PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa seek recognition?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I was told we should report the bill first, and then I will make my statement.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DRUG, IMPROVEMENT, AND MODERNIZATION ACT OF 2003—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 1, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Conference report to accompany H.R. 1, an act to amend Title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for a voluntary prescription drug benefit under the Medicare Program and to strengthen and improve the Medicare Program, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 1, which the chairman of the Finance Committee or his designee and the Democratic leader or his designee, with the last 10 minutes prior to the vote to be allocated between the Democratic leader for 5 minutes to be followed by the majority leader for the final 5 minutes.

The Senator from Iowa.

SCHEDULE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to state the plan for today. Under the previous order, the cloture vote will occur today at 12:30. The debate time until that vote is limited, and Members will only be allocated short debate times. The cloture vote on the conference report will be the first vote of the day. It is the leader’s hope and expectation that cloture will be successful and that time is not a problem.

On our side, we are obviously going to start with the Senator from New Hampshire. But since the time is very tight, probably most Members would be limited to 5 minutes or less, beyond that of Senator Gregg. I would like to make sure people are very orderly as they come over here and ask me for time. I cannot speak for the Democratic side, but for the Republican side, it is very essential for people to be here and be ready to speak.

Does the Democratic whip wish to be recognized?

Mr. REID. Yes, if my distinguished friend will yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have, on this side, a number of people who wish to speak. It is my understanding, to make this debate fair, that on this side the time will be given to those who are opposed to cloture being invoked. So the people who have asked for time on this side will be opposed to cloture. I want all the people who have asked for time on this side to understand that. And we are—this is just for Democrats—we are going to give 9 minutes to the following Senators, and in no necessary order. Whoever is here can speak. They should all be alerted that if there are quorum calls, they are going to lose time. So, Mr. President, I would, on our side, grant 9 minutes to Senators AKARYN, GLENN, LIEBERMAN, DODD, CLINTON, MIKULSKI, PRYOR, KENNEDY, with KENNEDY to have the last time before the Democratic leader speaks, closing the debate.

Now, again, I want to tell those listening, this side is for those who oppose cloture.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, could I make an inquiry?

Mr. REID. Yes. And I think it would be better if we alternated back and forth until 12:30.

Mr. GRASSLEY. That is the point I wanted to make.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, today we stand on the threshold of a truly historic moment. Not for Republicans. Not for Democrats. Or for the House of Representatives. Or for the United States Senate. But, for over 40 million American seniors and individuals with disabilities, who may finally be getting prescription drug coverage under Medicare.

Saturday morning, the House of Representatives passed H.R. 1, the “Medicare Prescription Drug Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003.” Also Saturday, President Bush called upon the Senate, once again, to finish the job. He urged us to send him legislation that will provide badly needed prescription drug coverage.

For years, Congress has debated whether, and how, to provide prescription drug coverage to seniors. It is now time for us to act. If we fail to act, if we fail to act on this important legislation, literally, means the difference between life and death. They cannot afford to wait any longer. I have treated thousands of Medicare patients. And I know firsthand that, without Medicare, millions of seniors would not have received needed medical services. Millions more would have faced financial ruin. Medicare has helped save and heal lives.

But this cherished program has failed to keep pace with medical and scientific progress. Prescription drugs are an integral part of modern medicine. They are as important as the surgeon’s knife. Yet, they are not part of the Medicare program.

In the nearly four decades since the Medicare program was created, the American medical system has transformed from one focused on treating episodic illness in hospitals to one characterized by an increasing emphasis on managing and preventing chronic disease in outpatient settings with advanced medical technologies and prescription drugs. Life expectancy has increased by nearly ten years. Death rates associated with heart disease have been cut in half, and new treatments and diagnostic tools have improved survival rates for prostate, colon, and breast cancer. Our medical and scientific knowledge and, along with it, our ability to treat illness and disease has improved dramatically over the past four decades. Yet, Medicare itself has not kept pace with these dramatic changes. It has been too inflexible. And bureaucrats. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.

As a result, we have today glaring and unacceptable gaps in the coverage that is available to seniors and individuals with disabilities—the most obvious of which is the lack of prescription drug coverage.

Over the past three decades, for example, the death rate from atherosclerosis has declined by over 70 percent and deaths from ischemic heart disease have declined more than 6 percent, largely due to the advent of beta blockers and ACE inhibitors. Designed for the 1960s health care system, it has been unable to adapt to changing medical practice. Medicare does not provide true preventive coverage, disease management, or protection against catastrophic health care costs.
Today, over 600 medicines are under development to treat or prevent diabetes, cancer, heart disease, stroke, neurological diseases, and other debilitating illnesses. Nearly 400 drugs have been produced during the past decade alone.

But, under today's Medicare, these drugs simply are not available to seniors. We must act to ensure that this generation of seniors, and the next, has access to the healing miracles of modern medicine. And we must act to provide our seniors, and the next generation of seniors, with true health care security: quality preventive care, affordable prescription drugs, protection from catastrophic health care costs, better coordinated care, disease management, and access to modern technology.

As voluntary prescription drug coverage the bipartisan bill we are debating today takes a major step in that direction. It devotes $400 billion over the next decade to adding a new, voluntary prescription drug benefit to the Medicare program. And it takes concrete steps to speed less expensive generic drugs to the market to help make prescription drugs more affordable for all Americans.

Within months after this legislation is signed into law, seniors will be able to get a voluntary Medicare-approved prescription drug discount card that will reduce the costs of their drugs by an estimated 10-25 percent. Lower income seniors will get an additional subsidy of $600 on top of these discounts to help them purchase needed medicines. Thus, seniors will get immediate relief even before the comprehensive drug benefit is fully implemented, with additional help for those who need it the most.

Beginning in 2006, seniors will have access to the new drug benefit. Those who wish to add the new prescription drug coverage to their traditional Medicare plan may choose to continue private coverage. And they will have the option of adding prescription drug coverage. Meanwhile, tomorrow's seniors, many of whom are covered through PPOs now, may choose to continue private coverage when they retire. We are laying down the road to prepare for the baby boomers needed to be ready now, not scrambling when it is too late.

This bill contains the most sweeping and strong rural provisions ever in a Medicare bill to come before this Congress. It also makes improvements to payments for graduate medical education and takes concrete measures to protect seniors' access to physicians.

For example, hospitals in my home State of Tennessee will receive $655 million under this legislation. Physicians, who otherwise would face real cuts next year of 4.4 percent, would instead see a 1.5 percent payment increase in both 2004 and 2005. I am very proud that the American Hospital Association, the Tennessee Medical Association, the American Hospital Association, the Tennessee Hospital Association, the American Association of Specialty Medicine, and the Alliance for Specialty strongly support this legislation. The bill has also received strong support from the Rural Health Care Association, the Rural Hospital Coalition and the Coalition for Geographic Equity.

This bill also works to contain drug costs.

NEW HEALTH CARE CHOICES

Today, most seniors choose to enroll in the traditional Medicare Fee for Service program. But this may not be the best choice for all seniors, and it may not be the choice of all seniors in the future.

There are about five million seniors who are covered by private health plans under the Medicare program today. Beginning immediately, the legislation prohibits Medicare's local HMO coverage. It will help stabilize and improve the coverage of those five million seniors in the current Medicare+Choice program. As a result, Medicare+Choice will become a more stable, secure, and strong option for those seniors who have already chosen to enroll in coordinated care plans.

This bipartisan plan also provides seniors with even more choices—the choice to enroll in regional preferred provider organizations—PPOs. The majority of Americans under age 65 get health coverage through PPPOs. Most members of Congress, Federal employees, and Federal retirees also get coverage through PPOs. Employees covered by PPOs report high levels of satisfaction with their coverage. PPOs typically provide coverage for preventive care, chronic care management, disease management, and access to a broad range of doctors and hospitals.

Under the bipartisan agreement, seniors will have the opportunity to participate in these innovative plans if they choose.

Moreover, beginning in 2010, we will test on a limited basis whether those private health plans provide higher quality than traditional Medicare. We will also test whether Medicare private health plans are most cost effective than traditional Medicare. All beneficiaries will be protected during this test. And the demonstration cannot be expanded or extended unless Congress acts to do so.

Throughout, seniors will always be able to stay in the traditional Medicare program. And they will not be forced to select the option of adding prescription drug coverage.

STRENGTHENING HEALTH CARE IN RURAL AMERICA

This bill also strengthens and expands rural provisions in Medicare.

SUBSTANTIAL ASSISTANCE FOR LOWER INCOME SENIORS

Seniors with incomes below 135 percent of the Federal poverty line ($11,648 for individuals and $14,965 for couples) will have no deductible or co-payment for their comprehensive coverage. Beneficiaries with incomes below 150 percent of poverty ($12,942 for individuals and $16,327 for couples) will pay only a portion of the premium, and a $50 deductible. After that, the government will subsidize 85 percent of their drug costs.

In my home State, over 430,000 low income Medicare beneficiaries—nearly half of all beneficiaries in Tennessee—will have no additional prescription drug coverage under this bipartisan plan. One quarter of a million Tennessee seniors who today have no prescription drug coverage at all will gain access under this proposal, along with millions more across the Nation.

IMPROVEMENTS TO TRADITIONAL MEDICARE

The legislation also strengthens and improves the traditional Medicare Fee for Service program. It adds new preventive care and chronic care services, and cardiovascular disease. For the first time, Medicare will cover initial preventive physical examinations. And this agreement responds to the six percent of seniors with chronic disease who account for about 50 percent of all Medicare spending. It will launch a series of major pilot programs on disease management and quality payment incentives that could result in dramatic improvements in the care of the most ill and the most needy. This will help us better target health care resources to those who require it most.

The legislation also puts in place national standards for electronic prescribing, along with incentives for doctors to fill prescriptions electronically. These reforms should dramatically improve medication therapy management, reduce medical errors, and improve patient safety.

As the Senator from Montana, the Ranking Member of the Senate Finance Committee, has said so eloquently during these past several days, this bill does nothing to destroy the existing Medicare program. In fact, it immensely strengthens the traditional Medicare program.

As my colleagues know, this legislation has received broad support from well over 350 organizations, including from the AARP—which represents 35 million seniors. In its letter of endorsement last week, the AARP also makes clear that, at a result of this legislation, "millions of older Americans and their families will be helped by this legislation." In addition, AARP writes: "The integrity of Medicare will be protected."

CONTROLLING PRESCRIPTION DRUG COSTS

Some of my colleagues have said that this legislation does nothing to control prescription drug costs. I respectfully disagree.

First of all, under this bill, seniors will be able to get a drug discount card right away. They will be able to present their Medicare discount card to their pharmacist and receive a 10 to 25 percent cut right off the top. The bill also limits catastrophic drug costs before the drugs get to the pharmacist's shelf. It does so in a number of ways. The bill speeds generic drugs to the market. It encourages competition to lower prices, and it gives the Medicare recipient new power to comparison shop.

Let’s start with the generic drug provisions. In 1984, Congress passed the Hatch-Waxman law to encourage cheaper generic drugs to come onto the market. Under that law, generic competition has flourished.

When the law was passed, generics were less than 20 percent of the market. Today, generic drugs represent nearly 50 percent of the market.

The Hatch-Waxman Act has been incredibly successful in allowing consumers to get low cost alternatives. But there have been some abuses. Therefore, we are moving to close loopholes in the system through this bill. And the core of the provisions build on the work of Senator Gregg and Senator Schumer.

Under the new system, a new drug applicant will receive only one 30-month stay of approval of a generic drug. This is a major change. Under the old system, drug companies could receive multiple stays of approval for generic rivals. Now, they will get one stay only.

The agreement of additional steps to generic drugs to the market faster—through which patients will get safe, effective, low cost generic drug alternatives to brand name medicines.

That is why this bill is supported by the Pharmaceutical Association and the Coalition for a Competitive Pharmaceutical Market.

The bipartisan Medicare agreement also empowers drug plans to negotiate discounts from drug companies. The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that this provision alone will save $18 billion dollars. Not only will the Medicare agreement help lower prices, it will help give consumers more information about their medical options. This bill expands Federal research into the comparative effects of different drugs and treatments.

With this new information, seniors will be able to compare drugs in the medical marketplace, just like they would for any other product or service. In patients, and their doctors will be able to compare treatments and choose the course of action that best addresses their medical needs. And Medicare and health consumers will get better value for their money.

HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

I am also very pleased that this legislation will include tax-advantaged Health Savings Accounts available to all Americans. HSAs will help control costs over time, and give individuals the ability to better control their health care dollars and health care decisions.

I wish we could have gone even further. I wish we could have added provisions from the House bill that would have allowed individuals to roll over some of their health savings Accounts. I also believe we must do more in the coming years to allow individuals to invest funds on a tax-free basis to meet their health care needs in retirement, just as we do with the preserved IRA.

The SCHUMER account will make tax-preferred Health Savings Accounts available to all seniors. I am committed to coming back and addressing these issues in the years ahead.

DEMOGRAPHIC AND STRUCTURAL CHALLENGES

Our first priority must be to provide seniors with health security. But, at the same time, we know that Medicare also faces serious financial and demographic pressures in the coming years.

Between now and 2030 the number of seniors will nearly double from 40 million to 77 million; the program’s costs will rise nearly $450 billion annually, even before we add prescription drug coverage or improve other benefits; the number of taxpayers paying into the system to finance health coverage for seniors will drop from today, to 24 by 2030; seniors, who represent 12 percent of the population today, will represent 22 percent of the population in 2030, and one last fact: each senior will be in the Medicare program longer. Life expectancy at age 65 will increase approximately 10 percent over the next 30 years.

The demographic underpinning has been defined: more seniors; each senior living longer; and fewer workers to support each senior.

So, while we need to act to provide prescription drug coverage to seniors, we also need to do so responsibly. This legislation takes an important first step in linking Medicare payments to quality. It also relies on competitive market forces to help control health care spending.

Moreover, for the first time in Medicare’s history, we will ask those seniors who can afford to pay more for their coverage, to do so. And we will put in place more accurate and more transparent measurements of Medicare’s fiscal strength—as well as special procedures for attempting to better control Medicare spending growth in the future.

These reforms do not go far enough for some of my colleagues. At the same time, they go too far for others. Over all, however, I believe this is a balanced, bipartisan bill that is worthy of the support of the United States Senate.

It is not a perfect bill. But, it is a meaningful step in the right direction. It will provide substantial relief from high prescription drug costs for millions of seniors. It will help rectify payment inequities for rural health care providers. And it will begin to inject into the Medicare program new health care choices and much needed flexibility so that seniors will have the option to choose the kind of health care coverage that best suits their needs.

Today, America is one step closer to being a more caring society for millions of seniors and individuals with disabilities. Today, prescription drug costs and outdated, often inadequate medical care. Today, we are one step closer to providing real health security to seniors all across the Nation.

As a physician, I have written thousands of prescriptions that I knew would go unfilled because patients could not afford them. With this bill, that will change. As a senator, I have watched as a decades-old Medicare program has operated without flexibility, and without comprehensive and coordinated preventive care, disease management and catastrophic protection against high out-of-pocket medical costs. With this bill, that will change as well.

This legislation is historic. By dramatically expanding opportunities for private sector innovation, it offers the possibility of genuine reform that can dramatically improve the quality of care available to seniors. At the same time, the legislation preserves traditional Medicare for those who choose it. It combines the best of the public and private sectors and gives today’s seniors innovative health care options and positions Medicare to serve tomorrow’s seniors as well.

This legislation is possible because of the work and dedication of every Member. I would like to thank all those whose commitment was critical to this effort. First and foremost, Chairman Charles Grassley and Ranking Member Max Baucus deserve credit. As does Senator John Breaux who joined me six years ago on the Bipartisan Commission on Medicare and again on this Conference Committee. All Members of the Conference Committee showed a degree of dedication and resolve seldom seen in either Chamber, especially Senators HATCH, NICKLES, and KYL. But we wouldn’t have reached this point without building on the strong foundation laid by Members over the last several years, especially Senators Snowe, Jeffords, Gregg, Hagel, Ensign and Wyden. Finally, the Senate could not have done this alone. The House Leadership, especially HASTERT and Leader DELAY, deserve special recognition, as does the Chairman of the Conference, Chairman Bill Thomas, and the Chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, Chairman Billy Tauzin.

In closing, I would like to thank again every member of this body who has worked so hard on this legislation—not just in this year, but in the previous six years of our most recent effort to strengthen and improve Medicare. I urge every Senator to support this bill. I implore every Senator to avoid filibusters and other partisan political maneuvers that threaten the prescription drug coverage, and health
Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 15 minutes to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. President, I rise today to express my concerns about the proposal before us. I think it has to be put in the proper context. This is a $400 billion subsidy over the 10 years that it exists, but over the actuarial life of this program, it is a $7 trillion subsidy—$7 trillion. It is not paid for.

Now, I have heard a number of speakers come to this floor and say this drug benefit is paid for by the senior citizens. Well, unlike the past, where seniors paid into their HI accounts, their health insurance accounts, and paid for their Medicare, that is not the case with this drug benefit. This drug benefit will be paid for essentially by working Americans who are working at the time that the seniors who benefit from the drug benefit receive that benefit.

The real concern arises when the baby boom generation, which is my generation, retires, because at that point we are going to have a massive influx of seniors into our system, and the cost that we pass along—what a generation is going to put on the system is going to be dramatic.

It is so dramatic, in fact, that any child born today in the United States immediately arrives with a debt of $44,000, which is what that child will owe during their working life in order to pay for my and my contemporaries—baby boomers’—benefits under Medicare, and we are going to take that $44,000 debt, which a child who is born today has, and we are going to add, with this bill, an additional $15,000—an additional $15,000—on top of the $44,000. That is why I have concerns about this bill.

I believe we need a drug benefit for seniors, for low-income seniors who cannot afford the drugs which they are presently receiving. I believe we need a drug benefit which addresses the problem of a senior who ends up, because of their drug costs, being wiped out of all their assets; a catastrophic drug benefit, in other words.

But while we move down the road toward that type of a drug benefit, we have to, at the same time, reform the underlying Medicare system so that it is affordable, so that my children and the children of other Members of the baby boom generation do not end up paying so much to support health care for us, the retired, that their lives are deprecitated, that their quality of life is reduced.

Under the bill before us, unfortunately, although it has an attempt to address the low-income issue, and although it has an attempt to address the catastrophic issue, there is no significant attempt to address the reform issue. So the practical effect of this bill is that it puts in place a massive new benefit without any control over the costs of the underlying Medicare system, and the effect of that is that the children of today—basically, my children and my grandchildren and the children of anybody who was born after 1940—will end up paying a huge amount in order to support us in our retirement.

This bill provides simply, that is the largest intergenerational tax increase in the history of this country, and it should not be sugarcoated. It is a massive tax increase being placed on working, young Americans and Americans who have not yet been born in order to support a drug benefit for retired Americans and Americans who are about to retire, without any underlying reform to try to control the cost so that tax is not so high that it overwhelms the ability of our children and the children of tomorrow to live the quality of life that we have lived.

It seems incredibly unfair for one generation to do this to another generation, for us to use our political clout because we are in office to benefit our generation at the expense of our children and our children’s children. Yet that is what, essentially, this bill does. It attempts reform, but it does not accomplish reform. It claims to have control, to control utilization, and control the rate of growth of the drug plan which is going to cost our children and our children’s children. Yet that is what, essentially, this bill does. It attempts reform, but it does not accomplish reform. It claims to have control, to control utilization, and control the rate of growth of the drug plan which is going to cost our children and our children’s children.

Then, in one of the true ironies of the bill, it takes people who already have private plans which are paid for by the private sector and moves those people into public plans, so we end up paying almost $100 billion to subsidize private plans to stay private. What an outrageous thing to do. The only way to produce a plan that is going to cost our children $7 trillion over the next 10 years, and then we say we are going to pay $100 billion to the private sector to keep in place plans which they already plan to keep in place. They call that “reform.” Very hard to understand.

The way the drug benefit is structured, utilization is obviously going to go through the roof because there is no incentive for people to be conscientious about their use of drugs. That is probably the most glaring, the most inexcusable, inexcusable to go out and purchase. I suppose that is because this is some sort of drug initiative that makes it more likely drugs will be purchased. But to have no cost incentives in place to control the rate of growth of the drug plan through control utilization is foolish.

There are good parts to the bill. There is the savings account, but that is $6 billion. There is a physician increase payment. That is $6 billion. That is the antithesis of the bill and the process developed, unfortunately, was developed to get us through the next election, to be able to say in the next election, we put in place a drug benefit which would be paid for by the parents of the children of tomorrow who will find during their working lives they are going to have to now pay $7 trillion of unfunded liability to support a program which has essentially no reform and no cost containment in it, and, as a result, as I mentioned before, reflects the single largest tax increase in this country that one generation has put on another generation, a grossly unfair act and one that should embarrass us as Congress and certainly does not fulfill the obligations we have as parents moving toward retirement.

This bill may well be well intentioned. I happen to think it is politically driven. But in the end, the results will be the same, whether it is well intentioned or politically driven. We will have put on the books a program which is going to cause our children and our children’s children to have a lower quality of life than we have had. And we, as the people taking advantage of this program, will be forced to take no actions that are responsible in the area of containing the costs of our health care delivery system.

As Republicans, we should be apprised of this. It goes against everything our party has always stood for, which is that government should be delivered in a responsible and efficient way—not in a way that simply throws money at an issue for the purposes of political gain. Unfortunately, we have chosen that second path in this bill, and in the process we will be passing a tax increase that will cause our children and our children’s children to have less of a quality of life than we have had, and yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I make an announcement to Democrat Senators. I would be very grateful if Senator Hagel would be set aside for those who are opposed to cloture, but I think that is too restrictive. We want to make sure there is good debate this morning. Some people... have not had an opportunity to speak, so our time will be for those who are opposed to the legislation, the bill itself. They can make up their mind whatever they want to do on cloture.

I ask unanimous consent that the name—Senators SORAKA, LAUTENBERG, DODD, KERRY, LIEBERMAN, CLINTON, MIKULSKI, PRYOR, and KENNEDY—all be allotted 9 minutes, the amount of time on the Democratic side that they would be entitled to, and no more. I ask consent that that order be entered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I rise today to express my opposition to this bill, a Medicare prescription drug benefit in name only that has very few benefits for the seniors in my State. In June of this year, I voted for a bipartisan Senate bill which, while not perfect, was a good step toward providing our seniors with the prescription drug help they need.

Let us be clear. This legislation does nothing to lower the cost of prescription drugs. The Congressional Budget Office says this legislation will actually cause prescription drug prices to increase by 3.5 percent. Under this legislation, Arkansans will not be able to reimport cheap FDA-approved drugs from other industrialized countries, and this legislation expressly prohibits the Federal Government from negotiating with drug companies to bring down the high cost of prescription drugs.

This means that our seniors will continue to pay more for their prescription drugs than anybody else in the world. It means they will continue to pay much more for their drugs than do our neighbors in Canada.

This means that a woman in America suffering from breast cancer will continue to be charged over $100 a month to take tamoxifen, while the same drug, made by the same company, can be bought in Canada for $22 for a month.

This means that people in my State will continue to pay: 37 percent more for cholesterol controlling Lipitor; 50 percent more for the anti-depressant Paxil, and 58 percent more for the arthritis drug Vioxx.

For the last decade drug spending has been driving up the cost of health care and put prescription drug prices out of reach for many Americans. We finally got our chance to help these seniors by lowering the cost of prescription drugs, but this bill wastes that opportunity.

It is bad enough our seniors are getting gouged by artificially high prices in the United States. I strongly believe we need to fix that. But now, with the passage of this bill, if indeed it passes, we are talking about taxpayers’ dollars. Not only is it the right thing to fix it, it is the duty that we fix it.

Under this legislation, thousands of Arkansans will be worse off than when they started. According to the CBO, 27 million Americans are expected to lose their retiree health care benefits as a result of this legislation. That includes 19,000 Arkansas seniors. In addition, under this bill, 109,100 Arkansas Medicaid beneficiaries will receive worse coverage than what they get now and they will face considerable new restrictions on the drugs they can take.

Mr. President, 40,750 fewer seniors in Arkansas will qualify for low-income protections against the assets test and lower qualifying income levels. I, for that matter, do not think that any American living on a farm should be penalized because they own a tractor or other farm equipment. And 11,020 Medicare beneficiaries will pay more for Part B premiums because of income.

This bill also starts us down the treacherous path to dismantling Medicare as we know it. It takes $12 billion away from Medicare and gives it to private insurers and then forces Medicare to compete with heavily subsidized HMOs.

This allows private insurers to cherry-pick the healthiest and wealthiest people to their plans while leaving the poorest and the sickest in Medicare to pay more in premiums. People need to know that this legislation was written to accommodate many of whom work for the pharmaceutical industry. It amazes me that we would seek permission from the pharmaceutical lobby before we would do the right thing for the people we serve. I do not support that. I do not believe 40 lobbyists have more influence over Congress than the 40 million people who are currently enrolled in Medicare.

People need to know that the pharmaceutical industry is going to be handed a taxpayer-subsidized windfall with the passage of this bill. Analysts at Goldman Sachs project the new Medicare benefit could increase industry revenue by 9 percent or about $13 billion a year. And it is no coincidence that as details of this legislation began leaking out, pharmaceutical stock prices have risen steadily. In the last week alone, the value of Pfizer’s stock increased by $19 billion.

I direct my colleagues to this bar graph behind me. The large bar represents Pfizer and the $19 billion they have increased in worth over the last week. Now look at the other bar, this little bitty bar, this small bar that you may have to squint and look closely to see is there. This bar represents the entirety of the cost savings provisions related to generic drugs and reimportation. Seniors will save over the next 10 years $0.6 billion. To reiterate, we have a $19 billion increase in the value of a company over 1 week, and $0.6 billion savings for seniors in the Medicare system over 10 years.

It is very easy to figure out who are the real winners and who are the real losers. If one takes a step back, one can see that there are some people in this body who believe we need this bill right now because the seniors have been waiting such a long time. They have.

But from the seniors I have talked to personally when I was home in Little Rock over the weekend, to the hundreds who have called my office in the last week, they just don’t want to get it done. They want us to get it done right. There is a big difference in just getting this bill done and getting it done right.

They want more than hollow promises that this legislation offers. My plea is simple: Let’s get it right so that our seniors can finally have a real benefit. Let’s get this bill wrong today will wind up doing more harm than good.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Wyoming. I urge people who are proponents of this bill and want me to yield them time to be here. When there is no time here, I will yield some of that time, but I am very glad to quit and put my statements in the Record to accommodate my colleagues. It is just a case of if we don’t want to waste any of this valuable time, get over here and do it.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I would say the same thing. We have a long list of people who have said they want to come. When our time is called and we are not here, that time will run off of our time. I would have the 9 minute people do it. Should people want extra time, I would have to object to protect other Senators.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, first let me thank the chairman of the committee who has worked so hard in bringing this proposal to the Senate floor. Not only has this been a part of his activity lately, but also the Energy bill. The Senator from Iowa deserves a great deal of support for what he has done.

I am very pleased to support this first real opportunity that we have had to modernize and strengthen Medicare, the first time in over 30 years. I am a little surprised at how negative some of our friends are in terms of being able to take this opportunity. Nobody suggests everything is perfect in this bill, but there is a lot of good in this bill. It is our opportunity to move forward and put in a program for the future.

Congress has no greater domestic challenge than strengthening and modernizing the Medicare Program and providing seniors with access to prescription drugs. Remember that the House and the Senate both passed a Medicare prescription drug bill earlier this year. It has taken Congress years to get to this point. This bill is not perfect, but I don’t think we should miss this opportunity to take some good steps in bringing Medicare into line with modern medical practices. We can’t allow the opportunity to pass.
November 24, 2003

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

that will give us a chance to provide seniors with prescription drug access. We can’t let that slip through our fingers because of partisan politics. Access to new technologies in Medicare currently takes an act of Congress. That is a lot to ask when you are caring for our elderly. We need to have a modern program in place. We need to improve the quality of care for our sickest seniors and ensure they have access to appropriate medications.

The Medicare Program is outdated and inefficient. There is absolutely no effort to coordinate care for seniors with chronic illnesses with the most expensive prescription drug needs. Over 90 percent of Medicare dollars are spent caring for folks who have already gotten sick, the most expensive type of care. We only spend 10 percent of Medicare dollars on preventive medicine. We need to focus on those folks as 6 percent of the seniors account for 55 percent of Medicare costs.

Progress has already made progress in implementing coordinated care programs. Medicare needs to catch up. This is our opportunity to not only allow for that but to provide for that. It doesn’t make sense that Medicare today pays much less than Medicare stays for ulcer surgery at a cost of about $28,000 per patient but will not pay for drugs that eliminate the cause of ulcers, drugs that cost about $500 a year. Another example how out of step with modern medicine Medicare has become is that it will pay many of the costs to treat a stroke which can be as high as $100,000. Yet Medicare does not cover blood-thinning drugs that could prevent strokes that cost less than $1,000 a year.

We need to strengthen the Medicare Program and provide seniors with the ability to choose the type of health care plan that fits their individual needs, protections against catastrophic health costs, and assistance in purchasing necessary prescription drugs. We also have to ensure rural seniors have access to the same choices as urban seniors. The Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan has proven to be a good model for giving folks the same health plan choices no matter where they live. I plan to monitor the implementation of the new Medicare Advantage plans, PPOs, to ensure that rural seniors have access to the same choices as urban seniors. The Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan has proven to be a good model for giving folks the same health plan choices no matter where they live. I plan to monitor the implementation of the new Medicare Advantage plans, PPOs, to ensure that rural seniors have access to the same choices as urban seniors.

It is important that we monitor spending carefully or we will be placing a huge burden on our children and grandchildren. There are specific cost containment provisions that do the following: Trustees are required to notify Congress when rural revenues are used to fund 45 percent of the Medicare Program. If this situation is reported 2 years in a row, it is called Medicare funding warning. After a Medicare funding warning is issued, the President must submit a proposal to respond within 15 days of submitting his budget. An expedited legislative process is then laid out.

So it has taken years for Congress to agree to a $400 billion Medicare. It could easily take another decade for Congress to learn how to control Medicare spending.

The President pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield the Senator 3 minutes.

The President pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 3 more minutes.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I thank the chairman. As I said, I happen to be the chairman of the Senate rural health caucus. We have worked on provider equity issues for a very long time. We have introduced over time several pieces of legislation with our rural colleagues that directly address the payment disparity in the Medicare Program for rural providers, hospitals, physicians, ambulances, home health agencies, and rural health clinics.

The majority of our health care plan has been incorporated into this Medicare prescription drug plan that is now before us, thanks very much to the chairman and ranking member. I am extremely pleased with the rural provisions and thank Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS for their work as cochair of the Senate rural health caucus. I also appreciate that the Senate has been incorporated into the Medicare Program, but the payment disparity must be addressed. The rural health provisions in the Medicare Program will make the equalization of the standardized amount permanent to hospitals; it will equalize Medicare disproportionate share payments. These payments assist hospitals where a large number of uninsured patients show up; it will lower the labor-related share from 71 to 62 percent.

Hospitals with fewer than 800 annual discharges will receive a 25-percent increase. It strengthens the Critical Access Hospital Program. In my State, for instance, many of the small towns cannot afford full-service hospitals, and we are moving toward critical access. This does a great deal with that issue.

The bill provides flexibility within the 25-bed limit for acute care and swing beds.

Not only is this a general movement forward with regard to Medicare and rural health care, but it strengthens the Critical Access Hospital Program. In my State, for instance, many of the small towns cannot afford full-service hospitals, and we are moving toward critical access. This does a great deal with that issue.

The bill provides flexibility within the 25-bed limit for acute care and swing beds.

Not only is this a general movement forward with regard to Medicare and rural health care, but it strengthens the Critical Access Hospital Program. I ask my colleagues to keep the big picture in mind as we debate this legislation. Seniors need assistance with prescription drugs now. Also, our rural health care delivery system cannot afford to wait for Congress any longer.

This bill is not perfect. No one said it is. We have concerns about the cost, but as I stated, we have plans to monitor the PPOs, to monitor the costs, to ensure seniors in rural areas have choice.

I do not believe we can walk away from the opportunity that is now on the table and its importance to seniors and providers. For these reasons, I strongly support the proposal before us.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZIGN). The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the real test of this bill, in the final analysis, is what it is really going to do for the senior population of the country. I know the arguments have been made forcefully that it is going to take $400 billion to give seniors something. But the test is whether we are going to give them something, the test is whether or not we are going to do more harm than good.

I believe when we measure the overall impact of this legislation on seniors and on the overall Medicare system, the bottom line is this does more harm than good. That is why I believe the Senate should stop the bill where it is. I would like to pass a prescription drug benefit. All of us want that. This bill could be better. It could be better by being closer to what was sent out of the Senate which had the support of my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, and others because it did more good than harm. But this bill moves in the wrong direction because while it was in the conference with the House, it was loaded up with major giveaways to the drug companies, insurance companies, and has put some money in such a way that on the ability of the Federal Government to even negotiate for bulk purchases and thereby lower costs, which is an extraordinary reduction in the ability of the Government to try to constrain the costs overall of prescription drugs. These are the reasons I think this bill does more harm than good:

No. 1, the prescription drug benefit for many is not affordable, it is not comprehensive, and it is not guaranteed. There are holes in coverage and complications. The coverage gaps remain too high, and seniors are still charged premiums even after their benefits shut down in the so-called donut hole.

Seniors are not assured a Government fallback plan with a set national premium. So if there are places where you don’t have HMOs or there are other problems, they are going to have increases in their premiums under Medicare. It seems we ought to have a fallback with some sort of fixed price that will be affordable. At least 3 million seniors are projected to lose their gold-plated retiree prescription drug plan and be forced into a lesser benefit under the Medicare system.

The bill fails to adequately fix protections for low-income seniors and people with disabilities who currently rely on both Medicare and Medicaid for their coverage. That could cause as many as 6 million people to pay more money for fewer benefits.

For seniors who think this bill is only designed to give them new benefits, they are going to be shocked to find that this legislation actually raises $25 billion in new revenue directly out of the pockets of senior citizens by increasing the costs for traditional Medicare coverage of doctor and hospital visits.

They also be surprised to find out that while we are in such a rush to pass this bill, the benefit is not actually going to come to them until 2006. In the meantime, seniors get a disadvantageous discount card. Most of them have four or five of the cards today anyway, with the same amount of deduction, and it will give them no more discount than any of those handful of cards available to them in the marketplace now.

The question ought to be asked: Why are we not beginning a Medicare prescription drug benefit until 2006? It took 11 months to put the entire Medicare Program in place. Are we telling seniors we can’t, in the age of computers, put a prescription drug benefit in place in a matter of months? Why 2006?

We all understand why. It has to do with the private companies and their taking time to ramp up, the amount of money they are going to get, and the unaccountability.

One of the biggest failures of this bill is its silence on controlling the rising prices of prescription drugs. Without an effective means to restrain double-digit price increases, this bill does nothing to protect seniors from ever-growing out-of-pocket costs. When they are pushed off Medicare into HMOs and the HMOs raise the prices, seniors are going to be screaming about the increased cost of prescription drugs.

This bill prohibits the Government, as I mentioned earlier, from using its bulk purchasing power to negotiate volume discounts for Medicare prescription drugs. That doesn’t make sense. When the State of Maine, they have done that with good results. It is interesting, they were taken to the Supreme Court and challenged in their right to do that, and the Supreme Court upheld their right to do that. As a consequence, they are able to provide more affordable prescription drugs to their citizens.

This bill is more about shifting medical costs to beneficiaries than actually reining in prescription drug costs. In fact, it is the exact opposite of private competition and to prevent the Federal Government from running the program, the Republicans came up with an unprecedented $12 billion slush fund to entice private plans to participate in this risky market. On top of giving them extra payments to participate, the bill does nothing to require that those private plans operate efficiently.

The Medicare Program in its entirety now spends only 2 percent of its total expenses on administration. By contrast, many of the health plans in the private market often commit as much as 15 to 20 percent of their expenditures to administration. So every dollar that goes to administrative costs is a dollar not available to improve benefits for Medicare beneficiaries. Smart stewards of taxpayer funds ought to demand that private plans be more efficient if they want to participate.

So this bill is not just about adding a prescription drug benefit to Medicare, it is also a bill that represents an ideological excess by some who want to force the traditional Medicare Program down the path to privatization. Under this plan, seniors will be given this choice: pay more for Medicare and get forced into an HMO, give up on choosing your own doctor and hospital or watch your bills skyrocket. This so-called premium support provision is, in my judgment, irresponsible and unfair.

The so-called cost containment provisions add insult to injury. By essentially placing a cap on future Medicare spending, this bill is going to attempt to force future Congresses to reconcile Medicare spending growth by cutting benefits, raising premiums, or increasing the payroll tax. I think that is unacceptable.

In addition, this bill squanders another $6 billion on tax breaks for wealthy people, and that is going to have an impact in harming Medicare. The reason is that when a tax-free, high-deductible, catastrophic health policy, known as a health savings account, is allowed, those seniors going to be used by those who have the money who can afford it. The result is it is going to undermine traditional Medicare by cherry-picking the healthiest people and the wealthiest seniors out of the risk pool, thereby raising premiums by as much as 60 percent for those who are left behind.

In the end, we have to ask ourselves who wins and who loses in this bill. I think I have shown how seniors lose. As we go from a PDP, which is a drug plan, a PPO, or the fallback, this benefit is guaranteed for all seniors. It is guaranteed in this bill. For service is held harmless in this bill in all respects. So a senior can always get a standard prescription drug benefit under this bill. Whether one takes it from a PDP, a drug plan, a PPO, or the fallback, this benefit is guaranteed for all seniors.

We will not have this opportunity again. We are 535 Members of Congress. There are 535 people who have to work together to get something passed. This product we have today reflects this reality. It is $400 billion for seniors.

It is also much closer to the Senate bill than the House bill. I hear complaints that the Senate bill is not nearly as good as the Senate bill. These critics have not read the conference report. The conference report is better than the Senate bill in many respects. For example, dual eligibles. The conference report covers low-income dual eligibles. The Senate bill does not. I think most Senators agree this is a better policy than what was in the Senate bill.

We also have a solid fallback. It is wrong when Senators say there is no guaranteed prescription drug benefit to seniors. It is guaranteed in this bill.

We will not have this opportunity again. We are 535 Members of Congress. There are 535 people who have to work together to get something passed. This product we have today reflects this reality. It is $400 billion for seniors.

As I mentioned earlier, this bill is an entitlement. It is a $400 billion entitlement expansion we have tried to pass in past years but are only able to get passed now.

I have heard some Senators claim that this is not the Senate bill because it contains something called a premium support, and it has a so-called slush fund. Let me remind Senators, the so-called premium support is extremely watered down from what was in the House bill. It is time limited to 6 years. Only six cities will be demonstration projects. Low-income seniors in each of those six cities will be held harmless. They get full protection. In addition, the premiums for those who are not low income are limited to a 5 percent charge. But we are not saying there is a premium they have not being reading. It seems that they are referring to a bill which is not the conference report before us today. They are discussing problems that might occur in the future. But the problems described are based on some other bill, not the bill before us, not the conference report.

The fact is that this legislation provides $400 billion for seniors. That is a billion dollars every year for U.S. seniors that they do not have today. I think we owe it to our American seniors to give them this $400 billion new entitlement for drug benefits. We are on the brink. We are close to passing it.

As a result of the last several years, we have come close but we were not able to finish the job. I do not think we are going to have this opportunity again. I do not think the Budget Committee is going to set aside $400 billion again, particularly with the increasing budget deficits and current account deficits. We will not have this opportunity again.

This is a good bill. No bill is perfect. We are 535 Members of Congress. There are 535 people who have to work together to get something passed. This product before us today reflects this reality. It is $400 billion for seniors.
Part B premium may go up by no more than 5 percent. Any other change in these demonstration areas has to be enacted by Congress—enacted by Congress to extend, enacted by Congress to expand, enacted by Congress to change.

What has happened in the past when we have had these demos? They have been repealed. They have not been extended. In 1997, Congress set up premium support demonstration projects. Congress then rushed in to repeal them as quickly as possible. They were gone. The same will happen here. Do my colleagues know why? Because the dollars provided to private plans in the premium support demonstration areas will be much less than in other parts of the country. The private plans will not be able to survive.

Mark my word, those plans, those physicians, and those providers in the demonstration MSAs are going to come to Congress and ask us to repeal it. Remember this so-called $1 billion slush fund, $12 billion was in the Senate bill, which seventy-six Senators voted for. This is just $2 million more, and it does not come out of the $400 billion for drug benefits. That $400 billion for drug benefits is still there, but the conference report does have $2 billion more than the Senate bill, for which 76 Senators voted.

To close, I will return to my main point. This is a very good bill. We have the opportunity now to provide prescription drug benefits for seniors. We are not going to have this opportunity in the future. Beneficiaries have waited a long time for this benefit. This bill is much closer to the Senate bill than it is to the House bill. If we do not pass this now, I must ask you, what are we going to tell our seniors when they say to us, Mr. Senator, Ms. Senator, you told us you were going to give us prescription drug benefits but you found some reason to say no and you voted against it? Will you give it to us; why did you give us the help you promised? We have an obligation to help our seniors pass this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to talk about the bill before us.

When the Senate first voted on a prescription drug benefit for seniors back in June, I offered an amendment. My amendment, Mr. President, I proposed that we give seniors a prescription drug benefit sooner rather than later. But that amendment was voted down by the Republican majority.

So now, under this conference report, the drug coverage doesn’t start until January 2006 23 months from now. Yes, 2006.

So why so long? One clue is illustrated on this chart. Notice that Election Day is 11 months from now. And notice the profound health gap that exists. The drug benefit is conveniently well past election day.

I would like to remind my colleagues that the original Medicare plan was signed into law by President Johnson on July 30, 1965, and 11 months later—July 1, 1966—all the people who were eligible for the program were enrolled in the program.

The entire system was created from scratch in 11 months.

I know the President is desperate to take credit for passing a prescription drug bill when he faces voters next year. But he does not want the many shortcomings in this plan to be fully evident to seniors until well after the election. My Republican friends are hoping that seniors won’t find out what they don’t get from this legislation until it is too late. It is almost a cruel joke.

When a prescription drug benefit is signed into law, all of our offices will be flooded with calls by seniors asking a simple question: “How can I sign up for this benefit?” They will have seen President Bush hype Medicare and say “we have put a prescription drug benefit in place.”

And when seniors call to find out how soon they can receive the benefit, we will have to tell them “2006.” Sorry, President Bush’s 2003 Medicare Prescription Drug Plan will not start until 2006.

No one wants to provide a real Medicare prescription drug benefit to seniors more than the Democrats. After all, Democrats created Medicare, and we have protected it for decades.

Everyone knows that Republicans resisted the creation of Medicare and have opposed it ever since. It wasn’t too long ago that former House Speaker Newt Gingrich expressed his desire to see Medicare “wither on the vine.”

Well, the President today is the first major step toward the disintegration of Medicare as we know it.

In reality, this bill isn’t as much a benefit for seniors as it is a big benefit for HMOs and other private sector special interests. It opens the door for HMOs to take over the Medicare program.

So, what is it specifically that the President is afraid seniors will find out before 2006? Is the President afraid that seniors will realize they are going to pay at least $810 before they break even and get any benefit from this plan? For many seniors that is more money than they spend on prescription drugs right now. Also, to 30 percent of beneficiaries would pay more for enrolling in the plan than they would receive in actual benefits.

Is the President worried that seniors are going to discover that there is a huge gap benefit? Under this plan, a senior will pay a premium estimated at $35 a month, a $250 deductible, and 25 percent coinurance payments until reaching $2,250 in drug expenses. What happens then? Seniors get no coverage. You heard me correctly, nothing, zero.

That is right. At that point, seniors will continue to pay their premiums but they will also pay 100 percent of their drug costs. Only until they have reached the catastrophic limit of $5,100 in drug costs does any benefit return. And by that time, seniors will have incurred $3,600 in out-of-pocket spending. This is called the “hole in the doughnut.” and it surely doesn’t sound like such a good deal to me.

And remember that nowhere in this bill does it say that the premium is only $35. It could be significantly higher.

The $35 figure is an estimate. We all know how bad this administration has been at making estimates.

Is the President afraid that seniors will figure all this out? You bet he is.

Seniors deserve a much better program than what the Senate is considering right now, and they certainly deserve it before 2006.

There are some who will say we must have this gap in coverage because we only have $400 billion to work with. Well, I say if there are insufficient funds in the budget to provide real drug coverage, then it is the result of choices made by the President and his party. They chose to provide a massive tax cut to the wealthy who need it least and they chose it at the expense of Medicare.

What else is in this bill that the Republican’s don’t want seniors to find out about until 2006?

This bill will effectively destroy the Medicare program that has worked for 30 years. Yes, 30 years. Say goodbye to Medicare as we know it.

This bill does not expand Medicare; it opens the door for HMOs to take over the program. And that means that seniors will be at the mercy of these HMOs. And as everyone knows, HMOs will not pay for all prescription drugs.

Under this bill, seniors will be limited to the prescription drugs covered by their drug plan or HMO. In order to keep costs down, these drug plans and HMOs will use something called a “formulary.” A formulary is a list of drugs that are covered under the health plan. If a particular drug is not on the formulary then it is not covered.

That means that after a senior has paid her premium and her deductible if she needs a certain medication not on the list used by her drug plan or HMO, then she will pay 100 percent of the cost of that medication.

Where is the benefit in that? Medicare, Mr. President, this bill goes to great lengths to prop up and protect HMOs at the expense of seniors. Included in this bill is something called the “Stabilization Fund.” It should be called the “HMO Slush Fund.” This fund is designed to ensure that HMOs succeed by offering artificially high premiums and better benefits than traditional Medicare. This bill hands over $12 billion of taxpayer money for this effort.

This $12 billion that could be used to try to cover the coverage gap has so far been deducted but our Republican friends have made a choice to create a $12 billion slush fund for the insurance industry.
I want to spend a few minutes talking about the overall impact of this bill on seniors in the State I represent—New Jersey.

The most important reason why I am voting against this bill is because I am convinced that more seniors in my State will be hurt by this legislation than helped.

There are approximately 1.1 million seniors in New Jersey.

Currently 430,000 New Jersey retirees receive prescription drug coverage from their former employers. Because this coverage is the result of a bargain made by employers to continue offering coverage to retirees, over 90,000 seniors in New Jersey will lose their existing drug coverage, which often offers more generous benefits.

This bill is also going to make poor seniors in my State worse off. In New Jersey, Medicaid covers the drug costs for seniors up to 100 percent of the federal poverty level. That is an income of approximately $9,000 a year for an individual or $12,000 a year for a couple.

In New Jersey, low-income seniors currently on Medicaid have access to what many other states have been able to provide them—no copayments for their prescriptions. Under this bill, however, they will now pay $1 per prescription for generic drugs and $3 per prescription for brand-name drugs.

Low-income seniors tend to be in worse health and, as a result, they have higher annual drug spending. A senior with an annual income of $7,000 or $8,000 does not have the discretionary income to shell out $15 or $20 or $25 for the prescriptions that he or she may need.

The other point I see a lot of money to my colleagues, but for low-income Americans, it can force them to choose between buying medication and buying food or buying medication and keeping the heat turned on in the winter.

Mr. President, this bill represents an enormous opportunity squandered. We had a real chance to do something right for seniors. The $400 billion to improve the lives of 34 million seniors, 34 million of whom don't have any prescription drug coverage right now. Frankly, we blew it.

When I look at this bill, I see a bill that makes seniors in New Jersey worse off.

I see a bill that makes poor seniors worse off.

I see a bill that takes away choices from seniors.

I see a bill that wastes taxpayer money on a slush fund for HMOs.

I see a bill that "hides the ball" until 2006.

And I see a bill that I cannot, in good conscience, support.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, let me inquire of the Democrats. Could we have a Democrat speak?

Mr. FEDERAL. Senator AKAKA is here and raring to go.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Thank you very much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii is recognized.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to express my opposition to the conference report for H.R. 1, the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act of 2003.

For far too long Medicare has lacked a prescription drug benefit. The lack of this benefit has been the gaping hole in the Medicare safety net. I have consistently supported efforts to establish a meaningful Medicare prescription drug benefit. I supported S. 1, the Prescription Drug and Medicare Improvement Act of 2003, because it would have been an important step forward in meeting the prescription drug needs of seniors. Instead, in making the coverage under the Medicare program for active retirees, not merely to shift the financial burden of existing coverage to the federal government. Many seniors will be forced to rely on Medicare, which will provide a less generous Federal benefit than what they currently enjoy. It is estimated that 17,850 Medicare beneficiaries in my home state of Hawaii will lose their retiree health benefits as a result of the enactment of this legislation. If Medicare seniors lose their employer-based coverage, they may have to pay more for a Medicare drug benefit that provides less comprehensive coverage. Despite the subsidies included in the conference report to encourage the continuation of existing coverage, it is estimated that approximately 2.5 million people will lose their coverage.

Mr. President, I along with Senators WARNER, ALLEN, MIKULSKI, SARBANES, JOHNSON, and CORZINE requested that the conference report include our bill, S. 1369, in the conference report to ensure that present and future federal retirees receive the same level of prescription drug coverage. The government's Federal Employee Health Benefit (FEHBP) program for its employees and retirees stands as a model for all employer-sponsored health care plans. Our legislation would protect prescription drug benefits for federal employees and ensure parity for these benefits with other FEHBP subscribers. The other body approved companion legislation, H.R. 2631, on July 8, 2003. While the Medicare reform bill includes tax credits to employers who retain existing drug benefits for their retirees, such incentives provide no guarantee of the FEHBP drug benefit for the government's own annuitants. If FEHBP is the model for this reform, the federal government must not drop or reduce drug benefits for retired FEHBP enrollees. Our legislation sends a message to other employer-sponsored plans that the federal government stands behind its commitment to retired workers. I will continue to work to bring about the enactment of this bill.

Mr. President, the cost containment provisions in the legislation provide a fast-track legislative process to cut Medicare benefits for federal retirees. The conference report to ensure that the federal government would not lose its negotiating leverage until 2005. The conference report prevents the federal government from using the bargaining power of 40 million senior citizens to bring down the cost of prescription drugs for the Medicare program.

Mr. President, the conference report weakens Medicare. It imposes means tests for Medicare Part B premiums and for low-income subsidies for the prescription drug benefit. This is the beginning of the end of Medicare being a universal benefit. This is the first step towards means testing other parts of the existing Medicare program. Means tests place greater burdens on seniors. They also create administrative difficulties for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

Even more objectionable is the assets test used to determine the low-income subsidies for the prescription drug benefit. The assets test is completely unrealistic. According to Families USA, the assets test will deny subsidies to 2.8 million very low-income seniors if they have even a small amount of assets. For example, the assets test disqualifies people who have household goods and cash savings worth more than $2,000. Medicare is an entitlement and participants should not be subjected to these demeaning means tests. Additional assistance should not be denied because they happen to have set money aside in their homes.

Mr. President, this legislation also threatens existing Medicare benefits because it includes billions of dollars for subsidies for private plans. This increases premiums for seniors, raises government costs for health care, and damages the solvency of the Medicare trust fund.

Mr. President, I also want to express my disappointment that language similar to an amendment that I had offered, which was accepted as part of the manager’s package for S. 1, was not included in the conference report. While I thank Chairman Grassley and ranking member Baucus for their assistance with this provision, it was not included in the conference report. The amendment would have allowed my home state of Hawaii to benefit from the increase in Medicaid disproportionate share hospital (DSH) payments included in the bill. Medicaid DSH payments are designed to provide additional support to hospitals that treat large numbers of Medicaid and uninsured patients. The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA) created specific DSH allotments for each state based on their Medicaid DSH expenditures for fiscal year 1995. In 1994, the State of Hawaii implemented the QUEST demonstration program that was designed to reduce the number of uninsured and improve access to health care. The prior Medicare DSH program was incorporated into QUEST. As a result of the demonstration program, Hawaii did not have DSH expenditures in 1995 and was not provided a DSH allotment.

The Medicare, Medicaid, and SCHIP Benefits Improvement and Protection Act of 2000 made further changes to the DSH program, which included the establishment of a floor for DSH allotments. However, states without allotments were again left out. Other states that have obtained waivers similar to Hawaii’s waiver have retained their DSH allotments. Only two states, Hawaii and Tennessee, do not have DSH allotments.

The conference report provides that states without DSH allotments could receive additional assistance if their waiver was terminated or removed. While this may possibly benefit Tennessee, this language will prevent Hawaii and any additional state from obtaining Medicaid DSH support that is included in this bill. The conference report includes an additional $6.35 billion in Medicaid DSH relief to the states. Hawaii does not receive any of these funds. Hawaii’s hospitals are struggling to meet the healthcare needs of the uninsured. Hawaii cannot continue to be left out. Additional DSH payments would help Hawaii hospitals to meet the rising health care needs of our communities and reinforce our health care safety net. All states need to have access to this additional Medicaid DSH support. I will continue to work to correct this inequity.

Mr. President, as I said at the start of my remarks, this legislation is a false promise. Even if this conference report is enacted, we will need to enact follow up legislation to address the flaws in the bill. We will also have to repeal several of the provisions that weaken the existing Medicare program. It is important for us to move forward in the Medicare program. I disagree. This conference report takes too many elderly Americans backwards in terms of their benefits to constitute forward progress or forward thinking. Many people, particularly seniors, will eventually come to the conclusion that I have reached on the legislation and Congress will regret this rush to judgment. After reviewing the provisions in this legislation, I am disappointed that this bill is a false promise that undermines the essential Medicare program. Thank you, Mr. President.

Grassley. I yield myself 30 seconds, before I yield to the Senator from Maine 7 minutes, for just a little bit of history and to applaud the Senator from Maine.

She was active in this issue of Medicare prescription drugs. Even if this conference report is enacted, we will need to enact follow up legislation to address the flaws in the bill. We will also have to repeal several of the provisions that weaken the existing Medicare program. It is important for us to move forward in the Medicare program. I disagree. This conference report takes too many elderly Americans backwards in terms of their benefits to constitute forward progress or forward thinking. Many people, particularly seniors, will eventually come to the conclusion that I have reached on the legislation and Congress will regret this rush to judgment. After reviewing the provisions in this legislation, I am disappointed that this bill is a false promise that undermines the essential Medicare program. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself 30 seconds, before I yield to the Senator from Maine 7 minutes, for just a little bit of history and to applaud the Senator from Maine.

She was active in this issue of Medicare prescription drugs. On August 1 of that year, we held a news conference, all five of us, along with Senators Hatch, Jeffords, Breaux, and Grassley.

I remember that meeting we had. The AARP sent us a birthday cake with a pie-shaped piece cut out of it. Their admonition to the tripartisan group was: Fill in the missing piece. The missing piece of Medicare was prescription drugs.

The Senator from Maine has been very aggressive in this issue in various ways, helping us fill in that piece of the pie. On August 1 of that year, we held a news conference, all five of us, announcing our plans for doing that.

We have not exactly come out where we were a year ago. We probably have come out a lot better with the legislation we have before us. But regardless, the Senator from Maine was in on the ground floor, a long time before I was, on this issue.

I yield to the Senator from Maine 7 minutes.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for his most gracious remarks. As I said on Saturday, without his considerable efforts, determination, leadership and willingness to work across party lines, we would not be where we are today. I want to congratulate him and commend him for the enormous leadership and support he has given to this issue as the chairman of the committee and throughout this process that has obviously been a difficult one.

I had the opportunity on Saturday to elaborate on my views with respect to this conference report and we are on a precipice of opportunity and ushering in a new era in the Medicare Program. While this conference report does not rise to the level of everyone’s aspirations and expectations when it comes to prescription drugs, I think we have a very good understanding of this report. It was melding some very disparate views in very disparate bills. We must, in the final analysis, measure these results for the millions of seniors who will benefit against the benchmark of the status quo.

The question is whether the status quo was preferable. Someone said you may have to fight a battle more than once to win it. We know how many battles we have fought on this issue over the last 5 or 6 years. How many more battles and how many more years will have to go by and at whose expense? I think we know at whose expense. It will be at the expense of the 10 million seniors who do not have prescription drug coverage currently. It will be at the expense of the 14 million seniors who are under the 150 percent of poverty level, who will now get a very generous level of support and subsidy to finance this most vital drug coverage.

This conference report embraces many of the critical benchmarks that we had established previously, the ones to which Chairman Grassley was referring with respect to the tripartisan bill that should have passed last year, the Senator from Maine, I was unable to pass that legislation. We lamented the loss of that opportunity, but that time has passed.

The Senate-passed bill was something we all preferred; there is no question about it. But I think we also understand the nature of conference committee. The key point to remember about this conference report is that it embraces the critical benchmarks and principles that we all championed: The prescription drug benefit will be voluntary; it is voluntary, it will be voluntary; it would be permanent, it would be comprehensive, it would be affordable, there would be equal benefits across all plans, there would be a Government fallback to ensure that every senior, regardless of where they live in America, would have access to affordable drug coverage, and we would target the most assistance to those most in need. While it is not everything it could be or should be, we have to measure the results against the status quo.

I would like to focus for a few moments on one of the issues that has been talked about consistently and understand the privatization of Medicare. There is no question that I certainly would not support anything that would lead to the privatization of Medicare. In fact, the Senate-passed bill had nothing in the feature of a premium support proposal. Now we have to discuss what is before the conference and what has actually changed from what was in the House-passed legislation. I think it is critical that we understand the differences in what is included in this conference report. The House approach sought to test an open-ended, permanent nationwide privatization of Medicare through an untested and untried approach known as the premium support proposal. It is certainly no secret that I was totally opposed to this approach, as well as many of us here in the Senate. But it is also critical to know what is now being applied in this conference report, and there should be no mistake that this conference report puts an end to that approach. It puts an end to that effort to privatize.

I certainly would have said the privatization approach in the House bill could have led us down the path of what the program of health care looked like prior to 1965 when Medicare was created, which was a patchwork delivery of health care to seniors in America. We don’t want to go back to that; that would be a retreat. The House approach would have wild fluctuations in premium, as we saw in the charts that were issued by CMS within the Department of Health and Human Services. There would be wild fluctuations not only between States but within States and even within congressional districts.

In response to that concern, I and 43 of my colleagues wrote a letter saying that it would be totally unacceptable—not only the open-ended, permanent nationwide system that the House-passed bill included but also even the narrowed-down version of a demonstration program that would have captured 10 million seniors. That was unacceptable.

I want to make clear where we are today. We have eliminated the whole approach of the House. Now, what is in this conference report as shown in this chart here today is one Federal demonstration program. That is what it is all about. Where the effort once centered on a narrowly tailored version of a demonstration program that would have ultimately ended up in the wholesale undermining and destabilization of the Medicare Program, we now have a pared back demonstration project that would be limited to 46 metropolitan statistical areas; that certain criteria will be included which will determine those areas; but according to the Congressional Budget Office, based on that criteria, in fact, it would not include more than 650,000 to 1 million seniors.

What we were talking about originally in the House-passed bill was a nationwide program, but we are now back to a pared-down demonstration project, and we include criteria that would allow the demonstration project to 650,000 to 1 million, according to the Congressional Budget Office. Also, there is protection for low income. Where the original proposal by the House had no protection for lower income, now they are protected as well. They will not be included in this demonstration project.

It is very important to understand some of those differences. In House bill, this program sunsets in 2016. It doesn’t start until 2010. We obviously have time between now and then after passage of the legislation to address any further concerns. But we move the date from 2008 to 2010. There is an end goal in 2016. No extensions are allowed without new legislative action.

There are six MSAs with criteria that I mentioned earlier. Now we are not talking about open-ended, nationwide; we are not talking about even 10 million seniors. We are talking about 650,000 to 1 million.

As far as any premium fluctuations, it is limited to 5 percent. Without the compounding, that would have had the net effect of having a 30 percent increase over 6 years. Now that would be phased in.

I should also mention that this demonstration project is phased in starting in 2010. It is not totally in place until 2015. If we stay within the 5 percent, it will be phased in over 4 years. It represents 5 percent each year. We have made substantial changes. It is a wholesale change of what was in the House proposal.

This is a limited Federal demonstration program that allows for the testing of perhaps new ideas. But nothing can be implemented—nothing can be done—until the Congress would want to address those issues based on the results of that demonstration project.

That is very important for Members of this Senate to understand in terms of the differences in scope, size, implementation effect, and what it would do to the underlying program.

Finally, one other additional point with respect to this demonstration project:

Also in this legislation we terminated the financial incentives that are offered to private plans participating in the demonstration when it begins in 2010. I think we have to understand what the true facts are.

This demonstration project will not undermine the underlying traditional Medicare Program as we know it. Obviously, it would be preferable not to have it in this legislation, but this is the essence of a compromise that is before us, and it is very limited in terms of size and scope.

It is important for Members of the Senate to realize that.

In the final analysis, I think we cannot lose this opportunity. This is an idea whose time has not only come, but it is long overdue. I yield the floor.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I yield myself 9 minutes.

Mr. President, let me commend the Senator from Iowa, the Senator from Louisiana, the Senator from Montana, and others who have worked on this so very hard. I want to express my gratitude to them for spending so much time on this issue.

Let me also briefly thank my own staff. I am not a member of the Finance Committee. But this issue transcends committees. This is legislation that all of us have a deep interest in. I thank Jim Fenton and Ben Berwick of my staff for the tremendous effort and the time they have put in.

I spoke at some length on Friday about this issue. Let me divide the issue very quickly.

A prescription drugs benefit, I think, would pass 100 to 0. I have a vote on the prescription drug benefit—you would hear speeches that it didn’t go far enough and concerns about the donut hole and whether or not 150 percent of poverty was the right margin to be drawn—but I suspect all Members in the final analysis would support the initiation of a prescription drug benefit on the assumption that we would work to improve it in the years ahead.

If I were voting on that issue alone, I would stand here and raise concerns about matters included in that provision, but it would have my wholehearted support as a long overdue proposition. I won’t dwell on that aspect of the legislation here this morning.

The second piece of this bill, however, is one that causes me concern. This second piece is more difficult to understand, it is less clear than just $400 billion for prescription drugs. The second part of this bill is a major change in Medicare. The program has been around for 48 years and is currently serving 41 million Americans. It is probably the most successful and the most widely supported Federal program of the 20th century. I can’t think of any program, except Social Security, which has been so widely supported. We are about to take that program which has worked so tremendously well, and I think disadvantage it significantly. Let me explain briefly why.

The sponsors of the legislation say that this approach will create competition in the system. But this is a new idea whose time has not come, and let’s talk about this so-called “competition.”
Private plans under this bill will be reimbursed at a higher rate than traditional Medicare—9 percent higher. On top of that, this bill also makes available $12 billion in a slush fund to be used to lure private plans into the market of Medicare. It is not competition. It is not a level playing field. It actually prevents the Medicare Program caused by this bill will force seniors to pay more and face the prospect of fewer benefits.

Remember, Medicare initially said whether you are wealthier and healthier or poorer and sicker, we all work together. Now we are splitting off the wealthier and healthier and leaving the sicker and poorer on the side. This bill will actually mean less choice, in many ways, for seniors. Seniors like the traditional Medicare Program. It is current law. It is current fact. This very thing the supporters of this bill claim to be providing. Under the current system, seniors have a choice of doctors. But that choice would soon disappear with a rise in private managed care plans.

I hope this prediction is wrong but I am fearful it is right. If this prediction is wrong, it most likely means seniors have elected not to move into private plans and HMOs will leave the market in many regions. How did we get here? We are splitting off the wealthier and healthier and leaving the sicker and poorer on the side.

This bill will actually mean less choice, in many ways, for seniors. Seniors like the traditional Medicare Program. It is current law. It is current fact. This very thing the supporters of this bill claim to be providing. Under the current system, seniors have a choice of doctors. But that choice would soon disappear with a rise in private managed care plans.

I hope this prediction is wrong but I am fearful it is right. If this prediction is wrong, it most likely means seniors have elected not to move into private plans and HMOs will leave the market in many regions. How did we get here? We are splitting off the wealthier and healthier and leaving the sicker and poorer on the side.

This bill will actually mean less choice, in many ways, for seniors. Seniors like the traditional Medicare Program. It is current law. It is current fact. This very thing the supporters of this bill claim to be providing. Under the current system, seniors have a choice of doctors. But that choice would soon disappear with a rise in private managed care plans.

I hope this prediction is wrong but I am fearful it is right. If this prediction is wrong, it most likely means seniors have elected not to move into private plans and HMOs will leave the market in many regions. How did we get here? We are splitting off the wealthier and healthier and leaving the sicker and poorer on the side.
Again, it is not all things to all people. If you find yourself in a position where you are well off and you do not have a lot of prescription drug costs, there may not be in here the most advantageous drug program for you, but for the sickest and the neediest of this country we have come a long way in this bill.

While the benefit is somewhat meager, I am confident we will improve on it in the future for those who maybe do not get the best return from this package. But this bill targets the sickest and the neediest of seniors, those with the highest drug costs and those who are in the lowest income category.

Because of the $400 billion limitation, that is where we have gone. When fiscal times improve, we should eliminate the gap in coverage. I am concerned about those seniors who will be hit with the gap in coverage and have to continue to pay their premiums. But the point is, every senior in Medicare in Arkansas will be able to choose to enroll in a new voluntary drug benefit while staying in the traditional Medicare Program. This is a huge victory. Seniors will not have to leave the Medicare they love to get a prescription drug benefit.

That is because the bill contains a fallback plan—a Government guaranteed plan or safety net—that will provide drug coverage should private, drug-only plans not come into their area.

We in Arkansas know a lot about that. We have seen what happens when Medicare+Choice comes in. I am concerned that the fallback provision in this bill is not as strong as that which was passed in the Senate bill because it allows one prescription plan and one integrated plan to provide the drug benefit instead of two prescription plans.

I intend to work with my colleagues to fix that. But before the drug benefit is enacted, I am glad that the conference agreement requires a national fallback contract, so that the Government fallback will always be there when necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield the Senator an additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 1 additional minute.

Mrs. LINCOLN. I thank the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. President, I have a lot more to say, and I hope I will have an opportunity to do it at some point.

I think the most important point to be made today is to talk about those who will be served. Over 170,700 beneficiaries in Arkansas will pay no premium for their prescription drug coverage and a nominal copay of no more than $2 for generic drugs and $5 for brand name drugs. They also will not have a gap in their drug coverage.

We are addressing some of the neediest individuals in our country at this juncture. Over 40,200 additional seniors in Arkansas will qualify for reduced premiums, lower deductibles and coinurance, and no gaps in their drug coverage. All told, over 40 percent—over 40 percent—of Medicare beneficiaries in Arkansas will receive the much-needed special benefit.

This low-income assistance is of special importance to Arkansans’ older women. Medicare seniors are disproportionately women and disproportionately poor, and will be served well by this special assistance.

There is much I would have done to strengthen the low-income provisions, such as not having an assets test for everyone and ensuring that Medicare could wrap around the cost-sharing requirements in the Medicare bill and that Medicaid could pay for prescription drugs not on the private plan’s formulary.

I fought to include a new benefit providing screening for diabetes. The new screening benefit will help with the fact that approximately one third of the 7 million seniors with diabetes—or 2.3 million people—are undiagnosed.

They simply do not know that they have this very serious condition—a condition whose complications include heart disease, stroke, vision loss and blindness, amputations, and kidney disease.

This bill takes a number of steps to protect seniors’ access to community pharmacies.

I worked hard to ensure that private PBMs must disclose any price concessions made available by manufacturers, that the Secretary of Health and Human Services has the authority to audit the financial statements and records of plans to ensure that they are complying with these disclosure requirements, and that the Federal Trade Commission study whether the PBMs that allow mail order pharmacies have created higher drug prices for consumers.

In addition, private plans must allow any willing pharmacist to be a provider under its plan. And for the first time, local pharmacists will be allowed to offer 90-day prescriptions just like mail-order pharmacies.

These provisions are vital to rural hospitals, physicians, ambulance providers, home health providers, and rural health clinics in Arkansas. I have worked with my colleagues for a number of years on these provisions, and long-sought rural equity is finally achieved.

This bill also contains several good additions to the traditional Medicare Program that seeks to improve the health and well-being of seniors.

Among the provisions that I fought to include is my demonstration program on chronic care management that will assist doctors and the healthy outcomes that result when a geriatrician is paid appropriately for caring for a patient with multiple chronic conditions.

I also fought to include coverage for insulin syringes. Roughly 40 percent of the senior population with diabetes—or 1.8 million seniors—use syringes to inject insulin into their bodies to control their diabetes every day.

Without a coverage on syringe purchases—which can be especially expensive for seniors on fixed incomes—would not count towards cost-sharing and yearly maximum out-of-pocket expenses.

The low-income assistance in the Senate bill was much more generous. It helped 3 million more seniors. And I pledge to these seniors that I will continue to work on strengthening these provisions in the future.

I am pleased that the conference agreement provides financial incentives for employers to continue offering prescription drug coverage for their retirees.

Without coverage, seniors will receive many calls this week from constituents who want to ensure they don’t lose the health coverage they worked for during their entire lives. It is frustrating that employers are already dropping retiree health coverage.

So I am glad this bill provides tax incentives to employers and unions so they don’t drop drug coverage. Employer groups have told me that this bill will actually encourage them to retain rather than drop coverage in the future.

This bill also creates the most comprehensive rural package we’ve seen in years. By significantly decreasing or eliminating the disparities in Medicare payments that exist between rural and urban health care providers, seniors in rural areas will have better access to the care they need.

To conclude, we must seize this opportunity before it is too late. This is not the bill I would have written, but it is a step forward.

Yesterday, I talked with Cecil Malone, the president of the Arkansas AARP. We both agree that this moment must not be wasted. We must act now to get a bill passed. Once it is there, it can only get better.

I promise the seniors of Arkansas that I will work day in and day out to make this prescription drug plan better.

I will also work to preserve and protect the Medicare Program so it can continue to be a safety net for all those who are uninsured in the private market—millions of seniors, individuals with disabilities, and people with kidney failure.

The Medicare Program has prevented millions of seniors, individu-by adopting the same standard that TRICARE uses to determine access.

The bill also includes my provision to waive temporarily the late enrollment penalty for military retirees and their spouses who sign up for Medicare Part B and are already enrolled year-round so that retirees can access the new benefits immediately.

I am glad that this bill takes some steps to contain the skyrocketing price of prescription drugs. One provision in the bill requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct a comprehensive study that identifies current problems with implementing the current reimportation law we already have on the books so Congress can turn reimportation go forward.

Mr. President, there is a lot to be talked about here. I hope we will continue to work together to improve upon the shortcomings in this legislation as we work to see it implemented to make it a better program for current and future beneficiaries of the Medicare Program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, this could and should be a day of common purpose, a day in which we are united, not divided, behind a vital and big goal; that is, giving senior Americans, who have worked their whole lives to bring about the Social Security they need to stay alive and well. This is a promise that President and Members of Congress of both parties have made and failed to keep for years and years and years.

Since the vast majority of us agree on the outlines of a solution, we had the opportunity, and I believe the responsibility, to finally make good on those years of rhetoric and deliver a solid and sensible prescription drug benefit under Medicare.

Instead, this President and this Congress have rushed into this opening and have staked what was once a decent bill—the one that passed the Senate overwhelmingly earlier in the year—with irresponsible and hurtful ideas that, rather than strengthening Medicare, weaken it and that, rather than just offering prescription drug benefits to millions of seniors who need it, reduce the benefits that millions of seniors have today. It has given with one hand and taken with another.

So instead of being a day of common purpose, which we had here on the Senate floor when we passed a prescription drug benefit bill just a few months ago, this is a day of all too common partisan politics, ideological politics that has divided this Congress, diminished this Government, degraded our democracy, and, ultimately, diserves our people. It did not need to be this way.

Everywhere the problem is, and just about everybody agrees that it is serious. We live in the wealthiest and most advanced country in the world. Yet millions of our seniors have a health care plan that excludes what is the component of modern medical treatment; that is, prescription drug benefits. It is a little like having a car warranty that covers everything but the engine.

America can do better. That is why I supported the landmark bill that overwhelmingly passed the Senate in July. Thanks to bipartisan leadership, we crafted a compromise that could have made a good downpayment for America’s elderly. It was not perfect, but it was a good start forward. Not everyone in my party supported that agreement. But I believed, despite its flaws, it was a necessary and worthy first step.

But a funny thing—or, rather, a bad thing—happened to that bill on the way to the conference. That solid, bipartisan bill was taken over by ideologues and others determined to stuff it full of pet, partisan projects that really end up hurting millions of seniors. They insisted on paying for quality care, not just for the medical payment system to focus it on paying for quality care, not just on cancer patients and oncologists, cancer doctors, worried that this exactly might happen.

Third, it will spend billions of dollars by expressly prohibiting the Federal Government from negotiating the best possible price for prescription drugs.

Fourth, driven only—I would say primarily—by ideology, rather than because it is in the interests of the American people, this bill will commit us to an overpriced version of privatized Medicare that would actually drive up costs for taxpayers, not lower them, and jeopardize the stability of the Medicare Program, which is one of the best programs the Government has provided seniors in America in the last century.

The fact is, Medicare as we know it is more efficient, more affordable, than the privatized version that is part of this bill.

In recent years, here are the facts:

Costs per covered person have risen almost 10 percent for private insurers providing Medicare coverage or the Medicare substitute while Medicare has been able to limit those increases in costs to just over 4 percent. That means Medicare has been twice as good at holding down costs as the private insurance substitute. Why are we subsidizing, at greater cost, that alternative?

The array of people opposing this bill is broad. One group is the Democratic Leadership Council, sort of a mother church of the moderate Democrats. The DLC referred to this bill as ‘Medimess.”

Two points I want to make briefly. It says the bill misses a chance to reform the medical payment system to focus it on paying for quality care, not just care for our seniors. And, second, given limited funds, the DLC argues that the bill should have targeted and exclusively done this for the lowest income seniors and those seniors, with the highest drug costs. Unfortunately, it did a lot more than that.

I have been moved in recent days by the complaints from cancer patients and AIDS patients and their families and advocates and psychiatric patients who are convinced that the restricted list of drugs covered by Medicare, the so-called formulary—restricted as compared to what they are receiving now under Medicaid or under their retirement plans—will limit, ultimately, the lifespan of themselves or their loved ones.
The American people know, as I have heard their calls, that something is wrong with the bill that promises instant relief but does not help a single senior really until 2006. Would you buy a drug with that kind of lag time? In fairness, there is at least one good thing to say about that delay. It means that when another President comes to occupy the Oval Office early in 2006, he can set about fixing the bill, if it passes before it goes into effect.

The proponents of this Medicare prescription drug bill have, in my opinion, tampered with America's seniors. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I ask unanimous consent for the 1 minute that Senator Dodd did not use. He delegated me to have that minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Proponents of this prescription drug bill have tampered with America's seniors. They have broken the seal on the compromise we had reached over the summer, emptied the contents of the legislative bottle, spilled there are a couple of poison pills, and put it back on the shelf for us to buy. America's seniors are not buying it. They know what is in the bottle. We shouldn't buy it either. I cannot and will not vote for this bill. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I yield the floor.

THE MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DRUG LEGISLATION

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I cannot, in good conscience, vote for closure and I intend to vote against this bill. With reservation, I voted in the favor of the Senate Medicare prescription drug bill. I felt the Senate bill, though flawed, brought us closer to offering seniors the universal prescription drug benefit that they needed and deserved. My hope was that the problems in this bill could be fixed in conference. The bill that has emerged from the House-Senate conference, however, does too much harm to the overall Medicare program.

We need to modernize Medicare by providing beneficiaries with a prescription drug benefit. But just because we need a bill creating a Medicare prescription drug benefit, does not mean we need to believe that this bill provides little help for Medicare beneficiaries and takes too many risks with the overall Medicare program, and I am not willing to take those risks.

One of the things that I am most concerned about with respect to this bill is the lack of true cost containment. If we are to ensure that Medicare remains solvent in the years to come, especially after adding a new $400 billion prescription drug benefit, we need to make sure that we take firm measures to keep the cost of Medicare down. This is especially important given the number of baby-boomers who will soon be enrolling in Medicare. Although this bill came in under the budgeted $400 billion, because it fails to make any real effort to bring down the skyrocketing prices of prescription drugs, the true cost of this bill is likely to surpass what has been budgeted for it. This is a fiscal danger we cannot put Medicare in financial jeopardy by ignoring the impact of rising health care costs on the overall Medicare program.

I am also greatly concerned by the efforts included in this bill to make Medicare a private, managed care program. This bill includes $12 billion in additional subsidies to encourage private insurance companies to offer managed care plans under Medicare. The bill also includes a demonstration project, which could affect up to 25 percent of Medicare beneficiaries, that may cause them to pay more in premiums, should they decide to stay in traditional Medicare. Those who cannot afford these higher premiums will be forced to enroll in private plans simply because they cannot pay more to stay in traditional Medicare.

One of my greatest concerns is how this bill will impact Wisconsin. While providing, at best, a minimal prescription drug benefit for some, the bill will make others worse off than they currently are. It is estimated that, because of this bill, 60,000 retirees in Wisconsin will lose the health insurance they currently have from their employers. Over 110,000 of poor, disabled or elderly Wisconsin residents who currently pay nothing for their prescription drugs will now face increased payments for their prescription drugs because of this bill. This bill will also drive up costs for the State, in a time of fiscal crisis, because Wisconsin will lose the ability to negotiate drug costs and will face increased administrative costs.

There are some who will benefit because of this bill. Due to subsidies, the titled playing field toward private insurance plans, and the lack of any cost containment on prescription drug prices, this bill will be a windfall for pharmaceutical and insurance companies. All we have to do is take a look at how the stocks of pharmaceutical and insurance companies soared recently in response to this bill. While these selected industries will profit, however, retirees and many low-income Medicare beneficiaries will suffer.

I am truly disappointed that I cannot support this bill, because there are some good things about it. I am pleased that the provisions that will bring us closer to having fairness in the Medicare reimbursement system were included in the bill. I am also pleased to have fought for a fairer share of Medicare dollars for states like Wisconsin for years. I am proud to have authored the amendment that passed in the Budget Committee earlier this year, which helped make the inclusion of Medicare fairness provisions in this bill possible. These particular provisions will help reduce the gross inequity in the division of Medicare dollars across the country.

But, on balance, I cannot vote for this bill because of the negative impact it will have on the Medicare program. The harm this bill does to Medicare and those who depend on it outweighs the benefits. Instead of privatizing Medicare, Congress needs to go back to the drawing board and create a real Medicare prescription drug benefit without undermining the Medicare system itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 6 minutes to Senator Breaux.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 6 minutes.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of the committee.

We have now come to the time of decision with regard to whether we are going to have the chance to decide whether or not to improve this legislation that creates a program that is substantially better than the 40 million seniors currently have under Medicare.

When Medicare was created in 1965, it was bipartisan. It was a change. Some said we should not change it. I would argue that Democrats have never feared change. In 1935, when we wrote the Social Security Program under Franklin Roosevelt's leadership, Democrats changed the status quo. When we led in 1965 the effort to provide medical assistance for our Nation's seniors, we challenged the status quo. We stood up for change and created a new program. Today, over 38 years later, we have the opportunity to do that again. Congress needs to sign a bill that reforms Medicare in the Rose Garden. The real question before this institution on both sides of the aisle should be whether for once we can come together and craft a piece of legislation that creates a program that is substantially better than the 40 million seniors currently have under Medicare.

When Medicare was created in 1965, it was bipartisan. It was a change. Some said we should not change it. I would argue that Democrats have never feared change. In 1935, when we wrote the Social Security Program under Franklin Roosevelt's leadership, Democrats changed the status quo. When we led in 1965 the effort to provide medical assistance for our Nation's seniors, we challenged the status quo. We stood up for change and created a new program. Today, over 38 years later, we have the opportunity to do that again. Congress needs to sign a bill that reforms Medicare in the Rose Garden. The real question before this institution on both sides of the aisle should be whether for once we can come together and craft a piece of legislation that creates a program that is substantially better than the 40 million seniors currently have under Medicare.

When Medicare was created in 1965, it was bipartisan. It was a change. Some said we should not change it. I would argue that Democrats have never feared change. In 1935, when we wrote the Social Security Program under Franklin Roosevelt's leadership, Democrats changed the status quo. When we led in 1965 the effort to provide medical assistance for our Nation's seniors, we challenged the status quo. We stood up for change and created a new program. Today, over 38 years later, we have the opportunity to do that again. Congress needs to sign a bill that reforms Medicare in the Rose Garden. The real question before this institution on both sides of the aisle should be whether for once we can come together and craft a piece of legislation that creates a program that is substantially better than the 40 million seniors currently have under Medicare.

When Medicare was created in 1965, it was bipartisan. It was a change. Some said we should not change it. I would argue that Democrats have never feared change. In 1935, when we wrote the Social Security Program under Franklin Roosevelt's leadership, Democrats changed the status quo. When we led in 1965 the effort to provide medical assistance for our Nation's seniors, we challenged the status quo. We stood up for change and created a new program. Today, over 38 years later, we have the opportunity to do that again. Congress needs to sign a bill that reforms Medicare in the Rose Garden. The real question before this institution on both sides of the aisle should be whether for once we can come together and craft a piece of legislation that creates a program that is substantially better than the 40 million seniors currently have under Medicare.
they are put into the State Medicare Program for the poorest of the poor. That is unacceptable. That is not in keeping with the greatness of this Nation, to have a health care program for seniors that is that deficient.

This bill cannot let the perfect be the enemy of the good. This bill is not perfect, but this bill is good. We cannot let political pundits on both sides of the aisle who try to dictate what our choices are say, well, let’s pass this unperfect bill so that we can blame the failure of its passing on the Democrats. Neither can we allow Democratic political pundits to say to us we should not pass this bill for the reason that it would allow the President of the United States to sign it in the Rose Garden and that would be a political benefit for him.

If we cannot take good legislation and pass it and both claim credit for it, then, quite frankly, we should be doing something else. Good government is good government. This is a good bill.

There are two different approaches to solving health care. Some of my friends on the Republican side will say: The Government should have nothing to do with the sector choice. Do everything, keep the Government out of it, and we can design a program with the free enterprise system that will work just fine.

Unfortunately, there are some on my side who would say: No, the Government has to do everything. Government would have to do it all. The private sector cannot be involved at all.

Both of those approaches are incorrect. The best way to solve health care problems is to do what this bill does; that is, to combine the best of what government can do with the best of what the private sector can do and come up with legislation that says: Yes, the Federal Government can supervise it but not micromanage it. Yes, the Federal Government can come up with legislation that says: Government can do with the best of what our choices are, say, well, let’s pass this unperfect bill so that we can blame the failure of its passing on the Democrats. Neither can we allow Democratic political pundits to say to us we should not pass this bill for the reason that it would allow the President of the United States to sign it in the Rose Garden and that would be a political benefit for him.

If we cannot take good legislation and pass it and both claim credit for it, then, quite frankly, we should be doing something else. Good government is good government. This is a good bill.

There are two different approaches to solving health care. Some of my friends on the Republican side would say: The Government should have nothing to do with the sector choice. Do everything, keep the Government out of it, and we can design a program with the free enterprise system that will work just fine.

Unfortunately, there are some on my side who would say: No, the Government has to do everything. Government would have to do it all. The private sector cannot be involved at all.

Both of those approaches are incorrect. The best way to solve health care problems is to do what this bill does; that is, to combine the best of what government can do with the best of what the private sector can do and come up with legislation that says: Yes, the Federal Government can supervise it but not micromanage it. Yes, the Federal Government can come up with legislation that says: Government can do with the best of what

The other very troubling provision in this bill is it has an absolute prohibition on allowing the Government to use its buying power to negotiate lower prices. This bill does nothing to save money on drug costs. In fact, it does the opposite. This bill prohibits the Government from negotiating lower prices.

In 1996, 48 percent had prescription drug benefits, and now only 28 percent have those employer-sponsored health care coverage. Now, why is this a problem also?

The other very troubling provision in this bill is it has an absolute prohibition on allowing the Government to use its buying power to negotiate lower prices. This bill does nothing to save money on drug costs. In fact, it does the opposite. This bill prohibits the Government from negotiating lower prices.

In 1996, 48 percent had prescription drug benefits, and now only 28 percent have those employer-sponsored health care coverage. Now, why is this a problem also?

The other very troubling provision in this bill is it has an absolute prohibition on allowing the Government to use its buying power to negotiate lower prices. This bill does nothing to save money on drug costs. In fact, it does the opposite. This bill prohibits the Government from negotiating lower prices.
means if you are forced into an HMO, you are going to lose your doctor. You will get the doctor that a bureaucrat tells you you should have rather than the doctor you want to have.

It also creates tax dodges for those making over $250,000, the so-called health savings account—another $6 billion, which they should be paying taxes on. But oh, no, it is one more gimmick, a tax dodge. If you take that $12 billion plus the $6 billion, it would give us $18 billion over the next 2 years. In stead, we have tax dodges and bonuses to insurance companies rather than a better benefit for the seniors.

I know what some seniors are asking: BARB, why are you going to vote against this bill? I need help now. I need a prescription drug coverage now.

Senior citizens in Maryland have told me that they don’t even buy green bananas. They don’t want to wait. I want to ease your worry about prescription drug costs. I want to give you something real. For the next 2 years, all you are going to get is a 15-percent discount card, while insurance companies and HMOs are going to get $12 billion from the Government, and there will be this tax dodge for those making over $250,000.

To the seniors of Maryland, I am going to vote against this bill. I am not voting against you. I am voting for you so that you have the benefit that you need. We have an affordable program for the U.S. Government. We can hold our heads up high, but now that when my name is called, I am going to vote no on this bill and, yes, that we can do it better, and we can do it better tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on our side, I think the time we have allocated—we have only 3 minutes left—is that true?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty minutes.

Mr. REID. I have allocated a lot of that time. I ask unanimous consent that Senator Edwards be given 3 minutes under our rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise in support of this conference report. I congratulate all those who have worked so hard to accomplish a bill on which, I have to admit, I have mixed emotions. There are a lot of things in the bill I like and some things that I don’t like.

One of the criticisms I have heard leveled against this bill is that it does harm to those who are in the Medicaid population, the very low-income, under 100 percent of poverty. The interesting thing is that some suggested it does harm because we have made people eligible for Medicaid, not eligible for Medicare. Those are the dual eligibles.

One of the reasons we are doing so is because there are many on the other side of the aisle who wanted dual eligibles to be covered under Medicare. The copayment for those dual eligibles is the same as under Medicaid. It is $1 for generics and $3 for name brand drugs. That is hardly a very high cost for prescription drug use, and I think the savings of those copayments for people who are in nursing homes and have other sources of coverage. So what we have done is something that on the other side wanted us to do, which is take people out of Medicaid and put everyone in one program. It makes some sense, but it is an enormous cost to the Federal Government. We are picking up more of the cost of Medicaid now and that money out of the drug benefit had to come from somewhere.

So I argue that to accomplish one policy goal, we had to give up some subsidies to other seniors. But, clearly, it was a win by many of the Democrats who argued—Senator Baucus and others—that all dual eligibles covered. It is something they wanted. We have done that. I hope we will understand that the reason some of the money has been shifted to lower income was to accomplish what the other side wanted.

I also say that, yes, I agree the standard benefit is not the most generous benefit out there. But what everybody here agreed to last year was $350 billion. This year it was $400 billion. I think everyone should be targeted at two groups of people—lower income individuals and high users of drugs. When you do that, and you provide $1 and $3 copays for people over 100 percent of poverty, and up to 150 percent of poverty $3 and $5 copays, what you are talking about is a very expensive program for low-income individuals.

Then, at the other end, you have the catastrophic program that picks up 95 percent of the cost of drugs after a drug plan. That is $3,600 is spent out of pocket—high users, sick people. We should be helping them with drug costs. When you throw those two pots in, there isn’t a lot left for the standard benefit.

It was the idea, I think, that everybody here agrees that we need to focus the $400 billion on those in most need, whether it is need because of sickness or need because of financial condition. This bill does that. I would argue, sure, there are people who are going to think they are going to be able to provide a more generous benefit. You have to remember, the rest of the people we are talking about—about 80 percent of them—have prescription drug coverage already. What we are allowing is for a lot of the people to have the drug coverage they have in addition to this being wrapped together to provide a much healthier benefit than just the basic benefit provided under this bill.

Seniors are not going to be just with this plan. In fact, the average senior in this group is going to have a much more enhanced plan available to them than what they have today as a result of this coverage.

I say to my conservative friends who are expressing concern about this bill, the most important thing in this bill, from my perspective, for conservatives is this plan allows for health savings accounts. Fundamentally, what health savings accounts will do is it will change Medicare—not today, not even 5 or 10 years from now, but over the long term, once health savings accounts become what I believe they will become, which is the method of choice that the majority of people in this country will do in the private sector. Health savings accounts affect people under 65, the non-Medicare population. This will be a very popular plan in which millions of Americans will participate. Now it will be formalized. Following that, the insurance market in this country.

One thing we have seen from Medicare reform—if you want to call what we have done over the past 40 years Medicare reform—is it follows the private sector. A 1965 Blue Cross plan was the original Medicare bill because that was the standard state of the art in 1965. In the nineties, we changed Medicare to allow for HMOs. Why? Because the private sector adopted HMOs. Now we are going to PPOs. Before the private sector moved from HMOs to PPOs, and in the future we will move to PPOs and health savings accounts in Medicare, and that, I believe, will be the long-term salvation of that program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZI). The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, my understanding is that the Senator from New York will be next. Following that, because we have taken shorter times, we will have two speakers in a row—the Senator from Arizona and the Senator from Texas.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I may speak briefly, I say through the Chair to the senior Senator from New York, we have been taking significantly longer than the majority on speeches. They should get two speakers to make up what we have been taking on our side. Senator CLINTON is next in the order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, there are a number of significant issues that have been raised in this debate over the last 48 hours. I remind our colleagues and our seniors who may be following this debate with some interest that we have not finished with this bill—this gigantic bill—for 4 days.

This is one of the most significant pieces of legislation that will come before this Congress certainly this year, but I would argue for many years to come. It is very significant. We remember the old fairy tale about the wolf that couldn’t get into the hen house or into the shepherd’s enclosure to try to go after the hens and go after the sheep and keep trying and trying. Finally, the wolf figured out that a frontal assault was just not going to work. People would see the wolf sneaking up on the hen house, sneaking up behind the sheep, and they would scare them off and try to get him before he got the hens and the sheep.

The wolf got really smart. The wolf found some poor old sheep that hadn't quite made it back from the hills and, unfortunately, killed that sheep, got that sheepskin, and snuck in. When people saw it moving across the ground, they thought: That's just an old sheep.

Lo and behold, the wolf got to the hen house and the sheep, and that poor old farmer didn't have any hens or sheep left by the time the wolf got done.

Make no mistake, that is what is going on here. You can dress it up, you can talk about how significant a benefit it is going to turn out to be, how we are modernizing and changing Medicare for the 21st century, but remember that fairy tale. Fairy tales are rooted in ancient folk wisdom and experience, and what we have here is just a classic wolf in sheep's clothing.

There are many reasons to oppose this bill, and my colleagues have been going over some of them and one after another. I think the bottom line is, No. 1, this bill does very little of what it actually advertises doing. It advertises it is going to be a sea change—a positive sea change—for seniors, and that is not the case.

We have been fighting over prescription drug benefits for seniors for years. A decade ago, when I was working on behalf of the Clinton administration with respect to health care, we included a drug benefit. Some of you may remember that debate. That debate went down, and it went down for many reasons, but one was that it was a 1,300-page bill—a bill that would guarantee health insurance to every American, a bill that would go across the border and we could actually afford health care for every American, and people said: Oh, my goodness, that is such a long bill; why, look at what the Clintons are trying to do. They are trying to change health care in this gigantic bill.

Remember, we produced that bill with a thousand people involved in the process. We vetted it with everybody. We brought it to the Capitol. It was done in the light of day. We produced a bill and then, of course, all the special interests got everybody confused about what was in the bill, and the bill went down even though, as it was going down, public opinion surveys were asking Americans: What is it you want in a bill?

They said: We want guaranteed affordable health care coverage and the ability to pick our doctor—all of which was in the bill.

It didn't do me any good to keep saying it because $300 million had been spent by the special interests for TV ads, radio ads, and newspaper ads—the whole 9 yards. Oh, my goodness, the bill was so big and so confusing and all these terrible things were going to happen.

Four days ago—4 days ago—we got this bill. I am looking through this bill trying to figure out, my goodness, how long it is. I know it is awfully heavy. I think it is about 1,200 pages. That is just to do something to Medicare. It is not to guarantee health insurance for children and working people. It is not to guarantee health insurance for people 55 to 64, who retire as you do when you get to 55, to have health kinks and problems and are not eligible for Medicare. It doesn't do anything for that.

It is a 1,300-page bill which we received 4 days ago, and I can guarantee you there are disputes on the floor of the Senate as to what is in it and what it means. Why is that? Because we haven't had a chance to examine and analyze it, and if we haven't, with our staff and our efforts over the last 4 days, I know the American people, particularly our seniors, haven't either.

There are many provisions in this bill that really need to be brought into the light of day. I will be voting against cloture at which point the parliamentary term to try to cut off debate, because I don't think we have had enough debate yet. I don't want anybody being surprised about what is really in this bill because there are going to be a lot of surprises.

The promise of reimposing drugs from Canada—which is really important in a place such as New York because we border Canada. A lot of my seniors from Watertown, Massena, or Plattsburgh go across the border and get those cheaper drugs. In this bill, that is going to continue to be a problem and a prohibition in reality, if not legally, because drug companies are going to be given the go-ahead to basically violate antitrust rules so they can cut back on the amount of drugs they send to Canada.

I don't blame the drug companies. They have a captive market in our country. Our tax dollars support the National Institutes of Health. Our tax dollars do the research at our great universities and research labs. Our tax dollars support the National Institutes of Health. Our tax dollars create the conditions in which drugs are given clinical trials to determine whether they help or hurt. We do all the work for the entire world for determining the efficacy of drugs, quality, and safety, and then other countries, such as Canada, Europe, and other places, bargain with the drug companies.

They say, OK, we have a big market. We have millions of people. It is kind of like Sam's Club, only think of it as the Canadian club or the European Union club. They bargain with these drug companies and they drive the prices down because they are going to buy in volume.

Should we not have an Uncle Sam's Club? Should not Uncle Sam be able to bargain with these drug companies? Apparently that is not what the backroom negotiators and part of this legislation wanted because in the most wonderful example of Orwellian language, on page 53 of this bill, under a title called noninterference—I love that—it says in order to promote competition—there are magic words around here. It is said that competition is going to be promoted, while they create a monopoly, while they end antitrust, because they are setting up all kinds of special privileges for special interest. Nevertheless, we just hope nobody notices that.

So in order to promote competition under this part and in carrying out this part, the Secretary, No. 1, may not interfere with the negotiations between drug manufacturers and pharmacies and PDP sponsors—those are drug plans—and may not require a particular formulary—that is the list of the drugs one can get—or institute a price structure for the reimbursement of covered drugs.

Basically, what this means is the lid is off. Not only can we not get the drugs from Canada anymore because our drug companies will say to the poor Canadians, keep letting your pharmacists send them across the border. We are going to not send the drugs for the Canadian people. But we cannot even bargain. We cannot have an Uncle Sam's Club. We cannot get the volume discounts.

We have to look at who is doing what in this debate to figure out where the sheep are, where the hens are, and where the wolves are. One of the biggest wolves has been after Medicare as long as he has been in public life is our old friend, Newt Gingrich, former Speaker of the House, when he called for Medicare to wither on the vine.

Well, guess who showed up to try to whip those House Republicans in line to vote for this bill, which is why they had to leave the vote open for more than 3 hours, the longest time they had ever had to leave a vote open because basically, there was the wolf in sheep's clothing going up to the House Republicans and saying: Do not worry, we are going to say all of these good things about this bill, but just wait until we get our hands on it. Just wait until we get into that hen house.

I do not blame them if that is what they believe. Nevertheless, we are the ones who are going to be paying the price.

I ask unanimous consent for an additional 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will be 2 minutes off the Democratic side. Since there is no one from the Democratic side objecting, it is so ordered.

Mrs. CLINTON. I will put a chart up that gives a short summary for any American, and particularly for any senior citizen, watching. This bill sacrifices seniors' interest to special interests.

Seniors need lower drug prices. Forget it. The drug industry wants higher profits.

Seniors need predictable premiums. Forget it. Managed care wants the flexibility to raise their rates even in the middle of the year.
Seniors need a choice of drugs. Forget it. The drug industry wants a restrictive formulary that pushes their brands.

Seniors need to keep their retirement benefits. Forget it. The private plans want to be goon slush funds so we are going to lose retiree health care.

Seniors want to stay in Medicare. Forget it because what is going to happen is that Medicare is going to get increasingly the health care plan for the sickest and the oldest of our seniors, which will make it more expensive. In this bill we are going to even see a contradiction on the nondrug benefits for Medicare.

So here has to really watch what goes on around here. They have to follow it carefully. This is a bill that is bad for seniors, bad for America, and I hope my colleagues will stand against it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, we have before us a conference report that represents one of the biggest expansions of the Medicare entitlement program and offers enormous profits and protections for a few of the country’s most powerful interest groups, paid for with the borrowed money of American taxpayers for generations and generations to come.

This legislation reminds me of the ancient medieval practice of leeching. Every special interest in Washington is attaching itself to this legislation and sucking Medicare dry.

We do not need leeching. What we need is reform. On top of the existing $7 trillion accumulated deficit, which translates into $24,000 for every man, woman, and child in the United States, this year’s current deficit is quickly approaching a half trillion dollars. Adding an unfunded entitlement to a system that is already financially insolvent is so grossly irresponsible that it ought to outrage every fiscal conservative.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, this package is estimated to cost just over $400 billion over 10 years. If one believes that is the maximum we will spend over 10 years, I have some beach front property in Gila Bend to sell you. Four hundred billion dollars is merely a down payment.

One important number not frequently mentioned is the estimated increase this new package will add to existing liabilities. The Office of Management and Budget estimated that current unfunded liabilities of Medicare and Social Security are $18 trillion. That is the current unfunded liabilities. What is absolutely astounding is that this new benefit will add an estimated $7 trillion in additional unfunded liabilities. By the year 2020 Social Security and Medicare, with a prescription drug benefit, will consume an estimated 21 percent of income taxes for every working American.

I think we ought to be honest with the American people. Passing this package without implementing the necessary reforms to ensure that the Medicare system is solvent over the long term is rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic. There is no one in America who will not say that the Medicare system is going to go broke. The question is not if. The question is when, not what.

To save this system we should enact drug free market reforms and bring Medicare into the 21st century. Unfortunately, the minor reforms in this bill do not even begin to offset the burden added by the new drug benefit. With future generations of American taxpayers funding the purchase of prescription drugs, we have an obligation to ensure some amount of cost containment against the skyrockets costs of prescription drugs. Unfortunately, however, this package explicitly prohibits Medicare purchasers from using power to negotiate lower prices with manufacturers.

How is that possible? The Veterans’ Administration, the VA, and State Medicaid Programs use market share to negotiate substantial discounts. It is prohibitive to ask private payers to purchase Medicare, the taxpayers funding the purchase of prescription drugs, to be able to derive some discount from its new market share. Instead, taxpayers will provide an estimated $9 billion a year in increased profits to the pharmaceutical industry.

Prescription drug importation is another lost opportunity for cost containment. American consumers pay some of the highest prices in the developed world for prescription drugs and, as a result, millions of our citizens travel across our borders each year to purchase these prescriptions. In all, Americans spend hundreds of millions of dollars on imported pharmaceuticals, not because they do not want to buy American but because they cannot afford to.

This conference report contains language on drug importation. However, it has been successfully weakened to the point of guaranteeing that implementation will never take place.

There is a good provision as far as generic drugs are concerned, but this package is not only a bad deal for American taxpayers, I believe seniors will also find it not worth the price.

Although the conference report allocates close to $80 billion in subsidies to corporations to encourage them not to drop or reduce benefits, the CBO estimates that approximately 20 percent of seniors will lose their current employer-sponsored coverage.

I am concerned we are about to repeat an enormous mistake. I was here when we enacted Medicare catastrophic in 1988, and I was here 1 year later fighting to repeal it. We cannot let political shortsightedness blind us from the fiscal implications of this package.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. After I use 3 minutes, Thank you.

Mr. President, while the medical community has ridden the technological wave of the future, pushing the envelope in research into new pharmaceuticals, treatments and life-saving measures, Medicare has been stuck floundering in the 20th century. The venerable program, designed to provide healthcare for the elderly and the disabled, has failed to meet all of the needs of those it set out to serve.

After years of talk, Congress is poised to enact the most sweeping change for America’s seniors in nearly 40 years. We have the opportunity to bring Medicare up-to-date and take advantage of the incredible advances in prescription drugs.

Pharmaceuticals are one of the miracles of modern medicine. Aliments that traditionally required an expensive in-patient hospital stay and invasion surgery can now be treated with medication. But most Medicare recipients wouldn’t know it. While the government pays for costly heart surgery, it is sure for America’s seniors that a prescription drug benefit for the first time.

An estimated 9.9 million Medicare beneficiaries do not have private prescription drug coverage, almost 600,000 in Texas alone. Some seniors who could lower their cholesterol by ingesting a simple pill like Lipitor have to pay out their pockets for the drug which retails at $108 per bottle, placing this simple solution out of their reach.

The bill before Congress would give America’s seniors access to a prescription drug benefit for the first time. Beneficiaries would pay a $35 monthly premium and a $250 deductible, after which they would pay 25 percent of drug costs between $275 and $2,250 and 100 percent between $2,250 and $3,600. Costs over that threshold would require an average copay of $2 for generic drugs and $5 for brand name drugs, or 5 cents of the total drug cost depending on the plan.

Until these reforms are in place, a prescription drug discount card offering savings of up to 25 percent will be available in 2004, providing some relief immediately.

This measure also offers additional and unprecedented assistance to those with low incomes. Medicare beneficiaries at the poverty level and below will pay no premiums or deductibles and will have nominal cost sharing responsibility, with copays of $1 for generic drugs and $3 for other pharmaceuticals. Those at 135 percent of the poverty level, or $12,123 annually for... individuals, will not pay premiums or deductibles and will have co-payments of no more than $5. Beneficiaries at 150 percent of the poverty level, or $13,470 annually, will have a sliding scale subsidy for premiums, a $5 deductible and $2 and $5 co-pays. These changes will mean more than $60,000 low-income Texans will pay no more than $5 per prescription. Furthermore, with the Federal Government providing drug coverage for those individuals who qualify for both Medicare and Medicaid, if Senator Stabenow’s Amendment 54 is adopted, we will save $1.7 billion over an eight-year period.

Though much of the attention surrounding Medicare reform has focused on the prescription drug benefit, there are a number of other elements that are important. In the end, the legislation is a good compromise and addresses the fundamental problems.

One significant element is choice. This plan provides access to a broad array of healthcare options, similar to what most working Americans already enjoy. Seniors can stay in traditional Medicare, add a prescription drug plan or choose an HMO or PPO that includes a prescription drug plan. Unlike the current Medicare-Choice plans, which have created a hit-or-miss system of communities where the bill guarantees all seniors will have access to an HMO or PPO plan.

It also has provisions to encourage companies currently providing healthcare to their retirees to continue offering that benefit.

Another important component of the bill is an increase in the reimbursement rate for physicians, many of whom have stopped taking on new Medicare patients. Physicians were facing a cut in March of 2004 and another in 2005, but this legislation not only stops the reductions, it gives physicians an additional 1.5 percent reimbursement.

Hospitals that treat a large number of illegal immigrants will receive some compensation for their services—a provision important for Texas hospitals and other providers.

Another advantage that will benefit the general population, not just those within Medicare, is the creation of Health Savings Accounts, which will allow individuals and families to put tax-free money into an investment-type account dedicated to their medical costs. The money is not taxed whether it is used for medical expenses, giving Americans another tool to cover healthcare costs, such as deductibles and co-payments.

As with any compromise, the bill is not everything I would want. I advocated larger teaching hospital reimbursement levels, and although the percentage is not as high as I proposed, in 2004 it increases the current reimbursement rate, from 5.5 percent to 6 percent in April and then to 5.8 percent in October, but it is still higher than the current rate.

This increase means almost $13 million to Texas’ teaching hospitals. Every State has at least one teaching hospital, with 1100 of the facilities nationwide. Teaching hospitals train nearly 100,000 physicians, and the Federal Government has traditionally recognized the higher costs inherent in training and educating those health care providers. They utilize new technology and deliver innovative care. This increase will provide some much-needed assistance to our financially strapped rural and teaching hospitals.

Let me be clear: this bill is not perfect, but as AARP President James Pankel said this week, “Millions of Americans cannot wait for perfect. They need help now.”

After years of talk, we are taking the first step to bring this vital program up-to-date. For the first time, we can provide a voluntary prescription drug benefit that offers additional assistance for those who need it most and strengthen Medicare for future generations.

I know my 3 minutes are up. I would like to add 2 minutes to Senator Hatch’s 5 minutes with that added 2 minutes. I urge my colleagues to support this major first step.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. THOMAS. Under our agreement, we will slip over to that side and then Senator Hatch will be next.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, without objection, I yield myself 5 minutes from the time of those in opposition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, we have a very important vote coming up shortly on whether or not to proceed with the bill or to continue working, whether or not to stop our efforts to continue to try to improve this bill or to begin to vote on the vote. Many of my colleagues have pointed out that this is the bill—the bill. The bottom line of all of this paperwork is that it does not take effect, in terms of prescription drug coverage for seniors, until 2006. So this is the bill we are asking for time to thoroughly go through, line by line, and to be able to fix what does not work for our seniors. We are being told we have to rush this; this is the last time we are going to be able to do anything. We don’t have any more time to be able to put this together. Yet the bottom line of all this, for seniors’ prescription drug help, if there is any in here—and there is a little—doesn’t even start until 2006.

I am going to be voting just the effort to stop debate and move to a final vote because I believe we need to take the time to get it right. I believe there are critical issues we need to fix. Let me first say a positive aspect in all of this is it is important for us to help our rural providers, our doctors and hospitals, home health agencies, and nursing homes. On Saturday I put forward a bill that would actually pull out those positive provisions that are critical for our providers, to vote separately on that. I believe we would have, if not unanimous, overwhelming bipartisan support for those efforts that help our providers.

We do not believe this bill, on balance, is good at all for our seniors, it is a bad deal for seniors, there are good provisions in it. I hope if this bill does not go forward, we can pull those provider pieces out and support them.

Mr. President, have I told you this bill is written? In this bill as written, 2.7 million retirees lose their coverage. One out of four folks who worked hard during their lives, maybe have taken a pay cut here or there to get good health coverage, would actually lose coverage as a result of the provisions, the way this bill is written for private employers.

Mr. President, 6.4 million low-income seniors, the folks we all talk about, the folks we are desperately concerned for—my real objection today is the $13 billion. Today at the table and saying, Do I eat today or do I take my medicine, they will end up paying more because of the way this is changed between Medicaid and Medicare. That doesn’t make any sense. It is a bad deal for too many of our seniors. Today is the last time we are going to be able to help the most. It is a bad deal for 2.7 million folks who have private insurance and will lose it. My fear is they will not just lose the prescription drug coverage; they will lose their entire health care coverage.

To add insult to injury, this bill locks in the highest possible prices in the world. It keeps drug prices high, which is why the pharmaceutical industry is so strongly supporting it. They changed their strategy a few years ago. They have been trying to stop prescription drug coverage because they didn’t want Medicare to use its clout as a group purchaser to be able to get a good discount, as we do with their veterans. They are trying to lock in the highest possible prices. They fought it, but then they decided they couldn’t fight it anymore because seniors are desperate and we do need to do something. We are long past doing something real for our seniors. So they changed the strategy. They said: Let’s write a bill that gets a whole bunch more customers, 40 million more customers potentially, and let’s make sure we lock in the highest prices so they can’t compete; they can’t lower prices; they can’t go to Canada where there is a Tier 2 where there are safer, FDA-approved processes right now to be able to bring drugs back across the border.

That is a big deal for us in Michigan. It is 5 minutes across a bridge or 5 minutes through a tunnel to be able to get lower prices—half of those.

They made sure we are not going to be able to do that and they made sure we are not going to be able to negotiate for lower prices.

Ms. Stabenow. Mr. President, we have a whole new group of customers for the pharmaceutical industry who will be forced to pay the highest possible prices.
This is not a good deal for our seniors. We can do better than this. People don’t have to lose coverage. People don’t have to pay more. People don’t have to be locked into the highest possible prices in the world. We have time. This bill won’t take effect until 2006 for our seniors. Let’s urge us to take the time to get it right.

Mr. HATCH. It is my understanding I have 7 minutes.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I think we have an agreement we would yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Utah and then 5 minutes to the majority whip.

Mr. HATCH. That is correct.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have listened carefully to the debate on H.R. 1 during the last few days. I regret to say I have heard many half-truths and misrepresentations about our bill from the opponents of the legislation. This simply won’t stand.

We’re reaching the point where twisted facts and wrong-headed reasoning have been repeated so often that even those who know better are no longer jarred to hear it.

As one of the conference committee members who actually wrote this bill, I find this untenable, because the opposition is just scorcing and confusing Medicare beneficiaries.

I think the last thing any of us want is for critical decisions to be made in a climate of fear or in a fog of uncertainty.

Yes, this legislation is not perfect. But it is good.

I’ll tell you why.

First, and most important, this bill provides all beneficiaries—seniors and the disabled—with voluntary prescription drug coverage for the first time in almost 40 years.

Coverage for their medications is something Utah beneficiaries have sought for decades.

Not a day goes by that I do not receive a letter from some part of Utah beseeching Congress to pass this bill.

Second, that coverage will be immediate. Seniors wherever they may live, from St. George to Logan, from Tooele to Vernal and down to Blanding and Moab and Panguitch, will be able to use a new drug card to get an immediate discount on their medications.

Third, the program is voluntary. We all know—as do the bill’s opponents—that beneficiaries will not be forced to join this new drug program. If they are happy with the status quo, then things can stay as they are. If they want to participate in the new program, it will be there for them.

Fourth, H.R. 1 provides choice in coverage. Beneficiaries may stay in traditional Medicare and elect to take a stand-alone drug plan if they want one. Or they may receive their coverage through a local health plan or the new regional PPO plans offered through the new Medicare Advantage program.

How often does a Federal program offer people the range of choices that this bill creates?

Fifth, this bill preserves retiree health coverage. Close to one-quarter of the spending in this bill, approximately $89 billion, is dedicated to protecting retiree health benefits.

For the first time—and none too soon—Medicare will provide funding as an incentive for employers to continue their retiree health coverage. Under this bill, no beneficiary will be forced to drop retiree health coverage and participate in the new prescription drug program.

Sixth, the conference agreement is good for rural America, which has gotten the short shift under Medicare for some time.

We want to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries will have access to quality health care, no matter where they live. We also want rural providers, providers in Moab and Panguitch, providers in Price and Manti, providers who dispense vital health services to beneficiaries, to be properly reimbursed for their services. This legislation accomplishes those important goals.

Seventh—as I intend to amplify later—this legislation improves the Drug Price Competition and Patent Term Restoration Act of 1984, better known as Hatch-Waxman. This conference agreement strengthens the 1984 law so it is easier for everyone, including seniors and the disabled, to have timely access to less expensive, generic drugs.

Eighth, the Medicare agreement includes an appropriate response to the question of reimporting prescription drugs into the United States.

While we include the provisions contained in the legislation approved by the Senate, this agreement also requires the HHS Secretary to conduct an extensive study that identifies the barriers to implementing a drug reimportation program.

Many of the opponents have written, asking why they cannot use the lower cost medications from Canada. The answer is easy: it is just irresponsible for Congress to jeopardize public safety by allowing the unchecked reimportation of drugs. That is why I adamantly opposed the House policy.

If we truly care about our seniors and other patients who depend upon prescription drugs, we should not expose them to what amounts to pharmaceutical Russian roulette.

And, finally, we have done all we can to craft a bill that is as cost-conscious as possible, a bill that the Congressional Budget Office has certified stays within our budget, and a bill that minimizes waste and fraud.

We have worked hard to write a measure that relies whenever possible on the private sector, not on exploding the size of big, Washington government.

Before I conclude, I would like to take a minute to refute some of the points that have been raised by the opponents of this legislation.

Yesterday, I heard my good friend from Massachusetts saying how he feels that the Senate is being stumped with a bad bill.

It is hard to argue we are being stumped, when we have worked on this issue for almost 25 years and 1 during the last few days.

I also have heard our colleague say this legislation dismantles the Medicare program and that the HMOs are going to make out like bandits. Again, that is simply not true. Guess who was talking to the people who helped to bring about HMOs. None other than the senior Senator from Massachusetts.

This agreement improves the Medicare program by giving beneficiaries voluntary prescription drug coverage for the first time in 40 years—that is a reaffirmation of Medicare, not a weakening of it.

We also give beneficiaries expanded choices in their health care coverage; they may remain in traditional Medicare or in their retiree health care coverage. Or they may receive their coverage through local or regional plans offered to them through the new Medicare Advantage program.

Contrary to what my friend from Massachusetts says, no one will be forced into an HMO and I hope that the American people are not buying that kind of scare tactic.

The other fallacy that I heard during this debate was that the premium support demonstration project, which would be conducted in only six metropolitan areas, is going to disadvantage beneficiaries who remain in traditional Medicare. I have heard it said that those premiums could go up by 10, 15 or 20 percent, even though we who wrote the bill know that the Part B premiums for traditional Medicare could not rise by any more than 5 percent over the regular premium.

This rhetoric is absolutely outrageous. If you look on page 254 of the conference report, you will see that it is not true. The legislative language speaks for itself:

“The amount of the adjustment under this subsection for months in a year shall not exceed 5 percent of the amount of the monthly premium.”

In addition, if a beneficiary is under 150% of poverty, there is no impact at premiums at all.

And I am really getting tired of Speaker Newt Gingrich’s words being continuously misconstrued.

He never said, as my colleagues on the other side of the aisle like to assert, that he wanted Medicare to withdraw on the vine. What he did say is that the agency that controlled Medicare, HCFA, should withdraw on the vine because it was filled with bureaucrats that were strangling the program. That is a far cry from what they have been representing—person after person after person.

He was arguing against large bureaucracies and for seniors to have more control over their health care.

I have saved the best for last: the accusations and allegations made against the AARP, which are truly amazing to me. It is truly amazing how last year they were considered to be the greatest organization on Earth by folks on the other side of the aisle, but this year they are dirtier than dirt. That is just not true.

It is ironic that some in this Chamber are criticizing the AARP for supporting a bill that will provide drug coverage to Medicare beneficiaries.

What a difference a year makes! Last year, the AARP could do nothing wrong in the eyes of today’s opponents. Yet, suddenly the AARP is either greedy or being taken in like a bunch of half-wits. So much for honest disagreement among friends.

What has changed? What does AARP know that the opponents of S. 1 do not?

AARP knows that this may very well be our last chance to enact a program adding prescription drug coverage to Medicare.

AARP knows, as we all do, that this is not a perfect bill. But AARP also knows that this bill lays a solid foundation which we can refine in the future.

In the eyes of this Senator, AARP has made a courageous decision by endorsing their proposal and I greatly appreciate their support.

In conclusion, I want to commend the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Chuck Grassley and the ranking minority member, Max Baucus on a job well done and I greatly appreciate their support.

I also want to compliment the Majority Leader, Dr. Bill Frist, on his leadership in shepherding this bill through the Senate.

Today will make history. We will break gridlock. We will act decisively to help the people of this great country.

The citizens of this great country are counting on us to get the job done. So, let us clear away all the parliamentary and pass H.R. 1.

It is the right thing to do.

One last thing. I have heard some of my colleagues who are opposed to this bill raise the issue that Government can do nothing to help restrain the growth of drug costs or bring drug costs down. Again, this is a misrepresentation of what the conference agreement actually does.

The conference bill specifies the Government “may not interfere with the negotiation of prices between drug manufacturers and pharmacies and PPO sponsors and may not require a particular formula or institute a price structure.”

Opponents claim that provision, which originated with Democratic proposals, by the way, is a concession to the pharmaceutical industry. That is why it is so phony to hear these arguments. They are plain wrong. The non-interference provision is at the heart of the bill’s structure for delivering prescription drug coverage. It is a good deal for consumers rather than price fixing by the CMS bureaucracy, which I believe is opening the door for universal health care. It is a misrepresentation of the language in this provision to argue otherwise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, will the Senate turn its back today on 40 million seniors who are going to find out in a few hours. Will a prescription drug benefit that we have promised our seniors for 38 years become law or become a victim to the political agenda of a partisan minority?

This bill provides a Medicare drug benefit to 40 million seniors. It has passed the House, and the President of the United States will sign it.

Only one hurdle—just one—stands in the way of seniors getting a Medicare drug benefit, and that is the Senate.

While a strong bipartisan majority in the Senate supports this drug benefit, that may not be enough. While the American Medical Association, AARP, and hundreds of other health provider organizations support this bill, that may not be enough.

While businesses, health plans, citizens, and taxpayer groups support this bill; it may not be enough.

All of this support may not be enough because this is the Senate. And the minority can, if it chooses to, obstruct.

Incredibly, some on the Democratic side plan to kill this Medicare drug benefit through a filibuster, or use any other way they can think of to defeat the will of the majority.

Points of order have been suggested. We know this bill is within the budget that we passed last year. So there may be some tricky point of order raised, but it should not be sustained because we know this bill is within the budget that we passed.

No matter how the minority tries to block the majority in the Senate, a filibuster by any other name is still a filibuster.

Somewhere in my home State of Kentucky, a senior is beginning a new day. She will have to choose whether to take half a pill of her medication, skimp on her food, or endure some other expense. She doesn’t understand about filibusters or arcane Senate procedures. But she does know that the drug benefit she needs is one step away from her. She thinks because the majority rules in America she will get what she wants. What the majority rule is everywhere except here in the Senate, potentially. She may be wrong. Here in the Senate the will of the majority can, if it chooses to, obstruct.

No matter how the minority tries to block the majority in the Senate, a filibuster by any other name is still a filibuster.

This conference report contains a generous drug benefit for the dual eligible. There is no donut for low-income Medicare beneficiaries. They talk about people being less well off because of this. That is not the case. This bill guarantees all 6 million dual eligibles, the people eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid, access to prescription drugs.

Under the conference report, dual eligibles will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will maintain appeal rights like all those in the Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan, which Senators on both sides of the aisle have endorsed. And it provides for regular review of bipartisan negotiations between the ranking member and chairman of the Finance Committee.

Time and time again, demands have been made by the minority as to what is in this bill and what must not be in this bill. Time and time again, this leader and this chairman have met them more than halfway.

The problem today is not this bipartisan policy but raw partisan politics.

Because of partisan politics, some want to keep the Medicare drug benefit as the “Holy Grail” of American politics—something always sought but never found.

To keep their election year gimmick where the Medicare drug benefit is always promised but never delivered—always promised but never delivered—this partisan minority will deny seniors a drug benefit now.

This is crass politics of the worst kind. Our seniors deserve better. Our parents always put us first. Now is our chance to put them first.

But will our seniors come in second place to political games here in the Senate? In the fight for prescription drugs, second place gets seniors nothing. Today, we will vote to see if we put our seniors first or if the greatest generation ever will come in last.

I yield the floor.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I will react to some of the comments, particularly the fact there is emphasis in this bill for help for low income Medicare beneficiaries. They talk about people being less well off because of this. That is not the case. This bill provides all 6 million dual eligibles, the people eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid, access to prescription drugs.

Under the conference report, dual eligibles will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.

Further States have the flexibility to provide coverage for classes of drugs, including over-the-counter medicines not covered by the Medicare Program. This bill ensures appeal rights for dual eligibles. Under this arrangement, duals will have better access through Medicare, especially since State Medicaid Programs are increasingly imposing restrictions on patient access to drugs.
generous coverage for those 6 million beneficiaries.

It is time for the partisan rhetoric to be put aside and we approve this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? If no one yields time, time is charged equally to both sides.

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I yield the Senator from Massachusetts 1 minute additional.

Mr. KENNEDY. Would the Chair notify me when I have 1 minute remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will so note.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, in a very short period of time, the Senate will be making a judgment about whether we are going to effectively close off any further debate on this legislation I hold in my hands. It was made available last week, on Friday, to the Members of the Senate on an issue of enormous importance and significance to every person in America. That is the question of Medicare and its future and how our seniors are going to get their prescription drugs.

It seems to me that out of consideration for our senior population and the importance of the issue, the Hastings of this body ought to know what is in it, what is going to benefit our senior citizens, and what is going to benefit the special interests. We think we ought to take a few more days, come back next week in the Senate and debate that issue, spend a couple weeks discussing it.

But our friends on the other side say no, they had to stay in all weekend—which I was glad to do. We had debate on Saturday, we had debate on Sunday, and now on Monday they are asking Members to vote on this measure.

I was not in the Senate at the time they passed Social Security, but I was here at the time we passed Medicare. The reason we debated the Medicare system was because private insurance companies were not paying attention to the elderly in this country. We debated the issue for 5 years—not 4 days; 5 years—from 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964 and finally we passed it in 1965. When we passed the Medicare system in 1965, it was opposed by many on the other side of the aisle. It only got 12 Republican votes.

This is the party that is committed to Medicare and Social Security. Over the past several months we have been hearing that we have constant efforts to undermine Medicare. It was understood when we passed Medicare that there was not going to be a role for private industry to take over senior citizens in the Medicare system. Many of our elderly, who have worked a lifetime, brought the Nation out of the Depression, fought in the World Wars of this country, fought in Korea, and paid their dues to the Nation, are elderly and frail and equally to them have illnesses.

We know the private sector carries picks, takes the healthiest senior citizens and the younger senior citizen, makes a profit, and leaves the others out so they can never get any kind of protection. We rejected that as a nation, passed Medicare, and said everyone is a part of it.

That is why it is a beloved program in the United States. Seniors today, this last afternoon last night, know their doctor, know their health care delivery, have trust and confidence in Medicare. They do not want to risk that. This bill does. This bill does, make no mistake about it. It is the beginning of the unwinding of Medicare. The trade in Medicare with the private sector and privatizing the Medicare system, make no mistake about it.

They are using—our friends on the other side—the word “prescription drug program” in order to carry this through. I have just listened to some of these statements. They say: “Don’t you want your parents tonight in different parts of the country to be able to get their prescription drugs in order to meet our sensibility?”

We have been trying to do that. And we did it pretty well—not as well as I would have liked—several months ago, in a bipartisan bill we created a prescription drug program. But the bill we have now has hijacked the prescription drug program and used it as an excuse to undermine the Medicare system, to require, effectively, or coerce our senior citizens to leave Medicare and to go into HMOs in order to be able to get the prescription program.

The subsidies that are provided for the HMOs are scandalous—scandalous. We hear about “free competition.” There is no more free competition than the man in the Moon in this with the kind of subsidies that are given. And who is paying for those subsidies? The elderly people.

It is undermining the Medicare system in three different ways.

First of all, it undermines the Medicare system, it undermines the unconscionable subsidies it gives to the HMOs, which will permit them to lower their premiums to draw and coerce seniors out of Medicare to go for HMOs.

Second, we have premium support. Premium support just means the costs for our seniors who remain in Medicare will be going up.

Is that what I say? Yes. But who else says it? The Medicare actuaries say there will be an explosion in the increase of the cost of premiums. Do we want to take that risk? Do we want to say, well, let’s try an experiment with our nation’s seniors? Why do we need an experiment when we know the premiums are going to go up?

The third is the undermining of employer-based systems through the HSAs. They tried it. They fought for it. It is an ideological commitment on the other side, and they have that included in the report.

All through those measures were not in the Senate bill but in the House bill. That is why the bill passed with only one vote in the House of Representatives. Imagine that. If this is such a wonderful bill, why would they only be able to pass it by one vote? That is all they passed it by the first time it came up in the House of Representatives.

Then, after twisting arms, cajoling, effectively bribing Members in the House of Representatives, they kept the tab open for 3 hours, they were able to bring together and carry the vote on the repot by just four or five votes—this overwhelming new program that is so good for everyone? It passed by such a narrow margin. And now they are trying to jam it through the Senate.

We all know what is going on. It is the objective of our good friends on the other side; and that is the beginning of the dismantling of the Medicare system, make no mistake about it.

I was here when Medicare passed in 1965. I was here in 1964 when it failed. I remember the debate. I remember very clearly. And we are seeing, if this bill passes, the beginning of the unwinding of the Medicare system.

Now, you can say: Well, Senator, you are really extending yourself on this and your interpretation of the motivation on the other side. I am saying they want to undermine the Medicare system. And the next is going to be Social Security, make no mistake about it.

Is that what I say? No. This is just reported in the Washington Post this past week. Just read it. It does a lot better sometimes to read what the objective is in the White House and what their statements are rather than necessarily the speeches by some of our Members on the floor.

Here it is in the Washington Post, on page A-14:

President Bush intends on being able to say that reworking Social Security is part of my mandate if he wins. This is it. President Bush aids reviving the long-shelved plan on Social Security. It is the privatization of Medicare. And next is Social Security. That has been their objective.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mr. KENNEDY. Now, Mr. President, we are strongly committed—when this bill fails or goes down, or a legitimate point of order is made—that we go back to the drawing boards. I am as strongly committed to get an effective prescription drug program as I was when I stood earlier this year when we passed a good program here in the Senate in a bipartisan way, and as I was when I stood with the Senator from Florida and the Senator from Georgia, Mr. GRAHAM and Mr. MILLER, when they fought for a good program here, and we got 52 votes for it.

But when we hear all this chatter over on the other side about, oh, my goodness, they are filibustering the bill, they filibustered that bill—Republicans filibustered that bill a year and a half ago. We got 52 votes. They would not let it pass. They refused to. It was a good bill.

So let’s go back to the drawing boards. Let’s go back to that conference. Sure, they will say: Well, we
Mr. HATCH. I am going to finish in just a minute. Again, I think my friend from Massachusetts, as great a Senator as he is, is trying to scare senior citizens. And, frankly, I think to say let's just pass the bill, let's get back to this drawing board is just plain wrong. The Members of the Medicare conference have been meeting for hours and hours, days, weeks, months to figure out how to provide Medicare beneficiaries with the best drug coverage possible. There are Members of Congress who have been working on this issue, trying to get a bill signed into law, for close to 15 years. And we are almost at the finish line. Yet my good colleague wants to go back to another 15 years of floundering around on this issue.

Now, if beneficiaries did not have choice in drug coverage, maybe my friend from Massachusetts would have a point. But seniors will have choice in coverage. Why would we go back to the drawing board after all the time and effort we have put in this legislation? We have before us a bill that really does so much for seniors. The AARP is coming out strongly behind this bill, because they know full well that once the smoke clears from the station, it is the only way we can go. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation so Medicare beneficiaries can finally have what they have wanted for close to 40 years—comprehensive prescription drug coverage.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HATCH. I yield the floor.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Vermont.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from Vermont is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I have been listening closely to our colleagues and their many statements of support for the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act of 2003.

Some have said this is the culmination of the debate we began last year. But this debate is much older than just a year, or even 2 years.

The debate as to whether, and if so how, to provide prescription drugs for the elderly through the Medicare program has been with us since the very beginning of the program.

Thirty-eight years ago, when this body engaged in the historic debate on the original Medicare bill, Senator Jacob Javits from the state of New York offered an amendment to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries would have access to prescription drugs. Senator Javits was asked to modify his amendment to a study that would examine the assurance of paying for drugs, methods of avoiding unnecessary utilization of drugs and mechanisms for controlling costs.

Almost 40 years later, they are still debating the very same issues that were part of the 1965 Javits debate. We should enact a prescription drug benefit today. The doom and gloom scenario painted by the bill's opponents is exaggerated as the claims that this bill will solve all seniors' needs. It is time to put aside our differences for the good of all seniors. This is not a perfect bill, but it is a good bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. JEFFORDS. May I have an additional 1 minute?

Mr. THOMAS. Without objection.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Forty million seniors and disabled Americans need help now. They cannot afford to wait for a perfect program because it may never come. The bill provides the foundations we need. In the final analysis, I find there are more reasons to support this bill than to oppose it. I fear that if we do not take this golden opportunity, we will have lost it forever.

We have on one hand the opportunity to provide the largest benefit improvements to Medicare in nearly 40 years, including a comprehensive and universal prescription drug benefit.

As part of a waiver through the Medicare drug program, Vermont expanded its "V-Script" state pharmacy assistance program and extended subsidized coverage to individuals at 250 percent of the Federal poverty level above the income levels that provide subsidies in this measure.

In fact, the Vermont V-Script program is so generous that some have argued that people will be worse off with a less-generous Federal benefit. I don't think that's the case.

First, in today's economy there is no guarantee that Vermont will be able to continue its current level of support for the V-Script program.

But this bill dedicates almost $400 billion to the development of a universal prescription drug program, representing the largest expansion of the Medicare program since its inception.

This bill will guarantee a comprehensive and universal drug benefit to 41 million seniors in America. That includes all 93,000 seniors in my own home state of Vermont. And, it guarantees the same coverage to the millions of baby boomers who will soon rely on Medicare.

For 40,000 seniors in Vermont with limited savings and incomes below $13,470 for individuals and $18,180 for couples, the Federal Government will cover most of their drug costs. In fact, nearly one-third of all seniors nationwide will receive assistance for nearly 90 percent of their drug costs.
Additionally, Medicare, instead of Medicaid, will now assume the prescription drug costs for 21,767 Vermont beneficiaries who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid.

According to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, this will save Vermont $76 million over 8 years on prescription drug coverage for its Medicaid population.

Finally, the bill includes provisions that will allow States such as Vermont that have pharmacy assistance programs to augment, or “wrap-around,” the Federal Medicare benefit with State resources.

In fact, there is nothing in the legislation that would preclude Vermont, should it wish, from using the savings to establish its own prescription drug plan as long as it meets the requirements of the bill.

Some of our colleagues have criticized the bill, arguing that it would lead to an increase in employers dropping or reducing prescription drug coverage for its retirees.

I have looked at the estimates put forth by the Congressional Budget Office and the employee benefit think tanks, and I am concerned with those numbers.

But again, it is important to consider this potential downside in light of what is already occurring.

The number of employers providing prescription drug benefits has already been steadily declining for years, and without this Federal guarantee those disenfranchised workers would not have any at all.

In short, no senior, regardless of income, will go without prescription drug coverage in Vermont or throughout America once this legislation is enacted. That is, in part, why two of the largest national aging organizations such as AARP and the National Council of Older Americans supports this legislation.

And it why the Vermont AARP supports it as well.

Perhaps most important of all is the $25 billion for rural providers, ending years of unfair payments to rural hospitals, doctors and other providers.

This bill will ensure reliable access to health care services for seniors by better compensating health care providers.

I have already seen estimates that these rural provisions will provide Vermont hospitals with an additional $41 million over the next 10 years, and physicians will get a boost of $18 million in reimbursements over the next 2 years.

I have received many announcements from many Vermont constituents and stakeholders, including the Vermont AARP, the Fletcher Allen Health Center, the Vermont Association of Hospitals and Health Systems.

I am also glad that Chairman Grassley and ranking member Baucus have worked with me to address another inequity in the system.

Critical access hospitals provide care in some of the most underserved regions of Vermont, as is the case throughout rural America. These hospitals are small, yet serve as critical resources to their communities.

So I am pleased to see that the conference retained a provision from the Senate bill that will allow critical access hospitals, such as Mt. Ascutney Hospital in Windsor, VT, to expand access to psychiatric and rehabilitative services to the most vulnerable citizens in that community.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge the conference’s retaining another key provision from the Senate bill that will begin a major demonstration on improving quality and patient outcomes for Medicare beneficiaries.

This is the result of several years of working in concert with Dr. Jack Wennberg at Dartmouth College to bring greater attention to the regional disparities in the consumption of health resources without the improvement in health outcomes to show for it.

I acknowledge the sentiments of many of my colleagues here today. I too agree that this is not the bill I would have written if I had infinite resources to do it.

This bill is not perfect. However, after all of the time that has been spent on trying to develop a Medicare plan for prescription drugs—38 years—it would be a missed opportunity if we reject this good beginning to comprehensive coverage.

By passing the bill, we are laying the foundation. A foundation that requires constant vigilance, as has the original Medicare program.

So in closing, I would like to urge my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to support this bill as we move forward.

This bill will establish a drug benefit that is universal, comprehensive, affordable, and sustainable.

This bill restores necessary and long-neglected resources to critical access providers in rural areas. And, the bill will improve the quality of care offered under Medicare.

I hope my colleagues will join me in voting for the measure.

I ask unanimous consent to have the following article printed in the Record:

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

AARP Calls on Vermont Congressional Delegation To Vote for Medicare Rx Bill (Montpelier, Vermont) Earlier this week AARP, the leading advocate for older Americans with 35 million members nationwide and more than 116,000 in Vermont, endorsed the conference Committee’s Medicare Rx bill.

Their bill represents a first step in the nation’s commitment to strengthen and expand health security for its citizens.

For the first time in the history of the Medicare program, more than 90,000 Vermont Medicare beneficiaries will have access to a prescription drug benefit. This is about getting vital help to the people who need it most—people whose high drug costs have become a heavy burden to them and their families.” said Phileen Taormina, AARP Vermont Director of Advocacy.

AARP and its members call on the Vermont Congressional delegation to vote for the Conference Report that establishes a prescription drug benefit in Medicare.

In a survey conducted Wednesday of this week 83 percent of AARP members polled supported enactment of this legislation. Further, 75 percent of respondents said that the proposed Medicare legislation should be passed because it will help low-income elderly and those with high prescription drug costs. Amidst middle and big-income individuals, 80 percent were in favor of passing the legislation for this reason, support for the bill was evenly split among Democrats and Republicans.

Every day, AARP receives letters and calls from our members recounting how the high cost of prescription drugs is hurting their financial and physical health. We believe that the legislation that has emerged after long negotiations is the right start to relieve these burdens for millions of older and disabled Americans and their families. Though not perfect, the bill represents an historic breakthrough and an important milestone in the nation’s commitment to gain fair and expand health security for current and future beneficiaries. This Medicare legislation guarantees a voluntary drug plan is available for all Medicare beneficiaries, regardless of where they live.
payment cut scheduled for 2004, which would have reduced Medicare payments to Vermont physicians and hospitals by $6.7 million, with two years of modest payment increases. The Vermont Medical Society estimates that if the bill passes, Vermont providers will see an increase in payments of more than $2 million a year. The improved reimbursement will encourage Vermont hospitals to move away from the restrictions on how many Medicare patients they accept in their practices.

Rural Vermont hospitals will also benefit if the Medicare bill passes, because they will be paid at the same rate for procedures as hospitals in more urban areas. Richard Siuks of Mt. Ascutney Hospital stated, "This bill is an important step forward for Vermont's Medicare beneficiaries and our small, rural hospitals. As a Medicare-only Access Hospital, the rural hospital provisions in this bill will strengthen our ability to provide the local services our patients need. This assistance could not have come at a better time for our community."

Bea Grause, President and CEO of the Vermont Association of Hospitals and Health Systems, believes that the bill is good for Vermont hospitals and for Vermont hospitals and for Vermonters with commercial health insurance coverage. "This will help to reduce the cost shift to Vermonters with commercial health insurance so that we do not move forward and move us toward a fairer reimbursement system for our rural hospitals with a high percentage of Medicare patients in their case mix."

The provisions improving access for Vermont Medicare beneficiaries and reducing disparities in payment for rural providers in the conference committee report through the efforts of Sen. James Jeffords. The Vermont Medical Society, Fletcher Allen Health Care and the Vermont Association of Hospitals and Health Systems commend Sen. Jeffords for his work to protect the Medicare benefits of all Vermonters.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, could the Chair tell us how much time remains on each side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirteen/15 on your side; 15/40 the other side.

Mr. THOMAS. I thank the Chair. I yield my time to Mr. Grassley, who may consume to the chairman from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I should not take more than 5 minutes, so please tell me when 5 minutes are up.

This is the opportunity, a time of destiny, whether or not this Congress will deliver on the promises of the last three elections, the promises the other party made well. Thank God there are people in the Democratic Party who are working in a bipartisan way to deliver on the promises of that party as there are Republicans willing to deliver on the promises of the Republican Party.

Nothing gets done in this body without bipartisanship. This is bipartisan. We are putting aside partisanship. It is time the other side put aside rhetoric and complete our work on this bill for which the AARP says seniors have waited far too long.

This bill offers an affordable, universal prescription drug benefit. This bipartisan bill offers better coverage than today's Medigap policies plus Medicare. It also offers much more generous coverage for 14 million lower income seniors. And just to emphasize this point, this bill does not harm 6 million seniors, as the opponents of this legislation claim. That is political poppycock.

In fact, this bill protects the benefits for these 6 million and then adds generous prescription drug coverage for an additional 6 million. It expands coverage for everyone, in fact, more than anything offered today. This means that for about two in five seniors, this bill offers drug coverage with lower or no premiums, no coverage gap, and coverage of 65 to 95 percent of the cost of prescription drugs. And it is voluntary.

The opponents of this legislation happen to believe—and they sincerely believe—that Government should always force people into doing something they do not want to do for their seniors. Seniors can stay in traditional Medicare if they like what they have today and have full access to prescription drugs. There is also a guaranteed Government fallback if private plans do not look after those in need.

This bill also creates new choices similar to what Federal employees have for beneficiaries in a new revitalized Medicare Advantage Program. With respect to drug costs, the bill speeds the delivery of new generic drugs to the marketplace, lowering drug costs to Americans and not just those on Medicare.

Finally, the bill includes long overdue improvements in Medicare's complex regulations. It also revitalizes the rural health care safety net with the Dingell-Johnson plan and improves that Congress has ever seen or been seen. I urge my colleagues to put the interests of our seniors first and give them more choices and better benefits by supporting this bill.

Most importantly, we have brought this bill as far as we have over the last 4 or 5 years because of bipartisanship. I hope this body will not let the narrow partisanship of a few on the other side of the aisle destroy our efforts. I yield the floor to the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I didn't hear a word from the chairman of the Finance Committee on what he is going to do or what this bill is going to do with regard to costs. Hello? Costs. There is virtual silence in this bill.

We know what is happening to the senior citizens. It is an issue of access to prescription drugs and it is an issue of cost. This bill does not meet its responsibilities in terms of protecting our senior citizens with regard to the cost.

The Senator from Iowa mentioned the numbers of people who are going to be the losers. If the Senate has trouble with this, just ask the Budget Committee, not the Senator from Massachusetts. They said that 6 million seniors who are on Medicaid are going to lose their coverage. That isn't the Senator from Iowa or Massachusetts, that is the financial analysis. And 2.7 million retirees are going to be dropped, for a total loss of $9 million; almost 25 percent of the total retirees are going to be lost.

We can do better. We can do something about the escalation of cost, but they refuse to do it. Let's go back to the drawing board and do something that is worthwhile.

The Senate is on trial today. In a few moments we will vote to stop this charade. But I say this today: I am going to fight this bill for my health insurance because of what this bill will do and, if necessarily, fight it tomorrow, next week, and next year. I will fight for the nurse who paid into our hospital retirement fund for 20 years and the 3 million retirees like her who will lose their health insurance because of this bill. I will fight for the city workers in Springfield, MA, whose brave mayor plans to purchase cheaper prescription drugs from Canada for them and their families, an action that is legal under this bill. I will fight for the widowed grandmother on Medicaid and the 7 million poor Americans like her who count every penny yet will pay more for their prescription drugs under this bill. And I will fight for the 36 million Medicare seniors who want to stay in the program they love with the doctors and the hospitals they choose.

I will fight to keep billions and billions of Medicare dollars that come out of my paycheck from going to the pockets of the big drug companies and the HMOs. I will fight for our honor as a nation that keeps its commitment to our seniors, the ones who fought our wars, raised our families, and built our economy.

The more the American people learn about this legislation, the less they like it. The more senior citizens learn, the more they oppose it. Let us not reverse the historic decision our country made in 1965. Let us not turn our backs to our senior citizens so that insurance companies and pharmaceutical companies can earn even higher profits. Let us reject this bill and come back and do the job right.
of this country because, if they were poor, they were not in the Medicare Program. If they were poor, they were not allowed to get through the Medicare door, and for no other reason than they were poor.

Under one scenario, low-income seniors, maybe 80 years old, who worked all of their lives, but ended up in a very low-income status, were relegated to the Medicaid Program, where there was not a consistent amount of benefits for their respective programs. They were subject to the will and whims of the various State legislatures. Some treated them better, some treated them worse, and some didn't treat them hardly at all.

When we were able to do, which I thought was a priority for many Republicans because it was in the House bill—but it also was a priority for many Democrats in this body—was to say that we are going to bring those low-income seniors, for the first time, into the Federal Medicare Program. We did that. That is part of this bill. Those low-income seniors now are going to have the opportunity to be in the Federal Medicare Program. They will know what their benefits are. They will, for the first time, have access to prescription drugs, which is what I think the bill is all about. In addition, we were able to find an extra amount of money to help them with any type of copayments they might have.

Some States have high copayments; some States have no copayments on drugs. But what we were able to do was to say: Here is extra money for the purpose of helping States to reduce the copayments down to $1, if they are buying a generic drug and only $3 if they are buying a prescription drug. In addition to that, the subsidies and assistance for low-income seniors in general is extremely important.

Starting in April of this coming year, they will get a drug discount card. If they are low-income, they will start off with $400 worth on that card, and be able to immediately have the benefit of something, where they have nothing at all today.

On balance, when you have a 150 percent of poverty and below special assistance program, when you have a discount card that starts in April, and all of the seniors, for the first time, will be in the same Federal program, I think that is significant. For the first time, we will say to seniors who are low-income that you will no longer be treated as a second-class citizen and be different from all of the other seniors you know. You will be part of the Federal program and you will have access to prescription drugs.

Again, I think the question is, Have we designed a perfect bill? The answer is no. But I think when you look to associations such as AARP and the National Council on the Aging, we have a bill that merits their support.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, my understanding is that we have 12 minutes left.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct. Mr. REID. We have allocated time to Senator Edwards, 3 minutes; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. REID. I yield 8 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. Kennedy. We want to make sure we will use all of our time now. If Senator Edwards isn't here, that time will run because Senator Frist gets the last 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will just take a few moments to review for our colleagues what the implications of this bill will be for my State of Massachusetts. I can say that this is very typical of what is going to happen just about to every State. We have three MSA potentially eligible for premium support—the program that will raise premiums and effectively drive our seniors out of Medicare into the hands of the HMOs. We have three potentially eligible. We have 62,000 retirees who will lose their drug coverage. They are part of the 185,500 low-income elderly and disabled who will fail the assets and income test in Massachusetts.

This conference reimposed the asset test, which we had eliminated here by 67 votes in the Senate. They reimposed it. So there are 2.8 million across the country, and 60,000 in my State, who will fail the asset test, and 34,920 seniors will pay more for Part B premiums.

In the few hours of this debate, the proponents of this legislation have described their proposal in the most benign and misleading terms. They say it gives seniors the freedom to choose among competing plans and gives protection to the poor seniors. They say this bill will lower drug prices through competition. They say at least it helps low-income seniors. They are absolutely wrong on all those counts.

Here is the truth: This is a partisan plan. I removed from Iowa. You saw the vote over in the House of Representatives, what the Republican leadership had to do to coerce Members to pass it. That answers the question as to whether or not this is a partisan plan. This partisan program is out of the mainstream. The proposal damages Medicare and leaves the millions of senior citizens who rely on it without a lifeline. It is the first step toward a total dismantling of Medicare. In exchange for destroying Medicare, it offers inferior and inadequate drug benefit. The moment it is implemented, it will make 9 million senior citizens—almost a quarter of all senior citizens—worse off than they are today.

Senior citizens already have the most important choice they want—the choice of doctors and hospitals they trust. That is the choice they want, not higher premiums and premium support. Those are their choices if we pass this. They lose if they are forced to join HMOs and PPOs, or other programs that say an insurance company bureaucrat can choose their doctor for them.

Senior citizens already have the choice to join a private insurance plan competing with Medicare if they choose. But 9 out of 10 prefer to stay in Medicare. So they already have a choice to stay in it. But under this bill, you are providing so much in terms of effectively bribing them, and overpayments that they will eventually coerce those seniors. The bipartisan bill that passed the Senate provided additional choice, a program for regional PPOs. The conference adopted a right-wing House approach of ending Medicare as we know it and establishes a massive demonstration program that would subject 7 million senior citizens—1 out of 6— to a so-called premium support program.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I would like to take a few minutes to rebut some of the points raised by the Senator from Massachusetts.

First, he mentioned he is concerned about the cost of this bill. Let me remind my friend from Massachusetts that in the last year, he supported a bill that would have not only cost $800 billion, it would have sunsetted the Medicare prescription drug benefit. How would that have helped senior citizens and other Medicare beneficiaries, especially the disabled?

Our bill costs $400 billion over 10 years and it is a permanent benefit.

He also mentioned retiree health benefits and how individuals are going to lose their coverage if we pass this bill. Let me correct that statement for the record. First, $99 billion—yes, I said $99 billion—is devoted to employer subsidies in order to preserve retiree health benefits, so individuals will not lose their retiree coverage. We have gone from a drop-out rate of 37 percent in H.R. 1, to a drop-out rate of under 20 percent. Again, my colleague is simply using scare tactics.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I see the Senator from North Carolina here. He wanted some time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes 10 seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I would not yield to that to the Senator. I know he intended to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized. Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts. I spoke yesterday, but I wish to speak once again on this bill.

This bill is a perfect example of the kind of legislation that should not go through the Senate. It is a giveaway to HMOs and insurance companies, a giveaway to big drug companies, a continuation of this administration's shifting
It is not shocking that there is a $12 billion stabilization fund in this bill—$12 billion of taxpayer money that is going to give HMOs the opportunity to compete? I thought the whole purpose of this bill was so that HMOs could provide competition. We are going to give $12 billion of taxpayer money—money that, in fact, could go to providing a better prescription drug benefit to seniors who desperately need it, instead of using that money to cover seniors, to give them help in getting the medicine they desperately need when they go to the pharmacy. No, instead we are going to give $12 billion of taxpayer money to HMOs. That is a great idea. That is just a terrific idea.

On top of all that, we are not going to do anything meaningful to bring down the cost of prescription drugs. We have been through this fight before and over. We fight to try to allow re-importation of prescription medication from Canada, to bring down costs for people in America. Does it pass? No. Can we get it into this bill? No. Why? Because the drug companies are against it.

We try to do something about mis-leading company advertising on television. Billions and billions of dollars are being spent every year by drug companies on television advertising. Much of the advertising is misleading. We know who is paying for this advertising: consumers, seniors, every time they go to the pharmacy, are paying for these advertisements every time. When we try to do something about that advertising, try to put some kind of reasonable controls on it, are we able to do it? Are we successful? No. Why? Because the drug companies are against it.

We cannot even allow the Government to use its bargaining power to bring down the cost of prescription drugs for all seniors.

This bill is a giveaway—a giveaway to HMOs, a giveaway to drug companies. It is not surprising that as a result of looking as if this bill is about to pass, the drug companies’ stock and HMO stock is rising.

One thing I can tell you for sure, if this bill passes, it will pass over the dead bodies of a lot of us standing here fighting against it. If this bill passes, the lobbyists will be celebrating all over this town, lobbyists who worked this bill, single day on behalf of the HMOs and the drug companies.

I grew up in a small town in North Carolina in a rural area. There are more lobbyists for those industries around Washington, DC, than people who live in my hometown. How about if we in the Senate stand up for the kind of people I grew up with in that small town? How about if we actually stand up to big drug companies and big HMOs?

Speaking for this Senator, I intend to stand up to those people. I will vote no and fight with everything I have to stop this legislation.

Mr. EDWARDS. I thank the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minori- ty still has time at this point.

Mr. KENNEDY. How much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Three minutes ten seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. I will be glad to wait until the Senator concludes, and then I will yield the remaining 3 minutes to my colleague from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana has 1 minute.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, there is not a lot to say in 1 minute. I will do the best I can.

Essentially we have $400 billion in prescription drugs for seniors. I do not see how in the world we can let that moment pass by.

It was said before that there are not enough low-cost benefits for seniors. The previous speakers said that. They are wrong. One-third of our seniors will get such benefits under this bill that 95 percent of their benefits will be paid for. One-third of American seniors will find that 95 percent of their benefits are paid for. The allegation is there is no help for low-income seniors. That is just flat wrong.

There were a lot of other statements made by those opposed to this legislation that are flat wrong. The allegation is there is $25 billion will be affected by premium support. Flat wrong. We asked CBO what the number is. They said 600 to 700 million.

Some people say 6 million were going to be hurt by Medicare. Flat wrong. It is much less than that.

I strongly urge Senators to look at the facts. Vote for the bill and particularly vote against the points of order because those are mere technicalities. They don’t speak to the substance of the bill. It is important to pass this legislation now for seniors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, the Senate has passed this legislation. The President signed this legislation. It is clear that in this body there is an overwhelming bipartisan majority—indeed, it is the only majority that the Congress has been able to pass, the Medicare drug bill. The State of Maine is allowed to do this. We have veterans who are allowed to do that. We have veterans who are allowed to go to Canada, to bring down costs for prescription drugs for seniors. I do not have a lot to say in 1 minute. I will do the best I can.

It is not shocking that there is a $12 billion of taxpayer money that is going to give HMOs the opportunity to compete? I thought the whole purpose of this bill was so that HMOs could provide competition. We are going to give $12 billion of taxpayer money—money that, in fact, could go to providing a better prescription drug benefit to seniors who desperately need it, instead of using that money to cover seniors, to give them help in getting the medicine they desperately need when they go to the pharmacy. No, instead we are going to give $12 billion of taxpayer money to HMOs. That is a great idea. That is just a terrific idea.

On top of all that, we are not going to do anything meaningful to bring down the cost of prescription drugs. We have been through this fight before and over. We fight to try to allow re-importation of prescription medication from Canada, to bring down costs for people in America. Does it pass? No. Can we get it into this bill? No. Why? Because the drug companies are against it.

We try to do something about misleading company advertising on television. Billions and billions of dollars are being spent every year by drug companies on television advertising. Much of the advertising is misleading. We know who is paying for this advertising: consumers, seniors, every time they go to the pharmacy, are paying for these advertisements every time. When we try to do something about that advertising, try to put some kind of reasonable controls on it, are we able to do it? Are we successful? No. Why? Because the drug companies are against it.

We cannot even allow the Government to use its bargaining power to bring down the cost of prescription drugs for all seniors.

This bill is a giveaway—a giveaway to HMOs, a giveaway to drug companies. It is not surprising that as a result of looking as if this bill is about to pass, the drug companies’ stock and HMO stock is rising.

One thing I can tell you for sure, if this bill passes, it will pass over the dead bodies of a lot of us standing here fighting against it. If this bill passes, the lobbyists will be celebrating all over this town, lobbyists who worked this bill, single day on behalf of the HMOs and the drug companies.

I grew up in a small town in North Carolina in a rural area. There are more lobbyists for those industries around Washington, DC, than people who live in my hometown. How about if we in the Senate stand up for the kind of people I grew up with in that small town? How about if we actually stand up to big drug companies and big HMOs?

Speaking for this Senator, I intend to stand up to those people. I will vote no and fight with everything I have to stop this legislation.

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, we bring debate to a close prior to a very historic vote in which we are making a decision whether to give 40 million seniors the opportunity, for the first time through Medicare—the program that has been constructed and been used to give them health care security—whether for the first time these 40 million seniors will have access through that program to prescription drugs, to the program which is the cornerstone of health care security today. Seniors don’t have it. What we are voting on today is to give them that true health care security.

American’s seniors have waited 38 years for this prescription drug benefit to be added to the Medicare Program, and today they are just moments away from prescription drug coverage that they desperately need and deserve.

There are no guarantees that this body here is a bipartisan majority—and I would say an overwhelming bipartisan majority—in favor of this Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003.
Act of 2003. Yet we have before us an attempt to block this body from expressing, through an up-or-down vote, their will to give seniors and individuals with disabilities access to affordable prescription drug coverage and, thus, to restore a way of health care security for those seniors.

We are about to vote on a cloture motion in an attempt to overcome this filibuster.

Let us today, as we are likely to face additional procedural hurdles that the minority has threatened to prevent passage of this bill. Make no mistake, these are not one and the same. The result of this filibuster and of the procedural points of order will be to prevent us from denying these 40 million seniors access to modern prescription drug coverage, something they need and something they deserve.

In my own State of Tennessee, there are nearly one-quarter of a million seniors who right now have no prescription drug coverage. There are millions more all across the Nation for whom this legislation literally means life or death. Think hypertension, heart disease, one of the great pulmonary disease, asthma, or emphysema, all for which we have effective prescription drugs which are not made available through our Medicare Program today.

Our seniors cannot afford to wait longer. Then why wait? They cannot afford to wait. It is a matter of their health. This generation of seniors did survive the Depression, did fight World War II, did help make the United States the prosperous and thriving Nation we have today. Again and again, they answered the call. Now is the time for us to fulfill our duty to that generation. Many of them are poor and many of them are sick. It is time to answer their call.

When he signed Medicare into law in 1965, President Johnson said:

No longer will this Nation refuse the hand of justice to those who have given a lifetime of service and wisdom and labor to the country.

We need to stand in the way of those who have chosen to deny this legislation literally means life or death. Think hypertension, heart disease, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, asthma, or emphysema, all for which we have effective prescription drugs which are not made available through our Medicare Program today.

I want to close by just reading a statement issued today by the AARP on behalf of 35 million seniors that fine organization represents. This is from the AARP today, and I will close with this:

The fate of the landmark Medicare prescription drug bill now rests in the hands of the U.S. Senate. More than a vote is at stake. With the final passage in the Senate, the Congress will honor a longstanding promise to 41 million older and disabled Americans and their families by finally adding a prescription drug benefit to Medicare. This bill will help millions of people, especially those with low incomes and high drug costs. It will strengthen Medicare by adding this long overdue benefit and preserving the basic structure of the Medicare program. We urge the Senate to seize this historic opportunity and vote to pass this bill now.

America's seniors are watching. America is watching. I urge my colleagues to do the right thing, to seize this historic opportunity, to vote up or down on this bipartisan legislation, and to pass this historic bill.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time allowed?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time expired. Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time expired. Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

Mr. President, I move to close the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time?
Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be 2 hours of debate on the pending motion to waive, with that debate time equally divided among two leaders or their designees; further, I ask consent that following that debate time, the Senate proceed to a vote on the motion to waive, with no amendments in order to the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, we will shortly begin debate for 2 hours, as we just agreed to, after which we will have the vote—approximately 2 hours from now.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, obviously the pending motion is now the matter before the Senate and the clock is ticking. I want to use some of the time at this point and reserve the remaining time of those who wish to speak. I will, hopefully, reserve some time for myself at the end of the debate.

I make this motion recognizing there are a lot of concerns involving budgetary considerations on the legislation now pending. Those on the other side have expressed their understandable concern about the overall commitment in the budget to a new entitlement program, and I respect their position. It may be that on that basis alone, many of my Republican colleagues will want to vote against the motion to waive a budget point of order.

They will make the case that this is an entitlement that goes way beyond the $400 billion, that it is very likely this legislation could grow to $600, $800, $900 billion in the very near future, as other entitlements have on occasion. That is their right.

They will argue that this, as a new entitlement, provides very little cost control. On that I would agree, and I will come back to that point in a moment. So without a doubt, there are very important budgetary points of order to be made.

Technically, this budget point of order challenges the bill because it exceeds the 2004 budget authorization. It also challenges the allocation of resources within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee. So those are the technical reasons.

I want to give my reasons for expressing the concern I have throughout the debate, and how it relates to this budget point of order. I don't challenge the $400 billion. Frankly, I don't think that it is adequate to provide a meaningful drug benefit. We have to do better than that. But that is another issue. What I challenge is why it is we are misallocating so many of the resources within that $400 billion budget pie. That is my concern: how it is we can spend $6 billion on HSAs, health savings accounts, and at the same time tell our seniors they are going to have to pay $35 a month, 100 percent of the cost for drugs up to $250, 25 percent up to $2,250, 100 percent up to $5,100. Why are we going to have to pay all this money for these special interests when there are so many other concerns? I argue that even the most avid supporters of this legislation would say don't need it as much. Do healthy people who have access to an HSA really need help as much as a senior citizen who is struggling to pay their bills?

Isn't there a better way that we can allocate these resources to maximize the drug benefit for every citizen in the country today? The answer is, of course, yes. Why is it that we saw the need to exclude the single demand ability on the part of a Federal program today, in the Veterans' Administration, to control the cost of drugs when it came to protecting drug prices for senior citizens? Why did we do that?

Unfortunately, that wasn't the only cost containment mechanism excluded. For all intents and purposes, we also took out reimportation. We don't have any real authority now to reimport lower cost American-made drugs into this country. I am told the reason we didn't is because the drug companies were overwhelmingly opposed. Keep in mind that a lot of these drugs are manufactured inside the United States, exported to be re-sold outside the United States. So the irony is that drugs made inside the U.S. could not be sold and brought back into the U.S. under this bill. I think it is a folly.

So the bottom line for those who are concerned about the exploding cost of an entitlement is this: I have news for you. You have a right to be concerned because we have not done anything to control costs in this legislation. We are going to woe the day we passed this without providing the same mechanism VA has to do just that. We are going to woe the day we draw distinctions between seniors for absolutely no good reason. If it is good enough for veterans, it ought to be good enough for senior citizens across the board. But the drug companies don't like that either because they don't like it, it was excluded. So I make these points of order on four very specific points.

No. 1, we are not using that $400 billion we have allocated very well. We could do a whole lot better.

No. 2, there are specific programs in health care that don't work. In the first place, have nothing to do with offering drugs to seniors; that are handouts to special interests and have no business in this bill.
No. 3, we do very little with cost containment. We exclude the most consequential leverage the Government has had in the past with a program as important as the VA. It passed unanimously on the Senate floor 10 years ago. What is it excluded now? Because there was special interest opposition.

No. 4, we are going to woe the day when we put special interests ahead of the senior citizens in making these resource allocations in this legislation the way this bill would do.

Mr. President, we can do better than this. We have to do better than this. I hope, on a bipartisan basis, we simply say we are going to ask that these provisions, these concerns be renegotiated. I was one—and I will end here—who voted in favor of cloture. I am not devious of extending debate unnecessarily and in a prolonged way. I wanted to make that point by voting for cloture.

But I must say, we expedite the day when we do the right thing with regard to the costs of drugs and with regard to a new system under Medicare. We expedite the day by voting against the motion to waive the point of order made by the distinguished majority leader. So who claim fiscal responsibility as an important priority, those who want to maximize the bang for the buck for seniors in this legislation, those who are concerned about the distinctions we draw among senior citizens, will join with those who voted for and those who voted against cloture, against waiving this point of order.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator in charge left the floor and said I could allocate some time to myself. I will not use much. I note the presence on the floor of the chairman of the Budget Committee, and I will note the presence of Senators Breaux and Nickles, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana and the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, who claim fiscal responsibility as an important priority. I assume the Senator from Louisiana wants to speak. Clearly, I want to speak for no more than 7 minutes. I ask that I be advised when I have spoken for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will be advised.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the Budget and Impoundment Control Act will be 30 years old soon—30 years in existence. Many pundits never thought it would survive even 1 year. As a freshman Senator, I worked along with my colleagues to help bring about the act, and then I was honored by this body to serve as chairman for many years.

Let me say that the drafters of the Budget Act knew it was a bold and daring piece of legislation, setting up a whole new way of considering legislation in the Congress. As a matter of fact, I am not sure they even knew how bold it would be. It, indeed, in many respects, changed the way the Senate does business—some for the better, some not so much for the better.

There is one provision that is called reconciliation—a strange word—and people wonder what it means. Let me just tell you, without trying to take much time, that our distinguished leader had an opportunity to move this bill under what is called a reconciliation bill. Do you know what that would have done, Mr. President? That would have made the bill almost not amendable and, indeed, besides that, there would be no points of order. He chose, as the bill progressed through, to go original order.

So let me repeat. The drafters recognized the need to provide waivers of points of order in this bill. The waivers are just as important as the points of order. They are not there just because points of order might cause so much damage that you need to waive them. They are there because points of order can be a range of things, and the points of order can be waived because the Budget Act says you can waive them, unless in fact they are important to fiscal responsibility or, in some way, violate the soundness of a Budget Act. So let’s be clear. The budget resolution before us, which we adopted back in the spring under the leadership of Senator Nickles, authorized spending over $400 billion for prescription drugs. Let me repeat. The fiscal dimensions are $400 billion. You would think if you are going to make a point of order about this bill being out of line budgetwise, somebody would have been there saying the $400 billion, it breaks the budget, would you not?

Most logically, any Senator who says there is a point of order against this bill would say, well, we didn’t think it spent more than was prescribed in the Budget Act. They are right, it didn’t. As a matter of fact, using technical rules of evaluation, it spent less than allowed. It spent $335 billion. You would have had to invoke the Budget Act, and yet a Budget Act point of order should not be used for a frivolous matter—$4 billion off in 1 year with a $400 billion bill. It should not be used to cure technical matters—$4 billion in a 10-year bill of $400 billion. I am sure my friend, the chairman of the Budget Committee, will talk about some of the other technical issues regarding programs. But the biggest issue is fiscal soundness.

We have from time to time in a Budget Act authorized $300 billion for a program over 10 years, and I can tell you, many times a committee came back with a bill that was $300 billion, but for each of the 10 years it didn’t fit the number.

This Senator, as chairman of the Budget Committee, wouldn’t have dared to get up and say the bill should fail on a point of order because it violates the budget and, thus, the Budget Act should be used to kill it because they had done a great job and had met the total, but you can’t, in estimating, make every year hit it right, right on the head.

I submit that a point of order should not be used. The leader’s waiver of that provision should be sustained because we are using the Budget Act to try to kill the Medicare bill that is fiscally as sound as you can get if you are not talking about fiscal soundness, not substance—the points of order are not substance; they have to do with dollars—if you are just off 1 year out of 10 but not on the total of 10, you should not invoke the point of order. It should be waived as requested by the majority leader.

I thank the Senate for the 7 minutes. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold?

Mr. NICKLES. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on our side, Senator Graham will speak for 10 minutes, Senator Boxer for 5 minutes, Senator Dodd for 5 minutes, and Senator Corzine for 5 minutes.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield myself as much time as I might consume.

The committee could not make this proposal fit in each piece of the 10 years. In other words, if you look along and keep adding up the years, it is $335 billion. But the committee also made some estimates by the year, and one of those years is $4 billion high—got it, $4 billion in an estimating bonanza of $400 billion.

First of all, everybody knows they are estimates, the best you can do. I have had to rely upon them and got ac- cused that I should have relied upon them when I was the budget chairman, but we did so. There is one year that is $4 billion off in the estimating of 10 years. But every other year is within, which is truly remarkable, and the sum total $335 billion.
I urge my colleagues to vote to waive the budget point of order. I think I am correct—I haven’t looked at numbers—I probably voted to make more points of order than almost anybody, maybe with the exception of my very good friend the past chair of the Finance Committee, but we have always tried to maintain the integrity of the budget, but I think what we have here is a way of people saying: Let’s vote for cloture, but maybe we can kill this bill indirectly; we will do it with a budget point of order. I wish the people were really concerned about the fiscal integrity of Medicare, but I don’t think that is what is behind the proponents of these budget points of order.

As a matter of fact, in looking at past records, Senator Daschle, who made the budget point of order, has moved to waive a budget point of order 56 out of 60 times. Senator Kennedy has moved to waive a budget point of order 51 times that he has been there. In other words, some 97 percent of the time they always moved to waive the budget rules. I have always been on the opposite side. I am going to be on the opposite side of them this time because I think they are trying to kill the bill so the bill will come back later with more costs and be a lot more irresponsible.

If my memory serves me correctly, when we debated the budget this year on the floor of the Senate, there was an amendment to increase the $400 billion authorization or the reserve fund we put in the budget for prescription drugs and to improve Medicare. I believe Senator Kennedy and Senator Daschle supported an amendment to increase that figure to $600 billion. They were not successful.

My point is I think their effort today is not because they are concerned about this bill costing too much money. They are trying to figure out a way to bring this bill down so it can come back and cost more money. I just mention that.

What about the point of order? The budget said we would have up to $400 billion to spend for improving and strengthening Medicare, including providing prescription drugs. The bill that was reported out, according to CBO, meets that target. It scores at $395 billion. I happen to think it is going to cost more than that. But it is in line with the rules set by the Budget Committee on its total spending and scored by the Congressional Budget Office.

There is a violation or budget point of order in 2004. What do I mean by that? It scores $3 billion more in 2004. What that relates to is when we pass a budget, we allocate so much money to each committee each year, and the Finance Committee has already spent all of its money. It spent all of its money because we put in prescription drug coverage—a total of $4.7 billion in unemployment compensation in 2004 not assumed in the Budget Resolution. We spent an additional $10 billion in aid to the States that was not assumed in the budget resolution. There are some other things that we didn’t do, so the Finance Committee is out of compliance now by about $3 billion with this bill.

What does this bill do in 2004 that costs money? The prescription drug proposal doesn’t really get started in 2004 with the exception of the prescription discount drug card. The card, which serves 20 percent or 25 percent of immediate savings in January of 2004 and provides a $600 benefit for low-income seniors. Seniors who have incomes less than 135 percent of poverty will get a card. I believe that card will be authorized in January of 2004 for $600. The beneficiary would have to make a copayment of 10 percent. So that costs money in 2004. I don’t hear the opponents seeking to delay immediate relief for seniors and low-income seniors.

Furthermore, there are other items that cost money in 2004. Providers receive assistance. Providers, who do I mean? I mean doctors, hospitals, rural hospitals—provisions that are supported very strongly by Members of both parties. Those that are the bulk of this money. $3.8 billion. So if people don’t want to spend that money, that is of interest, but my guess is that is not really the case.

My guess is people want to spend the money to get the results needed. I then heard the Democratic leader indicate his concern was also on the revenue side of the budget. There is a point of order because of health savings accounts. That is a $100 million revenue loss in 2004.

I understand some people do not like that particular provision of the bill. I happen to think it is a very good provision of the bill. If the supporters of this point of order prevail then the entire bill will be pulled down. Am I right to assume that their goal is to ensure that there will be no prescription drug coverage for low-income seniors because of that provision? I do not think so.

Now folks are stating that the bill has no cost containment. Well, I believe we have very different meanings of those words. The proponents of the point of order consider government price controls to be effective cost containment. I agree with the legislation lacks real cost containment—I heard Senator Daschle say we did not have cost containment. This Senator worked very hard to get real cost containment. I wanted to put cost containment in that bill that would require a supermajority vote to worsen Medicare’s financial condition. If any future Congress had legislation before the body which would make the fiscal problems of Medicare, which are already significant, worse, there would require a 60-vote point of order. I was not successful in convincing my colleagues to include that fiscal restraint.

In fact, my primary opponent in creating real cost containment was Senator Baucus. He kept saying: I cannot pass that in my caucus. That will never pass. That is a nonstarter. You cannot get a supermajority on this entitlement. You will get the growth of this entitlement. That is now done for other entitlements. I heard it over and over. We debated it for a long time. Well, the facts are that it is done for other entitlements. We have this rule in place today for Social Security. So I think the supermajority’s always has never been in question as a result of a supermajority requirement.

I was not successful in getting stronger cost containment than what we have in this bill. I regret that. I wish that we would. I would be happy to pursue that in subsequent budget resolutions with the Democrat leader. But we were not successful in getting it in this package. I think the proponents of this point of order are not serious in their effort to control costs. In fact I am accused as to why the proponents of this point of order voted for cloture. Instead of opposing cloture they are trying to get around it the other way and say, we will just use a 60-vote budget point of order.

Seriously, I do not think their efforts are about budgets. I think it is a way to try and kill this bill. I may not support final passage of the bill because I am concerned about the total cost of the bill. But I do not think it should be because we are spending some money for rural hospitals or for doctors. I think doctors are getting like $600 million in 2004; rural hospitals and other providers are receiving money in 2004; and health savings accounts reduce revenues by $160 million in 2004.

The real reason the Finance Committee has exceeded its allocation in 2004 is because we spent $4.3 billion for unemployment compensation and because we spent $10 billion for aid to the States in 2004, neither of which were in the original budget resolution.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. I will yield time in just a moment to my colleagues. First, I will respond briefly to a point made by the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, Mr. Domenici. I am sorry he is not in the Senate floor chamber to respond to a comment he made. He said this was a frivolous point of order.

I remind my colleagues, this is precisely the point of order made by Senator Grassley and Senator Frist on two different motions last year. So I argue if it was inappropriate last year, it would be inappropriate this year. If it is frivolous this year, it would have been frivolous last year. Yet the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, and I might add, his colleague, my friend and the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, both voted in favor of the points of order last year when that precise point of order was made.
I ask unanimous consent that the rollcall involving both points of order be printed in the Record at this time. There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

U.S. SENATE ROLL CALL VOTES 107TH CONGRESS—2ND SESSION

As compiled through Senate LIS by the Senate Bill Clerk under the direction of the Secretary of the Senate

VOTE SUMMARY

Question: On the Motion (Motion to Waive CBA re: Graham Amdt. No. 4309).

Vote Number: 186.

Vote Date: July 14, 2003, 03:57 Nov 25, 2003 Jkt 029060 PO 00000 Frm 00034 Fmt 0637 Sfmt 0634 E:\CR\FM\G24NO6.071 S24PT1

Statement of Purpose: To amend the XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide coverage of outpatient prescription drugs under the Medicare program.

VOTE COUNTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>YEAS</th>
<th>Nay</th>
<th>Not Voting</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>52</td>
<td>47</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ALPHABETICAL BY SENATOR NAME

Akaka (D-HI), Yea
Allard (R-CO), Nay
Allen (R-VA), Nay
Baucus (D-ID), Yea
Bayh (D-IN), Yea
Bennett (R-UT), Nay
Biden (D-DE), Yea
Bingaman (D-NM), Yea
Bond (R-MO), Nay
Boxer (D-CA), Yea
Breaux (D-LA), Yea
Brownback (R-KS), Nay
Bunning (R-KY), Nay
Burns (R-MT), Nay
Byrd (D-WV), Yea
Campbell (R-OK), Nay
Cantwell (D-WA), Yea
Carnahan (D-MO), Yay
Carper (D-WV), Yea
Chafee (R-RI), Nay
Clinton (D-NY), Yea
Cochran (R-MS), Nay
Collins (R-ME), Nay
Conrad (R-ND), Yea
Corzine (D-NJ), Yea
Craig (R-NY), Nay
Crano (R-ID), Nay
Daschle (D-SD), Yea
Dayton (D-MN), Yea
DeWine (R-OH), Nay
Dodd (D-CT), Yea
Domenici (R-NM), Nay
Dorgan (D-ND), Nay
Durbin (D-IL), Nay
Edwards (D-NC), Nay
Ensign (R-NV), Nay
Enzi (R-WY), Nay
Feingold (D-WI), Yea
Feinstein (D-CA), Yea
Feitzer (R-LT), Yea
Frist (R-TN), Nay
Graham (D-FL), Yea
Grandy (R-TX), Nay
Grassley (R-IA), Nay
Gregg (R-NH), Nay

GROUPED BY HOME STATE

Alabama: Sessions (R-AL), Nay

Arkansas: Hutchinson (R-AR), Nay

California: Boxer (D-CA), Yea

Connecticut: Dodd (D-CT), Yea

Delaware: Biden (D-DE), Yea

Florida: Graham (D-FL), Yea

Georgia: Cleland (D-GA), Yea

Hawaii: Akaka (D-HI), Yea

Idaho: Crandall (R-ID), Nay

Illinois: Durbin (D-IL), Yea

Indiana: Bayh (D-IN), Yea

Iowa: Grassley (R-IA), Yea

Kansas: Brownback (R-KS), Nay

Kentucky: Bunning (R-KY), Nay

Louisiana: Breaux (D-LA), Yea

Maine: Collins (R-ME), Nay

Maryland: Mikulski (D-MD), Yea

Massachusetts: Kennedy (D-MA), Yea

Michigan: Levin (D-MI), Yea

Minnesota: Dayton (D-MN), Yea

Mississippi: Cochran (R-MS), Nay

Missouri: Bond (R-MO), Nay

Montana: Baucus (D-MT), Yea

Nebraska: Hagel (R-NE), Nay

Nebraska: Nelson (D-NE), Yea

Nevada: Ensign (R-NV), Nay

New Hampshire: Gregg (R-NH), Nay

New Jersey: Corzine (D-NJ), Yea

New Mexico: Bingaman (D-NM), Yea

New York: Clinton (D-NY), Yea

North Carolina: Edwards (D-NC), Yea

North Dakota: Conrad (D-ND), Yea

Ohio: DeWine (R-OH), Nay

Oregon: Voinovich (R-OH), Nay

Washington: Sessions (R-WA), Nay

West Virginia: Rockefeller (D-WV), Yea
Inhofe (R–OK), Nay Nickles (R–OK), Nay Oregon:
Smith (R–OR), Nay Wyden (D–OR), Yea Pennsylvania:
Santorum (R–PA), Nay Specter (R–PA), Nay Rhode Island:
Chafee (R–RI), Nay Reed (D–RI), Yea South Dakota:
Thurmond (R–SD), Yea Texas:
Hollings (D–SC), Yea

On that bill, there were 50 votes expressed, and the Senate prepared to support it, however, is the last point that my friend and fellow-departing Member of the Senate, Mr. Nickles, just said, and that was about the issue of cost containment. Senator Nickles has a definition of cost containment. That definition is that we will impose limits on the amount of funds which can be spent on the Medicare Program, the most prominently suggested approach being to say that if more than 45 percent of the nontrust fund monies of the Federal Government are going to be spent on Medicare, then there will be a complex Rube Goldberg of votes and countervotes to determine if that can occur. If those limits are imposed, then the only way that 45-percent excess can be replaced are through things which are clearly going to be very onerous upon the Medicare beneficiaries, such as increasing the payroll tax or increasing the amount of premiums that seniors would pay.

The fact is, there are 27 million veterans eligible to get these reduced costs. When we pass this Medicare bill, until such time—and I am afraid it will not be very long—that we see a mass retreat of private pre-employers—that is the persons, the businesses that used to employ the drugstore and bought it at the same price that, for instance, seniors under Medicare would pay, what would it cost? It was $81 million. So there is more than a 50 percent discount—in some cases much more dramatic discounts.

The idea that we might go to general revenue as the means of meeting that excess is not allowable. It has to come out of the Medicare Program itself.

I have a different definition of what a cost control ought to be, and it is not a bureaucratic maze. It is a straightforward, capitalist, free enterprise, marketplace approach. It also is not a new idea. In the early 1990s, this Senate passed legislation which authorized the administrator of the Veterans Administration to negotiate with pharmaceutical companies on behalf of the VA. That bill was sponsored by Senator Alan Simpson, retired Republican from Wyoming; Senator and now-Governor Frank Murkowski of Alaska; retired Senator Alan Cranston from California; and my colleague today, Senator JAY ROCKEFELLER. Those were the four sponsors.

When the bill came before the Senate, there was not a request for a recorded vote. It passed unanimously. So that does not sound like it was a very radical bill, given who its sponsors were, or that it raised any great cries in the Senate. What has happened over the intervening decade plus since this legislation was passed? Well, here is a chart that shows some of the common prescriptions which are now being purchased by the VA under this legislation. Let us take one which I happen to know well because I take it myself, and that is Zocor. It was designed to control high cholesterol.

On Veterans’ Day of this year, I spent the day at the VA hospital in Miami. A lot of the day was spent in the pharmaceutical dispensing area. I asked the question: Who pays for Zocor? Well, the answer was 66 cents a tablet. I then asked what would it be if they went to the drugstore and bought the same identical tablet. It was $3.77.

I said: Is that illustrative of the kind of discounts you are able to negotiate? The answer was: No, it frankly is a little bit deeper than average. We, this year, will dispense about $39 million of prescription drugs through the Miami VA. The drugstore and bought it at the same price that, for instance, seniors under Medicare would pay, what would it cost? It was $81 million. So there is more than a 50 percent discount—in some cases much more dramatic discounts.

The question that I think we should anticipate, so we had better be ready with an answer, is the question: Why, in light of the success of the VA in providing for its 27 million eligibles—why do we have this in this legislation, under the clause “noninterference?”

I might correct a statement I made yesterday when I said it was on page 54, the final version of the printed conference report it is moved to page 53, lines 18 through 26. Here is what those lines say:

Noninterference. In order to promote competition under this part and in carrying out this part, the Secretary—who was in the Chamber just a few moments ago—(1) may not interfere with the negotiations between drug manufacturers and pharmacy benefit managers; and (2) may not require a particular formulary or institute a price structure for the reimbursement of covered part D drugs.

What all that legalese means is that we are about to prohibit the Secretary of HHS from using the tremendous bargaining power which Medicare has, similar to the Veterans Administration, to accomplish for Medicare beneficiaries the same cost control that we are now achieving in the Veterans Administration.

Some people say: Why are we doing this? What is the reason we would have such diametrically different policies for two very similar groups of Americans?

One answer weis: Well, veterans, they are a special class. There are not as many veterans; therefore, they will not have the impact.

I agree, veterans are a special group of Americans. They deserve to be honored. But so are the other members of the greatest generation. So are the wives who stayed home with the children while their husbands were fighting abroad.

The fact is, there are 27 million veterans eligible to get these reduced costs. When we pass this Medicare bill, until such time—and I am afraid it will not be very long—that we see a mass retreat of private pre-employers—that is the persons, the businesses that used to employ the drugstores—start to drop coverage—until that happens, there will be about 10 million to 12 million of the 40 million Medicare beneficiaries who are likely to take most advantage of this prescription drug benefit.
pharmaceutical industry to its knees, that 10 to 12 million Medicare beneficiaries are going to cause that to occur.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina). The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. I ask for an additional 5 minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Reserving the right to object—of course, I will not object—I would like to be the next Democrat on the list to speak because Senator DASCHLE had committed that to me but he is not in the Chamber at this time. I ask unanimous consent that I be the next Democrat to speak, up to 7 minutes, after Senator GRAHAM, and of course yielding to the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. There is a question more serious than the question I just asked, and that is, How do we answer the question? This is Mrs. Kitterage. She is 75 years old. She lives in Tamarac, FL. She has about $4,900 a year expenses over a range of prescription drugs. That is her annual expense. Here you see some of the vials of her prescription drugs.

This is not the case—at least I don’t know it to be the case—but let’s assume that Mrs. Kitterage either is married or is a widow and that her husband was about her age, which would have made him quite possibly, possibly, possibly have been one of our brave soldiers in the Korean War. As such, he would be eligible, as one of the veterans, to get the VA discounts. She is not eligible today. Because of this provision we are proposing to put into law, she will not be eligible in the future to get the benefit of Medicare’s tremendous purchasing power.

I want to just leave this question. When we stand up before an audience of elderly Americans and Mrs. Kitterage comes and asks this question: My husband is the same age I am; why is he referred or is a widow and that her husband

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used his additional time.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, I leave that question with you and hope during the course of this debate we will be answering.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, first of all, I should find out how much time we have left.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You have 43 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself such time as I might consume.

This may sound like a simple vote, to raise a point of order about a budget and how this fits into the budget. But what this vote is all about is whether or not we are going to have any bill whatsoever providing prescription drug benefits. That is what this next vote is all about because I believe if we get 60 votes like we did 70 votes on the cloture motion, we will be on our way to passage, in a bipartisan way—everything has been bipartisan this for seniors. This is what I think this vote is all about because I believe if we get 60 votes like we did 70 votes on the cloture motion, we will be on our way to passage, in a bipartisan way, passage of this bill, so our seniors can have prescription drugs, so that the biggest hole that has ever existed in Medicare for the last 38 years is filled.

So all the care can be made about this little budget deal or that little budget technicality, but this is a vote about keeping the promises of both political parties over the last three elections. I do not think we ought to pooh-pooh keeping the promises of the last election. People are cynical about political leaders anyway—over-promising, not delivering on promises. This is our opportunity. This is one of the last two votes for this bill to go to the President of the United States.

So this vote is about our seniors, and also we can include Americans with disabilities. So a successful vote against overriding this point of order will gut the immediate funding we provide for prescription drug discount cards.

Much has been said by the opponents of this bill about not providing help to seniors fast enough. How many times, in the last 3 days, 4 days of debate on this bill have you heard the point: “Well, this bill is not going to take effect for 2 years. I don’t know why it can’t take effect sooner.”

Now, that is not my choice. We pass a bill. You have to give some time for bureaucrats to implement it and write the regulations, and you want to do it right. So that is what they say: They need that amount of time, No. 1. No. 2, they’ll take for the process. That’s completely for part of it, and that part is the drug discount card for seniors and the disabled so they can get 15 to 25 percent discounts on drugs right away.

So apparently a discount card available to all seniors in less than 5 months, and also with a direct $600 subsidy to those with the lowest incomes, is something that opponents of this bill—crying in their beer all the time about this not doing enough for seniors taking effect too soon enough—is a reason to block this bill.

They are talking out of both sides of their mouth when they say that. On the one hand, they say it is not going into effect soon enough, and then with the next vote we will be able to keep, they are going to guarantee no drug benefit for years, and just with some little budget technicality on a procedural vote.

The President of the Senate

It is pretty ironic, that they would take that stand over the course of 4 days—argue that this bill is not going into effect soon enough, ignoring the discount card that starts immediately, and saying we are not doing enough, and then they are willing to block it on a technicality.

It seems to me that anybody who says we are not providing drug benefits quickly enough for our seniors and our disabled would vote to override this point of order so we can get to the next vote on final passage.

Also, I just heard some of my colleagues from the other side of the aisle say this bill, in some instances, does not do enough for rural health care delivery. We provide $25 billion in this bill for rural providers to deal with the inequitable situation of the 30 States below the national average. That is because the formulas for doctors and hospitals in rural areas treat them less well, less equitably than the formulas for urban areas, because the assumption is in rural areas you can deliver health care for less costs.

But they are crying in their beer about maybe that is not doing well enough. And if they vote as 1 of the 41 who might keep us from overriding that point of order, then how can they talk out of both sides of their mouth—one time saying, “We are not doing enough,” and then, on the other hand, “Kill this bill on this budget technicality”? Because just as soon as this bill passes, rural providers are going to get a great deal of help from this legislation.

Now, that help is not just for our providers because we feel sorry for doctors or hospitals. We are not being able to recruit doctors and maintain our hospitals in rural America. This $25 billion in this bill will strengthen our hospitals. It will give us an opportunity to recruit doctors.

So if you are 1 of the 41 who does not help us override this point of order, you are saying no to the recruitment of doctors in rural America. You are saying it is OK to close rural hospitals. Because you know what is going to happen if we do that? We might lose our community hospital. So we are passing this legislation well the doctors of America are going to take a 4.5-percent cut in their reimbursement because of the way our formulas work. I do not know how formulas such as that were written, but those formulas have an egregious impact upon the doctors.

I strongly disagree that that ought to happen and that we ought to have situations where medical doctors are fed up with Medicare, and they just get out of the program. Then our seniors have fewer doctors to take care of their needs.

But if this bill passes, it is going to give relief to our doctors, not only stopping that 4.5-percent cut, it will give them a 1.5-percent increase in reimbursement.

It seems to me a vote against overriding the point of order is a vote against our rural hospitals every day because every day our hospitals are doing more with less. They serve our elderly. They serve the uninsured, those who live in some of the remotest parts of our country, and those who live in our cities as well because city hospitals have high premiums, too.

Are we going to tell these hospitals what they do every day in saving lives and improving patients' quality of life is not somehow important? I certainly hope not. But a vote against overriding this point of order is a thumbs down in the eyes of health care providers, in the eyes of the people who run our hospitals, the nurses who work there.

So this is going to be a vote against some of our neediest seniors. And the neediest of our neediest are those in nursing facilities where they need physical therapy. They need occupational therapy, speech therapy. This bill, out of this $25 billion, provides a 2-year moratorium from the therapy cap that is in law today, which, basically, at $1,500 is saying, if you have a stroke, if you have some sort of major operation, you are only going to get physical therapy up to $1,500; and too bad after that.

Well, we take care of that in this legislation. But the people who vote against overriding this point of order are saying no to those neediest of seniors in the nursing homes who will be hit by this $1,500 cap and will not be able to get the physical therapy services they need.

We are at a point where all this effort about rural hospitals has been supported by an overwhelming majority in both the House and the Senate.

We heard our colleague, Senator Bennett of Utah, speak passionately about his daughter is a speech therapist and knows all too well how nursing home residents benefit from therapies after they have suffered a stroke, heart attack, or maybe just a fall. Are we going to say to Senator Bennett's of daughter that we don't need to delay these caps? Are we going to say to our seniors that access to physical therapy doesn't matter? I certainly hope not.

You will hear a lot about this vote being about how we spend money in this Medicare bill. You will hear how this vote might be a vote against special interests in America. I ask my colleagues what they mean because if their seniors need immediate relief from high prescription drug bills, their hometown doctors need some help, their local hospitals need some help, their seniors recovering from stroke and heart attack need some help because they need more therapy, then I guess they should vote against these people.

That isn't what I hear from the other side of the aisle. They are the great humanitarians of the American political environment. They are concerned about this. But this next vote will show how concerned they are because they are voting against all these people who have need, most often the seniors of America who need prescription drugs.

I do not intend to vote against them and, in the process, hopefully get this bill to final passage.

I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from California has already been recognized to speak for 5 minutes. Following the Senator from California, I ask unanimous consent that Senator Doocey of Arizona, Senator Corzine be recognized for 5 minutes, and following that Senator Durbin be recognized for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the understanding of the Chair that Senator Boxer of California is going to be recognized for 7 minutes.

Mr. REID. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, let me tell you where we are because people watching this debate may be confused on what has happened. On our side we have made a point of order against this bill because it busts the budget. Know why we bust the budget? Does it bust the budget by giving a more generous prescription drug plan to our seniors? No. It busts the budget by giving away billions of dollars to the HMOs. It also busts the budget because it allows a big deduction from the wealthiest and healthiest people to set up what they call HSAs, health service accounts, and to be able to deduct that money. What that does is, it raises the premiums for everybody else, taking those prescription drug coverage pool. So make no mistake about it, when the Senator from Iowa says we are terrible on our side because we don't want to spend more money, we are willing to spend the funds on the senior citizens' prescription drug benefit. We are not willing to throw it away on HMOs and on the tax breaks for the wealthiest people who are already doing just fine, thank you very much.

Having said that, there is a real benefit to ensuring that this bill stops in its tracks by supporting this point of order. In order to do that, we have to vote no on the motion to waive it. So if we prevail, if the other side does not get 60 votes, this bill will go back and get started again. It will come back to us with a better prescription drug plan. It will come back to us with less confusion, less bureaucracy and the rest.

The underlying bill hurts seniors; 6 million of them will receive less prescriptions than they do today. There is a cruel asset test in here where you may have to sell off your wedding band to get help. You may have to sell off your car if it is worth more than $4,500 to get help with prescription drugs. It seems to me something that is family heirlooms is not something we want to do to our seniors.

In many of our States that have big metropolitan areas—and I see the Senators from Connecticut, Illinois, and New Jersey, I am from California—our seniors will be forced into demonstration projects. That means they will either have been forced into an HMO to get a better break on their monthly premium or have to pay more to stay in traditional Medicare where they have the choice of a doctor.

It increases Medicare premiums for middle and upper class people. Some people may say that is a great thing. Let me tell you a couple of bad things that will happen. On our side we think, if what will happen is, these people may well lose Medicare, which means the pool shrinks and the premiums go up for everybody else. The other problem is, these premiums are not indexed. If this had been in place in 1997, we think we figured it would be people with $33,000 a year who would have to pay higher premiums. We know that is a low number.

There will be confusion and fear. I will talk about that. And there will be large benefit shutdowns which are daunting and penalize innocent seniors.

I say to the occupant of the Chair, something maybe he has not yet found in this bill because, look at the size of this thing. This is the size of it. It is huge. I think to hide in there it says the Secretary of HHS can demand from the IRS your tax return or mine or any of our constituents to just make sure they are not cheating on a lot of the rules that go along with this.

In California, the minute this bill goes into effect, I have a lot of problems: 867,000 sick low-income seniors will have worse coverage; 250,000 retirees will lose their more generous prescription drug coverage; and 1.4 million seniors will be forced out of traditional Medicare. This is what the senior citizens do to our seniors. This is what the senior citizens get to leave you with this chart that I made up, sort of wrote it myself. A lot of what I have to tell you I used this chart on Saturday. My phones have been ringing off the hook. This is what the senior citizens now have to understand.
I would urge my colleagues to look at every expression on this chart and you tell me if you understand what these things are: Transitional assistance, there is one thing seniors better learn because they are transitioning into something different; HSA, medical savings accounts; risk adjustment, you are going to hear about that; benefit, that is when you know savings accounts, risk adjustment, you know there is one thing seniors better learn.

There is incredible language here that even the most determined person to learn about this bill would be hard pressed. There is it.

I thank the Senator from California because she has laid out here a lexicon of what is being offered, you give the eyes of the most determined people to try to sort out what this bill means.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.

One of the points the Senator made is worth noting again. This is not the end of a Congress. This is only the end of a session. If I were the majority leader, I was going to go through all this.

There is no doubt in my mind that we have in this bill doesn't exceed $5 billion. Why? The problem the first year is that the budget sets up a category for mandatory spending, and included in Medicare, remember, was a $12 billion subsidy. That is the reason that the budget does not provide enough benefits and how we need to spend more money, and what is being offered is the budget point of order by the very people who want to spend more than what this bill does.
what we had budgeted for Medicare, then why is it subject to a budget point of order? Well, because the money that we had budgeted for Medicare was eaten up by two Democrat initiatives that have swallowed up that money—unemployment, and this one, which I believe to be another gimmick. Of course, because of those two expenditures—which I believe we had only done in a bipartisan way, and I tip my hat to the other side; it was clearly motivated by the other side of the aisle to spend this additional $600 billion. So if you look through what we were going to spend on Medicare. Guess what. There is no money left in fiscal year 2004 for Medicare—any kind of spending in this bill.

So if we would have done anything in this year to spend money on Medicare, we would have exceeded the budget caps. So we have this thing tantamount to a gimmick, if you will, where we have exceeded the budget because of other spending having nothing to do with Medicare, and this is here and this is the only way to obstruct the Medicare bill. We had 70 votes, and it would have been Senator SHELBY here and his plane was able to get off the ground. But we had 70 votes not to block it on a procedural vote, to give the people of this country, through the Senate, an opportunity for an up-or-down vote, whether this is worthy. Seventy Members voted today that we were not going to use a procedural filibuster.

What is the next step? The next step is to use another procedural gimmick. In this case, as the Senator from New Mexico has pointed out, it truly is a gimmick because we are within what was contemplated when we passed the budget earlier this year for Medicare next year, but we have a technical problem. There is other spending that has nothing to do with Medicare. I say to my colleagues who are going to be casting their votes momentarily on this issue: If you want to block this vote procedurally, you had your chance. It was a vote on cloture. We are now postcloture. To put up another procedural gimmick—and this is truly a gimmick—being offered by someone who for 57 out of the last 60 waivers of the Budget Act voted to waive the Budget Act, who has 3 times voted no to not, they were not here to vote as a way to obstruct the Medicare bill at the 11th hour and the 59th minute, when they had voted for every single waiver that was available to be voted on, to use this to try to block this bill. I think it does not comport with the original vote which was not to filibuster this bill.

This is tantamount to another filibuster only it doesn't have the word attached to it. If you vote you can go home and say: We didn't filibuster this bill; I voted to allow this bill to be considered. But, you know, there was this budget problem. Now by the way, I have never seen a budget problem that I didn't have a problem with waiving. I have waived it 57 times or 60 times this year on things a heck of a lot less important than prescription drugs for Medicare, and we routinely did it, but the other side of the aisle, when it comes to $3 billion or $4 billion or $5 billion out of a $400 billion bill in the first year, because of a problem having nothing to do with Medicare, then I am going to find a problem, then I am going to be concerned about the budget when I waively the Budget Act 60 times prior to that.

That dog doesn't hunt. That is just a procedural obstruction. I hope my colleagues who voted for the cloture motion will vote consistently. This is an other vote on cloture. That is what this is. This is a procedural hurdle that has no substance or basis to it.

When the people who offer this procedural motion, concerned about the impact on the budget, and in all of their speeches talk about how much more money we should be spending, one wonders how sincere the budget concerns really are. Every person who has gotten up to support this budget point of order has said this bill fails short because of the way they are making a point of order on the budget which says we are spending too much.

This is the kind of shenanigans that goes on in the Senate, that goes on in Washington, D.C. Frankly, just doesn't understand. You are either for this bill or against this bill. If you want to block this bill, vote against cloture, but don't put up these gimmicks, rules that are in place to stop something from happening, because you want to accomplish the opposite effect of the rule. The rule was put in place to save money. They are using the rule so they can spend money.

It shouldn't be any surprise that on another issue relating to this, we have a situation where many on the other side of the aisle have been critical of this noninterference issue. That is the provision that says the Federal Government is not going to negotiate a price for prescription drugs for everybody on Medicare. Why do we have this in place? Let me give you the policy. We have this in place from a policy point of view because roughly 50 percent of the drugs in this country are going to be bought through Medicare—to have that kind of market power where the Federal Government will basically go in and dictate a price fix, price set to every pharmaceutical—most pharmaceutical, not every—most pharmaceutical products in this country.

Most Members of Congress are not for a command-and-control, one-size-fits-all drug price policy in America. Some are, but it comes like to adopt the Canadian-style system, and some would like to adopt the German-style system, but we have made a decision that we believe it is better for the private sector insurance company, with big market share because there will not be very many of these plans—there will be big market share—to negotiate with the private sector drug companies for the best price they can get. And the better negotiators they are, the better premiums they can offer to their beneficiaries which means more enrollees. It is certainly their incentive to negotiate tough bargains with the pharmaceutical companies. They have the market power and the ability to negotiate.

It is different than giving the Government the ability to negotiate—I shouldn't say negotiate. I should say dictate—the price they will pay for pharmaceuticals. We think the private sector should work, not the Government dictating prices. They compare it to the Veterans Administration. Yes, the Veterans Administration has such a leader, and now like learning is the law. It mandates a 24-percent reduction. Does that have any rhyme or reason to what the drug costs should be? No, it is just a flat 24 percent across the board. If you don't take that reimbursement, then you can no longer be in Medicaid or any other Federal program. It is a heavy hammer. It is a very small part of the pharmaceutical industry.

I yield myself 3 additional minutes. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, that is the policy. What is the history of this provision? It is very interesting. The proposal, which was sponsored by Senator DASCHLE today, was introduced by Senator DASCHLE. This came from the Democrats' bill in the year 2000. This language, almost verbatim, was introduced by the Democratic leader, and now it is they are lining up saluting this as the worst thing they have ever seen. Yet it is their proposal, not just Senator DASCHLE'S. It was also in Congressman STARK'S bill in 2000, and again, in the Wyden proposal, it was the exact language. It was in the tripartisan plan of last year. Actually, a version of this language appeared in the Senate bill that received 76 votes on the floor of the Senate.

I just wonder whether the degree of outrage is somehow inversely proportional to the actual complicity of the act. We see this huge amount of outrage, and yet we see complicity. In fact, their last line in this bill: Why did they put it in? They put it in because they did not want to be charged with having Government price fixing. They didn't want to be accused in their proposal that it was going to cost. It is command-and-control Government price fixing of pharmaceutical products.

What did they do? They said: We believe in competition. They wanted to believe in competition. They wanted to say that they have a competitive model. They put in a competitive model. Let the private sector negotiate their incentives for the insurers to get lower costs out of the pharmaceuticals, and there are incentives on the pharmaceuticals point to give volume discounts.

Let that mechanism work. Don’t have the head of CMS, the Medicare Director in Washington, DC, dictate prices for everybody.

Let us not set those prices in the Senate. Let us let the marketplace work to squeeze cost and get efficiency out of the system. It is their idea. So, again, I suggest on two issues that have to do with pharmaceuticals, a lot of the right hates this bill. Usually, things that come straight down the middle are usually where most Americans are and where most Americans would like us to go. That is what this bill does. I hope we have very strong support for it as a result.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I want to spend a minute or two encouraging my colleagues to sustain this point of order. I want to use some of the comments I heard about gimmickry because I am concerned about the budget issues, and this is absolutely relevant. It was gimmickry to say we are spending $400 billion on a prescription drug benefit for seniors and then hide it in HSAs, $12 billion support for the insurance industry, lots of support, some of which I actually might even have agreed to with regard to encouraging corporations to maintain their insurance policies so Medicare does not have to pick it up, all of that is true. But we have a major league problem. There is no cost containment in this program of any serious effect.

I come from a State where there are a lot of pharmaceutical industries and we were talking about importing price controls from Canada. We had that debate around here. I am not for that. I think we need to deal with a market structure that is fair and respectful of the buyers actually competing for the price.

Last time I checked, the Federal Government, when it buys a tank, actually goes out and negotiates the price. When it is buying airplanes, we talk about negotiating the price. I think it is absolutely essential that if Medicare is the provider of the resources, the taxpayer, that they be able to negotiate their price.

One thing with this bill—which I will remind people is 1,200 pages long and not many of us have read it—is that it has a lot of unintended consequences. It has one very real intended consequence which is to dampen competition which might lower prices. We are increasing the demand curve and we are keeping the supply curve the same, and that raises prices. That is exactly what happens. That is economics 101.

By the way, the VA is a perfect example of it, and I thank Senator GRAHAM for pointing this out. When the VA is negotiating prices, it is not 24 percent across the board. It is on individual drugs. VA says about half of what would be paid if they went to a pharmacy.

This is not my chart but it is actually doggone good. I take this Lopressor for high blood pressure. No wonder I have high blood pressure being in the Senate. It costs 1 cent per pill. At the drugstore it is 87 cents.

Here is another one. This is Zantac. I guess if one has an ulcer—some people get ulcers when they are up around here—this drug costs $1.83 at the drugstore. That is price control, price containment at the VA, while the drugstore is charging what the market will bear. That is what our seniors are doing. That is going to back into the pocket of the seniors costs with regard to this bill, about which a lot of conservatives are concerned. I am concerned about it.

We say this is $400 billion, it is out of tilt with the budget resolution in the first year. And I think we know whether this bill is going to produce $400 billion worth of expenditures over the next 10 years, I think we are kidding ourselves.

Nobody knows what is inside this bill on each individual page. There is going to be a lot of difference by the time we get there. The one thing we do know when we go from 40 million seniors to 70 million seniors is this thing is going to explode in the second 10 years. The estimate is it will cost $1.3 trillion to $2 trillion.

Frankly, it is going to increase the unfunded mandate for Social Security and from about $18 trillion to $25 trillion. I cannot even think of those numbers, but that is a huge problem if we are not willing to deal with the reality of what we have to do.

That is why it is important on the budget to take into consideration whether VA and the Medicare system are the ones that can negotiate these prices because they can hold down those costs. If we do not want to deal with that, then we are going to have those kinds of long-term results which are going to end up undermining the ability of the American people to continue to have the kind of support they expect from Medicare and other things.

I said last night, there is a lot of good in this bill. Unfortunately, at least in New Jersey, 300,000 folks who do not have insurance, drug coverage right now, going to get it, but $50,000 are going to be impacted negatively. It is real. We have done the analysis. We know it.

What is important is we are putting ourselves on a track where we will not be able to afford Medicare A, B, prescription drugs, or any of these things. I think we are putting ourselves on a track because we have been unwilling to deal with cost containment in a serious way. The work to squeeze cost and get efficiency out of the system. People negotiate for the Federal Government in every other purchase they do. They ought to be doing that here. It would make a big difference on cost containment.

I urge my colleagues to sustain the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield whatever time he might consume, up to 5 minutes, to the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I wish to speak for about 5 minutes about encouraging my colleagues to sustain the budget point of order, which is made to order, they have almost all the time, in my opinion, is not. By its very fact, as my earlier statement. I noticed the Democrat leader, Senator DASCHLE, alluded to similar points of order being raised in July of 2002. That was raised and supported for a couple of reasons. One, the budget resolutions in 2002, that was passed by the resolution that passed in 2001 for fiscal year 2002, said there is up to $300 billion in a bill that was reported out of Finance Committee that would strengthen and enhance Medicare.

In 2002, the Democrats were running the place. They did not report a Medicare bill out of the Finance Committee. They bypassed the Finance Committee. I was a member of that committee. I was incensed that we would just ignore the committee. Therefore, it violated the budget. One, I know it was not reported by committee. Also, it was just, here is the bill. I believe the bill was quite a lot larger than $300 billion. I am not sure if it was $1 trillion or $600 billion. It was a lot more than $300 billion.

So there was a very legitimate reason. One, it was not reported out of committee. It did not have work done on it by the committee. It did not meet the overall structure or the framework. This bill that we have before us is within the $400 billion as reported by CBO. It did go through committee, both the Finance Committee and the Ways and Means Committee. It has been scored by CBO. At that time, I believe the bill we passed on the floor of the Senate had not even been scored, or at least the details had not been scored, by CBO.

There was a legitimate reason to make a budget point of order. This, in my opinion, is not. By the fact, as evidenced by most of the people who are promoting this budget point of order, they have almost all the time, 90-some percent of the time, opposed budget points of order when they have been 90-some percent of the time, opposed budget points of order when they have been the ones in the majority in the past.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?
The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Under the unanimous consent, I believe I have been allocated 5 minutes. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask for 4 and ask if the Chair will notify me when I have 1 minute left.

A few minutes ago, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Tommy Thompson, was on the floor. It is his right to visit with us. It is an opportune moment for him to come as the Senator from Pennsylvania reminds us that we are not going into socialism, socialized medicine, command and control; we are not going to have the Government bargaining on the prices of medicine.

Yet I guess the Senator from Pennsylvania has forgotten that during the anthrax crisis when Cipro, which was going to be used as an antidote, was $467 a pill, Secretary Thompson negotiated for America to reduce the price of that drug in the midst of the crisis to 75 cents. He was quoted as saying: Everyone said I wouldn't be able to reduce the price of Cipro. I'm a tough negotiator.

Sounds a lot like command and control for me.

For Americans, they are taking a look at this bill and saying: Who is going to pay for us? This 1,100 page bill prohibits reimportation of drugs from Canada. So our friends, the seniors, the patients, the families and others who are looking there for relief, they will not be getting it out of this bill. Even worse, as has been noted, in this one page that I take out of 1,100, page 53, lines 18 through 26, we prohibit Medicare from negotiating lower drug prices.

The Senator from Pennsylvania says that is because we believe in the free market. Let the market set the price. I might say to my friend from Pennsylvania, how do you explain the multibillion-dollar subsidies for HMOs included in this bill? How do you explain the $6 billion subsidy for your friends with health savings accounts in this bill? Frankly, you can't, under free market principles.

Let me say, when you take a look at this bill you understand that we are squandering $6 billion for retiree coverage. That is one of the key elements. We create these new health savings accounts into the long and lurid history, but when Mr. Newt Gingrich of Georgia took control of the House, he brought with him one of his best pals, the Golden Rule Insurance Company from Lawrenceville, IL. In fact, the Speaker was so smitten with this company he cut a television ad for them with their medical savings accounts. Frankly, they returned the favor, contributing over $3.6 million to Republican congressional candidates.

It was such a sweet arrangement. They would pay him back, they would get more exposure to Golden Rule, Golden Rule would send millions of dollars to Republican candidates.

Frankly, that meant nothing compared to this bill. This bill gives $6 billion for health savings accounts that have nothing to do with Medicare and nothing to do with prescription drugs for seniors. This is the largest single giveaway we have ever seen in 21 years. It is in this bill.

Now, let me connect the dots. Turns out Golden Rule Insurance Company was recently purchased. Who bought Golden Rule Insurance Company? A group called UnitedHealthcare, down here, whose CEO, Channing Wheeler, was paid $9.5 million, a sweet salary; compared to other HMO execs—not that great.

Now connect the dots. Golden Rule, a friend of the Republican Party, purchased by UnitedHealthcare; UnitedHealthcare is the largest insurance group working with AARP. It all comes together.

AARP is selling this product for UnitedHealthcare, is going to get a billion subsidy in this bill, and now they have discovered this is the best bill in the world.

I suggest to all my colleagues and all those watching this debate, call AARP. Today we have the opportunity to correct what we did not do in 1965 and bring about a reform to this program which is greatly needed. I would just say that is why organizations such as the National Council on Aging, which represents all of these seniors who go to these senior centers throughout our state and congressional districts, as well as the AARP—and Democrats many times cite the AARP when they agreed with them. But now when they do not agree with them they find fault with the organization.

I suggest the Nation's largest organization representing over 35 million seniors has had their health economists and their lawyers carefully study the document that is before us and made a recommendation to those of us in Congress. They said this is something we support because it is indeed, on balance, the bill we should approve and send on to the President for signature. Again, I say it is not a perfect bill.

But, once again, we can't let the perfect be the enemy. We also cannot let the political pundits of both of our parties suggest we cannot vote for this bill because somehow it may give credibility to the other party. I have actually heard that from both sides of the aisle. I think that would be a tragic mistake.

The issue today is not which political party wins. The issue today is whether we can craft legislation that allows America's 40 million seniors to come together and tell Congress on balance this bill does that because it combines the best of what government can do with the best of what the private sector can do.

Many on my side of the aisle think the Federal Government should do everything all the time. We can't do that. We can't do it very effectively. So I think it is important to note that on the other side of the aisle, many of them think the Federal Government should not do anything and that the private sector should do it.

The truth lies, as most truthful matters lie, somewhere in between. The fact is, we ought to combine the best of The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, how much time remains on either side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority side controls 3 additional minutes, the majority side controls 6½ minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, make no mistake about it, the issue before us—that is, whether a point of order is made—definitely is about whether or not we provide prescription drug benefits to seniors. It is that simple.

If we fail to waive this point of order, this bill is dead, certainly for this year, probably for the next Congress. The very narrow issue before us is whether or not it is "OK" to spend roughly $4 billion more than the Budget Act previously allocated for the year 2004.

It is important to remember that this bill is totally within the Budget Committee’s allocation for the 10-year period of $400 billion. So the narrow question is, is it within the allocation for the year 2004?

Now, a couple points here. In 2004, dollars will be spent based upon various pieces of legislation. There is already legislation passed which allocates dollars for 2004. So the conference report itself does not break the 2004 cap, but, rather, it is the accumulation of the dollars in this bill plus previous bills which total is exceeding the cap allowable for 2004 under the Budget Act by about $4 billion.

So the real question we are asking ourselves is, Are we going kill this bill—a bill for which the full $400 billion allocation does not violate the Budget Act—are we going to kill this bill on a mere technicality, a technical trap that any spending in 2004 has the effect of bringing this bill down?

Now, it makes no sense to do that because, clearly, we want, in this bill, to spend some money in 2004. What about the doctors in 2004? What about the hospitals in 2004? Are we to tell doctors and hospitals, because of a mere technicality, they do not get reimbursed in 2004? Will we send bills for a year, but then, beginning in 2005, could we pick them up again? I do not think so.

I don’t think we can afford passing up giving seniors a chance to get prescription drug benefits. So I urge Senators, on the technical matter before us, to vote to waive the point of order because it does make much sense to me to let a technicality kill this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s 5 minutes have expired.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume, and probably all of it.

Keeping the point of order means keeping the status quo. So I am asking my friends on the other side of the aisle, what is there about the status quo on Medicare that is good and acceptable? The lack of prescription drugs? The slowness in getting cheaper generic drugs out into the market? Arbitrary caps on physical therapists? Insufficient funding for rural hospitals and longwaiting lines for seeing the doctors, if Medicare people can get in to see a doctor in rural America?

I ask my colleagues, is this status quo acceptable? Apparently it is, at least to the Senators who are refusing to waive the point of order. mine. And most of all, seniors' lack of access to prescription drugs for all these years is what I find to be most unacceptable about the reality of the status quo.

For those of you happy with the status quo, try telling that to your doctors, your hospitals, and, most of all, to your seniors. You try telling these people that a technical point of order is more important than changing Medicare's status quo. I will not try, and I hope my colleagues will not try either.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The minority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, this is our last chance to do something to control the exploding costs that are absolutely guaranteed to occur for seniors and for the Government unless we do something else. This is the last chance.

There are those who have just said this will kill the bill. Just to make sure everybody understands, this has nothing to do with killing the bill. What happens under Senate rules is that we will go back to S. 1 as an amendment to H.R. 1. That is the pending business. That was voted on, by the way. So we go back. If we sustain this point of order, to the Senate-passed bill, which passed 76 to 21. We can send it to the House and ask for bipartisan support.

The distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania was saying that one of the concerns I raised was our ability to contain costs. And yes, he is right, we had an early bill that had the provision, this egregious provision in it prohibiting the Government from getting the best deal, just as Secretary Thompson has done with Cipro, just as we do with the Veterans Administration.

What he did not tell our colleagues is that every subsequent bill—the last two bills we have introduced—did not have this provision in it. Why? Because we understood what an incredibly valuable tool it has been for the Veterans Administration.

So, Mr. President, if you want to control costs, if you want to make sure the senior citizens of this country have the ability to get the lowest price, if you are absolutely as concerned, as you say you are, about controlling the costs of this program, then you are going to vote to sustain this point of order.

This is our last chance. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. DASCHLE. I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been requested. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 61, nays 39, as follows:

[ Rolcall Vote No. 458 Leg. ]

by a vote of 93 to 3, was stripped out of the conference report as, evidently, some Members were promised it would be. That should tell the American people everything they need to know about this bill. It is not good enough for anything.

Some Members of Congress are trying to sell this legislation as good for seniors and other Medicare beneficiaries of America, but it is not good enough for them to live under. That is the height of hypocrisy. It is good enough for the senior citizens of this country, it is the best we will vote to provide for them, but, sorry, we will pass on it for ourselves. Why is Congress opting out of this coverage if it is so good? Why is it only half as good as what Members voted to provide themselves and their families and their employees?

First, the program does not begin for 2 years—not until January of 2006. Until then, the senior citizens of America are going to have their opportunity to get another drug discount card. There is a novel idea. There are only how many dozens available already to seniors?

Then one plays special favorites. A senior with an income above $150 per cent of poverty, approximately $13,000 per year of income and approximately $16,000 a year for a couple—they get a drug discount card and nothing more. A single senior with an income just under that amount, by even a couple dollars, or a married couple with an income similar, just a few dollars under that cut off level, gets a drug discount card plus $600. It is all or nothing. Either $600 or nothing.

I am strongly in favor of helping low-income retirees but certainly on a more equitable basis than $600 or nothing. That is all that is available for seniors.

I would think the administration and others who decry the bureaucratic ineptitude and want to dismantle whole structures of Government would say something about the ridiculous delay. Two years from passage to inception, for what? To give insurance companies time to write insurance policies? Or to shortchange seniors for 2 years to get the 10-year costs of the bill down? What is the reason for this ridiculous delay?

Whatever it is, if a program such as this cannot be initiated for 2 years, that is a compelling reason to junk this program and find one better. Seniors of Minnesota of course have waited too long already to get good comprehensive prescription drug coverage. They should not be told they have to wait another 2 years before the program can even begin. That should be reason itself to find a better way.

When it does begin, what does the average senior get? He or she pays an annual premium of about $420 with an annual deductible of $250 and a 25-percent copay for the next $2,000 in expenditures in that 1 year. In other words, $500 of the $2,000 of costs. So if you add those up—$420 premium, the $250 annual deductible, the copay of $500, the
The senior is paying $1,170 of the first $2,250 annual costs for prescription drugs. In other words, just over half.

But the next $2,850 of the costs for that senior citizen in that single year have to be paid entirely by the senior, everything out of their own pocketbook. That means for the first $5,100 of annual expenses for prescription drugs—which is not, unfortunately, beyond the pale for many seniors—the senior citizen pays $4,020. The Senior pays for 80 percent of the first $5,100 of annual prescription expenses. As a result, catastrophic coverage kicks in and the program pays 95 percent of the balance for that year but then the next year it starts all over.

Something is better than nothing, but to delegate $400 billion over 10 years for coverage that seniors have to wait 2 years to begin and then they have to pay $4,000 of the first $5,100—all of that to save a little over $1,080 is something but it is not something sure.

If the bill dies, I still would support it reluctantly because something is better than nothing. Unfortunately, the bill does worse than that. 2.7 million seniors estimated by the Budget Office now covered under private insurance that prior to coverage and will be relegated to this coverage which is far inferior to what they have now. That would include an estimated 40,000 Minnesotans. People who worked all their lives for a private employer and are now covered under that plan would lose it and be shifted to something much worse for them and what they have now.

For over 7 million low-income elderly, the poorest of our poor senior citizens, they will pay more as they get shifted from Medicaid to Medicare. Their copay will increase and their choice of prescriptions will be reduced. That will affect almost 90,000 people in my State of Minnesota.

The result in this bill is not a prescription for higher and higher drug prices for all Americans that all Americans will have to pay. All Americans will have to pay out of their own pockets for their own prescription drugs and they will have to pay out of their own pockets for this program and other Government programs because the way this bill is written, the drug companies profit and everyone else has to pay.

There will be no drug reimportation from Canada permitted unless the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies the safety of all, which is something that the Secretary’s predecessors in the previous two administrations did not do and this Secretary has indicated he will not do either.

It is a totally unrealistic requirement to put on a Secretary to give a blanket certification of the safety of everything that would transpire.

If the Secretary of Transportation had the authority to find out guarantees for all air travel in the United States, we would not have an airline network functioning because no one could be expected to give that kind of guarantee.

But the people who wrote this bill were very clever. They will not prohibit reimportation themselves, even though that is the result they want. No. They pretend the opposite, that it is permitted if—the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies safety. Something they know he will not do.

The irony—or the absurdity really—is that according to Congressman Rahm Emanuel, one of the coauthors of the bill and the former Chairman of the House of Representatives, the United States imports $14 billion worth of foreign-made drugs into the United States every year—$14 billion of prescription drugs that are manufactured in countries such as Ireland and elsewhere that are imported into the United States and distributed to U.S. pharmacies and then sold to American citizens.

Those exact same drugs are manufactured in exactly the same plants, in the same exact same countries, such as Ireland, and have the same brand names distributed to Canadian pharmacists; and the only difference—they are exactly the same; the same product, manufacturer, packaging—the only difference is in Canada the price is one-third what it is in the United States or one-fourth what it costs in the United States or even as little as one-fifth or less than what it costs in the United States.

That is the only difference: the price.

Yet all of my colleagues who are free traders up for more trade liberalization, including the people in the House who want to repeal NAFTA just for prescription drugs, which is one of the areas where the American consumer would benefit most, particularly, enormously, from NAFTA, from free trade, from the ability to go to another country and take advantage of those lower prices.

No. Sorry. Under this legislation, the result will be you Americans must buy your drugs in the United States, and not in Canada. The prices will go up or down two, or three or four times the world market price.

Now, why are the prices so much lower in Canada than they are in this country? It is because the Canadian Government stands up for its citizens and negotiates prices that are lower and will not agree to prices that are exorbitant. And their citizens are the beneficiaries of these prices that are one-third, one-fourth, one-fifth of what they are in the United States—not even close approximations.

People say the Government ought to act more like a business, and they are right. What we are proposing the Government would do is exactly what large corporations which self-insure or HMOs do, which is to purchase volumes of prescription drugs at negotiated discounts of 30 percent, up to 50 percent. It is exactly what my colleague Bob Graham from Florida has pointed out. It is that, in the Veterans Administration—does quite successfully, with fantastic savings for veterans and for the American taxpayers who pay for part of the cost of that program.

But not under this legislation. This legislation would prohibit what they call Government interference in price setting negotiations. Why? Well, once again, the words of the bill belie the intent and the result. It says: “In order to further competition, what deceptively labeled as competition in America means that small competitor plans offer nickel-and-dime savings, but prohibit the Government from interfering.”

The critics call it price fixing. Well, there is price fixing now in this country. It is the drug companies that are doing the price fixing. They are given monopolies, called patents, for 15 to 20 years or more. They set the prices, they raise the prices, and we have to pay the prices. But that kind of price fixing is allowed according to some who want to prohibit the Government from doing so.

Does anybody really believe Americans are going to be upset about paying lower prices for prescription drugs? Not likely. They are standing up for me against these big corporate entities that I don’t have the ability to face by myself. I don’t have that purchasing power. I can’t go to a drugstore and negotiate price. Even as a pharmacist I can’t negotiate a different price. My Government is standing up for me the way the Canadian Government is standing up for their citizens. By golly, my Government is doing something right.

But the people who wrote this bill are so anti-Government that they will not even let Government do something right. They will not even let Government do something that would have enormous financial benefit for all the people of this country that would save them billions of dollars of expenditures because I guess it might contradict their ideological absolutism that Government does everything wrong.

Well, it also might cost the drug companies, the largest contributors to federal political campaigns—might cost them, I guess, some of their millions of dollars of profits, coming out of the pockets of people we are supposed to represent.

It is a big victory this bill, for the corporate drug dealers. You have to give them credit. All those lobbyists—what is it? They estimate there are six times the number of lobbyists for the pharmaceutical industry for every Member of this body. Well, it sure paid off this time. They got everything they wanted. They got it in the teeth and they got everything. They got uncensored price increases for years to come, a market group, 39 million seniors who will have to help pay them, who will pay those higher prices, and everyone else paying higher prices, and a captive market, where they are not even able to go someplace else and take advantage of lower prices elsewhere. The drug companies want everything. The drug lobbyists, they are the other winners. This bill is supposed to be about providing the best possible prescription drug coverage for senior citizens. Now we find out all these ambiguities of various aspects of Medicare are tossed in that were not considered by the small group who were in the hearings. And there were no votes on these matters. They were either put in the House bill or stuck in the conference committee behind closed doors where no one else could see what was going on.

The program reform in Congress has become like a drive-by shooting. With no forewarning, somebody picks a target, shoots a bunch of holes in it, and takes off. That is our version of reform. That is what we are doing here with no forethought.

Another example is special education. We have waited 3 years for so-called reform of special education, which is always used as the reason we cannot spend the money that is necessary to fulfill a 27-year old commitment. And then suddenly, last week, lo and behold, there was unanimous consent for 2 hours of debate, evenly divided, on IDEA reform, and, boom, we are done with it. Done, boom, in time to go home and eat turkey.

Unfortunately, we produce enough turkeys right here with this legislation. Unfortunately, this bill we have before us is one of those turkeys. And I say that with no pleasure at all, given the importance of it. But this is a $400 billion turkey that gives first pickings and all the gravy to the corporate drug dealers and the big insurance companies and the big plan providers. Some senior what the leftovers, and the American taxpayers get the neck and higher drug prices for themselves and higher payments through this program and others, subsidizing prices that are just exorbitant and that I would be ashamed to support.

There is a better bill that could be written. There is a better bill that could be passed. There is a better bill that could benefit the people of Minnesota and the people of this country. With a 2-year delay, we could comeback next year and pass that bill and still enact it and get it implemented sooner than this one. That is the course of action we should take.

We should reject this conference report, not for nothing, but for something better because the American people deserve something much better than what is being foisted on them here.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I have a question, Mr. President, about the process. Is the time available under the cloture rule divided between two sides in equal parts?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, there is no provision for equal division of time.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. So that any speeches now are made under cloture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

The Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the Chair.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, for the information of my colleagues, Senator CLINTON and I are going to speak briefly and make a unanimous consent request with which I think he would agree.

Having listened to my colleague from Minnesota, I think many of us come to this historic day on this vote on Medicare with some trepidation but, frankly, with a lot of hope. Everyone knows that Mr. Bush, as they say, has committed this program, does not any good things for our senior citizens. We also know they need a prescription drug benefit. And we also know we are just about to add $400 billion for that purpose. There are reforms in this we hope will work, but reforms which will make us enlightened as to how to best to preserve Medicare in the future. I believe that is the bipartisan motive behind all of this.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 1389

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I sought recognition to talk about our economy and, frankly, the need to extend unemployment benefits. It is a fact that long-term unemployment reached a 20-year high and the job outlook for the future, though improving, still leaves an awful lot of people wanting and unable. This holiday season approaches. For example, in my State of Oregon, we are down from 8 percent now to 7.6 percent. This is simply too high. Despite this economic reality, the Federal unemployment benefits is set to run out next month unless we provide an extension.

We have extended unemployment insurance with bipartisan support in the Senate three times in the last 2 years. I am very proud of that because I think it shows how we can work together to help those who deserve our assistance.

Because we are not coming back in, as I understand it, until January 20, we won't be able to do that if we don't act now. The Senate, we do act now, the House, which is coming back in early December, will be able to similarly act and the benefits will flow.

It is significant, too, that Senator SMITH and I are in the Chamber asking our colleagues to join us because the State of Oregon and New York City have the highest unemployment rates in the entire country. New York City has an unemployment rate of 8.2 percent. We have never recovered from the level of September 31. Oregon has an unemployment rate of 7.6 percent. So both the Senate and I are very concerned about the good people we represent on opposite ends of our country who have been out of work for a long time. We know that unemployment is at the highest level it has been in 20 years. We need to give them some additional time.

This extension would provide another 13-week extension. I urge support of Senator SMITH's proposal. If I am not already listed as an original cosponsor, I ask unanimous consent that I be so.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. CLINTON. I yield back to the Senator from Oregon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1839, to provide additional Federal benefits for the unemployed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I want to make a couple of points. Point one is that we have seen that the economy is recovering. We are at about a 6 percent unemployment rate nationwide. Back in 1993, the Democrats controlled the House of Representatives, they controlled the Senate and they controlled the Weather Act, which was to create circumstances in which it was better to get a job than it was to be on welfare—whereas we knew something about that. We knew that a lot of people out there and get a job. That would be great if there were jobs to be gotten.

Given the combination of the economic and budget policies of this administration, I don’t think we are going to have those jobs available. I predict to you that even if we have an unemployment rate of 5 percent, or 6 percent, or 6.1 percent, we are not going to have the jobs coming back because this administration has presided over the largest job loss in American history since Herbert Hoover. If I were on the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, I would not want to be reminded of that, either. I would not want there to be an up or down vote on whether or not to extend unemployment insurance because, if do you that, you admit the obvious: You know we are not creating jobs and we have to do something to help people.

I regret that the effort my friend, Senator SMITH, and I have joined together in trying to accomplish has been objected to; namely, to bring unemployment benefits, which strikes me as not only the right thing to do but the smart thing to do, because every time we extend unemployment benefits to the people who truly need them, you pump some money into the economy in which we may create a job or two and obviate the need for unemployment benefits in the future.

We will be back, as we were last year. We are not going away, obviously. This is something about which we care deeply. It is the right thing to do. If I thought we were having the kind of economy in the future that we had starting in 1993, I might have a different bill, but that is not what is going to happen. All the happy talk notwithstanding, that is not going to happen.

Mr. President, I will now move to the Medicare conference report. I have to tell you that the more I learn about this proposal, the less I like it, the less fair I think it is, the less useful for our seniors.

Just recently, because we got this 1,200 page bill 4 days ago, including a weekend, when people were combing through it, our expertise was going to read it. I can guarantee you that if you put two Senators up in the well of the Senate on opposite sides of the bill, or even on the same side of this bill, they would not agree on every provision because there is nobody who fully understands what is in this bill.

But what I just learned is that three important items from the Senate bill were changed in conference, in addition to everything else we know that was changed on all the big things, including the reimportation of drugs, the limitation on premium support, the lack of any kind of support for HSAs, all of those things which changed. Here are...
November 24, 2003
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
S15715

some additional changes which are now coming to light as people comb through the fine print of the bill.

First, we thought seniors would know at the time of their enrollment in these private plans what drugs would be on the list. And this is kind of a fancy term. There are lots of fancy, confusing terms in this bill. My colleague, Senator BOXER from California, has a mind-boggling chart, where she and her good staff have pulled out words that no normal human being understands. Heaven forbid, I don’t think abnormal people understand them. They are made-up words that describe these processes and events, and nobody understands what they really mean.

So we now found out that these formularies—the list of drugs that would be offered by a plan—are not necessarily going to be available to a senior when he or she signs up.

Now, imagine that. Think about my 84-year-old mother, who takes a number of prescription drugs that are very specific and assigned to her by her physician to meet her needs. Her doctor says: ‘You need this, and here’s your prescription. So in 2006 or 2007, when she signs up for one of these plans, she is not going to know whether the plan includes a particular drug that she needs. I find that a big problem, because how do you buy something when you don’t know what it is you are buying?

This is supposed to be a prescription drug plan. Therefore, prescription drugs are the core of it. If you don’t even know which drugs you are supposed to get on your plan, that is not much of a plan. This is another typical example of the old bait and switch—maybe it is better to call it buying a pig in a poke, because seniors don’t really know what they are buying but you have to go out and buy it.

Second, when the Senate sent the bill to conference, the Senate required that the 10 regions determined by the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be larger than a State. Now, that was supposed to assure that we avoid the problem we now have with Medicare+Choice, where HMOs serve some counties but withdraw from or refuse to serve other counties.

I have that problem all over my State. The most intensely organized seniors in my State are seniors who have had a bad experience with HMOs. HMOs have taken away their competition, raised the costs right in the middle of the year. Or at the end of the year, when they found they had no competition, raised the costs right in the middle of the year. Or at the end of the year, when they changed plans to reflect their costs if they were the only game in town, they really increased costs to our seniors.

But the conference report, instead of taking the Senate requirements, eliminates it—eliminates the requirement that the insurers must serve an entire State or a large region.

I also know that as a Senator from New York, I have a special obligation toward the people of Puerto Rico. We have a lot of Puerto Ricans in New York. We are very proud and I am very honored to represent a large Puerto Rican population in New York. But the conference report has less money than the Senate bill for prescription drugs for Puerto Ricans. It always comes as a surprise to some people to learn that Puerto Ricans are American citizens. They are not some alien group over here. They are American citizens. They don’t live in a State, but neither do the people of the District of Columbia, but they are American citizens, too. For some reason, we are not providing adequate funding for the people of Puerto Rico to get the prescription drugs to which American citizens under this bill are entitled.

Those are three hidden provisions in the fine print that we just discovered today. Now we are going to have to vote on this bill today or tomorrow, and we are going to be setting ourselves on a course that will radically change Medicare.

Why should people care? If you are not 65 or older, if you are not my mother’s age, if you are not even close in on Medicare, as I am, why should you care if you are an 18-year-old or one of these young people working in the Senate in their thirties or forties? Why should you care? I would argue you should care because, of course, if you try to keep faith with each other by providing a safety net for seniors, for people who fought the wars, raised their families, built their businesses, and served their communities. We thought ever since 1965, when Medicare was passed, that it was really good for America to make that commitment to our parents and our grandparents. It was the right thing to do. It was the moral thing to do. It was the smart thing to do. Before 1965, the poorest people in America were poor children. We have had a massive transfer of wealth to take care of our parents and grandparents through Social Security and Medicare. I believe we have neglected our children. We have about 22 percent of our children living in poverty. I am not proud of that, but I am proud of what we have done through Social Security and Medicare. If we are starting to unravel that now, that says something about who we are as a people. It says change is a part of American leadership compared to previous generations.

Why else should you care if you are not a Medicare beneficiary? Maybe you are the son, the daughter, or a grandchild of a Medicare beneficiary, and maybe you will want to do the right thing if your grandparent or your parent has some kind of medical problem and they cannot afford to pay for it themselves, and you want to step in and say that is the kind of person you are. And I hope that describes the vast majority of our young people in our country today.

That may be tough because maybe you are saving to send your own child to college or maybe you are saving to buy your first house. Then all of a sudden, a medical catastrophe strikes, and what used to be Medicare to provide for your insurance in general. We already have an increasing number of uninsured people, and we are going to have even more of them in the future because we have a totally dysfunctional system for financing health care that certainly does take care of insurance companies and their executives and pharmaceuticals and their executives but doesn’t do a great job for the average person.

This bill will undermine insurance for everyone, not just for Medicare recipients. Why do I say that? Because there are no cost controls to keep the price of a prescription drug down. There is no bargaining power for the Governor to try to hold the pharmaceutical company from preventing them from just blowing the top off whatever the price structure is. There is a really insidious provision that puts a limit on how much money we can spend on overall Medicare if the prices of pharmaceuticals increase. We prevent them from just blowing the top off whatever the price structure is. There is such a thing called cross subsidization. What that means is, if you have insurance and you go to the hospital, you are not just paying for your services that you get, you are, in effect, paying for people who couldn’t pay. For example, maybe the day before you showed up in the emergency room, you came in after a terrible car accident or maybe some kind of acute asthmatic attack or other kind of serious problem, and she didn’t have any insurance. The hospital takes care of her, but then they have to charge you, your employer, and your insurance company more to pay their bills. Anytime you transfer money away from direct care, you are forcing more people to pay more for the same care. Some of them may be unable to pay for it. The cost to the providers of that uncompensated care will, in turn, raise the price which, in turn, has employers dropping people which, in turn, creates more uninsured individuals. It is a closed system. It is a circuit. The circle should not be stressed. It is a circle. This takes the security of Medicare and pulls it right out, causing all sorts of effects throughout the circle.

The reason we created Medicare in the first place, was just not having older people who might be more sick and more frail is not a profitable enterprise. There are people who retire and go to some beautiful place and play...
November 24, 2003

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORNYN). The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank my colleague from New York for her eloquent statement and her perception about what is really taking place in front of us. We both have the good fortune to share one of the most interesting areas of this country, the center for finance, industry, and trade, and people, yes, who have to work hard to maintain their living in this high cost area that we share.

One of the problems we see in both of our States is that unemployment is unreasonably high; that people who used to work in manufacturing in the New York City region, in New Jersey, have lost jobs that are not available to be regained. It is a pity, but what has happened is that they were sold out to cheaper prices. We are looking for things cheaper while many of us revel in the fact we can live by such luxurious standards.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank my colleague from New York for her eloquent statement and her perception about what is really taking place in front of us. We both have the good fortune to share one of the most interesting areas of this country, the center for finance, industry, and trade, and people, yes, who have to work hard to maintain their living in this high cost area that we share.

One of the problems we see in both of our States is that unemployment is unreasonably high; that people who used to work in manufacturing in the New York City region, in New Jersey, have lost jobs that are not available to be regained. It is a pity, but what has happened is that they were sold out to cheaper prices. We are looking for things cheaper while many of us revel in the fact we can live by such luxurious standards.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank my colleague from New York for her eloquent statement and her perception about what is really taking place in front of us. We both have the good fortune to share one of the most interesting areas of this country, the center for finance, industry, and trade, and people, yes, who have to work hard to maintain their living in this high cost area that we share.

One of the problems we see in both of our States is that unemployment is unreasonably high; that people who used to work in manufacturing in the New York City region, in New Jersey, have lost jobs that are not available to be regained. It is a pity, but what has happened is that they were sold out to cheaper prices. We are looking for things cheaper while many of us revel in the fact we can live by such luxurious standards.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank my colleague from New York for her eloquent statement and her perception about what is really taking place in front of us. We both have the good fortune to share one of the most interesting areas of this country, the center for finance, industry, and trade, and people, yes, who have to work hard to maintain their living in this high cost area that we share.

One of the problems we see in both of our States is that unemployment is unreasonably high; that people who used to work in manufacturing in the New York City region, in New Jersey, have lost jobs that are not available to be regained. It is a pity, but what has happened is that they were sold out to cheaper prices. We are looking for things cheaper while many of us revel in the fact we can live by such luxurious standards.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank my colleague from New York for her eloquent statement and her perception about what is really taking place in front of us. We both have the good fortune to share one of the most interesting areas of this country, the center for finance, industry, and trade, and people, yes, who have to work hard to maintain their living in this high cost area that we share.

One of the problems we see in both of our States is that unemployment is unreasonably high; that people who used to work in manufacturing in the New York City region, in New Jersey, have lost jobs that are not available to be regained. It is a pity, but what has happened is that they were sold out to cheaper prices. We are looking for things cheaper while many of us revel in the fact we can live by such luxurious standards.
to make this a stronghold of industry and business and technology and education. That is what these people did who are now concerned about how they continue their life.

Oh, of course, a lot of them can get jobs at McDonald’s or at schoolings, at $5.50 an hour, $206 a week—have a good time, go to a restaurant and have dinner. Not on your life.

That is what should have been thought about as we debated this issue. There was concern, I would agree, I saw them, as they pirated votes, giving lots of money—$11 billion, $12 billion to a special interest here, special interest there, here a special interest, there a special interest. It reminds me of a nursery rhyme. But that was no game that was being played. They held open the vote in the House of Representatives way beyond the rules. They did anything they could to bypass the process as it was normally.

I wish to show those who can see what I am holding, if I have the strength to hold them—I do. Those who witness this stack, who see it, this pile of paper, may say: What is the Senator talking about? This describes what was in this Medicare proposal in which the Democrats were not invited to participate. That is against the rules. The participation was limited. This was a stealth affair: Sneak it out, get it out there. Why? Because they don’t want people to know what is in here.

Do you know what else? Here is a little smaller part of this whole package. This says: “I join Explanatory Statement.” This tells the audience who might read this what is really in this stack here. It is all mysterious. It is all arcane—can’t really understand what is happening.

Why is this debate so acerbic? Why is it that those of us, along with the senior citizens of this country, look as if we are losing this debate? It looks as if we are losing because we lose control of this issue. It is true, that we will have suffered a day in infamy, to steal an expression, because what happens here is we are going to assess poor people more costs.

I come from the corporate sector. I was fortunate to be able to create one of America’s great companies with two other young fellows who lived in the same area as I did. Both of them, like me, had fathers who worked in the silk mills. I had a trade in the city in which we lived. They had no money. Their parents had no education. But it gave them the incentive to create something for themselves.

So we created a company. The company is called ADP. A lot of people know it. It is an international company with 40,000 employees. We started with nothing.

One of the things I learned as the CEO and chairman of that company, before I got to the Senate, was that the most important asset my company had was not its customers. The most important asset we had was its employees, because if the employees did their job, the customers were there for us. We could render a service that was an invaluable beginning to outsourcing, to giving specialists opportunities to do jobs that they could best do. But one of the things we had to do was to make sure the employees were considered in everything we did. We have health insurance, including an early start with daycare, to make certain our employees were happy and thus productive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey, Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I could interrupt the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, I have a unanimous consent I would like to propound.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I am happy to yield, with the proviso that I regain the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, pursuant to the rule, Senator DASCHLE has designated me the manager in opposition. Senator Akaka is on the floor. Pursuant to the rules, they have asked that I be given their 1 hour post cloture. They are both on the floor. Is that sufficient?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is on the floor. Senator Levin is on the floor. Senator Akaka is on the floor. Pursuant to the rules, is the will of the Senators?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I do ask unanimous consent that the hour which I might be entitled to under the post cloture rules be yielded to Senator Reid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I yield my time to Senator Reid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey, Mr. REID. Mr. President, through the Chair to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, thank you very much for allowing me to proceed.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I assume the time has been credited to me for my 1 hour, whatever time remains, is still available.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the Chair.

What I got today was a request from one of America’s largest companies. I will not identify them because they are not unique. But they wanted us to pass this bill. They don’t make pharmaceuticals; they don’t do anything in the health care field; they are not an HMO. They are a manufacturing company, a gigantic company by any standards. They are hoping we are going to pass this bill.

The reason they are hoping we would pass it is because then those retirees who are dependent on their health care continuation could be kicked off the system. Then, because of what we are saying in this bill—this hocus-pocus language—this is another form of taking their money to provide premium support for HMOs—go there and you will be able to get it cheaper, and this giant company, this unnamed giant company will be able to say: Whew, we are finally rid of those retirees who we promised we would give this care to all those years they worked for us. But now we don’t have to keep that promise—no. All we have to do is say goodbye, thank you, we are eliminating coverage.

It means that about 90,000 people are likely to lose their company-provided health care.

Coming from a State as I do—a State often called “the Medicine Chest”; it is encouraged to negotiate prices. In other countries, Acoplex is 40 percent less than here in the United States. In England, it is 31 percent less than here in the United States. And just to the north of us, our friendly neighbor, Canada, the price is 37 percent less.

Now, wonder, senior citizens getting on buses and making the trip to Canada to get their medication. If you look at the things that we talk about, and see what happens when prices are not negotiated, the prices keep rising. From 2001 to 2002, drug prices rose 17 percent. The only way to lower drug prices is to give Medicare bargaining power—just the opposite of what this bill does. This bill says they want to prohibit giving what is normally called volume discounts. Instead of taking this step to lower prices, this bill explicitly forbids it.

The company I was talking about with a health plan has over 1 million employees. They want us to pass this bill, but they say to their retired employees that they will be off their health care system.

We know from experience that allowing agencies to use bargaining power brings down prices. A good example of this is the health care system run by the Veterans’ Administration. The VA is encouraged to negotiate prices. In this bill, as it presently exists, they forbid Medicare to negotiate prices. In fact, to follow the caution they say to their retired employees that they will be off their health care system.

We know from experience that allowing agencies to use bargaining power brings down prices. A good example of this is the health care system run by the Veterans’ Administration. The VA is encouraged to negotiate prices. In this bill, as it presently exists, they forbid Medicare to negotiate prices. If you add to this that our friend and colleague, Senator Bob Graham, made earlier today. This chart really tells the story. The chart compares VA-negotiated prices for medication with what it costs to buy from a local pharmacy.

By way of example, Acoplex, a stomach acid product, in the drugstore it is $4.37. At the VA it is 22 cents.

Let us take a product such as Zocor, to guard against high cholesterol in the heart. Zocor is a drug that was manufactured at our great company, Merck. If you want to buy it in the drugstore, you have to pay $3.77 per tablet, and if you are a member of the VA, their price is 66 cents. The list goes on.
At the drugstore for aspirin at 325 milligrams, the cost is 20 cents. If you buy it in the VA, it costs a penny.

Plavix to guard against heart attack and strokes, $3.63 per tablet; $2.01 if you go to the VA.

The list goes on with even better known products. The price comparison is ugly at best when you consider what happens with people on Medicare.

We got one batch that was 75 to 100 percent. We are going to ask: When is the bill not yet in place. The Republicans will not talk about this bill. The Democrats created Medicare. We protected it for decades. The Republicans never really liked it. They resisted the creation of Medicare and have opposed it ever since.

It wasn’t too long ago that a very well known leader of the House, Newt Gingrich, expressed his desire to see “Medicare wither on the vine.” That is what he wanted to see happen. He represented a view that was generally accepted.

We may see it wither but not without a strong fight on our hands, even if we have lost step 1 here. The senior citizen population in this country has to raise the alarm to all citizens to those who are in this building and those who are in the House of Representatives. Tell them: We don’t like that bill. It is going to cost us more. You are not helping us, you are hurting us. We worked with certain promises in place, and the promise included a proposition that said as you get older and as we see things develop, we are going to help you get those things to keep your health going.

The bill before us today is the first major step toward disintegration of Medicare as we know it.

In reality, this bill is not as much a benefit for seniors as it is a big benefit for HMOs, the private health care organizations, and other private-sector special interests who want to tear the Medicare Program to pieces. Get them in corporate hands so we can charge more, make more. I wonder whether we could limit the incomes of some of the companies in Medicare, if they are in the interest of public service? We regulate lots of industry.

So what is it specifically the President is afraid seniors will find out before 2006? Is the President afraid the seniors will realize they will pay at least $810 before they break even and get any benefit from this plan? For many seniors, that is more money than they currently spend on prescription drugs. Up to 30 percent of the beneficiaries are going to enroll in the plan than they would receive in actual benefits. Is the White House worried seniors will learn there is a huge gap in coverage? Under this plan, a senior will pay a premium estimated at $25 a month, a $25 deductible, 25 percent will cover the payments until reaching $2,250 in drug expenses.

What happens then? Seniors then get no coverage. I have been heard correctly: Zero coverage. At that point, how will seniors pay their premiums, but they will also pay 100 percent of their drug costs. That is a double whammy, as we say in New Jersey. Only until they have reached a catastrophic limit of $5,100 in drug costs does any benefit restart. By that time, seniors will have incurred $3,600 in out-of-pocket spending. This is the so-called hole in the donut. It does not sound like a good deal to me.

In November, now, when this bill does say that premiums will be only $35. It could be significantly higher. The $35 is a current estimate. We know how good this administration has been at making estimates. Is the President afraid that seniors will figure all this out? You bet. Seniors deserve a much better program than that which the Senate is considering right now. They certainly deserve it before 2006.

I will spend a few minutes more talking about the overall impact of this bill on seniors in the State I represent, New Jersey. The most important reason I am voting against this bill is I am convinced more seniors in my State will be hurt by this legislation than helped. There are approximately 11 million Americans who currently get their prescription drugs through their employers. There is a disincentive to employers to continue offering coverage to retirees, it is estimated that over 90,000 seniors in New Jersey will lose their existing, more generous retiree drug coverage from their former employers.

This bill is also going to make poor seniors in my State worse off. In New Jersey, Medicaid covers drug costs for seniors with incomes of less than $9,000 a year for an individual or $12,000 a year for a couple. In New Jersey, low-income seniors currently on Medicaid have access to whatever drugs they need and they do not have a copay for their prescription. Under this bill, however, they are now going to pay $1 per prescription for generic drugs and $3 per prescription for brand name drugs.

Low-income seniors tend to be in the worst health and have higher annual drug spending. A senior with $8,000 annual income does not have discretionary income to shell out $15 or $20 or $25 for the prescriptions he or she may need.

I will long remember the battles we have had in the Senate to try to raise the minimum wage. It is the old rhyme that says: Try, try again. We tried, we tried, and we tried, but we could not raise it. So there are people out there who are working for $5.15 an hour, $206 a week. Having to pay these extra burdens, their prescription costs is going to be a torturous outcome for them. The low-income Americans can be forced to choose between providing medication or buying food, providing medication or keeping the heat on in the winter.

This bill represents an enormous opportunity squandered. We had a real chance to do something right. We had $4 billion to improve the lives of 34 million seniors, 14 million of whom do not have prescription drug coverage right now. Frankly, we missed the opportunity. We ought to scrap this plan and go back to the drawing board to give seniors a real prescription drug... benefit in the Medicare Program. Let's not try to move seniors into HMOs. Let's not leave that enormous gap in coverage. We should give seniors a plan that starts now, not in 2006.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Murkowski). The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, let me first of all commend my colleague from New Jersey for a very fine statement on the pending matter, the Medicare bill. I intend to take some time to speak on the same matter and then I plan to yield my remaining time to the Democratic leader for his purposes.

This is the third time I have spoken on this matter since last Friday. We are now in a situation, I am sure people are aware, where we have had a cloture motion which was approved earlier today. We then considered a point of order which was not sustained, and as a result our effort to try to use a procedural move short of final passage have been, I gather, exhausted. So we are down now to the question of whether or not we ought to vote for this bill at this juncture or whether or not people will continue to the conclusion there. I am sure sufficient time to deal with the pending matter that we ought to take some additional time to review it before it becomes the law of the land.

Before I get into some discussion of the soundness of the bill—will it last a minute or so and talk about the process of law. Putting aside the matter before the Senate, which has obviously been contentious, I am very worried about how we are doing our work in this institution—not just this body but the legislative branch in general.

I will have served, at the end of this term, some 30 years in the Congress, 6 years in the other body and 24 years in the Senate. I have enjoyed serving in this fine institution and watched it carefully over the years. In that time, I have noticed that there are ebbs and flows in how the institution functions and operates. There have been periods affectionately referred to as the golden age of the Senate and other times when they have been less than golden. I will not use language to describe the less than golden periods of the Senate.

I am very worried about how we are proceeding at this time with the underlying matter, and I am particularly concerned in these institutions that we not only just be concerned about what we accomplish but how we go about working toward these accomplishments.

The Founding Fathers of this country were very concerned about that. If they were looking for efficiencies of systems, if they were looking for a process that would guarantee quick results overnight, this is certainly the last system they would have constructed. In this institution, the Senate, the rights of a minority are paramount. We have always said in the other body, the House Chamber, the rights of the majority should prevail. And the Founders, in their wisdom then, in the creation of the Senate, emphasized the rights of a minority. In so doing, they wanted to guarantee that matters would be thoughtfully deliberated.

I am very worried, over these last number of months, including the bill presently before the Senate, that we are not devoting the time necessary for deliberate consideration of matters before this body. In fact, I was stunned to just the other day that files were not named on the Medicare bi—bill before us—and for those who are not students of this institution or follow the Congress on a regular basis, when the Senate passes a bill, and the House passes a bill, invariably, with some exceptions, there are differences.

So this body, the Senate, will appoint conferees, representatives of this body—usually from the committees of jurisdiction over the legislation—to meet with conferees of the other body, usually coming from their committees of jurisdiction. And those two smaller groups then meet to resolve the differences between the two bills.

Over the years, of course, many conferences have been held, many have been contentious, particularly those involving difficult matters, but it is the nature of the institution, learned over our 220-year experience that it is in the tension of debate that some of the ideas exchange, where there is a full expression of the views of the American public in those meetings, when people of different persuasions and ideologies come together and work to resolve their differences.

What I find stunning is that it has become popular, in recent days, to have conferees named and then have conferees excluded from meeting in these conference committees. That is exactly what happened here with the measure presently before us. Whether you are a Republican, liberal, conserv—conservative, or moderate, you ought to be deeply concerned if this becomes the precedent, the operating standard procedure, that when bills are passed and conferees are named, then people are excluded from meeting to try to resolve their differences.

I can only suspect, Mr. President, that most Americans are not aware that this 675-page bill, the Medicare reform bill, was crafted by only Republican Members of the House of Representatives. There was not a single Democratic Member of the House of Representatives from the Ways and Means Committee included in the room to write this bill—not one—despite the fact that the House is controlled by Republicans by only a small majority. Yet not one member of the minority party of the House of Representatives was brought into the room to sit down when the conferees met to resolve their differences on this bill. And out of this body, only two conferees from the minority side were included, despite the fact that only one Member separates us. Senator DASCHLE and Senator ROCKEFELLER, duly appointed as conferees, were excluded from meeting. In fact, Senator DASCHLE, the Democratic Leader of the Senate, was excluded from the conference on this important measure. To say to the Democratic leader, the minority leader of the Senate, to Senator ROCKEFELLER, two senior members of the Senate Finance Committee: You are not allowed to come into the room to help draft a piece of legislation dealing with 41 million Americans, Medicare beneficiaries, to frame a prescription drug benefit. I am stunned, Mr. President, that the 675-page bill, on as an important a matter as the healthcare of nearly 41 million elderly Americans, that not a single Democratic Member of the House, and only two members of the Senate Finance Committee to work to resolve differences on matters as important as this.

Then, in the House of Representatives on Friday evening and well into Saturday morning, when the vote was being cast on the final passage of this bill, we witnessed a historic moment as the House held open for almost three hours, an unprecedented occurrence in the body's history—a vote that was supposed to take 15 minutes to pass this bill. The Presiding Officer said: There will now be 15 minutes to record your votes by electronic device. Having served in the House of Representatives when electronic balloting came into place, I heard that message over and over again: Members will have 15 minutes in which time they can record their ballots by electronic device. And almost 3 hours later, that 15 minutes elapsed, as every possible bit of arm twisting and in light of the final outcome, the gavel came down within a nanosecond, and the traditional opportunity given to Members to change their votes before a final vote is recorded was denied them.

I am stunned as I watch a process and a phenomenon so deplorable that it has become to this. And I say to my friends on the other side: Beware. The wheel does turn. The day will come when we will be in the majority. And in the House that will happen as well. Changes in leadership have occurred, and the results are profound. In light of our history and they will continue to occur. What sort of precedent are we setting if this is how we conduct our business?
Then, last Thursday, late in the afternoon, those of us who were excluded from having Members who represent our views work on this conference report, were delivered this 675-page document.

Surely, to say, there is not a Member here who has read this in its entirety, nor could they possibly understand it even if they tried to, since last Thursday. Yet we have just voted on several procedural motions here to say that within a matter of hours, we are now debating this history one of legislation without fully, in my view, understanding the implications of what is actually contained in the bill.

Mr. President, a bill of 675 pages, delivered just last Thursday, and here it is, Monday at 6 p.m., and we find ourselves only a few hours away from deciding the fate of 41 million Medicare beneficiaries and coming generations of them as to whether or not they will have the incredible safety net the Medicare Program has provided for 38 years.

These process questions cannot go unnoticed, Mr. President. And while we talk about the implications of what we are talking in this bill, I am deeply troubled that the shutting out entirely of the House of Representatives in the wee hours of the morning in one Chamber, and rushed through the other in a matter of hours of debate and discussion—more a litany of speeches than any real debate.

Beware,eware, America. Beware, America, of what happens when this process breaks down, as it has here with this bill.

Beware, America, when you have a bill of this magnitude and size passed in the wee hours of morning in one Chamber, and rushed through the other in a matter of hours of debate and discussion—more a litany of speeches than any real debate.

Beware, when almost one-half of the entire Congress is excluded from sitting and working on a product as important as this. There is something wrong when that happens, Mr. President.

I don't care what your politics are; I do not care who you are; I do care, however, about you, the American, when you find out other voices are denied being heard. It is the critical quotient, the critical element of what constitutes this democracy: the importance of debate and discussion, the tension the debate brings, and the ultimate improved product that occurs when that happens in America.

When other voices are not heard, when other ideas are not brought to the table, then we all suffer. That is what has happened in the construct, if you will, of this legislative package.

Let me take a few minutes, if I may, and try to make a point with my colleagues as to what I believe is included in this bill. I have talked about it to some degree already, and I know, in a sense, why we are being called on to do this as rapidly as we are. Because based on the time I have spent going over this bill, and looking at it, and others who are more knowledgeable than I am about health care issues, who have dedicated almost their entire careers to examining these issues, I would say one of the reasons that is the speed of the pace as it is, is there is a lot in this bill that the more you know about it, the less you would like it, and the more opposition would grow to its passage. The more people are aware of what is included in these bills, the greater concern they ought to have.

There are those who have never liked the Medicare program, who fought against its very creation 38 years ago, and since they have been seeking an opportunity to undo it.

Congratualtions to them. Congratulations to them because I think, in effect, they have achieved that result with what I think is going to happen in a few hours; that is, the adoption in the Senate of this particular package, the approval already in the House and the likelihood, of course, that the President is going to sign this into law.

Then I would tell America, as you get to know this bill, you will come to have greater and greater concerns about it. Let me explain why I think that is the case.

We have all been talking about—certainly those of us have—the great need for a prescription drug benefit for years. However, I have reservations about the prescription drug benefit contained in this bill. Under this bill, 27 million retirees are going to lose their existing drug benefit package—27 million of the 41 million Medicare beneficiaries. While some might say that doesn't amount to much when combined with the other millions of seniors who are going to have their premiums go up, and possibly their benefits reduced if this bill is to pass, you begin to realize how troubling this bill is. That is literally what is going to happen under this bill. 27 million retirees are going to lose their present prescription drug benefit.

Why? Because they presently are covered under plans offered by their previous employers. They have retired and yet they carry with them those plans. The estimates are that 2.5 million retirees are going to lose coverage because their employers are going to drop those plans if the benefit under this bill is enacted.

In my State, just to put it in local terms, this will mean that 39,000 people in Connecticut who fall into that category will lose their present drug coverage. In Connecticut there are approximately 15,000 people who are of retirement age. However, I am going to have 39,000 who are going to be dropped from their prescription drug coverage.

Further troubling, I am then going to have 74,000 Medicare beneficiaries in the state of Connecticut, 64 million nationwide, who are going to lose as well under this bill. What happens to these people? These are seniors with severely limited incomes, making them eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid. These senior citizens are going to face less access to and higher prices for the drugs they need due to this conference agreement requiring drug co-payments and the creation of an assets test.

I have heard Members say that the price increases these low-income seniors will face are not that significant. Well, it isn't much, if you make $15,000 a year as a Senator. A few more bucks a month amounts to nothing. But if you are a person making $32,000 a year, or less, as these people do, and you are on Medicaid and Medicare and you are working each month trying to pay a mortgage, to put food on the table, to pay for the other essential needs you have, then you will see the consequences of this bill bear.

We in this body do not have such worries because we have such a great health care program. Members of Congress enjoy a fabulous healthcare plan. We offer nothing like that to the rest of the American public so we don't quite understand what other people go through in many ways.

Taken together—those losing their present prescription drug coverage and those low-income beneficiaries facing increased costs—youth of all Medicare beneficiaries negatively affected by this bill. Those are, to begin with, some of the concerns we have with what happens to close to 9 million of this nation's nearly 41 million retirees.

Now let me move to address some of the other issues of concern in this bill. While others have already talked about the prescription drug benefit portion of this bill at length, I want to point out that I am worried about certain aspects of this portion of the bill which will present real problems for our seniors. Under the proposed prescription drug benefit, this bill before us contains a gap in coverage, the so-called donut hole. The donut hole is nearly $2,800, twice the size of the one we adopted when this bill was adopted by the Senate back a number of months ago. Under the conference report, Medicare beneficiaries with costs within the 'donut hole,' will be forced to pay for the full cost of their prescribed medicines as well as a monthly premium of an estimated $35. This will mean that when your prescription drug spending falls within this coverage gap that you will receive absolutely no assistance purchasing your prescribed medicines under this bill. To add insult to injury, you're still on the hook for the monthly premiums while receiving no assistance affording your needed medicines.

Also troubling, Mr. President, is the notion of the monthly premium of an estimated $35. Under this conference agreement, if you end up having only one provider in your area, then these plans could charge whatever they want, because the lack of a another competing plan. The $35 figure often cited is not a cap; it is the estimate of what the average may be. There is nothing in this bill that prohibits one of those private plans from charging whatever they want in that area. You would end up being forced to charge whatever these plans determined it has to be, whether you're sick or not having any drug coverage at all.

Despite all of the problems with the prescription drug benefit portion of this package, even with the concerns I have outlined, I would have supported this bill if it stood as I believe it offers a first—though not nearly complete—first step toward adding a prescription drug plan under the Medicare program. I think the idea of doing something in this area made sense, and I would have, even with these bad features, supported this legislation in the hopes that in the coming years we could have modified it and changed it.

But something that few people want to talk about on the other side of the package before us are the structural reforms of Medicare contained in this bill. The conference report we are considering today is not just about prescription drugs but about how we are going to structure Medicare in a way that will make it much more troubling part. It is over this part that most of us who are expressing our strong objections to this bill have found common ground. It is this part of the bill that gives us all pause because it is no less, than an attempt to end Medicare, certainly as we have known it over these past 38 years.

I tell America to watch carefully. This is the part on which you want to focus. The more you read about it, the more you will draw the same conclusion as those of us who are strenuously fighting adoption of this bill. It is an attempt to force seniors into private plans, producing billions in profits for HMOs by denying seniors access to the benefits to which they have become accustomed and the doctors they trust.

This bill provides a $12 billion subsidy to the private companies and a 9-percent kicker, in effect, to make sure the competition fostered by the tax break is rigged in such a way that they cannot possibly lose in that competition. The supporters of the bill will tell you it is not forcing seniors out of traditional Medicare. They claim they are creating competition and, as a result, offering seniors a choice.

Let’s talk about the so-called competition in this bill and what it would create. Private plans under this conference report will be reimbursed at a higher rate than traditional Medicare—9 percent higher to be exact. How does Medicare compete when you have a 9-percent higher reimbursement rate for the plans they are supposed to be competing against? What kind of a competition is that, when all of a sudden you get a 9-percent higher reimbursement rate and claim to have a level playing field? Additionally, this reimbursement rate is going to be used to lure private plans into the marketplace. If it is going to be a competition, let it be a competition—but we are going to stick $12 billion into the pockets of the HMOs. Given a 9-percent higher reimbursement rate, and say to Medicare: Go out and compete. That is like tying both hands behind their back and tying their legs together and then saying go run a race. A more balanced playing field. It is not a balanced competition you can draw. You cannot accept the notion that we are creating a level playing field. It is not a balanced competition.

Ironically, this bill will mean less care for seniors. Traditional Medicare will grow weaker and private plans will grow stronger, forcing more beneficiaries out of the traditional program and into the arms of HMOs.

It is very easy to get bogged down in the minutiae of this bill. So let me state very simply that the weakening of the traditional Medicare caused by this 675-page bill is going to force seniors to pay more and face the prospects of fewer benefits.

Romantically, this bill will mean less choice for seniors. One of the things we are being told is there is going to be a lot more choice under this agreement. One of the great features of Medicare is that you get to choose your doctor. I don’t know a single American who doesn’t appreciate the opportunity they have to choose which physician they want to have treat them. Under this 675-page bill, that is over with for many seniors. That fact alone ought to cause people to pause. Why? Why not leave the people the choice of which doctor they use, someone they may have dealt with for years? That choice is gone with this bill.

America, pay attention. It is gone. If this bill gets adopted in the next few hours, that is gone. That is not choice at all. Nothing would make me happier than to find out these predictions are wrong, but they are not. I truly hope seniors can retain the choice that they already have and that traditional Medicare survives.

Let me explain briefly why I get as passionate as I do about these issues, Mr. President. When the Medicare+Choice Program was created and these private plans first came to our communities, many offering zero premiums. People joined in droves, jumped from traditional Medicare at the promise of reduced cost and increased benefits. Then, of course, once the plans looked around in certain areas and discovered there weren’t quite as many wealthier, healthier people in certain areas but there were poor and sicker people, they decided—and they can do this at a moment’s notice—they said: We are leaving, packing up and getting out. They did that in my State. They packed up and left.

I remember going to a meeting because the senior Medicare beneficiaries I represent were so upset and concerned about these decisions to leave. I convened a town meeting in Norwich, CT. About 350, 400 people showed up, and it was on a Saturday morning. They could not believe what happened to them. One individual was so upset about his wife losing her Medicare+Choice plan—a man who served in the U.S. Navy in World War II and worked at the Electric Boat Division in Groton, CT, for many years. As he spoke passionately about what happened to his wife, being dropped from Medicare, I believe he said: I will never forget it. It was, obviously, a stunning moment for... the people there. He was so upset about what happened to him because his wife’s HMO left, and she was left with nothing in terms of the promised health care coverage. He was a man by the name of Frederick Kral from eastern Connecticut. I have never forgotten the tragic incident and the deeply personal stories shared at this town meeting.

I remember how people felt when these HMOs came running in and then walked away. I cannot say that will happen here. I don’t think that part of the wheel is going to happen. We are just playing such a risky game with all of this. Why are we taking these kinds of risks on such an important issue? We should realize the tremendous damage we can do to people.

I recall very well what happened when we had HMOs promise they were going to step in and provide choice and do all these wonderful things. Remember, these are companies that have to make a profit. They want to make money and they want, as their customer base, healthy people. They would like wealthier people because then they don’t have to pay out as deep a benefit. When these plans discover people are not quite as wealthy and healthy, then they design plans that exclude them. My fear is that will happen here.

Even more ironic is this highly unfair system being championed by the self-proclaimed champions of free enterprise.

The bill, as I mentioned, will provide $12 billion to help HMOs unfairly compete against traditional Medicare, along with a 9 percent higher reimbursement rate. It does nothing to control drug prices. If we really want to do something to promote competition under this plan, wouldn’t you think we might have allowed the purchasing power of nearly 41 million Americans to achieve lower prices for prescribed medicines?

That is what we allow with veterans hospitals. The veterans hospitals collectively get together and negotiate with the drug companies for the best price. If you are a veteran in the country, you get a much reduced cost of prescription drugs because the VA has negotiated these prices on your behalf.

As my friend from Florida, Senator Bob Graham, so eloquently described earlier today—what do you say to two people who walk in—a husband, who is a veteran of the Korean war, who is paying one price for drugs because as a veteran the VA has negotiated a lower price, and his wife who stayed home and raised a family and maybe held down another job during that time. She is not a veteran, but she is on the same drug as her husband and she pays two, three, four times what he pays. How do you explain that to people?

Why can we not do in this bill what we have done in the VA? Their 65-page bill specifically prohibits the Medicare program to negotiate for lower drug prices. How is this representative of free market principles?

On the other hand, we are being told that we ought to have competition between private plans and Medicare. When it comes to negotiating for lower prices for prescription drugs, this law categorically prohibits the Federal Government from negotiating for the VA, and I applaud them for doing that, but it is not OK for Medicare. Yet we are told this is supposed to provide a fair competition.

The reason, of course, for all of this is simple: The champions of free enterprise know private plans cannot compete with traditional Medicare on a level playing field. The subsidies are absolutely necessary because Medicare is actually more efficient. Medicare delivers service, at a lower cost. That isn’t one Senator’s conclusion. Those who have examined this program from top to bottom, in every different manner, say Medicare is a very efficient program. And it delivers terrific services at a much lower cost. We are about to walk away from that with the adoption of this bill.

We are going to go off now and take 41 million Americans and make them guinea pigs, despite the fact the system works. There is that old expression: If the wheel ain’t broke, don’t fix it. This wheel is working well—the Medicare wheel.

I am afraid we can only conclude one thing: The architects of this bill are going to spend billions and billions of taxpayers’ money not to reform Medicare, but to dismantle it, to push patients out so that it will, indeed, wither on the vine. I remember so well when the former Speaker of the House, Newt Gingrich, speaking in front of a group of people here in Washington, a group of lobbyists from the health care industry, talked about Medicare withering on the vine. I heard the other day Mr. Gingrich, no longer a Member of Congress, showed up at the House Republican caucus and gave a strong pitch for this bill, according to the man who wanted to make Medicare wither on the vine. Either he had a great conversion on the road to Damascus, along the lines of St. Paul, or he still believes what he did a few years ago, and he is finally going to be able to achieve what he talked about doing then.

I suspect it is more the latter than the former. I have seen no evidence that there has been a change of heart by Mr. Gingrich in his views about Medicare. So the individual who promised you we are going to let this tremendously successful program wither on the vine is now applauding the fact we are going to finally achieve what he suggested a few years ago.

I predict we will be back, unfortunately, at great cost to the American taxpayers and at great cost to older Americans. We will be back in this Chamber rewriting this bill, as that much I will guarantee will happen. Unfortunately, we will squander billions of dollars unnecessarily. We will put a lot of people who shouldn’t have to go through this, given their age and the problems they face—older Americans shouldn’t have to go through the added frustrations and anxieties and wonder every day, as millions of them do, about how they are going to pay for their health care needs. They are going to have to go through this wringer because there are people around here who just never could stand Medicare and have been looking for ways to undo it since its inception.

As I mentioned at the outset of these remarks, this prescription drug benefit, while it is flawed, in my view, is worthy of support, despite the objections I have to certain parts of it. But it is not a benefit in my view that is intended to override the great damage to the Medicare program that will be caused by this bill.

Allow me to express my concerns about another provision of the conference agreement before us today. The structural changes to Medicare, if they were to be offered before this Chamber as a sole proposition, I don’t think would get 15 or 20 votes, but because they have been linked inexcusably to the prescription drug benefit, the bill will pass.

As I mentioned at the outset of these remarks, the prescription drug benefit, while it is flawed, in my view, is worthy of support, despite the objections I have to certain parts of it. But it is not a benefit in my view that is intended to override the great damage to the Medicare program that will be caused by this bill.

Allow me to express my concerns about another provision of the conference agreement before us today. The structural changes to Medicare, if they were to be offered before this Chamber as a sole proposition, I don’t think would get 15 or 20 votes, but because they have been linked inexcusably to the prescription drug benefit, the bill will pass.

Unless this Chamber know of any other Federal program that has a similar provision in it, when we pay for anything else you can think of, when 45 percent of the cost comes out of general revenues, that we must take exact cost containment measures? Only Medicare; there is no other Federal program that has similar handcuts on it that Medicare does under this bill: It states that when you reach 45 percent coming out of general revenues, then cost containment measures must be taken.

The adoption of this purely arbitrary cap will lead to almost certain erosion of this critical program’s scope of coverage and affordability. It is yet another attempt of opponents of Medicare to destroy this program that so many of our senior citizens rely on every day.

Today, after nearly 40 years of Medicare’s inception, we find ourselves at that crossroad. This opportunity is before us to move Medicare toward the future without threatening its proven availability, to provide for the health and well-being of this Nation’s seniors citizens. Sadly, the conference agreement represents an opportunity lost, an opportunity not only to add comprehensive coverage for prescribed medicines under the Medicare Program, but also an opportunity to strengthen the Medicare Program for future generations.

So it is with a great deal of sadness that I find myself faced with this 675-page document. The entire House minority was allowed to sit in and help craft this bill affecting minority in the House was allowed to up the conference committee that crafted this agreement—I am not making this up—congressional meetings so no one could find out where they were meeting. Not a single representative of the minority in the House was allowed to sit in and help craft this bill affecting 41 million Americans—and all but only two members of the minority on this side were excluded as well from these deliberations. The Democratic leader showed up only if he showed up as a member of the Finance Committee, was told he had no right to go to the meetings. In fact, the chairman of the committee said: If the Democratic leader shows up, then the meeting will be canceled.

What kind of arrogance is this? The chosen leader of a minority of this body was told if he shows up as a member of the conference committee, the House chairman of this conference would close down the meeting and walk out.

This process is broken, Mr. President. How much confidence can America have in a product that in the construct of this process, minority views were almost totally excluded. I warn my colleagues, a dangerous precedent is set when a bill of this significance is crafted in the manner of the bill before us. This bill before us affects 41 million Americans—yes, Americans, not just the 25,000 who are direct recipients of Medicare. Think what Medicare has meant to the children and grandchildren of its beneficiaries. Think what costs would have had to have been borne by children trying to raise their children while they were taking care of their parents had it not been for Medicare.

How many college educations would not have been achieved if the families were forced to choose between making sure that mom and dad could see a doctor or their children might go on to college? That is not hypothetical at all. Think how many people's dreams of home ownership, making investments in their communities need made possible because there was a program called Medicare. It said to Americans: You have given so much, particularly the generation that Tom Brokaw has called the greatest in our history, that we have not achieved that dream. Through World War II and Korea, that after all of that, we said to them, look, we are going to create a program that makes it possible for you and your families not to have to face poverty or worse when you face expenses for needed medical attention.

Despite the fact the program works well, has been efficient, and produces services at low cost, we are about to enter a casino, under the best of circumstances, and start playing roulette with people's health care and with the costs associated with it. That is why I am so saddened by the emergence of this conference report. The product has been down. This is a product in which one can have little or no confidence. I am being asked as one Member, with only 3 or 4 days to review this product, to agree to sign on to something of this magnitude. There are so many critical issues, so many rights to defend, that I think, to get this right and to make this better. We owe it to the people of this country to seize this opportunity.

Older Americans are not Democrats or Republicans. They are not conservatives or liberals. They are just hard-working people. The least they deserve is to have a Medicare Program they do not have to worry about. They need a comprehensive prescription drug benefit so they do not have to make choices between how they will need the food they must have or whether they can purchase the heat they must purchase to warm their homes.

We should be able to find a way to achieve that. I am deeply saddened to think that we have not achieved that goal with this conference report. After all of the reasons I have laid out, I will vote against this bill and urge my colleagues to do likewise.

I deeply regret we did not prevail on opposing cloture on the point of order that was raised so that we might have been able to go back and work on this again and come back in January with a better product. This is not the end of this Congress, it is only the end of a session. Yet every effort is being made to see to it that we jam this flawed bill down the throat of America.

We will be back: unfortunately, at great cost to the Treasury, and at great cost to the well-being of an awful lot of people who deserve better than they are getting to get through the adoption of this bill, in order to fix this bill. I truly wish this were not the case. I reserve the remainder of my time and designate the Democratic leader as the beneficiary of any time I may have remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. DODD. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today by a 2-vote margin, I guess it was, the Senate, this greatest deliberative body of this nation, has failed in the process of ending Medicare in America. After nearly 40 years in which the elderly in our country have been raised out of poverty, in which the elderly in our country have been given the assurances that they will not have to go to the poor farm to pay for medical care, after nearly 40 years of children being freed from the burden of caring for all their parents and grandparents, after raising the cost of providing care to what we do to care for our elderly in terms of health care, the Senate today began the process of turning our back on all the progress we have made. Medicare was created, as I said, almost 40 years ago with the purpose of providing our Nation's aged and disabled with that safety net, to protect them from death and destitution.

For years, seniors have counted on health security in their golden years thanks to Medicare. For nearly 40 years, this program has stood as a social contract between the American Government and the American people. After a lifetime of labor, when a person turns 65 they are promised health insurance covering doctor's visits, hospitalizations, and many other health costs. There was one exception for all of those 40 years; that is, there was no coverage for prescription drugs. It is almost impossible to overstate what Medicare means to a family, a citizen of modest means who has worked hard for a lifetime, a person who does not want to be a burden on the rest of his or her family. Medicare has been a rock solid, reliable, guaranteed lifeline for America's senior citizens.

Today, with a two-vote margin, we are watching that social contract erode. We are taking huge risks with the health and security of seniors, all to satisfy ideological agendas, to satisfy big political donor's wishes and certain political strategies.

With this Medicare bill, we have seen grave abuses of power—such as the recent vote in the House of Representatives in which this bill before us today lost in the House of Representatives, lost under the normal rules of the democratic means over there. But as you know, they kept the vote open for almost 3 hours, from about 3 a.m. to 6 a.m., to twist arms until they finally got the votes.

I was driving to work Saturday morning. I was listening to public radio. A caller had called in and she said President Bush says he wants to bring democracy to Iraq. After what happened last night in the House of Representatives, I was flabbergasted. I hope Iraq wasn't watching. That is not the kind of democracy they need in Iraq.

I am disappointed in the process that we have had here. This has been a sham process.

We have this bill here; I have held it up many times. I can barely hold it up right now—1,200 pages. It is dated November 20. It was delivered on our desks when we arrived here Saturday morning, that big, Saturday morning at 6 a.m., and we are expected to vote on it.

How many seniors in this country have seen this bill? How many here in this room have actually gone through it or looked at it—or staffs? We know basically what is in it, but who knows what fine print is included and how some things may work? It is a terrible process.

That is why I argued against it repeatedly and that is why I voted against cloture today on the filibuster. It is not that I want to keep filibustering, but I believe we should have gone home and let this bill get out to the public, let the American people see it, talk about it, digest it. Then we could come back here in late January, as we are going to do, and February, and see what our constituents think about it. To me that seems to be the American way, the democratic process.

That is not the process we followed here. That is not the process. We are debating a proposal that was originally supposed to accomplish one simple goal: to right the wrong in Medicare, that gap that was in there, by providing a prescription drug coverage and to make medicine more affordable for seniors.

I regret that in writing this bill Congress has strayed from that objective. We have forgotten who we are supposed to be helping. This Senate version of a straight drug benefit, we now have a Medicare privatization proposal that threatens to undo the entire Medicare Program on which seniors and the disabled rely each and every day. Seniors who rely on the stability and affordability of this program, seniors like many in my home State of Iowa, simply want and need affordable medicine.

I have seen no big clamour to change the basic Medicare Program. We had a proposal here in the 1990s to get more competition in Medicare. The Congress came up with this Medicare+Choice Program, where seniors could stay in traditional Medicare or they could join an HMO. So we have had several years of experience with this.

What is the result? Eighty-nine percent of the seniors in this country have chosen to stay with Medicare. About 11 percent in various parts of the country went with HMOs. That is fine. That was purely voluntary. But seniors have spoken. They want to keep traditional Medicare. They simply need an affordable drug benefit.

I want to say more about this as I talk, but I think this bill seniors do not really have a choice. You hear my friends on the Republican side say time and time again, choice, choice, choice, we are giving seniors choice, choice, choice. That simply is not true.

I hear all the time they say if a senator wants to stay with Medicare, they can stay with Medicare. That is true. But at what expense? What they don’t tell you is, if a senator wants to stay with Medicare, they don’t get drug coverage. They get no prescription drug coverage. You can stay with Medicare, but you have to give up prescription drug coverage. If you want prescription drug coverage, you have to go to some private plan. That is what they are not telling, I will have more to say about that choice.

This bill totally violates the spirit and substance of the original Medicare Program. Again, to make it worse, we get the Senate version. This bill doesn’t start until 2006. What is the rush? Why are we here 3 days before Thanksgiving, 7 o’clock in the evening, having a vote on a filibuster today, trying to ram this bill through? Why is it that the House of Representatives, in an all-nighter, rammed this bill through? I will tell you why they rammed it through. Because the pharmaceutical companies and the big insurance companies want to get it through before Americans broadly know what is in it. That is why. Get it through in a hurry.

Only a few fortunate people know what is in this: a roomful of Republicans, two Democrats, and big money industries. Seniors didn’t have a seat at the table, if they would have, I am sure they would have created a very different bill.

I have this cartoon here. I will show it again. Here is a pharmacy. There is a pharmacist who represents Congress. This Congress has given her drug benefit to Congress, and Congress is saying: Have a seat. It will be ready in 2½ years—your prescription; 2½ years. Yet we have to rush this through right now.

As I said, I called this the big Medicare gamble. It is like a roulette wheel. That is what we are doing. Before, under Medicare, it wasn’t a gamble. You knew what you had. You had good, rock solid coverage, no matter what part of the country you lived in, whether you lived in rural Iowa or New York City; it didn’t make any difference. Now we are rolling the dice, spinning the roulette wheel. It is going to unravel Medicare. The special interests, the drug companies, the HMOs are now more interested in seniors.

Seniors are being told there is not enough money for a really good drug benefit. Why isn’t there enough money? It is because we already squandered our surplus in tax cuts worth billions for the wealthy. Once again, the well-heeled on Wall Street are more important to this administration than the elderly and disabled on Main Street.

I ask unanimous consent that the article from today’s Washington Post be printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Nov. 24, 2003] MEDICARE BILL WOULD ENRICH COMPANIES (By Amy Goldstein)

The Medicare legislation that passed the House near dawn on Saturday and is moving toward a final vote in the Senate would steer at least $125 billion over the next decade in extra assistance to the health care industry and to businesses that have only a widely heralded goal of helping older Americans pay for prescription drugs.

The largest chunk of that assistance, according to congressional budget estimates, would be $86 billion worth of payments and tax benefits for employers, giving them a new subsidy for the health benefits that many already provide to retirees. Health maintenance organizations, hospitals and physicians also would be paid more by the government for treating the 40 million elderly and disabled people in Medicare, the estimates show.

Whether this extra money, part of a $400 billion plan to redesign the program, is warranted remains a matter of intense debate. Regardless of whether the payments are needed, the bill’s generosity to employers and major sectors of the medical industry helps explain the aggressive lobbying campaigns for the legislation by groups including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the American Medical Association. Liberal and conservative health policy analysts say the payments undercut a significant goal of the White House and congressional Republicans in redesigning the Medicare system: preventing it from running out of money in the near future.
The extra money to private health care companies is part of the reason many Democrats oppose the measure. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), his party’s leading voice in the Senate on health care and a vehement critic of the bill, said last week that provisions calling for increased payments to HMOs and other health plans were “obscene.

Kennedy and other critics say that, for the first time in the many years that Medicare has encouraged private health plans to welcome Medicare patients, the government would be abandoning its original rationale that managed care is more economical. Instead, the bill would create new funding rules to ensure that the government covers the rates that Medicare pays for patients in the traditional, fee-for-service part of the program. It would also establish a special $2 billion fund to try to persuade health plans to enter—or stay in—parts of the country where they have been scarce.

Lobbyists for health plans counter that they cannot afford to take Medicare patients unless they are paid enough to make it worthwhile. But health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, on top of what they already get. That is what doctors and hospital administrators want. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) said last week that providing physicians $1.9 billion more in Medicare payments during the next decade than they would get otherwise, the budget analyses show.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, on top of what they already get. That is what doctors and hospital administrators want. Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) said last week that providing physicians $1.9 billion more in Medicare payments during the next decade than they would get otherwise, the budget analyses show.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”

The extra payments in the bill have varying purposes. One is to send more Medicare money to doctors, hospitals and other care providers in rural areas, through a combination of new rules that total about $25 billion over 10 years. Rural health care advocates—and the lawmakers who represent them—made that money a top priority. The other was to add new employer subsidies connected to the new drug benefits. Once federal benefits became available, the employer groups were lobbying for a new round of payments as the cost of prescription drugs was rising.

Hospitals would get nearly $24 billion extra during the next decade, about two-thirds of it in rural areas. The rest would be used to help defray the costs of training new doctors and to give all hospitals a bigger boost for inflation next year than the House originally wanted.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, the legislation before us seeks to privatize Medicare, plain and simple. It seeks to privatize it, despite the fact that 99 percent of seniors say they want to stay in traditional Medicare—and they have done so when they had a choice—despite the fact that traditional Medicare is less expensive to administer—2 to 3 percent compared to 15 percent in private plans.

Again, there is something the average person doesn’t understand. They don’t realize. You would think a Government plan such as Medicare would cost more than a private plan. Private plans are supposed to be cheaper because of competition. We have had Medicare for almost 40 years. We have had private plans that length of time. So. We have a lot of data. We know the facts and all of data we have from the facts and all of data we have from the health economist Marilyn Moon said: “It is very ironic. To increase participation in private plans, we are going to overpay them for the foreseeable future.”
break down barriers to people with disabilities in our country. It was the Government—we here in the Congress—that had to step in to ensure opportunity and openness in our country for people with disabilities. In the survival of the fittest free market, these folks were left behind.

Another example: We have been fighting this Congress for years to pass a bill ensuring mental health parity. But people with mental illnesses are not a profitable group. So the free market, left to its own devices, will have nothing to do with mental health parity.

Think about it. We don't have mental health parity. Why wouldn't we? Why wouldn't the free market jump in there and get it? Because there is no profit. That is why, as soon as we get back into session next year, I hope we pass the Paul Wellstone mental health parity bill. Again, if we leave it up to the free market, people with mental illness are simply left behind.

Another prime example of those left behind is the elderly. The elderly are not a profitable group of people to include in an insurance risk pool. They are sick. They have chronic illnesses. They are difficult to treat. The elderly are all around us. It is impossible to imagine private insurers fighting and competing with one another for the privilege of covering the elderly. That is why we have to bribe the companies with billions of dollars of taxpayer money to get them to participate in this witch's brew scheme we have come up with here.

I have seen this proof firsthand. The other day, I talked about my own situation. I want to repeat it again.

In 1958, I was a senior in high school. My father was 74 years old. My mother had passed away 8 years prior to that. My father had worked most of his life in the coal mines in Iowa. My father had an eighth grade education. My mother was by then deceased. She was an immigrant with no formal education—little formal education. We lived at that time in a little house in a rural town of Cummings, IA, of 150 people. Because of my father's years in the mines—we called it miner's lung at that time; they call it black lung today—he would get sick every year. We would never see doctors. We didn't have any money. My father's total income was less than $1,000 a year. It was about $1,200 a year. That included bonuses for having kids under the age of 18.

Thank goodness he worked a while during World War II to pay into Social Security and he had some Social Security. That is all he had. My father had no stocks, no bonds, no property, no trusts, nothing. He had the small house we lived in and he had a Model A Ford, the only car he ever owned. That was 1958, the only car he ever owned those 1950s. I remember, like clockwork, my father would get sick. He would get sicker; he would get pneumonia. We would rush him to the hospital in Des Moines. They would put him in an oxygen tent, give him antibiotics, fix him up, and send him back home again.

If we did not have any money, and our total family income was less than $1,200 a year, how did we afford that? I tell you very simply. The Sisters of Mercy at Mercy Hospital would take care of my father, and knowing that we were poor and could not afford it, they would not bill us. That was charity.

I was in the Navy some years later, in 1966. I was home on leave. I think for Christmas, and my father was quite beside himself because he showed me this new card he had, a Medicare card. Now he could go see a doctor. If he had to go to the hospital, he did not have to rely on charity any longer.

I often think of how much better my father's later years would have been had he had Medicare. If he had seen a doctor and had preventive health care, his later years would have been much healthier and much better. But the only thing he had Medicare for 2 years before he passed away.

I tell that story because I wonder, as I stand here and as I listen to all this debate about choice, as I listen to the debate about how insurance companies will get there and do all this. I wonder, why didn't insurance companies rush to help my father? Why weren't they knocking on his door, competing with one another, to cover my father? We had insurance companies at that time. Why weren't they knocking his door down to cover him? Why? Because my father was not profitable. Elderly people in health care are not profitable.

So do not tell me the private sector will solve every problem, because I lived through its failures firsthand. I know many lowans and many Americans have the same situation. They do not want to be left to the volatility and the whims of private HMOs.

I understand my colleagues prefer the free market over Government intervention. I do, too, in most cases. But to say that we are going to do it regardless is a misplaced faith. There is a time and a place for the Government to step in, where the private sector fears to tread or fails to tread.

No question, this is the case when it comes to helping people with disabilities, people with mental illnesses, and seniors with serious health problems.

We hear the claim that private sector competition will drive down costs and save Medicare. Nonsense. The only competition will be competition for healthy seniors. If you are sick, you will be shunned.

I saw this headline in the Washington Post: “Medicare Deal Likely to Spark More Health Care Competition.” I thought, my goodness, and I got to reading it.

On Wall Street last week, drug stocks jumped as investors anticipated a congressional deal for Medicare, and in order to be able to compete, we are going to give them 26 percent more than what we provide in Medicare.

I guess I would kind of like that competition. Man, I would like to get a piece of that action. I would like to have the Government give me 26 percent more than what Medicare is making. That is not competition; it is a corporate giveaway. It is corporate welfare. That is what it is. It is a waste of taxpayers dollars. If you are in Medicare, over 40 years, shows it can do the job cheaper, more effectively, and more efficiently.

Seniors know it, trust it, and want to keep traditional Medicare. We are saying: No; we are taking your tax dollars and we are going to give it to private companies, 26 percent more, $1,900 more per beneficiary to bribe them to get into a private plan.

On top of that, the conferees have come up with what they call a stabilization fund. How about that for a nice fancy word—“stabilization” fund? What are we stabilizing? It sounds as if there is an earthquake out there. There may be when seniors find out what is in the bill. It is a $12 billion slush fund for private plans. Privatization, when it comes to medical care for the elderly, costs more money and it will reduce choice.

We have heard the claim time and time again that seniors have a choice. Members of Congress do. Seniors will be greatly disappointed when they find out what they are getting is nothing like what we have. I hear are giving seniors more choice to make people think about what we are not hearing is that if you want drug coverage, you have to get out of Medicare. If you do not care about not having drug coverage, you can stay in Medicare. That is what they are saying. They are saying no one will be forced out of Medicare. If you do not care about not having drug coverage, you have to go to a private plan.

Isn’t that what we are all about, trying to get drug coverage for seniors? And seniors say they want it under Medicare; they do not want it under private plans. Seniors will actually end up with reduced choices under this legislation.

If there are two private plans, say, an HMO and a PDP may be you have never heard of a PDP. If you say you have never heard of it, I understand that they do not exist. But it has been conjured up in this bill. We have conjured up something called PDPs, there are two private plans, an HMO, and a PDP, if a senior is in Medicare wants drug coverage, that senior is forced to take the PDP or the HMO. You cannot stay in Medicare. You have to move over and take one of the private plans.

That is a choice? That is a choice? That is like you have a choice between getting shot and getting hung. Either way, you are dead. Not a very good choice. They will not be allowed to get their drugs through traditional Medicare.

Again, let’s say they go and join one of these private plans, this PDP, or whatever it is, or an HMO. Well, then the seniors say they go and join one of these plans. You can see your doctor. You have to see another doctor. Oh, you can’t take that drug. It is not on our formulary. You have to take this other drug. What do you have to take this other drug? We cannot tell you why, but they are probably getting a bigger kickback from the pharmaceutical companies for that certain drug. So seniors are forced to change drugs.

That is not choice.

It is instructive that in this bill—perhaps it is daytime, you might just think it is probably night. If someone says something is black, think it is white. Around here we have gotten to the point where we use these words to confuse people, to make people think something is not what it is.

This idea of choice, that somehow we are giving seniors more choice—just false. The rhetoric around this bill does not match reality. The President and this administration has said many times that seniors deserve choice, that the seniors deserve what Members of Congress have. I am all for that. But that is not what they are getting.

Right now, I pay about 25 percent of my drug costs. That is it, flat. But the prescription drug plan put before seniors in this bill will not even come close to that.

Instead, it is a confusing, convoluted maze that—mark my words—will leave the seniors feeling betrayed and bewildered. This Congress is full of good intentions. We have a bill that will return to a law that we passed here. I think, in the 1990s, the VA sets down and negotiates with drug companies for the price of drugs for veterans hospitals and veterans throughout the country. That is why veterans pharmaceutical prices are 50 percent or more less what you might normally pay or what an elderly person would pay because they use the purchasing power of the VA to bring it down.

In this bill, we have said, no, you cannot do it any further than that. Medicare cannot negotiate. Think about it. It is written in here. Medicare is prohibited from negotiating with drug companies to get a better price on drugs.

People always ask: Why are drugs so much cheaper in Canada? I have been to Canada a lot. I am sure the occupant of the Chair has been to Canada. If you go back to a veterans administration, like that, there are drugstores all over, private drugstores owned by private citizens—free enterprise. You go in there, and the pharmacist is there, and you can get your drugs 50, 60, sometimes as much as 80 percent cheaper than what you get here.

It is the same drug, made by the same manufacturer, that is that much cheaper in Canada. Why? Well, guess what. The Canadian Government buys the drugs. They negotiate with the drug companies to get a lower price because they buy in such huge volumes. Then the private pharmacist makes money on filling the prescriptions, watching your prescriptions.

But in this bill we are forbidding Medicare from negotiating with drug companies for a better price. What a sweetheart deal that is.

Let’s see what seniors are going to pay for this and why this is kind of confusing. Here is what seniors are going to find out. Right now, here is what seniors pay under Medicare: Part A deductible of $720; Part B deductible for their doctor, $134; Part A premium $105 per month; Part B premiums $49.60 a month; Part B deductible for their doctor, $100 per year, and a 20 percent cost share on each visit to the doctor’s office.

Very simple, very straightforward; every person in Medicare understands that.

Now what? Well, let’s see. Senators who have an annual income above $13,470 per year will have to pay a year—well, the maximum is $3,270. That is the deductible of $2,550 plus $720. If they will then pay a $35-a-month premium, which can go up, by the way. That is not fixed in law. So that is $420 a year. That figure can change every year because if the private plan is not making the profit that they want, they can boost that figure up, and they will.

After seniors have put in at least $670 up front, they can start receiving some benefits. You might say, well, 670 bucks, that isn’t much. Remember what I said: This is someone who is above $13,470 a year. Six hundred seventy dollars is a lot of money to someone making $13,470 a year and worrying about paying $10,000 to $15,000 for med-care benefits. But his friend Sue just took a job at the local supermarket at minimum wage to try to make ends meet, pay her heating bills. But because she has a little extra income, even though she barely makes any money, she is in a different class. So, therefore, she is going to get a different drug benefit.
Margaret thought she was going to get some low-income benefits but she filled out her forms and she had too much life insurance. $10,000 in life insurance. So she is out.
How in the world is the average elderly citizen supposed to know where they fit into this mess? You are going to have several different people who make nearly the same amount of money each year and they are going to receive drastically different benefits.
This is a formula for confusion and confrontation. You are going to be pit-you have a little bit of assets—you are going to have friends wondering:
Why is it that Bob over there gets all those benefits and I don’t? We know that Bob owns something else. He is cheating maybe. And why did he get that and you didn’t? Is it that George over there gets all these low-income benefits? And you know George.
All his life he frittered his money away, gambled it, boozed it up. Sure he doesn’t have much now, but the Government is coming in and giving him everything.
How about Bob? Bob over here worked hard all his life, raised a family, educated his kids. He is a man of meager means. He and his SocSec society. He was frugal. He saved a little bit. He has a little life insurance policy. No, Bob, you don’t get this. Your income may be just about the same as George’s, a little bit more, but because you saved a rainy day—you are out. Tell me what this is going to be like when the seniors get ahold of this and talk about it.
Then there are those citizens who are going to lose retiree prescription drug benefits. Two to three million are going to lose prescription drug benefits. It is outrageous. This bill would spend roughly $8 billion to try to bribe employers not to drop retiree health coverage yet, even with that, 2 to 3 million seniors will lose their retiree benefits.
Yes, the drug and health industries are spending millions to ram this bill through Congress. But though seniors across the Nation don’t know what it contains. The authors of this bill did not let the senior citizens of this country see what was in the bill because they knew once they found out they would be against it. So apparently a seat at the Medicare table was quite expensive.
The Washington Post article from Saturday morning was entitled “Two Bills Would Benefit Top Bush Fundraisers.” It explains that the Medicare bill will benefit at least 24 Rangers and Pioneers as executives of companies or lobbyists working for them.
A Pioneer in the Bush campaign one who raises at least $100,000, while a Ranger is someone who has raised at least $200,000.
I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

Tuesday, November 24, 2003
[From the Washington Post]

EXECUTIVES’ CONTRIBUTIONS GET BILLIONS
(Thomas B. Edsall)

More than three dozen President Bush’s major fundraisers are affiliated with companies that stand to benefit from the passage of two central pieces of the administration’s legislative agenda: the energy and Medicare bills.
The energy bill provides billions of dollars in benefits to companies run by at least 22 executives and their spouses who have qualified as either “Pioneers” or “Rangers,” as well as to the clients of at least 15 lobbyists who have achieved similar status as fundraisers.
At least 24 Rangers and Pioneers could benefit from the Medicare bill as executives of companies or lobby-is working for them. Eight who have clients affected by both bills.

By its latest count, Bush’s re-election campaign has designated more than 300 supporters as Pioneers or Rangers. The Pioneers were created by the Bush campaign in 2000 to reward supporters who brought in at least $300 million in contributions. For his reelection campaign, Bush has set a goal of raising as much as $200 million, almost twice what he raised three years ago, and established the designation of Ranger for those who raise at least $200,000.

With the size of donations limited as a result of the campaign finance law enacted last year, fundraisers who can collect $100,000 or more in contributions of $2,000 or less have become key players this election cycle. The law barred the political parties from colllecting large—sometimes reaching $5 million—to $10 million—“soft money” contributions from businesses, unions, trade associations and individuals. This has put a premium on those who can solicit dozens, and sometimes hundreds, of smaller contributions from employees, clients and associates.

The energy and Medicare bills were drafted with the cooperation of representatives from dozens of industries. Power and energy company officials; railroad CEOs; pharma-aceutical, hospital association and insurance company executives; and the lobbyists who represent them are among those who have supported the bills and whose companies would benefit from their passage.
The Medicare bill was scheduled to be acted upon by the House late last night. If passed, it will go to the Senate. The first major revision in Medicare policy in more than a decade passed the House this week, but in the Senate, the measure ran into a roadblock yesterday when opponents stopped it from coming to a vote. Sponsors promised to make further efforts to get the 60 votes to break the filibuster.

The energy bill provides industry tax breaks worth $25.5 billion over 30 years aimed at increasing domestic oil and gas production, and $5.4 billion in subsidies and loan guarantees. The bill also grants legal protections to gas producers using the additive methyl tertiary-butyl ether (MTBE), whose manufacturers face a wave of lawsuits, and it repeals the Public Utility Hold-In Act (PUHII), which is a way of consumer protection that limits mergers of utilities.
The bill has been the focus of a bitter ideological and partisan fight for three years. A leading sponsor, Rep. W. J. "Billy" Tauzin (R-La), Chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, praised the legislation, saying, "All Americans can look forward to cleaner and more affordable energy, reliable electricity and reduced dependence on foreign sources of resources."

Public Citizen, which has tracked the legislation and correlated patterns of contributions to members of Congress and to Bush, denounces the bill's explicit national energy policy, developed in secret by corporate executives to members of Congress and to Bush, on foreign oil for generations to come.

In addition to the prescription drugs provisions, the Senate has passed measures to encourage patients to join preferred-provider organizations (PPOs) and other kinds of private health care, instead of receiving care through the traditional fee-for-service system in which they pick their doctors and generally get whatever care they request.

The health industry has provided substantial amounts to fund the campaign and support the influence of officials whose companies and associations actively support the Medicare bill are Pioneers and Rangers.

On Medicare issues, Akin Gump represents the Pharmaceutical Research & Manufacturers of America, J. Johnson & J. Johnson, Abbott Laboratories and Pfizer Inc. All would benefit from the expanded markets resulting from passage of the bill.

Barbour Griffith & Rogers received $1 million from similar clients.

On Medicare issues, Akin Gump represents the Pharmaceutical Research & Manufacturers of America, J. Johnson & J. Johnson, Abbott Laboratories and Pfizer Inc. All would benefit from the expanded markets resulting from passage of the bill.

Government subsidies to help Medicare patients are threatened. One corporation, Pfizer, has pledged to raise at least $200,000 for Bush’s reelection, although he is not yet listed as a Pioneer or Ranger. Pioneer Munr Kazmier, who runs a direct-mail drug company called Direct Meds Inc., estimates that he has about 100,000 customers on Medicare who will have more money to buy drugs from him. Of the patients, he says, "We know how important this bill is," he said.

In addition to the prescription drugs provision, the Senate has passed measures to encourage patients to join preferred-provider organizations (PPOs) and other kinds of private health care, instead of receiving care through the traditional fee-for-service system in which they pick their doctors and generally get whatever care they request.

The health industry has provided substantial amounts to fund the campaign and support the influence of officials whose companies and associations actively support the Medicare bill are Pioneers and Rangers.

Pioneer Charles N. Kahn, president of the Federation of American Hospitals, said that the Medicare bill will make "important strides in ensuring that all hospitals have sufficient funding to meet the medical needs of this nation's seniors." A federation spokesman noted that the bill provides more money for rural hospitals and for hospices serving disproportionate numbers of the uninsured, and that it prevents doctors from setting up new competing specialty, or "boutique," hospitals.

M. Keith Weikel, chief operating officer at HCR Manor Care, a chain of more than 500 nursing homes, said that the Medicare bill, passed last month, will help nursing home trade groups. The American Health Care Association, strongly endorsed the bill, which among other things, would continue funding for nursing home trade groups. The amount it covers for various therapies offered by health care providers such as nursing homes.

Mr. HARKIN. The article goes on to describe how the drug industry got everything they wanted. I think seniors in this country deserve more. They deserve to be put first in the process. Instead, they have been put last. Corporate interests, insurance companies, pharmaceutical companies, they come first. It speaks volumes that on Wall Street the health industry and drug stock have surged with the emergence of this bill. Corporate executives may be popping their champagne corks in celebration of what happened here today, but seniors are left scratching their heads and wondering why their interests were forgotten. Maybe they assumed that the AARP would stand up for their interests. But AARP has been battered by the winds of its members. Seniors need to know what direction Medicare is taking and whose side the AARP is on.

It says everything about this bill that Newt Gingrich is urging Republicans to vote in favor of it. Remember, this is the same Newt Gingrich who was Speaker of the House and expressed his desire to let Medicare wither on the vine. Mr. Gingrich is one of those Republicans who believe that the private marketplace will solve all of our problems. It would make his day to see Medicare dismantled. If he is for this bill, that ought to give us pause for concern.

Mr. Gingrich and his rightwing friends love this bill, like the head of Americans for Tax Reform, Grover Norquist, who once said:

My goal is to cut government in half. . . .

to get it down to the size where we can [drag it into the bathtub] and drown it in the bathtub.

Today, with his vote on this bill, Mr. Gingrich’s dream is coming true.

The bill is a first step toward privatizing Medicare. You can bet that once the ink is dry, they will be starting on Social Security and going after that, too. Mr. Gingrich even went so far as to say he believed the pharmaceutical companies are getting an unfair treatment; that they are punished by the success. Wrong. The bill doesn’t ask for a penny from the pharmaceutical companies.

On page 53 of the bill, it protects drug companies from Government efforts to negotiate lower prices. That is on page 53, line 18. It says that Medicare cannot negotiate for lower prices for drug companies.

A recent Peter Hart poll found that almost two-thirds of seniors view this bill unfavorably. Most of them identified themselves as members of AARP, American Association of Retired Persons. Among those AARP members, only 18 percent said Congress should have passed the bill, while 65 percent said Congress should get back to work. Last week, AARP members from Maryland, New York, and Pennsylvania tore up their membership cards in front of their organization’s headquarters here in Washington.

William Novelli, CEO of AARP, of “selling out” to insurers and selling out to Newt Gingrich. Where did they ever get that idea?

Well, in fact, the relationship between Newt Gingrich and the bigwigs at AARP goes way back. William Novelli, the head of the AARP, wrote the preface to Gingrich’s book, “Saving Lives, Saving Money.” In that preface, he states:

Newt’s ideas are influencing how we at AARP are thinking? Is it Newt’s wish that Medicare wither on the vine? Is that influencing Mr. Novelli’s thinking? AARP’s endorsement of the bill is disturbing for another reason. They have a financial conflict of interest in this matter. They receive vast revenues from the sale of insurance to seniors. Royalties from such arrangements include deals with UnitedHealthcare Insurance Company, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and Advance PCS, a pharmacy benefit manager. All that accounted for more than one-third of AARP’s $630 million in revenues last year, according to AARP’s 2002 annual report.

If you open up any newspaper in the last 3 days, you have paged full-page ads by AARP telling you why this is such a good bill—full-page ads in USA Today, The New York Times, Washington Post, and on and on.
First of all, I want every elderly person who belongs to AARP to think about this and the dues they pay. Think of all that money being siphoned off to ad agencies. Think about all that money being spent on these full-page ads in newspapers. These ads do not pass through to Congress. They are paid for through the dues. The political slush fund is what it ought to be—win, seniors lose; stabilization fund—pharmaceutical companies win and seniors lose. On cost containment, they win because they want it. On premium support, they lose. On universal coverage, they win because they know this bill is a betrayal. They know this has a component of the bill Senator Hagel and I introduced—are all positive aspects of this legislation.

I am pleased that in the bill are two other critical reforms that I spearheaded in the House and now in the Senate. Placing a 2-year moratorium on the outpatient therapy cap is a win for our oldest and sickest Medicare seniors. Those who suffer from life-threatening ailments such as Parkinson’s disease and stroke should not pay every dollar out of pocket just because they require additional care.

The bill also includes a provision that eliminates the late penalty military retirees pay for joining Medicare. Our military retirees, who gave so much of their lives to our country, deserve access to the best healthcare benefits available without being penalized for changes in the system. They thought they were going to get lifetime health care. Then, when they were put into the Medicare system they were not informed, or at least many of them were not aware that if they did not sign up right away, later they would have to pay extra penalty costs. Joining me in helping to get these passed was Senator Lincoln, and I would like to thank her for all of her efforts.

The reason I have struggled so fervently over the merits of this legislation is the substantial financial burden this bill places, not only on the Medicare program, but on the country. The benefits in this bill will assist seniors and disabled Americans only to the degree that our Nation is fiscally able to sustain paying for it. That is why I drafted a bill that was responsible to the next generation of workers who will bear the burden of paying the price tag on Medicare prescription drug costs.

I want to put up a couple of charts that help us understand what we are dealing with for the next generation. Until 1970, we had about 20 million seniors in our Medicare Program. Today we have a little over 40 million seniors. 30 years later. Thirty years from now, military will have close to 80 million seniors, equaling another doubling of the number of seniors.

This chart shows the problem. These are the number of workers per senior, the number of workers who have paid for this in this country. In 1970, for every one retiree we had a little over seven people, on average. In 2000, that had slipped to 3.9. When that huge expanse of the baby boomers is in full bloom in 2030, we will have 2.4 workers for every one retiree.

I remember Senator Phil Gramm telling us that means there are a lot more people riding in the cart and a lot fewer on the end. I believe this bill threatens the fiscal security of the Medicare Program and compromises the continued growth of our economy by lacking the necessary cost controls to keep it from consuming the entire budget. I personally believe the cost of this bill is grossly underestimated. By the time the drug benefit goes into effect in 2006, we will have a better understanding of the enormous cost of this bill but at that time it will be too late to do anything about it. Without measures to contain overutilization, the Government or the private sector plans will be forced to ration prescription drugs for our seniors, similar to the way care is rationed in Canada.

While every law requires legislative corrections after becoming law, I believe that before the ink is dry on this new benefit, a campaign will be underway to expand this program by closing the coverage gap that exists in the law. There will also be efforts also to reduce deductibles and reduce premiums as well, further transferring costs onto the next generation.

While providing seniors with a prescription drug benefit is so very important to all of us, it must be done in a way that does not bankrupt Medicare and threaten future access to care in our country for our seniors. It also needs to be fiscally responsible to the next generation.

I believe the Congressmen and Senators who put this bill together labored so intensively, and they did it for the right reasons. They had pure motives. I also appreciate the leadership the President has shown on this issue. In fact, I adhere to the principles that he laid out at the beginning of the year, I believe we would have a much better bill before us today—perhaps a bill I could support.

I am very disappointed in the debate these last few days in how people have politicized this bill. Unfortunately, I believe many have done so for their own political benefit. There have been many things said about this bill. You could say many negative things about this bill and you could say many positive things about it. However, what we ought to do in this Chamber is at least talk about what is in the bill and what is not in the bill. To mischaracterize the bill, I believe, is patently unfair, and it is just wrong to scare senior citizens into thinking that Medicare is somehow going to go away.

We must remember that most of the private sector reforms in this legislation do not even kick in for several years. So to scare seniors I just, frankly, belies how serious they are.

I have anguished deeply over this bill. There really are some positive things in it, things that I like. But, overall, I just believe the negative things in it outweigh the positive. That is why I, unfortunately, am going to have to vote against this conference report.

I look at the chairman of the Finance Committee who is on the floor right now, and there is just no finer person in the Senate than Senator Grassley. So it is with a heavy heart that I announce that I am going to vote against final passage of this bill because I believe that we have torn down togeth a bill with all the different people he had to work with in the House and the Senate, the various interest groups and the like. But I believe this bill does not rise up to the level where I think the positives will outweigh the negatives in the future. I think the costs are going to be too great. Looking at the first 10 years, it is estimated to be around $400 billion. For the second 10 years, I know of estimates as high as $1.7 trillion. Do we really want to add to the burden of our grandchildren with this burden? That is a question each of us has to least ask ourselves, and go into this with our eyes wide open. Twenty years from now when we look back on this debate and on the bill and on the huge bill, I think we are going to say we really did what was right for the future of our country? I hope that in fact we can.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I had the privilege of addressing the Senate yesterday on this bill. This is the bill that we are considering—some 675 pages. My statement yesterday—announced that after spending the better part of the weekend trying to comprehend some of the details of this bill, I have come to the conclusion that I will vote against this legislation for a number of reasons.

As has been stated by so many Senators, there is a lot that is good in this bill. Clearly, the part about reimbursement to doctors and other health care providers is very important. Interestingly, while giving enormous subsidies to PPOs and managed care to the tune of some $12 billion, they take away from oncologists and other cancer providers in this bill $11.5 billion. That is a part to which I strenuously object.

For my predecessor, Senator Connie Mack, who has been at the forefront of the fight against cancer, this is one of the provisions that is causing him enormous agony. Visiting with so many of the oncologists all over the country, it is just inexplicable to them as to why there would be a $11.5 billion cut on cancer care. The truth is, it was a tradeoff. It was a tradeoff back when we originally considered the bill in the Senate to provide for rural health care. You had to get the money from somewhere. Then they took it from cancer care. I think that was not only a poor choice, but I think it was a tragic choice. But that is in this bill. That is one of the reasons I am against it.

But there are other things that are good in this bill, and a lot of that has to do with trying to get physicians and other health care providers adequately compensated instead of cuts that were enacted some 5 to 7 years ago in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, which has resulted in health care providers to the bone in their Medicare reimbursement.

But there is a lot more in this bill that is causing me great concern. It is that I am going to vote against it. I want to share that with everybody.

One of the toughest jobs that I have had in a lifetime of public service is the years that I served as elected Insurance Commissioner of the State of Florida. I inherited a mess in the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew. I had to learn something about insurance marketplaces and how in a devastated insurance market we could encourage and nourish the free market back to competition. In the aftermath of Hurricane Andrew, the companies—other than the 12 that went bankrupt—were fleecing the State of Florida. Those who stayed were cancelling homeowners right and left.

We had to dig in to see what would make the insurance marketplace tick, and what would encourage insurers to come back into the marketplace; at the same time, what would provide the needed commodity—namely, in this case homeowners insurance—to the counties of Florida.

Because a marketplace had been disrupted by the most costly natural disaster in the history of the country in insurance losses, a lot of it we had to learn by first impression. We were successful in doing that. It took a long time. It was very difficult. One of the things that I learned about insurance in the marketplace is when you get to health insurance, you should let the principle of insurance work for you; you let the actuarial principles, you spread it over the largest possible group so that the health risk—when it comes out in costs because people get sick and they have to have health care expenditures—because it is a huge group and it is a diverse group in age and health, the per unit cost comes down.

One of the things that used to frustrate me the most as the Insurance Commissioner of Florida was when the new products would be filed, they would be filed for a very small group. The insurance company would drive the cost of the premium down so that it made it very attractive for people to take that particular brand of health insurance. But over the course of time, instead of the insurance company continuing to expand that group, they would keep it stagnant. Over time, people would drop out. Over time, people would get older. Over time, people would get sicker. The group would get smaller and the group would get smaller. Since the group was defined and not expanding, what do you think the costs were going to be? The costs were going up. That meant the premium was going up in order to make that group actuarially sound in what they were charging for that insurance.

People were stuck in an insurance group. They had no place else to go because they were locked in by their employer. They certainly couldn’t go on their own and buy a policy for one individual. The cost would be astronomical for that. They were stuck in a spiraling, upward cycle of insurance costs and insurance premiums that went to the moon.

I saw people literally cry giving testimony about how they could not afford it.

I learned something from that. I learned that if you are going to have a logical way of handling health insurance, it can’t be with a small group. It can’t be with a segmented group. It needs to be with a large group.

Beyond this particular bill, as we look ultimately to the future of what we are going to do about health care delivery and its costs in this country, in my judgment, since I would like to see it delivered by the private sector and free market competition, you are going to have to expand the groups. You are going to have to make them as large as possible so that the companies compete for that business. It is when you start to shrink that large group that you get into trouble. Senators, that is what this bill stands to do. It starts to selectively take people in Medicare, segmenting them, separating them, dissecting them, and ultimately when the healthier people in America—in this particular case, Medicare—when the healthier people in Medicare are siphoned off, it leaves the sicker seniors to be dealt with in Medicare. And what will happen to the cost? The cost will go up and it will go up big time.

The figure has been thrown out in this bill that the starting point for the premiums for the Medicare prescription drug benefit will be $35 a month per person. That is not going to happen. It will happen when it starts off in 2006, as but the group gets sicker, the costs are going to go up and the premiums—that $35 per person per month—are going to go through the roof.

Why are they getting siphoned off? Look at the provision. The provision says we are going to divide up the country as you can see on the State map. First of all, it says that you are going to offer the benefit in 2 ways. It will be offered with what is called a PDP, or prescription drug plan, and there is going to be the alternative of managed care, either a PPO or an HMO.

What this bill provides is the incentive for the healthier seniors to go into the PPO because they can get their health care cheaper—and, indeed, all of their health care, including the Medicare fee for service.

Also in this bill is a healthy subsidy for HMOs. This bill does not allow reimbursing HMOs at 100 percent like Medicare at 100 percent but kicks it up an additional 9 percent, 109 percent reinsurance. So the Medicare HMO then will be able to offer lower costs for services, thus enticing the senior citizen population, particularly the ones who are healthier particularly when they use such recruiting methods as going into bowling alleys and recruiting seniors to come into the managed care operation, the PPO or the HMO.

What will that do? That is going to leave the rest of the seniors to get their drug benefit from the only other available way, which is the prescription drug plan. And if their seniors are sicker, what do you think will happen to the cost? The cost is going to go up the marketplace under this bill is starting to be fragmented, violating the principle of insurance which is, take the largest possible group, spread the health risk over the group, and it brings down the per unit cost.

There is another way it is being fragmented, and that is the basic health care population in America. If another 5 or 10 years down the line we ever want to deal with health care insurance reform, and it is done among employers just because we have done it that way historically—if your employer is a big employer, such as the Federal Government or General Motors, you have a big group in which to spread the health risk. But what happens if the employer has five employees or two employees or one employee? It is not an efficient way of delivering health care through an insurance system.

Indeed, that provision in this bill is another way of fragmenting that population, another way of segmenting that population that ultimately, when we have to face this crisis—as surely we are going to someday—you cannot keep operating in a country this large, with 44 million people who do not have health insurance, who at the same time get health care because when they get sick they go to the most expensive place at the most expensive time—to the emergency room—when sniffles have turned into pneumonia. Sooner or later, the crisis will become apparent and we will have to deal with it, if the entire population has been so fragmented as a provision of this bill in creating health savings accounts.

Now, for people who have some means of income, this is a very attractive alternative. Health savings accounts will allow someone to take dollars, without paying tax on them, and put them into a health savings account. It is highly logical, like the present law regarding medical savings accounts where, if the dollars are not used, they self-destruct, these dollars will accumulate. And it will not be just for medical emergencies. Those dollars can be put aside. They can go out and buy an insurance policy that has a high deductible, such as $5,000. Even if they put $5,000 into the health savings account, they have saved a lot of money because they were getting, say, a $500 deductible policy. That money can accumulate and they can pay for other things than medical expenses, such as cosmetic surgery. So, for a good part of our country that has to start here, where- forthwith, that is very attractive.

It is dissecting the overall insured population, and when the crisis comes, it will make it very difficult to get these large pools upon which we can spread the health risk and where private sector insurance companies can come in and bid for that particular pool. That is another reason I oppose this legislation. It violates the principle.

Some talk about it as a giveaway to the HMOs and the PPOs, pushing seniors into managed care where they lose their choice of doctors. That speaks for another time, when in January of 2006—that is another 2 years and 1½ months—people are going to start realizing what has happened.

There is another reason I oppose this bill. That is, you cannot go out and offer the alternative of prescription drug plans, subsidized by the Federal Government for managed care, without private employers who have drug coverage for their former employees, now retirees, without those large employers asking, why do I want to continue this costly prescription drug coverage for my retirees when, in fact, I will let these retirees go on in to the Medicare system of prescription drugs.

If we have an equal prescription drug benefit, that would be OK for the senior citizen, the retiree. But the shock they are going to get is when their private employer, former employer, drops the managed care, a retiree can go to Medicare under this bill to give them a prescription drug benefit, and, lo and behold, they will find it is a very inadequate benefit. If they have $5,000 worth of drugs that they have to buy in a year, the senior citizen under this plan is going to pay out of his own pocket $3,600, $3,600 under this prescription drug plan for the senior citizen who has an annual prescription drug cost of $5,000.

So all of these retirees who are going to be dropped are going to be quite shocked and quite unhappy and quite disappointed, when they thought they were getting a full prescription drug benefit.

So in my State, for example, it is estimated by one of the very credible studies—and I have heard no one who has disputed this study—that 2.7 million retirees will be dropped from their private drug coverage in my State of Florida, that translates to 166,000 people. And I suspect that is going to be a very unhappy 166,000 people in the State of Florida.
It is true that since this bill does cover those up to 150 percent of the poverty level, there is going to be, for that group, some increased coverage that they do not have now, but it is not going to be much. It is not going to be much of the resources that would otherwise qualify because they meet the income test of being at that level of the poverty level, I and behold, this bill now puts an asset test on them. That asset test is going to disqualify thousands of them. And if it does, it is going to be that they are limited, under this bill, in the brands of drugs, the brand name drugs, because this bill defines their receipt of drugs in a class, and that class of drugs is yet to be determined. There are going to be some disappointed seniors.

There is another reason for opposition to this bill. We talked about there not being any competition for the prescription drug plan and how—since there do not have to be two prescription drug plans competing against each other and therefore holding the cost down, holding the premium down—that $35 monthly premium is going to go up. But in this bill there is also another violation of a principle we have found in Medicare, the Medicare program was set up in 1965; and that is, the premium is universal. The farmer in Iowa who is retired is paying the same premium as the retiree in Miami Beach, even though the costs of health care in Iowa and Minnesota are much less than the cost of health care in south Florida. There is a universality of the Medicare Part B premium.

That is going to be broken up, not on the Part B premium but on the Part D premium, because this bill causes the division of the country into at least 10 and some say as many as 50 regions in this country, each to be actuarially determined what is going to be the premium that will be actuarially sound with regard to that premium, with regard to health care costs in that region. And with regard to the cost. So I do not think this bill is procompetition even though that is how it is being sold.

The last reason I will state tonight of my reasons for opposition is one that has been mentioned many times here. Mr. President, $400 billion is lot of money. It depends on how you look at it. The Senator from Nevada, who just stood up and announced he was voting against the bill, has made a very eloquent statement about the cost being so high, $400 billion, at a time we are hemorrhaging to the tune of half a trillion dollars in deficit financing this year.

But I might want to take it in another direction and say, yes, $400 billion is lot of money, but it is not being efficiently used. The reason it is not being efficiently used is that Medicare is strictly forbidden, in this bill, from negotiating with pharmaceutical companies for bulk purchases.

Now, I thought we were for free market competition. I thought we were for letting the market forces determine what the price is. But this is an exact opposite of that. This is an interference in the private marketplace for it says Medicare cannot negotiate in bulk purchases a price less than the retail price. It is in here. It is in here not only on one page, it is in here on two pages.

It is unlike what has been done for nearly 20 years in the Veterans Administration, in a bill that passed this Senate on a voice vote because it was so noncontroversial that the bill, Government would negotiate through bulk purchases for the acquisition of drugs for the Veterans Administration.

The Veterans Administration is serving a population of about 25 million veterans. Medicare is serving a population of about 41 million Americans. If the Veterans Administration can negotiate prices downward, why should not Medicare be able to lower the cost of the drugs to seniors? It is not logical that you would not do. And I certainly do not know what we consider we are constrained under the Budget Act that we cannot spend more than $400 billion, until we waived that today.

So $400 billion, at a retail price of a drug, that on the retail market is going to cost at least twice the cost of the drug to the Veterans Administration, which is buying in bulk—we would be able to provide so many more of the benefits of prescription drugs to seniors without their having to pay so much in a deductible and in copays; and in some cases the copay is an entire 100 percent until they get past the threshold of spending $5,000 a year for drugs.

Now, I have counted noses. This thing is going to pass. It is either going to pass tonight or it is going to pass in the morning. It passed the House two nights ago, when they held the vote open for 3 hours until they twisted a few arms and got the vote around. So it is going to pass.

Well, it is not going to pass with my vote for the reasons I have stated, that I think are against the interests of the United States and my State. But I am going to do something about it after it passes because I have already started drafting a bill that is going to say, what is good for the Veterans Administration ought to be good for Medicare as well, and that if the Veterans Administration has so been in effect for two decades, that was noncontroversial when it was passed—can purchase in bulk and therefore bring the price down, so, too, ought Medicare, for the sake of our senior citizens, be able to get a more extensive prescription drug benefit than the meager one they are going to get in this bill.

I will be introducing that bill. I think one of the people I am going to work with is my good friend, Senator Mr. GRAHAM, since he has announced his retirement in the last year of his service as a Senator, and the two of us will put together a comprehensive package. But that is certainly one aspect of the reason we are going to be fighting. I thank the Senate for its attention.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I would propose to proceed for a short period— I think we are going back and forth—unless one of my colleagues signifies to the contrary.

I have listened very carefully, as indeed I think all Senators have, to the very strongly held views of colleagues on this bill. My good friend, the Senator from Florida, who proudly serves on the Armed Services Committee, and I work together. I was quite interested in what he had to say. I guess on most military issues we are together, but on this one we seem to have differences of opinion. I would say that our distinguished colleague from Florida does represent quite a few senior citizens, so I expect he has done much of his homework to develop his views here tonight. Nevertheless, I respectfully differ, and we are going to have to think what is in the best interest of the country as we approach this vote, whatever that will be.

I rise in support of the conference report to H.R. 1, the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act of 2003. Medicare was created in 1965, a nationwide insurance program that offered health insurance protection for prescription drugs to Medicare and those who have had the misfortune of becoming disabled. The program provides broad coverage for many health services, but there are gaps—how well we know that—in this program that has been working since 1965.

Those gaps create no coverage in some instances. That is the reason we are here today, to plug those gaps.

I think under the leadership of the distinguished Senator from Iowa, Mr. G.payload, the distinguished majority leader, many others who have worked so long and hard on this bill, we have done more than plug the gaps. We have done more. I hope that increase, which is well deserved by the seniors, is appreciated because it is important to these individuals.

I myself proudly fit into the category of a senior citizen. In fact, when I am speaking publicly, quite often I am not introduced as a senior Senator but as a senior citizen. There has been a lot of laughter among the crowd, but I look them square in the eye and say that I am very proud to have that status as a senior citizen. My mother lived to be 98 years old. I kind of hope I can follow along in her footsteps.

One area in the current Medicare Program where a major gap exists is in the coverage of prescription drugs. We know that so well. Medicare currently provides no outpatient—if you are in the hospital, you can get your prescription drugs covered. That is because when Congress created Medicare in 1965—it is interesting, when they created it in 1965, prescription drugs were not a major component of the health system.

November 24, 2003
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE S15733

That is fascinating to me. My father was a medical doctor. He was a surgeon. I remember he used to carry that black bag, and he used to have several bottles of pills in it, to the best of my knowledge. I know he was very careful in how he dispensed all those drugs. But when we stop to think, it has been a dynamic, if not revolutionary, change in the practice of medicine and health care owing to the development of prescription drugs. So it is important to us that there have been a lot of positive developments in health care.

One major positive development is prescription drug innovations. We are proud in America of the many innovations we have had. Those innovations have improved the quality of life for those with chronic conditions such as heart disease, diabetes, arthritis, and others. Prescription drugs are now an essential component of today’s health care—worn but truthful phrase. Often they give us the opportunity to stay out of the hospitals and, therefore, not become a burden on the already overburdened health care system in the United States. That is owing to prescription drugs.

What is the reason—the prescription portion of this—why I am so fervently and strongly in support of this legislation?

I have had the good fortune of representing the citizens of the Commonwealth of Virginia to the distinguished majority leader. When this session of the Congress concludes, it will be 25 years. A quarter of a century I have been privileged to serve in this Chamber. Throughout that period of time, as all of us do, we travel extensively throughout our States. We have our town meetings and otherwise. How often have all of us come across those individuals who simply say they struggle to pay for these prescription drugs, a well-earned but truthful phrase. Often they give up the bare necessities of life—food and shelter—to pay for their drugs. So we have all heard those stories. I am proud that this act will go a very long way to remove that anecdotal phrase from our town meetings and from these individuals. They are not aggressive about it. Really, they are very sad and almost embarrassed to say they have to dip into their basic necessities of food and shelter to meet their prescription requirements, whatever the case may be.

Some say they ration the drugs they are instructed to take by their physician. Imagine that. A physician you take a pill a day, and they can’t afford it. They are talking to you every other day. That is just impacting the health of so many people.

I hail this section on the prescription drugs. I think it is a remarkable step forward. This outpatient benefit is long overdue. Now we are about, with a historic vote, to provide that.

Many of us have worked these years to try to come to this point in the Senate where we do have this prescription drug outpatient Medicare Program. I have in the past voted for a number of pieces of legislation, have cosponsored a variety of bills to add such a prescription drug benefit. In fact, in an effort to reach a legislative consensus, I authored an amendment in this bill. I am proud of the bipartisan effort. I was joined by Senators Collins and Dayton early this year. It was very simplistic. I look at the remarkable size of that. It is about 8 inches thick. Our bill was probably not more than 3 inches thick. It is about 8 inches thick. It went to a partial solution of this problem faced by so many people who could not afford their drugs. None of these measures ever got enough support in either the House of Representatives or the Senate. As a result, while we in Congress continued to debate this issue, America’s seniors continued to suffer.

Today, though, we have a historic opportunity before us. Early Saturday morning we all read their report and now we are about to pass ours. I am confident we will. At that moment, across this Nation will go the voice of the Congress saying that we have at long last, since 1965, done our part to ensure that every older American will have the opportunity to take care of the 40 million beneficiaries of Medicare that exist today.

Under this legislation, starting in 2004, all Medicare beneficiaries will be able to receive a Medicare-sponsored prescription drug discount card. It is estimated these cards will save seniors between 15 and 25 percent on their prescriptions. Low-income beneficiaries will also receive a $600 subsidy on their cards towards the purchase of prescription drugs. I am very proud in the way the drafters of this bill have put such a tremendous emphasis on the low-income Americas. Pain knows no class, no age. Pain is endured by all. Perhaps more than any other Americans, we are able to alleviate our pain, but we certainly cannot let those less fortunate than ourselves suffer. So I think this $600 subsidy is a major part of this bill.

Then, starting in 2005, beneficiaries will be able to, at their option, sign up for a new Medicare prescription drug program. This program is entirely voluntary, so if a senior already has solid prescription drug coverage and does not want to participate, he or she does not have to sign up for the program.

Those seniors that do voluntarily sign up for the program will receive standard prescription drug coverage that covers 75 percent of a senior’s drug costs up to $2,250 in drug expenses after meeting a $35 monthly premium and a $250 deductible. After a beneficiary has spent $3,600 out of their own pocket on prescription drugs, the standard plan’s catastrophic coverage will cover 95 percent of prescription drug costs.

Under the bill, very generous assistance is provided to low-income beneficiaries. In my view, these low-income provisions are truly the hallmark of the bill, as these seniors are truly the ones who have most struggled to obtain the prescription drugs they need. These seniors will pay little or no premium and little or no deductible, based simply on income. They’ll have to pay at most a $2 copay for a generic drug and up to a $5 copay for a brand name drug.

What does this new drug benefit mean to Virginian’s? If passed and they sign up for this drug program, it will provide the nearly 1 million Medicare beneficiaries in the Commonwealth with access to a Medicare prescription drug benefit for the first time in the history of Medicare. Almost 400,000 of these individuals will qualify for the generous low-income benefits.

But, not only does this legislation directly help Virginia’s Medicare beneficiaries by providing a prescription drug benefit, the legislation also provides every Medicare provider to ensure they are more adequately reimbursed for their services. As we have seen, without adequate reimbursement, health care access can become a real issue as doctors and other health care providers cut back services or even close their doors to Medicare beneficiaries.

That is one of the reasons I strongly support this bill. We simply have to help those people access the care which those of us here in the Senate and the Congress enjoy, and indeed that many other Americans with larger corporations and small businesses enjoy, too. Some of them are being denied the Medicare rights.

This legislation recognizes this fact and provides significant assistance to Medicare providers. For example, the bill blocks the proposed 4.5-percent cut in physician reimbursement in 2004 and 2005 and updates their reimbursement rate by 1.5 percent in both 2004 and 2005. This one fix alone will result in an influx of almost $200 million into Virginia’s health care system.

Now, while I strongly support this historic legislation, I must admit that in no way is this bill a perfect bill. It is certainly not the bill I would have drafted.

But, our leaders in the Senate on this legislation—the bipartisan team of Senator Grassley, Senator Baucus, Senator Bayh, and our majority leader Senator Frist—really should be commended for their work. After the Congress has for years struggled to reach an agreement on this matter, we have finally reached what appears to be a strong, compromise bill that the President will sign.

And, while I intend to vote for this bill shortly, I do wish to take a moment to raise a few brief points of concern that I believe Congress must carefully watch as this legislation is implemented.

First, Congress must be cognizant of the fiscal impact of this bill and its long term effect on Medicare and our
November 24, 2003

C O N G R E S S I O N A L  R E C O R D —  S E N A T E

S15735

Federal budget. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that this legislation will cost the taxpayers approximately $400 billion over the next 10 years. Over the next few years we must closely watch the implementation of this law to ensure that the program's costs do not explode exponentially beyond the CBO estimate. To do so would leave a tremendously unfair burden on America's younger generations.

Next, we in Congress must pay close attention to the possible unintended consequences of this legislation. Almost ¼ of all seniors currently have retiree employer-sponsored prescription drug coverage. However, due to rising health care costs, more and more employers are dropping retiree health coverage. This legislation will provide a solid fall-back plan for those seniors who lose their retiree coverage due to rising costs.

I crafting this legislation, though, we were mindful of the prospect that the mere existence of a Medicare prescription drug benefit might somehow encourage companies to drop their retiree prescription drug plan. This is certainly not our intention, and the legislation provides important Federal incentives to employers who offer good retiree prescription drug coverage. Nevertheless, we in Congress must provide strong oversight to ensure that this legislation does not have the unintended effect of actually causing retirees to lose existing employer-sponsored coverage.

Finally, I regret that the bill before us today includes provisions that would sharply cut Medicare funding for cancer care provided to Medicare beneficiaries. After the Senate passed Medicare bill included a $16 billion cancer care cut, I fought hard with Senator SAM BROWNBACK and Senator BILL NELSON to ensure that the final bill contained no such cut. Through our efforts, we garnered the support of 53 U.S. Senators. Ultimately, though, the Conference Report to H.R. 1 cuts reimbursement for cancer treatment by approximately $11 billion over the next 10 years.

Proponents of this cut claim that it is needed so that cancer treatment reimbursement more accurately reflects the true cost to the physician. On the other hand, the hundreds and hundreds of cancer patients and oncologists who communicated with me on this issue maintain that these cuts will be devastating to cancer care in this country.

I remain committed to working with my fellow Virginians and others in the Senate to ensure that cancer patients are not negatively affected by these provisions.

In closing Mr. President, the bill before us today is the product of a number of years of hard work by a lot of people in Congress. It presents the best opportunity we have ever had in the Congress to update the Medicare program with a prescription drug benefit.

While I do have some serious concerns about certain provisions in the bill—on balance—I firmly believe voting for this bill is the right thing to do. I look forward to this bill becoming law but remain cognizant of the need for the U.S. Congress to closely monitor the implementation of this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise on an additional hour to add my voice in opposition to the legislation that I believe we will be voting on later tonight or early tomorrow morning and to basically explain that I think under this bill, my constituents in Washington State, who would benefit from a prescription drug benefit, or are currently benefiting from something, will be worse off after this legislation than if we did nothing at all.

That is the important point for us to discuss today. I have come home to Washington State over the summer, and in September and in October, the voices of Washingtonians basically said we would like to see a prescription drug benefit. Actually, first, they said we would like to see a restriction in the cost of prescription drugs, whether you have a benefit or not. Those who have insurance now are seeing increases in the rates of prescription drugs and cannot afford the continual increase in pricing. I am going to talk about that in a moment. It is clear that if you can get a prescription drug benefit, go ahead, but certainly don't do harm by passing something that puts seniors worse off than they currently are.

While I voted for the bill that came out of the Senate, I think this conference report is far off from where we need to go. My colleague from Virginia, who just spoke, talked about the physician reimbursement rate and hospital reimbursement rate, for which I applaud her. I would point out that the reimbursement rate for Medicare patients that is still within this framework of a national average has Washington State at the very low end. In fact, I think we went from 41st in the Nation to 49th in the reimbursement rate. As a place where we want people to come and provide health care benefits, they are certainly not incentivized under this legislation to want to come to Washington when they can practice in other regions and make much more. But the fundamental failure of this bill far outweigh the strengths of the legislation.

I may come at this differently than my colleagues who want to, as I say, privatize Medicare. I certainly believe we have today a program since 1965 that we would provide a universal benefit of Medicare, provide basic care to our seniors. I think this bill is a failure to expand on that and put a prescription drug under Medicare.

When the Harvard School of Public Health did a study in June of 2002, they asked people: If you retired and you had a choice to get a benefit under the Medicare health insurance program or from a private plan, such as a PPO or HMO, which would you choose? And 63 percent said they wanted a plan under Medicare. Only 19 percent said they wanted a plan under a private provider, a PPO or HMO organization. So I think the public is clear that they have said they trust Medicare.

In fact, I found great pleasure recently when the Seattle Post-Intelligencer characterized this debate, I think in an edifying fashion that was really right on the spot:

Two constituents obviously are saying to each other, honey, see, the Republicans—what they promised is that we would get out of the faceless control of the Government bureaucrats on Medicare.

Unbeknownst to the couple, they are sitting in the faceless hands of insurance company executives. I think that is fundamentally what is wrong with this legislation, that while we have had a trusted system for many years and an increase in the cost of prescription drugs going from maybe 5 percent of your health care costs at the time Medicare was introduced to something like 25 percent of your health care costs, Medicare prescription drug benefits should just be part of basic care under Medicare. Instead, we are saying we are going to subsidize insurance companies to somehow provide a prescription drug benefit for you. I think what we are going to find is that it is going to have disastrous results.

There are a lot of things in this legislation about which I think people in the State of Washington are concerned. Obviously, this particular debate, as the New York Times called it today, is really a debate—I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD, entitled “Medicare Debate Turns to Pricing of Drug Benefits.”

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Nov. 24, 2003]

MEDICARE DEBATE TURNS TO PRICING OF DRUG BENEFITS

(By Robert Pear)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—With Congress poised for final action on a major Medicare bill this week, some of the fiercest debate is focused on a section of the bill that prohibits the government from negotiating lower drug prices for the 40 million people on Medicare. The provision epitomizes the turf war, which relies on insurance companies and private health plans to manage the new drug benefit. They could negotiate with drug companies, but the government, with much greater purchasing power, would be forbidden to do so.

Supporters of the provision say it is necessary to prevent the government from imposing price controls that could stifle innovation in the pharmaceutical industry. Critics say the provision epitomizes the turf war that is tripping up the government and Medicare beneficiaries to spend much more for drugs than they should.

The House passed the Medicare bill on Saturday by a vote of 208 to 215, after an all-night session and an extraordinary three-hour roll call. President Bush and House Republican leaders persuaded a few wayward conservatives to vote for the bill, which calls for the biggest expansion of Medicare since its creation in 1965.
In the Senate, debate continued on Sunday, with Democrats asserting that the bill would severely undermine the traditional Medicare program. Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, said the measure would lead a filibuster against the measure.

Democrats acknowledged they did not have the votes to sustain a filibuster. But they said the tactics of ordering cloture on the legislation, whose passage is a priority for President Bush.

Senator Dianne Feinstein of California, Ron Wyden of Oregon, and Kent Conrad of North Dakota, all Democrats, announced on Sunday that they would vote for the bill. Other Democratic senators who have endorsed the measure include F. J. Breaux and Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana, Blanche Lincoln of Arkansas and Ben Nighthorse of Colorado.

But Senator Don Nickles, Republican of Oklahoma, said he would vote against the $400 billion bill.

"We are building a new expansion onto a house that's teetering on a cliff," Mr. Nickles said. "We are saddling future generations with enormous liabilities.

No provision has been mentioned more often in Congressional debate than the section that prohibits the government from interfering in negotiations with drug companies.

Democrats have repeatedly asserted that Medicare could provide more generous drug benefits if, like other big buyers, it took advantage of its market power to secure large discounts.

But many Republicans have expressed alarm at the possibility that federal officials might negotiate drug prices. The Medicare program, they say, dwars other purchasers, and the government is unlike other customers because it could give itself the power to set drug prices.

Under the bill, the government would subsidize a new type of insurance policy known as a prescription drug plan.

"In order to promote competition," the bill says, the secretary of health and human services "may not interfere with the negotiations between drug manufacturers and pharmacies and prescription drug plan sponsors, or require a particular formulation or institute a price structure for the reimbursement of drugs."

Tommy G. Thompson, the secretary of health and human services, said Sunday that if Congress wanted to give him the power to negotiate drug prices, it could do so next year. But "that's not a reason to oppose this Medicare bill," said Mr. Thompson, who negotiated with Bayer to obtain a lower price for the company's anthrax medicine, the antibacterial Cipro, in 2001.

Representative James P. Rhodein, Democrat of Maine, said it struck him as absurd that "the government will not be able to negotiate lower prices for the drugs on which it plans to spend $400 billion in the near future."

"The bill will allow the pharmaceutical industry to continue charging America's seniors the highest prices in the world," Mr. Allen said.

Representative Peter A. DeFazio, Democrat of Oregon, said, "We could bring down drug prices if we allowed the secretary of health and human services to negotiate on behalf of 40 million seniors. That is what Sam's Club does."

Sam's Club, a chain of warehouse stores that is a division of Wal-Mart, acts like a purchasing agent for its members, who can buy low-price goods.

Representatives say that health plans will be able to negotiate lower drug prices for Medicare beneficiaries and that large groups of employees with private insurance.

The Senate majority leader, Bill Frist, Republican of Tennessee, said: "We tend to use the phrase in the private sector like individual plans to hold down costs over time. The Democrats tend to emphasize, and thus push for, more government control."

Representatives also think that competition through the private sector, through bulk purchasing and negotiation, is a more effective way to bring down drug costs. Medicare drug plans would be offered by state-licensed insurance companies. They, in turn, could hire pharmacy benefit managers like Express Scripts, McKesson Health Solutions and AdvancePCS to negotiate with drug makers, issue discount cards and line up networks of pharmacies.

"The provision epitomizes much of the bill, which relies on insurance companies and private health plans to manage the drug benefit. They could negotiate with drug companies, but the government, with much greater purchasing power, would be forbidden to do so."

I have great concerns about what is the basic hamstringing of this proposal as it relates to prescription drug benefits when the key opportunity before us would be to put this benefit under Medicare and capitalize on those savings.

Mr. President, that is why I had supported earlier legislation and find it very difficult to support this legislation. I am going to talk about why, because I believe this particular bill we are hampering ourselves from having other price controls in this legislation.

I agree with my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, as we start this new benefit, we must be cognizant of what kind of cost measures we can do to make sure we continue to provide this for our citizens. Before I get to that, I want to mention, I have great concerns about the retiree benefit under this particular proposal. We have about 49,000 retirees in Washington State who might end up losing their coverage under this bill in the future.

They have good, solid insurance coverage plans for any of you don't think too generous, but under this proposal they might go away.

There is a certain percentage of the population under this proposal that actually will start paying a variety of premiums based on income, and while people think this would be a good idea, really these people have been in this program—it has been a program based on a payroll tax into the Medicare trust fund—they have paid into the trust fund expecting to get reliable health insurance coverage back. Now they are going to be paying aggressively on their premiums.

About 51,000 residents in Washington State are going to wake up very much surprised to find that as a result of trying to provide a package to the country, all of a sudden they are paying more on their Medicare Part B program. I know my phone is ringing very much against this legislation, but I don't know if those 51,000 people realize it is actually their premium rates that are going to go up.

Third, I think the legislation, as it relates to low-income seniors, is another area where we are leaving seniors basically worse off than they are today. The United States has in making pharmaceutical drugs; the fact that access to the capital system allows these biotech companies to do years and years of research and then maybe 10 to 15 years later actually getting a drug produced. So they need access to the capital market.

Once those drugs are created, we need to do something about controlling the costs of those drugs. This section of the bill, according to the New York Times article, says:"

The provision epitomizes much of the bill, which relies on insurance companies and private health plans to manage the drug benefit. They could negotiate with drug companies, but the government, with much greater purchasing power, would be forbidden to do so.
those at 150 percent of the poverty level, which is basically incomes of about $13,000 per individual or $18,000 for a family of two, that the asset test is going to be $6,000 for the individual or $9,000 for a couple, that means after that, you're going to benefit from the program in the same way.

Basically, you are limiting the opportunity for this section of low-income individuals to benefit from what would be a more profitable way of dealing with a prescription drug benefit and giving them a reason to say I'm limiting you qualify but limiting them on the asset test.

In Washington State, for those individuals below 150 percent of poverty level, they are going to be worse off under this legislation.

I hope this legislation is not a death knell for those who are living with cancer because according to the CBO estimates, this bill could basically cut $11.5 billion over the next 10 years for cancer insurance benefits because of the reimbursement rate for cancer care. Basically, we are making cuts to programs, and I have heard from facilities, oncologists, and cancer patients all across the State that they are very upset with this legislation and the reduction in reimbursements for cancer patients. This is another group of people who will be worse off if this legislation passes.

As I said, my primary concern with this legislation is it does very little to rein in the cost of prescription drugs. Talking to my constituents, yes, they would like to see a prescription drug benefit, but they don't want to be worse off than they are today. Even without the benefit, they expect the Senate to do something about controlling prescription drug costs.

What have we done? I see my colleague from Michigan on the Senate floor. She had a great proposal that we failed to pass that basically said: Why not cap the advertising dollars of the pharmaceutical companies to the dollars that are involved in research and development; that way, they are doing research and development on new drugs. They are not overspending, over-advertising to America, or at least not getting a tax benefit for over-advertising and trying to drive up the consumption of drugs.

We have done nothing about that. My colleagues from New York and others have tried to address the issue of what has become evergreening of patents where drug companies actually change the name or some feature of the product just so they can continue to have a patent control and generic drugs, cheaper drugs, cannot come to the market.

This bill actually deals with some aspect of that, but the aspect I was very concerned about is oftentimes you have big pharmaceutical companies buying a generic drug company right before the generic drug company produces the product. That ought to be investigated by the Department of Justice as an antitrust violation and to make sure we are not allowing such collusive activities to happen, thereby raising the overall price of prescription drugs.

A provision that would have benefited us the most and was critically important was: drug insurance companies, basically, in charge of prescription drug benefits— is we had a great opportunity in an amendment I offered with several of my colleagues to control the costs as it was put forth by pharmacy benefit managers.

In traveling around Washington State, actually a summer ago, it became very clear to me that a great deal of purchasing of pharmaceutical drugs for individual plans were done by pharmacy benefit managers. They are the middlemen in this process, and pharmacy benefit managers often negotiate huge savings for various employee groups, companies, and organizations. Yet it is unclear what happens to the negotiated discount. Is it passed on to the consumers? It depends on the time of the year what the rules are, what the rules and transparency which basically means we need to know what the discounts were realized. They don't have to overexpose what I think would be private corporate information that allows them to be competitive. But the Department of Justice ought to be able to investigate collusive activity that is ripping off seniors in America, when somebody negotiates huge discounts based on volume but then doesn't pass those discounts on to consumers.

So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen. So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen.

Seniors need a comprehensive benefit that covers their total prescription benefit needs. Why tease them with a prescription drug benefit under this program would fall into the donut hole. Easily some 122,000 people in my State could fall into the donut hole. Again, another percentage of the population that I don't think are—you might not say they are better off. It depends on whether they have a drug benefit now. But they are certainly not going to get anything from this legislation and they are going to be far more confused about what this cliff starts at a certain level.

Again, my colleagues, I am sure, have talked about the economic impact of this legislation. I would go back, saying we should start with a prescription drug benefit.

When my colleague, the Senator from Michigan, and I first came into this Congress, when we had a huge surplus, that was the time we should have put forth a prescription drug benefit that would have been a more comprehensive program and started this process. But we didn't do that.

So what my constituents are telling me, and these are even constituents passed on by being in a big market and having market leverage—those things are gone.

I believe our Attorney General of the United States ought to investigate. I don't see why the manufacturers of drug insurance companies, basically, in charge of prescription drug benefits—are we going to go through a PBM, can't list the top volume of 50 drugs they have sold and the difference between the prices they received at the pharmacy level and what discounts were realized. They don't have to give all of their pricing information. They have to oversee what I think would be private corporate information that allows them to be competitive. But the Department of Justice ought to be able to investigate collusive activity that is ripping off seniors in America, when somebody negotiates huge discounts based on volume but then doesn't pass those discounts on to consumers.

So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen. So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen.

Seniors need a comprehensive benefit that covers their total prescription benefit needs. Why tease them with a program that we are somehow going to cover their prescription benefits and then not control the price, have it in the private sector, and then have the private sector dictate to them: Here is the very limited number of drugs that are going to be provided.

Seniors enrolled in the Washington State seniors enrolled in the prescription drug benefit under this program would fall into what is the donut hole. Easily some 122,000 people in my State could fall into the donut hole. Again, another percentage of the population that I don't think are—you might not say they are better off. It depends on whether they have a drug benefit now. But they are certainly not going to get anything from this legislation and they are going to be far more confused about what this cliff starts at a certain level.

Again, my colleagues, I am sure, have talked about the economic impact of this legislation. I would go back, saying we should start with a prescription drug benefit.

When my colleague, the Senator from Michigan, and I first came into this Congress, when we had a huge surplus, that was the time we should have put forth a prescription drug benefit that would have been a more comprehensive program and started this process. But we didn't do that.

So what my constituents are telling me, and these are even constituents passed on by being in a big market and having market leverage—those things are gone.

I believe our Attorney General of the United States ought to investigate. I don't see why the manufacturers of drug insurance companies, basically, in charge of prescription drug benefits—are we going to go through a PBM, can't list the top volume of 50 drugs they have sold and the difference between the prices they received at the pharmacy level and what discounts were realized. They don't have to give all of their pricing information. They have to oversee what I think would be private corporate information that allows them to be competitive. But the Department of Justice ought to be able to investigate collusive activity that is ripping off seniors in America, when somebody negotiates huge discounts based on volume but then doesn't pass those discounts on to consumers.

So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen. So, as I said, this is a key part of the legislation that was left out. I hope we will have a way to do this and we will have a way to have market leverage that makes it less likely to happen.
Nothing would please me more than to be able to stand on the floor this evening and say: We did it. We have put together a voluntary, comprehensive prescription drug benefit under Medicare for seniors and the disabled. Nothing would please me more than to say: What we did. We have put in place the ability to lower prices for everyone.

As colleagues have said, this is not just about Medicare and just about our seniors. It is about all of us. Of course, certainly they are very important people. They use the majority of the prescription drugs. But we know right now the explosion in prices of prescription drugs is driving the entire cost of the health care system.

When I talk to those who are in the auto industry, or when I talk to small businesses, when I talk to those who are in the furniture business in Michigan, or in retail sales or work in State government, I hear the same thing. Medicare is driving up the cost of which increases in health care are a result of the explosion in prescription drug prices.

So this is an issue that affects everybody. As we look at this question under Medicare, this is also an issue that affects every corner of our country as well as everyone who is paying for Medicare. So this is a big deal. It is important that we get this right. It is important that we be able, at the end of the day, to say we have strengthened one of the great American success stories of this country, Medicare, and that we have put in place the competition and the accountability to bring prices down. This bill absolutely does not do that. It doesn’t do either one of those things.

First of all, it starts from the premise that seniors want something other than traditional Medicare. When we look at what seniors have said when they have had a choice, here is what they said. Eighty-nine percent of those seniors who have a choice between Medicare+Choice, which is an HMO, private insurance, or traditional Medicare, 89 percent said: We will take traditional Medicare. Eleven percent said: We will take the private insurance.

Seniors have already said what choice they want. When I hear folks talking about what they want in Medicare, they are not asking for more bureaucracy, or more insurance paperwork, or more insurance companies to deal with. The idea is to update Medicare for prescription drugs, that is all—just update Medicare for prescription drugs. Eighty-nine percent of the Medicare beneficiaries have already told us what they want to do. They want traditional Medicare.

This bill basically sets in place—some of it is immediate with prescription drug coverage where you have to choose from private insurance plans if they are in your area, and some of it is down the road a bit. In 2004 when the entire evening Medicare begins. In some areas, people will have a very different system that will attempt to move them into private insurance.

That is not what folks have said to me. People say we should do that because it costs less. Medicare is in trouble financially down the road. We need to do something to lower costs.

When you look at this, Medicare costs about 2 percent more and private HMOs cost 15 percent. So that can’t be the reason we are doing this. It costs more to go into private plans than it does with traditional Medicare.

For many of the reasons colleagues said on the floor, traditional Medicare has a very large insurance pool—those who are sick, those who are well, those who are older, those who are younger, all together—the bigger the pool, the bigger the risk pool, the lower the price.

It is not because it would cost less, because it doesn’t cost less; it will cost us more. It will cost taxpayers more. It costs more for services under the private sector than it does under traditional Medicare.

Why are we doing this? I think we are doing this for one reason: Unfortunately, the driving reason behind this legislation is that the pharmaceutical lobby has decided, instead of continuing to fight Medicare coverage and Medicare prescription drug benefit as they have done for many years—they decided they don’t want to stop it anymore because it is too big an issue for people. It is a critical life-and-death issue in order to pay for your medicine.

That is not to say that you got up today and decided to eat or get their medicine. That is not rhetoric; it is real. So they changed their approach and thought they couldn’t stop it anymore because it is too real for people. This is a real problem. Let us create a benefit that is done in a way that divides people up into private insurance plans and in a way that doesn’t allow Medicare to use all of its leverage to be able to lower prices.

So behind all of this, there are two things. There are those who really do believe it ought to be done in the private sector, that we ought to go back to private insurance. But you couple that with an industry that wants to make sure that: No matter what, we can’t lower their prices; let us make sure that no matter what, people have to pay the highest prices.

That is why there is no reimportation, which is really important in my State. The idea is that if you can have a local pharmacist in Michigan be able to do business with a pharmacist in Canada, be able to bring prescription drugs back into the local pharmacy in Michigan at half the price, many of them made in the United States, they are safe, they are FDA approved, bring them back, and create a way to lower prices—they don’t want that. That is not in the bill. They do not want a strong provision to tighten patent loopholes so competitors can be able to get the medicine made in generic drugs. That is not in the bill.

We have a weakened version of that. Amazingly, as colleagues have said, they were actually able to get language into the bill that says Medicare is prohibited from group purchasing on behalf of seniors and the disabled. It is amazing. That is just amazing. The private insurance companies can try to get lower prices by creating a whole new group of customers who will be forced to pay the highest possible price.

That would only be in the bill for one reason; that is, because the industry has been successful in creating a whole new group of customers who will be forced to pay the highest possible price.

How do we know this? This is not just me talking. The Boston University School of Health has looked at this legislation and estimates there will be $139 billion in increased profits over the next 8 years for the world's most profitable industry. At $17 billion annually, this means a 38 percent rise in drugmaker profits. I am talking for making a profit. I have a major pharmaceutical company in Michigan. They do wonderful research. I am very proud of them for doing this research. But we are talking about an industry that is already one of the most subsidized by taxpayers, because they do not make shoes, or chairs, or cars, they make lifesaving medicine. We want them to make it. We want them to do research. So we help them pay for it. We give them protection so that they are protected from competition. We give them the ability to write off their research and write off their advertising. They get a lot of support and help. Why? Because we want to be able to afford the product.

At the end of the day, when, by the way, they are spending 2 ½ times more on advertising and marketing and administration rather than research, which is a big concern of mine, but at end of the day we see that drug prices going down so people can afford them but efforts to actually protect prices and allow them to go up.

We are looking at about a 38 percent rise in drugmaker profits. Certainly any business would welcome that. But that is on the backs of American citizens. This is on the backs of American taxpayers who are paying the bill—American seniors who just want to know that they can count on Medicare, get the medications they need to pick their own doctor, live a healthy life, and visit grandkids and great grandkids. They trust us to look beyond the 650 million low-income seniors and disabled who will lose access to the drugs they need. Many of them will actually pay more. How in the world does it make any sense that we would have a prescription drug benefit that has been described as helping our low-income seniors the most, but actually costs people more out of pocket, people who are currently on Medicaid, who find themselves under Medicare with a different system, a different asset test, different copays, and would actually pay more.

We should be focusing on and helping the people who really are choosing every day whether or not to eat or get their medicine or pay the electric bill. When we look at this whole picture, as much as I would love to say this is a great deal, this is a bad deal. My colleagues say this is a first step. There is an old saying: Beware of the first step. I think the first step is right off the cliff on this legislation for too many people.

In closing, there is one important piece in this bill that has strong if not unanimous bipartisan support that I wish we were passing separately this evening. That is the issue I have talked about a number of times: what is happening to our doctors, our hospitals, our home health agencies, nursing homes, and others who have been cut because the reimbursements they receive, whether they be rural or urban providers.

Those who care for our seniors and the disabled have seen resources cut. That, in turn, is cutting access. We have known that cuts were coming now for the last 3 years, and instead of doing something about it sooner because our doctors and other providers desperately needed us to, it gets rolled into this legislation that is highly controversial. I regret that. I have offered separate legislation pulling out all of these provisions. I offered it on Saturday, and I asked unanimous consent we take it up immediately and pass it. It was objected to on the other side. I regard that, as well.

The reality is, in the middle of this bill I believe there are some very important providers being held hostage, folks I want to support, whom I have supported, and I will support in the future, folks for whom I have worked. Unfortunately because of the fact that this is in the middle of this bill to unravel Medicare and hurt them in the long run and increase cuts in the long run for all of them, I am not going to be able to support this bill. However, I would like the record to reflect that our doctors and hospitals and others who have been cut too much are cancer care providers. They are still cut too much in this legislation. I am extremely upset that is the case.

But we do have in this bill provisions for rural hospitals, urban hospitals, and others that are desperately needed. I am at least pleased there are provisions there recognizing the desperate needs our providers feel. In conclusion, when we look at the broad bill before the Senate that unravels Medicare, keeps prices high, causes people to lose their health insurance in the private sector, and causes the most vulnerable seniors to pay more, this is a bad deal. I am hopeful, still, that those listening this evening will call their Members before the vote that I believe is coming tomorrow morning. Tell the Members to go back to the drawing board. We can do better than this for people. I am still very hopeful this will be stopped and we will get back to the drawing board and get it right.
As we continue to debate the Medicare conference report, I want to make particular note of the efforts of Senators B AUCUS, GRASSLEY and MURRAY to address the Medicare bias against self-injectable biologics and oral anti-cancer medications, which is not equivalent. These biases can mean that Medicare pays for treatments that are more costly and that require patients to travel long distances for treatment. Working together, we have pushed hard for provisions that would ensure coverage of these drugs for an interim period, until the Part D drug benefit begins. This immediate coverage would make a real difference for thousands of seniors suffering from cancer as well as various chronic illnesses, such as rheumatoid arthritis and multiple sclerosis.

While I am pleased that the Medicare conference includes measures to provide coverage of these medications over the next 2 years, I am disappointed that the funding for this policy was limited and the number of beneficiaries who will be allowed to benefit from this coverage was capped. Also, concerned that the Medicare conference report language does not accurately reflect the intent of the conference, which is clearly laid out in the statute of the conference report. I would like to ask my colleagues to comment further on this issue.

Mrs. MURRAY. I also want to thank Senators B AUCUS and GRASSLEY for their support of the Conrad-Murray language that would have eliminated this discrimination against self-injectable biologics. The amendment would have rewarded companies who innovate their treatments to meet their patients needs, not Medicare reimbursement policies. Many of these patients suffer from rheumatoid arthritis and MS, two disabling conditions that can restrict mobility and make it very difficult to even get to a physician’s office. As my colleagues know, I have spent the last 4 years working to end this outrageous disincentive in Medicare reimbursement policies.

Mr. B AUCUS. It is important to note that without Senator MURRAY’s efforts and leadership on this issue, we would not be here today. I also thank the Senator from North Dakota for all that he has done to realize this important benefit. And I thank both Senators, as well as the chairman, for working with me to level a Medicare reimbursement playing field that has long been biased against biologics and biologics. We have the most comprehensive rural health package in history in this bill, and I am proud of that.

With respect to self-injectable biologics and oral anti-cancer medications, I have some background. Under current law, Medicare will cover certain drugs that are administered “incident to physicians’ services” but self-injectable biologics which are complete replacements for physician-administered biologics are not covered by Medicare. In other words, if a doctor is required to inject the drug, you’re covered. If not, you’re out of luck.

A similar situation exists for oral anti-cancer medications. Coverage is available for oral anti-cancer drugs if they are also available in injectable form. But Medicare coverage is denied for anticancer therapies that are available only as new self-injectable biologics. Therapies to treat cancer, as well as many that are in various stages of development and approval, are available only in oral form, and therefore are not covered under the Medicare program.

Mr. B AUCUS. I thank my friend from Montana for that explanation. And as he and the Senators from Washington and North Dakota know, we have a demonstration program in this bill that covers, until the Part D drug benefit starts in 2006, self-injectable and oral anti-cancer drugs. This demonstration program is in the statutory language. That is good news. However, the report language is clearly in error and refers to an entirely different provision, not the Medicare bill. For clarification’s sake, we would like to ask you some questions about this demonstration project. First, in negotiation we were told that demonstration would be available and would operate without limitation to the number of States, correct?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Isn’t it true that you intended that the demonstration ensure that the Secretary preserve physician and beneficiary treatment options by providing for equitable coverage of all qualifying products?

Mr. GRASSLEY. That is correct.

Mr. CONRAD. Isn’t it true that the conference committee intended to provide $500 million above what Medicare would have expended absent this provision to cover placement self-injectable medicaments and oral anticancer therapies?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes. That is right.

Mr. B AUCUS. I thank the chairman for the clarification.

Mr. CONRAD. I also thank the chairman for that clarification and, again, would like to thank both the chairman and Senator B AUCUS for their work on this important effort. I also strongly share their view that the rural health provisions in the Medicare conference report are a real victory for not only our States, but for all of rural America.

Mrs. MURRAY. I just want to be sure that we provide the greatest degree of relief for patients and their families. I was disappointed to learn of this error in the final report language, and it does undermine the entire negotiations for this provision. It certainly undercuts the intent of the Conrad-Murray amendment adopted by the Senate during consideration of S. 1. I appreciate your working with me to rectify that error.

COST CONTAINMENT PROVISIONS

Mr. B AUCUS. As we move forward, let me take a few moments to provide some background on the cost containment provisions in the Medicare conference agreement.

First, let me review current law. Under current law, the Medicare Board of Trustees oversees the financial operations of the Medicare Hospital Insurance—or HI—trust fund—Medicare Part A—and the Medicare Supplementary Medical Insurance—or SMI—trust fund—Medicare Part B. The Social Security Act requires Medicare’s trustees to submit reports to Congress annually by March 31. Medicare Part A pays beneficiaries’ medical expenses incurred in hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, hospices, and a portion of home health care services. Payroll taxes provide most HI trust fund revenues. Employers and employees each pay 1.45 percent of earnings. Self-employed workers pay 2.9 percent of net income. Other sources of HI revenue include: interest on trust fund investments, the federal income taxes on Social Security benefits, and the premium from voluntary enrollees into Part A, railroad retirement account transfers and reimbursement for certain uninsured persons.

Medicare Part B pays for physician and other health care practitioner services, other medical and health services, including laboratory and other diagnostic tests, outpatient hospital services and other clinical services, and therapy and ambulance services, durable medical equipment, and home health services not covered under Part A. SMI trust fund revenues come from beneficiary premiums to purchase Part B and general revenues. The Part B premium is set at an amount that aggregates premiums make up about 25 percent of program costs. The monthly premium for 2003 is $58.70. General revenues make up the remaining 75 percent of Part B program funding.

Now let me turn to some provisions on Presidential legislation. Under the State of the Union Clause—article I, section 3, clause 1—of the Constitution, the President has a right to “recommend to [Congress]’s Consideration such Measures as [he] deems necessary and expedient.” Thus the President can already submit legislation to address Medicare solvency.

Current law on House procedures is that the House regularly passes rules that govern the consideration of particular pieces of legislation. The Rules Committee formulates these rules, which the House can then adopt by a majority vote. Thus the House can already establish such procedures as it deems necessary to consider Medicare legislation.

And current law with regard to Senate procedures provides that, under Senate rule XIV, any single Senator can already submit legislation to address Medicare solvency.

Now let me turn to what was in the House-passed bill. Section 131 of House bill would require the trustees to submit special reports to the President. The combined two trust funds and the Prescription Drug Trust Fund. The bill would require the report to include a statement of the amounts spent on benefits.
in the preceding fiscal year from the general revenues and the percentage the Medicare general revenues bore to all other general revenue obligations of the Treasury that year. The bill would require this information for each year from the beginning of Medicare and for 10-year and 75-year projections. The bill would also require the report to compare the rate of growth of Medicare general revenue funding to the rate of growth in the gross domestic product. The bill would require the Committee on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce to publish each report and post it on the Internet.

The Senate-passed bill was quite similar. Section 132 of the Senate bill would require the trustees to submit a report on the status of the combined two trust funds and the Prescription Drug Trust Account. The bill would require the report to include a statement of the amounts spent on benefits in the preceding fiscal year from general revenues and the percentage that the Medicare general revenues bore to all other general revenue obligations of the Treasury that year. The trustees would make this calculation separately for Medicare benefits and for administrative and other expenses. The bill would require this information for each year from the beginning of Medicare and for 10-year and 50-year projections. The bill would also require the report to compare the rate of growth of Medicare benefits and administrative costs to the rates of growth in the gross domestic product, health insurance costs in the public sector, other general revenue funding as a percentage of the Medicare program. The report would also include an analysis of Medicare that assumed that general revenue funding would not exceed 45 percent.

The report would also include an analysis of Medicare that assumed that general revenue funding would not exceed 45 percent. Starting in 2005, the Medicare trustees would annually determine whether the excess general revenue funding “‘general revenue funding’’ in excess of the Medicare outlays during the current year or the next 6 years. If the trustees did so 2 years in a row, it would be a Medicare funding warning. Under the conference agreement, “general revenue funding” would mean total Medicare outlays minus “dedicated sources.” “Dedicated sources” would mean funding received from outside the Federal Government, specifically: the HI payroll tax, the income tax raised by the 1993 changes in taxation of QASDI benefits, amounts States pay to the Federal Government on account of dual-eligible funds collected by the “claw-back,” premiums paid by Medicare, and gifts to Medicare. The conference agreement would not include interest on trust fund assets in “dedicated sources,” as Republican conferees viewed the general fund as needing to pay these amounts to the trust funds.

If, for 2 consecutive years of reports, both covering 7-year periods of projections, the Medicare Trustees projected that excess general revenue funding would be required in any of those 7-year periods, the program would be subject to special procedures and the trustees would notify the President and Congress. The special procedures would be in force only after the second annual report confirmed that excess general revenue funding would be required.

Here is a plausible example of how the system would work. When Medicare’s trustees issued their March 31, 2010, report, they would examine fiscal years 2010 through 2016. If the trustees then projected that in 2016, general revenues would exceed 45 percent of Medicare funding, then 2010 would be the “notice” year. The conference agreement says that “Congress and the President should address the matter under existing rules and procedures.”

When Medicare’s trustees issued their March 31, 2011, report, they would examine fiscal years 2011 through 2017. If the trustees once again projected that in 2016, general revenues would exceed 45 percent of Medicare funding, the then 2010 would be the “warning” year. The conference agreement would trigger actions in the next year, 2012, the third in this series of years.

Next, Presidential legislation: Section 802 of the conference agreement sets out the Presidential response. After 2 consecutive years of trustees’ projections that Medicare would exceed 45 percent of Medicare funding, the President would propose legislation in response within 15 days after the President’s first annual budget of the next session of Congress. The legislation could use any means to respond, including adding to the dedicated sources. But if the legislation in response did not include matter within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee, then the Senate discharge procedures would not apply.

Now the statutory language says that the bill must “contain” matter within the Finance Committee’s jurisdiction. The joint statement of managers, based on an earlier draft of the bill, said that the language was intended to limit the Finance Committee’s jurisdiction. The joint statement of managers is in error on this point. And of course, the statutory language controls.

Mr. FRIST. Will the Senator from Montana yield on that point?

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield to the majority leader.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Montana and rise to say that the comments he made earlier that the statement of managers is in error and that the statutory language must control. The result would be faithful to the intent of the conferees on this measure.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, returning to my discussion of the conference agreement’s provisions, the conference agreement expresses a sense of Congress that the legislation that the President submits in response should eliminate excess general revenue Medicare funding for the 7-fiscal year period. If, during the year in which the trustees issue a warning, Congress enacts legislation that would eliminate excess general revenue Medicare funding for the 7-fiscal year period, then the President would not have to propose legislation in response to the latest warning.

The warning would also trigger certain House procedures. Section 803 of the conference agreement sets out the procedures for House consideration of the President’s legislative proposal. Within 3 days of receiving the President’s legislative proposal, the majority leader and minority leader of the House, or their designees, would introduce the proposal. The legislation would be referred to the appropriate committees which would be required to report Medicare funding legislation no later than June 30. The chairman of the Budget Committee would certify that the legislation would eliminate excess general revenue Medicare funding for the 7-fiscal year period.

Unless the House of Representatives has voted on final passage of the legislation by July 30, the conference agreement would provide fallback procedures. After 30 calendar days—and concurrently 5 legislative days—and after the introduction of the legislation, a motion to discharge any committee to which the legislation had been referred would be in order, under specified circumstances, and debate on the motion to discharge would be limited to one hour.
The conference agreement provides for floor consideration in the House of the discharged legislation by the Committee of the Whole no later than 3 legislative days after discharge.

Now let me turn to Senate procedures. The conference agreement sets out the procedures for the Senate consideration of the President's legislative proposal. Within 3 days of receiving the President's legislative proposal, the majority leader and minority leader of the Senate, or their designee, would introduce the proposal. The Presiding Officer would refer the legislation to the Finance Committee. If the Finance Committee failed to report the legislation—with or without amendment—by June 30, then a single motion to discharge the committee of any Medicare funding legislation would be in order. That motion to discharge would be subject to 2 hours of debate. If Congress enacted legislation that Budget Committee chairman estimated that could eliminate the excess general revenue, then the motion to discharge would not be available for the rest of that session of Congress. Once legislation got to the calendar, normal Senate rules would govern its consideration. Any motion to proceed to the bill would be fully debatable. The bill itself would be fully debatable and amendable. That is all that this procedure would do.

Now, let me take a few moments to talk about what the conference agreement on cost control would not do.

The conference agreement does not include references to "insolvency." Some sought to label Medicare general revenue funding of more than 45 percent as indicative of "insolvency" and "unsustainability." The conference agreement contains no such language. The conference agreement does not include a hard cap. Some sought a cap on Medicare general revenues. When general revenues exceeded 45 percent, Congress would have had to vote affirmatively to allow the program to continue above that point. The conference agreement would not be a cap.

The conference agreement does not include a new point of order. Some sought a point of order providing that when Medicare general revenues rose above 45 percent during the next 7 years for two consecutive reports, it would not be in order to consider legislation that would increase the general revenue funding. This requirement would be waived or appealed by 60 votes in the Senate. The conference report contains no new points of order.

The conference agreement does not eliminate rights to filibuster. Some sought to eliminate the ability of Senators to filibuster the motion to proceed to the Medicare funding bill and to filibuster the bill itself. The conference agreement does not curtail the right to filibuster either the motion to proceed or the bill itself.

In sum, the conference agreement would provide for reports, Presidential legislative proposals, and getting a bill on the calendar. The President or White House staff could get the reports with a phone call. The President could already make a legislative proposal whenever the President chooses. And any single Senator can get a bill on the calendar:

Thus although the conference agreement could provide additional impetus to cause these steps to occur, nothing prevents all of them from occurring under current law. Thus, this is a reasonable set of provisions. And it should not be of concern to those who hold the procedures of the Senate dear.

S. 1402, the Federal Railroad Safety Improvement Act, would reauthorize the Federal Railroad Administration, and make many important updates to continue to ensure safety on the Nation's railroads.

In particular, the conference report does not curtail the President's authorities to administratively change railroad safety rules without amendment, or under Executive Order 12866, walmart certification eliminated the excess general revenue funding. This requirement would be subject to 2 hours of debate on the motion to discharge the committee of the conference agreement.

Now, let me take a few moments to talk about what the conference agreement does not do.

The conference agreement does not provide for reports, Presidential legislative proposals, and getting a bill on the calendar. The President or White House staff could get the reports with a phone call. The President could already make a legislative proposal whenever the President chooses. And any single Senator can get a bill on the calendar.

Thus although the conference agreement could provide additional impetus to cause these steps to occur, nothing prevents all of them from occurring under current law. Thus, this is a reasonable set of provisions. And it should not be of concern to those who hold the procedures of the Senate dear.

S. 1402, the Federal Railroad Safety Improvement Act, would reauthorize the Federal Railroad Administration, and make many important updates to continue to ensure safety on the Nation's railroads.

In particular, the conference report does not curtail the President's authorities to administratively change railroad safety rules without amendment, or under Executive Order 12866, walmart certification eliminated the excess general revenue funding. This requirement would be subject to 2 hours of debate on the motion to discharge the committee of the conference agreement.

Now, let me take a few moments to talk about what the conference agreement does not do.

The conference agreement does not provide for reports, Presidential legislative proposals, and getting a bill on the calendar. The President or White House staff could get the reports with a phone call. The President could already make a legislative proposal whenever the President chooses. And any single Senator can get a bill on the calendar:

Thus although the conference agreement could provide additional impetus to cause these steps to occur, nothing prevents all of them from occurring under current law. Thus, this is a reasonable set of provisions. And it should not be of concern to those who hold the procedures of the Senate dear.

S. 1402, the Federal Railroad Safety Improvement Act, would reauthorize the Federal Railroad Administration, and make many important updates to continue to ensure safety on the Nation's railroads.

In particular, the conference report does not curtail the President's authorities to administratively change railroad safety rules without amendment, or under Executive Order 12866, walmart certification eliminated the excess general revenue funding. This requirement would be subject to 2 hours of debate on the motion to discharge the committee of the conference agreement.

Now, let me take a few moments to talk about what the conference agreement does not do.

The conference agreement does not provide for reports, Presidential legislative proposals, and getting a bill on the calendar. The President or White House staff could get the reports with a phone call. The President could already make a legislative proposal whenever the President chooses. And any single Senator can get a bill on the calendar:

Thus although the conference agreement could provide additional impetus to cause these steps to occur, nothing prevents all of them from occurring under current law. Thus, this is a reasonable set of provisions. And it should not be of concern to those who hold the procedures of the Senate dear.

S. 1402, the Federal Railroad Safety Improvement Act, would reauthorize the Federal Railroad Administration, and make many important updates to continue to ensure safety on the Nation's railroads.

In particular, the conference report does not curtail the President's authorities to administratively change railroad safety rules without amendment, or under Executive Order 12866, walmart certification eliminated the excess general revenue funding. This requirement would be subject to 2 hours of debate on the motion to discharge the committee of the conference agreement.

Now, let me take a few moments to talk about what the conference agreement does not do.

The conference agreement does not provide for reports, Presidential legislative proposals, and getting a bill on the calendar. The President or White House staff could get the reports with a phone call. The President could already make a legislative proposal whenever the President chooses. And any single Senator can get a bill on the calendar:

Thus although the conference agreement could provide additional impetus to cause these steps to occur, nothing prevents all of them from occurring under current law. Thus, this is a reasonable set of provisions. And it should not be of concern to those who hold the procedures of the Senate dear.

S. 1402, the Federal Railroad Safety Improvement Act, would reauthorize the Federal Railroad Administration, and make many important updates to continue to ensure safety on the Nation's railroads.
Medicare Advantage plans whose Medicare members do not fill prescriptions at retail pharmacies. I am referring to plans that operate their own pharmacies and take possession of prescription drugs directly from manufacturers, wholesalers, or other suppliers. Under these plans, is it the intent of the conference that dispensing costs include all reasonable costs related to plan activities needed to deliver prescription drugs to their Medicare members, including the cost of delivering this benefit? For example, this would include salaries for pharmacists, and facility- and equipment-related costs.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, the distinguished Senator is correct. The intent of the conference report is to recognize that different Medicare Advantage plans are organized in different ways to deliver the new Part D prescription drug benefit and the benefits of the Medicare-endorsed drug discount card. I understand that Medicare members of some Medicare Advantage plans fill their prescription in retail pharmacies and others in a plan's own pharmacies. For Medicare beneficiaries that will be using retail pharmacies to fill their prescriptions, the conference report that the prices negotiated between the prescription drug plan or the Medicare Advantage plan plus dispensing-related costs include the pharmacies' reasonable overhead costs.

Similarly, it is the conference's intention that Medicare Advantage plans whose Medicare members do not use retail pharmacies, but instead fill their prescriptions at the plan's pharmacies be reimbursed for the costs they incur in delivering the benefit when reimbursed for the same types of costs.

SECTION 507

Mr. BREAUX. I coauthored Section 507 of H.R. 1, the Prescription Drug and Medicare Improvement Act of 2003, which would require that all plans funding physician-self-referrals, I would like to engage in a colloquy with my colleague, Mr. GRASSLEY, in relation to the exception language contained in this provision.

I would like to clarify congressional intent with regard to the "exception" language included in S. 1, as this language may ultimately be included in any compromise between the two bills. I would like to discuss the extent to which Medicare Advantage plans and Medicare Advantage organizations have discretion to exempt a hospital based on the factors identified in the language. The language in the conference agreement states that, for the purpose of determining whether a hospital qualifies as a specialty hospital, the Secretary shall consider:

1. the extent to which the hospital was under development as of a certain date.

2. any other evidence the Secretary determines shall consider.

It was my intent in crafting this language that the factors outlined would serve as an illustrative guide to the Secretary. The Secretary shall consider these factors, but not be required to see that each and every factor has been met or even considered, that the Secretary would have discretion to make a reasonable determination of whether a specialty hospital was "under development".

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, I believe you are correct in saying that the Secretary would have discretion to consider these factors, but would not be limited to or bound by those factors. The language states that the Secretary "shall consider," which implies that the Secretary shall consider these factors but that he or she should use the factors to make a reasonable decision as to whether a specialty hospital was "under development" as of a certain date.

Mr. BREAUX. Is it your understanding that a specialty hospital that has, as of November 18, 2003, met zoning requirements, received approval from the local planning board, and received partial funding, but has not yet completed all architectural plans would be "under development"?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, it is my understanding that the Secretary would have discretion to determine to what extent the hospital was under development as of November 18, 2003. If the Secretary found that the hospital was "under development," he or she would be able to exempt that specialty hospital from the 18-month self-referral limitation.

Mr. BREAUX. Similarly, is it your understanding that a specialty hospital that has completed or substantially completed architectural plans but has not received full funding would qualify for the exception?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, it is my understanding that the Secretary would have discretion to determine to what extent the hospital was under development as of November 18, 2003. If the Secretary found that the hospital was "under development," he or she would be able to exempt that specialty hospital from the 18-month self-referral limitation.

Mr. BREAUX. I thank my distinguished colleague for engaging in the colloquy.

RETAIL PHARMACIES AND COMMUNITY PHARMACISTS

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today to engage the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator GRASSLEY, in a colloquy regarding benefits that Medicare beneficiaries may receive through retail pharmacies and community pharmacists.

Section 1860D-4 of the conference report to accompany the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003 states that sponsors of Medicare drug plans or organizations that offer Medicare Advantage plans shall permit plan enrollees to receive benefits through a pharmacy other than a mail-order pharmacy. This benefit includes the delivery of a 90-day supply of drugs or biologicals. The conference report states that such enrollees would have access to mail-order pharmacies but that the Secretary shall consider the extent to which the other factors identified in the language. The language included in S. 1, as this language was "under development." As of November 18, 2003, my intent in offering this amendment was to prohibit plans from implementing restrictions that would steer consumers to mail-order pharmacies. The Senate voted 95 to 0 in favor of requiring Medicare drug plans and Medicare Advantage organizations to allow local community pharmacists to fill long-term prescriptions and offer any other services that they are equipped and licensed to provide.

The language does permit a Medicare drug plan or Medicare Advantage organization to charge a different copayment for a mail-order prescription versus a prescription filled by a community pharmacy. This happens today in many health plans.

I note that the conference report would require plans to provide clear information to beneficiaries about copayments and deductibles. This information would have to include details on the differences in charges between mail-order and retail prescriptions.

My concern is that any differences in charges between mail order and retail be reasonable differences, based on the actual cost of delivering the service. I would be concerned if differences in charges were used as a method of steering seniors and the disabled to mail order pharmacies.

I know that Chairman GRASSLEY and I agree that since seniors trust their local pharmacists, they should be allowed to keep those relationships in place.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I say to my colleague from Wyoming that Medicare drug plans and Medicare Advantage organizations should not force seniors or the disabled to choose a mail-order house when they would prefer to patronize their local community pharmacy.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I recognize that Senator from Wyoming is correct in noting that the conference report permits plans to set a different copayment charge to the beneficiary for a mail-order prescription versus a retail prescription. However, it is my expectation that any differential in charge be reasonable and based on the actual cost of providing the service in or through the setting in which it is provided. I also would expect that the Secretary of Health and Human Services would disapprove of any plan that would impose an additional charge that was intended primarily to steer Medicare beneficiaries to mail-order pharmacies versus retail pharmacies.
Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I have voted today to oppose the termination of debate on the Medicare Conference Report because I have carefully analyzed the report and come to the conclusion that far from being a bipartisan compromise on prescription drug benefits, the report is nothing short of an attempt to compromise the integrity of the Medicare and Medicaid system as we know it.

When it comes to health care in America, there are many parties in interest—providers, patients, care facilities, and pharmaceutical suppliers, to name a few. These groups have interests that may, at times, be in conflict, but I believe one overwhelming interest unites them all: providing the American public with the health care services and treatment that it needs. Regrettably, I find that the report we have been asked to consider has abandoned unifying principle.

Worse than abandoning our commitment to the health of our Nation, when viewed as a whole, the report strikes at the foundation of the Medicare and Medicaid system. Rather than buttress the system of comprehensive care for our senior citizens and disabled persons, the report actually sows the seeds of its demise by undermining its ability to provide a prescription drug benefit, subsidizing competing private health plans, and increasing Medicare premiums without increasing the benefits provided.

The overwhelming drive to reconsider the Medicare and Medicaid systems came from listening to our constituents and their frustration with the ever-increasing cost of the medicines they needed. From blood thinners, to antibiotics, to state-of-the-art pharmaceuticals for cancer and HIV/AIDS, the cry for help was clear: the cost of prescription drugs was breaking the backs of the Americans who were paying for these expensive, but life-saving therapies.

Far from addressing these needs, however, the report actually makes the problem worse. On the administrative level, the report disdains the Medicare system’s purchasing power by mandating the purchase of necessary medications by individual Medicare regions, rather than as a whole system. With more providers, more buyers, pharmaceutical companies are more able than ever to raise their prices, because the individual regions will have less bargaining power.

The report will also impact average beneficiaries by potentially depriving them of the specific drugs they need by providing coverage for only one or two of each class of drug. In a world where antibiotic resistant strains of common ailments are on the rise, this could be a very expensive proposition. Someone who needs a drug you need is not one of the covered drugs in the antibiotic class. Difficulties only escalate in medically complex cases where patients’ individual responses to pharmaceuticals may vary dramatically, as in treatments for high blood pressure, high cholesterol, cancer, and HIV/AIDS.

Even worse, what flexibility there is in the report to tailor the limited drug benefit to individual patients must now be requested and petitioned for by the patients themselves. Placing the paperwork burden on seniors and the disabled only shifts the burden to the people least able to bear it. They may not be surprised to learn that as a result, more and more beneficiaries will lose access to the medicines they need.

Finally, the report strikes a further blow to more than 6 million of our neediest citizens, those who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid. At present, States have the statutory flexibility to make any copayments for persons who are “dual eligible.” Under the report, however, persons with dual coverage will face increased out-of-pocket costs because States will lose this flexibility. As a result, Americans who are already below the poverty level would be expected to make copayments between $1 and $3—a huge hardship for single persons with incomes of less than $12,120 per year, and couples with incomes of less than $12,120 per year.

More than failing to provide the promised prescription drug benefit, however, the report actually paves the way for dismantling Medicare and Medicaid altogether. The report establishes a demonstration project for “premium support” in six metropolitan areas. “Premium support” does not mean, as one might think, additional Federal support for areas where costs are especially high, and premiums are not sufficient to cover all expense. Just the opposite, it is a way of increasing the Medicare premiums Americans pay in order to remove some of our current care costs. Moreover, with a “demonstration project” such as this in place, it would be a simple step to broaden the “project” to include the entire United States—and with an estimate average 25 percent increase in premiums, the costs to American citizens would be substantial.

The report would also provide a $12 billion subsidy to private Health Maintenance Organizations and Preferred Provider Organizations—HMOs and PPOs. With a massive subsidy such as this, there will be no question but that HMOs and PPOs will have a competitive edge over Medicare because they will receive more money per plan participant than Medicare will, and with more money, more beneficiaries will be able to provide more benefits. “Premium support” and a $12 billion subsidy for private insurers look suspiciously like a one-two punch aimed at Medicare. For not to have “premium support” will increase the cost of Medicare without raising benefit levels, while on the other, a multi-billion dollar subsidy will allow HMOs and PPOs to slash premiums and provide more services. Add to this a prescription drug benefit that actually leaves millions of Americans worse off than they are now, and it is difficult to see how this conference report responds to the simple unifying principle of our health care system: providing Americans with the health care they need.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, our seniors deserve a comprehensive, meaningful drug benefit under Medicare—it’s something that I, like so many of my colleagues, have been fighting for years. The world of health care has changed, and Medicare should be updated to give seniors the services and care they need.

I voted for this bill when it first came to the Senate because I thought it was a good start, and I hoped we could build on it in conference. Unfortunately, now that I see the result, I have to say this is not good enough for New York’s seniors—in fact, the bad parts outweigh the good.

The bill contains some good things—it provides a good benefit for seniors who have low incomes or very high drug costs who have no other drug coverage. But for the average middle class senior, with moderate drug costs, the benefit is much too small.

In fact, the way this benefit is structured, hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers who currently have coverage may actually end up worse off than they are today—and that doesn’t sound like a benefit to me.

When I voted for the bill the first time around, I said that if it got any weaker, got any closer to the House version, I could not, in good conscience, support it. And, unfortunately, that seems to be what has happened here.

Other than the generic drug provisions—which represent a huge win for consumers across the board—it seems clear to me that the choice was between seniors and the big drug companies, the big drug companies have won.

Of all the bad things in this bill, the thing that angers me the most is that Congress has squandered away the single best weapon we have against rising drug costs by forbidding Medicare from using its buying power to negotiate lower drug prices with the drug companies.

At a time of rising budget deficits and escalating costs, it really makes you wonder why the Congress would go out of its way to forbid the Federal Government from using its buying power to get prices like we do through the VA.

If the Federal Government leveraged its full buying power under Medicare, we might not have a doughnut hole in this benefit at all.

The impact of this reckless prohibition is seen in a study that shows that the drug companies will earn windfall profits of $139 billion over the next eight years, alone from this bill.
This bill not only ensures we will be paying the highest possible price for drugs in this country, but it also guts any chance at reimportation—guaranteeing the drug companies a captive audience.

Is this the Republicans’ idea of cost containment?

What this bill does is ensure that the government is gouged by the drug companies while putting a huge bulls-eye on the Medicare program. The prohibition on negotiation, and artificial “cost containment” mechanisms in this bill will simply help the opponents of Medicare justify shifting more and more costs onto the backs of seniors.

Under the drug benefit before the Senate today, the average middle class senior could still be saddled with up to 80 percent of their drug costs. And almost 30 percent of beneficiaries would actually pay more for this Medicare drug benefit than they would be getting back in drug coverage. What kind of relief is that?

So this bill represents a paltry benefit—or no benefit at all—for most people who currently have no drug coverage. I had hoped that the bill would—at the very least—help provide a down payment for one-third of the New Yorkers who currently have no coverage, but I don’t think it even does that.

In fact, there is a very good chance this benefit will actually jeopardize access to affordable drugs for New Yorkers who currently have good coverage.

Of the 2.7 million Medicare beneficiaries in New York State, 989,000 have prescription drug coverage from their former employers; 329,000 are enrollees in New York State Medicaid program.

First, let’s look at the EPIC program. Right now, EPIC is available to individuals with incomes less than $35,000 and couples with incomes less than $50,000. People in EPIC currently have access to nearly any drug their doctors prescribe, and can go to virtually any pharmacy in the state to get their prescriptions filled.

I fought to get strong language in the Senate version of the Medicare bill that would have provided these New Yorkers with a benefit better than the one they get through EPIC.

Then, if you take away New York State a subsidy equal to about $375 million per year to help it continue the EPIC and even expand it to provide a more generous benefit, to cover the disabled, which the State currently does not do, and to enroll even more people...

The watered-down compromise in the conference report leaves far too many questions unanswered.

Under the bill, if the State wants to use any of the new Federal investment in Medicare, it has to force EPIC seniors to go and enroll in a Medicare private plan and the State legislature will have to go back to the drawing board and restructure the entire EPIC program to coordinate with the Medicare plans.

The end result will be a program so laden with red tape that it is a virtual certainty that seniors fail through the coverage mechanisms. It will be an administrative nightmare for the State to implement.

I have yet to hear one compelling argument for how the bill before the Senate will enhance the EPIC program. The State can’t even tell me what will happen to EPIC and the 329,000 seniors who depend on it if this Medicare bill passes.

Even more shocking is the fact that the bill gives the private Medicare plans a say in how generous any additional state coverage can be. The way I read it, under the new scheme, the Medicare plans will be able to limit which drugs an enrollee has access to and limit pharmacies they can go to—no such restrictions currently exist for EPIC enrollees. In short, when it comes to EPIC, many seniors may be worse off with the bill than without it.

One of the concerns I have about this bill is that it simply doesn’t do enough to protect retirees who have good employer-sponsored coverage.

The conference made some progress toward reducing the employer drop rate by giving employers a tax break worth an additional $18 billion. However, to truly protect retirees from losing coverage would cost about $65 billion.

Even with the change made in conference, an estimated 215,000 New Yorkers will likely lose their retiree coverage if this bill becomes law, and many others may see their options narrowed. That’s simply too big a risk for me.

In addition, starting in 2005, all Medicare beneficiaries would be saddled with higher deductibles for doctor visits. Under the bill, Medicare premiums would no longer be universal, but higher for at least one-third of New Yorkers. This means that as many as 80 percent of their drug costs. And all seniors would be back to square one.

One of the big goals of the Balanced Budget Act was to provide them the resources they need to pay for drugs, and seniors would be back to square one.

The Nation’s teaching hospitals are the backbone of our health care system—they do the research and they train the doctors—and I am worried we will not get another opportunity to help provide them the resources they need to do their job.

The bill also addresses the crisis in physician payments which was driving so many physicians out of the Medicare program and leaving seniors in the lurch. These issues must be addressed—we’ve fought back the draconian cuts in the Balanced Budget Act for five years now. Our providers are struggling, and it’s time to set things straight.

I am pleased that the bill includes provisions based on a bill I introduced with Senator SANTORUM to stabilize the Medicare+Choice program in the short term.

The long-term changes will ensure that plans in programs like Long Island and Westchester get paid on par with plans in other areas of the country and will help significantly bring down premiums in these areas over the next few years.

Perhaps the biggest win in the bill—not only for seniors, but for all consumers, employers, and purchasers of prescription drugs—is the extraordinary victory we have achieved in the fight to keep the unprecedented influence of the big pharmaceutical companies: generic drugs.

The generic drug provisions which Senators GREGG, KENNEDY, McCAIN and I have been fighting for over the past few years—and which Senator SANTORUM and I introduced as an amendment in the Senate by a vote of 94 to 1—represent a huge step forward for all seniors, consumers, and purchasers of prescription drugs.

The provisions close loopholes in the law and end the abusive practices in the pharmaceutical industry which have kept lower-priced generics off the market and cost consumers billions of dollars.
The Gregg-Schumer amendments to the Hatch-Waxman Act, would put an end to the practice of brand companies listing frivolous patents for the sole purpose of automatically delaying generic approval. It would also ensure that the 180-day stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at the FDA before a generic application is filed. This way, the 30-month stay—if there is one at all would limit brand drug companies to a single 30-month stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at FDA by generic applicants.
Second, key to ensuring that patent issues are resolved in a timely way, the provisions clarify that a generic applicant has a right to seek a declaratory judgment that its product does not infringe a patent that a patent is valid, and direct courts that they must hear these declaratory judgment cases to the maximum extent permitted by Constitution.
Third, the provisions enforce the patent listing requirements at the FDA by allowing a generic applicant, when it has been sued for patent infringement, to file a counterclaim to have the brand company delist the patent or if it is invalid. This clarification of the courts' jurisdiction will have an immediate effect on both pending and future declaratory judgment actions brought by generic applicants.
Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President,
on July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B.
Johnson stood with President Harry Truman and, together, they delivered the Medicare program. They proudly addressed the American people as President Johnson proclaimed, "No longer will older Americans be denied the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they may enjoy dignity in their later years." Today, those words still move me and yet, if I am to be honest, they also haunt me as we consider the future of Medicare.
Mr. Horde. The Gregg-Schumer amendments to the Hatch-Waxman Act would put an end to the practice of brand companies listing frivolous patents
for the sole purpose of automatically delaying generic approval. It would also ensure that the 180-day stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at the FDA by a generic application is filed. This way, the 30-month stay—if there is one at all—will run concurrent with FDA approval of the generic application and minimize delay.
Second, key to ensuring that patent issues are resolved in a timely way, the provisions clarify that a generic applicant has a right to seek a declaratory judgment that its product does not infringe a patent that a patent is valid, and direct courts that they must hear these declaratory judgment cases to the maximum extent permitted by Constitution.
Third, the provisions enforce the patent listing requirements at the FDA by allowing a generic applicant, when it has been sued for patent infringement,
to file a counterclaim to have the brand company delist the patent or if it is invalid. This clarification of the courts' jurisdiction will have an immediate effect on both pending and future declaratory judgment actions
brought by generic applicants.
Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President,
on July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B.
Johnson stood with President Harry Truman and, together, they delivered the Medicare program. They proudly addressed the American people as President Johnson proclaimed, "No longer will older Americans be denied
the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they may enjoy dignity in their later years." Today, those words still move me and yet, if I am to be honest,
they also haunt me as we consider the future of Medicare.
Mr. Horde. The Gregg-Schumer amendments to the Hatch-Waxman Act would put an end to the practice of brand companies listing frivolous patents
for the sole purpose of automatically delaying generic approval. It would also ensure that the 180-day stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at the FDA by a generic application is filed. This way, the 30-month stay—if there is one at all—will run concurrent
with FDA approval of the generic
application and minimize delay.
Second, key to ensuring that patent issues are resolved in a timely way, the provisions clarify that a generic applicant has a right to seek a declaratory judgment that its product does not infringe a patent that a patent is valid, and direct courts that they must hear these declaratory judgment cases to the maximum extent permitted by Constitution.
Third, the provisions enforce the patent listing requirements at the FDA by allowing a generic applicant, when it has been sued for patent infringement,
to file a counterclaim to have the brand company delist the patent or if it is invalid. This clarification of the courts' jurisdiction will have an immediate effect on both pending and future declaratory judgment actions
brought by generic applicants.
Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President,
on July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B.
Johnson stood with President Harry Truman and, together, they delivered the Medicare program. They proudly addressed the American people as President Johnson proclaimed, "No longer will older Americans be denied
the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they may enjoy dignity in their later years." Today, those words still move me and yet, if I am to be honest,
they also haunt me as we consider the future of Medicare.
Mr. Horde. The Gregg-Schumer amendments to the Hatch-Waxman Act would put an end to the practice of brand companies listing frivolous patents
for the sole purpose of automatically delaying generic approval. It would also ensure that the 180-day stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at the FDA by a generic application is filed. This way, the 30-month stay—if there is one at all—will run concurrent
with FDA approval of the generic
application and minimize delay.
Second, key to ensuring that patent issues are resolved in a timely way, the provisions clarify that a generic applicant has a right to seek a declaratory judgment that its product does not infringe a patent that a patent is valid, and direct courts that they must hear these declaratory judgment cases to the maximum extent permitted by Constitution.
Third, the provisions enforce the patent listing requirements at the FDA by allowing a generic applicant, when it has been sued for patent infringement,
to file a counterclaim to have the brand company delist the patent or if it is invalid. This clarification of the courts' jurisdiction will have an immediate effect on both pending and future declaratory judgment actions
brought by generic applicants.
Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President,
on July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B.
Johnson stood with President Harry Truman and, together, they delivered the Medicare program. They proudly addressed the American people as President Johnson proclaimed, "No longer will older Americans be denied
the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they may enjoy dignity in their later years." Today, those words still move me and yet, if I am to be honest,
they also haunt me as we consider the future of Medicare.
Mr. Horde. The Gregg-Schumer amendments to the Hatch-Waxman Act would put an end to the practice of brand companies listing frivolous patents
for the sole purpose of automatically delaying generic approval. It would also ensure that the 180-day stay of generic approval, and only on patents listed at the FDA by a generic application is filed. This way, the 30-month stay—if there is one at all—will run concurrent
with FDA approval of the generic
application and minimize delay.
Second, key to ensuring that patent issues are resolved in a timely way, the provisions clarify that a generic applicant has a right to seek a declaratory judgment that its product does not infringe a patent that a patent is valid, and direct courts that they must hear these declaratory judgment cases to the maximum extent permitted by Constitution.
Third, the provisions enforce the patent listing requirements at the FDA by allowing a generic applicant, when it has been sued for patent infringement,
to file a counterclaim to have the brand company delist the patent or if it is invalid. This clarification of the courts' jurisdiction will have an immediate effect on both pending and future declaratory judgment actions
brought by generic applicants.
Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President,
on July 30, 1965, President Lyndon B.
Johnson stood with President Harry Truman and, together, they delivered the Medicare program. They proudly addressed the American people as President Johnson proclaimed, "No longer will older Americans be denied
the healing miracle of modern medicine. No longer will illness crush and destroy the savings that they have so carefully put away over a lifetime so that they may enjoy dignity in their later years." Today, those words still move me and yet, if I am to be honest,
they also haunt me as we consider the future of Medicare.
which the Administrator of CMS said does not exist in nature and would probably not work in practice. The former head of the Health Insurance Association of America said that drug-only plans are like insuring against haircuts. Right? Well, there is no limit on what these drug-only plans can charge seniors alone at all. These plans could charge seniors $100, $500, or even $1,000 per month. These premiums could be completely prohibitive. West Virginia seniors will certainly not be able to afford premiums that high. If that is the case, seniors will not really have the option to stay in traditional Medicare and get a prescription drug benefit. They will be forced to enroll in an HMO in order to get a drug benefit and then pay half of what they are worth. Again, to be fair, this bill has some provisions, including those affecting physician services and rural hospitals that will be helpful to my home State of West Virginia. However, these recognitions are too little. In fact, I pushed for these because I understand that good care is critical to good health, and that we must adequately reimburse Medicare providers for that good care. However, despite this, I have grave concerns about the compromise produced by the Conference Committee charged with reconciling differences between the House- and Senate-passed Medicare reform bills. I was on the conference committee. I understand the arguments on both sides. And now, more than ever, I believe that the Congress needs to pass a meaningful prescription drug benefit that gives seniors more for their money, not less. I do not want to privatize Medicare, undermine retiree coverage for force seniors to flip-flop between plans. Unfortunately, this bill would do all of that and more. Today, 339,000 seniors live in West Virginia. Nearly 30,000 West Virginia seniors will lose their employer-sponsored prescription drug coverage simply because of the enactment of this bill. As health savings accounts (HSAs) created by this legislation select and cover healthier, younger seniors, employers will be left to cover seniors. Employers that will see their health care costs rise and they will be priced out of continuing to provide employees or retirees with coverage, leaving remaining retirees with a benefit that is less desirable than they had before. Meanwhile, 70,000 West Virginia seniors will fall into a $2,800 coverage gap, forcing them to bear the total cost of their drug themselves until they reach the end of that gap. In fact, the available benefit will be so stingy that many seniors will pay more for their drugs than they will receive in actual drug benefits. At the same time, private insurance plans will be assured even greater profits through a $12 billion “slush fund” created by this legislation. Proponents argue that this “slush fund” is necessary to bring HMOs into rural areas. The fact is that this additional funding is necessary because HMOs have overestimated their costs and have lowed their investors, providing them with no return to their stockholders and they have to pay for good marketing materials because that’s the best way to skim off the healthiest seniors. On average, private insurers underwrite that 15 percent of total spending whereas Medicare’s administrative costs are 2 to 3 percent of total spending. There is no way that private plans can be as efficient as Medicare. Yet I am not opposed to allowing them to compete fairly with Medicare. However, we should make them compete on a level playing field. We should make them compete by creating efficiencies. We shouldn’t take money away from the high-quality Medicare program and give it to the HMOs to help them instead of seniors. That is not the free-market at work. That is not real competition. And, while a “premium support” demonstration, which effectively allows a voucher system instead of a real Medicare prescription drug benefit, will take place in six metropolitan statistical areas (MSAs) initially, I believe we can safely assume that this demonstration is meant to be standard at some point. If demonstration is expected to raise monthly Medicare premiums by 26 percent. Perhaps most disturbing, 45,000 “dual eligible” beneficiaries will pay more for every prescription drug they receive under this legislation. Dual eligibles are seniors who qualify for Medicare by virtue of their income. They currently receive drug coverage under Medicaid. In my State of West Virginia, these seniors pay between $0.50 and $2 per pill depending on the total cost of the drug. Under this legislation, they could be required to pay twice that much. I want to be clear on this point because I was among those insisting that the dual eligibles be included under the Medicare benefit and not left in Medicaid. I believe this conference report does the right thing by including these seniors in the Medicare benefit. However, this legislation precludes States from “wrapping around” Medicare. In other words, States will have to pay $2 per pill for Federal dollars for assisting dual eligible beneficiaries with the costs not covered by Medicare. This is unprecedented. For every other benefit covered by Medicare but not by Medicaid, the states receive a Federal match to provide those benefits to our poorest seniors. For example, Medicaid covers long-term care but Medicare does not. So, for those seniors who are also eligible for Medicaid, the Federal Government provides matching dollars to states to help them care for our dual eligibles. This conference report completely twisting that concept of protecting our poorest seniors against increased costs in an unprecedented way. This arrangement represents a fundamental change in the relationship between Medicare and Medicaid. Many predict that the individuals affected will choose to forgo the prescription drugs that they need rather than try to pay what they cannot afford.
perfect, makes a good start at addressing the needs of Minnesota's seniors and health care providers as well as those across this country.

This is the largest and most comprehensive rural health care improvement that we have ever seen or will see in this body. Last year, as I campaigned across Minnesota and spent many hours talking to our rural health care providers, it was apparent to me that most of our hospitals and doctors had given up hope for fair Medicare reimbursement.

Thanks to the strong leadership of Chairman Grassley, we have a bill before us that has $26 billion—or $2.6 billion each year for 10 years—for rural providers, something that one short year ago seemed nearly impossible.

Quality rural health care is one of the foundations of our rural communities—this isn't simply about making sure our rural hospitals are adequately reimbursed. This is about preserving a way of life for our farmers.

Without rural hospitals and physicians, it is tough to raise a family and hard to attract new businesses to rural communities. Without access to health care, many of our out-state towns simply don't exist.

This bill seeks to eliminate many of the disparities in reimbursement rates that have existed too long and crippled the rural health system. Hospitals, physicians, and ambulances, as well as all of those health professionals who work within these systems will not see Medicare reimbursement rates that better reflect the realities of the costs of providing care in rural communities.

As I look back on the accomplishments of the first session of the 108th Congress, addressing the rural health care payment disparity under the Medicare program will undoubtedly be one of the most meaningful achievements to Minnesotans. Many said it couldn't be done, and today I have the great opportunity to come to the Senate floor and tell my constituents that we will be voting on a bill that takes a major step in providing equality with urban payments that will significantly improve their ability to provide quality care.

Minnesota has a long tradition of providing high quality care, but many of our seniors have not had access to this care because of the lack of prescription drug coverage under the Medicare program.

Again, I have the great honor coming here and announcing to the seniors back home that help is on the way.

Beginning in 2006, the 677,400 Medicare beneficiaries in Minnesota will have access to drug coverage for the first time in the history of the Medicare program, and 187,356 of these people would not otherwise have access to drug coverage.

This means access to new drug therapies that could never have been imagined in 1965 when Medicare was created. It is time to bring this program in line with current medical practices.

A 1965 Cadillac is a classic. A 1965 health care benefit is a travesty.

This bill will provide prescription drug coverage for 41 million people in this country—41 million people! Is this the perfect benefit? I'm not sure what the perfect benefit looks like. But I do know that the average senior's drug costs will be cut roughly in half under this proposal. That is meaningful assistance for all seniors and the bill provides even more assistance for those low-income seniors who need to shoulder even more of the burden.

Let's not let perfect be the enemy of good. In the words of the AARP, one of the largest senior associations, "Millions of Americans can't afford to wait for perfect."

And we know that drugs are most effective when used to prevent the onset of a health condition. Right now almost 93 percent of our health care dollars go to treat a person who is sick. Without routine screening and early detection capabilities, we have a program that waits for people to develop dangerous and costly conditions before they can receive care.

It appears to me that there is a 1965 model of comprehensive rural health care that belongs in a 2003 health care system. This bill for the first time includes a "Welcome to Medicare" physical that will allow beneficiaries to get an assessment of their health condition and possibly detect conditions that could possibly escalate over time. It also includes cardiovascular screening, blood tests and diabetes screening that will be available without deductibles or co-pays to encourage seniors to take advantage of these benefits.

I want to stop for a moment at the word "encourage." It is absolutely critical for every senior to know that they don't have to take advantage of the preventive screenings, they are not required to participate in the prescription drug plan, and most importantly, no seniors under this proposal are forced into a private health plan. Every senior who chooses to remain in traditional Medicare has that equally important option under this bill.

This bill is about expanding choice. Time and time again I hear from seniors who have said they want to receive the same benefits that my colleagues and I have and in the House of Representatives. As this bill is at the moment it has no seniors participate in the prescription drug plan, and most importantly, no seniors under this proposal are forced into a private health plan. Every senior who chooses to remain in traditional Medicare has that equally important option under this bill.

This bill is about expanding choice. Time and time again I hear from seniors who have said they want to receive the same benefits that my colleagues and I have and in the House of Representatives. As this bill is at the moment it has no seniors participate in the prescription drug plan, and most importantly, no seniors under this proposal are forced into a private health plan. Every senior who chooses to remain in traditional Medicare has that equally important option under this bill.

This bill is about expanding choice. Time and time again I hear from seniors who have said they want to receive the same benefits that my colleagues and I have and in the House of Representatives. As this bill is at the moment it has no seniors participate in the prescription drug plan, and most importantly, no seniors under this proposal are forced into a private health plan. Every senior who chooses to remain in traditional Medicare has that equally important option under this bill.

As we look toward completing our session drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Republican leadership and even a member of the President's Cabinet twisted arms and bullied individual House Members late in the night and into the wee hours of Saturday morning. A roll call vote was held open for almost 3 hours—the longest House roll call vote in history—until enough Members ignored their conscience, cried "mercy," and voted "yes" on the Medicare bill. This is the closest most Americans would find such tactics repulsive and unbecoming of how Members of Congress should behave. One might expect to see such arm twisting and intimidation during a prison interrogation scene in an episode of "Law & Order," but not in the session of Congress—especially on a vote of such great importance to the citizens of this country.

What happened the other night was nothing short of a subversion of the democratic process itself and a subversion of the democratic principles our Founders stood for. Is this the manner in which legislating that our Founding Fathers had in mind when they so craftily designed the political institutions of this country? I do not believe it is the scenario our Founders envisioned when they created the Senate—to act as the "saucer," as George Washington so wisely said, to absorb the overheated passions pouring out of the House of Representatives.

But our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.

The Thanksgiving season is upon us. Our work in this session is nearing completion. But our work will not be done until and unless we seize this historic opportunity and bring a prescription drug benefit and hopes for a better and healthier life and make this a Thanksgiving to remember for all the right reasons for our senior citizens and their families.
that history is again repeating itself. I can recall a painful experience during my majority leadership when an outraged citizenry, composed mostly of seniors, forced Congress to repeal the ill-fated Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act back in 1989. The year before, Congress was engaged in a Medicare debate eerily similar to the one we are having today. An agreement was reached to make the most sweeping change in Medicare’s “then” 23 years of existence.

At that time, Congress agreed to two key changes to the Medicare Program—a prescription drug benefit and a “stop-loss” protection from catastrophic medical bills. Facing deficits as we do today, Congress decided that beneficiaries should pay for the new benefits themselves, with the wealthiest paying the most. The new law included a complicated benefit that was too difficult to explain and a lengthy delay in the benefit’s taking effect. In the end, the public rejected the bill, and the Congress excluded no part of it. After angry protests, it was repealed. We are poised to make the same mistake again.

I foresee a great deal of confusion and dismay occurring around kitchen tables across America when people actually start to read beyond the newspaper headlines and see the fine print of this plan three years from now. Seniors may not know whether to laugh or cry. And if seniors reject this new Medicare plan, it will fail and fail miserably.

When senior citizens wake up in 2006 and find out what this bill is really about, it will not be the turkey that needs to be eaten on Thanksgiving day, it will be all of us in Congress eating crow.

We should not let political ideology drive our Nation’s Medicare policy when we are dealing with the health care and lives of the most vulnerable in the country. I am worried that this body is being asked to hand over one of the most popular Government programs in history to private insurance companies. I have been down this tortured road before during my 51-year tenure in Congress. My constituents and others around the Nation are reeling from public programs that have been turned over to the so-called free market. Utility rates, cable rates, airline rates, you name it, the free market has ensured exorbitant prices while diminishing pensions and retirement security have taken a similar beating.

So here we are again, this time being presented with a rosy scenario about how private industry competition will improve the Medicare program. The rhetoric is familiar: increased competition, lower costs, and greater services will be provided. Yes, the rhetoric is familiar, but so is the reality. This scheme will not deliver what it promises.

I fear that we are going to wind up with a patchwork across the country of differing coverages, differing plans, differing copays and differing premiums. No senior will know for sure what they can count on.

Analysis of the GOP Medicare bill estimates that 31.000 Medicare beneficiaries in West Virginia will lose their retiree health benefits as a direct result of this package. Nearly 45,000 Medicaid beneficiaries in West Virginia will pay more for the prescription drugs they need. As many as 27,700 fewer seniors in West Virginia will qualify for low-income protections because of lower and lower qualifying income levels. More than 7,500 Medicare beneficiaries in West Virginia will pay more in Medicare premiums because of income means-testing.

Let’s slow down and take a better look at this legislation and the unintended consequences. We need more time to explain this plan to our elderly citizens. Don’t we need their feedback? I doubt that our Nation’s seniors will even want to be on this particular Medicare board that poisons the well. Seniors will likely want no part of it—especially when they see how it will undermine the rest of Medicare down the road. Just like they did almost 15 years ago, they may look back and wonder if Congress could have or should have been here earlier or could have been back here scratching their heads and scrambling to find a solution and save their seats.

This bill fails our seniors. It sells senior citizens out in exchange for big profits for prescription drug companies. America’s senior citizens and disabled citizens deserve more than some new hocus-pocus scheme that leaves them naked to the whims of private insurance companies, and offers only a new-you-see-it, now-you-don’t promise of coverage. Instead of selling illusions, Congress ought to go back to work and settle on a good, comprehensive, voluntary Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Let’s not short-change our seniors. We owe them much, much better.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my concerns with the conference agreement on H.R. 1, the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003.

My original intentions were to work with this body to create and provide a fiscally responsible prescription drug benefit for seniors who are in need. My commitment to responsibility and obligation through this process was to make sure that Medicare beneficiaries with the lowest monthly income and the highest monthly drug bill were taken care of. That obligation has been fulfilled by this agreement.

This bill will provide almost 1 million Georgia seniors with completely voluntary access to a Medicare prescription drug benefit for the first time in the history of the Medicare program. Starting next year, low-income seniors will get drug cards that provide $500 worth of assistance for prescription drugs. Seniors will be covered with access to an initial physical and other new preventive benefits such as cholesterol and diabetes screenings. This legislation creates new Health Savings Accounts, HSAs, to pay for qualified medical expenses, available to all beneficiaries with contributions allowed from employers and family members.

Beginning in 2006, beneficiaries will be eligible to get prescription drug coverage through a Medicare-approved plan. In exchange for a monthly premium of about $35, seniors will pay no out-of-pocket for prescription drugs. Senior citizens out in exchange for big profits for prescription drug companies. America’s senior citizens and disabled citizens deserve more than some new hocus-pocus scheme that leaves them naked to the whims of private insurance companies, and offers only a new-you-see-it, now-you-don’t promise of coverage. Instead of selling illusions, Congress ought to go back to work and settle on a good, comprehensive, voluntary Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Let’s not short-change our seniors. We owe them much, much better.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my concerns with the conference agreement on H.R. 1, the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003.

My original intentions were to work with this body to create and provide a fiscally responsible prescription drug benefit for seniors who are in need. My commitment to responsibility and obligation through this process was to make sure that Medicare beneficiaries with the lowest monthly income and the highest monthly drug bill were taken care of. That obligation has been fulfilled by this agreement.

This bill will provide almost 1 million Georgia seniors with completely voluntary access to a Medicare prescription drug benefit for the first time in the history of the Medicare program. Starting next year, low-income seniors will get drug cards that provide $500 worth of assistance for prescription drugs. Seniors will be covered with access to an initial physical and other new preventive benefits such as cholesterol and diabetes screenings. This legislation creates new Health Savings Accounts, HSAs, to pay for qualified medical expenses, available to all beneficiaries with contributions allowed from employers and family members.

Beginning in 2006, beneficiaries will be eligible to get prescription drug coverage through a Medicare-approved plan. In exchange for a monthly premium of about $35, seniors will pay no out-of-pocket for prescription drugs. Senior citizens out in exchange for big profits for prescription drug companies. America’s senior citizens and disabled citizens deserve more than some new hocus-pocus scheme that leaves them naked to the whims of private insurance companies, and offers only a new-you-see-it, now-you-don’t promise of coverage. Instead of selling illusions, Congress ought to go back to work and settle on a good, comprehensive, voluntary Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Let’s not short-change our seniors. We owe them much, much better.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my concerns with the conference agreement on H.R. 1, the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003.

My original intentions were to work with this body to create and provide a fiscally responsible prescription drug benefit for seniors who are in need. My commitment to responsibility and obligation through this process was to make sure that Medicare beneficiaries with the lowest monthly income and the highest monthly drug bill were taken care of. That obligation has been fulfilled by this agreement.

This bill will provide almost 1 million Georgia seniors with completely voluntary access to a Medicare prescription drug benefit for the first time in the history of the Medicare program. Starting next year, low-income seniors will get drug cards that provide $500 worth of assistance for prescription drugs. Seniors will be covered with access to an initial physical and other new preventive benefits such as cholesterol and diabetes screenings. This legislation creates new Health Savings Accounts, HSAs, to pay for qualified medical expenses, available to all beneficiaries with contributions allowed from employers and family members.

Beginning in 2006, beneficiaries will be eligible to get prescription drug coverage through a Medicare-approved plan. In exchange for a monthly premium of about $35, seniors will pay no out-of-pocket for prescription drugs. Senior citizens out in exchange for big profits for prescription drug companies. America’s senior citizens and disabled citizens deserve more than some new hocus-pocus scheme that leaves them naked to the whims of private insurance companies, and offers only a new-you-see-it, now-you-don’t promise of coverage. Instead of selling illusions, Congress ought to go back to work and settle on a good, comprehensive, voluntary Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Let’s not short-change our seniors. We owe them much, much better.
has the potential to expand our budget deficit for years to come. Placing the cost burden of an entitlement program on the shoulders of our children’s generation seems very unfair. Shouldn’t it be possible for this legislative body to create a prescription drug benefit plan that is fiscally responsible? Have we successfully done this? With a cost containment trigger we could have done just that and we have missed the opportunity.

In addition to the looming fiscal problems of this measure, I am also very concerned with cuts for the reimbursement of drugs for cancer treatment. Community oncology practices in Georgia and nationwide will be at risk of closing their doors because of these cuts. When approximately 1.4 million people are diagnosed with new cases of cancer each year and approximately 550,000 people die from cancer each year, why are we decreasing these drug reimbursements?

Our seniors and pharmacists may also experience financial risk as a result of the passage of this bill. They play a fundamental role in delivering these benefits to our seniors. Pharmacy Benefit Managers, PBMs, should be required to tell all financial concessions they receive from manufacturers such as discounts, rebates, and indirect subsidies and should be audited to ensure accountability. I want to ensure that these pharmacists will be able to compete on the same level as the PBMs and purchasing by mail so that they can continue serving their patients. We also need to acknowledge and protect the role of medication counseling services provided by our pharmacists as this is a valuable benefit to the patient.

Another concern is the lack of flexibility within the Medicare program. Competition among private healthcare plans in Medicare will help ensure more comprehensive and greater savings for seniors. It will give seniors the ability to choose the healthcare plan that best meets their personal health needs rather than a one-size-fits-all government plan. A Medicare-approved private healthcare plan needs flexibility in designing benefits so that seniors can have the option to choose the coverage that makes the most sense to them and best suits their health needs. Seniors deserve choice and flexibility within their benefits, and this bill does not give seniors the full extent of flexibility they deserve.

Lastly, the means testing provisions included in this bill are positive but are not strong enough. Our goal should be to help those seniors who cannot afford life saving drugs and currently have to make the difficult choice between putting food on their table and buying the prescriptions they need. We should not waste taxpayer money on subsidizing wealthy seniors who can easily afford to pay for their own medicines.

Individuals who fall into the category of 150 percent of Federal poverty level or those with a total income of $13,470 or less will receive great benefits. However, the gaps in coverage for the middle class will make this legislation somewhat effective or possibly even more costly for certain beneficiaries. But this measure is needed, and we cannot sacrifice those folks that fall in the middle.

The decisions we will make today by voting for this measure will affect the health of every American and significantly increase and spend billions of dollars in future generations. I stand before you today burdened by trying to make the best decision for America’s seniors, for Medicare solvency, and for the financial security of our children and their future generations.

This bipartisan agreement is a necessary step to completing the promise we made to seniors, and that is to provide prescription drug coverage. It is one of the most important votes that I will vote for this conference report, but I will continuously seek ways to improve this program by seeking stronger cost containment provisions and increasing the flexibility for the plans.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to oppose the Medicare conference report. Once again, the Senate is on the verge of passing a bill that is good for everyone—except the people the bill is supposed to help. Our Nation’s seniors rely on Medicare and are asking for Congress’ help with a real Medicare drug benefit. This bill doesn’t give it to them; it is a dream package for drug companies, insurance companies, and the people who make TV ads for politicians. And it is a nightmare for too many Medicare beneficiaries.

Our elderly and disabled citizens rely on Medicare. They know it and they are comfortable with it. They know it will cover most of their health care needs whether they’re healthier or sicker, middle class, affluent, or low income.

For years now our seniors have asked us to add a prescription drug benefit to Medicare to help them pay for the costs of their medication. It is a simple, straightforward request that this bill meets with a confusing, costly, and damaging response. The bill changes Medicare from the reliable, popular program that has worked for seniors since 1965 to a Government subsidy program for private insurance companies.

The bill fundamentally changes the nature of Medicare. Instead of enhancing the current guaranteed benefit under Medicare with prescription drug coverage, it adds a cost-sharing, $60 billion hole in it and does not cover Medicare beneficiaries. In fact, the companies will be paid more than it costs traditional Medicare to cover seniors. And on top of that, there is a new $12 billion slush fund to beg them to enter the program.

And what will these insurance companies do with this extra money? They will design their plans to attract the wealthiest, wealthiest seniors—and leave poorer, sicker seniors in traditional Medicare facing higher costs.

This is no small point. Medicare has worked for decades because it is a universal, reliable program. People believe in it because it has served them. But this bill, which was supposed to simply add a new prescription drug benefit, instead changes Medicare to a new system of winners and losers.

This fundamental weakening of the Medicare system is bad enough, but the worst is the proposal which Congress is considering the changes. The conference report was put together by a small group behind closed doors. It is over a thousand pages long and is extremely complicated. But we’re being given only four days to read and digest this massive bill—this massive shift in the way we provide health care to our seniors.

Why are we rushing to vote? Are we afraid of seniors learning the truth about what’s really in this bill? This bill makes the most sweeping changes to Medicare since its creation, and we have barely had time to examine it. Our seniors deserve more than a cursory glance and crossed fingers that everything will work out.

Our seniors also deserve a real prescription drug benefit that gets the best prices for their medication. But this bill actually prohibits the Federal Government from negotiating with drug companies for lower prices. What a huge missed opportunity. What a waste of taxpayers’ dollars. We could have used the tremendous purchasing power of the 41 million Medicare beneficiaries to make sure that prices are fair. Instead, this bill is a windfall for the drug industry. Just look at drug companies’ stock prices spiking up over the last few days; it’s clear who the winners under this bill are.

The drug benefit itself is far less generous than seniors expect and deserve—and for many seniors, it will do more harm than good. Many seniors will still be responsible for most of their drug costs. Those with drug costs below $800 a year will actually pay more than they do today if they sign up for the drug benefit. Seniors with drug costs of $5,000 will still pay almost $4,000 themselves—almost 80 percent of the bill. There is a giant hole in the drug benefit—a gap in coverage where seniors continue to pay their monthly premiums but get absolutely no help from Medicare with their drug bills. I voted against the original Senate bill in part because of this gap. Now instead of closing the gap in conference, this bill actually doubles its size.

Even worse, this bill will cause many retirees who already have good drug coverage through their former employers to lose it. According to the Congressional Budget Office, 2.7 million seniors nationwide could lose their current coverage, including as many as 60,000 in Wisconsin. These seniors worked hard to earn retiree health coverage. That coverage will now be in jeopardy.

In addition, while there is additional help for some low-income beneficiaries, millions of poorer seniors will be worse off because of this bill. Up to 6 million seniors who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid—the poorest of the poor—will have higher costs. Up to 110,000 dually eligible seniors in Wisconsin could be affected. In addition, the bill cuts out the extra help for millions of other seniors if they fail a restrictive asset test.

There are some good things in this bill. It includes an increase in Medicare payments to Wisconsin that will finally begin to level the playing field for Wisconsin’s doctors, hospitals, and seniors. I am pleased that this was included.

I know there are some who say we can’t afford to wait for a perfect bill. But I believe that this bill is not just for tomorrow but for the better health of many of our seniors and will waste billions of taxpayer dollars in a giveaway to the insurance industry and drug companies.

This drug benefit is nowhere close to what our seniors asked for, and they will not be given the huge subsidies to drug and insurance companies we could have given if we had the courage to do it. We could have provided for tremendous good here. We could have done this.

But I believe that this bill is not just a giveaway to the insurance industry and waste billions of taxpayer dollars in a rush to pass it. It is another chance to see, digest or comment on proposals for declaratory judgments. This refusal to entertain a declaratory judgment plaintiff satisfy the “reasonable apprehension test” before being allowed to bring declaratory judgment actions in Federal court. Section 1101(d) provides that, so long as a generic drug company has filed an Abbreviated New Drug Application, ANDA, and the patentee has not filed suit within 45 days of receiving notice, “the courts of the United States shall, to the extent consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, have jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory judgment action imposed in any action * * * for a declaratory judgment that such patent is invalid or not infringed.” This subsection will provide relief to alleged patent infringers—at least in the Hatch-Waxman context.

First, this language sweeps away the type of discretionary barriers to a declaratory judgment action imposed in decisions such as E.M.C. Corp. v. Norand Corp. The Federal Circuit in that case found that the district court actually had jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory-judgment suit. It nevertheless allowed the district court to dismiss the action, holding that district courts may do so unless “there is no real prospect of non-judicial resolution of the dispute.” The Federal Circuit apparently felt that a patentee should be able to use what may prove to be an invalid patent as a source of bargaining power in license negotiations. This refusal to entertain a litigant’s action where jurisdiction unquestionably exists is, of course, at odds with the rule, announced 182 years ago in Cohens v. Virginia, that the Federal courts “have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given.” Blame for this practice, however, cannot entirely be laid at the feet of the Federal Circuit. The Supreme Court, in the 1995 Wilton v. Seven Falls decision, found that Federal courts have “unique and substantial discretion in deciding whether to declare the rights of litigants.” Wilton identified two sources of this discretion: it found a “textual commitment to discretion” in the Declaratory Judgment Act, emphasizing the act’s use of the word “may.” And it noted the courts’ history of recognizing discretion to decline declaratory-judgment actions.

Section 1101(d) directly sweeps away the type of discretion allowed in the E.M.C. Corp. case. First, and most importantly, it replaces the word “May”—the textual source of the discretion identified in Wilton and E.M.C. Corp.—with the word “shall.” Second, simply by creating a new source of authority to entertain declaratory judgments in the Hatch-Waxman context, section 1101(d) disentangles such actions from the tradition of discretion associated with the Declaratory Judgment Act. Armed with the word “shall,” this new section starts afresh, with no reason to be exempted from the usual (Colorado River) rule that Federal courts have a virtually unflagging obligation to exercise the jurisdiction given them.” With this new provision, generic-drug companies never will be denied access to a declaratory judgment action on the basis of pending or potential license negotiations, at least so long as the suit otherwise is constitutionally sufficient for presentation in an Article III court.

This last matter—when the case or controversy requirement for a declaratory judgment action is satisfied—is the subject of the second major aspect of section 1101(d). Senator Gordon Smith and other proponents of this subsection believe that the reasonable-apprehension test demands more than is required by the constitutional case-or-controversy requirement. We are fortified in this view by two letters received by the committee of jurisdiction from Professor John Yoo. Rather than repeat all of Professor Yoo’s analysis, I will simply include his letters at the conclusion of my remarks. As Professor Yoo notes in his first letter, the reasonable-apprehension test is “not demanded by the Supreme Court’s interpretation of the Declaratory Judgment Act.” He suggests that the test may be viewed as an exercise of the court’s discretionary power.

Section 1101(d) shifts the focus of a court’s inquiry to whether the requirements of Article III are satisfied. In deciding when a Hatch-Waxman declaratory judgment suit may meet the requirements of Article III, the courts should focus on the actual components of the case-or-controversy requirement. In the 1998 Steel Company decision, the Supreme Court reiterated that the “tried and true” Article III’s case-or-controversy requirement. In setting the constitutional standard for allowing declaratory judgments, the Supreme Court in its 1997 Aetna Life Ins. v. Haworth decision focused on the dispute’s adversity, definiteness, concreteness, and the specificity of the claims. This language inevitably invokes the injury-in-fact element of the Article III standing inquiry. It is from the injury-in-fact case—law—which asks whether an injury is concrete and particularized, and actual or imminent—that the courts draw new standards of constitutionally adequate case or controversy in the declaratory judgment context.

It thus bears mention that the Supreme Court has not hesitated to find actual Article III injury where a plaintiff forewent a legally cognizable beneficit as a result of being actually and reasonably deterred from particular conduct. Just 3 years ago, for example, the court held that even where a defendant is free to act and would not have caused no harm to the environment, environmentalist plaintiffs had standing where their “reasonable concerns about the effects of those discharges, directly affected [their] recreational, aesthetic, and property interests.”
And in 1979’s Babbitt v. United Farm Workers, the court found that plaintiffs deterred from constitutionally protected conduct had standing to challenge the offending statute where the threat of its enforcement was “not imaginary or wholly speculative.” The Court further specified that the plaintiffs were “not without some reason in fearing prosecution” where “the State has not disavowed an intention” of enforcement, a fact that rendered the po-position of the plaintiffs incontrovertible.

“ to present a case of controversy within the jurisdiction” of the Federal courts. And—closer to the context of a section 110(d) plaintiff—the court has inquired, when evaluating complaints to plaintiffs standing in Warth v. Seldin, whether the defendant with respect to patents listed in the Orange Book. In any event, the courts should impose prerequisites to seeking declaratory relief—whether reasonable apprehension, the standing tests suggested here, or any other requirements—will be the extent required by the Constitution.”

I ask unanimous consent that two letters from Professor Yoo be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOAT HALL SCHOOL OF LAW, University of California at Berkeley,
Hon. Orrin G. Hatch,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Hatch:

I have been asked by the Generic Pharmaceutical Association to provide my views concerning the constitutionality of a proposed amendment to the Hatch-Waxman Act. The amendment would allow a generic drug manufacturer who has filed an abbreviated new drug application (ANDA) to seek federal declaratory relief against a declaratory judgment action by the patent holder.

I am writing to express my concern about the proposed amendment, its constitutional implications, and its potential impact on the current Hatch-Waxman Act framework.

The proposed amendment would allow an ANDA applicant to seek declaratory judgment relief against a patent holder. This relief is not currently available under the Hatch-Waxman Act, which requires the applicant to file a patent infringement action before seeking declaratory judgment relief.

The amendment is intended to address the issue of whether a patent holder can prevent a generic drug manufacturer from entering the market by filing an ANDA. The current Hatch-Waxman Act framework provides a 30-month exclusivity period for the patent holder, during which time the generic manufacturer cannot enter the market.

However, the amendment would allow the ANDA applicant to seek declaratory judgment relief against the patent holder, thereby potentially delaying the entry of the generic drug into the market.

I am concerned about the potential constitutional implications of the proposed amendment. The amendment would allow a generic drug manufacturer to seek declaratory judgment relief against a patent holder, even in cases where the patent holder has not infringed the patent.

I am also concerned about the potential impact of the proposed amendment on the current Hatch-Waxman Act framework. The amendment would create a new avenue for generic drug manufacturers to challenge the validity of patents, potentially delaying entry into the market.

I am opposed to the proposed amendment and urge you to consider the potential constitutional implications and potential impact on the current Hatch-Waxman Act framework.

Thank you for your consideration of my views on this important issue.

Sincerely yours,

[Your Name]
necessary steps." C. Wright & A. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2751. In the area of patents, "the owner of a patent might assert that a manufacturer was infringing a patent he held, whereupon, with the distributor contended that his product was not an infringement or that the patent was invalid.

The manufacturer was helpless, however, to secure an adjudication of the issue, and he was not entitled to await suit for infringement, unless the manufacturer preferred to yield and discontinue the activity." Id.

Declaratory judgments acts first arose in the states, but uncertainty initially remained as to whether such cases could be heard as suits falling within the jurisdiction requirements of Article III of the Constitution. Willing v. Chicago Auditorium Ass'n, 277 U.S. 724 (1928). In 1927, however, the Supreme Court concluded that the state declaratory judgment, Fidelity Nat'l

Bank & Trust Co. v. Swope, 274 U.S. 123 (1927), and in 1933 it upheld a state court declaratory judgment in the case of Shell Oil Co. v. Wass dale, 288 U.S. 240 (1933). Immediately after Worcester, Congress enacted the Declaratory Judgment Act: "In a case of actual controvert

troversy, the court of the United States, upon the filing of a petition showing the existence of a controvert-ey or dispute of a hypothetical or abstract controversy, the court of the United States shall have case or controversy is thus distinguished from a different type of controversy, a hypothetical or abstract controversy. A hypothetical or abstract controversy is one that is not confined to traditional forms or traditional remedies. A hypothetical or abstract controversy is one that is not confined to traditional forms or traditional remedies." Aetna Life Insurance Com-

In explaining more precisely why the Declara-yory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to ‘cases of actual con-

The Supreme Court soon made clear that the Declaratory Judgment Act was constitutional. Even though it was in the constitutional sense the Congress is acting within its delегated power over the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, the exercise of such determination of the legal rights of the courts of the United States, upon the filing of petition showing the existence of a controversion, the court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to ‘cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only. In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have juridiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to ‘cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.

In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases of actual controversy requirement, the court explained: "The Declaratory Judgment Act of 1934, in its limitation to “cases of actual controversy, the court of the United States shall have

jurisdiction of the controversy. The Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only.
the Declaratory Judgment Act, rather than as a true test of Article III justiciability. The Act itself states that a court "may declare the rights and other legal relations of parties thereunto concerning any past, present, or future controversy which exists."

The Supreme Court has interpreted this language as allowing the federal courts to decline to adjudicate a federal declaratory action even if case or controversy requirements exist. For instance, in Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. (1 Cranch) 137 (1803), Chief Justice John Marshall said, "We are not competent to give...a declaratory judgment."

To review the testimony provided to your committee by the Department of Justice on August 1, 2003, concerning the constitutionality of the declaratory judgment provision of the Hatch-Waxman Act, I believe that the Justice Department has failed to demonstrate that Congress was concerned about the constitutionality of the Declaratory Judgment Act as it was originally passed in 1873. As a general rule, the Supreme Court has held that the Declaratory Judgment Act is constitutional, even though it permits suits to occur before the holder of a patent has properly interpreted Article III of the Constitution. Congress does not have the authority to alter the boundaries of the federal judicial power. The Constitution grants Congress the power to define procedure in relation to cases and controversies which the Congress is authorized to establish. The word "actual" is one of emphasis rather than of definition. Thus the operation of the Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only. In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases and controversies in the constitutional sense the Congress is acting within its delegated power over the jurisdiction of the federal courts beyond the limits set by Article III of the Constitution.

Regarding the Hatch-Waxman Amendment, the Department of Justice has failed to demonstrate that Congress was concerned about the constitutionality of the Declaratory Judgment Act as it was originally passed in 1873. As a general rule, the Supreme Court has held that the Declaratory Judgment Act is constitutional, even though it permits suits to occur before the holder of a patent has properly interpreted Article III of the Constitution. Congress does not have the authority to alter the boundaries of the federal judicial power. The Constitution grants Congress the power to define procedure in relation to cases and controversies which the Congress is authorized to establish. The word "actual" is one of emphasis rather than of definition. Thus the operation of the Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only. In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases and controversies in the constitutional sense the Congress is acting within its delegated power over the jurisdiction of the federal courts beyond the limits set by Article III of the Constitution.

Regarding the Hatch-Waxman Amendment, the Department of Justice has failed to demonstrate that Congress was concerned about the constitutionality of the Declaratory Judgment Act as it was originally passed in 1873. As a general rule, the Supreme Court has held that the Declaratory Judgment Act is constitutional, even though it permits suits to occur before the holder of a patent has properly interpreted Article III of the Constitution. Congress does not have the authority to alter the boundaries of the federal judicial power. The Constitution grants Congress the power to define procedure in relation to cases and controversies which the Congress is authorized to establish. The word "actual" is one of emphasis rather than of definition. Thus the operation of the Declaratory Judgment Act is procedural only. In providing remedies and defining procedure in relation to cases and controversies in the constitutional sense the Congress is acting within its delegated power over the jurisdiction of the federal courts beyond the limits set by Article III of the Constitution.
state of facts... Where there is such a concrete case admitting of an immediate and determinative determination of the legal rights of the parties in an adversary proceeding upon the facts alleged, the judicial function may be appropriately exercised although the adjudication of the rights of the litigants may not require the award of process or the payment of damages. The passage of the 45-day period would meet Article III jurisdiction thanks to passage of the Declaratory Judgment Act in this context.

... arguably a potential patent infringer needs legal certainty concerning the scope of the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution. By enacting the amendments to the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court upheld as constitutional, Congress did not give any indication that it intended to amend the Act. Nor has Congress ever required a "reasonable apprehension" of a lawsuit, nor has the Supreme Court ever interpreted the Act to require such a result. Rather, Congress wanted to give those who could be subject to a lawsuit by the holder of a right the ability to seek legal certainty for all parties involved, so that business planning and activity could occur in an environment with clear legal rules.

... That Congress did not mention the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit appears to employ an inherently unpredictable totality of the circumstances approach to determining whether a potential patent infringer has a "reasonable apprehension" of lawsuit. Such approaches undermine the very purpose of having clear rules in the area of federal jurisdiction and, instead invite wasteful and excessive litigation merely to determine whether a case is appropriately brought in federal court. And the Federal Circuit's authority to seek to correct misinterpretations of its enactments where, as here, the courts have acted in a way that undermines the very purposes of the statute it has passed. By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.

... This brings me to another reason why the Federal Circuit's recent case significantly understates the amount of resources to file an ANDA and to prepare and manufacture the generic drug. The enforcement of the patent could prevent the company from producing and selling its product, nullifying its investments in research and production, and potentially subjecting any profits to the uncertainty of the lawsuit. In the ANDA context, the generic drug manufacturer declares its intention and ability to produce the drug, which renders the dispute anything but hypothetical. Were the patent holder to bring a patent infringement action, the case clearly would fall within Article III's arising under jurisdiction.

... The Federal Circuit appears to employ an inherently unpredictable totality of the circumstances approach to determining whether a potential patent infringer has a "reasonable apprehension" of lawsuit. Such approaches undermine the very purpose of having clear rules in the area of federal jurisdiction and, instead invite wasteful and excessive litigation merely to determine whether a case is appropriately brought in federal court. And the Federal Circuit's authority to seek to correct misinterpretations of its enactments where, as here, the courts have acted in a way that undermines the very purposes of the statute it has passed. By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.

... This brings me to another reason why the Federal Circuit's recent case significantly understates the amount of resources to file an ANDA and to prepare and manufacture the generic drug. The enforcement of the patent could prevent the company from producing and selling its product, nullifying its investments in research and production, and potentially subjecting any profits to the uncertainty of the lawsuit. In the ANDA context, the generic drug manufacturer declares its intention and ability to produce the drug, which renders the dispute anything but hypothetical. Were the patent holder to bring a patent infringement action, the case clearly would fall within Article III's arising under jurisdiction.

... By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.

... This brings me to another reason why the Federal Circuit's recent case significantly understates the amount of resources to file an ANDA and to prepare and manufacture the generic drug. The enforcement of the patent could prevent the company from producing and selling its product, nullifying its investments in research and production, and potentially subjecting any profits to the uncertainty of the lawsuit. In the ANDA context, the generic drug manufacturer declares its intention and ability to produce the drug, which renders the dispute anything but hypothetical. Were the patent holder to bring a patent infringement action, the case clearly would fall within Article III's arising under jurisdiction.

... By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.

... This brings me to another reason why the Federal Circuit's recent case significantly understates the amount of resources to file an ANDA and to prepare and manufacture the generic drug. The enforcement of the patent could prevent the company from producing and selling its product, nullifying its investments in research and production, and potentially subjecting any profits to the uncertainty of the lawsuit. In the ANDA context, the generic drug manufacturer declares its intention and ability to produce the drug, which renders the dispute anything but hypothetical. Were the patent holder to bring a patent infringement action, the case clearly would fall within Article III's arising under jurisdiction.

... By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.

... This brings me to another reason why the Federal Circuit's recent case significantly understates the amount of resources to file an ANDA and to prepare and manufacture the generic drug. The enforcement of the patent could prevent the company from producing and selling its product, nullifying its investments in research and production, and potentially subjecting any profits to the uncertainty of the lawsuit. In the ANDA context, the generic drug manufacturer declares its intention and ability to produce the drug, which renders the dispute anything but hypothetical. Were the patent holder to bring a patent infringement action, the case clearly would fall within Article III's arising under jurisdiction.

... By adopting the amendment, Congress would simply be making clear the original purposes of the Declaratory Judgment Act, which the Supreme Court, almost immediately after the Act's passage, had upheld as constitutional. By enacting the amendments to Hatch-Waxman, Congress is appropriately attempting to correct misinterpretations of the Declaratory Judgment Act that goes too far in narrowing its scope. By employing the reasonable apprehension test, the Federal Circuit may be allowing declaratory judgment actions in only a subset of the possible range of cases that could be permitted by Article III's case or controversy requirement. By enacting this amendment, Congress would be instructing the courts that it wishes to expand the exercise of federal subject matter jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgment Act to the full extent permitted by the Constitution.
major step for seniors across the country. For example, in my home State of Nebraska, today there are 259,000 Medicare beneficiaries. Of these, about 90,000 do not currently have prescription drug coverage. Through this bill, beginning in 2006, they will all have coverage.

The average out-of-pocket cost for drugs for a typical Nebraskan, including premiums, will decrease 35 percent from $760 to $500 per year. Low-income Nebraskans will receive a large benefit in this bill. Before the drug benefit is implemented in 2006, low-income Nebraskans will receive $600 a year for their drugs, resulting in Nebraskans receiving $83 million in prescription assistance. After the drug plan is implemented, 108,000 low-income Nebraskans will pay little to nothing in premiums, deductibles and coinsurance. Because Medicare is taking responsibility for dual eligibles, Nebraska will save $167 million over 8 years. And the benefits for Nebraskans extend beyond the drug benefit.

This bill will provide additional reimbursements for rural hospitals and health care providers. Nebraska doctors will receive $57 million over 2 years; this will enable hospitals to receive $113 million, and the rest of Nebraska's hospitals will share an additional $108 million over 10 years. This funding will help keep rural health care vital and available to rural seniors.

Furthermore, this bill contains a pilot program I pushed to include that will create a new Medicare designation of "rural community hospitals". These hospitals will receive cost-based reimbursements for Medicare services. Seven Nebraska hospitals will take part in the 5-year program resulting in an additional $22.5 million for these hospitals to help them continue to provide high-quality health care in their communities.

Rural community hospitals are currently unable to keep pace with their costs. They are too big to qualify for additional Critical Access Hospitals funds, yet too small to take advantage of the volume benefits of larger hospitals. This new pilot program will allow Nebraska's rural community hospitals to immediately benefit from cost-based reimbursements for inpatient services while testing the feasibility of enlarging the program to similar hospitals across the Nation.

The seven hospitals are Beatrice Community Hospital, Box Butte General Hospital in Alliance, Columbus Community Hospital, Community Hospital of McCook, Jennie Melham Memorial Medical Center in Broken Bow, Phelps Memorial Health Center in Holdrege and Tri County Hospital in Lexington.

Nationwide, this bill also takes steps to ensure that doctors do not leave the employer-sponsored health coverage. Originally, the conferees only handled this issue halfway through a subsidy covering 28 percent of costs to employers $250 and $1000. I and others, did not believe this would do enough to protect these benefits. So we made that subsidy non-taxable; increasing the value of the subsidy by a third. Because of this increase, the Congressional Budget Office has stated that the subsidy for seniors could decrease by half; saving these benefits for millions of seniors.

The bill before us is not perfect, but it is a start. I do not believe this bill is the beginning of the end of Medicare, nor do I believe it is the final solution to the skyrocketing costs of health care.

With passage of this legislation, for the first time, seniors will have access to prescription drugs through Medicare. And we will be able to use this bill to build better coverage in the future. This bill goes fully into effect in 2 years; time that can be spent studying this coverage, adapting it and making sure it works for our seniors. For some seniors, this is not enough for this coverage. Many of those seniors are not here to see it happen today. They are no longer with us; they never got the drug coverage they needed. It is too late for them.

But it is too late for millions of seniors across the country to benefit from this bill. We owe it to them to pass this and get a concrete start on this issue. We can make changes if we need to; but we can't get back the time we will have lost if we do not move forward now.

A vote against this bill will leave tens of thousands of seniors in Nebraska without a prescription drug benefit of any kind. Let's pass this bill before it is too late for today's seniors. We may not get an opportunity like this again.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to speak for a moment today about the impact on States from this Medicare prescription drug benefit. I have been very concerned about our States' fiscal crisis, and I have supported fiscal relief through the so-called "FMAP" increase, through increases in SSBG, and through general revenue sharing. And I am pleased that, in the long term, this bill is expected to result in substantial savings to States more than $17 billion by 2013.

But I remain concerned about the impact that this bill will have on States in the short term. Before this bill had been finalized, when there were early indications that States could be harmed by the so-called "holdback" formula in the first years of the drug benefit, I insisted that the formula be revised. We added $4.5 billion so that the impact on states of the "woodwork effect," new administrative costs, and the "holdback" provisions would ultimately put the States in the red in any year of the drug benefit.

As someone who opposed preliminary budget estimates did not turn out exactly as expected. The overall impact on State Medicaid budgets in the first year of the drug benefit will still result in States spending more than they will save. While I regret that, I firmly believe that, in the long run, this bill will strengthen State budgets and take some pressure off of strained Medicaid programs.

A longer term analysis shows that there are unanticipated costs to States in the early years, or the expected costs are higher than we can know today. I pledge to work over the next 2 years to ensure that the States are not harmed when the Medicare drug benefit goes into effect.

Mr. President, one of the most important provisions in the rural package in this bill would reauthorize the Rural Hospital Flexibility Grant program for another 5 years. This grant program was created along with the Rural Hospital Flexibility Program, RHFP, in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. The RHFP is designed to help ensure continued access to medical services in rural and frontier areas of our Nation through the conversion of acute care hospitals to Critical Access Hospitals. The BBA created a new category of hospital called a Critical Access Hospital, CAH. In my State of Montana, 36 acute care hospitals have converted to CAH status.

The Rural Hospital Flexibility Grant program provides the tools States need to implement the RHFP. The purposes of this grant program are many. First, it provides resources to cash-strapped rural hospitals to help them make the conversion to CAH status. Second, it enables States to provide technical assistance to these facilities as they move through the conversion process. Third, this grant program provides resources to help States further stabilize rural health care by fostering and developing networks of providers in rural areas.

Fourth, the program enables States to initiate a variety of other innovative approaches to better sustain and improve health care in rural areas. For example, in my State of Montana, Flex grant funds have enabled the State's CAHs to develop a pioneering quality improvement program.

There was strong support for reauthorization of this grant program among the conferees. There was also strong support for clarifying how these funds could be used to ensure that as much of this money as possible was used for the conversion to CAH status and other rural providers in the States.

In that regard, the bill was intended to specify that no more than 15 percent of a State's grant allocation be used for "indirect" administrative costs. However, in drafting the bill, the word "indirect" was inadvertently dropped from the language.

I would like to clarify the intention of the conference committee that this 15-percent restriction be applied only to the portion of funds that can be used for "indirect" administrative expenses.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, the majority leader, Senator Frist, joins me in this
The explanation of why the conference agreement on the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act of 2003 does not allow increased importation of drugs from outside the United States. Our explanation provides important information about this largely misunderstood issue that is vital to the health and safety of Americans.

Under current law, the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act establishes a system under which prescription drugs must be approved by the FDA and properly labeled, packaged, tested, stored, and distributed pursuant to FDA regulatory requirements. This is the finest and most effective system in the world for ensuring drug safety, effectiveness, and quality. To protect American consumers by ensuring the integrity of this system, the law generally prohibits the importation of prescription drugs. Section 801(d) of the Act prohibits importation of drugs that are unapproved, adulterated, or misbranded. Virtually all prescription drugs manufactured overseas are subject to FDA jurisdiction.

Some drugs available overseas are manufactured in the United States and then exported. Section 801(d) of the Act prohibits the importation of drugs that are unapproved, adulterated, or misbranded. Therefore, drugs that are subject to FDA inspection does not mean that the drug meets FDA approval or other requirements. Different countries have different manufacturing, testing, labeling, packaging, and other requirements from those imposed by the FDA, and in fact the composition of the drug product itself may vary from country to country. Manufacturers may use a single facility to manufacture a drug for several different countries, but they must vary their processes to ensure that each drug lot will satisfy the requirements of the intended destination country.

Some drugs manufactured in the United States and then exported. Section 801(d) of the Act prohibits the importation of drugs that are unapproved, adulterated, or misbranded. Congress added section 801(d) through the Prescription Drug Marketing Act in 1988 to close a loophole under which counterfeit and substandard drugs were being brought into this country. There is an exception to this prohibition for the original manufacturer, who is part of the Act prohibits importation of drugs that are unapproved, adulterated, or misbranded. The manufacturer’s own importation of drugs that have never been outside its control is comparable to shipments between their manufacturing plants and warehouses within the United States, and is FDA. The Act prohibits different ingredients from those required by FDA jurisdiction.

In 2000, Congress authorized an additional exception to section 801(d) in the Medicine Equity and Drug Safety Act. This law added a new section 804 under which pharmacists and wholesalers would be permitted to import drugs from a list of designated countries, including Canada and the countries of the European Union. In order to protect American consumers, Congress required FDA to ensure that these new importation pathways would not become effective until the Secretary of Health and Human Services demonstrates to Congress that its implementation will “pose no additional risk to the public’s health and safety” and will not present a significant reduction in the cost of covered products to the American consumer. Secretary Shalala and Secretary Thompson both concluded that they could not make this demonstration.

FDA has a written policy under which permits an individual to import a small quantity of a prescription drug for personal use, but only if the drug is not available in the United States. This policy is intended to allow seriously ill patients to obtain unapproved drugs to treat potentially life-threatening and similar conditions for which adequate treatment is unavailable in the United States. It does not apply to importation of drugs that are approved in the United States or to controlled substances. Therefore, drugs improperly packaged, Internet or print advertising or importation by persons other than individual patients. Moreover, even importation within the four corners of this policy remains technologically illegal; the policy represents only a reasonable and limited exercise of FDA’s enforcement discretion in the interest of individual patient treatment.

A final, and important, legal requirement is that a prescription drug can only be dispensed to the patient based on a valid prescription. Otherwise, the drug is misbranded and cannot be imported, or shipped domestically. There is extensive evidence documenting the fact that many foreign interest sites ship counterfeit prescription at all, or with an invalid prescription based on a perfidious questionnaire and without any genuine medical examination—co-signing of prescriptions by foreign physicians who have no relationship with the patient. Does not meet the legal requirements and presents serious risks, as both U.S. and foreign authorities have made clear. These activities put patients at risk by taking the licensed healthcare system out of the picture for deciding whether to initiate or continue treatment. Prescription drugs are classified as such because they cannot safely be used by laypersons without professional oversight. Drug importation commonly violates this basic safeguard, and poses no additional risk to the public’s health and safety.

Despite the existing prohibitions on drug importation, the volume of importation activity is growing as foreign pharmacies and domestic storefronts have added addiction and illness, and state and local governments and others explore ways to direct American consumers to foreign sources for their needed medicines. All of these activities are illegal, and they pose threats to our health and safety.

According to the FDA, imported drugs are too often unapproved, contaminated, counterfeit, and contain different ingredients from those required by FDA. These concerns are not mere theoretical concerns. A recent series of spot inspections conducted jointly by the FDA and the U.S. Bureau of Customs and Border Protection found that 88 percent of more than 1,000 examined drug packages contained unapproved drugs and that they could pose “clear safety problems.” These included an unapproved blood thinner that could cause life-threatening bleeding; unapproved epilepsy, thyroid, and diabetes drugs that could cause life-threatening side effects; drugs that have been withdrawn from the U.S. market because of safety concerns; animal drugs not approved for human use; drugs with dangerous interactions; drugs improperly packaged in sandwich bags and tissue paper; and controlled substances. In another case involving a Web site purporting to ship FDA-approved drugs from Canada, a patient received an unapproved seizure medicine manufactured in India. In that same case, a U.S. storefront operation, the Web site shipped unrefrigerated insulin, which can degrade without changing its appearance and thereby put insulin-dependent diabetic patients at risk. Other examples include substances affecting the ability of the kidneys, including leads to overdoses of drugs obtained from foreign Internet sites, as documented in a recent press report of a year-long investigation into illegal drug importation, counterfeiting, and distribution.

Another recent study also concludes that drug importation increases the risk of terrorism against the United States. Large volumes of packages, only a miniscule fraction of which can be inspected, present an inviting target for terrorists. Drug importation seriously affects insurance rates and reduces comparison shopping, thereby putting patients at risk. Last year, in the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act, Congress gave the FDA substantial new powers to protect the safety of the food supply against terrorist threats. FDA has been implementing this law through new rules requiring advance notice of food importations and similar measures. Imported drugs present comparable threats, yet there is neither an adequate system of regulation nor adequate inspection resources to enforce existing legal standards.

Proponents of loosening the existing standards for drug importation have argued that we can rely on the Canadian drug regulatory system to ensure the safety of drugs exported from that country to the United States. This is simply wrong. Section 37 of the Canadian Food and Drug Act provides that it does not apply to imports. In a recent statement, the Canadian government made clear that it “has never stated that it would be responsible for the safety and quality of prescription drugs exported... from Canada into the United States." Health Canada also has described its concerns with cross-border Internet pharmacy sales as relating to the health of Canadians themselves as it should be.

While we have no doubt that the Canadian system works for Canadians, FDA Commissioner McClellan has made clear that purchases of drugs by Americans from Canada present entirely different concerns:

"Drug importation actually will save seniors nothing in the way of savings. There is no evidence to suggest that drug importation will only increase this cross-border traffic and, in the absence of new legal protections and new resources to effectively enforce them, increase the threat to the American public."

The United States has every right under our international agreements to enforce legitimate regulatory requirements obtained and maintained in the United States, with full confidence in product safety, quality, and integrity. The myriad of questions and concerns we have raised here explain why, rather than allow lower priced foreign drugs, this legislation calls for a comprehensive study of the risks and benefits of importing drugs and of how trade negotiations can be used to begin bringing down price controls, so that Americans and everyone else in the developed world share fairly in the costs of drug research and development.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I rise before the Senate in support of the conference report accompanying the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act. While the conference report before the Senate is not a perfect bill, it is a good bill that will finally provide seniors a voluntary prescription drug benefit through Medicare.

After years of having to carry the burden of high prescription drug costs without any assistance from Medicare, the bill that is before the Senate now, which has the full support of the AARP, will finally provide 40 million Medicare beneficiaries nationwide, 16 million in Ohio, access to affordable prescription drugs.

I would like to applaud the work of our leader, Senator Frist; our Finance Committee Chairman, Senator Grassley; and the Finance Committee Ranking Member, Senator Baucus. Through their leadership, the Senate is poised to finally move past politics and provide seniors with a real prescription drug benefit. Unfortunately, we have fiddled around with the issue of Medicare reform for far too long in Washington. The truth is, even if the Senate passes the bill before us today, its full implementation will not occur until 2006. For those of my colleagues who have said that we are moving too quickly in adding a prescription drug benefit, the fact of the matter is that the Senate has not moved quickly enough.

As with the rest of the Nation, currently, Ohio's seniors are paying too much out-of-pocket for their prescription drugs. The cost of these life-saving drugs is increasingly becoming a large burden for seniors, with some even traveling to Canada to find cheaper drugs. Seniors should not have to go to a foreign country to pay more for drugs that their doctors prescribe. It is time seniors receive access to affordable prescription drugs in the United States.

This legislation will finally provide Medicare beneficiaries with a voluntary prescription drug benefit. This is especially important to the 400,232 Medicare beneficiaries in Ohio that currently have no public or private prescription drug coverage.

For those beneficiaries that already have coverage through another source, such as through a former employer, and would like to keep that coverage, this legislation supports that choice as well.

As my colleagues know, approximately 12 million of the 40 million Medicare beneficiaries currently have prescription drug coverage through former employer-based retiree health plans.

Many Ohioans that I have spoken to have concerns that the creation of a new Medicare benefit may cause many of them to lose their retiree coverage. However, the bipartisan conference report encourages employers to continue to provide coverage to their retirees by providing assistance for retirees that elect to continue their prescription drug coverage.

In fact, the conference report provides $86 billion in subsidies to assist employers who continue to provide their retirees with health care coverage. This is critical because scores of retirees have lost their health care benefits over the past several years. The bottom line is that this bill will help employers to continue to provide their retirees with health care security.

Not only will seniors have access to affordable prescription drugs with this bill, they will have access to benefits that a modern health plan should have, such as preventive care and disease management—options that Medicare currently does not provide.

Moreover, these additional benefits are provided by giving seniors a choice and control over their prescription drug plans and health care providers. What is most on the brink of finally strengthening and modernizing Medicare, I would be remiss if I did not take a step back and point out the roadmap that has lead us to this point.

The President has led the way to providing seniors with access to affordable prescription drugs. If my colleagues recall, at the beginning of the year, the President provided in his budget $400 billion for Medicare reform, which included adding a prescription drug benefit. This substantial amount illustrates his commitment to our nation’s seniors. That was the first step.

Following the President was the action taken by Congress to lay out a blueprint for Medicare. During the prescription drug debate in 2002, the Senate operated without a budget resolution—the first time the Senate has not done so since 1974. However, this year Congress operated under a budget resolution.

Through these efforts, and those of the Finance Committee, a bill stands before the Senate that strikes a balance between providing seniors and the disabled access to needed prescription drugs today and doing so in a fiscally sensible way so that the benefits to extend to future generations.

And while opponents of the bill claim that the benefits provided are not large enough, $400 billion does buy an awful lot.

Beginning in 2004, seniors will receive a prescription drug discount card that will provide immediate savings of 10 to 25 percent on most prescription drug purchases. On top of these discounts, the Federal Government would annually provide seniors with a $250 annual deductible to offset prescription drug costs for those seniors below 135 percent of poverty.

The implementation of the full program, which will include a new Medicare Part D and a Medicare Advantage program, will begin in January 2006. All Medicare beneficiaries will receive substantial subsidies through these new benefits. However, low-income seniors will receive additional assistance on top of these subsidies. In Ohio, this means 624,416 seniors will receive additional assistance.

For the 152,470 neediest seniors in my State of Ohio, those who qualify for both Medicare and Medicaid, under this bill they would pay: nothing in premiums; nothing in deductibles; and a nominal cost-share of no more than $1 for a generic drug and no more than $3 for a name-brand drug.

For the 492,872 seniors in my State of Ohio with incomes below 135 percent of poverty, and assets of no more than $6,000 per individual and $9,000 per couple, under this bill they would pay: nothing in premiums; nothing in deductibles; and A nominal cost-share of $2 for a generic drug and $5 for a name-brand drug.

For those 131,544 seniors in my State of Ohio with incomes between 135 and 150 percent of poverty, and assets of no more than $10,000 per individual and $20,000 per couple, under this bill they would pay: nothing in premiums based on a sliding scale but NO MORE than $35 per month; $50 annual deductible; and 15 percent co-payments up to $3,600 after $3,600, seniors would pay a nominal cost-share of $2 for a generic drug and $5 for a name-brand drug.

For seniors over 150 percent of poverty, the standard subsidized benefit would include: $250 annual deductible; $35 average monthly premium; the government would pick up 75 percent of out-of-pocket costs for drugs, capped at $2,250; between $2,251 and $3,600, beneficiaries cover all drug expenses out-of-pocket; and the government would pick up 95 percent of beneficiary out-of-pocket costs for drug expenses above $3,600.

In addition to the stand-alone benefit under traditional Medicare, the conference report would establish the Medicare Advantage program. All Medicare Advantage plans are required to offer at least the standard drug benefit established in H.R. 1 and would be encouraged to offer beneficiaries enhanced access to the latest in health care technology through disease management, chronic care, and quality improvement programs.

These plans have the opportunity to provide seniors with better coverage at affordable prices. To help ensure participation in rural and urban areas equally, Medicare Advantage plans would submit bids to the Centers on Medicare and Medicaid Services on a regional basis. The Federal Government will share the risk with insurance companies and these plans.

It should also be noted that while the thrust of this bill is to provide seniors with access to affordable prescription drugs, the bill also ensures that seniors will continue to have access to current Medicare benefits as well.

For instance, for seniors with disabilities, the relationship between a senior and their physician is paramount, last year, Medicare was scheduled to cut physician payments by 4.4 percent, which threatening seniors’ access to their doctors. Physicians had already received a 5.4 percent cut in 2002.

Congress temporarily fixed the formula in 2003 and doctors received a modest increase of 1.6 percent instead of a cut. For 2004, physicians were again scheduled to take a 4.5 percent cut. However, to ensure that seniors have access to their physician of choice, this bill includes modest increase in payments of 1.5 percent for both 2004 and 2005.

Additionally, physicians and their staffs have become increasingly inundated with regulations and paperwork from Medicare. Provisions are included in the bill to streamline some of this paperwork so that doctors can spend more time with their patients rather than filling out reams and reams of Government forms.

Seniors in rural areas will also be assured of continual access to Medicare benefits. One of the most important aspects of the bill is the rural provider provisions. Through the bill, providers in rural areas will be placed on an equal footing to that of their urban counterparts. Some of the specific rural provisions include: equalization of the urban and rural payments for in-patient hospital services under Medicare; revision of the labor-related share of the wage index used in Medicare’s payment system. Rural hospitals, because their local wage levels are lower than urban areas, are adversely affected by a high labor-related share; increased payments to rural health agencies by five percent for services furnished in rural areas; and increase in payment for physicians that serve... beneficiaries in counties where there are a scarcity of physicians.

The House of Representatives has already acted and the President is waiting to sign the bill into law. It is time that the Senate act and pass the Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, since Medicare was established in 1965, people are living longer and living better. Today Medicare covers more than 38 million Americans, including 35 million over the age of 65 and nearly 6 million younger adults with permanent disabilities.

Congress now has the opportunity to modernize this important Federal entity to create a 21st century Medicare Program that offers comprehensive coverage for pharmaceutical drugs and improves the Medicare delivery system.

The Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Act would make available a voluntary Medicare prescription drug plan for all seniors. If enacted, Medicare beneficiaries would have access to a discount card for prescription drug purchases starting in 2004. Projected savings from this program would range between 10 to 25 percent. A $600 subsidy would be applied to the card, offering additional assistance for low-income beneficiaries defined as 150 percent or below the Federal poverty level. Effective January 1, 2006, a new optional Medicare prescription drug benefit would be established under Medicare Part D.

This bill has the potential to make a dramatic difference for millions of Americans living with lower incomes and chronic health care needs. Low-income Medicare beneficiaries, who make up 44 percent of all Medicare beneficiaries, would be provided with prescription drug coverage with minimal out-of-pocket costs. In Pennsylvania, this act would further save $850 million by including the Prescription Assistance Contract for the Elderly (PACE) program which will work in coordination with Medicare to provide increased cost savings for low-income beneficiaries.

For medical services, Medicare beneficiaries will have the freedom to remain in traditional fee-for-service Medicare, or enroll in a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) or a Preferred Provider Organization (PPO), also called Medicare Advantage. These programs offer beneficiaries a wide choice of health care providers, while also coordinating health care effectively, especially for those with multiple chronic conditions. Medicare Advantage health plans would be required to offer at least the standard drug benefit, available through traditional fee-for-service Medicare.

We already know that there are many aspects to this bill at various levels. Many would like to see the prescription drug program cover all of the costs without deductibles and without copays. There has been allowance in our budget plan $400 billion for prescription drug coverage. That is, obviously, a very substantial sum of money. There are a variety of formulas which could be worked out to utilize this funding. The current plan, depending on several levels of coverage from a deductible to almost full coverage under a ‘catastrophic’ illness. One area of concern is the so-called ‘donut hole’ which requires a recipient to pay the entire cost of drugs before Medicare assumes the burden.

As I have reviewed these projections and analyses, it is hard to say where the line ought to be drawn. It is a value judgment as to what deductibles and what the copays ought to be and for whom. Though I am seriously troubled by the so-called donut hole, it is calculated to encourage people to take the medical care they really need, and be affordable for those with lower levels of income. Then, when the costs move into the ‘catastrophic’ illness range, the plan would pay for nearly all of the medical costs.

I am pleased that this bill contains a number of improvements for the providers of health care to Medicare beneficiaries. Specifically, the bill is scheduled to receive cuts in 2004 and 2005 will receive a 1.5 percent increase over that time. Moreover, rural health care providers will receive much needed increases in Medicare reimbursement. In Pennsylvania, this act will mean increases in the Indirect Medical Education. Furthermore, the bill will provide $900 million for hospitals in metropolitan statistical areas with high labor costs due to their close proximity to urban areas that provide a disproportionate share hospitals and standardized amounts, and a decrease in the labor share in the Medicare reimbursement formula. Hospitals across Pennsylvania will benefit from upgrades to the hospital market basket update and increases in the Indirect Medical Education. Furthermore, the bill will provide $900 million for hospitals in metropolitan statistical areas with high labor costs due to their close proximity to urban areas that provide a disproportionate share hospitals and standardized amounts, and a decrease in the labor share in the Medicare reimbursement formula. Hospitals across Pennsylvania will benefit from upgrades to the hospital market basket update and increases in the Indirect Medical Education.

I would note that I do have concerns with this legislation with regard to oncological Medicare reimbursement and the premium support demonstration project for Medicare Part B coverage. Proposed reductions in the average wholesale price for oncological pharmaceuticals may have a grave effect on the ability of patients to receive cancer care to Medicare Beneficiaries. Every Medicare beneficiary suffering from cancer should have access to oncologists that they desperately need. I will pay close attention to the effects that this provision has on the quality and availability of cancer care for beneficiaries and oncologists’ ability to provide that care. Further, the premium support demonstration project for Medicare Part B premiums poses a concern. Some metropolitan areas may receive up to a five percent higher premium for fee-for-service care than neighboring areas. While these provisions remain troublesome, we cannot let the perfect become the enemy of the good with this piece of legislation. The Medicare Prescription Drug legislation has been worked on for many years. I believe this bill will provide a significant improvement to the vital life-saving prescription drugs so urgently needed. I congratulate the members of the conference committee including Majority Leader Frist, Senator Grassley, Chairman of the Finance Committee, and the Ranking Member, Senator Baucus, for their outstanding work which they have done on an extraordinary complex bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent request to clarify plans for at least early in the morning. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes the conference report to accompany H.R. 1 on Tuesday at 8:15 a.m., the time until 9:15 be equally divided between the chairman or his designee and the Democrat leader or his designee; further, I ask consent at 9:15 the Senate proceed to a vote on the adoption of the conference report, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Durbin. If the majority leader will yield for a question, is it the intention of the majority leader to adjourn after that vote?

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, through the Chair, we are currently still negotiating and working on the omnibus, and we will continue to work for the next probably 6 to 7 hours. So I will not be able to comment definitively until probably first thing in the morning. Again, we continue to work. Initially, we hoped to make progress even tonight on the omnibus, but we were unable to do that. So we will not be adjourning right afterwards. We will likely be in through tomorrow and would like to see how far we can get with the omnibus at that time.

Mr. Durbin. If the majority leader will yield for another question, will there be an effort to extend unemployment compensation benefits before we adjourn?

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, at this point I really cannot comment intelligently until we further have our discussions through the night in terms of what the plans will be over the course of tomorrow.

Mr. Durbin. I thank the majority leader.

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, over the past few days, we have heard a number of criticisms of the bill. And there is one criticism in particular that I want to address.

Opponents have claimed that the bill fails to contain prescription drug costs. I can only presume that this criticism reflects a misunderstanding—because the bipartisan agreement includes a number of critical provisions to lower prescription drug costs.

Under the Hatch-Waxman law, generic approval is allowed when a new
Mr. President, Medicare beneficiaries have waited too long for this debate. The practice of medicine has changed dramatically since the inception of the Medicare Program in 1965. Unfortunately, the program has seen few changes or improvements. Today we finally consider providing 41 million seniors and Americans with disabilities with access to prescription drug coverage. Currently, 9.9 million Medicare beneficiaries have NO drug coverage and many more have only limited coverage.

Prescription drugs have become integral in the practice of Medicine and this legislation is critical to the health of current and future beneficiaries. Beginning next year under this bill, seniors will receive immediate, voluntary assistance with their drug costs. All Medicare beneficiaries would receive a discount drug card that will help bring down the cost of prescription drugs by 10-25 percent. Moreover, low-income seniors will receive $600 to help with their drug costs.

In 2006, beneficiaries will have access to a comprehensive prescription drug benefit. Seniors with incomes above 150 percent of the Federal poverty level will receive medications at wholesale prices. Savings of 10-25 percent will reduce drug costs as a result of this coverage.

Low-income seniors will no longer be forced to rely on Medicare for help with their drug costs. This legislation will provide coverage for drug costs for seniors with incomes up to 150 percent of the Federal poverty level under the Medicare program. Seniors with incomes below 150 percent of the Federal poverty level will receive coverage for all but a small percentage of their drug costs.

Prescription drugs not only treat disease, but they can help to prevent disease when used as part of therapeutic treatment. For this reason I am proud to say that prescription drug coverage is only one of the major improvements we are making to the Medicare Program. For the first time, the Medicare Program will put an emphasis on chronic care coordination and disease management. Beneficiaries will receive coverage for a welcome to Medicare physical. The preventive physical visit is one of the best opportunities physicians have to measure health status, screen for various diseases and educate patients about their health needs.

The legislation will also add coverage for screenings for high blood pressure and diabetes. Moreover, this bill directs the Secretary to integrate disease management and chronic care coordination into the basic Medicare program. Beginning immediately upon enactment with a large-scale pilot program the Secretary will test new methods to help beneficiaries with chronic conditions, ensuring they receive preventive tests, procedures and treatments to better manage their disease and improve their health status and quality of life.

This legislative emphasis on prevention and treatment, rather than acute episodes of care. This is one of the most important reforms in the conference agreement. Beneficiaries with multiple chronic conditions account for the greatest share of Medicare spending. And low-income beneficiaries are more likely to suffer from multiple chronic diseases and to have poorer health outcomes than higher income seniors.

Diabetes is a good example of how prescription drug coverage and prescription drug therapy along with a regular care regimen promise more effective treatment and outcomes. Approximately 17 million Americans suffer from diabetes and another 16 million adults are at risk for developing diabetes. Undiagnosed and improperly treated, diabetes can and will result in a host of complications that can result in disability and even death. These complications include kidney failure, blindness, heart disease and loss of limb. According to the American Diabetes Association, $91.9 billion dollars was spent last year in direct medical expenses for diabetes.

Since 1995, five new classes of medicines have been introduced to treat diabetes. These medicines, coupled with health management and coordinated care programs, are powerful tools to increase access to care and reduce complications. For example, a comprehensive disease management program for approximately 7,000 diabetic patients produced savings of $50 per diabetic patient per month. While pharmaceutical costs have increased during the program, total health care spending declined. This was due to substantially fewer in-patient hospitalizations and reduced lengths of stay.

All that stands between seniors and prescription drug coverage, disease management and improved health coverage is the upcoming Senate vote. I am confident that we will pass this conference report and send the legislation to the President's desk. Seniors deserve no less.

Mr. President, millions of Americans experience serious health disparities based on ethnicity, race, gender, or a lack of access to health care. Great progress has been made in narrowing health disparities. Through advances in medical research and public policy, we are working to ensure better access to quality health care for all of our citizens. More, however, needs to be done. Let me list a few examples of where there are still serious disparities in health.

The number of diabetes cases among African Americans has tripled since the 1960s. Moreover, African Americans experience higher rates of diabetes’ most serious complications: blindness, amputation and kidney failure. One of seven Hispanics have diagnosed or undiagnosed diabetes and the prevalence of type-2 diabetes is twice as high in Hispanic Americans as in non-Hispanic whites.

American Indians and Alaska Natives are 2.3 times as likely to have diabetes as non-Hispanic whites of similar age. Diabetes cases are more concentrated among American Indians in the southeastern United States.

Asian Americans and other Pacific Islanders are approximately two times as likely to be diagnosed with diabetes as compared to their white counterparts.

When it comes to cardiovascular disease, African Americans have the highest rate of high blood pressure of all groups and tend to develop it younger than others. Stroke is the only leading cause of death for which mortality is higher for Asian-American males.

Breast and cervical cancer also hit African American women more often than their white counterparts. Although deaths caused by breast cancer have decreased among white women since the 1960s, African American women continue to have higher rates. For example, nearly 360,000 African Americans—women continuing to have higher rates of mortality from breast and cervical cancer. African Americans are more likely to develop cancer than whites and are about 30 percent more likely to die of cancer than whites. In the Medicare legislation before us, we have an opportunity to address the problem of health disparities head on. Today, roughly 20 percent of all Medicare beneficiaries are members of minority groups. And the Census projects that, by 2025, minorities will constitute 35 percent of all seniors. Racial and ethnic minorities covered by Medicare will suffer from more illnesses and are more apt to live in poverty than white beneficiaries.

So I am pleased that this bill particularly benefits racial and ethnic minorities, and assures that minority seniors and disabled people have access to needed medicines at affordable prices. The bipartisan Medicare agreement will ensure better Medicare coverage for minorities through new disease management services, a new “welcome to Medicare physical” and new cardiovascular disease and diabetes screening programs. Beginning in 2005, each year, nearly 360,000 Medicare enrollees will be covered for an initial physical examination. The initial preventive physical exam includes measurement of height, weight and blood pressure, and an electrocardiogram, as well as education, counseling and referral related to other preventive services.

The bipartisan Medicare agreement includes new cardiovascular and diabetes screening blood tests that do not have deductibles or co-pays, so beneficiaries with limited resources who might not otherwise access these benefits are not deterred by the cost.

Disease Management is being introduced into Medicare programs to provide beneficiaries the tools and support systems to help them manage their chronic illnesses. Through these new benefits, conditions such as obesity, diabetes, heart disease, and asthma could be treated far less severe for millions of Medicare beneficiaries, including those racial and ethnic minorities who suffer most from these conditions.

The bipartisan agreement provides important help to those who need it most: low-income Medicare beneficiaries who do not have prescription drug coverage and do not qualify for Medicaid. This starts with the prescription drug discount card and builds on it. We were needed for nearly 300,000 low-income seniors with a generously subsidized drug benefit in 2006.

Over 13 million beneficiaries under 65, across all racial/ethnic groups, have limited income and are uninsured. But these limitations are particularly acute among some populations. In 1999, 46 percent of African Americans and 55 percent of Hispanics had incomes below the Federal poverty level, compared with 15 percent of white beneficiaries. Nearly two-thirds of African-American and Latino beneficiaries have incomes below twice the poverty level, compared with 41 percent of whites.

Starting in 2006, more than 1.5 million minority beneficiaries will gain access to new drugs, reducing over a half million Hispanic and nearly 700,000 African-American Medicare beneficiaries. The bipartisan agreement will help cut their prescription drug bills in half. The poorest seniors—nearly 2 million minority beneficiaries—with incomes below 100 percent of the Federal poverty level who are eligible for Medicare would pay no premiums or deductibles, and would pay only nominal cost-sharing of $2 for a generic drug or a preferred multiple source drug and $3 for all other drugs.

2.5 million low-income minority beneficiaries with incomes below 135 percent of the Federal poverty level would pay no premiums or deductibles, and would only pay nominal cost-sharing of $2 for a generic drug or a preferred multiple source drug and $5 for any other drug. More than 400,000 minority beneficiaries, with incomes below 150 percent of the Federal poverty level would get sliding scale subsidies for their premiums, and pay both a lower deductible and lower cost-sharing compared to the standard benefit.

In addition to the low-income benefit, the bill provides that the Federal Government will assume the costs of dual-eligible beneficiaries, allowing them to receive their medicines through a private-sector drug plan, remove the stigma of Medicaid coverage, and provide fiscal relief to the States that are currently paying it.

Because only a third of African Americans and a quarter of Hispanics have Medicaid or employer-sponsored retiree benefits, compared to two-thirds of white beneficiaries, they are more likely to rely on Medicare and on supplemental Medicare. In fact, 43 percent of dual-eligible beneficiaries are minorities.

The bipartisan agreement improves access to prescription drugs and new services for low-income individuals.
November 24, 2003

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE  S15763

many of whom are racial and ethnic minorities.

The agreement includes critical provisions to study and disseminate the latest research on the comparative clinical effectiveness of prescription drugs. Health care spouses—including among specific patient sub-populations. This will ensure that patients and providers can make informed choices about their treatment options. It will also make prescription drug coverage affordable for all Americans through important provisions, speeding generic drugs to market.

Ultimately, by adding much-needed prescription drug coverage to services already covered by Medicare, this agreement ensures that individuals have access to more comprehensive, higher quality health care and treatment options.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I sincerely hope we do something about unemployment compensation benefits. We will be gone for 2 months. Nine million out of work have lost their jobs since this President took office. Frankly, many of them have seen their unemployment benefits expire.

Historically, traditionally, on a bipartisan basis, we have extended these unemployment benefits. I think it is a sad situation if we adjourn before this holiday season leaving literally millions of American workers without the basics they need to keep their families together. I hope if we do nothing else, we achieve that.

Those who may be following this debate may wonder why, at 20 minutes to 10 this evening, on November 24, Senators are still on the floor speaking about this legislation. This bill, which in its totality is about 1,100 pages long—and the sponsor of it, Senator GRASSLEY, my friend, has admonished me not to say that the bill is 1,100 pages long—deserves at least moved in the direction of change but did not move far enough. It did not contain any cost containment. It did not challenge the drug companies in America to treat Americans fairly.

That bill passed and went to conference committee. We hoped it would be improved, but it was not. In fact, the bill was worsened in many respects. As a result of that, many of us who had hoped for prescription drug benefits for seniors are going to oppose this particular legislation because it does not achieve that goal.

Sadly, it brings another element to the debate: many of us never bargained. There are those in the Congress who believe we have to basically dismantle and fundamentally change Medicare.

Medicare, a system of health insurance for seniors across America for over 40 years, has given seniors quality of life and quality health care, and statistics prove that it has worked. Seniors live longer. They are more independent. They are healthier. Medicare has proven that if we have Federal leadership, doctors and hospitals providing the best care to our mothers and fathers and our grandparents.

But there are some who opposed it from the beginning, calling it socialized medicine, and others who do not want to meet the obligations of Medicare as the baby boom generation qualifies to receive it. So they have set upon a path to basically change Medicare as we know it.

That was never part of the bargain. This was supposed to be about prescription drugs and seniors. Instead, it switched into a new realm. The House Republican leadership pushed into this conference committee a dramatic, and some say drastic, change in Medicare for its future. That has forced many of us to not only oppose this bill but to oppose it strongly, believing our first obligation is to protect Medicare and our second obligation is to give seniors the benefit they need for prescription drugs.

This bill has failed. This bill will raise Medicare premiums for millions of senior citizens. It will force many senior citizens into HMOs. I do not have to explain HMOs to people who have tried to live with them. A health maintenance organization or similar insurance company basically rations care. It picks the doctor, not the individual covered or insured. But the HMO will see your doctor and pick your doctor.

I think we have all heard the horror stories about HMOs that basically have denied care, denied basic medical procedures because they do not believe it is economical. So doctors make decisions about what you need to stay healthy, and HMOs overrule the doctors.

Senator KENNEDY, who is on the floor, and will speak after I do, has been a leader in this Senate, in the Congress, on a Patients’ Bill of Rights. Why did we have to create a Patients’ Bill of Rights? Because of the abuses of HMOs. And that is no surprise to people who have tried to live with them.

Now, this bill, pushed by the Republican leadership, wants to move Americans out of Medicare and into these HMOs. They believe that is a better way to go, to ration health care through HMOs. They want the HMOs to pick the doctors and the hospitals. They do not want the seniors to choose them, as they do now under the Medicare plan.

The original argument was that these private insurance companies, because they would be competing in the open market, would provide more economical care for seniors. But, of course, that premise was destroyed by this bill because they included in the bill a $12 billion slush fund, $12 billion of Federal tax dollars that will go to subsidize the HMOs. In other words, they not only do not have to prove their profitability; they will have a Federal subsidy as they try to lure the healthier seniors out of Medicare, leaving behind poorer and sicker Medicare recipients who will drive up the unit cost of care under that traditional program, making it more expensive to Congress and the American people, and its critics hope will lead it into a period of unpopularity and perhaps abandonment.

I believe that is their ultimate goal. I think that is what they are setting out to do. They want to force seniors into HMOs, subsidized, incidentally, by Federal tax dollars. They want to undercut full Government funding of Medicare.

That is not why I signed up for this debate. It is not the reason most Senators got involved in it. It, frankly, represents a distorted view of what we were setting out to do.

It also is going to eliminate drug coverage for millions of retirees. The Congressional Budget Office, which makes projections, tells us that 2.7 million retirees in America currently have health care benefits, including prescription drugs—2.7 million will lose that coverage because of this bill.
The obvious reason is that under this bill, senior citizens are going to lose their health care coverage to seniors, but in the process 100,000 in my State are going to lose their health care coverage.

That is the result, and not a result on which we are speculating. It is from the Congressional Budget Office, as they reported it to us.

The Lobbyist is another element here as well. There is an element that I think really tells the story about why this bill is so popular in some quarters in Washington—not among seniors but with some special interest groups.

If you should have seen the scene right outside the Chamber this afternoon when the key votes were coming down. You could not even walk through. It was packed with lobbyists.

Now, there is nothing wrong with lobbyists. Lobbyists perform a valuable function when they come to Government and tell us both sides of the story. As a Member of the House and Senate, I value lobbyists who are honest and tell me their side of the story.

But if you took a look at the lobbyists in the hallway outside on this vote, you noticed, overwhelmingly, they were lobbyists supporting this bill and lobbyists representing pharmaceutical companies and HMOs.

Why would pharmaceutical companies support a bill that is supposed to lower prescription drug prices for seniors?

The obvious reason is that under this bill there is no cost control. There is no cost containment. There is no restraint on those drug companies charging even higher prices.

In two particular areas, this bill is going to keep drug prices high, not just for seniors but for families across America. This bill virtually prohibits the reimportation of medicines made drugs from Canada and other countries. We have seen the news reports. Seniors in Minnesota, Michigan, and New England are traveling into Canada to buy drugs, American drugs, at a fraction of the cost. We put a provision in the House version of this bill and the Senate version of the bill to allow that trade to continue so that seniors could take advantage of the lower prices.

I have always said that we are not importing drugs from Canada. Canada is leading the world in importing critical leadership from Canada. Canada and its Government stood up for its people and its senior citizens. Canada said to the drug companies, represented in our hallways by the lobbyists: You can't charge whatever you want to charge. You have to keep your charges reasonable.

Because Canada imposed these standards and would not allow the prices to go up as much as the same prices and the same goods sold in America. This bill virtually closes the door for importation from Canada. It is the answer to the prayer of our pharmaceutical companies that don't want cheaper drugs coming to this country so the can sell more expensive drugs to Americans currently living here.

Also, this bill prohibits Medicare from negotiating lower drug prices. When we started this debate on prescription drugs, virtually every senior I talked to said: Senator, I don't understand why it is taking so long to see the obvious. If Medicare as a program offered prescription drugs, that would be the best approach. It would be a universal voluntary program covering everyone under Medicare. Medicare as a program could bargain for lower drug prices and say to America's drug companies: If you want to sell us a drug for high blood pressure, then you have to give us a reasonable price or we will look to another company with a comparable drug. We do that with the Veterans' Administration. We could have done it with Medicare. But this bill expressly prohibits Medicare from entering into these negotiations to lower prices. Why? Because the drug companies that fought reimportation of drugs don't want to bargain with Medicare. As a consequence, the seniors are the losers. That is basically what we are going to deal with. We are going to continue to see out-of-pocket prescription drug costs.

Let me give an illustration of one element that I am not sure has been addressed during the course of this debate. That may be hard to believe after 3 full days in the Senate. This bill lacks any serious attempt to lower the cost of prescription drugs. We can reasonably assume that prescription drug prices will continue to rise about 15 percent annually as they have in the past. It is one of the most inflated costs in our health care menu of opportunities, prescription drug prices. One major employer in Illinois, Caterpillar Tractor Company, self-insured for health insurance, told me the price of prescription drugs and said, I can't deal with it. This bill is going to raise drug prices even higher.

Consider the example of a senior citizen struggling to make ends meet, the kind of senior we were supposed to help with this bill, a senior who in 2006, when this bill will first go into effect, has an income of $20,000 a year. That is probably in the high end for many seniors. Some survive on much less. But for purposes of illustration, this senior has an income of $20,000 a year and is struggling to devote 25 percent of their income to paying a $5,000-a-year pharmaceutical bill. Five thousand a year is a little more than $400 a month. Believe me, I have met seniors who are paying an awful lot more than that.

So here we have a senior, $20,000 in retirement income, and $5,000 in annual drug costs. Now let's consider what this bill is going to mean to that senior. If this bill steps in and cuts the senior's costs by $1,080. That is not much. That is about 22 percent of the senior's costs. I think it ought to do more, but it is something, to cut the $5,000 bill by $1,080. That is what this bill does. But that happened 10 years ago. The senior's income goes up at the rate of inflation, roughly 3 percent, while the pharmaceutical companies' charges for prescription drugs increase at 15 percent a year. Income going up 3 percent; cost of drugs going up 15 percent a year.

By the year 2015, 9 years after this bill goes into effect, the senior's income will have grown 30 percent to $26,000. The drug costs of $5,000 when it was $3,800 will have mushroomed to $17,600, a 15 percent increase unchecked versus a 3 percent increase in income. Do you know how much of that $17,600 will be paid by the Government under this bill when we have this period of time, 9 years after it goes into effect? $3,800. So you are talking about $13,800, 53 percent of the senior's income. So even with the changes under this bill, prescription drug inflation will drive seniors in a decade or more from spending a fourth of their income on prescription drugs to spending more than half of their income under the scenario I have just described.

Why? Senior citizens' out-of-pocket prescription drug costs go up even with this bill because the bill does nothing to rein in unsustainable inflation in prescription drug costs. That doesn't help seniors. They had us in the House to take action to bring down the cost of medication.

If you take a look at the pharmaceutical companies and their approach on this bill, here is what they wanted when we started this debate. They wanted private-insurer-administered drug benefits that dilute purchasing power. They got it. They wanted financial incentives for HMOs, another step away from Medicare. They got it. They wanted a prohibition on Medicare negotiating to reduce drug costs. They got it. They wanted a prohibition on Medicare negotiating to reduce drug costs. They got it. They wanted meaningful reimportation. They got it. They got it. So getting drugs from Canada becomes even more difficult. They wanted watered down generic drug access provisions. They wanted no public scrutiny of secret PhRMA-insurer kickback arrangements. They got that protection. And, finally, they wanted huge windfall profits, and they will get it.

Wall Street has already cost this out. Pharmaceutical stocks, which were already the most profitable in America, will continue to be such. The loser will be senior citizens who were supposed get the help. That is why the pharmaceutical companies line up outside the door to the Chamber cheering for those who want to vote for this bill—because they know it means more dollars for those companies.

What I have given you here is not an extreme example; $5,000 a year for prescription drugs for a senior is sadly a reality. The seniors who will face this without a helping hand from the Government are the same seniors paying these inflated costs of drugs are going to struggle, and they may not succeed in paying for those drugs.

Let me show you this, too. Here are the compensation levels of those who run HMO insurance companies I described earlier. Remember what I said: The intent of this bill is to move seniors out of Medicare into HMOs. These are compensation levels: For companies such as Aetna, here is their CEO; he received $9.9 million; Anthem, $5.8 million; CIGNA, $5.9 million; Coventry, $216 million compensation for their CEO; Health Net, $6 million; Humana, $1.6 million; Oxford, $76 million for Mr. Norman Payson, not a bad year; PacificCare, $7 million; Sierra Health, $4.7 million; and then we get down to United Health Group, this group with a CEO by the name of Mr. Channing Wheeler; he received $9.5 million in compensation.

I would like to stay with United Health Group for just a moment. This is not just another HMO, this is an HMO that is extraordinarily blessed by this bill. Let me tell you why. In addition to $32 billion in a slush fund to subsidize and underwrite HMOs that are going to compete with Medicare, there is an additional provision in here that gives $6 billion for a theory of health insurance called health savings accounts. If you have followed the debate in Washington, you may know that a couple of years ago, a company based in Lawrenceville, Illinois, the Golden Rule Insurance Company, dreamed up this basic insurance idea that said: We will say to people that if you will take a high deductible health insurance policy and do not use all that you could in insurance-related revenues made up a quarter of their operating revenues last year and one-third in 2001. They receive royalties from policies marketed by United Health Group, the one that purchased Golden Rule. Last year they made $17.7 billion in premium revenue from their offerings to AARP members—$3.7 billion. This one company.

The royalties AARP earned as a result of that amounted to $123 million; access fees, $30 million; quality control fees, $60 million. AARP also earns investment income on the premiums received from members. That is a total of $161.7 million in revenue from insurance. According to Advertising Age Magazine, AARP and United Health Group hired a direct marketing agency in May to conduct a marketing campaign that could cost $100 million.

United Health Group is going to be one of the biggest winners under this bill. We are considering and will vote on tomorrow. It will be a big winner in at least two different directions: First, as an HMO, it is entitled to part of the $12 billion slush fund to lure seniors out of Medicare into their HMO. Secondly, because they have now bought Golden Rule, they will be authors of insurance policies called health savings accounts, which receive another $6 billion subsidy; and guess who is in on it as well. Our friends at AARP.

I want to talk now when seniors who belong to AARP have been asked whether they like this bill, they overwhelmingly say no. Let me get this figure right; I don’t want to misstate it. When asked last week whether they supported this bill—AARP members were, in a poll conducted—56 percent opposed it and 18 percent supported it; 56 percent of the seniors in AARP opposed it and 18 percent supported it.

Bill Novelli and AARP have been leading the charge to pass this bill. If it is not that popular among AARP members, what is going on? There is money to be paid. AARP is making good on a promise by Republican leadership to reward their friends—in this case, Golden Rule. But wait, there is more to the story.

Golden Rule as an insurance company doesn’t exist anymore. It sold itself out. The purchaser was United Health Group. R. Channing Wheller is their CEO who made $9.5 million. They are basically the architects of the health savings accounts, this HMO.

Let me say, it is not a one-way street. In order to win the attention of Congress and $6 billion in Federal subsidy, Golden Rule, over the past 12 years, has been extraordinarily generous to political candidates. They donated $3.6 million to political parties in candidates—90 percent to the Republican Party. Mr. Gingrich received more campaign contributions from Golden Rule than any other Federal officeholder over 12 years. In fact, he became their poster child and appeared on their television advertisements. The list goes on and on about Golden Rule and all the political contributions they have made.

This bill contains $6 billion for health savings accounts, such as those that have been devised by Golden Rule. This is how it works. Consumers or employers buy high-deductible policies. The deductibles at least $1,000 for individuals or $2,000 for families. The consumer or employer can put as much as $5,000 a year for an individual and $10,000 for a couple into the account. The contributions are tax deductible. Money can accumulate tax free. Withdrawals are tax free in the event that the HMO, they may not succeed in paying for those drugs.

The problems are numerous. First, it compromises the current health insurance system. People who purchase high-deductible health insurance policies are the healthiest among us. As they opt out of traditional plans, the risk pools in those traditional plans are compromised, leaving people behind to pay higher premiums.

Past research by Rand, the Urban Institute, and the American Academy of Actuaries shows that premiums for comprehensive insurance could more than double if these health insurance accounts become widely used.

Second, wealthy Americans are likely to use these as tax shelters.

In 1996, HIPAA established a demonstration project of health savings accounts. The GAO evaluation of the investigation showed that investment firms such as Merrill Lynch entered into health savings accounts, such as those that have been devised by Golden Rule. This is how it works. Consumers or employers buy high-deductible policies. The deductibles at least $1,000 for individuals or $2,000 for families. The consumer or employer can put as much as $5,000 a year for an individual and $10,000 for a couple into the account. The contributions are tax deductible. Money can accumulate tax free. Withdrawals are tax free in the event that the HMO.

The problems are numerous. First, it compromises the current health insurance system. People who purchase high-deductible health insurance policies are the healthiest among us. As they opt out of traditional plans, the risk pools in those traditional plans are compromised, leaving people behind to pay higher premiums.

Past research by Rand, the Urban Institute, and the American Academy of Actuaries shows that premiums for comprehensive insurance could more than double if these health insurance accounts become widely used.

Second, wealthy Americans are likely to use these as tax shelters.

In 1996, HIPAA established a demonstration project of health savings accounts. The GAO evaluation of the investigation showed that investment firms such as Merrill Lynch entered into health savings accounts, such as those that have been devised by Golden Rule. This is how it works. Consumers or employers buy high-deductible policies. The deductibles at least $1,000 for individuals or $2,000 for families. The consumer or employer can put as much as $5,000 a year for an individual and $10,000 for a couple into the account. The contributions are tax deductible. Money can accumulate tax free. Withdrawals are tax free in the event that the HMO.
going to be selling insurance through the United Health Group with a massive Federal subsidy, and through the old Golden Rule health savings account with another massive Federal subsidy. They are not listening to seniors; they are listening to the insurance companies, to the HMOs, and that is a sad thing.

This bill squanders $6 billion that should have been paid for retiree coverage of prescription drugs, creating new health savings accounts that ordinary Americans cannot afford; undermining employer-based coverage, $6 billion that should have been used to prevent the loss of retiree coverage. As I mentioned earlier, some 25 percent of the revenues going to AARP came off of insurance royalties.

So you ask yourself if the membership of this organization doesn’t care for this plan and opposes this plan, by a margin of more than three to one, why then is AARP front and center running ads in newspapers, television, and radio across America? Because, frankly, the ads are paid for by HMOs and pharmaceutical companies and represent an effort by the current leadership of AARP to jam down the throats of senior citizens a proposal they do not support.

What I suggest to seniors across America who are following this televised debate is this: If you belong to AARP, call them first thing in the morning at 1-800-424-3401 and tell them to stand up for seniors, don’t stand up for the insurance companies. Don’t stand up for pharmaceutical companies, stand up for seniors across America.

I, frankly, went back to Chicago this weekend and met with many people who said they have had it with AARP. They have no idea what happened to an organization created to serve seniors and, frankly, is turning its back on the seniors across America. They have no idea what happened to an organization that was designed to reward seniors. It was a product that was designed to reward friends—the pharmaceutical companies that have spent $139 million lobbying Congress over the past 6 months, as well as the HMOs, Golden Rule, and all the old buddy network.

They may win tomorrow, but this I will predict: When this bill goes into effect in 2006, conveniently after the next Presidential election so that all of this lobbying and realized profits can be written off, when this bill goes into effect and seniors across America realize they have been had, the telephone calls that Congressmen and Senators are receiving today will pale in comparison.

Wrong through and through. Congressmen who stand for reelection having voted for this bill when it goes into effect in 2006. When the seniors realize how complicated it is, how unfair it is, the gaps in coverage, the fact there is no catastrophic insurance, the fact that the cost of Medicare is going to increase and that they are going to be forced into HMOs with no choice of doctor or hospital, there is going to be a reaction which you will not forget.

I served in the House when we passed something called catastrophic insurance. We thought it was a pretty good idea. I voted for it. The seniors read the fine print and rejected it. When they rejected it, we were forced to repeal the bill. Now is the only time I recall in my congressional career we even done that.

Trust me, after this goes into effect in 2006, this Congress is going to be scrambling to repeal the most outrageous portions of this bill. And all those who think we are going to get by with a slogan about prescription drugs for seniors are in for a rude awakening.

The seniors across America are men and women who have worked hard all their lives, people of compassion; most are served financial security in retirement. Our people. We guaranteed that any American who works hard, plays by the rules, and pays taxes will earn well-deserved financial security in retirement. A generation later, we added health care to that commitment. And ever since, the two most successful and beloved programs in the nation have been Social Security and Medicare.

The legislation before us today is a shameful attempt to break that promise. It’s a right wing Republican assault on Medicare in the guise of a pre-existing condition drug program, and Republicans know it. They know that this bill will force millions of seniors into HMOs, and deny them their choice of doctor and hospital. They know that this bill does nothing to control the costs of prescription drugs. They know that it’s a fat deal for HMOs and pharmaceutical companies—and a raw deal for the elderly. They know it’s a dress rehearsal for the coming assault on social security.

They say that this bill gives seniors the freedom to choose among competing plans. They say at least it gives protection to the poorest of seniors. They say it will lower drug prices through competition. They are absolutely wrong on all of these points. They say that they are not partisan, that they are carefully and coldly calculated, not to protect Medicare but to destroy it, and leave the millions of senior citizens who rely on it today without a lifeline in the future.

It is the first step towards a total dismantling of Medicare. In exchange for destroying Medicare, it offers senior citizens a limited and inadequate drug benefit. The moment it is implemented, it will make nine million seniors—almost one quarter of all senior citizens—worse off than they are today.

Seniors already have the most important choice they want—the choice of their own retirement. But for millions of Americans, retirement meant misery, poverty and abandonment. They were on their own with no financial security and no health care in what was called, with great irony, the golden years of their lives. But all that changed in the wake of the Great Depression.

The scandalous neglect and serious hardship of the elderly was no longer tolerable. In the 1960s, Congress and the administration made a promise to our people. We guaranteed that any American who works hard, plays by the rules, and pays taxes will earn well-deserved financial security in retirement. A generation later, we added health care to that commitment. And ever since, the two most successful and beloved programs in the nation have been Social Security and Medicare.

The legislation before us today is a shameful attempt to break that promise. It’s a right wing Republican assault on Medicare in the guise of a pre-existing condition drug program, and Republicans know it. They know that this bill will force millions of seniors into HMOs, and deny them their choice of doctor and hospital. They know that this bill does nothing to control the costs of prescription drugs. They know that it’s a fat deal for HMOs and pharmaceutical companies—and a raw deal for the elderly. They know it’s a dress rehearsal for the coming assault on social security.

They say that this bill gives seniors the freedom to choose among competing plans. They say at least it gives protection to the poorest of seniors. They say it will lower drug prices through competition. They are absolutely wrong on all of these points. They say that they are not partisan, that they are carefully and coldly calculated, not to protect Medicare but to destroy it, and leave the millions of senior citizens who rely on it today without a lifeline in the future.

It is the first step towards a total dismantling of Medicare. In exchange for destroying Medicare, it offers senior citizens a limited and inadequate drug benefit. The moment it is implemented, it will make nine million seniors—almost one quarter of all senior citizens—worse off than they are today.

Seniors already have the most important choice they want—the choice of the doctors and hospitals they trust. That is the choice they will lose if they are forced to join HMOs or other programs that say an insurance company will choose their doctor for them. Senior citizens already have the choice to join a private insurance plan competing with Medicare if they choose. But nine out of ten prefer to keep their Medicare. The bipartisan bill that passed the Senate earlier this year provided a reasonable additional choice—to receive prescription drug coverage under Medicare, or to receive that coverage through a private-sector drug plan.
November 24, 2003

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

S15767

But the conference report adopted the unacceptable House approach of ending Medicare as we know it. It establishes a massive demonstration program that will subject seven million senior citizens—one out of every six—to a so-called premium support program. The only purpose of premium support is to raise the premium in regular Medicare so that senior citizens will have to join HMOs to get affordable care. That’s not competition. That’s compulsion.

If that weren’t bad enough, the conference report lavishes massive subsidies on HMOs and other private insurance companies. An estimated $3.8 billion in corporate welfare is given to HMOs if they contract with every senior citizen who joins an HMO, the government will pay a 25 percent mark-up—almost $2,000—more than it would cost to provide that same senior citizen with the same service under Medicare. As a result of this bill, insurance company revenues will increase by $150 billion a year. That’s not competition. It’s corporate welfare. It’s robbing Medicare and robbing senior citizens to enrich powerful special interests and big campaign contributors.

It’s creating a grossly tilted playing field on which Medicare cannot compete and senior citizens will be the losers.

Proponents of this plan admit that the benefits for most seniors are small. But, they say, look at how much we are needed medicines reduced. Their rates of hospitalization, injury, and even death will go up.

In addition, almost 3 million seniors, many with low incomes, with good retirement drug coverage today will lose it as the result of this bill. That’s not progress. It’s a massive retreat. As the old saying goes, our Republican colleagues have left behind.

Some low income seniors may get better drug coverage under this plan, but only at the price of the destruction of the health care that all seniors, low and moderate income alike. No senior citizen should be faced with this Sophie’s choice between the drug benefits they need and the dismantled Medicare they will face under the GOP plan. We passed a bipartisan bill in the Senate and that did not sacrifice Medicare on the altar of right-wing ideology. If we voted down the destructive, partisan bill before us, the Senate will have another opportunity to do the job right.

The drug industry too will reap a bonanza under this bill. If prescription drug prices continue to rise at double digit rates, the minimal savings this bill provides to the average senior will be wiped out in no time by higher drug costs. This bill does nothing meaningful to hold prices down. In fact, far from holding drug prices down, the report of increased drug costs, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that they will actually rise as the result of this legislation. No wonder the stock of our four leading drug companies went up $8 billion today.

It doesn’t allow drugs to be imported from Canada. It even bans the Secretary of HHS from bargaining for better drug prices.

The Senate is on trial today, and we will soon vote on whether to stop this charade. I urge my colleagues to stand up and fight. Fight it for the worker in Springfield, MA, whose brave mayor plans to obtain cheaper prescription drugs for them from Canada.

Fight it for the elderly grandmother on Medicaid, and the 7 million poor Americans like her, who count every penny, who can’t begin to pay for their prescription drugs under this bill.

Fight it for the 36 million seniors who want to stay in the Medicare they love, and with the doctors and hospitals they trust.

Battle for the 36 million seniors who want the medical care they need. It says, ‘‘Pay into the system during your working years, and we will guarantee you affordable, quality health care in your retirement years.’’

And we will do that job right, even if it takes the election of a new Congress and a new President to do it.

It is said that this bill was about the price of prescription drugs. How in the world, the American people are asking, did we get from that non-partisan objective of improving the Medicare program with a prescription drug benefit to a partisan proposal to radically alter Medicare for the benefit of the insurance industry?

In July, the United States Senate passed a bipartisan program to add prescription drug coverage to Medicare. Seventy-six members of the Senate, Republicans and Democrats alike voted yes. On December 3 a group of 35 Republicans and 10 Democrats voted no.

By contrast, the House of Representatives passed a bill to radically change Medicare.

It included prescription drug coverage—but only as a trojan horse for... the radical changes that were their real objective. Their bill was designed to privatize Medicare, to force senior citizens to join HMOs or other private insurance plans, and to benefit the wealthy and powerful at the expense of senior citizens. This was a radical program designed to by those who, with their arrogance, believe they know what is best for senior citizens. Senior citizens may not want to join HMOs or other private insurers—but in the view of the writers of this legislation, that’s because they just don’t know what’s good for them.

The House bill picked up where President Bush left off. The President proposed that senior citizens couldn’t get a prescription drug benefit at all unless they joined an HMO or other private insurance plan. That plan generated such a wave of public outrage that Republicans had to withdraw it. But the House bill achieved the same objective by proposals that were less blatant but equally destructive. Because the House bill was about radically restructuring Medicare according to the right wing blueprint, it could not command bipartisan support. It passed by the House by a narrow partisan single vote. The report the conference produced—with all but two of the Democratic conferees excluded from the deliberations—was the partisan House proposal all over again. That’s why the vote in the House was just as narrow, just as narrow, and only achieved by the most extraordinary perversion of House rules. Now it is up to the Senate to prevent this travesty from becoming law.

This is no longer a bill to provide senior citizens a drug benefit. It is a bill to reward powerful special interest and to force senior citizens into the unloving arms of HMOs and insurance companies. It is a right wing program to privatize Medicare and force senior citizens into the HMOs, PPOs, or other private plans. They ignore what seniors want and what they’ve been doing for almost forty years?

One of the most important of these destructive changes is a concept called “premium support.” It should really be called “senior citizen copays.” It is a change in Medicare premiums that senior citizens pay for Medicare today, with an unstable, unaffordable premium.

Here’s how it works. Today, Medicare premiums are set at 75 percent of the costs for Part B of the Medicare program, the part that pays for doctor care. Beneficiaries pay the remaining 25 percent. The premium is the same no matter where you live. It increases from year to year at the same rate as Medicare doctor costs. It is a stable, reliable amount to be paying while senior citizens are in good health. Premium support stands this system on its head. The Government contribution to private plans would no longer be based on a fixed amount. Neither would the charges to Medicare beneficiaries. The Government contribution to both private plans and Medicare would be based on the average of what plans charge and Medicare costs. If plan charges were lower than Medicare costs, the Government payment to Medicare would go down—and Medicare premiums will go up. And instead of Medicare premiums being a single, reliable, fixed amount that goes up only with increases in Medicare costs, Medicare premiums will be different in every county in the country. And they will fluctuate wildly from year to year, depending on what private plans choose to do and how many people enroll in them.

We all know what is going on. Insurance companies believe they can make big money by offering low-cost health insurance to healthy senior citizens. This program will drain healthy seniors from Medicare, and leave behind those who are sick and need help the most. It will send the cost of health care through the roof—and it leave the elderly and disabled in the cellar holding the bag.

Under premium support, the administration’s own estimates show that average Medicare premiums will initially jump 25 percent. Several years ago, the estimate was a whopping 47 percent. The truth is that no one really knows how high Medicare premiums could rise. But we do know this. Over time, the increase will become higher and higher. And Medicare would pay an even higher premium support. Under premium support, how much you pay will depend on where you live and the amount could change dramatically from year to year.

In my own state of Massachusetts, a senior citizen who happens to live in Barnstable county will pay $500 a year more for their Medicare than one who lives in Hampden County. In Florida, you will pay $900 in Osceola and $2,000 if you live in Dade County. In the whole country, in Washington State, you’ll pay $1,225 if you live in San Juan and $700 if you live in Clark. In California, you’ll pay $1,700 if you live in Los Angeles and $775 if you live in Yolo. In Oregon, you’ll pay $1,325 if you live in Yamhill and $675 if you live in Columbia.

Why would anyone want to make these destructive changes to the Medicare program that has served senior citizens so well for almost fourty years? The answer is a radical ideology that says Medicare is bad. HMOs and PPOs are good. And if senior citizens don’t agree, we’ll make sure that their premiums keep going up until they are forced to give up the doctors they trust to get the medical care they need.

Some of supporters of this program claim it is just a demonstration—nothing to get excited about. But it’s not a demonstration. It is a club to force through a radical change in Medicare that could never pass muster on its own.

Premium support is only one of the ways that this plan would privatize Medicare and force senior citizens to choose between the doctors they trust and the prescription drugs they need. The conference report pumps up the payment to private plans to a level where Medicare could be uncompetitive.

It’s fiscally irresponsible and unfair. It’s using the elderly’s own Medicare money to destroy the program they depend on.

The bill lavishes largesse on the private sector by stealing from Medicare in three ways.

First the payment formula in the conference report is the same as the House’s—and it raises payments to private plans so that they are 109 percent of Medicare’s costs for caring for the same patient.

Is that not odd? The private sector is supposed to be more efficient and save Medicare money—but Medicare, under this report, is paying them 9 percent more than it would provide Medicare to cover the same services.

But that is only the beginning. According to the CMS’s own studies, Medicare pays an additional 16 percent in excess of Medicare’s own costs to private insurance companies because the senior citizens who join Medicare HMOs are healthier than those who do not.

So under this bill, Medicare is going to be paying a 25 percent markup for every senior citizen that goes into an HMO—nine percent for the payment differential put into this bill and 16 percent for the health differential—and that is before you add in a $12 billion slush fund for PPOs that this bill also contains.

The Medicare trust fund—that today's retirees paid into and rely on—will be robbed to lavish billions of dollars on HMOs and insurance companies. Senior citizens will pay for this largesse not only in the depletion of the Medicare trust fund, but not only in lesser resources for benefits they need, but in higher Medicare premiums. Why? So HMOs and insurance companies can profit.

Last week, I released a new report by the staff of the Health Committee analyzing the impact of this program on HMO and insurance industry revenues and profits. The data is drawn from the projections of the Medicare actuary, the Medicare Trust Fund report, and publicly reported data on the insurance industry. The results are sobering. As the result of this bill, annual revenues of the insurance industry will increase by an incredible $50 billion a year. Profits from private insurance plans will increase by 50 percent. And this huge bonanza to the private insurance industry will, in the words of the Medicare actuary, "increase Medicare costs significantly."

I ask unanimous consent that the study be printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE IMPACT OF REPUBLICAN MEDICARE PROPOSALS ON INSURANCE INDUSTRY REVENUES AND PROFITS

A SENATE COMMITTEE ON HEALTH, EDUCATION, LABOR, AND PENSIONS MINORITY STAFF REPORT, NOVEMBER 20, 2003

H.R. 1, the House Medicare Prescription Drug and Modernization Bill passed by the House of Representatives earlier this year, includes a number of provisions described by its sponsors as intended to enhance Medicare benefits and encourage competition. Most of the relevant provisions of the proposed conference report are identical to H.R. 1. This report by the minority staff of the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions examines the impact of these proposals on the revenues and profits of Health Maintenance Organizations (HMOs), Preferred Provider Organizations (PPOs), and the private health insurance industry.

The report concludes that Medicare revenues of HMOs and PPOs will increase from $33 billion this year to $181 billion in 2010 under the Republican plan. Profits will increase by $4.4 billion based on an average profit margin, or $18 billion based on profits of the most successful plans. Overall, Medicare revenues and profits of the private insurance industry will increase by 400 percent in 2010 under the Republican plan. Increases under the premium support program, which begins in 2010, will be even higher.

Background

Competition within the Private Sector in the Medicare Program Today

Senior citizens already have a choice today between Medicare and private insurance plans offering Medicare benefits through the Medicare+Choice program. The program is open to most types of insurance plans—HMOs, PPOs, and fee-for-service indemnity plans—but those who enroll in Medicare+Choice plans are HMOs. Eleven percent of Medicare beneficiaries are enrolled in Medicare+Choice plans.

Under Medicare+Choice, participating plans must offer Medicare benefits. They receive a payment from Medicare that is supposed to represent what it would have cost Medicare to serve enrollees under the regular Medicare program. Originally, the Medicare payment was set at 95 percent of Medicare's cost, on the theory that those who enrolled in private sector plans were healthier than the average Medicare beneficiary. As a result of subsequent modifications in the payment formula, Medicare payments to private sector plans now average 103 percent of Medicare costs.

Adjusting for the fact that those enrolled in private sector plans are healthier than the average Medicare enrollee, the extra cost to Medicare when a beneficiary enrolls in a private plan is substantially higher than three percent. According to a study by the Department of Health and Human Services, private plans are overpaid by 16.3 percent, solely because their enrollees are healthier than those who remain in traditional Medicare. The combination of the overpayment formula and the difference in health between those who receive services from traditional Medicare and those who enroll in Medicare HMOs means that private insurance plans are paid almost 20 percent more than it costs Medicare to provide the same services.

Competition with the Private Sector under Conference Proposal

The conference proposal changes the terms of competition between Medicare and the private sector in three ways: It establishes a new category of private plans—regional PPOs—eligible to enroll Medicare beneficiaries and receive Medicare payments for their care. It increases Medicare payments to private plans to an average of 109 percent of Medicare costs, compared to 103 percent under the current system. Beginning in 2006, a new system of payments for both private plans and Medicare called "premium support." Under the premium support system, the Medicare payment to private plans and the corresponding Medicare contribution to the cost of the Medicare Part B program are no longer fixed amounts. Instead, they are based on a weighted average of the Medicare "benchmark"—the payment that would be made to private plans under the old system—and the charges of the private plans. If the charges of the private plans exceed the premium support payment, the excess is charged to Medicare beneficiaries. In addition, since the premium support payment is based on the charges of private plans in the same area, the Medicare premium will vary depending on where the beneficiaries live. It will no longer be a uniform nationwide premium.

Revenues and Profits of HMOs and Private Health Insurers

In 2003, the revenues of HMOs and other private health insurers are estimated to be $500 billion. Profits are estimated to be $16.8 billion, and the industry average profit will be 2.9 percent. Some HMOs have significantly higher profit margins than the industry average. UnitedHealthCare's profit margins averaged 2 percent, and profits are expected to increase by more than a third for 2003, to 12 percent.

Impact of Conference Proposal on Revenues and Profits of HMO and Private Health Insurers

Revenues. The CMS Medicare Actuary has estimated that if H.R. 1 is enacted, 53 percent of all Medicare beneficiaries will be enrolled in private health plans by 2010, an increase from their current 11 percent enrollment. The most relevant provisions in the conference report are similar to H.R. 1. Medicare payments to private health plans are expected to increase by $150 billion to a total of $25 billion.

Profits. Under the average profit assumption, Medicare profits of the industry will increase by 490 percent to $5.3 billion in 2010. Under higher profit assumptions, Medicare profits of the industry will increase by 2316 percent to $21.7 billion. Industry analysts estimate even higher potential additional profits of $25 billion.

Cost to Government. The Medicare Actuary has not provided an estimate of the impact of H.R. 1 on this cost. However, I sent a letter to Congressman Thomas, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, dated June 4, 2003, the Actuary states that these provisions of the bill "would increase Medicare costs significantly."

Premium Support. The Medicare Actuary has estimated that the creation of regional PPOs—Medicare+Choice plans for beneficiaries who would enroll in private insurance plans under the premium support program. Since the Actuary has estimated that premium support would raise average Medicare premiums by as much as 25 percent, however, it is reasonable to assume that a larger proportion of beneficiaries would leave Medicare and join HMOs or other private insurance plans under a full-blown premium support program, further increasing industry revenues and profits.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, there you have it. This legislation is by the insurance industry, for the insurance industry, and of the insurance industry. It is about privatizing Medicare so that HMOs can improve their bottom line and raise their stock prices. Senior citizens should not be forced to give up the doctors they trust to get the medical care they need. The only rationale for this misguided policy is an ideology that says higher profits for powerful special interests is the highest public good.

No wonder President Bush and the Republican leadership is fighting so hard for this bill. No wonder they are insisting on radical changes to Medicare that have nothing to do with prescription drug coverage for senior citizens. And no wonder senior citizens all over this country—and the organizations that represent them—are outraged and urge members of Congress to vote no.

The two most beloved and effective programs our government has ever created are Medicare and Social Security. Every American should understand that this debate is the dress rehearsal for the coming assault on Social Security. If the Republicans are successful with the legislation we are considering, they will have turned over Medicare to the insurance industry, so that their powerful friends can reap huge profits at the expense of senior citizens. But if we insist that the beneficiaries of the HMOs and health insurance companies get their cut, it will be time for the stock brokers and the bankers.
A story in the Washington Post yesterday exposed the Republican plan. It said:

President Bush’s aides are reviving his long-sought plan to let workers divert some Social Security taxes into stocks as a way to avoid the Social Security crisis, gambling that market drops have not soured voters on the politically risky idea.

It goes on:

A Republican official said the White House has signaled Capital Hill that Bush’s campaign ‘wants to spend a lot of money’ on advertising promoting the issue. A presidential advisor says that Bush is intent on being able to say that any self-funding Social Security ‘is part of my mandate.’

Aides said Karl Rove, Bush’s senior advisor, has argued internally and to the President’s key supporters that recent polling and election results show that changing Social Security is no longer the ‘third rail of American politics.’

The article concludes:

Republican leadership aides on capital hill said [the Social Security issue] is more likely to be a winner if Congress passes the G.O.P. bill and add a prescription drug benefit to Medicare.

There it is, in the Republicans own words. Hold on to your hat. Today, Medicare, Tomorrow, Social Security.

It is no wonder that the Republican leadership aides on capital hill are reviving his bill through. It is no wonder that the House leadership violated its pledge to allow the members three days to review it. This bill can’t stand the light of day.

Every hour that passes, we find more outrageous provisions tucked away in this bill just past the Senate.

Let me review for the members some of the things that have been uncovered in just the last twenty-four hours.

The legislation the Senate approved earlier this year included an effective guarantee that seniors who wanted to remain in traditional Medicare would have a choice of at least two prescription drug only plans. If this simple two-plan test was not met for any reason, the federal government would provide a fallback plan. This assured that seniors who wanted to stay in Medicare would have a choice of plans to provide their drug benefit—or the Federal Government would provide the benefit directly, as it does other Medicare benefits.

The supporters of the conference report claim that they have guaranteed that every senior could stay in Medicare and get their prescription drugs from the government if the private sector doesn’t provide a choice of two plans. What they don’t say is that their two-plan requirement would be fulfilled if there is only one drug only plan and one PPO in an area.

That means that seniors have to take what one-drug only plan offers—no matter how high-priced, no matter how inadequate the formulary, no matter how poor the service—or be forced to leave Medicare. It looks like President Bush plans to let senior citizens drug coverage unless they give up their Medicare and their right to choose a doctor hasn’t been scrapped; it has just been repackaged.

The supporters of this conference report tout the limited $600 benefit that some very low income senior citizens will get next year along with their prescription drug card. But what they don’t say is that the price of getting this benefit will be governments ability to control drug costs. Major corporations will have unfettered access to your tax records—without so much as a “by your leave!” All those of you who think that’s a good idea will love this bill—but anyone who thinks that drug companies, health care providers, and insurance companies have no business prying into your financial records had better call your Senator to tell them to reject this legislation.

To comply with the bill’s require-ment that these drug benefits are tied to a person’s income, the bill allows HHS to disclose a senior’s tax records to any “offices, employers, or contractors” of the Department of Health and Human Services. That’s practically anyone—including the huge corporations that run the drug card programs.

In the words of the bill, just applying for the card “shall be deemed consent” for this monstrous invasion of privacy. Another dirty little secret tucked away in this drug bill is the freedom it gives the insurance companies offering the drug benefit to construct their formularies so that senior citizens can be sure that there will be a drug to meet their needs on their formularies. The conference report says that there must at least two drugs on the for-mulary in each therapeutic class. The Senate bill says the therapeutic classes must be approved by the Secretary. The conference report says the plan gets to decide. The plan can decide to make a category as broad as pain-killers and leave the senior citizen with a choice of aspirin or Tylenol—and no access to the more sophisticated drugs that so many of us need.

Whether the issue is choice of drugs, or privacy of tax records, or availability of drugs the senior needs, or the size of the PPO slush fund, this bill is not written in stone. No wonder Republicans want to get the legislation off the Senate floor and onto the President’s desk before all the rocks are turned over.

One of the most troubling aspects of this legislation is that a program that is supposed to improve the lives of sen-ior citizens will make almost one-quar-ter of them worse off the day it is im-plemented.

Six million senior citizens and disabled people on Medicaid—the poorest of the poor—will be victimized. Their out-of-pocket payment for drugs will be raised, and they may not even have coverage for the drugs they need the most.

The people we are talking about are truly the poorest of the poor. In most cases, their incomes are well below poverty. And the impact of even small co-payments is going to be huge. Study after study finds that when the poor have to pay more for drugs, they end up hospitalized, in nursing homes, or dead.

You couldn’t make up some of the provisions that are actually in this bill. It sounds like something out of Charles Dickens to say that the law might force a widow to give up her jew-elry or sign away the burial fund she has scraped together to get the pre-suption medication she needs. People wouldn’t believe you if you told them that Congress is considering a law to force some of America’s senior citi-zens to make those kind of choices.

I think everyone would acknowledge that the drug benefit portion of this legislation is inadequate to meet the needs of senior citizens. It has a high deductible and a coverage gap of thousands of dollars. Overall, we are pro-viding only $400 billion toward the $1.8 trillion in drug costs our senior citi-zens and disabled will incur in the next 10 years.

Given the limitations on the new Medicare benefit, the last thing we should be doing is causing people who have retirement coverage to lose it. But that is exactly what this bill does, because it provides a dis-criminatory benefit. People who have retirement coverage get a lesser Medicare benefit than every other bene-fit recipient. The result: employers will drop the coverage they now provide. The CBO and a new study just released by Professor Ken Thorpe of Emory University show that 2.7 million people—one retiree in four—will lose the good coverage they have today.

So between the 7 million poor people on Medicaid who will be worse off and the 3 million retirees who will lose their coverage—almost one-quarter of all Medicare beneficiaries will be worse off after this bill is implemented than they are today. If this legislation passes, Americans will ask: What were they thinking of? Why would any Senate vote to make 9 million senior citi-zens and disabled people worse off and undermine Medicare to boot?

And finally, this program undermines the health insurance of all Americans. It puts in place an unrestricted pro-gram of health savings accounts, what used to be called medical savings ac-counts. They provide billions of new tax breaks for the healthy and wealthy.

This program encourages the healthy and wealthy to take high deductible policies—policies that require you to pay thousands of dollars before you get benefits. That is fine for people who can afford to put money into a tax-free savings account, but it is not good for ordinary working Americans and people who are sick.

The Urban Institute and the American Academy of Actuaries have esti-mated that because the healthiest people are pulled out of the risk pool for regular, comprehensive policies by these health savings accounts, pre-existing medical conditions need a wider coverage will skyrocket. If this program becomes law and you want to keep your insurance policy, your premiums will increase 60 percent according to the Urban Institute and 61 percent according to the American Academy of Actuaries.

Isn't that astounding? The Senate started out with a bipartisan program to add prescription drug coverage to Medicare, and now we are asked to vote on a conference report that not only undermines Medicare but could raise health insurance premiums through the roof for younger Americans.

Senior citizens do not want this bill. The disabled do not want this bill. This bill is not a drug program for senior citizens. It is an attack on Medicare—and the Senate has the duty to reject it.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

QUARTERLY MASS MAIL REPORT FISCAL YEAR 2003

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, in accordance with section 318 of Public Law 101–520 as amended by Public Law 103–283, I am submitting the frank mail allocations made to each Senator from the appropriation for official mail expenses and the quarterly summary tabulations of Senate mass mail costs for fiscal year 2003 to be printed in the RECORD. The official mail allocations are available for franked mail costs, as stipulated in Public Law 108–7, the Omnibus Appropriations Act 2003.

I ask unanimous consent that the materials be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows: