Iran now feel the combined pressure of the international community to abandon their nuclear ambitions. I am confident in time they will.

Finally, change wrought by war has given old adversaries an opportunity to lay aside their grievances and begin the work of peace. India and Pakistan have agreed to peace talks. Syria has established diplomatic relations with Turkey. In each case, the opportunity to pursue a new course of peace between historic antagonists is a direct result of the United States determination to oppose international terrorists and the regimes that sponsor them.

This is not to say the war against terrorism has been won. We are far from that. Yasser Arafat continues to cling to the tools of terror, frustrating the latest efforts for peace in the Middle East. In Colombia, a courageous new government fights a stubborn terrorist movement. But with clear-eyed determination we can find solutions to these conflicts as well.

Victory in the war against terrorism is inevitable because of the leadership of our President, because of the perseverance of our people and, most of all, because of the courage and sacrifice of our men and women in uniform. Every day they serve the Nation, our service men and women give this Nation their very best. They are not the first, but they are the latest generation to take up arms, to travel from home and loved ones and risk all so we may live in safety, so we may live in peace. They deserve our deep gratitude.

I take one final moment to pay a special thanks to the 101st Airborne which is based in my home State of Tennessee and also in the adjoining State of Kentucky. Under the leadership of MG David Petraeus, a friend, the 101st is doing extraordinary work. You may remember it was the 101st that found and dispatched Uday and Qusay Hussein in Mosul. Since then, the 101st has moved more quickly than any other American unit in training guards and policemen for the new Iraqi civil defense guard.

They have also shown that the Iraqi people have tremendous generosity in their relationships with the United States. They have demonstrated the generosity through their action, through the action of the 101st Airborne, the generosity, the heart displayed by our service men and women in helping Iraq rebuild its infrastructure, rebuild its civic institutions and, even more fundamentally, the pride and hope of the people in Iraq, that pride and hope in the future. Together with the support of the Congress and the American people, the 101st is helping plant the seed of democracy in the heart of the Middle East.

There is yet much to be done, but it must be said that none of these developments was even imaginable 3 years ago. Because of the extraordinary leadership of President Bush and the courage of our men and women in uniform, America is safer. Millions of people around the world are for the first time free.

Strengthening our homeland security, prosecuting this war on terror, addressing domestic issues such as education and health care and tort reform are just a few of the issues we will address this year. The President’s judicial nominees will get the up-or-down vote they deserve. We will not allow a small minority of Senators to thwart our constitutional duty to advise and consent.

Look for action to protect unborn victims of violence, child custody protection, gun liability, bankruptcy, and many other legislative efforts.

We have laid out an ambitious agenda, one worthy of a great nation, one that will require strong, bipartisan work. We will be aggressive. We will fulfill our duty to serve the American people and make our Nation strong.

Some cynics say in a narrowly divided Congress, especially during an election year, that we are doomed to gridlock, that we can accomplish little. I strongly disagree. I believe everyone in this Chamber will do what is right and what is best for the American people and that is to move America forward.

There is much to be done and there is no time to waste. I thank my fellow Senators for their dedication. I look forward to another extraordinary year in the Senate. I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH). Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2004—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 2673, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the conference report as follows:

A conference report to accompany H.R. 2673, making appropriations for agriculture, rural development, Food and Drug Administration, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 2004, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 6 p.m. will be equally divided between the chairman and ranking member of the appropriations committee or their designees for debate only.

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to consume as much time as I will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I listened to my colleague, Senator Frist, who is the majority leader. I have great respect for him. His call for bipartisanship is certainly welcome. I say to him and to others that those of us who serve in the Senate come here wanting to do good things for our country. We have a passion for good public policy that will advance America’s interests.

But I must say, in the past year or so the evidence of bipartisanship is hard to find with respect to the way the White House and the majority in this Senate have conducted our business. We would welcome true bipartisanship.

I must also point out, while I think there are areas where we have made progress in this country, there are some very significant issues with which we must deal.

We have the largest budget deficit in history, and, no, it is not because of a war, it is not because of a recession. We had testimony at a hearing yesterday that said the largest part of this deficit is as a result of recurring tax cuts, very large tax cuts, the bulk of which went to the largest income earners in this country. If you earn $1 million a year, good for you; you are very fortunate. You, also, under this administration’s tax plan, get nearly $100,000 in a tax cut each year as well.

We have a very large and growing Federal budget deficit, the largest in history. The President proposes increased defense spending, increased homeland security spending, and then decreased revenue. I went to a really small school, but mathematics is still the same. One and one equals two. That fiscal policy equals very large budget deficits.

We have a responsibility—all of us, Republicans and Democrats—to our children to put this fiscal policy back on track. This President inherited a large and growing budget surplus. We now have the largest budget deficit in history, and we must fix it.

We have the largest trade deficit in history, and we have to fix that. This administration is negotiating new trade agreements that, incidentally, will once again ship more American jobs overseas. It makes no sense to me for us to do that. We do have a global economy, but we ought not set American workers and American businesses up for competition against those around the world who will work 12-year-olds 12 hours a day for 12 cents an hour and then ship their products to the store shelves in America. That is not fair competition for American workers and American business. That is only about larger profits for multi-nationals. We need a better trade policy and to reduce those trade deficits as well.

We have many problems, significant problems, we have to address. I welcome bipartisanship. I hope Republicans and Democrats see the same goal, who have the same interests and urges to improve this country, can work together.
But I want to talk a little about this Omnibus appropriations bill and describe why some of us are concerned about the lack of bipartisanship at the end of the last session and about the partisanship, especially that was exhibited. I want to talk about things that were put in this Omnibus appropriations bill, or things that were taken out, and how that was done, and why that was done, and why we think it is bad public policy.

First, let me talk about country-of-origin labeling. That is just a slogan. Not many people, perhaps, know what that is about. Let me describe it.

Upton Sinclair in 1906 wrote a book called “The Jungle.” He was describing what happened in America’s meatpacking plants. They had a rat problem, and so what they did to control the rats was they would take loaves of bread and lace them with poison and lay them around these meat plants so the rats would eat the poison. The meat would die, and they would put the bread and the rats down the same hole, and out the back of those packing plants came sausage sent to the American consumer.

Well, Upton Sinclair wrote about that, too, but in a book called “The Jungle.” That led to tough new laws, inspections, saying you cannot do that. This is about the health and safety of the American people and the health and safety of America’s food supply.

Country-of-origin labeling is about labeling food in this country. The necktie I am wearing has a label on it. I looked at it this morning. All neckties have labels. Why? Because they are required to have labels. I know where this necktie was made. In fact, I know where the shoes I am wearing were made.

But not everything is labeled. And especially in the advent of a case of mad cow disease, discovered in the State of Washington, with a cow that came from that plant in Mexico. It might have come from Guatemala. You do not know. Did it come from Canada? You will not know. Guatemala? No. This meat is not labeled.

Let me read something about a packing plant in Mexico for the interest of the consumers in this country. In May of 1989, I was privileged to have a surprise visit to a meatpacking plant in Mexico. This is what he said he found: “Shanks and briskets were contaminated with feces . . . diseased-condemned carcass was observed ready for boning and distribution in commerce.” But then the Mexican officials went to work to restore that plant’s ability to sell meat into America. The Mexican plant regained its export license. It switched its name. It sells meat into America. And USDA has never returned. It has never again been inspected.

Do you want to know whether this meat came from this country or that country? I do. The American consumer ought to know.

This Omnibus appropriations bill contains something that is pernicious on this issue. We passed a law that is the law of the land that requires food labeling, meat labeling, and the Department of Agriculture will not implement it. This appropriations bill, with no debate and no discussion in the Congress, put a provision in this appropriations bill that says we shall delay, by 2 years, the implementation of this law. Total nonsense. Why? Because the big packing plants got to them, and they don’t like this.

The USDA says it is hard to implement. Nonsense. We can drive a vehicle on the surface of Mars and we cannot put labels on food. That is about big interests versus others. It is about consumers and farmers and ranchers being together in whose interest it is that we label meat and food.

On the other side are the big grocery manufacturers, the big packing houses that have fought this tooth and nail, and this administration and the majority in this Congress who listen to only one voice; and that is the biggest interests—the bigger interests. They are the winners. They are always the winners in this fight.

So the country-of-origin labeling provision in this bill is wrong. It was never debated. It was never agreed to. The provision went into a room and wrote these provisions and stuck them into this appropriations bill. They ought to go back into the same room and fix it. We do not know which room it is. We do not know who they are because this was a partisan exercise. They did not invite Democrats. It was a partisan exercise. What they did is they served big business interests by sticking this sort of nonsense in the bill. That is country-of-origin labeling.

Let me describe something else. How about overtime? This is not about meat. I will put the meat away. I thank the Presiding Officer for allowing me to show a piece of steak on the floor of the Senate. There is not one Member of the Senate who would know where that meat came from because it is not labeled. It might have come from a plant in Mexico. It might have come from Guatemala. You do not know. I do not know. We do not know, but we do not want to know. That is what the major-and start to pound on it and bend it. You can bend it when you put heat on steel.

That is a lot like politics. When you apply heat, that is when things bend in politics. That is what this is about, trying to get those who want to get rid of meat labeling, or we are going to let the Labor Department tell 8 million people they have to work without overtime pay for more than 40 hours a week or broadcast ownership, which is interesting for me.

Broadcast ownership. Who owns America's radio and television stations? That is a big issue. We voted on that issue in the Senate and in the House of Representatives. The judgment and decision we made was taken out of this conference after the conference made the decision and closed the title by unanimous consent. I was a conferee; that is how I know. The conference report on this Omnibus bill dealt with all the big interests, taking on the big broadcast ownership. We did it in bipartisan fashion, with Republicans and Democrats together. We passed legislation in both the House and the Senate, with Republican and Democratic support.

When we finished, we went to conference. Sitting in the conference, when we came to that title, I asked the chairman of the conference: Let me understand what you now intend to put in this conference report because they were about to close the title. I said: On the broadcast ownership issue, will this conference report include the 35-percent restriction that passed the House and Senate on a bipartisan basis? The answer was that, yes, it includes the position of the House and Senate, the 35 percent. I said that I will then have no objection to closing this title. Bang, the gavel came down, the title was closed, and the conference resolved that issue. It was done.

Mr. President, that is not what is in this bill. That is not what came from the conference. I was driving down the road in my car about a week later and I heard on the radio that the Senate was negotiating with the President on a different number. That is what is in this bill. Apparently, conferences don't matter. The gavel doesn't matter. The chairman closing a title doesn't matter. None of it mattered. None of it was on the level. What is in this conference report expands the ownership capability of broadcast ownership in television and radio—television with respect to this issue—in a way it abridges the decision made first by the House, then by the Senate, then by the conference.

I would like just one person to explain to me that process, or the rules that allow that process to bring that to the floor of the Senate. What is this about? It is about whether you are going to stand up in this country for broad-based economic ownership, or whether you believe in the area of broadcast properties—those who determine what we see and what we hear and read, which increasingly are just a few people in this country—whether you believe the sky is the limit; own everything; own the sky, the air, and own bigger and bigger. One company now owns over 1,200 radio stations in this country. I could bring out charts about all the broadcast properties in television and radio. You would see there is this steady accretion of concentration and a dramatic and damaging concentration.

That is what this fight was about in the Senate and House. In fact, the Senate passed a resolution of disapproval that I, along with Senator Lott and others, on a bipartisan basis, passed in the Senate—a resolution that disapproved the entire Federal communications rule dealing with expanding the ownership capabilities of the big five or six groups that own stations and allowing cross ownership of newspapers and broadcast media. We passed that resolution of disapproval in the Senate that would disapprove the entire rule. That is now pending in the House of Representatives at the desk. It is only about 10 signatures short of passing there. They have, I think, 208 signatures.

You know what. Somewhere in a closed room, with just a few folks deciding, the decision by the House, the decision by the Senate, and explicit decision by the conference committee of which I was a member, with respect to broadcast ownership in television. I think that is a horrible policy choice, aside from the fact that, in my judgment, it casts aside all the rules as to how we do business.

It is fundamentally wrong for this Congress to weigh in and say, by the way, the sky is the limit; own everything. That is not what the House and Senate wanted. That is not what we passed. That is not what is in the bill. They have, I think, 208 signatures.

It is not fine with me. It is not the way things ought to be in this country. Yet it doesn't matter how we vote in the Congress. What matters is what a few people can do in an omnibus report that comes to us, which contains provisions that were not debated and not supported by either the House or the Senate. Why? I will tell you why. On virtually all of these issues, the White House says if you mess around with what we don't like, we will veto this.

We have compliant folks who bow and say if you say “veto,” let us take it out. By all means, let us satisfy the White House in forgetful, I guess, that we have a Constitution which they would conference with themselves and exclude Democrats. That will not happen again in this Congress either. We will not appoint conferees unless there is a commitment from the chairman of the committee that the conference will meet with both members of the conference, Republican and Democratic caucuses.

We will not appoint conferees unless there is a commitment from the chairmen of the committee that the conference will meet with both members of the conference, Republican and Democratic caucuses.
Even more than that, we will not allow again something like this to happen: seven appropriations bills put in one omnibus and then in the middle, a little folder is stuck in that abridges the rights of the majority and minority with respect to specific votes in the Congress. It is not the right way to do business.

I accept the majority leader's call for bipartisanship. As far as I am concerned, sign me up on things on which we can work together. I want to do that. I will shoot them out of the barrel for the good of this country. But we cannot call for bipartisanship unless we renounce the tactics that created this conference report with respect to overtime, country-of-origin labeling, broadcast ownership, and other issues. Those people have a voice in this Chamber as well — people who work hard, people who are consumers. They have a right to be heard in this Congress, and they were not with respect to those provisions in this Omnibus bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of a concurrent resolution which I shall send to the desk directing the enrollment of the omnibus conference report restoring the media ownership language to that which the conference had originally agreed to; that the concurrent resolution be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

Mr. BOND. On behalf of the Republican leadership, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, my colleagues from Missouri and my colleague from Rhode Island are waiting. I thank them for their indulgence. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Graham of South Carolina). The Senator from Missouri is addressed.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that after I finish my remarks, the Senator from Rhode Island be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I have come to speak about the Omnibus appropriations bill. I say to my good friend from North Dakota, sometimes it is frustrating. We spent 8 years with an administration of his party, and there were many times we had to change appropriations bills. We had a very frequent presence from the Office of Management and Budget, and in order to get bills signed, we had to accede to Presidential requests.

In this bill particularly, there are some very important provisions. When we are talking about country-of-origin labeling, the concern that comes to many of us in livestock-producing States, cattle producers and hog producers, is you are a small independent operator and you don't have a totally integrated operation, you have a very difficult time getting a total life history of every animal you might want to feed out and sell.

The ability of a large integrated operation which goes from cow calf to feeding, finishing and slaughtering, they are in a great position to live with the country-of-origin labeling. There are some very important provisions. I am not sure which is why we asked for a delay in the implementation of the country-of-origin labeling. There had been a new proposal for an animal identification system which would make that prospect possible. In the absence of that, individual small cattle ranchers and hog producers in my State think it would be impossible for them to sell their animals.

There are some conflicting needs. Those had to be resolved and, like any matter, an Omnibus appropriations bill has provisions in it that some people don't like. Certainly, in almost every appropriations bill on which I work, there are provisions I don't like. But the objective of the Senate will be to get it passed by both Houses. We have to get it signed by the President.

I am here today to urge that, No. 1, we move quickly to adopt the Omnibus appropriations bill and that we get on and work on a bipartisan basis without delays, without having to invoke closure to pass appropriations bills for the coming year.

With respect to the Omnibus appropriations bill, I wish to call the attention of my colleagues to some very important provisions. There are problems that are happening every day because we were not able to pass the Omnibus appropriations bill in December. We worked on a bipartisan basis. The distinguished ranking member of the VA-HUD Subcommittee, Senator Mikulski of Maryland, and I put together what is a very difficult bill, but we think it is a very important bill. Probably the most significant part of it is for medical care.

The Omnibus appropriations bill provides $23.3 billion in funds, including third-party insurance collections. This amount is $3.1 billion over the fiscal year 2003 enacted level and represents a 12.3 percent increase over the previous year's enacted level, the one that will have to stay in effect if we continue to work under a continuing resolution.

At this point, our problem is we either pass this bill or go back to a continuing resolution. The figure of $3.1 billion in increased spending means great hardship, great delay for our VA health care, among other things.

Make no mistake, these funds are urgently and desperately needed by veterans, especially for those who return from Iraq and the global war on terrorism.

If my colleagues visit, as I have, VA facilities, the Washington VA, and the VA facilities in my home State, anywhere they go they will find there is a tremendous delay in the ability to care for and take on veterans who qualify under the greatly expanded eligibility scope the Congress has mandated on VA. There is a great delay in taking care of many of these people.

According to a VA analysis, there are 15,813 service members who served in Operation Iraqi Freedom who have been separated from military duty as of December 22 of this year. Among these service members, almost 2,000, or 12.5 percent, have sought VA health care during 2003.

Every day we hear unfortunate and sad news of American soldiers killed in Iraq. As illustrated by the VA analysis of scores of news reports, there are thousands of service members who were fortunate to live but were wounded in combat. As reported last October 1 by USA Today:

At least seven times as many men and women have been wounded in battle as those killed in battle.

As these wounded service members are discharged from the military and confront new and challenging hardships in piecing together a new life, they are discharged from VA, without VA to meet their needs. I personally met some of these service members when I visited Walter Reed Hospital last month. I visited the VA facilities. I visited service members, such as Phillip Reuter of Kansas City, MO, who was badly wounded in Iraq and will ultimately require extensive, long-term care from the VA system as well.

Further, we know that the demand for VA medical care is not going to let up; we already seen the VA medical care system being overwhelmed by the staggering increase in demand for its medical services.

Since 1996, VA has seen a 54 percent increase, or 2 million patients more, in total users of the medical care system. Further, the VA projects that its enrollments will grow by another 2 million patients from a current level of 7 million to 9 million patients in 2009. Getting the funds that we have approved in the Senate and in the conference committee, approved on the floor, and signed by the President is absolutely essential.

In addition, construction projects for new medical facilities and improvements to existing facilities will not go forward without this Omnibus bill passing. Under a year-long continuing resolution, the VA would not be able to begin funding construction for new facilities in Las Vegas and Orlando. Further, funding for the development of 48 high-priority, new community-based outpatient clinics, and a number of new nursing homes will be curtailed.

In the years I have worked with the VA in my current position, providing community-based outpatient clinics is the most effective, humane, and efficient way of delivering service to VA-qualified veterans who would otherwise have to travel perhaps as much as hundreds of miles to get primary and routine care.

In another area, for 2003, pharmacy costs rose over 11 percent, and the VA is continuing to see increasing demands for prescriptions each month.
The continued rising demand for prescriptions is stripping funds from other priority areas as VA continues to operate under last year’s funding level. Furthermore, the VA provides a high priority to the highest quality of life long-term care for each of its elderly veterans. The VA plans to reduce the long-term care program by over 20 percent this year, but the VA will not be able to expand its long-term care services under a continuing resolution funding authority. This, in my view, is not the way we should go.

The VA has made significant strides in improving claims processing, but the VA’s efforts would again be curtailed under a continuing resolution. The VA is currently on track to reach their goal of no longer than 100 days to process these claims, down from 233 days, which it was previously. They are trying to get there by the end of 2004. However, with a continuing resolution level at the 2003 funding level, the current year, the Veterans Benefits Administration would have to cut 500 full-time employees. Such a reduction would be catastrophic to the timeliness of claims processing and the expeditious delivery of benefits such as pension to the needy, education benefits, and home loans.

At a continuing resolution for 2003 funding level, the VA cemetery services would be critically impacted and would result in delays in expanding shrine commitment contracts, awarding grants for State veterans cemeteries, and a reduced level of staffing that would negatively impact cemetery maintenance.

America’s veterans rely on the VA to provide the services they need and have earned. Now is not the time to reduce funding levels, and that is one reason I urge my colleagues to approve this Omnibus bill.

In HUD, Housing and Urban Development, under a continuing resolution, the Section 8 Voucher Program for the needy who get housing through a voucher provided by the Federal Government would be $2.1 billion short. That would result in tens of thousands of low-income families without rental subsidy assistance and potentially displace them. Certainly, that is not something we want to see done. That is another reason we have to pass the Omnibus bill.

For the Federal Housing Administration single family and multifamily insurance fund programs, the continuing resolution’s limitations for the mutual mortgage insurance and general insurance special risk insurance programs will be hit well before the end of the fiscal year. That would result in a suspension of new mortgage activities for a wide variety of home ownership and multifamily housing programs.

Moving on to NASA, our space programs are facing yet another continuing resolution space science activities would be reduced by approximately $425 million from the amount included in the 2004 Omnibus appropriations conference report on the VA/HUD and Independent agencies. Space science would be forced to accommodate the reduction by cutting missions that are currently in the pre-development phase, both technology and advanced concept, resulting in delays to missions on origins, solar space exploration, and Sun-Earth connections.

NASA is also relying on the 2004 Omnibus bill for the shuttle program in order to accommodate return to flight requirements. If forced to operate under a full-year CR, the ability of the space shuttle to accommodate these return to flight requirements would be reduced by nearly $600 million. Finally, the Corporation for National Community Service would be forced to limit grant awards to AmeriCorps programs throughout the country since the CR does not provide adequate funding to reach the President’s goal of serving 75,000 volunteers. Under a year-long CR, the corporation would only be able to support between 45,000 and 47,000 members, about 40 percent less than provided under the Omnibus appropriations bill.

We went through a period of problems that have occurred in the Corporation for National and Community Service. Senator MIKULSKI and I worked to help them straighten out the problems. On a bipartisan basis, they have been getting back to the great work of the many volunteer programs, including AmeriCorps. Without this funding, there would be a drastic setback and we would find that the level of activity would be significantly reduced.

These are just some of the reasons, from the perspective of the VA/HUD and Independent Agencies Subcommittee bill, which is included in the Omnibus bill, why I hope colleagues in the Senate will agree we need to get on with this bill and go to work on the current year’s business. We have far too little time to deal with all of the things we must deal with, and I hope we could get on with the job.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I express my deep concern about several provisions contained in this omnibus legislation. Many of these provisions were in direct contradiction to the bipartisan actions of this Congress and the House of Representatives. It is alarming to me that in an Omnibus appropriations bill that will be signed by the President the House and Senate would be contravened so arbitrarily and so dramatically. I am concerned about the process, as well as the specific issue that I come to speak about today.

First, tucked into this massive spending bill are several out and out gifts to the gun lobby. Some were included in a controversial House amendment and another was slipped into the conference report later by the Republican leadership without a vote by the House and Senate conferees. That is highly unusual and, in terms of procedure, very dangerous to the functioning of this body and, indeed, to the constitutional obligations we must perform.

These provisions, with respect to guns, reduce law enforcement’s ability to carry out their duty to enforce our Nation’s gun laws, and they do not provide any benefit to law-abiding gun owners. The other people who benefit from these provisions are criminals and prohibited purchasers, those who should be disarmed, according to the laws of this country. Again, I hear time after time that all we should do with respect to gun safety in this country is just enforce the laws. This is the mantra of the NRA and of the gun advocates. But how can you enforce the laws if law enforcement authorities are required to destroy information they obtain through the gun sales procedures under the Brady Act? We went through a period in law enforcement’s authority has been highly suspicious. According to a report in the Washington Post on July 21, 2003, Representative TODD TIAHRT, in the words of the Washington Post “surprised many of his fellow Republicans” when he offered an amendment in the House Appropriations Committee. In fact, Representative FRANK WOLF, who chairs the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee on Appropriations, objected to the amendment, saying he had not had time to review it prior to its presentation. But Representative TIAHRT refused to withdraw the amendment and he won passage on a 31-to-30 vote, over the opposition of Chairman WOLF and Appropriations Committee Chairman BILL YOUNG.

Meanwhile, Mr. TIAHRT assured his colleagues that the NRA had reviewed the language. He said, “I wanted to make sure I was fulfilling the needs of my friends who are firearms dealers” and that the NRA officials “were helpful in making sure I had my bases covered.”

This insertion of language over the objections of the subcommittee chairman and the full Appropriations Committee chairman, at the behest of the NRA, to take care of your friends who are firearms dealers is not what we should embrace in this Omnibus appropriations bill.

In the conference between the House and the Senate, appropriators modified several of the provisions on a bipartisan basis of the original amendment offered by Representative TIAHRT. But the Republican leadership later inserted a most objectionable item over, presumptively, the objections of the committee chairman and the subcommittee chairman. The provision would require the FBI to destroy approved gun sale records within 24 hours.

The 24-hours-records-destruction provision would put more guns in the hands of criminals by preventing the FBI from discovering and correcting erroneous gun sales under the National Instant Criminal Background Check System.
Currently, approved gun sale records are retained for 90 days to allow the FBI to perform audits of the National Instant Criminal Background Check System, to ensure that if criminals or terrorists or other prohibited purchasers have acquired such a weapon incorrectly, yes, the contrary to this, to these mistakes can be corrected, that the guns can be retrieved. This is not an imaginary problem. The General Accounting Office found that during the first quarter of the 90-day retention policy, the FBI used retained records to initiate 235 firearm retrieval actions, of which 228, or 97 percent, could not have been initiated under the next-day destruction policy required by this Omnibus appropriations bill.

Let me repeat that. In a 6-month period, the auditing of these records enabled retrieval of 235 firearms that were in the hands of prohibited persons—criminals, people who were spouse abusers, the whole category of people who are prohibited from having firearms because of their records—235. If this rule were in effect then, they would have recovered 7, leaving 228 with dangerous individuals whose conduct has already underscored their need to carry a firearm. They would have had these weapons. I can't see any other result of this policy than to put more weapons in the hands of identified criminals or identified violent individuals.

No one in this country is walking around saying let's give violent criminals more guns. Again, the mantra is: Just enforce the laws. Make sure those criminals don't have access to weapons. This provision cuts at the heart of all the rhetoric and all the hyperbole about "just enforce the laws" and "guns don't kill, criminals kill," and exposes a grotesque miscarriage of justice. That is why organizations such as the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the National Shooting Sports Foundation oppose this provision.

But that is not all that is included in this Omnibus appropriations bill. The bill would also prohibit the ATF, the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau, from finalizing a proposed August 2000 rule that would require gun dealers to conduct an annual physical inventory of the weapons in their possession. The purpose of the proposed rule is to allow dealers to go ahead and identify missing firearms and report them to the ATF in a timely fashion.

You would think every responsible dealer in this country would conduct periodic inventories and, as soon as a weapon was discovered missing or stolen, their first instincts would be to contact authorities. But we know that is not the case because this community of Washington, DC suffered through a string of sniper killings months ago that traumatized not only Washington but the entire Nation, and this string of killings could be traced to a weapon at Bulls Eye Shooter Supply, the gun seller where John Allen Muhammad and Lee Boyd Malvo obtained the assault rifle used in these attacks. After the snipers were apprehended, the gun was recovered and was traced back to Bulls Eye. What did they say? They had no record of selling the gun. They didn't even know the gun was missing until the shooting spree was over. The guns were not traced. Just one of more than 238 firearms missing from Bulls Eye's inventory during the previous 3 years—a dealer who is missing 238 weapons in a 3-year period, one of the first dealers who were found to be trafficking weapons, which was one of the most heinous assaults on the United States in many years. The ATF proposal requiring dealers such as Bulls Eye to conduct annual physical inventories is still pending. We should be urging them not to suspend this rule but to enact this rule. What could be more commonsensical, more obvious, after the sniper killings in Washington, than allowing the ATF to promulgate a rule so there is at least a physical inventory and requirement they get this done. We have learned nothing from the deaths of these people. We have learned nothing from the death of Conrad Johnson, a bus driver sitting in his bus reading his paper at 6:30 in the morning, working, working to support his family and his children—who was killed by these snipers.

This, to me, is preposterous. Yet here we are, trying to take an omnibus bill, holding billions of dollars in appropriations, that is part of the Omnibus appropriations bill from Missouri talked about that we all support—holding them hostage to provisions like this, to provisions that fly in the face of our experience and that undercut all the rhetoric when we talked about learning from the mistakes of the past, from ensuring that criminals don't have weapons, from enforcing the laws. We are undercutting the ability of law enforcement to do their job. Floundering, this bill prohibits release of any information regarding firearms production or sale that is required to be kept by gun dealers or manufacturers. In addition, no information or records regarding multiple handgun sales—where two or more handguns are sold to the same buyer within 5 days—or crime-gun-tracing information that is reported to the ATF could be reported to the public. No, let's throw a cloak of silence over all of these laws, over any disclosure of information that should be public.

ATF has in the past made this information available under the Freedom of Information Act, but this information has been used to highlight some of the discrepancies and difficulties and deficiencies in our gun laws. As a result, the gun lobby doesn't want it out: No information, no knowledge, no problems. That is not right. There are problems here, problems we should address with our colleagues. It is not the purpose of this provision to prevent law enforcement authorities to enforce laws when they are prohibited by the law. I believe from having the information to do that.

This is an important right for the public to know, particularly with respect to firearms tracing from crime scenes. As a result of publicly available information, there have been identified several firearms dealers who were the source of a preponderance of weapons at crime scenes. That is valuable information, not only to law enforcement authorities but to the general public, and that information should be public. We are facing numerous problems about gun violence. We have the threat of terrorism. Last night the President spoke repeatedly about terrorists. This is a situation made to be manipulated, to be misused by those who want firearms. If the record of their purchases is destroyed in 24 hours, if there is no requirement for an inventory of weapons, think of how we are setting out a situation that can be exploited, not just by criminals but by those people with even more malign designs on this country. We are doing it and we are doing it in the middle of the night, figuratively speaking. None of these issues was fully debated, particularly the destruction of records within 24 hours. Procedurally we should reject it. Substantively we should reject it.

There is another issue we should be concerned about that many of my colleagues mentioned, and that is the overtime rule for American workers.

Last year, the administration announced its proposal to significantly weaken overtime protection. The proposal would take away from many hard-working Americans their ability to earn enough to support their families. The timing of this proposal is even more egregious. It comes during a period when more and more Americans are struggling to make ends meet and while the country is bleeding jobs overseas.

It was announced this week that IBM was going to hire 15,000 people this year. The only problem is that they are only going to hire about 1,500 in the United States. Those people who are struggling to find jobs, to keep jobs, and to better their lives, we are telling the employers they do not have to pay overtime. It doesn't make sense to me. It doesn't make sense to this Senate because on September 10, the Senate passed a measure to prevent millions of American workers from being stripped of their overtime. We acted in a bipartisan fashion. In doing so, we reaffirmed our support for protecting these hard-working Americans.

Unfortunately, safeguards to overtime pay were stripped out at the President's request, again leaving Americans vulnerable.
At a time when the President is talking about job growth and providing additional benefits to families, why does he want to weaken the laws designed to create jobs and to protect hard-working Americans? We know what is happening today. Employers are not hiring full-time workers. They are extending the hours of their existing workforce because of the pressures they face. When you lower the number of people who qualify for overtime pay, that is an incentive to continue that practice of simply extending the hours of current workers and not hiring new workers. This will go against our hopes by all, I believe, that this year our economy can start hiring people again—not simply adding a few hours to the workday of existing workers. But certainly those few hours of additional work deserve to be compensated by overtime. This law cuts it. About 11 million workers receive overtime pay. Many understaffed fields such as nursing are required by law in many communities to pay overtime. Yet under this rule, that mandatory overtime would not in all cases be compensated.

Other workers rely on this extra income simply to make ends meet. The people who are in danger of losing their benefits are health care workers and technicians, paralegals, restaurant workers, draftsmen, therapists, retail managers, news reporters, police officers, firefighters, and even military reservists.

What I find most objectionable is that this proposal basically says that reservists who are coming back who have had certain kinds of training in the Armed Forces are no longer considered eligible for overtime pay. This is preposterous. These individuals could literally have left their employment a few months ago to respond to the call of the Nation in a time of danger and receive some training while they are in the military, or have that training before and now find themselves penalized for the training they received in the military in terms of getting overtime pay. That is preposterous. That is what this rule would do. It could affect thousands of military reservists. That is not only unfortunate in individual cases, but that is a stunning snub to Americans who are risking their lives in serving their country collectively.

I again am amazed that such a proposal would even be submitted, and I am more amazed that we would, today, be prepared to vote on it in this Omnibus appropriations bill.

American workers work more hours than any others in the world—1,900 hours per year. Yet, still, they need more to get by and to make ends meet. I am amazed that the administration would continue on this track of undercutting overtime in the United States, and I am extremely disappointed. Rather than trying to undermine the wages of Americans, we should be looking for ways to increase the wages of Americans.

I think these two provisions are problematic. Many more of my colleagues have spoken about that and have called into serious question both the procedures that brought us here and certainly the substance of these proposals. I would like to propose a unanimous consent request.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of the resolution which I shall send to the desk correcting the enrollment of the omnibus conference report; the resolution strikes the language which requires the FBI to destroy gun purchase background check information after 24 hours; that the current resolution be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, this is a time of challenge, and it is time for the Senate to step up to meet those challenges.

As the President carefully outlined last night, because of the filibuster in the Omnibus appropriations bill we find the Senate almost 5 months into the fiscal year still wrestling with the remaining funding bills from the year in which we are currently involved. We have started a new calendar year trying to finish the business of last year. The Omnibus legislation is finished, and it is ready to pass except for the filibuster. With its passage, the Senate will finally complete last year’s business.

To be sure, much of the Nation’s business was accomplished by the Senate last year. We had hoped to be able to finish the appropriations business last December. In fact, last year the President’s economic growth package to create jobs. The Senate passed it, and that plan is clearly working.

Last year, the President called for a Medicare drug plan so that our seniors would never have to choose ever again between groceries and needed prescription drugs. The Senate passed it and that help is on the way for our seniors.

Last year, the President called for full funding for homeland security. The Senate passed it, and America is safer.

Last year, the President called for funding of the liberation and reconstruction of Iraq. The Senate passed it and freedom is rising.

In normal times, that would be indeed a phenomenal record. But these are not normal times. These are times of unprecedented challenges.

The Senate’s historic pattern of studious delay is out of touch with these demanding times in which we find ourselves.

This filibuster needs to come to an end. To that end, each Senator must ask themselves the following questions about the funding of the Government: Should funding for most Federal departments and agencies be at the levels we agreed to in the last budget resolution, which we negotiated with the President, or should it be funded at a lower level and perhaps not at all? Should we fund the FBI at $320 million less than we planned, even though most of that goes to their counterterrorism activities? Should we fund embassy security at the State Department with the extra $20 million we agreed to? Should we keep faith with those who have borne the brunt of battle in the war on terrorism by providing veterans medical care with the extra $3.1 billion we agreed to?

These questions obviously answer themselves. Instead, we wrestle with these questions with an insufficient budget to fund these programs. As we try to fund the Government for this year at the levels agreed upon in last year’s budget resolution, we cannot begin to set the budget priorities for next year. The Senate cannot meet the demands of tomorrow if we are still wrestling with the agreements of yesterday.

The demands of tomorrow are not going to go away. As the President stated last night: We may believe the danger of terrorism is behind us. That hope is understandable, comforting, and false.

The President is right. We have done much to improve America’s security: our economic security, our health security, our homeland security, and our national security. But it is false hope, indeed, to believe we have done all that can be done or should be done. Economic security is improving as the economy grows and the unemployment rate declines. Health security has improved with enactment of the prescription drug benefit in Medicare for seniors and enactment of health security accounts for workers.

While homeland security has also improved, more must and can be done, but not if we are wrestling with the FBI budget of last year.

The national security needs in the coming year require our full attention, but that is not possible if we are still fighting to fully fund the State Department embassy security for last year.

Thomas Jefferson advised us that eternal vigilance is the price of freedom. Ever since he stated those words, America has tried to assess how they apply to us at a particular time and as we confront a particular challenge. The President has assessed the unprecedented challenges of our times and provided unprecedented leadership.

Our Nation has responded to the challenges as well. From issues of security to issues of prosperity, our country is moving forward behind the President’s leadership.
The Senate should respond as well. But when we delay this bill for no reason other than for delay itself, we are not meeting the challenges of our time. This is a bill that should have been passed months ago.

There is no reason for delay. We see it in the reduced funding of the FBI, embassy security, food security, and, of course, veterans health benefits.

We cannot yet see the price we will pay tomorrow for our delay today, but it is surely there. We delay setting the priorities for next year and building upon the security we have achieved in the last 3 years. We delay making our Nation safer and we delay making our economy stronger.

In these times of challenge, the time for delay is over and the time to act is now. It is my hope and the hope of many Senators on both sides of the aisle that tomorrow we will be able to wrap up the business of last year, finally, and get this important Omnibus appropriation down to the President for his signature so we can begin the work of the year in which we currently find ourselves.

The Senator from New Mexico is here. I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank Senator BOXER who was entitled to go next. Before she got down here, we intervened and asked her if it would be possible I go ahead of her. So I will be next. We are trying not to break the commitment of one side and then the other side, but I will not be here if I cannot speak now. I am on my way to New Mexico to meet the President, ultimately in Roswell, NM.

Mr. President, I said yesterday to a large group of Senators that it is about time now to speak about the energy situation in America since we have a bill before the Senate that missed, in terms of filibuster, by two votes. That means that in normal times that bill would have passed handsomely.

What is happening around here, if you do not get your way, instead of voting on a bill, you threaten to filibuster. The American people have probably seen more 60-vote issues in the Senate in the last 5 years than in modern history. Almost every issue is turned into a 60-vote issue by a threat to filibuster. That was done on the Energy bill.

My friends, I can state what is happening but most of it is right in front of your face. We have the worst case scenario in much of the energy-consuming areas of the country, from the Rockies to New England, with the coldest 10- to 20-day period since the winters of 1977 and 1978. It was 14 degrees at my house this morning a block and a half from the Hart Building. Accuweather is predicting within 2 weeks we could have the coldest weather we have seen in 25 years.

Some people love the cold. Some people hate the cold. But the point is America should not be brought to its knees economically and otherwise because we have a cold winter. We are looking at a point in time not too far down the line when the major sources of energy for Americans will be so expensive that the American people will wonder what happened.

I am stating what is happening: Three or four Senators will not let us pass an Energy bill. That is what is happening.

Yesterday, natural gas was over $6.50. To put that in perspective, when I first came to the Senate people—people can look at me and guess how long that was; some would say I look as if I have been here 100 years; some might say 15 years. I have been here 31 years. Ten years after I came here, we were talking about deregulating natural gas and the price of natural gas was 38 cents. Compare that to $6.50.

We can look around the world and see what is happening. The great monster economy called China has decided they do not have enough energy for their growth. They cannot find a way to quench their thirst for oil. Nobody knew that. It just came upon us. China, the fastest growing economy in the world, has put the word out: Buy oil. And even more than that: Buy the oil-fields. Go invest money with oil companies in the world. The underlying theme is China's thirst for natural gas, as well as to fuel its industrial revolution.

Yesterday, China reported economic growth of 9.9 percent. These are over 1.3 billion or 1.4 billion—and they finally decide to take on some aspects of capitalism, that they are producing overwhelming amounts of goods and services for themselves and for the world. Whether their leaders call themselves Communists or not, they love dollars and they love to produce things and sell to the world. They are a huge problem. But China is not alone. The population and economic growth is creating a voracious demand for energy that is overwhelming.

And even more than that: Buy the oil—import it? No. China's growth is following in our footsteps. In these times of challenge, the time for delay is over and the time to act is now.

Yesterday, China reported economic growth of 9.9 percent. These are over 1.3 billion or 1.4 billion—and they finally decide to take on some aspects of capitalism, that they are producing overwhelming amounts of goods and services for themselves and for the world. Whether their leaders call themselves Communists or not, they love dollars and they love to produce things and sell to the world. They are a huge problem. But China is not alone. The population and economic growth is creating a voracious demand for energy that is overwhelming.

The bottom line is we are allowing ourselves to become increasingly dependent upon imported energy. We used to say "imported oil." Now I can say "imported energy" because we are beginning to import, or will have to, soon, natural gas, liquefied natural gas. We will have to buy that from overseas. And we ourselves will become dependent upon foreign natural gas just as we have grown dependent on oil but it will happen quicker and be more devastating.

Yesterday, unknown to most, a terrible event occurred with reference to the production of LNG, natural gas's substitute. A plant blew up in Algeria. Who would have been worried about it? Why would a Senator from New Mexico even have read about it 10 years ago? Well, we did not care about it because we did not use it. But a plant blew up. Forty-three people died, and all the production of LNG, which was going to feed the wind. Now, that is not our production. I should not be here crying about their losing it. But what I am telling you is, they are not producing LNG to give it away. They are producing it to sell and to sell to us.

The bottom line is, we are allowing ourselves to become dependent upon imported energy. The EIA predicts that half of all our energy will come from overseas by the year 2025; up from 26 percent in 2002. Just think of that.

I believe some of my colleagues who do not like the current Energy bill and who want to duck and hope the energy prices will come down are going to just wait and see. They will not be coming down; they are going to go up. And when the question is asked, what did we do about it, it is going to be easy for some of us. We are going to say there was a chance to pass a bill, and because of two Senators it did not pass. Two Senators decided they would not vote for cloture, so the Energy bill, which would have done a lot of things which I will quickly outline in a moment, was not passed.

First, let me tell you about a couple of things that we hear about often that the bill does not have in it. The bill does not have a change in the CAPE standards on automobiles. Because of that, some of my friends on the other side of the aisle, including the distinguished junior Senator from New Mexico, say this bill should have that in it and we have shirked our duty.

Let me say to all of you, what do you do when one House of Congress does not want something? And what do you do when you cannot pass it in the Senate, you cannot pass CAPE standards in the Senate, and if you passed it in the Senate, the House will not take it? Let's talk it up. It might be something we ought to be doing, but you cannot do it. Does it mean we should quit, and it does not mean that is enough to kill a bill?

Secondly, MTBE liability. You all know what that is. It is in the bill before the House but not in the Senate. Is it a matter of the end of the world? I do not think so. Is it enough to kill an energy bill? I doubt it.

A renewable portfolio standard means one group wants to not only give a wonderful tax credit to windmills and solar energy, but they want to mandate a percentage each State must produce. That is what these words mean: renewable portfolio standard. It is a mandate of a percent. Isn't that interesting? Every State does not have wind, but they are mandated to produce a percent of their energy from wind. Can you imagine what is going to happen administratively? They are going to have to buy credits or they are going to have to do something, because this law would do that.

Frankly, the Senate did not want it, and the House did not want it, but a few people said: We will not vote for the bill unless that is included. How do you put it in when one half of the people in both bodies will not vote for it? Certainly, the House told us, in 30 seconds: Do not talk about a percentage, a mandate. We will never put it before the
We do not want it. That is the end of it.

Now, we all know ANWR is still hanging around, we all know the giant issue of offshore drilling is still hanging around, and they are not in this bill.

Like it or leave it, the bill represents the current consensus position of the Congress. If we were looking at 51 votes being necessary, which is what you usually need, this bill would be over with. The points of order would be done with, and we would be on our way to doing what it does.

I believe the deal before us is the only one that does enough, that can currently be reached. I do not believe it is possible to go back to the table and negotiate a different agreement. Why? Because whatever we bring to the floor will be debated ad nauseam.

The last time we tried to pass a bill to go to the House with, you all remember, there were 370-plus amendments tacked on there at the desk when we struck a deal with the Democrats to take last year's bill. Remember that? That meant they were not very interested in helping us get a bill then. That is something I direct at a number of Members who might be listening to them. We thought they were doing that, but that is what they did. Luckily, the minority leader said: Why don't you take last year's bill, and I told our leader, BILL Frist: Take it. I think they could not imagine we would take it. We took it and went to conference. And then, of course, we could negotiate around all the bills.

(Ms. MURKOWSKI assumed the Chair.)

Mr. DOMENICI. I know if we are going to be able to get 60 votes for this agreement—I do not know if we are going to be able to, but, frankly, there is part of me that is quite all right with that. As prices and imports rise, Members are going to begin to reconsider their position. They are going to begin to reconsider their opposition to domestic production. I believe at some point, if we do not take intervening steps, we will be forced to open ANWR.

I say to the occupant of the chair, which you have been advocating since the day you arrived, and for the many days you were in your State legislature, unless we get control of this situation, I think we will find ourselves confronted with that decision, sooner rather than later.

As much as we possibly can, without a new political consensus about energy, this bill addresses the following problems. This is a minimal list.

One, it makes regulation of the electricity grid much more predictable. This new investment can flow into the transmission system. It is a huge part of our problem.

Two, it encourages massive new construction of windmills—60 gigawatts is expected points of new wind power, about 10 times the current amount. Why? Because this bill makes the production tax credit permanent.

And listen up. It expired as of January 1. It is not there for those who are building windmills. They know it is gone. It is in this bill. It is there for biomass and a lot of other things.

Now it makes a new generation of clean coal possible through tax credits and research and development. As gas prices climb, we are going to burn more coal. I would like that to be as clean as possible, and this bill makes that possible.

It results in more domestic oil and gas production.

It will result in the construction of perhaps four nuclear powerplants. Some other things have to happen, but it opens the door.

Frankly, I believe that for this world crisis I have been talking about, of everybody wanting more energy, there are only a few ways to dampen the impact of that on the world. One of them is going to be new, modern, different nuclear powerplants. No doubt about it, that is going to be one of them.

America led the way. We ought to continue leading the way.

This bill will result in encouraging the use of hybrid cars because there is a big tax credit for them. In fact, those companies that are building them believe they could never sell them without the credit provided in this bill.

It massively expands our use of domestically produced ethanol, meaning our farmers will be more in command of their future and their destiny than ever before.

Needless to say, bills do strange things. This bill is more for the farmers than anything else we have ever done. Everybody knows it. I asked yesterday in the presence of 30 Senators, those who have big farms and much corn production, would you tell me what the most important issue in your State is? Is it ethanol? Every farm State Senator in that room said it is the No. 1 issue in their States.

How many times have we taken the floor of this Senate since Senator R EID and I have been here, when Senators have come and said: We have to do this for all the farmers? It just happens that the farmers are in this bill. It is going to produce a substantial amount of gasoline because ethanol is an additive that will expand the use of gasoline immensely. So throw it away because you don't like some provision or you believe they have been saying about this bill—that it has too much pork in it.

Well, I can tell you that if we have time available at another time, we will talk about the pork. I will tell you about one piece, and it has been written down 100 times because one Senator used it on the floor twice. It has to do with a new plant that might be built in my State, which will be the construction of a new plant for highly enriched uranium. We only have one such company in the United States. We used to have all that market. This company that exists now doesn't want a new one built. They have sent to Senators and newspapers around the country an unsigned document where they maliciously and erroneously talk about that plant. Some people have refused to use it, thank you, because they didn't sign it. Nobody signed it. But some people use it. The Democratic Senator and said that New Mexico stood to gain $500 million to $700 million, and what a shame that such pork is in the bill.

That isn't even in the bill. Read it. It says anybody who wants to build a new plant of that type, two things will happen—it says anywhere, not just New Mexico. The license will be approved in 2 years and, second, if they want to make an agreement for the Federal Government to dispose of their waste, they can make one, and they will have to pay the Federal Government full price. What this company—which wants no competitor to be built—did was price out what you might have to pay the Government, and then said we are giving it to a State—a total unequivocal fabrication.

Many of the other so-called lard matters in this bill have been matters that have been around here for years for States that produce much of our oil and gas. They finally got a chance to have some equity done to them. When you finally get there and you have the best package you could ever put together, I don't know why we have Senators who find excuses. I think it is because they don't believe there is anything that can be laid to rest on their shoulders in terms of what they have done for this great country and what they have failed to do.

I actually believe that of all the things domestically that the President of the United States mentioned, and all the things we will be debating, there is nothing more important than what we do about our energy availability for future generations. It is No. 1 in my book. You have not heard much from the White House, after months on on it, I was shocked that I could not get 60 to vote to get around a filibuster. I believe sooner or later those who have done this to this bill will pay the piper politically. I say to our President: I believe you ought to be pushing this bill a lot harder.

Some worry about its cost. Let me tell you, the cost of this bill is infinitesimal compared to the cost to future generations of not producing natural gas in Alaska, like we have in the past. It is a waste of time instead of bringing it down here, and all the things like that which are in this bill. It is absolutely crazy. Costs, say some, are too much. If everything has to be paid for, and it goes the way it says, it is $1.6 billion a year. Do you know what that means? Americans spend $400 billion a year on energy. If that is going up 10 percent, when the rest of the domestic product is only growing at 2 percent, that would be an 8 percent differential. Just for the New Mexico nuclear plant, the full price instead of 400 times 400 is $32 billion a year in cost growth being put on the backs of hard-working Americans.
It is time we talk real sense about this. I will not let it go. But you all know there is only so much you can do and only so much of yourself that you can give to an issue. You have one thing growing up after another that people invent and argue about, and that same cycle just fails to want to argue about the validity of the entire bill. It is truly something that we would look at America and say we love democracy and we love to vote, but this is one that it sure would be good if some of us could be looking on the President of the United States. Not so. Can't be. We have to go do it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Madam President, Senator BYRD has time that has been reserved. He has indicated to me that he is going to speak for 2 hours. He will be here at 12:30 to begin his important discussion about the Energy bill. So I hope to work, generally speaking, with the tax cut and the jobs that the President has said we need to work toward having an Energy bill for this country.

There are things in the bill that are extremely important to the State of Nevada. I have personally told Senator Bucus and Senator Grassley how I think they have done remarkably good work, generally speaking, with the tax provisions of the Energy bill. So I hope that at some time we have the ability to work something out on this legislation. I know I will make myself available to the Senator from New Mexico to see if there is a way we can narrow the gap. As the Senator from New Mexico knows, there may be two, three, or four Senators who are crucial to coming together on this bill. If we can work something out to satisfy those individuals and not lose some on the other side, maybe we can do something.

I want to say this, though, to my friend from New Mexico, not in relation to the Energy bill but to the underlying bill. The Senator went to some length talking about things that both bodies did not agree on and people are upset that it is not in this Energy bill. Well, I can understand why the Senator from New Mexico, being the legislator that he is, cannot understand why if the House and the Senate by their bodies assembled have not approved legislation, how in the world you think the conference committee can stick it in when both bodies have not agreed to it. With the omnibus bill, you have the opposite situation. In the omnibus bill now before the Senate, you have the House and the Senate house assembled who have voted overwhelmingly to support provisions, and the President and his minions go to the conference committee and say you are going to take these things out or you are going to things you are not going to.

Are they things that don’t matter? No. They are very important. For example, the President wants people who make more than $22,000 a year to not be eligible for overtime pay. The House and the Senate said we don’t agree with the President, and we passed legislation by virtue of amendments in this body and in the House which said you cannot do that. Mr. President, I will say to you: I don’t care what you have done in these two legislative bodies. I want it out.

Now, if that wasn’t bad enough, he goes to an issue that is so important.

And I repeat this floor today that Monday night we had a little family gathering, which we called “family home evenings.” We had our children and we went to this Caribbean restaurant with my three grandchildren who live in Washington, and my daughter and son-in-law, Landra and I. My little 13-year-old granddaughter has had mononucleosis. She has been sick and has missed a lot of school. She came to dinner. She is feeling better. She attended school yesterday. She is feeling better. She attended school yesterday. She was real hungry Monday night. One of the things with mono is you don’t have an appetite. She was hungry. She ordered something she really liked, steak and fries. It had a fancy name for it, but that is what it was. She ordered steak and fries.

While we were in conversation, I heard her say to her brother who is 8 years old: Aiden, would you like some mad cow? Here are my grandchildren. They know this is bad. We know there is no way to prevent the beef that goes to Argentina, Mexico, or Bolivia. I don’t know where else they raise beef. Canada. We know they raise beef there. Even my grandchildren are concerned about mad cow disease.

In the bill that we wanted to come before this body, there was a provision in it that said you have to have a country-of-origin label that that which is sold to consumers. The President said: I don’t care what the House and Senate have done; they passed these overwhelmingly, but I don’t care because I want to take care of my corporate friends say country-of-origin labeling is not good; I don’t care about mad cow or hoof-and-mouth disease; if you want a bill, you take this out. The Republican leadership in the House and Senate said: OK, Mr. President. And they took it out.

So now this bill, which will probably pass tomorrow, does not have that provision in it. Country-of-origin labeling is not in the bill.

I don’t think that is a real good deal. It is too bad. But he did the same thing with how much ownership these big broadcasters can have.

But he also wants to talk about this, but with what Senator DOMENICI said about if you don’t put something in a bill, how do you expect it to be stuck in conference. I say if you put stuff in a bill that is passed by two duly assembled bodies, how in Heaven’s name can the President in conference demand it be taken out? He has done it, especially on issues that deal with the average American: overtime and labeling of beef. It is another example of this President being the President for corporate America and not the people who work for those corporations.

Yesterday, the New York Times reported that the administration wants to increase Medicare payments to insurance companies and HMOs by a record 6.6 percent now, which is five times as large as the typical increase, was mandated by the new Medicare law that passed this body by one vote.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates those extra payments to private plans will total more than $500 million this year and over the next decade $14 billion; $15 billion extra, added on that the taxpayers are going to shell out to insurance companies and these health care providers.

We could do a lot of things with $14 billion. Instead of this handout, maybe there are ways we could use the $14 billion to help Nevada. People in Nevada need health insurance. There are in America today 44 million Americans who have no health insurance, and Nevada is at the top of the list. We could cut health care costs paid by patients, improve the care they receive, and expand coverage. For example, the direct premium paid by individuals for drugs until they get up to $5,100. Obviously, these people who are using $2,100 worth of drugs are sick. That is not in the bill.

We could do a lot of things with $14 billion. Instead of this handout, maybe there are ways we could use the $14 billion to help Nevada. People in Nevada need health insurance. There are in America today 44 million Americans who have no health insurance, and Nevada is at the top of the list. We could cut health care costs paid by patients, improve the care they receive, and expand coverage. For example, the direct premium paid by individuals for drugs until they get up to $5,100. Obviously, these people who are using $2,100 worth of drugs are sick. That is not in the bill.

Under the new Medicare law, a senior must spend $810 out of pocket per year before he or she will receive a penny from Medicare. And a senior who spends $5,000 a year on drugs will be stuck with almost 80 percent of the bill. Essentially, the new Medicare law that passed this body will penalize our sickest seniors, the very ones who need help the most.

The new law has a huge gap in coverage. Listen to this. Once a senior spends $2,250 on prescription drugs, he or she will have to pay the full price for drugs until they get up to $5,100. Obviously, these people who are using $2,100 worth of drugs are sick. That doesn’t matter. There is a hole, a big hole until they hit $5,100. They pay it all. But they have to continue to pay premiums the whole time.

Instead of a handout to the insurance industry, we could use the $14 billion to... protect senior citizens who will actually be worse off under the new Medicare bill. In Nevada, 15,000 seniors stand to lose the coverage they currently receive from former employers, and our poorest seniors in Nevada, those with Medicare and Medicaid, will be forced to pay a copay under the new law, something they don’t have to do at present. This will create a new expense which will be a significant burden for those with chronic conditions and disease who are struggling to make ends meet on fixed incomes.

We can use the money to provide a drug benefit now instead of waiting 2 years while our seniors struggle with the rising cost of drugs. It took less than a year to start the entire Medicare Program, and that was before we had computers. Surely, we can add a drug benefit in less than 2 years.

Finally, we need to expand health care coverage. As I said, there are 44 million Americans in our country who don’t have health care coverage at all. In Nevada, a sparsely populated State, 600,000 people under age 65 were without health insurance last year. Most of these people, including children, are working families. They go to work every day, but they can’t afford the peace of mind that comes with health insurance, so how can we afford an HMO handout of $14 billion?

My youngest son who is a lawyer and worked here in Washington got a job in Las Vegas. He is educated. He has two little girls and, in a matter of days, is going to have a third little girl. He could afford the gap coverage until he got his new job. Most people couldn’t do that. For just I think 2 weeks he had to pay $1,200 to have coverage. According to the State of the Union Address, talked about privatizing Social Security. I have to hand it to him, he has a lot of nerve because it is rare I find anyone who wants to privatize Social Security. He had some buzz words, but that is what it all meant.

These private companies that compete with traditional Medicare now have their hand out for a 10.6-percent increase because they say it is the only way they can continue to serve Medicare beneficiaries. I think this is very inefficient to me. It does not sound like competition. It does not sound like a great deal for seniors who are struggling to buy medicine or for taxpayers. It certainly does not sound like real competition.

This HMO handout to the insurance industry and the managed care entities is an example of the way the administration has one set of rules for the big-money interests, the corporate interests, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

Competition is OK for ordinary folks, but the fat cats get sweet deals like the HMO handouts.

This is a case of misplaced priorities. Just like the misplaced priority of spending $14 billion on a corporate handout instead of using it to improve health care for ordinary Americans. This is just one more reason we need to work to fix the problems in Medicare so seniors can have what they deserve. I hope the administration will take another look at its priorities and reconsider this ill-advised HMO handout. According to the State of the Union last night, he has his veto pen ready in case we try to do it.

Before I yield the floor and before Senator BYRD speaks, we have been gone for a few months and it is good that I remind myself on occasion how I have been educated in the years I have been in this Chamber, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

I am not opposed to competition. Make no mistake; competition is a good thing. It is a strong incentive for efficiency and productivity. I think this administration has a different definition of competition than I have.

They are all in favor of competition when it comes to a worker in a national park who might be making $30,000 a year. They think people like that should compete against contractors to keep their jobs. But when it comes to big corporations, such as HMOs, the administration doesn’t like competition. Why else would a company such as Halliburton get a billion-dollar contract just about even submitting a bid? That’s not competition.

Why does the new Medicare bill contain a provision that expressly forbids the Government to use its bargaining power to negotiate prices with drug companies? Is that how the free market is supposed to work? No. Now we have a handout for insurance companies.

We were told it would be good to let private companies compete with traditional Medicare because they would be more efficient which would allow them to provide better care and less costs.

While I am talking about privatizing, don’t forget that the President again in his State of the Union Address talked about privatizing Social Security. I have to hand it to him, he has a lot of nerve because it is rare I find anyone who wants to privatize Social Security. He had some buzz words, but that is what it all meant.

These private companies that compete with traditional Medicare now have their hand out for a 10.6-percent increase because they say it is the only way they can continue to serve Medicare beneficiaries. I think this is very inefficient to me. It does not sound like competition. It does not sound like a great deal for seniors who are struggling to buy medicine or for taxpayers. It certainly does not sound like real competition.

This HMO handout to the insurance industry and the managed care entities is an example of the way the administration has one set of rules for the big-money interests, the corporate interests, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

Competition is OK for ordinary folks, but the fat cats get sweet deals like the HMO handouts.

This is a case of misplaced priorities. Just like the misplaced priority of spending $14 billion on a corporate handout instead of using it to improve health care for ordinary Americans. This is just one more reason we need to work to fix the problems in Medicare so seniors can have what they deserve. I hope the administration will take another look at its priorities and reconsider this ill-advised HMO handout. According to the State of the Union last night, he has his veto pen ready in case we try to do it.

Before I yield the floor and before Senator BYRD speaks, we have been gone for a few months and it is good that I remind myself on occasion how I have been educated in the years I have been in this Chamber, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

I am not opposed to competition. Make no mistake; competition is a good thing. It is a strong incentive for efficiency and productivity. I think this administration has a different definition of competition than I have.

They are all in favor of competition when it comes to a worker in a national park who might be making $30,000 a year. They think people like that should compete against contractors to keep their jobs. But when it comes to big corporations, such as HMOs, the administration doesn’t like competition. Why else would a company such as Halliburton get a billion-dollar contract just about even submitting a bid? That’s not competition.

Why does the new Medicare bill contain a provision that expressly forbids the Government to use its bargaining power to negotiate prices with drug companies? Is that how the free market is supposed to work? No. Now we have a handout for insurance companies.

We were told it would be good to let private companies compete with traditional Medicare because they would be more efficient which would allow them to provide better care and less costs.

While I am talking about privatizing, don’t forget that the President again in his State of the Union Address talked about privatizing Social Security. I have to hand it to him, he has a lot of nerve because it is rare I find anyone who wants to privatize Social Security. He had some buzz words, but that is what it all meant.

These private companies that compete with traditional Medicare now have their hand out for a 10.6-percent increase because they say it is the only way they can continue to serve Medicare beneficiaries. I think this is very inefficient to me. It does not sound like competition. It does not sound like a great deal for seniors who are struggling to buy medicine or for taxpayers. It certainly does not sound like real competition.

This HMO handout to the insurance industry and the managed care entities is an example of the way the administration has one set of rules for the big-money interests, the corporate interests, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

Competition is OK for ordinary folks, but the fat cats get sweet deals like the HMO handouts.

This is a case of misplaced priorities. Just like the misplaced priority of spending $14 billion on a corporate handout instead of using it to improve health care for ordinary Americans. This is just one more reason we need to work to fix the problems in Medicare so seniors can have what they deserve. I hope the administration will take another look at its priorities and reconsider this ill-advised HMO handout. According to the State of the Union last night, he has his veto pen ready in case we try to do it.

Before I yield the floor and before Senator BYRD speaks, we have been gone for a few months and it is good that I remind myself on occasion how I have been educated in the years I have been in this Chamber, and another set of rules for people who work for these corporations.

I am not opposed to competition. Make no mistake; competition is a good thing. It is a strong incentive for efficiency and productivity. I think this administration has a different definition of competition than I have.

They are all in favor of competition when it comes to a worker in a national park who might be making $30,000 a year. They think people like that should compete against contractors to keep their jobs. But when it comes to big corporations, such as HMOs, the administration doesn’t like competition. Why else would a company such as Halliburton get a billion-dollar contract just about even submitting a bid? That’s not competition.

Why does the new Medicare bill contain a provision that expressly forbids tune in Washington, he changed that tune all right. It is the worst that I have seen in my more than 51 years in Congress. Gone is that traditional spirit of cooperation. Gone is the belief that the needs of the Nation are above the needs of any political party. In their place, the White House drive for pure raw partisan control. This is a tragic turn for this historic Chamber, a tragic turn for these United States of America.

Hope for a bipartisan Medicare prescription drug benefit was bright at the start of this Congress, but by the time the conference report returned to the Senate for final passage, all that was left was a prescription for protecting the pharmaceutical industry and a drug benefit that is a shame for American seniors.

Progress on an energy strategy for the country began in a cooperative effort but quickly the Democrats were locked out while industry lobbyists were allowed to write the legislation. Negotiations on that conference report took it behind closed doors. The Republican congressional leadership imposed a leadership down leadership by the White House pressure. Suddenly, Democratic Members of Congress had no voice in the legislation. Senator Graham, the Democrats had no voice, suddenly, in the legislation they had only days before helped to move to the verge of passage.

In the back rooms of the Capitol, the White House sat down with the Republican leadership and with fast-carry lobbyists representing big corporations and wrote the 1,002-page, $328 billion conference report. They produced a conference report that turned the legislative process on its head.

You think Speaker Joe Martin, Republican Speaker of the House—Joe Martin of Massachusetts—would have stood for that when he was Speaker of the House? Do you think John Taber of New York, Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, would have stood for that in his day? No.

Four of the bills contained in this omnibus did not have a recorded vote in the Senate. That is all right. A voice vote or a vote by division are just as legal and legitimate as is a rollcall vote. But one of the bills, the Commerce-Justice-State bill, was never even debated, never even debated in the Senate, let alone adopted by a vote of the Senate.

Shame. Shame on us for letting that happen.

So there you have it. The Commerce-Justice-State bill was never even debated in the Senate, let alone adopted. Scores of provisions were included in the so-called Miscellaneous Appropriations Act portion of the conference report that were never debated, never debated in this Senate. What has happened to the legislative process here under the leadership of the Republican administration? Under pressure from the White House, provisions that were approved by both the House and Senate have been dropped. Get that. Under pressure from the White House, provisions that were included in both the House and Senate, have been dropped.

A point of order could be made under rule XCVIII that would kill this conference report. Under pressure from the White House, controversial provisions that were included in both the House and Senate have been mutated into permanent changes in authorization law.

This conference report includes an across-the-board cut never debated here in this Senate, an arbitrary cut that would apply to legislation already signed into law. It would cut homeland security. It would cut counterterrorism efforts. It would cut education and health care. This across-the-board cut would reach back into laws that agencies have been operating under for 4 months.

In the view of the White House, the United States can afford $1.7 trillion in tax cuts. When it comes to the Medicare bill, we can afford $12 billion for subsidies for private insurance companies. When it comes to the Energy bill, we can afford $20 billion in tax cuts and $5 billion of mandatory spending for big energy corporations. But when it comes to initiatives funded in these appropriations bills, initiatives that help ordinary Americans every day, the President lauds the military, as he should. He applauds the soldier, the sailor, the airman, the marine. But when it comes to veterans, 26,500 fewer veterans will receive medical care under the Bush leadership, programs by more than $73 million, resulting in 24,000 fewer children being served by title I. The across-the-board cut would reduce veterans medical care funding by $159 million, resulting in 26,500 fewer veterans receiving medical care.

The President lauds the military, as he should. He applauds the soldier, the sailor, the airman, the marine. But when it comes to veterans, 26,500 fewer veterans will receive medical care, or 198,000 veterans won’t get the prescription drugs they need. Was anything said about that in the speech last evening? No a word.

The across-the-board cut will chop funding for homeland security initiatives. How many more baggage screeners will be laid off, resulting in longer lines and less security at the airports? How many fewer flights will have air marshals on board? Nothing said about that in the State of the Union speech.

No, no, no. How many more containers will come into this country uninspected? How many more illegal aliens will be able to remain in this country or how many more will be able to sneak into this country? Not a word said. How many potential terrorists will never be investigated because of cuts in the FBI? The Bush tax cuts will cost $293 billion in the calendar year 2004. More than $1 out of every $4 being spent on those tax cuts is going to the top 1 percent of taxpayers in this country. They didn’t put me in office. No, those on that side of the track didn’t put me in office. The Bush tax cuts—let me say it again—the Bush tax cuts will cost $293 billion in the calendar year 2004.

More than one out of every four dollars being spent on those tax cuts is going to the top 1 percent of taxpayers in this country. Are you in that category? Are you a billionaire, the top 1 percent? I don’t know. But I know a lot of people who sent me here who are not in that category.
Taxpayers with incomes that average about $1 million per year will receive an average tax cut of $85,000 in the year 2010, while those taxpayers earning less than $73,000 will receive at best 1 percent of what a millionaire will receive and at worst a paltry $98 in the year 2010.

How will we pay for this? Oh, that will be somebody else’s problem. This President will be back on his ranch in Crawford, TX, living it up and having it good. What about your children and my children? They are going to be left to pay for this.

How will we pay for it? With cuts in education, cuts in veterans’ programs, and cuts in homeland security.

In the dark of night, behind closed doors, the White House filled this conference report with favors for big corporations. Everywhere you look, you find the interests of corporate America coming first and the needs of working Americans coming in last.

The Democrats proposed a provision to block for 1 year the administration’s plan to take away the rights of as many as 8 million employees to earn time and a half for extra hours worked. This administration produced a rule so biased in favor of the industry that it even included advice to corporations on how to avoid additional wages.

Yet the Senate provision—what happened to it? What happened to that Senate provision? It is gone, obliterated under the darkness of night, taken out.

At the request of the food marketing industry, rules to allow Americans to know where their food, such as beef and vegetables, is grown are delayed out. Americans coming first and the needs of working Americans coming in last.

During the consideration of the 2002 farm bill, the Senate included a provision—the Senate; that is, us—included a provision to ensure that American consumers were provided with information about where their food originated—where it comes from. This so-called country-of-origin requirement became law and was immediately attacked by industry forces. When the smoke of the agriculture conference cleared, we found that industry forces had worked overtime to slip out of their statutory requirements. The country-of-origin issue was not even allowed to be discussed at the conference whether to keep or to kill the country-of-origin requirement was made behind closed doors after the conference was adjourned subject to the call of the Chair. I was in that conference. It was adjourned subject to the call of the Chair. They didn’t have any use for me anymore. I was locked out. Senator BYRD can go home now. He will not be in on the decision. We don’t need you there. You can go home now subject to the call of the Chair. Of course, the call never comes.

Roy Acuff used to sing, “I called and I called but nobody answered. I called and I called but nobody answered.” Democrats of either the House or the Senate were not in the room.

I wonder how many of our listeners remember the first question that was ever asked in the history of man. What was the first question that was ever asked? Of the first day when God walked through that garden of paradise, the Garden of Eden, which we think was located somewhere between the two great rivers in old Mesopotamia, the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers, God walked in that garden and asked Adam, where art thou? And he couldn’t find Adam. So he asked the question: Adam, Adam, where art thou? That is the first question ever recorded. Adam, where art thou? Well, Adam and Eve were hiding behind bushes and fig-leaves. Adam, where art thou?

Well, Democrats in either the House or the Senate were not in that room. So when their constituents ask, where were you, where were you, Senator GRAHAM? Where were you, Senator BYRD, you who has been in Congress 51 years, where were you then? Where were you on that day?

The Democrats were locked out. We were locked out. We weren’t included. That was never done when I was chairman.

Now we find that the delay in implementing the country-of-origin law is not just for 1 year, as the House provided and the Senate opposed, but 2 years. Moreover, The House provision only placed a limitation on the labeling requirement for meat products. Now the agreement coming out of conference expands the limitation to all the other commodities covered by the law such as fruits and vegetables. American consumers may have thought they were going to know where their food came from, but the majority has made sure that those facts will remain a hidden secret in the deep freeze.

Also, the 1-year limitation on the FCC media ownership rule was turned into a permanent cap at 39 percent. The practical effect of changes demanded by the White House is to protect Rupert Murdoch’s FOX television network and CBS-Viacom from having to comply with the lower 35 percent ownership caps, the congressional version of the bill that was put in place.

The White House is boosting special corporate interests. Why not? Look at the millions that are poured into political coffers by those special corporate interests. The White House is boosting special corporate interests at the expense of the people’s interest for balanced news and information. Protections for Federal workers that were agreed to on a bipartisan basis in the public conference that would ensure fair competition with the private sector disappeared in the backroom. The White House asked in the conference last fall. Sixteen million cargo containers arrive in the United States by ship, truck, and rail each year. One hundred forty million passengers travel annually by ship each year. Thousands of employees work at our ports each day. Millions of citizens live in and around our port community. A terrorist attack through our ports would produce billions of dollars of damage to our economy.

Was a thin dime requested by this President? No. No, the President did not request a dime.

One year ago, the President used the State of the Union Address before this body, this Nation, in his best case for taking the Nation to war in Iraq under the doctrine of preemptive strikes, under the doctrine of preemption.

In the State of the Union Address and in other speeches, the administration told Congress and the Nation that Saddam Hussein had weapons of mass destruction that were an imminent threat to this Nation. We were told that Saddam Hussein was trying to develop nuclear weapons. We were told that American troops would be received as liberators. We were told that Saddam Hussein was aiding terrorists, such as the al-Qaida. What an incredible tale. What an incredible overselling of the danger of our Government in the eyes of the world.

For this President, there seems to be no limit to his appetite for rhetoric, no recognition that there is a difference between his rhetoric and reality.

Yes, he promised Americans to leave no child behind, but this omnibus bill would cut funding by $6 billion below the level authorized for title I in the No Child Left Behind Act which this President signed with such promise in January of 2002. This omnibus bill would leave behind 2.1 million children who are eligible for title I educational services.

The President promised to secure our homeland and yet this bill would cut funding for port security and border security. On November 14, 2002, the Senate passed the Maritime Transportation Security Act without a dissenting vote. The bill was signed into law by President Bush on November 25, 2002, during a celebratory White House ceremony. On that day, the President said: We will strengthen security at our Nation’s 361 seaports, adding port security agents, requiring ships to provide more information about the cargo, crew, and passengers that they carry.

Despite these requirements, the President has requested no funding for port security grants. This omnibus bill would cut the funding that Congress added last fall. Sixteen million cargo containers arrive in the United States by ship, truck, and rail each year. One hundred forty million passengers travel by port each year. Thousands of employees work at our ports each day. Millions of citizens live in and around our port community. A terrorist attack through our ports would produce billions of dollars of damage to our economy.

Was a thin dime requested by this President? No. No, the President did not request a dime.
On November 19, 2001, the President signed into law the Aviation and Transportation Security Act. The act created the Transportation Security Administration and mandated that all cargo on passenger aircraft be screened. The administration has incurred unforeseen costs that met the goals of the law. In order to bridge a $900 million funding shortfall that it created for fiscal year 2003, the administration proposed delaying advanced firearms training for Federal air marshals. But his Secretary says we are in greater danger than at any time since September 11. Legislation reports indicated an enhanced threat to aviation and the potential for hijacking planes transiting the United States.

Regarding air cargo security, the administration has met the requirement of screening air cargo by expanding a program referred to as the Known Shipper Program. This program does not actually physically screen cargo going into the bellies of jumbo passenger or cargo planes but relies on paperwork to protect our citizens. Congress added $35 million above the President’s request to enhance the deployment of detection equipment, research other methods to screen cargo and otherwise expand air security. The omnibus bill would reduce that funding.

The Enhanced Border Security and Visa Entry Reform Act of 2002, Public Law 107–173, was signed into law by President Bush on May 14, 2002. The act authorized funding for immigration inspectors and agents as well as for improvements to immigration facilities. The President did not request the authorized funds to hire additional immigration personnel, nor did he request funds to make the authorized improvements to immigration facilities or to hire the required number of Border Patrol agents. The omnibus bill would reduce funding for Border Patrol efforts.

Just 11 days before Christmas, Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge announced that the nation’s terror alert level was being raised to orange. He said the strategic indicator, including al-Qaida’s continued desire to carry out attacks against our homeland, was perhaps greater than at any time since September 11. He went on to say that information indicates that extremists abroad are anticipating near-term attacks that they believe will rival or exceed the scope and impact of those we experienced in New York.

The President promised a safer nation when he created the new Homeland Security Department. But his Secretary says we are in greater danger than at any time since September 11, 2001. At the same time, the administration urged Congress to cut funding for Homeland Security.

In May of this year the President signed into law a $1 billion over 5 years for international programs to combat HIV/AIDS. On July 12, while in Nigeria, the President said: The House of Representatives and the Senate must fully fund this initiative, for the good of the people on this continent of Africa.

To “fully fund this initiative” requires $3 billion. The authorization bill, which the President explicitly referenced, authorized $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2004. Yet the President only requested that the Congress provide $2 billion for the program. This omnibus bill, after the across-the-board cut, would provide less than $2.4 billion for the Global Fund, or $900 million below the level promised.

Democratic Senators, including myself, on three separate occasions offered amendments that would have ensured that the President’s funding reached the $3 billion level. All three of these amendments were defeated by the Republican leadership working with the Bush administration.

Rhetoric and reality are two different systems that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office, to support the Constitution. I fault the President, to support and defend the Constitution of the United States.

The legislative branch is being used not as the Framers envisioned, to serve as a check on the executive branch, but instead as a tool to check off accomplishments on the President’s political agenda.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.

I fault no individual Senator for bringing us to this point, but I do fault the system that places meaninglessness message votes and staged photo-op debates before the business of the Nation. I fault politicians for their weakness, for their failure to uphold their oaths of office to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I fault the President. This is not the way the Senate should operate.
here if I am going to bow and scrape to a President? They expect me to speak up, and that is what I have tried to do, in the presence of Presidents, yes, but they put their pants on just like I put mine on; the same old way, no different.

Under our Constitution, our Founding Fathers had the wisdom to establish three separate, equal, coordinate branches of Government. That is under this Constitution. This Constitution—perhaps one does not think about it often, but when one stops to think about it, this Constitution has something to do with every minute, every hour, every day of every life in this country in one place or another, and in some instances more than one place.

This Constitution impacts your life, your life, and your life. Every day that you are here on this planet, this Constitution has a bearing on it. And then some would treat this as a piece of paper and put political party above the Constitution, above the United States. This is the Constitution of the United States. This is the people’s branch, this body. Under our Constitution, the Congress determines how to write our laws, how to protect Members’ rights to debate the important issues of the day. This omnibus bill leaves those pillars of our constitutional system in shambles. It is our duty not to approve it and not to protect those pillars of our constitutional system of government.

In 1999 and in the year 2000, when President Clinton, a Democratic President, a President of my own party, supported efforts by the Republican Congress to produce Omnibus appropriations bills, I came to this floor to decry our loss of our right and our duty to write legislation. I came to this floor to stand up for Congress’s power of the purse. It makes no matter—not any, no matter—that this was a Democratic President calling for omnibus spending legislation. I stood up for the rights of this Senate as I do today.

In 1993, there was a great effort to include comprehensive health care reform plan in a reconciliation bill. Proponents of the President’s proposal hoped that such an approach would shelter the proposal from extended debate in the Senate. My colleague, George Mitchell, came to me. I said, no. My own colleague from West Virginia in the Senate pleaded with me. I said, no. President Clinton, a Democratic President, called on the telephone, called on me to support this effort. I said, no. Without regard to party, I felt compelled to protect Members’ rights to a full debate.

I said: This is a comprehensive health bill. The people need to know what is in it. They need to know what is in it. That is why we have the Senate, to debate and to amend. No.

And so I turned my face like flint to the request of my own friend and the President of my own party. No. Did he think less of me? I doubt it. He thanked me. He understood what I was saying. I will say it again. How many on that side would say that to a President of their party? But with President Bush, he insisted on members of his party march with him step by step. I can remember a great Republican Senator who refused to march step by step. That was Senator Mark Hatfield. He was scorned by many on that side of the aisle because he stood alone against a political party, his party. He was no coward for doing that. He was a man.

President Bush insists that members of his party march with him step by step. Today, on the other side of the aisle, there is no strong and equal Congress fall silent.

Last week Senator Frist wrote to Senators and urged them to vote for the omnibus conference report because if the omnibus fails, then the only alternative, he said, is a full-year continuing resolution that would force the agencies for the seven outstanding appropriations bills to operate at last year’s level. He argues that such a continuing resolution would produce deep cuts for food safety, veterans medical care, highway funding, and the Global AIDS Programs.

However, the Senator presents the Senate with a false choice. If the omnibus fails, there are other options to move forward. If the only alternative is a full-year continuing resolution, then that is the choice of the Republican leadership. It would be another example of putting political posturing before the needs of the American people.

There is a clear alternative, and that is to sit down and work out a compromise that can overwhelmingly pass the Senate. If our distinguished and illustrious President from West Virginia had the will to do so, such negotiations could be completed, who knows, maybe even in 1 day. However, in its current form, I cannot vote for this bill. I cannot vote for this conference report that speaks to our process and puts corporate interests ahead of the people’s interests. I cannot vote for a bill that undermines our credibility; undermines the credibility of the United States Senate with the American people. I urge Members to vote no tonight on the Senate version of the conference report.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBING. Mr. President, it is a tough act to follow of the Senator from West Virginia. Is there any specified allocation of time for debate this afternoon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No specific allocation of time, except that Senator McCain is to be recognized at 2 o’clock for an hour.

Mr. DURBING. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I thank the Senator from West Virginia for his eloquent words, which I followed on the floor and through the television before I arrived on the floor. It is always a pleasure to hear him speak to the issues that we are challenged with as a nation.

Last night, I joined many Senators and Congressmen to walk across the Rotunda to attend the 21st State of the Union Address, which has been my honor to witness as a Congressman and as a Senator, to be on the escort committee to bring in the President for this historic moment and to hear the President’s words as he addressed America, as he does each year. It is a rare chance for him to speak unencumbered to the Nation directly and to really express the feelings in his heart.

Part of what the President said I thought was particularly timely and poignant. It drew bipartisan response... and applause—particularly the part where he saluted the men and women in uniform. We have many debates on foreign policy here. Senator BYRD and I view it the same way, that perhaps our country is on the wrong track when it comes to this policy of preemption and going it alone in the world. Having said that, we both understand, as every Member of the Congress does, there are men and women in uniform who are literally risking their lives at this moment for our country. While politicians and elected officials debate the policy, we should never forget the courage, sacrifice, and dedication of those men and women in uniform, how much it means to their families that they know we stand behind them and we will not deny them the resources they need to perform their mission safely and to come home safely and as quickly as possible.

I point out one aspect that has come to my mind over the 2-month break when the Senate was in recess. I joined a couple Senators and I went out on my own to visit Walter Reed Hospital last November and meet with these wounded soldiers. It is a wonderful thing to see these brave young men and women who are so sad to see the extent of the injuries they have sustained. Most of them wear ceramic vests that protect them in combat, but they don’t protect their limbs. Many of those there are amputees who have lost a hand, or a leg, or both, or the lower part of one soldier, both hands, or suffered a head injury.

Having spoken to them and asked them the circumstances of their injury, I usually said: Is there anything I can do for you? It was interesting to me how many had the same response. It wasn’t personal. They didn’t ask me for a favor. They said: Don’t do me a favor, but do a favor for the men and women I served with. We need to have more protection for the body and the damage in the process. The same thing is true with the homemade bombs. So the wounded soldiers at Walter Reed said time and again that they need more armor-plating on the Humvees vehicles.

I thought this was something a Senator ought to look into. So I came back to my office and contacted the Department of the Army and said: How many Humvees in Iraq today don’t have armor-plating? They said that 8,500 do not. So I said: Is it a priority to make armor-plating for these? They said it is the highest priority. They said: Senator, there is good news. Half of them will be built in your State at the Rock Island Arsenal, which has served America since the Civil War. I knew the men and women there were anxious to get involved and to prove themselves and to serve our Nation again, as they have time and time again in times of conflict.

During the trip, I went to the Rock Island Arsenal and saw the first two armored doors for Humvees come off the assembly line. The employees were working around the clock and could not stop to ask me if I would be interested in the office in charge at the Rock Island Arsenal: This is great. You are supposed to build about 8,000 or 9,000 of these armor-plated doors. How long will it take you to get these 9,000 armor-plated doors into Iraq on the Humvees? He said: Senator, if we work night and day, we can get this done in 2 years.

I thought to myself, what am I missing here? In World War II, we would build a bomber in 72 hours. We would build a ship in a month. Why is it going to take 2 years to build the armor-plated doors for the Humvees? He said: I am sorry to tell you that there is only one plant left in America that makes the steel that can protect these soldiers who are operating in the Humvees—one plant left in America. I thought about that last night when the President said to us that jobs are growing in America—manufacturing and industrial jobs are growing in America. I have to say to the one officer in charge at the Rock Island Arsenal: This is great. You are supposed to produce the armor for the Humvees, which are today’s jeeps that a different function. They move troops for a desert war, and now they perform a different function. They move troops through Baghdad and Fallujah, which are dangerous areas. Sadly, many of these Humvees have canvas sides. If one of these terrorists fires a rocket-propelled grenade at it, it whistles right through the vehicle causing great injury and damage in the process. The same thing is true with the homemade bombs. So the wounded soldiers at Walter Reed said time and again that they need more armor-plating on the Humvee vehicles.

I thought this was something a Senator ought to look into. So I came back to my office and contacted the Department of the Army and said: How many Humvees in Iraq today don’t have armor-plating? They said that 8,500 do not. So I said: Is it a priority to make armor-plating for these? They said it is the highest priority. They said: Senator, there is good news. Half of them will be built in your State at if you watched the cable channels, you saw Lou Dobbs talking about exporting America. Frankly, that is a sad reality today.

So when the President talks about all the new jobs coming into America, I want to see it. For my money, a jobless recovery is no recovery at all. What good is it to talk about productivity? What good is it to talk about economic growth if we have lost 3 million jobs under the Bush administration? That is a real life and death issue.

I told you the story of the Humvees. I will tell you one other.

In my apartment in Chicago, at 4 o’clock on Saturday, I received a phone call. It is interesting that I received a similar call 3 weeks before. The voice on the other end of the phone said: Mr. DURBIN, this is Nancy, and I am happy to inform you that your Discover Card is on the way to your apartment.

I said: Nancy, I didn’t order a Discover Card.

She said: Yes, but you have qualified for one and we are going to send you a credit card.

I said: Nancy, may I ask you a question? Where are you calling from?

She said: Delaware.

I said: What city in Delaware?

She said: Just a minute.

I heard papers shuffling. She said: New Delhi?

She said: No, Bangalore.

As you know, that is a city in India. I tell you those stories because I think they demonstrate the anxiety and concern of Americans from one coast to the other.

The President may believe that we are deep into a recovery. The President may see new jobs coming, but America looks at the current evolution of our economy with concern. We are giving up our basic industries. We are giving up manufacturing to the Chinese, and now we are giving up service jobs to India and other countries.

IBM announced 4,000 jobs will be lost in the United States for computer programs that will be sent overseas to India. If you buy a Dell Computer and you need instructions on setting up your computer and you call the 800 number, you will generally speak to someone in India.

The question that raises is this: What will be the job for the next generation of Americans? What occupation or profession would you recommend to a young person for a future in America? There are some that are obvious, but when you look at how we have built this country with a strong middle class, raising good strong families with strong values, you have to wonder, with the challenges we are going to face in the years ahead, whether this administration and this Congress are looking at the state of the American economy honestly.

What was President Bush’s proposal last night to deal with the future of America’s economy? He made it clear. He believes that if you make the tax cuts for the wealthiest people in America permanent law, then, in fact, we will have a strong economy. In other words, if you will give more money to the wealthiest people in America, somehow the economy lifts and everyone will succeed. History is not on his side. In fact, this anomaly, in which the President is presently involved is proof positive that his tax cuts did little or nothing to stimulate this economy and creating a deficit of historic proportions. This President took a surplus in the Treasury and turned it into the biggest deficit in the history of the United States. He took over from an administration that had created over 20 million new jobs, and this President, unless something dramatic happens in the next few months, will go down in history as having lost more jobs under his administration than any President since the Great Depression—3 million jobs lost in America. And his answer to get America back on its feet and working again: Give the wealthiest people in America a tax break.

The President, when he talks about the tax cuts, zeros in on the $300 for individuals, $600 for families, the marriage penalty, but he ignores the biggest tax breaks, which are not included in the tax cut, but go to the wealthiest people in this country. Those are the ones who have brought us into this deficit situation.

To make matters worse, the conference report to accompany the Omnibus appropriations bill, which we have before us, includes a provision which says when it comes to those currently working in America, people who are struggling to keep their jobs and to keep their families together, this bill contains a provision which will eliminate overtime pay for 8 million Americans.

Mr. President, 8 million Americans today working overtime hours—away from their families, to make ends meet, who receive money away for college education, to deal with medical bills they can’t handle otherwise—because of language insisted by the Republican leadership in the White House and in the Congress will lose their overtime pay.

That is the record of the Bush administration when it comes to jobs: 3 million jobs lost; 8 million working Americans denied overtime pay.

What does it mean? It means these men and women who are working these jobs will be told by their employers: You will show up and you will work instead of 40 hours this week, you will work 50 hours this week, and the extra 10 hours you work, you will be paid the same hourly wage, and if you don’t like it, leave.

Perhaps that is the President’s vision of America. From my point of view, that is not a vision that most families would appreciate. If we truly value work and we truly value families, wouldn’t we take a different approach?

 Didn’t we hear the President last night talk about the family values of America and protecting those traditional values? While he spoke, we were considering a bill that says for 8 million Americans, the likelihood that your family will succeed is diminished, and it is reduced because we believe employers, at least those who support this bill, believe that employers should not be paying overtime at the expense of their employees.

We have had overtime pay since 1938. The Fair Labor Standards Act required employers to pay time and a half, and usually Presidents, Democrats and Republicans, renew this protection and overtime benefits to more and more employees. This President will go down in history as the first to take overtime pay away from working Americans—8 million Americans.

The administration’s proposal would strip 8 million workers of their overtime rights, including 375,000 workers in my State of Illinois. For workers who receive overtime pay, that overtime compensation usually accounts for 25 percent of their pay. The administration’s proposal would slash the paychecks of 8 million hard-working Americans by 25 percent.

I haven’t spoken about increasing the minimum wage in this country, which this administration has steadfastly opposed and Republicans in Congress have adamantly opposed. So at $5.15 an hour, more and more low-income workers find themselves falling behind and have to take a second job. I went to a high school in Du Page County over the break. Du Page County is a great diverse, strong, and generally prosperous county in my State, just west of Chicago. When I sat down with the educators, we looked at No Child Left Behind test scores, and I said: Why is it that only 92 percent of the students took the test for No Child Left Behind at this high school?

The principal said to me: Senator, a lot of our kids are from poor families, single families, and they have to work to help their brothers and sisters. If a little brother or a little sister gets sick and can’t go to day care that day, mom is going to have to stay home from work and give up her paycheck or that older brother is going to have to stay home and watch the sick baby. That is what happens. He said that is reality.

Think about that kind of life where the sickness of the baby keeps an older brother out of school; where the mother leaves work, makes it home money away for college education, to deal with medical bills they can’t handle otherwise—because of language insisted by the Republican leadership in the White House and in the Congress will lose their overtime pay.

That is the record of the Bush administration when it comes to jobs: 3 million jobs lost; 8 million working Americans denied overtime pay.

What kind of employees will be hit hard by the President’s determination to cut overtime pay? Let me give you a few categories: Police officers, firefighters, and safety coordinators. The International Union of Police Associations estimated this proposal will take an 8-hour day and, perhaps a 12- and 14-hour day or, if she is lucky, she has a job that used to pay overtime for those extra hours now, because of the Bush administration’s proposal, is about to lose her overtime. She is struggling to keep her little family together under extraordinary circumstances, and we make it worse.

We do not increase the minimum wage. We do not protect her right to earn overtime pay, which has been on the books in America. Is that an administration with family values, sensitive to families and what they face? broadcasting for Eastern Europe. The appropriations for the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty broadcasting for Eastern Europe. The Senate bill included this funding, as did the Senate version of the authorization bill: $9 million for broadcasts to Estonia, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Lithuania, Poland, Bulgaria, Latvia, Romania, and Moldova. Unfortunately, this bill included $1 million for broadcasts to Moldova, and that is not the right thing to do. These are new democracies. They are still subject to instability. There is still gang and Soviet influence. I refer to the old Soviet gangs that are still alive. We are well and reformed, and the Soviet democracies need the help of Radio Free Europe. I think putting that voice, as well as Radio Liberty, in a broadcast is an important thing to strengthen those democracies. Unfortunately, it was cut.

Imagine, you and your husband, your family, have made a sacrifice to buy a home in a very expensive subdivision which you know to be safe and near a good school, so that there is going to be a great education for your kids. You are starting to make the mortgage payments, it is not an easy thing to do, and you pay your taxes, and did you realize the high school our kids are about to go to has been graded a failing school? That is going to happen. It is going to happen across Illinois. It is going to happen across America. Instead, he projects the resources and money to help those schools and to help those students, this administration refuses to put the money on the table. I think that is unfortunate and tragic, and it hardy suggests that this President is looking forward to the next generation.

The same President who a week ago looked up to the heavens and said the vision for America is manned space flight to Mars is a President who is not looking around America at the neighborhoods and towns that need a helping hand, that need more jobs, that need better schools, and need affordable health insurance. Had that same President, instead of casting his eyes to the heavens and outer space, looked to our Nation and said, in the next 10 years we are going to bring America's schools up to the highest world quality standards, and if it takes the trillion dollars that is necessary, we will spend it, that President would have been applauded across America. Instead, he projects someone in a manned space flight to Mars that will cost us $1 trillion.

I am not against the space program. Many good things have come from the space program, and they continue to come from the space program, but to think that we are going to look beyond Mother Earth, look beyond our own home into the heavens to spend a trillion dollars just strikes me as a complete misstatement of priorities for America.

In the few minutes I have remaining, I will mention two or three other things I find troublesome in this bill. One of the major disappointments was the deletion of funding in the Commerce-Judiciary-State-Judiciary appropriations for the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty broadcasting for Eastern Europe. The get up every morning, who put that badge on over their heart and risk their lives for us every single day. It isn't going to make it safer for our children who are walking home from the bus or from the CTA train. It is not going to make it safer for America.

But I am also a member of the House of Representatives and a member of the Committee on Appropriations. And I will focus on the consequences of the special interest group, the National Rifle Association. They won in this appropriations bill. They were able to limit the opportunity for Government to do its work, to keep guns out of the hands of criminals. That is another unfortunate outcome of this legislation.

So we will face this Omnibus appropriations bill after having defeated a motion to close down debate yesterday. I hope in the process a lot of Americans will pay close attention. This is one of the latest times I can remember major appropriations bills being enacted since I served in Congress. The fact is, the longer the bill languishes, the more likely it is subject to mischief. That is what happened here. Time and time again we saw the overtime pay issue, the issue of media ownership concentration, the issue of the background checks on guns, as well as the issue of country-of-origin labeling—all of these became victim to this debate that went on and on, on the appropriations bills, and ultimately the special interests won, Americans lost, and American families lost as well. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished senator from Arizona is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. REID. Senator MCCAIN is scheduled to be here at 2 o'clock, and he has indicated he will be here, so I suggest the absence of a quorum pending the arrival of Senator MCCAIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished senator from Arizona is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. REID. Senator MCCAIN is scheduled to be here at 2 o'clock, and he has indicated he will be here, so I suggest the absence of a quorum pending the arrival of Senator MCCAIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished senator from Arizona is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada for asking for this consent. Certainly I will yield to the Senator from Arizona when he arrives. I know he had time reserved.

I listened with great interest to the President's State of the Union speech, hoping to hear what kind of plans he had to help America's working families in the struggling economy. Unfortunately, I didn't hear anything to help the millions of people who are out of work and have given up looking for work because there are so few jobs. I think we need a new agenda to wake up and come up with a real jobs plan to help America's families.

We need to extend emergency unemployment insurance for the hundreds of thousands of people who paid into unemployment insurance and have lost their jobs but months after losing their job still can't find work.

We need to raise the minimum wage, which has not been increased in over 6 years.

And the administration needs to immediately withdraw its proposal that would deny millions of workers their overtime pay. The President's proposal will deny overtime pay to 8 million workers. Five months ago the Senate approved an amendment to block the administration's effort to take away overtime pay to 8 million Americans. The House soon followed, 223 to 201. The Senate spoke again yesterday in its vote against cloture. This should not even be on the Omnibus appropriations bill that is before us today. The Congress of the United States spoke up, clear as a bell, and said: No, the administration must not strip overtime rights from 8 million Americans.

But, as we all know, the administration refused to accept the will of Congress. The administration ordered its foot soldiers in the House to strip this provision from the omnibus. Senator SPECTER and I fought to keep it in, but the administration refused any cooperation or compromise. In the end, just like that, without any vote in the conference, the administration nullified the clear will of both Houses of Congress and the people by sticking to his position to deny overtime pay rights to 8 million Americans.

This is a clear abuse of power by the administration and part of a pattern we have seen from this President, time and time again. The administration seems to believe in government by one branch, the executive branch. When there are no checks and balances, the result is bad public policy, and that is exactly what we see here today.

Mr. President, I see the Senator from Arizona has arrived. I will yield the floor and resume my talk on the overtime provisions later on sometime today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina). The Senator from Arizona is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank my colleague from Arizona and welcome him back from a very interesting time.

Mr. President, here we go again, another Omnibus appropriations bill, and this one takes the cake. Obviously, the New Years Eve parties didn't end for Congress on January 1. We are on a spending bender and this bill is ample proof of it. I think we have a new phrase in the lexicon of description of the way the Congress does business: Another drunken sailor spending spree embarked on by the Congress of the United States to the detriment of our children and our children's children.

But we have done this as long as many others, but I have never seen, nor do I believe history will record, such a rapid transition from a period of surpluses as far as the eye could see, to now commitment on the part of the administration to cut a trillion dollars in half at some time in the future. Multitrillion-dollar surpluses to multitrillion-dollar deficits, and you would think we were still in a period of surpluses. If you look at this legislation, it is a living, breathing argument that this system is broken, the way we do business. Spending is out of control and we are mortgaging the future of our children and our grandchildren, and there is no way that Medicare and Social Security can be viable when we are amassing the likes of these outrageous processes. I say shame on this body, shame on the appropriators, and shame on us because, on Thursday, we will, after a vote of dissatisfaction, pass this outrageous spending bill.

Americans have heard much about the growing problem of identity theft. We have before us the most costly case of identity theft imaginable. It appears that the big spenders in this body have all but stolen the credit card numbers of every hardworking American taxpayer in America and have gone on a limitless spending spree for parochial pork-barrel projects, leaving Americans to pay and pay.

As I will point out later in my statement on such programs as NASA, some of these cuts are dangerous.

Cuts in the International Space Station in the name of pork-barrel spending is endangering the very lives of our military. In my opinion, these projects have to do with fundamental changes in media ownership, in fishing, and in other areas that have been inserted in this bill are absolutely outrageously in violation of Senate rules, I might add.

Please join me as we walk through this shopping mall. On the right, we have $1.8 million for exotic pet disease. On your left, you will find $50 million for an indoor rain forest in Iowa—$50 million for an indoor rain forest in Iowa! Give me a break. On your left, you see $250,000 to build an amphitheater park in Illinois.

It is time we put an end to this theft. I am sorry we have to call it theft but that is how I see the situation. The sum of these political indulgences is enormous and growing and amounts to the theft of our future and the theft of our economic recovery.

Nearly 1 year ago I stood here and spoke about the 2003 Omnibus appropriations bill. At that time, I said our current economic situation and our vital national security concerns illustrate that we need now more than ever to prioritize our Federal spending. Obviously, it had no effect.
January 21, 2004
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
S85

Let me remind my colleagues that we are nearly 4 months into fiscal year 2004 and still without 7 of the 13 annual appropriations bills. This has become an unacceptable practice. Less than a year later, with the threat of a government shutdown, we are poised to do it again as if it should now be our standard operating procedure. But far worse than the breadth and timing, we have before us a bill loaded with special interest pork barrel projects that have no business in this or any other spending bill.

It is no accident that we are dealing with this bill in an election year. In fact, I strongly suggest we change the name of this bill to “The Incumbent Protection Act of 2004.” Forget about the Patriots versus the Panthers in the Super Bowl next weekend. We are right in the middle of the Super Bowl of pork. C-SPAN viewers have seats at the 50 yard line for $1 million. Is Congress as interested in the American taxpayer, and sadly we already know the outcome of this game. The taxpayer will be the loser.

We have before us today a bill that incorporates 7 of the 13 annual spending bills into one, a whopping $820 billion chocked full of pork barrel spending and major policy changes.

The Kansas City Star recently reported, “Enough pork is layered into the spending bill that even the Missouri Pork Producers Association is in line for $3 million.”

There is over $11 billion unrequested, unauthorized, run-of-the-mill pork projects inserted in the 1,182 pages of this conference report.

Let us talk about some of the interesting provisions: $200,000 for the West Oahu campus of the University of Hawaii to produce the “Primal Quest” film documentary. I am sure my colleagues will again be surprised at the number of projects that go to the States of the senior members of the Appropriations Committee, Alaska, West Virginia, Mississippi, and Hawaii: $225,000 to the Wheels Museum in New Mexico—a wheels museum in New Mexico; $7.3 million for a Hawaiian sea turtles; $6 million for sea lions in Alaska; $450,000 to the Johnny Appleseed Heritage Center in Ohio; $100,000 to the State Historical Society of Iowa in Des Moines for development of the World Food Prize; $200,000 to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland, OH, for the Rockin’ the Schools education program.

As a fan of rock and roll, I can certainly understand why we would want to send $250,000 to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in New Mexico—a wheels museum in New Mexico. I can certainly understand why we would want to send $200,000 over there to help get rid of that fruit fly in Montpellier, France.

Given the closeness of our relationship with the French, I can certainly understand why we would want to send $90,000 to the University of Missouri for the painting of a mural on a wall. That must be one heck of a mural.

But back home, $225,000 to Traverse City, MI, for the restoration of an opera house. Opera lovers rejoice; $250,000 for the Alaska Aviation Heritage Museum. Alaska is known for a lot of things, but being the hotbed or the birthplace of aviation is not one that I am aware of and I have lived there for 20 years. I have grown to be more and more aware of the critical needs of Alaska for federal funds for every conceivable purpose; $200,000 to the city of Guadalupe, AR, for the construction and renovation of a horse racing track. I have been to Guadalupe and I can see why they want to go out there and see it. It is not too far from my home; $325,000 to the city of Salinas, CA, for the construction of a swimming pool.

Some of my colleagues may have read about this kind of interesting thing. It appears that a Member of the other body had some pangs of conscience because he dropped a frog into the swimming pool, or something like that. But whatever, the city of Salinas will have a new swimming pool.

And $100,000 to the city of Macon, GA, for the renovation of the Coca-Cola building. I can certainly see why the Coca-Cola people couldn’t arrange for that. They are an impoverished corporation, as we all know; $100,000 to the city of Atlanta for the renovation of Paschal’s restaurant and motel. I am sure there is great historical significance associated with Paschal’s restaurant and motel down there in the impoverished part of Atlanta; $900,000 to an economic development association in Idaho to continue the implementation of the Lewis and Clark Bi-centennial commemoration plan; $175,000 to the city of Detroit for the Motor City Jazz Festival. The city of Detroit certainly wouldn’t want to have to pick up any of that tab; $238,000 to the National Wild Turkey Federation. I wasn’t sure whether this was the animal or the beverage. But either way, $238,000 to the Wild Turkey Federation will, I am sure, be wisely spent, and perhaps that would reduce the cost per bottle; $200,000 for the city of North Pole, AK, for recreational improvements.

I know there has been a bad Christmas season for some, but you would think the elves and others might not need $200,000 for North Pole, AK. But one never knows, does one? The condition of the elves and Mrs. Claus are generally updated only around Christmas time. But it has come a little late this year. I will have to ask my staff to find out the total population of North Pole, AK, although counting nonpersons, I am sure, would enlarge the census大大. This conference report has the department of the Jefferson County courthouse clock tower in Washington State. That was under the category of economic development. I imagine everyone knowing what time it is would probably encourage efficiency that have no business in this or any other spending bill.

There is $220,000 to the Blueberry Hill Farm in Maine. They are getting their thrill on Blueberry Hill. I almost did not use that one, it is so schmaltzy.

While many of these projects may sound comical, they illustrate a badly broken system in need of serious and comprehensive reform. The HUD portion of this bill contains an account that is perhaps the best evidence that this process is completely broken and out of control. The Appropriators included $278 million in this bill for so-called “economic development initiatives.” Every single dime of that $278 million was served up as pork. There were 40 pages of report language. The Appropriators tossed $650,000 for everything from theater renovations in Jenkintown, PA, to quarry updates in Nome, Alaska.

Excuse me, North Pole, Alaska, The population in 2000 was 1,570, so $230,000 is tiddy Christmas present.

Back to the 902 earmarks, from everything from theater preservation to quarry updates in Nome, Alaska. Again, somehow Alaska comes back and back and back through out. I wonder how the people in Alaska feel about being put on welfare.

Sadly, the EDI account in the HUD appropriations bill has become nothing more than a slush fund for the appropriators, completely eliminating any competitive or merit-based determination by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. The only word that comes to mind to describe this practice is “shameful.”

At the same time, I will comment about some language in the statement of managers language accompanying this conference report that offers a more appropriate approach. Many of the accounts throughout the Department of Justice portion of this bill contain language from Federal officials, Governors, and other State and local representatives some discretion in awarding the appropriated funds. While the statement of managers names specific entities in connection with the Department of Justice grant, it also states that funding should be awarded if they are warranted after a proper review. Unfortunately, that kind of language is missing throughout the rest of this legislation. I hope the agency officials charged with reviewing these proposals will exercise a greater amount of fiscal restraint in some projects mentioned, such as $2 million for the First Tee Program, which teaches... young people how to play golf. I know the President Offi cer is an avid golf fan and has been to many parts of the world in order to enjoy the game of golf, but I don’t think even he would think it is justified in this period of multiple deficits to spend $2 million for the First Tee Program.

As inappropriate as the earmarks are, I am perhaps more dismayed at the inclusion of some major policy changes in the bill. Every member of this Chamber is well aware of the Federal Communications Commission. When Gannett owns the Washington Post and Channel 12, is it really fair? What happens when Gannett owns Channel 12 and Channel 10 and Channel 5? That is what concerns people.

So the appropriators, in a blatant bow to Viacom and CBS, insert a 39 percent rule. I again give credit where it is due, the power of the National Association of Broadcasters, which is not included in the provision, as the ultimate proof of their inuence. Why is it that other concerns that have been raised were not raised? Why were not included in the appropriations bill? It is because the National Association of Broadcasters did not want it in.

As I mentioned, this is not the first attempt by the Senate to undo the FCC’s new media ownership rules. Last September, the Senate voted 55–40 in support of Senator Dorgan’s congressional disapproval resolution which sought to declare all of the FCC’s new media ownership rules null and void. The omnibus spending bill is not the appropriate legislative vehicle to undo the commission’s broadcast ownership cap. If Congress wishes to take action on the issue of media ownership, it ought to do so in the committee of jurisdiction. The issue of media ownership is far broader than the limited scope of this provision. As William Safire wrote in an op-ed piece in the New York Times, itself a large owner of second amendment rights. I have not supported the use of the appropriations process to legislate policy and I will not do so today. Substantively, this provision is objectionable because while purporting to ad-ress public concerns about excessive media consolidation, it really only addresses the concerns of special interests. As of now, my understanding is that the 39 percent is the exact ownership percentage of Viacom and CBS. Why did they pick 39 percent? So that these two major conglomerates would be grandfathered in, purportedly, in order to reduce the media ownership, which was voted 55–40 in the Senate. The fact is now they are endorsing Viacom and CBS’s 39 percent ownership, grandfathering them in because it is due, the power of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Almost two years ago, the other major broadcast networks resigned from the NAB. The issue was the patently hypocritical NAB position favoring deregulation of newspaper ownership and advocating continued regulation of the national station cap. The NAB and the public policy process in Washington should not be abused to address the interests of one broadcaster over another.

The ABC/Disney suggestion is exactly what is going on here. This provision is not about public policy; it is about advancing the interests of the National Association of Broadcasters.

To summarize, stand-alone legislation like S. 1046, that was reported out of the authorizing committee, is the correct vehicle to address these different and complex media ownership. Attaching a rider to selectively address concerns of special nonpublic interests is not the way to make good policy.

Let me state from the outset I take a back seat to no one in my support of second amendment rights. I have supported nearly every law that protects the rights of law-abiding gun owners since first coming to Washington. But there is a special interest that is included in the omnibus appropriations bill that is absolutely appalling. The House sponsor of this provision has argued that it benefits gun owners, but the only gun owners it seems to help are those who have broken the law.

This rider has three major provisions, all of them unnecessary for gun owners, and none of them helpful for law enforcement.

First, it requires that background check approval records be destroyed within 24 hours instead of the current policy of 90 days. Proponents argue that keeping these records for 90 days.constitutes a national firearms registry. I want to be very clear, I oppose Federal registration of firearms.

I also want to be equally clear that our current policy of keeping these records for 90 days does not constitute in any way, shape, or form a national registry. It is a phony issue.

The 90-days retention allows the NICS system to correct mistakes that occur when they accidentally approve someone who should have been denied a gun in the first place. This happens about once a year, according to the General Accounting Office. Nearly all these false approvals are because of missing domestic violence records. So as far as I can tell, this provision benefits no one except those who should have been denied a firearm but were not.

The second provision prevents ATF from conducting an inventory audit of licensed gun stores. This means that ATF auditors will have no way of knowing if a gun store is selling firearms, a sure sign that they are selling guns illegally without the proper background checks.

In Tacoma, WA, ATF auditors recovered 233 firearms missing from Bull’s Eye Shooters Supply store. One of those weapons was used by the accused DC area snipers. Why are we putting so much special language in a must-pass Federal spending bill to protect a store from DC area snipers? Consider the potential consequences.

A third provision prohibits the public release of crime gun trace information that shows where criminals have obtained a gun.

We are creating a cartel, a Government-mandated cartel. And who is going to pay for that, at the end, in the form of higher prices? Those who eat this crab all over America, including my State.

This legislative language has not been considered by the authorizing committee nor requested by the administration. This provision raises serious antitrust concerns. Again, it would require—not simply allow but require—the cartel gunfishermen to sell 90 percent of their crab harvest to predetermined processing companies. This precedent-setting action would vitiate antitrust laws, limit competition in the seafood sector, and ultimately hurt fishermen and consumers and the Nation have expressed strong opposition to this provision, as have at least a dozen newspaper editorial boards.

Before I go any further, I wish to clarify the difference between “fishing quotas” and “processing quotas.” Fishing quotas are allocation tools that allow fishermen to catch a certain portion of the overall allowable harvest. Fishermen can determine when and under what conditions to fish with such quotas, and fishing quotas have been widely recognized as fishery management tools. The environment, the processors are already counting that they will be able to process in the future is based on how much they have been considered or disdained by the committee of jurisdiction, the Commerce Committee.

This provision has no support from the law enforcement community, and wascompromised by Chairman Young and Subcommittee Chairman Wolf. Yet here it is today included in this terrible bill. This language is an embarrassment to law-abiding gun owners and a slap in the face to law enforcement.

Now, it is going to get a little esoteric here for a second, but it is very important. Because what we have done in this bill has basically changed the entire fishing industry and the way they do business, again, to protect certain entities in the State of Alaska.

One of the policy riders is language that authorizes the Bering Sea and Aleutian Islands crab fisheries rationalization plan, which would divide 90 percent of that crab market among just a small group of processors. Under the provision, fishermen could only sell this crab to those few processors and, in turn, only those processors would sell to consumers.

We are creating a cartel, a Government-mandated cartel. And who is going to pay for that, at the end, in the form of higher prices? Those who eat this crab all over America, including my State.

This legislative language has not been considered by the authorizing committee nor requested by the administration. This provision raises serious antitrust concerns. Again, it would require—not simply allow but require—the crab fishermen to sell 90 percent of their crab harvest to predetermined processing companies. This precedent-setting action would vitiate antitrust laws, limit competition in the seafood sector, and ultimately hurt fishermen and consumers and the Nation have expressed strong opposition to this provision, as have at least a dozen newspaper editorial boards.

Before I go any further, I wish to clarify the difference between “fishing quotas” and “processing quotas.” Fishing quotas are allocation tools that allow fishermen to catch a certain portion of the overall allowable harvest. Fishermen can determine when and under what conditions to fish with such quotas, and fishing quotas have been widely recognized as fishery management tools. The environment, the processors are already counting that they will be able to process in the future is based on how much they have been considered or disdained by the committee of jurisdiction, the Commerce Committee.

Fishermen throughout the Nation object to the crab plan’s individual processing quotas, IPQs, because the precedent-setting nature of this action could lead to IPQs in the processing sector of other fisheries. Indeed, crab boat owners and crew from all over the country—even from Arizona—have voiced their opposition to this proposal.

“Crab cartels,” the Anchorage Daily News—even the Anchorage Daily News. “Stevens pushes plan that gives processors too much market power.”

The Los Angeles Times: “Toos This Stinker in the Sea.”

The Seattle Post-Intelligence: “The quota plan would guarantee shares not just to boat owners, as has been done successfully with other species, but also to fish processors on the land. That has nothing to do with safety. As the U.S. Department of Justice recognizes, it raises significant antitrust concerns.

Crab Cartels are Bad News for Maine Lobster Industry.

Seattle Times: Crab Industry Bakes a Monopoly Pie.

Seattle Times: Feeling Crabby? No Need for a Monopoly. It goes on and on. There is nobody who thinks this is a good idea.

In addition to affecting the price setting process, I am aware of at least one crab fisherman who owns a fishing boat and a ‘catcher-processor’ boat. He objects to this policy rider because it would make it illegal for him to sell his own catch to himself, so that the catch from his fishing boat could be processed on his processing boat.

According to the National Research Council, the General Accounting Office, and the Department of Justice Antitrust Division, concerns about IPQs are clearly justified. The 1999 NRC publication, Sharing the Fish, found no “compelling reason to establish a separate, complementary processor quota system” to accompany an Individual Fishing Quote program. Provisions were used by the GAO in its December 2002 report on IPQs, which failed to find the IPQ programs resulted in harmful impacts on processors in the halibut and sablefish fisheries that would warrant creation of an IPQ program.

Furthermore, on August 27, 2003, the Assistant Attorney General of the U.S. Department of Justice Antitrust Division wrote a letter to the General Counsel of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, in which he opposed the IPQ provisions of the crab plan, stating “processor quotas are not justified by any such beneficial competitive purpose” and that “The Department urges NOAA to oppose IPQ.”

While the fisherman are up in arms, the processors are already counting their chickens, or in this case, crab harvests, and in turn, their profits. That is because the percent of the harvest that they will be able to process in the future is based on how much they have processed in the past under the free market environment. Regardless of future operational efficiency, supply and demand, or any other real-world factors, these processors guaranteed their allocation in perpetuity. Consider, for example, one company that recently has processed roughly 20 percent of the Bering Sea and Aleutian Island crab. This provision will assure that company continues to receive 20 percent of future harvests, worth on the order of tens of millions of dollars annually.

For centuries, fishermen have used market forces to negotiate their dockside prices, and this has had the effect of maintaining competition and benefitting consumers. Processor quotas throw an enormous wrench into the free market machinery.
In addition to affecting the price-setting process, the crab IQP plan also would effectively prevent new processors from entering the industry. If anyone wants to enter the processing sector, they would need to buy the processing rights from the few processors who have processing quotas.

Considering all these facts, the administration has officially stated its opposition to IQPs, as reported in the Sacramento Press Daily Sacramento, Anchorage Daily News, and Seattle Times. The administration's proposed language for amending the Magnuson-Stevens Fisheries Conservation and Management Act clearly specifies that processors could own fishing quota, but does not provide a separate quota system divvying up processor quotas.

Editorial boards from at least 12 major newspapers—the Washington Post, Washington Times, Boston Globe, Oregonian, Anchorage Daily News, Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, Daily Astorian, Seattle Times, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Portland Press Herald in Maine, and the Tampa Tribune—have come out against IQPs. Note that these newspapers include the entire west coast, including Alaska and Hawaii.

I ask unanimous consent they be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Los Angeles Times, Oct. 5, 2003]

TED STEVENS STINKER IN THE SEA

Ted Stevens thinks the Alaskan fishermen and processors he represents shouldn't have to comply with federal rules they don't like. So the powerful Republican, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, attached a rider to the Commerce, Justice and State appropriations bill to give Alaskan industry a pass.

Stevens insists that Alaskans have done a better job husbanding their fish-teeming waters than farmers in the 48 contiguous states. Regardless of whether he is right about the health of the Alaskan crab, salmon and pollock populations, he's wrong to use the appropriations process to rewrite federal food policy.

One provision of his rider would freeze all funds to enforce federal laws imposing new limits on crabbing and fishing in sensitive ocean habitat. Another legal barnacle guarantees certain processing companies 90% of the lucrative Bering Sea and Aleutian Islands crab catch. This unprecedented deal not only would favor some processors and unfairly exclude others, it would hobble fishermen who are supposed to be the ones in control of their own destinies.

This rider is troubling by itself. But it becomes deeply disturbing when combined with the granting of leases for seabed and the efficient fishing techniques that threaten ocean species. For example, the red king crab season in Alaska's Bristol Bay this year was the shortest ever. Crabbers captured an entire year's quota in a little more than two days by using 700-pound steel pots baited with chopped herring and set and retrieved by hydraulic launchers and large winches. Yet even as this high-tech harvest intensifies each year, Stevens would order federal regulators to lay off, a move certain to put more fishermen and their crews at risk.

Stevens' rider also would set destructive precedent. California, Florida or Maine lawmakers could decide they want to suspend federal rules protecting their fish.

Federal fisheries law is and should remain the product of consensus and deliberation, not one man's backroom maneuvers. That's why Sens. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Olympia J. Snowe (R-Maine) promise to "strenuously oppose" Stevens' rider. When asked if the manager of the House hooked to come before the Senate, other senators too should cast his smelly deal into the deep.

[From the Anchorage Daily News, Sept. 16, 2003]

CRAB CARTELS—STEVENS PUSHES PLAN THAT GIVES PROCESSORS TOO MUCH MARKET POWER

U.S. Sen. Ted Stevens is fast-tracking a controversial plan where Alaska's Bering Sea crab fishermen are allowed to sell all but a tiny part of their catch. He is pressing the legislative process to ram through a scheme that short-circuits market competition.

The concept Sen. Stevens is pushing is known as processor quotas. Using a legislative shortcut called a rider, he tackled his measure onto one of the 13 federal spending bills that have to pass each year, instead of pursuing a stand-alone bill that would have to be judged on its merits in committees and on the Senate floor. A rider is no way for Congress to make such a complicated, far-reaching and hotly disputed decision.

Stevens' rider is a larger set of fish management changes that address real problems in the Bering Sea. Fishing for crabs today is a free-for-all, a race to see who can get their quota's most catch. As a result, too many boats are chasing too few crabs. They go out in dangerous weather, and crews work dangerously long hours. The boats then rush to deliver the processed fish to processors who have to move huge amounts of product before it spoils.

To cure these problems in some other Alaskan fisheries, federal managers now use individual fishing quotas. In that system, the government gives each fisherman the right to take a certain percentage of each year's allowable harvest. Fishermen can go out when it's safe and work at a safe pace without having to worry that others will grab all the fish. Fish plants have more time to process the catch and produce higher-quality products.

These fishing quotas have improved the safety and economics of other Alaskan fisheries. Processors, though, have complained that fishermen with quotas now have too much time to shop around and get higher prices for their product.

Crab processors persuaded the North Pacific Fishery Management Council to try to cure their problem. So when the council decided to give fishermen rights to catch Bering Sea crab, fish plants in the region also got guaranteed rights to process the catch. Fishermen would have to sell 90 percent of their catch to boat operators. This patchwork of the council's plan requires congressional approval, which is where Sen. Stevens and his rider come in.

Stevens' rider would give 90 processor quotas a straightforward way for fish plants to limit competition and grab back economic power they might lose if fishermen get a guaranteed share of the catch. Sen. Stevens' riders could instruct the council to block the catch they consider too much. And to tell farmers they could sell their grain only to a handful of agribusiness companies. There would be an uproar on the plains. The U.S. Department of Justice recognizes, it raises significant anti-trust concerns.

If Stevens rewrites his rider, the Senate should block it. In the name of saving lives, too much mischief could be played.

[From the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Nov. 3, 2003]

BOAT QUOTAS MAKE CRAB FISHING SAFER

Crab fishing off Alaska can be made safer. The key to reducing fatalities is a quota system. Allotting shares of the Alaska crab catch to boat operators could end the frenzied effort to grab back economic power they might lose if fishermen would do it by attaching a rider to a vital spending bill. As fellow Republican Sens. John McCain and Olympia Snowe recognize, that's a poor way to make policy.

Attaching riders to spending bills ends-run the lawmaking process. Stevens' proposals need full scrutiny. His rider would reopen a timerolock fishery that he has criticized and dramatically documented by recent P-I stories and photos.

Unfortunately, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska is trying to ram through a broad new kind of quota system with too little consideration. At the same time, Stevens would halt several enforcement efforts that could help prevent new problems in the Bering Sea. Fishing for crabs is the product of consensus and deliberation, not one man's backroom maneuvers. That's why Sens. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Olympia J. Snowe promise to "strenuously oppose" Stevens' rider. When asked if the manager of the House hooked to come before the Senate, other senators too should cast his smelly deal into the deep.

[From the Portland Press Herald, Nov. 3, 2003]

"CRAB CARTELS" ARE BAD NEWS FOR MAINE LOBSTER INDUSTRY

A rider on the commerce appropriations bill has made some Alaska fishermen and environmental groups, well, crabby.

Ridgly so. Sens. Stevens, R-Alaska, is trying to push through a plan that would essentially create "crab cartels" in Alaska, guaranteeing certain crab processors a quota of the valuable resource that undermines fair market competition. As the Anchorage Daily News rightly points out, nobody would try to tell farmers that they could only sell their grain to certain agribusinesses.

Crab producers want the plan, obviously, because it guarantees them business but they also say it will grab to consumers faster.

Such a rider would set a dangerous precedent, shifting oversight of the details of the regulatory process from the regional council and giving it to Congress. The regional council system is flawed, but it does allow for more public input. There's also a danger of this plan eventually affecting other business, such as Maine's lobster industry. Sen. Olympia Snowe is opposed to the rider.
The plan also would end funding for identification and protection of essential fish habitat, making sensitive areas such as coral reefs vulnerable to damage by huge trawlers. This would be harmful to Alaska and it's harmful to the nation as a whole, and it should be removed from the bill.

[From the Seattle Times, Nov. 1, 2003]

FEELING CRABBY? NO NEED FOR A MONOPOLY
Seafood processors, led by Seattle-based Trident Seafoods, have been campaigning for years for exclusive rights to buy crab from the Bering Sea. If these rights come into effect, a newcomer who wanted to buy that crab would have to buy the rights to buy crab from companies already in the business.

In the proposal now under consideration, anyone wishing to enter the crab-processing business would have to get permission from someone already in it. And that is a monopoly privilege.

Processors say they are asking only for what boat owners will get: an individual quota of crab. But these two quotas are not the same.

For the fisherman, crab is wild and in the public domain. There has to be a quota, either on a boat or an engine, or the idea of a quota for each boat allows crab to be harvested slowly, cost-effectively and safely. There is a public interest in doing that with crab.

Processors buy crab that is already harvested. There is no public-interest reason to give certain processors what amounts to raider quotas. * * *

Mr. Stevens' rider would also cancel a study by the National Marine Fisheries Service of Alaskan crab fisheries to determine to comply with Federal fishery laws, including the Marine Mammal Protection Act, the Endangered Species Act, and the Magnuson-Stevens Act. Not surprisingly, the administration did not request this change, nor has the authorizing committee of jurisdiction held any hearings on this proposal.

Mr. Stevens is trying to create a package for crab fisheries that holds IPQs hostage to benefits for processors. His rider, which would give crabbers IPQs only if they deliver 90 percent of their catch to a handful of processors, is poorly designed. Bush administration and Senate colleagues. Even the Justice Department has suggested it would not stand up under antitrust law. Fellow Republican Senator Craig of Idaho is seeking public comment on and finalizing regulations to do this.

In the northeast, fishery managers must comply with a court-ordered implementation date of May 1, 2004, for putting a groundfish management plan into effect, and the administration is not seeking public comment and is finalizing regulations to do this.

Even before we know what the final plan is, the language would prohibit the administration from spending any money to implement this plan. The legislative rider would authorize fund- ing for only a certain set of management rules—which have already been determined by a court to be out of compliance with the Magnuson-Stevens Act.

So, under the language in the omnibus, it would be illegal for the administration to comply with Federal fisheries law as set out in the Magnuson-Stevens Act. If this provision is enacted, there is a real risk that the fishery could be ordered closed by a Federal court.

Again, this significant policy change was not considered by or debated in the Commerce Committee. I am more than willing to discuss ways to redesign the fishery management council process, along with the rest of the Magnuson-Stevens Act, if indeed, it is as flawed as some seem to think it is. This rider, however, is not the appropriate way to make policy.

Section 626 of the omnibus broadly requires the Secretary of Commerce to ‘negotiate or reevaluate, with the consent of the President, international agreements affecting international ocean policy.’

Under 22 U.S.C. Section 2655a, however, international ocean policy issues are currently handled by the State Department's Bureau of Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs, or OES. Several marine resource conservation laws, including the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act, grant the Secretary of State the authority to negotiate international agreements on these matters. Clearly, this language conflicts with the Secretary of State’s statutory responsibility for carrying out a coherent foreign policy.

When appropriators first proposed such a transfer in the FY04 CJS appropriations bill, Secretary Colin Powell explained, “Such a provision would significantly hamper the Department’s ability to address important foreign policy issues (e.g., oceans policy, CAIR pollution, global overfishing) to which the United States can ill afford to give short shrift.”

Considering the important role that the United States needs to maintain as a leader in the international community on ocean policy matters, I am dismayed that the appropriators would attempt to transfer these powers between government agencies without any public or expert review and debate. This is clearly a matter that needs the full attention of the Commerce and Foreign Relations Committees, and this has not happened.

A provision in the EPA portion of the VA–HUD section of this bill prohibits all States, with the exception of California, from exercising their existing authority to regulate “non-road” engines to improve air quality. This language will effectively tie the hands of the State air pollution control agencies by preventing them from addressing the 120 million small engines which are a substantial and growing source of smog and soot pollution nationwide.

This provision was originally put in the VA–HUD bill at the request of a single engine manufacturer, Briggs and Stratton. The company suggested that the provision would save jobs. I find this argument very disingenuous due to the fact that, in its September 2003 filing with the SEC, the company stated, “Briggs and Stratton does not believe that the Staff proposal will have a material effect on its financial condition or results of operations . . .”

Our colleague from California, Senator Feinstein, made an effective argument against the language on the Senate floor during consideration of the bill, but she was not permitted to offer an amendment to strike the language. Mr. President, what has come out of the conference may be acceptable to California and to Briggs and Stratton, but it is unacceptable to me and should be unacceptable to almost every Member of this body.

If you have not heard from your State air agency yet, you certainly will soon. In the State of Arizona, for example, the potential emissions impact of these unregulated engines is equivalent to 1.4 million additional cars on the roads. This is almost certain to worsen the smog problem in the city of Phoenix, and I am sure it will be the same in many other cities in the Nation. I have no doubt that what we lose in terms of health will come with worst cases of asthma and a litany of other health problems. It is simply outrageous that the United States will be prohibited from exercising their responsibility to protect public health and the environment because one company was able to secure a special deal in a must-pass spending bill.

I also am very concerned that for the NASA funding portions, that the Joint Explanatory Statement to the conference report contains a list of 144 earmarks that total in excess of $300 million. These earmarks are unauthorized and unrequested by the President.

Meanwhile, the international space station has been funded at $200 million below the President’s request. This action comes despite news reports that have outlined numerous safety problems aboard the international space station.

The Columbia Accident Investigation Board (CAIB), which was assigned to determine the causes of last February’s tragic accident, described the results of their August 2003 report. According to the CAIB report:

Pressure on NASA’s budget has come not only from the White House, but also from the Congress. In recent years there has been an increasing Congressional tendency to add “earmarks”—congressional additions to the NASA budget request that reflect targeted Members’ interests. These earmarks come out of already-appropriated funds, reducing the amounts available for the original tasks.

I must question whether we have learned anything from the shuttle accident. At a Senate Commerce Committee hearing last year, I questioned Admiral Gehman about the effects of the $167 million that was earmarked in fiscal year 2003 appropriations bill. He responded by saying that “$100 million will buy a lot of safety engineers.” Maybe we should ask what he thinks should be done with over $300 million worth of earmarks.

Mr. President, I would like to take a few minutes to discuss the importance of fully funding the international space station. Again, the omnibus provides $200 million less than the President’s request at a time when serious safety concerns have been raised about the space station. This underfunding could be corrected if we simply eliminated these wasteful earmarks and we’d even have money to spare.

William F. Readdy, the NASA Associate Administrator at the Office of Safety and Mission Assurance, told the Senate Commerce Committee that the space station onboard environmental monitoring system which, “provides very high accuracy information on atmospheric composition and presence of trace elements . . . is not operating at full capacity. CAIB also recommended that the crew health countermeasures, which include an onboard treadmill and associated resistive exercise devices, were “operating at various degrees of reduced capacity and needed to be repaired.”

Articles in the Washington Post paint an even more disturbing picture. An October 23, 2003, article describes:

The problems with monitoring environmental conditions aboard the space station have festered for more than a year, some NASA medical officials said. Space station travelers have shown symptoms as headaches, dizziness and “an inability to think clearly,” according to a medical officer who asked not to be named. The onboard instruments designed to analyze the air, water and radiation levels have been broken for months, which has made it impossible to determine at any given time whether there is a buildup of trace amounts of dangerous chemical compounds that could sicken astronauts, or worse.

A November 9, 2003, Washington Post article reports that:

A recent NASA study found that the risk of fire aboard the station has grown because the crew is stowing large quantities of supplies, equipment and waste in front of or in many other cities in the Nation. I have no doubts that with worsening the station’s motion failed, and that another was showing vibrations and spikes in electrical current. NASA will be forced to use Russian thrusters onboard the space station to shift the station’s position.

These are very serious issues that cannot be ignored, yet here we are, with wasted money, equipment and resources. We should be reducing the $200 million for unrequested earmarks while underfunding more pressing needs. How will these cuts to the President’s budget affect the safety of the space station? Are we really willing to take any risks? Mr. President, that this practice continues in the face of legitimate safety concerns is simply unacceptable given the tragedies experienced just last year.

The Statement of Administration Policy opposed this $200 million reduction in the VA–HUD bill, stating that: “After diligently rebuilding reserves to place the Station on sound financial ground, this reduction would deplete reserves deemed critical by independent cost estimates and limit the program’s ability to address risks in FY 2004, including impacts from the Columbia accident.”

You know, I have to admit I am naive to believe that the Columbia disaster we would see a reduction in the earmarks. It was an increase.

In addition, I have been informed that this reduction would place at risk actions that NASA is taking to address the Independent Management and Cost Evaluation (IMCE) Task Force recommendations to ensure a “credible” ISS Program.

I know there is a lot of excitement about last week’s announcement by the President proposing a new agenda for human exploration of the Moon, and eventually Mars. However, let us also note that he reaffirmed the United States commitment to completing the ISS. The Commerce Committee will hold a series of hearings to discuss the proposals and not lose sight of our responsibilities of ensuring the safety of the space shuttle and international space station.

Finally, it is unfortunate that the appropriate, while earmarking hundreds of millions of dollars less, NASA underfunded the Advanced Polarimeter Sensor of the Global Climate Change Research Initiative by $1 million below the President’s request—a 47-percent decrease—yet could sign off on thousands of earmarks. This reduction would significantly impact the development of the sensor, which is designed to measure methane, tropospheric ozone, aerosols, and black carbon in the atmosphere. The proposed reduction would delay the purchase of “long-lead” item purchases, which could potentially delay the launch date of the satellite from 2007 to 2008.

As my colleagues know, the public is greatly concerned about the impacts of climate change on our environment and economy. Although the administration and I have a difference of opinion on the need to take action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, we are in agreement on the need for research in this area. We should not cut this publicly significant research, so that we can simply fund local pork projects.

The bill would appropriate funding for the Advanced Technology Program, ATP, at approximately $152.6 million above the President’s request. The language would ignore the President’s attempt to rein in a corporate welfare program in a time of skyrocketing Federal deficits and critical national security needs. For example, the most recent ATP awards included a grant to Aqua Breeding Farms, Inc., to “produce sterile transgenic fish that can be made fertile as needed for reproduction.” I can assure you that the ATP program was never envisioned to fund the production of sterile transgenic fish.

I also am concerned about funding for the Scientific and Technical Research and Services account of the National Institute of Standards and Technology. This account supports NIST’s scientific research, including Nobel Prize winning research on the Bose-Einstein condensates. This account is funded at approximately $35 million below the President’s request, while, at the same time, the appropriators have continued to earmark activities within this account. I would ask my colleagues to ask themselves if it is more important to fund a spreadsheet engineering initiative at Dartmouth College’s research to help our beleaguered manufacturing sector. Should we fund a wind demonstration project in Texas or research to improve the equipment for our Nation’s first responders? In the long run, it will be considered a great tragedy that we have wasted our Nation’s scientific potential of meaningless parasitical projects.

This reduction is even more disturbing given the reality that NIST will have to lay off many of its scientists and engineers due to lack of funding. Let me remind my colleagues that these are the scientists and engineers that have won two Nobel Prizes for research in the past few years. These layoffs will occur even as we continue to contract to industry through the ATP program for research that is inconsistent with the program requirements of being “high risk.” That does not send the right message to our award winning scientist and engineers and their work.

There is also language that redirects $40 million to the Port of Philadelphia for construction of a cargo terminal that is designed to support “high-speed military sealift and other military purposes.” Today, these type of vessels do not even exist, nor are they being championed by the military. They are supported, however, by the private investors and their lobbyists who obviously think it makes sense to place the military at the front of the line for the risk of the taxpayers. Let me also mention that the design of these vessels is based on unproven technology. And, in reviews of the proposed vessel technology by the Department of Transportation, it was determined that the project did not quality for government backed financing. It is ridiculous that despite these facts, this legislative rider will risk wasting $40 million of the taxpayers on a terminal to support a certain type of vessel that may never exist. This is not a sound example of putting the cart before the horse.

By the way, we have ample precedent. The Senator from Hawaii, the Senator from Alaska, and the Senator from Mississippi put in loan guarantees for cruise ships to be built in Pascagoula, MS, which cost the taxpayers $273 million in loan guarantees, which I fought against and predicted would fail. Only $273 million. By the way, for those of you who keep up with it, the hulls of these cruise ships in Mississippi have been towed to Europe.

Mr. President, it’s time to get serious about what we are doing here. We have a deficit of $500 billion—that’s half of a trillion dollars—the largest ever. Our fiscal future can only be described as bleak. Government watchdog organizations and think tanks, both liberal and conservative, have expressed enormous concern about the level of spending in this bill.

A recent report by the Heritage Foundation states:

Following increases of 15 percent and 12 percent during the previous two years, 2004 would mark the third consecutive year of massive discretionary spending growth.

It further notes that:

• Altogether, total Federal spending in 2003 topped $2,000,000 per household and we don’t divide that up by States] for the first time since World War II and is set to grow another $1,000 per household in 2004.

Due to a joint statement issued by the Committee for Economic Development on the Concord Coalition Center on Budget and Policy Priorities:

Without a change in current fiscal policies, the Federal Government can expect to run a cumulative deficit of $5 trillion over the next 10 years.

These numbers are shameful and frightening.

Another astonishing part of this report states:

After the baby boom generation starts to retire in 2008, the combination of demographic pressures and rising health care costs will result in the cost of Medicare and Medicaid and Social Security growing faster than the economy. We project that by the time today’s newborn reaches 40 years of age, the cost of just one of these programs, as a percentage of the economy, will more than double from 8.5 percent of the GDP to over 17 percent.

I urge my colleagues to read this joint statement.

The Congressional Budget Office has issued warnings about the dangers that lie ahead if we continue to spend in this manner. In a report issued last month, CBO stated:

Because of rising health care costs in an aging population, spending on entitlement programs, especially Medicaid, Medicare, and Social Security, will claim a sharply increasing share of the Nation’s economic output over the coming decades. Unless taxation reaches levels that are unprecedented in the United States, current spending policies will probably be financially unsustainable over the next 50 years. An ever-growing burden of Federal debt held by the public would have a corrosive effect on the economy.

That is from the Congressional Budget Office, not from any liberal or conservative think tank, as much as I value those.

Additionally, CBO projected a 10-year deficit of $4.4 trillion.

The Wall Street Journal recently reported, according to an International Monetary Fund report:

If cumulative budget deficits rise by 15 percent of gross domestic product, as the Congressional Budget Office expects, world interest rates would be pushed up by one-half to 1 percentage point over 10 years.

We are paying a price overseas for our reckless spending. The U.S. dollar is fading, and it is a result of our fiscal indiscipline and our enormous deficit. Foreign countries are losing confidence in the dollar. To underscore the
We are just going to do this for labor once. How stupid is labor? If I were a labor leader, I would say: Either vote it down or vote it up, but don’t throw me some kind of 4-day delay.

I understand labor just took some significant setbacks. They are about to take another one.

Mr. President, I will continue to fight. I will continue to see if we can’t stop funding the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, the Air Force Memorial on Pennsylvania Hill, the wild turkey, and all of the other turkeys that have become part and parcel of this thousand-page piece of pork.

I thank my colleagues for their indulgence. We will be hearing about this issue for a long time to come because the American people demand we address it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Sessions). Who is there? Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, what is the order right now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The chairman and ranking member of the Appropriations Committee control the time until 6 o’clock.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, in their absence, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 15 minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I would ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 15 minutes. So ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, what is the order right now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A unanimous consent to proceed for 15 minutes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senate from New Jersey, Mr. LAUTENBERG, has been waiting a long time. He is in the cloakroom. If we can have Democratic speakers in order, Senator HARKIN, Senator LAUTENBERG, then Senator GRAHAM, and Republicans to speak in between, that will certainly be appropriate. We have been going back and forth. Will that be OK?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A unanimous consent request has been provided. Is there objection to the request? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, picking up where I started earlier today, I listened to the President’s State of the Union Message hoping he would come up with a real jobs plan to help America’s families. But quite frankly, there was nothing in the State of the Union Address that talked about that.

We need to extend emergency unemployment for the hundreds of thousands of people who paid in when they were working, but months after losing their jobs, they still can’t find work. We need to raise the minimum wage, which has not been increased in 6 years.

And right now, most important of all, the administration needs to withdraw its proposal that would deny millions of American workers their overtime pay protections.

Five months ago, the Senate voted on my amendment 54 to 45 to block the administration’s effort to take away overtime pay protection for up to 8 million workers. That’s right, the Bush proposal that came out of the Department of Labor would deny overtime pay protection to 8 million American workers.

The House followed soon after us and voted 223 to 201, and the Senate spoke again yesterday in its vote against closure.

Now, again, this should not even be an issue in the Omnibus appropriations bill before us. Congress spoke up clear as a bell. They said: No, the administration should not strip overtime pay protection for these 8 million workers.

As we all know, the administration refused to accept the will of Congress. The administration ordered its foot soldiers in the House to strip the provision from this omnibus bill. Senator SPECTER and I fought to keep it in, but that bill passed. We will now continue to object to the Omnibus bill—Congress spoke up clear as a bell.

This is a clear abuse of power by the administration and is part of a pattern we have seen from this President time and again. The administration seems to believe in government by one branch, the executive branch. Time and again, we see this administration running roughshod over the will of Congress. When there are no checks and balances, the result is bad public policy, and that is exactly what we see today.

The administration’s new rule is a stealth attack on the 40-hour workweek, pushed by the White House without one single public hearing. As I have said time and again over the last several months, it will effectively end overtime pay for dozens of occupations, including police officers, firefighters, clerical workers, air traffic controllers, social workers, journalists, nurses, ... the administration is telling them how to do it.

They are suggesting how employers can avoid paying overtime. First, they lower existing wages so when workers accrue overtime, their net pay will not grow. This reduces their incentive to work them longer hours so that the net effect is the same. So the workers will be working more than 40 hours a week but their pay will be exactly the same. Now, that is what has come from the Department of Labor. That is what they are telling employers to do around that provision in their proposal.

Secondly, they are saying change workers’ duties so they are exempt from the overtime rules. Well, okay. So let’s say someone makes slightly over $22,100 a year. Therefore, they might be eligible for overtime. Just change their designation. Say they are something else. Put them under the category of exempt from overtime, and guess what? They are exempt from overtime.

If an employee is close to the $22,100, what they are saying is, raise their wages to the level required to be exempt. So if someone is making $22,000 a year, or $21,700, just raise their pay to $22,100. If they are over 40 hours a week, and do not pay them any more overtime. That is the way to get around it. This is from the Bush administration. That is what they are telling employers to do. Lastly, do not let them work more than 40 hours a week.

Well, this sweeping proposal is in direct contrast to the intent of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 that established the 40-hour workweek for American workers. It is a slap in the face to the millions of American workers who depend on overtime pay to support their families and make ends meet.

We are not talking about spare change. We are talking about taking away the basic income of American workers. It is essential family income that helps pay the mortgage, feed the children, pay for college, save for a rainy day, save for retirement.

Now, again, one can say do not let them work more than 40 hours a week, family time is premium time. For an American worker to spend time with their children at baseball games, basketball games, football games, or at school meetings, or just to be home with their families late in the evening or on a weekend is premium time. If an employer is going to ask an American worker, a man or a woman, to give up their premium time with their families, they had better pay them premium wages, which is what overtime is.

No. The Bush administration is saying, hey, this family-friendly administration—how many times have we heard that, “family-friendly administration”—is now saying: Forget about it; if an employee wants to work overtime away from their family, we are going to make sure they do not get overtime. Or if they need the overtime to pay for retirement and stuff, we are suggesting they do not work an employee over 40 hours a week.

Again, we already know that American workers are working more than what they have in the past and more than what they have done in other nations. If we look at this chart, we can see that American workers work more hours than workers in other industrialized nations. Here is the United States versus other workers employed person in 2001 is slightly over 1,800. Look at where it is in Denmark, France, Ireland, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Italy, and Germany. American workers are already working lower than any other workers in any other industrialized country.

What the administration is saying is we are going to work employees longer and not pay them any more. It will give employers a disincentive to hire new workers if they can force their current employees to work more hours with no increase in pay. That is exactly what it is. It is anti-worker. It is anti-family. It is anti-economy.

Congress did the right thing in voting to block this new rule. Now that Congress’s vote and voice have been nullified, we are hearing from the Department of Labor that the new rule will go in. I am here to serve notice that just as I offered this amendment last summer, I will offer it again and again on any legislation that comes to the floor of the Senate. We will not give up; we will not let others who have fought this fight with us. The American people will not allow us to drop this issue. They have been watching this issue closely because it hits so close to home.

Lastly, not create one new job. It will give employers a disincentive to hire new workers if they can force their current employees to work more hours with no increase in pay. That is exactly what it is. It is anti-worker. It is anti-family. It is anti-economy.

Congress did the right thing in voting to block this new rule. Now that Congress’s vote and voice have been nullified, we are hearing from the Department of Labor that the new rule will go in. I am here to serve notice that just as I offered this amendment last summer, I will offer it again and again on any legislation that comes to the floor of the Senate. We will not give up; we will not let others who have fought this fight with us. The American people will not allow us to drop this issue. They have been watching this issue closely because it hits so close to home.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I think this is quite a moment in history. It will be long remembered. It will be remembered for several reasons, not the least of which is the excessively optimistic tone that was issued by the President of the United States in his address on the State of the Union last night. Millions of people were watching and, I assume, thinking about the effects his thoughts will have on their lives.

It is presented as the Omnibus appropriations bill, but I think there is a better description than that complicated term that few in the public really understand. I would rather call it the “ominous” bill, and I am going to refer to it that way.

It is astonishing to me that we are here, nearly 4 months into the new fiscal year. Our friends on the other side of the aisle who control the White House, the House of Representatives, and the Senate, have failed to move through the Senate the result of the conference with the House. It is an indictment of failure, an indictment of failure to govern.

The basic problem with this bill is that in an age when we are so conscious of saturated fats, this bill is saturated with special interest provisions that bring harm to the well-being of our constituents. In some cases, the bill even threatens the health of the American people.

For instance, stuck deep in this bill is a provision that blocks the country-of-origin labeling rules for agricultural products, including beef. In the wake of the mad cow scare, it is more critical than ever that Americans get more information about beef and other products they eat, not less information.

The bill also, regrettably, undermines workers' rights. Even though both the Senate and the House—both houses of the legislature—voted in favor of blocking the administration's new rule to deny overtime pay to 8 million Americans, this omnibus report allows the rule to go into effect.

The question is, How did it get there? You know how I used to say that both the Senate and the House voted in favor of blocking the administration's rule to deny overtime to people, deny their just compensation from coming to them. How does this report ban that, those compulsions votes? The President's overtime rule amounts to a 25-percent pay cut, on average, for millions of hard-working Americans, including police, firefighters, emergency workers, nurses, and many others. Many of these people, it amounts on average, according to the Economic Policy Institute, to $161 a week in lost wages—$161 a week. That is $8,000 a year that will be taken away by this rule.

It doesn't say you work less. The amount of time you work may be the same. But you are going to lose part of the compensation that you currently earn if you work those hours. It is a very important addition to the average weekly pay.

Congress voted to stop this unjust rule. But the omnibus allows it to move forward. Is that how democracy works? Congress speaks clearly, unequivocally, on an issue and the White House comes in and tells the conference: Hey, forget it; we don't care what the people in the Senate or the House in a majority vote. You have to do what we tell you to do. And we are going to hold billions of dollars in funding hostage until you agree with us.

That is not democracy; that is extortion.

The overtime rule is not the only provision in the conference report put there because of this extinction. To clarify, there are lots of things in the appropriations bill. Some of them we would like to see put into place. But the administration, in a cute trick, held them out for ransom to pass this omnibus bill.

For instance, if you vote your conscience, you are going to lose your money. Your constituents are going to lose their money. The States and cities across this country are going to lose their money. If you dare to vote your conscience and do what is right, we are going to take away the funding that is justly yours.

There is another gift to corporate special interests in the omnibus, the new media ownership rules. Current media ownership law prevents a single company from owning local TV stations that reach more than 35 percent of the nation's homes. In most totalitarian nations there is usually only one or two broadcast stations that are controlled by the government. In this case, they are held by people who have a particular view of how society ought to get its information.

So in fairness to the constituents, the citizens across the country, we made clear that ownership of those outfits was to be held to a particular percent. In 2002, the FCC proposed raising the limit to 45 percent. Majorities in both the House and the Senate voted to block this FCC rule to weaken media ownership rules—to expand it for the fat cats who presently own it to let them foist their opinion all over America without restraint.

Congress spoke clearly. We said no. Leave those caps where they are. There is a reason and there is a value to them.

But in the conference on this omnibus, the limit was raised from 35 percent to 39 percent—some arbitrary act. By whom? We can't say around here. It is an odd-sounding number. Not coincidentally, that is the number just big enough to accommodate Mr. Rupert Murdoch in his effort to allow his conservative views on his media empire to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

What is the harm in holding that information and giving our law enforcement people a chance to further study it?

Some on the other side may say that "terrorists don't buy guns on the legal market in the United States." But they do. In fact, the Bush administration has indirectly assisted them in the acquisition of guns.

A recent audit of a small sample of gun background check data by the Justice Department reveals that at least 10 percent of the thousands of firearms purchased in the United States last year. How did the Department of Justice find this out? By looking at gun background checks data.

But this ominous would change the law so that records of gun purchases are destroyed within 24 hours of sale. The logic to that escapes me and lots of people. I hope the American people pay attention to that. The Brady law calls for these records to be held up to 6 months. The current practice is to hold the records for at least 3 months so that there can be a second review or a second check.

If someone is on a terrorist watch list, they certainly ought to report it immediately to the FBI or the CIA or whoever it is that is going to follow up on this information if the war on terrorism is as serious as it ought to be. If the Republicans' 24-hour destruction rule were put into place, no audit or investigation of terrorist activity involving weapons purchases would be possible.

The administration is already dragging its feet when it comes to investigating terrorists who purchase firearms. Believe it or not, just 18 days after the 103. If any of the records—if any of those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

That is not democracy; that is extortion.

The overtime rule is not the only provision in the conference report put there because of this extortion. To clarify, there are lots of things in the appropriations bill. Some of them we would like to see put into place. But the administration, in a cute trick, held them out for ransom to pass this omnibus bill.

For instance, if you vote your conscience, you are going to lose your money. Your constituents are going to lose their money. The States and cities across this country are going to lose their money. If you dare to vote your conscience and do what is right, we are going to take away the funding that is justly yours.

There is another gift to corporate special interests in the omnibus, the new media ownership rules. Current media ownership law prevents a single company from owning local TV stations that reach more than 35 percent of the nation's homes. In most totalitarian nations there is usually only one or two broadcast stations that are controlled by the government. In this case, they are held by people who have a particular view of how society ought to get its information.

So in fairness to the constituents, the citizens across the country, we made clear that ownership of those outfits was to be held to a particular percent. In 2002, the FCC proposed raising the limit to 45 percent. Majorities in both the House and the Senate voted to block this FCC rule to weaken media ownership rules—to expand it for the fat cats who presently own it to let them foist their opinion all over America without restraint.

Congress spoke clearly. We said no. Leave those caps where they are. There is a reason and there is a value to them.

But in the conference on this omnibus, the limit was raised from 35 percent to 39 percent—some arbitrary act. By whom? We can't say around here. It is an odd-sounding number. Not coincidentally, that is the number just big enough to accommodate Mr. Rupert Murdoch in his effort to allow his conservative views on his media empire to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.

These problems are only some of the bad provisions contained in the omnibus.

I haven't even mentioned the worst problem in the bill.

This bill contains provisions that would help terrorists. I am heard correctly. I will repeat it. This bill aids terrorists who seek to harm the American people. A dangerous provision was snuck into this bill in the dead of night, put there by the Republican leadership carrying water for the gun lobby, the people associated with Libya and that group that goes to purchase a gun, those records ought to be left open to have more control over local TV news than is appropriate in communities across this Nation.
make America safer? I am sorry that the President last night in his speech didn’t object to having that held over our heads legislatively now.

In their zeal to please the National Rifle Association and other special interest gun groups, the majority is ignoring homeland security and individual security and put our communities in danger. So I ask the majority: Whose side are you on anyway? You really have to wonder when the Republican leadership decides that the safety of the American people is less important than protecting our country from terrorist attacks.

My home State, New Jersey, lost 700 people on 9/11. I would like someone from the other side of the aisle, or someone from the Justice Department, to sit down with those families, many of whom I know, who lost loved ones, and explain to them why we should destroy these records so quickly. Explain to those families why we need to protect the terrorists’ identity when they try to buy a firearm. It is an outrage.

The majority claims that they care deeply about homeland security. I am sure they do. But in practice, when homeland security collides with gun rights, homeland security goes out the window.

I was a member of the Appropriations Committee for 18 years. The committee has always done its work in a bipartisan fashion. It is sad to see that bipartisan spirit corrupt at the snap of Karl Rove’s fingers.

I say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle: Let us take the pollutants out of this ominous bill. We have a responsibility to fund critical government programs without adding misguided or downright dangerous legislative riders.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I will speak on the issue of the education funding in this omnibus bill which is being held up by our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, which is unfortunate.

The issue of education, of course, is one of the priorities of our concerns in Congress. We have made significant strides under the Bush administration in addressing a variety of different areas involving education, and this omnibus continues that progress. It is interesting to note the commitment which we as a Republican Party and the President, under his leadership, have made coming into office.

The commitment to education, specifically, has been dramatic. For example, in the area of No Child Left Behind, which is funding for low-income disadvantaged students, as compared with the prior administration, in the last 3 years we have seen a 32 percent increase in funding, going from $18.4 billion up to $24 billion. In the Title I account, which is 41 percent, going from $8.8 billion to $12.3 billion. In the area of special education, we have seen a 59 percent increase in funding, going from $6.3 billion up to $10.1 billion. In the area of funding for K through 12, totally, we have seen an increase of 36.5 percent, going from $26 billion to $35 billion. In the area of Pell grants, we have seen an increase, going from $8.8 billion to $12 billion, or an increase of 37 percent. That is in the last 3 years of this President.

This bill carries forward those initiatives. The fact this bill is not passed and the Democrats insist on holding it up will represent a very significant cut in the amount of money that would otherwise go into Title I, which is education for underprivileged children, into special education, and into Pell grants.

If we go under a continuing resolution, which is the other option to not pass the omnibus bill, it will mean the title I will end up being cut by over $650 million. Those are dollars that go out to low-income kids, to schools that educate low-income kids, which is critical to bring these children up to speed so they can compete with their peers and have a chance at the American dream.

In addition, in the special education area, if this bill is not passed, it will represent an approximately $1.2 billion cut in special education. Anyone who goes back to their State and spends any time with their local communities knows the cost of special education is one of the most difficult issues which the local education community faces because the Federal Government requires, as rightly it should, that children with special needs be educated and educated at a level competitive with their peers who do not have special needs.

Unfortunately, that is very expensive. Originally, the Federal Government said it would pick up 40 percent of the cost of that education, but it has not been doing that. However, since President Bush came into office, we have dramatically increased our commitment in the area of special education. As a result, we have been able to reduce the burden on the local property owner because more money has been going out from the Federal Government to bear its share of special education, thus relieving the local property tax owner from having to bear not only the local share of special education but also the Federal share of the special education. If this bill is not passed, that is $1.2 billion of additional money which will not occur, which will mean that burden will be thrown right back on to the local property tax payer. That is certainly not something we should do. We have an obligation to try to get to full funding of the Federal share of special education. The President has made that commitment and we are on that path. This bill is part of that effort.

There are other things this bill has. One of the ways we have tried to relieve that burden is to increase the amount of money or to increase the amount of people who participate in the Pell grant program, which is a grant program which helps kids who are in college pay for their college tuition. If this omnibus bill does not pass, the Pell grant program will be penalized with a loss of tens of millions of dollars which would be for college students in order to help defray their cost of education so when they get out of college they can participate aggressively in the workforce and earn the rewards of participating in the workforce, which are much higher. This is a huge burden of debt placed on them by having to pay for their tuition costs and borrow money to do that but, rather, by having a Pell grant, which is not a loan.

This is a critical issue for us as a country. As the tuition rates go up and up, it has become more and more difficult for many people to participate in college education. We as a society cannot compete in the world unless we have a highly educated workforce.

That highly educated workforce is conditioned on people being able to afford college. This bill allows a lot of people to participate in college who will not otherwise be able to.

We can honestly say if this bill is held up, low-income kids who go to title I schools will not receive the support they need, kids who are special-needs children will not be receiving the support they need, and the local taxes of people who will go up as their property tax burden will go up, and many kids who are attending college will be unable to continue their college because they will not be able to obtain the Pell grant. There are real lives at risk if this bill is not passed in its present form.

There are other things this bill has that address education which are equally important and equally, in my opinion, significant. The most significant is the fact this bill includes the District of Columbia’s efforts to pursue other options for their children in the area of education. The Mayor of the District of Columbia, the head of the school board of the District of Columbia, members of the city council of the District of Columbia, spoke to me and asked those in a position to deal with education issues. Will you help us do some more creative things to try to address a very serious problem in our school districts?

The serious problem is this: Washington, DC, spends the second most per child of any school district in the country. The only other school district in the country that spends more per child is New York City. Yet Washington, DC, has the worst performance for its children of any school district in the country; in fact, the worst in many categories. A lot of parents feel their children are trapped in schools that are not working. Mayor Anthony Williams is realizing this and wants to improve the school system but wants to give parents other options. They have in this town a private proposal, a private program for kids whose parents want to send their kids to a private school through a choice program, take them out of the public schools and put them in a private school. There are 7,500 kids waiting to participate in that program.

The Mayor and the head of the school board and members of the city council came to us and said, We would like to try a demonstration program in the area of choice where we will basically set up a fund which allows parents—most of these are single parents, by the way—they are in very low-income situations to take their kids, if they are not performing and they are not getting the support they need in the public schools, to a private school as long as that private school subscribes to the standards as a city public school system set both in the area of accountability and in the area of teaching those children.

It is a creative and courageous idea the Mayor has put forward along with the president of the education board and along with members of the city council—courageous, obviously, because it flies in the face of the professional education community, and especially the unions.

But money is committed to trying to improve the educational level of the kids in Washington. He simply is not willing to accept the idea of generation after generation of children here in Washington being left behind and not being able to participate in the American dream because they cannot get the education they need.

When you have parents who are waiting, enthusiastically, to try to give their children an option, to try to give their children an opportunity, which does not exist today, by moving their child from a public school to a private school, when you have parents who are willing to take that risk with their children, and you have a mayor who is willing to do that, then you have a formula for maybe improving the lives of these children.

The mayor came to us and said: Give us this program. We would also like a program which helps us support more charter schools in the city and helps us do more school improvement in the basic public schools.

So we put together a package where we took $40 million out of other accounts within the Federal Government.

I know because a significant amount of that $40 million came out of my own appropriations bill which has nothing to do with the city of Washington, and we moved that money into the city of Washington account. We divided it into three parts: one that is structured so that the mayor and the board of education and the council can set up three programs: One, to assist in the creation of charter schools; two, to add to the improvement of schools that already exist in the school system; and, three, to have a choice program system. It is a creative and aggressive idea.

But if this bill does not go through, that program will fail. The mayor and the people who are committed to this, and, most importantly, the children who would benefit from this and their parents—and it is heartrending to meet these parents.

They have a lottery right now in this city where the private program—which is funded privately, which is the philanthropic program—every year draws out of a hat a group of names of kids who qualify to take part in the choice program. Literally thousands of parents send in their names, and it is heartrending to sit in that room and wait for their child's name to be drawn. When their child's name is not drawn, it is tragic, and the sense of loss is palpable. And, when their child's name is drawn, the excitement they have of having a shot at the American dream because they will get a decent education is electric.

So the mayor has set up this program, working with the president of the board of education and with members of his council, and they came to us and asked for this money.

Unfortunately, Members on the other side of the aisle have tried, in all sorts of ways, to defeat this program. It is obvious that there are not a whole lot of Republicans serving in the municipal government in the District of Columbia. In fact, I do not think there are any. I don't know. I suspect there are not. I think only 12 percent of the people in the city are registered Republicans. The mayor is Democrat. I know the board of education is democratically controlled. The council is democratically controlled. The whole administration is democratically controlled. It was, ironically, the leadership of the city, a Democratic leadership, that came to a Republican Congress and said: Give us this opportunity. We will take it. We will run with it. We will make these children's lives better and give their parents a chance to give their children something special.

Unfortunately, they were stone-walled, regrettably, by the other side of the aisle, but we were able to put in this bill the language which accomplishes this. If this bill fails, then that program fails, and it will mean that $40 million—which is a huge amount of money—which would flow into the educational efforts here in Washington to try to improve those educational efforts—not by putting more money after money that has not worked in the past but, rather, by putting more money in programs which have a potential of working and which will work, in specific instances, such as charter schools and choice—that money will not go forward. That money will be a benefit, and there will be real lives impacted in a very positive way.

We have seen a lot of crocodile tears from the other side of the aisle about their concern on education, about their concern about children. Where the rubber hits the road is whether this bill passes or not. A lot of children's lives here in Washington will be affected. If it does not pass, they will once again be put in a system which has failed them and failed their peers. And, regrettably, it has failed generations before them. If the bill does pass, there will be an opportunity, created by a creative and aggressive mayor who is willing to take chances.

If this bill passes, there will be relief for many taxpayers in America who are paying the burden of the Federal Government's share of special education. There will be relief on their property tax bills.

If this bill passes, people who are going to college will be able to stay in college, and they will not have to leave college because they can no longer afford to pay for it.

If this bill passes, title I children, children from low-income homes, will have a better shot at not being left behind because the No Child Left Behind bill will be more aggressively funded.

So there are real lives affected by whether or not this bill passes. I hope Congress will see fit, and our colleagues on the other side of the aisle will see fit, to stop this filibuster and pass this bill so these students can get on with their education.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CONYNN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, as fate would have it, the first vote this new session of Congress has before it, as our first measure, is an omnibus appropriations bill for fiscal year 2004.

This first-of-the-year appropriations bill is the product of negotiation among the majority and the minority. We have had Republican leadership in this Chamber and their House counterparts, to meld together a series of appropriations bills.
Iowa, Senator HARKIN, who also has overtime.
now eligible for overtime, ineligible for million American workers, who are effect of this will be to make some 8 overtime pay standards. The practical tion which would modify the current Department of Labor developed a regula-

But that is not the reason I am going to discuss today. It is the fact of what is not in this bill. What is not in this bill is a provision which was adopted on a bipartisan basis by the Senate and by the House of Representatives which would protect the overtime rights of our Nation's workers.

A brief background. In 2003, the Department of Labor developed a regulation which would modify the current overtime pay standards. The practical effect of this will be to make some 8 million American workers—working for employers who are now eligible for overtime, ineligible for overtime.

My colleague and good friend from Iowa, Senator HARKIN, who also has spoken eloquently on this matter today, offered an amendment to protect the overtime our Nation's workers earn from this new Bush administration policy.

Senator HARKIN's amendment passed the Senate by a vote of 54 to 45. That same day, there was then endorsed by the House of Representatives when they instructed their conference, who would be responsible for negotiating any differences between the House and the Senate bills, to accept the Harkin amendment by a bipartisan vote of 221 to 203.

In spite of that history, this provision, which would have rolled back the Department of Labor's denial of overtime to 8 million Americans, was removed from the bill, ostensibly at the insistence of the White House.

I have had a practice, now for almost 30 years, of taking different jobs. My next-to-the-last job was as a coal compactor. That consisted of driving a very big piece of equipment, made by Caterpillar in Peoria, IL, over a large field of West Virginia coal in order to keep it at the necessary compaction so that it would not be subject to self-ignition and fire. There were three other men who worked with me in that job. It took place at the Gainesville regional utility generating plant.

At the lunch break, we avoided talking politics. That is sort of my rule when I am on these workdays. I talk about hunting or fishing or football or whatever but not politics. These three men brought it up at lunch. They said: We heard somewhere that they are talking about messing with our overtime.

I said: Well, how much will this affect you?
They said: It will affect us a lot because we typically work maybe 50, 60 hours a week doing this job, and that overtime is what makes the difference between us sort of getting along and getting along with a little extra money to do the things our families need.

I cite that example to indicate this is not an inside-the-beltway issue. This is an issue which the American people understand and about which they are emotional.

Under the Bush administration's overtime plan, millions of salaried workers who make between $22,101 and $65,000 a year would have 100 are reclassified as being ineligible for overtime. under more lenient standards as executive, administrative, or professional employees and would no longer qualify for overtime. The revenue from this plan would affect approximately 8 million workers in 257 occupations. This is the estimate of the Economic Policy Institute, that that many workers in that many occupations would lose their right to overtime, the change is estimated to affect 411,000 workers.

Allowing the Department of Labor regulation to go into effect, whatever overtime is generated in that plant is going to be assigned to the 20 employees who no longer are eligible to get overtime pay.

I believe this extensive use of overtime is a significant factor in causing a jobless economic recovery. If it is a significant problem today, when the employer is having to pay an additional $10 an hour in overtime, think what it is going to be like for an employer doesn't have to pay the additional $10 an hour in overtime, where the amount of work that the four current employees do would be paid at the same rate as those four plus a fifth working at 40 hours a week?

No. 2 is another example. A plant has 100 employees, all of whom are currently eligible for overtime. Under these new rules, let's say that 20 of those 100 are reclassified as being ineligible for overtime. Under the Harkin amendment, that the number of hours of overtime which are going to be incurred. Today they are distributing that among the 100 overtime-eligible employees. I can tell you with a high level of confidence that the 80 who are no longer eligible for overtime are going to be assigned to the 20 eligible employees. That plan has a huge impact on the output of that plant.

Let me give two illustrations of its extended impact. We are concerned about a jobless recovery. Yes, the stock market is up. Yes, we are seeing a significant increase in our domestic economic output. But in the month of December, do you know how many jobs were created in the month of December, 2002? One thousand. I have not made a mistake. I didn't misstate one thousand. One thousand new jobs were created in the month of December.

While there is no single reason that that is true, I believe one of the reasons is the math I am about to give you. Assume you are an employer. You have four employees. As part of this economic upturn, you have generated enough income and profit that you really need to hire a fifth employee. So you have a choice: Hire a new person or you can ask the other workers to add 10 hours a week to cover the amount of additional demand that has been generated. Assuming these workers earn $20 an hour, that would mean that while they are in their overtime period, they would be earning $30 an hour. So each of the four people would earn 10 hours at an additional $10. So they would earn, as a result of earning the four workers which is $400 a week.

The employer could very well look at those numbers and say: Look, it is less expensive for me to pay these existing employees an additional amount to work overtime than it is to undergo the training cost and the insurance cost, particularly the health insurance cost, of bringing a new person on board.

I believe this extensive use of overtime is a significant factor in causing a jobless economic recovery. If it is a significant problem today, when the employer is having to pay an additional $10 an hour in overtime, think what it is going to be like for an employer doesn't have to pay the additional $10 an hour in overtime, where the amount of work that the four current employees do would be paid at the same rate as those four plus a fifth working at 40 hours a week?

As Senator BYRD discussed with vigor and eloquence a few hours ago, 75 percent of these tax cuts go to 1 percent of the American taxpayers. That is not a program of economic stimulation. Rather, it is a program to compensate the most affluent people in the country by cutting their taxes and letting the crumbs of the other 25 percent of the tax cuts fall down on the rest of us.

If we were serious about economic stimulation through the Tax Code, we would have a different tax cut policy. I have advocated, as an example, that we ought to have a program to make the first $10,000 of earnings free from the payroll tax. That would put approximately $780 in the pocket of every American, the largest share of which would go to where the largest share of Americans are—into the middle class. I can tell you, from common sense, those people will actually spend the $780 because they have kids who need new clothes; they have a car that needs to be replaced; they have a new bedroom they could add to the house because they just had another child.

We didn’t take that approach. We didn’t focus our tax cuts on the Americans who are most likely to use the tax cut to stimulate the economy by increasing demand. Having committed that first error, we are now about to compound it by taking away overtime pay from the same group of Americans who, if they get the overtime, are most likely to spend it, create demand, and create new jobs in our economy. It is just confounding that, at a time when we are concerned about the future of this country and we are concerned about economic stimulation, when we have concerns about the fairness by which we are viewing many of the Government’s actions, we would go an additional mile to cut away the eligibility for overtime pay for 8 million Americans.

This policy is not just bad economics; it is bad for security because many of the people who will be affected by this are people who are our first responders. They are police officers, firefighters, air and traffic controllers, nurses, and others involved in emergency medical care. The people who will potentially see their wages diminished as a result of this one provision in a bill which does not justify passage even on its own merits—a provision which has stripped away the overtime pay for 8 million Americans.

This issue came before my subcommittee, Senator STEVENS, and I chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator YOUNG, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus Appropriations. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation. If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this overtime regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation. If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.

If the alternative is followed, the result will be the same. If you have the Omnibus appropriation bill in its present form, which does not have the prohibition against implementing this regulation, then the regulation goes into effect on March 31. If we pass the Omnibus appropriation bill, then we will have a continuing resolution, and the continuing resolution will leave in effect the current funding for the Department of Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, and all of the other departments that are affected by the Omnibus bill. With a continuing resolution, there will not be any provision to prohibit the implementation of the regulation.
quietly tries to deny millions of workers their basic right to overtime.

If you have to work overtime, you deserve overtime pay. No employer should deny you that right, and no President and no Congress should take it away from you. For our part, we will do our best to defend that right to overtime pay.

In his State of the Union speech last night, the President said his jobs and growth agenda would include “relief from needless Federal regulation.” Apparently, he believes protecting employees’ overtime pay is a needless regulation.

Millions of employees across America disagree with that. This proposal makes clear that the Bush administration is working overtime for the corporations and against the workers of America. We are fighting a war in Iraq, and this President and this administration is also waging a war on workers here at home.

Thirteen million children are going hungry. Eight million American adults are unemployed with no jobs in sight; 7 million workers have been waiting since 1997 for the raise they deserve in the minimum wage; 90,000 workers a week are losing their unemployment benefits. They can’t find jobs in the Bush economy, and the President is going to make their unemployment benefits go away at the stroke of a pen. And more than 8 million workers will lose their overtime pay because President Bush says they don’t deserve it.

Majorities in both the Senate and the House agreed that the Bush administration was wrong to deny overtime protections to workers, and by a vote in the Senate and a vote in the House of Representatives, we said to the President: You are wrong. But here it is. They took it out of this bill behind closed doors at the last minute, and now they expect Congress to accept that because the vote is on this larger bill.

We could change this bill in a minute and send it on to the President, and that is what we ought to do. We know for whom we are fighting on this issue, and we know why we are fighting—for their right to keep the overtime pay they deserve.

We are fighting for the nurse who burns the midnight oil day in and day out caring for the sick and the elderly. We are fighting for the firefighters, the law enforcement officers, the first responders of homeland security—the men and women standing watch and working night and day to protect our safety. They are our generation of Paul Revere prepared to act when danger comes. They deserve fair pay for all they do.

We are fighting for our veterans and for our men and women serving so bravely now in Iraq and across the world who return to civilian life only to find that the training they learned in the military will now be used to deny them their right to overtime pay. I want to point out what this proposed regulation under professional employees is all about and what it states. I will include the whole provision but included in the provision—listen to this, Mr. President—is:

The word “customary” means that exemption is also available to the employees in such professions—these will be the trades, the crafts, and the professions in the overtime rule and, therefore, ineligible for overtime—it says:

The exemption is also available to employees in such professions who have substantially the same knowledge level as the degreed employees—

Those are generally the 4-year degree employees to whom they are referring, but who attained such knowledge through a combination of work experience, training in the Armed Forces—

Training in the Armed Forces. This is the first time they have included that you can be ineligible for overtime pay if you have been trained in the Armed Forces.

I say to my colleagues, what are the kinds of training they get in the Armed Forces? The Army, for example, offers new recruits a choice of over 200 occupations, each of which includes training and a listing of the civilian occupations for which training could help them find a job. This proposal would punish the veterans with loss of overtime protection precisely because they have received the exact same training that is used as a recruitment incentive.

The military trains service members for hundreds of occupations, including lab technicians and other health care occupations, information technology, engineers, drafters, designers, air traffic controllers, communications specialists, law enforcement, firefighters, security personnel, journalists, and the list goes on.

If you go into the Armed Forces, you serve in Iraq, you come back, you have received training programs. Under these regulations, you are ineligible for overtime.

That is unconscionable. Why did they put in the service members’ training programs for the first time? This is put in for the first time in changes to the rules. This is the first time in the history of overtime, going back to the Fair Labor Standards Act, that they have included this training.

I am absolutely amazed, at a time when we are asking our service men and women to do so much and while they are in Iraq and elsewhere, we are passing a regulation in this omnibus bill that is going to say when they come back that if they have been trained in any of these areas, they will be considered, under these regulations, a professional and be ineligible for overtime when they have been risking their lives for the American people. Does that make sense? Permit us to have an up-or-down vote on that, Mr. Republican Leadership? Permit the Senate to vote on that and see what the sentiment is? Oh, no. Just stick it to the American people; shut the doors; put it in there with everything else and let it become law without giving Congress a say.

I do not know what that will mean in the future if that happens because we know that the incentives—one of the reasons that many young people go into the Armed Forces is because of the various training and educational benefits. Effectively, it says, the Bush plan would do away with the standard requirement and allow equivalent training in the Armed Forces to substitute for the 4-year degree and therefore make these veterans ineligible. These training programs are a permanent incentive for attracting people into the Armed Forces.

Do my colleagues understand that? It says here—I am reading right from it—training in the Armed Forces, and it goes on: Comma, or other intellectual instructions, training in the Armed Forces.

So that is what would happen to thousands of those men and women who are eligible to serve bravely now in Iraq and across the world. They come on back. This proposal goes into effect. Their employer is going to look down and say, oh, Jim, by the way, you were in a training program before you went over to Iraq and you were eligible, and it says in these rules here I do not have to pay you overtime because that is right in these rules.

So we are fighting for our veterans and fighting for our men and women serving bravely now in Iraq and across the world, who return to civilian life only to find that the training they earned in the military will now be used to deny them their right to overtime pay.

Most cynical of all, the Bush administration claims that its plan would actually entitle low-income workers to qualify for overtime. The Department of Labor has distributed guidelines to employers on the assumption that they can take to avoid the need to pay that overtime. Just calculate the pay an employee now gets with overtime included and then cut the employee’s basic pay enough to reduce the total to what it was before.

Is there anybody who doubts what is going on? This is basically a sop to companies and corporations around the country in order to squeeze employees even further. There are more than eight million out of work. Last quarter we found employment increased by only 1,000. They expected close to 300,000. It increased by only 1,000. There are so many workers who are eligible for unemployment even though they have paid in for it, 90,000 at the end of this week which will be the end of all of their unemployment compensation. Did we hear anything about that last evening? I did not.

So is that cynical or what? How red-handed do we have to catch this administration before the American people understand what is being done to them? Always it is the Bush administration putting corporate profits over the well-being of American workers. The Department of Labor’s mission is to promote the welfare of the job seekers, wage earners, and retirees of the United States, and that is what it says on the Department's Web site. It does not say promote the bottom line for businesses.

The last thing American workers need in today's troubled economy is a pay cut like this. Staff Sergeant John Miller, who performs homeland security and other public safety duties in the District of Columbia National Guard, is concerned that he and many in his department will lose their overtime pay because of the Bush plan. He recently testified that eliminating overtime pay will have a devastating impact on his department's ability to perform vital public safety responsibilities. Without his overtime pay, he said his family could no longer afford their current mortgage or save for college for their two teenage children.

Thousands of veterans will lose their overtime pay as well. Under current law, workers can be denied overtime protection if they are in the category of the armed forces. In general, it is only workers with a 4-year degree in a professional field who will be classified as professional. The Bush plan will abolish this standard and allow equivalent training in the Armed Forces to substitute for a 4-year degree. How is that for a slap in the face to our courageous men and women fighting in Iraq?

Cutbacks in overtime pay are a nightmare that no worker should have to bear. Nationwide overtime pay makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration's policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.

It is wrong for the administration to try to force the unfair pay cut on them. More than 2 million jobs have been lost since President Bush took office. Unemployment is a massive problem, and hard times such as these. Overtime pay is exactly the incentive needed for job creation, because it encourages employers to hire more workers, instead of requiring current employees to work longer hours. We need a job creation policy, but all the Bush administration proposes is a job destruction policy.

The overtime pay requirement and the Fair Labor Standards Act has been a fundamental right of American workers for more than half a century. That basic law was enacted in 1938 to create the 40-hour work week. It makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration’s policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.

The overtime pay requirement and the Fair Labor Standards Act has been a fundamental right of American workers for more than half a century. That basic law was enacted in 1938 to create the 40-hour work week. It makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration’s policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.

The overtime pay requirement and the Fair Labor Standards Act has been a fundamental right of American workers for more than half a century. That basic law was enacted in 1938 to create the 40-hour work week. It makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration’s policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.

The overtime pay requirement and the Fair Labor Standards Act has been a fundamental right of American workers for more than half a century. That basic law was enacted in 1938 to create the 40-hour work week. It makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration’s policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.

The overtime pay requirement and the Fair Labor Standards Act has been a fundamental right of American workers for more than half a century. That basic law was enacted in 1938 to create the 40-hour work week. It makes up a quarter of a worker's total pay. The administration’s policy will mean an average pay cut of $160 a week for every worker. That is an outrage.

Hard-working Americans deserve a pay raise, not a pay cut.
These are real people with real needs—families, mortgages to pay, food to put on the table. If we are going to have an expanding economy, it should not be done at the expense of one sector of our economy. It should be a tide that raises all the boats. There is no question that Wall Street is doing well. There is no question that a number of our companies are having extraordinary profits.

But we have these two issues, one denying the 8 million Americans the overtime, including veterans. And now we have a bill to permit the extension of the unemployment compensation for those who have paid into the program and who are in dire need.

I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 2006, a bill to extend unemployment benefits for 6 months, which I introduced yesterday; that the bill be read a third time, passed, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and any statements appear in the RECORD as a matter of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. NICKLES. Reserving the right to object, I need to find out what the request is. Unfortunately, I tell my friend, the colleague from Massachusetts, the Senate has been in for a day, but I have not read his bill. I understand he introduced it yesterday. He wants to pass it today. Senator KENNEDY is a very effective legislator, but I personally have not had a chance to read the bill.

Will the Senator tell me what the essence of his bill is? Is it a program to double unemployment compensation extension to 26 weeks? Or extend the present program to 13 weeks?

Mr. KENNEDY. I say to the Senator, it is essentially the same plan we passed before. The bill will reestablish the insurance program for 6 months, ensure that higher unemployment States continue to be covered—13 weeks; 13 weeks. It is the narrower program.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate the clarification.

Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, two or three comments. Senator KENNEDY is my friend. We debated this issue a couple of times. In the past many months, I guess for the last year and a half, there has been an effort to turn a 13-week program into a 26-week program. I have objected to that very strongly and will continue to object to it very strongly.

As I understand Senator KENNEDY's explanation, this is an extension of the existing Federal unemployment compensation program which is scheduled to expire by the end of March of this year. But I would like to point out a couple of reasons why I object.

I work with my friend and colleague from Massachusetts to maybe learn in greater detail of his proposal, but just a couple of editorial comments. No. 1, the unemployment rate is coming down. It is at 5.7 percent. In 1993, at the conclusion of a significant downturn and recession in the economy, the Democrats were in control of the Senate and they had a Temporary Federal Unemployment Compensation Program. The unemployment rates at that time were between 6.6 and 7.7 percent. In other words, they discontinued the program when the unemployment rate was at 6.6. The unemployment rate today is 5.7.

I might mention the title of this program has been Temporary Federal Unemployment Compensation. It was temporary. I note today there are 26 States, over half of States have unemployment rates of less than 5 percent.

To have a national program for every State, which is very expensive, I am not sure is timely.

That is the reason we should have a chance to review this. Without having the chart in front of me, I am not sure is timely. The cost of it is, from what I have gathered and learned over the years, I object.

We have already spent, for the information of my colleagues, over the last 36 months I think something like $30 billion. It is not an inexpensive program.

I might note that in the 1990s Congress spent $28.5 billion. That was over 30 months when the unemployment rate was much higher—6.6 to 7.7 percent.

I might also, for the information of my colleagues, note that many States have not spent the $8 billion of Federal funding that we transferred in March of 2002 for unemployment compensation. We transferred $8 billion. According to the Labor Department, there is still $5 billion remaining unspent by the States.

Those are reasons I objected to my friend's unanimous consent request. I appreciate the Senator's argument. In the forefront of the Senate, it may not be the last we have heard of this. But this is a temporary program. I think some people would like for it to be a permanent program. This Senator does not want it to be a permanent program.

For those reasons, I objected to the request. I will be happy to work with my colleague, the Senator from Massachusetts, to see if we can't do something positive to help create an environment which is more conducive to the economy which is more conducive to the economy.

I yield the floor.
We can’t get the chance to vote on these matters. There is objection. How long did we hear last fall about, we ought to be able to vote on Medicare? Let the people vote up and down. But no, we can’t with regard to the unemployment compensation. We can’t get a vote on increasing the minimum wage. They have refused to permit this institution to have a vote again on the overtime limitations for 8 million people because there is objection. I think that is wrong.

We look forward to another opportunity to come back and address these issues in a way where hopefully we will be able to get a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

MR. NICKLES. Mr. President, it is a pleasure to see my friend from Massachusetts again. He is feeling good. He is energetic, as he always is. He is a very effective legislator and champions the cause with great enthusiasm. I appreciate that.

I will make a couple of editorial comments. I love the chart. He said if we went at last month’s pace of 1,000 jobs being created, it would take 200 years. That was 1,000 jobs last month. Over the last 5 months, 280,000 jobs were created, according to the Department of Labor. He forgot to mention that. But for December, I think he is correct as reported by the Department of Labor.

It is kind of interesting. He also said we have to have a vote on increasing the minimum wage but those Republicans haven’t allowed us to do it. He said they haven’t allowed us to do it for the last several years.

I remember a period with not necessarily the greatest fondest of memories. But for almost 2 years, the Democrats were in control. Senator Daschle was the majority leader, I believe from about June of 2000 or maybe 2001 until the end of 2002. He was the majority leader of the Senate, Senator Kennedy was the chairman of the committee, and that could have been brought to the floor at any point during that time. The majority leader controlled the floor and the agenda of the Senate. It could have been offered as an amendment by any Member of the Senate, and it wasn’t. I just make note of that fact.

It is interesting that it wasn’t raised during that timeframe when this body was controlled by my friends on the Democratic side of the aisle. I want to just make note of that.

I don’t doubt that we will have the pleasure of debating that issue. I look forward to that debate when that happens. I don’t know that we want to make law for anyone in the United States for less than $6 an hour. Some people say if they didn’t make $6 an hour, they would be unemployed. I don’t share that philosophy. But I guess we will have a chance to debate that when it is fine. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. President, very briefly, we will have an opportunity to debate this further. We were denied an up-and-down vote on the minimum wage just last year when the Republican leadership pulled the State Department bill from the floor rather than let us try them on the minimum wage amendment.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

However, the word “customarily” means that the exemption is available to employees in such professions who have substantially the same knowledge level as the degree-employees, but who attained such knowledge through a combination of work experience, training in the armed forces, attending a technical school, attending a community college or other intellectual instructional institutions.

Ms. Mikulski. Mr. President, I voted to continue debate on the Omnibus because I believe we need to explore alternatives. Let me be clear: I am proud of the work we did on the VA-HUD subcommittee to help our veterans, protect our environment, rebuild our communities, but I believe we need to pause.

We need to take a break and problem solve. There should be an alternative between passing an Omnibus that contains terrible provisions and a one year continuing resolution that would underfund so many of our priorities.

There was a compromise and go back to the original seven appropriations bills, negotiated on a bipartisan basis, before provisions were added in the dead of night, outside the usual and customary conference procedures.

The Omnibus includes critical funding for our Nation’s veterans. Working on a bipartisan basis, Senator Krr Bond and I increased funding for VA health care by $1.5 billion over the President’s request. We said no to the administration’s proposal to charge our veterans a $250 membership fee for their healthcare. We said no to higher deductibles and copayments. With record numbers of veterans seeking medical care through VA, with soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan, we have a duty and responsibility to care for them. Promises made must be promises kept. The Omnibus funding bill allows us to keep our promise.

The Omnibus also includes increased funding for AmeriCorps—$444 million—an increase of $170 million over last year’s highest funding level ever.

With this funding, more volunteers will serve our communities teaching in our schools, tutoring and mentoring our children, rebuilding neighborhoods, restoring parks, all while earning money to help pay for college, and learning the habits of the heart that make a difference for America.

The Omnibus also provides $500 million for the Clean Water revolving loan fund, and another $6 million to improve water and sewer infrastructure that directly helps clean up the Chesapeake Bay.

Let me tell my colleagues what this means in my State of Maryland. The Chesapeake Bay is part of our heritage. It also source of jobs from the watermen to the restaurant owner. Yet the President’s cuts for this critical infrastructure program. That’s why I fought to provide $3.15 billion for water and sewer construction.

This funding means a cleaner Chesapeake Bay and new jobs right away—high-paying construction jobs that will put people back to work clean our environment and prevent cost shifting to our local communities.

We have a chronic shortage of nurses in America. This bill contains a $30 million increase for the Nurse Investment Act—legislation I wrote that provides scholarships to nursing students in exchange for 2-years of service in areas that need nurses most.

The Omnibus increases funding for special education by $247 million. This is an important step toward the Federal Government fulfilling its obligations. When IDEA first became law, the federal government promised to pay 40 percent of the cost. Federal funding has never topped 17 percent that means local districts must make up the difference by skimping on special ed, by cutting from other education programs, or by raising taxes. I do not want to force States and local school districts to forage for funds, cut back on teacher training, or delay school repairs.

We need to make up the difference and help relieve a crushing financial burden on local school districts.

I fought hard to improve this bill to meet the day to day needs of Marylanders and the long range needs of our Nation.

So why do I want to pause—before we pass it?

Because we can do better. I want time to discuss and explore alternatives to provisions that were added in the dead of night and that cause real problems.

I believe the best social program is a job. You should be paid if you work. You should be paid overtime if you work overtime.

Yet the Omnibus allows the administration to gut overtime protections for 8 million American workers. The Bush proposal means workers will have to work long hours for less money.

It hurts nurses, police officers, firefighters who are already stretched to the limit. This provision hurts working families struggling to make ends meet.

The Senate voted to block this provision. The House supported our efforts.

But then, in the dead of night, the administration strong-armed conferees to strip our protections out of the bill.

The administration should not be able to overturn the will of Congress without debate and without a vote.

The administration did the same thing to federal employees—twisting arms and going outside the usual and customary process to push an anti-worker agenda.

The White House has a plan to contract out as many federal jobs as possible. It is a political agenda, masquerading as management reform. The Administration’s plan for privatization costs money, costs morale, and costs the integrity of the civil service.

They have changed the rules to favor their contractor cronies, and now they have violated the democratic process. They know they do not have support in Congress or from the American public for their privatization agenda.

So they are using bully boy tactics and back room politics to bypass Congress and over-turn a bipartisan compromise.

Let me tell my colleagues, what happened. During an appropriations conference, the House and Senate agreed to a bipartisan compromise that fixed some, but not all, of the work that contractors have to save money.

This is disgraceful. The contracting out provisions in the Omnibus roll back workers’ rights—the right to appeal a contracting out decision, the right to competitively bid on their own jobs. It even rolls back the requirement that contractors have to save money.

That is not what we agreed to in a bipartisan, bicameral compromise. We had an agreement that these three things were important. But OMB did not like it, because it would have given workers a fair shot.

Our country faces a new threat—the threat that mad cow disease will contaminate our food supply.

But, instead of taking this seriously, and doing everything possible to keep our food supply safe, the administration pushed to delay the country-of-origin labeling for meat products, over-riding the will of the Senate.

Labeling of meat and meat products was supposed to go into effect this year, based on provisions in the 2002 Farm Bill. With this labeling, consumers could make an informed decision about what they purchased and what foods they chose.

Even with the first case of mad cow in the United States, administration will not back down from protecting its special interests friends. They made sure the Omnibus kept language delaying the implementation of labeling for 2 years.

The Omnibus also rolls back existing gun laws and ties the hands of law enforcement. The Brady law requires that gun records be held for 90 days, yet this bill allows Government to destroy records after only 24 hours.

These records are kept for a reason—to help law enforcement track down gun smugglers, and to take away guns in a crime, and to keep law breakers from using his own guns.

The rollback provision also blocks the public from seeing critical information, even if they were the victim of a gun crime. If these rollback were in place last year, families of the DC sniper victims would not be allowed to know where the sniper got his gun and the questionable practices of the gun shop. Without this information, they would effectively be denied their day in court.

These provisions were not raised in the Senate. They should not be forced through in an omnibus.

I voted against cloture so the Senate has more time to discuss these important issues and explore the alternatives.

The American people deserve our best effort, not an omnibus rushed through in a single day.

There are serious problems with this bill—problems largely created by an administration that runs rough-shod over the democratic process and the will of Congress.

I am volcanic about how the final version of this bill was written.

As a member of the Appropriation Committee, I know first-hand the hard work and honest effort at bipartisanship went into the 7 appropriations bills.

All that went out the window once the administration forced itself into the room.

The underlying bill is a good bill that does a lot of good things.

We need to find a way to get back to those things and move forward for the good of America.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. President, more than 70 years ago, Nebraska Senator George Norris left Congress, returned to Nebraska, and led the effort to establish a unicameral legislature. He did this in large part because of his frustration with conference committees. These committees are supposed to reconcile differences between House and Senate bills, but all too often the bills that come out of these committees with new, controversial provisions.

Based on what I have witnessed, I have a renewed understanding of Norris’s frustration with the conference committee process.

As we all know, it is in the conference committee that the final draft of legislation is often completed. Once the conference report is finished, a member may only vote to accept or reject; no amendments are allowed.

For this reason, the conference committee is an attractive opportunity to include provisions that would not pass muster if they were considered openly on the floors of the House and Senate.

As Senator Norris wrote: Members of conference committees are often compelled to surrender on important items where no surrender would be even demanded if consideration of the legislation were left in the open. The individual legislator must then vote upon a conference report without any opportunity of expressing his opinion or add anything to the bill in the form contains.

This is as true today as it was so many decades ago.

Too often, a conference report comes back to us with initiatives never discussed in this body, or worse, with provisions that were rejected outright months, weeks, or even days before. In a conference report, popular or necessary programs can be tied to unpopular or impractical ones, subverting the process by which we should consider legislation.

The legislative process is frustrated further when the legislation in question is labeled a “must-pass” appropriations bill. With programs awaiting resources sometimes months after the end of the fiscal year, there is an understandable desire not to drag out the process once the omnibus bill is finally completed. When a “must pass” appropriations bills leaves conference, the normal conference habit of including more controversial measures increases exponentially—as does the pressure to pass the bill without delay.

This is not how Congress should do business. Measures should be considered openly and honestly. They should not be tucked in during closed door meetings of committee conferees.

This year’s Omnibus bill contains several controversial proposals, and while this is by no means the first time this has occurred, it is past time for it to end.

Included among those is a provision that would delay funding of COOL for 2 years. This could effectively end the program before it has begun. This program is an important element in our efforts to re-establish consumer confidence in foreign markets. Nebraska’s beef exports to Asian markets amounted to more than $360 million in revenue for our State in 2003. Without these and other markets, Nebraska could lose up to 21,000 jobs according to a Creighton University expert, severely hurting our efforts to turn the corner on the recent economic downturn. This may be the most important economic issue facing rural Nebraska.

We need to properly in considering the impact of defunding COOL.

For this reason, I will vote to continue debate on the Omnibus bill. I do so in the hopes that this package can be re-examined and that the policy initiatives in it will be discussed as legislation, not appropriations.

This bill contains many promising Nebraska projects, some of which I worked with my colleagues and other Nebraskans to include. These projects and other spending initiatives are important to our State and to me. But I do not think that their importance should allow them to be held hostage by a process that promotes the backroom inclusion of new, controversial, onerous and unpopular initiatives. It is my hope that with full debate on the bill, these last minute policy initiatives will be considered and openly discussed.

It is past time for Congress to end the process of using conference reports and appropriations bills to enact unpopular or controversial policies. Continuing debate on the controversial provisions of this bill is the first step in doing so.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Collins). Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—CONFERENCE REPORT TO ACCOMPANY H.R. 2673

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that at 6 p.m. this evening, the pending conference report be temporarily set aside; further, that there be 5 1/2 hours equally divided for debate; and finally, that following the use or yielding back of that debate time, the motion to proceed and the motion to reconsider the failed cloture vote be agreed to; and further, that the Senate then proceed to a vote on invoking cloture on the pending conference report with no intervening action or debate; and finally, I ask unanimous consent that if cloture is invoked, the Senate then immediately proceed to a vote on the adoption of the conference report to accompany H.R. 2673, with no further intervening action or debate.

Mr. REID. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PREVENT ALL CIGARETTE TRAFFICKING (PACT) ACT OF 2003

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I am pleased to inform my colleagues that we have reached an agreement on final language for S. 1177, the Prevent All Cigarette Trafficking, PACT Act of 2003, which my friend Senator KOHL and I introduced on June 3, 2003. The manager’s amendment makes the PACT Act even stronger than as introduced.

The distinguished Senator from Wisconsin and I originally introduced the PACT Act because of our concern that contraband cigarette trafficking both damages the economies of several States and contributes heavily to the profits of organized crime syndicates, including terrorist organizations. When we reported this bill from the Judiciary Committee on July 31, 2003, I pledged to work with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to address any and all concerns they had with the legislation. The result of this bipartisan effort is a piece of legislation that will prevent cigarette and smokeless tobacco smuggling and ensure the collection of tobacco excise taxes without infringing upon the rights of Native Americans or consumers.

Internet sales of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco are an impediment States face in their collection of tobacco excise taxes. A recent General Accounting Office report indicates that Internet tobacco sellers rarely comply with requirements under the Jenkins Act of 1949 (15 U.S.C. §§ 375–378 (2003)). The Jenkins Act, as modified by this legislation, is a Federal statute that requires Internet tobacco sellers to register with the tax authority for each State in which they sell cigarette and smokeless tobacco products and to file monthly reports providing shipment information within each state. Failing to comply with the Jenkins Act damages not only individual States, but also retailers that are put in unfair commercial disadvantage.

By ensuring the collection of state excise taxes from all tobacco retailers, the PACT Act addresses the inconvenience nor hinder smokers and smokeless tobacco users in their ability as consumers to purchase the tobacco products of their choice over the Internet. This legislation merely removes any uncertainty regarding the scope of the Jenkins Act by explicitly mandating Internet tobacco retailers also comply with existing requirements under the Jenkins Act. This strong vehicle with which to collect taxes from Internet tobacco retailers will allow States to finally claim their rightful revenue and level the playing field for all tobacco retailers.

The PACT Act as modified by the manager’s amendment also clarifies that the bill will not affect existing tribal compacts relating to tobacco tax collection on tribal lands and allows Native American Tribes to maintain enforcement authority over their own excise tax laws.

As I mentioned in June, law enforcement authorities have uncovered several instances in which organized crime syndicates are illegally funding terrorist organizations, such as Lebanon-based Hezbollah, through the smuggling of cigarettes. These groups purchase cigarettes in States with low taxes and then transport them into States with higher taxes where the contraband is sold to small retailers at below market cost. On November 19, 2003, edition of the Detroit Free Press reports that one such scheme involved a 12-member syndicate, which purchased cigarettes in North Carolina and resold them in Michigan. Because North Carolina collects a 50-cent-per-casheen tax, and Michigan collects a $12.50 per carton tax, federal prosecutors estimated that one member of the scheme, Hassan Moussa Makki, who monthly smuggled $36,000 to $72,000 worth of cigarettes into the State during a 2-year-period, prevented Michigan from collecting $2 million in tax revenue. Law enforcement authorities determined Makki donated a substantial portion of these profits to Hezbollah. By providing state attorney general with the enforcement tools and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives with investigative and inspection authority, the PACT Act will ultimately disrupt this form of terrorist funding and ensure that state, local and tribal governments receive their rightful excise taxes from both cigarette and smokeless tobacco sales.

With respect to delivery sales of smokeless tobacco, this provision is intended to impose strict federal limitations on delivery sales in order to supplement, and not preempt, applicable State or local law. Accordingly, it is intended that State-specific requirements in connection with the collection and remittance of applicable smokeless tobacco excise taxes will remain controlling, notwithstanding that advance payment of excise taxes might otherwise be required by Federal law in the absence of contrary State law.

For example, the law of the delivery State and locality may explicitly or implicitly provide for the payment of smokeless tobacco excise taxes along with the filing of a tax return in the month subsequent to the delivery sale. Under such circumstances, even though applicable State or local law may not require the applicable smokeless tobacco excise taxes be remitted after the delivery, where the law of the delivery State and locality allows for such taxes to be remitted after the delivery, the intent of this provision is that the delivery sale be made without violating federal law provided that applicable State and local law with respect to the collection and/or