakings.”

This belief infused those courageous risk-takers then when they faced an unimaginable and seemingly insurmountable undertaking—and it inspires many of us today, especially as we face an unimaginable and seemingly insurmountable undertaking in challenging terrorists around the world.

Indeed, according to the 9th Circuit, it would be likely to teach children about President Bush’s address to Congress following the terrorist attacks.

That’s not just sad, it is an injustice to our children, our nation and our government. It cries out for logic and common sense—but clearly this Court has neither. Although I am not surprised—it turns out that in recent years, more than 80 percent of the rulings by the 9th Circuit have been overturned. Just a few years ago the 9th managed to compile an 1-28 record at the Supreme Court—that is, the Supreme Court reviewed 29 cases from the 9th Circuit Court and reversed a stunning 28 of them.

Although I must admit that I can’t just criticize the 9th Circuit, as interestingly enough, we can make an accurate and strong argument that the Establishment Clause is clearly misinterpreted by the entire legal system today. The concept of a “wall of separation” is actually from a letter Thomas Jefferson wrote in 1802 that was completely unnoticed until a mistaken transcription of the original letter was written into Supreme Court in 1879 in Reynolds v. United States. The focus in 1879 was not on “separation” but on the term “legislative powers”—yet the transcriber had written that wrong; The original, in Jefferson’s neat handwriting said “legislative interference.” This metaphor again remained unused and virtually unknown until Justice Black drew it from obscurity in 1947—again using the erroneous translation.

It is clear that the Bibles on our desks, perhaps even from the beginning, needs common sense, reasonable judges—judges who will defend our principles, ideals and way of life. Judges who understand the risks and sacrifices made by those who founded our Nation and fought for its principles—and by those who continue to do so today.

It is why today I thank Frank Bellamy, who wrote this beautiful poem that our Pledge was based upon in 1892 when he lived in my home state of Kansas in the small town of Cherryvale. And why I thank those sincere leaders who in 1954 sought to reaffirm, as the Declaration of Independence first declared, our “firm reliance on the Providence of Divine power.”

On a side note, Madam President, we have people every day who seek to emulate the model after the United States, thankfully. It is a great country, as is the country for so much freedom for people around the world, people such as Mi-Hwa Rhyu and Sol-Hee Rhyu, a mother and daughter captured by police in Asia today, North Korean refugees seeking to flee North Korea and get to someplace like the United States, to be free and be able to live in a nation that honors God. They are now being detained and probably sent back to a country that does not honor God—North Korea—that does not believe, to suffer an ill fate there. Yet people yearn to be free, to come into a place that says, “In God we trust.” And they are willing to risk their lives to come into a place such as this. Countries seek to emulate our great land.

Why, why, why will we seek to remove the foundation of all those basic beliefs that we have? I tell our schoolchildren not only is it wrong but unconstitutional to say “under God” or “In God.”

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the
We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

We, the people, ordain and establish the Constitution of the United States. I think it is important for us to note that this is not a total surprise, let me say, because we have had a number of decisions by courts in America that have lost sight of the balance contained in the first amendment and have rendered opinions that go beyond the intent of the Framers of the Constitution.

When we say go beyond the intent of the Framers, that is really not quite strong enough. The Constitution starts off saying: We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

I remember Hudding Carter, President Carter's aide, was on “Meet The Press.” He used to be on there regularly. One time he said: We liberals have gotten to the point where we want the courts to do for us what we will never win at the ballot box.

I think that touched a nerve, really. The way to erode the power of the Constitution to protect our liberties is to start playing around with the meaning of words, just redefining those words, and then they come to mean whatever a judge says they do. That is a particularly dangerous thing because, you see, judges are not accountable. Federal judges are not accountable to the public. They are given a lifetime appointment.

I think from a point of view of a democracy, our judges must show self-restraint. That is what President Bush has talked about in his judicial nominees—finding judges who follow the law, for the layman. Not make up law, not expand law, not make it say what they think the American people want it to say today—even though they may be correct. They may not be correct. They do not have the power to do that.

It is an antidemocratic act when an unelected, lifetime-appointed judge simply takes a political view and imposes that through the reinterpretation of words.

We, the people, ordain and establish this Constitution—the one that we have, not one somebody would like it to be, not one that they wish it would be, but the one that we ordained, passed, and ratified by the people of the United States.

Over the years, we have amended that Constitution, as we have chosen to do so, from time to time. That is the way it has to be amended. What the Constitution does not give is the power to judges to amend the Constitution.

Some judges say: We will just redefine the Constitution. We are just matching it up with modern, enlightened standards. They may have meant that back then, but we want to interpret it today in the light of the standards and values that we have.

And whose standards and values are they? It is the standards and values of the judge. I was very troubled about this recent ruling, the way it occurred, involving the death penalty law with regard to retarded individuals. The Court seemed to say that they had decided, somehow, that the American people had evolved in their thinking and, therefore, the laws their legislatures had passed were not valid anymore; that they could not execute people who were retarded.

However you feel about that, that is a dangerous philosophy, but it is a philosophy afoot in America today. It is a philosophy, I think, that is dangerous to liberty. If you care about the Constitution, really respect the Constitution, as Professor Van Alstyne, of Duke University, one time said: If you respect the document, you will enforce it, the good parts and the bad parts. You will enforce the parts you do not agree with, if you love, respect, and revere the Constitution.

The way to erode the power of the Constitution to protect our liberties is to start playing around with the meaning of words, just redefining those words, and then they come to mean whatever a judge says they do. That is a particularly dangerous thing because, you see, judges are not accountable. Federal judges are not accountable to the public. They are given a lifetime appointment.

The one thing we have is a moment in time to review their record, to make sure they are committed to follow the Constitution. We vote on them in the Senate, they are confirmed or not, and they go on to serve, and then they are there forever.

I think from a point of view of a democracy, our judges must show self-restraint. That is what President Bush has talked about in his judicial nominees—finding judges who follow the law, for the layman. Not make up law, not expand law, not make it say what they think the American people want it to say today—even though they may be correct. They may not be correct. Another interesting phenomenon is that the Supreme Court unanimously agrees—

That means the U.S. Supreme Court, across the political spectrum, unanimously agrees that the Ninth Circuit was wrong 17 times during the 1996-1997 term. This is a fairly remarkable finding. Considering all of the circuits combined logged in with only 20 unanimous votes, 7 of which were affirmative.

We have liberals and conservatives on the U.S. Supreme Court, and 13 of these cases were unanimous reversals of the Ninth Circuit.

This article goes on to say that only 13 unanimous reversals were found throughout the rest of the United States but 17 in the Ninth Circuit.

So that is the problem for us. We need to be concerned about it.

I opposed two judges I sincerely believed were good people but who clearly—I had concluded clearly—had activist tendencies. And I was particularly concerned when President Clinton pushed those nominees because they were going to this circuit that has been out of step.

We have to understand why we need to confirm judges who will consistently follow the law, whether they like it or not. That is what President Bush campaigned on; that is what he promised to do. That is what he has been submitting—men and women of the highest possible integrity, and high legal ability. These men and women are clear in their record as being people who just follow the law, whether they like it or not. That is what we expect out of a judge. It is important or it undermines democracy otherwise.

I want to mention that.

I also want to discuss just briefly the trouble we are having throughout the court system of America. The U.S. Supreme Court is not blameless in this issue. Somehow they have got it in their heads that the expression of religious faith in a public activity violates the Constitution. We have problems with valedictorians making speeches out of their own hearts. They cannot say certain things because we have gotten to that point, as I mentioned earlier.

That was criticized by Judge Griffin Bell, former Attorney of the United States under President Carter. Judge Bell said we ought to have a litmus test. Nobody ought to serve on the Court who doesn’t believe in prayer at football games.

How did we get to this point? How did we get to the point that a voluntary prayer you don’t have to bow your head. There is no requirement that anybody has to do anything before football games. We take a minute, and somebody says a little prayer that acknowledges something more important than our third place football player on the field. I don’t think there is anything wrong with that. I don’t believe that violates anybody’s right.
The Supreme Court said some things over the years. In recent years—during the last 50 or 70 years—they have been inconsistent about it. I think that has given some circuits, like the Ninth Circuit, and some judges the opportunity to perhaps run with some liberty to go further and nourish religious faith. Therefore, the Supreme Court wants them to go. But the Supreme Court has some fault here. We have had a long period of these kinds of opinions that go beyond reason, in my view.

For example, in Lynch v. Donnelly, the U.S. Supreme Court recognized "an unbroken history of official acknowledgment by all three branches of government of the role of religion in American life from at least 1789."

And it adds, "Our history is replete with official references to the value and invocation of Divine guidance in the deliberation and pronouncements of the Founding Fathers and contemporary leaders."

We just have to be relaxed here, and be natural in understanding of what we mean by not establishing a religion.

We also do not need to forget the free exercise clause of the first amendment that we shall not be denied the free exercise of our religion. That is of equal value with nonestablishment of religion.

Other things are important. Engraved on the top of the Washington Monument are the words "Praise be to God.

I suppose the judges out there that rendered the opinion are going to have to take a chisel up there and go after it.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier: At that tomb are these words engraved: "Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God." Is somebody going to take the chisel to that?

Let me mention this final quote. It shows how, in the middle of this past century, we were not so far out of sync about what the first amendment really means.

Justice William O. Douglas, whom many would recognize as perhaps the most liberal member ever to serve on the Court—certainly one of the most, maybe, radical members of the Court; his background was quite unusual, but he was a brilliant man—he wrote many interesting opinions. This one, writing for the majority on the Court, in 1952, in Zorach v. Clauson, said this:

"The First Amendment . . . does not say that in every and all respects there should be a separation of Church and State. . . . Otherwise the state and religion would be aliens to each other—hostile, suspicious, and even unfriendly. . . . Prayers in our legislative halls; the pledge of allegiance; the Memorial Day exercises; the Pledge of Allegiance; in our public schools, that has been adopted, and in significant part adopted by the Supreme Court. So they have a problem now, as I see it. They are going to have to deal with this.

Say a school child cannot say a prayer, cannot express religious faith through a prayer that nobody has to listen to, but we can chisel on a wall of the Senate: "In God we trust."

They are saying we can have paid chaplains in this Senate and in the Armed Forces by the taxpayers of the United States, but nonmandatory, free expressions of faith all over the country they strike down in many different ways.

So I think they have a problem. I hope this Supreme Court will reevaluate what they have done. I hope they will go back to the 1960s and 1950s, and all the century and a half of the founding establishment clause that is being taught, that has been adopted, and in significant part adopted by the Supreme Court. So they have a problem now, as I see it. They are going to have to deal with this.

I hope that as we go through this whole debate, this resolution will have some impact. I doubt it will have much. But I hope in the course of responding to this opinion, which is, unfortunately, too consistent with some of the rulings of courts in America, that we will once again readdress ourselves to the great historic principles of America that venerate respect and further and nourish religious faith, not to eliminate it, but to eliminate the trouble of it, but, at the same time, not allow anybody to impose their will on somebody else.

I think we can reach that balance. I think we can show courtesy to one another. I hope we can be able to do so. If we do, America will be better off for it. It is time for us to get to the bottom of it, confront the issues honestly, and head on, and maybe we can make some improvements.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I am surprised and offended by the decision of the Appeals Court of the Ninth Circuit and hope that it will be promptly appealed and overturned. I believe that the Court has misinterpreted the intent of the Framers of the Constitution and has sought to undermine one of the bedrock values of our democracy, that we are indeed “one nation under God,” as embodied in the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag of the United States of America.

While our men and women in uniform are battling overseas and defending us here at home to preserve the freedom that we all cherish for our country and its children, we should never forget the blessings of Divine Providence that undergird our Nation. That includes the freedom to recite the pledge of allegiance in our Nation’s schools. I can only imagine how they will feel about this decision as they risk their lives for our values.

And the children of America, who share a bond with each other and with our Nation by reciting the pledge each day, what effect will a decision like this have on them? It will cause them to wonder about the ways in which our beliefs can be stretched, our heritage can be assaulted. It is the wrong decision, and it is an unfair decision, especially unfair to those who defend our Nation by reciting the pledge for including the phrase “One Nation, Under God,” is simply incredible.

Nobody’s forcing school children to recite the pledge. What we want, and what millions of parents want, is to simply give American children the chance to pledge allegiance to our Flag and to everything that it represents: patriotism, sacrifice, courage, justice, perseverance. The list goes on.

Now, more than ever, we should encourage our young people to learn and respect the patriotic values embodied in our Flag, the symbol of our country, and in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the judges who today declared the Pledge of Allegiance unconstitutional because of the words “under God” threw out reason and common sense and misread the Constitution. What we are left with is an absurd result.

The first amendment of the Constitution allows for not only freedom of religion, but freedom to exercise religion. It is ludicrous that we can’t say “under God.” It is a twisted logic, “In God We Trust” couldn’t be on coins, and we would have to edit the Declaration of Independence because it says that all men are “endowed by their Creator.”

When reason, common sense, and the correct interpretation of the Constitution return, this opinion will be reversed.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

AMENDMENT NO. 4138

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I would like to note that the Senate authorizes $1.0M for efforts designed to enhance the development of key enabling robotics technologies that will support Army, Navy and Air Force transformational programs. These efforts will leverage and coordinate capabilities that exist in the federal government, industry, academia and not-for-profit entities.

The Department of the Army has embarked on a new and ambitious program to develop a Future Combat System (FCS). Robotic and unmanned systems are expected to play a role in the platforms that are developed to support the Army's Objective Force initiative. In addition to FCS, the Air Force and the Navy are pursuing the development of unmanned aircraft and, in the case of the Navy, underwater unmanned platforms.

These funds are to be used to begin work and continue work on key robotics technologies that are identified by the Department of Defense and military services as essential to achieving transformational or leap ahead capabilities.

Currently, there is no single coordinated service-wide robotics initiative that will support military efforts to develop technologies that would begin the process of advanced product development, prototype development, product testing, demonstration, and validation projects for defense-related unmanned and/or robotic platforms.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I commend Ranking Member WARNER for his stewardship of the FY 2003 defense budget process in the Senate. We face many challenges to our national security in this day and age and I am thankful for his leadership. One of those emerging challenges we face is the terrorist threat to our food supply, specifically U.S. agriculture. On the federal, state, and local level, we need to establish procedures to detect, deter, and respond to large scale coordinated attacks against livestock and agricultural commodities. Toward that end, I ask the Senate to support my amendment to authorize, with an offset, research, development, test, and evaluation, for basic research for the chemical and biological defense program (PE 0601384BP) for research, analysis, and assessment of efforts to counter possible agroterrorist attacks. I have worked with universities with established expertise in the agricultural sciences can conduct studies and exercises that lead to better coordination between federal, state, and local authorities as they attempt to detect, deter, and respond to large scale coordinated attacks on U.S. agriculture. Most importantly, I envision universities assisting the Department of Defense in determining what role—if any—our military or defense agencies play in countering agroterrorism. I ask my colleagues to support my amendment. I thank the chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 4160

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Fiscal Year 2002 Defense Appropriations Act directed the State Department to study and report on the United States-People's Republic of China Science and Technology Agreement of 1979, and its protocols. The Agreement has been the basis for nearly a quarter century of science and technology transfers from the U.S. to China by twelve agencies of our government.

While the Cox Report of 1999 detailed how private companies in the United States have transferred technologies that have aided the development of China's military, up until now there has never been an assessment of the joint scientific activities between the governments of the U.S. and China. As the report on the science and technology agreement states, this report “is the result of an analysis of the agreement in nearly 25 years and is intended to provide a comprehensive review of the agreement, its protocols, and their impact on the Chinese economy, military, and defense industrial base.”

The report, which was developed in close consultation with the U.S.-China National Security Review Commission, has been delivered to Congress. It is in executive summary and voluminous annexes, and in classified form, which is available in S-407 in the Capitol for my colleagues to review.

There are several troubling aspects of this report. It makes clear, for example, that there is no coordinating mechanism to oversee the activities undertaken by the twelve agencies and dozens of offices and bureaus of our government that are carrying out the 1979 Agreement with China. In fact, the report, noting certain changes to the State Department bureaucracy in 1996, “there has been no mechanism within the U.S. Government since then to keep a systematic account of protocols under the U.S.-China Science and Technology Agreement.” Furthermore, this report was reportedly the first time that the intelligence community has had an opportunity to evaluate the range of programs that are underway. According to the State Department, we have spent an average of $5 million in taxpayer funds over each of the last five years to carry out this Agreement and its protocols, yet there is no single official in our government that oversees the web of technology exchange programs that have spun from it.

The report fails to fully analyze the impact of the science and technology exchange programs on the development of Chinese military power. While it argues that the development of China’s industrial and military power has been based primarily on its economic growth and its general efforts to acquire technology from the West, the State Department also states that “the degree to which cooperative science and technology activities conducted under the Agreement may have contributed to China’s economic and military growth is difficult to assess.” That amounts to, at the very least, a mixed message.

The report also notes that there is no regular reporting requirement to Congress on the range and types of programs that are carried out under the Science and Technology Agreement. This lack of reporting indicates that no one is paying very much attention to what activities we are undertaking with regard to the Agreement. Just who is minding the store? Is anyone in the Executive Branch truly concerned about these technology transfer programs? Or is this Agreement considered just another means to smooth over the inevitable hiccups in relations between our countries?

Finally, to no surprise, the State Department provided no recommendations for improving the monitoring of the Science and Technology Agreement. In essence, the report argues that whatever technology and scientific knowledge China might have gained through cooperative programs with the United States pales in comparison to the knowledge China has gained through other channels. The comparison to the knowledge China has with the United States pales in comparison to the knowledge China has gained through cooperative programs with other countries as well as other routes for technology transfer.

The State Department’s contention is akin to arguing that the Chinese are gorging so heartily on science and technology through universities, private industry, and other countries, that another few morsels from Uncle Sam cannot be very important. Ridiculous!

As a result of this analysis, the State Department’s principal recommendation is to “allow the Agreement to operate, as heretofore, without the encumbrance of any special monitoring mechanism, which we,” referring to the State Department, “do not believe is either necessary or desirable.” I do not think that it is going out on a limb to suggest that the U.S.-China Science and Technology Agreement has been failing and to soothe the same spots of our bilateral relations. As the State Department report says, “In April 2001, at the height of the EP-3 plane incident, the U.S. and China quietly renewed the Science and Technology Agreement. Despite that, we need to get to the bottom of this discussion and see if this agreement is modest or not.”

It is astounding to note that in the very same month that a Chinese fighter jet crashed into one of our reconnaissance airplanes in international airspace, and the same month that China detained our military personnel after executing an emergency landing at a Chinese airfield, we “quietly” renewed this significant bilateral agreement. I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the President knew about it?

Mr. President, I do not think that it is wise to view the transfer of advanced technology and scientific knowledge as simply a diplomatic tool. The amendment I offer today takes very basic steps to improve oversight of the 1979 Science and Technology Agreement. That is simply necessary.

The underlying logic of the Office of Science and Technology Cooperation in the State Department as responsible for monitoring the Agreement. According to its report, the State Department has not even kept track of the sixty protocols to the Agreement since 1996. That needs to be changed. The amendment also requires the Secretary of State to see that activities carried out under the Agreement are consistent with our laws and regulations that prohibit the transfer of sensitive technology.

Further, the amendment establishes a reporting requirement so that the State Department will inform Congress every two years on what activities have taken place under the Agreement. As I stated earlier, the State Department report released in May 2002 was the first-ever comprehensive assessment of the implementation of the 1979 U.S.-China Science and Technology Agreement. In response to that report, I ask the President to wait another 23 years for the next assessment.

Mr. President, China is embarking on a substantial military buildup. They are using technologies that have been acquired from the United States and other sources. It is hard to believe that our own government has been cooperating with China in exchanging scientific information that has the potential, in the words of the State Department, to facilitate China’s military research programs. My amendment takes very simple steps to make sure that the government-to-government scientific exchanges that take place are focused on peaceful uses of technology. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, let me say that there has been a tremendous amount of work done today. I know we were in long quorum calls and people could not see the work that has been done. But one very important amendment dealing with national missile defense was completed. That was done by voice vote after many hours of work. Then, today and this evening, staff, with Senators Warner and Levin, have approved almost 50 amendments. So this very important bill is on the way toward being completed.

We are going to vote in the morning on cloture. People will have to deal with germane amendments after that. But I just want to spread on the RECORD comments about the work done by the staffs, today and tonight, and the two managers of the bill.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, if I might address the Senate, I wish to express my appreciation to the distinguished chairman, the Republican leader, himself, and our distinguished chairman, who departed a few days ago.

I assure you that we will find a way to support the amendments. We did achieve a good deal of work. I am confident that tomorrow, with the support of all the Senators, we will achieve a landmark bill on behalf of the men and women in the armed services of this great Nation.

I thank all members, and particularly the Presiding Officer for his patience and guidance throughout the day, and the Senate staff.

I thank my distinguished colleagues and friends.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period not to exceed 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CORPORATE RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, this morning’s Wall Street Journal, on the front page, alerts us that WorldCom admits a $3.8 billion error in its accounting. “The Firm Ousts Financial Chief and Struggles for Survival; SEC Probe Likely to Widen.” As I come to the floor of the Senate this afternoon, the news from the stock market is not encouraging. But it hasn’t been encouraging for a long period of time. At least since the Enron scandal we have been dealing not just with recession but with what we must term a crisis in corporate responsibility.

It is hard to imagine the ultimate impact this will have on average Americans and their families, let alone our businesses. After all, this really calls into question the responsibility and role of the Federal Government to respond to this crisis in corporate responsibility.

Very soon, we will be considering legislation reported from the Banking Committee that will seek to address some of the most glaring problems in corporate governance in America today. It is talking about the role of accounting firms that are serving both as consultants and auditors—in a dual relationship and sometimes conflicting capacity—that will establish standards for regulation of accounting firms so there is more credibility in their findings for the American public. It will address a number of other areas, such as strengthening the SEC. I believe all of these things are long overdue.

When we return from the Fourth of July recess, the Senate will be addressing this issue. There will be differences of opinion. There will be some who will criticise the floor action or the debate. Some will argue to leave business alone. Government should not meddle. Yet the fact is that unless Government steps in in this situation offering sound advice, counsel, and regulation, we are going to continue to see this crisis in America’s confidence in corporate institutions. There was a day when the robber barons ruled in America. Corporations, frankly, cared little or nothing about public opinion. The richest people in America were very powerful here on Capitol Hill. Those days hearken back to the era of Teddy Roosevelt, a Republican who came in power here. Those days are as far away as the economic and financial storm that engulfed the country. And now we are seeing a different kind of crisis.

The crisis we are seeing is akin to arguing that the Chinese are wise to view the transfer of advanced technology and scientific knowledge as simply a diplomatic tool. The amendment I offer today takes very basic steps to improve oversight of the 1979 Science and Technology Agreement. The amendment simply designates the State Department, who I ask the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this significant bilateral agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time? I wonder if the Secretary of Defense was aware of the renewal of this agreement at that time?
I am afraid this year, in this new century, we face a similar challenge. If Congress shirks its responsibility, if the administration does not accept its responsibility, we will continue to see a decline not only in the stock market but in the savings, the pensions, the nest eggs of American families across the board.

We really call on the leaders in the business community to step forward—and there are many honorable, hard-working people who have done such a fine job of good business and good enterprises, opportunities for people to work and profits to be made. They need to step forward and make it clear that the good people in the business sector will not tolerate what we are reading day in and day out in the Wall Street Journal about corporate activity.

Recently, we had a hearing before the Governmental Affairs Committee and brought in some of the people from Enron who made the decisions. One of them, a person I have admired for many years, who is a medical doctor in the Houston area, was head of the compensation committee for Enron. We asked him during the course of the hearing: How in the world could you justify hundreds of millions of dollars, that these days. People are being compensated within that click, that fraternity, important issue here; the question was, whether they were being compensated as their peers would expect.

Kevin Phillips, who has written a book called "Democracy," analyzes the disparity of wealth and income in America. Now, it is understood in this country that if you are willing to take a risk and work hard, you should be compensated. That is one of the great parts of America, part of the American dream. But we see at WorldCom and other corporations where they are falsifying their profitability, where the average person, whether buying a mutual fund or a share of this stock, could not have a clue as to the reality and honesty of the corporate books.

I say to President Bush and members of the administration: You cannot ignore this problem. This is a problem that calls for Presidential leadership, on both sides of the aisle. Those who want to take a hands-off, laissez-faire attitude toward this business crisis are inviting, unfortunately, even worse results in terms of our economy and our stock market.

There is a standing joke, I guess, some comedians talk about: My 401(k) has now become a 201(k).

I guess we can laugh a little about that. But the fact is many people I meet in my home State of Illinois talk about postponing retirement. They have to keep working because what they wanted to do, they hoped to rely on just isn’t going to be there. Today, at end of the day, when we look at Dow Jones, and NASDAQ, and other reports from financial communities, I am afraid we are seeing that even more wealth in America has evaporated.

It is not because of this one corporation, WorldCom; it is because of this looming corporate responsibility, which is a specter over the economy of our Nation.

This calls on us to be honest and real in our dealings with corporate America. It is not just a matter of their reporting accurately as to whether they are profitable or losing money: it is a question of corporate conduct. We have to demand corporate responsibility when it comes to treating pensioners from their companies fairly. If a promise is made that they will have health insurance and a pension, that corporation should not be allowed to escape that responsibility or that liability—to leave these poor people alone, after promises of a lifetime, and unprotected and unguarded with the peril of the economy literally at their door.

Secondly, we have to insist that corporations, when it comes to their conduct involving world trade, do the responsible thing for America. When Stanley Tools recently announced they were going to move their corporate operations to Bermuda to avoid American income taxes, this consumer said I will never buy another one of their products because, as far as I am concerned, if they can go to that Bermuda Triangle where their tax liability and American jobs disappear, they may as well disappear, too, as far as I am concerned.

That is the kind of corporate misconduct that has become rampant and is creating a cynicism among Americans about many corporate leaders, and that has to change.

In addition, when it comes to the whole question of the environment, time and time again, we find corporations that have created a toxic impact on the environment—those that have left behind toxic waste, for example, that are trying to escape liability.

It is an issue being debated over Superfund sites. A Superfund site is a place in America where a corporation has done business and left behind dangerous toxic waste. The question is: Who should pay to clean it up? I think the answer is simple. The polluters should pay it; the person who makes the mess should pay it. That is not what we are hearing from this administration. We are hearing: No, no, you cannot ask the businesses and corporate community to be responsible for their misconduct; the taxpayers in general should pay for the cleanup.

That is wrong, just plain wrong. That is not fair and it is not just.

This issue of corporate responsibility is rising to the surface as the Dow Jones falls. People across America are understanding that the great corporations and the great businesses that are truly the backbone and strength of our economy have to stand up and be responsible in their conduct.

As I said earlier, there are good ones. I know many great business leaders. In my State of Illinois and the city of Chicago, I can list dozens of them for you. But there are some who are bringing shame on this sector of the economy and the people who are dedicated to American business.

I hope this WorldCom scandal which has been announced this morning in the Wall Street Journal is a wake-up call not only for the President but for Congress as well.

I yield the floor.

AMERICA CANNOT AFFORD AN AMTRAK SHUTDOWN

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to reiterate my steadfast and unwavering support for Amtrak.

I believe that President Bush, Transportation Secretary Norm Mineta, Amtrak President David Gunn, and the Congress need to work together immediately to prevent our passenger rail system from grinding to a halt and stranding millions of commuters coast to coast.

Amtrak’s passenger rail service is an essential link in our transportation system and our economy.

Every day Americans use Amtrak and local commuter rail systems that I cannot think of a worse time for Amtrak to have run out of money and I find it unconscionable that Members of Congress and the President are not unified to see that our trains continue to run.

What will happen if Amtrak shuts down? You can be sure the roads will jam up even more and air travel will become an even greater headache.

I agree with Secretary Mineta when he said Monday night that the burden is not on President Bush alone to save the rail system from bankruptcy. However, it is important to point out that President Bush alone can keep Amtrak out of bankruptcy by announcing today that he will approve the company’s application for a $200 million loan guaranty and support an additional appropriation of $200 million in the supplemental appropriations bill that is now in conference negotiations.

Here is how I believe we must respond to the current situation. First, I believe the $200 million emergency loan guaranty that Amtrak needs to keep the trains running must be approved immediately. This $200 million will allow Amtrak to again find private financing that has dried up over the past several months because of the company’s deteriorating financial condition.

Second, the members of the conference committee on the supplemental appropriations bill are trying to include a $200 million emergency appropriation for Amtrak. If this bill can emerge from conference negotiations this week and if the President agrees to sign the legislation, the funds will get to Amtrak before the July Fourth holiday.

Third, I have joined many of my colleagues in a commitment to work for $1.2 billion for Amtrak in fiscal year 2003. This is the amount Amtrak needs and I believe it is the amount Congress should deliver.

I cannot understand why President Bush continues to stand by his paltry $200 million loan guaranty and support an additional appropriation of $200 million in the supplemental appropriations bill that is now in conference negotiations.

had not been able to secure a needed $200 million bank loan. David L. Gunn, the newly appointed Amtrak CEO, testified before a U.S. Senate Subcommittee on that day that failure to obtain the needed $200 million in federal loan guarantees or cash by July 1 would leave him no choice but to begin an orderly shut-down of rail passenger service nationwide, to place Amtrak into bankruptcy, and to place the corporation’s assets under a court-appointed trustee.

You may have heard that Metrolink dispatchers, locomotive engineers and conductors are provided under a contract with Amtrak. Our contract with Amtrak is similar to many other passenger rail operator contracts with Amtrak throughout the country. The Metrolink contract, which expires on June 30, 2004, covers all Amtrak costs of providing the 145 Amtrak employees needed to dispatch trains and to operate Metrolink’s 138 weekday trains and 32 weekend trains.

At this time, we have no additional information as to exactly how a shut-down of Amtrak passenger rail service would affect Metrolink. Metrolink sent Amtrak and federal officials a letter on June 10th stating that no federal subsidies are used for the Metrolink contract and that there should be no cash flow concerns for Amtrak by continuing to provide the contract services. To date, Amtrak has not provided a response. We have also begun to explore the limited options we have to try to avoid an interruption in services in case Amtrak is unable or unwilling to meet its contractual obligations. In order to ensure uninterrupted operation of Metrolink, we need the continued support of the existing Amtrak certified and qualified employees.

While we encourage you to purchase your July Metrolink tickets earlier than usual, as you would for any inconvenience or uncertainty that this potential Amtrak action may have, we have hope that Amtrak and the federal government can secure the needed funding to avert the crisis.

DAVID SOLOW, CEO
Hon. DIANNE FEINSTEIN, U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR FEINSTEIN: On behalf of the Southern California Regional Rail Authority, operators of Metrolink, I am writing to urge your support for an immediate Amtrak loan guarantee. We contract with Amtrak to provide passenger rail service throughout six counties of Southern California. If bridge funds are not provided to Amtrak, our service is at risk for shutting down as well.

As you are aware, David L. Gunn, Amtrak’s new president recently announced that Amtrak needs a $200 million loan guarantee. We, as other Metrolink operators, need the continued availability of the existing Amtrak certified and qualified employees.

Amtrak operates in the nation’s most congested area, in the heart of the nation’s economy. This potential Amtrak action will not only impact our ridership—$34,000 daily—but also contribute to increased peak hour congestion on the highways. Metrolink removes one lane of traffic during peak hours on the highways we parallel. Without our service, those lanes will be flooded again with frustrated drivers.

We call upon President Bush to request his support for Amtrak’s request of $200 million in loan guarantees. We respectfully urge you to work with Congress to ensure continued operation of passenger rail and the contract services upon which Metrolink depends.

Sincerely,
DAVID SOLOW,
Chief Executive Officer.

Hon. DIANNE FEINSTEIN,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FEINSTEIN: I am writing to you on behalf of the North San Diego County Transit Development Corporation, to request support for Amtrak and its provision of NCTD’s “Coaster” Commuter Rail Service in San Diego County.

David Gunn, Amtrak’s new President, has recently announced that unless Amtrak receives a $200 million loan guarantee by the end of this month, the company will have no choice but to shut down passenger train services nationwide. NCTD, along with three other public agencies in California, contract with Amtrak for the operation of critical commuter and inter-city rail services. Our commuter rail services are obtained through cost-reimbursement contracts and do not contribute to the national subsidy requirements for Amtrak’s overall network. Nevertheless, Amtrak has been unable to provide assurance of continued commuter rail service operation for the Coaster.

The shutdown of commuter rail service in San Diego County would severely impact 5,000 Coaster passengers per day, add significantly to peak hour freeway congestion, and result in a significant loss to the complex requirements of railroad operations. Amtrak’s services cannot be readily replaced overnight if Amtrak shuts its doors.

We call upon President Bush to request his support for Amtrak’s request for $200 million in loan guarantees, and work with Congressional leaders to ensure continued operation of passenger rail and the contract services upon which Coaster operations depend.

Sincerely,
THOMAS P. WALTERS,
Washington Representative.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in America.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred July 4, 2000 in Casper, WY. A man was arrested on charges of firing shots at a group of people watching a Fourth of July fireworks display in what police described as a hate crime. Johnny Lee Hodge, who is white, was being held on $100,000 bond after firing a shotgun at least three times at several black men and putting a gun at the head of a teenage Indian girl. Authorities said Hodge made racial slurs before shooting at the group.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them from the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

10TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY AND THEIR SISTER CITY PETTORANELLO, ITALY

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the 10th anniversary of the renewed sister city relationship between the Township of Princeton, NJ, and the village of Pettoranello, Italy. Over the past 10 years the township and village have formed a strong bond and benefitted greatly from their relationship.

Giusseppe Perna and Achille Carnevale, sons of the village of Pettoranello, came to Princeton in the 1850s. They, along with the many immigrants who followed, built much of the Princeton community and University that still stands today. The people of Pettoranello had a great influence on the Princeton community that continues to be felt. Those first immigrants from Pettoranello brought not only their families, but also their traditions while maintaining strong ties to their village in Italy.

In 1994, a group of Princeton citizens led by Mayor Phyllis L. Marchand visited Mayor Antonio Camillo Paolino and the village of Pettoranello, renewing the special sister city relationship between the two municipalities. Over the years, the Township of Princeton continues to recognize the ties that bind the Princeton community and the village of Pettoranello, Italy. The two sister cities have gained a great deal from each other through the exchange of music, athletics, medicine and literature.

So, I join with people of the Township of Princeton, NJ, and Pettoranello, Italy, in saluting the 10th anniversary of the renewed sister city relationship between the two municipalities. May their spirit of friendship and continued exchange of ideas and goods be a model for all of us to admire and emulate.
TRIBUTE TO ROBERT J. SEMLER

- Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I rise today joined by my New England colleagues Senators Jeffords, Kerry, Snowe, Reed, Dodd, Gregg, Lieberman, Chafee, Collins, and Leahy to congratulate Robert J. Semler as he ends an impressive career as the Regional Administrator of the Department of Labor.

Since 1985, Bob has been responsible for the administration of the Federal employment and training programs throughout New England. He has ensured that workers and employers in New England understood and took advantage of opportunities in Job Training Partnership Act, the School-to-Work Act, the Welfare-to-Work Act, and most recently in the Workforce Investment Act. He has taken federal programs from print to the people and made every program work for the particular needs of New England.

During his 33-year career with the Department of Labor Bob has actively tried to meet the needs of employers and employees, understanding that economies of scale mean investments in people. He has made the six New England States operate as a region, and with that collaboration has come a renewed commitment to the cross-State initiatives that have allowed our region to remain competitive in attracting new industries.

Bob’s commitment to people began with his time with the Peace Corps. From 1964 to 1970 he served as the Western Venezuela Regional Director overseeing Peace Corps volunteers and programs that worked with community development, health initiatives and agricultural cooperatives. He took the lessons learned in community building and imbedded those beliefs in the implementation of job training policy over the next 27 years.

Countless New England workers have raised their skills and found better jobs because of the work of Bob Semler, and it is with great pride and genuine affection that we recognize his impressive contributions to our region and wish him all our best as he begins the next phase in his impressive career.

FREE OVER-THE-AIR BROADCASTING

- Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the important role that free, over-the-air broadcasting plays in local communities.

Every 2 years, the National Association of Broadcasters conducts an industry-wide census of television and radio broadcasting service efforts. The results from the most recent census found that America’s radio and television stations contributed a staggering $9.9 billion in service to their local communities throughout 2001.

The President has spoken in recent months about the importance of re-discovering the value of service. Today, I would like to applaud an industry that consistently demonstrates how small business can weave itself into the fabric of a community and play a vital role in helping others.

In my home State, radio and television stations often assist local charities and non-profits. It is estimated that local Arkansas television and radio stations provided $23 million in public service efforts during 2001 amounted to over $71 million dollars.

During 2001, KPOM-TV in Fort Smith continued its partnership with the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure benefit for the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation. Thanks to these stations’ promotional activities, more than 34 thousand people participated, bringing in more than $1.6 million dollars to fight cancer. In Mountain Home, AM and FM stations KTLO and KKC-FM partner every year to put on a Senior Fair and Hospital Expo. The event brings in more than 3,000 senior citizens every year for free health tests, information and referrals. In Jonesboro, KAIT-TV conducted an active Public Service Announcement campaign to promote prostate cancer awareness. The on-air effort included interviews with prostate cancer survivors in the community. The timing of the campaign coincided with a local hospital’s program to provide free screenings for area men.

While $9.9 billion is an impressive figure, what is most impressive about broadcasters’ community service work is that each station endeavors to meet the community’s unique needs. The efforts of broadcasters are as diverse as the different communities they serve. Local broadcast stations serve every community differently.

In this new era, I think it is important that we recognize those among us who have a solid record of service. And so to my local Arkansas broadcasters, I would like to say thank you. We appreciate everything that you do to make our communities and our lives better, and I am confident that you will keep up the good work.

SALUTING SOUTH CAROLINA CREDIT UNIONS

- Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, as we watch our budget deficits going up, up, and away, I take solace in knowing that today in South Carolina we are teaching our teenagers the real value of money.

The South Carolina Credit Union League, in conjunction with the Clemson Cooperative Extension, is furnishing materials to teachers throughout the State to help build financial literacy among our teenagers. Teenagers spend $155 billion a year nationwide, yet only 10 percent have any financial training in high school. It is imperative that they learn, as early as possible, not to spend the credit unions in South Carolina for taking on this initiative, which is part of a nationwide effort, spearheaded by the National Endowment for Financial Education.

To recognize the important role high school teachers play in this effort, the credit unions also recently named Sue Dillon, a teacher at Spring Valley High School in Columbia, SC, as the Financial Literacy Educator of the Year. Her commitment to students’ financial knowledge is reaching hundreds of young people in five South Carolina schools. Since today’s high school graduates stand to earn more than $1 million as adults, the lessons Ms. Dillon imparts may be the most valuable her students ever learn. I congratulate her on receiving this honor.

TRIBUTE TO RAY UHALDE

- Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I want to pay a special tribute to a great public servant who is retiring later this month after nearly 25 years of tireless and effective service. Raymond J. Uhalde has served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Labor for Employment and Training for the past 8 years. As the senior career professional in the Employment and Training Administration (ETA), he provided executive direction for its $11 billion annual budget and 1300 employees. Ray also served as acting Assistant Secretary from 1996 to 1998, and held other key policy positions during his tenure at the Department of Labor. As Deputy Assistant Secretary, he led important initiatives that improved the systems of job training, job placement, and income support that are administered by ETA. These public investments help millions of Americans increase their job skills, make smoother transitions between jobs, and improve their wage levels. They also help employers find the skilled workers they need. As a result, family incomes and our nation’s prosperity have both improved.

Ray has received many accolades for his leadership over his years of service, including recognition by President Clinton in awarding him with the rank of Meritorious Executive in the Senior Executive Service, as well as the Department of Labor’s most prestigious Career award, the Philip Arnow Award for excellence. But what stands above even these awards is Ray’s unquestionable integrity and professionalism on a bipartisan basis. Ray enjoys a great deal of respect for his leadership and skill in shaping employment policy from Members of Congress and their staffs on both sides of the aisle, enabling him to be an effective representative for the Department of Labor.
through several different Administrations.

His work has made a real difference in the lives of millions of Americans. His legislative and administrative skills have played critical roles in the enactment and implementation of many important bills, including the Workforce Investment Act, a 5-year effort which fundamentally reformed the Nation’s job training system; the Welfare to Work program, which has helped transition welfare recipients to gainful employment; and the reauthorization of the Older Americans Act, which assists low income seniors earn a paycheck while providing important community services. The passage and administration of each of these acts was due in large part to Ray’s personal skills and dedicated efforts to assist in the development of consensus bills that would reflect the Administration’s priorities and help Americans in need.

I am also grateful for his help and advice over the years on a range of immigration issues facing the Department of Labor. Ray embraced our immigrant heritage, but also understood the importance of strengthening our immigration laws to ensure they would not be misused by those who sought to bring in immigrants to abuse them with substandard wages and working conditions, and to displace U.S. workers.

These efforts represent only a small fraction of the most recent accomplishments that mark Ray’s career at the Department of Labor. His fellow workers in the Department of Labor and throughout the administration will sorely miss his wisdom and guidance, as will State and local workforce development leaders in every corner of the Nation. While I am sad to see Ray leave the civil service, I am happy to know that he is going to become Co-Director of the Workforce Program at the National Center on Education and the Workforce, a Vermonter, I would like to thank Dick for his years of service in the State House.

I am sure that his retirement from politics will never keep Dick from calling me to discuss the issues that he thinks I should care about. And if an issue is important to Dick, it should be important to all Vermonters.

My congratulations to Dick, and good luck.

STATMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. Dodd (for himself and Mr. Chafee):

S. 2681. A bill to provide for safe equestrian helmets, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. Dodd. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleague from Rhode Island, Senator Chafee, to introduce legislation to provide greater safety for children and adults who ride horses in the United States. Each year in our country, nearly 15 million people go horseback riding. Whether it be professional or for pleasure, Americans of all ages and from all walks of life enjoy equestrian sports. And, while everyone acknowledges that horseback riding is a high-risk activity, there are serious issues related to equestrian sports that can and should be addressed.

I first became aware of the problem of equestrian helmets when Kemi Ogunnaike, a constituent in Connecticut, called by office to relate her family’s tragic experience. The story she shared opened my eyes to the danger posed by certain equestrian helmets. In 1998 Kemi’s daughter, Christen Ogunnaike, was a 4-year-old resident of Darien, CT, and a 7th-grader at New Canaan Country School. Active and sporty, Christen was a talented intermediate rider who had 5 years or riding experience under her belt when she mounted her horse on the morning of August 11. As always, Christen wore a helmet and was accompanied by her trainer when she began a slow walk through the ring. Suddenly, without warning, the horse she was riding shook its head, and Christen was thrown off onto 4 inches of sand. Even though her horse was only at a walk, and Christen was wearing a helmet, that helmet offered her little protection, and she sustained severe head injuries as a result of the fall. She was rushed to Stamford Hospital where, despite efforts to save her, she died the next day. The magnitude of their loss has been compounded by the thought that, had Christen been wearing a better constructed helmet, it is possible she could have survived.

My colleagues may be shocked to learn, as Christen’s parents were, that there are no government standards in existence for the manufacturing of equestrian helmets. Some helmets are voluntarily constructed to meet strict American Society of Testing and Materials, ASTM, testing requirements, but the vast majority of helmets sold in the United States offer little or no real protection and are merely cosmetic. The parents of young riders like Christen, and even more mature riders, do not know that they are buying an untested and unapproved item when they purchase a riding helmet. Indeed, most riders believe that when they buy a helmet at the store, they are purchasing a product that meets standards designed to provide real and adequate head protection. Bike helmets are built to minimum safety requirements, as are motorcycle helmets. Apparel helmets, like the one worn by Christen, offer little or no head protection, while ASTM-approved helmets are designed to significantly reduce head injury. The difference in aesthetic design between the two is minimal, but the underlying structures of these types of helmet are substantial. ASTM-approved helmets offer a high degree of head protection, increase the survivability of equestrian accidents and, in my view, should be the standard for equestrian helmets.

This lack of adequate safety standards in riding helmets is why USA Equestrian, (USAeQ), one of the largest... equestrian organizations in the country, recently mandated that ASTM-approved helmets must be worn in all USAEq-sanctioned events. While this decision effectively eliminates the danger posed by “apparel helmets” at these events, today many monte-ment riders in lessons and private shows that are not USAEq-sanctioned. For their safety, I believe that Congress should establish minimum safety standards for all equestrian helmets sold in the United States, so that all riders can obtain headgear that offers actual protection against head injury. This is not an unprecedented suggestion. As I stated before, Congress has already acted to similarly ensure the safety of bike helmets. The legislation that I and Senator Chafee introduce in Christen’s memory today is modeled on this successful bike helmet law and would go a long way toward reducing the mortality of equestrian accidents.

The Christen O’Donnell Equestrian Helmet Safety Act would require that the Consumer Product Safety Commission establish minimum requirements, based on the already proven ASTM standard, for all equestrian helmets in the United States. Thus, there would be a uniform standard for equestrian helmets, and riders could be confident that the helmet they buy offers real head protection. Let me be clear. This modest legislation does not mandate that riders wear helmets. That is a matter better left to individual States. But, it would take a significant step toward improving the survivability of equestrian accidents and would bring the United States in line with other industrialized countries with sizable riding populations. Countries like Australia and New Zealand have enacted similar helmet safety legislation, and the European Union has set standards to make sure that helmets for equestrian activities meet continental standards. It is time for the United States to take similar steps.

This bill is supported by a wide-ranging coalition of equestrian, child safety, and medical groups. This bill has received the endorsement of USA Equestrian, one of the nation’s largest equestrian groups, the National SAFEKIDS coalition, an organization dedicated to preventing accidental injury to children, and the Brain Trauma Foundation, an organization dedicated to preventing and treating brain injury. Further, in the “ Chronicle of the Horse,” the trade publication for the Masters of Foxhounds Association, the U.S. Equestrian Team, the U.S. Pony Clubs, the National Riding Commission, the Foxhound Club of North America, the National Beagle Club, the U.S. Dressage Foundation, the American Vaulting Association, the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association, and the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association, an article was published endorsing the ASTM rule. Given the wide range of organizations that endorse this bill, or have endorsed the ASTM rule, it is clear that riders, coaches, and medical professionals alike recognize the need for a standard, tested helmet design.

I would like to draw my colleague’s attention to some alarming statistics that further demonstrate the importance and expediency of this bill. Emergency rooms all across America have to deal with an influx of horse-related injuries each year. Nationwide in 1999, an estimated 15,000 horse-related emergency department visits were made by youths under 15 years old. Of these injuries, head injuries were by far the most numerous and accounted for around 60 percent of equestrian-related deaths. These injuries occurred, and continue to occur, at all ages and at all levels of riding experience. That an inadequately protected fall from a horse can kill is not surprising when you examine the medical statistics. A human skull can be shattered by an impact of less than 6.2 miles per hour, while a horse can gallop at approximately 40 miles per hour. A fall from two feet can cause permanent brain damage, and a horse elevates a rider to eight feet or more above the ground. These statistics make it evident that horseback riding is a high-risk sport. While all riders acknowledge this fact, reducing the risk of serious injury while horseback riding is attainable through the use of appropriate head protection. We should pass this bill, and pass it soon, to encourage the use of head protection for equestrian events is safe and effective.

American consumers deserve to be confident that their protective gear, should they choose to wear it, offers real protection. I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

January 1, 1982, benefits rightly continue uninterrupted to the surviving spouse. But if the beneficiary died or dies after January 1, 1982, the surviving spouse must file a new claim to benefits and must prove that the miner was already deemed eligible to receive benefits.

This issue affects more than 11,000 West Virginia retirees and their survivors, as well as another 51,000 black lung families across the country. I have introduced legislation that would begin to address the failures of the Black Lung Benefits Act. It is a companion to legislation Representative RAHALL introduced in the House. The Black Lung Benefits Survivors Equity Act of 2002 would give benefits to widows of black lung victims, benefits that these women rightfully deserve.

Linda Chapman, one very strong and courageous woman from Spencer, WV, tragically lost her husband, Carson, to black lung disease last January. On top of that tragedy, she was denied survivor benefits simply because of the BLBA’s double standards. But rather than giving up, Linda stood up.

On behalf of the surviving widows of black lung victims, she walked several hundred miles from Charleston, WV, to Washington, DC, to generate public interest and to get the attention of lawmakers as well. I applaud Mrs. Chapman’s efforts, and was pleased to meet her when she arrived in Washington.

I hope this Senate will act quickly to remedy this problem for Ms. Chapman and other black lung widows like her. After all that they have endured, these women should not have to fight against bureaucracy simply to obtain the survivors’ benefits due them.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. LEVIN):

S. 2686. A bill to introduce a bill, the Airport Employee Whistleblower Protection Act of 2002, that will allow employees of the Federal Aviation Administration to file a claim for whistleblower protection for airport screeners.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I, along with Senator LEVIN, am pleased to introduce a bill, the Airport Employee Whistleblower Protection Act of 2002, that will enhance airport and air travel safety. It will do this by protecting all security screeners at all airports from reprisal for blowing the whistle on security violations, not just those who are specifically protected. As my colleagues know, I have long believed that a good government is an accountable government, and whistleblower protection laws go a long way toward making government accountable.

This is particularly true when it involves our nation’s security. Just recently we saw enlightening disclosures of massive systemic problems at the FBI by a whistleblower, Special Agent Rowley, that will no doubt lead to improvements and better security for Americans. Although Director Mueller has promised Special Agent Rowley that she will not be discriminated against because of her disclosures, whistleblower protection laws do not currently apply to the FBI, a problem that I’m trying to fix. Likewise, whistleblower protection laws do not currently protect many baggage screeners and x-ray technicians who witness security breaches.

In the Spring of 2000, Congress passed a law known as Air 21 that provided whistleblower protection to employees and contract employers to air carriers. At that time, when baggage screening was usually the responsibility of the airlines, screeners with whistleblower protection could alert their bosses or the Federal Aviation Administration about security violations. But that legislation didn’t go far enough. That’s because only employees of air carriers were protected from retribution under the law.

Under Air 21, security screeners employed by state or municipal governments, or regional airport authorities, had to rely on a patchwork of state whistleblower protection laws, or just the good sense of their employers, when they decided to blow the whistle on security breaches.

Worse still, when Congress passed the Aviation and Transportation Security Act last Fall, it specifically denied whistleblower protection to the new Federal baggage screeners. During the debates, I called for whistleblower protection for airport screeners because the key to an effective workforce is by creating an accountable government. But when Congress federalized the baggage screeners, it took Federal screeners out of the Air 21 air carrier whistleblower protections, and created a class of Federal contractors that perform security screening services, but are not covered by any whistleblower protections.

This legislation will fix these problems. First, the bill will ensure that until airport security screening is fully federalized, all airport security screeners are given whistleblower protection, regardless of whether they’re employed by air carriers, state or local governments, regional airport authorities, or contractors. Second, the bill will close the loophole in the law so that Federal baggage screeners receive protection under the same Whistleblower Protection Act that protects many airport contractors, and so that contractors for the Federal government also will get whistleblower protection.

I note that the Secretary of the Department of Transportation has taken a significant step toward giving whistleblower protection to Federal screeners by signing a memorandum of understanding with the Office of Special Counsel, the office that enforces the Whistleblower Protection Act. The idea is that the OSC will agree to investigate cases of alleged whistleblower retaliation by the Transportation Safety Administration. But this agreement is not enough because it does not afford a right of appeal, so the TSA is free to ignore any OSC recommendation. Further, it does not provide whistleblower protection for contract screeners. Finally, unlike legislation, the agreement can be cancelled by either the TSA or the OSC on 90 day’s notice. So the Administration cannot provide whistleblower protection, though an admirable effort, is just not enough.

We need statutory whistleblower protection for airport screeners.

In all my years of doing oversight, I have found that it’s pretty rare for an agency to identify and fix its own problems, especially security problems. Most of the time, it takes a whistleblower or an Inspector General or a Congressional investigation to expose and fix security problems.

In conclusion, I urge my colleagues to support the Airport Employee Whistleblower Protection Act of 2002 to improve security at our nation’s airports. Let’s close the loophole and give all security screeners whistleblower protection so that our nation’s aviation system is more safe and secure.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 2687. A bill to facilitate the extension of the Alaska Railroad from Eielson Air Force Base, just south of Fairbanks, AK, to a point near the location on Fort Greely, AK that has been chosen for the national missile defense system. This bill will allow the extension of the Alaska Railroad from Eielson Air Force Base, just south of Fairbanks, AK, to a point near the location on Fort Greely, AK that has been chosen for the national missile defense system. This will significantly reduce the cost of shipping construction materials and operational supplies to the site, and incidentally allow a considerable amount of construction waste and debris to be sent to the site by rail, thereby reducing the wear and tear on the highway system that would otherwise be the only possible route for those goods.
The extension will allow materials to be shipped to Alaska by sea to be transferred to the railroad and carried all the way to the vicinity of the defense project by rail. This is preferred to being loaded, unloaded, loaded onto long-distance trucks, unloaded, and loaded again when they move to the actual work site.

The bill provides for the Secretary of the Interior, working with other agencies as appropriate and necessary, to identify and acquire all of the lands necessary for this modest rail line extension of approximately 80 miles. Where those lands are held by other entities, there will be a fair exchange for lands held elsewhere. Once the entire route has been acquired, the lands will be transferred to the Alaska Railroad under the same circumstances that have been used previously under the Alaska Railroad Transfer Act.

This is a very important step toward ensuring the most economical possible approach to this major project, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

(a) A comprehensive rail transportation network is a key element of an integrated transportation system for the North American continent, and federal leadership is required to address the needs of a reliable, safe, and secure rail network, and to connect all areas of the United States for national defense and economic development, as previously done for the interstate highway system, the Federal aviation network, and the transcontinental railroad;

(b) The creation and use of joint use corridors, including cross-border rail and utility corridors, as it moves by rail, is necessary to support the efficient and cost-effective handling of materials necessary for construction and for the secure movement of launch vehicles, fuel and other operational supplies;

(c) The 1960 Act recognized the potential benefits of establishing a rail connection to Alaska by enacting legislation to authorize a U.S.-Canada bilateral commission to study the feasibility of linking the rail network in the United States to an appropriate point in Canada on the North American rail network; and

(d) The Secretary may, as part of the corridor identification, include issues related to the further extension of such corridor to a connection with the nearest appropriate terminus of the North American rail network in Canada.

SEC. 3. IDENTIFICATION OF NATIONAL DEFENSE RAILWAY-UTILITY CORRIDOR.

(a) Within one year from the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, the State of Alaska and the Alaska Railroad Corporation, shall identify a proposed national defense-railway-utility corridor linking the existing corridor of the Alaska Railroad to the vicinity of the proposed National Missile Defense facilities at Fort Greely, Alaska. The corridor shall be at least 500 feet wide and shall also identify land for such terminals, stations, maintenance facilities, switching yards, and material sites as are considered necessary.

(b) The identification of the corridor under paragraph (a) shall include information providing a complete legal description for and noting the current ownership of the proposed corridor and associated land.

(c) In identifying the corridor under paragraph (a), the Secretary shall consider, at a minimum, the following factors:

(1) The proximity of national defense installations and national defense considerations;

(2) The location and access to natural resources that could contribute to economic development of the region;

(3) Grade and standards that are commensurate with rail and utility construction standards and that minimize the prospect of at-grade railroad and highway crossings;

(4) Availability of construction materials;

(5) Safety; and

(6) Effects on and service to adjacent communities and potential intermodal transportation connections;

(7) Environmental concerns; and

(8) Use of public land to the maximum degree possible;

(9) Minimization of probable construction costs;

(10) Prior and established traditional uses.

(11) Essential utility elements for the corridor, including but not limited to, providing transportation, communication facilities, and electrical power transmission lines, and

(12) Prior and established traditional uses.

(d) The Secretary may, as part of the corridor identification, include issues related to the further extension of such corridor to a connection with the nearest appropriate terminus of the North American rail network in Canada.

SEC. 4. NEGOTIATION AND LAND TRANSFER.

(a) The Secretary of the Interior shall:

(1) upon completion of the corridor identification in Sec. 3, negotiate the acquisition of any lands in the corridor which are not federally owned through an exchange for lands of equal or greater value held by the federal government elsewhere in Alaska; and

(2) upon completion of the acquisition of lands under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall convey to the Alaska Railroad Corporation, subject to valid existing rights, title to the lands identified under Section 3 as necessary to complete the national defense rail- way-utility corridor, on condition that the Alaska Railroad Corporation construct in the corridor an extension of the railroad system to the vicinity of the proposed national missile defense installation at Fort Greely, Alaska, together with such other utilities, including but not limited to, fiber-optic transmission lines and electrical transmission lines, as it considers necessary and appropriate. The Federal interest in lands conveyed to the Alaska Railroad Corporation under this Act shall be as in lands conveyed pursuant to the Alaska Railroad Transfer Act (45 USC 1201 et seq.).

SEC. 5. APPLICABILITY OF OTHER LAWS.

Actions authorized in this Act shall proceed immediately and to conclusion notwithstanding the land-use planning provisions of Section 202 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, P.L. 94-579.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

The resolution I am introducing today underscores that message. It recognizes the United Nations International Day in Support of the Victims of Torture, marked each June 26th, and encourages the training of law enforcement personnel. Experts estimate that more than 100,000 individuals, including survivors of torture live in the United States. Victims of torture and other forms of cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment or punishment and their families often suffer devastating effects. They need the protection of comprehensive medical and psychological treatment.

I am pleased to note the contribution of the Rocky Mountain Survivors Center, located in Denver, CO, in meeting the needs of torture survivors living in Colorado. The Rocky Mountain Center and similar torture treatment centers located elsewhere in the United States play a critical role in the identification, treatment, and rehabilitation of victims of torture and deserve our continued support.

As we mark the United Nations International Day in Support of the Victims of Torture, I urge my colleagues to declare their opposition to torture and solidarity with torture survivors by lending their support to this resolution.
