The Senate met at 9:45 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable DEBBIE STABENOW, a Senator from the State of Michigan.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:
Almighty God, all power and authority belong to You. You hold the universe in Your hands and focus Your attention on the planet Earth. We humble ourselves before You. You alone are Lord of all nations and have called our Nation to be a leader of the family of nations. By Your providence You have brought to this Senate the men and women through whom You can rule wisely in soul-sized matters that affect the destiny of this Nation. With awe and wonder at Your trust in them, the Senators press on in consideration of the homeland security legislation.
Grip their minds with three assurances to sustain them today: You are Sovereign of this land and they are accountable to You; You are able to guide their thinking, speaking, and decisions if they will ask You; and You will bring them to unity so that they may lead our Nation in its strategies of

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, November 15, 2002.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Debbie Stabenow, a Senator from the State of Michigan, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Robert C. Byrd,
President pro tempore.

Ms. STABENOW thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Madam President, there is going to be a period of morning business until 10 a.m. this morning with the time to be equally divided between the two leaders. At 10 a.m., the majority leader or his designee is to be recognized, and at that time there will be an effort to move to the conference report on terrorism. A rolloall vote is expected on the motion as soon as possible. At 10:45, the Senate will vote on cloture on the substitute amendment to the Homeland Security Act.

There is much work to be done today, including completing the homeland security legislation. The chairman of the Banking Committee is here, and also the chairman of the Rules Committee, the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. Dodd. They have worked long and hard on the terrorism insurance legislation. The House passed that last night, and that will be passed as soon as possible. We are not going to leave here until that legislation is passed—whether it takes the next 10 minutes or the next 10 days. Both leaders have indicated it will be passed. It is something the White House wants very badly.

Finally, we have things worked out. We now have a conference report. I don't know if it has been given to us yet. But, if not, it will be presented shortly.

I would indicate for all those who are listening that there are ways: For example, someone could call for a quorum. Of course, we could call for a live quorum immediately. That is going to happen.

We are not going to have games played with terrorism insurance any longer. This legislation is supported by the President of the United States and the two leaders. It passed the House, and the legislation is going to pass.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the time necessary to be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees. The Senator from Connecticut.

HOMELAND SECURITY AND TERRORISM INSURANCE

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I am curious, if I could get the attention of the distinguished majority whip, what is the plan this morning, if I can inquire of how we are going to proceed? Mr. REID. We, of course, in 55 minutes, are going to vote on cloture on homeland security. Prior to that time, it would be our desire to move to the very important antiterrorism legislation that has been here for more than a year. We are going to do that. We would like to do it by unanimous consent. As the chairman knows, it is a nondebatable motion to move to that. We are going to have a vote on that in the near future. We do not know exactly when.

We are going to try to get a unanimous consent agreement, perhaps, to only have one vote and get rid of the legislation. That would be preferable, rather than trying to mess around with a cloture motion on it because, if necessary, we will file cloture on it.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. REID. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. Is the Senator talking about a conference report when he says it is a nondebatable motion? Is he talking about a conference report?

Mr. REID. Yes. What I am talking about is, we have terrorism insurance legislation passed in the House last night.

Mr. BYRD. Is that a conference report?

Mr. REID. Yes, it is a conference report.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield further for a question?

Mr. REID. Yes. I am happy to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. I am taken aback by the notion that we are not going to be able to go to this legislation by some unanimous consent, that we are going to have to invoke cloture, and all the rest of it. I do not quite understand where that opposition is coming from.

In fact, it passed the House on a voice vote without any opposition whatever expressed over on the House side. And this is something that has been laboriously worked over under the very effective leadership of my very distinguished and able colleague from Connecticut. I was operating under the assumption that we would be able to go to it in short order.

People will want to make some speeches and explanatory statements. I would assume, although I don't see any need for any lengthy debate or a long involvement of time in order to finally conclude this legislation.

Mr. REID. I respond to my friend, the chairman of the Bank Committee, logic, reason, common sense has not applied to this legislation. We have worked on this for more than a year, and just when it appears we are over the hill, some phantom objection comes and we are not able to do it.

We are now at this point, and I think that what should happen is there should be a couple of hours. This is some of the most important legislation that has passed this body. It is extremely important to all sectors of our economy. I think we should have a couple hours to explain the legislation and then have a vote on it and get it out of here and send it to the President's desk. I think that would be the preference of a vast majority of the people here.

But I want to make it very clear to everyone here, if we cannot do it in a logical, reasonable way, we are going to do whatever it takes to get this legislation out of here. If we have to work tomorrow, Sunday, Monday, this legislation will pass. And we are now in the procedural where alternatives to slowing this down are very slim.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REID. I am happy to yield to the President pro tempore.

Mr. BYRD. I hope we are not going to work on Sunday. That is a religious holiday for this Senator. We do observe religious holidays around here. Furthermore, I think the distinguished Democratic whip's mention of reason and logic and common sense should be applied to the homeland security legislation as well.

I hope all Senators within the sound of my voice here in this Chamber and listening on the TV.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time controlled by the majority leader has expired.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I hope that all Senators within the sound of my voice will vote no on cloture today. Here is a 484-page bill that we have not seen until tonight.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, I yield, if I may have an additional 2 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, could the Senator have an additional 10 minutes so we could discuss this?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. I just wondered, has the Senator noticed that the newspapers are filled now with stories about provisions that are in this legislation that have appeared, in a sense, out of nowhere? All of a sudden they have manifested themselves in this legislation, provisions that were not in this bill before, dealing with unrelated, extraneous matters.

Mr. BYRD. Yes, exactly, one of which happens to appear to target a facility for a district represented by a Member of the House from Texas. We do not know what that facility is, but it has been slipped into this measure.

Mr. SARBANES. I say to the distinguished Senator, I was not even aware of that one. That one has not yet risen to the level of being covered in these newspaper stories.

Mr. BYRD. I think that is where I got a glimmer of it, somewhere in a newspaper story.

Mr. SARBANES. I missed that. But that is just another example of what may well be stacked away—it is not as though this is simply or straightforwardly a revision or an alteration of provisions directly related to homeland security which we have been dealing with here, and so there have been some changes or modifications.

As I understand it, it is becoming increasingly evident that there are a number of provisions in here that have nothing to do with homeland security. Is that the Senator’s understanding?

Mr. BYRD. Exactly. And I am very much alarmed by it. I spent 3 hours yesterday talking about some of these provisions. And, of course, there is a provision in here to reward the pharmaceutical companies. That is pork for pharmaceutical companies. That just came to light. That did not go through any committee. That had no hearings, no testimony of witnesses—just slipped into the bill in the wee hours of the morning of Wednesday. It is alarming.

We are supposed to pass this bill. It provides for a massive shift of power to the executive branch, a massive shift, out of the hands of Congress. I think we ought to at least have a few more days to study this bill, have our staffs able to study it, and advise us as to what is in it. That is all I am asking.

I do not doubt cloture will be invoked at some point, but it should not be invoked today. We ought to at least have until sometime next week to further study this before cloture clamps its beartrap on us.

Mr. SARBANES. I think the Senator raises a very important point. It would at least then give us the weekend to go through the provisions of this proposal.

Mr. BYRD. Yes. I thank the distinguished Senator from Maryland for his observations.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I wonder if the Senator from West Virginia will yield further for a question. Mr. BYRD. I will be glad to, if I may do so.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, if the Senator from West Virginia continues to have time—

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.

Mr. DORGAN. I would like to make an inquiry similar to the inquiry made by my colleague from Maryland.

There is an article in this morning’s newspaper which contains some information which is very surprising to me, which was referenced briefly yesterday on the Senate floor, relative to the homeland security bill. This homeland security bill has a provision in it which says:

‘‘Riding along on legislation to create a new federal Department of Homeland Security is a White House-backed provision that could head off dozens of potential lawsuits against . . . pharmaceutical companies.’’

It goes on to further explain what this is. It says: Richard Diamond, a spokesperson for the retiring majority leader in the other body, RICHARD ARMEY: . . . said the provision was inserted because ‘‘it was something the White House wanted. It wasn’t [Arney’s] idea.’’

This is a circumstance where a homeland security bill contains a provision dealing with protection for pharmaceutical companies. The pharmaceutical companies, according to a Wall Street Journal article, spent $16 million.

Mr. BYRD. How much?

Mr. DORGAN. They spent $16 million in the recent election. Much of it went through organizations such as Seniors United and others set up to move this money out under the guise of an organization called Seniors United in order to defeat Democratic lawmakers and support Republican lawmakers.

The point is, this provision now is slipped into a homeland security bill. It has nothing to do with homeland security. Yet it is a provision that likely will be very beneficial to the pharmaceutical industry that spent $16 million in the last election.

Mr. BYRD. It is a blatant payoff to the pharmaceutical industry for their massive contributions to candidates during the election. That is a massive payoff.

Mr. DORGAN. If I may inquire further, has the Senator from West Virginia or have other Senators heard from the President or the White House by what justification would they insert—again, the White House apparently wanted it; that is what the majority leader of the House says—a special provision benefiting one industry in something called homeland security.

Has anyone heard an explanation of that?

Mr. BYRD. That was very revealing what the majority leader’s staff person from the other body had to say, pointing the finger at the White House. That was very revealing. I hope we have more time.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BYRD. How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARPER). There are 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. BYRD. I yield.

Mr. SARBANES. One paragraph follows right along with what the able Senator from North Dakota was bringing to our attention. I want to quote it: Most alarming is that the version of the legislation passed by the House on Wednesday—with the Senate apparently soon to follow—is a 500-page, 11th hour rewrite few lawmakers have read and perhaps none fully understand.

Mr. BYRD. Well stated.

Mr. SARBANES. Continuing: New snakes slither out daily, but doubtless many will remain hidden until long after the measure is enacted into law.

Mr. BYRD. Well stated. Well stated. I hope Senators will take notice of that editorial. I hope the Senator will put that in the RECORD.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print the editorial in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Sun, Nov. 15, 2002] response to the myriad failures that made the nation vulnerable on Sept. 11, 2001, offers no assurance that Americans will be safer. Instead, it poses new dangers.

Most disturbing is that the version of the legislation passed by the House on Wednesday—with the Senate apparently soon to follow—is a 500-page, 11th-hour rewrite few lawmakers have read comprehensively understands. New snakes slither out daily, but doubtless many will remain hidden until long after the measure is enacted into law. How later on does that protect the homeland be so scary? Let us count some ways:

First, the basic concept is flawed. Combining 22 separate departments and agencies with nearly 200,000 employees into one super agency is a recipe for bureaucratic chaos that will distract workers from their security duties rather than sharpen their focus. New bosses, new locations, new personnel rules, new rivalries, new turf battles. These are the issues that will most concern workers in the years just ahead. How helpful is that?

The recent squabble between the FBI and the Pentagon, Tobacco and firearms, arms, neither of which is to be included in the new department, demonstrates there is little chance that blending separate agencies to eliminate overlap and clarity control can be anything but a bloody task.

This proposal came originally from Democrats and was opposed by President Bush. But the suggestion that the sweep action that promised Americans greater security was so great that Mr. Bush decided to board the train before it ran over him.

Second, the White House refused to accept a Senate provision that would have created an independent commission to investigate government failures that preceded the Sept. 11 attacks, squelching what looked like the last chance the American people would have to look at what they did in the election.

The American people do not deserve this kind of approach. I appreciate the Senator bringing it to our attention again. I know there is an amendment to strike these items which I strongly support. I think it is absolutely outrageous that while we are trying to do something serious for the American people, we would see this kind of help put into this bill for an industry that is already heavily subsidized by taxpayers.

Mr. BYRD. Absolutely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Absolutely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate be adjourned for a little over 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request for 10 additional minutes for the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I didn’t hear the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request that the Senator from West Virginia be recognized for an additional 10 minutes, Mr. President?

Mr. DASCHLE. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Let me compliment the distinguished Senator from Michigan for her correct, characteristic, acute perception of what is in this bill. She spoke about this very item on yesterday. I wonder how many Senators were listening yesterday, and I wonder how many Senators are listening today, quite appropriately, calling it to the attention of the Senate and the American people. I thank her.

I yield to the distinguished Senator from Florida, Mr. NELSON.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for yielding to me. Isn’t it interesting, in the eleventh hour, the closing hours of the session when the country is at war and a bill that is perceived to be vital to the defense interests of this country.

Mr. BYRD. Hear, hear.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. That there would be suddenly inserted or deleted—

Mr. BYRD. Oh, yes.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. For example, the provision that was deleted that passed unanimously in the Senate that we would have a bipartisan commission to understand the ramifications of September 11? That was in our version of the bill. And because the White House objected to that, even though an overwhelming vote had taken place in the House of Representatives, it was deleted. And because there was such an outcry from the American people, they are going to try to resurrect some bipartisan commission.

But it shows the legislative sleight of hand in the rush to adjournment that would now delete a provision so important to the American people. Such a commission would create all kinds of havoc, as enumerated by the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Michigan.

I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Florida for his observations and for his contribution and for his service to his country, his service here in the Senate.

Liberty, freedom, justice, and right cry out today to be heard here on the Senate floor. I urge Senators not to vote today for cloture. Let’s see what else is in this bill. Let us have time to amend it, to correct the errors that may be in it, on behalf of the people. I ask that we not vote for cloture today.

I suppose my pleadings, my importunings will fall upon deaf ears in many areas of the Senate Chamber, but please, let our constituents be heard on this bill which comes to us in the name of homeland security but within it has many injustices, many violations, many things that we would love to hear the Senator’s comments—is with regard to freedom of information and the provision of that information.

I yield to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from West Virginia has done a tremendous service to our Nation by pointing out, over the last several hours while we have been in session, some of the flaws in this 484-page bill, which many of us have been trying to study.

One of those flaws—and I would love to hear the Senator’s comments—to the American people, and to the people in Congress who are responsible for oversight of this new Department. Is it not true that in this new Department there have been given broad waivers of opportunity for the administration—anybody—to pick outside advisory committees to come in and give advice, to make specific policy recommendations with regard to the direction of the country—not unlike what we saw with regard to our energy policy that have any of that information made available to the public, where it can be challenged in situations where there is a serious concern about conflicts of interest and about how people might approach these issues.

I think, if I have read this right, there is an almost blanket ability for the administration—any agency, and not necessarily Republican or Democrat—to completely keep from Congress and the State, keep from others the ability to understand what is taking place within the policymaking arrangements of this new Department.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator for what he has just called to the attention of the Senate. What he has made reference to, I have every reason to believe, is section 671 dealing with advisory committees. Let me read it. I will have more to say about this. As a matter of fact, I will have an amendment to change this. It is section 671: Advisory Committees.

(A) The Secretary or any officer, from whom such Secretary may establish, appoint members of, and use the service of, advisory committees, as the Secretary may deem necessary. An advisory committee established under this section may be exempted by the Secretary from Public Law 92–463, but the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register announcing the establishment of such committee and identifying its purpose and membership. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, members of an advisory committee that is exempted by the Secretary under the preceding sentence who are special Government employees (as that term is defined in section 202 of title 18, United States Code) shall be eligible for certification under subsection (b)(3) of section 208 of Title 18, United States Code, for official actions taken as a member of such advisory committee.

A separate reading of this language does not stir one’s blood, but a clear understanding of the laws that are referenced begin to stir one’s blood.

Under current law, advisory committees may be appointed and the President may exempt a committee on a case-by-case basis. The public has a right to know what these advisory committees are doing. The public has a right to know what is going on in Government, in these advisory committees.

But here is a provision that will give the Secretary blank authority to keep from the public the knowledge of what these advisory committees are saying, as to what’s going on, and so on.

Mr. CORZINE. Will the Senator yield for one more quick question?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. CORZINE. Am I not correct this was neither in the original Lieberman proposal that came out of the Governmental Affairs Committee, nor was it in the compromise proposals that were brought before we went into recess? This is another one of these midnight strikes, additions, that is completely outside of any of the review process that we normally have, is that right?

Mr. BYRD. To the best of my knowledge, we have not been given the opportunity to examine this bill, inform us this is something that is new. So the President and the Secretary will be given blanket authority. Whereas, at the present time, under the Advisory Committee Act—I believe that is what it is called, and it is referenced in this language—one has to see what is being said behind the lines here. But now the Secretary would have blanket authority to shut out the press. The press ought to be aware of what is in this bill. And the distinguished Senator from New Jersey is calling the attention of the Senate and the world—may we have order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator in order.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 36 seconds.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I want to take advantage of these few seconds to thank the very able Senator from West Virginia for raising these extremely important questions about this legislation. This editorial made reference to that was in the Baltimore Sun talked about all these other provisions that were coming in, and it went on to talk about the basic concept of this bill itself—something the Senator has been saying on the floor of the Senate. Listen to this. They are talking about the homeland security bill:

First, the basic concept is flawed. Combining 22 separate departments and agencies with nearly 200,000—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. I will quote this:

First, the basic concept is flawed. Combining 22 separate departments and agencies with nearly 200,000 employees into one super agency is a recipe for bureaucratic chaos that will distract workers from their security duties, rather than sharpen their focus. New bosses, new locations, new personnel rules, new rivalries, new turf battles—these are the issues committees are going to face in the years just ahead. How helpful is that? The recent squabble between the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, neither of which is to be included in the new Department, demonstrates there is little chance of blending separate agencies to eliminate overlapping and clarifying control can be anything but a bloody task.

Then they go on to say:

Union rights and other worker protections will be stripped from the employees of the new Department because the President says he needs new flexibility to hire, fire, and move people around. No convincing national security rationale has been offered to justify this broad power grab.

The problems inherent in this legislation, I have come to the conclusion, will divert focus, energy, and attention from the substantive challenge of providing homeland security to this kind of a procedural fight.

They are going to have to get a new location, new organization. They are going to be spending all their time on getting the boxes on the chart instead of focusing on the substance of the job that confronts them.

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. That is one of the basic points the Senator has been making consistently, as I understand it. Mr. BYRD. How telling, how telling, how revealing what the distinguished Senator from Maryland just said in this excellent editorial in the Baltimore Sun. I thank him for that.

Senators need to wake up. Senators need to wake up as to what is going on. Mr. President, I do not intend to take more time than I have because I know the leaders want to speak. How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes and ten seconds.

Mr. BYRD. Does the distinguished Senator from Maryland have anything further to say?

Mr. SARBANES. No. I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield me 30 seconds for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for an inquiry? The majority leader is in the Chamber and will take just a few seconds to offer a unanimous consent request. Can that happen? Then this dialogue can take place for a long time after that.

Mr. BYRD. Yes, I yield to the majority leader. I hope I retain my 2 minutes.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from West Virginia retain the remainder of his time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia retains the remainder of his time.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, after I have propounded this unanimous consent request.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 3210

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately upon passage of H.R. 5005, the homeland defense bill, the Senate proceed to the terrorism insurance conference report to accompany H.R. 3210; that the Senate then vote immediately on cloture on the conference report; that if cloture is invoked, the Senate then immediately without any interval of debate, vote on passage of the conference report; that if cloture is not invoked, the conference report continue to be debatable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?  Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, retaining the right to object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I do not fully understand this request, I want to know what this does to homeland security. Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, if I can respond to the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, this has no effect on the debate on homeland defense. All Senators are protected with regard to their rights under cloture, if cloture is invoked on homeland security. This only deals with the next issue, the terrorism insurance bill, to be taken up once homeland defense has been debated.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, further reserving my right to object, and I will be very brief, I am supportive of the measure the distinguished majority leader is seeking to advance in connection with this request. Does this in any way have a psychological effect with respect to the cloture we are going to vote on this morning?

I plead to Senators—further reserving my right to object—I plead with Senators not to invoke cloture today. I understand cloture will be invoked at some point. I just hope it will not be today. I hope we will have the weekend for our staffs to study this bill so that we will be better prepared after we have had more time to study it.

What I am concerned about is the desire to get to the bill about which the majority leader is speaking and which I fully support. I hope that desire will not have some psychological impact on Senators causing them to vote for cloture today.

I wonder if our two leaders would propose a unanimous consent request that would vitiate a cloture vote today. They clotted the vote over until Monday, but the cloture vote is going to be invoked, but for God’s sake, for Heaven’s sake, for the sake of liberty and justice, and for the sake of Senators being able to understand what they are voting on in this 484-page bill that has been sprung on us—and we have only been able to see it at the beginning of Wednesday, the day before yesterday—would the leaders please consider at least vitiating that vote and putting it over until Monday so that we and our staffs will have some more time for study?

For Heaven’s sake, would the majority leader and minority leader consider this request? That is all I am asking.

I know cloture is going to be invoked at some point, but for Heaven’s sake, we have a right to know what is in this 484-page bill, and the people out there who are watching this debate through those electronic lenses have a right also to know. We have a duty to know what we are voting on. At this moment, as we get ready to invoke cloture, we do not know what is in this bill.

Mr. President, I remove my reservation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank all of my colleagues. I thank in particular the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. I yield the floor.

ORDER OF PROCEEDURE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia retains the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order which, as I understand, acknowledges 2 minutes remaining for Senator BYRD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia has 1 minute 30 seconds remaining, and Senator LOTT retains 4½ minutes.

Mr. BYRD. I yield 1 minute to Senator LEVIN.

STATUS OF AMENDMENTS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: A large number of amendments have been filed which, on their face, appear to be relevant to this bill. If cloture is invoked, not only non-germane but even relevant amendments would be precluded from being offered.

My parliamentary inquiry is this: How many of the amendments which have been filed and reviewed by the Parliamentarian would fall? Mr. BYRD. What bill is the Senator referencing? Mr. LEVIN. Homeland security. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will attempt to answer that question.

Mr. LEVIN. The list I have, they all appear, most appear to be relevant amendments, but because of the technical rules, many of these would not be allowed apparently; many would not be allowed if they are not strictly germane. How many of these amendments are non-germane in the eyes of the Parliamentarian?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Parliamentarian advises the Chair that of the list of approximately 40 amendments, preliminary analysis indicates 10 are not germane and roughly 30 are either germane or are arguably germane. Mr. LEVIN. That was not the question. The question is, Of the amendments reviewed, how many would not be strictly germane and therefore would fall?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 10 amendments.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, Homeland security.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, we have drifted into a debate which I think we should be engaged in now, and that is a debate on whether we should vote for cloture on the pending amendment and, therefore, cloture to proceed with homeland security.

At this late hour, I do not think anybody is going to be convinced in terms of whether this is a good thing or a bad thing as it is written. I think people have pretty well reached that decision. I simply would like to make a couple of points that I think are important in making the decision.

I begin by saying I do not think anybody set out with a goal of homeland security becoming an issue that sort of divided us along party lines. I do not think anybody had that intention, but the net result is it happened. We now are at a point where we have one last opportunity to do this bill.

I make two arguments for doing it that I think are strong, and I make them not to the people who are for it—they are already convinced and I hope they will not listen because I do not want to change their mind. I want to make my argument to the people who are on the other side of the issue.

The first argument is that we have had an election. It is very easy in elections to read into them what you want to read into them. Elections are sort of like the Bible in the sense that everyone finds something in them that they want to find and they neglect the things they do not want to see. I do think one of the themes of the election was a desperate desire of the American people to see a homeland security bill passed.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. Whether it was this one or another one, I think that is open to interpretation, but I think they wanted to see it passed.

I certainly will yield.

Mr. BYRD. Just one quick observation. I hope the Senator will delete from his remarks that which will appear in the RECORD any reference to the Holy Book in the context that he was speaking. I do not think that has any place in this argument. I say that lovingly and sincerely.

Mr. GRAMM. Well, I appreciate that. Let me remove “the Bible” and put “teaching” or “holy script.”

What we tend to do with revered documents—whether it is the Constitution, the Koran, or some other holy teaching—is we take from it what we like and we tend to leave out what we do not like, and that was the point I was making. I thank my colleague for making the point.

I simply say to my colleagues this is a compromise, even though it may not be one that the Senator finds supportable. But I ask the following question: Does he have a guarantee that the bill that will be adopted in the new Congress will be closer to what he wants than this bill? Does he have a guarantee that in the new Congress the concerns that were dealt with here will be dealt with?

I guess really what I am saying—and not doing a very effective job in saying it—is the following: I ask my colleagues who oppose the bill to look at it in its totality, to look at the compromises you are making our right to the purse, giving public employees an opportunity to have an input but not a veto. We all know the bill is going to pass now or it is going to pass later, and so will the bill passed in the new Congress. Is the lik—

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is absolutely right in what he says with reference to the question, will the bill be better 3 months from now? I say there is an excellent chance the bill would be better, that the failings of this compromise as brought to light by the press and by Members, through the help of their staffs, the things that they are complaining about in this bill, just like we would have time to remove those after debate and we would come out with a better bill. I think always that more debate results in a better end product.

Mr. GRAMM. Whether it was this one or another one, I think that is open to interpretation, but I think they wanted to find and they neglect the body finds something in them that is not a good decision.

In fact, I may or may not agree with the President power to veto a homeland security reorganization, but by strengthening their ability to have input into it. That represented an additional compromise.

The bill before us is not a bill that all of us support. I know my dear colleague from West Virginia is very sincere in his opposition, but I say this: The first major issue that the distinguished Senator from West Virginia raised, in opposition to the original bill, was that it interfered with Congress’s power of the purse by giving the President power—and the Senator and others argued arbitrary power—to rewrite appropriation bills.

I argue to my colleagues that whether they support or oppose this bill, that concern was responded to, and the bill before us sets an amount that the President has flexibility in, but it gives him no power, without reprogramming—which means the approval of the chairman of the appropriations committee—to move money around.

I simply say to my colleagues this is a compromise, even though it may not be one that the Senator finds supportable. But I ask the following question: Does he have a guarantee that the bill that will be adopted in the new Congress will be closer to what he wants than this bill? Does he have a guarantee that in the new Congress the concerns that were dealt with here will be dealt with?

I think if we were on the other side, what I would probably conclude is I am not for the bill and I am going to vote against it, but doing it in the new Congress with the makeup of the new Congress will probably produce a bill that I like less and that the victories that have been won in it—and there have been some; this is a compromise—would be lost, could be changed, and waiting 3 months to get a bill that might be worse from my point of view is not a bad decision.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is absolutely right whether it is a good idea or a requirement to include the appropriations process. That was a major weakness of the original bill, and the Senator from Texas knows that. He had a lot to do with a compromise that developed with respect to the appropriations process—he and Senator STEVENS, above all, on that side of the aisle. That part has been vastly improved. So I have not had much to say in my expressions of opposition to the way we are proceeding. I have had little to say except to commend the Senate and say I will compliment the distinguished Senator from Texas because he has privately told me upon occasion that that was almost an unassailable position I was taking with reference to that appropriations process within the constitutional system.

This measure has gone a long way. It has not gone all the way, but it has gone a long way. I have had very little to say about that. But let me say, would we have a better bill 3 months later?

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President. I ask for an additional 4 minutes if the Senator is going to speak. I want to conclude with three remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, with reference to the question, will the bill be better 3 months from now? I say there is an excellent chance the bill would be better, that the failings of this compromise as brought to light by the press and by Members, through the help of their staffs, the things that they are complaining about in this bill, just like we would have time to remove those after debate and we would come out with a better bill. I think always that more debate results in a better end product.

As far as I am concerned, the answer is yes. 3 months from now we could have a better bill. We would have more time. Our staff would have more time. The press would have more time. I am just pleading for us not to invoke cloture today so we can have at least the week to look at this bill. I simply say to my colleagues this is not a good decision.

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SARBANES. The question, will the bill be better 3 months from now? I say there is an excellent chance the bill would be better 3 months later?

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield, but I do want to make sure I have 3 minutes at the end to sum up and we are 5 minutes from the vote.

Mr. SARBANES. One of the things we could do if we had more time is get the special interest provisions out of this bill. As I understand it, and with appropriate respect to the Senator from Texas, those provisions were never in the alternatives being offered in the Senate as we considered homeland security.

In fact, I may or may not agree with your provisions on homeland security and think it should be done differently, but at least it was homeland security. Now we discover and are discovering every moment there are other special interest provisions out of this bill. As I understand it, and with appropriate respect to the Senator from Texas, those provisions were never in the alternatives being offered in the Senate as we considered homeland security.

First of all, this bill results from three things: One is the old Gramm-Miller substitute with which we are all familiar and we debated for 6 weeks. It also includes compromises that were reached with three Democrat Members to try to increase input that public employees have in the process. I am first to say it does not give them veto power, but it gives them a greater degree to be heard. The third thing it entails is a compromise with the House. We had to meet with Members of the House to try to bring the two bills together, given we are at the end of the session and wish to pass the bill in the House and we could pass it in the Senate.

Are there special interest provisions in the bill? There are. But does anyone believe we would be willing to compromise in February or March and not have special interest provisions in the bill? I am proud that my colleague has noted I didn’t have any in the substitute we offered.

I say the following in addressing the important point of the Senator from West Virginia, and then I will conclude. I believe this is a good amendment. I believe it is a result of 6 weeks of work. It is a compromise that has been made, and then an additional compromise has been made on top of that. I believe from my point of view we might get a better bill in February, but I don’t believe from the point of view of the opponents of this bill they would get a better bill. And to the extent we got greater support, we would get a bill that is not as good.

Secondly, I remind my dear colleague from West Virginia that when Benjamin Franklin read the Constitution, he asked himself: Is this the best product that we are going to get? As he knows, better than I, there were things in it he was doubtful of. I am not comparing this 484 pages to what, in a secular sense, is a document that is pretty holy to me and the Senator from West Virginia, and that is the Constitution.

But the point is relevant. This is a compromise. Even the Senator said his biggest concern has been dealt with. I say to critics, the fact that is the case says something about the fact that there is a genuine effort to compromise. I am not asking my colleagues that have taken a hard position to vote yes. I know that will not happen. I know I will not convince the Senator from West Virginia, but I hope I will convince him of two things.

The first is the most important one, and that is this bill is not all bad and there are some good things in the bill and there has been some legitimate effort to compromise. Second, when we do get a vote, we are not in a position where we need to go above and act and adopt the bill.

I thank my colleague for the debate. Probably the Senator from West Virginia has had more impact in changing this bill than anyone else because of the strength of his arguments. I simply say, it is a long way from what he would like. I have voted on many bills here in my 18 years in the Senate, and they were a long way from what I liked. But you ultimately come down to, essentially, these circumstances: the following questions: Is it going to get any better? Might it get worse? Is it worth waiting 3 months to find out?

My conclusion, and it is one I feel very strongly about, is that I believe it is a good bill. I don’t believe it would get better with time, especially from the point of view of people who are concerned about workers’ rights. And finally, waiting 3 months does not serve anybody’s interest, that there will be more special interest provisions in it 4 months from now than there are right now.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, all time is expired on this; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. That is right.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I advise all Senators, we heard a lot of debate this morning. There will be immediately an up-or-down vote on cloture on the Gramm-Miller substitute amendment to the Homeland Security Act. On our side this is opposed by Senator BYRD. It is my understanding that Senator LIEBERMAN will vote in favor of the cloture motion.

Mr. DORGAN, Mr. President, I wish to reinforce of the Senator from Texas where this negotiation took place?

Mr. ROBERTS. Regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. Under the previous order, the clerk will report.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from——

Mr. ROBERTS. I object.

Mr. BYRD. I know the Senator object——

Mr. ROBERTS, I object.

Mr. BYRD. I yield the floor.

Thomas Jefferson said good men with reverence to Benjamin Franklin, when the Constitutional Convention ended we are told a lady approached Benjamin Franklin with the question: Dr. Franklin, what have you given us? His response: A republic, Madam, if you can keep it.

That is what is wrong with this bill. That is the problem. The third leg of the trinity here is this compromise, which was related to us by the distinguished Senator from Texas, is that third leg, that compromise that he spoke of, which was entered into with the House so that the House could go on to fix this, virtually without debate, that is the leg I think we could improve with an additional 3 months. That is the leg which has the major flaw. That is the leg which has the daggier pointed to the heart of the Republic, which we all love. It is that leg which I think another month or 2 months or 3 months would vastly improve, I say with all due respect.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I have the time.

Mr. SARBANES. I say to the Senator, I think it is clear, I understand his point on the homeland security provisions about now or next year. But it seems to me clear that next year you will not have these special interest provisions that are in this legislation. They were not in your legislation. They have been put in here by the House. Some of them are absolutely outrageous.

Mr. GRAMM. Let me say when Senator MILLER and I wrote the substitute, it is true we did not have any special interest provisions in it. It is true that there are a few special interest provisions in this bill. But I would have to say—without getting into an argument with anybody on what may be my last words in the Senate—that more often than not when you are negotiating between the two bodies, you end up with some provisions, (a) you don’t like, and (b) that have been promised by some special interest. I would like to say to the Senator from Texas that I am sure my colleagues will remember me going through bills at midnight looking at proposed amendments that were going to be accepted—seldom have I seen a bill that had none of those. I am not going to be here in future years, so I guess I will read about it in the paper. But if we do not invoke cloture, I would be willing to bet good money, and I hope to have it to bet at that time, that there will be more special interest provisions in it 4 months from now than there are right now.

Mr. REID, Mr. President, all time is expired on this; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. That is right.
that shows up now, today, that says there will be special liability protections for the pharmaceutical industry. And the majority leader of the House, Mr. ARMY, says: Well, I put it in, but it wasn’t my idea; it was the White House.

I am asking, was there a negotiation someplace, sometime, between some people, of which I am unaware? Because I have heard of no such negotiation by which that provision should have ended up in this bill. I inquire of the Senator from Texas where this negotiation occurred. Who was involved in it? Who made the decision that a special protection for the pharmaceutical industry that just spent $16 million in the last election ought to be stuck in this bill? Who was involved in it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired. The Senator from Texas has 1 minute.

Mr. GRAMM. I am glad the Senator picked one with which I am totally familiar.

In the Senate bill, we had a provision whereby the Federal Government indemnified those manufacturers that produced items to be used in the war on terrorism whereby the taxpayer would pay liability that arose from it. I was never much for that provision, but I was desperately trying to get the votes to prevail, and so I took that provision.

The House had a provision that limited liability, similar to what we did in World War II what we have done in most major conflicts. When you produce an item for defense purposes, there is a limited liability. It seemed to me that, rather than the taxpayer bearing the burden, forcing these cases into Federal court and limiting liability was a preferable choice.

That is where the negotiation came from. This was not a provision out of the clear blue sky. We had a provision, they had a provision, and we took less liability than they had. This is a good provision of the bill.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I rise in support of cloture on the Homeland Security bill because our country needs a unified effort to defend our shores. But I want my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to know that I am ashamed of the tactics that you have used. And this Senator will not forget what you and your patrons in the pharmaceutical industry have done to this bill and to the American people in the dark of the night. It appears that the $12 million PhRMA donated during the last election cycle can buy more than a handful of House and Senate seats. It can also buy a sneak attack on people—autistic children—who have been harmed by vaccines.

I say to my friends across the aisle and to my friends in the pharmaceutical industry: sneaking this unrelated provision into critical legislation like Homeland Security is not the way to make good public policy. It is un-American, and something to be ashamed of.

Why should the parents of autistic children—children who were injured by thimerosal in vaccines—lose some of their legal options in the name of Homeland Security? They too care about the security of our nation, but you do not doubt their love and concern for their precious vulnerable children. The homeland security bill is not an appropriate vehicle to make this change to the vaccine injury compensation program on behalf of one interest group.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002

Pendency:

Thompson (for Gramm) Amendment No. 4901, in the nature of a substitute.

Lieberman/McCain Amendment No. 4902 (to Amendment No. 4901), to establish within the legislative branch the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States.

Dodd Amendment No. 4901 (to Amendment No. 4902), to provide for workforce enhancement grants to fire departments.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the substitute amendment No. 4901 to H.R. 5005, the Homeland Security Act of 2002. The motion requires three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to.

The majority leader.

AMENDMENT NO. 4902

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Lieberman amendment No. 4902 be in order.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I very respectfully make a point of order that amendment No. 4902 is not germane. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order. The amendment falls.

AMENDMENT NO. 4901 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4902

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4911.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what is happening? What was the request? What has happened?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have called up amendment No. 4911. I would like it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, parliametary inquiry. Parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what was the request agreed to; what happened? What was the decision of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A unanimous consent request that the pending first-degree amendment be in order was objected to. A point of order was then made against the amendment on the grounds that it was not germane. The Chair sustained the point of order, and that amendment fell.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. There was so much noise in the Chamber that many of us could not hear what was going on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE], for Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 4911 to amendment No. 4901.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide that certain provisions of the Act shall not take effect, and for other purposes.)

At the end, add the following:

TITLE XVIII—NONEFFECTIVE PROVISIONS

SEC. 1801. NONEFFECTIVE PROVISIONS.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, (including any effective date provision of this Act) the following provisions of this Act shall not take effect:

(1) Section 308(b)(2)(B) (i) through (xiv).
(2) Section 311(d).
(3) Subtitle G of title VIII.
(4) Section 871.
(5) Section 890.
(6) Section 1707.
(7) Sections 1714, 1715, 1716, and 1717.

(b) Application of Federal Advisory Committee Act.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of section 232, any advisory group described under that paragraph shall not be exempt from the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(c) Waiver.—Notwithstanding section 833(d), the Secretary shall waive subsection (a) of that section, only if the Secretary determines that the waiver is required in the interest of homeland security.

(d) The amendment made by subsection (a)(1) of this section shall be effective one day after enactment.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that during the next 90 minutes—that is until 1:30 today—there be no action. I wish to give a lengthy speech, but rather than debate tonight, I wish to discuss the matter now before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I do not want to give a lengthy speech, but briefly I will talk about where we are and then talk about the amendment that is pending. We have now invoked cloture on the pending substitute, and so we have a very tightly scripted 30-hour period. The Democratic majority leader put into place two amendments, and in the process no amendment now is in order. This produces a situation where at some point, at the end of 30 hours, there will be a vote on the pending Lieberman amendment.

The pending Lieberman amendment is the amendment I will discuss. It is clear these amendments will not be dealt with until the 30 hours expires. So we will vote on the Lieberman amendment, and then we will move to vote on final passage. I want to address the Lieberman amendment because what tends to happen in these cases, where things are done at the last minute, is that it is sort of easy to confuse people as to what has been done. I want people to understand where the provisions came from and why they are important. One can agree with them or disagree with them, but I wish my colleague to basically know where they came from.

Over the weekend, we had a series of negotiations. I want to go back to the point that the President could have said to the electorate that he had a mandate, that this Congress could go home, that we would then have a new Congress and he would write the homeland security bill in the way he wanted it written, or he would have Congress write it that way. I think it tells us a lot about our President that he decided not to do that.

In fact, after having gotten a strong electoral mandate, the President actually negotiated further and made additional changes in his bill.

This substitute that is before us is basically the Gramm-Miller amendment, which is well-known, which we debated for 6 weeks—few amendments have ever been debated that long in my 18-year career in the Senate—with two sets of changes. One, the agreements that the President reached with three Democrat Senators and an Independent Senator in negotiations over the weekend, whereby the following changes were made: Workers in the Federal sector who were unhappy with the President's amendment were given a greater voice in expressing their views about how the new Department is organized, and they were given more clearly defined due process. They were not given veto power, but they were given a guaranteed input under a specific time period. That is the significant change that was made. That represents a compromise from the original Gramm-Miller amendment.

The second change that was made was recognized that the House had passed its own bill. So realizing that we were coming to the end of the Senate, one of the things we did over the weekend is we met with the House to try to make changes in our substitute to assure that at the end of the session we would not have to do a conference once we had passed the bill. Quite frankly, the Democrats who have been supportive of this effort felt strongly that they did not want to negotiate with the President and then end up negotiating with other Republicans in conference. That makes sense. When a deal is cut, one wants it to be a deal. So we brought in the House. As a result, we took 95 percent of our provisions, took about 5 percent of the House provisions, and that now is the bill before us. This bill has been adopted by the House, which has now left town. They will be here in pro forma session on Monday, but practically the House has adjourned.

I will address the generic issue about add-on provisions and then I want to talk about something else. I hope nobody is offended by this, but I have to say I have probably been as strong in speaking out against add-on provisions as anybody. I remind my colleagues that many times at midnight or 2 in the morning we have had seemingly noncontroversial amendments that did all kinds of special projects that we were meant to accept. In fact, earlier this Congress I sat in that very room and went through a list of amendments. One amendment would have the Federal Government absorb a billion dollars of liability for a project in one State. We would never have been able to do that. We said, no. Not only did we look at that as being something that is not true. Not only do the provisions in this bill reflect the political rhetoric, but the bottom line is it will end with the last Congress. It will never go away.

For the people who say there are extraneous matters in this bill, of all the major bills I have looked at that have been agreed to by the House and Senate, there are probably fewer extraneous matters in this bill than any major bill in American history. It started with the first Congress. It will be argued the first Congress. It will be argued the last Congress. That has been the nature of the body from the very beginning. It started with the first Congress. It will end with the last Congress. It will never go away.

For example, maybe I should say there are extraneous matters in this bill, of all the major bills I have looked at that have been agreed to by the House and Senate, there are probably fewer extraneous matters in this bill than any major bill in American history. It started with the first Congress. It will be argued the first Congress. It will be argued the last Congress. That has been the nature of the body from the very beginning. It started with the first Congress. It will end with the last Congress. It will never go away.

Finally, advisory committees—who cares? You could strip all of them out and I wouldn't care. But by stripping them out you are risking killing the bill. So, in the end, this amendment really comes down to a threat to the passage of homeland security. Five of the six provisions are totally defensible. The sixth one is important only if appropriations occur and we are going to pass the appropriations later, so we are not committing to anything.

Contrary to the criticism that there are extraneous materials in this bill, there are fewer extraneous matters in this bill. To suggest this is some special interest sweetheart deal makes good political rhetoric, but the bottom line is it is not true. Not only do the provisions fit, not only are they part of the fabric of the bill, but we had a provision to have the taxpayer pay for the liability risk, and we picked a better, preferable approach to limit liability when we introduce new technology like airport screening and new vaccines. We always had some limit on vaccines because they are risky, but the threat is now serious. It has never been relevant to a war effort before because we have not viewed smallpox as being a weapon. We do now.

In three areas our colleagues have singled out. We have six provisions in the bill, not only are they part of the fabric of the bill, but we had a provision to have the taxpayer pay for the liability risk, and we picked a better, preferable approach to limit liability when we introduce new technology like airport screening and new vaccines. We always had some limit on vaccines because they are risky, but the threat is now serious. It has never been relevant to a war effort before because we have not viewed smallpox as being a weapon. this bill than any major bill I have seen in many years. When you reach an agreement between the two Houses, you are always going to have extraordinary material.

So, we will have a vote at 5 o'clock on Monday. First of all, I think it is bad policy to strike these six provisions. I think no legitimate case can be made against four of them. I think one of them is irrelevant—whether we have advisory committees or not. I think the other one is a small item in a big bill and I do not think it is worth risking this bill to make that change. Nor do I believe this issue would ever have been raised, that this amendment would ever have been offered, had this not been an extraordinarily controversial bill to begin with.

So I just have to say, in the big picture, I feel totally comfortable in defending the great majority of these six provisions. I think we need them. On substance, of course, we should limit liability for new vaccines that may save American lives; for airport screening equipment that may keep our children, our spouses, or ourselves from being killed on airplanes; and from new manufacturers and new weapons we need in the war on terrorism. Those items should not be stricken.

I know special interest groups like the plaintiffs' attorneys are opposed to these provisions. But they are limited in a big bill and they are narrow, they are reasonable, and the alternative, which we had in the Senate amendment, was to have the taxpayer pay all these damages. So this seems preferable to me.

I guess when we vote on Monday to vote against this amendment and, in the process, let us pass this bill in the form it passed the House and, to the maximum extent possible, guarantee that we are successful in seeing this bill become law. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEAHY). The senior Senator from West Virginia.

MR. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my name may be added as a cosponsor of the pending Daschle-Lieberman amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator's name is added as cosponsor. The Senator from North Dakota.

MR. DORGAN. Mr. President, it is a very special moment on the floor of the Senate to have a colleague from Texas defend special provisions being put in legislation—actually to hear him describe the negotiations at the end of the process that result in these special provisions. Because he has been a tireless opponent of provisions that are put in pieces of legislation that in most cases or many cases have nothing to do with the underlying bill. So it is a real treat today to hear my colleague from Texas justify and support and ask Members of the Senate to support these provisions, and a colleague from Texas defend special provisions being put in the homeland security bill which, in most cases, had nothing at all to do with homeland security.

I must say, with respect to the issues of childhood vaccines liability protection, manufacturer liability protection, transportation security—I would wonder whether these have had hearings. Because we so often hear our colleagues, especially my colleague from Texas, who some have put a provision in the bill. There has been no hearing on the bill. I am wondering whether these provisions have had hearings and discussion, and if there were negotiations, as was represented by my colleague, were the parents of autistic children part of the negotiations? Where were the negotiations? Was it late at night? Early in the morning? Was it at the White House, as Congressman ARMY would have us believe? I don't know the answer to that. But my hope is our colleagues will vote to strip these provisions from the bill.

Homeland security, that is what this legislation is about. Frankly, the way this legislation was created, it was not under normal circumstances, where you have committee exploration in some detail and some depth of all of these provisions. What has happened is at the eleventh hour a piece of legislation is written and it is placed on desks. It has a rubber band around it. It is four-hundred-and-some pages and I know of very few Members of the Senate who would have read all of it at this point.

But having heard my colleague from Texas, for whom I have great fondness, describe his support for special provisions, especially at the end of his career here in the Senate, I must say that this is a very unusual moment. We will, of course, miss him for a lot of reasons. Among other things, I will miss him because at the end of most bills, he will be the one counted on to stand up and say: I object to these special provisions.

But he seems to have hit a speed bump here by the end of the road, on special provisions. I hope my colleagues will decide they want to vote to strip these provisions out of this bill.

MR. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield?

MR. DORGAN. I will, of course, yield. Mr. BYRD. I will only be a moment.

The distinguished Senator from North Dakota.

MR. DORGAN. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield?

MR. BYRD. I will, of course, yield.

MR. DORGAN. May I interpose this observation.

Diogenes went about the streets of Athens with a lantern, saying that he was looking—in broad daylight—he was looking for a man, he was seeking a man.

Plato, upon going to Syracuse, was asked by Hieron the—I wouldn't say he was a beneficent dictator. But he was asked why he came to Syracuse.

He said: I came seeking an honest man.

I rarely make the observation as a premise to what I am about to say—I believe the Senator from Texas is not only a man, but is also an honest man. He is very frank and open. He doesn't have to come to the floor with written speeches as I often do. He speaks from the heart and from the head and is very up front. He has always been that way. He doesn't hide his reasons. And he will answer your questions and he will answer honestly.

So I pay tribute to the Senator from Texas in that regard. I am glad the distinguished Senator from North Dakota has given me the platform for a moment to say that. We may not agree with the distinguished Senator from Texas. I certainly don't agree with the request for some of the special interest provisions here in this bill. But I do say here is an honest man, as far as I am concerned. He is aboveboard. He will answer your questions. He doesn't need a written speech to do it.

I say it is not always easy to find Phil GRAMM in the Senate. Excuse me for taking this time. I will say no more, except to thank him for the good relations.

MR. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield for just 30 seconds? It is said, in the old Confederate Army, that they didn't give medals.

So the single honor was to be mentioned in Robert E. Lee's communiques to Richmond.

Having the distinguished Senator from West Virginia say something about me and to pronounce me a honest man I take in the same way that any private in Hood's brigade would have taken in the same way if he heard that his name in one of those communiques. I love the Senator from West Virginia, as he knows. I think he serves a great purpose in the Senate. In my opinion, he is not always right, but I think it is the give and take that ultimately produces it. Senator Wellstone, in my opinion, was not always right, he did speak honestly and with clarity. And he knew where he was coming from, and you could be for it or against it. I do think that is important to the Senate.

I thank the Senator: The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

MR. DORGAN. Mr. President, the comment that not always right but never in doubt may well apply to every Senator. I must say to my colleague from Texas that I intend to find him on moments on Monday to say a word about the Senator from Texas, and my colleagues from South Carolina and North Carolina, and others who are leaving the Senate. I don't know if Senator BYRD indicated that he wished he had more such as the Senator from Texas, and he is, indeed, an extraordinarily bright and talented Senator. There are times at midnight when he is objecting to all kinds of provisions that I suspect the Senator from West Virginia would not wish that we had 25 more exactly in the same mood at midnight on important pieces of legislation. But he and so many others contribute in very significant ways to this body.

This body produces for the American people best when it achieves the best ideas that everyone has to offer. There are times when we end up with the worst ideas, but we have been the best. I have always thought that politics and our political system is not who is the worst; it is who is the best, who has the best ideas, and who can best manifest those ideas in public debate to achieve a result for this country.

Regrettably, much of American politics—especially if you are coming off recent campaigns—is not at all about who is the best but rather who is the worst. That, in my judgment, becomes an anvil on the body politic. John F. Kennedy used to say with some beautiful prose that mother kind of hopes her child might grow up to be President, as long as they don't have to become active in politics. But, of course, politics is the way we make decisions in this country.

I am enormously proud of this political system of the participation by Republicans, Democrats, Conservatives, Liberals, Independents, and moderates. I think all bring a great deal to the public debate, with time to time have our differences. Every one of them, even though we have been mentioned on the record.

On October 25 of this year, a task force headed by former Senators Warren Rudman and Gary Hart issued a report on America's homeland security. That report was entitled "America Still Unprepared, America Still In Danger." It was a bipartisan task force sponsored by the Council on Foreign Relations, which included former Secretaries of State, Warren Christopher, George Shultz, ADM William Crow, Retired, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

They found that 1 year after the September 11 attacks, America remains dangerously unprepared for another terrorist attack.

I specifically wish to talk about one of their concerns raised in this report that I read, which gave me great personal concern.

In the report, the task force concluded that the 650,000 local and State law enforcement officials around the country “continue to operate in a virtual intelligence vacuum without access to the terrorist watch list provided by the U.S. Department of State to Immigration and consular officials.”

Our government has a watchlist to identify foreigners nationals suspected of ties to terrorist organizations. That watch list is at the State Department. It is provided to the Immigration Department and to consular officials. It sets out the names of people whom we ought to watch because they are known terrorists. They are people who associate with terrorists; they are a terrorist threat to this country.

Guess what. That watch list is unavailable to state and local law enforcement officials around this country.

Thirty-six hours before the September 11 attack, one of the hijackers was pulled over by a Maryland State police trooper for driving 50 miles an hour on Interstate 95. The hijacker’s name was Ziad Jarrah. He was a 26-year-old Lebanese national. He was one of the key organizers of the al-Qaeda terrorist cell formed in Germany 3 years ago. He shared an apartment with Mohammed Atta. And he was at the controls of Flight 93 when it crashed in a rural area of Pennsylvania.

When that hijacker—or at that point the potential hijacker—was pulled over by the Maryland trooper, he was driving a car rented under his own name. There are a couple of things with respect to this issue that are interesting.

No. 1, his name was not on the watch list.

No. 2, had it been on the watch list, it wouldn’t have mattered because a highway patrolman or a city police officer has no access to that watch list. The officer can run the name of an individual through the NCIC computer and find out if an individual has an outstanding warrant, or if there are law enforcement warnings about him but the officer has no way of knowing if the individual is on the State Department terrorism watch list.

The State Department watch list has the names of 80,000 terrorists or suspected terrorists on it. And 2,000 names are being added each and every month. The watch list is drawn from a good many area intelligence agencies. And I am sure there is no way for law enforcement authorities to access the database. Let me read in detail an excerpt from the Hart-Rudman report:

With just fifty-six field offices around the nation, the burden of identifying and intercepting terrorists in our midst is a task well beyond the scope of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. We conclude that a watch list should be shared with 650,000 local, county, and state law enforcement officers, but they cannot rightly lend a hand in a counter terrorism initiative when void. When it comes to combating terrorism, the police officers on the beat are effectively operating deaf, dumb, and blind. Terrorist watch lists provided by the Department of State to immigration and consular officials are still out of bounds for state and local police.

In the interim period as information sharing issues get worked out, known terrorists will be free to move about to plan and execute their attack.

This comes from the report of former Senators Hart and Rudman, entitled "America Still Unprepared, America Still In Danger."

I asked my staff—after I read this in the Report—to contact the task force. The task force, through my staff, has told me that they are not aware of any administration initiative to fix the problem. This, despite the fact that this is a top recommendation of a blue-ribbon task force.

So I asked the Congressional Research Service to contact the White House Office of Homeland Security, the Department of State, and the Department of Justice. They have done this in recent days.

My understanding is that after I made these inquiries the White House convened a meeting with State and local officials, and they are now apparently looking into ways to integrate the State Department terrorist watch list—called the “Tipoff” database—with the National Crime Information Center, which is accessible by State and local law enforcement authorities.

This effort must be expedited. Let me quote from the article in the Washington Post of just yesterday:

U.S. intelligence officials, increasingly confident that al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden is the speaker on new video tapes released this week, said yesterday that the message was part of a disturbing pattern indicating that terrorist groups may be planning a new wave of attacks on Western targets.

Even before the purported bin Laden tape surfaced on the al-Jazeera satellite network on Tuesday, the CIA, FBI and National Security Agency had detected a significant spike in intelligence “chatter” over the previous 10 days that strongly indicated new assaults are planned, officials in U.S. intelligence agencies said.

That is from the Washington Post. They continue to say:

The amount of alarming information was approaching the volume seen in the weeks before the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks in Washington and New York, and again in the middle of last month following a wave of attacks on overseas targets, some sources said.

The point is this: Homeland security and homeland protection rests, yes, with our intelligence agencies, yes, with the FBI, the CIA, and all of the officials who are working very hard, spending a lot of hours doing the best job they can to make it work. But beyond that, it also rests with cooperation with all of the local responders, especially local law enforcement officials across this country. There are 650,000 of them.

If, today, a terrorist drives through a rural county in North Dakota this afternoon or a rural county in Vermont, or Kentucky, or in the middle of New York City, and is picked up for a traffic violation, and is a known terrorist on a watch list—guess what—that highway patrolman, that city police officer is going to run that terrorist's name through the database at the NCIC, and they are going to get no warning that they have on their hands is a terrorist in the car in front of them. There would be no warning at all because they cannot access the watch list.

If we have a watch list in which we have identified the names of terrorists and suspected terrorists, it makes no sense at all to withhold that information from law enforcement officers, who every single day climb out of bed and go protect this country on America's streets, on our highways. They are our eyes and ears. They are also watching out for the security of this county. They ought to have access to that watch list.

Again, let me say, this was the No. 1 recommendation in the report offered by former Senator Rudman and former Senator Hart. The report, which I would urge everyone to read, is entitled: "America Still Unprepared—America Still in Danger." These are former Secretaries of State, former Senators, Republicans, Democrats, evaluating what needs to be done to protect this country for this country's security.

I want to go back to read just a portion of the report. The task force had this to say:

With just fifty-six field offices around the nation, the burden of identifying and intercepting potential midsize threats is too great. This task is beyond the scope of the FBI. The burden could and should be shared with 650,000 local, county, and state law enforcement officers, but they clearly cannot lend a hand in a counterterrorism information void.

Yesterday, I was on the phone with a community in North Dakota, and the county sheriff was there in the room, and we talked by conference phone. We talked about this issue. He is not too far from the Canadian border. If one of his deputies or that county's sheriff stops a car on a rural highway, and it turns out to be a terrorist driving a rented car, he is not going to know because he does not have access to the watch list, he does not have access to the information. The FBI will not know, the CIA will not know, no one will know that terrorist was driving a car on that rural road because the person who apprehended him—the county sheriff, the city police officer—had no access to the information the State Department has, the consular officials have, the CIA has. It is not that the information does not exist, it is that it is not shared with local law enforcement officers across this country for the purpose of securing this country's homeland.

So this was the task force's top recommendation. This was not No. 5 or No. 10. It was the top recommendation of this group, a group that included several former Secretaries of State under Republican and Democratic administrations, Republican and Democratic former Senators, and others.

So I implore the President and the folks who are apparently now working on this to do everything they can in this regard. When a trooper stops someone for speeding tomorrow, or the day after tomorrow, or the day after that, and the individual that was pulled over is a terrorist, I want that trooper to realize who he has in that car—for the trooper's protection, and for the protection of this country.

Let me talk briefly about one other piece of homeland security, and we addressed it in the report. I have told my colleagues previously, I was recently at a port in Seattle. I don't know much about ports because I come from a landlocked State. I don't come from a State near an ocean. So I went down to see how the ports worked. They showed me all these ships that come in with all these containers.

I asked: What is in all these containers? They said: We have all these bills of landing and invoices, so we know what is in them. I asked: Can I see? And they showed me some containers they were opening.

They showed me a container from Poland that had frozen broccoli in it in 10-pound bags. They pulled out a bag of frozen broccoli and cut it open. Sure enough, it was frozen broccoli. I asked: What is in the middle of the container? I know what is in the bag. And they said: Well, we just know what's on the invoice.

We are spending $7 to $8 billion to see if we can stop an incoming missile because we are very afraid a terrorist group might get hold of an ICBM. But it is much more likely a terrorist group might put a weapon of mass destruction in a container on a container ship that comes in at 3 miles an hour pulling up to a dock in New York City or Los Angeles.

We have 5.7 million containers every year coming into our ports. So 5.7 million containers every single year; 100,000 are inspected, 5.6 million are not. Is that a matter of homeland security? You bet your life it is.

A fellow in the Middle East—many of you read about this fellow—decided he was going to ship himself to Toronto and then come into this country. He had a GPS, a computer, a toilet, fresh water, a cot, all in a container loaded on a container ship, shipping himself to Toronto, and with the intention, apparently, of coming into this country.

Do we need to be concerned about these things? You better believe it. And many of these issues, even if we passed a homeland security bill, will not be resolved.

The first issue I mentioned today is not resolved, and will not be resolved with the passage Monday of this bill: The fact that 650,000 local law enforcement authorities have no ability to access a watch list to determine who is a terrorist and who isn't. And 5.6 million uninspected containers coming into our ports will not be inspected next Tuesday when the homeland security bill is passed.

So my point is, there is much left to be done for those of us—and I am sure that is all of us—who care deeply about homeland security in this country.

Mr. President, I yield.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York. Mr. SCHUMER. If the Senator will yield, I was waiting behind the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. DORGAN. If we are going back and forth—I only want to speak for about 10 minutes.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I sought recognition first.

The PRESIDENT. There is not a particular order. The custom is usually to go back and forth from side to side. I am wondering if we might recognize the Senator from Tennessee, to follow the normal custom.

Mr. FRIST. Normal procedure would be to turn to me?

The PRESIDENT. I am sorry. I heard the Senator from New York yield if the Senator from Tennessee says he sought recognition earlier, then I will apologize for not hearing him.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I would be happy to yield, although I felt I was—The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will yield 10 minutes to the Senator from New York. Is that enough time?

Mr. SCHUMER. I am prepared to yield. I don't want to break the protocol.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank both my colleagues for helping the Chair out of a difficult situation.

Mr. SCHUMER. I appreciate it. I only want to say that the Chair's most difficult situation in the upcoming months.

I thank the Senator from Tennessee for allowing me to speak. I will try to be brief. I would like to talk about two related subjects in this bill: What is in the bill and what is not in the bill.

What is in the bill, aside from the original homeland security provisions which we have been debating for a very long time, are little pieces of legislation unrelated to homeland security, none of which could stand the scrutiny of individual debate. In other words, if any of these little provisions were put in separate legislation and brought to the floor of the Senate, my guess is they would be overwhelmingly defeated.

For those to be in homeland security right now, for those pieces of pork, for those rifleshot pieces of legislation that benefit one company to be in this bill, particularly after the President made such a fuss about keeping this bill the way he wanted it without any other provisions in it, is very wrong.
I hope we will support the Lieberman amendment. There are a few that are particularly galling to me. Probably the worst is a provision in this bill that was in the original bill that the House just took out that said, if you go overseas to avoid paying taxes, the original provision cannot bid on homeland security contracts. This takes it out. It says to companies that move overseas that they can benefit from the homeland security issues. I find that very troubling.

There is a provision that exempts one company, Eli Lilly, from any liability against a drug that is already subject to many lawsuits because of its mercury levels. That kind of provision would never pass standing on its own, and it was slipped in in the dark of night by the other body. We should not countenance it here.

There are provisions that redate the tort law. We will have plenty of debates about tort law next year; I am sure of that. But to put them in the President wanted it his way or no way and led, at least if you believe some of the pundits, to some of our colleagues losing their elections because they wanted it a slightly different way. Now to put these sometimes pork, sometimes hard, sometimes extraneous provisions in this legislation unfair, is wrong. We should support the Lieberman amendment.

I also would like to talk about what is not in the bill. This bill is a reorganization of agencies. All things being equal, it is better than not having it. But anyone who thinks, as my colleague from North Dakota has outlined, that this is going to make us safer to do the job, is sadly mistaken. I will support the legislation because it is a little bit better than the present situation. But I am worried that then we will think we have done all we can on homeland security.

This administration is letting our Nation down on domestic security—not by design but by effect—when they say that nothing can be added to homeland security that costs money. I don’t get it. We are spending $80 billion on a war in Iraq which I have supported, but we are not willing to spend $250 million to prevent nuclear weapons from being smuggled into our country. Where is the logic there?

Does anyone think that rearranging agencies is going to get the INS to have better computers or the Coast Guard to better defend our borders? No. And this administration is going to run up against a serious problem if it continues to have the view that we cannot spend on domestic security. The analogy, the comparison is stark. The military gets all the money it needs—it should—but our domestic agencies, both Federal and State and local, that deal with homeland security get virtually no dollars at all.

I was told that my provision, which had bipartisan support—Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator THOMPSON, Senator BYRD, Senator HOLLINGS—that would have enabled us to have nuclear detection devices attached to the cranes that load and unload containers and could detect a nuclear weapon that would be smuggled in, had to be out of the bill because it could be seen as that to be said. I find that to be troubling in the sense that we are letting our national guard down. If we were under such spending constraints when it came to the rest of the parts of the war on terrorism, I would say OK. But I don’t understand why we can spend all the money we want overseas but when we come to the water’s edge, even carefully thought out small amounts of money aren’t allowed. This bill is problematic for what was just added in and what was not put in. It is a little bit better than nothing. It is a baby step in the direction of better homeland security because our agencies do have to be reorganized. But I hope and pray that we will not take out the extraneous provisions that should be debated another day, but that we don’t make the mistake that this reorganization bill is doing what the Lieberman amendment is doing. With that, I yield the remainder of my time and once again thank my colleague from Tennessee for his graciousness in allowing me to speak. I will now yield to Senator New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

MR. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the Lieberman amendment and will spend a little bit of time over the next probably 30 minutes going to the substance of what this amendment does, talking policy, but also talking to the impact that passing the Lieberman amendment would have on our homeland security.

The bottom line is that I believe striking the provisions, which is what the Lieberman amendment does—it pulls out certain provisions from the underlying bill—which will put the people of our Nation at greater risk, when we are talking about homeland security and safety and protection of individuals, of families, of children. That is a bold statement. It is a bold statement for me to make. But over the next several minutes I want to give you the substance of it.

A lot of people have said these provisions having to do with vaccines and smallpox are one-company provisions. What actually happens at that standpoint? Smallpox is a disease that is one of the most deadly infectious diseases. There is a 30-percent chance, to anybody who gets it, that they are going to die. If three people are here, one of those three will die if they get smallpox.

What is the treatment? The only treatment—real treatment—is to get the vaccine as early as possible. It is a baby step in the direction of better homeland security. It is a little bit better than nothing. It is a baby step in the sense that we are letting our national guard down. If we were under such spending constraints when it came to the rest of the parts of the war on terrorism, I would say OK. But I don’t understand why we can spend all the money we want overseas but when we come to the water’s edge, even carefully thought out small amounts of money aren’t allowed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

MR. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the Lieberman amendment and will spend a little bit of time over the next probably 30 minutes going to the substance of what this amendment does, talking policy, but also talking to the impact that passing the Lieberman amendment would have on our homeland security.

The bottom line is that I believe striking the provisions, which is what the Lieberman amendment does—it pulls out certain provisions from the underlying bill—which will put the people of our Nation at greater risk, when we are talking about homeland security and safety and protection of individuals, of families, of children. That is a bold statement. It is a bold statement for me to make. But over the next several minutes I want to give you the substance of it.

A lot of people have said these provisions having to do with vaccines and smallpox are one-company provisions. What actually happens at that standpoint? Smallpox is a disease that is one of the most deadly infectious diseases. There is a 30-percent chance, to anybody who gets it, that they are going to die. If three people are here, one of those three will die if they get smallpox.

What is the treatment? The only treatment—real treatment—is to get the vaccine as early as possible. It is a baby step in the direction of better homeland security. It is a little bit better than nothing. It is a baby step in the sense that we are letting our national guard down. If we were under such spending constraints when it came to the rest of the parts of the war on terrorism, I would say OK. But I don’t understand why we can spend all the money we want overseas but when we come to the water’s edge, even carefully thought out small amounts of money aren’t allowed. This bill is problematic for what was just added in and what was not put in. It is a little bit better than nothing. It is a baby step in the direction of better homeland security because our agencies do have to be reorganized. But I hope and pray that we will not take out the extraneous provisions that should be debated another day, but that we don’t make the mistake that this reorganization bill is doing what the Lieberman amendment is doing. With that, I yield the remainder of my time and once again thank my colleague from Tennessee for his graciousness in allowing me to speak. I will now yield to Senator New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

MR. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the Lieberman amendment and will spend a little bit of time over the next probably 30 minutes going to the substance of what this amendment does, talking policy, but also talking to the impact that passing the Lieberman amendment would have on our homeland security.

The bottom line is that I believe striking the provisions, which is what the Lieberman amendment does—it pulls out certain provisions from the underlying bill—which will put the people of our Nation at greater risk, when we are talking about homeland security and safety and protection of individuals, of families, of children. That is a bold statement. It is a bold statement for me to make. But over the next several minutes I want to give you the substance of it.

A lot of people have said these provisions having to do with vaccines and smallpox are one-company provisions. What actually happens at that standpoint? Smallpox is a disease that is one of the most deadly infectious diseases. There is a 30-percent chance, to anybody who gets it, that they are going to die. If three people are here, one of those three will die if they get smallpox.

What is the treatment? The only treatment—real treatment—is to get that vaccine on your arm within 3 days. Some people say 4 days. I personally think it is 3. Some say 5 to 10, but if your child has smallpox, not from when the manifestations start appearing but from the time of actual contact, and that usually be having a vaccine out there that has 30 million doses. Because we know smallpox in an unprotected population, which we are, knows no barriers. Right now, if I had smallpox lesions within my mouth, people around these four or five desks probably would be infected. Where the only protection is the vaccine itself. The only treatment for smallpox—and this isn’t true with all biological agents, but the only treatment is the vaccine within 3 days.

The administration has a policy, that I agree with, that basically is, if there is an outbreak, or a case, you can inoculate people in that area. That is a great policy. We don’t need to mass-vaccinate everybody. What about right now?

People listening, saying we are a nation at risk—Iraq has had biological weapons programs. We know Saddam Hussein is a mass killer, a serial killer, weapons programs. We know Saddam’s—

The only treatment for smallpox is the vaccine. It is not all licensed yet, but it is good vaccine and I think we know the most risky because we know the side effects are that about 1 in a million people would die. If you vaccinated 300 million people, about 300 would die. Ten times that number would have serious side effects—maybe encephalitis or many others that are life threatening. As a matter of fact, probably 30, 40 times that many would have a bad rash, many of which would cause hospitalization. So it is a vaccine, in medical terms, with more potential side effects than others.

What would you say if there were an outbreak tomorrow? You would call in nurses and public health officials, and pediatricians and other doctors, and you would say, as part of the American response to bioterrorism and the use of terrorist agents or microorganisms as weapons of mass destruction, you need to get this vaccine to as many people as you can within 3 days. It could be maybe 100 or maybe 1,000, or 10,000; and in a city such as New York, it could be millions within 3 days. Okay, you have the vaccine. You have willing health care providers. I think of myself as a physician. Everybody could be mobilized to do that. You are basically saying, as American policy: You need to give that vaccine. It has side effects, but we are not going to protect you in the event there is a side effect—death or encephalitis. We are not going to protect you in any shape or form, although you are fulfilling the mandate and the policy, the emergency response of the American people.

Why would they not do that? Because of the lack of protection from skyrocketing lawsuits. I have a great fear—and I don’t want to say I know for sure, but I have a fear in talking to health care providers and to the nurses who recognize, given that vaccine is important to life saving, but at the same time is subjected to these unlimited lawsuits with punitive damages—they just might say: I cannot subject myself to giving a thousand of those doses, even looking at the statistics. That is the problem, that is why the smallpox vaccine has to be in there. We have had so many people make all these statements, but nobody has been to the substance. The bill extends the Federal Tort Claims Act—the FTCA—protection to any person, such as a doctor, or a pediatrician, or a nurse, or somebody who is qualified to be giving the anthrax inoculation, in your arm. It provides them a protection of the Federal Tort Claims Act.

What is important there—people say if that is the case, you cannot sue. Well, that is simply not true. It basically says that the Federal Government is going to be on your side and will defend you in any lawsuit and the protection of the Federal Government. There are both State and Federal courts. People say Federal courts cannot do that. In truth, we all know Federal courts can do that.

It is important to point out that in Federal court, the rules that are actually used are to put the policy to that State or according to State law.

Thus, you can still sue, but the Federal Government pays. A lot of people say you should be able to punish anybody—punish that nurse who put that vaccine in your arm—so let’s have punitive damages on top of compensation. The underlying bill says you get adequate, just, fair compensation. You are defended by the Federal Government and they will pay you. Is it no punitive damages component, which makes sense because, remember, that nurse is putting that inoculation on your arm to save your life under a plan put forward by our Government, probably in response to an emergency.

Over time, I think we need much more balance in terms of the overall provisions. It was not my idea, although I support these provisions strongly, to take these specific provi-

So over time, we need to develop a more comprehensive policy to make sure we have both a full range of vaccines developed, that we have appropriate countermeasures, and if somebody is harmed by a vaccine, there is fair compensation.

We need to come back and visit this in a more comprehensive way as we go forward. I will add, though, there is some sense of urgency to this given the threats today.

The issue of what is front line is important because the use of germs, microorganisms, and bacteria is now to the American people as weapons of mass destruction. It is causing us to say we understand nuclear weapons, gas, but what about these organisms that can wind their way through a society? What is the front line?

What is front line is absolutely important because they become the front line, and that is why we address vaccines in the homeland security bill, especially since we are at risk today. One cannot turn on a television or read the newspaper without learning of this enhanced risk, this higher risk.

Let me back out of this broader issue of vaccine. Smallpox is one case. It happens to be a virus. What about the plague which wiped out a third of Europe? What about anthrax? We have an old vaccine. The vaccine has to be administered over and over, so we need newer vaccine developed for anthrax.
What about Ebola? About 3 months ago, the National Institutes of Health said in their response to bioterrorism that one of its major priorities is going to be the development of a vaccine for the Ebola virus. That makes sense because we know that other states in their offensive biological weapons programs—and there are 12 offensive biological weapons programs outside the United States; people need to know that—there has been a linkage of smallpox with the Ebola virus. We know that smallpox has a 30-percent mortality rate; smallpox has a 30-percent mortality rate. We should at least be thinking of a front line there which means a new vaccine. NIH said 4 months ago—and most people do not even know it—has as one of their major initiatives development of an Ebola vaccine. Why? Because intelligence tells us people have attempted to link viruses. Thus, we need to have an effective response system in terms of the development of vaccines.

Research is good. NIH is doing research. But unless we have manufacturers in the field manufacturing vaccines, we can have the greatest research in the world and know how to do it, but unless we can produce it and produce it quickly, the knowledge does not do us any good because we are not going to be able to develop the vaccine to put on your arm and protect you from the Ebola virus.

Though the emphasis in this bill that provides smallpox as a microcosm, but in the macro sense, there are other vaccines. Every year—and the distinguished Presiding Officer knows this—we hear about these shortages of vaccines about every 6 months. People ask: Why are there these shortages? It is multifactorial, and we have to address that.

One of the issues we know is this unlimited liability. Think back to the smallpox. It is put on your arm, and you have a bad side effect. Somebody is going to sue for that side effect. There are no protections today. In the same sense, the manufacturers, the pharmaceutical companies, which is very popular for people to beat upon aggressively these days, the manufacturing companies, the pharmaceutical companies are the only ones that can make the smallpox vaccine, the front line for that weapon of mass destruction for the United States.

We can, through NIH, promote the research, but only a manufacturing firm, a pharmaceutical firm can make the Ebola vaccine. There used to be in the eighties 12 pharmaceutical companies making vaccines. Then it dwindled to 10, then to 8, then to 7, then to 6, then to 5, and there are now only 4 vaccine manufacturers licensed to sell vaccines in the United States, and only two of these are American companies.

Why is that the case? Why would they stand out totally exposed for making a medicine that is lifesaving, yes, but once that with one lawsuit can wipe out their whole development process, their whole manufacturing process today?

That is an issue that has to be developed, and the urgency of it is the fact we are a nation at risk from biological agents, and there are 12 states that have offensive biological weapons programs, and we are today unprotected.

On the liability issue, people have said one preservative causes autism. They mentioned this on the floor. That is just wrong. The Institute of Medicine has looked on that there is no established causal relationship between that preservative and autism. I will and others need to go back and look at the data, but the Institute of Medicine has basically said that to date, we need more research.

I was one of the primary authors of the autism research bill. We need to look at it again. I want to assure families in the country that those statements made on the floor of the Senate—that are wrong. The underlying bill that slows down research for autism or just compensation, if there is an association between autism and a certain preservative.

It is interesting, with these vaccines being so expensive with the potential of liability costs driven up so high because it is easy—it is not easy, but we can have lawyers coming in and starting these lawsuits.

In the 1980s, this body started the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program. They did this through the National Children’s Vaccine Injury Act. It was passed in 1986. I believe. The whole purpose of this program is to provide injured patients compensation while attempting to control litigation, based on the recognition that vaccines will always be an easy target because they have inherent side effects and everybody gets vaccines—everybody in this body has been vaccinated. Everybody listening hopefully has been vaccinated. That at the end of the day, since everybody gets it and there are certain side effects, that if you want to make a lot of money you can go out and start getting these people and start creating these lawsuits. That is why in the mid-1980s we said we have to put all of this together and look at it in a reasoned way, a way that is efficient, a way that is fair to people broadly. The vaccine injury compensation program is essentially a return to the traditional tort system in this whole area of vaccines. It has been a key component of stabilizing the vaccine market, of not driving even those last four companies—or the last two in this country—out of making vaccines. It has a streamlined process. It puts down a no-adversarial alternative so not everybody is going to court and spending weeks, months, and in some cases years trying to have their cases actually looked at.

It encourages research and development of new and safer vaccines, and it provides the appropriate liability protection to that nurse who is putting that inoculation, that vaccine, in your arm, as well as the health care providers, the facilities, and the manufacturers.

What is in the underlying bill is a narrow set of provisions that were actually written from those that I have studied for the last 3 years and that I introduced this Congress, that should eventually be passed in this comprehensive form, but the provisions have been taken out and included in this bill. When I feel strongly about and I will continue to talk to my colleagues about them individually as they understand why those provisions were included.

I will say that the provisions that are in the bill are far narrower than what I think we actually need to do to have this balance in our liability system so we can continue to develop vaccines to protect our children, the current generation. In the event there is a bioterror attack a week from now, a terror attack a week from now, a year from now, we will be adequately prepared.

The Lieberman proposal would strike those sections that are in the underlying. And all of them merely relate to some extent what was introduced by Congress. This is clarification, a restatement. In 1986, when it passed the bill, the underlying bill called the National Children’s Vaccine Injury Act, what that act did was to create an administrative mechanism in which those covered by the act have a serious side effect from a vaccine can receive compensation without ever having to prove in court a vaccine caused their particular injury. So you do not have to go to court. You can go to this new administrative body.

There are a handful of people who do not believe in vaccines. They just say all vaccines are bad. Most know that they are invaluable and have spared our children from many of the diseases that have taken us. This is why if you have that which we all really fully understand today, that they are a protection for our children, plus this new threat of bioterror, that is why you link it to homeland security and that is why it is important in this bill. We know we need to have that manufacturing base so with the research that is done, yes, by the pharmaceutical companies, but also maybe even more importantly by the NIH, we can actually manufacture them.

Section 171 clarifies that the components and ingredients of a vaccine listed in the vaccine’s product license application and label are not contaminants or adulterants. Importantly, the advisory committee, from which all of this essentially was taken, is an advisory committee called the Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines. They unanimously concur with this particular provision.

The next section, section 1716, adds a definition of “vaccine” to the Public Health Service Act since that term was not defined at all in the initial legislation back in 1986. This section states the obvious—that the term “vaccine” includes all components and ingredients listed in the vaccine’s product license application and product label. Again, the Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines recommended the appropriate modification. What is a part of the underlying homeland security bill, again, which the Lieberman amendment would strip out.

Sections 1715 and 1716 restate the original intent of the law that a vaccine is all the ingredients and components in the product which are approved by the FDA. This is an important one because there have been some allegations that all this was stuck in for a specific purpose. The fact is that there are presently more than 150 of these lawsuits against the four vaccine manufacturers, as well as pediatricians, children’s hospitals, state health departments and other healthcare providers. From my comments, one can see that it is not a single company. We are talking about a huge issue that reflects back to the protection of our families and our Nation.

Section 1714 clarifies that the term “manufacturer” under the VICP, includes any corporation, organization, or institution that manufactures, imports, processes or distributes any vaccine on the vaccine injury table, including any component or ingredient of such vaccine. The Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines, again, an independent body making specific recommendations—it is composed, by the way, of trial lawyers, medical providers, and injured parties—unanimously supported this provision. This provision restates Congressional intent to ensure that any lawsuit alleging vaccine-related injury or death follows the same process and groundrules regardless of whether it is against the final manufacturer, a doctor, a pharmacist, or a component or ingredient manufacturer and addresses those lawsuits seeking to circumvent the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program.

I want to point out that these provisions are supported by the American Academy of Pediatrics, and I will talk more about that in a minute. I want to run through a couple of other specific ones, again because nobody has really talked to the substance underlying what this amendment would mean.

The congressional intent very much was to encompass the manufacturers of component materials of vaccines in the original intent of the law that a vaccine is all the ingredients and components which other nations have had offensive biological weapons programs.

If litigation continues against component manufacturers outside of the vaccine injury compensation program, those companies that make the components simply are going to be unnecessary to provide the vaccine or those people who make FDA-approved components, unless the vaccine manufacturers will stop making those components. We saw that in the mid-1990s when raw material suppliers refused to sell the necessary components to the medical device manufacturers. People just stopped making materials there because of this fear of litigation. Ultimately there it took an act of Congress to protect those component manufacturers, the people making the pieces that go, for example, into a pacemaker or, in this case, it would be a component of the vaccine. It took an act of Congress to prevent a shortage back then of pacemakers and of other vital medical devices.

These provisions that are in the underlying bill have been unanimously supported by the Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines. As I mentioned, that includes injured patients, trial lawyers, and an expert group of patients as well. They have been endorsed by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

I ask unanimous consent to have a portion of letters from the Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines and the American Academy of Pediatrics posted in the Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADVISORY COMMISSION ON CHILDHOOD, VACCINES, AND IMMUNIZATION

HON. TOMMY G. THOMPSON, Secretary of Health and Human Services, Washington, DC

Dear Secretary Thompson: The Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines (ACCV) is authorized under Section 2119 of the Public Health Service Act to advise the Secretary of Health and Human Services (the Secretary) on the implementation of the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program (VICP). At the June 6 meeting, the ACCV discussed in detail the need for urgent modifications of the VICP and the necessity to ensure the viability of the Vaccine Safety Datalink Project. Actions are needed to address a variety of concerns that directly impact the VICP.

BACKGROUND

As of May 2002, more than 50 individual and class action lawsuits with millions of plaintiffs alleging potential thimerosal-related injuries from childhood vaccines have been filed in state and federal courts. The plaintiffs in these lawsuits argue that their claims are not governed by the VICP because they allege that thimerosal is an “adjuvant” to, and not a part of the vaccine and, in some instances, against health care providers. Thimerosal, as you know, is approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration and is part of the vaccine formulation when licensed; hence clarification is needed to direct these claims to the VICP before tort remedies can be pursued.

Unfortunately, some 2000 incomplete cases have been filed as placeholders with the VICP alleging that thimerosal (mercury) has caused vaccine-related injuries. The medical records that the Act requires upon filing do not accompany many VICP petitions, including these cases. This causes problems because of the time constraints spelled out in the Act. The presenting physician must generally resolve a case within 240 days (this period excludes any period of suspension and any period during which a petition is being amended). If the special master is unable to issue a decision within such time, the petitioner may withdraw from the VICP and pursue outside litigation without affording respondents the opportunity to address a variety of concerns that directly impact the VICP.

RECOMMENDATION

The ACCV believes this disturbing new development in civil litigation could circumvent the VICP.

RECOMMENDATION ON CERTIFICATION OF COMPLETENESS OF PETITIONS

The ACCV recommends that the Secretary propose legislation to amend the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986, as amended, to require special masters to issue...

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

a certificate of completeness once a determination is made that a petition is complete in accordance with section 2111. The time period described in sections 2112(g) and 212(b) of the Public Health Service Act would begin from the date the special master issues a certificate of completeness. This would allow for a period of 240 days excluding any period of suspension (time the petition is on remand) for the parties to consider all of the evidence and for a decision to be reached. If the special master fails to issue a decision within 240 days, the table calculated from that date the certificate of completeness is issued, the petitioner could withdraw from the VICP and pursue outside litigation.

SENATOR FRIST'S BILL:

In addition to the previous request, we also ask that you consider our recommendations regarding legislation introduced by Sen. William Frist (R-IN), "Improved Vaccine Affordability and Availability Act" (S. 2053). The ACCV concentrated on Title II of the bill that has provisions to ensure that all claims for a vaccine-related injury or death are first filed with the VICP. The ACCV makes the following recommendations:

RECOMMENDATIONS ON THE "IMPROVED VACCINE AFFORDABILITY AND AVAILABILITY ACT"

The ACCV unanimously concurs with the following sections of S. 2053 which are the same as or very similar to proposals made in the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program Amendments of 1997 and the 1999 Amendments which were developed from recommendations made by the ACCV and sent to Congress as legislative proposals by the former Secretaries:

Section 206, “Clarification of When Injury is Caused by Factor Unrelated to Administration of Vaccine”; Section 207, “Extension of Periods for Calculating Projected Lost Earnings”; Section 209, “Allowing Compensation for Family Counseling Expenses and Expenses of Establishing Guardianship”; Section 211, “Procedures for Paying Attorneys’ Fees”; Section 212, “Extension of Statute of Limitations”;

Section 213, Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines”; and Section 218, “Amending Definition of Trust Fund Provision.”

The ACCV unanimously concurs with the following sections of S. 2053:

Section 204, “Jurisdiction to Dismiss Actions Improperly Brought”; Section 215, “Clarification of Definition of Manslaughter”; Section 216, “Clarification of Definition of Vaccine-Related Injury or Death”; Section 217, Clarification of Definition of Vaccine;” and Section 220, “Pending Actions.”

The ACCV does not concur with the following sections of S. 2053 and recommends:

Replacing Section 201, “Administrative Revision of Vaccine Injury Table”, which changes the public comment period from 180 to 90 days; and Replacing Section 202, “Equitable Relief”, and Section 203, “Clarification of the Petition’s Responsibility” to add “past or in front of present physical injury”. Some individuals may have sustained a vaccine-related injury in the past, but may be too young to have a present physical injury. These individuals should not be prohibited from obtained relief in a civil action filed against a vaccine manufacturer or administrator.

Replacing Section 207, “Increase in Award in the Case of a Vaccine-Related Death and for Pain and Suffering” with the 2001 ACCV recommendation to increase the $250,000 benefit cap for both death and pain and suffering. These $250,000 benefit caps should be retrospective increased since 1986 and in accordance with increased annually, thereafter, to account for inflation using the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Workers (CPI-U) as envisioned by the National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986;

Replacing Section 210, “Allowing Payment of Interim Costs” which does not stipulate an attractive increased since 1986, calculated from the date the certificate of completeness is issued, the petition could withdraw from the VICP and pursue outside litigation.

BACKGROUND ON THE VACCINE SAFETY DATALINK PROJECT:

The Vaccine Safety Datalink Project (VSD) is a critical component of our vaccine safety infrastructure. Participation by health maintenance organizations in the and Drug Administration and is part of the patient identifiers. In order to assure the continued viability of the VSD, the privacy of individual patient data must be protected. Therefore, the ACCV believes that the Secretary of Health and Human Services take all steps necessary to protect the privacy of patient data in order to ensure the continued support and viability of this important project.

In conclusion, Mr. Secretary, we believe that the VCP plays a critical role in our nation’s childhood immunization program, and we urge your immediate attention to our concerns. The ACCV greatly appreciates your continued support, and looks forward to your timely reply.

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH J. NOYES,
Chair, ACCV.

Mr. FRIST. In part it also involved—

These claims have been filed against vaccine companies and, in some instances, against health care providers. Thimerosal, as you know, is approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration and is part of the vaccine formulation when licensed; hence clarification is needed to direct these claims to the VCP before tort remedies can be pursued.

That is what the underlying bill does.

That is what the Lieberman amendment strips out.

The American Academy of Pediatrics also wrote in support of this. I’ll quote a final sentence from this letter of June 19, 2002:

The AAP has reviewed S. 2053 and has the following comments beginning first and foremost with our strong support that all claims for vaccine-related injury or death first must be filed with the VCP.

In addition, we concur with the ACCV’s most recent recommendations in support of sections 204, 215, 216, 217 and 220.

I ask unanimous consent to print the letter in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN ACADEMY OF PEDIATRICS,

Hon. BILL FRIST,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FRIST: The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), and the 57,000 pediatricians we represent, greatly appreciates your leadership and support of the various immunization provisions outlined in your bill, S. 2053, the Improved Vaccine Affordability and Availability Act. This legislation addresses several issues of critical importance for the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program.

VACCINE INJURY COMPENSATION PROGRAM

Enacted in the late 1980s, with the support and guidance of the AAP, the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program (VICP) has helped ensure that what was then a perceived threat to be a global vaccine market. For the past 14 years, this program has been successful in its efforts to ensure an adequate supply of vaccines, promote more research and development of even safer and better vaccines and most importantly to provide for a fair and just compensation program for vaccine-related injury and death. The AAP believes that petitions for compensation for vaccine-related injury or death first must be filed with the VICP.

The Academy concurs with several sections of which were previously proposed in 1999 by the Advisory Committee on Vaccine Compensation (ACCV) and have been incorporated in S. 2053. These provisions include S. 2053, 208, 209, 212, 213, and 218. In addition, we concur with the ACCV’s most recent recommendations in support of sections 204, 215, 216, 217, and 220. The AAP is particularly pleased that S. 2053 includes language that allows compensation for family counseling, ongoing review of childhood vaccine data and clarifies the definition of vaccine manufacturers, and vaccine-related injury or death.

The AAP, however, does have specific concerns about Section 203, “Parent Petitions for Compensation” of which was previously proposed in 1999 by the Advisory Committee on Vaccine Compensation (ACCV) and have been incorporated in S. 2053. These provisions include S. 2053, 208, 209, 212, 213, and 218. In addition, we concur with the ACCV’s most recent recommendations in support of sections 204, 215, 216, 217, and 220. The AAP is particularly pleased that S. 2053 includes language that allows compensation for family counseling, ongoing review of childhood vaccine data and clarifies the definition of vaccine manufacturers, and vaccine-related injury or death.

The AAP believes that petitions for compensation by parents or third parties must be adjudicated through the VICP and not through the judicial system. Moreover, in addition to potential constitutional issues that this provision may pose, we contend that such claims by parents should be separate and apart from those of the vaccine-injured child. Although the issue of the compensation of parents or third parties was initially dropped during the drafting of the VICP in the 1980’s, it was rejected to maintain the focus of the Act on providing appropriate and just compensation that covers the life of the vaccine-injured child. We believed then, as well as today, that this approach is in the best interest of the child. The AAP would suggest that consideration could be given to providing, within the scope of the VICP, a provision for the loss of consortium that would be separate from the award to the vaccine-injured child.

The AAP agrees with your identification in Section 207, of the need for an adjustment to the award for a vaccine-related death and for pain and suffering. However, we recommend a modification to this section as written. Use of the Consumer Price Index (CPI) to account for annual inflation in providing these benefit awards had been the original intent of Congress in creating the VICP. The AAP encourages your adoption of this approach that was also recommended in 2001 by the ACCV. In 2002 dollars, such an award would be the equivalent of an award of over $300,000.

MENINGITIS AND INFLUENZA VACCINES

The AAP supports your recommendation in Section 103 to provide information to a variety of health care providers about meningitis and influenza vaccines. We are ready to work with you to implement these efforts.

This past June, the Advisory Committee of Immunization Practices (ACIP) made the decision to expand the Vaccine for Children (VFC) program coverage of the influenza vaccine for children aged 6 to 23 months. This will take effect March 1, 2003. As physicians, we are both aware that this age group has a higher likelihood of hospitalization and that therefore the availability of an adequate supply of the influenza vaccine is critical. In addition, this expanded recommendation means that adequate vaccine supply, both public and private, is essential. The estimated first-year costs of influenza vaccination of children, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, are $11.5 million in the VFC program, $2.6 million in Section 317 funds, and $1.42 million in state funds. This assumes vaccination of 20% of children aged 6 to 23 months (most requiring two doses), 15% of high-risk children aged 2 to 18 years, and 5% of children living with high-risk household contacts. These costs dramatically increase as we assume higher vaccination coverage rates for these populations of children. We applaud your support of increasing the supply of vaccine and the availability of the vaccine to these children. We encourage your pro active support to ensure sufficient public and private funding to meet the need and demand of the pediatric population living at a minimum, coverage by the Medicaid program for our youngest citizens as is received under Medicare for our senior citizens.

IMMUNIZATION RATES

The AAP appreciates the recognition of increasing immunization rates and data collection, especially surveillance as well as results included in Section 102 of S. 2053. However, as pediatricians dedicated to the health, safety and well being of infants, children, adolescents and young adults we would respectfully caution against the inclusion of all infants and children in the collection of data and in efforts to increase immunization rates. Presently, the rates of immunizations for children may well be at an all time high. But we still have significant disparities and pockets of need among rates of immunization for racial and ethnic groups. This is further exacerbated by the potential impact that vaccine shortages may have on the rates. This may also allow complacency or less vigilance of rates for infants and children at this critical time.

VACCINE SUPPLY

Although pediatricians over the years have encountered vaccine shortages, nothing compares to the most recent situation because of both the number of different vaccines involved and the scarcity of the supplies. For the first half of this year, the shortage of vaccines included eight of the 11 diseases preventable through routine vaccination of children. In many instances, delays by necessity resulted in temporary changes to immunization entry requirements for day care and school. Until just recently the long-standing significant shortage was with the Td vaccine that began about a year ago and affected the ability to give teens the booster Td they need. Currently, the most serious shortage is with the new 7-valent pneumococcal conjugate vaccine (PCV7, Prevnar). The AAP supports and appreciates the recognition in Section 104 of the need to improve the vaccine supply. Moreover, we also support the discretionary authority of the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop a national vaccine inventory and to maintain a supply of six months and as long as 12 months. This stockpile should include all of the routine recommended childhood vaccines and certain other vaccines that may be critical to the public’s health such as Hepatitis A and meningococcal vaccine. Thank you for your commitment to an immunization strategy that promotes the safety, efficacy as well as the adequacy of the supply of vaccines and look forward to working with you as this legislation moves forward.

Sincerely,

LOUIS Z. COOPER, President.

Mr. Frist, I will read from a statement by Dr. Timothy Doran, testifying on behalf of AAP, to the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee this year on behalf of the American Academy of Pediatrics, relating to these provisions. He testified it was crucial:

...to preserve and strengthen the liability protections for consumers, manufacturers and physicians through the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program. The VICP has been an integral part of maintaining the vaccine market and promoting the support and guidance of the American Academy of Pediatrics the VICP has helped to stabilize what was then and appears again to be a fragile vaccine market. We reiterate our strong support that all claims for vaccine-related injury or death must be filed first with the VICP. We appreciate the intent of the legislative proposal put forth by Sen. Frist and others to craft appropriate modifications as necessary to ensure that the VICP is working to its full potential.

Those are the provisions in the underlying bill. That is exactly what is in the homeland security legislation that would be stripped out by the Lieberman amendment.

The effect of these provisions in this bill is important because of the new era of bioterrorism, not knowing the direction the world is moving, recognizing we are unprotected today from smallpox. We now have a tremendous initiative by the administration, the private sector, and the public sector. We have better coordination and better public health infrastructure, better communication, better coordination. But at the end of the day, if smallpox is in your community and you know where to go, that is good, but unless you have a health care provider to put it on your arm, you are not protected. We do not know when it will hit again.

The fact the Advisory Commission on Childhood Vaccines endorses these provisions is important. The fact that the American Academy of Pediatrics endorses these provisions is also important. This shows we are not just pulled out or from a single company or they have not been thought through by both trial lawyers and patients and families and providers. We have heard the claims that these are not relevant to the underlying bill. But at the end of the day, in this world where we are at risk from bioterrorism, germs, viruses, I guarantee, based on everything I know and everything I have read, it is critical we increase our protection for these agents. That is what the underlying bill does.

The liability protections are important for health care providers. I argue, also, for the facilities where they are administered and the manufacturers. If we allow out-of-control lawsuits to drive people out of the business of making these vaccines, no matter how good our research is, we will not be able to make vaccines which are critically important. We started with 12 companies and we are now down to 4 companies in the United States who make the vaccines. We have no guarantee they will stay in the business. They are unlikely to stay in the business if they have to go through a tort system in a way that simply is not favorably judged.

The provisions in the underlying bill only restate the original intent of Congress. They restate current law that individuals claiming injury for covered vaccines must first file for compensation under the vaccine injury compensation program, the VICP. These sections state what really should be obvious. A vaccine itself is the sum total of all these various components. We have the vaccine, the components, the manufacturers who make the vaccine, and also the people who make the components.

Nothing in this language takes away one's right to sue. These provisions simply clarify and restate current law which requires all claims of injury related to a vaccine covered by the compensation program must first go through the compensation program before a lawsuit can be filed. There is much more that needs to be done. I believe in a more comprehensive way, but these provisions take the first step in a timely way, when time certainly matters.

In the long run, it is critical to expand the vaccine market for a whole range of microorganisms we are not protected from. We need to provide greater access to their vaccines, as well as all Americans, are not going to be in some way turned away by a barrier that we failed to address in the Senate. That is why a vaccine provision is necessary, is necessary now, is necessary in this homeland security bill.

I yield the floor.

Mr. President, we have a consent in order for debate only until 1:30 p.m. There are numerous Senators who wish to speak. I ask unanimous consent that the order for debate only be extended until 3 o'clock today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. LINCOLN.) Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Madam President, I rise to discuss the amendment proposed by the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. LIEBERMAN. First, I commend the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. LIEBERMAN, not only for his amendment but also for his work on this very important legislation. He introduced this legislation months ago, even before the administration recognized the need for a homeland security bill. He has brought to the floor a very well-crafted, well-balanced, thoughtful piece of legislation, a bill that has been deliberated over many months. It is disheartening at this moment to see a piece of legislation that has arisen in the last couple of days, almost 500 pages long, with greater omissions but also including what I think is the intent to cases to be extraneous provisions.

One of the provisions at issue is the curtailing the ongoing discussion about the scope of the vaccine injury compensation program. We have a situation where vaccine manufacturers included a preservative, Thimerosal. This preservative has been alleged to have caused medical harm; it has not been scientifically proven. The Senator from Tennessee has indicated the Institute of Medicine has suggested there is no causal link between Thimerosal and autism or other childhood diseases. Yet there is ongoing litigation to determine if this, in fact, is a causal factor.

In a homeland security bill designed to focus on threats that are most urgent and dramatic threats to the United States, we find a very transparent attempt by at least one manufacturer to curtail potential liability because of their products. Frankly, we have no justification for putting this one provision in the legislation. It is inappropriate to be included in this legislation. It certainly does not raise the urgency of the issues the Senator from Tennessee discussed in terms of smallpox protection or potential for a mass casualty crisis because of the use of a biological agent.

In point of fact, Thimerosal was withdrawn from use in vaccines in 1999. So this is not a situation where we have to have critical legislation, to ensure that manufacturers will continue to use this material. In fact, quite the contrary, this material, although no one has established a definitive link to any particular disease, has been voluntarily withdrawn from inclusion in vaccines.

So what we have is a situation where allegations have been made by parents of children that this preservative caused a disease in their child. And as the Senator from Connecticut rightly pointed out, in 1987 Congress enacted the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program as a no-fault alternative to the tort system for resolving these types of claims. The procedure for the compensation program is that you must first go through this system of evaluation of your claim and determination of award, if any, before you are allowed to pursue your claim in court.

What has occurred in this situation is that families have alleged that this preservative, Thimerosal, is not covered under the Vaccine Injury Compensation Program because, even though it is an ingredient listed on the label, was a contaminant or adulterant and, as a result, is not included in the scope of the VICP. That is a legal issue. That legal issue is being decided as we speak.

In fact, the VICP has requested that the Special Master in the Federal Claims consider this question, and the Special Master is currently deliberating the issue, but has not yet ruled.

So here we are, at the 11th hour of this legislative session, trying to pass a homeland security bill. And what we find, mysteriously and surprisingly, is a provision in the bill that would short circuit the ongoing litigation, that would thrust our view on the courts. And, frankly, I suspect the Special Master has a much more attuned notion of what are the permutations, what are the consequences, what are the legal precedents of concluding whether or not Thimerosal is covered under the VICP, than we have on this floor.

Again, this is reduced quite easily, quite simply, quite transparently, to an attempt by an industry to insert, within a bill that is deemed to be absolutely necessary to pass, a provision that by short circuiting the discussion and potentially short circuits the rights of parents to recover the full compensatory and other damages that they deserve because of their child's illness.

The purpose of this has been settled in terms of scientific cause and effect. But procedurally I think we have to, in short, allow the process to take place. It is not uncommon—in fact, it is quite common—that there are disputes about the interpretation of a particular statute, the coverage of a particular statute. But we seldom—if of course there are very well connected and influential proponents—seldom pick out these items for legislative relief with respect to any type of judicial conclusion. So I suggest, particularly with regard to this matter—the striking of these specific provisions—is inappropriate.

Indeed, one wonders why we are spending time debating this issue on a homeland security bill when in fact there are so many other needs that deserve our attention and deliberation. Many of my colleagues have suggested that, not just with regard to what is in this bill but, frankly, the need to support more vigorously those programs and policies that we already have in place might take precedence over simply recreating and reshuffling the deck in terms of the organization of the Federal Government with respect to homeland security.

I urge my colleagues to support Senator LIEBERMAN's efforts, at least to eliminate these items which are entirely extraneous to the homeland security bill, and in fact fall far from the urgency that is so apparent, appropriately, in the homeland security bill.

A final point I should say, and I think my colleague from Tennessee... said it so well, is that the issue of access to vaccines is a very critical issue that warrants our close attention. I was fortunate enough to chair a hearing of the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee in which Assistant Secretary of Defense testified about existing obstacles to a dependable and adequate supply of vaccines for children. The Senator from Tennessee, with his unique perspective as a physician, not only has been helpful but has taken a very personal role, working with others and myself, in developing a comprehensive approach. That comprehensive approach might require an examination of the VICP program. It certainly might also require vaccine stockpiles, notifications by manufacturers, if they chose not to produce a vaccine, so that our public health authorities know prior to the onset of a particular shortage that you will have one, two, three, or four manufacturers in the market to meet the demand.

So I would argue that a comprehensive approach to maintaining the supply of vaccine is important. The Senator from Tennessee has been working on it, and I am working on it, but that is not what we are talking about this afternoon. We are not talking about protecting the American public in a systematic, comprehensive way by ensuring that vaccines are available. What we are talking about today is a special interest provision that short-circuits ongoing litigation involving a product that is no longer being used as a preservative. It is not about what we need to do today to protect ourselves from the very real threat of bioterrorism. Frankly, my assumption was, when we came to the floor to talk about the homeland security bill, we would be talking about what we need to do today to protect this country in the future.

So I urge my colleagues to support Senator LIEBERMAN, to recognize this bill would be much improved by adopting the provisions he has suggested for Madam President, I rise today to talk about an issue of critical importance to our Republic, and that is the urgent need for Federal civil service reform. I came to this floor earlier this fall to discuss how civil service reform can improve our ability to secure the homeland, and I rise again today because this issue remains at the crux of our renewed debate on the homeland security legislation.

As a member of the Governmental Affairs Committee and ranking member of the Oversight of Government Management subcommittee, I have worked to focus the spotlight on this issue since I came to the Senate 4 years ago. During the course of numerous hearings and numerous meetings with national leaders in management and public policy, it became crystal clear that we were in the midst of a human capital crisis in the U.S. Government. Moreover, it became clear that if this crisis is not addressed, it is going to get worse unless this Congress acts decisively to address it.

Some people still ask what the human capital crisis is, how serious is it, and whether it really threatens the operations of the Federal Government. The human capital crisis is, simply stated, the inability of the Federal Government to properly manage its workforce. Robust personnel management includes the ability to recruit the best candidates, keep people in a timely manner, award performance bonuses and other motivational tools to provide training and professional development opportunities and the flexibilities to shape a balanced workforce. Good management includes the flexibility to act quickly and to compete as an employer of choice in this fast-paced 21st century knowledge economy.

Madam President, I believe that if a Federal agency or department is implementing the reforms we receive the hard-earned tax dollars of our constituents and yours, we have a moral responsibility to see to it that the people's money is spent wisely. Outdated personnel practices and lack of training not only put agencies at risk of not being able to fulfill their mission and providing needed services to the American people, they also represent wasteful spending. We simply must provide the flexibility agencies need and give them the right tools to do their work.

Within 2 years, more than 50 percent of the 1.8 million person Federal workforce will be eligible for early or regular retirement. It is virtually impossible to predict accurately the amount of experience and institutional knowledge that is literally going to walk out the door by the end of the decade. That is why it is not only right to focus attention on our human capital crisis, it is essential.

Unfortunately, until recent months, very few Members of Congress have paid much attention to this growing set of challenges.

Now, as the Senate is considering legislation designed to reorganize the Federal Government in a way that will help secure our Nation against future terrorist attacks, civil service reform is front and center. This issue, which for years has not been substantively addressed, is of paramount importance in the consideration of the most significant government reorganization to take place in our Nation in half a century. It's about time.

Congress last enacted major civil service legislation for the Federal Government 24 years ago in 1978. To operate effectively, the Federal Government cannot afford to revise its personnel laws only every quarter century. So much has changed over the years, and changing times require new ways of thinking and new laws that allow flexibility in our Federal government's civil service system.

During the 107th Congress, I have worked with some of the Nation's premier experts on public management to develop what I believe are the laws that are necessary to create a world-class 21st century Federal workforce. These include: the Council for Excellence in Government, Partnership for Public Service, Private Sector Council, Brookings Institution, National Academy of Public Administration, and the Volcker Commission: Administration officials including OPM Director Kay James, and former OMB Deputy Director and current NASA Administrator, Sean O'Keefe; and representatives of federal employee groups like Bobby Harnage of the American Federation of Government Employees, Colleen Kelley of the National Treasury Employees Union, and Carol Bonosaro of the Senior Executives' Association. I am grateful for the respective and recommendations all of these groups provided and we drafted our legislation based on their insights.

Our bill, S. 2651, the Federal Workforce Improvement Act of 2002, which I introduced with Senators THOMPSON and COCHRAN, is designed to get the right people with the right skills in the right jobs at the right time. It is a consensus package of human capital reforms that I believe will have a positive impact on the Federal Government's personnel management.

Working closely with Senator AKAKA, I successfully amended key provisions of this bill to the homeland security legislation during its consideration by the Governmental Affairs Committee in July. I am grateful for the support that Senator AKAKA provided as we adopted those important government-wide personnel flexibilities. I only wish we had put more of S. 3551 in the homeland security bill. We need to get it all done.

Next year, I intend to introduce these provisions again, as well as other human capital legislation that will not be enacted this year. For example S. 1817, which would make Federal student loan forgiveness benefits tax-free; S. 1913, the Digital Tech Corps Act, which would establish a public-private exchange program for IT professionals, and S. 2456, the Federal Law Enforcement Pay Equity and Reform Act, which would create an employee exchange program between Federal agencies that perform law enforcement functions and state and local law enforcement agencies. These bills would strengthen the performance of our Federal workforce throughout the government.

In the 108th Congress, I also intend to take a closer look at compensation issues, especially for the Federal law enforcement community. Serious recruitment and retention challenges have been a problem at agencies such as the FBI and other law enforcement agencies for a long time and we simply have to address this issue.

The governmentwide human capital provisions we have already included in the homeland security legislation will have an impact not only on the new department, but on all Federal agencies. Our language will help the Federal department, but on all Federal agencies. It creates Chief Human Capital Officers at the Federal Government’s 24 largest departments and agencies—officials who will have responsibility for selecting, developing, training, and managing Federal workforce. This language does the following:

- It creates Chief Human Capital Officers at the Federal Government’s 24 largest departments and agencies—officials who will have responsibility for selecting, developing, training, and managing Federal workforce.
- It eliminates the OPM Director from the OPM’s determination of human capital challenges—challenges that extend far beyond the corridors of the proposed Department of Homeland Security.
- It establishes an agencywide human capital language to address the personnel problem is a precondition of fixing the personnel problem.

The second compromise provision in this bill was proposed by Representatives CONNIE MORELLA and CHRIS SHAYS with an additional provision that I have recommended. This language would, for the first time, limit the current authority of the President to exclude an agency or agency subdivision from participation in a collective bargaining unit.

Under current law, the President may exclude participation in a collective bargaining unit upon determining that the entity has as a primary function intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative or national security work and that permitting the entity to have collective bargaining rights would be inconsistent with national security requirements and considerations.

The compromise language would limit the President’s current authority only with regard to the new department. It would prohibit the President from using the exclusionary authority unless the mission and responsibilities of a transferred agency materially change and a majority of the employees within such an agency have as their primary duty national security work. We have also added some language I have proposed requiring that if the President does not execute his authority under the Morella language, he must notify Congress at least 10 days prior to the issuance of his written order. This will bring the light of day into his decisionmaking process. I don’t expect him to do it, but I think in some way we can guarantee that such action will not be arbitrary and capricious.

The second compromise provision in the bill was proposed by Representatives JACK QUINN and ROB PORTMAN over in the House. I want everyone to understand this so they can see how much more limited this bill is than what the President originally sent us.

The initial proposal featured a personnel system that was similar to the one that was established last fall for the Transportation Security Administration, which waived most of title 5. Of course, the Homeland Security Department, the President realized Congress would flesh out his proposal, and that is what happened. This legislation we are considering would create a new agency under title 5, allowing modifications in only six areas.

The House-passed version is less flexible than what the administration wanted, but it is designed to deal with the personnel flexibility sought by the President, and to address the collective bargaining rights that many of our colleagues seek to protect, including me.
This language would preserve employee rights, including hiring and promotion based on merit and equal pay for equal work, and would protect employees from improper political influence and reprisal for whistleblowing. Employees will still be protected from prohibited personnel practices, such as illegal discrimination, politicized hiring or promotion processes, and violation of veterans' preference requirements.

Further, employees would still have the right to organize, bargain collectively, and participate through labor organizations of their own choosing in decisions that affect them.

The compromise language requires the new Department collaborate with unions and other employee organizations in creating its personnel system. The language also improves the arbitration process by ensuring both employees, at the beginning of the 30-day arbitration period, the differences between collective bargaining unit employees and management would be established so everyone would know what the differences are. In other words, if there is no purpose of opinion aired publicly. It is not going to be hidden somewhere. We are all going to know about it. The American people will know about it, and Congress will know about it.

After the 30-day period, the differences would be resolved. At the end of the total of 60 days, it is over. I would have been open to more robust participation of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or another third-party mediator in resolving disagreements over title 5 modifications. However, the system established by this legislation is a compromise, and I support it.

The real test of this language is whether we have built trust with your labor union colleagues to know I feel that the personnel provisions in the compromise language can go a long way towards putting personnel management in the executive branch on track.

I urge the passage of this very important bill. We have to get it done. It is going to take time to establish this new Department. We have to secure the homeland. We need to get going.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROCKEFELLER). The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORZINE). The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I compliment the Senator from Ohio for his very thoughtful and important comments in which he reached to a deeper level, which I was going to do, but now I do not feel the need to because he spoke of the importance for good working relations between management and those who work with management, which is a field as important as homeland security.

I rise today to lend my support to the Homeland Security Act. I thank Senator LIEBERMAN for taking really the lead, before anybody else did, on this issue, and then to work in good faith with all interested parties to develop solutions.

Based on my work, I want my colleagues to know that the personnel provisions in the compromise language can go a long way towards putting personnel management in the executive branch on track.

I thank the Chair.

layers of intelligence agencies, and expect them all to work very crisply together, when they don’t work crisply together now. Nevertheless, there needs to be a central point. I believe in that firmly.

So with the understanding it is a work in progress, we will, therefore, have to shepherd its ongoing development, and we will.

Although the homeland security act should not be mistaken for the definitive answer for all of our security woes, I believe it is a strong piece of legislation with a lot of potential to serve its purpose and all of us and the people we represent well.

The Department we are creating is strikingly similar to the original proposal both the White House and Senate introduced last summer. It has been some time since then.

The new Department will combine the functions of 22 Federal agencies and subagencies. Again, this will be complicated. There will be all kinds of problems. We have to assume that. That is not a bad thing. That is the evolution of anything that large that takes place, whether it is in business or in government; change, reorganization takes place, whether it is in business or in any other evolution of anything that large that doesn’t happen quickly.

That is not a bad thing. That is the purpose and all of us and the people we represent well.

I believe it is a strong piece of legislation. There will be all kinds of subheads, and so on and so forth. It is going to have to be efficient, oftentimes you have less accountability rather than more accountability, and with a way for the intelligence community to communicate with each other. And yet, we know that there was a breakdown that existed between these agencies. We know one thing about September 11th. We know that the CIA and the FBI were not speaking to each other.

The homeland security bill tinkers around the edges with creating new ways for the intelligence community to let the Homeland Security Director know what is happening. But we do not have an overall picture of this great problem that exists between these agencies. That is amazing to me, since we know one thing—that there was a breakdown in communication between these two agencies.

I also happen to believe that massive reorganization is generally an invitation to chaos and more bureaucracy. I began my political career a long time ago in a small county of about 200,000 people. We found that when you combine agencies in the name of trying to be efficient, oftentimes you have less accountability. That is what is happening here—combining all of these agencies, with some 170,000 people, creating all kinds of subheads, and so on and so forth.

So I am very worried. I hope to be proven wrong because this bill will pass, but I am worried that there will be less accountability rather than more. That is why I supported the Byrd amendment, way back when we started this debate, which would create a Cabinet level Homeland Security Director and a streamlined Homeland Security Department, with people who would be held accountable, and with a way for the President to continue to play a role as we develop this very important agency. I thought that would have been the way to go. I was proud to stand with Robert Byrd on his amendment.

I happen to believe in my heart of hearts that the President’s change of heart about the need for a homeland security department had a lot to do with the fact that he is very interested in stripping away worker protections. I have to believe that deep in my heart. Why did the President change his position? Of the 170,000 people in the new Department, only 40,000 of them have worker protection, that is all. There are people at the bottom of the barrel, when the President refused to spend $5.1 billion that this Congress gave him for homeland security to ensure that our ports are more secure, to ensure that our nuclear power plants are safe, to ensure that our chemical plants are safe, to ensure that our airports are safe, and to speed up development of necessary vaccines. I was stunned when the President did what he did.

I was also stunned when he opposed the idea of making the Homeland Security Department a Cabinet position. Stunned.

The Homeland Security Director, Senator LIEBERMAN and his committee had voted out a bill—at least the Committee Democrats did—did the President decide he wanted to support this concept.

We know one thing about September 11th. We know that the CIA and the FBI were not speaking to each other. And yet there is not one thing in this homeland security bill that addresses this issue.

The homeland security bill tinkers around the edges with creating new ways for the intelligence community to let the Homeland Security Director know what is happening. But we do not have an overall picture of this great problem that exists between these agencies. That is amazing to me, since we know one thing—that there was a breakdown in communication between these two agencies.

I happen to believe in my heart of hearts that the President’s change of heart about the need for a homeland security department had a lot to do with the fact that he is very interested in stripping away worker protections. I have to believe that deep in my heart. Why did the President change his position? Of the 170,000 people in the new Department, only 40,000 of them have worker protection, that is all. There are people at the bottom of the barrel, in terms of pay; the secretaries, the janitors, the file clerks. I don’t understand—and I have said this before on the floor of the Senate—why a President who calls himself “compassionate” would want to take away the most minimum of rights from such people. The debate is not about health care. I don’t understand why this President would have held up this bill all this time for that.

Now there is a compromise. I am glad a few exemptions are added. That is good. But I don’t know how a person who says he is compassionate could go on after people who have the most minimal job protections. They don’t have the right to strike. No Federal employee has the right to strike. They can scarcely collectively bargain given the provisions of this bill. That, to me, is a sour note in this debate and continues to weigh on my heart—that maybe this President changed his mind, in part, because of this “compassionate” approach to take after these workers. It is really a sad thing to me.

If we look at the economy today—and I know my colleague from West Virginia gets this because he talks to me about it all the time—it is a tough economy they are working in. The fact is, over the last couple of years, as the President came into power, we have seen a tremendous loss of private sector jobs. More jobs have been lost than at any time in 50 years. We know what is happening to people’s retirement security because of the stock market, with the worst performance in more than 50 years. People are frightened. So why do you go after 40,000 workers and give them insecurity?

We heard yesterday that the President is going to move more than 800,000 jobs into the private sector from the Federal Government—more than 800,000 jobs. At a time when people are feeling insecurity, he is going to throw them out of the marketplace because of the fact that the market will have very little security. There is something missing here that is upsetting to me.

So here we are. In my opinion, we have a bad choice to make when we finally vote on homeland security. I will make what I consider to be the best of that bad choice—a choice between no homeland security bill and one that I believe was thrown together in a way that is going to make it less accountable and is going to hit a lot of bumps in this country. Taking FEMA and putting it in there—what will happen when we have an earthquake in California? What is going to happen with the Coast Guard when they have to do search and rescue? These are troubling questions to me.

We will have that choice to make. That is life. We often don’t have great choices here, and we will make that decision. But one thing I know I am going to vote for with great pride on Monday, is the Daschle-Lieberman amendment.

I see a couple of colleagues on the floor who care about these issues, and I want to recognize my friend from Michigan, who called us together today to explore the ramifications of a particular rider that was added in the dead of night. I will explain it, and I hope she will engage me in a bit of a colloquy.

In the dead of night, with no one watching, after we thought we had made the compromise on these workers, a few things were snuck into this bill. A big campaign contributor of the Republican Party was rewarded phenomenally. A provision was added to the homeland security bill that protected that big contributor but it has nothing to do with homeland security or protecting the American people. In fact, I say that this provision which was added will create insecurity in our homeland by sending a message to thousands of families that their children’s health takes a distant second to the interests of large, wealthy, powerful corporate America.

Let me say that in my State of California, autism—a very haunting and mysterious brain disorder—has increased an astonishing 273 percent over the last decade and a half. Dr. Neil Halsey, a respected pediatrician and an expert in vaccination, for years said there was no connection between vaccines and autism. I am quoting from an article that appeared in Sunday’s New York Times. There is “some real risk to children,” he said, “from vaccines that contain mercury. It is used as a preservative in some of these vaccines.”

So what provisions did the Republicans put into the bill? A provision that holds harmless the company that produces Thimerosal, a mercury-based preservative for vaccines.

What does that have to do with homeland security? Absolutely nothing. Childhood vaccines have nothing to do with homeland security. What does this say? What do we not have the guts to strip it out? What does it mean to real people who are fighting this disease? Many of the families have filed class action lawsuits because—if you have ever seen an autistic child, although their symptoms range from mild to severe, in severe cases you are talking about essentially 24-hour care for that child. What will these families have to do? They will have to go to a taxpayer fund—a compensation fund that taxpayers pay for—which has very little money left in it, which is capped at an amount that will never pay for the cost of raising a child with this terrible disease.

We heard testimony on the House side that some families trying to collect from this compensation fund have had to fight for 10 years to receive their awards. All the while, if this special interest rider passes, the companies that cause the problems will continue about their business. There is a love out this rider which is upsetting and disturbing.

First of all, how would you feel if you were a parent of a young child and all of a sudden, without any science, you have a liability waiver for this mercury compound? They are going to think: My goodness, if the Republicans—the Bush administration—is protecting their biggest contributors, maybe they know something we do not know that this is really a problem because why would they bother doing it if they were not worried?

This has nothing to do with homeland security. If it did, they would have something else they would have cited the vaccines.

There are moments when I wonder why we are here if we are not willing to stand up and fight for the American people. The special interests, the powerful interests have so much behind them. They can so easily hire the lawyers they need, the representatives they need to come here to lobby. But the average family that gets struck with this type of tragedy, all they have is the love in the home to get them through. What are we doing here? We have to help these people, not have a special interest provision that is put in in the dead of night that says to themselves: We do not care if you do not care about your kids, and if you have to suffer through, too bad, because we are going to protect the people who write the large contributions. (Mr. ROCKEFELLER assumed the chair.)

Ms. STABENOW. Will my friend from California yield?

Mrs. BOXER. I will be happy to yield to my friend.

Ms. STABENOW. On that point, we actually have counted the number of pharmaceutical lobbyists in the Senate. There are six lobbyists for every Member of the Senate: Six for me, six for the Senator from California, six for the Senator from New Jersey. Six pharmaceutical lobbyists are being paid full time to lobby and bring in these kinds of provisions and also to kill other provisions.

We passed legislation to lower prescription drug prices, to increase competition of generic drugs, and open the border to Canada. There is a bill that has been languishing in the House for months that has been stopped by the same group that could take the time at the last minute to put this outrageous provision into the homeland security bill.

I thank the Senator from California for her eloquence and for standing up for families, because as a mother—and I have three as well—it is outrageous to think that parents who are concerned about their children will not have an opportunity to have their day in court over something that potentially is extremely damaging and hurtful.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend for her leadership. I point out to my colleagues who are here that four desks down from me sat Paul Wellstone for 12 years. If Paul was here now, he would be stepping outside that desk and telling us: Now is the time to stand up for people, for children, for people without a voice.
Autistic kids sometimes cannot talk. We have to stand up and be counted on Monday when this vote takes place and take the consequences if somebody gets mad at us here or there because there is no reason to be here if we do not protect the people of this country.

Mr. President, I am not going to take the Senate’s time anymore. I have expressed myself. I look forward to casting a vote on the Daschle-Lieberman amendment to strike this rider and the other riders that were attached at the last minute. I think it is just auantant attempt to give out special favors to the detriment of the American people.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, before I begin, I commend the Senator from California on raising the issue regarding childhood vaccines but the whole issue of adding riders about which I am going to speak in a moment on a whole series of issues. It makes a complicated and troubling piece of legislation even more difficult to weigh and balance as to whether or not we can truly think that we can do better to make things better by pushing them together.

At least in my experience in my private life, sometimes mergers do not always amount to what is intended, and value is not always created. It certainly leads to a question of whether we have the flexibility and responsiveness in an organizational structure.

I am certainly troubled by the idea of creating a larger organization made up of parts that apparently have not been working so well historically. Clearly, we need to take positive steps. It may very well be we are doing that with the proposal with regard to homeland security, but at least as one individual, I am troubled with the overall size of the operation and whether it will bring about the responsiveness to the need, which I think all of us feel quite clearly needs to be addressed, of protecting the American people.

I also am equally concerned about a number of these provisions that were added in a closed manner.

There may be things that should be carved out from public view, but when private sector individuals can have a perspective of conflict of interest in the advice, it seems perfectly clear that ought to be made available to the American public, and I am very troubled about the mentality we are taking with regard to secret activity, particularly when it involves the private sector.

We have had that debate with regard to our energy policies, and I think we are making that a normal course of events.

So for all of those reasons—and those are mostly adds, except for maybe the drop with regard to the Wellstone initiative—I am troubled.

Finally, this National Commission on September 11 and the review, to me, is incomprehensible. Hopefully we will find another way to bring this back, but in my 30 years in the world of management I have never seen a situation where you have an accident, a breakdown, a problem that people do not stand back and say, what went wrong and what could we have done differently to make sure we are secure going forward, without an independent review that has no vested interest, that all of the facts are laid upon the table, including, by the way, observing whether congressional oversight is operated with its most effective provision.

I find it difficult to understand why we have given so much and so great certainty about the direction we should be taking with regard to homeland security.

As I said, this is going to be a tough weekend for me because I have trouble with the conceptual issue of putting so many people together. Now that the senior Senator from West Virginia is present, we could argue that the Constitution he is carrying in his pocket would also raise serious questions about some of the authorities there. These special additions and drops at the end are particularly concerning to me.

So for all of those reasons, this is going to be a very difficult weekend for me because I have trouble with the conceptual issue of putting so many people together. Now that the senior Senator from West Virginia is present, we could argue that the Constitution he is carrying in his pocket would also raise serious questions about some of the authorities there. These special additions and drops at the end are particularly concerning to me.
Now, there is another issue which has not been discussed on which I have worked very hard through most of this year and feel deeply about because it deeply impacts my State. Actually, it impacts almost every State in the Union.

I see the ranking member from the Committee on Environment and Public Works, the Senator from New Hampshire, who has heard much of this discussion in the committee, which I think is something that is missing from this debate. What is the need to protect Americans from attacks on our Nation's privately owned chemical facilities?

I realize this is also one of those things that is futile in the context of the cloture debate, but it is absolutely essential that America be aware of an issue that needs to be focused on and needs to be moved forward. I would be remiss in not having brought this farther in the process, and hopefully this discussion can help us focus on this issue.

Many facilities simply have not fulfilled their responsibilities, in my view. Many are certainly vulnerable to attack. As the statistics and studies show, literally millions of Americans are at risk. They are at risk in New Jersey. If one flies into Newark Airport, one would see at a nuclear power plant in the United States.

As I will relate, if someone visits some of these facilities in the United States, they will see an entirely different standard by which we are securing them. In fact, there are currently no Federal security standards for chemical facilities. In none—so that the private sector is left to do whatever it desires or believes it can afford. It is a completely voluntary situation.

Many facilities simply have not fulfilled their responsibilities, in my view. They are at risk in New Jersey. If one flies into Newark Airport and looks at the chemical plant storage facilities, the refining facilities that are put in the path of the landings, they will get a sense of the kind of exposure we have.

Also, if one looks at how easy it is to access, which I will speak more clearly to in a minute, they get an even greater sense of the insecurity with regard to this area of our infrastructure.

According to the EPA, there are 123 facilities in 24 States where a chemical release could expose more than 1 million people to highly toxic chemicals. One of these plants is New Jersey. It has exposure to 7.5 million people inside the metropolitan region of New York. A lot of chemical plants are located in our urban communities, not scattered out into the hinterland but right smack dab in the middle of where we have high concentrations of populations. There are about 750 facilities in 39 States where chemical release could expose more than 100,000 people to highly toxic chemicals. There are nearly 3,000 facilities spread across 49 States where a chemical release could expose more than 10,000 people to highly toxic chemicals.

I think the numbers speak for themselves, and they are staggering. There is a large exposure in a broad context in our Nation.

A single attack on a facility could unleash highly toxic chemicals such as chlorine, ammonia, and hydrogen fluoride that cause widespread injuries and death. Considering the literally thousands of potentially deadly facilities across the country, we cannot escape the conclusion that it represents a major vulnerability, a major homeland security problem.

It is not just my opinion. In fact, the Justice Department issued a report on this matter a year and a half before September 11. I will read a brief excerpt from a summary of the report issued April 18, 2000.

We have concluded the risk of terrorists attempting in the foreseeable future causing industrial, chemical release is both real and credible. Increasingly, terrorists engineer their attacks to cause mass casualties to the populace and/or more large-scale damage to property. Terrorists or other criminals are likely to target the chemical release from an industrial facility as a relatively attractive means of achieving these goals.

That report was issued before September 11. Its conclusions have been echoed by several other Government agencies and individuals since.

For example, Governor Ridge said the following in recent testimony before EPW:

The fact is, we have a very diversified economy and our enemies look at some of our economic assets as targets. And clearly, the chemical facilities are one of them. We know that there have been reports validated about security deficiencies at dozens and dozens of those.

Let me talk about the reports Governor Ridge may have been referring to. Earlier this year, the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review did a major investigation of western Pennsylvania. Here is what they found:

A Pittsburgh Tribune-Review investigation has shown that intruder has unfettered access to 30 of the region's deadliest stockpiles of toxins and explosives, despite repeated warnings from the Federal intelligence agencies to safeguard large chemical tanks.

This Tribune-Review went on to say:

Security was so lax at the 30 sites that in broad daylight a Tribune reporter—wearing a press pass and carrying a camera—could walk or drive up to tanks, pipes and control rooms considered key targets for terrorists.

After this initial story, the Tribune-Review expanded the scope of investigation. They went to Houston, Baltimore, and Chicago to see if what they found in western Pennsylvania was a fluke. They looked at 30 or more facilities in 3 other States and the findings were equally disturbing.

I point out in metropolitan New York and the local television station has done similar reports of walk-arounds at chemical plant facilities, including the one that has the 7.5 million people exposure in metropolitan New York.

This is troubling, to say the least. There is a pattern. Perhaps that is why the chemical industry got low marks for post-September 11 terrorism response.

On September 10 of this year, the Washington Post graded critical infrastructure sectors, giving the chemical industry a D. Newsweek, which is owned by the same people, did a similar piece. They were even tougher. Newsweek gave the chemical industry an F. I have seen this repeatedly in a number of surveys of America's infrastructure.

While some companies may be doing everything they can, and I know there are some that are working very hard, they are concerned about it for security reasons and protecting their people and maybe themselves. But the fact is we need to do more. We need to be a lot more certain the breadth of the industry is being attended to.

That is why in October 2001 I introduced the Chemical Security Act. That is why I worked with Senators on both sides of the aisle to move the bill through the EPW Committee. This is the hard part. Ultimately, the committee approved the legislation on a vote of 19-to-0. Not a single Senator voted no. I note Senator INHOFE did, in fairness, express concerns about the bill at markup and I agreed to continue to work with him on those issues afterwards, particularly so we could potentially add it as an amendment to homeland security.

In fact, as I suggested, I talked with other Members and we tried to keep the concerns of the bill, deal with them, and while I will not go through the post-markup negotiations, there were substantial revisions so it could get added to the bill. Unfortunately, we have not been able to get to conclusion in that process even though it was a 19-to-0 vote in committee for it. Sometimes I wonder whether special interests sometimes trump the people's interests.

I will not be offering my amendment; it is not germane. But I think we need to come back and go to work on this issue as soon, as forcefully, as possible. It is absolutely relevant to homeland security and protecting the American people. I know that is the case in New Jersey.

I will not go through it in detail, but the first thing we have to do is be very specific about identifying high priority chemical facilities. That can be done relatively straightforwardly. It will take cooperation between EPA and the new Homeland Security Department. There is some debate about that. We need a list. It does not have to be published on the front page of the New York Times, but we need to understand what the exposures are and get about protecting the American people.

Second, we need to have audits of what is so prescribed. And there is a reality to what has been talked about. There is not a moral hazard saying we have done something and nothing really has occurred.

In a nutshell, that is what this is about. It is little more complicated than that in detail, but I suggest this is something that really should be a priority when we return. I hope we do not face the stonewalling that has come up from some elements in the industry. The need to act is urgent. This is, by the way, consistent with some of the things other people who have looked at homeland security on a broader basis have talked about.

I will quote from a recent op-ed piece by William Rusden and Gary Hart, who have been following homeland security as effectively as any two Americans studying this. They have an op-ed page written in October of this year:

America’s corporate leaders must accept their responsibilities to protect the privately owned critical infrastructure and cease the behind-the-scenes lobbying against measures requiring them to do so. If necessary, the President must deliver this message bluntly and directly.

Some of those things that were added in the middle of the night, the kind of experience that I have with regard to trying to deal with chemical plant security, is indicative that that process of resisting, protecting the American people, is not fully embraced in the private sector.

I could not agree more. We need to work together as a Congress, with the administration, and deal with this issue.

Homeland security in general, is of the essence, as someone said around here. It is not neutral. So I hope we can move very quickly on this. I am sorry we are not here to deal with this.

There are some good voluntary efforts with regard to chemical security. But I don’t think we have gone far enough. Voluntary efforts alone are not going to be sufficient. We need to work in Congress to make this happen.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that there be debate only on the matter now before the Senate until 3:30 today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORZINE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, if the Chair will bear with me momentarily.

Mr. President, over recent weeks as the President crisscrossed the Nation and campaigned stop after campaign stop—he used a number of gimmicks, including this legislation, to rally support for his chosen candidates. He painted this bill as a panacea for the terrorist threats that plague us and is going to this Congress to pass this bill quickly.

On each occasion, as I followed the newspaper accounts of the President’s stops during the campaign, the President left the impression among the public that this bill is urgently needed, and that it will save American families. But there was much he didn’t say. Here is what the people can expect after the Congress approves this legislation to transfer 28 agencies and offices to a new Homeland Security Department.

Next February, the President will submit a plan—his plan—to the Congress about how he intends to transfer 28 agencies and offices into a massive new Department over the period of just 12 months. We don’t know what is in the President’s plan today, and we will not know what is in the President’s plan when and if Congress passes this bill and it goes to the Chief Executive for his signature.

We will not know what is in the President’s plan. After we have passed this bill and it becomes law, the President will then inform the Congress about how he intends to reorganize, consolidate, and streamline these 28 agencies and offices into the new Department. He will not seek approval of the Congress—the elected representatives of the people. He will not seek our approval. He will not need to because—according to the provisions of this bill on which we are being hurried and stampeded to act, according to the provisions of this bill—he will simply drop the plan in the laps of the committees so they can be informed about what he intends to do. He will not be asking for their approval. We will have already given our approval when we pass this bill.

I hope Senators understand that. When we pass this bill, we, the Congress, are out of it. The President will in due time submit his plan. In due time he will inform the Congress as to what he intends to do. He won’t have to ask us if we approve of what he is going to do. We will have already said to him: Here it is. You submit your plan. According to the provisions of this bill, your plan will go into effect in due time. And we will not have any more to say about it.

He will simply drop the plan. It will not fall like manna from heaven, because it won’t come from heaven. This is what we are authorizing the President to do when we adopt this bill that is before the Senate.

Here it is. Those who are watching this floor through the electronic lenses before us, here is the bill. It is made up of 484 pages. These pages are not like reading “Robinson Crusoe” or Milton’s “Paradise Lost.” They are very difficult to read. It is really not a fairy tale. But it is indeed not a fairy tale.

This is a bill that affects you—a bill that affects those two members of the staff back here who are talking: This is a bill that affects you. This is a bill that will affect you, each of you—you, you, you, each Senator. Each of those persons out there who are watching this pages to understand only one page—484 pages of complicated material. How long have we had it? A little over 48 hours. It came to us early in the morning on the day before yesterday, today is Friday—early in the morning of Wednesday. There it is. There is the whole thing—the whole thing. I don’t know what is in it. I know about some of the things that are in it. I do not know how the Congress is out of it. The President will stand on his feet and challenge me on that and say: Hold up here a minute; I daresay that I would be happy for any Senator to stand on his feet and challenge me on that and say: Hold up here a minute; I know everything that is in it.

There is no authority for the President to submit this plan. He can do it without our subsequent approval. This legislation authorizes the President to reorganize, consolidate, or streamline these 28 agencies and offices any way he chooses, and stampede the floor to get the bill into the hands of the President of the United States—as these various agencies are moved into the new Department.
All this legislation asks of the President of the United States is that he let us know what he has decided. That is not asking a lot from the Chief Executive of this country. That is all he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about is to explain what he plans to do. Too late. I am sorry to say to any of you Senators that you can’t do anything about this. You have already given him the approval. When you vote aye on this 484-page plan, you have given the President the approval that he needs. You can be sorry for what you have done. You can grab about it and be cranky and wish you had not done it. But it is too late now.

You remember that old song: “It is too late now.” Well, it will be too late for any of us—too late.

We can weep and gnash our teeth—if we have any teeth left. And I happen to have my full set after 85 years. I had a full set quite a full set. But I have lost about I think four teeth in my lifetime of 85 years. These are real teeth. I can’t take them out at night and scrub them, wash them, and put them in my glass of water; I can’t do that. They are real teeth. And they are real teeth. And they can bite, thank God. We didn’t have all of this fancy medicine and all of these fancy health programs that the young people and children have today, with which mothers and fathers are blessed. We didn’t have anything like that in those days.

So all I have is what the good Lord gave me through my mother’s and father’s genes. Well, that is all I have.

So here we are. I can gnash my teeth. They are real teeth. I can gnash those teeth. I seldom show them around here, but they are there. I can gnash those teeth. I seldom show them around here, but they are there. I can gnash those teeth. And they can bite, thank God.

All this legislation asks is that the President of the United States is that he let us know what he has decided. That is all he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about. All he needs to be concerned about.

You remember that old song: “It is too late now.” Well, it will be too late for any of us—too late.

I wish I had known what Senator who is sitting in the Chair right now, the Senator from New Jersey, Mr. CORZINE, talked about this morning. He told us about it. He told us about these special advisory committees. And they will have been established, by the new Homeland Security Secretary, to make recommendations about certain homeland security-related issues.

Now, look at that. I hope Senators will go back to today’s RECORD or that of the first of the week about what Senator CORZINE had to say about this, yes, about certain homeland security-related issues.

Possibly, you will hear about an advisory committee that has been established—to make recommendations about how the new Directorate of Information Analysis can look at our e-mail accounts. This will not be a laughing matter. I will tell you, this will not be a laughing matter. Now, let me say that again. Possibly, you will hear about an advisory committee that has been established to make recommendations about how the new Directorate of Information Analysis can look at our e-mail accounts, can look at our banking transactions, can look at our telephone conversations, or even look at our credit card transactions.

I don’t have any credit cards. Let them look at mine. They can’t look at my credit card transactions. I grew up the old-fashioned way, I pay for it as I get it. No credit card for Robert C. Byrd, or the Mrs. But to those who have credit cards, he can look at your credit card transactions to trace everything you purchase from butter to bullets. Welcome, Big Brother. How do you like that?

The American people will want to know, and they will want to know, what recommendations are being made to the Homeland Security Secretary. This will not be a laughing matter. You can be sure that the press will not be allowed to access the minutes of those committee meetings. That is what we are making possible by the passage of this legislation. We are making it possible for the American public not to know what these special committees will do, they will not be able to find out because this bill—this bill—here it is; 484 pages, new, never been in a committee, never seen the light of day in a committee meeting. There is no analysis of this bill that I know of from any departments here. There have been no witnesses appearing before Senate committees supporting this bill. Nobody had any committee markup that I know about. This is what Senator CORZINE had to say about this:

But that bill—that bill—will allow the new Secretary to exempt such advisory committees from the public disclosure laws that are on the books now that enable the press—the fourth estate—and the American public to find out what these advisory committees are doing.

This bill will allow the Secretary to drop a veil, to bring the curtain of secrecy down, to drop a veil of secrecy over these advisory committees and麻将 for that. I have been in this Congress 50 years, and I have cast many votes. I have cast more votes, than any Senator who ever lived, in the Senate of this Republic. And I just have to say, I have cast some votes that were right, and some votes, but I hope that we are doing in this bill, more than anything else I have voted on in my 50 years in Congress, is shifting power to an administration, shifting power to a President.

I would say this: God, so help me—and God could drop me in my tracks right here in this moment if I were not saying what I believe—I would say the same thing about this bill if it were a Democratic President in the White House.

I have no ax to grind. I am not on the payroll of any pharmaceutical company or any other company in this country. I am on the people’s payroll. I am telling you the truth. So I have no ax to grind. I am just saying that if it were a Democratic President in the White House, I would be standing here today saying the very same thing. It isn’t because the current President of the United States is a Republican. That is not it. But there is something about this Republican administration that is far different from what I have seen in former Republican administrations. And I served under Republican administrations, beginning with the Eisenhower administration.

This is a different kind of administration. This is a bill that I will vote against, no matter who might be in the office of the President. This bill will allow the Secretary to drop a veil of secrecy over these advisory committees and hide their works from the press and the public.

So what we are doing when we vote next week on this bill, if we vote next week, what we are doing is putting our hands over our eyes, and we are saying the public has no right to know. We are taking away the public’s right to know.

That is what we are about to do to you out there in the land, across the land, across the plateaus, the Plains, the mountains, the valleys. That is what we are saying to you. You may not catch us at it, but that is what we are doing, that is exactly what we are doing to your right to know.

Later in the year, the people may begin to read in the newspapers about start-up problems in this vast new Department. The papers will possibly report that the new Immigration Service to deny entry to a known terrorist because the relevant immigration officials were too preoccupied with moving their offices, reconnecting their computers, re-installing their phones, or even changing the heading on their stationery to handle their primary responsibility; namely, protecting our borders.

This would bring about a clamoring of public disgust as agency officials are found to be too busy organizing their offices to properly handle their duties. Editorials will appear around the country remarking about the failures of the new Department, and the public very well may have reason to lose trust in that Department.

These kinds of high-profile debacles could carry over to the Transportation Security Administration, the Customs Service, FEMA, the Coast Guard, or any of the 28 agencies and offices and 170,000 employees being transferred to the new Department. Senators may well read a few months from now about Federal workforce in their home States and the jobs of Federal employees being privatized under the labor rules included in this bill.

Do you know what that is? That is exactly what we are doing to your right to know.

The Washington Post reported today that the administration plans to open as many as $50,000 Federal jobs to private contractors. Have you read it? If you haven’t, go to today’s Washington Post. Look for that story. It is there. Read it with your own eyes, and you will believe it. What a nice plum that is for some friends of the administration. How about that? What a shortsighted, ill-conceived political gimmick it is. What a hoax it is to play on the taxpayers.

Privatization has nothing whatsoever to do with improving security. Look at the private security firms that were in charge at some of our Nation’s largest airports on September 11. Remember reading about these in the newspaper? Go back and look at some of those old newspapers. What did this administration really want? I ask, is more of that what this administration really wants?

The Wall Street Journal editorialized today about the fallacy of pushing this bill through at such a late date.

Now, imagine that. The Wall Street Journal. Hear me now. Paul Revere awakened Concord. I would like to be able to awaken this Senate and the other body. Do you suppose I could do that? Paul Revere did that. He was able to awaken Concord. Get out of your beds; the redcoats are coming.

Let me say that again. The Wall Street Journal editorialized today about the fallacy of pushing this bill through at such a late date.

How many of our Senators today voted for cloture? If Senators had read the Wall Street Journal, the editorial today about the fallacy of pushing this bill through at such a late date, would the Senate have voted for cloture?

I implored and I importuned and I urged, which I seldom do. I urged Senators right there in front of that desk, that table in the well of the Senate. There were several Senators I urged: Please, Senators, don’t do this. You can vote for it next week perhaps, but don’t vote today. Let’s take a little more time and study this bill.

The answer I got: Well, you have the weekend. You have 30 hours. You have 30 hours; isn’t that enough?

Do we have? No. We have already been told by the minority: You won’t be able to offer any more amendments. The only amendment that is going to be offered is the amendment that has been offered. That was offered by Mr. DASCHLE, that amendment on behalf of Senator LIEBERMAN, and I added my name to it afterwards, when I saw what was going on. So there it is, the Daschle-Lieberman-Byrd amendment.

But we are told by the current minority—soon to be the majority—that you can’t offer any more amendments. That is the only amendment we are going to let you offer.

So how about that cloture now? I was told by the leader of the other side of the aisle: Well, you have the whole weekend. You can study.

Who saw this thing coming? Who saw the situation coming in which we would offer one amendment and we are told by our Republican friends, that is it, no more that one to only amendment that will be offered?

So what about it now, my colleagues who reminded me that we have this weekend? Even under cloture, we have this weekend. I have been told by our Republican friends that they have 30 hours.

I said to one of the Senators who said that to me: I wasn’t born yesterday. I am not a new kid on the street here. I have been in this Congress 50 years. I know a little something. I have learned a little something about the rules of the Senate, and so forth.

But here we are, one amendment. That is all.

We are not going to be allowed to have any other votes on amendments, except that one. “You have 30 hours.” I was told by Senators down in the well there. “Well, you have 30 hours; you have the weekend, and your staff has the weekend. You have 30 hours.”

We have several amendments I would like to offer, but I cannot do it. The tree is filled. Remember the tree at the Garden of Eden? It is the first thing you read about in the Bible. The greatest scientific treatise ever written is that first chapter of Genesis. That will tell you more about science than many scientists today can tell you. It tells you the order of things in which they were created. The scientists of today will tell you that is the correct chronological order. Go back and read that first chapter of Genesis. We will read the chronological order of creation, and that was written thousands of years ago. What a piece of science that is.

I have three grandsons, two of whom are physicists. I have a son-in-law who is a physicist. I have a grandson who married a physicist. So we have lots of physicists, lots of scientists in my family. But before all those scientists came into being, the greatest scientific treatise ever written had been written right there in the Book of Genesis. We have no reason to stay dumb about how creation went forward. It is right there.

Anyhow, there it is for us. So here the Wall Street Journal editorialized today about the fallacy of pushing this bill through at such a late date. Here were these great Senators who stood up there in my face and two or three of them told me, “Well, you have this weekend. You have 30 hours.”

As though I didn’t know that. How many Senators would like to tell me that? One or two of them did. I did say to one that this is not a new kid on the block. I know about that 30 hours.

Now look at what we have. I cannot offer an amendment, even though we have 30 hours. The tree is filled. But it is not that tree in the Garden of Eden. That is the tree of knowledge and we all can continue to learn. But I cannot do it. Our Republican friends would say you can go this far but no farther. You have an amendment pending, but that’s all. That is the only amendment you are going to have to vote on before that 30 hours is up.

How do you like being given that kind of medicine? That is what we have to deal with here. Here is what the Wall Street Journal said. Get this:

There’s little or nothing that this rump session can accomplish that couldn’t be done better starting anew in January.

That reminds me of the distinguished Senator from Texas. I love him in many ways, and I agree with him on occasion. He stood right here today and said, “This bill is the best you will get. How many in here are willing to believe that by putting this over another 3 months they can get a better bill?” I said, “I do.” But that was his position, that this is the best bill you are likely to get. Do I think we will get a better bill after 3 months in a new Congress? Yes, I do. But that was his question.

I don’t need to answer that. Let the Wall Street Journal answer that question. You would not be presiding over a Senate in that condition. You would not be in a Senate in that state would have the same strength, as you would have before. You would not be presiding over a Senate in which this bill was a compromise between, other than the White House and the congressional Republicans, who already supported some version of the President’s original plan. It is a compromise. It won

The first question that was ever asked was asked by God as He went into the Garden of Eden and started looking for Adam—Adam and Eve in that garden. God was walking in the cool of the day and he was looking for Adam in that paradise setting. How lovely that must have been. Here is old Adam over here somewhere under a tree, or back in the bushes, with some figleaves hiding from God. God said: “Adam, where art thou?” That was the first question ever asked.

The people are going to say to us: Senator, where were you? Those Senators of cloture, God will forgive them—and I love them and I respect their viewpoints. They have a right to cast the votes they want to cast them. I don’t like to tell them how to vote. But let my constituents say: Robert, where were you? Where were you when you cast that vote?

So here is what the Wall Street Journal would say:

There’s little or nothing that this rump session can accomplish that couldn’t be done better starting anew in January.

Hallelujah. Thank God for the Wall Street Journal. They answer the question well—better than I

There’s little or nothing that this rump session can accomplish that couldn’t be done better in January. That includes President Bush’s priority of a new Department of Homeland Security . . . the proposal is rearranging the old bureaucratic furniture . . . And as with any bill whipped through this quickly, we can expect to learn later about many bad ideas that disappeared.

Mr. President, at a later moment, I will ask unanimous consent that the entire editorial be printed in the RECORD but not at this point. I suspect it won’t be long before we begin to hear about the bad ideas that deserved more scrutiny.

Some Senators may find comfort in the fact that this bill has been touted as a compromise. It won’t compare with the great compromise of July 16, 1867, which created this Senate. If it had not been for that compromise, you would not be here today, Mr. President. You would not be presiding over a Senate of equals, regardless of the size of your State, or the size of its population; you would not be in a Senate in which two Senators from the smallest State have the same standing as to their vote, as two Senators from the largest State in the Union. I would not be here. The Senator from New Hampshire would not be here. The Senator who is the minority leader from Mississippi would not be here. The Senator who is the majority leader, the Senator from South Dakota, would not be here. All of these pages, they would not be here. No, that would not be the Senate. But if it is a good compromise, I hold it in my hands. Senators should, above all people, become more acquainted with this Constitution.

Some Senators may find comfort in the fact that this bill has been touted as a compromise, as if this bill was a compromise between, other than the White House and the congressional Republicans, who already supported some version of the President’s original plan. Call me old-fashioned. Yes, there is, there is that old-fashioned guy. I am married to an old-fashioned sweetheart. Thank God for her. She has been my sweetheart now for 65 years and going on quickly to the 65th. Thank God for that. I think of my old-fashioned sweetheart. I hope she thinks the same thing about her old-fashioned husband—ha, ha, ha, that old-fashioned guy. That is the man. He has been around 85 years—an old-fashioned guy. I am an old-fashioned President,.chief. When compromises were crafted by individuals who had differing views on an issue. This kind of compromise, this 484 pages—let me make sure I am right. Yes, it is 484 difficult, complicated, hard-to-read, harder-to-understand pages. There it is. This kind of compromise is like legislative shadow boxing.

Have you ever tried boxing? I tried it, and I got knocked on my anterior. That was the end of my boxing. I found I was not so good at boxing. This kind of compromise here is like some kind of shadow boxing. It would be laughable if it were not so serious. This kind of compromise is like legislative shadow boxing—punching and jabbing and sparring with absent opponents. The opponents are not there.

This ephemeral compromise makes no concessions with regard to the President’s efforts to exempt this new Department from public disclosure law, such as the Federal Advisory Committee Act. You will not find that spelled out, but you will find reference is made to it. You have to go beyond the plain print in section 671. You have to go beyond the plain print. It is referenced there, but you have to go back to the statute books to see what they are talking about.

This ephemeral compromise makes no concessions with regard to the process. They will go back one day and they will say: I heard Senator BYRD say that was not how our laws are made. No. We short circuited that process. This amendment, this 484-page bill. Here it is, 484 pages. What is in it? Don’t ask me. I know a few things that are in it, and I have heard other Senators talk about a few things that were left out of it in the darkness of night.

We talk about compromise. This 484-page monstrosity compromises the civil liberties of the American people out there. It compromises your daddy’s and mothers’ civil liberties, the parents of these nice pages we have here.

They are just the most wonderful people. They come here seeking to understand the legislative process. What are they getting? They are not getting the legislative process in this monstrosity. They are not getting the legislative process in this monstrosity. They are not getting the legislative process. They come here wanting to learn the legislative process. They are being cheated out of the rights of Federal workers. It compromises the civil liberties of the American people.

They are coming to this Committee to talk about Milton. I talk about the Constitution. I talk about history. I talk about Nathan Hale to these young people here. Bless their hearts. I always am inspired when I talk to these young people. These are the cream of the crop. Mind you, there are millions across this country just like these. But they are being fooled. We are fooling these young people.

They come here to learn the legislative process. What are they getting from this bill? This is not the legislative process. They do not learn in this amendment. They will go back one day and they will say: I heard Senator BYRD say that was not how our laws are made. No. We short circuited that process. This amendment, this 484-page bill. Here it is, 484 pages. What is in it? Don’t ask me. I know a few things that are in it, and I have heard other Senators talk about a few things that were left out of it in the darkness of night.

We talk about compromise. This 484-page monstrosity compromises the civil liberties of the American public.
It compromises the constitutional doctrines of the separation of powers and checks and balances that we find in the Constitution, which I hold in my hand.

This bill compromises the notion that the Senate should debate and amend legislation and act as the greatest deliberative body in the world before passing massive—massive—reorganizations of the Federal Government.

Mr. President, we have allowed ourselves to be stampeded, and I could be as King Canute if King Canute's followers thought he could do anything. He thought he would disabuse his followers of that fallacy, that belief that King Canute could do anything. So he went down to the sands of the oceanside, and he commanded the waves to be still. The waves were not still. They did not go still, so the people finally understood that King Canute could speak to the ocean and it would not necessarily heed him.

I say that to say this, Mr. President: I might as well speak to the ocean. I might as well speak to some of my colleagues here. I might as well speak to the ocean. I might as well speak to each other end of the Capitol. Yes, explain your vote, explain your vote to your constituents. You, back there in the other—we are not supposed to refer to the other body in our speeches, but the other body passed this bill in a hurry.

The President? Mr. President? The President? Mr. President? Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield to me on my time for a few questions?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. May I have this counted against my time under closure?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask the distinguished Senator from West Virginia: In July, the Brookings Institution issued a report concerning this reorganization, and they pointed the finger, and I am quoting from them now: Any fundamental reorganization represents a huge managerial undertaking, one that becomes ever more daunting as the number of agencies and personnel increases. The danger is that top managers will be preoccupied for months, if not years, with getting the reorganization right, thus giving insufficient attention to their real job, taking concrete action to counter the terrorist threat at home.

This Brookings report advocated some consolidation of agencies, but it proposed a much smaller, more streamlined consolidation, and the report went on to say: ‘‘Reorganization is not a panacea. In fact, there is a risk that reorganization could interfere with, rather than enhance, homeland security tasks.’’ Certainly, changes should be made only when there is a compelling case that consolidation offers clear benefits.

I supported the proposal—and this leads up to the question that the Senator from West Virginia offered earlier in the consideration of this issue, which would have undertaken to do a reorganization, but would have phased it and would have brought it back at periodic times for further scrutiny, examination, and implementation by the Congress. Was that the approach which the Senator had taken?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, it was. Mr. President, if I may respond to the distinguished Senator. That amendment I offered to the legislation that was being proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN in his committee, the language I offered with several cosponsors and supporters, such as the distinguished Senator from Maryland, and this is the amendment that was proposed for the recommendations of the administration to come back to the Congress periodically—every 4 months, for the next 12 months—which recommendations should have to do with the phasing in of the various and sundry agencies, a few at a time, three times, every 120 days. Some of the agencies would be phased in.

Those recommendations would come back to the Congress and would go to the appropriate committees having jurisdiction—in this case it would be Mr. LIEBERMAN's committee and his committee's counterpart in the House of Representatives. This particular procedure would require that committee to act to bring out a bill implementing those recommendations, or amending them or changing them. Then the Senate, under expedited procedures, would proceed to call up that bill and pass it. That would be done three times. This procedure would proceed.

So the amendment which the distinguished Senator from Maryland refers to would provide for a phased-in approach over the same period of time that is going to be utilized by the President and the Secretary under this bill—namely, 12 months—and that same period of time a phased-in approach with Congress still in the mix. Congress would still have a say at each of these junctures.

Mr. SARBANES. It seems to me that this is a far more sensible way to proceed. First, I think it maintains a better balance with respect to the roles of the executive and the legislative branches of our Government. I think the President has been right to underscore the fact that what is at stake here is a tremendous grant of authority to the executive branch.

Mr. BYRD. Tremendous.

Mr. SARBANES. It is sweeping in its dimension.

Mr. BYRD. Sweeping.

Mr. SARBANES. Secondly, I think that review process is more likely, far more likely, to produce beneficial results, because as the Senator said earlier today, the more scrutiny and discussion you have, the higher the likelihood—not a guarantee, but the higher the likelihood—that you will have a better result.

As I have listened to the Senator over these weeks of the debate, I have increasingly come to have very deep concerns about what we are doing with this legislation. I feel for the Senator when he says people are not—even now, as we near the last hour, focusing fully on the implications and the consequences of what we are discussing.

Back in September, the Baltimore Sun published an editorial, and I want to read a couple of paragraphs from it. This is from September 23 of this year: Most of debate has made clear that this bureaucratic boondoggle offers no promise of making the homeland more secure. Worse, it takes the focus off the need for tighter oversight of the Nation's security apparatus. President Bush offered the most sweeping government reorganization in a half a century, largely as a political and public relations tactic. He was trying to counter Senate Democrats who were advancing similar legislation of their own. He timed the unveiling of his plan to drown out the testimony of FBI Agent Coleen Rowley, who blew the whistle on the security failures of her hidebound agency that blinded it to the clues of the September 11 attacks. Shifting 22 Federal agencies and 170,000 workers into a new homeland security agency that blinded it to the clues of the September 11 attacks. Shifting 22 Federal agencies and 170,000 workers into a new homeland security agency that blinded it to the clues of the September 11 attacks. Shifting 22 Federal agencies and 170,000 workers into a new homeland security agency that blinded it to the clues of the September 11 attacks.
addressed. What is needed is greater sharing, coordination and synthesis of the security information collected by the myriad agencies. But this new department will not even include the FBI and the CIA which are the two premier intelligence gatherers. Nor is there any guarantee that greater sharing would take place between them if they were together.

I think this is right on point and parallels much of what the Senator, as I understand it, has been arguing.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, before I respond to the distinguished Senator from Maryland, I understand the able Senator from Hawaii, Mr. AKAKA, has a unanimous consent request he would like to make. Will the Senator from Maryland yield for that request since this is on his time?

Mr. SARBANES. Certainly.

Mr. AKAKA. I thank the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Maryland for yielding to me.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my hour under cloture be yielded to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Hawaii, Mr. AKAKA, who is about to take the chair. I wanted to make the request before he took the chair.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order now in effect, that there be debate only until 3:30, be extended until 5 o'clock today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. On the time of the distinguished Senator, let me be just a little bit loquacious in my response. I have served in this Senate for 41 years and in the Congress for 50 years. In my time in the Senate and in the House, the Senator from Maryland—I don't have to say this; I don't owe the distinguished Senator from Maryland the tribute I am about to say, except it is honestly entitled to it.

We often pass around our warm words of praise because we are Senators and a happy family here. I admire this son of ancient Greece. He is a son of Athens, He is American. He grew up in this country. His parents came to this country. He knows what being an immigrants means. He is a Rhodes scholar. I can't say that about ROBERT BYRD. But this man from Maryland is a Rhodes scholar. He is a true son of Athens, a true son of Sokrates, Sophocles, and Plato were a part. He is one of the most thoughtful Senators I have ever seen.

When I was majority leader and when I was minority leader—thank Heavens, thank Heavens that experience is in the background now; it is long past—but when I was the leader duly elected by my colleagues, I always had meetings in which I tried to get from the most brilliant, most thoughtful Senators on my side of the aisle, their thoughts about the actions of the lowliest clerk to this or that issue, whatever issue might be before the Senate or about to come before the Senate. PAUL SARBANES was one who was always there. He was never out of the room. Not because he was the "yes" American. He wasn't, by any means. But I knew I would get the real stuff from PAUL SARBANES.

Here is a man who is head and shoulders above some Senators with whom I have served, and I have served with a great many Senators. This man is a true thinker. We have seen the picture of The Thinker. This is the thinker, PAUL SARBANES.

A little while ago he said something which brought to my mind the words of William Wordsworth who said: No matter how high you may be in your department, you are still responsible for the actions of the lowliest clerk in your department.

I forget now what the Senator said, but it brought that thought to mind. We are talking about 28 agencies. Who is going to be responsible for the lowliest clerk's actions in this conglomeration, the epiphanies of chaos that will occur?

I thank the distinguished Senator from Maryland. Please, if he has something further I will sit down at any moment. If he has anything further of me, I will be glad to respond.

(Mr. AKAKA assumed the Chair.)

Mr. SARBANES. First, Mr. President, I appreciate the generous and gracious remarks of the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. I must say that with all of my schooling he mentioned, I have not heard from him than at any other point along the way. I am extremely appreciative to him for that.

I did want to cite this quote that the Senator has used in the course of this debate, which is so appropriate to our situation, from the Roman poet and the adviser to Nero, Gaius Petronius Arbiter. It is another instant in which the Senator has enlightened this institution through his use of Roman history. The quote could not be more on point, that we learned through it were written for the current situation. It is as follows:

"We trained hard, but it seemed that every time we were beginning to form into teams, we would be reorganized. We was to learn later in life that we tend to meet any new situation by reorganizing, and the wonderful method it can be for creating illusion of progress while producing confusion, inefficiency, and demoralization." The Federal Emergency Management Agency, to name just a few. These employees are already doing their job well. Are they to be rewarded by stripping them of these union protections, of these civil service rights?

We have spent a long part of our history working out these employee rights, and they are important to the success of the Government and to the attraction and retention of the best possible Federal employees. We ought not to be diminishing these rights and protections, as this legislation does.

I think that stripping the employees of these protections will harm national security rather than help it. This is a subissue within the larger issue on which the Senator from West Virginia has been focusing, about the dislocation that is going to be created by this sweeping proposal, the one that brings up this wonderful quote from Gaius Petronius Arbiter.

I urge my colleagues to reexamine this closely. I know this issue has now been politicized. No one is against homeland security. No one is against enhancing the security that our people feel, and protecting it. The question then becomes, what is the best way to do it?

We have had studies on this point. The Brookings Institute made a very careful evaluation. They said they thought some consolidation was in order, but they thought it should be limited, it should be done carefully, it should be done thoughtfully, it should be done slowly. They found out, of course, that it is a huge managerial undertaking; that it becomes more daunting as the number of agencies to be included increases. And then last summer they said in their report:

The danger is top managers will be preoccupied for months if not years with getting the reorganization right, thus giving insufficient attention to their real job, taking concrete action to counter the terrorist threat at home.

I think that is absolutely on point and it is a point which the able Senator from West Virginia has made repeatedly, of course, during this debate. It really tracks what Gaius Petronius Arbiter said, when he said:

I was born in a world that we tend to meet any new situation by reorganizing, and a wonderful method it can be for creating the illusion of progress while producing confusion, inefficiency, and demoralization.

Mr. BYRD. Hear, hear, hear.

Mr. SARBANES. And that is exactly what we are confronted with here.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator for yielding, and I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator for his contribution today, and for his references to the ancient Roman, Gaius Petronius Arbiter, whom the Senator from Maryland more than once has quoted on this floor. I thank the Senator for his defense of the patriotic Federal employees who work day and night to protect us.

Mr. President, we will not have one whit more protection with the passage of this 484 pages, not one whit protection more than we have now. The same people who will protect us at the borders, at the ports, at the airports and throughout the land at the ports of entry, the same people who will protect us then are out there now. They are there day and night protecting us.

So I salute the distinguished Senator from Maryland.

Mr. President, continuing my statement, and I will not be overly long, probably the most egregious provision inserted is a White House-backed provision designed to head off dozens of potential lawsuits against Eli Lilly and Company and other pharmaceutical giants that are being sued by parents who have linked their children's autism to these companies' childhood vaccines. The language would keep the lawsuits out of the courts, rolling out huge judgments and lengthy litigation and, instead, channel complaints to a Federal program set up to provide liability protection for vaccine manufacturers. The program, funded through a surcharge on vaccines, compensates persons injured by such vaccines to a maximum of $250,000.

A number of Senators, including the very distinguished Senator from Michigan, Ms. STABENOW, strongly criticized these provisions yesterday. And yet at the same time, some Senators who have made these statements—not the Senator whose name I have expressed just now—but some Senators at the same time have pledged to vote in favor of this bill, regardless of whether these provisions are included or removed. How about that. We are acting as though this is a conference report that cannot be amended, as though its passage is a fait accompli. We still have the opportunity to amend this bill, except for the fact that our Republican friends on the other side of the aisle the Senator Tasco far and no further.

We have got an amendment pending in the tree and that is all you will get. You will get a vote on that amendment—up or down on or in relation to it, I suppose, at the end of the 30 hours—but names. That is it. That is the only amendment.

Well, we will see about that.

We still have the opportunity to amend the bill, at least the basic bill, S. R. 5065, even postcloture. So this amendment introduced by Senator DASCHLE will strike language in this bill which the Senate has not previously considered, the language that would allow the Homeland Security Secretary to exempt any advisory committee within the Homeland Security Department and to exempt these committees from the Federal Advisory Committee Act.

When I saw that in the amendment that the amendment was introduced on behalf of Mr. LIEBERMAN—I saw that in the amendment, and I immediately wanted my name attached because I have been complaining, I have been criticizing that, complaining about that language.

This statute which has been on the books, the Federal Advisory Committee Act, which has been on the books for 30 years, ensures that the ad hoc committees used to craft policy in the executive branch provide objective advice that is accessible to the public. These public disclosure rules allow Congress and the media and groups outside of Government to know how the executive branch is making important policy decisions.

Section 871 of this new substitute we have just been given, less than 60 hours ago, provides the Secretary of Homeland Security blanket authority to exempt any committee in the Department from existing public disclosure rules. This provision was not included in Senator LIEBERMAN's substitute, but it has been slipped into this new bill, which was made available to us, as I say, less than 60 hours ago, with the hope that Senators will not have enough time to scrutinize this dramatic change to existing statute.

Many of the advisory committees in this new Homeland Security Department will be dealing with issues of national security that should not be subjected to public disclosure rules. But the Federal Advisory Committee Act already allows the President to exempt this committee from any public disclosure advisory committee for national security reasons. This is authority that the President has used for 30 years, and authority he will be able to use for advisory committees in the Homeland Security Department.

But instead of relying on the President's current authority to exempt committees on a case-by-case basis, the new language in this bill allows the Secretary to exempt ANY advisory committee from public disclosure rules, regardless of whether national security is pertinent or not.

This new blanket authority is not necessary. As a matter of fact, we ought not have it. It should be that we do it because it involves the people's right to know, and it is a danger to our liberty. It is a danger to our constitutional system.

The provisions in this bill allow the Secretary to use ad hoc advisory committees to craft policy, without making specific findings that such secrecy is necessary in any particular instance.

The press, I hope, will read this bill and understand this bill. I hope the American people are fully aware of this bill. It presents a danger and a threat to the media's efforts to probe, to ask questions, and to scrutinize and to protect the public's right to know.

This unnecessary new blanket authority will give the President carte blanche to respond and expand the culture of secrecy that now permeates this White House—this administration. Let me say that again.

This unnecessary new blanket authority could be used by the President carte blanche to expand the culture of secrecy that now permeates this White House—this administration. The public disclosure exemptions in this bill are a license for abuse. They are a danger. They are un-American. They should not become law.

I hope that Senators, before they cast their vote on the passage of this bill, will think about this. I hope they will be prepared to answer the public—our constituents—this election, whatever election down the road awaits them. I hope they will be prepared. There are going to be stories in the press as time goes on, I would wager, about this particular authority that the Senate will extend with passage of this bill to this administration and to this new Department—to the Secretary of this new Department.

We see on the front page of the Washington Times today—I have already mentioned the Wall Street Journal, and I mentioned the Washington Post. Now I call attention to the front page of the Washington Times this morning. There is a headline which reads...
“Homeland Bill a Supersnoop’s Dream.”

There are many dreams to which we can allude—Jacob’s dream—the dreams.

“Homeland Bill a Supersnoop’s Dream.”

In yesterday’s New York Times, William Safire warned that if this homeland security legislation is passed as it is currently written, the Federal Goverment may be planning to use its new special investigative authority to compile computerized dossiers on every Amercan citizen, including “every piece of information that government has about you . . . “

—every piece of information that the Government has about you, each of you, about you, about you, about you

Government has about you, each of you, about you. . . .

The language here provides for the administration to provide special treatment for corporate campaign contributions who are pushing new anti-terrorism technologies.

It worries me that issues as important as homeland security and the safe-security measures may be de-sided in secret by ad hoc committees that are exempt from traditional government laws. Under this language, the Senate will be able to exempt not only new advisory committees, but also existing committees that are transferred from Treasury to with these 28 agencies and offices.

This amendment, which I have co-sponsored, will strike this exemption authority from the bill.

This dangerous new authority should not be slipped under the cover of darkness, as it were, into legislation that Senators have had little time to study or amend. If the Senate of the new Department of Homeland Security needs this blanket authority, let him examine the amendment like this case. Congress must not hand over blanket authority to this department which would allow it to cloak decisions in secrecy.

Now, Senators, this is what we are about to vote on, this bill. Now, if the amendment fails, Senators should not then go ahead and vote for this bill. If this amendment to strike these provisions fails to be adopted, Senators have no right then to go home and say: Well, I voted for the amendment. I was for that, but it failed and I, therefore, went ahead and voted for this bill.

What a crappy bill. Don’t hide behind your vote when you vote on this amendment or you vote in relation to it or whatever the vote is when it comes. Don’t hide behind that. If that amendment fails, don’t hide behind that and say: Well, I voted for the amendment, and so I tried to get it in there, but the Senate voted it down, so I went ahead and voted for the bill. Shame on you. And your constituents should say so: Shame on you. Now, you say you voted for the amendment, and that the Senate didn’t adopt it. Your convictions were not very strong, so you went ahead and voted for the bill, then, after that amendment failed. Shame on you.

Mr. President, I don’t know of any measure that has ever come before the Senate in connection with which I have spoken more passionately, with greater conviction, in regard to this bill. I have no special ax to grind. No, I have no special ax to grind. I am on nobody’s payroll except the people’s.

I am concerned about this. I am more concerned about this bill than I believe any bill I have ever voted on or will ever have voted on. And I have cast more votes than any Senator in the history of this Republic.

I have eight votes to grind. You say: Well, he’s 85. He won’t be running again. Don’t bet on it. Don’t bet on it. That is a matter for the Good Lord to determine and the people of the State of West Virginia. So don’t count me out. There are those who may say: Don’t count me in. I believe there is a song to that effect: “Don’t Count Me In.” But don’t count me out.

That is my belief.

This dramatic reduction of transparency should not be clandestinely slipped into this eleventh-hour legislation, and the Senate should not allow such a dangerous provision to be rushed through this Chamber during the final minutes of this Congress.

So shame on you if you vote for this amendment, and then, if it fails, you turn around and vote for this 484-page bill. Don’t use that as an excuse when you go back to your constituents.

Every Senator has the right to do what he thinks best, but, believe you me, your constituents, if you vote for this bill—if that amendment fails, and you still vote for this bill, I hope you won’t try to hide behind your vote for that amendment that was rejected by the Senate: Oh, I voted for that amendment, but the Senate rejected it, so then I felt that I had done my best, and I went ahead and voted for the bill. Shame on you.

This administration has worked hard to keep the Congress out of the loop. The President has sought to isolate himself from the American public and their Representatives in Congress. He has asked for the Congress to provide him with broad statutory powers to further block congressional involvement.

That is what this bill will do. Pass this bill, and you will say to the President: Well, I don’t know what your plan is—you have not told us what your plan is—but we have approved it. Here it is. Here is the bill. So you have the next 12 months in which to determine your plan, and all you need to do—we hope you will tell us about it.

The language here provides for the President’s “informing” the Congress about the plan.

Well, in some cases, Senators have supported the President on these issues, either to show unity with the leader of their party or because they fear political attacks if they do not. Less and less, it seems to me, do we think about these grants of power that will affect the constitutional checks and balances and separation of powers that protect the constitutional freedoms of our country.

I must say this, that the shelf life of appreciation one might expect from this administration, in having suppported it—those of us, may I say, on this side of the aisle, in particular—the shelf life of appreciation from this administration for your efforts to curry favor with the administration, if that is what it is, is very short indeed.

We saw that in the case of the distinguished Senator from Georgia, Mr.佩里。We saw that in the case of the distinguished Senator from Missouri, Mrs. Carnahan. We have seen it in the cases of other Senators who supported the administration. They did what they thought was right. But in any event, their votes were in support of the administration on various issues—the tax cut, the Iraq war resolution, whatever it might have been—and yet, the President, himself, went into those very States and campaigned against those Senators. So this administration’s thanks don’t go very far, may I say to Senators.

So the best thing to do, as always, is to do your best, vote your convictions, and set the course for people who send you here, and stand by the Constitution.

Henry Clay, as a Senator from Kentucky in 1833, in building the case for the censure of President Andrew Jackson, asked the Senate:

How often have we, Senators, felt that the check of the Senate, instead of being, as the Constitution intended, a salutary control, was an idle ceremony . . . We have established and maintained a system, in which power has been most carefully separated and distributed between three separate and independent departments. We have been told a thousand times that such a division assuages us that such a division is indispensable to the existence and preservation of freedom. . . .

This is Henry Clay talking:

The president, it is true, presides over the whole. . . . but has he power to come into Congress, and to say such laws only shall pass . . . to arrest their lawful progress, because they have dared to act contrary to his pleasure? No, sir; no, sir.

Well, Henry Clay was an opponent of the Presidential veto. He thought that was a despicable thing, the President’s veto.

So he spoke, as I have just read. He spoke of the President and he said: It is true, he presides over the whole: . . . but has he power to come into Congress, and to say such laws only shall pass . . . to arrest their lawful progress, because they have dared to act contrary to his pleasure? No, sir; no, sir.

The Senate must not blindly follow in the name of party unity. I don’t blindly follow in the name of the Democratic Party unity. I don’t do that. That time will not be my guiding star. In storm or in tempest or in fair weather, that will not be my guiding star.

The Senate must not blindly follow, in the name of party unity or under the yoke of political pressure, a shortsighted path that ultimately undermines our sworn duty to support and defend the Constitution.

I will vote against this homeland security bill. I believe even the amendment that is before the Senate is not enough. I have some amendments that I would like to offer. If this amendment fails, I would like to offer my amendments. It is very questionable as to whether I will get to do that, very questionable as to whether or not those amendments will pass the Senate. I doubt that they will.

So I intend to vote against this homeland security bill. I will raise my voice as long as I have a voice, and I will fight as long as I have the right to raise that hand to attempt to derail this blatant power grab and giveaway of the people’s liberties.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BARKLEY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to reclaim 5 minutes of my time that I yielded to Senator BYRD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Hawaii is recognized.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Senator DASCHLE, Senator LIEBERMAN, and Senator BYRD to the pending legislation concerning homeland security.

I voted early against invoking closure on this legislation because in part I disagreed with many of the amendments which were added at the last moment by the House to this bill. The amendment offered by Senator DASCHLE, Senator LIEBERMAN, and Senator BYRD would correct many problems in this House bill, although not all. There is much about the underlying bill which still needs to be corrected. I laid out earlier my concerns. Today, however, I want to address the House’s legislative "add-ons" that should be stripped from this bill. I think it is clear what the house has done in the midnight hour of this Congress.

The House leadership has taken a moving train—legislation for a Department of Homeland Security—and attached gilded carriages for their special friends to travel on this legislative express.

What has been added does not enhance the security of the American people. It enriches a select few compadies and special individuals, and very special people. One provision is clearly meant to earmark a new university-based homeland security research center program for Texas A&M University, avoiding an open and competitive award process. All of us have universities, distinguished centers of higher learning in our states, all of which would welcome the opportunity to make their case for this funding, but under the House’s legislative "add-ons" that should be stripped from this bill. I think it is clear what the house has done in the midnight hour of this Congress.

The original Lieberman substitute, and the original Gramm-Miller amendment, were based upon provisions that were debated and discussed within the Governmental Affairs Committee through hearings and business meetings. The bill before us today has several provisions that have not had that treatment and will directly benefit the airline and rail companies and other special interests.

The Governmental Affairs Committee spent weeks and months studying, debating, and drafting legislation on homeland security. In contrast, this bill was not written in committee and some parts of the bill before us today have had only special interest input.

That is not the best way to ensure public safety and national security.

I yield my time, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Under the liability provision sections, the Secretary has the discretion to designate which technologies will benefit from this additional protection from liability. This section is not about stimulating the development of new technologies to protect us. It is about finding new ways to protect companies from legal liability. Indeed one section of this bill is labeled “Litigation Management.” That says it all.

The subparagraphs, almost too small to notice, undermine the Federal Advisory Committee Act, FACA, and the public’s right to know the make-up, meeting schedules, and findings of federal commissions, committees, councils, and task forces. These groups are chartered by the President, Congress, and agency heads to give independent advice and recommendations on substantial policy issues and technological problems.

Congress enacted FACA in 1972 to address concerns of committees being returned and having oversight, using secretive operations, and not representing public interest. FACA requires that the advice provided by such committees be objective and responsive to public concerns. Committee meetings are required to be open and properly noticed, with specific exceptions. The House bill would give the Secretary of Homeland Security a blanket exemption from FACA requirements once the Secretary notices the creation of a committee.

One wonders why the House Leadership wants to overturn sunshine rules. What do they want to hide?

This is a very serious matter. What sort of oversight will these committees have? Who will serve on them? Will all interests be represented? How will we confirm that the public interests have been met? To allow the Secretary of Homeland Security to set up advisory committees that are free from the balanced regulations of FACA is to retreat back to the days when interest groups ran roughshod over the public’s interest and recommended one sided views without appropriate oversight.

INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report to accompany S.R. 4628, the intelligence authorization; that the conference report be printed in the Record, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The conference report was agreed to. (The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the Record of November 14, 2002.)

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate be in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 6:12 p.m., recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 8:11 p.m., when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. BARKLEY).

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I appreciate very much, first of all, the patience of the Presiding Officer. We are sorry that in your first few hours in the Senate you have had to spend so much time here when we have not been doing a lot, but it is necessary that you are here, and we appreciate very much your patience, as I have indicated.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that we are not in morning business. Is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that we now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period not to exceed 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR JEAN CARNAHAN

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to my distinguished colleague from Missouri, Senator Jean Carnahan. After losing her husband and eldest son in a tragic plane accident, Missouri called upon Mrs. Carnahan to fill the remainder of her husband’s Term. Senator Carnahan answered the call of duty and did it with a fair, courageous hand.

Senator Carnahan was Missouri’s first member of the Armed Services Committee in over 25 years. She also served on the Small Business Committee, the Governmental Affairs Committee, the Commerce Committee, and the Special Committee on Aging.

Senator Carnahan made a strong economy her top priority. Her ability to secure additional funds for Missouri and safeguard funding for family farmers hurt by flooding and drought clearly shows Senator Carnahan’s desire to bolster Missouri’s economy, provide good jobs for Missouri workers, and support Carnahan’s effort in the war against terrorism.

Senator Carnahan also knew that a highly skilled workforce required equal educational opportunities. Her Quality Classrooms Amendment allowed local schools greater flexibility in deciding how to utilize Federal dollars. She also worked to secure over $1.3 million for programs boosting postsecondary education assistance to low-income students. These initiatives illustrate Senator Carnahan’s deep commitment to a better education and a brighter future for all Missouri students.

Filling the seat of her late husband, Senator Carnahan led with dignity and courage as Missouri’s first female Senator. She took the time of personal loss and hardship, yet prevailed and proved to be a strong leader for Missouri. I would like to join my colleagues in wishing Senator Carnahan and her family the very best in the future.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR PHIL GRAMM

Mr. Bunning. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to my good friend and colleague, Senator Phil Gramm.

Without Senator Gramm, none of us would ever know who Dicky Flatt is. We would not know nearly as much as we know about Texas A&M as we do. And we would probably still be trying to repeal Glass-Steagall.

I met Senator Gramm on a number of occasions when I was a Member of the House of Representatives, but I did not really get to know him until I joined that Banking Committee in January 1999. I was the Subcommittee Chairman.

Senator Gramm’s first order of business was to finally pass a repeal of the Glass-Steagall banking law. I had worked on this same repeal during my first term in the House. 12 years earlier, and I know many others had been working on this effort for much longer than that. But it was Senator Gramm’s dogged determination that finally pushed the ball over the goal line and brought our banking laws into the 21st Century.

I won’t bore everyone by going into a long list of Senator Gramm’s other legislative accomplishments; they are too numerous to mention, but I would put him up there with a small group of other senators who have had the greatest impact on the Senate in the past century.

Outside of our working relationship, I have also gotten to know Senator Gramm, and his lovely life Wendy, very well over as friends.

I would also like to tell a little story about how Senator Gramm’s unselfishness greatly assisted me when I was in a tight spot. Everyone in this body remembers the anthrax attacks of last year. As a resident of the Hart Building, I was one of those who was forced to find other space when the Hart building was closed. The Architect of the Capitol, the Senate Superintendent and the Rules Committee did a great job, under very trying circumstances, of finding space for everyone. But there were about fifty offices that were relocated so space was tight. My staff and I were sitting on top of each other down in EF 100 underneath the back steps of the Capitol.

We were glad to have the space. But it wasn’t much more than a glorified broom closet.

Well, Senator Gramm heard about my predicament and very graciously let me use his Capitol hideaway office until the Hart building was reopened. He only asked that I did not “trash the place and leave empty whiskey bottles on the floor.” I can assure the Members of the House and the people of the Commonwealth of Kentucky that I followed his instructions.

I am also fairly confident that as much as I appreciated the kind gesture, my staff appreciated the fact I had somewhere else to go even more. It is not just Members who will miss Senator Gramm, but staff as well.

We will miss his leadership, but I think we will miss his courage even more. Senator Gramm is willing to take unpopular stands. He is willing to lose a vote 99-1. He is willing to keep the Senate in all night to fight for what he believes in, no matter how unpopular that stand may be.

One example that stands out clearly in my mind was at the beginning of the debate on the Clinton health care bill. Many don’t remember now, but when we first started working on that issue in Congress, President Clinton had a lot of momentum and it looked like only the foregone conclusion that he would get some form of health care passed. Those of us who didn’t the President’s proposal really felt like we were swimming upstream.
Then PHILL GRAMM took the Senate floor, and laid out a withering assessment of the bill and why it would do so much harm to the country if passed. He wrapped up his remarks by saying that “the Clinton health bill would pass the Senate virtually cold, despite its political body.” That served as a rallying cry for the rest of the Congress and signaled a real turning point in the debate. But, at the time, it wasn’t popular and most people on Capitol Hill thought it wasn’t. But it was right. That’s PHILL GRAMM for you.

I have heard him say on more than one occasion, “I’ve never taken a hostage I wasn’t willing to shoot.” Everyone knows Senator PHILL GRAMM will kill a bill if he thinks it’s bad for America or if fellow Tennesseans and all Americans, and he has shot some legislative hostages.

But more often than not, he was able, through negotiation, to work out a better product.

I think the Senate will miss his homespun eloquence. I don’t think there is anyone better at simplifying a complicated simple. On this side of the aisle, that eloquence will be missed, he always did a great job of articulating our position. Mr. President, Senator PHILL GRAMM will be missed not just by me, but this entire body, the people of Tennessee and all Americans. I will miss him as a Senator, but look forward to watching my friend on Wednesday nights as he begins his new career on “Law and Order.”

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR TIM HUTCHINSON

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, it is with great pride that I rise today to pay tribute to Senator TIM HUTCHINSON of Arkansas

Since 1983, when he first began his career in public service as a member of the Arkansas State House of Representatives, he has fought for the people of Arkansas and the citizens of the United States of America. Throughout his 12 years in public office at the State and Federal level, TIM has worked hard to push his conservative agenda and ideals. He has been a strong proponent of a balanced budget, tax relief and reform of our Nation’s education system.

As a Member of the House of Representatives from 1992 to 1998, TIM authored the much needed $500-per-child tax credit, which allows parents to place as much as $2,000 per year, per child, in a designated savings account. He was also one of the main actors in the pursuit to reform this nation’s struggling and inefficient welfare system.

TIM has been a major advocate of issues affecting our nation’s veterans. He has worked tirelessly over the years to open additional outpatient clinics for veterans across Arkansas.

As a Member of the U.S. Senate, TIM HUTCHINSON served on the Armed Services Committee, Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, Agriculture, Nutrition, Food and Drug Committee and the Special Committee on Aging. As a member of the Education Working Group, Senator HUTCHINSON led the charge to pass the “Education Savings Accounts” Legislation. I am very proud to work with Senator HUTCHINSON on trying to pass legislation which bans human cloning.

I have had the honor of serving with TIM HUTCHINSON on the Armed Services Committee and the Special Committee on Aging. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, I have had the privilege of working with Senator HUTCHINSON on various projects when he served as chairman, and later as the ranking Republican member. The Senator should be congratulated for his hard work on the President’s priority to create the Homeland Security Department.

With his background as a teacher and businessman, TIM was able to bring both expertise and leadership to the Republican party. We need more public servants like TIM HUTCHINSON who champion empowerment over dependence. It was a pleasure and honor to serve with him in this body.

THE PROTECT ACT

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, last night the Senate passed, by unanimous consent, the Hatch-Leahy PROTECT Act providing important new tools to fight child pornography. I want to take a moment to speak about the passage of this important bill and the effort that it took to get to this point. Although they have recessed subject to the recall of the Speaker of the House, I also want to implore the Republican leadership in the House of Representatives to miss this important opportunity to pass such important bipartisan legislation as this.

In April, I came to the Senate floor and joined Senator HATCH in introducing S. 2220, the PROTECT Act, after the Supreme Court’s decision in Ashcroft v. Free Speech Coalition (“Free Speech”), although there were some others who raised constitutional concerns about specific provisions in that bill, I believed—and still believe—that unlike the Administration proposal, it was a good faith effort to work within the First Amendment.

Everyone in the Senate agrees that we should do all we can to protect our children from being victimized by child pornography. That would be an easy debate and vote. The more difficult thing is to write a law that will both do that and will stick. In 1996, when we passed the Child Pornography Prevention Act, “CPPA”, many warned us that certain provisions of that Act violated the First Amendment. The Supreme Court’s recent decision in Free Speech has proven them correct.

We should not sit by and do nothing. It is important that we respond to the Supreme Court decision. It is just as important, however, that we avoid repeating our past mistakes. Unlike the 1996 CPPA, this time we should respond with a law that passes constitutional muster. Our children deserve more than a press conference on this issue. They deserve a law that will last for important the law will allow all we can to end the victimization of real children by child pornographers, but it is also important that we pass a law that will withstand First Amendment scrutiny. We need a law with real teeth, not one with false teeth.

After joining Senator HATCH in introducing the PROTECT Act, I convened a Judiciary Committee hearing on the legislation. We heard from the Administration, from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, NCMEC, from experts who came and told us that our bill, as introduced, would pass constitutional muster, but the House-passed bill would not.
I then placed S. 2520 on the Judiciary Committee’s calendar for the October 8, 2002, business meeting. I continued to work with Senator HATCH to improve the bill so that it could be quickly enacted. Senator HATCH circulated a Hatch-Leahy committee substitute that improved the bill before our October 8 business meeting. Unfortunately the Judiciary Committee was unable to consider it because of procedural maneuvering by my colleagues that had nothing to do with this important legislation, including the refusal of Committee members on the other side of the aisle to consider any pending legislation on the Committee’s agenda.

I still wanted to get this bill done. That is why, for a full week in October, I worked to clear and have the full Senate pass a substitute to S. 2520 that tracked the Hatch-Leahy proposed committee substitute in nearly every area. Indeed, the substitute I offered even adopted the House bill provisions that would help the NCMEC work with local and state law enforcement on these cases. Twice, I spoke on the Senate floor imploring that we approve such legislation. As I stated then, every Democrat, every Republican, cleared that measure. I then urged Republicans to work on their side of the aisle to clear this measure—so similar to the joint Hatch-Leahy substitute—so that we could swiftly enact a law that would pass constitutional muster. Unfortunately, instead of working to clear that bipartisan, constitutional measure, colleagues on the other side of the aisle opted to use this issue to play politics before the election.

They redrafted the bill, changed crucial definitions, and offered a new version. Facing the recess before the mid-term elections, we were stymied again.

Even after the election, however, during our lame duck session, I have continued to work with Senator HATCH to pass this legislation through the Senate. As I had stated I would do prior to the election, I called a meeting of the Judiciary Committee yesterday. In the last meeting of the Judiciary Committee under my Chairmanship in the 107th Congress, I placed S. 2520, the Hatch-Leahy PROTECT Act, on the agenda again. At that meeting the Judiciary Committee approved this legislation. We agreed to a substitute and to improvements in the victim shield provision that I authored.

Although I did not agree with two of Senator HATCH’s amendments because I thought that they risked having the bill declared unconstitutional, I nevertheless both called for the Committee to approve the bill and voted for the bill in its amended form.

I then sought, that same day, to gain the unanimous consent of the full Senate to pass S. 2520 as reported by the Judiciary Committee, and I worked with Senator HATCH to clear the bill on both sides of the aisle. I am pleased that late last night that the Senate passed S. 2520 by unanimous consent. I want to thank Senator HATCH for his help clearing the bill for passage last night.

I am glad to have been able to work hand in hand with Senator HATCH on S. 2520, the PROTECT Act, a bill that gives law enforcement the tools they need to combat child pornography. The Hatch-Leahy PROTECT Act strives to be a serious response to a serious problem.

The provisions of the Hatch-Leahy bill, S. 2520, as amended, are bipartisan and good faith efforts to protect both our children and to honor the Constitution. At our hearing last month, Constitutional and criminal law scholars—one of whom was the same person who warned us last time that the CPPA would be struck down—stated that the PROTECT Act could withstand Constitutional scrutiny, although there were parts that were very close to the line.

Unfortunately these experts could not say the same about the administration’s bill, which seems to challenge the Supreme Court’s decision, rather than accommodate the restraints spelled out by the Supreme Court. I have also received letters from other Constitutional and criminal law practitioners expressing the same conclusion, which I will place in the Record with unanimous consent. The Administration’s proposal and House bill simply ignore the Supreme Court’s decision on a constitutional matter, and in effect instead of a carefully drawn bill that will stand up to scrutiny.

The PROTECT Act is a good faith effort, but it is not perfect and I would have liked to have seen some additional changes to the bill. Unfortunately, I could not obtain agreement to make the following modifications:

First, regarding the tip line, I would have liked to clarify that law enforcement agents cannot “tickle the tip line” or avoid the key provisions of the Electronic Communications Privacy Act.

Second, regarding the affirmative defense, I would have liked to ensure that there is an affirmative defense for the new category of child pornography and for all cases where a defendant can prove in court that a specific, non-obscene image was made using not any child but only actual, identifiable adults.

Nevertheless, we were able to reach agreement in Committee on modifying the bill with my amendment to the victims’ shield law by giving federal judges and prosecutors the discretion to override the new victim shield law when there is good cause, such as cases where the shield law is actually used as a sword by the defendant to help present a defense.

As a general matter, I would have thought it far simpler to take the approach of outlawing “obscene” child pornography of all types, which we do in one new provision that I suggested. That approach would produce a law beyond any possible challenge. This approach is also supported by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, which we all respect as the true expert in this field.

Following is an excerpt from the Center’s answer to written questions submitted after our hearing, which I will place in the RECORD in its entirety:

Our view is that the vast majority (99-100%) of all child pornography would be found to be obscene by most judges and juries, even under a standard of reasonable doubt in criminal cases. Even within the reasonable person under community standards model, it is highly unlikely that any community would not find child pornography obscene . . .

In the post Free Speech decision legal climate the prosecution of child pornography under an obscenity approach is a reasonable strategy and sound policy.

Thus, according to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, the approach that is least likely to raise constitutional questions—using established obscenity law—is also an effective one.

Because that is not the approach we decided to use, I recognize that S. 2520 contains provisions about which some may have legitimate Constitutional questions. These provisions include:

A new “pandering” provision with a very wide scope;

A new definition of ‘obscenity’ that contains some, but not all, of the elements of the Supreme Court’s test;

A new affirmative defense for pornography made not using any minors that does not apply to one new category of child pornography.

These provisions raise legitimate concerns, but in the interest of making progress I am pleased, as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to have tried to balance all the competing interests to produce a bill with the best chance of withstanding a constitutional challenge.

That is not everyone’s view. Others evidently think it is more important to make an ideological statement than to work on the law. A meeting this week on this legislation noted the wide consensus that S. 2520 is more likely than the House bill to withstand scrutiny, but quoted a Republican House member as stating: “Even if it comes back to Congress three times we will have created better legislation.”

To me, that makes no sense. Why not create the “better legislation” right now for today’s children, instead of inviting more years of litigation and pushing the risk any convictions obtained in the interim period before the Supreme Court again reviews the constitutionality of Congress’ effort to address this serious problem? That is what S. 2520 seeks to accomplish as drafted.

I want to commend Senator HATCH for working with me to include many other important provisions in the Hatch-Leahy bill that we developed together and are not as controversial. These include:

A tough new private right of action for victims of child pornography with punitive damages;

Congressional Record — Senate  S11201

a victims’ shield law to keep child victim’s identity out of court and prevent them from suffering a second trauma in the criminal process;

a new notice provision designed to stop “surprise defenses”;

senatorial amendments for recidivists and a directive to correct the disparity in the current sentencing guidelines that provides a lighter sentence for offenders who cross state lines to actually molest a child than for offenders who possess child pornography that has crossed State lines.

These provisions are important, practical tools to put child pornographers out of business for good and in jail where they belong.

I support S. 2520 as a good faith effort to protect our children and honor the Constitution, and the Committee substitute, which improved upon the original bill.

There were two amendments adopted in Committee that I opposed. I opposed Senator HATCH on the curtailment in S. 2520 of the right to counsel in S. 2520 as Senator HATCH and I introduced it in the Senate. Senator HATCH’s amendment which would expand our definition of “virtual child pornography” in the definition of child pornography, in my view, crosses the constitutional line, however, and needlessly risks protracted litigation that could assist child pornographers in escaping punishment. Although I joined Senator HATCH in introducing S. 2520, even when it was introduced I expressed concern over certain provisions. One such provision was the new definition of “identifiable minor.” When the bill was introduced, I noted that this provision might “both confuse the statute unnecessarily and endanger the already upheld ‘morphing’ section of the CPPA.” I said I was concerned that it “could present both factual and vague constitutional problems in a later constitutional challenge.”

The Supreme Court made it clear that we can only outlaw child pornography in two situations: No. 1, it is obscene; or No. 2, it is pornographic for any “computer generated image that is virtually indistinguishable from an actual minor” (the “identifiable minor” provision). The provision was designed to cover all sorts of pornography, in my view, crosses the constitutional line, however, and endanger the already upheld “morphing” section of the CPPA. That is the law as stated by the Supreme Court, whether or not we agree with it.

The “identifiable minor” provision in S. 2520 may be used without any link to obscenity doctrine. Therefore, what saves it is that it applies to child porn made with real “persons.” The provision is designed to cover all sorts of images of real kids that are morphed or altered, but not something entirely new, with no child involved. That is the provision as Senator HATCH and I introduced this bill.

The Hatch amendment adopted in Committee that redefined “identifiable minor” by creating a new category of pornography for any “computer generated image that is virtually indistinguishable from an actual minor” (the “identifiable minor” provision) and that was the reason it was adopted. I oppose this amendment. Nevertheless, in light of the broader support for this amendment on the Committee, it was adopted over my objection.

Senator HATCH and I agree that legislation is needed. But regardless of our personal views, any law must be within constitutional limits or it does go no good at all. Even though it is close to the line, I support S. 2530 as Senator HATCH and I introduced it in the Senate. Senator HATCH’s amendment which would expand our definition of “virtual child pornography” in the definition of child pornography, in my view, crosses the constitutional line, however, and needlessly risks protracted litigation that could assist child pornographers in escaping punishment.

Some members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have written to me stating that this issue is so important that I have been willing to compromise as long as I can support a measure even though I do not agree with each and every provision that it contains. That is how legislation is normally passed. Again, however, I fear that some in the Administration and the House have decided to play politics with this issue that is so important to our nation’s children. I urge them to reconsider their “take it or leave it approach” and consider the Hatch-Leahy PROTECT Act—or at least come back to discuss our differences.

I ask unanimous consent that the letters and materials to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senator Patrick J. Leahy,
Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary,
Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Leahy: On October 2, 2002, I testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee concerning S. 2520 and H.R. 4623. Each of these bills was drafted in response to Ashcroft v. Free Speech Coalition, 122 S. Ct. 1389 (2002), in which the Supreme Court threw out key provisions of the federal child pornography laws. As I testified, the new sections contained in S. 2520 have been carefully tailored with an eye towards satisfying the precise concerns identified by the Supreme Court. Recently, Senator Hatch offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute to S. 2520 (hereinafter “the Hatch Substitute”), which has examined the Hatch Substitute, and I believe that it contains a definition of child pornography that is nearly identical to the definition rejected by Free Speech Coalition. Therefore, the Hatch Substitute would survive a constitutional challenge in the federal courts, and the Committee should decline to adopt it.

As you know, each of these bills contains some complicated provisions, including especially their definition sections. As you also know, this complexity is unavoidable, for the Congress aims to intervene in and eliminate some of the complex law enforcement problems created by the phenomenon of virtual pornography. Following consultation, I will try to state my concerns about the Hatch Substitute as concisely as possible, while identifying the statutory nuances that are likely to suggest that constitutional questions in the event that the Hatch Substitute is enacted.

In Free Speech Coalition, the Supreme Court scrutinized provisions of the Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 ("CPPA") that were designed to eliminate obstacles created by virtual child pornography. The proliferation of virtual pornography has enabled childographers to escape conviction by arguing that the materials they created did not depict real children. In order to close these arguments, the CPPA defined "child pornography" broadly so that it extended to sexually-explicit materials that had been produced using a real minor, but also to an image that "appears to be of a minor" engaging in sexually-explicit conduct. Injunctions against such a definition of First Amendment grounds. The Court reaffirmed the holding of New York v. Ferber, then, not only referred to the distinction between actual and virtual child pornography, while identifying the statutory nuances that had been produce using a real minor, but also to an image that "appears to be of a minor" engaging in sexually-explicit conduct. Injunctions against such a definition of First Amendment grounds. The Court reaffirmed the holding of New York v. Ferber, then, not only referred to the distinction between actual and virtual child pornography, while identifying the statutory nuances that had been produce using a real minor, but also to an image that "appears to be of a minor" engaging in sexually-explicit conduct. Consequently, the Court there reasoned that the ban on theirth Substitute contains additional innovations that the Committee should identify the problem precisely and dispose of the provisions in the Hatch Substitute and omitting some of their complexity. In particular, the Hatch Substitute does not provide a definition of the phrase "virtually indistinguishable," requiring that the quality of the depiction be determined from the viewpoint of an "ordinary person" rather than from the perspex and unnecessarily broad, and the provision could and should be avoided. The Hatch Substitute offers even more reason to reject it as overly broad and excessively vague. Had the Drafters of the Hatch Substitute have in mind, I would suggest that the drafters identify the problem precisely and develop language that is clearer and narrower than the phrase "virtually indistinguishable," for that ambiguous term is likely to generate First Amendment concerns that otherwise could be avoided.

I would like to draw your attention to a similar, but separate, matter that also reflects on the health and security of our children: the Child Pornography Prevention Act. Ashcroft v. Chairman PATRICK J. LEAHY,
U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY: We write to express our grave concern with the legislation recently proposed by the Department of Justice in response to the Supreme Court's decision in Ashcroft, et al. v. The Free Speech Coalition, et al., No. 00-796 (Apr. 16, 2002). In particular, the proposed legislation purports to ban speech that is neither obscene nor unprotected by the speech and expression protection of the First Amendment. In our view, the bill expressly targets images that do not involve real human being at all. Accordingly, in our view, it suffers from the same infirmities that led the Court to invalidate the statute at issue in Ashcroft.

We emphasize that we share the revaluation all Americans feel toward those who harm children, and fully support legitimate efforts to eradicate child pornography. As the Court in Ashcroft emphasized, however, in doing so Congress must act within the limits of the First Amendment. In our view, the bill proposed by the Department of Justice fails to do so.

Re S. 2520.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY,
U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY: Following up on my written statement and on my oral testimony before the Committee on Wednesday, October 2, 2002, the staff of the Committee has asked me to comment on the constitutional implications of proposed amendments to S. 2520 to change the word “material” in section 2 of the bill (page 2, lines 17 and 19) to “purported material.”

In my opinion the change would push well over the constitutional edge a provision that is now right up against that edge, but probably barely on the constitutional side of it.

As I explained in my statement and orally, the Supreme Court has from the Ginzburg decision in 1966 to the Hamling decision in 1973 to the Free Speech Coalition decision in 2002 consistently refused to accept that “pandering” is an independent offense, as opposed to being evidence of the offense of obscenity (and, by implication, child pornography). The basic premise of the pandering prohibition in S. 2520 is thus in some tension with more than thirty-five years of Supreme Court doctrine. What may save the provision, however, is the fact that pandering may be seen as an act not as commercial advertisement, and the commercial advertisement of an unlawful product or service is not protected by the Supreme Court’s commercial speech doctrine. The provision is made clear in both Virginia Pharmacy and also in Pittsburgh Press v. Human Relations Commission 413 U.S. 376 (1973). It is important to recognize, however, that the line of commercial speech doctrine does not apply to non-commercial speech, where the description or advocacy of illegal acts is fully protected unless under the circumstances it is not applicable here, of immediate incitement.

The implication of this is that moving away from communication that could be described as an actual commercial advertisement decreases the availability of this approach to defending Section 2 of S. 2520. Although it may appear as if advertising “material” must provide this necessary factual predicate. To shift the burden of proof as to this necessary element that crime to the defendant is unconstitutional, even putting aside the often impossible task of proving that material was an actual minor. This proposed impermissibly and unconstitutionally shifts this burden.

With respect to virtual child pornography, there are similar constitutional problems. The Supreme Court in Free Speech Coalition found that the evil in child pornography, and the basis for excluding it from First Amendment protection, is the unlawful conduct vis-av-vis an actual child. Thus, the Court held that, unless an actual child is used and thus abused in the creation of the material, there can be no crime as to otherwise First Amendment-protected material. The government must provide this necessary factual predicate. To shift the burden of proof as to this necessary element that crime to the defendant is unconstitutional, even putting aside the often impossible task of proving the negative—that no child was used.

I am also concerned that the record-keeping provisions, which themselves have had a checkered constitutional history, having been held unconstitutional (ALA v. Thornburgh, 713 F. Supp. 469 (D.D.C. 1989)), revised in 1990, again held unconstitutional by the District Court (ALA v. Barr, 794 F. Supp. 1177 (D.D.C. 1992)), and upheld on appeal by the Court of Appeals. Although certain regulations were invalidated (ALA v. Reno, 33 F. 3d 78 (D.C. Cir. 1994)), and subsequently the Tenth Circuit has held certain other regulations invalid (Sundance Assoc. Inc. v. Reno, 139 F. 3d 804 (10th Cir. 1998)), throughout, however, the records kept by those who use images of children in the production process, or is obscene under, the First Amendment, or is not protected by the sale of child pornography, whether it is or not. Similarly, one who accepts or attempts to procure child pornography if some action is taken to effectuate that desire, even if the material actually is not child pornography. And, since it applies to both the pandering defendant and the person aggrieved are apparently in an unlimited, undefined category. Moreover, apparently the government must prove knowledge of minority by the defendant class to distributors, retailers, etc. is inappropriate and ultimately harmful to legitimate First Amendment interests. It raises the specter of the Pornography Victims Compensation Act, which raised such an outcry that it failed to pass Congress.

H.R. 621

A. Section 3(a) of the Bill criminalizes as child pornography computer images as long as the material is indistinguishable from actual child pornography. The majority in Free Speech Coalition clearly held that unless material either meets the Ferber test, which protects child pornography from judicial relitigation, or is obscene under, Miller v. California, it is protected by the First Amendment. Like the material covered by the unconstitutional CHPA, the material described in the "indistinguishable from" portion of section 3(a) does not involve or harm any child in the production process. Thus, section 3(a) is unconstitutional under Free Speech Coalition.

B. Section 3(c) of the Bill provides an affirmative defense to a child pornography prosecution if the act involved actual children in the creation of the material. Thus, despite section 3(a) discussed above, the Bill actually permits computer-generated sexually explicit depictions of minors that are not, pre-pubescent minors and computer morphing which appears as an identifiable minor, if the defendant meets the burden of proving the affirmative defense. (Curiously, the provision limiting the defense excludes material described in §2256(6)(A), i.e., that which used an actual minor in its production. It further suggests that a non-computer child pornography case, one cannot escape liability by proving that only adults were photographed. It is unlikely that this is what was intended.)

As Justice Kennedy, writing for the Court, says in Free Speech Coalition (122 S.Ct. at 1843), providing the burden of proof on an element of the crime raises serious constitutional issues. In fact, in the First Amendment context we have moved the shift is unconstitutional; among other things, it violates Smith v. California, 361 U.S. 147, 153 (1959) in that it eliminates the requirement that the government prove knowledge of minority by shifting the burden of proof to the defendant. Thus, defendant must prove a negative—that no children were used—a difficult chore, particularly if the purchaser-de signer is not available or known to the defendant. Finally, under United States vs. X-Citement Video, Inc., 513 U.S. 64 (1994), in the case of a librarian or distributor, the government must prove that he or she knew that the material was of an actual minor. This proposal impermissibly and unconstitutionally shifts this burden.

C. Section 4 creates a crime of pandering child pornography, defined as the sale or offer of material intending to cause the procure child pornography if some action is taken to effectuate that desire, even if the material actually is not child pornography. However, there appears to be a civil liability even when no child is involved.

Most important, it opens a Pandora's Box. Under state law, a person using a minor to create pornography is not necessarily civilly liable, but is also liable to the child whom he or she has used. To open the protected class to parents, spouses, etc. and the defendant class to distributors, retailers, etc. is inappropriate and ultimately harmful to legitimate First Amendment interests. It raises the specter of the Pornography Victims Compensation Act, which raised such an outcry that it failed to pass Congress.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred January 11, 2002, in New York, NY. A gay man, Eric D. Miller, 26, was shot in the chest on a Harlem street by a man who shouted antigay slurs after seeing Miller go into a local police station where he had gone as a witness against the harassments of a hate crime. Miller and his partner were walking down a street when they were confronted by two men who became enraged at the sight of the couple. The assailants yelled, "Black men shouldn't go gay," and threw rocks and bottles at the victims. During an ensuing scuffle, one of the assailants shot Miller in the chest. Miller was treated at a local hospital and released.

I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens, as well as its enemies, against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

IN HONOR OF THE NATION'S VETERANS

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise today in celebration of National Veterans Awareness Week, a time to commemorate and appreciate all the men and women who have served in America's Armed Forces. The week of November 10, 2002, is for honoring the soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines—some now gone, and some still alive—who have fought to protect our freedoms and liberties.

The Nation's veterans have often shown us the last line of defense between our country and the terrors of fascism, communism, and anarchy. They have waged war, kept peace, and deterred the threat of the unknown. The work of those in uniform is dangerous and difficult; it requires a personal commitment to defend its citizens and a patience and support of their families. Members of the armed services have a brave, admirable responsibility and a privileged perspective of history. It is with deepest respect that I thank them for their courage and their continued dedication to our Nation's security. Pennsylvania is the proud home of more than a million veterans, all of whom have demonstrated their love of country in defending our borders and our way of life. But in remembering and applauding their service, we must also recognize America’s next veteran generation: the men and women in uniform today. Our duty as lawmakers is to ensure service men and women’s commitment to the Nation is matched by the Government’s diligence in preparing them to face our current and future threats. Also important is the quality of life that these service members and their families deserve. There should, therefore, be a priority to improve the salaries, benefits, and facilities that our military men and women, and their families, rely upon.

America’s troops on the ground, on the sea, and in the air make up the most capable military force in all the world, and their equipment and support systems should be nothing less than first rate. The current war on terrorism and the changing threats of the 21st century demand a new level of readiness from our military that can only be met with better funding and more effective programs. The Nation’s Armed Forces need to be prepared for the realities of a new security paradigm and a new kind of combat. Last year’s terrorist attacks have changed our understanding of modern warfare and the need to protect our cities and our citizens. And in response to this realization, the Senate has passed legislation to increase spending so that America’s military and intelligence community can meet the world’s growing, nontraditional threats.

We owe much to our veterans: respect and admiration, in addition to appropriate retirement and healthcare benefits. We can most greatly honor these men and women, however, by focusing on the needs of the current service members who will one day be veterans themselves. We must support their mission today so that we can celebrate their accomplishments tomorrow. I encourage my colleagues and my fellow Americans to join me in paying tribute to the veterans, past, present and future, who are an indispensable part of what makes our country the greatest in the world.

Nomination of James L. Jones to be Supreme Allied Commander, Europe, SACEUR

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the nomination of Gen. James Jones to be Supreme Allied Commander in Europe. General Jones has served in the Marine Corps with tremendous skill and dedication, and I know he will make an equally effective U.S. and NATO commander in Europe.

I first met General Jones when he served as a Corps liaison here in the U.S. Senate in the mid-1980s. Like other Marines, the Major General was quiet about his war record but I learned he served gallantly in Vietnam. In some of the worldwide travel that the Corps supported and he helped arrange, I quickly realized that the service had itself a man of exceptional intellect, skill, and determination. In other words, the Corps possessed a leader in every sense of the word.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I rise today to applaud the passage of Anton’s Law, H.R. 5504, by the House of Representatives. I introduced the Senate version of Anton’s Law, S. 980, in May 2001. S. 980 is named in memory of Anton Sleen, a four-year-old who was killed in a car crash in Washington State. Anton’s mother Autumn—a national passenger safety advocate—believes that Anton’s death could have been prevented had he been riding in a booster seat. Designed specifically to help standard adult seats fit better, booster seats are used to protect children who have outgrown their car seats but are still too small to fit properly in an adult-sized safety belt. On average, children in this group range from 4 to 8 years of age, weigh 40 to 80 pounds, and are less than 4 feet 9 inches tall. It has been reported that only about 5 to 6 percent of these 19.5 million U.S. children are using booster seats. In 2000, 721 children aged five to nine were killed, and 133,000 were injured in car accidents.

The Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation approved Anton’s Law in August 2001, and the Senate passed the measure by unanimous consent on February 25 of this year. Last month, in order to help ensure that this important measure is placed on the President’s desk for signature before the end of the year, the Senate Commerce Committee accepted my amendment to insert Anton’s Law in the Senate version of the National Transportation Safety Board Authorization bill, S. 2950, which the Committee then approved by unanimous consent. I would like to thank all of my colleagues for their continued support of this bipartisan legislation that will help to improve the safety and effectiveness of child restraints in automobiles and protect our Nation’s young people.

Like the bill that I introduced in this body, the bill that was passed yesterday by the House of Representatives will improve the safety of children from 4 to 16 years old by requiring the Secretary of Transportation to initiate a rulemaking regarding performance standards for child restraints, especially for booster seats, for children weighing more than 50 pounds. This measure will also lead to the development of a 10-year-old dummy that can be used to test child restraint devices. It also requires automobile manufacturers to install three-point lap and shoulder belts in all rear seating positions of passenger vehicles. I urge my colleagues in the House to have this measure passed by the House, and I commend them for the work that they have done on this important issue. While I am happy that Anton’s Law will finally be presented to the President, this bill represents only part of what the Senate sought to accomplish when we passed Anton’s Law in February. The Senate’s version of Anton’s Law, unlike the House bill, contained provisions that would extend for five years a Federal grant program for States to promote child passenger safety and education, and that would encourage State action by providing States with financial incentives to adopt mandatory booster seat laws by October 1, 2004. Absent this incentive grant program, States will have little impetus to promulgate the laws needed to adequately protect this group of children. As I have already mentioned, the version of Anton’s Law passed by the Senate this year is incorporated in the Senate’s version of the National Transportation Safety Board Authorization bill. I urge the conferees.
In recent months, we have seen snipers with an assault rifle kill people around the country and a student at the University of Arizona go to his school and kill three of his teachers and himself. These events represent only a few of the thousands of murders that already occurred this year. These brutal killing sprees were given national media attention, and hopefully will generate legislative action. While there is little time left in the 107th Congress to address these issues, it is critical that Congress consider these issues early in the 108th Congress.

THE CONFIRMATION OF 98 JUDICIAL NOMINEES

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate confirmed the 98th judicial nominee of President George W. Bush.

These past 16 months, since the reorganization of the Senate Judiciary Committee following the change in majority last year, have been an historic and impressive period in which we have fairly considered hundreds of the President’s executive and judicial branch nominees. Contrary to the contrary, the Senate has done a good job.

If this Senate had a “lousy” record on judicial confirmations, then the Republican leadership, which controlled the Senate from 1995 through the first part of 2001, must have been far, far worse than “lousy”. Under Republican control judicial vacancies on the Courts of Appeals more than doubled, from 16 to 33, and overall vacancies rose from 65 to 110. We have heard no criticism from the White House of that period, in which Senate Republicans blocked President Clinton’s nominees. We have heard no apologies from the Republican leadership that engineered those efforts.

Just last night, in one night, the Democratic-led Senate confirmed more circuit judges, 18, including more circuit judges, than the Republican-led Senate allowed to be confirmed in the entire 1996 session more in one day than Republicans were willing to proceed on for an entire year. Seventeen of those judges were the nominations that we were able to get reported from the Committee on October 8 with some significant effort and in spite of Republican efforts to divert the Committee into other matters.

This week the Committee met, again, as I had said it would. We considered the nominations of Dennis Shepard and Michael McConnell and voted on them as the 101st and 102nd judicial nominations voted on by the Committee during the last 16 months and reported them to the Senate. One hundred judicial nominations have now been reported favorably by the Senate by the Committee during the last 16 months; two were rejected. One indication of the fairness with which we have conducted ourselves is that as chairman I have proceeded to consider nominations that I do not support and the Committee has reported nominations that I do not support to the Senate. As I said during this week’s Committee consideration of the Shepard nominations, for example, I examined his record, and confirmed his record, and a District Court Judge. I intend to vote against his nomination to the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

With the Senate’s actions last night, we have confirmed 98 of this President’s judicial nominees in only 16 months. This compares most favorably to the 38 judicial confirmations averaged per year during the six and one-half years when the Republican majority was in control of the Senate. Last night, the Senate confirmed another 18 judicial nominees. In the entire 1996 session over the course of an entire year, the Republican majority allowed only 17 district court judges to be confirmed. We have confirmed over a single circuit court nominee—no one. Last night, the Democratic-led Senate confirmed all 17 district court nominees reported to the Senate by the Judiciary Committee after our October 8 business session as well as a 6th Circuit nominee from Kentucky.

The Democratic-led Senate exceeded in one day what it took the Republican majority of the Senate an entire year to accomplish. That should put our historic demonstration of bipartisanship in the President’s judicial nominees in perspective.

The 17 district court nominees confirmed last night were on the Senate calendar because, on October 8, the Senate Judiciary Committee was able to report those nominations despite unparalleled personal attacks by Republicans on me as chairman. The circuit court nominee confirmed last night, Professor John Rogers, is the second of this President’s judicial nominees confirmed to the Sixth Circuit this year. They are the first confirmations to the 6th Circuit since 1997, when Republicans for four years shut down consideration of President Clinton’s nominees to that circuit. Three of President Clinton’s nominees to that court were never allowed a hearing by the Republican majority; the Democratic majority has, in contrast, proceeded to confirm two new judges to that same circuit court.

I am also a cosponsor of Senator DURBIN’s Children’s Access Prevention Act. Under this bill, adults who fail to lock up a loaded firearm or an unloaded firearm with ammunition would be held liable if the weapon is taken by a child and used to kill or injure themselves or another person. The bill also increases the penalties for selling a gun to a juvenile and creates a gun safety education program that includes parent—teacher organizations, local law enforcement and community organizations. This bill is similar to a bill President Bush signed into law during his tenure as the Governor of Texas.

More recently, I cosponsored Senator KOUNTZ’s Law Enforcement and Safety Technology Act, or BLAST Act, which would require licensed firearms manufacturers to test fire firearms, and prepare ballistics images of the fired bullets and casings of new firearms. Expanding the National Integrated Ballistics Information Network to include these ballistics images would increase the crime gun tracing capabilities of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. ATF agents could quickly identify firearms by using these images of cartridge casings and bullets recovered at crime scenes, even when criminals obliterate the serial number.
Galaxy. was drawn into the tragedy when 24 response of the my deep appreciation to all those in who died on October 20, 2002. I extend families and friends of the four men the Mayday call, the icy water without a survival suit. One Weckback, who was thrown into the rine Fisheries Service biologist Ann Boss Ryan Newhall of San Antonio, assistance. The heroic efforts of Deck fishing vessels to come to the alerting the Coast Guard and other fire to make the crucial Mayday call. These problems often arise when they have the potential to wreak the greatest havoc: when buying a new home or put children into college or to put a child through college. It can be devastating to make a major life change, only to find out that your creditworthiness has been destroyed by fraud, and it is going to take months of excruciating effort by you to clear your name. These crimes rarely meet the threshold for prosecution because each crime involves a small amount of money. Meanwhile victims must independently contact numerous federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, consumer credit reporting agencies and creditors over a period of years, as each new event of fraud arises. One of the most significant problems victims face is gathering the evidence of the fraud and cost of their identity. In order to prove fraud, the victim needs copies of creditors’ business records, such as applications, invoices or other information related to the fraudulent transactions. These records are often difficult to obtain because the victim’s personally identifying information does not match the fraudulent information on file with the business. Ironically, in the interest of protecting consumer privacy, a business is not required to provide the information to the victim, believing the victim to be an unauthorized third party. This bill establishes a nationwide process for all victims of identity theft to obtain business records that are evidence of identity theft to enable a victim to reclaim his or her identity and assist law enforcement in finding the thieves. This legislation also requires consumer credit agencies to block reporting of bad credit that arises from identity theft, so the harm caused to the victim is stopped dead in its tracks.

The bill also extends the statute of limitation from 2 years to 4 years, giving victims a reasonable time period to decide whether they need to sue a business under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

Finally, the bill amends the Internet False Identification Prevention Act of 1999 to expand the membership of the Coordinating Committee currently studying enforcement of Federal identity theft law. This will allow the Coordinating Committee to examine State and local identity theft law enforcement and identify ways the Federal government can assist state and local law enforcement in addressing identity theft and related crimes.

The bill is based on a Washington state law enacted in 2001. Other States, including California and Idaho, have enacted similar laws. But identity theft is a national problem growing at an exponential rate. Identity information may be stolen in Washington state and used to perpetrate a fraud in Wisconsin, New Jersey, or Alabama. That is why it is critical that we have passed this bill to help all victims move more quickly and easily through the process of restoring their good name. This bill is a critical step in helping victims of identity theft restore their good credit.

Identity theft can be extraordinarily destructive to people’s lives. People are denied credit, spend enormous time, effort, and money correcting the problems caused by theft and suffer profound frustration and distress in dealing with the problems that result from identity theft.

I thank my colleagues who have worked hard with me to bring this legislation to the floor. Particularly, my thanks go to Senators ENZI, GRASSLEY and LEAHY, and Banking Committee Chairman SARBANES.

I also want to mention the broad support that this legislation has received. The bill is supported by the National Center for the Victims of Crime, the Fraternal Order of Police, Consumers Union, Identity Theft Resource Center, U.S. Public Interest Group, Police Executive Forum, Privacy Rights Clearinghouse, and Amazon.com, and the Committee has received a letter of support signed by 22 Attorneys General. This legislation is a win for consumers and a win for businesses because identity theft leaves both as victims in its wake. It should be among the highest priorities in the waning days of this Congress that we work together to get the bill enacted into law. The sooner we give victims of identity theft these tools, the more victims we will help and the fewer businesses that will be defrauded by identity theft in the future.

LOAN FORGIVENESS FOR SOCIAL WORKERS AND ATTORNEYS CAN IMPROVE CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I am very proud to join my friend and colleague, Senator DeWINE, as an original cosponsor of two important bills, S. 3165 and S. 3166, to offer loan forgiveness to social workers and attorneys willing to work in the child welfare field. Senator DeWINE has been an inspiring leader on child welfare issues for many years, and I am delighted to work closely with him to continue to
The ideas exchanged in Oregon’s partnership have led to at least two significant developments with the support of the Croatian Ministry of Education and Sports: first, as part of the exchange, an American civic curriculum, Foundation of Democracy program on justice, has been translated and is now a requirement in Croatian preschools and primary schools; second, We the People . . . Project Citizen, an American civic education program which engages students in learning how to monitor and influence public policy, has become a requirement in grades 7 and 8 for secondary schools in Croatia.

The Civitas Exchange Program is an excellent example of how programs supported by the federal government can help achieve U.S. foreign policy objectives by helping emerging democracies develop a political culture supportive of democratic values, principles, and institutions. I wish to thank the Center for Civic Education for their successful administration of the Civitas program and applaud Oregonian Marilyn Cover for her excellent work in the project.

RETIREMENT OF SENATOR FRED THOMPSON

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute and recognize the accomplishments of a colleague who will be retiring at the end of this term. Senator FRED THOMPSON has represented Tennessee in the Senate for 8 years. During his tenure, he has been an important advocate for a wide range of legislative reform activities.

Throughout his Senate career, Senator THOMPSON has fought for protecting our national security, making government more efficient, and improving programs that are important to America’s families, such as Social Security and Medicare. Senator THOMPSON has also been nationally recognized for his expertise in international affairs as was evidenced by his recent nomination to the prestigious Council on Foreign Relations.

As the ranking member of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, FRED THOMPSON held more than a dozen hearings on important national security issues, including missile defense and technology and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. As a result of his efforts, Senator THOMPSON has been instrumental in bringing the issue of weapons proliferation to the forefront of the national agenda.

In addition, FRED THOMPSON has been the leader in many efforts to reform and improve government. He has championed efforts to enhance the security of government computer systems and to strengthen privacy protection on Federal Web sites.
Finally, as his colleague on the Finance Committee, I had the opportunity to work with Fred to address the challenges facing Social Security and Medicare. Among the efforts we jointly supported, a primary concern we have shared is improving the long-term solvency of these important social programs. As a Finance Committee member, as well as in the other roles he has served, Senator Thompson’s work has been thoughtful, and our Nation is a better place because of his efforts.

Most of all, I will miss Senator Thompson’s unfailing good humor. We shared many laughs as we bantered back and forth about his future in film and television. I will really miss his sense of humor and basic decency.

Mr. President, for these and many other reasons, I have been honored to serve with Fred Thompson. I would like to join my colleagues in wishing him well.

The Senator and his family the best in November 15, 2002.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise today to say a few words about Neal Gonzales, a prominent New Mexico labor leader who died in late October.

In the early 1970s when I became acquainted with the working of the new Mexico Legislature, I also became acquainted with Neal Gonzales, a powerful presence in the halls of power in our state. He was the representative of labor and as such his influence was felt in most of the important legislative battles throughout the state.

Neal was a true professional at his job. Liked and respected by all, he was a formidable adversary as those who found themselves opposing him soon learned.

I learned much from watching Neal Gonzales work as the advocate for the working people of New Mexico. He kept his focus on the impact of legislation on the lives of those he represented. He did his homework and, more often than not, he prevailed.

With his death, many of us in New Mexico have lost not only a valued friend, but the working families of our State have lost a tireless champion.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to the 75th anniversary of Vashon High School. In the early quarter of the 20th century, the high school that educated many African-American students who attended in St. Louis was overcrowded and quite a distance from their homes. Consequently, in 1922, a citizens group called the Central School Patron Association led by Reverend George Stevens and other community alliances began formulating plans for a second high school designated for African-American students. On September 6, 1927, Vashon High School opened and has been educating and changing the lives of students since. Over time, Vashon High School has established itself as a premier educational institute, known for its athletics as well as academics.

There are several outstanding individuals who have contributed to the founding and success of Vashon High School. The school was named for a family with a long tradition of struggle and sacrifice dedicated to the importance of education while battling to secure African-American civil rights. Specifically, the school was named for George B. Vashon, 1824–1878, the first African-American graduate of Oberlin College, OH in 1844, and his son John B. Vashon, 1859–1924, an outstanding educator in the city of St. Louis for 34 years. James W. Meyers served as the first principal of Vashon from 1927–1932 and Otto Bohanan, a member of the faculty, composed the school song, “Vashon We Love”. Many students honed their talents, skills, and abilities in educational, future educators and community leaders from the positive influence and support of these and other influential faculty members.

Over the past 75 years, Vashon High School has undergone changes and relocated to several different locations, but irrespective of physical location, the spirit of Vashon High School continues to inspire students to pursue their dreams and achieve their goals. Congratulations to the students, faculty, and alumni of Vashon High School.

TRIBUTE TO DR. LURA POWELL

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise today to say thank you to one of the true leaders in the Washington state science community who has recently announced that she will be stepping down from her position at the end of the year. I am speaking of Dr. Lura Powell, vice president of Battelle and Director of the Department of Energy’s Pacific Northwest National Laboratory, PNNL, in Richland, WA.

During the past 2 years, Dr. Powell has developed a bold strategy to ensure that the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory will play a significant role in carrying out the missions of the Department of Energy as we move forward into the 21st century. The recent installation of two major pieces of equipment will position the laboratory to be a leader in molecular research—research that reaches across many disciplines, including environmental cleanup, national security, and the life sciences. The new 9.2 teraflops supercomputer and the 900-megahertz nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer, both of which are part of PNNL’s Environmental Molecular Sciences Laboratory, will attract academia, industry, and other Government researchers to the lab in an atmosphere of collaboration and discovery. I had the opportunity to attend the dedication of the NMR spectrometer on March 28, 2002. This equipment is poised to play a central role in the fast-approaching revolution in systems biology, the seeds for which were sown by the amazing success of the Human Genome Project.

Dr. Powell has set out to establish a systems biology program for PNNL that will position the laboratory to play a significant role in the Department of Energy’s Genomes Initiative and to participate in the National Institutes of Health biomedical mission. Congress has consistently supported increased funding for scientific research in the biomedical sciences at NIH, and there is an equally important role for the Department of Energy to play in this field. Genomics research holds great promise for unraveling many previously intractable scientific problems, and will one day lead to the development of technologies that will help address some of the most pressing challenges: carbon sequestration and climate change, the national security risks posed by bioterrorism, even clean and sustainable energy production. The Genomes to Life program will indeed enhance the Department of Energy’s ability to fulfill its many diverse missions, and PNNL—thanks in large part to Dr. Powell—is poised to be a prime contributor to this initiative.

In her term as Director of the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory, Dr. Powell has reached out to create new partnerships within Washington State to support this agenda. They include the University of Washington, Washington State University, the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center, and the Institute of Systems Biology. Meanwhile, conversations are ongoing with still other institutions in the Pacific Northwest that will further expand PNNL’s collaborations. These efforts will bring a science presence to the State of Washington, provide economic sustainability to the Tri-Cities area and lead to scientific discoveries that will ultimately benefit this Nation as a whole. I want to recognize Dr. Powell for her vision and commitment to public service and wish her much success in her future endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO DR. VINCENT ZECCHINO

Mr. CHAFFEE. Mr. President, it is with great honor that I recognize Dr. Vincent Zecchino and his wife, Julia, for the numerous contributions they have made to the field of medicine in Rhode Island and throughout the world. I am pleased to say that after a lifetime of achievement, Rhode Island Hospital dedicated their newest facility as the Julia and Vincent Zecchino Pavilion on October 18, 2002.

After graduating from the University of Bologna Medical School in 1936 and completing his internship at the Long Island College Hospital in 1938, Dr.
Zecchino served his orthopedic and fracture residency at Rhode Island Hospital, which he completed in 1946. Subsequently, Dr. Zecchino continued his medical training as a fellow at Harvard Medical School and as a resident at Boston’s Children’s Hospital and Mass General Hospital. He mustered out of the United States Army in 1942. Dr. Zecchino served the United States in the China Burma-India Theatre as Chief of Orthopedic Surgery until his discharge as Lieutenant Colonel in 1946. Upon completion of his military service, Dr. Zecchino returned to Rhode Island where he joined the orthopedic staff at Rhode Island Hospital and Miriam Hospital and the faculty of Brown Medical School. During his illustrious career, Dr. Zecchino also served as Chief of Orthopedics at the Veterans Hospital, worked and taught at Project Hope medical schools in Columbia, Tunisia and Sri Lanka, and was a member of the Tufts Medical School faculty.

Dr. Zecchino has authored and co-authored numerous articles in medical journals and textbooks. He was critically important in the development of knee prosthesis and its instrumentation, and invented the double-edged bone cutting blade bone say. After such a long and distinguished career, it is especially noteworthy that Dr. Zecchino founded an orthopedic clinic for people in need after his retirement in 1982.

Throughout his medical career, Dr. Zecchino has benefited from the love, compassion and commitment of his wife, Julia, who was in a nurse-training program when they met. Together, Dr. and Mrs. Zecchino have improved the lives of thousands of people and with the dedication of the Julia and Vincent Zecchino Pavilion; future generations will continue to benefit from the Zecchino’s goodwill, dedication and tireless effort to improve the world around them.

IN RECOGNITION OF HARTFORD MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH ON THE OCCASION OF THEIR 85TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to recognize the members of the Hartford Memorial Baptist Church for 85 years of dedication and service to the Detroit community.

Since 1917, Hartford Memorial Baptist Church has established an environment of strength within the parish walls as well as throughout the surrounding community. Through commitment to social change, they welcomed the nonviolent insights of W.E.B. DuBois and Paul Robeson during the Civil Rights Movement and continue to make significant contributions to social development through extensive community outreach programs.

The establishment of the Hartford Agape House is one of their current initiatives dedicated toward an urban mission that provides needed social services to the local community. Widely respected among the Michigan faith-based organizations, their exemplary programs take on the issues of poverty through hunger initiatives and free clothing; medical necessities through a public health consortium. Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous are just two; as well as educational assistance that provides both college preparation and scholarship programs.

I take great pride in recognizing the efforts of the Hartford Memorial Baptist Church toward their 85-year history in the Detroit community. Their ministry attends to the entire person: mind, body and soul. I know my Senate colleagues will join me in saluting their contributions to society and wish them continued success in the future.

SPINA BIFIDA AWARENESS MONTH

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I rise today to let my colleagues know that October is National Spina Bifida Awareness Month and to pay tribute to the more than 70,000 Americans—and their family members—who are currently affected by spina bifida—the Nation’s most costly and disabling birth defect. The Spina Bifida Association of America—SBAA—an organization that has helped people with spina bifida and their families for nearly 30 years, works every day—not just in the month of October—to prevent and reduce suffering from this devastating birth defect.

The SBAA was founded in 1973 to address the needs of the individuals and families affected by and is currently the only national organization solely dedicated to advocating on behalf of the spina bifida community. As part of its service through 60 chapters in more than 100 communities across the country, the SBAA puts expectant parents in touch with families who have a child with spina bifida. These families answer questions and concerns and help guide expecting parents. The SBAA then works to provide lifelong support and assistance for affected children and their families.

Together the SBAA and the Spina Bifida Association of Texas work tirelessly to help families meet the challenges and enjoy the rewards of raising their child. I would like to acknowledge Shannan SBAA and the Spina Bifida Association of Texas for all that they have done for the families affected by this birth defect, especially those living in my State.

Spina bifida is a neural tube defect that occurs when the central nervous system does not properly close during the early stages of pregnancy. Spina bifida affects more than 4,000 pregnancies each year, with more than half ending tragically in abortion. There are three different forms of spina bifida with three different kinds of spina bifida: myelomeningocele spina bifida, which causes nerve damage and severe disabilities. This severe form of spina bifida is diagnosed in 96 percent of children born with this condition. Between 70 to 90 percent of the children born with spina bifida are at risk of mental retardation when spinal fluid collects around the brain.

We must do more to ensure a high quality of life for people with spina bifida so more families choose the blessing and joy of having a child with this condition. Fortunately, spina bifida is no longer the death sentence it once was and now people born with spina bifida will likely have a normal or near normal life expectancy. The challenge now is to ensure that these individuals have the highest quality of life possible.

Today, approximately 90 percent of all babies diagnosed with this birth defect live into adulthood, approximately 80 percent have normal IQs, and approximately 75 percent participate in sports and other recreational activities. With proper medical care, people who suffer from spina bifida can lead full and productive lives. However, they must learn how to move around using braces, crutches, or wheelchairs, and how to function independently. They also must be careful to avoid a secondary problem—spina bifida affects skin problems and latex allergies.

The Spina Bifida Association of Texas has four chapters in San Antonio, Austin, Dallas and Houston. These chapters serve the individuals and their families with spina bifida in the great state of Texas through a number of programs and services including providing emergency assistance; running a summer camp for children and a weekend retreat for adults; scholarships; and medical seminars. In addition, the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital is the largest single-site interdisciplinary center for the treatment of spina bifida in the United States and provides ongoing treatment for more than 13,000 children annually, without charge.

During the month of October, the SBAA and its chapters make a special push to increase public awareness about spina bifida and teach prospective parents about prevention. Simply by taking a daily dose of the B vitamin, folic acid, found in most multivitamins, women of child-bearing age have the power to reduce the incidence of spina bifida by up to 75 percent. That such a simple change in habit can have such a profound effect should leave no question as to the importance of awareness and the impact of prevention.

As a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I am pleased that we provided $2 million in much-needed funding to establish a National Spina Bifida Program at the National Center for Birth Defects and Developmental Disabilities—NCBDDD—of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention—CDC—to ensure that those individuals living with spina bifida can live active, productive, and meaningful lives. In addition, I am proud that we in the Senate recently passed by unanimous consent the Birth Defects and Developmental Disabilities Prevention Act of 2002, which takes many critical steps that will work to prevent spina bifida and to improve quality of life for individuals and families affected by this terrible birth defect. I am hopeful that the House will act shortly to pass the measure so it can be sent to the President for his signature.

I again wish to thank the SBAA and its chapters for all of their hard work to prevent and reduce suffering from this birth defect and for their commitment to improve the lives of those 70,000 individuals living with spina bifida throughout our Nation. I wish the Spina Bifida Association of America the best of luck in its future endeavors.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. INHOFE:
S. 3171. A bill to amend the Impact Aid program under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to improve the delivery of payments under the program to local educational agencies; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to make the Impact Aid Program a Federal entitlement.

Over the past few years, the need for a change in the delivery of Impact Aid payments to eligible school districts has become increasingly clear. Impact Aid was originally designed to compensate a local school district for financial losses caused by a Federal presence in that district, whether due to a military base or to other designated Federal land in the community. Congress met its obligation and fully funded the program for the first twenty years of its existence. When the funding was cut in 1971, appropriations for Impact Aid were allocated for school districts according to a need-based formula. In subsequent years, multiple changes in the law have revised and further complicated both the formula and the additional factors that determine funding for each district. The result of these numerous revisions has been large payment disparities for the same types of students in different districts, as well as inherent flaws in reimbursements due to how school districts are defined in different states.

I have consistently defended increased appropriations for Impact Aid not only because it is a vital source of revenue for many local school districts, but also because it constitutes a clear-cut Federal responsibility. When the Federal Government’s presence in a community detracts from the local tax base, which often comprises nearly 90 percent of local schools’ funding, we must compensate for the lost funds. When we do not do so, the children suffer the consequences.

Despite increases in the past few years, Impact Aid remains substantively under-funded. We can no longer ignore the inequity this causes in educating our students. It is for this reason that I have introduced this bill today. When this legislation becomes law, Congress will be required to meet its obligation to the children and the schools that have been negatively impacted for so long. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting our local schools by permanently fully funding the Impact Aid program.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 358—CONGRATULATING THE PEOPLE OF MOZAMBIQUE ON THEIR SUCCESSFUL EFFORTS TO ESTABLISH, BUILD, AND MAINTAIN PEACE IN THEIR COUNTRY, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. BIDEN submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

Whereas, on October 4, 1992, having overcome the hardships of a colonial struggle, decolonization, and armed regional and national conflict, the people of Mozambique, parties to the civil war in Mozambique, and the leadership of Mozambique reached a peaceful settlement to the devastating 16-year civil war;

Whereas this peace was facilitated by the good offices of the Comunita di Sant’Egidio in Rome and supported by regional friends and the international community;

Whereas in 1994 and 1999 Mozambique held multi-party elections for free and fair by the international community;

Whereas this peace has been consolidated and strengthened by Mozambique civil society, helping the Government of Mozambique on a course of political and economic reforms despite the challenges currently presented by HIV/AIDS, floods, droughts, and inflationary instability;

Whereas the Government of Mozambique has initiated sound economic reforms, including the privatization of state-run enterprises, the reduction and simplification of import tariffs, and the liberalization of agricultural markets, resulting in extraordinary economic growth;

Whereas the resources that have become available by Mozambique’s participation in the Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative have been responsibly channeled by the Government of Mozambique into anti-poverty programs;

Whereas, despite the progress that Mozambique has made, more than one-half of the people of Mozambique over 15 years of age are illiterate, twenty-eight percent of the children under five are malnourished, infant mortality stands at more than 12 percent, and life expectancy is only 42 years;

Whereas the United States values democratic principles, the rule of law, peace, and stability in all nations that comprise the community of states; and

Whereas Mozambique has been transformed from a war-torn country to one where political disputes are settled through peaceful means, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) congratulates the people of Mozambique on ten years of continued peace and growing democracy and commends the Government of Mozambique for its continued economic and political reforms;

(2) salutes the Comunita di Sant’Egidio for using its good offices to facilitate and mediate the peace process that led to the October 4, 1992, agreement;

(3) recognizes the indispensable role that civil society in Mozambique has played in both achieving peace and deepening democratic reforms; and

(4) stands ready to assist the Government of Mozambique on a variety of programs, including humanitarian assistance, prevention, and technical assistance to fight corruption.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 158—URGING THE GOVERNMENT OF EGYPT AND OTHER ARAB GOVERNMENTS NOT TO ALLOW THEIR GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED TELEVISION STATIONS TO BROADCAST ANY PROGRAM THAT LENDS LEGITIMACY TO THE PROTOCOLS OF THE ELDERS OF ZION, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. NELSON of Florida (for himself and Mr. SMITH of Oregon) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Whereas in November 2002, a number of government-controlled television stations in Egypt began broadcasting a multi-part series, “Horseman Without a Horse”, based on the Protocols of the Elders of Zion and conspiracy myths about Jewish global domination;

Whereas the Protocols of the Elders of Zion are a notorious forgery, written by Russian anti-Semites in the early 20th century, which purport to reveal a plot for Jewish domination of the world;

Whereas the Protocols of the Elders of Zion have been a staple of anti-Semitic and anti-Israel propaganda for decades and have long been discredited by all reputable scholars;

Whereas the broadcast of this series takes place in the context of a sustained pattern of government-sponsored anti-Semitic commentary and depictions in the Egyptian government-sponsored press, which has gone unanswered by the Government of Egypt; and

Whereas the Government of Egypt has urged Egypt and other Arab states not to broadcast this program, saying “We don’t think government TV stations should be broadcasting programs that we consider racist and untrue”; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) condemns any publication or program that lends legitimacy to the Protocols of the Elders of Zion;

(2) believes the use of such heinous propaganda, especially in the Arab world, serves to incite popular sentiment against Jewish people and the State of Israel rather than promoting religious tolerance and preparing Arab populations for the prospect of peace with Israel;

(3) commends the Department of State for its denunciation of the “Horseman without a Horse” television series and its efforts to discourage Arab states from broadcasting it; and

(4) urges the Government of Egypt and other Arab governments (A) not to allow their government-controlled television stations to broadcast this program or any other racist and untrue material; and

(B) to speak out against such incitement by vigorously and publicly condemning anti-Semitism as a form of bigotry.

(b) Administration.—The Secretary shall make assistance available under this section in the same manner as provided under section 815 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001 (Public Law 106–387; 114 Stat. 1549A–35), including using the same loss thresholds for the purpose of determining eligibility as were used in administering that section.

(2) Crop Insurance.—In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall not discrimi- nate against or penalize producers on a farm that have purchased crop insurance under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.).

(b) Livestock Assistance Program.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary shall use such sums as are necessary of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation as are necessary to make and administer payments for livestock losses to producers for 2001 or 2002 losses, or both, in a county that has received a corresponding emergency designation by the Secretary or the Secretary’s designee, of which an amount determined by the Secretary shall be made available for the American Indian live- stock program under section 806 of the Agri- culture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001 (Public Law 106–387; 114 Stat. 1549A–51).

(2) Administration.—The Secretary shall make assistance available under this section in the same manner as provided under section 806 of the Agriculture, Rural Develop- ment, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001 (Public Law 106–387; 114 Stat. 1549A–51).

(c) Funding.—Of the funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Secretary shall—

(1) use such sums as are necessary to carry out this section; and

(2) transfer to section 32 of the Act of August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to the amount of funds under section 32 of that Act that were made available before the date of enactment of this Act to provide disas- ter assistance to crop and livestock pro- ducers for losses suffered during 2001 and 2002, to remain available until expended.

(d) Regulations.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary may promulgate such regulations as are necessary to implement this section.

(2) Procedure.—The promulgation of the regulations and administration of this section shall be made without regard to—

(e) Emergency Designation.—

(1) In general.—The entire amount made available under this section shall be avail- able only to the extent that the President submits to Congress an official budget re- quest for a specific dollar amount that in- cludes the entire amount of the estimate of the request as an emergency requirement for the purposes of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 900 et seq.).

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to executive session to consider the following calendar numbers: No. 1177 and No. 1179; that the nominations be confirmed, the motions to reconsider be laid on the table, the President be im- mediately notified of the Senate’s action, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations as ordered and confirmed are as follows:

THE JUDICIARY

Michael W. McConnell, of Utah, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Tenth Circuit.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, it is my high honor and privilege to speak on the confirmation of Professor Michael McConnell to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. Professor McConnell is a Utah, a scholar of the highest talent, and a man of profound integrity and judicial temperament.

Professor McConnell holds the presti- gious Presidential Professorship at the University of Utah College of Law in Salt Lake City. He began his legal career at the University of Chicago Law School, where he was Comment Editor of the Law Review and gradu- ated Order of the Coif. Thereafter he served as a law clerk for two of the leading liberal jurists of the 20th cen- tury: Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. and D.C. Court of Ap- peals Judge J. Skelly Wright.

After completing those clerkships, Mr. McConnell became Assistant General Coun- sel of the Office of Management and Budget and then served as Assistant to the Solicitor General. He then joined the faculty of the University of Chicago Law School, where he was awarded tenure and later the William B. Graham Professorship.

In addition to his academic credentials, Professor McConnell is an able and experienced appellate lawyer. He has argued eleven cases before the United States Supreme Court—and won nine of them. In fact, the Los Angeles Daily Journal named one of his presentations to the Supreme Court “best oral argument” of the year. His clients include a wide range of entities: Fortune 500 companies such as NBC and Ameritech; organizations such as the United States Catholic Conference; municipal authorities including the New York Metropolitan Transit Authority; and many individuals.

This combination of intelligence and experience was very likely the reason that the American Bar Association rated Professor McConnell unanimously “well qualified”—its highest possible rating.

Now, Mr. President, I imagine you have heard some of the attacks waged against these fine nominees by the usual suspects—that group of Washington-based special interest lobbyists who are trying to thwart President Bush’s judges. Those groups are trying to make believe that Professor McConnell is out of the mainstream of American politics.

Well, let me set the record straight. I’ll mention just a few of the positions Professor McConnell has taken that prove he is an independent-minded thinker who calls things as he sees them, and does not follow anyone else’s political prescription. Professor McConnell represented, without charge, three former Democratic Attorneys General in opposition to an order of the first President Bush; publicly opposed impeachment of President Clinton; urged the confirmation of several of Clinton’s nominees; testified against a school prayer amendment; worked, without charge, on a lawsuit representing both People for the American Way and Americans United for the Separation of Church and State; has been described by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia as “the most prominent scholarly critic” of Scalia’s approach to the free exercise clause; and has served as co-chair—together with a former ACLU president and a former American Bar Association president—of an organization whose purpose is to oppose MY proposed constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from desecration.

So you see, Mr. President, the idea that McConnell is in lock-step with the Republican party is absolutely untrue. Rather than credit all of the unsupported attacks with responses, I instead would like to tell you a couple of things the ARE true about Professor McConnell.

First, Professor McConnell is widely regarded as modern America’s most persuasive advocate for the idea that our government should ensure every citizen’s right to worship—or not worship—in his or her preferred manner. Through his scholarship and advocacy in court, he has stood up for the rights of all religious people—including members of the politically out-of-favor faiths—to worship free of government restriction or intrusion.

Many Americans believe that the freedom to exercise their own religion is the most important principle that this country was founded on. Before Professor McConnell began his prodigious scholarship in the area of the First Amendment’s religion clauses, the idea was taking root that the government must disfavor religion in its policies. That is, judges and scholars believed that all groups must be treated equally except religions, which must be excluded entirely from any government program or policy.

Professor McConnell served as a dramatic wake-up call. He researched the Founders’ writing and presented with illuminating clarity that the point of free exercise is for the government to remain neutral as between religions, and must accommodate religious activity where feasible. He demonstrated there was no basis in the founding for the view that our government must be anti-religion. The persuasiveness of his writing reawakened American legal scholars and judges to the Founders’ view that the First Amendment’s purpose is to protect religion from government, not the other way around. His work has helped reinvigorate the healthy and dynamic pluralism of religion that has allowed all faiths to flourish in this promised land, the most religiously tolerant nation in human history.

McConnell’s views defy political pigeonholing. Although he has generally sided with the so-called liberal wing of the Court on questions of Free Exercise of Religion, McConnell’s view of Establishment of Religion is that religious perspectives should be given equal but not dominant status in the public sphere—a view that has led him to testify against a school prayer amendment, while supporting the rights of religious citizens and groups to receive access to public resources on an equal basis.

Few people in modern America have contributed more to their area of expertise than Professor McConnell. He has written over 50 articles in professional journals and delivered hundreds of lectures and penned many op-ed pieces. He has contributed an immeasurable amount to the discourse of legal ideas. As Professor Laurence Tribe wrote to the Judiciary Committee, McConnell is among the nation’s most distinguished constitutional scholars and a fine teacher.”

Tribe further explained that he and McConnell “share a commitment to principled legal interpretation and to a broadly civil libertarian constitutional framework.”

The significance of McConnell’s contributions to the legal profession in part explains why 304 professors—ranging from conservative to liberal to very liberal—have signed a single letter urging us to confirm McConnell’s nomination.

Mr. President. When was the last time 304 professors endorsed anything? Professor McConnell’s peers consider him one of the nation’s foremost constitutional scholars and appellate advocates and as a person with a reputation for open-minded fairness.

Because of his outstanding reputation for scholarship, the attacks on Professor McConnell have not focused so much on his judicial abilities, but on his personal beliefs. I think this is wrong. All Americans have the right to think their own thoughts and believe their own beliefs. That right should apply as much to the Americans who don robes in service of the Federal Judiciary as to any other citizen.

One of the Senate’s most important responsibilities is to ensure that judicial nominees are not warned by the Senate to testify against a school prayer amendment; worked, without charge, on a lawsuit representing both People for the American Way and Americans United for the Separation of Church and State; has been described by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia as “the most prominent scholarly critic” of Scalia’s approach to the free exercise clause; and has served as co-chair—together with a former ACLU president and a former American Bar Association president—of an organization whose purpose is to oppose MY proposed constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from desecration.

So you see, Mr. President, the idea that McConnell is in lock-step with the Republican party is absolutely untrue. Rather than credit all of the unsupported attacks with responses, I instead would like to tell you a couple of things the ARE true about Professor McConnell.

First, Professor McConnell is widely regarded as modern America’s most persuasive advocate for the idea that Many people across the political spectrum know that Professor McConnell will obey precedent even when it is at odds with his own views. That explains why Professor McConnell’s nomination has been praised by a number of prominent individuals, including former Clinton administration officials Acting Solicitor General Walter Dellinger, Deputy White House Counsel William Marshall, Domestic Policy Advisors Bill Galston and John Podesta, and Associate Attorney General John Schmidt. Listen to part of a letter I received from the Legal Director of the ACLU chapter in Utah. He wrote—in his personal capacity—to endorse Professor McConnell “enthusiastically and without qualification,” saying that “there can be no doubt that [lawyers who appear before him] will receive a fair and impartial hearing, thoughtful scrutiny and careful consideration toward a decision that will be based solely on the merits and not on any predetermined ideological or political agenda.”

Professor McConnell is immune to any political litmus test because he speaks as a scholar in terms of integrity and fairness. He is committed to the rule of law and to the ideal of nonpartisan judging. He is known for his principled defense of a limited and restrained role for the judiciary in our constitutional system. He has argued for constitutional interpretation based on constitutional text, original understanding, historical experience, and precedent. He has criticized scholars and judges of both the right and the left for advocating interpretation based on the judge’s own political or moral views. He has advocated a major role for Congress in defining and protecting civil rights and has criticized the Supreme Court’s decisions limiting such measures. For example, McConnell wrote that the Supreme Court’s own interpretation of the Constitution’s own interpretative powers. Civil rights groups should take special note of his defense of broad congressional power under Section Five of the Fourteenth Amendment. In conclusion, Mr. President, Professor McConnell is one of the very best people ever nominated to be a judge. I am very pleased that the Senate confirmed him today. He will be a great judge.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, tonight, the Senate will consider the nomination of the distinguished judge for a lifetime appointment to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. I oppose this nomination.

Professor McConnell’s record as a scholar, an advocate and an activist is firmly in the American mainstream on a number of critical constitutional, civil rights, and other legal issues. His views are so clear and consistent that I believe no litigant on areas such as reproductive rights or the separation of church and state could reasonably expect to receive a fair and impartial hearing in Judge McConnell’s court room.

Let me tell you why I believe that. Professor McConnell has called the right to choose an “evil” and one of the greatest injustices of our day. He would not simply overturn Roe v. Wade—a disastrous outcome for American women. He has gone so far as to suggest that the courts should declare embroyos persons under the Fourteenth Amendment. He has called Roe v. Wade “illegitimate,” and has called for a constitutional amendment banning the right to choose and granting constitutional rights to embryos.

Professor McConnell has also written and spoken against the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act (FACE). He believes—in contrast to everyone in the federal appellate court that has considered the question—that it is unconstitutional. In a recent article, he expressed admiration for a district court judge who refused to apply FACE because it was not consistent with the “good purpose.” Mr. President, that is not in the statute Congress passed. McConnell’s statements of admiration for the “judicial nullification” of a federal statute that he does not agree with speaks volumes about his inability to fairly and impartially apply a range of civil rights statutes that my conflict with his views.

And it makes it clear that as a judge, he would be a judicial activist. McConnell has even criticized the Supreme Court’s 8-1 decision in the Bob Jones case from 1983. In that decision, the Court ruled that the IRS may deny tax-exempt status to a school that discriminates against nonwhites. In a 1989 article, McConnell wrote that the “racial doctrines of a Bob Jones University” should have been “tolerated” because they were “church teachings.”

Mr. President, I realize that this is not a Supreme Court nomination. But, the reality is that Circuit Courts make new law in many areas where the Supreme Court has not spoken. The Supreme Court hears fewer than 100 cases per year, while the Circuit Courts decide close to 30,000. The truth is, the appellate court is very often the courts of last resort. As Justice Scalia recently wrote, “the judges of inferior courts often make law, since the prece...
choice record shows that he will use every opening the law permits to further restrict a woman's right to choose.

Unfortunately, Professor McConnell does not stand apart from other Bush nominees for his extreme ideology. I believe he was chosen because of it.

Remaking the Federal courts has been a long-term goal of the right-wing base of the Republican party. They have pursued this goal with dogged determination and persistence for more than two decades, and they are succeeding. More and more restrictions on a woman's right to choose are being upheld as constitutional by the increasingly conservative Federal courts, while portions of anti-discrimination law and Violence Against Women Act—a law that Senator Biden wrote and that I was proud to sponsor when I was in the Senate—remain unenforceable. This is not the right direction for the federal courts.

Now Bush Administration is poised to tip the scales of justice even further to support an extreme anti-choice agenda, and the right to choose may well disappear for more and more American women—especially for poor women. Don't take my word for it. After last week's elections, former Reagan Administration attorney Bruce Fein said that there will be a philosophical revolution in the courts and that Bush nominees will impose a variety of new restrictions on a woman's right to choose. The impact, he said, will be as great as if Robert Bork had been confirmed.

Mr. President, during the Clinton Administration, I was repeatedly told by the Republican leadership in the Senate that I should only recommend moderate judges to fill judicial vacancies on the Federal courts in the state of California. Otherwise, I was told, Republicans would not let them be confirmed.

President Bush should be held to the same standard. In fact, President Bush said he wanted to govern from the middle. And he fulfilled that commitment on the district court level in California when he agreed to a bipartisan committee selection process. That process has worked well, producing well-qualified mainstream nominees for eight open district court seats in California.

However, Professor McConnell's nomination does not meet the test. He does not fulfill President Bush's commitment to govern from the middle. He does not meet the requirement established by the Senate Republican leadership during the Clinton Administration that nominees be moderate. No, Mr. President, Professor McConnell is far outside the mainstream.

I again call on President Bush—as have so many in the Senate—to step out of the aisle and to work with all of us to find and nominate the moderate, consensus judges that Americans deserve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, point of clarification: On Monday night after the Shedd matter is disposed of, will the Senate be allowed to discuss the homeland security matters?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be the order.

Subsidy Rate for Small Business Loans

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to consider S. 3172, to improve the calculation of the Federal subsidy rate with respect to certain small business loans, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to support the small business subsidy rate improvement bill before the Senate today. It is not perfect, but it takes us a step in the right direction. It takes us a step in the right direction by reversing a current 60-percent cut in loan dollars available to small businesses through the Small Business Administration's flagship 7(a) loan program, and it includes a budget change mid-year with OMB's blessing, which is unprecedented. However, it does not go far enough in correcting the way the government calculates the cost and fees of the SBA’s small business loans. Specifically, the Administration would not also support our proposal to correct the errors in the subsidy rate used for the 504 development company loan program—errors that resulted from overcharging of thousands of dollars to 504 borrowers and lenders.

As so many of us in the Senate, House and White House have heard for months, the small business community supported the Senate’s plan to enact a recommendation by the General Accounting Office as part of one of the continuing resolutions. However, that provision was blocked time and again by a few Republican Congressmen on behalf of the Administration. We are now faced with leaving small businesses strapped for financing until next year or enacting this bill that would put in place something called an econometric model to calculate the subsidy rate for the 7(a) program immediately, but for 2002 only.

Our goal—that of Senator Bond, Senator Conrad, Senator Domenici, Senator Hollings, Senator Byrd, and myself—was to right years of wrong in which the government has played budget games; two largest SBA programs at the Small Business Administration. Our goal was to end a double standard in which the government cooks the books but small businesses get penalized if a comma is missing on their financial statements. Our goal was to put transparency, accuracy, and fairness into a system that has overcharged small business borrowers and private-sector lenders more than $2 billion, fees that are tantamount to a tax on small businesses.

Specifically, our goal, in technical talk, was to put in place budget systems in this fiscal year that would more accurately calculate the cost of providing loans through the SBA’s 7(a) and 504 programs, thereby maximizing appropriations to leverage an additional $6 billion in small business loans and assessing fees that are more in line with the true cost of providing the loans. In the end, it would stimulate lending by creating a greater incentive for lenders to loan in these uncertain economic times, it would leave more money in the pockets of small businesses, and it would allow almost 190,000 jobs to be created or retained.

There is a lot of concern among small business trade groups, bankers, and members of Congress about adopting an econometric model at this stage because the administration has not been forthcoming with supporting documentation and the estimated subsidy rates over the testing period have varied greatly. Without that information, it is unreasonable to expect the small business community to trust the government. They have been fighting this problem for two years, trying to settle business promises, when promises have been broken time and again. In the coming months I look forward to working with the Administration to get this information and give all of us confidence that this model is more predictive and accurate.

On the plus side, as I mentioned earlier, passing this legislation would reverse the impact on the 7(a) loan program by patching together $6 billion in lending dollars. That restoration of loan dollars is significant on a micro and macro level. In my home state of Massachusetts, small businesses stand to lose $121 million in loan dollars and almost 3,700 jobs if this bill isn’t passed. Nationwide, a loss of $6.2 billion in loans would translate into 189,000 jobs either lost or not created. In this economy, we can not afford to lose any more jobs or block job creation.

To my colleagues who have courageously fought for small businesses on this issue—from Senator Bond and Senator Conrad to Congressmen Manzullo and Congresswoman Velazquez—thank you. To the small business groups—from 7(a)’s NAGGL and 504’s NACDC to the small business coalition lead by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which included among many others, the National Association of Development Companies, Small Business United, and the American Bankers Association—I am proud to work with them. Because of your grassroots efforts, probably every member of Congress knows what a subsidy rate is and how it hurts the small business community when it is left uncorrected year after year. Last, I thank the Office of Management and Budget for reaching this agreement with our Committee, the Committee on Small Business & Entrepreneurship, the Committee on Appropriations. I know they are strongly opposed, in general, to changes to their subsidy rates, and, in particular, to any adjustment to the budget mid-year. But, small businesses are not the only source of technicalities and budget intricacies; they care about access to capital. This bill accomplishes that.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following be printed in the RECORD: a letter from the small business community; a letter to OMB from our Committee with the Committee on budget regarding this issue; and a letter from OMB Director Mitch Daniels regarding the FY2003 subsidy rates for the 7(a) loan program.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HON. JOHN KERRY, Chairman, Committee on Small Business & Entrepreneurship, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN KERRY: On behalf of the hundreds of thousands of small businesses represented by the undersigned organizations, we are writing to you to ask your support for legislation that would limit the use of outdated default rate data in calculating the subsidy rate for the Small Business Administration (SBA) 7(a) and 504 programs.

The undersigned associations believe government policies that foster and encourage robust entrepreneurial activity and small business ownership provide the economic prosperity important to the long term vitality and success of our nation. Many of our small business members indicate that one major obstacle to entry or expansion of small business is the availability and access to capital for small enterprises.

One source of funding, the SBA 7(a) and 504 guaranteed loan programs, play an important role in providing an alternative means of accessing capital for small businesses where funding has not been available through conventional lending methods. However, in a recent Government Accounting Office (GAO) report, it was determined that the use of overly conservative default rate data by the SBA resulted in overestimated defaults for 1992 through 2000 by over $2 billion for the 7(a) program alone when compared to actual loan performance.

Indeed, overly conservative default rates used in calculating the subsidy rate, according to the GAO report, has during the same period, resulted in the overestimation of the cost of the 7(a) program by nearly $1 billion. Furthermore, consistent yearly program re-estimates of this magnitude serve to undermine the intent of Congress during the appropriations process.

Even so, overly conservative default rate assumptions are still being used to calculate FY 2003 subsidy rates, resulting in diminished numbers or sizes the loans capable of being made given current program funding levels. In light of increased levels of demand, we can anticipate program short-ages that may needlessly shutout some small businesses to sorely needed funds to start or grow their businesses, thus limiting their contribution to the fragile economic recovery.

The consistent use of overly conservative default rate data, resulting in the overestimation of the subsidy rate for the 7(a) and 504 programs is contrary to the spirit and intent of the Credit Reform Act, but an affront on Congresses role in determining program funding levels in the appropriations process. As a result, we encourage Congress to take legislative action to assure the FY 2003’s subsidy rate calculation and future calculations will be limited to the use of recent default rate data that reflect the use of revised program credit standards and thus preserve the integrity of the appropriations process.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of legislation that has just been introduced to permit the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to use a recently-completed econometric model to calculate the credit subsidy rates for the 7(a) small business loan guarantee program, the flagship loan program at the Small Business Administration. This bill, once signed into law by President Bush, will allow the 7(a) loan program to meet the borrowing demands of nearly 3.9 million small businesses, which is approximately $10 billion for Fiscal Year 2003. Without this bill, the program would limit 7(a) loans to less than $5 billion for FY 2003. In addition, the bill will permit unobligated, no-year funds previously appropriated for the STAR terrorist disaster recovery loans to be used for the 7(a) loan program.

The “econometric model” is a significant reform in the way the SBA and OMB calculates the credit subsidy rate for the 7(a) loan program. The bill provides that the OMB and SBA will adopt the new econometric model effective retroactively to October 1, 2002. Developed by the SBA and OMB, the econometric model will use far more comprehensive data about individual borrowers and loans when forecasting anticipated defaults and establishing loan reserves to cover them.

Under the Credit Reform Act of 1990, the annual appropriation for the SBA was based on the cost of a federal loan guarantee. After taking into consideration the fees paid by small business borrowers and lenders under the 7(a) program, the Administration and the SBA had to re-estimate the subsidy rate for the 7(a) program. The subsidy rate has been calculated by the OMB for the most recent years: $1.76 in FY 2002; $1.55 in FY 2001; and an estimated $1.42 in FY 2003. The objective of the subsidy rate is to cover the cost of the General Fund to cover the cost of a Federal loan guarantee.

What has made the continued cost of 7(a) loans difficult for the SBA and OMB is that the loan program is one of the few that does not have an adequate subsidy rate. Critics of the credit subsidy rate for the 7(a) program have cited the use of an outdated econometric model as a major cause of the credit subsidy rate that greatly exceeds actual loan performance. The excess credit subsidy rate can result in lower loan guarantees and loans when forecasting anticipated defaults and establishing loan reserves.

The SBA testified earlier this year that it is developing an econometric model to estimate more accurately the default rate for each program. Through econometric models, the SBA calculates a subsidy rate and establishes a loan guarantee for the 7(a) loan program.

In accordance with the commitment that the Administration made one year ago, the Office of Management and Budget has just approved SBA’s 7(a) econometric subsidy model to calculate its fiscal year 2004 resource requirements. Further, in light of the fact that the econometric subsidy calculation procedure is now available, the Administration would support legislation that allows us to implement the econometric model for fiscal years 2003 and 2004. The econometric model would produce a subsidy rate of 1.04 percent rather than the 1.76 percent submitted in the FY 2003 budget. Please let us know if you need any more information.

Sincerely,

Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr.,
Director.

Mr. KERRY. Last, I want to remember Senator Wellstone, a true advocate for small business who faithfully attended our committee hearings and markups and worked hard to help the 7(a) and 504 programs not just on this issue, but every single time. His contributions were great, and I wish he were here to see this agreement pass.
Administration stated that the econometric model would not be available until FY 2004. After exhaustive negotiations with the senior White House staff, I was able to secure an agreement to accelerate their use of the model retroactively to October 1, 2002. The beginning of FY 2003. The bill before us today is designed to waive a key provision of the Federal Credit Reform Act that prohibits the Congress from changing a credit subsidy rate estimate once it has been transmitted to the Congress as part of the President's annual budget submission. This may be the first time this provision has been waived since implementation of the Act in FY 1992.

We would not be here today resolving this important matter without the tireless efforts of my colleagues in the Senate and the House of Representatives. Mr. MANZULLO, Chairman of the House Committee on Small Business, fought for this change every step of the way. The Ranking Member, Ms. VELAZQUEZ, was especially vigilant in her efforts. In the Senate, my colleague from Massachusetts and Chairman of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, John KENEN, has kept the Committee focused on resolving this issue for the past year and has insisted that we resolve the credit subsidy rate controversy for FY 2003.

Resolving the 7(a) credit subsidy rate issue is good for small businesses. It will release new capital and economic growth to grow start-up and growing small businesses. I urge each of my colleagues to vote a resounding "Aye" for this important bill.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 358 submitted earlier today by Senator BIDEN.

Mental Health Equitable Treatment Act

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to H.R. 5716, which is now at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5716) to amend the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 and the Public Health Service Act to extend the mental health benefits parity provisions for an additional year, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 5716) was read the third time and passed.

(At the request of Mr. DASCHLE, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we have passed tonight a bill a call to pass the full and meaningful mental health parity bill that Paul Wellstone and PETE DOMENICI have fought for so tirelessly. It is a day to sound the battle cry for finally ensuring that no American is discriminated against because they suffer from a mental illness.

Mental illness is a pervasive problem in our society, and too often it is a problem that is swept under the rug.
with an immense human cost. One out of five Americans will suffer from some form of mental illness this year—but only one-third of them will receive treatment.

The fight against discrimination is not new—it is as old as the Republic and as fresh as today’s headlines. All Americans deserve equality of opportunity and fundamental fairness.

Next year this fight begins anew. All of us want that Paul Wellstone is no longer with us to carry on this fight. But we intend to honor his memory and continue to fight for the cause for which he worked so hard. We will not rest until we enact legislation that ends the cruel discrimination that burdens so many Americans suffering from mental illness.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 107-21

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following treaty transmitted to the Senate on November 15, 2002, by the President of the United States:

Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage, Treaty Document No. 107-21. I further ask that the treaty be considered as having been read the first time; that it be referred, with accompanying papers, to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed; and that the President’s message be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The message of the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, for Senate advice and consent to ratification, with a declaration, the Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage, signed on September 12, 1997. This Convention was adopted by a Diplomatic Conference convened by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and was opened for signature at Vienna on September 29, 1997, during the IAEA General Conference. Then-Secretary of Energy Federico Pena signed the Convention for the United States on that date, subject to ratification. Also transmitted for the information of the Senate is the report of the Department of State concerning the Convention.

The Convention establishes a legal framework for defining, adjudicating, and compensating civil liability for nuclear damage that results from an incident in the territory of a Party, or in certain circumstances in international waters, and creates a contingent international supplementary compensation fund. This fund would be activated in the event of an incident with damage so extensive that it exhausts the compensation funds that the Party where the incident occurs is obligated under the Convention to make available.

The international supplementary fund would be made up largely of contributions from Parties that operate nuclear power plants. The improved legal certainty and uniformity provided under the Convention combined with the additional resources provided by the international supplementary fund create a balanced package appealing both to countries that operate nuclear power plants and those that do not. The Convention thus creates for the first time the potential for a nuclear civil liability convention with global application.

Prompt U.S. ratification of the Convention is important for two reasons. First, U.S. suppliers of nuclear technology now face potentially unlimited third-party civil liability arising from their activities in foreign markets because the United States is not currently party to any international nuclear civil liability convention. In addition to limiting commercial opportunities, lack of protection afforded by treaty obligations has limited the scope of participation by major U.S. companies in the provision of safety assistance to Soviet-designed nuclear power plants, increasing the risk of future incidents and their consequences.

Once widely applied, the Convention will create for suppliers of U.S. nuclear equipment and technology substantially the same legal environment in foreign markets that they now experience under the Price-Anderson Act. It will level the playing field on which they meet foreign competitors and eliminate the liability concerns that have inhibited them from providing the fullest range of safety assistance.

Second, under existing nuclear liability conventions, many potential victims outside the United States generally have no assurance that they will be adequately or promptly compensated if they are harmed by a civil nuclear incident, especially if that incident occurs outside their borders or damages their environment. The Convention, once widely accepted, will provide that assurance.

United States leadership is essential in order to bring the Convention into force soon. With the United States as an initial Party, other countries will find the Convention attractive and the number of Parties is likely to grow quickly. With leadership, the Convention could take many years to enter into force. The creation of a global civil liability regime will play a critical role in allowing nuclear power to achieve its full potential in the diverse and environmentally responsible world energy structure we need to build in the coming decades.

The Convention is consistent with the primary existing U.S. statute governing nuclear civil liability, the Price-Anderson Act of 1957. Adoption of the additional fund would require virtually no substantive changes in that Act. Moreover, under legislation that is being submitted separately to implement the Convention, the U.S. contingent liability to contribute to the international supplementary fund would be completely covered, either by funds generated under the Price-Anderson Act in the event of an accident covered by both that Act and the Convention, or by funds contributed to a retrospective pool by U.S. suppliers of nuclear equipment and technology in the event of an accident covered by the Convention but falling outside the Price-Anderson system. In either case, U.S. taxpayers would not have to bear the burden of the U.S. contribution to the international supplementary fund.

The Convention allows nations that are party to existing nuclear liability conventions to join the new global regime easily, without giving up their participation in those conventions. It also permits nations that do not belong to an existing convention to join the new regime easily and rapidly. The United States in particular benefits from a grandfather clause that allows it to incorporate the Convention without being required to change certain aspects of the Price-Anderson system that would otherwise be inconsistent with its requirements.

The Convention, without relying on taxpayer funds, will increase the compensation available to potential victims of a civil nuclear incident, strengthen the position of U.S. exporters of nuclear equipment and technology, and permit us to provide safety assistance to the world’s least-safe reactors more effectively.

I urge the Senate to act expeditiously in giving its advice and consent to ratification of the Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage, with a declaration as set forth in the accompanying report of the Department of State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The bill (S. 2799), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

ENHANCING THE MANAGEMENT AND PROMOTION OF ELECTRONIC GOVERNMENT SERVICES AND PROCESSES

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 2458, which is now at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is now at the desk.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2458) to enhance the management and promotion of electronic Government services and processes by establishing a Federal Chief Information Officer within the Office of Management and Budget, and by establishing a broad framework of measures that require using Internet-based information technology to enhance citizen access to Government information and services, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to applaud passage by the House today of the E-Government Act of 2002. The E-Government Act is strong, bipartisan legislation that will help bring the Federal Government into the electronic age by improving the access of all citizens to the government information and services they rely on every day for work and personal lives.

The bill that we are passing today, H.R. 2458, represents a consensus between Democrats and Republicans in the Senate and the House, and with the administration. It is the product of more than a year of negotiations and cooperation between Senators FRED THOMPSON, CONRAD BURNS and me, and...
Congressmen Tom Davis, Jim Turner, Dan Burton, and Henry Waxman. It is also the result of important input from a range of constituencies who support electronic government. This bill has won the support of the IT industry, of the public access community, of privacy advocates, and of non-profit groups interested in good government. There are many others who have contributed to the legislation, too many to name here. The bill demonstrates what can happen when we put aside partisan interests and work together to improve the performance of our Government.

I introduced the E-Government Act, S. 803, on May 1, 2001, with Senator Burns as chief cosponsor, and many original co-sponsors from both parties. This March after months of negotiations with the White House and with the help of my friend Senator Thomson, an amended version of the bill was reported out of the Governmental Affairs Committee. The committee filed Report No. 107-174 with the bill; this report provides important explanations and background on key concepts. The legislation should be referred to as relevant legislative history. The E-Government Act first passed the Senate on June 27 of this year. That fall, the House Government Reform Committee took up H.R. 2458, an amended version of S. 803 that had been introduced by Rep. Jim Turner on July 11, 2001. The House Government Reform Committee incorporated virtually all of the amended S. 803. It also expanded upon several provisions of the new one, and all of these initiatives that had been working on for some time by Congressman Davis, Turner, Burton and Waxman. The revised E-government legislation was passed by the House by unanimous consent early this morning.

In less than a decade the tremendous growth of the Internet has transformed the way industry and the public conduct their business and gain access to services and information. This, in turn, has spawned a growing public expectation that government will make use of new information technologies, and a growing support for electronic government. Information technology, and the Internet in particular, provide a unique opportunity to re-package government information and services, so they are offered to the public according to the needs of individual customers. They can also facilitate interagency cooperation, requiring a major reorganization of government agencies. Ultimately, e-government can transform the way government operates, essentially effecting a "virtual" reengineering of government. This paradigm shift is vital to the performance of our government. The E-Government Act of 2002 will facilitate this transformation to a government organized more appropriately according to the needs of the public. The bill requires agencies to link their e-government initiatives to key customers and partners. It provides a more effective mechanism for coordinating efforts and allows the public to interact with the government in more convenient ways. The E-Government Act will also help agencies make use of electronic government in order to improve efficiency and reduce costs. EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO CONGRESSMAN SONNY CALLAHAN

HON. TERRY EVERETT
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, after nine terms and 18 years in this chamber, Congressman SONNY CALLAHAN of Alabama’s First District is saying goodbye to this institution and will retire to life along the Dog River on the beautiful Alabama Gulf Coast.

SONNY certainly deserves a chance to enjoy life with his family, but I don’t mind telling you that I will miss him. When I came to Washington ten years ago, I looked to SONNY for guidance as I sought to run my office and seek committee assignments. I leaned on him for advice and his chairmanship of the House Appropriations Energy and Water Subcommittee has been beneficial to our state.

SONNY’s reputation for fairness to all is respected and admired on both sides of the aisle and his garnered him plenty of friends of all political stripes. A good example of this was the close friendship he had with the late Rep. Joe Moakley. Politically, they were a world apart, but you could not find two better friends and personally enjoyed their company at dinner on many an evening after we concluded legislative business.

For those of us in the Alabama delegation, SONNY has been an invaluable ally in obtaining vital federal project funding for our districts. His chairmanship of the House Appropriations Energy and Water Subcommittee has been beneficial to our state.

I personally owe him a debt of gratitude for his exemplary service as a civil servant serves as a true example to the family and friends of James (Jim) C. Benfield, who passed away on November 3, 2002. I would ask for unanimous consent that his obituary appearing in the Washington Post on November 2, 2002. I would ask for unanimous consent that his obituary appearing in the Washington Post on November 3 be included in the RECORD.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

THANKING MY STAFF

HON. GEORGE W. GEKAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, as I leave the Congress for the last time, I want to especially thank the many staff who have worked so hard for me over these last 20 years that I have been privileged to serve the people of the 17th District of Pennsylvania. But I want to especially thank my chief of staff, Allan Cagnoli. Allan has worked his entire career for the people of central Pennsylvania. Low pay, long hours, incredible stress and responsibilities are the hallmark burdens of all legislative staff. But Allan Cagnoli was and is one of the best. He kept my Washington, DC, and district staff and offices running smoothly and efficiently, even under the most difficult of times. Whether it was serving in the minority party in the 1980s, dealing with the Clinton Impeachment in which I was a House Manager, or spending the last 5 years working for passage of my bankruptcy reform legislation or any of the several hundred other measures I introduced or projects I undertook, Allan was there. He was there through thick and thin. And we all know how thin it can get around here.

For the past 25 years I and the people of central Pennsylvania and the Nation have been lucky to have a trusted, competent, and intelligent aide like Allan Cagnoli. Regardless of what he does in the future, be it to remain here in Washington, DC, to further the cause of good government and a better America, or return to his home in Hershey, PA, to help where it is needed, I will always treasure and thank him and all my staff, both current and past, for their service to me and to our great country.

THANKING MY STAFF

Whether it was serving in the minority party in the 1980s, dealing with the Clinton Impeachment in which I was a House Manager, or spending the last 5 years working for passage of my bankruptcy reform legislation or any of the several hundred other measures I introduced or projects I undertook, Allan was there. He was there through thick and thin. And we all know how thin it can get around here.

For the past 25 years I and the people of central Pennsylvania and the Nation have been lucky to have a trusted, competent, and intelligent aide like Allan Cagnoli. Regardless of what he does in the future, be it to remain here in Washington, DC, to further the cause of good government and a better America, or return to his home in Hershey, PA, to help where it is needed, I will always treasure and thank him and all my staff, both current and past, for their service to me and to our great country.

TRIBUTE TO CONGRESSMAN SONNY CALLAHAN

HON. TERRY EVERETT
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, after nine terms and 18 years in this chamber, Congressman SONNY CALLAHAN of Alabama’s First District is saying goodbye to this institution and will retire to life along the Dog River on the beautiful Alabama Gulf Coast.

SONNY certainly deserves a chance to enjoy life with his family, but I don’t mind telling you that I will miss him. When I came to Washington ten years ago, I looked to SONNY for guidance as I sought to run my office and seek committee assignments. I leaned on him for advice and his chairmanship of the House Appropriations Energy and Water Subcommittee has been beneficial to our state.

SONNY’s reputation for fairness to all is respected and admired on both sides of the aisle and his garnered him plenty of friends of all political stripes. A good example of this was the close friendship he had with the late Rep. Joe Moakley. Politically, they were a world apart, but you could not find two better friends and personally enjoyed their company at dinner on many an evening after we concluded legislative business.

For those of us in the Alabama delegation, SONNY has been an invaluable ally in obtaining vital federal project funding for our districts. His chairmanship of the House Appropriations Energy and Water Subcommittee has been beneficial to our state.

I personally owe him a debt of gratitude for his exemplary service as a civil servant serves as a true example to the family and friends of James (Jim) C. Benfield, who passed away on November 3, 2002. I would ask for unanimous consent that his obituary appearing in the Washington Post on November 3 be included in the RECORD.

For over 12 years, I have worked closely with Jim on an issue that I have spearheaded, and I have been consistently impressed with his selfless and tireless advocacy. His ability to organize diverse grassroots coalitions and deal honestly with me and my colleagues impressed me beyond words. His efforts and ethics will be remembered and we will long recognize the trails he blazed on behalf of his clients, his community, and the underprivileged that he served in his spare time.

I have had a picture that Jim took hanging in my office for many years. It is a photo of the Statute of Freedom being lifted from the Capitol dome as that she could be refurbished. What an appropriate subject. Jim loved and appreciated the institution she oversaw. He strived to see issues and seek solutions from an elevated viewpoint like she does. Moreover, he embraced everyone like she symbolically does.

I will miss my friend Jim. Please join me in expressing the condolences of the House to his family.

JAMES C. BENFIELD, 59; ORGANIZER, ACTIVIST

By Richard Pearson

James C. Benfield, 59, a lobbyist since about 1980 who was chief financial officer and a partner at Bracy Tucker Brown, the Washington legal and public affairs consulting concern, died of a brain tumor Nov. 2 at his home in Takoma Park.

Mr. Benfield, an authority on grass-roots organizing and advocacy, had corporate clients and was often involved in consumer issues, as well as causes including coinage, daylight savings time reform and help for the poor.

He had done work for such clients as the Continental Group, the Clorox Co. and McDonald's. But he made headlines locally for his advocacy efforts, often as a volunteer, managing the Daylight Savings Time Coalition, which he founded, and directing the Coin Coalition and the Campaign for Home Energy Assistance.

Mr. Benfield, who joined what became Bracy Tucker in 1980, was a master at organizing coalitions. In his successful efforts to extend daylight savings time in April, he trumpeted the belief that daylight savings, with its longer hours of afternoon daylight, extended hours of outdoor activity. This helped to support the coalition representing amateur softball, barbecue makers, convenience stores, service station dealers, chain restaurants and sporting goods.

His efforts to reform coinage featured drives to replace the dollar bill with a dollar coin, which he pointed out would save the government more than $400 million annually because coins last longer than bills. It helped lead to the Sacagawea dollar coin. The effort included a board for that campaign including representatives of the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

Another of his great efforts was the Home Energy Assistance Campaign he started in 1989. It now helps 4.5 million households and has secured annual congressional appropriations of $2 billion. His partners in this effort included the American Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

Over the years, Mr. Benfield explained his views on these issues on ABC's "Good Morning America," CNN, National Public Radio. He wrote for The Washington Post, Chicago Tribune and Des Moines Register. He also lectured at Harvard University and conducted workshops for the Energy Department.

Mr. Benfield, who was born in Philadelphia, was a 1965 economics graduate of Drake University in Des Moines. He was an Army photographer in South Korea in 1967 and 1968. He came to the Washington area in the 1970s. Before becoming a professional lobbyist, he held a variety of jobs.

In fact, the collection of jobs he held led to a 1977 profile in The Post. The jobs included public relations director of the National Symphony Orchestra, freelance photographer, and apartment manager and party-time janitor. He also had managed a local chamber music group, had played classical guitar at restaurants and had given guitar lessons.

He assisted the homeless, both with contributions and helping to obtain government aid and assistance, as a volunteer. He worked with area churches to raise corporate aid for the homeless. The Post wrote about his efforts to raise funds for a sick street musician and after his eventual death, to place a plaque on the wall where he most often performed.

His neighbors remembered him as the guy who hosted community Fourth of July picnics to furl the firing of a cannon and pruning trees along railroad rights of way. He also improved a muddy shortcut that commuters took to the local Metro by laying a bed of garbage can lid-size stones. He also was known for always giving a hand, forever taking people into his home who had suffered a tragedy.

Mr. Benfield's first marriage ended in divorce. Survivors include his wife of 17 years, Susan Storing Benfield, and two children, Bracy Benfield and Susan Storing Benfield, all of Takoma Park; his mother, Corinne Benfield of Lombard, Ill.; and a sister.

CONVERSION BAN IN INDIA SHOWS IT IS NOT A DEMOCRACY

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, the party that controls the national government in India, the BJP, has enacted a ban on religious conversion in the state of Tamil Nadu, a state which it controls. The ban also applies to the entire country.

The bill prohibits anyone from converting to any religion except Hinduism. Anyone who converts to a religion other than Hinduism can be imprisoned and can face a heavy fine. If officially targets conversions "by force, allurement or fraudulent means," it also prohibits all conversions "by allurement," that is, by persuasion presented by another person.

Effectively, the new law prevents all conversions, except conversions to Hinduism. This is part of the fundamentalist Hindu nationalists' drive for a Hindu-dominated culture. "Even if one converts of one's own free will, those involved in the conversion can be punished on the grounds that it's a forced conversion," said former Tamil Nadu Chief Minister M. Karunanidhi. Yet the BJP and other groups under the umbrella of its parent organization, the RSS, have been forcibly converting people to Hinduism after they have converted to other religions of their own free will.

According to the Washington Times of November 7, those who lead the Tamils of southern India, planning to have 25,000 of its members convert to Buddhism on December 6 if this unjustified law is not repealed by then. Dalits, or "Untouchables," are the lowest caste in Hinduism and their continuing oppression is essential to the preservation of the repressive Hindu social order.

It is clear once again that there is no religious freedom in India. India's claims to be democratic are a lie if people cannot freely choose their religions. This is more evidence that India is not the democracy it claims to be. America must speak up for the rights of all people in South Asia by cutting off our aid and trade to India, by imposing the sanctions the law mandates for violators of religious freedom, and by declaring openly our support for self-determination. Why can't the country that proudly claims to be the world's largest democracy settle its minority issues through a free and fair vote? That is the way that democratic countries do it, and it is the way world powers do it. As long as India refuses to do it, it will not be a member of either category.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to place the article referred to before into the RECORD at this time for additional information about the conversion ban.

A SAWDUST TRAIL FOR LOW-CASTE HINDUS?

(By Shailak Azizur Rahman)

NEW DELHI—Low-caste Hindus in the southern Indian state of Tamil Nadu are struggling to keep their faith, claims to embraced Christianity, Buddhism, or Islam are threatened by a new law that outlaws religious conversion.

A bill passed into law by the state legislature last month penalizes those who convert to a religion other than Hinduism with imprisonment and a hefty fine.

While religious minorities in Tamil Nadu face a challenge to keep their faith, many Hindus from so-called "untouchable castes," known as Dalits, are threatening to publicly defy the new law.

One group of Dalit Hindus in the state capital, Chennai, said that a group of 10,000 will convert to Buddhism on Dec. 6 if the law is not revoked.

Another group, known as the Dalit Panthers of India (DPI), pledged that 25,000 of its members would become Christians to protest what they see as a new "anti-caste decree."

"The upper class has been torturing the Dalits for centuries, and now, by passing the bill, the government has decided to shake us up in a variety where even basic democratic rights," said one Dalit activist, who identified himself by the Christian name Emmanuel. On Oct. 31, Tamil Nadu Governor K. R. Narayanan signed the bill into law.

“an assault as much on civil rights as on human dignity.”

John Daya, secretary-general of the Christian Council in New Delhi, said: “In fact, the only inducements by fraud and fear are those being carried out by [Hindu organizations] in the tribal belt, where indigenous tribes are being forced to become Hindus.”

Mushtaq Ahmad, aacher, “How can conversions be prevented if an individual is attracted to another religion because of his or her faith If Force is never used to convert one to Islam because it is against the basic tenets of [Islam],” said Maolana Siddiquullah Chowdhury, general secretary of the Jamate Ulema in Calcutta.

He added that low-caste Hindus converted to Islam simply to “escape discrimination and ill-treatment” and not under any coercion.

A TRIBUTE TO JOHN LAFALCE

HON. BARNEY FRANK

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, for the past several years, I have had the privilege of working under the leadership of our colleague from New York (Mr. LAFALCE) in his role as Senior Democrat on the Committee on Financial Services (as it is now officially called, after our Republican colleagues gave a hint of their political preferences by excising from the Committee’s title any reference to cities, urban affairs or housing).

In his leadership of the minority on this important committee, Mr. LAFALCE has been a compassionate, creative, forceful advocate of policies that combined support for a strong free market with concern for fairness for consumers and social justice for people with low incomes. No opposition was strong enough to deter him from fighting for an America that was both prosperous and fair, and he helped people understand that these goals are mutually supportive, not exclusive.

Personally, I have been the beneficiary of his ability to lead in a cooperative spirit, and to perform both his partisan and bipartisan roles with equal effectiveness. That is, when possible, he worked constructively with the majority party to improve legislation, when necessary he led the minority in an effective and cohesive way.

The financial community, the House, and I personally will miss him. As an indication of this, I ask that the well-merited tribute contained in a recent editorial from the official publication of America’s Community Bankers be printed here. And, I thank America’s Community Bankers for this gracious—and entirely accurate—summoning of John LAFALCE’s work.

THE LAFALCE LEGACY: THREE DECADES OF LEADERSHIP FOR BANKS

Congressman John J. LaFalce (D-N.Y.), who represented western New York’s 29th Congressional District since he was elected to Congress in 1974, will retire at the end of the current Congress. His departure represents the end of an era.

Congressman LaFalce has been a good friend of the banking industry. In his years of service, from the U.S. Army Adjutant General Corps, to the New York State Senate and to the House of Representatives, John LaFalce personified the best in public service.

He listened to those on all sides of an issue, taking out his position and, as a pragmatist, using his skills as a politician to craft compromises on both sides of the aisle to move necessary banking and financial services legislation.

In his leadership role as the ranking Democrat on the House Financial Services Committee, John LaFalce exercised extraordinary influence over the outcome of financial services and housing legislation. He contributed greatly to the historic Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act by first introducing his own bipartisan bill and then by helping to craft the final product. In his long career, Rep. LaFalce was involved in all of the major legislative initiatives on banking and financial services.

John LaFalce is a consumer and community advocate, and a staunch defender of the Community Reinvestment Act and financial privacy. And yet bankers also found him to be a champion of balance.

As chairman of the House Small Business Committee, John LaFalce paid special attention to the needs of women who are small business leaders and entrepreneurs. He wrote the Women’s Business Ownership Act, which improves access to credit for women.

Rep. LaFalce’s career was aptly summarized in a citation by Niagara University when it awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. It read, in part, “Three qualities emerge as best describing the man: honesty, energy and conviction.”

These qualities, along with his integrity, leadership, and good humor, will be missed in the halls of Congress. John LaFalce leaves behind a legacy of outstanding achievement. America’s Community Bankers extends its best wishes for the future.

POLICE AGAIN ENTER GOLDEN TEMPLE COMPLEX

HON. DAN BURTON

OF INDIAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, in June 1984, Indian police entered Golden Temple, the most sacred Sikh shrine, and other Sikh Gurudwaras around Punjab, killing 20,000 people. As Sant Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale said, this helped lay the foundation of Khalistan, the Sikh homeland that declared its independence in 1987. Now the police have again invaded the Golden Temple complex on the pretext of searching the complex in connection with the upcoming elections for the Shiromani Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee (SGPC), which oversees all the Gurudwaras in India.

The police were accompanied by Indian political officials, including the Chemicals and Fertilizers Minister, Sukhdev Singh Dhindsa. People of all religions and from all over the world have welcomed to worship at the Golden Temple. Now even members of the SGPC may well be blocked from entering it. Some SGPC workers had a verbal altercation with two of the invading police officials, according to the Tribune newspaper out of Chandigarh. The article reports that SGPC members have already had to sneak into the Golden Temple complex.

Mr. Speaker, this is further proof that there is no religious freedom in “the world’s largest democracy.” India has already been added to our government’s list of countries that violate religious freedom. Now sanctions should be implemented to help ensure real religious liberty in India.

This is just the latest chapter in a long history of repression of Sikhs by India. Over a quarter of a million Sikhs have been murdered since 1984. More than 52,000 are being held as political prisoners, according to a report by the Movement Against State Repression. Another 50,000 have simply been made to “disappear.” The police picked up 50,000 Sikh youth, tortured them, murdered them, declared them “underground,” incarcerated them, and refused to hand the remains over to the families. Christians, Muslims, Dalits, and other minorities have seen similar atrocities committed against them, yet the world treats India as a respectable, democratic country.

Mr. Speaker, we must stop our aid to India now. We must declare our support for self-determination for the Sikhs of Khalistan, for predominantly Christian Nagaland, for Kashmir, for everyone in South Asia. The cornerstone of democracy is the right to self-determination.

I would like to place the Tribune article on the police invasion of the Golden Temple complex into the RECORD at this time. I think my colleagues will find it informative.

From the Tribune (Chandigarh), Nov. 11, 2002

POLICE ENTERS GOLDEN TEMPLE COMPLEX

(By Prabhjot Singh)

CHANDIGARH, Nov. 10.—Less than 24 hours before the scheduled five-member team led by union minister Sahib Singh Verma, could fly into the Holy City of Amritsar to oversee the conduct of next Tuesday’s annual election to the SGPC executive council, uniformed policemen in plain clothes entered the Golden Temple complex on the pretext of searching all three holy shrines (inns) there.

Accompanying the team would be not only Union Chemicals and Fertilisers Minister, Sukhdev Singh Dhindsa, who is also a SAD General Secretary, but also 100 SGPC members owing allegiance to SAD chief Parkash Singh Badal.

Though preventive arrests continued throughout the stated SGPC election, the temple complex was put under police siege with the deployment of hundreds of anti-riot policemen in anti-riot gear, some of the Akali leader’s followers, including former minister Kanwaljit Singh managed to sneak into the sanctum sanctorum.

Talking to The Tribune over the telephone, Mr Sukhdev Singh Dhindsa said the names of four NDA observers—Mr Sahib Singh Verma, Mr Thomas (MP, Samata), Mrs D’Souza (MP, Samata), and Mrs Anita Arya (MP, BJP)—have already been cleared, the Union Civil Aviation Minister, Mr Shah Nawaz, is also expected to be a part of the special NDA team to oversee the SGPC elections. The observers and the SGPC members would take a chartered flight from New Delhi to Amritsar tomorrow afternoon.

Mr Dhindsa further said that on the basis of the complaint lodged by the Shiromani Akali Dal with the Union Home Minister yesterday, the Union Home Secretary today called Punjab Chief Secretary Y.S. Ratra on the telephone and expressed his “strong dis-pleasure” over “politicalisation of the bu-reaucracy.”

The Chief Secretary reportedly assured the Union Home Secretary that no SGPC member would be stopped from reaching the Golden Temple complex for attending the elections.

Efforts would be made to facilitate those lodged in jails in one case or the other to attend and vote in the elections.
Meanwhile, reports indicate that so far the Punjab police has taken 1,222 Akali workers into custody. Of these 394 belong to Shiromani Akali Dal, 234 to Sarb Hind Shiromani Akali Dal (Badal) and 230 to Shiromani Akali Dal (Amritsar). Of the 394, 375 individuals were arrested in Amritsar, 19 in Patiala and 10 in Ludhiana.

The police said that the raids were carried out on the basis of warrants issued by the District Magistrate but the remaining three belong to the Mehta faction of the AISSP. Of the 394 arrested, 385 are accused of the Badal men were made in Sangrur (73), followed by Majitha (64), Tarn Taran (60) and Patiala (62). Rashmi Talwar and Ashok Sethi in their reports from Amritsar said the police in a pre-dawn swoop entered the Golden Temple complex on the pretext of searching all three serais—Guru Nanak Niwas, Guru Hargobind Niwas and Mata Ganga Niwas. The police also entered the complex on the basis of a report that there was an attempt to enter the Golden Temple complex.

When the police arrived to get the three serais vacated to ensure implementation of the orders, among those evicted were 50 schoolchildren in the age group of six to eight years from Lucknow. The police parties which were headed by Mr Jagdish Khera and Mr R.S. Ghumman, both DSPs, had a verbal altercation with the SGPC workers who resisted the attempts of the raiding party to get the serais vacated. Mr Harbant Singh Shergill, Secretary to SGPC, and Mr M.S. Wadhwa, SGPC, were also in the party.

Talking to The Tribune over the cellphone, Capt Kanwaljit Singh said that that action of the police was in violation of the sanctity of the Golden Temple complex. He said that the police had entered the complex illegally and the SGPC was going to protest.

The SGPC Chief, Prof Kirpal Singh Badungar, who had to rush to Amritsar from Bathinda police entry into the Golden Temple complex, assailed the government action maintaining that it was a direct attack on the most sacred Sikh shrine and the Congress Government was bent upon disturbing communal peace and harmony.

The police officials managed to get computer printouts of the names and addresses of 2,000 devotees staying in the serais.

Hundred of policemen in top anti-riot gear laid a siege to the Golden Temple complex. The mounted police has also been deployed around the complex.

He said a number of SGPC members and dal workers had already managed to sneak into the complex.

Professor Badungar told newsmen that in case the police entered Tejinder Singh Samundari Hall on the day of the election meeting, the repercussions would be “draconian.”

He said the government was gripped by a “fear psychosis” and its nervousness was evident from the desperate steps it was taking. He said that national and international media would be permitted to cover the executive committee elections as he disapproved of any NDA observers to oversee the elections. No other SGPC employee would be allowed inside the hall.

The SGPC chief said that non-bailable warrants against SGPC members would be issued. Mr Jagdish Khera by a Kapurthala court was an indication of the desperation of the state government.

Meanwhile, Mr Sukhdev Singh Bhrar, General Secretary, SHSAD supported the orders issued by the District Magistrate but held that these orders should be applicable in case of the presence of arms but not the BGNs.

The SHSAD was ready for a truce with Mr. Parkash Singh Badal provided he agreed to apologize at Akal Takht and accepted Bhai Ranjit Singh as Jathedar of Akal Takht. He claimed that 50 SGPC members were strongly behind the SHSAD. Senior and close aide of Mr. Parkash Singh Badal, Capt Kanwaljit Singh claimed that the SAD has formulated its secret strategy to bring all 120 SGPC members to Tegintera Hall on November 12 to elect the President and the executive committee. Talking to newsmen this evening at Bhai Gurdas Hall after managing to enter the city in disguise. He said the reign of terror unleashed by the Amarder Singh government on Akali leaders and workers were trampling upon their democratic rights.

Talking to The Tribune over the cellphone, Capt Kanwaljit Singh Badal, along with all 120 members would land at Rajasansi Airport tomorrow for the SGPC general house election meeting. Party leaders and workers would ensure that all SGPC members manage to enter the Golden Temple complex on that day.

He claimed that the ex-partes disqualification of SGPC members by the SGJC was likely to be set aside by the Punjab and Haryana High Court tomorrow. He said that the SGPC would oppose the SGPC members’ disqualification by the SGJC. The SGPC chief maintained that the national and international media would be permitted to cover the event.

Americans. BEST is the partnership recommended by the congressional commission. Since incorporating one year ago, BEST has assembled an extraordinary array of talent, talent that’s working across the whole continuum of workforce development, pre K-12, higher education in the workforce. These panels will report their findings and recommendations next spring. The benchmarks they identify and the insights they develop into what works, why it works, under what conditions it works, is going to be of great value to Congress and the nation. BEST’s national assessment will provide a foundation for action both at the national and local levels in communities across the country. Now the purpose of today’s progress report is to let policymakers know how the work of BEST is going; and first, we want to give you a sense of the framing of a national action agenda to meet the challenge of under-representations, and then we’re going to hear from leaders involved in BEST’s assessments of the workplace, higher education and pre K-12. The progress report will wrap up with a discussion of BEST’s plans to spur action in the field of early childhood engagement. I believe it is of the utmost importance that we provide the vision and leadership of the community to meet this challenge.

TESTIMONY OF SHIRLEY JACKSON, PRESIDENT, RENSSELAER POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE AS READ IN HER ABSENCE BY ANNE PETERSEN, VICE PRESIDENT, THE KELLOGG FOUNDATION

PETERSEN: Thank you. It’s a great privilege this morning to be stepping in for Dr. Shirley Jackson. When Dr. Jackson was chair of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, she instituted policies for that agency that were based on the assessment of risk to the nation’s nuclear power plants and vulnerability risk. This is termed probabilistic risk assessment. Looking squarely at the vulnerability to risk determines clearly what action must be taken to reduce the risk of a particular threat. This is what BEST is doing. The work that BEST has done this past year has revealed that the United States faces serious risk of losing its economic preeminence, security, and its well-being as a nation without peer. That risk is embedded in the fact that while there are many for scientific and engineering graduates of underrepresented groups, and other technologically skilled workers, the United States is simply not producing enough of them. That leaves the United States vulnerable to scientists and engineers from other nations, a situation that bears its own inherent risk and curtailments as we know. Most of the numbers are included in the BEST paper, “The Quiet Crisis” which we present to you today, and I understand you have the series of charts as well.* *

TESTIMONY OF RITA COLWELL, DIRECTOR, NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION

COLWELL: Thank you. It is an honor to be part of today’s panel on building the U.S. science, engineering and technology workforce for the 21st century. The United States has become increasingly diverse in recent decades and will move steadily in the direction of greater diversity and a corresponding increase in human resources. can be done about it? and, who should do it? Our Panel's work addresses these questions from the perspective of the workplace. Let me start by stating the two core objectives of the Panel. Number one, we are to identify and distill the success factors and best practices that create a more inclusive workplace spanning the private sector, including industry and as well, as government. This distillation will form the foundational asset base that can be accessed by BEST's proposed test-bed community programs as they move beyond number two, we are to develop an action agenda that moves the country forward toward the adoption of these proven practices. While the direction of the panel is not yet complete, I can report on some of our initial findings on success factors and provide some of our early thinking as we entertain a two-pronged agenda to: (1) Leaders must come from the top echelons of the organization. Managers must "walk the talk." An institution must have highly visible, fully involved, visionary leaders in order to make valuing diversity efforts a success. (2) Accountability for personal and organizational behavior must exist. A system must be in place that encourages these values and that means diversity performance must be linked to compensation and advancement. (3) Valuing diversity must be perceived as a critical part to the success of the organization i.e., a bundled strategy. (4) Employee ownership: this issue must not only raise awareness, but more importantly, develop skills needed to work in and manage a multicultural organization. (5) Effective mentoring programs for women and underrepresented minorities must be developed and implemented ***

TESTIMONY OF SHIRLEY MALCOM, HEAD, EDUCATION DIRECTORATE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE

MALCOM: When President Bush and the nation's governors met in Charlottesville in 1989, they established ambitious national education goals. These goals were affirmed and expanded upon by the Congress of the United States and included that we would raise achievement levels in all academic fields and, even more ambitiously, that we would be first in the world in mathematics and science achievement by the year 2000. When in 1995, the results were announced from the Third International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS), there was great concern as the mathematics and science achievement of U.S. students when compared with the performance of students from other countries in the world. The results of TIMSS showed U.S. fourth grade students comparing quite favorably in their performance on tests of science, both scoring far above average and among the top tier of countries. Performance by fourth graders in mathematics was about at the average compared with other countries involved in TIMSS. When fourth grade students were tested in 1990, their performance had fallen to the average levels in science and slipped in mathematics as well. The performance of 12th graders in science and math slipped further down the bottom. This underperformance by U.S. students was true even for our brightest and best performing students, such as those taking advanced placement courses in physics. The current structures provide neither equal chances nor a level playing field, and it is these circumstances that we must remedy if we are to maximally utilize the talents of all our students. Our efforts include: Vigorous support for systemic reform efforts to improve the quality of the curriculum, teaching and support within our schools, science and math achievement disparities. Yet, we have key imperatives: for example, in boosting female and minority enrollment in Calculus and Advanced Placement Science courses. A little over three years ago I founded an organization known as the Minority Student Achievement Network. We are 15 urban-suburban districts devoted to discovering, developing and implementing strategies to eliminate the achievement gap. Our strategies include conferences where we learn directly from students and teachers, and research where teachers are directly engaged in studies with university professors. My professional experience has revealed the extensive gap in education between research and practice. Quite frankly, it is the rare aspect of our reality. When districts or schools are able to successfully bridge that gap. Practitioners generally receive very little training in the interpretation or use of research findings. In fact, research methodology that meets the highest standards of reliability and validity are quite often written in language that is unfamiliar to the teacher. TESTIMONY OF ALLAN ALSON, SUPERINTENDENT, EVANSTON TOWNSHIP HIGH SCHOOL

ALSON: I am in my eleventh year as superintendent of Evanston Township High School in Evanston, Illinois. This large comprehensive high school with a national reputation for excellence has 3200 students and is quite diversified, socio-economically, sexually and linguistically. Student achievement, despite impressive gains, continues to reveal racial and class achievement disparities. Yet, we have significant initiatives, in boosting female and minority enrollment in Calculus and Advanced Placement Science courses. A little over three years ago I founded an organization known as the Minority Student Achievement Network. We are 15 urban-suburban districts devoted to discovering, developing and implementing strategies to eliminate the achievement gap. TESTIMONY OF EUGENE GARCIA, PROFESSOR, ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

GARCIA: Clearly, in this endeavor, we know the pathway to science and technology of the future begins in the Pre K-12 sector, if not earlier. As our efforts look very carefully at the beginning pathway or the beginning steps into science, technology and mathematics. Our students depend heavily on the public school system for alternatives to move forward to those futures that we believe should be available to all children in this country. BEST has a particularity in which we open the doors to the world of science, technology and mathematics for all children. First, the membership of BEST feels that we need to understand what needs to be done or, what is the changing nature of work? It is important to note that while we are entertained a two-pronged agenda to: (1) Leaders must come from the top echelons of the organization. Managers must "walk the talk." TESTIMONY OF RAYMOND, RAY, PROFESSOR, UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

RAYMAN: To build upon the rationale for diversity presented by my honored colleagues Dan Arvizu, and Dr. Shirley Jackson I will add that the crisis we are facing in our nation's science and technology workplaces. We face a work world in the midst of an enormous change. Nothing is the same as it was 20 years ago and more dramatic changes are anticipated over the coming decades. We face a crisis on three dimensions: Where will the new science jobs be? Who will fill the jobs? How will the work get done or, what is the changing nature of work? It is important to note that while we are entertaining a two-pronged agenda to: (1) Leaders must come from the top echelons of the organization. Managers must "walk the talk." TESTIMONY OF CLAIBORNE SMITH, PRESIDENT, DELAWARE FOUNDATION FOR SCIENCE AND MATH EDUCATION

SMITH: I believe business/industry/government and educational institutions of this country must take the lead in defining the strategies necessary to maintain our leadership position in the world. From the intentions of our workforce, where we are engaging a two-pronged agenda to: Drive change within organizations and to drive change externally among industry, academia, and government. Our recommendations are: (1) Leaders must come from the top echelons of the organization. Managers must "walk the talk." An institution must have highly visible, fully involved, visionary leaders in order to make valuing diversity efforts a success. to 10 outstanding leaders committed to community improvement.

Since 1964, Missourians who have dedicated their lives to community improvement have received acclaim through the MCB Program. This initiative, which is meant to spur economic growth and improve quality of life, has worked to strengthen communities with strengths that often go unnoticed.

Pat Scott, through her tireless community efforts, continues to make her friends, family and state very proud. I am certain that my colleagues will join me in wishing Pat all the best.

HONORING CONGRESSMAN BOB CLEMENT

HON. JOHN S. TANNER OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize one of the outstanding statesman and my friend, Congressman Bob Clement. I have known Bob for more than 30 years, having gone to school with him at the University of Tennessee.

He served his country with distinction in the United States Army and the Tennessee Air National Guard. As a young man, he also served as president of Cumberland University and TVA board director before being elected to represent Tennesseans as a member of the United States Congress.

Bob is a man of energy, intelligence and vision. I always have been certain that as he prepares to leave the House of Representatives, Bob will continue to serve his state and nation in a constructive capacity.

THE LEGACY OF MARLA BENNETT

HON. BOB FILNER
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, in a region that has been racked with violence and acts of terror, the vicious bombing that took place on July 31, 2002 at Hebrew University stands out as a particularly heinous crime. This is a university that prides itself on its diversity, especially its ability to integrate students and faculty regardless of their ethnic or religious background. It is the oldest university in Israel and has established itself as one of the outstanding universities in the world, one that has gained renown for the quality of its students, teachers and researchers.

I feel compelled to comment on this attack for many reasons, not the least of which is that it hit my community, my Congressional district and my friends so personally. The bomb that detonated in Hebrew University’s Frank Sinatra International Student Center cafeteria killed nine young people, including five Americans. Over eighty were injured. Marla Bennett, of San Diego, California, was one of the Americans killed in this senseless assault. Marla was only 24 when her life was taken. She had graduated in 2000 at the top of her class with a B.A. in Political Science from the University of California at Berkeley.

At the time of her death, she was studying for her M.A. in Jewish Education at Hebrew University’s Rothberg International School’s Division of Graduate Studies. She was also jointly enrolled at the Pardess Institute for Jewish Studies. Her ambition was to be a teacher.

Marla was not new to Israel, nor even to the Hebrew University. She spent her junior year attending the Rothberg International School’s One Year Program.

She had lived in Israel for a year, during which time she sent home frequent letters brimming with idealism, especially in her ardent support for the peace process. Last May, she wrote that “At least if I am here I can take an active role in attempting to put back together all that has been broken. I can volunteer in the homes of Israelis affected by terrorism, I can put food in collection baskets for Palestinian families.”

Bennett, whose exams were over, had a flight back to San Diego that was scheduled to leave only hours after the time of the attack.

Marla Bennett symbolized the goals and objectives of the university she grew to love. She symbolized the striving for academic excellence as well as the search for cooperation and peace that has typified this university since it opened its doors in the mid-1920’s.

The University’s President, Menachem Magidor, summarized this when he wrote in a letter to the New York Times that this was “an act of barbarism and it has ended the quest for peace. [It] is a crime not only against Israel or the Jewish people, it is a crime against the free and enlightened world.”

In the wake of this tragedy, President Magidor asked “whether it still makes sense to strive for a peaceful society based on reason and understanding.” He concluded that “the answer came to me clearly, and it is summarized by the Hebrew word ‘davka’—‘despite everything.’ We must not let them kill our drive of peace.

In this spirit, it is important to stress that Hebrew University is continuing its fine academic traditions. Its researchers and scientists are continuing their cutting edge work on projects that are designed to benefit all peoples. It is not surprising that Hebrew University’s scientists apply for and receive so many grants from American government agencies including USAID, NIST, NIH and DARPA. Many of these projects are done in cooperation with American universities and research centers.

Other Members of Congress have complimented the high quality of research done at Hebrew University and I join in their commendations.

Rather than go through a long litany of all of these projects, especially those that have an Israeli, Palestinian and American component, I might be useful to point one as typical of the ethos of this special university.

The Kuvin Center for the Study of Infectious and Tropical Diseases functions within the University’s Medical School, which is a world class institution established over 75 years ago.

This College has been a leader in infectious diseases and pathological research for over 30 years. Its researchers and physicians have published extensively in the professional literature and it has trained many active scientists in the field.

For a number of years, the Kuvin Center has collaborated with Al-Quds University Medical School on a variety of scientific and medical projects. Al-Quds, the pre-eminent university in the West Bank, is located in Abu Dis.
which is near Jerusalem and close to Palestinian hospitals, clinics and laboratories.

The two institutions are now proposing a joint project for “Regional Cooperation on Infectious Diseases” that will cover the study and control of diphtherial and respiratory diseases, tuberculosis, viral hepatitis, HIV infections and zoonotic diseases such as leishmaniasis, and rabies. Preventing and treating these diseases are of enormous importance to the welfare of the region as a whole.

The Congress fully recognizes and supports these types of cooperative Israeli-Palestinian health initiatives.

The Foreign Operations bill for Fiscal Year 2003, which has passed through the Appropriations Committee, includes language on the Kuvin Center/Al Quds cooperation. I am pleased that the Committee included the following paragraph in the report accompanying this bill:

The Committee acknowledges that one of the primary objectives of the West Bank and Gaza Programs is to provide infrastructure in Palestinian Authority-controlled areas to ensure the health and welfare of the Palestinian people. Al Quds University, in cooperation with the Kuvin Center for Infectious Diseases of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, has proposed the establishment of a regional health and disease program, which would work to build an effective infrastructure to deal with serious health and disease problems among the Palestinian people. The Committee understands that cooperative programs of this nature are rare in the current environment, and urges AID to work, though the West Bank and Gaza program, to help Al Quds and the Kuvin Center begin this initiative.

This project is designed to enable the United States to provide $15 million over five years to this cooperative effort to deal with infectious diseases.

This program does not require any additional appropriations. The proposed expenditure of these funds is an indication of Congressional intent on just how American money that has already been allocated can best be used in a productive capacity for Israel, the West Bank and Gaza. Thus, the Kuvin Center—Hebrew University/Al Quds University cooperative program will serve as a model of United States, Israel and the Palestinians can work together on projects that will benefit the entire region.

While Marla Bennett and the four other Americans who were killed, together with four Israelis, cannot ever come back to life, it is important to preserve their memory by continuing with projects such as this one. It is the very least we can do for them, for their ideals and for their dreams. Even more important, it will serve as a step toward a better future for the entire region.

RABBI SILVER’S 2002 VETERANS DAY ADDRESS

HON. JAMES H. MALONEY OF CONNECTICUT IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of Rabbi Eric A. Silver, it is my honor to share the text of his 2002 Veterans Day address with the Members of the House. Rabbi Silver had the one quality which Washington had that made him the best choice for an American commander, and this was Washington’s understanding of the military’s role in representing the civilization this would determine the kind of America that would exist after the Revolution.

The challenge of a military takeover. More to the point, America has never faced the threat of a military takeover. The various political factions which have guided this nation’s destiny at any one time have been the men who wore the uniform understood that they served under the authority of the military arm. We didn’t always agree with them, we sometimes laughed at them, and we sometimes were angry with them, but it never once crossed our minds that we should use the power at our disposal to change things within this nation and make them right.

The inspiration for this idea was General George Washington who, at various times, had to remind his senior officers that—

To the memory of the Man, first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen. It wasn’t merely that Washington was first in the hearts of the United States, or that he was the victorious commanding general of the Revolution. Of course, by the time he was chosen to be President, which grew up around this man was so large that it was difficult to separate between the man and the legend, but it was, in truth, his qualities as a leader of the American Armed Services who would wear the uniform—in his own time—and for all time to come. He set the pace for the kind of military for the way it would function within the American system. And it is Washington, the veteran that I should like to speak about, because every one of us who strove to emulate him.

Washington was not a philosopher—at least not in the sense that he was well-read in the classical works. In fact to some this made him somewhat less than he might have been in their eyes had he been able to quote from the works of the great thinkers. He was, however, a practical philosopher. He had an uncanny knack for learning on the job. He was, however, a practical philosopher. He had an uncanny knack for learning on the job, and by his actions, establishing a paradigm that others might follow.

He was brave, to be sure. He was beyond brave. As a young officer serving with General Braddock. It was noted that Washington’s uniform had several bullet holes in it. But he understood that his men would never face fire if he were unwilling to do so. That spirit would guide his actions throughout the long and dark days of the Revolution, when Washington was faced with troops who were frightened, who melted away at the first sight of the enemy—ca-age, his cool, calm demeanor that inspired his troops, and rallied them.

It was no accident that he was picked to lead the armed forces of the new Republic. He was, after all, a veteran, someone who had already established himself by years of military service. But there were others who were considered for the post of America’s commander. He felt that he should have gotten the job, for he would have led his troops directly against the British and taught them a good lesson. And his army was not only obli- erated, and the Revolution would have died in its infancy. Charles Lee was highly re- regarded, and thought by many to have the spirit Washington lacked. He was too cautious, and might have been willing to accept setbacks as defeats. But neither man had the one quality which Washington had that made him the best choice for an American commander, and this was Washington’s understanding of the military’s role in representing the civilization this would determine the kind of America that would exist after the Revolution.

And today, America is at war once again. We need to understand that this time we face a threat to our existence greater than any we have encountered to date. This will truly be the Second World of American Inde- pendence, for upon the success of this en- deavor will depend the survival not only of our nation, but of western civilization itself. It will be a long war, it will be a conflict for their willingness to return to their lives in their offices, their farms, their shops—for they are the quintessential veterans. They are Americans.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the 5th District of Connecticut and the United States House of Representatives, I commend Rabbi Eric A. Silver for his honorable years of military service, and thank him for his remarks this Veteran’s Day.

SELECTIVE SERVICE VOLUNTEERS

HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Mr. Dean E. Schick of Cheyenne Wells, Colorado; Mr. Leslie M. Rittgers of Eads, Colorado; and Mr. C.P. Bryant, Jr. of Las Animas, Colorado on their appointments to the Selective Service Local Board 025 in Pueblo, Colorado.

Local board members have the distinction of receiving an appointment by the Director of Selective Service in the name of President George W. Bush, and on the recommendation of Governor Bill Owens. Patriotic Americans, these board members serve their country by volunteering their time to assist the government in selecting men suitable for military service in the event of a draft. If a draft commences, these gentlemen would decide who would receive deferments, postponements, or exemption from military service based on the individual registrant’s circumstances and beliefs.

The Selective Service System is America’s defense manpower “insurance policy” in a still dangerous and uncertain world. The service performed by a Selective Service Board Member provides a vital link between the community and today’s military. His hard work helps guarantee claims filed by young men for deferments and exemptions will receive fair and equitable consideration if a future crisis requires reinstatement of a draft.

Congressman Schick is one of these dedicated volunteers on their appointments. I ask the House to join me in thanking these three men for their commitment to their country.

HONORING ASHLAND POLICE CHIEF FREDERIC PLEASANTS, JR. FOR HIS ROLE IN THE SNIPER ATTACKS

HON. ERIC CANTOR
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Ashland Police Chief Frederic Pleasants, Jr., for his role during the sniper attacks that shook Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

After the Ashland, Virginia shooting of October 19th, Chief Pleasants was on the scene in a matter of minutes and helped lead the quick and efficient response that ensued. It is known that Chief Pleasants can always be found hard at work behind the scenes, a characteristic that will certainly benefit the prosecution during the trial of the suspects. In fact, throughout the ordeal, Chief Pleasants and his dedicated staff logged 16-plus-hour days.

Chief Pleasants is an exceptional law enforcement officer who has served the Commonwealth of Virginia with distinction for over 32 years. His humility, professionalism, commitment to his team and community are truly deserving of special recognition. We are fortunate that he serves in our community.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring Chief Pleasants.

REGARDING THE RETIREMENT OF GEORGE O. WITHERS

HON. IKE SKELTON
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, this is the time of year that we say farewell to some old friends. That’s never easy. But it is even harder when the friend in question spent considerable time and energy helping make us all look good.

George Withers, who is leaving the Armed Services Committee staff at the end of this year, came to Capitol Hill in 1978. He had served his country in the Navy during Vietnam. But he has spent twenty-four years proving that national service doesn’t end when you take off the uniform. As legislative director on a personal staff, then press secretary and a professional staff member of the committee, George has made America better every day.

A lot of young go-getters come to work on the Hill, Mr. Speaker. But George proved that you don’t have to be obnoxious to get things done. His real sense of decency and values have provided a reference and example for not only the Armed Services Committee staff, but all of us who worked with him.

George has been the conscience of the committee staff. He is the incorruptible advocate for those Americans who most need and deserve Congress’s protection. Discussions of national security can get pretty esoteric, but George makes sure that we keep our focus on people, both those in uniform and those our military exists to protect. As a former enlisted man and NCO, he never lets the former officers on the staff forget who the real troops are.

Mr. Speaker, while our staff works in a non-partisan way, George is a determined, thoroughgoing, old-school Democrat. But look at the pictures on his office walls. Yes, he has photos of himself with our former colleagues Ron Dellums and Silvio Conte. But there’s John Kasich, too, and President Bush. All of which speaks to the fairness and openmindedness with which George approached his job. He lets his political beliefs inform his work, but never get in the way of doing what was right for the country.

To my way of thinking, George has only one flaw. The B-2 bomber is the pride of White-man Air Force Base, in my district. George led the fight at the staff level against the B-2, and succeeded for quite some time. In gratitude for George’s exemplary service, I promise not to have one named for him.

In recent years, George’s primary duties have concerned the military construction budget. Every member of this body whose district has received military construction funds—and that’s most of us—has George Withers to thank.

But he was also our committee’s driving force on policies concerning Latin America. Whether the question was the naval bombing on Vieques or the United States’ role in Colombia, George fought for a sensible, humble foreign policy.
George's decency doesn't stop at the Capitol door, either. When he isn’t here—during the few hours each year we let the staff out—George actively supports charities. He loves riding his bike, and he loves it even more when he’s getting contributions for every mile he rides.

While he will tell you that he loves his work here, just ask him about his children, Sam and Lizzie. You'll see what love really means by the sparkle in his eyes. And we were all thrilled when George married Donna earlier this year. His departure from our little world means that he will have even more opportunities to love and care for them, and even his cat, Tom. But I warn you, George, cats don't always love you back.

I will miss George Withers' cheerful counsel personally. The Congress will be poorer for his departure. But the real accolade is that people around the world who will never know his name have better lives today because George Withers was part of this House.

I yield back the balance of my time, noting that the House should be honored that George O. Withers yielded so much of his time to us.

AMENDING TITLE VI OF PUBLIC UTILITY REGULATORY POLICIES ACT OF 1978

HON. TOM UDALL

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, today, I introduce legislation that amends title VI of the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 to establish Federal renewable energy portfolio standard for certain retail electric utilities.

As we in Congress have attempted to develop a national energy policy, some say that a long-term sustainable energy plan is impossible. They say that renewable energy and energy efficiency are pipe dreams, and they say the U.S. will never be able to break its reliance on traditional energy sources like oil and coal. I disagree.

Now, in the post-September 11th world, the renewed conflict in the Middle East shows us that we cannot continue to rely on imported oil from that region. When my father, Stewart Udall, was Secretary of the Interior, the U.S. imported 20% of its oil. My father argued that we shouldn’t import more than 20% of our oil on national security grounds. Today, we import 53% of our oil, 47% of which comes from OPEC countries; by 2020, the United States will import 52% of its oil.

Even more frightening, world production is expected to peak some time in the next few decades, possibly as early as 2007. That means that as energy demand increases more and more rapidly, the world’s oil supply will be proportionally diminished.

While energy production has brought tremendous prosperity and allowed us to grow our economy at unprecedented rates, non-renewable forms of energy are responsible for many of the greatest environmental threats to America as well and have even more opportunities.

Consider this: less than 2% of this nation’s electricity is generated by non-traditional sources of power such as wind, solar, and geothermal energy. During the period from 1973–1991, smart investments were made to develop new technologies that made our energy use more efficient without affecting economic output. These investments curbed the projected growth rates of energy use in the United States by 18% from what they would have been otherwise.

Unfortunately, the U.S. spends only one-half of 1% of its energy bill on research and development. Sixty percent of that money is wasted on the country’s failed experiment in nuclear energy. Less than one-third of the nation’s tiny research and development budget is spent on renewable energy and energy efficiency technologies.

Mr. Speaker, I am particularly interested in Renewable Portfolio Standards (RPS), which I believe paves the road for the development and investment in clean energy technologies and local economic development. RPS, in my mind, clearly serves as model for tomorrow’s small and medium businesses to draw a profit from their own environmental responsibility.

In the Senate version of H.R. 4 there is a provision, which proposes that retail electricity suppliers (except for municipal and cooperative utilities) be required to obtain a minimum percentage of their power production from a portfolio of new renewable energy resources. The minimum energy target or “standard” would start at 1% in 2005, rise at a rate of about 1.2% every two years, and peak at 10% in 2019.

I applaud the Senate for including an RPS provision in the Energy bill, which the House failed to include in our energy package. However, I believe that we are capable of doing better than the Senate and believe we should set the standard higher to around 20%. As I mentioned earlier, less than 2% of this nation’s electricity is generated by non-traditional sources of power such as wind, solar, geothermal, etc.

My legislation would add an additional 10% on top of the 10% set to peak in 2020, and would achieve this goal within 5 years. Consequently, 20% of retail electricity supplier’s power production would be from a portfolio of new renewable energy sources in 2025.

Consider this: Wind farms in the Pacific Northwest are producing energy at a price of 3 cents per kilowatt-hour. This is less than the current price of power from natural gas. With a little encouragement, wind energy could become economically viable around the country, and this means a tremendous level of energy self-sufficiency for the U.S. Using wind as an energy source, twelve Midwest states alone could generate three times the total U.S. electricity consumption.

Solar power, one of the most well known forms of renewable energy, also has potential for the future. The cost of solar energy has dropped by 90% since the early 1970s, and scientists and industry groups predict the price will drop another 66% by 2020. Solar energy, if properly developed, could go a long way towards freeing the U.S. from its dependence on coal. Just 10,000 square miles of solar panels would supply all of the nation’s electricity needs.

And just a few weeks ago, the Public Service Company of New Mexico and FPL Energy LLC, based in Florida, signed an agreement to build in my congressional district one of the nation’s largest wind generation fields near Fort Sumner in eastern New Mexico. Har-nessed by 136 twirling turbines, wind will be used to create electricity in the first large-scale renewable energy operation in the state.

Wind will make up less than 4 percent of the power generated by PNMs, and this project has the hope of becoming the first of many wind farms in the state and an example of using and developing new technologies for renewable energy use.

A RPS makes good economic sense to help states diversify their energy market, increase their workforce, and help revitalize communities who have little to no economic development.

Currently, the New Mexico Public Regulation Commission is working on passing a Renewable Portfolio Standard for New Mexico that would require electric utilities to generate 10% of their electricity from renewable energy sources by 2007.

Mr. Speaker, our dependence on coal, oil and other traditional energy sources is unsustainable. To protect our environment and our economy, we must turn off the dead end street that our energy non-policy has been leading us down, and start down a path of energy productivity and sustainable, environmentally sound production.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HIGHLIGHTER

HON. BOB SCHAFFER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the students and staff members involved with Rocky Mountain High School’s student newspaper, Highlighter, for winning the 2002 Colorado High School Press Association Newspaper Sweepstakes for the second consecutive year on October 3, 2002.

Under the guidance of Rocky Mountain Highlighter newspaper advisor and language arts teacher Stephen Wahlfield, these dedicated and resourceful students worked tirelessly through the school year to create an informative and professional newspaper. The Lobos ultimately achieved victory over 63 other participating schools in the Sweepstakes, and held the title of “Colorado’s best high school newspaper” in Fort Collins for at least another year, through six first-place and three second-place awards.

Cruicial wins in the individual categories came from Erin Ortmeyer for Critical review writing; Leigh Pogue, Baker Machado, and Ortmeyer for Sports Feature story; Joy Bloser and Brett Burnett for Feature Photography; Kristen Frank and Burnett for Sports Photography; and Jenny Ackerson, Carolyn Whitten and Burnett for Front Page Layout. The Rocky Mountain Highlighter also proved its superiority in the esteemed General Excellence category. Additionally, Jack Meier, Kendall Miller and Burnett won second-place for Personal Opinion Column, as did Brent Barentine for Graphic Illustration. The entire staff collaborated to place second the Headlines category.

These journalists involved in Highlighter are commended for their achievements and praised for their pursuit of excellence. These young men and women are primary examples of the vast potential of future generations. Go Lobos!
HONORING HANOVER COUNTY SHERIFF V. STUART COOK FOR HIS LEADERSHIP DURING THE SNIPER ATTACKS

HON. ERIC CANTOR OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Hanover County Sheriff V. Stuart Cook for his outstanding leadership during the sniper attacks throughout Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

After the Ashland, Virginia shooting of October 19th, Sheriff Cook was instrumental in leading a quick and efficient response. In addition, he and his team performed a thorough investigation after the shooting that certainly aided in the capture of the suspects on October 24th and will prove vital to the incrimination of the suspects during trial. Furthermore, Sheriff Cook served as a strong voice of reason to many in the area who were terrified and anxious because of the attacks.

Sheriff Cook is an outstanding law enforcement officer who has served Hanover County, Richmond, and the Commonwealth of Virginia with distinction for over 37 years. His professionalism, commitment to his team, and dedication to duty are truly deserving of special recognition. He is a highly dedicated man who has faithfully contributed to his community and the Commonwealth of Virginia. We are fortunate that he serves in our community.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring Sheriff Cook.

CONCURRENT RECEIPT: TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE

HON. BOB FILNER OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I rise today to protest the “compromise” provision included in the Defense Authorization Act regarding the issue known as concurrent receipt.

As we all know, current law requires an offset between military retired pay and VA disability compensation. In effect, our disabled military retirees are paying for their own disability.

Both the House and the Senate, in their versions of the Defense Authorization Act, passed significant and appropriate provisions to address this inequity. The Senate bill provided concurrent receipt for all veterans who were qualified to receive both military retired pay and VA disability compensation. The House bill provided it for those veterans with a disability rating of 60 percent or more.

Now, we come to the so-called “compromise” before us. A compromise, to me, means that you meet somewhere in the middle. This compromise does no such thing. It would set up an alternative “special pay” for only military retirees who have combat-related disabilities. These are military retirees with 20 years of service who also:

1. Have a Purple Heart and a disability rating of 10 percent or more for the condition for which they received the Purple Heart, or
2. Have another “qualifying combat-related disability” rated at least 60 percent.

I have heard that this “compromise” is being sold as a good first step. It is not a good first step. It is hardly a step at all.

During my ten years in Congress, I cannot recall more than one or two other issues besides concurrent receipt on which I have received so many letters, e-mails, and calls. The expectations of our military retirees have been raised by the House and Senate versions of this bill. It is a disservice to give so little to so few at the last minute. While these veterans with combat-related disabilities are absolutely deserving of recognition, so are the others whom we have been fighting for.

I understand that it is expensive to pass concurrent receipt. But disabled veterans did not hesitate when called to serve. They returned home with disabilities they have had to live with ever since. How can we even doubt the need to keep our promises and give them what they deserve? They earned their military retired pay. They deserve their VA disability compensation. The “compromise” that is before us today is a disgrace.

KUNTU REPERTORY THEATRE

HON. WILLIAM J. COYNE OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call the House’s attention to an important cultural resource in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Kuntu Repertory Theatre of the University of Pittsburgh’s Department of Africana Studies has been presenting the works of African, African-American, and Caribbean playwrights and poets since 1974. The Theatre was founded that year by Vernell A. Lillie to showcase the works of Rob Penny, the school’s playwright-in-residence, as well as those of other authors who have worked with Kuntu to explore the Black experience. It plays an important role in Pittsburgh by providing an important voice in the region’s cultural mix. In addition, the Kuntu Repertory Theatre is the only ongoing African American theatre group in Pittsburgh; consequently, it provides African American actors, writers and technicians with opportunities that might not be available elsewhere.

Over the last 28 years, the KRT has produced more than 80 plays under the direction of Dr. Lillie, who has been a faculty member in the University of Pittsburgh’s Department of Africana Studies since 1972. This year marks both Dr. Lillie’s 70th birthday and her 30th anniversary at the University of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of Pennsylvania’s 14th Congressional District, I want to commend Professor Lillie and the members of the Kuntu Repertory Theatre for their important cultural contributions and congratulate them as they begin their 28th season of high-quality, thought-provoking plays.

RECOGNIZING THE CONTRIBUTIONS AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF VINCE O’BRIEN

HON. JOHN S. TANNER OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a World War II veteran, a successful businessman and family man, a true civic leader and my friend, Mr. Vincent O’Brien of Dyersburg, Tennessee.

Vince’s life has always been marked by a desire to change the world he lives in for the better. That dedication is still proven by his continued work for the city of Dyersburg.

He has served for 30 years as a member of the Dyersburg Planning Commission and has chaired the commission for 20 years. During that time, the city of Dyersburg has experienced tremendous growth, including the development of many new businesses and a shopping mall that have become vital to the economy of West Tennessee.

Vince served in the Air Force during World War II and received the Distinguished Flying Cross.

A few months after the war, Vince married Virginia Marr of Dyersburg, and they eventually moved to Dyersburg and established Marr Cleaners, which operated successfully for more than half a century. Virginia passed away 10 years ago. Vince still enjoys spending time with their daughters and their families, eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Now, at 86 years old, Vince shows no signs of slowing down. While still continuing his work for Dyersburg, he splits his time between Dyersburg and Caruthersville, Missouri, home to his wife Dorothy.

Vince O’Brien is an example for us all. He has always lived a life of compassion, involvement and service. His accomplished leadership has been vital to our community, and I am proud to call Vince O’Brien my friend.

TRIBUTE IN HONOR OF OHIO SENATOR RICHARD H. FINAN

HON. ROB PORTMAN OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Senator Dick Finan, a dear friend and leader in my home state of Ohio. Because of term limits, Dick will be completing his final term in the Ohio Senate this year.

Dick is a Cincinnati native. He graduated from the University of Dayton with a B.S. in Business Administration in 1954, and he earned his law degree from the University of Cincinnati College of Law in 1959. From 1954 to 1956, Dick served our country in the U.S. Army. Last year, he was appointed as Ohio’s Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army.

Dick has been an outstanding public servant to the Cincinnati community and the people of Ohio. Before term limits, Dick was first elected as a Councilman of the Village of Evendale in 1963, and went on to serve as Mayor of Evendale from 1969 to 1973. He served in the Ohio House of Representatives from 1973 to 1978, and, since 1978, has served in the Ohio Senate. For the past 6 years Dick has been President of the Senate.

During his 29 years in the Ohio General Assembly, Dick has been an outstanding leader. He has been involved with some very difficult issues for a long time. As a result, he has been an excellent leader. I look forward to continuing to work with him.

Although he will greatly miss his public service in the Ohio Senate, Dick is looking forward to having more time with his family. He and his wife, Joan, have been married for over 40 years and have 4 children and 10 grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues will join me in recognizing Dick’s outstanding service. All of us in Southwestern Ohio are grateful for his many contributions to our community, and we wish him the very best as he steps down from the Ohio Senate.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002

SPREECH OF
HON. TOM UDALL
OF NEW MEXICO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, November 13, 2002

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, for the past year, Congress has debated legislation to establish a Department of Homeland Security. This has been an extremely important debate considering that any legislation we pass in this regard will result in the largest federal reorganization since World War II. Yet, despite this fact, we are not only on the verge of passing flawed legislation, but in what seems to have become the norm for legislation I introduced (H.R. 3154), to include the provision for the additional Civil Support Teams nationwide.

Civil Support Teams are National Guard units designed to provide support to civil authorities in response to Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) threats or attacks. The teams are expertly trained to provide a variety of services including coordination of rescue and recovery efforts, securing communications, and providing medical supplies. The teams are outfitted with the proper protective equipment for entering a contaminated site. These highly-skilled units, made up of 22 full-time National Guard members, are a critical part of the Department of Defense’s (DoD) mix of local, state and federal resources for the Homeland Security plan.

Yet, currently a number of states, including Connecticut, do not have a Civil Support Team. At present, there are only two teams assigned to the entire Tri-State/Southern New England area. Those two teams are located in Natick, Massachusetts and Scotia, New York, which leaves Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Jersey without teams. The National Defense Authorization for FY 2003 rectifies this by authorizing 23 additional teams, one for each state and territory in the United States. This initiative has been a concern of mine since well before the tragic events of September 11, 2001. On January 10, 2000, I sent a letter to the Honorable Louis Caldera, Secretary of the Army, urging that a team be deployed in Connecticut. I followed up that letter with a series of actions in support of expanding Civil Support Teams nationwide. I worked with the Connecticut Air/Army National Guard, the National Guard Bureau and the National Guard Association of the United States to address this issue of a team.

On October 4, 2001, I sent a letter to the Honorable Donald Rumsfeld, Secretary of the Department of Defense, to ask his support for establishing additional weapons of mass destruction. The language in the bill before us is derived from legislation I introduced (H.R. 3154) on October 17, 2001, which attracted 49 cosponsors. On November 14, 2001, in response to these efforts, I was joined in my efforts by Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Military Assistance to Civilian Authorities briefed a small number of fellow Democratic Committee members of the House Armed Services Committee. At that meeting I reiterated my view that there should be at least one WMD–CST in every state and U.S. territory. On February 6, 2002, I again raised this issue with Secretary Rumsfeld when he testified before the House Armed Services Committee.

During the House Armed Services Committee’s consideration of the FY 2003 Defense Authorization measure (H.R. 4546), my colleague, Congressman TAYLOR of Mississippi, and I successfully offered the amendment, based on my legislation (H.R. 3154), to include the provision for the additional Civil Support Teams.

Currently there are thirty-two Civil Support Teams across the country, authorized by Congress over the last three years. While 32 teams is a good start, it does not go far enough. H.R. 4546 will increase (from 32 to 55) the total number of Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams—including a team for Connecticut.

My legislation (H.R. 3154) requires the Department of Defense to establish at least one team per state and territory. Federal emergency resource needs to be properly and fully integrated with state and local emergency response operations. To do that, we need a team in each state. Establishing a team in every state ensures a quick response to a Weapons of Mass Destruction attack, and allows the Civil Support Teams to run practice scenarios with local and state authorities that would be involved in the event of a real attack.

This will ensure high-quality coordination among all those involved.

A Connecticut-based Civil Support Team is vital to residents of Connecticut and the Northeast Corridor. The terrorist attacks of September 11th in New York City made this point clear, and necessitate addressing this regional national security concern as soon as possible. The Civil Support Team in New York helped assess the initial terrorist incident at the World Trade Center, and undertook chemical, biological and radiological sampling at Ground Zero. The team also provided a full range of communications support as well as air monitoring services. The attack in New York was a critical test for this Civil Support Team, and proved to provide significant assistance to local and state authorities. Connecticut deserves to be equally well protected and prepared. I am delighted that my legislation to advance that goal has been incorporated in the National Defense Authorization for Fiscal Year 2003.

Mr. Speaker, for these reasons, and for the obvious reason that national security is authorized within, I strongly urge the House to vote in support of H.R. 4546, the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization for Fiscal Year 2003.
THE HONORABLE DAN NOBLE
HON. BOB SCHAFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002
Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to memorialize the Honorable Dan Noble of Norwood, Colorado, who passed away on November 12, 2002. Dan Noble was an exceptional man who spent his life serving his community and his nation.

Dan was an Army veteran and served as a staff sergeant in a motor battalion in Korea from 1950 to 1952. When he returned from the military he married his wife, Donna, and attended the University of Colorado School of Banking from 1960 to 1962. He became the President and the Director of the San Miguel Basin State Bank in Norwood.

In 1970, Dan was appointed to fill a one-year vacancy in the Colorado State Senate. He continued to faithfully serve his constituents for a total of 17 years. He served seven of these years as the Majority Leader. Senator Noble was respected by all of his peers and his commitment to the people of Colorado is a great example for all who serve in the Colorado General Assembly.

Dan died of cancer at the age of 73, leaving behind his wife, Donna, and his children: Douglas Noble, Danette Christiansen, Darin Noble, Dru Ann Nemecek, and Darcy Crotteau.

Dan Noble was truly a great man. It is with sadness that I inform the House of the loss of such an exceptional American. I ask the House to join me in extending its sincere sympathy to the family and friends of Mr. Noble.

TRIBUTE TO GENERAL JOHN N. ABRAMS
HON. IKE SKELTON
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002
Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, it has come to my attention that a long and exceptionally distinguished career has come to an end. General John N. Abrams’ 36 years of service to the nation has been marked by meritorious service in increasingly demanding command and staff positions, culminating as Commanding General, United States Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC), Fort Monroe, Virginia. Throughout, General Abrams demonstrated strong and inspiring leadership, unsurpassed executive ability, and an unflinching dedication to the spirit and mission of the United States Army.

General Abrams was commissioned through Officer Candidate School at Fort Knox, Kentucky on February 3, 1967, after enlisting in the United States Army on February 17, 1966. He is a graduate of Bowling Green State University in Ohio with a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and Shippensburg State University of Pennsylvania with a Masters of Science in Public Administration. He is also a 1986 graduate of the Army War College.

General Abrams has served in command and staff positions over the last thirty-five years. He is a combat veteran of Vietnam from August 1967 to July 1969 where he served as an armored cavalry platoon leader and armored cavalry troop commander with the 2d Squadron, 1st Cavalry, which deployed from the 2d Armored Division, Fort Hood, Texas. He commanded the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment in Fulda, Germany, from 1988 to 1990; the 2d Infantry Division, Uijeongbu, Korea, from 1993 to 1995; and V Corps, Heidelberg, Germany, from 1995 to 1997. Prior to assuming command of TRADOC, he was the TRADOC Deputy Commanding General from August 1997 to September 1998.

His service includes staff assignments as Chief of Staff of the 3rd Armored Division in Germany; Military Science Instructor at the United States Military Academy at West Point; Army Staff Officer in War Plans and Deputy Director of Operations Directorate in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff of Operations and Plans.

His awards and decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Bronze Star with three oak leaf clusters, and the Purple Heart. He has also received the Knight Commander’s Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Throughout his career, General Abrams has made significant contributions at every level with implementing change in the Army. General Abrams’ distinguished performance of duty will have far-reaching impacts on the future of the Army. I am certain that my colleagues will join me in wishing General Abrams all the best.

H.R. 1070: THE GREAT LAKES LEGACY ACT
HON. MARK STEVEN KIRK OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002
Mr. KIRK. Mr. Speaker, the magnitude of the Great Lakes water system is difficult to appreciate, even for those who live within the basin. As the world’s largest body of fresh water, the Great Lakes are sensitive to the effects of a wide range of pollutants. The sources of pollution include runoff from farm chemicals, and discharges from industrial areas and waste disposal sites. The large surface area of the lakes makes them vulnerable to direct atmospheric pollutants of all kinds, such as mercury.

H.R. 1070 amends the Clean Water Act to authorize $50 million a year for fiscal years 2004 through 2008 for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to carry out remediation projects in Areas of Concern (AOCs) surrounding the Great Lakes to monitor or evaluate contaminated sediment, remediate contaminated sediment, or prevent further or renewed contamination.

Contamination of the Great Lakes is an issue that directly affects my district. The city of Waukegan in my district was home to what many have called the worst PCB (polychlorinated biphenyls) contaminated site in the U.S. Waukegan lies fifty miles north of Chicago directly on the shore of Lake Michigan. Waukegan Harbor was designated in the 1980’s an Area of Concern (AOC) by the International Joint Commission on the Great Lakes, the United States EPA and the Illinois EPA.

The contamination of Waukegan Harbor took place over a 13-year period from 1959 to 1973. The U.S. EPA approximated that during that time 300,000 pounds of PCBs were discharged directly into the water of Lake Michigan and an additional 700,000 were discharged on the property by the Outboard Marine Corporation. An average 9–10 pounds of PCBs were discharged into Lake Michigan daily.

The cleanup of Waukegan Harbor has been successful thus far removing approximately 500 tons of PCB contaminated sediment from Waukegan Harbor. However, more corrective action is necessary before the harbor can be de-listed as an AOC. Passage of H.R. 1070 will go a long way in continuing the movement to de-list Waukegan Harbor and clean the remaining Great Lake AOCs.

I applaud the Congress for taking this important step addressing contaminated sediments in the Great Lakes basin. The time has come to protect the Great Lakes from the other dangers, such as mercury pollution and invasive species. Earlier this session I introduced H.R. 5261, the Great Lakes Mercury Reduction Act, which will prohibit the issuance of new permits under the Clean Air Act that would result in the deposition of any additional mercury into the Great Lakes.

Congress must also adopt a comprehensive plan to stop the introduction of alien species into the region. H.R. 5396 and 5397 seek to reauthorize the National Aquatic Invasive Species Act to address existing loopholes in our laws and authorize much needed funding to upgrade the fight against aquatic invasive species, along with expanding the Aquatic Nuisance Species Dispersal Barrier on the Chicago Ship and Sanitary Canal.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment and thank Mr. EHLERS for his tireless work on H.R. 1070. His work on this legislation, and other Great Lakes issues, has been remarkable. I would also like to thank the groups involved in the Waukegan Harbor cleanup effort, including the U.S. EPA, the Illinois EPA, and the Waukegan Harbor Citizens Advisory Group. Hopefully, the passage of H.R. 1070 will enable our community to celebrate the de-listing of Waukegan Harbor.

AFRO-AMERICAN MUSIC INSTITUTE
HON. WILLIAM J. COYNE OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002
Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call my colleagues’ attention to a milestone that was recently observed in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. On September 21, the Afro-American Music Institute celebrated its 20th anniversary.

The Afro-American Music Institute was established in 1982 by ethnomusicologist Dr.
James T. Johnson, Jr. and his wife Pamela Johnson. Dr. Johnson has been the director of the AAMI since its founding, and Mrs. Johnson serves as manager of this non-profit organization. They have worked tirelessly over the last 20 years to expand and improve the programs offered by the AAMI.

For the past 20 years, the AAMI has trained musicians of all ages and backgrounds in jazz, gospel, and blues for voice and instruments. Over that period of time, the Afro-American Music Institute has trained thousands of students. In addition to vocal and instrumental instruction, the AAMI curriculum includes such subjects as directing, improvisation, song writing and arrangement, and music theory, as well as the technical and managerial aspects of musical performance. The AAMI sponsors several musical ensembles, including a youth jazz group, a sacred music choir, a boys’ choir, and a faculty ensemble.

The Institute was originally located in St. James AME Church in Pittsburgh’s East Liberty neighborhood, but in 1992, it incorporated and moved to its current location at 7227 Tioga Street. The AAMI has plans to relocate to a new building on Hamilton Avenue early next year.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of Pennsylvania’s 14th Congressional District, I want to commend Dr. and Mrs. Johnson and the faculty and students of the Afro-American Music Institute for their educational and cultural contributions to our community and wish them continued success in the future.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, on rolcall No. 477, final passage of H.R. 5710, The Homeland Security Act of 2002, I was detained in traffic from an event honoring federal employees. Had I been present, I would have voted “yes.”

IN HONOR OF REPRESENTATIVE CARRIE MEEK
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of my dear colleague, Carrie Meek, whom I have had the privilege of working with from the great state of Florida.

A freshman from the class of 1992, Carrie represents Florida’s 17th district, encompassing large portions of my hometown, Miami.

In her very first term, we were all impressed by her ability to win a seat on the Appropriations Committee, the only freshman Democrat to do so. She has also served admirably on the Treasury Postal Service and VA/HUD Committees, consistently advocating on behalf of African Americans, fighting for job creation and business development through Federal programs.

Always fighting for the underdog, Carrie has served with an iron fist in a velvet glove. Although we sit on opposite sides of the aisle, I have always respected her work and welcome the arrival of her son, Kendrick, to the Congress. My office and the entire Florida Delegation look forward to working with him. We are certain he will carry on Carrie’s fine family tradition of public service.

Mr. Speaker, the residents of Florida’s 17th Congressional District have been better served for Carrie’s service in Congress. This body exists so that the people of our country have a voice in their government. The votes Floridians cast to send her to Washington have clearly turned this House to more orderly, energetic lawmakers and strong conviction. Today we honor her service to her country and wish her well.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE SERVICE AND CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE HONORABLE CHARLES ROSSOTTI

HON. ROB PORTMAN
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the service to our country that has been performed by our outgoing Internal Revenue Service Commissioner, Charles Rossotti.

Commissioner Rossotti was one of the longest serving Commissioners in the history of the Internal Revenue Service and the first to have a five-year term as recommended in the landmark IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. During his tenure, Commissioner Rossotti provided the IRS with the leadership it needed as it went through the most dramatic change in its history. The structural and cultural reforms he implemented will have a positive impact on both the IRS and taxpayers for many years to come.

Under Commissioner Rossotti’s leadership, the IRS was reorganized into four divisions, each of which is responsible for a specific segment of taxpayers. This model allows taxpayers to receive expert and personalized service and permits the IRS to more efficiently use its resources. Another significant accomplishment under Commissioner Rossotti’s watch is the expanded ability to exchange data electronically. During the last tax season, nearly one in three Form 1040s was filed electronically, and the IRS Web site has become one of the most popular sites on the Internet. Charles has managed the implementation of many taxpayer rights contained in the IRS restructuring law, such as the innocent spouse and collection due process protections, and has strengthened the role of the National Taxpayer Advocate.

Commissioner Rossotti’s accomplishments have set the IRS on the right track to providing top-quality service and fairness to all taxpayers. He is to be commended for his efforts to transform the IRS into a performance-based organization, and dispel the belief that customer service and enforcement are mutually exclusive. Perhaps the broadest indicator of Commissioner Rossotti’s impact on the IRS has been the steady rise in the public perception of the IRS over the last four years.

Mr. Speaker, Charles accomplished all of this at a time in his life when he was ready to leave full-time employment and enjoy a slower paced life. He and his wife, Barbara, put their personal plans on hold for the past five years while he served our country nobly and well. He is a true citizen servant in the great tradition of the Roman hero Cincinnatus. Our country owes him a debt of gratitude for his outstanding public service. We wish Charles and Barbara the very best.

FAMILY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN CONGRESS

HON. TIM ROEMER
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to reflect on my last 12 years here in United States Congress. I have enjoyed this experience and consider it to be one of the most gratifying opportunities of my life. I am grateful for the people of the Third District of Indiana who allowed me to serve with such intelligent, honorable and talented people. It is my hope that we have made some strides in making the lives of Americans better and more prosperous for the future. As I leave this body, one of my regrets will be that this institution did not set more of a priority on scheduling, which is essential to a balanced family and professional life. With a quote, I would like to point to the following example of our colleagues across the Atlantic who have set a family-friendly precedent as part of their agenda.

Winston Churchill once said, “There is no doubt that it is around the family and the home that all the greatest virtues, the most dominating virtues of human society, are created, strengthened and maintained.”

According to an article in the New York Times, Members of the British Parliament recently reaffirmed their commitment to this principle. The House of Commons voted to end a centuries old tradition of late-night sessions, moving the start of business up to 11:30 a.m. from 2:30 p.m., and declaring that the latest a session can go is 7:30 p.m. This is three hours earlier than the usual closing time. This vote apparently came after a nine-hour debate that ended at midnight.

This schedule is all too familiar to us here in the United States Congress. We have had more than our fair share of late nights. Some of these nights have been essential, especially when we are considering measures on how to combat the war on terrorism or balance the budget. Oftentimes, these sessions are indeed vital. However, more often than not, there was no compelling reason to be in session so late. Mr. Speaker, I applaud the hard work of my colleagues during this committee, past and present, to mesh family time with Congressional business.

As Co-chairs of the Members and Family Committee, my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. Pickering, and I have worked with the Committee to make this body a more family-friendly atmosphere. The events have been a success but they are a far cry from the goal of having a family-friendly atmosphere in "The People's House."

A broader level of this concern in this body should be the importance of having representative in the people's house who have family interests in mind. It is imperative to this body for all interests of the American people to be represented, particularly the issues that affect the family. We cannot allow those interests to be forgotten as we continue to set an agenda for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, as I leave Congress in the coming weeks, I hope that this body will work to improve the schedule so that members can meet their priorities in life: our families. Thomas Jefferson once said, "The happiest moments of my life have been the few which I have passed at home in the bosom of my family."

IN CELEBRATION OF NATIONAL BIBLE WEEK

HON. BOB ETHERIDGE OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I am honored and pleased to serve as Congressional Co-Chair for National Bible Week, November 24-December 1, 2002. National Bible Week has been an annual observance in this country since 1941. When the nation turned to the Holy Bible for strength, comfort, and guidance. On September 11, 2001, when terrorists destroyed the World Trade Center Towers in New York and attacked the Pentagon, another "day of infamy" took place in our nation's history. President Bush immediately called Americans to prayer, saying, "Our purpose as a nation is firm, yet our wounds as a people are recent and unhealed and lead us to pray. . . . We ask Almighty God to watch over our nation."

I strongly believe that one contribution every American can make in these troubling times is to pray for our nation, its leaders, and its people.

National Bible Week is celebrated every year from Sunday to Sunday during the week of Thanksgiving as a time of prayer, a time to confirm our values and a time to strengthen national resolve. As we gather at our dinner tables in remembrance, let us be thankful to be living in a country where our Constitution guarantees freedom of worship. I commend the National Bible Association for its leadership in promoting this worthy endeavor.

HONORING DOUGLAS MCCURG

OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of my good friend Douglas McCurg, who will be remembered in the Tampa Bay community as a prominent and highly esteemed bankruptcy attorney, a Vietnam War hero and a man who was deeply devoted to his faith, family and community.

Since 1992, Doug worked as a bankruptcy lawyer for Hill, Ward & Henderson, and he was the founding director and former president and chairman of the Tampa Bay Bankruptcy Bar Association. Doug handled several high profile bankruptcy cases in the Tampa Bay area and was highly respected by his colleagues for the quality of his work and character.

But what was most impressive about Doug was his ability to successfully balance a demanding career with his responsibilities to his family and his community. Doug was very active in the lives of his children and committed to helping young people. He sat on the executive board of the Gulf Ridge Council of the Boy Scouts and was chairman of the board for Young Life, a Christian outreach program for middle and high school students. Doug also served as a trustee for the Tampa Museum of Art, past president of the Tampa Club and trustee of the University of Florida Law Center Association.

As a member of the U.S. Special Forces, Doug served a combat tour during the Vietnam War and earned a Purple Heart, Bronze star, Combat Infantry Badge and Air Medal.

On behalf of the Tampa Bay community, I would like to extend my heartfelt sympathies to Doug's family. Doug led a very full life in too short of a period of time, and we will never forget him, his contributions to many and the example he set for all of us to aspire to reach.

CORRECTION ON H.R. 4689

HON. BARNEY FRANK
OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I signed the "Dissenting Views" to the Committee Report on H.R. 4689, the "Fairness in Sentencing Act of 2002," which included these two inaccurate statements:

If enacted, the bill would prevent individuals who perform low-level drug trafficking functions from qualifying for a mitigating role adjustment under the United States Sentencing Guidelines.

The bill prevents low-level, first-offense drug offenders from receiving a mitigating role adjustment under the sentencing guidelines.

H.R. Rep. No. 107-769 at 307-08 (Oct. 31, 2002) ("Dissenting Views"). The Chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime, Terrorism, and Homeland Security, Rep. LAMAR SMITH, has brought to my attention that these two statements are inaccurate because the bill does not in fact do this. I acknowledge and regret the error.

CHINA'S BALLISTIC MISSILE THREAT

HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, as we prepare to invade Iraq and ponder North Korea's secret nuclear weapons program, America must not overlook the greater threat posed by China and the transformation of the People's Liberation Army into a modern technological force capable of lightning attacks.

Similar to how Germany used blitzkrieg or lightning warfare in World War II to demoralize its opponents, the People's Liberation Army (PLA) is ready to unleash a new form of warfare using advances in accurate ballistic missiles, high-energy lasers, and information warfare.

This transformation of the PLA has more than the capture of Taiwan in view. In December 1999 China's Defense Minister, General Chi Haotian, declared war between China and the United States "is inevitable." He noted, "The issue is that the Chinese armed forces must control the initiative in this war."

To control the initiative, the PLA plans to mount a surprise attack, coupling on the weight of its initial blow to stun an opponent into submission. Ballistic missile strikes, high energy lasers used against satellites, and information warfare provide the means by which the PLA can launch a surprise attack with little or no warning.

Do we need to remind ourselves of the congressionally funded U.S.-China Security Review Commission that declared in August 2002, "Despite overwhelming U.S. military and technological superiority, China can still defeat the United States by transforming its weakness into strength and exploiting U.S. vulnerabilities through asymmetric warfare . . . deception, surprise and preemptive strikes."

China's mild reaction to our plans to invade Iraq may indicate deception, laying the groundwork for a surprise attack. Even as we engage China in diplomacy to call a halt to North Korea's nuclear weapons program, we deceive ourselves as to the role China played in the proliferation of nuclear weapons and ballistic missile technology to North Korea, where Pakistan served as an intermediary by assisting North Korea in its nuclear weapons program in exchange for North Korean assistance with its ballistic missile program.

Even our efforts to seek China's assistance in the war on terrorism contain an element of self-deception. We overlook how China supported the Taliban, signing a memorandum of understanding with Taliban leadership on September 11, 2001. Do we note how China's military doctrine described in Unrestricted Warfare extolled Osama bin Laden as a new type of warrior to emulate?

We deceive ourselves if we believe the PLA is not capable of mounting a powerful blow at our armed forces. Our satellites are vulnerable to laser attacks and information warfare—a fact carefully noted by Donald Rumsfeld before he became Secretary of Defense while serving as Chairman of the Space Commission. Our forces and military bases are vulnerable to ballistic missile strikes—we have no defense against ballistic missiles except for the short-range Patriot.

TAIWAN

A picture of our vulnerability may be seen in Taiwan. For example, a Taiwanese defense ministry report concluded a PLA attack using ballistic missiles and cruise missiles supplemented by long-range artillery and other weapons aimed at nearly one hundred key targets such as airports, harbors, important highways, bridges and military command centers, would be devastating and would be successful within a very short time. Several dozen ballistic missiles could destroy over half its navy concentrated at the naval base of Tsuyong.
In 2002 computerized war simulations in Taiwan's Han Kuang Number 18 military exercise showed it could lose much of its air force in the first wave of ballistic missile strikes. The launch of hundreds of ballistic missiles aimed at major air bases around Taiwan would damage 75 percent of its air force fighters on the ground.

Furthermore, China has obtained technical information on the improved Patriot-2, enabling it to devise tactics for overwhelming the two hundred Patriot missiles guarding Taipei and its environs.

Transformation is a result of new strategy and new weapons that can convey a sense of overwhelming defeat, enabling conventional military forces to conduct mopping-up operations against a demoralized enemy. In other words, while the bulk of PLA forces are not as technologically sophisticated as U.S. forces, if PLA laser and ballistic missile forces can create a sense of overwhelming defeat, the once vaunted technological superiority of U.S. forces would be swept aside.

Similarly, China's intermediate and long-range ballistic missiles could be used in a preemptive strike against U.S. air and naval forces, particularly in the Pacific. Indeed, China's intermediate-range ballistic missiles were developed for attacking U.S. forces in the Pacific and Indian Oceans. The effect would be the same as an attack on Taiwan. U.S. air and naval strength would be devastated.

The PLA is aware of the vulnerability of U.S. forces to ballistic missiles. The inability of U.S. forces to defend themselves against ballistic missiles can create a condition for intense psychological fear of utter helplessness against a foe that can strike at will.

We will find our weapons, doctrine, and leadership outdated. For example, we have no weapons to counter a high-energy laser used to attack our DSP early warning satellites, which could otherwise warn of a PLA ballistic missile strike. Other key military satellites, upon which depends our Revolution in Military Affairs, are at risk.

Our generals do not practice for war against an opponent that uses accurate ballistic missiles in a preemptive strike. China has developed accurate ballistic missiles. Its short-range M-11, which uses GPS guidance, is accurate to about 5 meters. Its DF-21 (CSS-5) intermediate-range ballistic missile is equipped with terminal, precision guidance and possibly GPS. China has the option of using ballistic missiles armed with non-nuclear warheads in a precision, long-distance strike.

Our navy has no defense against a DF-31 ICMBM targeted to be fired at a naval battle group shortly after leaving Pearl Harbor. The PLA large-scale exercise called Liberation 2 simulated landing on Taiwan and attacking U.S. aircraft carriers, including strikes by DF-31 nuclear-capable ICMBMs.

Our nuclear missiles are no defense against a preemptive ballistic-missile strike. The threat of retaliation under the doctrine of Mutual Assured Destruction is empty. Even though we possess a larger number of ICMBMs, we have no defense against the PLA holding American military bases in Taiwan under a small number of missiles.

Unlike the Cold War where Soviet ballistic missile forces were targeted at U.S. ballistic missile forces as well as other defense installations and military bases, China has targeted U.S. conventional forces and bases, trusting that a small arsenal of ICBMs pointed at American cities could deter a U.S. nuclear retaliation.

Not only are U.S. forces undefended from ballistic missile attack, the use of air power in retaliation or suppression would be slower in comparison to another ballistic missile strike. Air power alone is not decisive in the age of missiles.

Evidence

Evidence of the PLA's transformation may be seen in the double-digit increases to its announced defense spending for over a decade; its purchase of advanced Russian arms such as Sovremenny destroyers, Kilo submarines, S-300 air defense missiles, supersonic cruise missiles, Su-27 and Su-30 aircraft; and, its buildup of ballistic missiles and new doctrine. Once an army of peasants, the PLA has become an army of the technologically equipped. A new centurion has been born.

This is called asymmetric warfare—attacking an opponent's weakness. We will find our weapons, doctrine, and leadership outdated.

U.S. Force Disposition

The concentration of U.S. forces in the Middle East and Persian Gulf, creating a condition for strategic attack and maneuver by the PLA. After a surprise attack using lasers, ballistic missiles, and information warfare directed at U.S. satellites and air and naval forces, a PLA force as small as 50,000 well-equipped troops could conquer the U.S. forces rely heavily on air power.

Following a surprise attack there would be little to stop the PLA from invading other countries, including Taiwan and the island nations of the Pacific. PLA invasion forces against these tiny Pacific nations would not be large. The fractured nature of Indonesia could lead the PLA to extend its initiative to larger nations, perhaps focusing on oil and gas reserves. Guam and Hawaii would be at risk.

While the world is preoccupied with the threat posed by Iran, the PLA is planning for the acquisition of advanced Russian arms such as Sovremenny destroyers, Kilo submarines, and cruise missiles in addition to its buildup of ballistic missiles. Ballistic missile forces would play a key role, especially space-based and naval defenses that can provide widespread, flexible coverage over the Pacific. Our preparations may include new weapons and defenses against the PLA's acquisition of supersonic cruise missiles, Shkval rocket torpedoes, and J-10 and J-11 fighters.

Central America

In preparing defenses to counter the PLA, the southern approach to the continental United States from Central America, Mexico, Cuba, or other Caribbean nations deserves our attention. The PLA has no bases in this region, our planning should include the deployment of U.S. ground forces in the event of a PLA intrusion through our southern border or through ports such as Houston or Mobile.

However unlikely it may seem to be, the southern approach is vulnerable, especially given the extensive nature of Chinese shipping interests. Commercial shipping could be used for the transport of military forces in the form of a Trojan horse. The PLA has conducted military exercises using freighters armed with artillery similar to the German Q-ships used in World War II. While a small PLA invasion force would hardly be expected to conquer the United States, neither should we overlook the disruption and destruction that even a small PLA invasion force could cause.

With its commercial influence at the ports of San Cristobal and Colon in Panama and friendship with the Marxist learning President of Venezuela, Hugo Chavez, China’s reach could well include our southern approach. Yet an opportunity could arise to renew our relations with Panama, glossing over the invasion of military forces along the Panama Canal, as a number of Panamanians would like to see the Yankees return.

This planning would need to include a strategy and reserves. These reserves would need to be stationed within the United States, not the Middle East or Persian Gulf Reserves for reserves. It is unreasonable to use Reserves and National Guard units in place of the regular armed forces, whether in scattered peacekeeping missions or the buildup for Iraq.

Summary

The PLA has developed similar attack capabilities to Germany’s lightning warfare, using surprise as the key for a sudden and powerful launch. The tools the PLA will use in the spearhead of its attack—ballistic missiles, high-energy lasers, and information warfare—are tools against which the United States have virtually no defense. For these reasons I wish to note for the record that we are woefully unprepared for a more serious and eminent war. I cannot stress enough the issues relating to the PLA’s war threat. We must continue to recognize the significant role our current actions in the Middle East play into China’s aggressive military intentions. To further illustrate my points, I will offer subsequent remarks detailing the present danger China poses elsewhere in the Record.

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 15, 2002

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor two very special friends, Richard and Elizabeth Hayman of Oscoda, Michigan, as they celebrate forty-five years of marriage and a loving commitment to each other and their family, including my Communications Director, Rik Hooper, his wife, Deborah Westa. It is not often that a family and a community have the good fortune of having two such outstanding individuals as Dick and Betty Hayman to count on to willingly and generously give their time and talents to the commonweal.

Dick and Betty met while he was serving in the U.S. Coast Guard and she was working at her father’s grocery store in South Portland, Maine. They married in 1957 and were later blessed with two children. Betty graduated from Gorham State Teacher College and also holds a master’s degree from Central Michigan University. Dick has a bachelor’s degree from Emerson College in Boston and a master’s degree from Central Michigan University.

For many years, Dick and Betty were teachers in the Oscoda Area Schools until they both retired to pursue other interests. Former colleagues and students will recall Betty for her compassion and her uncompromising demand for excellence to the best of one’s ability. A strong disciplinarian who often was referred to as the “Mother Superior,” Betty has a well-deserved reputation for wielding both a kind heart and firm hand. She also has had the wisdom to know when to apply the former and when to rely on the latter. Dick will always be remembered as the director who gave so many students their first and perhaps only experience in the theater. In fact, if Dick were to meet a former student today, he would be far more likely to recall the role they played than their name.

Theater enthusiasts in the Oscoda area have many fond memories of Dick and Betty in the roles they’ve played on stage and of the performances they’ve directed and produced as leaders of the Shoreline Players. Betty also has done exemplary work on the Oscoda Area Schools Board of Education, serving as its Vice President, while Dick used his retirement to write a novel. Of course, the Haymans never lost sight of their family responsibilities and they have provided untold joy to each of their grandchildren: Ryan; Christopher; Katie; Kassie; Kevin; Meaghan; Brenna; and, Bridget.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in expressing the gratitude of the United States Congress to Richard and Elizabeth Hayman for their work in educating our youth, and for their ongoing commitment to the arts. I am confident the spotlight will continue to shine on their work for many years to come.

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. WOOLESY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Everett H. Shapiro of Santa Rosa, CA, on the occasion of a tribute to his role as Trustee Emeritus of Social Advocates for Youth (SAY). SAY has focused services on children and their families since 1971, and Mr. Shapiro has been a trustee for 13 years.

SAY operates 25 programs in Sonoma County that assist 10,000 families per year in becoming caring, productive, and responsible members of the community. Mr. Shapiro’s life embodies a spirit of dedication to children that makes him a perfect match for SAY’s mission. In addition to his support of children’s causes, he is well known to Sussex County locals as the man who has handed out an estimated 250,000 Tootsie Rolls to them over 50 years. As a fan of Don Quixote, Snoopy, and the Marx brothers, Mr. Shapiro’s focus has always been on doing good deeds with a sense of humor. As the director of SAY, he has successfully raised two sons, Tad and David, in the community. After graduating from UC Berkeley and serving two years in the army, he joined the family wool buying business. He learned to value the diverse agriculture of Sonoma County and the ranching life style, but when Tad began kindergarten, Mr. Shapiro began law school. He graduated in 1967 just before his fortieth birthday and began practicing business, probate, and personal injury law. He has served in numerous professional organizations such as California Trial Lawyers Association, Sonoma County Bar Association, and American Arbitration Association. Tad and David, are now lawyers as well.

Always devoted to Santa Rosa and the community at large, some of his other community involvements include the Spirit of Santa Rosa Award, B’nai Brith, Special Olympics, Red Cross, Kid’s Street Theatre, Santa Rosa Human Rights Commission, Canine Companions, Rotary Club, Gray Foundation, and the Schulz Museum. He has received numerous awards including the Spirit of Santa Rosa Award from the Santa Rosa Chamber of Commerce and is recognized as a Paul Harris Fellow by the Rotary Foundation.

Mr. Speaker, Everett Shapiro’s record of caring and leadership emphasizes the term he often uses to describe the folks in his home town—he’s a “quality human being” whose life shows us how much this means to the community of Santa Rosa and Sonoma County.

Mr. Speaker, one of these distinguished individuals hails from my home district in Indiana. Professor Dennis Jacobs has received the award for Outstanding Research and Doctoral University Professor of the Year.

As a professor of chemistry at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana, he has won several teaching awards and the Presidential Award for dedicated service to the university. One prestigious award he received was from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The foundation named him a Carnegie Scholar in 1999 largely for completely redesigning an important introductory chemistry class. The redesign led to greater student success and engagement of the students, and the course is considered a leading example of the trend toward peer-led curricula.

Professor Jacobs has also combined the fields of chemistry and service learning. He created a course in which students and community partners evaluate lead contamination in area homes. He is a fellow with the Center for Social Concerns where he focuses on other methods of integrating community service into the curriculum. One of his colleagues has described him as “the kind of teacher who never stops growing, thinking, and changing.” When community service has become essential to America’s fabric, it is encouraging to know that there are still important contributors from such a prestigious university contributing to this effort.

Another outstanding educator to receive this award is Alicia Juarrero who is being awarded the Outstanding Community College Professor of the Year. She has served Manchester College in North Manchester, Indiana for forty-two years. She teaches a philosophy module in the National Endowment for The Humanities that uses a college-level humanities course to bring the poor out of poverty and into their communities.

The third distinguished professor from my home state of Indiana is James Adams for Outstanding Baccalaureate College Professor of the Year. He is the Fay Boyle Professor in the department of Modern Languages and Literatures at Santa Clara University and is the director of the university’s Ethnic Studies Program. He has taught at Santa Clara University since 1973 where he has garnered teaching awards as well as honors for publication and special service to the campus and community.

He has also created an outreach program with a local high school called the Eastside Future Teachers Project to encourage historically under-represented students to become teachers.

Mr. Speaker, I commend these four professors for their incredible contribution to the world’s most important profession: teaching.

They have set an example which all educators should be proud to follow.

TRIBUTE TO DEDICATED MEMBERS OF THE WEST BOYLSTON FIRE DEPARTMENT

HON. JAMES P. McGOVERN
OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Chief Ron Goodale, Deputy Chief Alvin Barakian, Deputy Chief Thomas J. Welsh, Chief Duncan Gillies, Firefighter, Paul Renault, and Chief Aaron Goodale, III from the town of West Boylston, Massachusetts who have retired after many years of dedicated service with the West Boylston Fire Department.

These men put their lives on the line every day to protect the citizens of West Boylston. Because of their efforts through the years, many lives and a great deal of property have been saved. Countless times these brave men have entered burning buildings or responded as Emergency Medical Technicians in order to save lives.

The town of West Boylston is very fortunate to have an outstanding fire department. As we all know—and as the tragedies of September 11th reminded us—the job of a firefighter is not an easy one. It takes a special person to perform the duties required of firefighters. That duty involves one risking one’s life every day. Through the years, these men and their colleagues have performed admirably. Their community is grateful for their work, and so am I.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to recognize these outstanding men, and I know the entire U.S. House of Representatives joins me in extending our best wishes to them and their families for a happy and healthy retirement.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO DEPARTING FLORIDA CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — Extensions of Remarks November 15, 2002

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN Mr. Speaker, it is with a mixture of sadness and enthusiasm that I bid farewell to friends and colleagues, CARRIE MEEK, DAN MILLER, and KAREN THURMAN as they prepare to end their service in the United States Congress.

I am sad because I have worked with these extraordinary individuals in Congress since 1992 when they were first elected to the House, but I am also excited for them as they embark on a new journey.

I have had the distinct pleasure of not only serving with Congressmen Meek and Thurman here in the House, but also in the Florida legislature. Dan Miller then made the Florida Congressional delegation even stronger when he joined the House in 1992.

I believe that throughout their tenure in the House these Members have dutifully served their districts, the state of Florida, and indeed the nation by working on the myriad of issues that have faced us during these last ten years. CARRIE MEEK and DAN MILLER were an important boost to Florida with their service on the Appropriations Committee and KAREN THURMAN made her mark by being the sixth woman to serve on the Ways and Means Committee.

I am certain their leadership will be missed by the constituents of Florida’s 5th, 13th, and 17th Congressional districts. For myself, I can certainly say that their friendship and accomplishments in the House will be sorely missed and I know that they will continue to succeed in their chosen paths after their distinguished service in the House.

I am proud to have known and worked with Congressmen CARRIE MEEK, DAN MILLER, and KAREN THURMAN, and I ask my Congressional colleagues to join me in paying tribute and saying goodbye to these dear friends. Godspeed to them.
Planning for PLA aggression as well as planning for an invasion of Iraq must consider the flow and supply of oil. From China’s perspective, the flow of oil from Indonesia, the Middle East, and potentially Russia must be assured to sustain its economic growth, which is needed to maintain the legitimacy of its communist government. Without oil, China’s economic growth may be compromised.

In this regard, U.S. diplomacy with Sudan may be cast in a new light. We may seek to supplant Chinese oil interests. While other considerations need to be factored into our diplomacy such as its civil war, it may be asked if a more humane treatment of the inhabitants of the south could be given to respect private property rights if a U.S.-led initiative were established. It is noteworthy how the Sudanese government did proffer cooperation for the capture of Al Qaeda terrorists, but its offer was turned down by the Clinton administration.

We should ask ourselves about our ability to defend the supply of oil from the Middle East and Persian Gulf, and the development of new supplies of oil, perhaps from equatorial Africa to develop alternatives to the problematic Middle East. In this light, our relationships with African countries, and Latin American neighbors and Mexico may gain a new status. In fact, I just returned yesterday from the Republic of Cote d’Ivoire where I held meetings with President Laurent Gbagbo, his Prime Minister and Members of Parliament. The recent discovery of significant offshore oil fields there have the potential to dramatically reshape the economic strength of the region.

The question of foreign oil supplies should affect our planning for naval strength, especially escort vessels that could protect oil tankers and convoys in time of war. This planning may embrace domestic policy on oil and gas production and exploration, and the development of alternative energy sources as well as the efficient use of coal.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thur sday, November 14, 2002
Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I previously submitted remarks concerning America’s defense against China, North Korea and Iraq. Given the eminent military action against Iraq by the United States and its allies, along with our outlook on North Korea’s nuclear missile capabilities, we must also recognize China’s capabilities to attack the U.S. and its national interests.

As mentioned in my previous remarks, in December 1999 China’s Defense Minister, General Chi Haotian, declared war “is inevitable” between China and the United States. He noted, “The issue is that the Chinese armed forces must control the initiative in this war.”

In my remarks we considered the capabilities of the United States in recognizing China’s threat and our ability to control initiative during battle. Yet there are several key matters of the Chinese position that must be considered by U.S. leaders and officials influencing policy regarding China and its oppressive People’s Liberation Army (PLA).

As the PLA began its transformation in the late 1980’s, recognizing the technological impetus of President Reagan’s Strategic Defense Initiative and the importance of technology in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, we began a procurement holiday, living off our forces from the Gulf War.

We reduced the acquisition of new weapons. We cut, for example, the number of B-2 bombers from 132 to 22. In ballistic missile defense, we denigrated Brilliant Pebbles from approval for acquisition in 1991 to a follow-on technology, leading to its termination in 1993. In 1995 or earlier, when we could have engaged major aerospace contractors to build a Space-Based Laser, we funded it at a nominal amount, leaving it as a future technological option instead of recognizing how the future was in our hands.

Today, as the Bush administration considers cutting the acquisition of F–22 stealth fighters and F–35 Joint Strike Fighters, China’s surface-to-air missile (SAM) technology is advancing based on Russian SAMS, which are reportedly capable of intercepting stealth aircraft, and pose a difficult defense for F–15 and F–16 fighters.

We have yet to develop hypersonic aerospace vehicles even though they have been proposed since the 1960’s. No small part of our failure to build aerospace vehicles—military space planes—must be attributed to a reluctance to embrace the Space Age, including its applications for ballistic missile defense and long-range strike vehicles.

Technology

Research and development has lagged for years, especially in physics, engineering, and materials. Our development of high-energy laser technology has been hindered by a lack of willingness to use this technology, whether for ballistic-missile defense or OIL BELT STORM

HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thurs day, November 14, 2002
Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I previously submitted remarks concerning America’s defense against China, North Korea and Iraq.

Given the eminent military action against Iraq by the United States and its allies, along with our outlook on North Korea’s nuclear missile capabilities, we must also recognize China’s capabilities to attack the U.S. and its national interests.

As mentioned in my previous remarks, in December 1999 China’s Defense Minister, General Chi Haotian, declared war “is inevitable” between China and the United States. He noted, “The issue is that the Chinese armed forces must control the initiative in this war.”

In my remarks we considered the capabilities of the United States in recognizing China’s threat and our ability to control initiative during battle. Yet there are several key matters of the Chinese position that must be considered by U.S. leaders and officials influencing policy regarding China and its oppressive People’s Liberation Army (PLA).

Planning for PLA aggression as well as planning for an invasion of Iraq must consider the flow and supply of oil. From China’s perspective, the flow of oil from Indonesia, the Middle East, and potentially Russia must be assured to sustain its economic growth, which is needed to maintain the legitimacy of its communist government. Without oil, China’s economic growth may be compromised.

In this regard, U.S. diplomacy with Sudan may be cast in a new light. We may seek to supplant Chinese oil interests. While other considerations need to be factored into our diplomacy such as its civil war, it may be asked if a more humane treatment of the inhabitants of the south could be given to respect private property rights if a U.S.-led initiative were established. It is noteworthy how the Sudanese government did proffer cooperation for the capture of Al Qaeda terrorists, but its offer was turned down by the Clinton administration.

We should ask ourselves about our ability to defend the supply of oil from the Middle East and Persian Gulf, and the development of new supplies of oil, perhaps from equatorial Africa to develop alternatives to the problematic Middle East. In this light, our relationships with African countries, and Latin American neighbors and Mexico may gain a new status. In fact, I just returned yesterday from the Republic of Cote d’Ivoire where I held meetings with President Laurent Gbagbo, his Prime Minister and Members of Parliament. The recent discovery of significant offshore oil fields there have the potential to dramatically reshape the economic strength of the region.

The question of foreign oil supplies should affect our planning for naval strength, especially escort vessels that could protect oil tankers and convoys in time of war. This planning may embrace domestic policy on oil and gas production and exploration, and the development of alternative energy sources as well as the efficient use of coal.

One of the lessons of the 1991 Persian Gulf War was the need for more effective ballistic missile defenses. The success of the improved Patriot-2 was incomplete. Its range was limited. It was a single-layer defense. It could not intercept Scuds during their boost phase.

More than a decade has passed since the Gulf War ended. Since that time we have begun to field a new version of the Patriot, the Patriot-3, for use against short-range ballistic missiles. But we have yet to deploy a defense against intermediate or long-range ballistic missiles, or a defense capable of intercepting ballistic missiles in space.

While, for example, on October 14, 2002 we completed the fifth successful interception test of a ground-based interceptor against an ICBM target and decoys, we have yet to deploy a defense that can intercept ICBMs.

Instead, we have dramatically reduced several effective ballistic missile defense programs since the 1991 Persian Gulf War. In 1993 the Clinton administration canceled Brilliant Pebbles, a program for building space-based interceptors that could intercept ICBMs and long-range ballistic missiles. In 2001 the younger Bush administration canceled Navy Area Wide, which would provide coverage similar to Patriot-3 but based on Aegis ships.

In 2002 we all but canceled the Space-Based Laser, ending its existence as an active program when it could provide a very effective boost-phase defense with global coverage in contrast to the limited coverage of the Airborne Laser.

For over a decade we have cut effective ballistic missile defense programs, especially restricting space-based defenses. This regressive policy continues today. The proposed ground-based interceptor for a national missile defense, while absorbing billions of dollars, will afford only a modest capability. It will, for example, be less capable and more expensive than Brilliant Pebbles, and be susceptible to decoys and countermeasures directed at its ground-based radar and centralized command and control center.

The deployment of Patriot-3, a very modest accomplishment for ten years of development, does not compensate for the proliferation of ballistic missiles that has occurred since the 1991 Persian Gulf War. Since 1991 North Korea has begun to build a range of long-range ballistic missiles that can reach the United States. Iran has developed the intermediate-range Shahab-3, and is developing the Shahab-4 with even longer range. China has engaged in a ballistic missile buildup of all types with improved accuracy. The proliferation of ballistic missiles has extended to India and Pakistan, creating conditions for a nuclear exchange.

With the exception of the draw down of the former Soviet arsenal, the ballistic missile threat has increased, and Russia’s missiles are still capable of massive destruction.

NEW WEAPONS

As the PLA began its transformation in the late 1980’s, recognizing the technological impetus of President Reagan’s Strategic Defense Initiative and the importance of technology in the 1991 Persian Gulf War, we began a procurement holiday, living off our forces from the Gulf War.

We reduced the acquisition of new weapons. We cut, for example, the number of B-2 bombers from 132 to 22. In ballistic missile defense, we denigrated Brilliant Pebbles from approval for acquisition in 1991 to a follow-on technology, leading to its termination in 1993. In 1995 or earlier, when we could have engaged major aerospace contractors to build a Space-Based Laser, we funded it at a nominal amount, leaving it as a future technological option instead of recognizing how the future was in our hands.

Today, as the Bush administration considers cutting the acquisition of F–22 stealth fighters and F–35 Joint Strike Fighters, China’s surface-to-air missile (SAM) technology is advancing based on Russian SAMS, which are reportedly capable of intercepting stealth aircraft, and pose a difficult defense for F–15 and F–16 fighters.

We have yet to develop hypersonic aerospace vehicles even though they have been proposed since the 1960’s. No small part of our failure to build aerospace vehicles—military space planes—must be attributed to a reluctance to embrace the Space Age, including its applications for ballistic missile defense and long-range strike vehicles.

Technology

Research and development has lagged for years, especially in physics, engineering, and materials. Our development of high-energy laser technology has been hindered by a lack of willingness to use this technology, whether for ballistic-missile defense or...
anti-satellite operations, although the Air Borne Laser program would be an exception—the Air Force sponsored its development for tactical air superiority as well as missile defense.

Our use of lasers—directed energy weapons—could be quickened. For example, instead of consigning the high-energy gas chemical Alpha laser used in the Space-Based Laser program to a museum or trash bin, as is perhaps contemplated by the Missile Defense Agency, we should build such a defense. We should use advanced technology, not throw it away.

The use of medium-power lasers in aircraft, equipping them with another countermeasure against SAMs or air-to-air missiles could be hastened. Realizing the potential of lasers to irradiate the heat-seeking element of a SAM or air-to-air missile, Russia is planning to equip jet fighters with laser pods. China’s use of laser technology for anti-satellite or air-defense applications should not be discounted. In July, 2002, a Department of Defense report on the PLA noted how it excels in lasers.

Other technological developments could be highlighted, including our reluctance to build military space vehicles with rapid launch access. Both NASA and the Air Force declined to finish development of the X-33, leaving behind another half-finished reusable rocket program like the DC-X/Delta Clipper. An emphasis on space technology and reusable launch vehicles is needed to counter the PLA, which recognizes the importance of establishing superiority in space.

SUMMARY

In World War 11, Germany defeated France using blitzkrieg warfare. The French Army was demoralized by its lightning attacks while the British escaped at Dunkirk. The PLA has developed a similar but modern capability for lightning attacks, planning to seize and retain the initiative. Surprise is key to its planning to launch a sudden, powerful blow. The tools the PLA will use in the spearhead of its attack—ballistic missiles, high-energy lasers, and information warfare—are tools against which we have virtually no defense, with information warfare being a possible exception. A preemptive ballistic-missile strike, aimed at our air and naval forces would cause widespread devastation, as would the use of high-energy lasers against our satellites.

Should China launch an attack—and the only plausible situation where we would engage China—the resulting depth of warfare would be the same magnitude as found in World War 11. Not a minor skirmish as in Special Forces deployed in Afghanistan, or a replay of the 1991 Persian Gulf War, war with China would involve an all-out commitment to victory and the re-allocation of federal resources to achieve that victory.

For these reasons I wish to note for the record that we are woefully unprepared for the more serious and eminent war. As detestable as Saddam Hussein is, Iraq lacks the tools for a long-distance, preemptive strike as are possessed by the PLA.

TRIBUTE TO STATE SENATOR RICHARD H. FINAN

HON. DAVID L. HOBSON OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Ohio State Senate President Richard H. Finan, who is retiring after 30 years of distinguished service to the people of the State of Ohio.

Whether it was managing the state’s $45 billion two-year budget or restoring the Statehouse to its original grandeur, Dick Finan has always seen the big picture and been guided by his unwavering principles and love of his home state and its people.

Dick Finan was a key figure in passing landmark ethics reforms and was a tremendous help to me on health care reforms I was sponsoring in the Committee on Health, Human Services and the Aging. Dick also will be long remembered for his tireless work in the restoration of the Ohio Statehouse and in creating a unified organization to preserve and maintain all the facilities on Capitol Square.

The Statehouse restoration had been discussed for years, but for one reason or another, the plans were always sidelined. When Dick was put in charge of the project, he did what needed to be done to save the building for future generations while being a good steward of taxpayer money. Dick made sure that the project was done in the interest of historical accuracy, and not to create a palace for the comfort of state legislators.

In Columbus, Dick Finan has been guided by faith and family and never chosen the trappings of office over the importance of being at home with his family. Dick is a true gentleman and leader, and I am proud to call him my friend.

As Ohio’s Seventh District Representative to the Congress of the United States, I take this opportunity to join with members of the Ohio delegation to honor the efforts and the many outstanding achievements of State Senator Richard H. Finan. His many contributions as a member of the Ohio State Legislature and leadership will be remembered.

IN RECOGNITION OF RON PACKARD AS THE RECIPIENT OF THE FIRST ANNUAL GLORIA MCCLELLAN PUBLIC SERVICE AWARD

HON. DARRELL E. ISSA OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to share some news about our former colleague Ron Packard. On October 30, President Bush signed into law H.R. 4794, which designated the United States Postal Service located at 1895 Avenida Del Oro in Oceanside, California, as the Ronald C. Packard Post Office Building. I believe that naming this post office in honor of Mr. Packard’s service and leadership is a fitting tribute to his public service.

The San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG) has joined the President and Congress in recognizing Ron’s career by awarding Mr. Packard the first annual Gloria McClellan Public Service Award. The award, which will be presented annually, honors the local elected leader that best exemplifies Gloria McClellan’s commitment and dedication to service. As the Mayor of my hometown, I can personally attest to the contributions Gloria McClellan has made to the community and the San Diego region.

The San Diego Association of Governments serves as a forum for decisionmaking on transportation, land use, the economy, environment, and criminal justice. Earlier this year the SANDAG Board of Directors, composed of mayors, council members, and supervisors from each of the San Diego region’s 19 local governments, established an award to honor the 29-year public service legacy of Vista Mayor Gloria McClellan.

With over 30 years of public service, Mr. Packard was the perfect candidate to receive the Gloria McClellan Public Service Award. Ron Packard has been active in local civic and business affairs and his leadership brought him to the forefront of regional issues. Ron Packard’s legacy as a public servant is characterized by hard work, honesty, leadership and patriotism.

Representative Packard began his public service in the United States Navy, which he entered upon graduation from dental school in 1957. Ron was elected to his first public post in 1962 and held various local government positions until he was elected to Congress on November 2, 1982. During Ron’s 18 years on Capitol Hill he always made it a priority to support local projects that were important to his constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I commend SANDAG for establishing this award to honor Mayor Gloria McClellan’s public service. I also join SANDAG in congratulating my friend, Ron Packard, for his faithful public service to the people of California and on winning this prestigious award.

YOU ARE A SUSPECT

HON. RON PAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to read “You Are a Suspect” by William Safire in today’s New York Times. Mr. Safire, who has been one of the media’s most consistent defenders of personal privacy, details the Defense Department’s plan to establish a system of Total Information Awareness. According to Mr. Safire, once this system is implemented, no American will be able to use the internet to fill a prescription, subscribe to a magazine, buy a book, send or receive e-mail, or visit a web site free from the prying eyes of government bureaucrats. Furthermore, individual internet transactions will be recorded in “a virtual centralized grand database.” Implementation of this project would shred the Fourth Amendment’s requirement that the government establish probable cause and obtain a search warrant before snooping into the private affairs of its citizens.

I hope my colleagues will read Mr. Safire’s article and support efforts to prevent the implementation of this program, including repealing any legislation weakening privacy protections that Congress may inadvertently have passed in the rush to complete legislative business this year.

YOU ARE A SUSPECT
(By William Safire)

Washington—If the Homeland Security Act is not amended before passage, here is what will happen to you: Every purchase you make with a credit card, every magazine subscription you buy and medical prescription you fill, every Web site you visit and e-mail you send or receive, every academic grade you receive, every bank deposit you make, every trip you book and every event you attend—all these transactions and communications are what the Defense Department describes as “a virtual, centralized grand database.”

To this computerized dossier on your private life from commercial sources, add every piece of information that government has about you—passport application, driver’s license and bridge toll records, judicial and divorce records, complaints from noisy neighbors to the F.B.I., your lifetime paper trail plus the latest hidden camera surveillance—and you have the supersnoop’s dream: a “Total Information Awareness” about every U.S. citizen.

This is not some far-out Orwellian scenario. It is what will happen to your personal freedom in the next few weeks if John Poindexter gets the unprecedented power he seeks.

Remember Poindexter? Brilliant man, first in his class at the Naval Academy, later earned a doctorate in physics, rose to national security adviser under President Ronald Reagan. He had this brilliant idea of secretly selling missiles to Iran to pay for hostages, and with the illicit proceeds to illegally support contras in Nicaragua.

A jury convicted Poindexter in 1989 on five felony counts of misleading Congress and making false statements, but an appeals court overturned the verdict because Congress had given him immunity for his testimony. He famously asserted, “The buck stops here,” arguing that the White House staff, and not the president, was responsible for fateful decisions that might prove embarrassing.

This ring-knocking master of deceit is back again with a plan even more scandalous than his previous stovepiping. Poindexter heads the “Information Awareness Office” in the otherwise excellent Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, which screened the Internet and stealth aircraft technology. Poindexter is now realizing his 20-year dream: getting the “data-mining” power to snoop on every public and private act of every American.

Even the hastily passed U.S.A. Patriot Act, which widened the scope of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act and weakened 15 privacy laws, raised requirements for the government to report secret eavesdropping to Congress and the courts. But Poindexter’s assault on individual privacy rides roughshod over such oversight.

He is determined to break down the wall between commercial snooping and secret government intrusion. The disgraced admiral dismisses such necessary differentiation as “bureaucracy.” And he has been given a $200 million budget to create computer dossiers on 300 million Americans.

When George W. Bush was running for president, he squawked in defense of each person’s medical, financial and communications privacy. But Poindexter, whose contempt for the restraints of oversight drew the Reagan administration into its most serious blunder, is still operating on the presumption that on such a sweeping theft of privacy rights, the buck ends with him and not with the president.

This time, however, he has been seizing power in the open. In the past week John Markoff of The Times, followed by Robert O’Harrow of The Washington Post have revealed the extent of Poindexter’s operation, but editorialists have not grasped its undermining of the Freedom of Information Act.

Political awareness can overcome “Total Information Awareness,” the combined force of commercial and government snooping. In a similar overreach, Attorney General Ashcroft tried his Terrorism Information and Prevention System (TIPS), but public outrage over release of names and postal workers as snouts caused the House to shoot it down. The Senate should now do the same to this other exploitation of fear.

The Latin motto over Poindexter’s new communications industry: “Potestas Est Scientia et Virtus Est Potentia” “knowledge is power.” Exactly: the government’s infinite knowledge about you is its power over you. “We’re just as concerned as the next person with protecting privacy,” this brilliant mind blandly assured The Post. A jury found he spoke falsely before.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN D. GRAHAM

HON. RICHARD A. GEPHARDT OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to John D. Graham, a great business leader in St. Louis, and a pioneer in the communications industry. Over the years, I have been proud to see what was once a small St. Louis public relations firm grow to become what is now a widely respected international powerhouse—Fleishman-Hillard. One of the key reasons that this company has become a worldwide leader in the communications industry is the leadership provided by John Graham, its Chairman and CEO.

Recently, that leadership earned John some well-deserved recognition. John received one of my state’s greatest honors, the Missouri Honor Medal for Distinguished Service in Industry. This is the Missouri Honor Medal for Distinguished Service in Journalism. He joins an impressive list of past recipients, which includes Winston Churchill, Walter Cronkite, Gordon Parks, George Gallup, and Tom Brokaw.

In presenting the award, it was noted that John has not only built Fleishman-Hillard into one of the largest agencies in the world, but that he has consistently sought to improve the ethics, integrity, and quality in the practice of his profession. John has always understood the responsibility that comes with communicating with the public, and his emphasis on professional, honest representation has made his company the gold standard for public relations firms.

There is no one more deserving of the Missouri Honor Medal for Distinguished Service in Journalism than John Graham. He will continue to do great things for both Fleishman-Hillard and the St. Louis community. I am proud to call him a friend, and salute his efforts.

TAIN RELATIONS ACT SHOULD BE CORNERSTONE OF OUR RELATIONSHIP WITH TAIWAN

HON. STEVE CHABOT OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call attention to our “One China” policy and its inability to deal with the current situation in the Taiwan Strait. Since the adoption of the 1972 Shanghai Communiqué, the United States acknowledges that “all Chinese on either side of the Taiwan Strait maintain there is but one China and that Taiwan is a part of China.”

This “One China” policy, however, does not reflect the reality of Taiwan’s maturation into a vibrant democracy. As the distinguished Majority Whip stated in March 2000 in an address to a Center for Strategic and International Studies forum, “* * * We must discard old policies that no longer have credibility because they are no longer true * * * whatever utility the “One China” policy diplomatic fiction might have had twenty five years ago has been erased by the new reality. Currently there are two states: one being the free, democratic, and peace-loving state of Taiwan. The other is the authoritarian communist regime of the People’s Republic of China.”

The PRC established in 1949, has not for a single day exercised sovereignty over Taiwan. And, in 1991, Taiwan’s Kuomintang Party relinquished all claims to being the sole, legitimate government of China. Subsequently, former President Lee Teng Hui, in 1999, referred to cross-strait relations as a “state to state relationship.” While this exemplifies a distinction of two separate governments, the U.S. position on this matter remains an influential factor in the peaceful resolution between both sides.

For the past twenty-five years, the U.S. has exercised a delicate diplomacy in which it fails to send consistent messages toward the East Asia region. Little progress has been achieved in our relations with both China and Taiwan because of the various interpretations regarding the “One China” policy.

The United States cannot under any circumstances allow the People’s Republic of China to impose a communist future on Taiwan. The “One China” policy undermines our actions and commitments; rather than clinging to old relics of the cold war era, let us reaffirm our dedication to democratic ideals in the new millennium.

We must redirect our attention toward fulfilling our obligations to Taiwan, as spelled out in the 1979 Taiwan Relations Act. In the Taiwan Relations Act, the United States pledges a full commitment to the defense and security of Taiwan in the event of Chinese aggression. Clearly, the Taiwan Relations Act should be the cornerstone of our relationship with Taiwan—not the obsolete “One China” policy.
Achievement of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory Golden, Colorado

Hon. Mark Udall
Of Colorado

in the House of Representatives

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise to call attention to another achievement of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, based in Golden, Colorado. It is appropriate that on its 25th anniversary, the National Renewable Energy Laboratory (NREL) has garnered yet another award recognizing its contributions to the development of clean energy technologies. In its December issue, Scientific American magazine has named NREL one of the Scientific American 50—the magazine’s first list recognizing annual contributions to science and technology that provide a vision of a better future.

NREL, along with Spectrolab Inc., was selected by the magazine for its work in increasing the efficiency of photovoltaic solar cells. NREL’s research into multi-junction solar cells for more than a decade has led the way to collecting by the magazine for its work in increasing the efficiency of photovoltaic solar cells. NREL’s research into multi-junction solar cells has received strong recognition from the sun.

The magazine noted that all the recipients of the Scientific American 50 have “demonstrated clear, progressive views of what our technological future could be, as well as the leadership, knowledge and expertise essential to realizing those visions.” I continue to be proud of the tremendous contributions that the National Renewable Energy Laboratory had made—to Colorado, our country, and our world. Congratulations to all at NREL on this important award.

In Honor of Representative Dan Miller

Hon. E. Clay Shaw, Jr.
Of Florida

in the House of Representatives

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of my dear friend and colleague, Dan Miller, whom I have had the privilege of working with from the great state of Florida.

A member of the freshman class of 1992, Dan represents the Thirteenth Congressional District of Florida along the Gulf Coast areas of Sarasota and Bradenton. Dan never held public office before his election to Congress, but once here, fought for legislation critical to the future of our state. A man of his word, Dan took office with a pledge to term limit himself and has kept that promise, much to our personal dismay.

Looking back on his career, Dan has served his district and his country honorably in his roles on the Appropriations, Government Reform and Census committees. Dan has stood as a staunch fiscal conservative who is committed to reducing wasteful government spending. These beliefs have manifested themselves most notably through his efforts to curtail the government sugar program. Dan also did great things in his role as an appropriator. He was one of the original cheerleaders of doubling the National Institutes of Health budget, sensing its growing importance to the U.S. and the world health communities.

Beyond all of these accomplishments, Dan and his wife, Glenda are my neighbors here in Washington and dear friends. I will miss Dan’s presence in this House as my wife, Emilie, and I will miss their presence in our home. Although the MILLERS leave Washington, I look forward to many years of continued friendship. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say all Americans have been better served for having Dan Miller in Congress. This body exists so that the people of our country have a voice in their government. The votes Floridians cast to send him to Washington brought this House reason to honor their judgments and hold strong conviction. Today we honor his service to his country and wish him well. God Bless Dan and Glenda Miller.

Fighting for Disabled Military Retirees

Hon. Michael Bilirakis
Of Florida

in the House of Representatives

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, for more than 17 years, I have introduced legislation to repeal a 100 year old law that unfairly penalizes military retirees. These retirees are individuals who are eligible for military retirement benefits as a result of a full service career and are also eligible for disability compensation from the VA based on a medical problem they incurred while in the service. Under present law, retirees who are disabled must surrender a portion of their retired pay if they want to receive the disability compensation to which they are entitled. This issue is commonly referred to as “concurrent receipt.” Congress enacted this unjust law in 1891.

My legislation to completely eliminate the offset between military retired pay and VA disability compensation has received strong bipartisan support in both houses of Congress. In fact, more than 90 percent of Members of the House of Representatives and more than 80 percent of the Senate have cosponsored legislation to repeal the current offset.

The 106th Congress took the first steps toward addressing this inequity by authorizing the military to pay a monthly allowance to military retirees with severe service-connected disabilities rated by the Department of Veterans Affairs at 70 percent or greater. These provisions were expanded to include retirees with ratings of 60 percent.

For years, I have been told that I had to get the money included in the budget resolution before action would be taken on my legislation. So earlier this year, I worked very hard with Chairman Nussle and other members of the Budget Committee, like Representative Charlie Bass, to secure funding for a partial repeal of the offset in its Fiscal Year 2003 budget resolution. While very money in the budget resolution fell short of the funding needed to completely eliminate the current offset, it would have provided for a substantial concurrent receipt benefit.

For that reason, I was particularly pleased that the House Armed Services Committee in their mark up of the authorization bill, as initially approved by the House, H.R. 4546 included a provision to authorize military retirees who are 60 percent or greater disabled to receive their full retired pay and VA disability compensation benefit by Fiscal Year 2007. During its consideration of the authorization bill, the Senate approved an amendment to authorize full concurrent receipt immediately.

Given the overwhelming support that repeal of the current offset has received in both bodies of Congress and the fact that the money was included in the Fiscal Year 2003 budget resolution, I am extremely disappointed that the conference report for the Bob Stump National Defense Authorization Act does not contain at least the House-passed concurrent receipt language. While I appreciate the efforts of Chairman Duncan Hunter and others to include a benefit for some disabled retirees in the final bill, I am frustrated that we have once again failed to address this issue for the majority of retirees who have been forced to fund their own retirement for years. I have already started to hear from disabled retirees who are angry that we did not do more on this issue in the defense bill.

At a time when our nation is calling upon our Armed Forces to defend democracy and freedom, I am afraid we are sending the wrong message to our men and women in uniform. I want to remind my colleagues of a quote by our first Commander-in-Chief George Washington: “The willingness with which our young people are likely to serve in any war, no matter how just, shall be directly proportional to how they perceive the veterans of earlier wars were treated and appreciated by their nation.”

I will continue my efforts to eliminate the unjust offset that penalizes disabled military retirees. In the 108th Congress, I hope my colleagues will join me in the fight to restore military retired pay to the men and women who earn it by serving in our Nation’s Armed Forces.

Our Florida Colleagues: Carrie Meek and Karen Thurman and Dan Miller

Hon. Mark Foley
Of Florida

in the House of Representatives

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleagues in recognizing the contributions that three of our Florida colleagues—Carrie Meek and Karen Thurman and Dan Miller—have made. Each brought invaluable gifts to this institution, and each are leaving with a legacy that any one of us would be proud to have.

I have known Karen Thurman since we both were elected state officials in the Florida Legislature. And both then and since, she worked hard and long for constituents in need. She has been a particularly strong champion of veterans’ and senior citizen causes and of Florida’s agricultural community. Both of us have served on the Agriculture Committee here and since then on the Ways and Means Committee. And while Karen and I have found ourselves divided many times by partisan political issues, I have never known her once not to fight for what she believed in. She’s a fighter and a wonderful person, and while politics ultimately determines our fate here, there is no question Karen will continue a strong role in making both Florida and this nation better.

The same can be said of Carrie Meek. Carrie has dedicated her professional and personal life to the people of Florida, as a public servant, college administrator and educator. Carrie has been a true champion to her constituents. She has been a person that would reach out to the neediest and be their strongest advocate. I will always admire her commitment and loyalty to her convictions.

Surely, Carrie’s contributions to the lives of all Floridians will continue to pay dividends for generations to come.

And I want to join all my colleagues in thanking them for that.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE JUSTICE WILLIAM COUSINS, JR.

HON. BOBBY L. RUSH
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to the distinguished life and career of the Honorable William Cousins, Jr., Justice of the Illinois Appellate Court. A scholar, patriot, and gentleman, Justice Cousins has never rested in the ivory tower that his distinguished academic and professional achievements could afford him. Instead, he has chosen at every stage of his life, to use his tremendous gifts to engage and serve his country, city, and community in the pursuit of social justice. He is truly a source of inspiration not only for the residents of the 1st Illinois Congressional District, but for all Americans everywhere.

Born on October 6, 1927 in Swifton, Mississippi, Justice Cousins moved to Chicago where he graduated from DuSable High School in 1945. After graduating from the University of Illinois in 1945 with honors in Political Science, and Harvard Law School in 1951, Justice Cousins answered the patriotic call to duty and served in the United States Army from 1951 through 1948 as a combat infantry 2d and 1st Lieutenant during the Korean conflict. He would continue on in his military service until 1975, when he retired from the United States Army Reserve Corps as a Lieutenant Colonel.

While serving his country in the military, Justice Cousins began to build an impressive, multifaceted legal career as an attorney with Chicago Title & Trust Company. He then went on to become State Attorney of Cook County, Illinois before going into private practice. Justice Cousin was then elected Alderman for Chicago’s 8th Ward. He served as a Circuit Court Judge of Cook County, Illinois from 1976 until his election in 1992 to the Illinois Appellate Court. His tenure on the Illinois Appellate Court includes service as Chairman of the Executive Committee, First Appellate District, Presiding Justice of the First District, 3d Division, and 2d Division, and chair for Illinois Appellate Judges Annual Meeting. He was appointed by the Illinois Supreme Court as a member of the Executive Committee of the Illinois Judicial Conference since 1983 and was appointed Chairman of the Illinois Judicial Conference from 1989 to 1990. Justice Cousins is also a member of the Special Supreme Court Committee on Capital Cases.

Aside from his distinguished legal career, Justice Cousins has lent his immense talents to several civic organizations by serving as a board member of the Citizens’ School Committee, Parkway House as well as the Chicago Area Planned Parenthood Association. He was also president of Chatham-Avondale Public Community Council, and is a founding member and former Board Member of PUSH. Justice Cousins was a Deacon at Lincoln Memorial Congregational United Church of Christ, and was an Assistant Moderator and former member of the Executive Council of the United Church of Christ. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity and Sigma Pi Phi Fraternity.

Justice Cousins’ status as a pillar of civic and professional responsibility has not gone unrecognized, as he has been honored by well over one dozen organizations. It is only fitting that Justice Cousins be recognized and honored by the United States Congress.

CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY OF JAY, FLORIDA

HON. JEFF MILLER
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the residents of Jay, Florida.

On the 30th of November, Jay will celebrate its centennial anniversary. Named after its first postmaster, Mr. J.T. Nowling, this small, Northwest Florida town near the Florida-Alabama border was established one hundred years ago primarily as a farming community. Today, many residents of this Santa Rosa County community follow in their ancestors’ agrarian footsteps.

In 1940, a small group of farmers embarked on a venture to create a livestock market in Jay. Sales brought in $1 million by 1950 and the industry continues to thrive today. Jay boasts about their peanut buying and warehouse facility as well as Florida’s only two cotton gins, making this one of Florida’s finest and most progressive agricultural towns.

In the early 1970’s, the discovery of oil changed the life of this small community. The Jay oil field has approximately 67 oil wells that have provided profits of more than $400 million. The revenues generated from Jay’s entrepreneurial spirit have funded a new city hall, fire department and recreation complex.

In spite of its brisk development, Jay remains steadfast in its roots, distinctive in its identity, and carries on all that America cherishes about its small towns. Much like my nearby hometown of Ft. Myers, these 700 residents live in a place where life centers on church, work and family. It is a place where the people are loving, friendly and neighbors help neighbors in times of need.

On behalf of the United States Congress, I wish to congratulate the people of Jay, Florida on their centennial and wish them the best as they continue to move and prosper through the 21st century.
TRIBUTE TO GREG LAURIE PASTOR AND FOUNDER OF HARVEST CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP EVANGELIST AND FOUNDER OF HARVEST CRUSADES

HON. KEN CALVERT OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to an individual whose dedication to the community and to the spiritual well-being of Southern California, the nation and the world is exceptional. Southern California has been fortunate to have dynamic and dedicated community leaders who willingly and unselfishly give time and talent to making their communities a better place to live and work. Greg Laurie is one of these individuals. The week of November 24th will mark 30 years of dedicated service and Greg’s work will be celebrated by his family, friends, colleagues, church members, and all those whose lives he has touched through his work.

Greg Laurie is a native of Southern California, born in Long Beach on December 10, 1952. His interest in the ministry began with a girl he followed into Bible study. At 19 he committed his life to Jesus Christ and grew a Bible study group into a church of more than 15,000 people. Greg is senior pastor of Harvest Christian Fellowship in Riverside, California, the eighth largest church in America. As a pastor, Greg has sought to meet the challenges and opportunities of religion in the 21st century. In his years of faithful service to the Harvest Christian Fellowship he has provided unwavering spiritual support and guidance.

In addition to his work in the church, Greg sought out a way to present the gospel of Jesus Christ to Southern Californians in a non-traditional, non-church environment. With the help of a fellow colleague, Greg began the Harvest Crusades, a multi-night event of up-beat music, genuine worship, and a clear presentation of biblical messages. The first Harvest Crusades saw more than 90,000 people attend. Since that time, crowds totaling over 2.8 million people have attended Harvest Crusades in California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, New Mexico, Hawaii, Colorado, New York, Pennsylvania, Florida and North Carolina, in May of 2000. Harvest Crusades ventured outside the U.S. for the first time to present Harvest 2000 in Wollongong, Australia. Tens of thousands more people have participated in the Harvest Crusades via the Internet.

Besides conducting evangelistic crusades, Harvest Ministries sponsors A New Beginning, an international daily radio program with messages by Greg Laurie, as well as a weekly television program, Harvest: Greg Laurie. Greg also serves as a board member of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association and Sammy’s Pizza. At the Billy Graham Atlantic Crusade in 1994, Dr. Graham stated “The media have been writing Greg Laurie up as the man who is going to be the evangelist of the future and he is.”

In recognition of Greg’s exemplary work as a minister and evangelist, his 30th anniversary as pastor will be a week long celebration of programs, activities and ceremonies. Greg’s tireless work has contributed unmeasureably to the spiritual well-being and betterment of Southern California and the world. His outstanding involvement in the community makes me proud to call him a fellow community member, American and friend.

HONORING REPRESENTATIVE STEVE HORN

HON. DAVID DREIER OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for this opportunity to speak about a good friend and respected colleague, Congressman STEVE HORN, who is retiring from this body after 10 years of unwavering integrity in service. And though we wish our friend nothing but the absolute best as he leaves Washington, we will miss Steve immensely, and are sad to see the parting of this true Californian.

Congressman HORN has served with diligence on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee on behalf of his constituents in Southern California. His Congressional District benefited greatly from his leadership, especially in the areas of environmental stewardship and infrastructure investment. He consistently championed projects critical to the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, preserving local wetlands, and supported the need for new technologies to advance ocean water desalination.

Congressman HORN has been an unsung hero on federal government accountability for which I thank and commend him. Chairing the Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management, and Intergovernmental Relations, Congressman HORN dedicated his committee’s jurisdiction to making federal agencies more accountable to the taxpayer, ensuring that our government was open and accessible to the public, and demanding that red-tape and other bureaucratic excesses were eliminated.

Many of us can only look with awe at Congressman HORN’s distinguished and vast public service career. He served as the Eisenhower Administration under Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, and then got his legislative feet wet while working for California Senator Thomas Kuchel on historic legislation including the Civil Rights Act of 1965. In addition, Congressman HORN dedicated 18 years to the California State University, Long Beach, where he was recognized as one of the most effective college presidents in the country.

There is no doubt that Congressman HORN has accomplished a great deal. However, I believe his greatest accomplishment lies in not just what he has been able to do, but in the person that he is. He is a man of character and personal integrity, who sought real answers to real problems for the benefit of strangers, and whose watchful gaze held us all to the same higher standard he set for himself.

I will miss seeing him in the halls of the Capitol, but will look forward to seeing him and his lovely wife, Nini, at home in California.

COMMITTEE REPORT TO H.R. 4689, THE “FAIRNESS IN SENTENCING ACT”

HON. ROBERT C. SCOTT OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, as the Ranking Member of the Crime Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, I wish to address an aspect of H. Rep. 107-769, the Committee Report accompanying H.R. 4689. In that report, the Majority unjustifiably impugns the integrity of James M. Rosenbaum, a distinguished federal judge and former prosecutor who testified before our subcommittee on May 14, 2002.

Judge Rosenbaum serves as the Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota. Prior to his appointment to the bench by President Reagan, he served as the United States Attorney for the District of Minnesota. Judge Rosenbaum did not testify before Congress. Rather, he was invited to participate in the May 14 hearing by Chairman SENSENBRENNER at my request.

At the hearing, Judge Rosenbaum expressed support for an amendment to the federal sentencing guidelines that had been introduced by Democratic Congressman P. Ewing of the United States Sentencing Commission, and expressed opposition to H.R. 4689, a bill to block that guideline amendment. Judge Rosenbaum’s position in favor of the amendment is shared by, among others, the three Republican members of the Sentencing Commission and the Judicial Conference of the United States. Moreover, Judge Rosenbaum’s position is largely embodied in legislation (section 202 of S. 1874) introduced last year by Senators JEFF SESSIONS (R–AL) and ORRIN HATCH (R–UT).

The amendment in question would cap the base offense level established by the sentencing guidelines for low-level drug defendants who are classified as “minimal” or “minor” participants in the offense, as those terms are defined in the guidelines manual. In support of that policy, Judge Rosenbaum testified using fact patterns taken from actual cases in the District of Minnesota. He never testified about the actual sentences imposed; he simply demonstrated the differences between the presumptive sentencing range under the existing sentencing guidelines, and the presumptive sentencing range calculated under the proposed guideline amendment. His analysis was primarily based on pre-sentence reports, which describe in detail the roles of low-level defendants in actual rather than hypothetical cases.

The Committee’s 22 page critique of Judge Rosenbaum’s testimony is highly repetitious, but contains four major charges:

First, the Committee complains that Judge Rosenbaum did not cooperate in the Committee’s requests and made the resources of his courtroom available to committee staff. This was despite the verbatim nature of the Committee’s inquiries. Chairman SMITH sent four letters to Judge Rosenbaum over the three month period following the hearing. The first letter, worded in the manner of litigation interrogatories, enumerated eleven separate categories of information sought by the Committee. One follow-up letter, four pages in length and densely footnoted in the form of an adversarial brief, posed six separate questions about the Committee’s concerns.

The practice of pounding follow-up questions to congressional witnesses is common, but the intensity with which this subcommittee pursued Judge Rosenbaum is unprecedented.

Second, the Committee claims that Judge Rosenbaum misstated facts by not explaining that several defendants he described were awarded downward departures from the guideline range.

This criticism misunderstands the point of Judge Rosenbaum’s statement. In supporting the Sentencing Commission’s proposed amendment, Judge Rosenbaum faulted the current sentencing guidelines that result in unamendment, Judge Rosenbaum faulted the Sentencing Commission guidelines.

By voting in favor of H.R. 4689, a majority of the House Judiciary Committee expressed its disagreement with the views of Judge Rosenbaum, all seven members of the Sentencing Commission, and Senators Sessions and Hatch. That is the Committee’s prerogative. It is also the Committee’s prerogative to rebut the arguments of any witness. However, the Committee exceeded the bounds of decency and fairness when it published a 22-page diatribe against a distinguished, respected federal judge and former United States Attorney.

RECOGNIZING AGENT DAVID F. CORRIGAN

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the numerous contributions of Agent David F. Corrigan, one of Monterey Park’s finest police officers. Agent Corrigan is retiring from active duty after 28 years of outstanding and selfless service.

Agent Corrigan graduated from the Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department Academy and joined the Monterey Park Police Department on September 9, 1974, as part of the Patrol Bureau. During his career, Agent Corrigan was assigned to the Patrol and Detective Bureaus and periodically to the Administration Bureau as a Background Investigator.

Agent Corrigan has received countless commendations from the Monterey Park Police Department. He was highly recognized for his role during the evacuation of a hospital emergency room that was held hostage in June of 1995 and for apprehending the gunman. Furthermore, he frequently received letters of appreciation from residents and other law enforcement agencies for his work as an investigator and as a patrol officer.

In November 1998, Agent Corrigan was recognized as the Police Department Employee of the Month and in 1999, he was awarded the department’s third highest honor, the Distinguished Service Medal, for outstanding performance throughout his career as an officer, detective, field training officer and field supervisor. Agent Corrigan is an integral member of the community and his church. He is a role model for the youth of Monterey Park and continues to participate in the Police Department’s D.A.R.E. Camp and In-School Scouting programs.

Throughout his career, Agent Corrigan was known for his honesty, compassion and professionalism. He will be greatly missed by his co-workers and the community he greatly impacted. Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me in expressing my gratitude to Agent Corrigan for his selfless dedication to our community.

TRIBUTE TO JUDGE SID STEWART

HON. HAROLD ROGERS OF KENTUCKY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a dedicated public servant, family man, friend, and all around great Kentuckian, Judge Sid Stewart. After 17 years of tirelessly serving as County Judge/Executive of Morgan County, Kentucky, he is retiring from public office. I want to express my deepest gratitude for his many contributions.
A native of Eastern Kentucky, Judge Stewart grew up on a hillside farm in Knott County. As a youth, he labored alongside his father in the log woods and lumber industry. Never one to shy away from hard work, he used his knowledge of the lumber industry to pay his way through college. After graduating from Morehead State University, he went on to lead a successful professional career that has included working as a Juvenile Probation Officer, Assistant Director of the Northeast Kentucky Area Development Council, Executive Director of the Community Services Board, and President of a construction company. He also served as a member of a number of civic and professional boards and was a member of the Morgan County School Board for four years.

Sworn into office on January 6, 1986, Sid Stewart has worked tirelessly to improve the lives of the people in Morgan County. As a lifelong resident of Eastern Kentucky, he has a personal interest in the well being and prosperity of the region and understands the challenges and needs facing the residents of the area. As the chief executive officer, Judge Stewart has focused his efforts on lifting up the people of his community. He has worked with local, state and federal officials on a variety of initiatives aiming to boost the local economy, create new jobs and enhance public services. Without the determination and vision of Judge Stewart, these initiatives would not be possible.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleagues and myself, I want to thank my friend Judge Stewart for the time and effort he has put into the lives of others. Although his time in public office is drawing to a close, I know the people of Morgan County will continue to benefit from his contributions for many years to come.

THE WAR IN CHECHNYA AND MOSCOW

HON. CHRISTOPHER H. SMITH OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, next week following the NATO conference in Prague, President Bush is scheduled to meet with President Putin in St. Petersburg, Russia. It is expected that the two leaders will discuss such vital issues as the war against terrorism, the policies in Iraq, safeguards against weapons of mass destruction, and expanded energy cooperation between the United States and Russia. I would urge Mr. Bush to include on the agenda the continuing conflict in Chechnya.

At the time, the Russian Government and its people are still recovering from the horrific events of last month, when a group of armed Chechen terrorists seized approximately 700 hostages in a Moscow theater and threatened them with execution if the Putin Administration did not withdraw its forces from Chechnya. After three days of terror, Russian special forces captured the theater, apparently killing all the terrorists. In the preliminary gas attack to neutralize the terrorists, over one hundred hostages lost their lives. This terrorist attack was appropriately condemned by the Bush Administration, and we all sympathize with the innocent victims of this attack.

But, Mr. Speaker, this does not mean that we should not step back and seriously examine the circumstances that have driven some elements of the Chechen resistance to such suicidal extremes. Perhaps it is because the Russian military, in its drive to suppress Chechen separatism, has employed means which virtually guaranteed to drive a despoothing civilian population into the arms of radicalized resistance. In the three and a half years since the war ignited when Chechen militant invaded neighboring Dagestan, the Russian military has embarked on a campaign of carnage, destruction, and terrorizing against civilians. There are credible and ongoing reports of atrocities committed by members of the Russian military—indiscriminate shelling and bombing, murder, assault, rape, torture, arrests “disappearances,” kidnapping and holding civilians for ransom. It is imperative that military personnel who commit such egregious human rights violations face criminal charges but the Russian military and judicial system has yet to demonstrate its commitment to bring such criminal actions to account.

Nor should we have any illusions about some elements of the Chechen fighters, who have murdered hostages, kidnapped civilians for ransom and used them as shields during combat operations, and embarked on a campaign of assassination against fellow Chechens who work for the Russian civil government. As Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Steve Pifer testified before the Helsinki Commission, “We have seen evidence of individuals or certain factions in Chechnya who are linked to international terrorist elements including Al Qaeda.” Without a doubt, war criminals and terrorists should be brought to justice, wherever they are and whomsoever they serve.

In the wake of the attack on the theater in Moscow, President Putin has hardened an already uncompromising position against the Chechen fighters. But, it should be clear that the Russian scroched-earth policy against Chechnya and the Chechen people is not bringing peace to the region. Rather, such policies are sowing the dragon’s teeth of hatred and conflict for generations to come. The distinguished Newsweek commentator Fareed Zakaria recently wrote: Terrorism is bad, but those fighting terror can be very nasty, too. And the manner in which they fight can make things much, much worse. It is a lesson we had better learn fast because from Egypt to Pakistan to Indonesia, governments around the world are heightening their repression and then selling it to Washington as part of the war on terror. Russian officials called the Chechen fighters “rebels” or “bandits” until recently. Now they are all “international Islamic terrorists.”

Secretary of State Colin Powell continues to call for the observation of human rights and a political settlement in Chechnya, while consistently and properly supporting Russia’s territorial integrity. But as the Danish Foreign Minister, Anders Fogh Rasmussen, recently summed up the issue, “We, of course, support Russia in the fight against terrorism...but it is not a long-term solution to the Chechnya problem to launch a military action and bomb the country to pieces.”

In addition, the war in Chechnya has affected the lives of refugees, who have fled the constant carnage. In September of this year, I and 10 other colleagues from both the House and Senate wrote President Putin regarding the plight of the internally displaced persons escaping Chechnya to the neighboring province of Ingushetia. We urged the president to resist the forcible return of internally displaced persons seeking refuge in Ingushetia, elsewhere in the Russian Federation, or to any location where the security situation is such that their lives will be endangered. However, I have recently learned of 300 Chechen families who are currently facing expulsion from Ingushetia and are seeking refugee status in Kazakhstan. I hope the Russian Government will not expel these individuals, but instead will take all possible actions to alleviate the situation for the many innocent victims of the brutal violence.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge President Bush to include these important issues in his talks with President Putin when they meet in St. Petersburg.

HON. KAREN McCARthy
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. McCarthy of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Mr. John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil, a man some call “Mr. Kansas City.” “Buck” is a man who has come to embody the ideals we share as a nation. As he celebrates his 91st birthday on November 13, 2002, I am proud to honor his lifetime of achievement as our hometown hero.

John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil was born November 13, 1911 in Carrabelle, Florida. He developed a love of baseball at an early age and his father nicknamed him “Buck” after the owner of the Miami Giants, Buck O’Neal. Though a segregated America denied Buck the opportunity to grace the diamonds of the Major Leagues as a player, he was able to showcase his unmatched talent with the Kansas City Monarchs of the Negro Leagues. He joined the Monarchs in 1938, and played for them until 1943, at which point he went on to serve his country in World War II. Recognizing his patriotic responsibility to our country, he entered the United States Navy and was stationed in the Philippines from 1943 until his discharge in 1946. Buck was named player/manager for the Monarchs in 1948 and continued his association with the team through the end of the 1955 season.

As a player, Buck had a career batting average of .288, including four .300-plus seasons at the plate, and led the Kansas City Monarchs to victory in the 1942 Negro World Series. After 12 years as a player, Buck changed hats and managed the Monarchs to four more league titles in six years. Following his career with the Kansas City Monarchs, Buck joined the major leagues as a scout for the Chicago Cubs in 1962, in which he made him the first African American to coach in the Majors. Buck is credited with signing Hall of Fame baseball greats Ernie Banks and Lou Brock to their first professional contracts, and is acknowledged to have sent more Negro League athletes to the all white major leagues than any other man in baseball history.

Today he serves as the Board Chairman for the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum in Kansas City and spends his time promoting the achievements of African American baseball players who played for the love of the game, despite the color barriers at that time that kept them out of the Majors. He is also actively involved in utilizing the Museum to assist in the education of youth in the community through programs such as “Read to the Negro Leagues,” where elementary school students learn from community readers about the pioneers of the Negro Leagues. I was honored to be asked to read from “second base” to a group of students as part of celebrating Buck’s 88th birthday party. Buck participates in the Negro Leagues Museum’s “Night of the Harvest Moon” program on Halloween night. It provides area children a safer alternative from the traditional to door-to-door trick or treating. More than 16,000 children have participated in the event over the past five years.

Our “Hometown Hero” is very active in various charitable causes within the community. He lends his name and energy to sponsor the Buck O’Neil Golf Classic, a fundraiser for the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum and the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. In the past four years, the event has raised nearly $400,000 for the organizations. For the past seven years, the Kansas City Securities Association, Inc. Educational Endowment Fund has given four-year scholarships to graduating high school seniors in honor of Leagues players, one each year in honor of Buck O’Neil. And Buck still keeps on giving. This entire birthday week is dedicated to giving. Buck wants to fill the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum for his birthday, so the museum is trying to get 9,100 people to the museum in honor of Buck’s 91st year. Yesterday, Buck’s actual birthday, tickets to the museum were only a dollar all day, and the 91st person to walk through the door won an assortment of prizes. On Friday, November 15, Buck will get together with friends for “Givin’ Buck the Blues,” a star-studded celebrity roast in his honor and donate all of the nights proceeds to the Negro Leagues Baseball Museum, And there is no indication that Buck will ever slow down. He started his birthday on the radio, left to read to children, spoke at a news conference, and Project S.O.Disable to help kids get school supplies and clothes. The amazing thing about all of this is that he still finds time to give hugs, give autographs, speak to church groups, and throw baseballs to the small children who frequently walk up to him. Buck has risen to national prominence with his moving narration of the Negro Leagues as part of Ken Burns’ PBS baseball documentary. He has been the source of countless national interviews including appearances on “Late Night with David Letterman,” and “The Tonight Show with Tom Snyder” as well as being interviewed numerous times on the Jim Rome Show, a nationally syndicated sports radio program. Mr. Rome has talked to Buck so often because Buck had such rich experiences to share about various baseball players, and baseball in general. He states that Buck was one of the most interesting interviews he had ever had on his show.

On his 90th birthday, the City of Kansas City, Missouri named a street in his honor one block north of 18th and Vine, the area that housed the Negro Leagues Museum and also as the Apollo Jazz Museum. The street’s new name is John “Buck” O’Neil Way. I look forward to the day in the near future when the Baseball Hall of Fame Veterans Committee recognizes our hometown hero for his accomplishments on and off the baseball field and approve his induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

In addition to his work in Cooperstown and at the museum in Kansas City, Buck has found new and exciting ways to enjoy life and spread his infectious and warm spirit. He is a local hero whose recognition for service is recognized at home and nationally. Buck and the Negro Leagues are to be honored with an award from the “100 Black Men” in New York on November 14, 2002. He was given the trumpet Award in 1998 by the Turner Broadcasting System saluting him for achievements to African Americans. The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International conferred on Buck its “Paul Harris Fellow” in appreciation of his “...furthering better understanding and friendly relations among peoples of the world.” Kansas State University bestowed upon him the “Lifetime Leadership Award” in “recognition for leadership, community involvement, commitment to diversity, and life long record of contribution to the public.” Buck has received numerous awards in recognition of his work in the community and assistance to various organizations. Some of these awards are: the United States Army Award for Outstanding Support of Army recruiting in Kansas City, the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce Centurion Leadership Award, the State Historical Society of Missouri Distinguished Service Award, and the 2001 Jewish Community Center Ewing Kaufman Outstanding Achievement Award. As an award winning baseball player, esteemed baseball manager and scout, decorated veteran, and humanitarian Buck exemplifies Society in public service and his career serves as a beacon for generations to come. He symbolizes the spirit of American patriotism and is a role model for us all. With all that Buck has done and all that he continues to do for Kansas City and the nation, one might wonder what Kansas City will give Buck for his birthday. Buck simply says, “If I could just see that museum overflowing, it would make my heart sing. That’s all I want for my birthday.” Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the many lives Buck has touched will return the favor on this birthday and many more to come.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in saluting John Jordan “Buck” O’Neil. It is an honor and a privilege to join in the 91st birthday celebration of an American hero, a national treasure, a symbol of African American pride, and one of Kansas City’s favorite sons. Buck’s favorite song is “The Greatest Thing In All My Life, is Loving You.” Buck, I love you, salute you and your heroic accomplishments, and am delighted and privileged to know such a patriot and to call you my friend. Thank you, Buck.

COMMENDING PRESIDENT BUSH’S LEADERSHIP

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend President Bush’s courageous leadership in securing bipartisan Congressional and unanimous U.N. support to disarm Iraq. The threat of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons being transferred from Saddam Hussein to group like al Qaeda is a real threat to America and our allies.

I also want to praise President Bush’s initiatives in strengthening our important relationship with India. Over the past 10 years, bilaterial trade between the two more than tripled from 6 billion to 19 million per year. We have continued to engage in joint military exercises, and we share common goals and concerns.

One major goal is to dramatically increase bilateral trade. We have made significant advances in this area, but more remains to be done. We share the common threat of international terrorism from al Qaeda, and we must continue to share intelligence and coordinate counterterrorism strategies through our joint task force on terrorism.

U.S.-India security cooperation is helping to foster greater stability in Asia and to make for a safer world. U.S.-India joint military exercises were held in Alaska from September 29 through October 11, 2002. The U.S. Army 1st Battalion 501st Para Infantry Regiment and India’s Ambassador to the United States, Mr. Lalit Mansingh, traveled to Alaska to observe the exercises. The Ambassador was welcomed by Brigadier General John M. Brown 111, Commander of the U.S. Army Alaska at Fort Richardson, who expressed appreciation for the professionalism, discipline and adaptability of the Indian armed forces.

Also last month, a major joint U.S.-India naval exercise, named “Malabar IV,” was successfully completed in the Indian Ocean. The U.S. and Indian Navies have agreed to jointly patrol the Strait of Malacca to ensure the uninterrupted flow of vital oil supplies. The U.S.-India Defense Planning Group has been established to help coordinate ongoing joint activities, while the Joint Steering Groups of all of the three defense services are scheduled to meet again later this year to plan future joint exercises, training and other areas of cooperation for the next year.

Earlier this Fall, India once again demonstrated that it is indeed a democracy, where power is transferred by means of free and fair elections, with the conclusion on October 7th of a four-stage election for the Assembly in India’s State of Jammu and Kashmir. Despite the ongoing threat of violence by terrorist elements—most of which come from outside of India’s borders—to intimidate voters and candidates alike, the elections went forward successfully, as judged by the United States and other independent observers. Turnout was approximately 45 percent, and the result was a defeat for the ruling party, the Bharatiya Janata Party.

One major goal is to dramatically increase bilateral trade. We have made significant advances in this area, but more remains to be done. We share the common threat of international terrorism from al Qaeda, and we must continue to share intelligence and coordinate counterterrorism strategies through our joint task force on terrorism.

As the Washington Times reported on October 14 (“Embassy Row” column by James Morris), “The United States is praising the bravery of voters in Kashmir who defied threats from Islamic militants to vote in large numbers this month.” The article quotes the U.S. Ambassador to India, Robert Blackwill, who said, “It was a successful election. The election commission did a very fine job. It was a credible election carried out by democratic means.”

Other top U.S. officials have echoed these sentiments. The Assistant Secretary of State for South Asia, Christina Rocca, in a speech last month at the American Enterprise Institute, said that ‘Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee’s “personal commitment to making them [the elections] transparent and open” was a critical factor in moving the democratic process forward.’

Ambassador Blackwill did not mince words when it came to describing the guerillas that used violence in an effort to disrupt the elections, calling them “terrorists.” ‘Terrorists can call themselves many different things at different places, our Ambassador said. “Sometimes they are called freedom fighters. Any person who kills civilians is a terrorist.”

Mr. Speaker, America knows how it feels to be a democracy targeted by terrorists. India has for many years endured the same experience. In fact, the terrorist elements targeting India in Kashmir have links to the same Al Qaeda terrorist network that attacked America on 9/11 and was apparently responsible for the bombing in Indonesia last month. I have spoken out on several occasions this year about the terrorist attacks against Kashmiri civilians, and I have urged the leaders of Pakistan to stop allowing their country to be used as a base for terrorist training camps and extremist religious clerics who foment hate against America.

Unfortunately, the opposite may be happening. On November 12, the Orlando Sentinel, and other publications, reported that, “U.S. intelligence says most of al-Qaeda’s surviving leaders have relocated to Pakistan.” The newspaper noted that U.S. forces cannot operate in Pakistan as they have in Afghanistan, due to concerns that an American military presence would anger Pakistan. Therefore, we must press President Musharraf to take control of this situation.

Assistant Secretary Rocca stated in her speech that the U.S. and India are allies in the struggle against terrorism, saying, “Counter-terrorism cooperation is maturing rapidly, including intelligence sharing, training, finance and antiterror laundering cooperation, improving border security, fighting cyber-terrorism and increasing mutual legal assistance.” In fact, a Treaty on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters between the U.S. and India is awaiting approval by the full Senate, having been approved by the Foreign Relations Committee in the other Body.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote from President Bush in his remarks welcoming Prime Minister Vajpayee to Washington on November 9, 2001. “My Administration is committed to developing a fundamentally different relationship with India, one based upon trust, one based upon mutual values. After all, the Prime Minister leads a nation that is the largest democratic nation in the world.” I appreciate the commitment of our President, and I look forward to working with the Administration as the United States continues to improve and expand our relationship with India to the benefit of the people of both of our great nations.

I look forward to working with the Republican leadership and President George W. Bush to shape a new relationship between the U.S. and India in the 108th Congress. to move impoverished Americans to self-sufficiency, the Clinton Administration greatly expanded the number and scope of these waivers and many states took advantage. Many provisions of the innovative state waiver programs were later incorporated into the legislation that created the TANF program.

My September 2002 letter took advantage of a welfare waiver and over the past six years has created a highly successful program that has seen welfare caseload reduction above the national average. Oregon’s waiver and the waivers of eight other states have expired, or will expire, between September 2002 and September 2003. Once they expire, the states will have to spend scarce resources reconfiguring their programs to meet the federal TANF standards.

This comes at a particularly inopportune time. With the fall off in the American economy, states around the nation are experiencing some of the largest budget deficits in history. Furthermore, rising unemployment rates have forced many out of work and back on to the welfare rolls. Scarce resources should not be spent on programmatic changes to ineffective programs, particularly when it comes at the expense of our most needy constituents.

With work on TANF reauthorization uncompleted, states with expiring welfare waivers will not be able to adequately plan their welfare programs for the future. It makes little sense for them to begin transitioning to the current program with the knowledge that Congress intends to make substantive programmatic changes, particularly in how states are criterion to extend existing state waivers.

DAWSON FAMILY TRAGEDY

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I rose to pay homage to our fallen "Front Line Soldiers." The soldiers that I speak of did not die thousands of miles away from our shores in a foreign land; they were executed in their own home as they slept. These soldiers were not killed in combat or armed with the latest weapons technology to devise; they fought a life and death battle armed only with a strong voice and a determination that they would not surrender. If the City of Baltimore were to erect a monument to all the innocent lives lost during the proliferation of drug violence in our community, tragically the most recent names to be added would be Carnell and Angela Dawson, along with their children; Keith and Kevin Dawson (9 year old twins); Carnell Dawson Jr., 10; Juan Ortiz, 12 and LaWanda Ortiz, 9.

On October 16th, while this family slept, a cold-blooded killer entered their home, spread gasoline throughout, and ignited a blaze that swept through the house in a few short minutes. Reportedly, this was done in retribution for the repeated efforts of Mrs. Dawson to stop these dealers from selling drugs in front of her home, in plain view of her young children. That night, Mrs. Dawson and five of her six children lost their lives. Mr. Dawson battled hard but perished a week later from the burns he sustained. We can not, and we will not walk away from the horrific acts of such cold-blooded killers.

Mr. Speaker, this Congress must take action to give the people of Baltimore and people around this country the tools they need to combat the proliferation of drug related violence in our communities.

As the Ranking Member on the House Criminal Justice, Drug Policy and Human Resources Subcommittee I am especially wounded that such a barbaric act could occur within a city in my own district. I will do everything in my power to ensure that the effort to fight terrorism does not drain the fight against drug terror at home. Baltimore City Mayor Martin O’Malley and Police Chief Ed Norris have used their limited resources to make a positive impact on reducing drug related crimes in the city of Baltimore. With the help of citizens, the mayor and the police chief have achieved a 23 percent reduction in violent crime in just a few short years. Federal agencies also report that Baltimore City has achieved the largest reduction in violent crimes of any major city in America. However, the plague of drug abuse is not a local problem or a problem limited to people of color; it is a national problem that demands a federal response.

The National statistics show that this problem is not limited to Baltimore City. The Bureau of Justice Statistics reports that in 1998 an estimated 61,000 convicted jail inmates said they had committed their offenses to get money for drugs. The cost-effects of these statistics on Baltimore City and other communities throughout our nation are incalculable. That is why I am encouraged by the swift and decisive actions taken by Director John P. Walters of the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) to arm our domestic front line soldiers with the resources they need to combat the bane of our communities.

I joined Director Walters on October 23 of this year, as he announced the federal government response to this tragedy. Effective immediately, ONDCP will redirect existing funding resources within the Washington-Baltimore High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area Program (HIDTA) to better protect specified high-crime neighborhoods in Baltimore City. The federal funds will help to pay the cost of additional foot patrols, police overtime pay, surveillance cameras and home security programs. This is only a down payment on the debt owed to the Dawson family and the many other families around this nation who are the domestic front line soldiers in what some residents of Baltimore call "a killing ground."

The Baltimore police will do more; more must be done to protect families living in communities of fear. Drug gangs cannot be allowed to rule our court system through intimidation. Children should not fear stray bullets as they sit in front of their homes. Families await a day when they can sleep soundly knowing that the drug dealer is behind bars within their community. Baltimore City’s fight against these drug gangs is not a war America can afford to ignore; and retreat is not an option.
enemies that it is our resolve to say once again: ‘Don’t tread on the United States of America; that we are prepared to do whatever is necessary to seek out and to destroy those who would destroy our way of life.

RANGHLI. And we come back to where the Congress has met over 200 years ago, and I cannot help but thinking of our forefathers believing how proud our forefathers should be of us, to come back after 200 years, and to see what we have done with their Constitution, how much we have expanded it, and how much today as we meet are we prepared to protect it. How little did they know that those who picked cotton or those who came into our country to build our roads and our railroads, those that would come from foreign countries seeking religious and economic freedom, would be coming here as a part of the United States Congress 200 years later. (Applause.)

U.S. history is strange because not only are we living it, but to give New Yorkers an opportunity to say thank you to our colleagues in the House means that we’re saying thank you to America. We are basically saying, as New Yorkers, “God bless this great country, that gives us an opportunity to have our diversity, and to continue to believe that the legacy that we are going to leave to those to follow us, is that we’re not going to allow terrorism to instill terror in our heart; that our basic commitment is to those that would not allow an enemy to intimidate us, we’re not going to allow terror to take away our basic freedoms; that we’re not going to strike any in the country without knowing where the enemy actually is; and that the opportunities that we have been given as a people, of education, of Social Security, of health care, of opportunity are going to protect to ensure that, as we protect this country, we protect those civil liberties that have been passed, that will assist us when the Congress meets, no matter where they meet, they will be saying that we protected the Constitution that was given to us over 200 years ago.” (Applause.)

RANGHI. My mother, your mother, everyone always said that during times of pain, that you’d have to seek and you can find some strength. One of the truths of that is that when we were struck, it was hard to believe that we could find some good.

But when we found it was good, that America gave us an opportunity to say thank you to each other. America gave us an opportunity to see how blessed we were; that we could see other without wishing color, without seeing party label, without seeing where we came from, and recognize that we had an obligation to protect what we have.

Mr. Governor, Mr. Mayor, thank you for giving us the support of bringing us together. And now we can say that we really owe a lot to each other, because we need each other. We hope this never happens again, but thank you, Congress, for helping us with what we did, and not without us, without our courage, we deeply appreciate the opportunity. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. More than 2,800 people lost their lives between the North and South Tower of the World Trade Center, but the toll could have been far, far worse if it were not for the valor and professionalism of our local and regional firefighters, police officers and other emergency responders. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. Showing tremendous courage, they kept others safe and rescued more than 25,000 people from the World Trade Center, the largest and most successful emergency evacuation in modern history. Their heroism inspired so many.

Three hundred and forty-three members of the Fire Department of New York City gave their lives for freedom on 9/11. We will never forget their bravery and their sacrifice.

It is now my privilege to introduce Susan Magazine. She is the assistant commissioner to the Commissioner of the Family and Children’s Assistance Unit. She is also a woman who lost her husband Jay, who worked at the World Trade Center. (Applause.)

MAGAZINE. Thank you, Mayor Bloomberg. Mayor, Governor Pataki, distinguished members of Congress, distinguished guests, I am honored to have been asked to come here this afternoon to speak with you. I come here because I want to express to you, our nation’s leaders, directly from someone who lost a loved one, a family member, last September 11th.

As the mayor of my husband Jay was one of the more than 2,800 people who perished at the World Trade Center on that day. Jay and I spent our entire adult lives together. And now we can say that we really have celebrated our 20th wedding anniversary.

We have two children. Melissa is 14 and Andrew is 11. Melissa starts high school next week, and Andrew starts middle school.

Jay was the catering sales manager at Windows-on-the-World, a spectacular restaurant on the top of the north tower. One of our favorite shared family memories was all of us—Jay, me, Melissa and Andrew—going up to the restaurant on many occasions during the construction work to reopen Windows on the World.

MAGAZINE. What a beautiful restaurant it was. When you’re up there you felt like you were on top of the world.

And Jay loved it. He loved working at Windows. He loved going to the Windows Center. On October 17th of next month, we would have celebrated our 20th wedding anniversary.

When Michael accepted the award he told a story about how he and Jay would meet almost every morning in the Windows cafeteria for coffee. And every morning as they were leaving, Jay would turn to Michael and say, “You know, we’re the luckiest guys in the world to be able to do what we do.”

When our kids went to visit Jay, which was almost every morning, they would go to the Windows Center. And when the advocacy leaders, hear directly from these individuals and individual families. Every one of us lost a loved one. Jay was a husband, a father, a son, a wife, a mother, a daughter, a brother, a sister, a neighbor, a friend. Over 2,800 individual people lost on that day.

And it’s been remarkable to me how many Americans truly understand that each of us were real people, were real families who have experienced this enormous tragedy in very individual, very personal and very immediate ways.

Every day the people who work for the city of New York go to enormous lengths to do whatever they can for us, for the families. The city, the state and the entire nation have given us their support. Thank you.

Mr. Governor, Mr. Mayor, thank you for giving us the opportunity to come together. And now we can say that we really owe a lot to each other, because we need each other. We hope this never happens again, but thank you, Congress, for helping us with what we did.

It’s been more than a year since we started this endeavor to give aid to the families. It’s a priority of what we do. And we are extremely thankful for all of the support and [inaudible] from the city, the state, the federal government, your state’s leaders, what has been given to us.

BLOOMBERG. We spent hours, days, weeks, months, years responding to thousands of letters and gifts from all over the country; from your states, and your districts. And we respond to each one of them. We received cards from veterans in the army, houses of worship, individual people from all over the country, teddy bears, quilts, pictures, books, offers of weekends away for family members, paintings, scholarships for children, songs, poems, prayers. Whatever it is that people have to give, they want to reach out to individual family members and somehow try and make a difference to each family.

And these are the people that you represent, please tell them we thank you and the families in your home districts and your states how much it means to us that so many Americans have offered us their generosity and their kindness.

The events of September 11th were an attack on our nation and the nation and the world. Everyone who lives in the United States has been affected by September 11th. As our nation’s leaders, you should know that at the Family Assistance Unit of the fire department, we spent 200 days on 200 days responding to letters and gifts from all over the country; from your states, and your districts. And we respond to each one of them. We received cartons of letters from schools, camps, houses of worship, individual people from all over the country, teddy bears, quilts, pictures, books, offers of weekends away for family members, paintings, scholarships for children, songs, poems, prayers. Whatever it is that people have to give, they want to reach out to individual family members and somehow try and make a difference to each family.

behalf of the people of New York City. I am pleased to memorialize this historic joint session of Congress in our city by presenting a commemorative Steuben glass eagle to the House of Representatives.

Minority Leader Gephardt? (Applause.)

Thank you on behalf of all New Yorkers. Gephardt. Thank you so much. I accept this on behalf of all our members. And, Charlie, I don’t think you have an attitude at all. (Laughter.)

Thank you. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. The city is also proud to present a commemorative eagle to the Senate. Minority Leader Lott, would you come up to the podium? (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. On behalf of all New Yorkers, thank you, sir.

Lott. Thank you very much, Mr. Mayor. On behalf of the United States Senate, we express to you our appreciation for all you’ve done, and for this. Senator Daschle and I will find a special place for this great eagle. Thank you. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. Thank you, Speaker? (Applause.)

And Mr. Speaker, English. (Applause.)

HASTERT. On behalf of the U.S. Congress, we have a unique gift: a token of that day, and a symbol of the strength of this nation.

Over the Capitol of the United States flew the flag of the United States of America. And on September 11th, we took that flag down, we weren’t sure in any way how we were going to use that flag. But we think it’s very appropriate today to give to the city of New York as a memento of what this Congress believes in: the ability and strength of the people of New York, the spirit of the people of New York is truly the spirit of America. Thank you. (Applause.)

Daschle. On September 11th, when the people of South Dakota saw what happened, they dropped everything. One ranch couple, themselves struggling right now, sold 100 head of cattle to maintain the proceeds to the victims and their families. A class of second graders collected pennies, thinking that they might be able to collect or raise a couple of hundred dollars. They raised $1,776.05. I’m sure you could find similar stories from Speaker Hastert’s constituents in Illinois. Senator Lott’s, Mississippi. Congressman Gephardt’s in Missouri.

But in reaching out to help the people of New York, we realized it was the people of New York who were helping us. Your courage helped steady a wounded nation.

So today, I join Speaker Hastert, on behalf of all those who inspired, to present you this token of our appreciation. If a hero isn’t born, you can build a home for one. A memorial you build to the victims of September 11th, to let all New Yorkers know that they didn’t just inspire a city, they inspired a nation. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. Dick, would you come up? And, Trent, and if you could come up here as well. (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. Thank you.

Earlier, I proudly, perhaps boastfully but accurately, referred to New York City as the nation’s capital. It is now apparent that this was not an idle boast.

It is my great pleasure to introduce a great composer, arranger, conductor, musician, and in my book most importantly an educator. The winner of the Pulitzer Prize for music, and the artistic director of jazz, at Lincoln Center, Winton Marsalis. (Applause) (Music.) (Applause.)

BLOOMBERG. As to my boast about culture, I will rest my case. (Laughter.)

Thank you.

Well, thank you for joining us for this historic event. The members of Congress will now exit, en masse to visit ground zero and to pay respects to the more than 2,800 people who died for freedom. Governor Pataki and I will go with them.

But to facilitate their orderly departure, I would ask that all other guests please remain seated until the members have left for the balloonroom. Thank you for your cooperation. And thank you for showing your support for the greatest city on Earth.

EXPRESSING SORROW OF THE HOUSE AT THE DEATH OF THE HONORABLE PAUL D. WELLSSTONE, SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MINNESOTA

SPEECH OF HON. LUCILLE ROYBAL-ALLARD OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November, 12 2002

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution honoring Senator Paul Wellstone and to express my deep sadness at his unexpected death, and that of his wife Sheila, their daughter Marcia, members of his campaign staff, and the two pilots of the plane.

Senator Paul Wellstone was a man of conviction and passion who worked tirelessly on behalf of America’s families. He was dedicated to making the American dream a reality for all Americans—both in his career and among us. Senator Wellstone always stood firmly by his principles, consistently representing the people of Minnesota with honor and courage.

I had the privilege of knowing Senator Wellstone and working with him and his wife Sheila on the issue of domestic violence. Senator Wellstone was a vigorous champion for reform. He was a driving force behind enactment of the Violence Against Women Act—the most important domestic violence law in our nation’s history. He also authored and helped pass legislation that provides services and support to children who grow up in violent homes and fought for legislation that helps health care providers do more to stop domestic violence.

During the past three Congresses, I was honored to partner with Senator Wellstone in introducing legislation that helps provide employment stability and security to victims of domestic violence. And most recently, to have partnered with him to secure $5 million dollars for the Department of Defense to fund confidential victim advocates to address the problem of domestic violence among our military personnel.

Senator Wellstone will be remembered as one of this nation’s most dedicated and nationally recognized advocates on domestic abuse. All of us who partnered with him to put an end to this horrific crime know that this movement has lost an irreplaceable leader. His lifelong efforts to make our communities safer and more just will serve as a model for all of us who will continue to fight against the cycle of violence that plagues so many American families.

Mr. Speaker, Senator Wellstone will be sorely missed by all of us here in Congress, and fondly remembered as the Senator from Minnesota who brought a message of social justice and equality to the people of the great North Country. My sincere condolences go out to the Wellstone family, families of all those aboard the plane, to all the residents of Minnesota.

EXPRESSING SORROW OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SPEECH OF HON. EDWARD R. ROYCE OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the Anaheim Angels on their tremendous achievement. I am pleased to join my fellow colleagues from Orange County as we congratulate the Anaheim Angels on their miraculous World Series win.

For those of us who grew up in Orange County, this is a tremendous moment. Gene Autry formed the team in 1961. Now, after more than 40 years, the Angels have won their first World Series Championship.

The Angels’ victory was far from predicted. They were the underdog all the way. After all, the previous season, the Angels finished 41 games out of first place.

Anaheim was the wild card team—most gave them little chance of knocking off the perennial favorite New York Yankees for the American League Division Series. The Angels then went on to defeat the Minnesota Twins to win the American League pennant. And then finally, defeated the San Francisco Giants in the World Series in seven hard-fought games.

The Angels’ victory was electric. Fans across Orange County came equipped with their rally monkeys and thunder sticks to cheer our team to victory.

The Angels’ victory over the Giants was truly amazing. The Angels had never won a playoff series before beating the Yankees. Anaheim is the first team to win the World Series without having any player who had ever played for a World Series winner previously.

The victory is a testament to the teamwork and abilities of the Anaheim players.

They were led by manager Mike Scioscia; Tim “The Kingfish” Salmon, who has played his entire career for the Angels; Pitcher John Lackey—who was the first rookie to win a Game 7 in 93 years; and I think it is fitting that third baseman Troy Glaus—a native of Orange County—was named most valuable player of the World Series.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Angels’ players, coaches, staff, and the fans, who were instrumental in bringing the World Series Championship to Anaheim.
HONORING ROHM AND HAAS LONE STAR PLANT

HON. KEN BENSTEN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate the Rohm and Haas Lone Star Plant as they are saluted by the Deer Park Chamber of Commerce as the 2002 Industry of the Year. The Rohm and Haas Lone Star Plant is being recognized for providing critical industrial services, while continuing to make a pos-tive impact in the Deer Park community.

Located on a thirteen acre site in Deer Park, construction of the Lone Star Plant began in 1995, with its first batch created in June of 1996 and its first shipment dispatched soon af-after. One of the plant's main activities is the production of polymeric emulsions, which are used in various other product applications. In addition, the Rohm and Haas Lone Star Plant manufactures approximately twenty substances that grow in the production of water-based paints, traffic paint, adhesives, caulk, as well as other household and industrial commodities.

Although the Rohm and Haas Lone Star Plant has excelled in its industrial production and processes, its presence in the community has been invaluable. The Lone Star Plant is an active member of the Deer Park Community Advisory Council, the Deer Park Local Emergency Planning Committee, and the Channel Industrial Mutual Aid Organization. Two of its management team members serve in prominent community leadership positions as Director of the Deer Park Chamber of Commerce and Deer Park Educational Foundation. Additionally, many of its employees are active in the PALS mentoring program at San Jacinto Elementary School, as well as the promotion of youth sports and education in the Deer Park area.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud the Rohm and Haas Lone Star Plant for its many contributions made in both industry and community. I also commend the Deer Park Chamber of Commerce for their continued efforts to recognize such businesses that use their strengths and successes to better their communities.

HONORING REPRESENTATIVE STEPHEN HORN

HON. LUCILLE ROYBAL-ALLARD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to join my colleagues in paying tribute to one of our retiring members, STEVE HORN. STEVE HORN's departure from this House is a signif-ificant loss. Many of us on the Democratic side looked to STEVE as an honest and effective advocate who worked across party lines to advance the best interests of the Los Angeles region, our state of California, and the United States.

STEVE's loss to the House perhaps is overshadowed only by the loss we will feel within the Los Angeles County delegation. Republicans and Democrats alike have come to rely on STEVE’s expertise and help as a member of both the Transportation and Government Reform Committees. He is always there to help us meet the common interests of the citizens of the Los Angeles area.

STEVE and I were classmates, elected in 1992, and we have worked together on a variety of important issues during our five terms in the House. Together, we advocated to both Democratic and Republican Administrations to ensure an effective health care safety net for Los Angeles County. We worked on transportation and economic development projects affecting the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, the largest port complex in the nation. Just this year, we worked successfully for environmental funding to solve a wastewater runoff problem affecting two of our municipalities. We haven't always been successful, but our successes have far outnumbered our defeats. Southern California and Los Angeles County have benefited greatly from STEVE's willingness to work as part of a bipartisan team for the good of our constituents.

STEVE's hard work and commitment to his district have been made very evident, as I have worked this year to introduce myself to my new constituents. Everywhere I've gone I've heard nothing but praise for STEVE's rep-presentation. I have heard constantly how respected STEVE is, and how people appreciate his commitment to his district. I owe STEVE a personal debt because of the enormous assistance he has been to my staff and me as I inherit part of his congressional district, the cities of Downey and Bellflower. STEVE has explained the many issues he has worked on during his tenure in Congress. He has introduced me to local officials, business people and key community groups. He has gone the extra mile to make sure that my staff and I understand his district. STEVE didn't have to do that, and I am very grateful for his willingness to work with me.

In short, STEVE HORN's service in the House of Representatives has been distinguished and effective. I have enjoyed working with him on issues of importance of the Los Angeles area, and my respect for his work and personal integrity continues to grow as I learn more about him and the wonderful people now have the privilege of representing.

STEVE is a class act, and he will be a hard act to follow. But I will do my best to continue the high level of representation that he has achieved and the legacy of good government that I now inherit from him. We will miss STEVE in the Los Angeles delegation, and we will miss him in the House.

Based on my experience in Downey and Bellflower, STEVE retires with the greatest reward that can be presented to him—the adulation of the constituents he has represented so ably for 10 years.

I thank STEVE HORN and commend him for his service to his district and to our nation. Ed and I wish him and Nini well in their next untertaking.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002

SPEECH OF HON. W.J. “BILLY” TAUZIN OF LOUISIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, November 13, 2002

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5710, which embodies the President's ambitious and historic proposal to create a new Department of Homeland Security. At the outset, I want to thank the Majority Leader and the Chairman of the Select Committee on Homeland Security—the gentleman from Texas, Mr. ARMEY—for taking the President's bill forward and creating a much stronger bill in close consultation with his committee colleagues, including the committee I chair, the Energy and Commerce Committee, which has and will continue to have jurisdiction over many aspects of this new department and the difficult challenges it will face.

Ever since the anthrax attacks of last year, the threat of bioterrorism has become much more of a reality, and the importance of biomedical research activities at the Department of Health and Human Services and NIH and the CDC has never been greater. This bill builds upon those agencies. Rather than destroying their work and taking it over and redoing it, the bill makes it clear that NIH and CDC will retain primary responsibility over human health-related research, and that the new Department itself will not engage in defense-related efforts. Rather, NIH and CDC will retain primary responsibility over those agencies.

The Committee on Energy and Commerce recommended this approach because the terrorism-related research currently being performed at NIH and the CDC is really dual-purpose in nature. It serves the priority and needs of both counterterrorism and the traditional public health system. So I want to thank the gentleman from Texas and the administration for working with us on this important change.

We also want to make clear that the bill adopts recommendations that our Committee made with respect to the public health emergency and bioterrorism grant programs run by CDC and HHS for state and local governments, leaving them where they are now so that this important work of upgrading our public health infrastructure is not interrupted.

The bill also will improve the efforts by our country's top scientists at national laboratories to develop new methods of detecting and preventing terrorist attacks, such as improved sensors to detect radiological devices and new scanners to screen luggage and cargo, a critical need as we move forward. Our current ability to screen for radiological and nuclear materials entering our ports is woefully inadquate. We are going to do something about it with this bill.

A key provision in the bill that our Committee recommended will establish a central technology clearinghouse that will assist Federal agencies, State and local governments, and even more importantly, the private sector in developing, implementing, and coordinating information about key homeland security technologies such as radiation and bio-weapon detectors.

Finally, the provisions in this bill dealing with the protection of our country's critical infrastructures—most of which fall within our Committee's jurisdiction and are under the control of the private sector—are vitally important to ensure that progress in this area continues to be made. There will be a strong, cooperative program between the new Department and state and local governments and the private sector to enhance such protection, without micro-management of security from Washington, D.C., or new regulatory mandates that will serve only to foster distrust and delay.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and once again thank the President, Governor Ridge, and Majority Leader ARMLEY for their tremendous efforts in bringing this matter to a favorable resolution for the American people.

IN MEMORY OF JUSTIN ULRICH
HON. PETER T. KING
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the life of Justin Ulrich who passed away suddenly on November 9th. Justin, a twenty-three-year-old senior at New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts, embodied the spirit of young people who participate in the political arena while serving causes greater than their own. This past summer, Justin completed an internship in my congressional office in Washington, DC where I was able to see first-hand the energy, dedication, and initiative he possessed.

Justin carried a passionate appetite for politics as chair of the External Affairs Committee of the University Committee on Student Life and as a member of the Tisch Undergraduate Student Council. Most recently, he worked for congressional candidate Jim Farrin’s campaign and attended volunteer events promoting political candidates in Washington, DC.

In addition, Justin was an active member of the College Republicans at NYU and served as its publicity director.

Mr. Speaker, no one will forget Justin’s passion and cheerful smile. I join with his friends and schoolmates in offering my condolences to his family.

HONORING REPRESENTATIVE STEVE HORN
HON. DAVID DREIER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for this opportunity to speak about a good friend and respected colleague, Congressman STEVE HORN, who is retiring from this body after 10 years of unwavering integrity in service. And though we wish our friend nothing but the absolute best as he leaves Washington, we will miss STEVE immensely, and are sad to see the parting of this true Californian.

Congressman HORN has served with digence on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee on behalf of his constituents in Southern California. His Congressional District benefitted greatly from his leadership, especially in the areas of environmental stewardship and infrastructure. He consistently championed projects critical to the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, preserving local wetlands, and supported the need for new technologies to advance ocean water desalination.

Congressman HORN has been an unsung hero on federal government accountability for which I thank and commend him. Chairing the Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management, and Intergovernmental Relations, Congressman HORN dedicated his committee’s jurisdiction to making federal agencies more accountable to the taxpayer, ensuring that our government was open and accessible to the public, and demanding that red-tape and other bureaucratic excesses were eliminated.

Many of us can only look with awe at Congrressman HORN’s distinguished and vast public service career. He served in the Eisenhower Administration under Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell, and then got his legislative feet wet while working for California Senator Thomas Kuchel on historic legislation including the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. In addition, Congressman HORN dedicated 18 years to the California State University, Long Beach, where he was recognized as one of the most effective college presidents in the country.

There is no doubt that Congressman HORN has accomplished a great deal. However, I believe his greatest accomplishment lies in not just what he has been able to do, but in the person that he is. He is a man of character who never allowed partisan politics to triumph over personal integrity, who sought real answers to real problems for the benefit of strangers, and whose watchful gaze held us all to the same higher standard he set for himself.

I will miss seeing him in the halls of the Capitol, but will look forward to seeing him and his lovely wife, Nini, at home in California.

MARTHA THOMAS: A POINT-OF-LIGHT FOR ALL AMERICANS
HON. MAJOR R. OWENS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, recently Dr. John C. LaRosa, President of SUNY Downstate Medical Center announced the appointment of noted community leader and writer, Martha Thomas as Assistant Vice President for Community and Government Relations.

It is no secret in Brooklyn that Martha is a very skilled professional who, in her previous positions at SUNY Downstate Medical Center served as the Director of Community Relations in the Office of Institutional Advancement as well as Director of Media Relations. Since joining the staff in 1977, Martha has been instrumental in educating elected officials about the needs of the medical community as well as serving as a liaison to the community and its leadership.

I have known Martha for a number of years, and I know personally the level of her committment to insuring that all people have access to quality health care. In her new position, she will continue to serve as the government relations manager in addition to advising the institution on legislative issues ranging from health care to education.

Prior to joining SUNY Downstate, Ms. Thomas was a Michelle Clarke Fellow at Columbia University and a television reporter at Two Florida stations: WCTV in Talahassee and WJXT in Jacksonville. She is also a playwright whose work has been produced on Manhattan’s Theater Row and in Brooklyn, Harlem, Phoenix, Arizona and Fort Campbell, Kentucky.

Martha is the mother of two. Her son Eric is a teacher in Trenton, New Jersey, and her daughter, Dr. Cheryl Thomas is a graduate of Downstate’s College of Medicine who practices in New Jersey.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize Central Brooklyn’s Martha Thomas as a Point-Of-Light for all Americans.

CORRECTION TO DISSENTING VIEWS TO COMMITTEE REPORT TO H.R. 4689
HON. ROBERT C. SCOTT
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I signed the “Dissenting Views” to the Committee Report to H.R. 4689, the “Fairness in Sentencing Act of 2002,” along with three other members of the Committee. The views following statements: “If enacted, the bill would prevent individuals who perform low-level drug trafficking functions from qualifying for a mili-gating role adjustment under the United States Sentencing Guidelines.” and “The bill prevents low-level, first-offense drug offenders from receiving a mitigating role adjustment under the sentencing guidelines.”.

These statements do not precisely reflect their point. The bill would overturn a new U.S. Sentencing Commission guideline which establishes a 10-year cap on how much drug quantity alone can result in a sentence that is in great disproportion to the relative role of the offender in a drug enterprise. Accordingly, although the statements may not be precise, the point remains that, under the bill, certain low-level offenders will be prevented from receiving any meaningful benefit from a mitigating role adjustment, so long as the quantity alone can require such a disproportionate sentence under the guidelines.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002
SPEECH OF
HON. RICHARD K. ARMLEY
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, November 13, 2002

Mr. ARMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of Subtitle G of the Homeland Security bill, which is the Support Anti-terrorism by Fostering Effective Technologies Act of 2002—otherwise known as the “SAFETY Act.” Briefly, the SAFETY Act ensures that U.S. companies will be able to develop and provide vital anti-terrorism technologies to help prevent or respond to terrorist attacks—without the threat of crippling lawsuits.

Many technologies already exist that could be used to provide the American public with greater protection against a range of terrorist threats. However, due to concerns about potential lawsuits and liability, these technologies are not being made available to federal, state or local governments or to other commercial entities. Under current law, companies can only provide these technologies to a limited number of agencies of the Federal Government—thus leaving other entities without responsibility for protecting the public, including state and local authorities.

The SAFETY Act ensures that these important technologies can be made available to help protect our cities, schools, hospitals, nuclear power plants, bridges, dams, and other critical areas.

This legislation accomplishes this objective by providing litigation reforms and insurance guidelines for companies that help to prosecute the global war on terrorism. Without these protections, each time a technology or defense company puts its anti-terrorism technology to use, it becomes vulnerable to potentially unlimited and uninsured liability. Such an enormous risk has an understandably chilling effect on the willingness and ability to research and deploy critical homeland security technology. The SAFETY Act guarantees that the best companies with the best products will come forward with their technologies and will not sit on the sidelines.

The SAFETY Act helps to ensure that the most advanced anti-terrorism technologies could be put to use as soon as possible to protect American citizens through four mechanisms:

First of all, the Act limits non-economic damages to the percentage of responsibility and limits the award of punitive damages. Second, the Act allows all providers of anti-terrorism technology to claim the “government contractor defense.” If a contractor or company follows the strict specifications set forth by the government, then that company will have a government contractor defense as is commonplace in existing law.

Third, the Act applies to all providers of anti-terrorism technology, whether sold to the Federal government, state or local government, or a private sector entity that deals with the public safety. It also requires the companies to obtain liability insurance coverage. This provision balances the interests of potential plaintiffs and technology companies by requiring that the companies buy the maximum amount of reasonably available insurance without incurring unreasonable premiums. It is Congress’ intent that the insurance that the contractor must obtain should be reasonably priced and the Act does not require the purchase of insurance that is priced at unreasonable or exorbitant levels which would distort the sales price of the technologies.

Fourth, the Act of terrorism presents unknowable risks, liability for all claims against companies that provide anti-terrorism technologies are capped at the amount of the companies’ liability insurance coverage required under the Act. We must not allow the litigation fallout from one act of terrorism to bankrupt a company that otherwise could have developed technology that could prevent another act of terrorism. This section is modeled after a similar provision in the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act. It is the intent of Congress that this provision limit the liability for any and all claims as detailed in the Act.

Only those technologies designated by the Secretary of Homeland Security are covered under the SAFETY Act. Therefore, it is Congress’s hope and intent that the Secretary will use the necessary latitude to make this list as broad and inclusive as possible, so as to ensure that the maximum amount of protective technology and services become available. In addition, it is worth mentioning that the Act’s non-economic damages criteria are not intended to be exclusive, and in order for a technology to merit coverage by the Act, it need not meet all criteria. For instance, though prior U.S. government use or demonstrated utility is the first criterion listed, products new to the market are certainly eligible for coverage.

Finally, all of the liability reforms and litigation measures of the SAFETY Act are intended to complement other government risk-sharing measures that some contractors can use such as Public Law 85-804. Thus, these situations both types of measures could apply.

Through this Act, we want to give the appropriate incentives to companies to provide the technologies that can protect the American people.

KAZAKHSTAN’S REGIME SHOULD FREE JOURNALIST SERGEI DUVANOV

HON. DANA ROHRABACHER
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, the despotic regime in Kazakhstan has imprisoned one of that country’s best known journalists and human rights activists, Mr. Sergei Duvanov. I have joined a number of Members of the House International Relations Committee in writing a letter to President Bush urging the Administration to strongly speak to President Nursultan Nazarbayev and his regime to release Mr. Duvanov.

The campaign for the release of Mr. Duvanov, who has previously testified before our International Relations Committee on the need for human rights in Kazakhstan, has been joined by international human rights organizations, such as Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International, as well as by numerous Members of the European Parliament.

I am including for the Record a copy of an article titled, “Central Asia Resists Pressure From West To Improve Human Rights,” that appeared in the November 11, 2002 Wall Street Journal. I join the many voices of advocates of democracy and human rights from around the world who strongly urge the immediate freedom of Sergei Duvanov.

CENTRAL ASIA RESISTS PRESSURE FROM WEST TO IMPROVE HUMAN RIGHTS

(By Steve Le Vine)

ALMATY, KAZAKHSTAN—Several recent steps taken by Central Asian republics suggest an increasing boldness against Western pressure by the region’s autocratic leaders, most of whom are key U.S. allies in its war against terrorism, Western officials say.

Following the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, the U.S. began using Central Asia as a jumping-off point for its war to dislodge the Taliban in neighboring Afghanistan. The U.S. established military bases in all three of the countries, Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, and obtained Air Force landing rights in Kazakhstan. U.S. aid to the region more than doubled.

In recent months, however, the U.S. and Europe have been increasingly outspoken about the region’s poor human-rights record, and in response, the region’s leaders have been publicly resistant. Kazakhstan officials say a 14-year-old girl, an accusation Western officials say may be politically motivated. The journalist, 49-year-old Sergei Duvanov, had been charged with treason to the U.S. for speaking engagements on Kazakhstan’s human-rights record. He says the charges against him are fabricated.

It is the third time Mr. Duvanov has accused the government of harassment since he wrote a story earlier this year for an Internet site about Swiss bank accounts allegedly belonging to President Nursultan Nazarbayev. The accounts are part of separate money-laundering investigations by the U.S. and Switzerland. In July, the Kazakhstan government charged Mr. Duvanov with criminal libel for the story, and in August—two weeks before he was to attend a human-rights conference in Warsaw—he was beaten and a cross carved into his chest by unidentified men.

In a statement last week, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe said, “The pattern of incidents involving Mr. Duvanov, their coincidence with his planned trip abroad to discuss publicly the situation in Kazakhstan, and the disputed circumstances of the latest case trigger concerns that these incidents may be politically motivated.”

The U.S. and Europe are increasingly critical of President Nazarbayev, particularly regarding a series of attacks on journalists. Mr. Duvanov’s beating was the eighth unexplained assault on a local reporter in the country this year. The government has denied any role in the attacks, and last week Mr. Nazarbayev admonished diplomats in a yearly meeting that he “categorically rejects recommendations and advice aimed at unnaturally speeding up democratic processes.”

Mr. Nazarbayev’s neighbors also appear increasingly brash, some analysts say. In Kyrgyzstan, President Askar Akayev has faced a drawn-out test of wills with his political opposition since police shot dead six demonstrators last March. More recently, Mr. Akayev said it is time for deeper democratic changes, yet critics complain that a Kyrgyz judge recently overturned an election by an opponent by saying his papers weren’t in order, and gave the triumph to a challenger who received just 19% of the vote.

Uzbek President Islam Karimov recently used a news conference with United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan to assail critics of his human-rights record. And in Turkmenistan, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development has blocked new loans for public projects because of President Saparmurat Niyazov’s poor record on political and economic change.

“The key question is whether Washington’s new relationship with these countries has increased its leverage with them. The tenor of the leaders in the region seems to indicate it hasn’t,” said Charles W. Dunlop, director of the Central Eurasia Project at the New York-based Open Society Institute.
SUPPORT OF THE UNIFIED GOVERNMENT OF Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kansas and the City of Edwardsville, Kansas, for H.R. 5561

HON. DENNIS MOORE OF KANSAS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I recently received from Carol Marinovich, the mayor/CEO of the Unified Government of Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Kansas, a letter in which she expresses the strong support of their governing body for H.R. 5561; legislation I have introduced that would settle pending land claims of the Wyandotte Nation in Wyandotte County, Kansas. Additionally, I received today correspondence from Edwardsville, Kansas, Mayor Luther Pickell strongly supporting H.R. 5561. I hope all Members of the House and the Senate will review the correspondence from Mayor Marinovich and Mayor Pickell, along with the resolutions unanimously adopted by the Unified Government’s governing council and the city of Edwardsville in support of this measure, and join with me in endorsing this proposal.

UNIFIED GOVERNMENT OF Wyandotte County/Kansas City, KS

CAROL MARINOVICH, MAYOR/CEO

November 14, 2002.

HON. DENNIS MOORE,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MOORE: Congratulate and applaud your efforts on behalf of our citizens, businesses and local units of government.

As elected leaders from Wyandotte County, the Edwardsville City Council unanimously endorsed the proposed Congressional Act to permanently settle this matter and avoid a certain litigation strategy which will be both costly to taxpayers and the Wyandotte Nation. The clouded land title will prevent expanding in the Fairfax Industrial District costing The State of Kansas and Local Units of government millions in revenue. The litigation has already prevented one major corporation from expanding in the Fairfax District and forced the relocation of over 350 employees. We cannot sustain economic growth in this area without the settlement of the land claim.

Your legislation provides for a federal legislative solution that protects over $2 billion in taxable real estate and generates over 4000 high salaried jobs for the State of Kansas and finally settles a century old land claim which badly needs to be ended. We wish you luck in the closing days of Congress and will assist you by any means necessary to gain passage of this important act.

Let us notify us if we may be of assistance in explaining this to any other member of the United State Congress.

Sincerely,

LUTHER PICKELL, Mayor.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 4546, BOB STUMP NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2003

SPEECH OF HON. KEN BENTSEN OF TEXAS IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 12, 2002

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Fiscal Year 2003 Defense Authorization Conference Report, legislation which will provide our military forces with the resources needed to counter threats abroad while strengthening the security of our homeland.

This conference report provides crucial funding in several critical areas, among them: weapons procurement, research and development, operations and maintenance, and efforts against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. At $393 billion, the conference report matches the President’s request, and represents a 13 percent increase over current spending levels. As the largest national defense budget in inflation-adjusted terms since fiscal year 1990, this conference report confronts the changing security environment faced by our country and helps our armed services in coping with the new challenges facing them. I believe this legislation will provide the appropriate budgetary foundation to allow the President and Congress to pay for the war on terrorism as well as fulfill critical military needs that may arise.

Our military forces are today called upon to confront a host of wide-ranging challenges across every continent and hemisphere of the world. This conference report will ensure that our military remains the best-trained, best-equipped, and best prepared force to continue confronting these evolving challenges. To that end, I am pleased that this legislation authorizes an across-the-board 4.1 percent pay increase, along with targeted increases of up to 6.5 percent for N.C.O.s and officers. This represents the fourth largest increase for military personnel since 1982. In addition, this legislation also includes provisions for improvements to health care and education for our service members, provisions I consider crucial to increasing the recruiting and retention rates of highly qualified military personnel.

As a member of the House Budget Committee, I have fought to recognize the immeasurable contributions of America’s disabled veterans by being a strong proponent for concurrent receipt. I believe disabled military retirees deserve both disability and retirement benefits, therefore I am pleased that this defense authorization changes current law to allow veterans who earned a Purple Heart or who suffered a severe injury in a combat-related incident to receive both retirement and disability benefits. Although this provision targets only those specific veterans who are 60 percent disabled and I believe this benefit should be extended to additional veterans, I find this legislation a good first step in the right direction and urge our colleagues to continue supporting further efforts expanding concurrent receipt coverage in the future.

This conference report provides $7.3 billion to support DoD efforts to combat global terrorism, and funds for counterterrorism, force protection, counter-intelligence, and anti-terrorism programs. To guard against the threat of weapons of mass destruction pose to the United States, this report authorizes $993 million for advanced chemical-biological detection, protection, and decontamination programs, $148.2 million for biowarfare defense and technology, and $416.7 million funding efforts securing weapons of mass destruction and dismantling their facilities in the former Soviet Union. With respect to homeland defense, this legislation will require the DoD to work with the Department of Homeland Security and other federal agencies to share promising new technology, as well as assist local “first responders” improve their ability to respond to domestic terrorist actions.

While I will vote in support of this legislation, I have concerns regarding the process of base closures. With regard to base closures, I am concerned that language contained in this defense authorization would allow base closures to take place without adequate consultation with Members of Congress and affected communities. While I respect the consistent record of supporting cost-savings in all areas of the federal budget, I do not believe another round of base closures should be conducted until the DoD makes a thorough evaluation as to whether its current infrastructure is in a position to cope with the changing security environment. The threats facing our nation require that infrastructure on the local, state, and certainly the federal level be prepared and adequate to confront any possible scenarios. Due to language that would require 7 of 9 members of a Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission (BRAC) approve a base closure, I strongly encourage the DoD to consult closely with Members of Congress. I believe the concerns of potentially affected communities must be closely considered. The loss of a military base can prove potentially devastating for defense-dependent local economies, such as the case in my home state of Texas. Not only that, but in many cases, the additional level of disaster and emergency assistance provided by nearby military facilities can prove extremely helpful to local communities. As such, I believe the DoD and Congress should be cautious and prudent in planning the closure of bases that will be carrying our military’s mission in the coming months and years.

While I have concerns about these provisions, I strongly support this Conference Report because it is important Congress speak with one voice in support of our armed services. On balance, the initiatives included in this bipartisan legislation are appropriate, and will provide our dedicated men and women in uniform with the necessary resources to cope with the demanding security challenges facing our nation. I urge my colleagues to vote in support of this important legislation.

HONORING THE OPENING OF THE EAGLE ROCK ART MUSEUM IN IDAHO FALLS, ID

HON. MICHAEL K. SIMPSON
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the beauty and value of persistence. Ten years ago, a group of artists along with the Mayor and City Council of Idaho Falls had the idea of creating an area art museum. This huge undertaking would take thousands of volunteer hours and many fundraising efforts to become a reality. Today, I’m proud to say through the hard work of those dedicated volunteers and public servants, the Eagle Rock Art Museum opened its doors.

The Eagle Rock Art Museum showcases eastern Idaho artists. As someone who occasionally dabbles in artistic endeavors, I value the cultural significance art plays in our society. Visitors to this wonderful facility can now marvel at stone sculptures, oil and watercolor pictures, paintings by children, and other compelling works of art. Children can enter the doors of the Eagle Rock Art Museum and be inspired by the work it showcases. There’s even a children’s art gallery to display the work of our youngest citizens.

In civilization, art transcends age. The works of Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Claude Monet and modern day artists like Norman Rockwell breathe light into culture. The works of artists live on forever through museums like the Eagle Rock Art Museum. I’m proud of the community of Idaho Falls for working to make the Eagle Rock Art Museum a reality. The selfless efforts of many illustrate the powerful principle of working together for a common cause. I compliment Idaho Falls Mayor Linda Milam, Council members Ida Hardcastle and Mel Erickson, artists Gloria Miller Allen and John Griffith and the hundreds of other artists who contributed to creating the art museum. Thanks to their efforts germinations of Idahoans will have a lasting appreciation for the importance of art in our world.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on Sunday, October 27, a milestone in Federal procurement was observed. That day marked the 30th anniversary of President Nixon’s signing of the “Brooks Act” qualifications based selection (QBS) process into law as Public Law 92-58.

This law, which prescribes the process by which Federal agencies select contractors for architecture, engineering and related services (“A/E services”), is codified in 40 USC 541 et. sq. for civilian agencies and, by reference, also applies to military agencies (10 USC 2855). Regulations implementing the law are found in part 36 of the Federal Acquisition Regulations.

Named for its sponsor, our respected former colleague, the Honorable Jack Brooks of Texas, the Brooks Act provides for selection of firms for A/E services on the basis of demonstrated competence and qualifications, with negotiation of a fee that is fair and reasonable to the government.

Agencies publicly announce their requirements for A/E services, firms submit their qualifications (including resumes of personnel, past performance, experience and background), agencies review the competing firms’ qualifications, a short list of most qualified firms is established and agencies conduct interviews, and the most qualified firm is selected for specific contract negotiations of the precise scope of services to be performed and negotiation of a fee that is “fair and reasonable to the government” based on the government’s own estimate of the project cost.

QBS has been a trendsetter. When it was enacted in 1972, the QBS law was a radical exception to the government’s overwhelming reliance on awarding contracts based on the lowest bidder. Indeed, QBS was a precursor to the trend that came in the 1990s to migrate from lowest bid to best value procurement. Moreover, contractors’ past performance is a major factor in the evaluation and selection process again, something that, based on A/E contracting since 1972, but which became commonplace in other areas of Federal procurement in the 1990s.

The Federal government annually spends billions of dollars on construction of facilities and has capital assets of hundreds of billions.

This investment is highly dependent on A/E services for feasibility studies, design, operation and maintenance. It has been said that A/E services account for less than 1/10th of 1 percent of the life-cycle cost of a facility, but the quality of the A/E services performed determines what the life cycle cost will be.

The wisdom of Congress in passing, and President Nixon in signing, the “Brooks Act”, and of Congress in preserving this law for the past 30 years, has provide the American public with quality, cost effective and efficient A/E services on projects that stand the test of time.

The wisdom of the law is also demonstrated by the degree to which it has been emulated. The QBS process is included in the Model Procurement Code for State and Local Government written, endorsed and advocated by the American Bar Association, and the process has been enacted in “min-Brooks Act” statutes by more than 30 State Legislatures. As a local government official, I can personally attest to the value of this process in projects, from design of parks to hazardous waste site remediation, from water and wastewater facilities to geographic information systems (GIS) for growth management and transportation planning.

Today, Americans have the cleanest water, the safest and most attractive and functional public spaces, the most accurate maps, the safest roads, and many other aspects of the quality of life and our built environment because of the work of professional architects, engineers, surveyors and mapers who have worked on Brooks Act contracts. It is important that Congress pause at this moment to reflect on the success of this process. It has provided enormous benefits and effectiveness, and paid huge dividends to the taxpayers of our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, the Brooks Act has enjoyed wide bipartisan support over the years. This is a law that works. I congratulate our Nation’s architects, engineers, surveyors and mapers who have completed millions of dollars worth of projects as contractors to government agencies, as well as the dedicated public servants in the design professions who have been responsible for coordinating these contracts and performing the inherently government responsibilities for oversight of that work. The Brooks Act fosters a true public-private partnership that should stand as a model for how government and the private sector can work together to build a better America.

CONGRATULATING DONALD EUGENE ARCHEY AND REVEL (MOORE) ARCHEY ON THE OCCASION OF THEIR 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

HON. PATRICK J. TIBERI
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. TIBERI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Mr. Donald Eugene Archey and Mrs. Revel (Moore) Archey. Don and Revel met when Don accompanied his father to deliver a wagonload of firewood to the Moores. They were married on November 27, 1952 in Catlettsburg, Kentucky and shortly after moved to Columbus, Ohio. Since 1977, Don and Revel have lived in Delaware County, Ohio.

Don recently retired from his sole-proprietorship operation in the local Road Oiling. For more than 40 years he was the owner, president, and often the only employee. Revel and Don have seven children: Deborah, Stanley, Libby, Elisa, Gayla, Tawnya, and Jonathan. They are the proud grandparents of Jason, Zachary, Joel, Jairica, and Eli.

Fifty years of marriage is certainly an occasion worthy of celebration and recognition. I congratulate Revel and Don for this wonderful achievement, and wish them many more years of happiness together.

NATIONAL GUARD TROOPS

HON. GIL GUTKNECHT OF MINNESOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, our generation met its challenge. The attacks against innocent Americans were acts of war. We are still fighting that war. Carl von Clausewitz said that the goal of any military encounter is to destroy the enemy’s will to fight. We still have work to do.

But at home we have come far. We have buried our dead. We have comforted our wounded. We have rebuilt the Pentagon. New York is being rebuilt. We have gained a resolve and determination to go on. We will continue to be the shining beacon of liberty. We are willing to bear the price of defending the principles of freedom, justice and honor. We are America.

Generations of Americans have followed the wisdom of President Theodore Roosevelt when he said, “In any moment of decision, the best thing you can do is the right thing. The worst thing you can do is nothing.”

From the Battle of the Bulge to the streets of Kabul, Americans have always sought to do what is right. We have never given way to despotism and madmen in the name of artificial peace. More than 48 million men and women have served in our armed forces to do the right thing.

The sacrifice of Americans who left their homes and lives for the cause of justice across the globe is a testament to what is good and right about our great nation. Because of Americans, Europe was liberated from a madman. Because of Americans, Communism is left to the ash heap of history. Because of Americans, little girls are going to school in Afghanistan.

Today I honor those Americans who stepped in to secure our domestic defenses during a time of great uncertainty. The brave men and women of the National Guard. As active duty troops were deployed, the men and women of the National Guard dropped what they were doing and answered their call to duty. Careers were put on hold, families parted—loved one, sacrifices were made to secure our nation.

Guard members from Minnesota have served in every major conflict since its inception more than 360 years ago. More than 150 Minnesota National Guard soldiers were called to duty following the September 11 attacks.

I am especially grateful to the National Guard soldiers of Company B, Second Battalion of the 135th Infantry. These soldiers performed special duties at the Rochester International Airport during a time of crisis; they stepped up to join that long grey line. That line that has never failed us.

These soldiers deserve our respect and our gratitude.

As William Jennings Bryan said, “Destiny is not a matter of chance, it is a matter of choice. It is not a thing to be waited for, it is a thing to be achieved.” Americans have a history of choosing their destiny. We will continue to do so, because that is who we are. We must, and we will, not fail to achieve this vision for the future of the United States and for all civilized, peace-loving people around the world. There will be a price. The blood and treasure of our nation will be invested. The leadership, resources and unwavering courage of the United States are critical in the struggle. We shall win.

But at home we have come far. We have buried our dead. We have comforted our wounded. We have rebuilt the Pentagon. New York is being rebuilt. We have gained a resolve and determination to go on. We will continue to be the shining beacon of liberty. We are willing to bear the price of defending the principles of freedom, justice and honor. We are America.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, government efforts at benevolence always result in unintended consequences. Some have warned that the planned preemptive invasion of Iraq could prove so destabilizing to the region and the world that it literally could ignite a worldwide conflict big enough to be called World War III. Nuclear exchanges are perhaps the most likely to occur under the conditions of an expanded Middle East war than they were at the height of the Cold War, when the Soviets and U.S. had literally thousands of nuclear weapons pointed at each other. If we carry out our threats to invade and occupy Iraq, especially if we do so unilaterally, the odds are at least 50–50 that this worst case scenario will result.

The best-case scenario would be a short war, limited to weeks and involving few American and Iraqi civilian casualties. This, in combination with a unified Iraqi welcome, the placing into power of a stable popular government that is long lasting, contributing to regional stability and prosperity, and free elections, just is what our planners are hoping for. The odds of achieving this miraculous result are one in 10,000.

More likely, the consequences will be severe and surprising and not what anyone planned for or intended. It will likely fall somewhere between the two extremes, but closer to the worst scenario than the best.

as is hope, the opposite occurs. The Iraqi citizens anxious to get rid of Hussein join in his defense, believing foreign occupation and control of their oil is far worse than living under the current dictator. Already we see that sanctions have done precisely that. Instead of blaming Saddam and his regime, ordinary citizens would rather blame the United States for the suffering of the past decade. The Iraqi people blame the U.S.-led sanctions and the constant bombing by the U.S. and British. Hussein has increased his power and the people have suffered from the war against Iraq since 1991. There are a lot of reasons to believe this same reaction will occur with an escalation of our military attacks. Training dis- sidents like the Iraqi National Congress will prove no more reliable than the training and the military assistance we provided in the 70's and the 80's for Osami bin Laden and Saddam Hussein when they qualified as U.S. "ali- lies." Pre-emptive war against Iraq may well prompt traditional enemies in the regions to create new alliances, as the hatred for Amer- ica continues to exclude the hatreds that caused regional conflicts. Iraq already has made overtures and concessions to Iran and Kuwait, with some signs of conciliation being shown by both sides. Total domination of the entire Persian Gulf and Caspian Sea regions by the U.S. will surely stir survival instincts in these countries, as well as in Russia. As the balance of power continues to shift in the U.S.'s favor, there will be even more reasons for countries like China and Pakistan to se- curely support the nations that are being sub- jected to U.S. domination in the region. The U.S. will have to be free ride in their ability to control the entire world's oil supply. Antag- onisms are bound to build, and our ability to finance the multiple military conflicts that are bound to come is self-limited.

The Kurds may jump at the chance, if chaos ensues, to fulfill their dream of an independent Kurdish homeland. This, of course, will stir ire of the Turks and the Iranians. Instead of sta- bility for northern Iraq, the war likely will precipitate more fighting than the war planners ever imagined. Delivering Iraqi Kurdish to Tur- key and that cooperation with our war. Also, they warned that the likelihood of al Qaeda attacks on our own soil will increase once an invasion begins. This, of course, could a wave of well- placed snipers around the United States.

It is now admitted that over 150,000 U.S. servicemen are suffering from Persian Gulf War Syndrome as a result of the first Persian Gulf War. Our government would like to ignore this fact, but a new war literally could create an epidemic of casualties of the same sort, since the exact etiology is not completely un- derstood. The number of deaths and injuries through many occupations of Iraq is unknown, but conceivably could be much higher than anyone wants to imagine. Anti-Americanism now seeping the world will significantly increase once we launch our at- tack. Already we have seen elections swayed by the United States, Egypt, Turkey, and Pakistan by those un- friendly to the United States. The attitude that the world's "King of the Hill" must be brought down will escalate, especially if the war goes poorly and does not end quickly with minimal civilian deaths.

We must get a real boost in mem- bership once the war breaks out. Membership is already pervasive throughout the world with- out any centralized control. We should expect this to continue, with an explosion in member- ship and a negative impact around the world. Our attack will confirm to the doubters that bin Laden was right in assessing our desire to control the Middle Eastern resources and dic- tate policy to the entire region while giving support to Israel over the Palestinians. Our very weak economy could easily col- lapse with the additional burden of a costly war. War is never a way to make the people of a country better off. It does not end reces- sions, and is much more likely to cause one or make one much worse. A significant war will cause revenues to decrease, taxes to in- crease, inflation to jump, encourage trade wars, and balloon the deficit. Oil prices will soar and the dollar will retreat ever further. Already we're hearing demands for a mili- tary draft to be instituted for both men and women. I see that coming, and it will serve as another source of domestic friction as our economy deteriorates and unemployment rises. Under these conditions the standard of living for all Americans is destined to go down. This war, if of any significant duration, in time will be seen as a Republican war plain and simple. Along with a weak economy, it could easily usher in a "regime change" here in the United States. The conditions may justify a change in leadership, but the return of con- trol to the opposition party will allow them to use the opportunity to promote their domestic liberal agenda and socialize the entire econ- omic net result, regardless of the size and duration of the coming war, will be that the people of the United States will be less free and much poorer. The bigger the war, the greater will be the suffering.

IN HONOR OF THE CONGRESSIONAL CAREER OF CONGRESS- MAN BOB CLEMENT

HON. JERRY F. COSTELLO
OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great friend, our colleague BOB CLEMENT, who is completing a distin- guished 14-year career in the House of Rep- resentatives. Bob and I both began our serv- ice after special elections in 1988, and we have served together on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. I have had the chance to get to know his wife Mary and their children, and I wish them all the best as they begin this new phase of their lives.

Bob CLEMENT has upheld a fine family tradi- tion of public service, following the example of his father, who served as Governor of Ten- nessee. Bob served in the Army and the Ten- nessee National guard, was elected to the Public Service Commission and later ap- pointed by President Carter to the Tennessee Valley Authority Board of Directors. After suc- cess in the private sector, he became presi- dent of Cumberland University. Bob carried all of these experiences to Congress, working hard on behalf of our nation's veterans, par- ticularly on Gulf War Syndrome issues, and fo- cusing on the transportation needs of the country. He served on the House Education Caucus and passed legislation dealing with the increasing problem of identity theft.
While his legislative accomplishments are substantial, Bob may be best remembered for the manner in which he achieved them. Ever the southern gentleman, Bob Clement has defined comity during an increasingly partisan era. He worked well across the aisle and I hope we can keep his collegial spirit alive despite the absence of his way. Bob has truly left his mark on this institution, and it is without doubt a better place for his having been here.

Mr. Speaker, I know all of our colleagues will join me in thanking Bob Clement for his friendship, dedicated service to the United States of America. Knowing Bob, his long, exemplary career will not end here. I look forward to the next chapter.

HERB YASSKY
HON. MAJOR R. OWENS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, during the 106th Congress, the following statement was submitted for entry into the RECORD but was inadvertently lost. It is imperative that I re-submit this tribute to an outstanding American Point-of-Light.

HERB YASSKY: A POINT-OF-LIGHT FOR ALL AMERICANS

Herb Yassky sometimes seems to be climbing perpetually uphill with his efforts to bring medical supplies and equipment to Haiti and other underdeveloped countries. The problems multiply and the disappointments mushroom but Herb toils on in his almost singlehanded effort. He refuses to surrender when a container of hospital supplies is stuck on the docks of Port-au-Prince because there is no money to pay for transportation and the bonded cost of storage. Because he is quiet, stubborn and intensely passionate about his mission, Herb finds a way to deliver his vitally needed goods. In his spare time, as a volunteer, Herb has sent more than fourteen forty-foot containers of supplies to not-for-profit institutions overseas. This represents just one of many causes to which Herb Yassky’s Lifetime Struggle and Achievement.

The Southwest Georgia Regional System, often partnering with other community organizations, reaches out in innovative ways to serve a widely dispersed population in the cities and rural areas it serves, including initiatives to raise money for the development of local libraries. The system sponsors literacy programs, provides full access to the World Wide Web, and maintains close, ongoing support for schools and social service organizations. Utilizing a state-of-the-art bookmobile, the system makes books available to schools, nursing homes, and community centers. It provides special services for the handicapped. It sponsors historic projects and programs. In many different ways, it is helping raise the quality of life throughout a widespread area of southwest Georgia.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate the people who make the Southwest Georgia Regional Library System one of the country’s very best.

THE VILLAGE OF OAK PARK’S CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Community of Oak Park, Illinois. I take great pride in expressing my delight and heartfelt congratulations as we commemorate the 100th Anniversary of the Village of Oak Park.

Historically, Oak Park is a community in the Chicago area that has made significant contributions to diversity and is a model for other emerging American communities. Since the 1960’s Oak Parkers have seriously planned for the evolution and development of their community. The Village of Oak Park has refused to maintain its status as a bedroom community in the Chicago area. The integration of black and white residents has been a key component in the development of this unique neighborhood. As the community began to change, the Village government took action by enacting an Open Housing Ordinance in 1968, a statement supporting integrated housing. In 1973 Village Trustees created a policy statement that may be turned into brick and mortar reality. Yassky is an advocate and a planner who attends to the details and makes great things happen.

Because he is a tireless Champion for Health Care and Human Life, the people of Central Brooklyn are proud to salute Herb Yassky for his Lifetime Struggle and Achievement.
HON. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an individual from my district who provides quite an inspiration for each and every one of us on how to live, and how to work. J.E. Dunlap, Jr. is editor, publisher, and reporter for the Harrison Daily Times. At age 80, he continues to cover sports and other events and writes weekly articles for the paper. According to co-workers, he has an uncanny ability to just glance at a page of the paper before it is printed, and locate errors immediately.

Mr. Dunlap knows how to change with the times. He was instrumental in converting early typeset printing facilities to modern press and computer equipment. He continues to work today with modern typeset computers, a laptop, and email.

He has received numerous journalism awards including the Distinguished Service Award presented by the Arkansas Press Association and he was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize, twice. In addition, he was cited by the Social Security Administration for effective and continued public service for keeping the public fully informed on Social Security issues. He says the honor he is most proud of was earning his wings as a Second Lieutenant during the 1940's.

About working at age 80, Mr. Dunlap says “there is great satisfaction in knowing that I can continue doing my job after 64 years.” His advice to young people entering the workforce is, “be sure the job is something that you truly want to do and make every effort to fulfill the job requirements.”

I would like to congratulate him on being named this year’s Outstanding Older Worker of Arkansas.

HON. ADAM H. PUTNAM
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. PUTNAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor my retiring friend and colleague on the Government Reform Committee Congressman Dan Miller, the distinguished Representative of Florida’s 13th District.

Representative Miller was elected to Congress in 1992 and in his five terms has accumulated a record of accomplishment as an advocate for his district and as a guardian of the hard earned tax dollars of all Americans.

Representative Miller was born in Highland Park, Michigan. However, like so many of our State’s citizens, he came to Florida as soon as he heard about it and, having graduated from high school in our great State, he thereby attained the status of “semi-native” Floridian.

As Congressman Miller proudly told the voters throughout his five terms he is not a professional politician, in fact the only office he ever ran for was Congress. After winning a crowded primary his appeal as a candidate who focused on substance, not rhetoric, crossed party lines and he was routinely re-elected with 60 percent plus margins. Through his background as a successful entrepreneur and as a university professor he brought a unique skill-set to Congress, which will be sorely missed next session.

As I complete my final term in Congress I wish to thank Representative Miller for his kindness and courtesy during my freshman year, he is a consummate gentleman. In addition to always maintaining an open door to a freshman Dan Miller and I share the unique bond of having been together on Air Force One on September 11, 2001. I shall always remember and cherish his encouragement, fortitude and calm in the face of the terrorist attacks that shook our country that day.

God bless you Dan Miller, I want to assure you that, while you may be retiring from Congress, your friends and colleagues recognize that the good work you have done here and for our great State of Florida will continue.

IN RECOGNITION OF A LIFETIME OF DEDICATION
HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, Congressman Tim Roemer, the Ranking Member of the Subcommittee on Select Education of the House Committee on Education and Workforce and proud member of the House Select Committee on Intelligence, will be retiring after 12 years of dedicated service to his constituents in Northern Indiana and to our country.

I rise today to acknowledge and applaud the interests and service of Tim Roemer during his productive career in public service, and to wish him the very best in his future endeavors.

By way of background, Tim Roemer was first elected to Congress from the 3rd Congressional District of Indiana in 1990. Tim grew up in South Bend, and though he went to college in San Diego, he returned home and received a masters and Ph.D. from the University of Notre Dame. He has dedicated his life to public service not only through his term as a U.S. Representative, but also through his time with former 3rd District Representative John Brademas and Arizona Senator Dennis DeConcini.

In his tenure in Congress, Tim served as Co-Chairman of the New Democratic Coalition. While being a staunch believer in balancing the federal budget, he fought endlessly to support legislation that would improve the quality of education received by all children in our country. Tim was a strong advocate of federal special education funding and supported innovative programs like Ameri-Corp, Transition to Teaching, and charter schools. As a strong supporter of the war on terrorism, through his work on the Select Intelligence Committee, he called for efforts to better secure the American homeland and prevent future terrorist attacks.

I have had the pleasure and privilege of knowing and working with Tim for just over a decade. I do not expect his retirement from elective office to end either his public service or his significant contributions to our Nation. In fact, I have every expectation that Tim Roemer will continue to be an active, thoughtful, and valuable contributor to public debate on critical national issues. I wish him and his family the best.

AGAINST H.R. 4163—PROHIBIT
AFTER 2006 THE INTRODUCTION INTO INTERSTATE COMMERCE OF MERCURY INTENDED FOR USE IN A DENTAL FILLING AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES
HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate you for holding this hearing concerning the risk of mercury poisoning from the dental amalgam, which has been used for more than 150 years. According to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) there is “more significant human experience with dental amalgam than any other restorative material.” Any adverse outcomes of mercury in amalgam would have first manifested in Dentists and their staff due to their daily exposure. The American Dental Association Health Foundation (ADAHF) have done research regarding the mean urinary mercury levels of dentists from 1975 to 2001 and have found that dentist urinary mercury levels are well below established limits for occupational exposure. Furthermore the American Dental Association (ADA) investigators have done studies and research to find any possible correlation between Kidney dysfunction and urinary mercury levels and found none.

In addition, the FDA through various U.S. Public Health Services (PHS) agencies reviewed claims of mercury exposure measurements and fetal mercury exposure and concluded that dental amalgam do not share the same toxicity characteristics of mercury and there is no evidence that individuals with dental amalgam restorations will experience adverse health effects from these restorations. Various disease organizations like The Alzheimer’s Association, the Autism Society of America, the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and the American Academy of Pediatrics have stated that there is no scientific evidence linking dental amalgam with any known disease or syndrome that the groups track. Other organizations like the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization, U.S. Federal Agencies and International Organizations and expert groups from Sweden, New Zealand, Canada and the European Commission have concluded that there is no direct evidence that dental amalgam has an adverse effect on patient’s health except with isolated cases of allergic reactions. Also it is safe and cost effective.

By banning dental amalgam and using alternative type of fillings will only place additional financial burden on low-income individuals and the special needs population. Most insurance programs, whether private or Medicaid, pay for the lowest dental cost restorative material and would not pay for alternative dental options. This will only result in an even higher dental disease rate and dental need among low-income and special needs populations.

In conclusion, dental amalgam is deemed as a serviceable, safe, cost effective restorative material, which is backed by scientific evidence and research approved by the ADA and FDA.

MOURNING THE DEATH OF DR. JEANNE LAVETA NOBLE

HON. SANFORD D. BISHOP, JR.
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, November 14, 2002

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Speaker, when Dr. Jeanne Laveta Noble passed away on October 17, 2002, in New York City, the state of Georgia—and especially the city of Albany and the southwest Georgia region where she was born and raised—lost one of our great native citizens.

While Dr. Noble always remained close to her home town, returning often to visit with friends and family, she made contributions that were national and even international in scope as a noted educator, a fighter for human rights and against poverty, a scholar and writer who published three books and countless articles, an Emmy Award-winning media commentator, and a Presidential appointee in three Administrations.

Dr. Noble was the eldest child of Floyd G. and Aurelia P. Noble of Albany, Georgia. She earned her undergraduate, Masters and doctoral degrees from Howard University and Columbia University, and completed further studies at the University of Birmingham in England. She first taught Albany State University, and later served as dean of students at Langston University in Oklahoma, as the first black woman to serve as a tenured professor at New York University, and as professor emeritus of the graduate school at the City University of New York.

She was named by President Johnson to head the Women’s Job Corps of the President’s Task Force on the War Against Poverty, and served on commissions named by President Nixon and President Ford. In addition to her prolife writing, she moderated and co-wrote an acclaimed show called “The Learning Experience.”

Dr. Noble was involved in many civic and charitable activities, including serving as the 12th national president of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, the 200,000-member public service sorority that supports education, provides scholarships, boosts programs for young people, and promotes economic opportunities for all.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Noble’s devotion to education and her service to humanity inspired everyone who knew her or knew about her. Our thoughts and prayers are with her family and many friends.
