

and the remaining 23,043,439 acres of trust land were established by executive order.

Federally-recognized Indian tribes in South Dakota signed the Treaty of Fort Laramie with the desire to declare peace and thereby perpetuate a Nation-to-Nation relationship with the Federal Government. The common misperception that most Tribes have entered into treaties with the United States serves as a great injustice to Tribes who have entered into such formal and solemn agreements. In 1890 there were 162 established Tribes; 56 of those were established by executive order, 6 by executive order under the authority of Congress, 28 by acts of Congress, 15 by treaty and executive order, 5 by treaty or agreement and an act of Congress, 1 by unratified treaty and 51 by treaty or agreement. The treaty establishing the South Dakota Tribes is a contract negotiated between sovereign nations, relating to peace and alliance formally acknowledged by the signatories of the nations. The United States entered into such agreement because they desired peace and cessions of land from the Sioux Tribes, and in return they made promises that must be upheld. In conclusion, it is appropriate to recognize the special status of the treaty tribes located in South Dakota.●

GUADALUPE MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President I rise today to congratulate the staff and supporters of Guadalupe Mountains National Park as we mark the 30th anniversary of this great natural treasure. Thirty years ago, the National Park Service established the Guadalupe Mountains National Park along the southeastern border of New Mexico and west Texas.

Guadalupe Mountains National Park treasures and protects desert lowlands, canyons, and a relic forest of pines and firs. It also includes one of the world's greatest examples of a non-coral fossil reef. In addition, the rich cultural history and economic opportunities it provides to the region is part of the park's significance.

Throughout my time in the Senate I have worked to protect our natural, cultural, and historical resources. The Guadalupe Mountains National Park is a prime example of the natural beauty of the Southwest. I hope this refuge will provide enjoyment for many future generations.●

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

● Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred June 20, 2001 in Albany, NY. A gay man was beaten while sitting on a bench next to a bike path. The assailants, three teens, approached the victim, used anti-gay slurs, and repeatedly punched him in the head with their fists. Investigators believe the victim was targeted because of his sexual orientation.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.●

WELCOMING TAIWAN'S FIRST LADY, WU SUE-JEN

● Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I want to welcome Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen, First Lady of Taiwan, to the United States.

Madame Chen is a great champion of democracy, both at home and abroad. I applaud her efforts to learn from America's experiences so that she can take those lessons back to Taiwan and its evolving democracy.

During her stay in the United States, Madame Chen has met with many of our nation's finest scholars and statesmen. She has brought with her a wonderful example of leadership, charity and devotion to the American people and continues to strive for human rights and justice at home.

I congratulate Madame Chen on her accomplishments and welcome her to the United States. We look forward to continued friendship with Madame Chen and the Taiwanese people.●

PEACEFUL END TO A TENSE BASEBALL SEASON

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, yesterday marked the end of the Major League Baseball regular season. Fans everywhere have enjoyed a season with Barry Bonds leading the league in hitting, Alex Rodriguez hitting 57 home runs, and Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling combining as perhaps the greatest pitching duo ever. It has been a tremendous season of achievement for many teams. The Minnesota Twins, a team Commissioner Selig wanted to disband last off-season, won the American League Central Division. The Oakland A's set an American League record with a 20-game winning streak and won the American League's Western Division.

Eight teams, and fans from across the country and around the world, are now gearing up for an exciting playoff season. The Twins and the A's, as well as the Anaheim Angels, the St. Louis Cardinals and the San Francisco Giants, have earned the opportunity to continue into the playoffs, to compete for a pennant and even the World Series championship along with last year's champion Arizona Diamondbacks, the New York Yankees and the Atlanta Braves. They are not the eight teams with the highest payrolls or biggest markets. They do share a few things in common: talented players having outstanding seasons, great team play and exceptional management both on and off the field.

We are fortunate that this baseball season is being played to its rightful conclusion and that crisis was avoided on August 30, when negotiators for team owners and the Major League Baseball Players Union reached a new collective bargaining agreement. Announced just two hours before another work stoppage, this agreement saved professional baseball from a disastrous screeching halt to yet another baseball season.

With this agreement baseball can now go about the business of assessing the future of the sport in Montreal. It is unfortunate that this fine city, its team with a number of outstanding players, and its fans have been left in limbo for the past year over the future of the franchise. For a large number of Vermonters, Montreal provides the closest major league venue. This franchise is the major league affiliate for our own minor league Vermont Expos. There are many dedicated Expos fans in my State. Several local towns are doing their best to show their support for keeping the Expos in Montreal. I ask that a letter recently sent by the St. Albans Town Selectboard to the Mayor of Montreal be printed in the RECORD.

The letter follows:

AUGUST 12, 2002.

MAYOR GERALD TREMBLAY,
Montreal, Quebec.

MAYOR TREMBLAY, the St. Albans Town Selectboard wishes to express our utmost hope that the city of Montreal tries everything possible to help retain the Montreal Expos.

Montreal is a beautiful international city with much diversity and many different types of cultures. We believe the Expos are a large part of the city and it serves to bring many people from Northern Vermont to your city every year.

With a downtown stadium, we believe the Expos can flourish once again and help attract many more tourists to your wonderful city. We hope that you and your government are trying everything possible to work with new-interested buyers.

If the Town of St. Albans can be of assistance please feel free to contact us.

Cordially Yours,

TAYT R. BROOKS,
Vice-Chair.

Mr. President, through repeated hearings in the Judiciary Committee, Congress has tried to help the major league baseball owners and players find common ground. After the last work stoppage, we culminated almost a decade of hearings examining labor strife and other problems in major league baseball, when we enacted the Curt Flood Act in 1998. Senator HATCH was the lead sponsor of that measure, and I was his principal cosponsor. It was a bipartisan effort to clarify the law. By that effort we hoped to promote labor peace in Major League Baseball.

The principle purpose of the law was to make clear that federal antitrust laws apply to the relationships
