

there is a significant risk of terrorist attacks, requiring increased surveillance of critical locations.

Counties, cities and towns in my home State of Vermont and across the U.S. find themselves overwhelmed by increasing homeland security costs required by the Federal Government. Indeed, the National Governors Association estimates that States incurred around $7 billion in security costs over the past year alone.

As a result, the national threat alerts and other Federal homeland security requirements have become unfunded Federal mandates on our State and local governments. Rutland County Sheriff R.J. Elrick, president of the Vermont Sheriffs' Association, recently wrote to me, "We are in dire need of financial support to keep our personnel trained and equipped to meet the challenges here as home as we continue our vigilant commitment to fight terrorism."

When terrorists strike, first responders are and will always be the first people we turn to for help. We place our lives and the lives of our families and friends in the hands of these officers, trusting that when called upon they will protect and save us.

Just how, without supplying them with the necessary resources, do we expect our Nation's first responders to realistically carry out their duties?

Our State and local law enforcement officers, firefighters and emergency personnel are full partners in preventing, investigating and responding to terrorist acts. They need and deserve the full collaboration of the Federal Government to meet these new national responsibilities.

Washington is buzzing about the literally hundreds of billions of additional dollars the President plans to ask Congress to provide for our military services to fight the war on terrorism abroad. The same cannot be said for helping security here at home, which is shamefully overlooked.

For a year and a half I have been working hard to remedy that, with allies like our distinguished Democratic leader and assistant Democratic leader, and New York Senators SCHUMER and CLINTON. As former chair and now ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, I have made it a high priority to evaluate and meet the needs of our first responders.

For these reasons, I commend the Democratic leader for including in the homeland security section of his economic stimulus package the First Responders Partnership Grant Act, which will give our Nation's law enforcement officers, firefighters and emergency personnel the resources they need to do their jobs. This legislation will establish a grant program at the Department of Homeland Security to provide $5 billion nationwide for current fiscal year to support State and local public safety officers in their efforts to protect homeland security and prevent and respond to acts of terrorism.

Similar to the highly successful Department of Justice Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) and the Bulletproof Vest Partnership Grant Programs, the First Responder Grants will be made directly to State and local government units for overtime, equipment, training and facility expenses to support our law enforcement officers, firefighters and emergency personnel.

The First Responder Grants may be used to pay up to 90 percent of the cost of the overtime, equipment, training or facility. In cases of fiscal hardship, the Department of Homeland Security may waive the local match requirement of 10 percent to provide Federal funds for communities that cannot afford the local match.

In a world shaped by the violent events of September 11, day after day we call upon our public safety officers to remain vigilant. We not only ask them to put their lives at risk in the line of duty, but also, if need be, given their lives to protect us.

If we take time to listen to our Nation's State and local public safety partners, they will tell us that they welcome the challenge to join in our national mission to protect our homeland security. But we cannot ask our firefighters, emergency personnel, and law enforcement officers to assume these new national responsibilities without also providing new Federal support.

The First Responders Partnership Grant Act will provide the necessary Federal support for our State and public safety officers to serve as full partners in the fight to protect our homeland security. We need our first responders for the security and the life-saving help they bring to our communities. All they ask is for the tools they need to do their jobs for us. And for the sake of our own security, that is not too much to ask.

I commend Senator DASCHLE for his leadership, and hope that the Senate will soon consider this desperately-needed economic stimulus package.

EXPENDITURES OF COMMITTEES

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 66, which was submitted earlier today by Senators LOTT and DODD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 66) authorizing expenditures by committees of the Senate for the periods March 1, 2003, through September 30, 2003, October 1, 2003, through September 30, 2004, and October 1, 2004, through February 28, 2005.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 66) was agreed to.

(The resolution is printed in today's RECORD under "Statements on Submitted Resolutions.")

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

2004 SUMMER OLYMPIC GAMES

• Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, today, thousands of American athletes are training for the ultimate goal of participating in the 2004 summer Olympic Games in Athens Greece. Americans will have to wait until next summer to applaud their efforts, but we can start applauding another Olympic star today—Nadia Weinberg.

A Michigan native, Ms. Weinberg is a member of the Orchestra of Athens and she deserves a gold medal for her beautiful voice and her commitment to helping those who are less fortunate than she.

In order to celebrate the games' return to Greece, the Orchestra of Athens and Ms. Weinberg will conduct a world tour including a 15-city tour in America. They will visit New York City, Washington D.C., Boston, and Detroit to name a few. Each concert will benefit a number of charitable organizations: children's abuse centers, college scholarship funds, soup kitchens, homeless shelters, and children's hospitals. Ms. Weinberg and the Orchestra of Athens are using their gift of music to help spread the goodwill of the Olympic Games here in America and around the world.

We can all be proud that Ms. Weinberg is representing her country with such grace. She has performed in music halls around the world, impressed audiences in Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center, and filled the Rotunda of the Capitol with her voice. Each performance shows that the arts have always been a bridge of understanding between cultures.

I can think of no finer American—one who is dedicated to helping others, committed to the arts, and determined to encourage goodwill around the world—than Ms. Weinberg. We are proud of her accomplishments and her participation in this endeavor with the Orchestra of Athens, and we are honored that she is representing the United States around the world. •

HONORING MARION HIGH SCHOOL

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, on April 26, 2003, more than 1,200 students from across the United States will visit Washington, DC to compete in the national finals of the We the People: The Citizen and the Constitution program, the most extensive educational program in the country developed specifically to educate young people about the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Administered by the Center for Civic Education, the We the People program is funded by the U.S. Department of Education by act of Congress.

I am proud to announce that the class from Marion High School will represent the State of South Dakota in this national event. These young scholars have worked conscientiously to reach the national finals by participating at local and statewide competitions. As a result of their experience they have gained a deep knowledge and understanding of the fundamental principles and values of our constitutional democracy.

The 3-day We the People national competition is modeled after hearings in the United States Congress. The hearings consist of oral presentations by high school students before a panel of adult judges on constitutional topics. The students are given an opportunity to demonstrate their knowledge while they evaluate, take, and defend positions on relevant historical and contemporary issues. Their testimony is followed by a period of questioning by the judges who probe the students' depth of understanding and ability to apply their constitutional knowledge.

The We the People program provides curricular materials at upper elementary, middle, and high school levels. The curriculum not only enhances students' understanding of the institutions of American constitutional democracy, it also helps them identify the contemporary relevance of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. Critical thinking exercises, problem-solving activities, and cooperative learning techniques help develop participatory skills necessary for students to become active, responsible citizens.

The class from Marion High School is currently preparing for their participation in the national competition in Washington, DC. It is inspiring to see these young people advocate the fundamental ideals and principles of our government, ideas that identify us as a people and bind us together as a nation. It is important for future generations to understand these values and principles which we hold as standards in our endeavor to preserve and realize the promise of our constitutional democracy. I wish these young "constitutional experts" the best of luck at the We the People national finals.●

HONORING ALBERT W. SISK

● Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I have the privilege and honor of rising today to recognize Mr. Albert W. Sisk of Hopkinsville, KY. Earlier this month, Mr. Sisk was honored as Kentucky's nominee for the 2003 TIME Magazine Quality Dealer Award at the National Automobile Dealers Association convention.

Mr. Sisk is the president and dealer principle of Sisk Auto Mall located in Hopkinsville. One of the most distinguishing features of Mr. Sisk's business philosophy is his commitment to family. Mr. Sisk is a second-generation car dealer and he contributes his success to the knowledge he gained from working alongside his father, a torch he now passes to his son who is General Manager of Sisk Auto Mall.

Mr. Sisk is certainly no stranger to community involvement. Aside from his current service in the private sector, Mr. Sisk once served his country as a member of the United States Army upon graduation from the University of Kentucky in 1965. Now he focuses his attention on helping young adults excel in academics and their future careers. He is an active member of the YMCA, Rotary Club, First Christian Church and the Elizabeth Stone Educational Fund Advisory Board.

Business and personal honors aside, Mr. Sisk cites having the opportunity to work with his father the most rewarding aspect of his career. It is not often we have the chance to honor such a distinguished business man, community member, and family man. Please join me in congratulating Mr. Albert W. Sisk.●

IN APPRECIATION OF MAJOR GENERAL PHILIP G. KILLEY

● Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to express my profound appreciation for the work MG Philip G. Killey has provided as the adjutant general for the South Dakota National Guard. General Killey has announced that he will be retiring after 40 years of service, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank him for the extraordinary work he has done for this country and for the South Dakota National Guard.

General Killey reports that South Dakota has continued its high rankings in terms of readiness of its National Guard units. South Dakota's units also excel in the quality of its new recruits. I commend the South Dakota National Guard for its continued excellence, and General Killey for his leadership, which has led to the maintenance of this high standard. National rankings only confirm the quality that has come to be expected of the National Guard of a great State.

Most South Dakotans know at least 1 of the 4,500 current members of the South Dakota National Guard or the thousands of former guardsmen. Sometimes, the connection is even more direct. My oldest son Brooks was a proud member of the South Dakota Army National Guard in Yankton prior to his active duty service with the U.S. Army.

Every community in my State benefits from the work of these guardsmen. Following the tragedies of September 11, guardsmen were called to assist in the campaign against terrorism and performed security duties at airports around the State. From Aberdeen to Yankton, the Guard is a key member of the South Dakota community.

In addition to the support the National Guard provides to South Dakota, it has also supported overseas operations including those in Central America, the Middle East, Europe, and Asia. Units around the State have been activated this year, deploying to military bases across our country and around the world.

These latest activities, and the professionalism that our South Dakota National Guardsmen have shown, are a testimony to the leadership of General Killey. Before becoming the adjutant general in 1998, General Killey served with distinction in both the active duty and in the South Dakota National Guard.

General Killey received his commission in 1963 through Officer Training School, at Lackland AFB in Texas. He served a tour in Southeast Asia in 1967-1968 flying the F-4 with the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing at Ubon Royal Thai Air Force Base, Thailand. He left active duty in 1969 and joined the Air National Guard in 1970. He held various positions with the South Dakota Air National Guard before becoming the adjutant general. He was recalled to active duty as director of the Air National Guard from 1988 until 1994. General Killey was the first guardsman to serve as commander, 1st Air Force, Air Combat Command, and Continental United States North American Aerospace Defense Command Region, Tyn-dall Air Force Base, Florida, from 1994 until 1998.

I enthusiastically commend General Killey for his many years of service, and thank him for all that he has done for this Nation and for our great State of South Dakota. I wish him and his wife Ellen all the very best as they move on to new challenges and opportunities.●

TRIBUTE TO KING DAVID HOLMES, SR.

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to the late King David Holmes, Sr., a life-long resident and civil rights leader from the city of Waterbury, CT.

"King David," as he was affectionately known, was born and raised in Waterbury. After graduating from Crosby High School in 1940, he served in the Army during World War II. Returning to Waterbury after his tour of duty, King David worked at Scoville Manufacturing for 30 years, retiring as a shop foreman. He also spent 11 years working for the former Connecticut Department of Human Resources, now known as the Department of Social Services.

As the civil rights movement came to its own in the late 1950s and early 1960s, King David quickly became a local leader in advocating the needs of Waterbury's African-American community. He organized marches and protests against businesses and schools in the city practicing discrimination. He also founded the Waterbury Black Democratic Club and chaired New Opportunities for Waterbury, Inc., which
