

hope is that the Senate and the House will join together, that we will have bipartisan support in both the House and Senate, and that we will send to the President this year legislation to permanently eliminate the marriage tax penalty. Because if we do not, couples such as Jose and Magdalena Castillo of Joliet, Illinois, will see a $1,150 tax increase just because they are married if we fail to make permanent the elimination of the marriage tax penalty. And if you add up all the couples across America who benefit from the elimination of the marriage tax penalty, 36 million married working couples, it would be a $42 billion tax increase overall.

Let us protect Jose and Magdalena Castillo. Let us permanently eliminate the marriage tax penalty. Let us work together and let us get it done this year.

CORPORATE FRAUD

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, later today President Bush is scheduled to give a major speech, it is billed, on corporate responsibility. His advisers have told us he is going to get tough on corporate wrongdoers. He is even calling for jail time for those who defraud shareholders and who violate Federal law. In addition, the President's advisers let slip recently he is reading a biography of Theodore Roosevelt who had a well-deserved reputation for battling corporate greed. All of this must mean that the President is very serious about ending this season of executive greed and corporate misgovernance in America.

But to use the bully pulpit like Teddy Roosevelt did, you have got to have credibility on the issues at hand. For many of us, the President's credibility on corporate issues has been a problem since his vast, but inexplicable, success as a businessman was revealed a number of years ago. As recently as yesterday, the President and the White House have sought to offer new explanations for why he did not report in a timely manner his 1990 sale of $850,000 worth of stock in a Texas-based energy company just weeks before its value plummeted.

It sounds a lot like Enron. It sounds a lot like WorldCom. It sounds a lot like Adelphia. It sounds a lot like these corporate scams that we have all been so critical of. Previously, the President said he thought regulators lost the documents. He pointed at the regulators. Then last week the White House said it was a mix-up by the lawyers, the son of the President's lawyers; and then yesterday he gave the most plausible explanation. He said, "I still haven't figured it out completely how I made the $850,000." He has not figured it out.

While there are many decent and honest corporate executives and accountants in this country, those who lack integrity have only been emboldened by the permissive environment created by this administration and by those on the other side of the aisle in congressional leadership who never met a regulation that they liked. Companies like Enron and WorldCom and Arthur Andersen obviously believed they could mislead investors with impunity as long as this President, this friend of corporate America, was in office.

And why would they not? In the middle of the Enron scandal, President Bush, on behalf of his corporate friends, proposed a zero-growth budget for the Securities and Exchange Commission even though the SEC itself complained it was too short-staffed to go after these corporate abuses. President Bush supported a weak pension reform bill in the House even though thousands of employees in Texas and around the country lost their retirements because of fraud and mismanagement by the President's friends and his single major contributor and fundraiser at Enron. And the President endorsed an accounting reform bill in the House that had no teeth since it was strongly supported by his friends in the accounting industry.

Does it sound familiar? President Bush has refused to ask for reauthorization of the Superfund tax which would require corporate polluters, again friends of the President, which would require corporate polluters to pay for cleanup of the messes that they make. Instead, he wants to saddle taxpayers with those cleanup costs. The President joined the prescription drug industry, for whom they had a fundraiser raising literally $3 million from the drug industry itself 2 weeks ago, in supporting and pushing through the House a Medicare prescription drug plan that, first of all, privatizes Medicare, and second undercuts seniors' purchasing power and enables the drug industry, the most profitable industry in America, to continue to sustain its outrageous drug prices.

The President has openly supported the idea of turning the Medicare program over to the health insurance industry, again friends and major contributors of the President, and the Social Security program over to Wall Street, again major friends and political supporters and contributors of the President.

Sadly, Mr. Speaker, the list goes on and on and on and on and on. So later today as the country listens with rapt attention to the President's plan for reversing the trend of corporate greed and misdeeds, you will understand if I view this speech with a healthy degree of skepticism.

Civil rights leaders said years ago, "Don't tell me what you believe, tell me what you do and I'll tell you what you believe."

JUVENILE DIABETES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call the Chamber's attention to the serious issue of juvenile diabetes which is usually but not always diagnosed in children and remains with them for life. It has stricken over 16 million Americans, and it kills one American every 3 minutes. By the time that my brief remarks are over, two children will be diagnosed with the disease, kids like my constituent Victor Suarez. Diagnosed at age 14, Victor has to administer daily shots of insulin to keep him from falling into a diabetic coma from which there may be no recovery. Victor's friends must keep constant watch of his condition. This is no way for Victor or any child to live, but unfortunately this scene is repeated millions of times every day across our country.

Mr. Speaker, let us work toward finding more funding for research to ensure that Victor and other children will not be forced to suffer with juvenile diabetes. I congratulate the South Florida chapter of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International as well as its president, Sheldon Anderson, for their sincere commitment to finding a cure for diabetes and its serious complications. Founded in 1991 by a group of dedicated individuals, this south Florida chapter has already contributed over $8 million to diabetes research. Mr. Speaker, I join 274 Members of Congress and 67 Senators who recently signed a letter requesting support for increased juvenile diabetes research funding.

I believe, as do my colleagues, that a cure for juvenile diabetes is just around the bend and that by working together, we can make it a reality.

HONORING THE LIFE OF PETE C. JARAMILLO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HINOJOSA) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Speaker, it is a great honor and personal privilege to stand before you to pay tribute to one of our bravest and finest Americans, Pete C. Jaramillo, a loving father and grandfather, devoted son and brother, courageous soldier, loyal civil servant and great human being.

Pete C. Jaramillo of Belen, New Mexico, passed away on April 26, 2002, after a long illness. He will be remembered for his quiet strength, gentle manner, humility, deep compassion, kindness, and his dignity. He will be deeply missed by his family and friends. Mr. Jaramillo was born in Arroyo Colorado (Red Canyon), New Mexico, a small
