STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. Clinton:

S. 2827. A bill to amend the Federal Rules of Evidence to create an explicit privilege to preserve medical privacy, to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. Clinton. Mr. President, today, I rise to introduce the Patients’ Privacy Protection Act, legislation that will close a loophole in the Federal Rules of Evidence and ensure that every American’s medical records remain private to the Committee on the Judiciary.

I began exploring this issue when I learned that Attorney General John Ashcroft had subpoenaed the confidential medical records from thousands of women around the country to defend the first ever federal abortion ban in Federal court. The fact that the women in question were not a party to the lawsuits did not deter him.

Such a deliberate intrusion into people’s medical privacy record is deeply disturbing. Americans deserve full confidence that the government is not looking into their medical records. Without such assurance, how will Americans trust their doctors? What procedures, discussions, and diagnoses will they avoid for fear that their records could shame them or adversely impact their future if unearthed? At issue in this bill is what a reasonable person should expect when they walk into a doctor’s office. That person expects that what they say to her doctor stays with her doctor. Only because of that confidence are people able to be honest. And only through that honesty are people able to obtain the healthcare they need.

The right to privacy is the cornerstone of medical records. It is an issue that, in rhetoric at least, has broad support on both sides of the partisan divide. In fact, it was President Bush himself who, as recently as 2001 during a statement on the Medical Privacy Rule said, “I believe that we must protect both vital health care services and the right of every American to have confidence that his or her personal medical records will remain private.”

Even Attorney General Ashcroft has made strong statements in support of the privacy of medical records. Back in 1998, in a press release put out by his Senate office in which he is referred to as a “consistent champion of privacy rights,” then-Senator Ashcroft says “We should guarantee that the federal government does not undermine an individual’s fundamental right to privacy . . . Without privacy protections in place, people may be discouraged from seeking help or taking advantage of the access to health care.”

I agree. But unlike Attorney General Ashcroft, I believe preserving patient privacy entails more than issuing a press release. Patient privacy doesn’t end when it conflicts with a political agenda, no matter how deeply felt that conviction.

Throughout this Administration we have seen Attorney General Ashcroft disregard civil liberties in the name of preventing terrorism. But through this action, we see him disregarding civil rights in the name of outlawing abortion. This is a very slippery slope that, if entrenched, could affect not just women seeking reproductive healthcare, but all Americans. Over the past few months, the Department of Justice has asserted that federal law does not recognize the doctor-patient privilege and that the government no longer has a reasonable expectation of medical privacy. These are alarming statements.

Thankfully, Attorney General Ashcroft is not being allowed to run roughshod over our right to privacy and medical confidentiality. On March 5, 2004, a San Francisco court ruled that the Department of Justice has no right to view the records in question in the Planned Parenthood Federation of America lawsuit against the abortion ban. The decision issued by Judge Phyllis Hamilton soundly affirmed women’s right to privacy. She said, “There is no question that the patient is entitled to privacy and protection . . . Women are entitled to not have the government looking at their records.”

Nevertheless, we cannot take a chance that once again, when it suits the political or ideological interests of the Administration, intrusions to come, the federal government will intrude upon the most personal of information. That is why I stand before you today.

The Patient Privacy Protection Act of 2004 is very simple. It states that a patient’s medical records and any communication about their medical history are confidential unless a judge determines that the public interest in those records being disclosed sig- nificantly outweighs the patient’s privilege. In the cases where a judge orders the records to be disclosed, the court shall, to the extent practicable, eliminate any and all personally identifiable information.

I am pleased to be introducing this simple, straightforward, common-sense piece of legislation. I do not believe there is a Member of either Chamber of Congress who in good faith could oppose this measure, and I look forward to working with my colleagues, Representative Nadler and others to see it enacted into law expediently.
