DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2006—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the conference report to accompany H.R. 2863.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2863) making appropriations for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2006, and for other purposes, having met, have agreed that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, and the Senate agree to the same, signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of both Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of December 18, 2005.)

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?
There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

MS LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I would like to speak for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MS LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I know how anxious to vote on this underlying bill on defense. I just wish to say that there is $29 billion for coastal restoration, hurricane protection, housing, and business help for the gulf coast. I know it has been a tough, long fight in this bill. There is $29 billion because of the hard work by each side of the aisle. We are very grateful for the help on this bill.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise to express my surprise and deep-seated opposition to a count-solemn Notice Readiness and Emergency Preparedness Act, which is included in the De-defense Department Appropriations bill.

This provision would give the Seccretary of Health and Human Services authority to provide almost total im-unity from liability to the makers of almost any drug, and to those who ad-mint it.

While the measure’s proponents portray it as a simple tool to make sure we have sufficient vaccine available in the case of an avian flu pandemic, the actual language of the provision is far broader than that, and it therefore poses a danger to all Americans.

The provision permits immunity for the makers of virtually any drug or medical treatment. All the secretary need do is declare that it is a “countermeasure” used to fight an epidemic. One solitary person gets to decide what is a countermeasure and what is an epidemic. There is nothing to prevent the declaration of immunity for, say, TYLENOL. There is nothing to prevent a declaration that, say, arthritis is an epidemic.

What’s more, this is no typical grant of immunity. No, the breadth of this provision is staggering. A drug maker can be grossly negligent in making or distributing a drug, and still escape liability. It can even make that drug with wanton recklessness and escape scot-free after harming thousands of people.

In fact, under this provision, the only way a victim could still recover com-ensation for damages caused by a dangerous drug or vaccine would be to pro-ove “willful misconduct,” and then only by “clear and convincing evidence.” What this means is that, for a victim to be able to be compensated by the company that harmed him, he must prove that they committed a crime. And even if he can do that, the company can still avoid liability simply by notifying the authorities within 7 days that someone was harmed by their product. In other words, as long as one of the makers ‘came clean’ to you-bad behavior, you can get away with it!

Is this the sort of justice system that Americans desire?

The answer to this question seems clear from the way this provision was inserted in the larger bill. No hearings were held on this language; no Committee vote was taken; no bill passed the House or the Senate. Not even the Senate and House conferees had a chance to consider this provision.

Indeed, I’m told it was inserted in the dead of night, after conferees had already signed the conference report!

Perhaps the folks who secretly inserted this at the dead of night knew that it was overly broad, as I’ve discussed; perhaps they knew that it was constitutionally suspect, as has been noted by at least one prominent law professor; or perhaps they just knew that, if this provision ever saw the light of day, the American people would not stand for such secrecy and injustice.

This should not be how we conduct the business of the American people, and we will all suffer if this provision is permitted to go forward.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate is now on its way to passing the De-defense appropriations bill, which will provide essential funds to our troops.
The U.S. Armed Forces are comprised of some of our bravest, our best, our women and men who protect our country to offer. Each of these brave individuals has made the commitment to serve our country, during times of war or peace, and each is deserving of the support of a grateful nation.

I particularly wish to salute the fine members of the West Virginia National Guard who have time and again demostrated their commitment to serving our state and our nation. These citizen-soldiers have served in all corners of the world while balancing their obligations to their families, to their employers, and to their communities. The Defense appropriations bill is important to our National Guard and all the members who have served or who might choose to work with our National Guard and all the members who have served or who might choose to work with my colleagues to exp-dediate passage of this essential legislation.

The Senate is proceeding in a wise course after the cloture vote this morning. The most controversial part of the conference report will be removed, clearing the way for the De-defense appropriations bill to pass the Senate and be sent on its way to the White House. It is unfortunate that the liability amendment that was attached to the bill in conference will also result in eliminating needed funds for hurricane relied, LIHEAP, homeland security, and border security. Congress should not delay in providing additional funds for these purposes. There are emergency needs in each of these areas that must be met with quick action.

While the ANWR provision will be removed from the bill, I continue to have serious concerns about the avian flu-related liability provisions that were slipped into the conference report without debate. These liability provisions did not appear in either the House- or the Senate-passed bill. These provisions were not in the materials presented to the conference committee during its deliberations. It was not until the dead of night on this past Sunday, after signatures had already been collected on the conference report that the Republican majority slipped these provisions into the bill before the Senate today. What an insult to the legislative process!

It makes sense for Congress to take steps to encourage companies to develop and manufacture flu vaccines.
Manufacturers and health professionals acting in good faith to protect the public health, by developing and distributing vaccines, should not be unfairly penalized for their efforts to protect the American people from the horrors of a pandemic disease.

However, our country has a moral obligation to look out for those who may become seriously ill as a result of these to vaccine recipients. Americans who pull up their sleeves to receive an emergency flu vaccine must be provided with some assurance that they would not face catastrophic loss should they be harmed.

the avian flu to just $3.8 billion. That level of funding is $4.3 billion below the level that the Senate approved just 2 months ago.

The American people deserve better from their elected representatives. They expect this chamber to combat the looming threat of flu pandemic with significant resources devoted to protecting the public’s health.

Finally, Mr. President, I regret that so little attention has been paid during the debate here on this bill to the most important issue facing our country. The ongoing war in Iraq has so far cost the lives of 2,155 members of the U.S. Armed Forces. Including the so-called “bridge fund” of $50 billion that is appropriated in this bill, our Nation will have dedicated $290 billion to carry out the war in Iraq. What an enormous sum. More than a quarter of a trillion dollars has been spent on this war that should never have begun.

What is more, the newspapers are full of stories that the President is going to ask Congress for another $100 billion in the coming months to pay for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

These huge sums of money are being requested and spent for the war in Iraq with the White House intends to get our troops out of that country. The President has taken to the speaking circuit to try to rally support for the war, but his statements are simply variations on a theme: stay the course, stay the course, stay the course.

Americans are asking questions that the White House has so far refused to address. How much longer will our troops be in Iraq? How many more Americas will perish in this costly war? How many more billions will be spent to support the administration’s misguided policies in Iraq?

Instead of getting answers to these questions, and instead of changing course in Iraq, this appropriation bill includes $50 billion to continue the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, despite the fact that the President did not request a single dime in his budget for these costs. Let me say again: the Congress is appropriating billions more for the war in Iraq without a request from the President. Is this any way to pay for a war?

Although Senators must do our part in providing for our troops serving in harm’s way, I do not think our troops are served by having Congress appropriate funds for the war in Iraq without any explanation by the President or the Secretary of Defense about how these funds are to be used. If the administration wants additional funds to prosecute the war in Iraq, the administration should answer the tough questions about its policy for getting our country out of Iraq.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to object to insertion of a provision in the Department of Defense appropriations bill that would provide sweeping immunity protections to pharmaceutical manufacturers. I know that this provision is being billed as a simple liability protection to help those who would manufacture avian flu vaccine, but it is nothing of the sort. I support limited liability protections for manufacturers to help cover the risks in developing products that our Nation will need in the event of a pandemic. However, this provision would grant immunity to all claims of loss, including death and disability, for a broad range of products, including a drug that the Secretary designated as one that would limit the harm caused by a pandemic—a definition so broad as to encompass nearly any drug.

This immunity is not subject to judicial review. It preempts any State laws that provide different liability protections or that may provide stronger consumer safety protections for pharmaceutical products. In fact, the only exception to this immunity is for actions involving “willful misconduct.” This immunity is so narrowly defined that it would only apply to cases where a company intentionally set out “to achieve a wrongful purpose . . . in disregard of a known or obvious risk that is so great as to make it highly probable that the harm will result to the benefit.” The provision requires the Secretary and the Attorney General to narrow the scope of willful misconduct even further and states that for any FDA-approved product, willful misconduct will not apply unless the “willful misconduct is clear and obvious.”

If the Government is providing complete immunity to manufacturers, how are those who may be injured to seek compensation in case of injury? This provision sets up a “Covered Countermeasure Process Fund,” but fails to provide any money for this fund. We all recognize that in a public health emergency, we may need to seek whatever means are available to prevent widespread death and disease—but those who are asked to take these products are told that if they are injured, their only recourse is to seek compensation from a fund which currently has no money to award.

I am also gravely concerned by the fact that this provision was included in the appropriations bill without following the process for passing legislation used by this Chamber. This authorization—appropriating—language was never considered, let alone agreed to by the Senate. It was never agreed to by the HELP or Judiciary Committees, which have jurisdiction over this matter. It is a mockery of the legislative process. I believe that the American people are ill-served by Congress when controversial and potentially harmful provisions can simply be inserted without undergoing the open deliberations and debate that are fundamental to the demonstration to protect our citizens from special interests and back-room dealings. This provision should be stripped from the bill.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this week, the Senate considers conference reports on two pieces of legislation—the Defense Authorization and Appropriations Acts that are critical to the security of our Nation. These conference reports contain important measures for protecting our forces, particularly provisions to upgrade body armor and protective equipment, resources to ramp-up vital construction of U.S. military ships, aircraft, and ground vehicles, and funding for research on vital defense technologies of the future.

The conference agreements also promote important quality-of-life improvements for our troops and their families, including a 3.1 percent pay raise for all military personnel and increases in compensation for survivors of military personnel killed since the onset of the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.

I have consistently opposed opening the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, ANWR, to oil drilling because I am convinced that the small amount of recoverable oil there outweighs the permanent damage that we would do to this unique and the millions of acres of wildlife that live there. The process entails a web of oil platforms, pipelines, production facilities, power facilities, support structures, and roads across the entire area. I strongly believe we need to ensure our Nation’s economic and energy security, but any recoverable oil in the Refuge would not begin flowing for at least 10 years. What is the urgency to include this legislation now in a bill that it has no business being part—of especially when the impact of the bill could be so remote and so damaging? There is significantly less job creation than proponents would have us believe, there is minimal re recoverable oil available, drilling in ANWR would have no impact on current energy prices or supply or even on our foreign oil dependence, and it would leave a web of infrastructure that would permanently ruin the pristine land and habitat. Moreover, if we took just a few modest steps to use energy more efficiently—such as properly inflating vehicle tires or raising engines’ fuel efficiency—we would save more oil than currently exists in the ANWR. It is simply irresponsible to move forward with this legislation.

Just as irresponsible is an equally non-germane provision shielding vaccine producers from liability. This language provides sweeping legal immunity to a few companies, and relieves them of responsibility for their reckless and negligent actions. Rather than encouraging companies to make safe and effective medicines, it will provide a perverse incentive by protecting those who make ineffective or harmful products. That is unwise—not to mention unfair—to companies that strive for excellence, a number of which are located in Connecticut. And rather than encouraging Americans to be vigilant and take needed measures, it will discourage them from doing so by failing to provide even rudimentary compensation for the few who will inevitably be injured by these products. Make no mistake about it: this will not protect the American people from the risk of a flu pandemic or from other biohazards.

Senator KENNEDY and I spent the past several months negotiating with Senators Enzi, Burr, Gregg, Frist, and others on the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee to try to reach a bipartisan compromise on this issue. Senator KENNEDY and I made several proposals, modeled on past Congressional action, to protect manufacturers from frivolous lawsuits while providing fair and adequate compensation to those who are injured. Both sides worked in good faith, and we made significant progress.

Unfortunately, my understanding is that a decision was made by leaders of the Republican caucus to foreshadow this bipartisan process. Instead, this non-germane provision was slipped in the final hours of this session of Congress into the Defense Appropriations Conference Report. Moreover, it is my understanding that this language was inserted after members had agreed to the Conference Report with the understanding that this language was not included. I am disturbed and disappointed by this blatant abuse of power and disregard for Senate procedures. I can only assume that the supporters of this provision are using this tactic because they know that their plan would not stand up to public scrutiny and Senate debate. In terms of some of the germane provisions of this bill, I must also express my disappointment with the conferees’ decisions to weaken important measures that were actually inserted in the Senate’s defense bills to support and protect our troops. For example, I originally authored amendments to both of these bills that would ensure that our troops would be reimbursed for medical expenses, medical safety, and protective gear that the Defense Department failed to provide for use in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Senate approved this measure without any dissent, having recognized the administration’s inadequate coping with current law. After failing to implement a program under a law enacted last year, the Pentagon only established the reimbursement initiative as this body considered the new provisions to extend this benefit to all military personnel deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan. Most appalling to me is that there remains little evidence that the Pentagon has acted to ensure that our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines receive the training and equipment they need to take advantage of this important program. Given that the Defense Department is failing to meet its commitment to adequately equip our military personnel, the least that it can do is inform our brave men and women of the benefits of this new law.

I was deeply troubled that the final version of this legislation did not include adequate language to address many of the concerns originally raised on this floor just two months ago. In the original agreement, we worked out with both Chairmen of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee and Senate Armed Services Committee, we had agreed to extend the reimbursement program to troops who made purchases up until the end of the 2006 fiscal year. In both final conference reports, this deadline was cut short to April 1, 2006.

In the final analysis of the under-lying bills, I can only take solace in the fact that the important measures in these conference reports could have been weakened even further. We in this body managed to avert grave problems posed by misplaced priorities by the administration and the Republican leadership. For example, it is my understanding that the administration’s allies in the House actually attempted to slip another measure—this time, related to campaign finance—into the Defense Authorization Act. I already signed the conference report—without any hearing or public review by the appropriate committees of jurisdiction. It was only after the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Armed Services Committee intervened that this unacceptable measure was removed.

In another case, the administration and its allies in Congress sought to thwart the final approval of Senator MCCAIN’s amendment that would set standards for the interrogation of detainees in the custody of the United States, and prohibit the cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment of these detainees. I strongly support Senator McCAIN’s amendment because it upholds the values on which our country is based, it helps strengthen the rule of law, and most importantly, it serves to protect American troops and civilians who are currently serving and living abroad.

I regret, however, that the Bush administration attempted for so long to block adoption of this amendment. Indeed, the administration only accepted it in the face of overwhelming congressional support and in the wake of international condemnation resulting from allegations of secret CIA prisons in Europe. While I am certainly pleased that the McCain amendment was included in this conference report, I hope that the administration’s stonewalling has not undermined the very things that this amendment aims to protect—American values and American lives.

In the end, it is our solemn duty as members of this institution to promote policies that will strengthen America’s critical security interests. That is why I am so deeply offended by the tactics which the majority used to weaken many of these efforts. After all, most of the germane provisions of these two Defense-related conference reports will significantly increase our defense of the U.S. military personnel deployed in harm’s way. For example, within these germane provisions, I am particularly proud that the bills build on Connecticut’s unique strengths in contributing to America’s critical security interests. For example, increases in Black Hawk helicopters to production of a new Virginia Class submarine, our troops will be better prepared to meet the security challenges of the 21st century.

Under these bills, the Army and Navy will receive 83 much needed Black Hawk helicopters to perform a variety of critical missions including medical evacuations, air assaults, and special operations. In the shipbuilding account, in addition to funding for procurement of another Virginia submarine, these bills will ensure that the Navy remains committed to developing new undersea technologies—including development of new submarine designs—an important element of our nation’s pertinent efforts to maintain undersea dominance as countries such as China and Russia expand their own submarine fleets.

in Iraq with state-of-the-art body armor and other protective gear. This Congress has few higher priorities than the safety and wellbeing of our troops deployed in harm’s way. And I believe these measures truly are steps in the right direction.

But we must remain dedicated to such critical force protection measures, particularly as our forces battle insurgents in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Republican majority’s attempts to undermine these defense bills with unrelated political schemes greatly threatened our ability to meet this commitment and amounted to an utter abuse of power.

The United States is at war. Our troops and the American people expect that our nation’s defense policy will be unfettered by special interests and untainted by political gamesmanship. I can only hope that, as we return to Capitol Hill to begin the New Year a few weeks from today, the leaders of the majority party will realize that our national interests over narrow interests.

Mr. LEAHY. When the Department of Defense authorization bill passed the Senate on November 15, I spoke of my concern about a amendment that limits the rights of detainees in U.S. custody at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to file habeas corpus petitions in federal court. That amendment was modified in conference to further erode these rights. The identical text that was added to the conference report on Defense appropriations to ensure that the language was enacted into law in one bill or the other.

Debates over the treatment of detainees have dominated our discussions of both the Defense authorization and appropriations bills. Senator MCCAIN waged a battle with the White House and his own party to ensure that his amendment requiring the humane treatment of detainees was retained in the conference reports. I commend Senator MCCAIN and the members of the Congress who have fought to address these issues. Despite calls from many of us over recent years, the legislative branch has not met its obligation of oversight and policymaking in this area. I am encouraged that more than 18 months after the revelation of atrocities at Abu Ghraib, we are finally willing to confront this issue.

The administration fought this provision for months, with the President vowing to veto any bill that contained it. But after months of threats and backdoor lobbying, the White House finally recognized that it could not win with a policy that granted itself the authority to use torture and cruel and inhumane treatment in interrogations.

Unfortunately, the positive steps we take today in adopting the McCain amendment are undercut by the modified Graham-Levin amendment in the conference report. As I just noted, I expressed concerns about the Graham-Levin text, and voted against it, when it passed the Senate. At that time, it reflected a modest improvement over an earlier version offered by Senator GRAHAM. Now, it has come almost full circle, and is deeply troubling.

The Graham-Levin amendment as it passed the Senate would deny prisoners the right to challenge their unlawful combatants the right to challenge their detention in a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. At no time in the history of this Nation have habeas rights been permanently cut off from a group of prisoners. Even President Lincoln’s suspension of habeas was temporary. The Supreme Court has held numerous times that enemy combatants can challenge their detention. The new version of this text, the text that was added to the conference report, goes even further. It prohibits any lawsuit against the United States brought by a Guantanamo detainee for any reason. This means that while the McCain Amendment requires humane treatment of detainees, the substituted text of the Graham-Levin Amendment provides no remedy whatsoever when detainees are mistreated. The result is that Guantanamo could become the legal black hole that the administration has long argued it should be. The Supreme Court in 2004 found that the administration used coercive interrogation to consider statements obtained as a result of coercive interrogation, so long as the tribunal assesses the “probative value” of the statement. With the passage of the McCain amendment, I had hoped that the Congress was finally prepared to acknowledge that statements obtained by coercion have no value.

A prime example of how abusive interrogation techniques elicit bad intelligence was reported on December 9, 2005, in The New York Times. The article states that the “administration based a crucial prewar assertion about ties between Iraq and al Qaida on detailed statements made by a prisoner while in Egyptian custody who later said he had fabricated them to escape harsh treatment.” Just last week, at a speech in Philadelphia, a member of the audience asked the President why the administration continually seeks to link the invasion of Iraq in spite of the fact that Iraq was not involved in the events of 9/11.

It is beneath the values of this Nation to allow the use of coerced statements in the trials or review panels conducted on the status of detainees. It is also beneath us to strip detainees of habeas rights. Filing a petition for a writ of habeas corpus is often the detainee’s only opportunity to openly challenge the basis for his detention. The new version is not a defense of coddling terrorists. It is about showing the world that we are a nation of laws and that that we uphold the principles that we urge other nations to follow. It is about honoring and respecting the values that are part of our heritage as Americans and that have shone as a beacon to the rest of the world.

Authorizing a detainee to file a habeas petition provides legitimacy to our detention system and quells speculation that we are holding innocent people in secret prisons without any right to due process.

Members of the Senate have argued that these prisoners should be tried in the military justice system. I think that we could all agree on such a course if the administration had worked with Congress from the start and established with our approval procedures that are fair and consistent with our tradition of military justice. The Graham-Levin amendment does allow the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to review some of the military commission’s final decisions. I am in favor of Federal court review, but Congress seems to have missed the critical step of authorizing the administration to use military commissions. I placed a bill for Congress to do just that. So did Chairman SPECTER. If the administration wanted to use military commissions to try detainees, it should have sought and obtained the explicit authorization of Congress. It did not do so. The system that has been established by the administration to try individuals held at Guantanamo does not provide due process or independent review. It is not a system that reflects our tradition of justice.

Since the Graham-Levin amendment would not retroactively apply to pending cases, the Supreme Court will still have the opportunity to determine the legitimacy of the military commission, as well as being litigation in the case of Hamdan v. Rumsfeld. If the military commission process is rejected by the Court, I hope that the administration will work with Congress to establish a fair system for trying those who are captured in the war on terror. Working in this way, we can restore the reputation of our Nation for upholding the rule of law.

Everyone in Congress agrees that we must capture and detain terrorist suspects, but it can and should be done in accord with the laws of war and in a manner that upholds our commitment to the rule of law. The Judicial Committee held a hearing on detainee issues in June. Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.” Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.” Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.” Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.” Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.” Senator GRAHAM said that once enemy combatant status has been conferred upon someone, “it is almost impossible not to envision that some form of prosecution would follow.” He continued, “I do not envision that hearing.”
As Chairman SPECTER noted on the floor last month, there are existing procedures under habeas corpus that have been upheld by the Supreme Court that do not invite frivolous claims and that are appropriate. The Graham-Levin amendment would not only restrict habeas in a manner never done before in our Nation, but, as the chairman of the Judiciary Committee said last week, it would open a Pandora’s box.

The chair is right. We must not rush to change a legal right that predates our Constitution. Creating one exemption to the Great Writ only invites more. The Judiciary Committee has jurisdiction over habeas corpus, and it should have the first opportunity to review any proposed changes carefully and thoroughly. Although congressional action on the issue of foreign detainees is long overdue, we must act hastily when the Great Writ—something that protects us all—is at stake.

Qaeda-Link U.S. CITED IS TIED TO Coercion Claim

By Douglas Jehl

WASHINGTON.—The Bush administration based a crucial war pronouncement on third-hand accounts between Iraq and Al Qaeda on detailed statements made by a prisoner while in Egyptian custody who later said he had fabricated them to escape harsh treatment, according to current and former government officials.

The officials said the captive, Ibn al-Shaykh al-Libi, provided his most specific and elaborate accounts about ties between Iraq and Al Qaeda only after he was secretly handed over to Egypt by the United States in January 2002, in a process known as rendition.

The new disclosure provides the first public evidence that bad intelligence on Iraq was training Qaeda members in the use of explosives and illicit weapons. Among the first and most prominent assertions was one made by Mr. Bush, who said in a speech in Cincinnati in October 2002 that “we’ve learned that Iraq has trained Al Qaeda members in bomb making and poisons and gases.”

The question of why the administration relied so heavily on the statements by Mr. Libi has long been a subject of contention. Senator Carl Levin of Michigan, the top Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, made public last month unclassified passages from the February 2002 document, which said it was probable that Mr. Libi “was intentionally misleading the debriefers.”

The document showed that the Defense Intelligence Agency had identified Mr. Libi as a probable fabricator before the Bush administration began to use his statements as the foundation for its claims about ties between Iraq and Al Qaeda involving illicit weapons.

Mr. Levin has since asked the agency to declassify four other intelligence reports, three of them from February 2002, to see if it had previously expressed doubt about Mr. Libi’s credibility. On Thursday, a spokesman for Mr. Levin said he could not comment on the circumstances surrounding Mr. Libi’s detention because the matter was classified.

Mr. LEAHY. Late Sunday night, Republican leadership slipped language into a lengthy appropriations conference report that will immunize drug companies against reckless misconduct and will impair our ability to protect our citizens from the threatened avian flu pandemic. This provision is a gift to the drug manufacturers and will likely have a devastating effect on our ability to protect our constituents.

The provision shields drug companies from any culpability for injuries, the provision simply shields drug companies against reckless misconduct that will severely impair our ability to protect our citizens. acted with "willful misconduct." Knowingly committing health violations would not even suffice to state a claim. Knowingly violations as well as gross negligence would be immunized from accountability. Even if the drug company acted with the intent to harm people, it would nevertheless be immune from criminal conduct unless the Attorney General or Secretary of Health and Human Services initiates an enforcement action against a drug company that is still pending at the time such a claim is filed is unbelievable. I question whether such a role for the Secretary of HHS is even constitutional. When we do in Congress allow a political appointee of the administration to determine when, and if, someone injured by willful misconduct can be compensated for their injuries? Professor Erwin Chemerinsky sent a letter yesterday that outlines his concerns regarding the constitutionality of the provision and I ask that his letter be made part of the RECORD.

Passage of the Defense appropriations bill is of vital importance to all of us, but the inclusion of provisions that excuse even gross and deadly negligence on the part of drug companies makes it impossible for many of us to vote for this bill in good conscience. I urge my colleagues to strike the unjustified and extraneous provisions from the Defense appropriations bill in order to act quickly on this important bill.

DEAR SENATOR: I understand that the Congress is considering legislation that has been denominated as the “Public Readiness and Emergency Preparedness Act.” This legislation authorizes the Department of Health and Human Services extraordinary authority to designate a threat or potential threat to health as constituting a public health emergency and to the disease or the disaster, and implementation of countermeasures, while providing total immunity for liability to all those involved in its development. In addition, this bill accords unfettered discretion to the Secretary to grant complete immunity from liability, the bill also deprives all courts of jurisdiction to review these decisions. Section (a)(7). I write to alert the Congress to the serious constitutional issues that the legislation raises.

First, the bill is of questionable constitutionality because of its broad, unfettered delegation of legislative power by Congress to the executive branch of government. Under the due process clause of the Constitution, the Congress may provide another branch of government with authority over a subject matter, but “cannot delegate any part of its legislative power except under the limitation of a pre-established standard.” United States v. Chicago, M., St. P. & P.R. Co., 282 U.S. 311, 324 (1931). Recently, the Supreme Court considered the due process clause to the power of the Department of Commerce to designate a threat or potential threat to health as constituting a public health emergency and to the disease or the disaster, and implementation of countermeasures, while providing total immunity for liability to all those involved in its development. In addition, this bill accords unfettered discretion to the Secretary to grant complete immunity from liability, the bill also deprives all courts of jurisdiction to review these decisions. Section (a)(7). I write to alert the Congress to the serious constitutional issues that the legislation raises.

Second, the important federalism issues because it sets up an odd form of federal preemption of state law. All relevant state laws are preempted. Sec. (a)(8). The breadth of authority granted the Secretary makes it impossible for many of us to vote for this bill in good conscience. I urge my colleagues to strike the unjustified and extraneous provisions from the Defense appropriations bill in order to act quickly on this important bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the conference report on the Defense appropriations bill contains $29 billion in disaster relief funding related to hurricanes Katrina and Rita. As part of that emergency package, $49 million is being made available to the National Wildlife Service to reimburse clean-up and repair and restoration costs arising from the hurricanes. As the ranking member of the Interior and Related Agencies Subcommittee, which has jurisdiction over these agencies, I fully support this appropriation. There are, however, two aspects of the funding provision which concern me.

First, the $49 million being provided is less than a quarter of the $220 million in damages suffered by our gulf coast parks and refuges. But not funding these expenses does not make them go away. What I fear will end up happening is that every other park and every other refuge in the Nation is going to have its 2006 budget reduced as a way of making up the $170 million Congress is not providing. Every park superintendent and every refuge manager in this Nation is struggling to keep up with fixed costs and working to address the maintenance backlog. Taking more money away from them is simply not helpful.

Secondly, I strongly disagree with the instructions that are being given to the National Park Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service with respect to how these funds are to be spent. The funding in this bill is provided through each Agency’s construction account. Under Federal law, that is the only purpose for which those funds can be used. They cannot legally be spent on operational expenses, which are funded through different accounts. However, the Statement of Managers, which is the report that accompanies the bill and explains in detail how all of the appropriated funds are to be spent, explicitly says that the money is available for “un—reimbursed overtime [pay] and operational costs.”

I think it was a mistake for the administration to forgo asking for reimbursable construction projects. Both agencies have incurred substantial costs in that area that must be paid for. But the administration’s error should not be compounded by having Congress encourage a Federal agency to violate the law. I strongly believe that if he and other representatives of his party wish to violate the law, they should do so by arguing the merits of the proposal themselves, not by sneaking it into a bill that goes against the best expectations of the American people when they sent us here.

Aside from critical defense funding for our military, there are other elements of this bill that this country desperately needs to have passed. There is funding for gulf coast recovery efforts and resources that will help our Nation prepare for a possible avian flu pandemic. I am pleased that this bill includes a letter from a minority—advantaged woman, working in the Information Technology industry. I have been in the Construction industry. I have been in the

There will be a time and a place for debate on this topic as there has been before. But now is not that time. Not with 180,000 troops in harm’s way who need important resources and supplies; not with families from the gulf coast who want a place to go home to; not with the threat of a deadly flu virus threatening our shores. Now is the time to respect the legislative process and pass a bill that does not play politics with our troops, so that we can finally return home to our constituents and let them know that we truly did the people’s work.

We here in Congress know that there is a long history of keeping out the little guys in government contracting. In the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, minority-owned and economically disadvantaged companies have had a near impossible time trying to secure some of the billions of dollars of gulf coast reconstruction contracts. Meanwhile, big multinational contractors were given no—bid contracts in the weeks immediately following the hurricane. This double standard is unfortunately all too common, and it is the duty of Congress to ensure that this discrimination does not continue.

Ever since the DOD’s 1207 program was first adopted in 1986, racial and ethnic discrimination—both overt and subtle—have continued to erect significant barriers to minority participation in Federal contracting, but the 1207 program helps to correct the problems of discrimination without imposing an unfair burden on businesses. Without programs like the 1207 program, many contractors would simply revert to their old practices, denying contracts to small companies owned by minorities or the economically disadvantaged. It is clear that the 1207 program is still needed to monitor and secure the gains made and perhaps encourage even greater opportunity for these small businesses.

I am pleased that this bill includes an extension of this important program. I have a letter from a minority—woman owned business detailing some of her experiences with the Department of Defense, and I ask that this letter also be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR, My name is Carmen Nazario, I am a Hispanic business owner and Veteran, working in the Information Technology industry. I have been in business for more than eight years and our company has successfully completed contracts in the private and public sector. I personally have worked in this industry as a practice for over 30 years. After an initial entry into the computer technology profession commenced while serving in the army during the Vietnam-era war. I graduated from the General School on two different occasions while attending various types of computer training and concluded in that career path after the army.

I am writing to you because I believe that it is terribly important that you understand that there is still pervasive in the contracting markets across this country. Where I live in Washington State I confront discrimination on a regular basis as I attempt the buy and sale of goods and services. I understand that Congress is currently re-authorizing the Department of Defense’s 1209 program. This program is of special interest to me because I have attempted to get work with the Defense Department over the past several years to no avail. I feel strongly that discrimination and stereotyping are part of the resulting programs that have evolved over the years. As an example, I submitted a well qualified candidate, a minority, who was interviewed as a finalist but not selected and I found out that the work was awarded to another company after an established track record with the state. (I requested the winning bid.) Washington State’s procurement awards to minority companies has drastically decreased to less that 1 percent since the fact that I have wonderful references and the clients I have previously supported have been very happy with our services.

I have been trying to work with Washington State agencies for over seven years and find it very difficult because Washington State has no minority procurement goals. Although we have been on board with various agencies as pre-qualified vendors by way of the RFP process, I find that the state tends to award contracts to large firms and companies they have been working with for years. were added to this bill behind closed doors and in the dead of the night.

If unrelated and unpopular measures can be slipped into our Nation’s military spending bill at the last moment, without being included in either the House or Senate defense bill drafts, and all control over spending has been lost. Lawmakers behind this move held funding for our troops hostage to achieve the interests of the oil and drug industries.

Finally for this reason, dozens of Senators voted for more debate on the Defense appropriations conference report. We hope these unwanted and extraneous provisions will be removed.

As I have stated, I voted to oppose closing off debate on the Defense appropriations bill for several reasons—including the bill’s insertion of oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and liability protection for drug company or ‘big’ that manufacture vaccines. In addition, to my opposition to these specific provisions, I believe the disaster relief provided for in the bill is woefully inadequate for Florida.

Florida has been hit by our hurricanes again in 2005. Hurricanes Dennis, Katrina, Rita and Wilma wreaked havoc in South Florida, the Panhandle and even parts of central Florida. These storms caused over $2 billion in agricultural losses. That surpasses the losses from the 2004 hurricane season.

Florida’s Agriculture Commissioner, Charles Bronson, said that he has “never witnessed such extensive devastation to our state’s agriculture sectors as that caused by Hurricane Wilma.”

Despite this devastation, the disaster relief in the Defense appropriations bill fails to provide any financial relief to the citrus, sugar, vegetable, tropical fruit or livestock industry.

It is estimated that Florida lost 47 percent of the grapefruit crop and 15 percent of the orange crop—for a total loss of $180 million.

The vegetable industry took a $311 million hit because the fall and winter vegetable crops were growing when Wilma hit.

The sugar industry suffered more than $370 million in losses. One-hundred mile per hour winds not only flattened the cane, but also caused significant structural damage to critical infrastructure such as storage bins and the mill.

Literally, millions of Floridians are still recovering and struggling to meet immediate needs due to these hurricanes; and this bill does little to help them recover.

When this bill goes back to the conference committee, I hope this disaster relief package can be reworked to provide disaster relief to those who suffered damage in this year’s hurricanes.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, the fiscal year 2006 Defense Appropriations Act is a vitally important piece of legislation. It funds the operations of the Department of Defense and, in this particular case, the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

It is disgraceful that this bill was delayed until the end of the year by an administration that was more interested in lobbying for the right to torture than in meeting the needs of our troops. Now at this late hour, it was further delayed by those who sought to take a bill they knew people would support—funding our troops—and load it up with unrelated special interests. With these issues resolved, I am pleased this important legislation has finally passed.

The fiscal year 2006 Defense Appropriations Act includes funding for everything from to bullets—everything our Armed Forces need to keep America safe. This bill funds the national defense program at $453.28 billion, including $50 billion in emergency appropriations for ongoing operations in Iraq and the war on terror.

The legislation funds recent and pending increases in Army end strength, provides a 3.1 percent pay raise to all members of the U.S. military, and other allowances. It funds the readiness programs that maintain our military’s ability to conduct operations around the world, whether that means flying hours for pilots, steaming days for Navy crews, spare parts, and maintenance.

The legislation funds major acquisition programs in every service—whether the C–17, PAC–3 missiles, the Army’s Stryker, or the Navy’s DD–X program. It also funds $72.1 billion in research and development. That includes future systems—whether air, land, space or sea systems—as well as important medical research that will bring our soldiers the most advanced medical treatment on future battlefields. The future American military, its capabilities, and its personnel are all funded in this legislation.

The $50 billion emergency appropriation included in this legislation funds on going operations in Iraq, Afghanist and wherever the war on terror takes American forces. That total includes money for combat pay, death gratuities, and other allowances. It includes $142.8 million for body armor and other personal protection equipment and $1.4 billion for the Joint Improved Explosive Device Task Force. It funds important programs to replace lost or damaged helicopters and ground vehicles and restocks ordnances used in operations. It also includes $1 billion to meet immediate equipment deficiencies in the National Guard and Reserves.

The Defense appropriations bill is one of the most important pieces of legislation the Congress enacts each year. It is always tempting to some to try to attach riders to it that have nothing to do with the defense of our country or the courageous Americans who make up the U.S. military. I am pleased that, at long last, the Senate finally moved this vital legislation that is so important to our troops.

Mr. President, I know there will be some who criticize this legislation because of the way it was ultimately enacted. I share those frustrations. I wish that we could have passed a clean defense appropriations act 3 or 4 months ago to avoid the challenges we have seen in the last days. It is regrettable that we did not, but I am happy that this legislation has passed so that our troops receive the resources they need to protect this country.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, we are in a period of extended debate to resolve the remaining issues related to the Defense appropriations bill, so I wanted to take a minute to address the serious avian flu issue that is before us. While I am concerned that we will need the full funding request the administration sought, if we approve the avian flu proposal, we will at least be advancing some $3 billion. I want to stress the importance of global wild bird surveillance systems as part of my comprehensive flu plan.

The avian flu provision we have been considering today states that part of $150 million is designated to carry out global and domestic disease surveillance which includes avian flu public health preparedness. If passed by Congress and signed by the President, this will assure that we have a comprehensive approach to what may become a real world threat. We do not want to have piecemeal solutions or be simplistically reactive when it comes to the public’s health.

As we all know, the potential for an influenza pandemic is increasing as the H5N1 virus has now moved swiftly across Asia, Russia, Turkey, and now the EU, killing millions of domestic poultry and over 60 humans to date. Science and surveillance, especially wild birds and movements of poultry have the potential to spread deadly avian influenza viruses. The 1918 influenza epidemic that killed an estimated 40 million people worldwide was an avian-origin strain. We must act now to predict the spread of avian influenza and encourage the CDC to ensure that this important activity is part of its surveillance activities. I am pleased with this language that acknowledges a key part of the preparedness puzzle and recognizes that wild birds have given attention—wild bird sentinels and the intimate connection between animal and human health. We cannot separate the two.

While I am concerned that we will need the full funding request the administration sought, if we approve the avian flu proposal, we will at least be advancing some $3 billion. I want to stress the importance of global wild bird surveillance systems as part of my comprehensive flu plan.

is the killer. The current H5N1 virus is flu vaccine faster by understanding may even be able to produce an avian formation warrant it. By tracking wild people indoors should surveillance in- at poultry farms, and even keeping to those at-risk, enhancing biosecurity providing available antivirals or vaccines bird species, as the conference report notes.

This proposal would help ensure we have an organized, near real-time, virtual library that would allow U.S. Government agencies, wildlife conserva- tion organizations, and public health organizations to track both the spread of avian viruses and their reassortments and mutations, which are integra- te understanding how a virus might change to permit human to human transfer. Ten million dollars is a small sum in comparison to the tens of billions of dollars required for research and antiviral stockpiling. Vaccines and stockpiling are our current focus and we should be thinking about them—but it is equally important to think about being prepared for outbreaks and pre- venting a pandemic from ever becom- ing a reality.

As we speak, information is being collected and analyzed all over the United States and the world. But while we are collecting piles of data, it is not being stored in the kind of organized manner needed to make it available for easy study and response. The information we have, I fear, is scattered like books with no library to contain them and no librarian to locate them.

Again, I would like to thank leaders in the Senate and the House, including Senators SPECTER, HARKIN, and BROWN- BACK, and Representatives DELAURO, LOWEY, and CASE, for their work in pre- paring our Nation for a possible pan- demic. We must address the treatment, surveillance, and prevention but, also, critically the global wildfowl surveil- lance; this addresses a big gap that is easy to forget about. It is the big bird in the room.

Wild birds can spread this virus and could potentially carry it to the United States. I thank and urge my colleagues to continue supporting flu legislation with essential provisions such as this one, which surveys wild birds with NGOs who have the international net- work and the capacity to connect all the dots, so when a flu pandemic does or does not happen, we are better pre- pared.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, which is included in the De- fense Appropriations conference report. I will submit a similar statement into the RECORD for the Defense au- thorization conference report because the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005 is also included in the Defense authoriza- tion bill.

The Detainee Treatment Act includes two provisions that were adopted in the Senate version of the Defense Authoriza- tion bill: the McCain Antitorture amendment and the Gra- ham-Levin Detainee amendment.

I was an original cosponsor of the McCain Antitorture amendment. I have spoken at length about the vital impor- tance of this amendment on several other occasions. At this time, I simply want to reiterate a couple of points.

Twice in the last year and a half, I have authored amendments to affirm our Nation’s longstanding position that torture and cruel, inhuman, or de- grading treatment are illegal. Twice, the Senate unanimously approved my amendments. Both times, the amend- ments were killed behind the closed doors of a conference committee—at the insistence of the Bush administra- tion.

I am pleased that the administration has changed its position. As a result, it is now arguing that under U.S. law all U.S. personnel are prohib- ited from subjecting any detainee any- where in the world to torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment.

The amendment defines cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment as any conduct that would constitute the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the U.S. Constitution if the conduct took place in the United States. Under this standard, abusive treatment that would be unconstitutional in American prisons will not permissible anywhere in the world.

Let me give you some examples of conduct that is clearly prohibited by the McCain amendment.

“Waterboarding” or simulated drowning is a technique that was used during the Spanish Inquisition. It is clearly a form of torture. It gives an overwhelming sense of imminent death. It amounts to a clear-cut threat of death akin to a mock execution, which is expressly called “mental tor- ture” in the U.S. Army Field Manual.

Sleep deprivation is another classic form of torture or cruel, inhuman conduct that is clearly prohibited by the McCain amendment. It is called “mentally called ‘mental torture’” in the U.S. Army Field Manual. It has been banned in the United Kingdom and by a unani- mous Israeli Supreme Court, and the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly de- clared it unconstitutional, once citing a report that called it “the most effec- tive form of torture”.

The amendment also clearly bans so- called stress positions or painful, pro- longed forced standing or shackling. Again, the U.S. Army Field Manual ex- pressly calls these techniques “phys- ical abuse,” precisely the same thing that is called “cruel, unusual, and inhumane” by the most recent Supreme Court cases on the extent of the prohibitions on “cruel and unusual” punishments expressly outlawed the use of painful stress positions, denouncing their "obvious cruelty" as "antithetical to human dignity."

The amendment bans the use of extreme cold, or hypothermia, as an interrogation tactic. Hypothermia can be deadly. Clearly it is capable of causing severe and lasting harm, if not death, and consequently is banned by both the Field Manual and the Constitution.

The amendment bans punching, striking, violently shaking or beating detainees. Striking prisoners is a criminal offense and clearly unconstitutional. Moreover, while assaults like slapping and violent shaking, may not seem as dangerous as beatings, shaking did, in fact, kill a prisoner in Israel, and the tactic has been banned by the Israeli Supreme Court. Numerous U.S. Supreme Court cases likewise prohibited striking prisoners.

The amendment bans the use of dogs in interrogation and the use of nakedness and sexual humiliation for the purpose of degrading prisoners.

No reasonable person, given the text of the amendment, the judicial precedents, and common sense, would consider these techniques to be permitted. Any U.S. official or employee who receives legal advice to the contrary should think twice before defying the will of the Congress on this issue.

The McCain antitorture amendment will make the rules for the treatment of detainees clear to our troops and will send a signal to the world about our Nation's commitment to the humane treatment of detainees, a concept of basic sense, would consider these techniques to be permitted.

I want to express again my opposition to the Graham-Levin amendment.

The amendment would essentially eliminate habeas corpus for detainees at Guantanamo Bay. In so doing, it would apparently overturn the Supreme Court's landmark decision in Rasul v. Bush.

No one questions the fact that the United States has the power to hold belligerents and combatants for the duration of an armed conflict. That is a fundamental premise of the law of war.

However, over the objections of then-Secretary of State Colin Powell and military lawyers, the Bush administration has created a new detention policy that goes far beyond the traditional law of war. The administration claims the right to seize anyone, including an American citizen, anywhere in the world, even the United States, and to hold him until the end of the war on terrorism, whenever that may be. They claim that a person detained in the war on terrorism has no legal rights. That means no right to a lawyer, no right to see the evidence against him, no right to challenge his detention. In fact, the Government has argued in court that detainees would have no right to challenge their detentions even if they claimed they were being tortured or summarily executed.

U.S. military lawyers have called this detention system "a legal black hole."

Defense Secretary Rumsfeld has described the detainees as "the hardest of the hard core" and "among the most dangerous, best trained, vicious killers on the face of the Earth." However, the administration now acknowledges that innocent people are held at Guantanamo Bay. The Pentagon reportedly determined that 15 Chinese Muslims held at Guantanamo are not enemy combatants and were mistakenly detained. Almost 2 years later, those individuals remain in Guantanamo Bay.

Last year, in the Rasul decision, the Supreme Court rejected the administration's detention policy. The Court held that detainees at Guantanamo have the right to habeas corpus to challenge their detentions in Federal court. The Court held that the detainees' claims that they were detained for years without charge and without access to counsel "unquestionably describe custody in violation of the Constitution, our laws or treaties of the United States."

The Graham amendment would protect the Bush administration's detention system from legal challenge. It would effectively overturn the Supreme Court's decision and would prevent innocent detainees, like the Chinese Muslims, from challenging their detention.

However, I do want to note some limitations on the scope of the Graham-Levin amendment.

A critical feature of this legislation is that it is forward looking. A law purporting to require a Federal court to give up its jurisdiction over a case that is submitted and awaiting decision would raise grave constitutional questions. The amendment's jurisdiction-stripping provisions clearly do not apply to pending cases, including the Hamdan v. Rumsfeld case, which is currently pending before the Supreme Court.

In addition, or traditional definitions, this amendment does not apply retroactively to revoke the jurisdiction of the courts to consider pending claims invoking the Great Writ of Habeas Corpus challenging past enemy combatant determinations reached without the safeguards this amendment requires for future determinations. The amendment alters the original language introduced by Senator Graham so that those pending cases are not affected by this provision.

The amendment would also legislate an exhaustion requirement for those who have already filed military commission challenges. As such, nothing in the legislation alters or impacts the jurisdiction or merits of the Hamdan case.

Nothing in the legislation affirmatively authorizes, or even recognizes, the legal status of the military commissions at issue in Hamdan. That is the precise question that the Supreme Court will decide in the next months. Right now, the military commissions are legal under a decision of the DC Circuit, and this amendment reflects, but in no way endorses that present status. It would be a grave mistake for our allies around the world to think that we are endorsing this system at Guantanamo Bay—a system that has produced not a single conviction in the 4 years since the horrible attacks of September 11, 2001.

This provision attempts to address problems that have occurred in the determinations of the status of people detained by the military at Guantanamo Bay and elsewhere. It recognizes that the Combatant Status Review Tribunal, CSRT, procedures applied in the past were inadequate and must be changed going forward. As the former chief judge of the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court found, in In Re Guantanamo Detainee Cases, the past CSRT procedures "deprive[d] the detainees of sufficient notice of the factual bases for their detention and

In 2002, the former chief judge of the U.S. Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court found, in In Re Guantanamo Detainee Cases, the past CSRT procedures "deprive[d] the detainees of sufficient notice of the factual bases for their detention and without[ ] them a fair opportunity to challenge their incarceration," and allowed "reliance on statements possibly obtained through torture or other coercion.

Her review called into serious question the "necessity" of the past CSRT process. The former CSRT procedures were not issued by the Secretary of Defense, were not reported to or approved by Congress, did not provide for final determinations by a civilian official answerable to Congress, did not provide for the consideration of new evidence, and did not address the use of statements possibly obtained through coercion.

To address these problems, this provision requires the Secretary of Defense to issue new CSRT procedures and report those procedures to the appropriate committees of Congress; it requires that going forward the determinations be made by a Designated Counsel; and it requires the amendment does not apply to pending cases, including the Hamdan v. Rumsfeld case, which is currently pending before the Supreme Court. In addition, or traditional definitions, this amendment does not apply retroactively to revoke the jurisdiction of the courts to consider pending claims invoking the Great Writ of Habeas Corpus challenging past enemy combatant determinations reached without the safeguards this amendment requires for future determinations. The amendment alters the original language introduced by Senator Graham so that those pending cases are not affected by this provision.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, the annual Defense Appropriations bill is rightly considered a priority most years, and Congress typically completes its work on this important bill early in the year. This year, however, progress on this bill was suspended largely because of Republican political maneuvering. I support the Senate version of this bill, but a very different bill emerged from conference. That conference report was hijacked by the Republican leadership in a cynical effort to try to pass controversial provisions that have nothing to do with our defense. By jeopardizing funding for our brave men and women in uniform, and attempting to circumvent the rules that govern the Senate, those leaders placed their own narrow interests above those of the country and this institution.

The most blatant abuse was the insertion into the conference report of a provision that appeared in neither bill to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drilling. I have already addressed the Senate twice this week on why that provision had no place in this conference report and I am pleased that my colleagues have joined me in sending a clear message that we will not tolerate attempts to hold vital funding hostage to unrelated special interest provisions.

While we were successful in removing the Arctic provisions, I remain very troubled about provisions included in the emergency funds slated for pandemic influenza preparedness. While I have long advocated for pandemic influenza preparedness funding, and while I am pleased that $3.8 billion is provided for this purpose, I am deeply concerned about the inclusion of far-reaching liability protections for health care providers and vaccine manufacturers in this conference report. It is an abuse of the appropriations process to push such sweeping protections into a measure providing funds for the military.

The provisions inserted in the conference report would exempts vaccine producers from civil liability for injuries related to flu vaccines, unless those vaccine producers failed to adequately inform health care provider or vaccine manufacturer acted with willful misconduct. This language is extremely far-reaching. Plaintiffs would need to prove that the health care providers or vaccine manufacturers engaged in a knowing, culpable act that was unlawful, acted without justification, and disregarded known or obvious risks that the harm would outweigh the benefit. This will be extremely difficult for plaintiffs to establish. Furthermore, disregarding the advice of public health experts, the language fails to provide meaningful injury compensation provisions to help those injured by vaccines. These protections for health care providers and vaccine manufacturers are well-intentioned, and it is painfully clear that our leadership in Congress and in the White House is not listening to the concerns of first responders, families, or public and global health experts. They are listening only to the businesses and industries that would use the threat of pandemic influenza as an opportunity to help their own profit margins.

Mr. President, I also object to the inclusion of certain provisions of the Hurricane Recovery Appropriations bill. More than 370,000 elementary and secondary students have been displaced as a result of Hurricane Katrina. Schools across the country, including some in Wisconsin, have opened their doors to these students. I strongly support efforts to assist the schools that are welcoming these students as they continue to work to make this transition and school year go as smoothly as possible.

But I am troubled by key provisions of the legislation. For example, Section 107 of the Act would allocate Federal funding to go directly through State agencies to local school districts where displaced students have enrolled in public or private schools. The local school districts, which are government agencies, would then be responsible for issuing direct payments to public and private schools where displaced students. Earlier this year, the Senate soundly defeated a proposal to provide vouchers directly to parents with little in the way of civil rights protections. The Senate subsequently passed a measure that, like the measure now before this body, would have passed taxpayer money to private schools through local public school districts. I had grave concerns about that provision, and I am even more troubled that the provisions before us do not include even the modest attempts at civil rights and other protections that were included in the Senate passed language. While I believe the supporters of this act are well-intentioned, I am concerned that Senate passage of this measure is a significant and troubling precedent with regard to taxpayer-funded school vouchers.

I oppose school vouchers because such programs funnel taxpayer money away from the public schools that this funding is intended to support and instead direct this funding to private schools that do not have to adhere to the same Federal, State, and local accountability and civil rights laws and regulations that apply to public schools. I strongly support providing assistance to the students and schools that have been affected by Hurricane Katrina, but we should do so within existing Federal laws that allow local public school districts to provide specific educational services—rather than direct funding—to private schools.

Mr. President, I also object to the across-the-board cut to discretionary programs, including education programs, that was inserted in this conference report in the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill already cuts or allows for only nominal increases in funding for education. This across-the-board cut would magnify the damage done by that appropriations bill, which awaits final action. If both the across-the-board cut and the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill are adopted, total Federal education funding would be cut for the first time in a decade. Funding would be cut for No Child Left Behind, Title I services. The Federal share of special education costs would be cut for the first time in a decade forcing States and local school districts to pick up the slack. And I regret that the maximum Pell Grant award would be frozen for the fourth year in a row at $4,050.

Mr. President, reducing funding for our nation's schools is not the message we should be sending to our youth. We need to find ways to provide an excellent K-12 education for all of America's children and find ways to make college more affordable for young people now and in the future. Cutting funding for our nation's schools is not the answer and this across-the-board cut is particularly regrettable. I strongly support reducing our budget deficit and have long promoted measures, such as PAYGO, that would help us toward that goal. But cutting funds for the most in need is not the solution.

I am pleased that the conference report sends such a strong message to the administration about the treatment of detainees by adopting the amendment of the senior Senator from Arizona. The lack of a clear policy regarding the treatment of detainees has been confusing and counter-productive. It has left our men and women in uniform in the lurch with no clear direction about what is right and what is wrong. This failure on the part of the administration has sullied our reputation as a Nation, and hurt our efforts to promote democracy and human rights in the Arab and Muslim worlds. I have been the leading supporter of Senator McCain's amendment on interrogation policy because it should help to bring back some accountability to the process and restore our great Nation's reputation as the world's leading advocate for human rights.

I am disappointed with the mixed messages that the Senate continues to send to the administration and the country on issues related to the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay. In addition to the important McCain amendment on torture, the conference report also includes the Graham amendment, which remains deeply troubling because of the restrictions it places on judicial review of detainees held at Guantanamo. However, it is important to note that the provision is limited in critical ways. The provision on judicial review of military commissions covers only "final decisions" of military commissions, and only governs challenges brought under that provision. In addition, the language in Section 112 that prohibits "any other action against the United States" applies only to suits brought relating to an "aspect of detention by the Department of Defense." Therefore, it is my understanding that this provision did not affect the ongoing litigation in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld before the Supreme Court because that case involves a challenge to trial by military commission, not to an aspect of a detention and of course was not brought under this provision. Furthermore, it is important to make clear that this provision should not be read to endorse the current system of trial by military commission for those at Guantanamo Bay. This provision reflects, but certainly does not prescribing the status of those military commissions, which is that they are currently legal under a decision of the D.C. Circuit.
However, the Supreme Court has not yet addressed the legality of such military commissions, and this amendment should not be read as any indication that Congress is weighing in on that issue. While I would have strongly preferred that this amendment not be included in the conference report, I think it is important to note these limitations on its practical effect.

In closing, Mr. President, I am pleased that I was able to vote for a bill to provide our brave men and women in uniform with the funding they need. But I was disappointed with the long and winding road that it took to get to this point. I hope that Republican leaders are on notice that the Senate will not turn a blind eye when they break the rules and put their own narrow interests above those of the country and the troops.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

VITIATION OF VOTE—H.R. 1815

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the cloture vote on the conference report on H.R. 1815 is vitiated.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I am proud to bring the Conference Report on the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006 before the Senate for final passage. This has been a long and difficult conference, but we have achieved our goal of providing the necessary authorities and resources for our men and women in uniform to defend the freedom of America.

I thank my colleague and partner for these 27 years we have served together in the Senate, the senior Senator from Michigan, CARL LEVIN, for his consistently constructive help and leadership in bringing this important legislation to the floor.

An undertaking of this magnitude is ultimately a bipartisan, bicameral effort. Consequently, there are many people deserving of recognition. I want to thank all of our subcommittee chairs and ranking members for their tireless efforts. I also want to thank Chairman DURBIN and Senate Armed Services Chairman JOE LIEBERMAN, and Senator HARRY REID, as well as all of the Members who served on the conference committee. I want to thank all of our subcommittee chairs and ranking members for their tireless efforts. I also want to thank Chairman DURBIN and Senate Armed Services Chairman JOE LIEBERMAN, and Senator HARRY REID, as well as all of the Members who served on the conference committee.

This conference agreement could not have been reached without our dedicated, professional staff. I especially want to recognize the unwavering leadership of the Committee Staff Director, Charlie Abell and the Democratic Staff Director, Rick DeBobes, together with their staff, in bringing this process to a successful conclusion.

As we consider this legislation, we remain a nation at war. This year marks the fourth year in the global war on terrorism. On September 11, 2001, our Nation awakened to a terrorist attack. From this dark hour, our Nation quickly emerged stronger and more united because our Armed Forces, like the generations that preceded them, responded to the call of duty in Operation Enduring Freedom, Operation Iraqi Freedom, and elsewhere around the world in the cause of freedom.

Hundreds of thousands of soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines, active and reserve components, and countless civilians continue to serve valiantly around the world—from Iraq and Afghanistan to the Persian Gulf, Europe, Africa, and Korea—to secure peace and freedom. All Americans are proud of what our military has accomplished. Their sacrifices and service have removed obstacles to freedom and democracy in the regions of the Middle East and Asia.

We remain mindful that the defense of our homeland begins on distant battlefields. To the extent that we can prevent or contain the threats on these battlefields or potential battlefields, the less likely that we will experience a threat here at home. The threats to our Nation and the ongoing war on terrorism demand increased investment in our national security.

As we begin this debate, I remain mindful that no military victory is gained without significant sacrifice. I ask that we pause to remember those who died in the course of our freedom, and the many others who were wounded. We honor their sacrifices and service. On behalf of a grateful Nation, we salute you. They and their families deserve our gratitude and unwavering support.

This year, the House and Senate conferences confronted especially difficult challenges affecting our Nation’s security. These issues included U.S. policy on Iraq, incremental funding for the Navy shipbuilding budget. With respect to these issues, I believe that the conferences reached a balanced agreement.

Overall, the conference authorized funding of $441.5 billion in budget authority for defense operations for the fiscal year 2006, an increase of $20.9 billion—or 3.1 percent in real terms—above the amount authorized by the Congress for fiscal year 2005.

The conference report underscores some key defense priorities critical to our national security, including authorities and resources to win the global war on terrorism and support for the men and women of the Armed Forces fighting so bravely in the global war on terrorism. Specifically, the conferees added $586.4 million over the President’s budget request for combating terrorism. The conferees also authorized $50.0 billion in emergency supplemental funding for the year 2006 for activities in support of operations in Iraq, Afghanistan, and the global war on terrorism.

The conferees further agreed to enhance congressional oversight of ongoing military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, and the global war on terrorism, including uniform standards for interrogation operations, while removing the burden of litigation from vital intelligence activities. The conference report also includes a 1.3 percent pay raise for all military personnel.

In addition, the conference report contains some provisions of which I am very proud that every element of our homeland defense, force protection, recruiting and retention of military personnel, quality of life programs, and modernization and transformation efforts.

To enhance the ability of the Department of Defense to fulfill its homeland defense responsibilities, the conferees agreed to: authorize $115.2 million for homeland defense and counterterrorism, including $19.8 million for specially trained and equipped teams to support civil or military authorities in the event of a chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear or high-explosive... attack or event; and enhance the Department's working relationship with the Department of Homeland Security for purposes of leveraging dual-use assets in conducting homeland defense and homeland security missions.

To rapidly deploy and acquire the full range of force protection capabilities for deployed forces, the conferees agreed to authorize an additional $610.0 million for up-armedored high mobility multipurpose wheeled vehicles and wheeled vehicle add-on ballistic protection to increase force protection for soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan; designate an executive agent for a joint research and treatment effort to combat blast injuries resulting from IEDs, rocket propelled grenades, and other attacks; and facilitate the rapid deployment of new technology and tactics and the rapid deployment of equipment to counter the threat of improvised explosive devices.

To improve recruiting goals and retention of military personnel, the conferees agreed to create new and better incentives to meet the challenge of recruiting for the All Volunteer Force; and ensure the retention of experienced personnel in the active-duty ranks, in the Reserve, and in the National Guard.

To continue its commitment to quality health care for all beneficiaries, the conferees agreed to enhance access to health care coverage under TRICARE for every member of the Service and their families, with Government subsidies based on new categories of eligibility.

To continue necessary modernization and transformation efforts, the conferees agreed to authorize an increase of $159.5 million for Navy Shipbuilding to accelerate the CVN–78 aircraft carrier, the LHA (R) amphibious ship, and the second DD(X) destroyer of the class. Much more must be done, however, to protect the Navy in the Navy's shipbuilding budget and to protect this fragile sector of our industrial base.

I have a list of some of the highlights of this conference report that I ask unanimous consent to be printed in the Record following my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER: Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Each year since 1961, the House and Senate have reached a consensus on an annual national Defense Authorization Act. President Bush has signed into law, a National Defense Authorization Act. I now call upon my colleagues in this chamber to fulfill our responsibility and pass the annual Defense authorization bill, as has been the tradition of the Senate for each of the past 45 years. This is the 27th year that I have had the privilege of working on this important legislation.

I believe this conference report is a strong bipartisan bill that serves the interests of the men and women of our Armed Forces and of our Nation today. We must send a strong message of support to the men and women in uniform serving on the distant outposts throughout the world. I can think of no better way to honor their sacrifices and service, and that of their families than with the passage of the National Defense Authorization bill. This conference report provides the authorities and resources needed to win the war on terrorism, while safeguarding Americans at home. It sustains the current readiness of the Armed Forces and provides the resources to prepare them for the future.

I yield the floor.

It has had a long journey. But we are here.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2006: CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the conference report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

A conference report to accompany H.R. 1815 to authorize appropriations for the fiscal year 2006 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strength for such fiscal year, and for other purposes, having met, have agreed that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the Senate with amendments, signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of both Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of December 18, 2005.)

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, will the Chair advise the Senate with regard to any time limit for remarks in connection with the pending matter?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was not a time allocation.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I congratulate Senator Warner. Without his leadership, this bill would not be here. We had a record number of amendments which we had to deal with in a record short period of time. He showed incredible tenacity and patience and wisdom, as he always does in bipartisanship. I commend him and particularly our staffs.

Mr. President, I thank our leadership as well for their staying with us on this one. There was a time earlier this year when we didn’t think we were going to get an authorization bill, and except for the efforts of our leaders we would not be here either. I want to particularly thank them.

Mr. President, I am pleased to join my good friend and colleague, Senator Warner, the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in urging the adoption of the conference report on H.R. 1815, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006. Getting this conference report to the Senate required the labors of Hercules, the patience of Job and the magic of Merlin. We would not have been able to complete conference on this important bill—made so very urgent by the fact that we are nation at war—without the tireless efforts of Senator Warner.

First, a word on the extraordinary events of the last few days. On the Senate side, every one of our conferees—including all 11 Democrats on the Armed Services Committee—signed the conference report. Each of these Senators signed on the basis of the text of the conference report that was agreed to between the Senate and House conferees.

As is our usual practice, we delivered our Senate signature sheets to the House on Friday afternoon, with the understanding that the conference report would be filed first in the House and acted upon first by that body. The Senate stood ready to take up the conference report as soon as it came over from the House and to pass it after 1 hour of debate.

Unfortunately, the conference report was not filed on either Friday or Saturday, because the House Republican leadership was considering adding an extraneous bill to the conference report. This bill was not a part of our conference, is not in the jurisdiction of our committee, and was never considered by any of the conferees. The bill was not a part of the conference report that was agreed to by our conferees on either side of the aisle.

Senator Warner and I strongly objected to a procedure so totally destructive of bedrock legislative process. When we learned that such an attempt might be made, we joined together and retrieved the Senate signature sheets from the House. Only after we were assured on Sunday afternoon that the conference report would be voted on and signed by Representatives as agreed, with no effort to insert additional material, did we return the Senate signature sheets to the House.

I will ask unanimous consent that a copy of the cover letter that we sent to the Chair, the ranking member in the RECORD. I would also make reference to Senator Warner’s remarks in the RECORD on this subject last Friday, and my remarks last Saturday.

Even before the events of the last weekend, the Armed Services Committee faced obstacles and hurdles in completing this bill that we have never faced before. For example:

It took us over 2 months from the time we reported the bill to the Senate on May 15 to the time debate initially began on July 20.

Then, after only 5 days of debate, our bill was pulled down by the majority leader on July 20. The Senate failed to invoke cloture on the bill. We had to wait over 3 months and negotiate a very complicated unanimous consent agreement which limited the number of amendments before we were able to resume debate on the bill on November 4.

We debated the bill for an additional 7 days and finally passed it by a unanimous 98 to 0 vote on November 15, but not before disposing of a total of 261 amendments—more amendments ever considered to any Defense authorization bill since Congress passed the first annual Defense authorization bill back in 1961.

As far as completing conference this session, there were a lot of people who doubted it could be done because of the sheer size and complexity of this legislation, leaving aside some of its very contentious issues. Over the past 10 years, we have averaged a total of 70 days in conference with the House on the massive bill. Last year, we were in conference with the House for a total of 85 days. We completed this conference in under 1 month—29 days, to be exact. We compromised on a lot of issues, but we didn’t compromise the quality of this legislation just for the sake of getting it quickly. In short, we did it right and we are very proud of that. This year, we have produced a true holiday gift for our troops and our Nation.

This conference report contains provisions that provide well-deserved support for our military personnel and their families. In particular, the conference report will:

Increase basic pay by 3.1 percent, a half percent higher than inflation.

Increase the death gratuity for all active duty deaths from $12,400 to $100,000, retroactive to the beginning of Operation Ending Freedom;

Authorize a new special pay of $340 a month during hospitalization for service members while rehabilitating from an injury or disease incurred in a combat zone;

Authorize a new leave of up to 21 days when adopting a child;

Increase funding for military child care services by $50 million, and for family assistance services by $10 million; and

Create a mental health task force to help military members and families deal with an increasing number of mental health issues.

The bill also contains several provisions especially designed to benefit our National Guard and Reserve personnel and their families:

Every member of the Selected Reserve will have access to government-subsidized health care under the military TRICARE Standard medical program and their families.

Tier I is the TRICARE Reserve Select program that we authorized last year. National Guard and Reserve personnel who are mobilized can use this benefit for a year for each period of mobilized service, as long as they remain in the Selected Reserve. The Government pays 72 percent of their health care premium—they pay only 28 percent.

Tier II includes members of the Selected Reserve who do not have access to health insurance through their employer, called TRICARE. The Government pays 15 percent of their premium, they pay the remaining 85 percent.

National Guard and Reserve members who suffer an income loss when mobilized can be paid an income replacement payment after 18 months of active duty, upon completion of 24 months of active duty in a 5-year period, or when mobilized within 180 days of an earlier mobilization.

Reservists who are ordered to active duty for more than 30 days will receive a full housing allowance rather than the current 140 days.

In the bill we authorize the following end strengths for our active-duty forces: Army—512,400, an increase of 10,000 soldiers from last year’s authorized end strength; Navy—352,700, 13,200 less than last year, in accordance with the Department’s request; Marine Corps—179,000, an increase of 1,000 Marines from last year’s authorization, again in accordance with the Department’s request.

We are very concerned about the Army’s ability to recruit enough enlistees to make the end strength that we authorized. This bill gives the Army new tools to help it meet its recruiting goals:

A new bonus of up to $1,000 for soldiers who refer a successful recruit to the Army;

New authority to experiment with innovative recruiting incentives;

Authorization for matching contributions to the Thrift Savings Plan during a service member’s initial enlistment; and

An increased maximum enlistment bonus of up to $40,000.

This bill does not include everything that I fought for. For example, I am very disappointed that we were not able to immediately repeal the 10-year phase-in of the concurrent receipt of military retired pay and VA disability compensation for military retirees with less than a 100 percent disability who are considered “totally disabled” because their disability renders them unemployable.

Before I comment further on a number of other issues in the conference report relating to support for our men and women in uniform, weapons systems and nonproliferation programs, I want to comment on provisions relating to the treatment of detainees and the sense of the Congress on United States policy on Iraq.

I am pleased that the conference report contains the full text of the McCain amendment on torture, without change. This language firmly establishes in law that the United States will not subject any individual in our custody, regardless of nationality or status, to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment. The amendment provides a single standard—“cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment”—without regard to what agency holds a detainee, whether the detainee is, or where the detainee is held. With the enactment of this amendment, the United States will put itself on record as rejecting any effort to abolish the death penalty, as long as it is practiced in this country; or to eliminate detention; or to create a private right of action. The amendment adopted by the Senate—the so-called Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment—does not apply to or alter any habeas case pending in the courts at the time of enactment.

Under the Supreme Court’s ruling in Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320, the fact that Congress has chosen not to apply the habeas-stripping provision to pending cases means that the courts retain jurisdiction to consider these appeals. Again, the Senate voted affirmatively to remove language from the original Graham amendment that would have applied this provision to pending cases. The conference report retains the same effective date as the Senate bill, therefore adopting the Senate position that this provision will not strike the courts of jurisdiction in pending cases. Let me be specific.

The original Graham amendment approved by the Senate contained language stating that the habeas-stripping provision “shall apply to any application or other action that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.’ We objected to this language and it was not included in the Senate passed bill.

An early draft of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment contained language stating that a habeas-stripping provision ‘‘shall apply to any application or other action that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act,’’ which the Supreme Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to determine the lawfulness of the removal of such alien detainee under its jurisdiction to hear any case in which certiorari has been granted as of such date.’ We objected to this language and it was not included in the Senate-passed bill.

A House proposal during the conference contained language stating that the habeas-stripping provision ‘‘shall apply to any application or other action that is pending on or after the date of enactment of this Act.’’ We objected to this language and it was not included in the conference report.

Rather, the conference report states that the provision ‘‘shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.’’ These words have their ordinary meaning—which is prospective in its application, and does not apply to pending cases. By taking this position, we preserve comity between the judicial and legislative branches and avoid repeating the unfortunate precedent in Ex parte Quirin, in which the Supreme Court intervened to strip the Supreme Court of jurisdiction over a case which was pending before that Court.

Second, the initial Graham amendment would have provided for direct judicial review of both status determinations by Combat Status Review Tribunals, CSRTs. By contrast, the revised Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment adopted by the Senate provided for direct judicial review of both status determinations by Combat Status Review Tribunals and administrative or military commissions. The amendment does not affirmatively authorize either CSRTs or military commissions—instead, it establishes a judicial procedure for determining the constitutionality of such processes.

Again, this improvement is preserved in the conference report, which retains the Senate language authorizing direct review of both status determinations by CSRTs and convictions by military commissions.

The final initial Graham amendment would have provided only for review of whether a tribunal complied with the Department’s own standards and procedures. By contrast, the revised amendment adopted by the Senate would allow courts to determine whether the standards and procedures used by CSRTs and military commissions are consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

This language has been revised in conference only to state what the intent of the amendment already was—that it was not intended to grant to an alien detainee any rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States that the detainee does not already have. Otherwise, the improved language remains intact in the conference report: The courts would be expressly authorized to determine whether the standards and procedures used by CSRTs or military commissions in a status determination or the trial of an alien detainee at the Guantanamo Bay detention facility are consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, as they apply to habeas cases.

We expect that final decisions in both the CSRT process and under the military order for trials will be reached in an expeditious manner to ensure judicial review within a reasonable period of time. The statement of managers makes this point expressly with regard to CSRT determinations, because the amendment requires that CSRT procedures be submitted to Congress. The statement of managers does not make this point with regard to military commissions. If the procedures for military commissions are not in any way addressed in the conference report, the Senate bill also contained a provision that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to Congress a report on the procedures used by combat status review tribunals and administrative review boards for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay and the need to continue their detention.

This provision has been expanded in the conference report to require that the report also address procedures in operation in Afghanistan and Iraq for a determination of the status of aliens detained in the custody or under the physical control of the Department of Defense.

Nothing in the conference report is intended to in any way authorize, endorse or approve either these procedures or military commissions. The amendment does not affirmatively authorize either CSRTs or military commissions—instead, it establishes a judicial procedure for determining the constitutionality of such processes.

This language has been revised in conference only to state what the intent of the amendment already was—that it was not intended to grant to an elsewhere. I do not believe that we should have gone down the road of limiting legal remedies for detainees in the manner that we did. However, once the Senate voted over my objection to eliminate habeas corpus relief, my efforts turned toward: (1) building the courts access to the courts on direct appeal of administrative determinations of status or criminal conduct; (2) avoiding stripping the courts of jurisdiction over pending cases; and (3) ensuring that the provisions on detainee rights would not undermine the McCain amendment. I believe that we succeeded on all three issues. The conference report preserves a meaningful opportunity for detainees to challenge the legality of their detention or any criminal conviction in federal court. It ensures that the provisions eliminating habeas corpus jurisdiction will be prospective in their application and will not apply to pending cases. And of course we worked with Senator MCCAIN to preserve his amendment intact and to shape the Robert Levin language so as to avoid undermining the McCain amendment.

The conference report with minimal change the provision on United States police to be added back in to protect his and the administration should tell the leaders of all groups and political parties in Congress, in the provision in the conference report, notes that calendar change to include businesses that have been hurt by below-average water levels and the harm caused by unusually severe storms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes. The conference report also includes a provision to broaden eligibility for that assistance, the same way that floods, hailstorms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually severe storms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes.

I am particularly pleased that the conference report also includes a provision for disaster relief for small businesses damaged by drought. In the same way that floods, hailstorms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes can be irreparable to businesses that depend on the waterways. The Small Business Act already provides disaster assistance to businesses that have been injured by severe storms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes. The Small Business Act already provides disaster assistance to businesses that have been injured by severe storms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes.

With respect to nonproliferation programs, although I would have preferred the amendment that Senator Lugar added to the Senate-passed bill, which would have added various conditions that the Cooperative Threat Reduction, CTR, program must meet before spending money in any given year, I am pleased that we have included permanent authority to waive on an annual basis the requirement to certify that various conditions have been met by each country recipient of CTR funds.

The CTR program and the non-proliferation programs at the Department of Energy are all funded at the budget request. Within the Department, programs we were able to address some urgent requirements by providing additional funds to accelerate the shutdown of the last plutonium-producing reactor in Russia and to accelerate the security of nuclear weapons storage at key Russian sites.

The agreement includes $4.0 million in Air Force accounts that the Air Force and the Department of Defense have the option to use to study and improve the performance of conventional, nonnuclear, penetrator weapons. I hope and urge the Department to use at least the $4.0 million to support conventional, nonnuclear weapons development.

The conference report includes a series of provisions designed to improve the management of the Department of Defense. These include provisions that would:

Help protect the Federal employee workforce from unfair competition by codifying an important set of historic precedents and commonsense principles for public-private competition;

Improve the management of $70 billion a year of DOD contracts for services by requiring the Department to establish a new management structure for such contracts and requiring strict oversight requirements for such mechanisms that have been abused in the past;

Reduce the risk of abusive acquisition practices like those seen in the proposed tanker lease contract by requiring the Secretary of Defense or the Deputy Secretary of Defense to personally approve any proposal to purchase a major weapon system as a commercial item; and Prohibit the Department from wasting hundreds of millions of dollars on unneeded audits of financial management systems that must be replaced because they are incapable of producing timely, accurate and complete financial data for management purposes.

I am particularly pleased that the conference report also includes a provision for disaster relief for small business concerns damaged by drought. In the same way that floods, hailstorms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes can be irreparable to businesses that depend on the waterways.

The Small Business Act already provides disaster assistance to businesses that have been injured by severe storms, and other natural phenomena can devastate small businesses, the harm caused by unusually low water levels on the Great Lakes. With respect to the Navy's shipbuilding accounts, the conference agreement incorporates reasonable cost caps on Virginia-class attack submarines in the Future Years Defense Program, the fifth DD(X) land attack destroyer, to be bought in 2010, and the fifth and sixth littoral combat ships, to be bought in 2008 or 2009. The conferees did not include a cost cap on the LHA because, in their judgment, there were few, if any, cost savings from the LHA over future procurement options. The conferees also note that the House has expressed concern with the high cost of the LHA and further noted that the Navy has requested a cost cap on the LHA.

The conferees dealt with the Navy’s program to buy a new presidential helicopter, called the VXX, by adopting compromise language that would: (1) allow production of the pilot production helicopter to go forward; and (2) require that the Secretary of the Navy submit an acquisition strategy for the full rate production aircraft, Increment Two, by March 15, 2006. This strategy would be required to include one personal test aircraft to support the initiation of full rate production for VXX. The agreement would fence 25 percent of the Fiscal Year 2006 R&D funding until the Secretary submits that strategy.

The conferees also dealt with the Army’s future combat systems by agreeing that the entire Army future combat systems program, including the manned ground vehicles project, should remain in the system development and demonstration, rather than having large portions revert to the technical base. This is a recognition of the importance of the Army’s only modernization program to both the future Army, and to the spinout of FCS technologies to the current force, as well as a recognition of the need for the future combat systems to be developed as an integrated system of systems as quickly as possible.

The bill also demonstrates the conferees continued strong support for the Department’s special operations, counterdrug and humanitarian operations. In particular the conferees enhanced DOD’s ability to combat terrorism and the production and trafficking of illegal drugs, including: authorizing and funding five additional National Guard Chemical, Biological, Radiological, Nuclear and High Yield Explosive (CBRNE) Enhanced Response Force Package teams, in addition to sustaining the existing 12 teams—which provide support to civilian authorities in the aftermath of a WMD incident; directing the Department to report on the use of DOD aerial reconnaissance assets to support the Department of Homeland Security; authorizing 2 years for joint task forces combating terrorism and narcotics production and trafficking; and; designating the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as the principal military advisor to the Homeland Security Council. The conferees also agreed to authorize increased funding for humanitarian operations, including $40 million in a future supplemental for Pakistan, and expenditure of the appropriated amount to include related education, training, and technical assistance.

In science and technology, this year’s conference report includes a number of provisions and funding measures that support the transformation of our military while improving our ability to rapidly move new technologies out of the laboratory and onto the battlefield. The conference report authorizes over $11.3 billion for science and technology research programs, an increase of $840 million over the President’s budget request. It also makes permanent the SMART, Science, Math, and Research for Transformation, Scholarship for Service Program to help the DoD educate, train, and employ the highest quality scientific and technical workforce. In order to better utilize the innovative talents of our nation’s small businesses, the bill establishes a pilot program to promote the transition of technologies from the Small Business Innovative Research program into DoD acquisition programs. Finally, the conference report increases funding for and establishes mechanisms to accelerate and better coordinate research in a number of priority areas including robotics, unmanned ground vehicles, IED detection and defeat, the diagnosis and treatment of blast injuries, semiconductor microelectronics, and the development and deployment of advanced fuel cell vehicles.

I ask unanimous consent that the letter I referred to be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR DUNCAN: On Friday, December 16, we joined you and Ike Skelton in conducting the final meeting of the conferees along with other Members of the Senate and House. At this meeting the “base bill” was agreed upon and signatures of Republican and Democratic Conference Committee Members were requested and affixed to the Conference Report with the expectation that the House, following the customary procedure, would be the first chamber to file. It was our further understanding that this would be done Friday evening.

We are returning to you the signatures of the Senate conferees on the condition that there are no changes made in the “base bill” and Conference Report with the expectation that the House obtain a Rule which precludes any further amendment.

You have shown strong leadership during this very trying time in conference and we have confidence that you can achieve passage in the House of the “base bill”. We believe it is in the interest of the Nation and the men and women of the Armed Forces that our Conference Report as agreed to on December 16 becomes law.

Sincerely, CARL LEVIN, Ranking Member. JOHN WARNER, Chairman.

Mr. LEVIN. My particular thanks to my staff for their extraordinary work: Rick DeBates, Peter Levine, Jon Clark, Chris Cowart, Dan Cox, Madelyn Creedon, Brie Eisen, Evelyn Farkas, Richard Fieldhouse, Creighton Greene, Bridget Hingma, Mike Kilkun, Gary Leitzel, Mark McCord, Bill Monahan, Aron Seraphin.

Also to Charlie Abell and others of Senator WARNER’s staff.

COMMENTS ON FINAL PASSAGE

Mr. KYL. I would like to say a few words about the now-completed National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2006, and in particular about section 1405 of that act, which expels lawsuits brought by enemy combatants from United States courts. I see that my colleague, the senior Senator from South Carolina, is about to take the floor.

I would like to begin by commenting on the need for this legislation. This provision originally was added to the bill in an amendment that was offered by Senator GRAHAM and of which I was a cosponsor, as well as Senator CHAMBERS.

Keeping war-on-terror detainees out of the court system is a prerequisite for conducting effective and productive interrogation, and interrogation has proved to be an important source of critical intelligence that has saved American lives.

In Rasul v. Bush, the U.S. Supreme Court interpreted section 2241 of title 28 to authorize enemy combatants held outside of the United States to file habeas corpus petitions challenging their status in federal courts. Such a process is both without precedent and is utterly impractical.

Giving detainees access to federal judicial proceedings threatens to seriously undermine vital U.S. intelligence-gathering activities. Under the new Rasul-imposed system, shortly after al-Qaeda and Taliban detainees arrive at Guantanamo Bay, they are informed that they have the right to challenge their detention in Federal court. And the right to file habeas corpus petitions challenges their status in federal courts. Such a process is both without precedent and is utterly impractical.

And the right to file habeas corpus petitions challenges their status in federal courts. Such a process is both without precedent and is utterly impractical.
Navy VADM Lowell Jacoby expounded on the preconditions for effective interrogation in a declaration attached to the United States’ brief in the Padilla litigation in the Southern District of New York. Vice Admiral Jacoby, the Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency. He noted in the Declaration that:

DIA’s approach to interrogation is largely dependent upon creating an atmosphere of dependence and trust between the subject and the interrogator. Developing the kind of relationship of trust and dependency necessary for effective interrogations is a process that takes considerable time. There are numerous examples of situations where interrogators have been unable to obtain valuable intelligence from a subject until months, or, even years, after the interrogation process began.

Anything that threatens the perceived dependency and trust between the subject and interrogator directly threatens the value of interrogation as an intelligence gathering tool. Even seemingly minor interruptions can have profound psychological impacts on the delicate subject-interrogator relationship. Any insertion of counsel into the subject-interrogator relationship, for example, even if only for a limited duration or for a specific purpose—can undo months of work and may permanently shut down the interrogation process.

Specifically with regard to Jose Padilla, Vice Admiral Jacoby also noted in his Declaration that:

Providing [Padilla] access to counsel now would create expectations by Padilla that his release may have been obtained through an adversarial civil litigation process. This would break—probably irreparably—the sense of dependency and trust that the interrogators are attempting to create.

The system of litigation that Rasul has sought is unacceptable.

Mr. GRAHAM. I agree entirely. If I could add one thing on this point: perhaps the best evidence that the current Rasul system undermines effective interrogation is that very even the detainees’ lawyers are bragging about their lawyer

Meeting the legal and small th ing to represent these detainees. Every time an attorney goes down there, it makes it that much harder [for the U.S. military] to do what they’re doing. They can’t run an interrogation with attorneys. What are they going down now that we’re getting court orders to get more lawyers down there?

When I read that quote, that for me was the last straw. I knew that something had to be done. On this issue, both the detainees’ lawyers and the Defense Department seem to agree: involving counsel in adversarial litigation in U.S. courts undermines effective interrogation of these detainees.

Mr. KYL. I am glad that we have been able to work together on this issue. I would add that interrogation of these detainees is important. In his Declaration to the Southern District of New York, DIA Director Jacoby described how interrogation has proven to be a critical intelligence tool—indeed, our most important intelligence tool—in past conflicts and in the current war on terrorism. Interrogation was our most valuable source of information in World War II and the gulf war, and has proven so in stopping numerous terrorist attacks in the present conflict. Vice Admiral Jacoby stated in that declaration:

Interrogations are vital in all combat operations, regardless of the intensity of the conflict. Interrogation permits the collection of information from sources with direct knowledge of, among other things, plans, locations, and persons seeking to do harm to the United States and its citizens. When done effectively, interrogation provides information that likely could not be gained from any other source.

The Department of the Army’s Field Manual governing Intelligence Interrogation, FM 34-52, dated 28 September 1992, provides several examples of the importance of interrogations. The Manual cites, for example, the United States General Board on Intelligence survey of nearly 80 intelligence units after World War II. Based upon those surveys, the Board estimated that 43 percent of all intelligence produced in the European theater of operations was HUMINT, and 44 percent of the HUMINT was obtained through interrogations. The majority of those surveyed agreed that interrogation was the most valuable of all collection operations.

The Army Field Manual also notes that during OPERATION DESERT STORM, DoD interrogators collected information that, among other things, helped to: develop a plan to breach Iraqi defensive belts; confirm Iraqi supply-line interdiction by coalition air strikes; identify diminishing Iraqi troop morale; and save the lives of American soldiers in the field.

Mr. GRAHAM. You are absolutely correct Senator KYL. I must admit, I’m a bit baffled by the assertion that our amendment is somehow internally inconsistent, that our provisions interfere with the McCain provisions in some way.

While we must ensure that detainees are treated humanely, and that is why we addressed so well with the McCain portion of our total package, directing our departments and agencies to refrain from cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment; we also don't want to give these detainees the right to abuse our courts. Our courts, sailors, airmen and marines based on how we have decided to treat them. In fact, while it is true that some physical abuses have occurred, we know that members of al-Qaida are trained to claim mistreatment to manipulate public opinion of the war.

I would like to remind all of my colleagues of some of the most egregious cases that prompted our amendments. For instance, a detainee who threw a grenade that killed an Army medic; a medic—someone trying to render medical assistance, and who often treats our enemies on the battlefield as well as our own troops.

In any event, the detainee who threw the grenade that killed an Army medic in a firefight, and who comes from a family with longstanding al-Qaida ties, filed for an injunction forbidding anyone from interrogating him or engaging in "cruel, inhuman, or degrading" treatment of him.

Now clearly, our reaffirmation of America's policy against treating anyone in a cruel, inhuman, or degrading way tells the world that we are not like our enemy. We do not allow our departments or agencies to treat people like that. And if our people do abuse people, we prosecute them to the fullest extent of the law.

However, to allow a detainee access to our courts to contest every aspect of his detention, a person who has fought against the very system he now seeks to make use of, is ludicrous. And for anyone to say that somehow our provisions undermine the McCain provisions or our overall amendment is just as wrong.

Senator McCain, due to his service in our Nation's military, is uniquely qualified to take the lead on these issues. The McCain provisions are about us. How we behave. How we administer. And there is another authoritative statement that the United States of America is that "Shining City on the Hill" President Reagan referred to. I am very proud to have been part of Senator McCain's effort to retake the moral high ground in the war on terror.

The Graham-Kyl provisions are about them, the detainees, and what rights they do and, most importantly, do not have. And I am proud of the provisions we have made for the detainee's status to be reviewed by the Federal courts on the one time direct appeal. We allow for a just process, in the form of military tribunals and boards and commissions, a process based on Supreme Court precedent, modeled on the tribunals we have used in the past and created in accordance with Geneva Convention requirements. That is the process we have established for determining the status of detainees.

But I have gotten a little far a field here, let's get back to the lawsuits. Here is another of the crazy lawsuits out there: there's a suit out there by a detainee accusing military health professionals of "gross and intentional medical malpractice" in violation of the 4th, 5th, 8th, and 14th Amendments, 42 U.S.C. 1981, and other, unspecified, international agreements. Now I don't know about the rest of you, but a detainee has no business in our courts suing the individual doctors and nurses that are making sure that that detainee is in good health.

Here is another one. There is one guy down there that we are trying to send home, and I would tell him to send him home. Imagine that, he is trying to stay.

One high level al-Qaida detainee lawsuit complains about the base security procedures, the speed of the mail, and this medical malpractice. The military is asking the courts to order the marines to transfer him into the "least onerous conditions" at Guantanamo and allow him to keep any books and reading material sent to him.

I think the one is the one that makes the maddest. A high level al-Qaida member, who probably has the blood of 911 on his hands, complaining about the speed of his mail delivery.

Complaining about how onerous the conditions are at Guantanamo.

With the McCain provisions of our amendment, we have, in addition to the President's order and other regulations already in place, directed the Department of Defense to treat him humanely. But under our provisions, he will receive the justice he deserves.

As you can see, these cases have nothing to do with cruel or inhumane treatment. The plaintiffs are abuses of our courts by the very people who are trying to kill Americans here and abroad. I don't know about you, Senator Kyl, but I believe that when you raise arms against the United States, you should not be surprised when you lose the privilege of our court system. As the McCain amendment provisions state very clearly, we are not going to treat people inappropriately. And, Senator Kyl, as our provisions state very clearly, we do not want to make a mockery of our courts, standing beside our own citizens at the courthouse door.

We have provided a fair alternative judicial process for the detainees with which we will treat them and I would challenge anyone who thinks so to come to the Senate floor and debate us on that point.

Mr. Kyl. To be clear, neither the CSRT nor the ARB process is designed to entertain grievance about the conditions of confinement. Is that your understanding as well?

Mr. GRAHAM. And those are the only avenues that have been created where the detainee himself can pursue a remedy on his own in a semi-adversarial forum. These complaints about conditions of confinement, these are for the military itself to enforce through its own procedures and systems of accountability for monitoring its soldiers. And we have no reason to believe that those systems are not adequate to investigate and remedy abuses. For all the attention to cases such as Abu Ghrabi, one thing that deserves emphasis is that it was our own military that discovered, investigated, and punished those abuses. That is as it should be. These standards of treatment are important, but they need to be enforced through the military's own systems of accountability and Congressional oversight, not through lawsuits and adversarial proceedings brought by detainees. The military's own accountability systems ultimately, I think, will be more effective than our adversarial process.

Mr. BROWNBACK. If I might interrupt, I would like to add that I share the understanding of my colleagues from Arizona and South Carolina. I supported the McCain amendments—I think that it is important to ensure that detainees are treated humanely. But I would not support allowing those detainees to file lawsuits against our armed forces, and I wasn't aware that anyone had even suggested that the McCain amendments allow detainees to file lawsuits against us.

Mr. Kyl. No one really argued that the McCain amendments do create a private cause of action, except that some groups have suggested that the Graham-Kyl amendment is somehow inconsistent with the McCain amendments, the implication being that the Graham amendment wiped out the forum for bringing some cause of action that was otherwise created. Obviously, if the McCain amendment did create a private right of action, an amendment would bar the courts from entertaining that action. But the fact alone that the same Congress that adopted the McCain amendment also adopted the Graham-Kyl amendment tends to confirm, I would think, that the McCains amendments never were intended to create a private right of action in the first place.

As a matter of fact, the Supreme Court recently has tightened the standards for spontaneously recognizing such actions in cases where Congress is silent on the matter—I believe it was in the recent case of Alexander against Sandoval. The McCain amendments do... not state that they create a private cause of action. They regulate the conduct of our troops rather than creating rights. And we have alternative means of their enforcement—as my colleague mentioned, through the system of military discipline—and thus we did not need a private cause of action to be implemented. I would be pretty surprised if, under those circumstances, anyone were to argue that the McCain amendment created a private right of action. So Senator From North Carolina is correct, the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment does not take away any cause of action created elsewhere in this bill, because the bill does not create any rights of action. Some members have been arguing that the McCain amendment will establish a standard that perhaps could be employed in another cause of action. That is, of course, true. But if such a cause of action existed in the past, we wanted to re-create it in the future. No cause of action currently available could serve as a vehicle for enforcing the McCain amendment in a private lawsuit, and I think that all the backers of that amendment would agree that the McCain amendments themselves did not create a private right of action. Again, it would be strange to construe this Act as intending such a private action when by the same hand this Congress would take away any forum for asserting such action.

Mr. GRAHAM. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his comments. I'd also like to say a word about the timing of this bill. We drafted this section very carefully and I want our colleagues to know exactly what they will be agreeing to. While our language does respond to the Rascal decision by effectively reversing the Supreme Court's decision without taking away the courts' role in this by addressing two different considerations.

First, as we stated before, we wanted the CSRT process to yield decisions which will be reviewed by the DC Circuit, and we wanted to be sensitive to the Rascal court's concerns about a process for the detainees. So, what we did was make the substantive provisions governing the CSRTs and ARBs apply to all cases, those pending on or after the enactment date. This was to ensure that every detainee was provided with the same protections and review.

Second, regarding the modification of the CSRT, one of those courts currently hearing individual habeas or other actions that have been filed by the detainees, we wanted those cases to be recast as appeals of their CSRT determinations. We believe that is the best way to balance between allowing the detainees to challenge their status, and still allowing effective detention and interrogation techniques. As we all know, a court either has jurisdiction to hear a case or it doesn't. Jurisdiction doesn't attach for all time when the case is filed.

This is really no different than transferring a case from one court to another. But in this case, given the change in the substantive law as well, we were required to extinguish these habeas and other actions in order to effect a transfer of jurisdiction over these cases to the DC Circuit Court and substantive legal change as well.

Mr. KYL. The DC Circuit will have to construe this Act as intending such a private action when by the same hand this Congress would take away any forum for asserting such action.

Mr. GRAHAM. Yes, that is correct. But we do still allow some types of judicial review to go forward—those cases asking for review, in accordance with section 1405, of military commissions or CSRTs. And the very last paragraph of section 1405—I believe that it is paragraph (h)(2)—adopts a compromise of sorts. It states that the bill's authorization for limited DC Circuit review of military commissions shall apply to pending cases. Obviously, no pending case seeks judicial review in the DC Circuit pursuant to section 1405. What this paragraph means is that, at the same time that the court of appeal kicks these cases out of their courtrooms, they can also tell them where they should go next. And if, for example, a case is currently is in the DC Circuit, that court can simply hold in abeyance the request for review of the detainee's CSRT pursuant to subsection (e) of 1405, and allow that claim to go forward in that form.

Mr. KYL. The DC Circuit will have to give the petitioner leave to amend his claim, I assume?

Mr. GRAHAM. Yes, I assume that they will do so. No sense in kicking out a detainee's current habeas action in the DC Circuit just so that he has to file another one in a new venue. It would be better to let the current case go forward as a 1405 review request, as appropriately amended.

Mr. KYL. We agree on that point. The one thing that critics have said about this bill is that it is not a substantive change at all. It is a jurisdiction stripping bill. It strips every court of jurisdiction to hear claims from detainees held in Guantanamo Bay. The courts' rule of construction for these types of statutes is that legislative subspecies of the Supreme Court's appellate jurisdiction. This would be an interesting exam question for a law school class.

The Congress's authority to use this power was affirmed by the Supreme Court in the case of Ex Parte McCardle. That case involved, I believe, an even sharper use of this authority than this bill does—I believe that there the Supreme Court had even more law governing the CSRTs. And Congress stripped the court's jurisdiction over it. The Supreme Court upheld the statute and dismissed Colonel McCardle's case for want of jurisdiction.

Mr. GRAHAM. And we are confident that McCardle still is good law?

Mr. KYL. So long as the Constitution still is good law, I am not aware that the clause in Article III allowing Congress to make exceptions and regulations to Supreme Court appellate jurisdiction has been repealed. I suppose that some might argue that stripping the Supreme Court of jurisdiction over a pending case is unconstitutional if it is driven by some impure motive. But I can't imagine that the court would take away an authority clearly granted to Congress by the Constitution, regardless of what motive one might attribute to us. I am a member of this body, and would have great difficulty arguing in that case before the Supreme Court that the motive or intent to every law that we enact. I don't know how the Supreme Court or any other court could accurately discern such a motive. The laws that we enact have meanings that can be discerned through ordinary rules of construction. I think the rule of law is much more secure when the meaning of legislation is governed by those universally accessible rules of construction rather than through some attempt to psychoanalyze Congress's motive. And in any event, as I recall, this amendment was filed before the Supreme Court even granted review in the Hamdan case. That makes it a little hard to argue that the amendment was motivated by a desire to strip the court of its jurisdiction in that case. I don’t think that the Constitution gives Hamdan a greater right to have his case go forward than it did to Colonel McCord.

Mr. GRAHAM. So once this bill is signed into law, you anticipate that the Supreme Court will determine whether to maintain their grant of certiorari?

Mr. KYL. Yes, in my opinion, the court should dismiss Hamdan for want of jurisdiction. That is what they did in Ex Parte McCord. I assume that we may see an unhappy dissent from the court’s order from one or two of the justices—there may be some members of the court who refuse to accept McCord and article III. But I think that a majority of the court would do the right thing—to send Hamdan back to the military commission, and then allow him to appeal pursuant to section 956 of this bill.

The court also may well request a round of briefing on the effect of the effect on the Hamdan case. I suppose that a lawyer in the SG’s office can look forward to rereading Ex Parte McCord debates in Hart & Wechsler’s. But again, I don’t think that this will change the result.

As for legislative history, I think it usually is regarded as an element of the canons of construction. It gives some indication of what Congress at least understood what it was doing—the context in which a law was enacted. Although, I understand that Justice Scalia does not read legislative history. I suppose that for his sake, we will have to strive to be exceptionally clear in the laws that we write.

Mr. GRAHAM. Let me address another issue. As we worked through this language in conference, we received a lot of comments from our colleagues who were not only about the frivolous cases being filed by al-Qaeda terrorists at Guantanamo, but by people detained by our forces in Iraq.

I believe there are several cases that have been filed by those held in Iraq challenging their detention by American forces. Our language does not address these cases, and let me tell you why.

The Rasul v. Bush decision that we have talked so much about worked two significant changes in prior POW or detainees law. Prior to Rasul, the Eisentrager line of cases had governed whether foreign combatants had access to our courts. In 1950, the Eisentrager court held that a Federal district court lacked authority to hear habeas cases for some German POWs held by U.S. forces outside the U.S. These Germans had been tried and convicted of war crimes by an American military commission headquartered in Nanking, and then put in jail in Germany.

The Court stated six reasons for its decision. The German prisoners were: (1) Enemy aliens who (2) had never been or resided in the United States, (3) were captured outside U.S. territory and then held in military custody, (4) were there tried and convicted by the military (5) for offenses committed there, and (6) were imprisoned there at all times.

The Eisentrager line of cases is the reason the Bush administration chose to locate the al-Qaida and Taliban holding facility at Guantanamo. The Bush administration relied upon the Eisentrager line of cases so as to prevent exactly what we have seen happen since Rasul: terrorists with lawyers. Now I’m a lawyer myself, and I think we can all agree that that is a bad combination.

In fact, if my colleagues will permit me a quick aside, I would remind them again of the statement by one of the lawyers for some of these terrorists, Michael Ratner. Mr. Ratner boasts about the fact that this litigation has undermined intelligence gathering in the war on terror. In an interview published in May of this year Mr. Ratner stated:

The litigation is brutal for the United States. It’s huge. We have over one hundred lawyer now from big and small firms working to release prisoners. They come and an attorney goes down there, it makes it that much harder for the U.S. military to do what they’re doing. You can’t run an interrogation with attorneys. What are they going to do now that we’re getting court orders to get more lawyers down there?

Now that is what we are facing. Terrorists with lawyers. I am pretty sure the American people expect more from their government than that.

But getting back to what I was saying about Eisentrager. The Bush administration relied on the Supreme Court’s decision in Eisentrager when they located the detainees at Guantanamo, reasoning sensibly, at least I think it was sensibly, that since the al-Qaida and Taliban members were enemy aliens who were being held by U.S. forces outside the United States after being captured on the battlefield, that they would not have access to Federal courts.

But then the Supreme Court held in Rasul that the detainees could have access to our courts to challenge their detention. Would my colleague from Arizona care to comment on the Rasul decision?

Mr. KYL. Where to even begin? The U.S. has been accused before in its history of war in peripheral behavior, but I think that this is the first time ever that a portion of a sovereign nation has been annexed to the United States by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Rasul begins with a discussion of two cases that were irrelevant to the question before the court. Ahrens v. Clark and the Braden case. Ahrens had adopted a strict rule that district courts may only hear cases within their territorial jurisdiction. Braden then softened that rule for particular circumstances where a defendant is in prison in one state but under indictment in another, allowing the defendant to bring a habeas action to challenge the indictment in the latter state’s courts. Neither of these cases has anything to do with enemy combatants.

From a discussion of these relatively mundane decisions, the Rasul majority went on to rather startling: that “because Braden overruled the statutory predicate to Eisentrager’s holding, Eisentrager plainly does not preclude the exercise of section 2241 jurisdiction over petitioners’ claims.”

It could almost be a rule of construction that when a lawyer says “plainly” or “clearly,” he usually is identifying the weakest point in his argument. Braden is a case concerned more with the technical aspects of judicial administration than with core questions of the scope of the writ. Eisentrager is different. The Nazi soldiers denied access to the writ in that case did not simply file in the wrong forum—Alabama instead of Kentucky—or at the wrong phase of their sentences. Eisentrager denied review to the Nazi soldiers because they were Nazi soldiers in the custody of the U.S. military in occupied Germany. It is not a case about how we administer the writ of habeas corpus, but about the power of habeas to get to the inbox of a U.S. military official in occupied Germany. It is not a case about how we administer the writ of habeas corpus, but about the power of habeas to get to the inbox of a U.S. military official in occupied Germany. It is not a case about how we administer the writ of habeas corpus, but about the power of habeas to get to the inbox of a U.S. military official in occupied Germany.

Mr. KYL. Let’s bring it back to earth. Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard.

But territorial jurisdiction does matter—a point that the court seems to concede by attempting to annex Guantanamo Bay to the United States. But Cuba is not the United States. Eisentrager should be restored to its rightful place as the precedent that governs litigation attempted by enemy combatants outside of our territory—even for the special case of Guantanamo. Eisentrager was the law of the land for over 50 years, until Rasul carved a hole into it. Through this act, Congress patches that hole and restores Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard. We do this not by applying Eisentrager’s role as the governing standard.

Let me quote two key passages from Eisentrager that explain why enemy combatants outside the United States should not have access to U.S. courts. As that court began by noting, there has been:

"The Eisentrager line of cases is the reason the Bush administration chose to locate the al-Qaida and Taliban holding facility at Guantanamo. The Bush administration relied upon the Eisentrager line of cases so as to prevent exactly what we have seen happen since Rasul: terrorists with lawyers. Now I’m a lawyer myself, and I think we can all agree that that is a bad combination."
Barr had to say about the history of the committee—it persuaded several of us. He concludes: "the Rasul decision is at war with the role that will inevitably detract from the military mission which is the bedrock of our national life, have immersed themselves into the fabric of American society—from the excesses of an oppressive executive or a legislature who has subverted the current government. The determination that a particular foreign person seized on the battlefield is an enemy combatant has always been recognized as a matter committed to the sound judgment of the Commander in Chief and his military forces. There has never been a requirement that our military engage in evidentiary proceedings to establish that each individual captured is, in fact, an enemy combatant.

The concerns that were expressed in the passage from Eisentrager that I quoted earlier also have been expressed by other, more recent commentators, with the present conflict against Islamic extremism in mind. For example, in a 2003 article in George Washington Law Review, law professor John C. Yoo notes the special importance of "interrogating enemy combatants for information about coming attacks" in this time of conflict, and concludes:

"...de novo judicial review threatens to undermine the very effectiveness of the military effort against al-Qaeda. A habeas corpus proceeding requires the disclosure of commanders and intelligence operatives from the field into open court; disrupting covert operations; revealing success to the enemy; and forcing the military to shape its activities to the demands of the judicial process."

Similarly, Andrew McCarthy, a former federal prosecutor who led the case against Sheikh Omar Abdel Rahman, offered a stinging criticism of Rasmus the day after the Supreme Court issued its opinion. He stated that:

"How can it conceivably be appropriate to impose on our soldiers the burdens of stop-and-frisk of street pedestrians. More reports in the middle of fighting a war? Of course they do a measure of that now—after all, it is much in their interest correctly to sort out whom to hold and whom to release. But, until now, that has certainly not been done with the rigor of litigating that will doubtless produce. It is not enough to say, hopefully, that U.S. courts will be indulgent given what's involved. Empirically, judicial demands on governmental procedural compliance become steadily more demanding as the stakes increase, and are recognized as such. It is by determining whether it satisfies some objective standard of proof and that such a judgment must be made by a "neutral" arbiter, ensuring that the world—including that part of it energetically trying to kill Americans—has a forum in which to press its case against the United States.

McCarthy went on to conclude: "Rasul is a dangerous decision. Congress should slam the door on al-Qaeda today."

And again, former Attorney General Barr also commented on this same question—on the impracticality of applying judicial process and standards to questions of the detention of enemy combatants. Because of his authority as the force of the Constitution, he then quoted from his June 15 testimony at length:

"There appear to be courts and critics who continue to claim that the Due Process Clause applies and that the CSRT process does too far enough. I believe these assertions are frivolous. I am aware of no legal precedent that supports the proposition persons confronted by U.S. troops in the zone of battle have Fifth Amendment rights that they can assert against the American troops. On the contrary, there are at least three reasons why the Fifth Amendment has no applicability to such a situation. First, as the Supreme Court has consistently held, the Fifth Amendment does not have extra-territorial application to foreign persons outside the United States. As Justice Kennedy has observed, "The Constitution does not create, nor is it a general principle of law, any juridical relation between our country and some undefined, limitless class of non-citizens." Second, as far as I am aware, prior to their capture, none of the detainees had taken any voluntary act to place themselves under the protection of our laws; their only connection with the United States is that they confronted U.S. troops on the battlefield. And finally, the nature of the power being used against these individuals is not the domestic law enforcement power—we are not seeking to subject these individuals to the obligations and sanctions of our domestic laws—rather, we are seeking to effectuate our war aims against foreign enemies, a context in which the concept of Due Process is inapposite."

In society today, we see a tendency to impose the judicial model on virtually every field of decision-making. The notion is that the propriety of any decision can be judged against these individuals is not the domestic law enforcement power—we are not seeking to subject these individuals to the obligations and sanctions of our domestic laws—rather, we are seeking to effectuate our war aims against foreign enemies, a context in which the concept of Due Process is inapposite. In society today, we see a tendency to impose the judicial model on virtually every field of decision-making. The notion is that the propriety of any decision can be judged against these individuals is not the domestic law enforcement power—we are not seeking to subject these individuals to the obligations and sanctions of our domestic laws—rather, we are seeking to effectuate our war aims against foreign enemies, a context in which the concept of Due Process is inapposite.
These efforts flow from a fundamental error—confusion between two very distinct constitutional realms. In the domestic realm of law enforcement, the government’s role is disciplined enforcement of rules for an errant minority of society for transgressing the internal rules of the body politic. The Framers recognized that in the name of maintaining domestic tranquility an errant minority of society could oppress the very body politic it is meant to protect. The government itself could not be “involved in the business of war.”

Thus our Constitution makes the fundamental decision to sacrifice efficiency in the realm of law enforcement by guaranteeing that no man can be made to suffer the absence of virtual certainty of individual guilt. Both the original Constitution and the Bill of Rights contain a number of specific constraints on the Executive’s law enforcement powers, many of which expressly provide for a judicial role as a neutral arbiter or “check” on executive power. In this realm, the Executive’s subjective judgments are irrelevant; it must gather and present objective evidence of guilt satisfying specific constitutional standards at each stage of a criminal proceeding. The underlying premise in this realm is that it is better for society to suffer the cost of the guilty going free than mistakenly to deprive an innocent person of life or liberty.

The situation is entirely different in armed conflict where the entire nation faces an eternal threat. In armed conflict, the body politic is foreign to the domestic discipline and powers to sanction an errant member, rather it is exercising its national defense powers to neutralize the external threat and preserve the very foundation of all our civil liberties. Here the Constitution is not concerned with handicapping the government to preserve other values. Rather it is designed to maximize the government’s efficiency to achieve victory—even at the cost of “collateral damage” that would be unacceptable in the domestic realm.

Attorney General Barr brought these concerns into relief with the following hypothetical example:

Let me posit a battlefield scenario. American troops are pinned down by sniper fire from a village. As the troops advance, they see two suspicious figures who run down a road which the troops believe they had received sniper fire. The troops believe they are probably enemy combatants. Is it really being suggested that the Constitution vests those men with due process rights as against the American soldiers? When do these rights arise? If the troops shoot and kill them—i.e., deprive them of life—could it be a violation of due process? Suppose they are wounded and it turns out they were not enemy forces. Does this give rise to Bivens’ Constitutional tort actions for violation of due process? Alternatively, suppose the fleeing men are captured and held as enemy combatants. Does the due process Clause mean that the American military must divert its energies and resources from fighting the war and dedicate them to investigating the claims of innocence of these two men?

This illustrates military decisions are not susceptible to judicial administration and supervision. There are simply no judicially-manageable standards to either govern or oversee military operations or commands. Such decisions inevitably involve the weighing of risks. One can easily imagine situations in which there is an appreciable risk that the military may err in the absence of law, but significant uncertainty and not a preponderance of evidence. Nevertheless, the circumstances may be such that the President makes a judgment that prudence dictates treating such a person as hostile in order to avoid an unacceptable risk to our troops. By their nature, these military judgments must rest upon a broad range of information, opinion, prediction, and even surmise. The President’s assessment may include reports from his military and diplomatic advisors, field commanders, intelligence sources, or sometimes just the opinion of frontline troops. He must decide what weight to give these sources when he must evaluate risks in light of the present state of the conflict and the overall military and political objectives of the campaign.

Attorney General Barr goes on to consider the implications of applying civilian due process concepts in the context of military detention of enemy combatants:

The imposition of such procedures would fundamentally alter the character and mission of our combat troops. To the extent that the decisions to detain persons as enemy combatants are based in part on the circumstances of the initial encounter on the battlefield and the facts and circumstances that have to concern themselves with developing and preserving evidence as to each individual they capture, at the same time as they confront their enemy on the battlefield. They would be diverted from their primary mission—the rapid destruction of the enemy by all means at their disposal—to taking notes on the conduct of particular individuals in the field of battle. Like policeman, they would also face the prospect of removal from the battlefield to give evidence at post-hoc proceedings.

Nor would such procedures be compatible with the due process theory; the military would have to take on the further burden of detailed investigation of detainees’ factual claims once they are taken to the rear. Again, this would radically change the nature of the military enterprise. To establish the capacity to conduct individualized investigations and adversarial hearings as to every detained combatant would make the conduct of war—especially irregular warfare—vastly more cumbersome and expensive. For every platoon of combat troops that wars would have to field three platoons of lawyers, investigators, and paralegals. Such a result would inject legal uncertainty into our military operations. The military would be writing the war into demonstrating the individual “fault” of persons confronted in the field of battle, and thereby uniquely disadvantage our military vis-a`-vis every other fighting force in the world.

Second, the introduction of an ultimate decision maker outside of the normal chain of command, or altogether outside the Executive Branch, would disrupt the unitary chain of command and undermine the confidence of frontline troops in their superior officers. The military is itself already overburdened with rule command decisions regarding battlefield tactics and set free prisoners of war whom American soldiers have risked or given their lives to capture. The effect of such a prospect on military discipline and morale is impossible to predict.

Attorney General Barr also noted that “Supreme Court’s decision in Rasul was a statutory ruling, not a constitutional ruling, and went to point out:

An important consequence follows: Congress remains free to restrict or even to eliminate entirely the ability of enemy aliens to bring habeas corpus petitions. Congress could consider enacting legislation that does so—one by creating special procedural rules for enemy alien detainees, by requiring any such habeas petitions to be filed in a particular court, or by prohibiting enemy aliens from hauling military officials into court altogether.

Obviously, the Congress has taken the former Attorney General up on his suggestion, particularly the third variation of it.

I should also say a few words about military commissions. The Judiciary Committee also heard enlightening testimony on the history of these commissions. Former Attorney General Barr commented on them as follows:

Throughout our history we have used military tribunals to try enemy forces accused of engaging in war crimes. Shortly after the attacks of 9/11, the President established military commissions to address war crimes committed by members of al-Qaeda and their Taliban supporters.

Again, our experience in World War II provides a useful analog. While the vast majority of Axis prisoners were simply held as enemy aliens, many casualties were in fact enemy combatants. When such prisoners were convened at various times during the war, and in its immediate aftermath, to try particular Axis prisoners for war crimes. One of the most noteworthy cases involved American troops at Malmedy during the Battle of the Bulge. The German troops responsible for these violations were tried before military commissions.

As an aside, those disturbed by the tendency of some in the press and political class to take the side of the Guantánamo detainees—of those captured while at war with America—might find it interesting that the same phenomenon developed with regard to the Malmedy detainees. The Malmedy German soldiers were tried and convicted of massacring American POWs near the Belgian village of Malmedy during the Battle of the Bulge. This crime unambiguously occurred—the bodies of over 80 U.S. soldiers were recovered in a mass grave on a hillside above the town. Members of the German unit responsible for this crime later were captured and tried by a military commission. Over the years, those Nazi soldiers, at least some of whom unquestionably massacred American G.I.s, somehow managed to turn the tables on the U.S. military in the press and in political circles. Senator Joseph McCarthy took up their cause, as did other Senators. The most fanciful allegations of abuse made by these Nazi murderers were in fact turned around to support the side of the Guantánamo detainees—of those captured while at war with America—by whom it was to the military advantage to declare the killers innocent of all crimes ever committed by the American military in the press and in political circles.
resulted from such misplaced sympathy so far in this war pale in comparison to those that followed from Malmedy.

Perhaps first among those who would object to any sympathizing with the Guantanamo would draw McCarthy, the former Federal antiterror prosecutor. He has written often on this and other war-on-terror topics. I was pleased to see that shortly after legislation allowing first passed the Senate, he wrote a column for National Review Online lauding our efforts. It was titled “Restoring Law and Order,” and McCarthy’s only complaint was that “it has taken our national legislature nearly a year and a half—during all of which we have been at war—to stir itself to address this serious national-security problem.” So you can imagine my disappointment when, just two days later, Mr. McCarthy posted another column commenting on the final Senate language, which include some compromises to ensure bipartisan support. This column was titled “Snatching Defeat from the Jaws of Victory.” Some of its language I won’t recite here. But its specific complaints bear scrutiny. Mr. McCarthy alleged that “the senators resolved Tuesday that the ultimate decision about who is properly considered an ‘enemy combatant,’ should rest with federal courts, not our military commanders.” As he characterized the final Senate language, “a panel of robed lawyers will second-guess the determination of [our soldiers] commanders on scene that certain captives warranted detention—that holding them would be beneficial to the war effort.” Similarly, with regard to military commissions, Mr. McCarthy complained that “everything that happens in the commission would be reviewed by judges if this measure passes.”

I do not think that these words are an accurate characterization of the Senate-passed language. I think that Mr. McCarthy probably relied on inaccurate characterizations of the language published in the press at the time rather than on the language itself. Nevertheless, Mr. McCarthy’s complaints did cause me and others to take another look at the language, to make sure that it does what we intended.

Limited judicial review of the decisions of the CSRTs and military commissions is authorized by paragraphs 2 and 3 of subsection 1405(e) of the conference report. These paragraphs authorize the same two narrow judicial inquiries into the “status determinations” and “final decisions” of the CSRTs and military commissions. The differentiations and “reaching final decisions” for the military commissions.

The review authorized by each of these paragraphs goes only to the following questions: did the CSRTs and commissions use the standards and procedures identified by the Secretary of Defense, and is the use of these systems to either continue the detention of enemy combatants or try them for war crimes consistent with the Constitution and Federal law? The first inquiry I think is straightforward: did the military follow its own rules? This inquiry does not ask whether the military reached the correct result by applying its rules, even whether those rules were properly applied to the facts. The inquiry is simply whether the right rule was employed.

As to the second inquiry, here the language has been further modified in order to make clear the narrow scope of the inquiry. The original Senate language spoke of whether “subjecting” an enemy combatant to the CSRT or commission systems was constitutional and legal. This formulation was to invite an as-applied challenge. All that this language asks is whether using these systems is good enough for the ends that they serve—to justify continued detention or to try an enemy combatant for war crimes. The only thing that this provision authorizes is, in effect, a facial challenge. In fact, we anticipate that once the District of Columbia Circuit decides these questions in one case, at least so long as military orders do not substantially change, that decision will operate as circuit precedent in cases with no need to relitigate this second inquiry in the future. In effect, the second inquiry—into the constitutionality and lawfulness of the use of CSRTs and commissions—need only be decided once by the court.

It bears quoting some of the thinking that undergirds the establishment of these review standards. Attorney General Barr, in his June 5 testimony before the Judiciary Committee, described the approach that paragraph 2’s scope of review for CSRTs is designed to reflect:

"It seems to me that the kinds of military decisions at issue here—namely, what and who possesses a military operation—are quintessentially Executive in nature. They are not amenable to the type of process we employ in the domestic law enforcement. The process that has been devised for these purposes is not neat legal formulas, purely objective tests and evidentiary standards. They necessarily require the exercise of prudential judgment in which the President is one of the reasons why the Constitution vests ultimate military decision-making in the President as Commander-in-Chief. If the concept of Commander-in-Chief meant it, must mean that the office holds the final authority to direct how, and against whom, military power is to be applied to achieve the military and political objectives of the campaign."

I am not speaking here of “deference” to Presidential decisions. In some contexts, courts are fond of saying that they “owe deference” to some Executive decisions. But this suggests that the court has the ultimate decision-making authority and is only giving weight to the judgment of the Executive. This is not a question of deference—the point here is that the ultimate substantive decision rests with the President and that courts have no authority to substitute their judgments for that of the President.

And the thinking that underlies paragraph 3’s scope of military-commission decisions is well articulated in Johnson v. Eisentrager:

"It is not for us to say whether these prisoners were or were not guilty of a war crime, or whether if we were to retry the case we would agree to the findings of fact or the application of the laws of war made by the Military Commission. The petition shows that these prisoners were formally accused of violating the laws of war and fully informed of particulars of these charges. As we observed in the Yamashita case, ‘If the military tribunals have lawfully, fairly, and impartially decided, their action is not subject to judicial review merely because they have made a wrong decision on disputed factual questions. Correction of their errors belongs not for the courts but for the military authorities which are alone authorized to review their decisions.’ "We consider here only the lawful powers of the President to try the petitioner for the offense charged."

There is another matter that I should mention before I yield the floor to my colleague from South Carolina. Some have raised the concern that the “territorial-jurisdiction” rule for habeas courts, in the end the decision appears to be based on the unique status of the naval station at Guantanamo Bay—the permanent nature of the lease, for example, which can only be terminated by the Congress. Justice Kennedy adopted a similar focus in his concurring opinion. I believe that Justice Kennedy’s concurrence goes so far as to declare that Guantanamo is in practical respects a U.S. territory.

Some have raised the concern that the logic of Rasul will be extended to U.S. military and intelligence detention facilities in Iraq or Afghanistan. I think that such an extension would be very foolish and I do not think that the court will go there. I don’t think that the Supreme Court is going to declare parts of Afghanistan or Iraq to be the territory of the United States. If the court does so, we can of course legislatively overrule it, as we legislatively overruled the Rasul today. I do not think that it is either necessary, or respectful of the court’s capacity for common sense, to preemptively overrule such an outlandish hypothetical decision. Does the Senator from South Carolina disagree?"

Mr. GRAHAM. Yes, my friend from Arizona is correct, our language applies only to Guantanamo just because we understand that the Supreme Court only extended the jurisdiction of the courts over the detainees held at Guantánamo. And since the Rasul decision was based on the habeas statute in the U.S. Code, I am very comfortable amending that statute as a proper congressional response to the Court's decision.

As I stated repeatedly to a number of my colleagues, we did not want to deprive the courts of jurisdiction to hear cases filed on behalf of detainees in Iraq. But we are confident that, as the law stands now, those cases are already barred by previous Supreme Court decisions, which the Rasul decision left in place.

We should always be careful when dealing with our co-equal branches. Just as we do not appreciate it when they stray into our areas of constitutional responsibility, we should always be willing to refrain from straying into theirs unnecessarily. As I read the Rasul decision, the other cases that the other parts of the world are still subject to the Eisentrager opinion and will not be considered by U.S. courts.

And so, our language is limited to Guantánamo. To my friends who counseled us to expand our jurisdiction modification to those cases being filed on behalf of Iraqis held in accordance with the Geneva Convention, I would just counsel them to be patient. I cannot imagine the Court extending its jurisdiction halfway around the world to involve what is almost exclusively an executive branch function. However, should that become necessary, I am perfectly willing to modify our courts' jurisdiction again to ensure that does not happen. But again, in truth, especially after our very robust action here today, I cannot even conceive of such a decision by the Supreme Court.

Mr. KYL. Well, that is what I thought before Rasul was decided. But we can cross that bridge if we get to it.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I would also like my esteemed colleague from Arizona, Senator Kyl, to address the misunderstandings that seem to have made their way into the press. For instance, when I returned from Iraq this morning, I was surprised to see the New York Times editorial page making some fundamental mistakes about what our legislation does.

I would also request unanimous consent to have the New York Times editorial entitled Ban Torture. Period. from December 16, 2005 entered in the RECORD.

The first sentence reads, "It should have been unmitigated good news when President Bush finally announced yesterday that he would back Senator John McCain's proposal to ban torture and "cruel, inhuman or degrading" treatment at United States prison camps. Nothing should be more obvious for an administration that says it will "not permit a port on torture." I agree, nothing should be more obvious. And I'd like to applaud the New York Times for finally endorsing the actions President Reagan took when we signed the Convention Against Torture on April 18, 1988, and the Senate ratified the Convention on October 21, 1994.

But since they appear to be laboring under a misapprehension, I'd like to help them clarify how and when our antitorture statutes apply. First, torture has been illegal for quite some time. Indeed, Section 2340A of Title 18 of the United States Code specifically provides for the prosecution of people who torture overseas. And most of the techniques of torture, beatings, improper imprisonment, and threats have long been part of the criminal code of the United States.

I strongly supported Senator McCain's amendment each and every time it came up. I am extremely pleased it passed. But, make no mistake, it does not make torture illegal. Torture has long been illegal. What the McCain language does is make a very clear statement that our military personnel mistreat our prisoners humanely while we have them in our custody. The McCain amendment is a very clear policy statement that is in accord with the best of American tradition. But it does not ban torture. Accordin to the Graham-Levin-Kyl provisions do not equivocate in any way regarding torture. The Times editors, regrettably, for I appreciate the place the Times holds in our public discourse, do not appear to understand what they said.

I would like to address one other statement the Times makes. They state, and I quote, that "What is at stake here, and so harmful to America's reputation, is the routine mistreatment of prisoners swept up in the so-called war on terror." Now I take great exception to this baseless smear of our soldiers and marines. It is said off-handedly, almost as if everyone takes it for granted that the fine men and women of our armed services routinely mistreat the prisoners in their care. I believe they follow the orders that their superiors give them, orders based on such policy statements as Senator McCain's or the Army Field Manual, and they follow them to the best of their ability.

Now, where is there going to be bad apples? As a former JAG prosecutor and defense counsel, I can tell you affirmatively, yes, there will be. And they will be arrested, tried, convicted, and will serve long sentences. Those few individuals who do not live up to high standards of the vast majority of our honorable service members, will be held accountable for their actions.

Our troops do not deserve such a slander, and I call on the New York Times to take back the vile assertion they have made against the people who exemplify the best our Nation has to offer.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I see that we are nearing the end of our allotted time. If I could quickly address a few other minor issues and summarize briefly. It is important to note that the limited judicial review authorized by paragraphs 2 and 3 of the legislation (S 1426) is not habeas corpus review. It is a limited judicial review of its own nature. All habeas actions are terminated by this bill. I hope that this change will also put to rest any arguments that extending habeas to Guantánamo extends to them some type of substantive rights. I do not believe that supposition is correct because habeas is a vehicle for asserting rights, not a source of rights. The fact that an individual has access to habeas does not mean that he has any of the rights that he asserts. But in any event, because this bill leaves no habeas in place, that debate need not be rejoined.

Some have suggested that by vesting exclusive jurisdiction in the DC circuit for the paragraph 2 and 3 appeals, this bill bars even Supreme Court appellate review. That was not the framers' intent and believe that it is a correct reading of the legislative language. Supreme Court review is implicit, or rather, authorized elsewhere in statute, for all judicial decisions. It is rarely mentioned expressly.

In fact, when it is sometimes to preempt Supreme Court review. For example, the limited success habeas petitions for state prisoners in section 2241 bars petitions for certiorari following a three-judge panel's decision. It is a legislative decision. It is a limited judicial review authorized by this bill. I hope that this change will be successful. I believe that the United States will not subject any individual to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, we are better able to wage and win the war on terror. And if we were not able to learn about the work of the chairman, the ranking member, and other members of this committee, including most notably the Senator from South Carolina.

I would also like to thank the President and the national security advisor for their efforts in resolving the difficult issues underlying the amendment. In reaching agreement, we make sure that the world knows that the United States does not condone or practice inhuman or degrading treatment. During our talks, the administration raised legitimate concerns about legal claims.
facing civilian interrogators. Based on these concerns, the bill includes language that will allow accused civilian interrogators—like military interrogators—a robust defense if a person of ordinary sense and understanding would have believed he was following a lawful directive. It further includes language providing legal counsel to interrogators. These provisions are modeled on provisions drawn from the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Unlike the current treatment provisions, Congress has clearly spoken that the prohibition against torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment should be enforced and that anyone engaging in or authorizing such conduct, whether at home or overseas, is violating the law. Sections 1402 and 1403 of Title XIV of this bill do not create a new private right of action. At the same time, these provisions do not eliminate or diminish any private right of action otherwise available. It is our intent that this is not in any way by the affirmative defense added in the new section.

Mr. GRAHAM. I was pleased to support this legislation and work toward its enactment from the beginning. Under section 1402, our troops now have one standard—the Army Field Manual—for their interrogations. In section 1403, we close the loophole in the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. As National Security Advisor Stephen Hadley said, “those standards, as a technical, legal matter, did not apply abroad. And that is what Senator MCCAIN was concerned about. And this legislation is designed to make clear that those would apply abroad. We applied them abroad as a matter of policy; he wanted to make sure they applied as a matter of law. And when this legislation is adopted, it will.”

Mandatory provisions do not create a new private right of action, but that they are binding on the executive and may be applicable to actions brought under other statutes. Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have a letter from Mr. Ed Tong printed in the RECORD for the consideration of the fiscal year 2006 Defense Authorization Act. The letter reflects the view of a supporter of the minority small business contracting program, which is reauthorized in this bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ASIAN, INC.
Hon. Edward M. Kennedy, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Kennedy: I write to urge you to support the reauthorization of the Department of Defense 1207 program. The program has been repeatedly reauthorized since its original enactment, and it remains necessary today. Minorities have historically been disadvantaged with regard to the awarding of federal, state, and municipal contracts. The impact of such discrimination and exclusion has been especially felt in Northern California—and specifically within the San Francisco Bay Area.

The 1992 Minority Business Census of the U.S. Census Bureau reported that San Francisco has over 16,533 minority-owned businesses. San Francisco is home to the largest number of minority-owned businesses outside of the San Francisco Bay area. In 2000, the Bay Area had 278,087 minority businesses and 77,009 minority business establishments. These businesses had sales revenue of $113.8 billion.

San Francisco is the economic, social and cultural center of the Asian Pacific American community in the United States. It is the largest city in the United States with the greatest diversity, and the 2000 Census showed that nearly one quarter of the city’s population is Asian American. Asians are well represented in all areas of the city’s economy, from high technology to construction to retail.

Minority businesses are critical to San Francisco’s economy and its future development. The State of California, the U.S. Department of Defense, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Small Business Administration, and many banks and other private lenders, still discriminate against minority businesses.

The Asian Pacific American Commission on Fair Housing and Community Development, a local non-profit organization that promotes economic development and fair housing in underserved communities, found that San Francisco has the highest concentration of fair housing needs in the United States.

Asian businesses continue to be victimized by unfair hiring practices and discrimination. This is a persistent problem that has been ongoing and is constantly evolving. The San Francisco Bay Area continues to be a vibrant center of Asian business activity, with many businesses enjoying success.

In my role as ASIAN, INC’s Program Manager, I have had personal experience in speaking with Asian American businesses dealing with discriminatory treatment. ASIAN, INC. is a nonprofit technical assistance and research organization that works to strengthen the infrastructure of Asian American communities in Northern California and to assist customs in the state’s community and economic development.

For example, I personally have heard of cases of discrimination affecting minority businesses. For instance, a minority business owner in San Francisco encountered discrimination in obtaining a loan from a bank.

ANALYSIS OF SPECIFIC ISSUES:

A. BARRIERS TO BUSINESS OWNERSHIP

1. DISCRIMINATION IN LOANS

In 2000, the San Francisco Bay Area had $113.8 billion in sales revenue. Many Asian American businesses were able to obtain contracts through the Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization (OSDBU), which provides technical assistance to small and disadvantaged businesses.

ASIAN, INC. has been in operation for 34 years. Over that time, we have assisted in the development of over 500 disadvantaged businesses obtain business contracts. We work to strengthen the infrastructure of minority businesses by helping them to access new markets, increase their revenue, and improve their competitiveness.

Despite the large number of minority businesses, discrimination continues to pose barriers for many of the businesses with which we work. Because ASIAN, INC.’s role has been to provide strategic information and technical assistance in order to provide minority businesses with the necessary tools to compete in mainstream society—including achieving success for their businesses and participating in public decision-making—the organization has been in a position to witness the experiences of Asian American businesses in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Notably, several Asian American businesses came to ASIAN, INC. for assistance after the OLSE imposed significant penalties upon their businesses. These businesses no opportunity to rectify any alleged violations prior to making a finding, or to present their sides of the story. Initially there was no appeals process built into the Ordinance. To the presidents and owners of these businesses, it felt as if the OLSE was targeting them because they were minority-owned and because of the ongoing disputes between Asian businesses and the trade unions in the area. The targeting of Asian American businesses by OLSE for inspection and audits made obtaining contracts difficult when it became known that a business was being inspected by the OLSE.

ASIAN, INC. ’s work with the OLSE is by no means unique but rather involves merely one of many types of discrimination experienced by the Asian American businesses that contact our organization. In fact, the OLSE situation is quite emblematic of the underly ing problems that minority businesses face. Discrimination is not limited to the local or municipal level. Asian American businesses have experienced discrimination in the awarding of local agency contracts, the issuance of bonds and insurance policies, and the provision of necessary materials and marketing tools by state agencies.

For example, I personally have heard of complaints/testimonials from minority business owners, such as:

The use of racial slurs or epithets against minority owned or employees, One Asian firm owner used workers of Mexican ancestr try on a job, and other white subcontractors challenged him and asked “Why are your illegal workers on my job site.” Also, an institution might use the minority-owned business “Your kind are the majority now.” For another Asian American owner, when his work-tors took items from the trash bins he was told to pay six times the wages from diversions.

“You may be a nice guy, but you are not one of us.”

The exclusion of minority businesses from information on business networks such as the Associated General Contractors. Or not invited to go golfing with them, even when the other group was looking for a foursome.

The provision of different quotes from suppliers to companies depending upon the race of the prime contractor.

The existence of the old boys network to bar minority firms when doing public works projects (and the locale’s program encourages minority participation) but not ask them to bid on their private works projects.

This was also true for a general contractor (SJ Amoroso) that uses minority firms in their public works projects but one white sub-contractor almost exclusively for their roofing work, in their private works projects.

The existence of the old boys network to justify business with one’s own ethnic groups. For example, with Asian firms that have become prime contractors, white subcontractors often won’t bid for the subcontract work that was a result of their bids, but white subcontractors will not be asked to provide a certified payroll. In another case with an institution in the City, the inspector would not approve the work, and make additional demands that were not put in writing. For example, he demand that a electrical panel be explosion proof though it was not required by the specs. He also demanded that materials be UL (Underwriters Laboratories) listed although the specs gave no such direction. Also, when the probable prime contractor reported the error of his white subcontractor to the engineer, he was told that this was not acceptable. However, when the black subcontractor reported his error to the white engineer the error was allowed to stand without correction.

The bundling of contracts which minority businesses could bid for if not for bundling. For example, when work is required for a number of school sites, a number of 3-4 schools may be bundled even when the type of work is different. This will bring the total project and bonding requirements to $10 million dollar when without bundling the individual projects would cost about $3 million dollars.

The tendency to pay minority contractors slower or not at all compared to white contractors. For example, San Francisco city departments charge large minorities for a similar reputation for paying in a timely manner and so the cumulative debt on a number of projects/contracts owed to Asian businesses has been $30 million dollars.

The provision of different quotes from suppliers to companies depending upon the race of the prime contractor, or to provide those supplies at an exorbitant rate to a minority contractor.

The refusal to provide higher capacity bonds.

Our nation’s small businesses are the backbone of this country’s economy and the obstacles that impede the successes of U.S. businesses have enormous impact on the local economies these businesses support as well as the nation at large. This is especially true for minority businesses that not only contribute to the country’s economic base but have also traditionally provided jobs for minority youth and adults in ways that majority businesses cannot. As such, removing obstacles facing minority businesses is critical not only for our economy but for our nation’s minority youth.

Minority participation must right to expect unbiased treatment in the awarding of contracts. The 1207 Program is a valuable means by which the federal government demonstrates its commitment to the areas of government contracts. It is vitally important that the federal government understands and rectifies some of the problems faced by minority businesses across the country. The government’s commitment to equality in the economic marketplace is an ongoing responsibility of our government, and the reauthorization of 1207 not only is in keeping with the spirit of that commitment but provides leadership by example to local government, banks, customers and suppliers that interact with minority businesses around the country.

Respectfully submitted,

EDMUND Y. TONG,
Program Manager, Business & Economic Development Division,

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, the Senate is considering today the Department of Defense authorization conference report for the 2006 fiscal year. As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I have attended numerous hearings participated in the markup of this legislation. And I want to commend the Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senator WARNER, and the ranking member, Senator LEVIN, for the serious, bipartisan approach they took in preparing the Senate version of the bill.

The DOD authorization bill is critically important, particularly with our service members and women are serving bravely in Afghanistan and Iraq around the world. We owe it to our men and women in uniform to do everything we can to support them.

While what has emerged from conference is not perfect, the bill contains a wealth of positive provisions in keeping with the responsibility of Congress to our men and women in uniform.

When we first considered the DOD authorization bill in July, the Senate accepted an amendment Senator GRA-HAM and I offered to make Tricare available to all National Guard members and reservists during the House-

Senate conference, we reached a compromise which will offer great opportunities for Guard members and reservists to join the Tricare Program.

At all times, approximately 40 percent of the men and women serving in Iraq are members of the National Guard and Reserve, and as Guard members and reservists are a serving in a new and expanding role in the global war on terror, we ought to do all we can to ensure that they and women have the services and support they need and deserve. This bill marks further progress in this effort, increasing access to health benefits for our National Guard and Reserve and their families in New York and around the country. Providing the Guard and Reerves, as well as their families, with adequate support and benefits is the least that a grateful nation can do.

Under the provisions of this bill, the Selected Reserve are eligible to enroll in the military health care program. The premiums are based on categories of eligibility:

Category 1: Members of the Selected Reserve who are called to active duty qualify for TRICARE Reserve Select, TRS. Under this program, established last year, a reservist would accumulate 1 year of TRS coverage for every 90 days of Active-Duty service. Monthly premiums during the years of accumulated eligibility are only 28 percent of the program cost. The Government picks up the remaining 72 percent. As has always been the case, coverage is free of charge while on active duty. They are now notified of earned periods of coverage for frequently deployed personnel. In addition, it authorizes 6 months of transitional coverage for family members following the death of the Reserve member, if the member dies while in an inactive status.

Category 2: Members of the Selected Reserve who are not called to active duty and who otherwise do not qualify for health insurance due to unemployment or lack of employer-provided coverage are eligible to enroll in TRICARE for a 50-percent cost-sharing premium. The Government will pay the remaining 50-percent.

Category 3: Members of the Selected Reserve who do not fit into either of the above categories but would like to participate in TRICARE are eligible to do so for an 85-percent cost share. Employers are allowed and encouraged to contribute to the reservist’s share. The Government contributes 15 percent of these costs.

This compromise is an important step forward in improving health care access for our Nation’s guardsmen and reservists.

It is important to note as well that this expansion was the fruit of a bipartisian effort by Senator GRAHAM and myself, along with my colleagues Senator LEAHY and Senator DEWINE.

The conference report also includes another provision I offered, this one with Senator COLLINS, to improve financial education for our soldiers. It is a problem that has plagued military service men and women for years: a lack of general knowledge about the insurance and other financial services available to them.

This provision instructs the Secretary of Defense to carry out a comprehensive education program for military members regarding public and private financial services, including life insurance and the marketing practices of these services, available to them. This education will be institutionalized in initial and recurrin training for members of the military. This is important so that we don’t just make an instantaneous improvement, but a truly lasting benefit to members of the military.

The legislation also requires that counseling services on these issues be made available, upon request, to members and their spouses. It is very important to include the spouses in this program because we all know that investment decisions should be made as a family. Too many times, a military spouse who returned from a deployment alone, while a husband or wife is deployed.

This amendment requires that during counseling of members or spouses regarding life insurance, counselors must include information on the availability of Servicemembers’ Group Life Insurance, SGLI, as well as other available products.

I am happy that my fellow Senators support this legislation and proud that the amendment was adopted in conference.

The legislation also includes a provision which will ensure the availability of special pay for members during rehabilitative treatment from wounds, injuries, and illnesses incurred in a combat zone. Earlier this year, I learned of the story of Army SPC Jeffrey Loria, who was encountering pay problems while recovering at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. My inquiry to the Army in this matter revealed Specialist Loria’s problems and also led to the discovery of pay problems for at least 129 other soldiers. I continued to follow up on the plight of wounded soldiers when I questioned each of the service secretaries about this topic in early March 2005, asking if they would support efforts to ensure that wounded Guard members and reservists did not lose their combat pay allowance while in a military hospital. Their unanimous answer was yes. I am proud to see the provision incorporated into the bill.

In addition, I am pleased that the House and Senate have agreed to provide hundreds of members of the National Guard who served at Ground Zero after the terrorist attacks the full Federal retirement credit for their service that they deserve. Many of the soldiers who served at Ground Zero, often for extended periods, were not officially put on Federal active duty and so did not receive retirement credit. I was proud to fight for this legislation as a House-Senate conference, and I want to thank Congresswoman Maloney and Congresswoman King for their hard work to see the provision through the House of Representatives. I applaud Congress for accepting our arguments for those brave men and women of the National Guard who gave their all after the September 11 attacks and absolutely deserve this credit. I am also glad to see that the final conference report includes no language to restrict the role that women can play in our Armed Forces. Women have a long history of proud service in our Armed Forces, and more than 200,000 women currently serve, making up approximately 17 percent of the total force. Thousands of women are currently serving bravely in Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere. During my own visit to Iraq last March, I discovered that many of my colleagues who have also visited Iraq can also attest—I witnessed women performing a wide range of tasks in a dangerous environment.

Our soldiers, both men and women, volunteered to serve our Nation. They are performing magnificently. There should be no change to existing policies that would decrease the roles or positions available to women in the Armed Forces. Earlier this year, I introduced, along with several of my colleagues, a sense-of-the Senate resolution stating that there should be no change to existing laws, policies, or regulations that would decrease the roles or positions available to women in the Armed Forces.

Finally, I want to highlight several other provisions in the legislation that honor the commitment of this Congress to our men and women in uniform. The final bill includes a 3.1-percent pay raise for all military personnel as well as increases to the maximum amount of assignment incentive pay and hardship duty pay that our servicemen and servicewomen receive. The bill also calls for an increase of $60 million for childcare and family assistance services to Active-Duty and Reserve military families.

Also included were measures to bolster the support and gratitude our Nation shows for the families of our men and women in uniform who have lost their lives in service to our country. The bill increases the survivor benefits to $100,000 for all Active Duty military decedents; payments would be retroactive, to include all those lost since the commencement of Operation Enduring Freedom. During conference, the conference report increases TRICARE benefits for the surviving children of those who have lost their lives while on active duty and calls for the establishment of a uniform policy on casualty assistance to improve the services provided to survivors and next of kin.

I am proud to support these provisions and proud to do all I can for these families.

Deeper into the positive sections of the conference report, many of which I have outlined above, there are also portions of the authorization bill that are deeply troubling. I fear that included in a bill that does so much to support our men and women in uniform are provisions that might also do a disservice to these brave Americans.

One in particular is the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment, included in the conference report, governing the treatment of detainees at Guantanamo Bay. Like all of my colleagues, I am deeply troubled by the circumstances that have opened our Federal courts to enemy combatants. Senator Graham is correct that the present level of accessibility to our courts by individuals who would do us harm is unprecedented in our Nation’s history.

However, the seeds of this situation were sown when the President chose to accept our arguments for the rule of law. Rather than treating our detainees in accordance with the governing principles of military engagement, he chose to institute policies that demonstrate disrespect for the rule of law that resulted in lessening our country’s moral standing in the world. Had the President chosen instead to respect international conventions that provide due process protections, we would not be facing the unprecedented problem of having to make our courts open to our enemies.

I agree that this is an area long overdue for reform. Although it left much to be desired, I voted in favor of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment in its original form because it was an improvement over a harsh measure that would have eliminated almost entirely a detainee’s ability to challenge his or her detention. In conference, however, House negotiators once again undermined much of the thoughtful deliberations that went into crafting the Graham-Levin-Kyl compromise, stripping important provisions that would have prohibited the admission of evidence obtained through “undue coercion” and further limiting legal recourse available to detainees.

We must work toward a system that corrects the mistakes made by the President and adopt a well-thought-out set of procedures that respects the rule of law and restores our Nation to its proper standing in the world. The system outlined by the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment as provided in the DOD Authorization conference report falls short of this measure.

The Defense authorization conference report contains a great deal that we in this body can look to with pride. That is why I support the bill as a whole and why I voted in favor of it. We face real challenges and threats as a nation, and our men and women in uniform are, every single day, serving with courage on the front lines in defense of our values and our way of life. I do not vote without concern, however, in light of a few troubling provisions which I fear do not serve the interests of our country or our troops.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, the fiscal year 2006 Defense Authorization Act contains a number of provisions that take an important step towards the Military Family Bill of Rights I believe we need.

Among the final provisions, the legislation authorizes an increase of the death gratuity to $100,000 for all active-duty service members. I was pleased to originally offer this provision as an amendment to the fiscal year 2005 Supplemental Appropriations Act earlier this year. I was happy to work with Senator Levin on this bill to bring this provision into reality.
I offered another amendment on the supplemental last spring to increase to 1 year the length of time surviving families of service members may reside in Government housing or receive the basic allowance for housing. It was signed into law, but the final report contained an important provision that was part of the supplemental, it expired with the end of the fiscal year. The fiscal year 2006 National Defense Authorization Act makes this extension permanent.

I am pleased that the conference report contains an important provision that provides increased funding for Project Sheriff—an initiative of the Office of Force Transformation to provide our soldiers and marines with a full spectrum of lethal and nonlethal weapons when engaging enemies in an urban environment.

The Defense authorization bill includes other important provisions for our country: a 3.1-percent pay raise for military personnel; increased Army and Marine Corps end strength; and an expansion of TRICARE benefits for members of the Selected Reserve and their families.

Taken together, these provisions are important milestones. They are further testament of this Congress’s and this country’s commitment to maintain the best trained, best equipped, best prepared, and most capable military on earth. It is also a recognition of the important contributions made by military families—families who give so much to this country.

When I voted for this legislation on the Senate floor, one essential aspect was that the limitations placed on the review of habeas corpus claims of Guantanamo Bay detainees were perpetuated. I am pleased to say that the bill’s effective date was not altered in conference. As a result, as the Supreme Court held in Lindh v. Murphy, it still employs the normal rule that our laws operate prospectively.

Mr. PRESIDENT, Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate was finally able to debate and pass the Defense Authorization Act. It is indefensible that this important legislation was put on the backburner for so long; held back until the eleventh hour by the majority for various special interests and political reasons. The American people and the troops deserve better than that.

I am pleased that this bill includes important provisions for our men and women in uniform and their families. I am very pleased that we were able to include a 3.1 percent pay raise for all of our men and women in uniform as well as a host of bonus and incentive pays to help the military in its recruiting and retention efforts. The conference report also contains an important provision that permanently increases the death gratuity for those killed on active duty. Although the Senate’s strong bipartisan efforts to make TRICARE available for the Guard and Reserve were again watered down in the conference report, the final bill still includes significant improvements in TRICARE access for all of our citizen-soldiers. These are just a few examples of the important provisions contained in this bill.

I am proud that the Congress has finally, definitively, sent such a strong message that a responsible Senate that seeks the treatment of detainees by enacting the amendment of the senior Senator from Arizona. The lack of a clear policy regarding the treatment of detainees has been confusing and counterproductive for our men and women in uniform in the lurch with no clear direction about what is and is not permissible. This failure on the part of the administration has sullied our reputation as a Nation, and hurt our efforts to promote democracy and human rights in the Arab and Muslim worlds.

I have been proud to support Senator McCain’s amendment on interrogation policy because it should help to bring back some accountability to the process and restore our great Nation’s reputation as the world’s leading advocate for human rights.

Although I voted for the Department of Defense authorization bill, I am disappointed that the mixed messages that this bill sends to Senior Officers in the administration and the country on issues related to the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay. Even as we enact the important McCain amendment on torture, the conference report also includes a provision which remains deeply troubling because of the restrictions it places on judicial review of detainees held at Guantanamo. However, it is important to note that the provision is limited in critical ways. The provision on judicial review of military commissions covers only “final decisions” of military commissions, and only governs challenges brought under that provision. In addition, the language in section 1465(e)(2) which prohibits “any other action against the United States” applies only to suits brought relating to an “aspect of detention by the Department of Defense.” Therefore, it is my understanding that this provision will not affect the ongoing litigation in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld before the Supreme Court because that case involves a challenge to trial by military commission, not to an aspect of a detention, and of course was not brought under this provision.

Furthermore, it is imperative that DOD’s program and funding plans to ensure that DOD’s budget decisions address these equipment deficiencies. Such a report will make DOD’s equipment needs more transparent and will allow Congress to provide more effective oversight and hold the Department accountable. I am pleased that the conference report does not contain a number of provisions that unintentionally restricted the number of families of injured service members who qualify for travel assistance. The change in the law now ensures that families of injured service members evacuated to a U.S. hospital get at least one trip paid for so that these families can quickly reunite and begin recovering from the trauma they have experienced.

The military’s high operational tempo over the last 4 years led to the need to keep thousands of troops beyond their contractual separation dates through a policy often referred to as “stop-loss.” The Pentagon did a poor job of clearly disclosing to volunteers that they could be deployed and who had thought they had completed their military service found themselves deployed to a combat zone. It is not difficult to understand how this policy turned upside down the lives of the impacted troops and their families. The conference report contained an amendment I authored requiring the Department of Defense to report on the steps it is taking to clearly communicate the stop-loss policy to potential enlistees and re-enlistees. I hope that, by pushing the Department to report on the actions it is taken to ensure that potential recruits know the terms of their service, the Department will take quick action to address this problem.

Despite the unprecedented levels of deaths and injuries, the Defense Accountability Office recently found that the Department of Defense is not only doing a poor job in replacing equipment that is being rapidly worn out but is not even tracking its equipment needs. Military readiness has suffered as a result. I authored an amendment retained in the conference report requiring DOD to submit a comprehensive report in conjunction with the President’s annual budget request that details the program and funding plans to ensure that DOD’s budget decisions address these equipment deficiencies. Such a report will make DOD’s equipment needs more transparent and will allow Congress to provide more effective oversight and hold the Department accountable.

I am disappointed that the conference report did not maintain the bipartisan amendment I authored establishing the Civilian Linguist Reserve Corps, CLRC, pilot project. Our Government is in desperate need of people with critical language skills and the CLRC model, which is strongly supported by the Defense Department, has the potential of addressing this need in a fiscally responsible manner. It is unfortunate that the conference chose to go another route.

In conclusion, I must note, as I have in all of the 13 years I have served in the Senate, that we must continue the wasteful trend of spending billions of dollars on Cold War-era weapons systems while not fully funding our current needs. This enormous bill will only get us fiscally better. However, I am hopeful that this legislation will again balance this; it contains many good provisions for our men and women in uniform and their families and that is why I support it.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I express my concerns regarding the adoption of the McCain amendment as part of the National Defense Authorization Act. Although I am pleased the legislation now includes important protections for the brave men and women who must use every legal means—including aggressive interrogation techniques—and other terrorists in U.S. custody, a key architect of the 9/11 attacks, and other terrorists in U.S. custody, who wish to kill innocent Americans. We must always remember that the terrorists who attacked America on 9/11 are relentless in their efforts to destroy us.

Finally, some have argued that the passage of the McCain amendment would have somehow prevented the heinous abuses that we saw at Abu Ghraib prison. This is patently false. The individuals who committed the abuses at Abu Ghraib knew their actions were against the law, yet they violated core American values. The perpetrators of these crimes are now being prosecuted, and the military has undertaken comprehensive reforms to prevent future abuses. As Independent Schlesinger Panel in its report on detainee operations: "There is no evidence of a policy of abuse promulgated by senior officials or military authorities." Our military has detained over 80,000 individuals, and the percentages of these crimes are now being prosecuted. We must not weaken our ability to prosecute the war on terror. Our military and intelligence personnel must have the tools—including aggressive interrogation techniques—to question captured terrorists. I remain concerned that the McCain amendment, although admirable in its intent, may hinder our efforts to collect vital intelligence, and I make no apologies for legal means of obtaining actionable intelligence that will save American lives.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, today I rise to comment upon the recently passed Defense authorization bill. That bill contained a Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment which dealt with the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and Military Commissions at Guantanamo Bay. I was very pleased to join with Senators Levin and Kyl and others to offer this amendment, and I want to thank them for working so hard on this issue.

In rising today, I address one particular section of our amendment, the requirement that the tribunals consider whether evidence was coerced. In drafting this section, we were compelled to recognize three basic facts. First, we were compelled to recognize the impracticality of importing domestic criminal prosecutions into a forum where the parties are essentially enemy soldiers; combatants for a very unique enemy, an enemy without uniforms, capitals, or cohesive command structures, but combatants nonetheless.

Second, we were forced to address the necessity of relying on evidence without a complete picture of how it was obtained; evidence that might be obtained by force from battlefield intelligence, from classified sources, or even through unknown circumstances.

Lastly, we were required by our constitutional responsibilities to err on the side of protecting the American people. In instances where there is some doubt as to the evidence, or the status of the detainee, the benefit of the doubt must go to the government as it seeks to discharge its first duty, providing for the common defense of our people.

In our efforts to balance these interests, we initially included an exclusionary rule for evidence obtained through "undue coercion." We felt that the term "undue coercion" reflected the reality that, in the national security context, there is some level of coercive interrogation that is acceptable. We also understand that, at some point, the reliability of the information can be questioned as a result of the methods used to obtain it. I believe Guantanamo Bay serves a unique and necessary purpose in the war on terror, but we need to ensure that we are holding the right people.

However, upon consideration, we came to believe that the term "undue coercion," being a new term without legal precedent, might not be as instructive as we required. Furthermore, a number of the military judge advocates we consulted were concerned that the exclusionary rule could limit them from considering evidence tainted by only an allegation of mistreatment.

Therefore, after much consultation with legal professionals, we decided to eliminate the "undue" qualifier. Unfortuately, striking that qualifier also eliminated the consideration of whether the information was obtained by acceptable sources and methods. Accordingly, we decided to refrain from mandating the exclusionary rule. Instead, our language requires, for the first time, the panels to consider the source of the information and the information’s reliability. I am very confident our language provides for the proper consideration.

Now, to be sure, our language also provides for the benefit of the doubt to go to the government. In granting this benefit, however, we recognize that we are fundamentally different from our adversaries. Though we may fail at times, we strive to be fair and just and honorable. And because our military men and women exemplify those values, we can trust them to fairly administer this process. In the end, we must remember that this is a military administrative process, with the oversight provided by our amendment, we must trust our professional military officers to do their jobs.
In our amendment as a whole, we sought to protect our national security while still striking the proper balance between aggressively interrogating detainees and providing a competent military administrative process for their status determination. I am confident that the evidentiary standard serves that goal.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, which is included in the Defense authorization conference report.

The Graham-Levin Detainee Amendment includes two provisions that were adopted in the Senate version of the Defense authorization bill: the McCain antihuman torture amendment and the Graham-Levin Detainee Amendment.

It was an original cosponsor of the McCain Antitorture amendment. I have spoken at length about the vital importance of this amendment on several other occasions. At this time, I simply want to reiterate a couple of points.

Two years ago and last year, I have authored amendments to affirm our Nation’s long-standing position that torture and cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment are illegal. Twice, the Senate unanimously approved my amendments; this year, the amendments were killed behind the closed doors of a conference committee—at the insistence of the Bush administration.

I am pleased that the administration has changed its position. As a result, it now will be absolutely clear that under U.S. law all U.S. personnel are prohibited from subjecting any detainee anywhere in the world to torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment.

The amendment defines cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment as any conduct that would constitute the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the U.S. Constitution if the conduct took place in a State. Under this standard, abusive treatment that would be unconstitutional in American prisons will not be permissible anywhere in the world.

Let me give you some examples of conduct that is clearly prohibited by the McCain amendment.

‘‘Waterboarding’’ or simulated drowning is a technique that was used during the Spanish Inquisition. It is clearly a form of torture. It creates an overwhelming sense of imminent death. It amounts to a clear-cut threat of death akin to a mock execution, which is expressly called mental torture in the U.S. Army Field Manual.

Sleep deprivation is another classic form of torture, which is explicitly called mental torture in the U.S. Army Field Manual. It has been banned in the United Kingdom and by a unanimous Israeli Supreme Court, and the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly declared it unconstitutional, once citing a report stating: ‘‘the most effective form of torture.’’

The amendment also clearly bans so-called stress positions or painful, prolonged forced standing or shackling. Again, the U.S. Army Field Manual expressly calls these techniques ‘‘physical torture.’’ Moreover, one of the most recent Supreme Court cases on the extent of the prohibitions on ‘‘cruel and unusual’’ punishments expressly calls these stress positions, denouncing their ‘‘obvious cruelty’’ as ‘‘antithetical to human dignity.’’

The amendment bans the use of extreme cold, or hypothermia, as an interrogation tool. Extreme cold can be deadly. Clearly it is capable of causing severe and lasting harm, if not death, and consequently is banned by both the Field Manual and the Constitution.

The amendment bans punching, striking, violently shaking, or beating detainees. Striking prisoners is a criminal offense and clearly unconstitutional. Moreover, while assaults like slapping and violent shaking may not seem as dangerous as beatings, shaking prisoners in Iraq, Israel, and elsewhere has killed prisoners, and the tactic has been banned by the Israeli Supreme Court. Numerous U.S. Supreme Court cases likewise prohibited striking prisoners.

The amendment bans the use of dogs in interrogations and the use of nakedness and sexual humiliation for the purpose of degrading prisoners.

No reasonable person, given the text of the amendment, the judicial precedents, and common sense, would consider these techniques to be permitted. Any U.S. official or employee who receives legal advice to the contrary should think twice before defying the will of the Congress on this issue.

The McCain antitorture amendment will make the rules for the treatment of detainees clear to our troops and will send a signal to the world about our Nation’s commitment to the humane treatment of detainees.

I want to express again my opposition to the Graham-Levin amendment.

The amendment would essentially eliminate habeas corpus for detainees at Guantanamo Bay. In so doing, it would effectively overturn the Supreme Court’s landmark decision in Rasul v. Bush.

No one questions the fact that the United States has the power to hold battlefield combatants for the duration of an armed conflict. That is a fundamental premise of the law of war. However, in 2002, Secretary of State Colin Powell and military lawyers, the Bush administration created a new detention policy that goes far beyond the traditional law of war. The administration claims the right to seize anyone, including an American citizen, anywhere in the world, including in the United States, and to hold him until the end of the war on terrorism, whenever that may be. They claim that a person detained in the war on terrorism has no legal rights. They have no right to a lawyer, no right to see the evidence against him, and no right to challenge his detention.

In fact, the Government has argued in court that detainees would have no right to challenge their detentions even if they claimed they were being tortured or summarily executed.

U.S. military lawyers have called the detention system ‘‘a legal black hole.’’

Defense Secretary Rumsfeld has described the detainees as ‘‘the hardest of the hard core’’ and ‘‘among the most dangerous, best trained terrorists, the killers, the bullies on the face of the Earth.’’ However, the administration now acknowledges that innocent people are held at Guantanamo Bay. In late 2003, the Pentagon reportedly determined that 15 Chinese Muslims held at Guantanamo are not enemy combatants and were mistakenly detained. Almost 2 years later, those individuals remain in Guantanamo Bay.

Last year, in the Rasul decision, the Supreme Court rejected the administration’s detention policy. The Court held that detainees at Guantanamo have the right to habeas corpus to challenge their detentions in Federal court. The Court held that the detainees have a right for years without charge and without access to counsel ‘‘unquestionably describes custody in violation of the Constitution, or laws or treaties of the United States.’’

The Graham amendment would protect the Bush administration’s detention system from legal challenge. It would effectively overturn the Supreme Court’s decision. It would prevent innocent detainees, like the Chinese Muslims, from challenging their detention.

However, I do want to note some limitations on the scope of the Graham-Levin Amendment.

A critical feature of this legislation is that it is forward looking. A law purporting to require a Federal court to give up its jurisdiction over a case that is submitted and awaiting decision would also raise grave constitutional questions. The amendments’ stripping provisions clearly do not apply to pending cases, including the Hamdan v. Rumsfeld case, which is currently pending before the Supreme Court. In accordance with our traditions, this amendment does not apply retroactively to revoke the jurisdiction of the courts to consider pending claims invoking the Great Writ of Habeas Corpus challenging past enemy combatant determinations. As such, nothing in the legislation alters or impacts the jurisdiction or merits of the Hamdan case.

Nothing in the legislation affirmatively authorizes, or even recognizes,
I favor the bill as a whole. But I have favor of this conference report because amendment because I believed it was points.

EXTENSION OF THE USA PATRIOT ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to a bill at the desk relating to the extension of the PATRIOT Act which the clerk will report by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2167) to amend the USA PATRIOT Act, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, those of us working constructively to extend the USA PATRIOT Act have repeatedly offered to enter into a short-term extension while we work out the differences and improve this reauthorization legislation. The extension we are passing for 6 months is a commonsense solution that allows us to take a few more weeks to get this right for all Americans.

A majority of Senators—Republicans, Democrats, those Senators who voted for cloture, those who voted against cloture on the conference report that failed to pass the Senate—have joined on a letter urging the Republican leader to act on this commonsense offer by calling up a short-term extension bill.

As soon as it became apparent that the conference report filed by the Republican leadership would be unacceptable to the Senate, I joined on Thursday, December 8, in urging a 3-month extension to work out a better bill. On the first day the Senate was in session, Monday, December 12, Senator SUNUNU and I introduced such a bill, S. 3082.
Rights made clear not only the rights of the American people, but also the limitations on the power of government. Just as we cannot allow ourselves to be lulled into a sense of false security when it comes to national security, we cannot allow ourselves to be lulled into a blind trust regarding our freedoms and rights. We must remain vigilant on both counts or we stand to lose much that we hold dear.

In arguing for reauthorization of the USA PATRIOT Act, Attorney General Alberto Gonzales sought to assure us that “concerns raised about the act’s impact on civil liberties, while sincere, were unfounded.” I am not reassured, however.

We need only pick up a morning newspaper to see how the overarching of the Bush administration plagues our efforts to uphold democracy at home and throughout the world. We have never seen secret secret hearings of hundreds of people for the first time in U.S. history; the abuse of detainees in U.S. custody; detentions without charges and denial of access to counsel; and the misapplication of the material witness statute as a sort of general pre-conviction detention abuse that harm our national security as well as our civil liberties because they serve as recruiting tools for terrorists, intimidate American communities from cooperating with law enforcement, and, with the loss of our sense of resources, make it more likely that real terrorists will escape detection.

We have learned that the Pentagon maintains a secret database containing information on a wide cross-section of ordinary Americans. It keeps track of people like those in Vermont who planned peaceful protests of military recruiters, including one organized by Veterans for Peace. It monitored the activities of an antia war group that met at Quaker Meeting House in West Worth, FL, a year ago to plan a protest against military recruiting at local high schools.

Similarly, the FBI also engages in monitoring other ordinary, law-abiding citizens. Records show that the FBI used that authority to investigate not only groups with suspected ties to foreign terrorists, but also protest groups suspected of having links to violent or disruptive activities.” For example, recently disclosed agency records show that FBI counterterrorism agents have conducted wide-ranging intelligence-gathering operations on groups concerning the environment, animal cruelty, and poverty relief.

Now we are learning that President Bush has, for more than 4 years, been secretly authorizing warrantless surveillance of Americans inside the United States. In fact, he acknowledges issuing secret Presidential orders to authorize such warrantless surveillance more than 30 times since September 11, 2001.

The U.S. Supreme Court has consistently held for nearly 40 years that the monitoring and recording of private conversations constitutes a “search and seizure” within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. In fact, that far back as the 1967 case, Katz v. United States. It was because of concerns over unconstitutional surveillance of Americans in the 1960s and 1970s that Congress enacted the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. That legislation includes a legal mechanism for the Government to engage in searches of Americans in connection with intelligence gathering. Unless pursuant to a criminal search warrant issued by a judge on a showing of probable cause, FISA warrants are the exclusive means by which electronic surveillance and the interception of electronic communications may be undertaken pursuant to the rule of law.

The Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act has been amended over time, and it has been adjusted several times since 9/11. Indeed, much of the PATRIOT Act includes FISA amendments. The law has been further amended since the PATRIOT Act, as well.

Congress allows the FISA Court to operate in secret and authorizes the Government to begin immediate surveillance in an emergency situation, so long as it seeks a warrant from the FISA Court within 72 hours. In addition, Congress has provided that following a declaration of war, the President may authorize electronic surveillance without a court order for a period not to exceed 15 days.

There has never been a leak reported out of the FISA Court. Furthermore, it has never been alleged that FISA’s emergency procedures are inadequate or that FISA ties the hands of law enforcement. If the Bush administration believed that FISA was inadequate, it should have alerted Congress to these flaws. It did not. Instead, it worked with me and with others in the days following 9/11 to amend FISA. I chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee at the same time that the Bush administration began surveillance outside FISA. I was not informed of the President’s secret eavesdropping program while I chaired the Judiciary Committee in 2001 and 2002. I read about it for the first time in the press last week. Spying on Americans without safeguards to protect against the abuse of government power is wrong, and it is illegal.

Over the last week, we have learned of long-term, widespread eavesdropping on Americans by the Bush administration without compliance to the law, without court oversight, and without congressional authorization. Compounding that already troubling discovery were new, disturbing reports that the FBI has been monitoring U.S. advocacy groups working on behalf of the environment and civil rights issues. Quaker meetings and students checking out books to write school papers. This is all too reminiscent of the dark days when a Republican President compiled “enemies lists” and eavesdropped on political opponents and broke into doctors’ offices and used the wiretapping process to disbar lawyers who advised the President that he was wrong.

The chairman of the Judiciary Committee has the right instinct and was right to announce that we need hearings and an explanation, and the American people deserve an accounting for how important it is for the American people to have an accounting for how right the American people are. I ask that a copy of a letter to the President of which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Your recent acknowledgement of the existence of a highly-classified program to conduct electronic surveillance on U.S. citizens and permanent residents without obtaining a court order as required by law has raised a number of troubling issues in the minds of the American people. That is why Democrats and Republicans have called for prompt and thorough congressional investigation of this program.

We write to ask that you provide Congress with additional details on the extent and scope of this program, your legal justification for your actions, and your efforts to inform Congress about this program.

The relevant law governing surveillance, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (“FISA”), could not be clearer on the need to obtain a court order for such surveillance. It also provides for emergency procedures and for authorization of electronic surveillance during a time of war, with reasonable time limits beyond which a court order must be obtained. We are deeply troubled by your assertions that the Constitution and the Authorization for Use of Military Force Act (P.L. 107-40) empower you to conduct warrantless surveillance of Americans without court approval. I urge the Bush administration to make public its warrantless surveillance program. I view as an illegal program of spying on Americans without court approval. I urge them not just to recte bumper sticker slogans or conclusory statements that they view their actions as consistent with the self-serving rewriting of the law they have secretly made without informing Congress or the American people. That is wrong.

Al Qaeda knows that we eavesdrop and wiretap. Whether we do so legally, whether we protect the liberties of Americans by respecting the constitutional requirements for court-issued warrants, these aspects are of little concern to terrorists but matter greatly to Americans. I expect that when the supposed legal underpinnings for the President’s eavesdropping program are examined, they, too, will be withdrawn and disavowed by this administration. I also expect that they will be disavowed by an honest Congress, in the courts, and certainly by the American people. I ask that a copy of a letter to the President of which I referred be printed in the RECORD.
It is important for Congress to review these matters. We respectfully ask that you cooperate fully to provide all necessary information on all relevant aspects of this program. We believe that Presidential orders supporting legal opinions, complete descriptions of actions taken under the program, and other information, to the appropriate oversight committees.

As Congress begins to examine this program in greater detail, it is clear Congress and the American people need immediately to understand at least four issues:

1. Under what specific legal authorities did you authorize warrantless electronic surveillance of American citizens and permanent residents inside the United States?
2. Given your assertion that the FISA is insufficient in providing appropriate authority and procedures to protect Americans from terrorism, what specific powers or authorities are insufficient and why, in the four years since the 9/11 attacks, has your Administration not proposed correcting modifications?
3. You have stated that you authorized the NSA to intercept the international communications of people with known links to al Qaeda and related terrorist organizations. Have you ever authorized the intercepting, without a warrant, of purely domestic communications, or communications of people without known links to al Qaeda and related terrorist organizations?
4. Could you please provide additional information on the legal and other justifications for limiting briefings on these matters to a handful of Members of Congress, as well as information on the dates, attendance, and issues discussed at these briefings, so it can be determined whether you complied with the letter and spirit of the National Security Act of 1947?

Sincerely,

HARRY REID,
Democratic Leader.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER IV,
Vice Chairman, Select Committee on Intelligence.

PATRECK LEAHY,
Ranking Democrat, Select Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. RYAN. Mr. President, according to the Book of Mark, Jesus asked this question: “For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?” [Mark 8:36].

I would ask the President of the United States a similar question—what good is it to expand the power of the President, if in the process you erode the fundamental freedoms guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution?

Last week, we learned—from a New York Times report and then from President Bush himself—that since September 11, 2001, the President of the United States has authorized the National Security Agency to conduct electronic surveillance of American citizens on American soil without resort to the procedures of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

Today we learn contrary to assurances by administration officials, that the NSA has also conducted warrantless surveillance of purely domestic phone calls because of the technical difficulties of determining the physical location of a particular telephone.

There is still much that we do not know about this secret program and much that we do not know about the purported legal basis for it. In briefing the press on Tuesday, the Attorney General noted that people criticizing the administration are proffering opinions based on “very limited information—and that such critics “probably don’t have the information about our legal analysis.”

But we do know this: for the past 4 years, the Bush administration has aggressively sought to expand the powers of the President beyond recognition. In the face of this campaign, a Republican Congress has idled, reluctant to exercise its constitutional duty of oversight.

The Framers provided for a system of checks and balances in the Constitution for one simple reason: to protect against abuse of power by any branch of government in order to protect our personal freedoms.

In its zeal to expand the power of the President, the Bush administration’s actions have threatened the fabric of the Constitution. These are hardly the actions of a self-declared conservative who professes to want to reduce the power of the National Government.

It would be one thing if the President’s actions to expand Presidential power reflected sound judgment and wisdom. But again and again, the President’s overreaching in the name of security has been profoundly misguided, and has undermined support for the war against al-Qaeda at home and abroad; in his decision to create special military tribunals for al-Qaeda suspects held in Guantanamo Bay, a system that has yet to produce a complete trial, in his decision to authorize secret prisons abroad holding terrorist suspects—including, apparently, using facilities once operated by Soviet Intelligence agencies to play fast and loose with time-tested standards against torture; and now in his decision to unilaterally authorize secret wiretaps of Americans without a court order.

Without more information from the Executive, it is difficult to judge the legality of the President’s secret spying program. I call on the Attorney General, therefore, to provide the necessary information by promptly releasing the legal opinions governing this program—so that the Congress and the American people can adequately judge the propriety of the President’s actions. And I call on the Director of National Intelligence to promptly provide full and complete briefings to the appropriate congressional committees on the scope and operation of this program.

What is clear today is that the President of the United States decided to create a new system outside the framework of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978—a framework that Congress designed to provide a comprehensive and carefully balanced system of surveillance of foreign powers and agents of foreign powers. It is this framework on which I will focus my remarks today.

The Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, or FISA, was enacted in 1978 after a 3-year effort to do so. As stated in the report of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, the purpose of the law was to provide regular “all electronic surveillance conducted within the United States for foreign intelligence purposes” in order to provide a check against abuses that had been revealed by the investigation of the Church Committee.

The bill was a bipartisan product; in the Senate, the original version introduced in 1977 that served as the basis of the 1978 law was sponsored by Senators across the ideological spectrum—including Birch Bayh, Ted Kennedy, Mac Mathias, James Eastland, and Strom Thurmond. The Senate ultimately adopted the bill on April 20, 1978, by a strong, bipartisan vote of 95 to 1. At the time the bill was approved in the Senate, I stated that it “was a reaffirmation of the principle that it is possible to protect national security and at the same time the Bill of Rights.” I was also a member of the conference committee that produced the final version of the law that was enacted with broad support in October 1978.

It is what we did in 1978. FISA was designed to govern our collection of “foreign intelligence.” Typically, in the criminal context, search warrants can only be issued if the Government can demonstrate to a neutral judge that probable cause to believe a crime has been committed.

Under FISA, surveillance orders are issued so long as probable cause exists that someone is an “agent of a foreign power.” That term has been expanded in the last year to even include a lone wolf terrorist; in other words, someone not affiliated with a known terrorist organization.

Not only is the standard different under FISA, but the FISA process is done in secret, with no special court known as the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. This is a court made up of Federal judges who sit on U.S. district courts. I should parenthetically note that we learned today that one of the 11 judges on this court just resigned in reaction to President Bush’s unilateral domestic spying program.

When we wrote FISA, we knew there could be times when the President would have to act quickly. We knew there would be times when probable cause would have to be demonstrated to the FISA court after the surveillance began. We contemplated emergencies and wrote the law so that it could deal with them.

First, we addressed emergency situations in section 105(f) of the act, which provides that if the Attorney General reasonably determines that an emergency situation exists—and that his investigators need to target a wiretap—an application can be made to the FISA Court—he may do so for 72 hours. The original act provided for only a 24-hour emergency period, but Congress expanded that period to 72 hours in December 2001—after the attacks on 9/11. Similarly, in enacting the Patriot Act in 2001, Congress provided other changes to FISA.

It is therefore difficult to accept the contentions of the Attorney General that Congress has been unwilling to help the President meet the challenges we now face.

The law is clear on the steps the Attorney General needs to take to wiretap suspects about to obtain a warrant: he must tell a FISA Court judge at the time of the authorization that he has taken such emergency measures, and he has to apply for post-hoc approval as soon as is practicable but not later than 72 hours after the surveillance has commenced.

We envisioned another emergency that could authorize warrantless intelligence searches—a declaration of war. Section 111 lets the Attorney General authorize electronic surveillance without a court order to acquire foreign intelligence information for up to 15 calendar days following a declaration of war by Congress. Although the “Authorization for the Use of Military Force” approved just after 9/11 was not, technically speaking, a declaration of war, it was the constitutional equivalent under the war clause to permit the use of force in Afghanistan, and the President would have been justified to exercise these extraordinary surveillance powers in the first 2 weeks after enactment of the joint resolution.

It is also important to note that FISA, on its own terms, set up a comprehensive and exclusive system for domestic wiretapping. Section 2511(2)(f) of Title 18, United States Code, states that FISA, when combined with wiretap authority for domestic criminal investigations, is the “exclusive means by which . . . the interception of domestic wire, oral and electronic communications is conducted.”

That is why George Will recently had this to say about the administration’s tortured legal reasoning, “The President’s authorization of domestic surveillance by the National Security Agency contravened a statute’s clear language.”

It is also worth looking at how the FISA system has operated throughout its 27 years of existence. I would submit that it has served us well.

To be sure, it says it is too restrictive on our ability to gain intelligence, I would respond that the FISA Court—on the executive branch, in this instance, by an independent Article III judge.

And yet, even with a history of a FISA program—by which . . . the interception of domestic communications may be conducted. ‘’

FISA has been the exclusive means by which the President has embarked, directly contravening a specific statute and relying on a dangerously expansive view of his Commander in Chief authority—a view that would potentially expose thousands of Americans who make a phone call abroad to surveillance of this sort. This is a course that we tried to avoid when we drafted the FISA Act in the first place. As I said in 1978 when FISA was originally passed, “it is not necessary to compromise civil liberties in the name of national security.” I hope the lessons from 1978 and the real story about what FISA allows can inform the debate going on today.

This debate is just beginning. Congress must stand up to this Presidential overreach, examine what occurred, and provide corrective action. Senator SPECTER, the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has promised to hold hearings on this matter. I commend him for that.

But we will need the full cooperation of the Executive in this undertaking, and the administration can start by coming clean with the full legal reasoning for the President’s domestic spying program.

There will be much more to say—and learn—in the second session of the 109th Congress. The executive branch’s program must be subjected to close scrutiny by this Congress to ensure that in pursuit of terrorists or suspected terrorists, we are not sacrificing essential freedoms that we hold dear.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, more than 50 years ago, Justice Robert Jackson said:

With all its defects, delays and inconveniences, men have discovered no technique for long preserving free government except that the executive be under the law, and that the law be made by parliamentary deliberations.

I am deeply troubled by recent revelations that the President of the United States has apparently personally authorized spying on the private phone conversations of Americans without court approval, as is required by law. The President’s decision to ignore the law Congress wrote and bypass the special court we created raises profound concerns that deserve our immediate attention.

Yesterday, I reminded several of my colleagues in requesting a joint inquiry into the President’s actions by the Senate Intelligence and Judiciary Committees.

Checks and balances are the bedrock of our system of government. In 1978, when Congress passed Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act to permit the Government to seek court orders to tap the phones of people in the United States, Congress put in the law a check—the FISA Court—on the executive branch’s authority.

In 1979, the FISA Court has approved nearly 19,000 applications for FISA wiretaps. The Court has rejected only a handful.

Last year, at a speech in Buffalo, NY, the President explicitly cited the need for a court order as a reason why Americans should have confidence that their civil liberties are being protected. He said:

Any time you hear the United States government talking about wiretap, it requires—under the law, under a court order. Nothing has changed, by the way. When we’re talking about chasing down terrorists, we’re talking about getting a court order before we do so. It’s important for our fellow citizens to understand . . . constitutional guarantees are in place when it comes to doing what is necessary to protect our homeland, because we value the Constitution.

But now the President acknowledges that 4 years ago, he authorized wiretaps on Americans without court review. Now he asserts that he has the authority—without court approval—to order the wiretaps himself and we now know that the Government was conducting warrantless wiretaps when the President made the statement in Buffalo.

If the court isn’t consulted, where is the check on executive power? The President has said that he consults with executive branch lawyers on the Executive’s legal reasoning for the President’s domestic spying program.

There will be much more to say—and learn—in the second session of the 109th Congress. The executive branch’s program must be subjected to close scrutiny by this Congress to ensure that in pursuit of terrorists or suspected terrorists, we are not sacrificing essential freedoms that we hold dear.
Executive Branch authority demonstrates a fundamental misunderstanding of the concept of checks and balances. And notifying a few members of Congress—if that is in fact what the administration did—is not the check provided by law. That check is the courts.

In the conference report that accompanied the FISA law, Congress made the Supreme Court the only body that could authorize electronic surveillance by the executive branch not explicitly authorized by the FISA law. The conference report said:

The conferees agree that the establishment by this act of exclusive means by which the President may conduct electronic surveillance does not foreclose a different decision by the Supreme Court. . . .

Executive Order 12333, issued by President Reagan in 1981, recognizes FISA as the governing law for foreign intelligence wiretaps. It provides that:

Electronic surveillance, as defined in the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, shall be conducted in accordance with that Act, as well as this Order.

And, under FISA itself, a person is actually guilty of a crime if he engages in electronic surveillance except as authorized by statute.

The President has not provided any legal opinion that supports his claim of authority.

On Monday, the President said that the targets of the spying are “those that are known al Qaeda ties and/or affiliates.” But the FISA law says that wiretap orders may be issued by the court if there is probable cause to believe that the target of the wiretap is a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power. If the targets of the spying have known al Qaeda ties, why didn’t he get a FISA court order?

The President has also tried to justify the warrantless spying by saying “Sometimes we have to move very, very quickly.” That is true. In some cases we do have to move quickly. But the FISA law addresses such occasions. It explicitly allows the Attorney General, to issue emergency wiretap orders without first obtaining court approval. His wiretap application need only be filed with the FISA court within 72 hours after surveillance is authorized.

The President claims that he has authority under the Constitution to authorize wiretaps without court approval as required by law. Yet he refuses to provide any legal opinions justifying that view.

The Attorney General is quoted in the Washington Post as saying “This is not a backdoor approach . . . We believe Congress has authorized this kind of surveillance and he points to the Authorization for Use of Military Force passed by Congress in September 2001 as a source of Congressional authorization.

That Resolution states:

That the President is authorized to use all necessary and appropriate force against those nations, organizations, or persons he determines planned, authorized, committed, or aided the terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, 2001, or harbored such organizations or persons, in order to prevent any future acts of international terrorism against the United States by such nations, organizations or persons.

The assertion that “necessary and appropriate force” includes the authority to wiretap American citizens in the United States, is, on its face, without merit. And the President has not provided any legal opinion that would support that interpretation.

The Attorney General undermined his own statement that the Congress authorized warrantless wiretaps by telling the Post that the President had contemplated asking Congress to pass legislation granting him that authority but decided against it because it “would be difficult, if not impossible” to pass. Taken together, the two statements of the Attorney General make no sense. He asserts both that Congress had authorized the wiretapping and that it never would. The Attorney General is trying to have it both ways. We need some straight answers.

So, why wasn’t the FISA law followed?

Just this morning, the Washington Post reported that General Michael Hayden the head of the National Security Agency—the agency the President has charged with carrying out the spying—told Congress that the FISC ordered the wiretapping and that it never would. The Attorney General is trying to have it both ways. We need some straight answers.

I would remind General Hayden—and the President for that matter—of something else Justice Jackson said.

He said:

The doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the Convention of 1787, not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power.

Just as troubling as General Hayden’s reason for bypassing FISA is the Post’s report that the decision to tap a phone without a warrant “requires marshaling arguments” and “looping paperwork around.”

I would remind General Hayden—and the President for that matter—of something else Justice Jackson said.

He said:

The doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the Convention of 1787, not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power.

That is outrageous. We don’t let shift supervisors at the airport decide to stop screen passengers for explosives. And we shouldn’t let shift supervisors at the NSA decide whether to abide by the law.

The President says that this is a different era and a different type of war. And he is right. But this is the same country, with the same Constitution, and the same system of checks and balances that have served us so well for more than 200 years. And even Presidents are not above the law.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the PATRIOT Act Reauthorization conference report.

I voted for the original legislation in 2001. Along with 80 of my colleagues, I supported that bill because I decided that on balance, the PATRIOT Act it would enhance our Nation’s ability to fight terrorism without substantially encroaching on our citizens’ civil liberties. At the same time, I and many of our colleagues understood that aspects of the law should be revisited. For that reason, a number of provisions were set to sunset on December 31, 2005. After a bipartisan approach to these provisions, it became evidence to many of us that certain improvements are necessary to maintain the balance between fighting terrorism and protecting civil liberties. For that reason, I joined with a bipartisan group of Senators and cosponsors of PATRIOT Act, which would have modestly reformed the 2001 PATRIOT Act to provide procedural safeguards and increase judicial review.

In July of this year, the Senate unanimously passed a PATRIOT Act reauthorization bill. While that bill was not perfect, it took significant steps to fix shortcomings in the current law and strengthen our Nation’s ability to fight terrorism while still protecting the civil liberties that are the cornerstone of a free and secure democratic society. The House also passed a reauthorization bill, which did not come as close to reaching this goal.

Conferees were appointed to work out a compromise.

Prior to the Thanksgiving recess, a draft PATRIOT Act reauthorization conference report was circulated by conferees. At the urging of several Senators, Senator SPECTER and others took the conference report back to the conferees to try to negotiate additional modifications. They are to be commended for their efforts to reach a compromise that would earn broad bipartisan support.

When the conference was concluded, a number of our colleagues, including Senators LEAHY, KENNEDY, ROCKEFELLER, and LEVIN declined to sign the conference report due to their exclusion from key negotiations and their conclusion that the conference report failed to sufficiently meet the dual objective of combating terrorism and defending freedoms.

While I believe that the conference report is an improvement over current law, the provisions related to section 215, national security letters, and roving wiretaps have still given me pause. The so-called roving wiretap provision, current law allows the Justice Department to obtain medical records, business records, library records, or other tangible items of individuals by merely showing that the items are relevant to a terrorism investigation. The unanimously agreed upon Senate bill requires that the Government show that a person whose records are sought have some connection to a suspected terrorist or spy organization. Unfortunately, the conference report diverges from the Senate version as it maintains the minimal standard of relevance without a requirement of fact connecting the records sought, or the individual, suspected of terrorist activity. Additionally, the conference report does not impose any limit on the breadth of the records that can be requested or how long those records can be kept by the Government.

Under the current PATRIOT Act, an individual who receives a section 215 order to turn over business records is prohibited from telling anyone about the order. This is referred to as a "gag order." The conference report notes that an improvement over current law as it explicitly grants the right for a suspect to consult with an attorney regarding this "gag order" but unlike the Senate version, the conference report also requires an individual who receives a Section 215 order to notify the FBI if he consults with an attorney and to identify the attorney.

Second, under current law, the FBI can issue a national security letter—"NSL"—without the approval of a judge, grand jury, or prosecutor, to obtain certain types of sensitive information about innocent individuals. Similar to a 215 order, the targeted individual is restricted by a gag order. While the conference report does provide some additional disclosure, it also requires the court to accept as conclusive the Government’s assertion that a gag order should not be lifted, unless the court determines the Government has acted in bad faith. It also finds that the conference report would give the Government the authority to keep all evidence secret from an individual who is challenging a 215 order or an NSL order. For example, if an attorney wants to challenge an order to turn over the business records of a client on the grounds of attorney-client privilege, they would not be allowed to see the evidence the Government had requested or the reasoning behind the request.

Third, the conference report would allow the recipient of a Section 215 "business records" order or an NSL order is usually not the subject of investigation. For example, a doctor could receive a Section 215 order from law enforcement to reveal the medical records of a patient. Under this conference report, a doctor would not be able to see the evidence the Government had requested or the reasoning behind the request. The recipient of the order to provide the Government with "specific facts in the application" that show the target’s actions and "specific facts in the application" that show the target’s actions may thwart conventional surveillance efforts.

The PATRIOT Act Reauthorization conference report passed the House by a vote of 251-174 on December 14 and was brought to the Senate floor for debate. On December 16, Senator Frist attempted to invoke cloture to bring this body to a vote on the conference report. Cloture was not invoked. I was necessarily absent from the Senate for health reasons.

Since then I have joined 47 of my colleagues in cosponsoring S. 2082. The bipartisan legislation, introduced by Senators Sununu and Leahy, would provide a 3-month extension of the expiring provisions of the PATRIOT Act. Unfortunately, Senator Frist has said he will not permit a vote on it; the House leadership has said they will not bring it to the floor for a vote; and the Bush administration has stated that, even if the extension were to pass both the House and the Senate, President Bush would refuse to sign it. My fellow colleagues have asked this body more than a half dozen times to allow this 3-month extension to come to the floor. They have been denied this opportunity. This is playing politics with an extremely important law that protects our citizens from terrorism.

Earlier this week, the President, in speaking of the PATRIOT Act, said, "in a war on terror, we cannot afford to be without this law for a single moment." I agree with his statement. This is why I remain concerned and hopefully pass a bipartisan bill that would enhance our ability to fight terrorism without substantially encroaching on our civil liberties.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the bill is read a third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider is laid upon the table.

The bill (S. 2167) was read a third time and passed, as follows:

S. 2167

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

Section 229(a) of the Intelligence and National Security Reform Act of 2004 (5 U.S.C. 2610 note) is amended by striking "December 31, 2005" and inserting "July 1, 2006."

MAKING APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION—CONFERENCE REPORT—Resumption

The Legislative clerk read as follows:

A conference report to accompany H.R. 3010 making appropriations for Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education, and for other purposes. The conference report was first proposed in the President’s fiscal year 2006 budget, and will offer an appropriate incentive to States and local education agencies to advance the goals of the No Child Left Behind Act.

The No Child Left Behind Act, enacted 4 years ago, raised expectations for students and teachers. Students are expected to raise their achievement level, and teachers are accountable for reaching the specific goals. The Teacher Incentive Fund is an appropriate follow up to the No Child Left Behind Act.
Act. It is a pilot program for States and school districts to provide additional compensation to teachers who make a measurable impact on raising student achievement. Under this incentive program, Federal funds would be available to States and local school districts for the purpose of developing new compensation systems to reward teachers who raise achievement and to provide an incentive to attract effective teachers to what the Department of Education calls “high-need” schools, which are schools with high poverty rates and poor performance on State assessments. The Teacher Incentive Fund provides States and school districts with another tool to raise teacher quality and, thus, close the achievement gap, which, of course is the primary goal of the No Child Left Behind Act.

In October, the Senate Republican Policy Committee, of which I am the chairman, released a policy paper in support of merit pay for teachers in general and the Teacher Incentive Fund specifically. The paper, titled “Teachers Are Key to Success of ‘No Child Left Behind’ Act: Better Pay for Better Teaching,” discusses research in support of merit pay for teachers, and the success merit pay programs have achieved.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this paper be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEACHERS ARE KEY TO SUCCESS OF ‘NO CHILD LEFT BEHIND’ ACT: BETTER PAY FOR BETTER TEACHING

INTRODUCTION

Enacted four years ago, the No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act raised expectations for students and teachers. Students are expected to raise their achievement level, and teachers are accountable for reaching the specific goals. As such, it is appropriate to reward and acknowledge those teachers who, by working harder and smarter, have achieved measurable success in their classrooms. President Bush has proposed a pilot program for states and school districts to provide an incentive to reward teachers who make a measurable impact on raising student achievement. Under this incentive program, federal funds would be available for the purpose of developing new compensation systems to reward teachers who raise achievement, and to provide an incentive to attract effective teachers to what the Department of Education calls “high-need” schools, which are schools with high poverty rates and poor performance on state assessments.

In response to the President’s proposal, the House of Representatives included an incentive pay program for teachers in its Fiscal Year 2006 appropriations bill that funds the Department of Education (H.R. 3010). The House-passed program, like the one proposed by the President, is a voluntary pilot program available to interested states and school districts. The Senate-reported bill does not contain such a provision.

Some observers may be concerned that using federal dollars for anything related to teacher compensation is outside the jurisdiction of the federal government into an area that is historically the jurisdiction of states and local school districts. However, supporters of this concept view it in the context of a natural follow-up to the four-year-old NCLB. That law placed new accountability requirements upon schools; thus, it is now appropriate for the federal government to make available financial incentives for teachers who help meet those requirements.

The concept of the President’s proposal and the House plan is to provide states and school districts with another tool to raise teacher quality and close the achievement gap, which stand as the foundation of NCLB. According to a November 2004 national survey, 80 percent of the public supports salary increases for teachers who raise student achievement. However, some observers suggest that teachers’ unions oppose anything that might be construed as merit pay. At least one observer notes that union opposition stands in the way of local districts implementing merit pay systems on a larger scale. For example, in California, in response to Governor Schwarzenegger’s proposal to introduce merit pay for teachers, the state’s largest teachers’ union sought to impose a dues hike on its members to help raise “tens of millions of dollars” to combat merit pay. Instead of budgeting funds for the pilot program, such as the one proposed by the President, may be necessary to allow public schools to overcome teachers’ unions’ opposition to implementing a compensation program that links teacher performance and student outcomes. The pilot program would provide funds directly to state and local educational agencies to allow this concept—one that has already proven successful in other schools—the chance to prove itself and build support within the community. This was the case in Little Rock, Arkansas. Merit-pay bonuses were paid in the first year by an anonymous donor; the next year, the school district, pleased with the results of the first year, voted to use its own funds to pay performance bonuses.

BACKDROP: AN ANTIQUATED PAY SYSTEM

Today, the majority of teachers in the United States are paid through a system known as a “single salary schedule,” which bases teachers’ pay on their years of experience and their education credits and degrees. According to the National Education Association Statistics, 96 percent of all public school districts utilize a single-salary schedule for teacher pay. The system was designed in the 1920s to ensure fairness among elementary school teachers, who were mostly women, and secondary teachers, who were mostly men. Critics contend that this pay system fails teachers and students as it does nothing to reward excellence. Indeed, it promotes equal pay for unequal performance. Under the current system, an increase for one teacher means an increase for all. The following table shows the Denver Public Schools’ salary schedule as offered by Brad Jupp, education author and member of the Denver Classroom Teachers Association. According to Jupp, it is an example of a “typical single-salary schedule” used for paying teachers.

Notes: Rates are guaranteed raises over time. The current Denver Public Schools salary schedule is typical of compensation schemes for teachers. Each step represents a year of teaching. Source: Denver Public Schools.

Proponents of changing teacher compensation argue that the single-salary schedule deprives public school administrators of the ability to adjust an individual teacher’s pay to reflect performance, attract sought-after skills, and assure that teaching positions in low-income schools are filled by high performers. For example, many school systems struggle to fill teaching positions in fields that command high salaries outside of education, such as math and science. The rigidity of the single-salary schedule prevents them from addressing this shortage in the obvious way—by raising pay in these specialties. Likewise, few school systems provide extra compensation to teachers who work with disadvantaged students. Therefore, experienced teachers often use their seniority to transfer to more attractive schools, leaving the neediest students with more inexperienced teachers.

With such obvious flaws in this rigid pay system, why don’t states and local school districts reform their pay practices for teachers? One answer is teachers’ unions. Unions defend the single-salary schedule in the name of employee equity and fairness, and oppose changes that rely on student performance as a measure of a teacher’s effectiveness. Furthermore, teachers’ unions, particularly the National Education Association, have opposed merit pay systems because they place the union in an awkward position: “For every teacher awarded merit pay, ten others will want the union to file a grievance alleging that they deserved merit pay more than the teacher who received it.”

WHY MERIT PAY ENHANCES NCLB GOALS

The No Child Left Behind Act requires that all students become proficient in reading and math, and that the achievement gap between students of different backgrounds be closed. Schools that do not make progress must provide supplemental services, such as free tutoring, and/or offering the option of choosing another public school. They must also take corrective action with regard to the way the school is run. The law, recognizing that several, if not all, of these are a necessary component to obtaining these results, established certain teacher-quality requirements for states, including the state for these academic services be taught by ‘‘highly qualified teachers.’’

And while federal funds already are in place for professional training and development to help all districts meet this requirement, that program alone may be insufficient. The General Accounting Office (GAO) determined that states and local officials are hindered in their ability to obtain all highly qualified teachers for a number of reasons, including ‘‘the lack of incentive pay programs.’’

In keeping with the rationale that teachers are the key to the success of NCLB’s goals, and so should be rewarded for meeting them, the President proposed a $600 million Teacher Incentive Fund as part of his FY 2006 budget request. This formula grant program is for states and school districts that choose to reward teachers—those who are closing the achievement gap for students in schools most in need, and those who otherwise would be left behind. The proposal was met with enthusiasm by the Senate Education and Labor Committee who noted, ‘‘The federal government has a responsibility to reward those who improve student achievement, and so should be rewarded for meeting them, thereby reducing the achievement gap and helping states and school districts meet this requirement.’’

In addition to the bipartisan support it has garnered, a second merit pay for educators is supported by teachers, parents, and education researchers. In November 2004, two national surveys were conducted for The Teaching Compendium, compiled by former IBM chairman Louis Gerstner, Jr. The surveys found that 80 percent of those surveyed support salary increases for ‘‘teachers who improve student achievement, raise standards and increase accountability for teachers.’’ The surveys also found that three out of four surveyed support pay raises for teachers willing to serve in high-poverty schools that struggle to attract and retain good teachers. Furthermore, a 2003 survey conducted by the research group Public Agenda found that 85 percent of teachers and 72 percent of principals reported that providing financial incentives would ‘‘help a lot’’ when it comes to recruiting and retaining high-quality teachers.

Similarly, 72 percent of the public supported paying more for those who teach in subjects such as math, science, and special education in order to attract and retain teachers with knowledge in these subjects.

The Denver Board of Education and the teachers’ association approved ProComp in 2001. Next, the program will be submitted to Denver voters later this year in order to raise the $25 million needed to finance the program. A second program proving successful is in Chattanooga, Tennessee. In 2001, nine of Tennessee’s twenty worst schools were located in Chattanooga. The mayor and the school district, with cooperation from the teacher association (with funds provided by two private foundations), devised a plan to address these nine elementary schools, known as the ‘‘Benwood schools.’’ To attract highly qualified teachers to high-needs Benwood schools, the group developed a teacher-incentive package. The package included $5,000 bonus for highly-qualified teachers as defined by student achievement, and $2,000 for each teacher-incentive program in a school that significantly increased its test scores, among other incentives.

The ‘‘Benwood schools’’ have been impressive. The percentage of third graders reading at or above grade level rose from 23 percent in 2001 to 36 percent in 2003. Across all grades, the percentage testing at or above grade level rose from 57 percent in 2003 to 77 percent in 2005. Math achievement increased from 54 percent to 70 percent during the same period. In addition to raising student achievement, the Benwood schools report that filling their teacher positions has been easier, turnover has been reduced, and teacher morale has improved.

The success of the NCLB depends particularly on raising achievement at high-needs schools, but, as Secretary of Education Margaret Spellings describes it, the current system detracts from that goal: ‘‘We have a system that doesn’t give the students who want to help these students the support they deserve. While most professions reward those willing to take on the hardest assignments, the school system often offers the opposite. Teachers with the skill and desire to close the achievement gap find themselves drawn away from the schools that need the most help. Many school systems offer de facto incentives for teachers to leave these schools.’’ That is, sometimes experienced teachers use their seniority to transfer to more desirable schools.

To address this, a number of school districts have employed merit pay to reward highly qualified teachers who work in desiring high-needs schools. The program is the Teacher Advancement Program (TAP) developed by the Milken Family Foundation. In addition to merit pay, the TAP system rewards teachers who take on additional responsibilities with additional pay. In Arizona, talented teachers have shown their support for this program by taking jobs at some high-needs schools. Of the 61 teachers in one school district who moved to high-needs schools, 13 (or 21 percent) came from schools in high socioeconomic areas, (or areas that are ‘‘not in the area.’’ Additionally, school districts in Florida, Alabama, Maryland, and Tennessee are offering rewards to qualified teachers who work in high-needs schools. According to the superintendent of one such school district, since the initiative began,
“staffing the urban schools has become much easier.”

MERIT PAY RAISES TEACHER QUALITY AND TREATS TEACHERS AS PROFESSIONALS

Education research demonstrates that teacher quality is the single most important factor affecting student achievement. That said, one recent study documents a decline in teacher quality—which its authors attribute to the single-salary schedule. Economists Carlne Hoxby of Harvard University and Andrew Leigh of Australian National University found that salary disparities for U.S. public school teachers “has narrowed so dramatically that those with the highest aptitude can expect to earn no more than those with the lowest. This will result in more than a quarter of the decline in teacher quality.”

According to their research, which used SAT scores to define “aptitude,” and was limited to women, 16 percent of American female teachers in 1963 were of low aptitude, compared to 36 percent in 2000. At the other end the spectrum, only one percent of female teachers in 2000 were high-aptitude, compared to five percent in 1963.

This study underscores the assertion that, especially in this highly competitive economy, the single-salary compensation structure bases compensation solely on educational degrees, and years of experience does not attract the best and brightest. Highly capable teachers, who are better able and willing to be attracted to a system that rewards individual performance.

Teaching is a profession like none other. It is rewarding to watch others learn, and preparing all others with the skills needed to succeed. As such, it should be held to high standards. Merit pay allows top teachers to be acknowledged for their efforts, provides an incentive to other teachers, and raises the bar of professionalism in teaching. It allows teachers to be held more accountable and judged in relation to their peers. Merit pay brings evaluation of outputs to teaching, a standard used in most professions.

MERIT PAY IS MORE COST-EFFECTIVE FOR THE TAXPAYERS

Under the current single-salary teacher pay system, a salary increase for one means a salary increase for all. Based on survey data, a majority of the public (71 percent) believes that teachers who are better paid should receive a higher raise. However, “just to bring the salaries in the below-average states to the national average would cost $8.5 billion—an amount that is fiscally infeasible.”

Merit pay raises teacher quality and rewarding good teaching practices. These difficulties have been erased following annual salary increases for grades three through eight as required by NCLB, which provides objective measures to identify effective initiatives. Merit pay can be used in the schools that need them the most. According to the April 2005 Harris-Hart survey, “public support for paying the costs of higher teacher salaries is enhanced if higher pay is linked to teacher performance and other accountability measures.”

REFUTING CRITICS

Among the criticisms raised by opponents of merit pay is that it is not an appropriate use of student performance as a measure of a teacher’s effectiveness. Education research, which has been done for the past 25 years, shows that pay for performance based on student achievement would increase the probability that superior teachers would be attracted to and retained in the schools that need them the most. According to the American Council on Education, “the single most important factor affecting student achievement is the quality of the teacher.”

The National Education Association argues that, rather than pay increases for some, all teachers should be paid more. However, history shows that there is no direct connection between paying more money on education and increased achievement. According to the most recent analysis by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) of its member countries, spending on education as a percentage of Gross Domestic Product, the United States spends the second-highest amount. And yet, U.S. student achievement does not match the high expenditure. While the proportion of individuals completing high school has been rising in all OECD countries, the rates of students graduating from high school in the U.S. are among the lowest in all OECD countries are now higher than those in the United States. Another study shows a similar lack of correlation. According to the National Center for Education Statistics, the United States outspends the other G–8 countries in per-student expenditures. And yet, fourth-grade students in the United States ranked in the middle of the list of countries in mathematics, and eighth-grade students ranked 15th among the 45 countries in mathematics.

CONCLUSION

Expectations are greater now for teachers because the No Child Left Behind Act holds schools accountable for student achievement. Merit pay is a positive way to reward those who are effective in student achievement. Congress needs to help states to implement alternatives to the traditional, single-salary schedule used by the majority of public schools to pay teachers if it wants to assure that schools nationwide meet the NCLB’s important goals. Merit pay increases teachers’ ability to attract and retain highly qualified teachers, which suggests that command high salaries outside of education, such as math and sciences, and it encourages teachers to work in high-needs schools. A consistent policy that has clearly defined measures and expectations, should be able to address any legitimate concerns raised by teachers and their unions. Evaluation of performance and pay for performance increases pay for performance for teachers who improve student achievement. The Teacher Incentive Fund proposed by the President and passed by the House will permit many more schools to implement public-supported reforms, and will provide a major incentive for needed changes in teacher compensation nationally.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to express my strong support for the extension of a program that has provided vital support to our Nation’s dairy farmers, helped to maintain the milk supply, and perhaps more importantly has helped to preserve an important way of life in rural America. The program I speak of is the Milk Income Loss Contract, MILC, Program, which since its inception in the 2002 farm bill has provided a critical buffer between our Nation’s hard-working dairy farmers and the rollercoaster ups and downs of the milk market.

America’s farmers are the backbone of its rural communities, and for many, market, weather, and other challenges become more daunting we must make every effort to support them when they are in need. It is not just for the benefit of our farmers, who work hard year-round, often in the face of unfor-giving circumstances, and their families, but for the towns that they help to support and for the health of the land that they steward. Small farms are the big business of rural America, and if it becomes too hard for them to survive, the effects there will suffer, both economically and culturally. Likewise, as the economic pressure to develop grows, more and more open space will be lost to subur-ban sprawl if small farms disappear. Allowing them to go out of business by failing to extend sensible supports like the MILC Program would be bad for the economy, bad for our environment, and bad for consumers.

In very few places across the country are the days of the MILC Program’s survival more starkly apparent than in my State of New York. Agriculture is a dominant industry in New York, and dairy farmers are the bulwark of New York’s agricultural economy. In light of dramatic price swings and development pressures that are more severe than almost anywhere else in the country, the dairy farmers of my State need the type of support provided by the MILC Program when prices hit rock bottom. New York’s farmers have received millions of dollars under the program, and I can tell you that that money has made a real difference in helping small family farms pull back from the brink and stay in business.

Let me be clear about one thing. While this program provides crucial and timely support, it is not simply a big-dollar bonanza for America’s dairy farmers. Payments under the program only kick in when prices dip below the trigger price of $16.94 per hundredweight. If prices were fortunately high enough that support was not necessary, I raise these facts simply to say that anyone who would oppose this program, which provides crucial, targeted assistance to small dairy farms, on the grounds that it is big, fat or boondoggle is way off the mark.

The MILC Program expired at the end of September, so the need to extend it is pressing and vital. As we enter the New Year, milk prices may once again drop below the trigger price, and we need to make sure that the MILC Program is in place to do its job should our dairy farmers find themselves in need. The MILC Program is very good to New York, but not just to New York. The fact that the extension of this program has drawn strong support from Democrats and Republicans from multiple regions demonstrates its importance to our entire Nation.

While I have serious misgivings with other provisions contained in this budget reconciliation conference report, the 2-year extension of the MILC Program is one item that I am glad to see is included. The MILC Program has shown itself to be an effective and vital part of our Government’s commitment to support America’s farmers, and I strongly support its extension.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, this evening the Senate at the conference on the fiscal year 2006 Department of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education appropriations bill, I want to express my concerns with this conference report. The budget, the Senate conference report ignores the fact that short-term, cost-saving measures do not change important priorities compared to the Senate version of this bill, which passed on a near unanimous vote of 94 to 3, it is not the only affront to these programs since an additional across-the-board cut of 3 percent is included in the Department of Defense appropriations conference report. I am disappointed that this conference report fails to provide our children with the resources they need to compete in today’s world. Children of all ages will be affected by the decisions we make today.

This conference report decreases funding to programs that help students succeed at every stage. Indeed, it cuts funding for the School Improvement Programs, the Javits Gifted and Talented Students Programs, which all received less funding in the Senate bill than the President’s initiative to create 1,200 new or expanded health center sites to serve an additional 6.1 million people by 2006. The Senate-passed bill provided $105 million over the fiscal year 2005 level for community health centers while this bill contains an increase of only $66 million, in essence freezing any new competition for community health center funds. Second, the report slashes funding for programs that train health care providers who serve in health centers and other safety net sites.

Title VII health professions programs have a long tradition of responding to the needs of medically underserved communities as well as providing support to increase the racial and ethnic diversity of our health care workforce. Under this bill, a broad array of small but essential programs pertaining to trauma, geriatrics, aims and education, and emergency medical services will be eliminated. Over the past several years, Senator Roberts and I have led a strong bipartisan effort in support of these essential education and training programs. Cutting these programs is penny-wise and pound-foolish. It will cripple our ability as a nation to be better prepared for the inevitable emergencies and tragedies that happen every day and the demographic tidal wave that will soon be hitting our health care system.

The bill also neglected to include a Senate amendment allocating nearly $8 billion in emergency funds to combat the avian flu. Instead, the conference report actually diverts millions from the annual influenza program budget to pay for rural health programs, with a promise that funding for avian flu would be included in the pending Defense appropriations bill but at a much lower amount than the Senate originally proposed.

This conference report fails to provide sufficient funding for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, LIHEAP. Rising energy prices threaten to financially overwhelm low income families and result in longer waits for assistance. Meanwhile, the average family will face a $1,000 natural gas bill, an increase of 38 percent from just last year. For families using heating oil, prices are projected to hit $1,400, an increase of 21 percent over last year. These price increases are overwhelming workers’ salaries and seniors’ Social Security checks. American families need economic relief from high energy prices. They need the security to know they will not have to decide between heating their homes or feeding their families. They need the security to know they will not have to choose between paying their rent or their medical bills. They need the security to know they will have the freedom to be able to work and save advancements in medicine. And it fails to sustain support for essential programs $466 million below last year’s level, including a $137 million cut in rural health programs and a $185 million cut to the Bureau of Health Professions. Cutting these programs will make it even harder to recruit qualified professionals in many parts of the country.

Moreover, Republican conferees eliminated nine vital health care programs altogether, including trauma care, rural emergency medical services, the geriatric education centers, health education training centers, and the community health center will be created next year. At a time when we are the verge of major new breakthroughs in disease prevention and treatment, the conference agreement also includes the smallest percentage increase in health care programs since 1976, which will hinder promising medical research and disease prevention initiatives. There are just a few examples of the unconscionable cuts to crucial programs in this bill. Unfortunately, these cuts will be even deeper because the Republicans imposed an across-the-board cut against all nondefense and homeland security programs in the Defense appropriations bill.

In summary, Mr. President this bill is bad for our children, bad for workers, bad for seniors, and bad for this nation. America can do better.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the conference report to accompany the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies Appropriations bill. This bill does not reflect our Nation’s shared priorities and does a disservice to representing Wisconsin values. The people of Wisconsin value quality education for their children, affordable and decent health care for their families, and sound job training for workers. This bill cuts education funding for the first time in a decade. It cuts funding for No Child Left Behind programs, and the maximum Pell grant is frozen for the fourth year in a row, even as college costs are skyrocketing. And, for the first time 10 years, the Federal Government will slide backward on its commitment to students with disabilities because this bill cuts the Federal share of the costs of special education.

At a time when most Americans cite health care as their top priority, Republicans imposed an across-the-board cut against all programs that serve lower income kids. No matter how successful those schools are, I can tell you—they don’t have money to spare. This bill actually spends less Federal money per child than any federal budget in the last 10 years. How can we in good conscience reduce our commitment to education for low-income kids in public schools?

By making those cuts, the conferees provided education, health, and economic relief from high energy prices. With a sharp increase in energy prices this year, it is obvious that level funding for the LIHEAP program is inadequate. A major new breakthrough in disease prevention and treatment is just around the corner, but we won’t have the resources to deal with the inevitable emergencies and tragedies that happen every day and the demographic tidal wave that will soon be hitting our health care system.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, American families are ready for a change. They take a look at the priorities of this Republican Congress and the record of the Republican Party and say: it is time for a new direction for our country.
funding. Funding for No Child Left Behind programs would be cut by $779 million bringing it to its lowest level since 2002. Funding for Title I, which serves low-income, disadvantaged students and schools across the nation, would drop below the authorized level, its smallest increase in 8 years. And again, Congress fails to live up to its promise to provide 40 percent of the costs of educating students with disabilities: the bill cuts the Federal share of special education spending from 18.6 percent to 18.0 percent, just as our school districts are struggling to keep up with rising costs. Funding for Pell grant awards, which help make higher education affordable for many students, is frozen at $4,050 for the fourth year. In a row, funding for Even Start and Education Technology is slashed, and funding for the National Youth Sports Program is eliminated, leaving almost 1,500 Wisconsin young people without summer enrichment programs they have come to count on. The list goes on and on.

And education is not the only investment shortchanged. Some of the largest cuts in the LHHS bill are in programs that help shore up the health care system, like people lacking access to care and that address shortages of healthcare providers in under-served urban and rural areas. The conference report cuts funding for community health centers, which serve the uninsured people living in medically underserved areas, to a level below what is provided in either the House or Senate versions of the bill. This amount would not allow a single new community health center to open in the coming year. Funding for the Bureau of Health Professions, which helps recruit qualified health professions throughout the country, would be cut by $185 million, including the elimination of geriatric education centers and health education training centers. Rural health programs would drop by $137 million, including the elimination of the healthy community access program and rural emergency medical services.

In addition, funding levels have not kept pace with our need for investment in lifesaving biomedical research. The National Institutes of Health’s budget would receive a funding increase of less than 1 percent, the smallest percentage increase to NIH since 1970. NIH will have only $1.9 billion of the $10.8 billion in grants awarded by 355. The bill would provide no increase in Federal funding for Alzheimer’s research threatening the progress of promising research on that devastating disease. Less money would be available to support new research grants, attract talented, young researchers to the promising field of Alzheimer’s research and fund clinical trials to test new drugs to treat the disease—and this is just one example of the damage to vital research that the LHHS conference report would do.

Labor programs are immune from the slash and burn approach to appropriations embodied in the conference report before us. They are cut by $430 million. At a time when five percent of Americans, and four and a half percent of people from my State of Wisconsin, are unemployed, this bill wrongly reduces adult job training by $23 million and youth job training by $34 million. By forcing the unemployed find work and providing training to upgrade the skills of those who have jobs, this conference report turns its back to them.

I know better for our children and families. I supported the Senate version of this bill, which was bipartisan and passed by a vote of 94-3. Unfortunately, this conference report falls far short; it is neither bipartisan nor bicameral, and actually provides $1.4 billion less than last year’s level. In fact, LHHS is the only fiscal year 2006 appropriations bill to receive an overall cut in funding from last year.

I want to thank Senators SPECTER and HARKIN tirelessly to improve this bill. I also want to thank them for the modest increases they provided in the CMS Survey and Certification program, the ombudsman program, as well as their work to restore Perkins funding. However, I cannot support a bill that forces our schools, our health care system, and our workforce to do more with less. I urge my colleagues to join me in rejecting this conference report.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the challenge now before us is to find tonight on the floor of the United States Senate as Republicans rushed through unconscionable cuts to the programs that American families deserve. This conference report affects the lives of every single American, and it lets them down. It fails our commitments to the education of our children, to our health care, to the poor, and to our jobs. At a time when we should be moving forward, and helping families meet the challenges of higher costs, this conference report moves us backward.

EDUCATION

Parents know that education is a critical factor in making the American dream a reality for their children. An educated citizenry also makes a strong Nation possible. We cannot compete in the world without skilled workers. We cannot maintain a strong defense without a skilled and educated military. On the world stage, we have been presented with a global challenge, as we were when the Soviets launched Sputnik in 1958. In order to face this challenge with confidence, we should invest in the transforming power of education. That’s not what this conference report says. This conference report says that education is not a priority. It says global competitiveness is not a priority. It says basic fairness is not a priority. It says the American dream is not a priority.

In the face of this global challenge, this conference report does not invest in more education. In fact, for the first time in a decade, this conference report cuts the education budget. As we learn more about the critical importance of early education, as our elementary and secondary schools struggle to help our children meet higher standards, as a college degree is becoming an imperative in rising salaries, skyrocketing, the Federal budget for education is actually going down.

If our country is to remain strong in this rapidly changing world, our economy must work for everyone, and every American must have an equal opportunity to succeed. No Child Left Behind is not just a political slogan. It’s a solemn pledge to every parent and every child in America.

At a time when requirements under the law are more demanding than ever, this conference report cuts funding overall for No Child Left Behind programs by $1 billion, for a total that is $13.4 billion less than promised in the law. Over 3.2 million children will be left behind next school year. We have to raise the bar for adequate yearly progress, administer tests in reading and math on an annual basis, and ensure that all teachers are highly qualified. This conference report tells them they’re on their own.

Title I—the key NCLB program, which targets disadvantaged students—is cut for the first time in 13 years. Title I funds will be $28 million lower than last year, and 160,000 fewer children will be served. Funding for Massachusetts schools will be cut more than $4.3 million.

The conference report cuts Head Start funds by $68.5 million, leaving 750,000 eligible preschoolers without services, and dropping from the program 9,500 children who are currently enrolled in Head Start classrooms. It slashes the Even Start family literacy program, taking services away from nearly 35,000 children.

The conference report cuts funds for after-school programs, denying after-school programs to 13,000 children currently enrolled. The conference report also cuts funds to keep our schools safe and drug-free.

With the first cut to special education funding in a decade, this conference report moves backwards on our commitment to disabled students. The Federal share of the cost of educating students with disabilities actually decreases from 18.6 percent last year to 17.8 percent this year. The funding in the report is more than $4 billion short of the amount promised just 1 year ago when we passed the IDEA Improvement Act.

At a time when American students are performing below the international average in math and science, the conference report cuts $13 million in funds for the Math and Science Partnerships at the Department of Education, leaving funding well below half of the amount promised in No Child Left Behind.

At a time when technology is more and more prevalent in our lives and in our economy, this conference report continues the bewildering downward trend in educational technology funding. In fiscal year 2004, the program was funded at almost $700 million. This conference report includes $246 million, a 50 percent cut since last year and just over a third of the 2004 funding.

At a time when college costs have skyrocketed 46 percent since 2001, and almost 400,000 college-ready students do not go to college because of financial need, this conference report provides no increase in student aid. It leaves Pell grants frozen in place for the fourth year in a row.

JOBS

Just as this conference report leaves millions of children behind, it also leaves millions of American workers behind.

Close to 8 million Americans are unemployed, and most remain unemployed. Many families are counting workers, and close to 8 million Americans are unemployed, and most remain unemployed. Many families are counting Workers affected by the recent storms in the gulf are particularly at risk. Hundreds of thousands of gulf coast workers continue to struggle to find work in the wake of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Twenty-five percent of Katrina evacuees are unemployed, including 30 percent of those evacuees that have been relocated across the country. African-American and Hispanic evacuees fare even worse, with an overall unemployment rate of about 43 percent. Thus far, a total of 502,000 initial claims for unemployment benefits can be traced to the two storms.

Yet, the conference report would cut funding for unemployment insurance and emergency unemployment relief services that help jobless workers around the country. The conference report also cuts job training, as many workers struggle to improve their skills in order to secure good jobs. These illogical steps are an illusion that globalization is rapidly creating a single global workforce. Now more than ever, the jobs of American workers are at risk due to the poor wages and working conditions in other parts of the world. It’s critical that we invest in efforts to improve working conditions around the world, for the sake of all workers, including our own. Yet, the conference report slashes the budget for the International Labor Affairs Bureau from $93 million to $72.5 million—threatening our ability to protect American jobs and protect the basic rights of workers and children across the globe.

HEALTH

The conference report also fails to protect American families from public health catastrophes.

Congress has few higher priorities than protecting the American people from the deadly strain of influenza that is threatening the world and could take the lives of millions of Americans and damage the health of millions more.

The threat from this deadly new disease has been compounded by our inattention and failure to prepare. For years, public health experts sounded warning after warning about the devastation that a flu pandemic would bring, but year after year, we failed to respond to this deadly threat in its earliest stages.

Canada, Australia, Britain, Japan, and other nations released plans long ago. They’re implementing their plans now, but the Bush administration has not put a plan for only one Federal agency. A response plan for the Department of Health and Human Services is a critical first step, but even that plan is incomplete. It’s missing the actual operational plans for responding to a pandemic.

The President has called, however, for a significant investment in preparedness. I attended his speech at NIH, where he urged that $7 billion be appropriated immediately for preparedness.

We still have time to avert the serious consequences that a pandemic would bring, but only if we act now to begin improving our readiness. The Senate needed the call to action by unanimously approving an amendment for $8 billion in preparedness funding offered by Senator HARKIN.

But the Republican leadership isn’t on board. They stripped the $8 billion amendment out of this conference report, and provided only half that amount in the Defense Appropriations conference report. These irresponsible cuts to our preparedness programs will have to be delayed. Which parts of our response do our Republican colleagues think we should delay? Production of new vaccines? Stockpiling of flu medicine? Support for hospitals and health agencies preparing for the pandemic? I’d like to hear them explain to the American people which of these activities they think are unimportant, which of these priorities can wait, and which are not needed if disaster strikes.

This conference report also means that we will fail to capitalize on the promise of this century of the life sciences. With the 1 percent across the board cut, funding for NIH will decrease. This has happened only four times in the last 35 years. This is woefully inadequate to maintain our tradition of research excellence and breakthrough medical science. This is the lowest NIH funding level in 35 years and the research and development budget fails to keep up with inflation. These budget cuts will mean that four of five innovative new ideas will be ignored. Over 500 new research grants will fall by the wayside. It’s unbelievable that with the threat of a pandemic looming over America, the Republican Congress is denying the resources we need to discover new, life-saving treatments and cures.

Not only does the conference report not include funding for the avian flu preparedness, funding that would help to improve State and local preparedness against bioterrorist attacks was cut by over $96 million.

As we know, maintaining the health of our Nation is not limited to emergency preparedness. Our basic health services to the most vulnerable Americans and health promotion, and disease prevention are also vitally important. But this conference report cuts critical health promotion and prevention programs at the CDC will be cut by $307 million and HRSA programs are slashed by $754 million.

This conference report funds community health centers, that serve as a safety net of care for the most vulnerable, at less than 30 percent of the increase passed by the Senate, while eliminating the Healthy Communities Access Program which provides funds for health care providers, community-based organizations and local government to coordinate and strengthen health services for the poor and uninsured members of their communities. Funding is also cut for critical health professions training programs that address the shortages of providers and train them to deliver care in under-served areas and to serve the 46 million Americans who lack health insurance—often in community health centers. Funding for critical health professions
The conference report leaves our poorest Americans out in the cold time of soaring energy prices. Households heating primarily with natural gas will pay an average of $281 more this winter for heat—an increase of an incredible 36 percent over last year. Those relying primarily on oil for heat will pay $255 more—an increase of 21 percent.

This fall, the Senate voted against fully funding LIHEAP four times, and this conference report only provides flat funds. This is unacceptable.

We know that heating costs are at record levels this year.

Big oil profits are fatter than ever. Exxon-Mobil—the largest oil company in the United States—reported 3rd quarter profits of almost $10 billion, a 75 percent increase over last year.

Exxon-Mobil alone made $10 billion in the last quarter—but the Republican leadership refuses to fund LIHEAP at its authorized level of $5.1 billion. The Republican leadership is Robin Hood in reverse—robbing the poor to pay the rich.

So this conference report leaves our children behind, American workers behind, and American families behind. It leaves America behind.

It’s unfortunate that Christmas comes this week, because this conference report is the Grinch that steals Christmas for so many. While the neediest Americans are struggling to find some hope this season, the special interests are sledding away with all the Christmas for so many. The conference report leaves our poorest Americans out in the cold time of soaring energy prices. Households heating primarily with natural gas will pay an average of $281 more this winter for heat—an increase of an incredible 36 percent over last year. Those relying primarily on oil for heat will pay $255 more—an increase of 21 percent.

This fall, the Senate voted against fully funding LIHEAP four times, and this conference report only provides flat funds. This is unacceptable.

We know that heating costs are at record levels this year.

Big oil profits are fatter than ever. Exxon-Mobil—the largest oil company in the United States—reported 3rd quarter profits of almost $10 billion, a 75 percent increase over last year.

Exxon-Mobil alone made $10 billion in the last quarter—but the Republican leadership refuses to fund LIHEAP at its authorized level of $5.1 billion. The Republican leadership is Robin Hood in reverse—robbing the poor to pay the rich.

So this conference report leaves our children behind, American workers behind, and American families behind. It leaves America behind.

It’s unfortunate that Christmas comes this week, because this conference report is the Grinch that steals Christmas for so many. The text of that Senate amendment is pending at the desk, and I am asking, Will the Senator from Texas accept this amendment?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, with all due respect to the Senator from Montana, I don’t see how we can take part but not all of the tax reconciliation bill. It is time to do away with the AMT.

I appreciate the fact that the Senator from Texas has said he, too, wants to do that and that we need to do it right. To do it right we need to do the whole tax reconciliation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask the Senator, will she object to an amendment I suggested that the whole AMT be held harmless and that it count under pay-go in terms of the tax, the budget provisions which provide for $70 billion over the next 5 years? Those are the two conditions.

Mr. KYL. Reserving the right to object to the proposed amendment to the unanimous consent, I believe on our side we are going to have to do the form of the so-called AMT patch that the Senator from Montana has proposed. Of course, we would object to his counting of that against the reconciliation number, or the so-called pay-go provision.

I gave some thinking to his proposed amendment which would accept the broader AMT patch, as the Senator first described it, but nothing in addition to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. As I hear their response, they will not agree to my two suggested conditions and amendments. Therefore, I must respectfully object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An objection has been heard.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I do hope the Senator from Montana, working with the chairman of the Committee on Finance, will make it a priority to get the tax reconciliation package go through with AMT and with the other tax cuts that would be extended to show the American people they can rely on the tax cuts that have been passed and have helped the economy in its recovery.

It is very important we not leave any question in anyone’s mind that the tax cuts that started the economic upturn 2 years ago will be extended. The American people will get to keep the money in their pocketbooks, spend it, and fuel the jobs our economy has produced.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I listened carefully to the Senator from Texas. I think we all agree we have to do something about the AMT. It is a big problem.

I, frankly, tell the Senator I have introduced a bill to totally repeal AMT. It is a pernicious stealth tax and should not be incurred. We would like to work with the Senator to try and find a way to accomplish that.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I sign on to that effort immediately. With this kind of coalition maybe we can do something very important by doing away with the AMT in this country.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—S. 2164

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, as part of a bipartisan action this morning, Democrats and Republicans agree to send a reconciliation bill back to the House of Representatives for further consideration. Even though the vast majority of this bill hurts working families and the most vulnerable among them, there were a handful of important proposals that we support in that bill that need to be enacted immediately. That is why I am going to be asking unanimous consent in just a moment for the Senate to pass the Health and Welfare Relief Act of Senator STABENOW of Michigan.

This bill prevents the scheduled reduction in Medicare physician payments while holding Part B premiums harmless for beneficiaries. The bill extends TANF and transitional medical assistance, TMA, for an additional year. Finally, the bill provides temporary Medicaid relief to Katrina victims.

We should all be able to agree, even if there are parts of the bill subject to a point of order, parts that will be debated, there are many provisions in that bill that meet pressing needs that are important and need to be addressed on a timely basis. Many of them are taken directly from the conference report, my friends across the aisle have just supported. I hope we can take up this bill and pass it today.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 2164, the Health and Welfare Relief Act of 2005, introduced earlier by Senators STABENOW, REID, BAUCUS, and others; that the bill be read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I object.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I have a series of judicial nominations that have been cleared on both sides. I ask unanimous consent the Senate immediately proceed to executive session to consider the following nominations on today’s Executive Calendar: Nos. 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 471, and 472. I further ask unanimous consent that the nominations be confirmed, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table without any intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I object.
Mr. LEAHY. Last week marked the 214th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights to the Constitution. Over the last week, this Nation and the Senate proceeded to confirm 100 of this President’s nominees. If they are confirmed, the Senate will have confirmed 225 of this President’s judicial nominees to lifetime appointments. If they are confirmed, the Senate will increase the number of confirmations this year by 50 percent in just one day, from 14 to 21.

I chaired the Judiciary Committee for the second half of 2001. No judges had been confirmed that year before I became chair. In the last 5 months of the year we were able to have hearings, Committee consideration, and Senate votes on 28 new judges. We worked hard in spite of the 9/11 attacks and the anthrax attacks and succeeded in reducing vacancies and filling longstanding vacancies. Indeed in the 17 months I chaired the Judiciary Committee, the Senate proceeded to confirm 100 of this President’s nominees. It took Republicans as long as they could to match our record. Democrats proceeded in spite of the recent history of Republicans pocket filibustering more than 60 of President Clinton’s qualified, moderate nominees.

As is clear from our record since that time, we have been willing to continue working with the Republican majority to fill vacancies on the federal bench— if only the President would send nominees. Unfortunately, along with home heating prices, gasoline prices, interest rates, and the trade deficit, judicial vacancies have also increased dramatically this year. It almost seems that unless the White House can pick a partisan political fight, it really does not care very much about the Federal judiciary. I noted in the spring that we had not received new nominations this year from the President. Only recently has that begun to change but there are still more than 25 vacancies without a nominee. I urge the President, as the Democratic leader and I have urged him for some time, to work with Senators on both sides of the aisle to identify qualified, consensus candidates to fill these vacancies.

NOMINATION OF VIRGINIA MARY KENDALL

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, included in the nominations just approved by the Senate is the nomination of Virginia Mary Kendall of Illinois to be the U.S. district judge for the Northern District of Illinois. She is replacing the retired Susanne Conlon. This is an extraordinary woman who will make a great contribution to the Federal judiciary.

Virginia Kendall is strongly supported by Senator OBAMA and myself, as well as Speaker DENNIS HASTERT. On a bipartisan basis, we reviewed many fine candidates for this vacancy and found Virginia Kendall to be the best. With the approval of the White House, she moved through the Senate Judiciary Committee.

I am anxious, as soon as I finish these remarks, to go to the cloakroom, place a phone call, and give her a Christmas present and let her know her nomination has been approved by the Senate.

I would like to thank Judiciary Committee Chairman SPECTER, as well as Ranking Member LEAHY, for expediting the consideration of Ms. Kendall’s nomination. I also want to thank Senator OBAMA for the significant role that he played in the selection process. Finally, I want to thank House Speaker HASTERT for his role in the process and for his willingness to continue an important tradition of bipartisan cooperation in the recommendation of Federal district court nominees for presidential consideration.

Virginia Kendall is a highly respected federal prosecutor in Chicago with a stellar reputation for diligence, intelligence, and integrity. She has been in the U.S. Attorney’s office in the Northern District of Illinois for the past decade, and she has a great depth of experience.

She is one of the leading prosecutors in the country in the area of child exploitation over the Internet, and she was the lead counsel in the first Internet kidnaping case brought by the Department of Justice. She has also prosecuted domestic terrorism and corporate fraud cases.

Ms. Kendall has helped reduce Chicago’s murder rate, by creating a novel program that emphasizes better outreach by law enforcement to parolee gun offenders and to at-risk students in the Chicago Public Schools. She has been the lead prosecutor in cases involving the sale of weapons over the Internet to minors.
Ms. Kendall has also been extremely active in pro bono work. She has created programs in which Federal prosecutors go into Chicago high schools and educate students about the dangers of gun violence and the workings of the criminal justice system. One of her programs received an award from the Department of Justice as the most outstanding volunteer program in the country. Ms. Kendall and her husband have worked closely with students from the Cristo Rey Jesuit High School, an amazing success story of a high school in Pilsen, a low-income Latino neighborhood in Chicago.

In addition, Ms. Kendall has served as an adjunct law professor at Loyola University law school for the past 12 years. Some of her former law school students contacted me and said she was the best professor they ever had. That speaks very well of Ms. Kendall’s ability not only to understand the law, but to teach it.

One of Ms. Kendall’s biggest supporters is her boss—Patrick Fitzgerald—the United States Attorney in the Northern District of Illinois. He wrote me a long letter singing her praises, and he concluded,” I can also assure you that Ginny is a warm and compassionate person who is very atttentional to the human needs of those she works with and supervises. Ginny’s combination of legal experience as a prosecutor, supervisor and instructor, and commitment to bettering the communities most in need of help would stand her in great stead if she were selected as a federal judge in this district.

I am pleased to report that Ms. Kendall also receives high marks from her opposing counsel and has an excellent reputation in the criminal defense bar. One of her opposing counsel described her as “honorable, decent, ethical, and someone with an ideal temperament.” Another opposing counsel said Ms. Kendall was “down to earth, honest, straightforward, reliable, and full of integrity.”

I was not surprised to learn that a substantial majority of the American Bar Association’s judicial nomination review committee gave Ms. Kendall their highest possible rating of “Well Qualified.” I am confident that, as a judge, Ms. Kendall will serve with honor, courage, and distinction on the Federal bench in the Northern District of Illinois for many years to come.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will return to legislative session.

The Senator from Louisiana.

This afternoon Ms. LANDRIEU pertaining to the introduction of S. 2171 and S. 2172 are located in today’s Record under “Statements on Introductions of Bills and Joint Resolutions.”

HURRICANE RELIEF

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, while we did leave a lot of work to be done, I do want to thank my colleagues, particularly Chairman COCHRAN and Senator BYRD, for shepherding through a tremendous direct relief bill. That would not have happened without these two leaders. It was initially sent to us at $17 billion, with an anemic funding level for direct relief. It literally a bill that fixed Federal buildings and sent money to Federal bureaucracies and didn’t reach the people directly or our cities or counties or parishes or churches or hospitals. Senator COCHRAN took that bill and he stood it up and added some extraordinary pieces to it and fought like a tiger to keep that money flexible but accountable so our Governors could start rebuilding our States again, with help from the Federal Government; not just promises but real help. If it had not been for Senators COCHRAN and BYRD and the appropriators who helped to stand this bill up, we would be leaving here tonight in a much less hopeful situation.

We passed that bill out of here a little while ago. It is headed to the House of Representatives. That part is not controversial, but the process is controversial. I hope the House Members will pass that bill, send it to the people of the gulf coast, who have been waiting for a week, for not 2 weeks, but for 4 months for this Congress to send some package of hope, other than money to FEMA, but a package of hope to our elected officials so they can get their parishes stood up, people back home, the lights turned on, the hospitals working again, the universities functioning again, and stop firing and start hiring people so we can stand up this economy.

I am hoping that tomorrow the House will act, and we will at least send this $29 billion home. Just today the President signed an $8 billion tax relief package that is full of targeted and specific tax relief for businesses and individuals that will help as well. I thank the administration for their support of that bill.

Particularly I thank Senators BAUCUS and GRASSLEY. Senator BLANCHE LINCOLN worked very hard on many portions of this bill as a member of the Finance Committee. I could not leave tonight to go home for the holidays without thanking Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS. Without them, that bill never would have made it through the process. On the House side, Congressman McCRERY and my own Congressman from New Orleans, BILL JEFFERSON, had a great deal to do with the success of that bill.

As we get ready to celebrate Christmas and we remember members of our own family, our parents, our siblings, cousins, very good friends who have lost their homes and their businesses, as we remember the 250,000 homes that have been destroyed and the millions of people impacted negatively, at least this Congress can say we passed an $8 billion tax bill that will help many directly and give them immediate relief as it was signed today, and this $29 billion direct package reallocating FEMA money that is sitting in a bank account and give it to people for this Christmas holiday, and then to resolve when we get back to take up and design some new tools for reconstruction, the Administration, in particular, the need of housing, which is such a desperate need, and reorganization of our neighborhoods and communities.

I can rest assured that the leadership in Louisiana, with the Louisiana Reconstruction leader, who appointed Norman Francis and Walter Isaacson, the two leaders of the LRA, is prepared, with our local officials, to come up with new and innovative strategies to build a great city of New Orleans again, the great parishes of Jefferson, St. Bernard, and Plaquemine, then to move over to the southwest and give the small parishes, such as Cameron, which was totally destroyed, the help they need to stand back up, so we can stand up our farms, hospitals, local industry, keep our ports open, start hiring teachers and doctors back, and start building up the 18,000 businesses that were lost. Forty-one percent of the businesses in Louisiana were destroyed by this hurricane. Our income fell 25 percent, our personal income, in a report released today.

I know everybody is tired. It has been a long day. I am ready to go home myself and have a few Christmas gifts wrapped before the weekend. But I can say that last night in New Orleans, there was the first party thrown in a long time at Gallier Hall, the old city hall. Although Senator VITTER and I couldn’t be there, 500 people showed up. While there were a lot of stories about the heartache that had occurred, there was a lot of hope in the hearts of the people who came. There were former mayors and former council members and leaders of the community, Black and White, Hispanic and Asian. And despite the fact that still this Congress doesn’t understand why New Orleans matters, I can promise you that the spirit of the people who live in this city will not let it die, will not let south Louisiana die.

We are going to come back and work even harder to add to the package we passed tonight to get the job done and to be a model for the country, should this catastrophe ever strike another area again.

I thank my colleagues for getting through at least tonight the $29 billion of direct relief and the $8 billion tax package. When we come back, we have work to do on coastal, work to do on housing. I look forward to working with Members on both sides of the aisle to get the job done for the people of Louisiana and the gulf coast.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

December 21, 2005
Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MAGEN DAVID ADOM

Mr. FRIST. For 75 years, the Magen David Adom has served as Israel's emergency relief service.

Pondering in 1930 by seven Israeli doctors and a one-room emergency medical service, the MDA has grown to play a major role working alongside the Israeli Army Medical Corps in times of war and peace.

Twelve hundred employees and more than 10,000 volunteers have helped countless disaster, accident, and terrorism victims within Israel's borders.

And on battlefields and disaster areas around the world, the relief service has distinguished itself with consummate caring, professionalism and bravery.

Even the United States has been a beneficiary of the MDA's humanitarian efforts.

Most recently, in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina MDA Israel launched an emergency mission named “United Brotherhood” to collect donations, funds, clothing and other equipment for the New Orleans survivors who were left homeless.

Despite their indisputably noble work, for nearly 60 years the organization has been excluded from the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.

The reason? The Israeli agency has been excluded for 60 years because of its decision to retain its own protective symbol rather than adopt the Red Cross or the Red Crescent.

Finally, this month, the impasse was broken.

An overwhelming majority of the state-parties to the Geneva Conventions approved a new protective symbol—a “Red Crystal”—to allow the relief agency to operate as a member of the global humanitarian movement.

Within Israel's territory, the agency will still use the Red Star of David.

Around the world, it will use the Red Crystal Protective Symbol, with the option of also displaying its traditional logo if the host country permits.

Aside from a few remaining formalities, the Israeli emergency service will, finally, at long last, take its place as a full member of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.

I would have liked to have seen it done earlier. I urge my colleagues to set aside their partisan differences and pull together to protect the American people.

The flu virus won’t know who is Republican and who is Democrat, but the people who suffer will know who didn’t get the job done.

We don’t need panic, but we do need to be prepared.

We need communication, surveillance, antivirals, vaccines, research, and stockpiling and surge capacity.

This may sound like a lot of moving parts, but between our researchers, entrepreneurs, and public health experts, we have the intellect, the ingenuity, and the know-how to get the job done.

My duty as an elected official and as a doctor is to see this through to make sure that we are adequately prepared and we can look our constituents in the eye and tell them we have done everything we can to be prepared.

Our economy, country, and lives are depending on it.

The President has laid out a comprehensive plan. It is our job, now, to set aside sufficient resources to tackle this looming threat.

I urge my colleagues to set aside their partisan differences and pull together to protect the American people.

The avian flu spreading from East Asia to Romania and Turkey looks and acts more like the virus of 1918 than of any of its more moderate cousins.

If it achieves the final step of human-to-human transmission, the consequences could be catastrophic both in loss of human life and economic meltdown.

Recently, the Congressional Budget Office released a study which I had specifically requested on the economic impact of a flu pandemic. The CBO predicts that the American economy could suffer a $675 billion setback, a 5-percent loss in GDP, in the year a pandemic might hit.

The clock is ticking, and we need to act now.

We need to put the wheels in motion so that when and if the avian flu hits, America is prepared.

If we don’t, and an avian flu epidemic comes to our shores, we will rightly be blamed for failing to do our best to protect the American people. The finger will be pointing straight at the Congress.

What we need in order to be prepared is a six-pronged approach.

We need communication, surveillance, antivirals, vaccines, research, and stockpiling and surge capacity.

This may sound like a lot of moving parts, but between our researchers, entrepreneurs, and public health experts, we have the intellect, the ingenuity, and the know-how to get the job done.

My duty as an elected official and as a doctor is to see this through to make sure that we are adequately prepared and we can look our constituents in the eye and tell them we have done everything we can to be prepared.

Our economy, country, and lives are depending on it.

The President has laid out a comprehensive plan. It is our job, now, to set aside sufficient resources to tackle this looming threat.

I urge my colleagues to set aside their partisan differences and pull together to protect the American people.

The flu virus won’t know who is Republican and who is Democrat, but the people who suffer will know who didn’t get the job done.

We don’t need panic, but we do need to be prepared.

We need to act, and that is what we intend to do.

AFGHANISTAN

Mr. FRIST. On Monday, Afghanistan’s first democratically elected Parliament in more than 30 years convened before the eyes of the world. It was an emotional moment and one of great pride for the Afghan people.

As President Karzai told his audience of 351 new parliament members, with Vice President Dick Cheney and his wife Lynne listening in the front row, “This dear Afghanistan has risen again from the ashes.”

Here in the United States, we are full of hope for the Afghan people and we share in their joy.

They have suffered a long and difficult journey.

Twenty years of civil war. Nearly another decade of total repression.

But they have finally reached the shores of freedom, and the future spells out before them is one of hope, progress, and limitless possibility.

We are proud to count Afghanistan as a free country, a fellow democracy, and a friend of the United States of America.

This past year has been one of extraordinary events in the Middle East.

We have seen amazing images of people celebrating their newfound liberty—cheering, dancing and singing in the streets that they, too, are now free.

From the cedar revolution in Lebanon to the historic elections in Iraq, the winds of democratic change are blowing across Arab lands.

A new report by the highly respected human rights group Freedom House finds genuine stirrings of democratic progress: local elections in Saudi Arabia; women’s new voting rights in Kuwait; improved elections in Egypt and the Palestinian territories.

The organization’s director of research notes that, “Many people predicted that American policy in Iraq and elsewhere would set back the cause of freedom. This year’s results suggest that hasn’t been the case.”

Indeed, I would go further to say that President Bush, our brave men and women in uniform, our coalition partners, and courageous citizens across the Middle East deserve tremendous credit for advancing the cause of freedom.

That freedom is bringing hope and optimism to millions of people long oppressed.

Last week’s ABC News poll found that Iraqis believe their lives are going well, and nearly two-thirds expect things to improve in the year ahead.

Average Iraqi household incomes have skyrocketed by 60 percent in the last 20 months. Iraqis are quickly joining the global current of life with cell phones and the Internet, cars, washing machines, and satellite dishes.

Another new poll in Pakistan found that in that Muslim country, public opinion toward the United States has dramatically improved.

Favorable opinion toward the United States has more than doubled since May to nearly half of those polled, while support for al-Qaida has plunged to its lowest level since 9/11.

Times are changing, and they are changing for the better.

It is true, we still face a terrorist enemy who targets innocent civilians.
with bombings and beheadings, who dreams of inflicting massive violence on the American people. These same enemies sent suicide bombers to murder innocent Jordanians only a few weeks ago. They despire freedom, and they are bending every effort to derail the democratic process. But they will not succeed. I am confident that America and her allies will prevail. I am confident that we will defeat the terrorist enemy and bury its twisted aims. And all the while, we will continue to stand behind Iraq, Afghanistan and all champions of freedom as they work to secure the blessings of liberty.

RETIREMENT OF MR. ROBERT J. SHUE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Robert J. Shue, a senior official in the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense, Comptroller, who in early January, 2006, will retire from a distinguished career spanning 37 years of exemplary service to America. Mr. Shue began his career serving over two decades as an economist in the Bureau of Economic Analysis in the Department of Commerce. He joined the Department of Defense in 1982 and quickly became a highly valuable member of the Secretary of Defense's staff. During his 23 years in the Comptroller's office, Mr. Shue was a highly respected leader and expert on the Department budget and a wide range of related matters. He played a critical role in the formulation, approval, and execution of defense budgets that produced a much-needed strengthening of America's defense posture and enabled our military to fulfill its many demanding commitments.

Mr. Shue developed and led a diverse staff of analysts and liaison officers and made his office the Defense Department's primary leader in tracking and resolving high-level budget issues. He meticulously tracked numerous and complex actions affecting the funding available to the Department. He was a pivotal leader in presenting and justifying each new budget to the Congress and the American public.

Mr. Shue was vital to the Department's analysis of congressional action on Department funding and to devising strategies to influence that action. He skillfully led staff in achieving and sustaining a highly productive relationship with congressional oversight committees. This resulted in accurate and constructive information flow between Congress and the Department, helping each meet its responsibilities more successfully.

Mr. Shue produced substantial top-quality analysis on complex economic, fiscal, and budget topics for the Department and senior DoD leaders. He also improved support for these leaders by initiating important management reforms that saved staff time and improved the quality of decision making data.

For his extraordinary achievements, Mr. Shue received the Presidential Rank Award for Meritorious Service. He earned the deep respect of leaders throughout the Department of Defense, in the Office of Management and Budget, and with Congress's defense oversight committees. These leaders benefited enormously from his exceptional knowledge and dedication. Mr. Shue's service has substantially helped our nation's leaders make the wisest possible allocation of its defense resources in order to ensure America's future security.

Throughout his distinguished career, Mr. Shue has had the resolute support of his wife, Suzi, and his three children. He has earned the deep gratitude of the American people. I wish Mr. Shue and his family all the best in the coming years.

GIVE OUR VETERANS THE CARE THEY'VE EARNED

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, it has been 3 weeks since President Bush signed the $366 spending bill providing funding for the Department of Veterans Affairs. Unfortunately, his signature was accompanied by a glaring asterisk. Instead of approving the full amount of funding that Congress provided in the Department's budget bill, the President bottlenecked $1.2 billion in emergency funding that the VA urgently needs to make ends meet.

Congress added the emergency money to the bill after discovering that the President's 2006 budget request for the VA was woefully inadequate, compounding a series of errors in funding assumptions by the administration that led to a massive shortfall in VA funding in fiscal year 2005.

The $1.2 billion in emergency funding was not some kind of optional Christmas bonus for America's veterans. It is money that the VA needs to cover the baseline cost of veterans health care programs. But that money cannot be released to the VA until the President signs the bill on November 14 and to head off another shortfall in 2006. The administration, by contrast, had to be dragged to the table and only grudgingly owned up to the catastrophic consequences of its sloppy and inept budget estimating.

Congress has acted. Now the ball is in the President's court, and the clock is ticking. Mr. President, I again call on the President to immediately release the $1.2 billion in emergency funding for veterans' health care that Congress has provided.

MILITARY AID TO INDONESIA

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, just 1 month ago, this Congress approved the Department of State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, of 2006. President Bush signed the bill into law on November 14. The act contains strong language concerning the political and military situation in Indonesia.

Congress requested from the administration evidence of genuine progress in military reform, the protection of human rights, and accountability for crimes against humanity. It asked for such evidence before the administration made available to Indonesia any funds appropriated under the Foreign Military Financing Program and before it issued any licenses for the export of lethal defense articles for the Indonesian Armed Forces.

Congress also gave the administration the authority to waive these conditions when it is in the interests of national security to do so, as it usually does when placing these kinds of conditions on this or any administration.

To test the required improvements in military reform, we asked the State Department to certify that, No. 1, the Indonesian Government is prosecuting and punishing, in a manner proportional to the crime, members of the Armed Forces who have been credibly alleged to have committed gross violations of human rights: No. 2, at the direction of the President of Indonesia, the Armed Forces are cooperating with civilian judicial authorities and with the aim of making a genuine effort to solve cases of gross violations of human rights in East Timor and elsewhere; and No. 3, at the direction of the President of Indonesia, the Government of Indonesia is implementing reforms to improve civilian control of the military.

Congress does not make these requests lightly, and we based our decision on four decades of Indonesian history and U.S.-Indonesian relations. The Indonesian Armed Forces have frequently acted to forestall progress and the growth of democracy in Indonesia. Over the last decade, taking note of this, Congress has placed certain restrictions on military assistance to Indonesia, and—over that same span of time—we have seen certain positive changes in TNI behavior.

This progress is occurring—of course—in a larger context. Indonesia is making remarkable progress in building one of the world’s largest democracies, with democratic elections most recently in 2004.

Congress did not include the conditions on aid for Indonesia’s military contained in the Foreign Operations Act to hinder the development of Indonesian democracy or punish the Indonesian people, but to assist them as they build a better future for their country.

The Indonesian Armed Forces have rightly been criticized in the past, but I also want to emphasize the changes we have seen, the positive steps Indonesia’s military authorities have taken. Those steps are important and praiseworthy.

The Armed Forces have revised their old “Dual Function” doctrine, an artifact of the Sukarno and Suharto years, under which the Armed Forces claimed both a military and a socio political role in the life of the Indonesian state. Under Suharto, military officers also served as parliamentarians, provincial governors, mayors, civil servants, and teachers. The Armed Forces also controlled the police. They effectively controlled giant industrial and commercial concerns such as the state oil company.

That has stopped. The TNI has stepped back from politics, and given up its reserved seats in the Indonesian Parliament.

Indonesia’s military officers have shown repeatedly in recent years that they want to be part of the political life in the Indonesian state, and during their country’s last two national elections, they have behaved in an exemplary fashion.

When Indonesia suffered the terrible blows inflicted upon it by last December’s tsunami, the Indonesian military acted with bravery and great humanity to bring assistance to the victims of that most terrible natural disaster.

We recognize what they have done and we admire their commitment to the new and more democratic system their country is building.

Sadly, while the Indonesian Armed Forces have done a great deal, they have not done enough. Too many reasons for serious concern remain.

Six years after the TNI’s involvement in East Timor’s referendum on independence left 1,400 people dead, the Indonesian authorities have not brought Indonesian officers to justice for alleged crimes committed in the Timorese capital of Dili and elsewhere in that island nation. Indeed, some officers suspected of serious abuses have received not punishment or censure, but promotions to higher grades of their services.

There are numerous cases of human rights activists being harassed and even murdered, and we still have not seen justice for these victims.

Last year, the Indonesian Parliament was considering a South African-style truth and reconciliation commission to discuss past atrocities, military officials objected strongly and publicly—to the inclusion of “truth” in the commission’s title, warning any human rights crimes would not help the aim of building national unity.

During that debate, a retired Indonesian major general serving in Parliament, a man named Djasri Marin, said a remarkable thing. According to Australia’s The Age newspaper, he said, “If we reveal everything, it will be far from the idea of reconciliation, because there will be trials.” He added, “If we want to disclose everything for the sake of mere truth, it will prevent us from real reconciliation . . . Let’s bury the past and step towards the future.”

It will be difficult to move into a common future in a unified fashion if the Indonesian military cannot own up to its past and take responsibility for its actions. That is one reason why we need to continue promoting positive change within the Indonesian Army. We need to continue pressing for genuine military reform, human rights protections, and accountability for crimes against humanity, just as Congress has requested.

In plain and simple language, Congress made its intent clear, asking the administration for genuine improvement in these three areas. It seems unlikely that either the President or the Secretary of State could have misunderstood or misconstrued this congressional expression of intent. Still, only a week after President Bush signed the Foreign Operations bill into law, the State Department hastily waived these conditions on military assistance, squandering an opportunity to encourage the TNI and Indonesian authorities to engage in meaningful reforms.

The waiver authority, granted to the administration by Congress, comes with implicit expectations by Congress that the administration will use it wisely and well. During the few days that passed between the time the President affixed his signature to the Foreign Appropriations Act and the moment Under Secretary of State Nicholas Burns affixed his signature to the waiver, it gave the TNI little time to act on congressional concerns.

We certainly saw no major advances in the three areas marked out by Congress. The TNI took no new steps to assure the appropriate prosecution and punishment of TNI members who are credibly alleged to have committed gross violations of human rights. The TNI took no new steps to show it is cooperating with civilian judicial authorities and with international efforts to resolve cases of gross violations of human rights in East Timor and elsewhere.

The Indonesian authorities took no new steps to improve civilian control of the military. How could they? A week is hardly any time.

The great irony of all this is that the amount of assistance affected would have been small, small, but of great symbolic importance. I regret to say that the administration’s decision to waive these conditions on national security grounds is also of great symbolic importance. Congress was promoting accountability and the rule of law in a democratic system. The Department of State has said the administration remains committed to accountability, but its actions suggest otherwise.

To waive these conditions in such a preemptory fashion raises serious questions about the relationship this administration has decided to have with Congress. In truth, it makes a mockery of the waiver process. Can we trust the administration to implement conditions like this in good faith? They waived the conditions—on supposed national security grounds—a week after the President signed the bill into law. It is only taking a week to move a paper like that through the State Department bureaucracy.

In truth, it demeaned the process, making a national security waiver a waive-it-when-you-feel-like-it waiver, rather than a last resort when other priorities intrude.

And so, I ask the administration, how shall we do business with one another in the future? Does the administration want us to eliminate such waiver authorities, so that its officers are required to give our concerns a fair hearing?

The administration needs to do more to make sure that U.S. policy and U.S. assistance to Indonesia promote TNI accountability and discourage the impunity the TNI still enjoys. I respectfully disagree with MG Djasri Marin. Nobody can step towards the future by burying the past.

We are intensely interested in Indonesia’s future and the success of its democracy. Indonesia is the world’s fourth most populous country, with an Islamic population larger than that of... any other country on the planet. It unwillingly hosts a number of radical terrorist groups that have killed hundreds of Indonesian citizens and hundreds of foreign visitors to Indonesia’s shores. It sits astride vital trade routes linking the Middle East to the Pacific.

We believe it is in the best interest of our country to support Indonesia in its democratic transition and undermine our interests in that country. We know Indonesia faces a serious terrorist threat and that the Indonesian authorities must act to protect their nation’s citizens from that threat. We have urged closer U.S. cooperation with Indonesian police authorities to face down terrorism, and we support efforts to fund, train, and equip the Indonesian police’s antiterrorism units. We applaud the Indonesian Government’s determination to vet all workers to ensure that none of the institution’s history of human rights abuses make sure they have not been involved in human rights violations.

We do not dispute that the TNI could play an important and appropriate role in restoring order in Indonesia’s own fight against terrorism, but we cannot ignore the institution’s history of human rights abuses. We should not lend American support to an unreformed TNI. Its history of human rights abuses makes TNI a proxy for a problematic regime. The United States Government, in its own interest, should not support such an institution.

We will find ourselves on shaky ground—and place our counterterrorist strategy in the region at risk—if we do not press for reforms in an army that considers itself above the law. I strongly urge the State Department to reconsider its decision to waive in such a preemptory fashion the restrictions placed upon military assistance to Indonesia by this Congress. The administration needs to provide Congress with a better sense of the benchmarks it is using to encourage TNI reform and measure TNI progress. And it needs to use its waiver authority more judiciously if it expects Congress to continue granting such authority.

DORRANCE SMITH

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, earlier this week, the Committee on Armed Services reported the nomination of Mr. Dorrance Smith to the full Senate. Mr. Smith is an experienced and highly accomplished television executive, who has been nominated to be the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs. I have a copy of Mr. Smith’s biography, and I would note that he is a four-time Emmy award winning television producer, political consultant, and media strategist who has worked over 30 years in television and politics.

Mr. Smith spent nine months in Iraq in 2003-2004 where he served as Senior Media Adviser to Ambassador Paul Bremer. He was responsible for developing a state of the art communications facility in Baghdad for the Coalition Provisional Authority and a public diplomacy strategy for the United States government. In addition, Mr. Smith was asked to overhaul the fledgling Iraqi Media Network. By April, 2004 this effort was deemed so successful that the terrestrial channel—Al Iraqya—was launched on satellite. For his efforts he was awarded the Secretary of Defense Medal for Exceptional Public Service.

More recently he has been a consultant to the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies and the 2004 Republican National Convention.

A four time Emmy Award winning ABC News and Sports producer, he has held a number of positions at the network including serving as the first executive producer of “This Week with David Brinkley.” From 1989 until 1991, Smith was the executive producer of ABC News’ Nightline series originating from South Africa, which covered the release of Nelson Mandela. For this work he was awarded an Emmy award. In addition he served as executive producer of the prime time special “Tragedy at Tiananmen—The Untold Story,” which was honored with the duPont Columbia University Award, the Overseas Press Club Award and an Emmy. “Nightline” also won an Emmy in 1991 for outstanding news coverage of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Prior to his work on “Nightline,” Smith was the executive producer of the number one rated Saturday morning program, “This Week with David Brinkley.” He was also a five time Peabody award winner for his leadership of ABC’s media strategy for the 1980 Winter Olympics, the 1984 Winter and Summer Games, and the 1988 Winter Olympics in Calgary. From 1978-1979, Smith served as ABC News’ White House producer. Smith joined ABC News as a Washington producer in 1977. Previously he was staff assistant to President Gerald Ford.

He began his broadcasting career at ABC Sports in 1973 as an assistant to the producer. In 1974 he was made Manager of Programming for ABC’s Wide World of Sports. Smith is a member of the Advisory Council for the George Bush Library in College Station, Texas.

He graduated from Claremont Men’s College in 1973 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. He lives in McLean, Virginia.

FIRST SESSION OF 109TH CONGRESS

Mr. ALLARD. I rise today to speak in review of the first session of this 109th Congress. I have served in the Congress since 1991, and I can say without exaggeration that this year has been the single most productive year I have participated in. As I will detail, we have passed numerous significant legislative items, some of which have languished in Congress for many years. We have stayed a determined course in the global war on terror, maintaining our commitment to our troops and to those around the world who adopts a democratic way of life in place of tyranny. We have stayed a proven course to reduce the tax burden on Americans and on American business. Economic indicators in the market, home ownership data, and employment all illustrate the wisdom of the course. This Congress has shown a very real commitment to principle. While there are those in this body and in the media who would like to deny it,
I am confident that this session of Congress will go down in history as singularly productive and representative of the will of the people.

The list of significant legislative items passed and signed into law this year is extensive. We got off on the right foot by passing a budget resolution out of the Senate on March 17, and the Congress adopted the budget conference report on April 28. This is amazingly early when compared to the struggle we have encountered in recent years. The Budget, as I have said many times before, is a vital blueprint for our work and a responsibility we must assume to serve the taxpayers. I am a member of the Senate Budget Committee and a former member of the House Budget Committee, and I am pleased to say that our chairman in the Senate has been as efficient and principled an advocate for good budgeting policy as I have ever worked with.

In addition, we have also struggled to complete our work on appropriations legislation. The House, where appropriations measures are to originate, reported every single appropriation bill out of committee by June 21. The Senate passed every bill before October 27. Today, we wrap up a few remaining issues, all but the Defense and Labor-HHS bills have been signed into law, but it is important to note that these bills were passed by the Senate in October. The leadership on both sides of the Capitol and the members of the Appropriations committees have done a remarkable job of making sure quick work of these difficult legislative items.

Congress passed the Safe, Accountable, Flexible and Efficient Transportation Equity Act authorizing more than $286 billion of investment in our national infrastructure. The Congress also took a major step forward this year by passing a comprehensive energy policy. A comprehensive energy policy will help America meet long-term demands for energy. This policy will encourage greater domestic production, fuel diversity, research and development of new energy technologies, and an across-the-board improvement of energy infrastructure. One piece of this forward-looking policy includes the Oil Shale Development Act, which I worked on with my colleagues. This has been a prominent issue for years, but we have now made a significant policy decision, and it is one that will benefit millions of Americans in the decades to come. This year, Congress also addressed the energy needs of low-income families by increasing funds for the Low Income Heating Assistance Program, LIHEAP. Increased funding for this program will help those in need as winter grows more cold.

The work we have done on energy and transportation represents historic commitments to the public good. Virtually no aspect of our economic prosperity is unaffected by our fortunes in transportation and energy, and I am pleased to have been a part of these policy achievements.

After years of opposition that cost consumers untold millions, Congress finally passed the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act, the most sweeping revision to the U.S. Bankruptcy Code since 1978. This law will save approximately $3 billion a year for consumers through lower interest rates and better products and services. Congress also benefited from The Protection of Lawful Commerce in Arms Act and the Class Action Fairness Act. The former puts an end to the frivolous lawsuits that sought to financially drain lawful firearms manufacturers for the acts of criminals, and the latter curbs abuses in our courts that have driven costs for consumers up without benefitting the public. Frivolous lawsuits forced the firearms industry to spend nearly $300 million of its own funds on defending itself from third-party actions and class action lawsuits had grown over 1,000 percent nationwide. Lawyers were getting rich while consumers suffered. These two bills represent a major accomplishment for both American business and American business. We also passed the Dominican Republic-Central America-United States Free Trade Implementation Act which will benefit American business, consumers, and our neighbors in this hemisphere.

I would like to highlight another recent achievement of this administration and of this Congress that we celebrated this week when the first shipment of U.S. beef arrived in Japan. As my colleagues know the Japan Government recently declared that U.S. beef is every bit as safe as Japanese beef and that the beef trade may resume. This is a tribute to the hard work of our beef producers, and the diligent work of policymakers. It is with some pride that I note the first shipment of beef to be shipped to Japan was sent from Denver, CO.

In addition to these notable and historically significant accomplishments, the Congress has also passed a more humble pair of consumer-friendly items in the Junk Fax Prevention Act and The Family Entertainment and Copyright Act. These aren’t the kinds of bills that the Washington, DC, crowd may see as being vital national issues, but these are issues felt deeply by our constituents and the small business community.

It cannot be overstated that these policies have fostered continued economic growth and prosperity. More than 56,000 jobs were created in our economy in October this year, and millions of jobs have been created since May 2003. Unemployment continues to steadily decline as more Americans than ever are working. This is a remarkable feat by policymakers, investors, small businesspeople, and families across the country. Our economy is strong.

Congress continued the national commitment to our men and women in uniform in a variety of ways this year. Though we await completion on the Department of Defense appropriations bill, we have already passed into law more than $80 billion for the further prosecution of the war in Iraq, the reconstruction and rehabilitation of Iraq and for our international partners. We have increased the pay of our service men and women with an across-the-board 3.1 percent raise, increased housing allowances, increased bonuses for additional retention and reenlistment, and increased specific bonuses for those deployed overseas. We have also increased the maximum life insurance allowed for an insured veteran or service member and secured more than $140 million for body armor and personal protection.

I am particularly pleased with the steps we have taken to support our troops. Too often policymakers talk the talk without regard to action. It is my hope that we will continue to be responsive and supportive of our troops. The people of the United States are grateful for their dedication and courage. We tackled important veterans health issues this year, as well, by passing the Veterans Medical Services Supplemental. This legislation provided $1.5 billion to meet our commitment to those who have served our Nation.

The same Defense supplemental appropriations bill included almost a billion dollars to help our troops. The earthquake in the Indian Ocean last year was almost a year ago, including more than $650 million for the Recovery and Reconstruction Fund.

Though not a legislative accomplishment, this was a good time to mention the tremendous yield we have seen from the years of work by this administration, the military, and Congress. This year started with Parliamentary elections in Iraq to demonstrate the willingness of the Iraqi people to support their democracy. We must stay this course.

In the past year, we have also enacted a series of legislative proposals to provide relief to those in the gulf region. The unprecedented impact of Hurricane Katrina demanded an immediate response. The Gulf Coast Emergency Water Infrastructure Assistance Act, The Community Disaster Loan Act, The Natural Disaster Student Aid Fairness Act, Pell Grant Hurricane and Disaster Relief Act, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Emergency Response and Recovery Act, and Katrina Tax Relief Act, among others, put us on the road to recovery. The comprehensive emergency supplemental appropriations bills that Congress passed provided total relief over $65 billion and have provided needed infrastructure, security, and humanitarian relief. While there is a great deal of work to be done in the Gulf States, Congress has and will continue to demonstrate an ongoing commitment to this region.

Congress also engaged in one of the most important debates that we could have with regard to our national security concerns. That is, that of enhancing the security of our borders. This year’s Homeland Security Appropriations Act provides unprecedented funding to protect and secure our borders from those who wish to enter illegally. This year we passed more than $31 billion in new budget authority for the Department of Homeland Security, increasing border security accounts, providing an additional 1,900 border patrol agents, and providing more 220 detention beds.

Among the most high-profile issues of the year were the nominations, hearings, and thus far one confirmation for the U.S. Supreme Court. Not only did the Senate confirm John Roberts to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, but Judge Alito was named to be the new Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. In the time since Chief Justice Roberts came before the Senate, we have also worked through a pair of nominations, one of which we will make our first order of business in the new year. The Roberts nomination demonstrated the value of our system and all of its various parts, working together for a greater good. I look forward to the timely hearings on Judge Alito’s nomination and an up-or-down vote on his nomination.

This has been an amazing year of accomplishment for the Congress. As I said earlier, there has not been a more productive year in my time here. As proud as I am of these many accomplishments I would also like to discuss a few accomplishments a little closer to my home, the State of Colorado, where we have had a pretty big year, as well.

One of the ongoing projects I have worked on for many years now is the cleanup of Rocky Flats. This year, we secured more than $560 million for the final stages of the cleanup. Contrary to what many may expect, this cleanup was completed ahead of time and below projected costs, serving both the region and the taxpayer by cleaning up this facility.

Another long-term project that I have worked on is the destruction of chemical weapons at the Pueblo Depot. By working with the Department of Defense, we have increased funding and maintained good management principles to meet our treaty obligations in the destruction of more than three-quarters of a million chemical weapons on site.

Just down the road from Pueblo is Fort Carson. I recently held a town meeting at Fort Carson to discuss a variety of issues important to that base and to that community, including the political process that accompanies BRAC. We secured more than $120 million in military construction funds for new barracks and training at the facility as well as securing funds to prevent encroachment at the base. Even further on up the road is another jewel in America’s military infrastructure, the U.S. Air Force Academy. Our ongoing efforts to assess progress and address problems at the Academy have been very productive this year. We secured $18 million to upgrade academic facilities and family housing this year. It is with some pleasure that I can also say I attended all four board of visitor meetings at the academy this year.

This has also been a year of accomplishment for Colorado’s space industry. This year we added $60 million for military satellite projects in Colorado, secured $12 million for the space control facility at Peterson Air Force Base, and $6 million for the space warning facility in Greeley. In keeping with these efforts to modernize and expand our posture in space I held four Space Power Caucus events. Space is indeed a great frontier, and it is one where we must maintain an aggressive stance. Just as it is important that the military sector be moving forward in space, it is equally vital that our workforce and our students learn about space science and perform cutting-edge research. We secured more than $10 million for student programs at the University of Colorado, Colorado State University, the Challenger Learning Center, and the Space Foundation. The students who will benefit from these programs are our future, and I spoke earlier of the importance of the highway bill and its impact on our nation’s infrastructure. In Colorado, this will translate into a variety of projects. We secured $80,000,000 for the T-Rex highway improvement program, $5 million for the west corridor, and $9 million for the Colorado Association of Transit Agencies, a statewide coalition of agencies focused on the future of mass transit in my home State. Our infrastructure includes a variety of projects such as the Rio Grande bike trail in Garfield County, funding for the Pikes Peak Highway, State Highway 145 from Dolores to Stoner, the Ports-to-Plains Corridor, and Frisco’s West Main Street.

In the Agriculture Appropriations Act we secured more than $300,000 for the Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Services for the Russian Wheat Ashgl Resistance, Stress Tolerance and Quality Enhancement Project, more than 800,000 for infectious disease research to the Center for Economically Important Infectious Animal Diseases at Colorado State University, and almost $900,000 for the National Beef Cattle Evaluation Consortium, comprised of Colorado State University in Fort Collins, Cornell University, and the University of Georgia.

Another ongoing project that I have been pleased to work on with my colleagues is the modernization and expansion of the Centers for Disease Control lab in Ft. Collins. This facility, which provides vital research on vector-borne disease, will receive $21,000,000 this year.

We have been very fortunate in the State of Colorado. I appreciate the efforts of my colleagues in recognizing the vital research, military, and educational facilities housed in Colorado.

On a more personal note, this year I opened a new State office in Durango, CO. I would like to urge colleagues, if they have not been, to pay a visit to this charming mountain community in southwestern Colorado. Durango offers terrific recreation in summer and winter, and I look forward to being able to enhance my constituent service with this new office.

Each of my State offices and my office here in Washington joined with the University of Denver and the University of Northern Colorado this year to host the sixth annual Civic Engagement Conference. This year, we hosted more than 100 Colorado citizens for 3 days of civic learning and participation. This annual conference is one of the most enjoyable things I am able to do with constituents each year.

It has been an extraordinary year of accomplishment for the Congress and for Colorado. We have a tremendous amount of inertia going in to the second half of the 109th Congress, and I look forward to the new year and all of its challenges.

CLERICAL ERROR CLARIFICATION

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I submit for the Record a clarification to the conference report to accompany S. 11101(a)(2) regarding bankruptcy fees. The language, “in paragraph (3) by striking subclause (A),” refers to the wrong subsection of the bankruptcy code. The language should read, “in paragraph (3) by striking subclause (A),”
Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of the reauthorization of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act.

The scourge of trafficking in women and children was a priority for me as First Lady and continues to be a priority for me as a Senator. Since the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women in 1995, I have been working to raise awareness of the heinous practice of buying and selling women and children like commodities. I have met with the families from Eastern and Central Europe, who, with tears in their eyes, pleaded with me to help them find lost ones who had been stolen from them, and I have met with the victims, including a 12-year-old girl in Thailand who was dying of AIDS after being sold twice by her family. This barbaric practice has caused far too many to exist in a perpetual state of fear and vulnerability, and we must do everything in our power to curb the scourge of trafficking out of the shadows and to the attention of the world.

I am proud to say that the United States has, for the past decade, been a leader in working to end this evil practice. Today, I am pleased that we will take up a comprehensive antitrafficking bill in Congress to provide help in rebuilding the lives and their communities.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this holiday season is a time for families to come together, reflect on the year's challenges and opportunities, and give thanks for all that has been accomplished. It is also a time to take action to help those less fortunate. The year 2005 was a year of great challenges and opportunities, and among the greatest were the hurricanes that ripped through the Gulf coast.

The magnitude of Hurricane Katrina reminded us that we are all part of a single American family. And we have a responsibility to help members of that family when they are in need.

And 18,500 Head Start or Early Head Start children were uprooted from programs. These are not just statistics. These are real people whose lives have been changed forever.

Some have temporarily closed schools. Some have temporarily closed schools due to the devastation caused by these hurricanes. And 18,500 Head Start or Early Head Start students were quickly back on track in their classrooms. Florida schools damaged by Hurricane Andrew in 1992, the Army, Navy, and National Guard joined in helping to repair classrooms and reopen school doors in about 3 weeks. Last year, Florida schools damaged by Hurricane Charley were reopened in 6 months, and students were quickly back on track in their classrooms.

But Hurricane Katrina caused vastly greater devastation, especially in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. More than 700 schools and 30 colleges and universities were damaged or destroyed. Almost all have been closed, at least temporarily, and many will not open until January at the earliest. Some are in danger of never reopening. The toll was particularly devastating in the affected areas, and ensures that students affected by these hurricanes receive the financial aid they need to stay in school and continue working toward their degree. Several colleges in Louisiana are in danger of being sold twice by her family. This barbaric practice has caused far too many to exist in a perpetual state of fear and vulnerability, and we must do everything in our power to curb the scourge of trafficking out of the shadows and to the attention of the world.

I am proud to say that the United States has, for the past decade, been a leader in working to end this evil practice. Today, I am pleased that we will take up a comprehensive antitrafficking bill in Congress to provide help in rebuilding the lives and their communities.

The toll was particularly devastating in the affected areas, and ensures that students affected by these hurricanes receive the financial aid they need to stay in school and continue working toward their degree. Several colleges in Louisiana are in danger of closing their doors for good, unless they receive this critical assistance soon. The funding approved by the Senate today may not be enough to guarantee their future, but at least it offers much needed support.

This relief is long overdue, and I commend the Senate for taking action.

When these devastating storms struck, the entire nation responded in a way that is as caring and as generous as their spirit.

Thousands volunteered to help. Families opened their homes. School districts across the country accommodated displaced students in their schools. Colleges and universities graciously opened their doors.

The Nation is grateful to all who did so much to help respond in the tragic aftermath of the hurricanes. We are grateful to the school principals and superintendents and the college presidents and deans who served as first responders and helped so many students continue their education.

But these educators need help as they struggle to accommodate the students that did not do its part to help these devastated communities get back on their feet and enable students to return to their schools. We also need to help the institutions that are laboring so hard to provide a safety net for these children and their families.

That is why the proposals in this conference report are so important. This funding will rehabilitate and strengthen the educational institutions that serve and assist children and students affected by hurricanes Katrina and Rita, and help meet the needs of early education, elementary and secondary education, and higher education.

Thousands of young children affected by the storms need to return home to safe and healthy settings. They need good early childhood programs in adequate facilities. Their families need health and counseling services to cope with the trauma brought on by the storms.

The bill facilitates enrollment in Head Start and Early Head Start by waiving income eligibility and other requirements, so that families affected by Katrina will be able to enroll their children more easily. It provides $90 million for affected Head Start centers to provide preschool opportunities to displaced students. It also provides additional support and guidance to meet the emotional needs of children and their families.

We are reminded by this disaster that schools are the heart of local communities across America. When schools open, families return, businesses return, and lives begin to return to normal.

The bill also responds to the efforts of schools in Texas, Georgia, Florida, and other States that opened their doors to displaced students. It provides $645 million for public and private schools that have enrolled displaced students, in order to ease the transition of students to new schools, support basic instruction, purchase textbooks and materials, and temporarily expand facilities to avoid overcrowding.

Both public and private schools can benefit from this aid, but the proposal sets ideology aside and rejects the attempts by the House and the administration to provide this aid in the form of vouchers to parents through a 1–800 number. Instead, the bill uses the mechanisms of current law to provide aid for students in private schools through the public school system.

The funds can only be used for the same list of allowable educational services as for public schools and so cannot fund school choice programs.

This relief package is a welcome step toward helping students displaced by these deadly activities. It makes clear that all of the aid is temporary, and is being provided in response to the extraordinary circumstances resulting from these disasters.

It is not a precedent for future Policymaking.

In addition, to help meet the demand for qualified teachers, the bill authorizes the Secretary of Education to encourage states to extend temporary reciprocity for the certification of teachers and para-professionals across state lines. Teachers certified as highly qualified in one state should be recognized as meeting this standard in other States as well.

To ease the burden faced by colleges and universities in the declared disaster area, the bill also authorizes the Secretary of Education to waive various Federal reporting requirements. It includes $200 million for student aid and waives the institutional matching requirement for students affected by these deadly storms. The aid can also be used to help institutions in Louisiana rebuild their facilities and welcome their students home. Our priority should be to help these colleges and universities move into the future.

This relief package is a welcome step to help life return to normal for the hundreds of thousands of children and students uprooted by these deadly storms. We begin today to help the Gulf coast communities rebuild and re-open their schools and colleges.

We need to continue this important work in the coming weeks, by assessing the ongoing needs of those affected by the hurricanes, and doing all that is necessary to help them rebuild their lives.

FAILURE OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES TO PASS S. 1558

Mr. LEAHY. I am disappointed that the House of Representatives has failed to act on S. 1558, which passed the Senate on November 10. This bill was introduced by Senators Collins and Lieberman. I worked with them to amend it to extend for 4 years the “sunset” of a provision first enacted in the Identity Theft and Assumption Deterrence Act of 1998 that grants the Judicial Conference of the United States the authority to redact information from a judge’s mandatory financial disclosure in circumstances in which it is determined that the release of the information could endanger the filer or the filer’s family. The bill, as amended, also extends the protections of this provision to the families members of judges.

Like the more comprehensive court security measure Senator Specter and I have introduced, S. 1558 provides judges and their families with much needed security by extending the judges’ redaction authority without interruption and expanding it to their families. It also strikes the right balance with the need for continuing judicial oversight to ensure the proper use of this redaction authority, which has been a matter of some concern to me. I appreciate that the Judicial Conference is seeking to improve its practices and the Senate passed S. 1558 because none of us wants to see judges or their families endangered.

Now, because of the failure of the House to pass S. 1558 and enact the reauthorization of redaction authority for another 4-year period, these protections will lapse at the end of the year.

EPA’S PROPOSED PARTICULATE MATTER STANDARDS

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise to speak on behalf of myself and Senators Carper, Boxer, Clinton, Lautenberg, Lieberman, and Obama.

Last night, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency proposed new National Ambient Air Quality Standards for particulate matter. These National Ambient Air Quality Standards are the cornerstone of the Clean Air Act. These standards must be set at a level “required to protect public health” with an adequate margin of safety. They are to be based on the “latest scientific knowledge,” and EPA is prohibited from considering costs in setting them. Their fundamental purpose is to ensure that our air is safe to breathe.

We have known for years that fine particle pollution can cause premature death, increased asthma attacks, and numerous other health effects. In 1997, EPA revised the particulate matter standard on the basis of that evidence. The Clean Air Act directs that EPA, together with an independent scientific review panel, examine the available scientific evidence and determine whether the existing standard needs to be changed. The proposal by EPA last night, coming almost 5 years late, represents the end result of that effort. Unfortunately, EPA selected the weakest option available to it.

In determining whether to revise the standard, EPA reviewed the more than 2000 scientific studies that have been published since 1996. These studies confirm the earlier research results that demonstrate the strong relationship between particle pollution and illness, hospitalization, and premature death. Some of the more recent studies show the strong relationship between particulate pollution and cardiovascular illnesses that trigger heart attacks and strokes. These studies also indicate a stronger relationship between short-term PM exposure and health effects than was evident in 1997.

Under the Clean Air Act, EPA is required to consider the advice of an independent scientific review panel, the Clean Air Science Advisory Committee, CASAC, which must include at least one member of the National Academy of Sciences, one physician, and one person representing State air pollution control agencies. That body exhaustively reviewed the current level of scientific evidence and concluded that EPA must revise both its short-term—24 hour or daily—PM standard, and its annual PM standard. Unfortunately, EPA chose to disregard that advice to only revise the annual standard. And in making itsposal on the 24-hour standard, it choose the highest level recommended by CASAC—35 micrograms per cubic meter.

It is apparent that the level proposed by EPA was not based entirely on the latest scientific knowledge. The level of the standard proposed by EPA would leave millions of Americans unprotected. It will also require few, if any, additional controls to be put in place. EPA chose the least protective approach that it could and disregarded the advice of the CASAC by failing to revise the annual standard. Had EPA followed the recommendations of CASAC, it could have proposed options that would have prevented more than twice as many deaths. That is not even considering the Clean Air Act requirement that EPA act based on a standard—"that considers 'sensitive sub-populations.'"

Playing politics with public health is unconscionable. When these standards were last revised in 1997, they were subject to multiyear litigation battle. Ultimately the Supreme Court unanimously upheld the 1997 standards. The scientific process that was used to develop them. The science we have available to us today is even clearer than it was then. Fine particle pollution kills people at levels below the existing standards. We need to change these standards and heed the advice of our best and brightest scientific minds. We need to let them tell us when the air is safe to breathe. When EPA makes its final decision in September regarding a new national ambient air quality standard, it must do so based on scientific, rather than political considerations. The very lives of our citizens depend on it.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, we recently passed a disturbing milestone in this country. One morning just a few weeks ago in North Carolina, Kenneth Lee Boyd was put to death by lethal injection. Mr. Boyd’s was the one thousandth execution since the death penalty was reenacted in 1976. Why a jury decided that his guilt was not in doubt, confidence in the extraordinary punishment he received increasingly is.

Across the Nation, people are reconsidering capital punishment. Recent polls, jury verdicts, and actions taken by all three branches of government in States across the country reflect the changing attitudes about the death penalty in this country. Americans are increasingly concerned about the use of this very final punishment.

With advances in DNA technology, numerous exonerations of people on death row, and new revelations that innocent people have actually been put to death, Americans are questioning the accuracy and fairness of the administration of the death penalty. In addition, more and more people have qualms about the very concept of state-sponsored executions. This trend is a hopeful sign that there continue to be numerous moral, ethical and legal problems with the death penalty.

According to a series of Gallup polls, the death penalty has dropped from 13 percent of Americans in 1995 to 30 percent in October of this year. Think about that. In just 10 years, we went from a vast majority of Americans supporting the death penalty, to nearly one-third now opposing it. That is the highest level of opposition since its reinstatement almost 30 years ago. And a CBS News poll from April indicates that when people were asked whether they prefer the death penalty or life without parole for individuals convicted of murder, only 39 percent supported the death penalty.

Evidence of the changing attitudes about the death penalty can be seen across America. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops recently launched a campaign to end the use of the death penalty. In New York earlier this year, the State’s highest court struck down the State’s capital punishment statute, which had passed only 10 years earlier in 1995. The legislature then declined to reinstate the law, making New York the first state to abandon capital punishment since 1976. That is a remarkable sign of progress.

Meanwhile, just over the river in Virginia, the death penalty was a key issue in the last gubernatorial election. Tim Kaine, the current Lieutenant Governor, has long been personally opposed to the death penalty, although he pledged to enforce the law in Virginia. In the final weeks before the election, his opponent Jerry Kilgore aggressively criticized Kaine’s opposition to the death penalty. Kilgore strongly supports capital punishment and during the campaign he said he would push to expand its use in Virginia. But when Kilgore went after Kaine on the death penalty, Virginians did not take the bait. Despite Kilgore’s attack ads, the citizens of Virginia elected Kaine Governor, and he will become Virginia’s Governor in January.

I think what happened in Virginia strongly demonstrates how far we have come. This issue can no longer be used as a political grenade. A majority of Americans may not support the death penalty, but the electorate understands what a serious issue this is, and it will not stand for capital punishment to be exploited for political purposes.

Yet another example of the seriousness with which citizens and politicians alike are treating this issue is outgoing Virginia Governor Mark Warner’s recent commutation of the sentence of Robin Lovitt to life in prison. Lovitt was convicted of robbery and murder and sentenced to death, but before he had exhausted all judicial remedies, a court employee destroyed the physical evidence in his case—the very evidence that Lovitt said would exonerate him in the event of a vacated DNA analysis. Under Virginia law, the Commonwealth must keep all physical evidence until the defendant has exhausted all posttrial remedies. Although Governor Warner is a death penalty supporter, he decided that he could no longer support the death penalty when the State itself had destroyed his ability to prove his innocence. As he put it, he believed that the case “require[d] executive intervention to reaffirm public confidence in our justice system.” In his almost 4 years as Governor, this was the first time Governor Warner granted a clemency petition.

On the other side of the country, we have seen a great deal of public debate about Governor Schwarzenegger’s recent consideration of a clemency petition for Stanley Tookie Williams. Williams was a founding member of the Crips gang and was convicted of four murders in 1981. During his years in prison, however, Williams, by all accounts, worked to turn his life around. He denounced gang violence, tried to keep kids out of gangs, and even helped broker peace deals between rival gangs. Governor Schwarzenegger denied clemency and Mr. Lovitt’s recent commutation of the sentence of Robin Lovitt to life without parole. The State of California put Mr. Williams to death on December 13.

Much more is happening at the State level that has not received nearly as much attention. North Carolina and California recently created commissions to study the administration of the death penalty in their respective States, joining many other states that have already done so. Moratoriums on executions remain in place in Illinois and Michigan, and in other States. Many State legislatures have worked to address flaws in their systems or even rejected... efforts to reinstate the death penalty. State courts have limited or banned the death penalty, including the Kansas Supreme Court, which in 2001 ruled that State’s death penalty law unconstitutional. That case, Kansas v. Marsh, was heard in the U.S. Supreme Court, but not decided. In Texas, the State that executes by far the most people every year, a life-without-parole sentence was recently enacted, giving juries a strong alternative to the death penalty and voiding it. Mr. President, also established a Criminal Justice Advisory Council to review the State’s capital punishment procedures.

These signs of progress have coincided with critical new restraints imposed by the Supreme Court, which in recent years has issued two key rulings that limited the application of the death penalty. In 2002, the Court held in Atkins v. Virginia that applying the death penalty to mentally retarded defendants was excessive and constituted cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment. And just this year, in Roper v. Simmons, the Court made the same decision with regard to individuals who commit crimes before their eighteenth birthday. That means for mentally retarded defendants and juveniles is now unconstitutional in the United States.

Mr. President, as I mentioned before, there are many reasons people are questions about the death penalty in ever-increasing numbers. A common concern is that innocent people end up on death row, and we cannot tolerate errors when the state is imposing such a final penalty. More than 120 people on death row have been exonerated and released. Think about that. Just over one thousand people have been executed in the era of the modem death penalty, while a number equaling 12 percent of those executed have been exonerated. Those are not good odds, Mr. President.

Even more horrific is the prospect that we have already executed individuals who were, in fact, innocent. It saddens me greatly to report that information has come to light strongly demonstrating that two men put to death in this country in the 1990s may well have been innocent. That sends chills down my spine, as I’m sure it must for my colleagues.

Earlier this year in Missouri, local prosecutors in St. Louis reopened the case of a 1980 murder because the evidence against the man convicted of the crime had fallen apart. That man, Larry Griffin, was sentenced to death, and he was executed by the State of Missouri more than 10 years ago. Yet now, 25 years after the crime and more than 10 years after his execution, very serious questions about his guilt are being raised. CNN recently reported that a University of Michigan law professor who researched the case found that the first defense police officer on the scene now claims the person who testified as an eyewitness gave false testimony. A victim of the shooting, who was never contacted before Mr. Griffin’s original trial, stated that the person claiming to be an eyewitness at the original trial was not present at the scene of the crime. Samuel Gross, the Michigan law professor who supervised the new investigation of the case that led to the St. Louis County Attorney’s decision, was quoted as saying with regard to this man’s innocence: “There’s no case that I know of where the evidence that’s been produced in public is as strong as what we see here.”

The second case is from Texas, where a young man named Ruben Cantu was executed in 1993. He was just seventeen at the time of the murder for which he was executed. Again, in this case, the only eyewitness to the crime has recanted his statement, and told the Houston Chronicle that Cantu was innocent. The Houston Chronicle also reported that the judge, prosecutor, head juror, and defense attorney have since realized that, as the newspaper put it, “his case seems to have been built on omission and lies.”

The loss of one innocent life through capital punishment should be enough to force all of us to stop and reconsider this penalty. These cases illustrate the grave danger in imposing the death penalty. Whatever the new evidence that might come to light, it doesn’t matter. There’s no going back.

Mr. President, I know that many people in this country say that it doesn’t matter. But I say that we should not look abroad for ideas. But the fact is that attitudes are changing around the world about capital punishment, and the United States is in poor company internationally on this issue. We are the only Western democracy ranked in the top ten countries in executions in 2004. And increasingly, other countries are rejecting capital punishment. Over the past 10 years, according to Amnesty International, an average of three countries per year has abolished the death penalty.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to take a long, hard look at capital punishment. Years of study have shown that the death penalty does little to deter crime, and that defendants’ likelihood of being sentenced to death depends heavily on whether they are rich or poor, and what race their victims were. We have experienced again and again the risks, and realities, of innocent people being sentenced to death. I believe that it is wrong for the State to put people to death, especially when we can achieve our public safety goals by sentencing them to life without parole. It is heartening to see so many people reconsidering the death penalty, and it is my hope that in time we will end it in the United States.

I yield the floor.
front of the war on terror.” But the reality is that Iraq has become a terrorist front as a result of President Bush’s mistakes.

Our 160,000 troops in Iraq have become a target for cowardly insurgents who attack us with roadside bombs and suicide attacks.

This is not progress. Despite claims by supporters of the President’s Iraq policy we are not making sufficient progress in Iraq. Unfortunately, we may be sinking deeper into a quagmire.

We have not made progress because the President has never put together a coherent plan for postinvasion Iraq. For this, one need only look at the infamous speech aboard the aircraft carrier on May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared “mission accomplished.”

“Mission accomplished” sure sounded like the job was done and our troops can begin to come home.

But we now know the mission was not accomplished on May 1, 2003.

More recently, over the past few weeks President Bush has been making speeches about Iraq in an attempt to reshape people’s perceptions of the war. The President knows that polls show that a majority of the American people do not believe that the war is being managed properly.

President Bush thinks if something is repeated often enough, people will eventually believe it.

But the American people will not stand still while we lose more of our courageous men and women.

We all pray that Thursday’s Iraqi elections will lead to a viable government that will create stability. It could be a critical first step.

But where are the plans if the elections do not lead to success? How long until more lost lives exhaust the patience and will of the American people?

In the meantime, supporters of the President point to evidence of significant changes since the satellite dishes appear on Iraqi roofs and cell phones are in Iraqi hands. But while the anxiety and fear existing in thousands of American families continues, Iraqi satellite dishes and cell phones do not suggest relief.

It seems possible to get an honest assessment from the administration of any future plans to get our people home.

This probably explains why some of President Bush’s statements on Iraq have been contradicted by current military leaders.

For example, last June President Bush said there were 160,000 Iraqi troops trained and ready to fight. But then, months later, Gen. George W. Casey, Jr.—the top U.S. commander in Iraq—said only one Iraqi battalion was able to conduct operations independently of American forces. That means less than a thousand Iraqi soldiers are actually equipped to fight without our help.

And we should pay close attention to what the former head of U.S. Central Command—retired Gen. Anthony Zinni—said about this Iraq operation.

General Zinni has described the poor planning for the Iraq war as, “at a minimum true dereliction, negligence and irresponsibility, at worse, lying, incompetence and corruption.”

General Zinni went on to say, “And to think that we are going to ‘stay the course’—the course is headed over Niagara Falls.”

Other generals with vast experience are voicing deep doubt about the White House about Iraq, including Norman Schwarzkopf, Wesley Clark, Brent Scowcroft and Eric Shinseki.

But the people who wear a suit—not a uniform—in the administration didn’t listen.

I served in the Army. I have met thousands of soldiers. I know that it takes about 3 months to turn a young American into a trained and dedicated soldier. So why has it taken almost 3 years to train a handful of Iraqis to be able to fight our war?

President Bush also said this war has made us safer. But Iraq is not safe for our troops or the Iraqi people. We had 88 soldiers killed last month—one of the deadliest months since the war began.

There have been over 70 suicide bombings in the last 2 months, an average of more than one a day and more than 3,000 concealed bombs either exploded or discovered.

President Bush points to last Thursday’s parliamentary elections in Iraq as a sign that there is light at the end of the tunnel. Let’s hope this is true.

But we have heard rosy predictions from this President before, yet the insurgency seemed to only grow each time.

Remember: We also heard rosy predictions when the President said “mission accomplished.” We heard it when Saddam Hussein was captured. We heard it a year ago after the first election in Iraq.

Meanwhile, 2,158 of our best young Americans have been killed. And nearly 16,000 have been wounded—many with injuries that will forever change their lives. No wonder a significant majority of the American people do not believe that President Bush has a plan to end this war.

That is why it is time for the President to give the American people a realistic plan for bringing our troops home.

What needs to happen? How many Iraqi troops need to be trained?

Let us set reliable goals for our mission, with an understanding of what it will take to get the job done and bring our troops back home to their families.

Mr. President, we don’t want our leader to deny us the hard facts of war. And we don’t want the price of this conflict hidden by prohibiting photographs of the flag-draped coffins that carry heroes back to our homes.

We need a leader who recognizes what a majority of the American people see taking place in front of their eyes on television, in our newspapers, in our homes, and in our hearts.

President Bush, I ask you to be frank with us about what we are facing in the future in Iraq. Show us how you will work to avoid further loss of life. And then we will honor the memory of those who have perished, we must do whatever we can to make life more bearable for their families.

KOREAN FAIR TRADE COMMISSION DECISION AGAINST MICROSOFT

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today regarding the December 7 Korean Fair Trade Commission, KFTC, decision against Microsoft. A major employer in Washington, Microsoft is being unfairly penalized by Korea, but this decision goes well beyond Microsoft as the Korean Fair Trade Commission’s decision is ultimately a decision against free and fair trade.

When the European Commission issued its competition decision against Microsoft in March 2004, I was one of many Members who expressed serious concerns about the decision and its impact on one of America’s most innovative companies and its competitors. Like many of my colleagues, however, I was also alarmed at the broader policy implications of the decision—that Europe would adopt a decision whose negative impact on trade was so clear, and which diverged so markedly from the Department of Justice’s and the FTC’s remedial actions.

I believe that the December 7 decision of the Korean Fair Trade Commission against Microsoft is yet another warning sign that our trading partners are limiting competition in order to benefit their domestic interests. In this case, the Korean Fair Trade Commission not only followed the EU’s market-distorting, anticonsument approach, but appears to have gone substantially further than the EU remedies in several respects. The KFTC’s decision makes me wonder whether the Microsoft case is not a unique case but instead indicates the beginning of a trend among some of our key trading partners to use competition law as a means to pursue protectionist agendas or advance domestic industrial policy goals. If so, this should be of tremendous concern to every member of this body.

Last week I wrote to U.S. Trade Representative Portman to work with others in the administration—including at the White House and the Departments of Justice, State, and Commerce—to develop and implement mechanisms for addressing these issues in a more coherent and effective fashion. At the same time, I urged Ambassador Portman to work with others in the administration to ensure that the EU continues to adopt decisions whose negative impact on trade was so clear. And I would like to ask unanimous consent to place that letter into the record.

Hon. ROB PORTMAN,

Washington, DC, December 12, 2005.

Dear Ambassador Portman: When the European Commission issued its competition decision against Microsoft in March 2004, I was one of many Members who expressed serious concerns about the decision and its impact on one of America's most innovative companies. Like many of my colleagues, however, I was also alarmed at the broader policy implications of the decision—that Europe would adopt a decision whose negative impact on trade was so clear, and which diverged so markedly from the Department of Justice’s remedy addressing the same conduct. At the time, my hope was that the Commission’s decision was the counter-example that proved the rule—namely, that comity was alive and well among the U.S. and its trading partners, and that any such community was increasingly moving towards adopting U.S.-style antitrust principles and rules.

Recents, however, suggest otherwise. Specifically, the December 7 decision of the Korean Fair Trade Commission (KFTC) against Microsoft—in which the KFTC not only followed the EU’s market-distorting, anti-consumer approach, but appears to have gone substantially further than the EU remedies in several respects—makes it clear that whether the Microsoft case is not a unique case, but instead indicates the beginning of a trend among some of our key trading partners to use competition law as a means to pursue protectionist agendas or advance domestic industrial policy goals. If so, this should be of tremendous concern to the United States and your office.

I understand that your Office, and you personally, have been following this issue closely, and that you and other USTR representatives have expressed the Administration’s strong concerns on these issues with your Korean counterparts on more than one occasion. As a Member who represents a State with dozens of leading innovative companies employing several hundreds of thousands of workers, please know that these efforts are greatly appreciated. Clearly, however, the results to date are not what we would have hoped.

I am deeply concerned that, without a strategy for addressing these issues more effectively not only in the EU and Korea, but also more broadly—leading U.S. firms will increasingly face competition rulings in foreign nations that have little or no economic justification, and which may make it more difficult for U.S. industry to compete in global markets. With all of the other challenges facing the global trading regime at the moment, the United States can ill afford yet another barrier denying U.S. industry and workers the benefits of international trade.

I would therefore urge you to work with others in the Administration—including at the White House and the Departments of Justice, State, and Commerce—to develop and implement strategies for addressing these issues in a more coherent and effective fashion. At the same time, I would urge you and others in the Administration to take whatever steps are still available to you to work with our local colleges and universities to make certain that Boston remains the most prestigious destination in America for young men and women seeking excellence in higher education. He has welcomed our burgeoning biotech and medical research sectors in order to guarantee that Boston stays at the cutting edge of these highly promising industries of the future. This new century may well become the century of the life sciences, and Tom Menino is making sure that Boston helps write that history.

Next year marks the 100th anniversary of the inauguration of another visionary Mayor of Boston, my grandfather, John F. Fitzgerald, whose love of our city was legendary and whose commitment to progress was unchallenged.

Grampa Fitzgerald might not immediately recognize modern Boston as his beloved hometown, but he would be thoroughly at home with its vitality and its spirit of innovation, progress, and opportunity. Those qualities he fought so hard for a century ago are as strong and well today. I would be grateful that the city he loved so dearly is now in the capable hands of Mayor Tom Menino.

In the years ahead, I look forward to continuing to work with Mayor Menino to help ensure the real and often daunting challenges facing Boston and all of urban America. No one is more committed to solving the big issues than Tom Menino.

He and his extraordinary wife Angela have made a remarkable team for Boston, and all of us in the city look forward very much to more of the unique brand of Menino leadership in the years ahead.

Sincerely,

PATTY MURRAY

FOURTH TERM FOR MAYOR TOM MENINO OF BOSTON

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I welcome this opportunity to congratulate our outstanding mayor in Boston, Tom Menino, on his reelection last month. The people of Boston love Tom, and for good reason.

Running for his fourth full term as mayor, Tom received an incredible 68 percent of the vote on election day, an extraordinary new mandate to continue his leadership that has meant so much to our city.

Tom is Boston’s modern FDR, and at the end of this term he will become the longest serving mayor in Boston’s 375-year history. It is a distinction Tom Menino has earned through his unwavering dedication and commitment to the people of Boston.

For 12 years, Mayor Menino has worked day in and day out to unite our diverse city, make its neighborhoods and communities stronger, create fertile opportunities for businesses, and improve the quality of life for all the people of Boston.

He has fought to protect and expand housing for low-income families in the midst of the Nation’s tightest housing market. He has never stopped working to meet the needs and protect the basic rights of every resident of our city—regardless of their race or background.

He has been a pioneer in education, creating Read Boston to help every child read at grade level by third grade and the Afterschool for All partnership so that learning doesn’t end once school lets out for the day. He has fought to close the achievement gap for all of Boston’s children and made Boston the first urban school district to have every school wired to the Internet.

Tom Menino has proven that America’s great urban areas can succeed and thrive in this new economy, at a time when more of our Nation seems headed for the suburbs. Tom modestly describes himself as an urban mechanic, but it is far more accurate to say that he is an urban genius. Each day, he adds new proof that there are many leaders of America’s cities in our modern Nation.

Above all, Mayor Tom Menino has always worked tirelessly to ensure that Boston’s brightest days lie ahead and that our city will continue to build on its incomparable history.

Tom has worked closely and constructively with our local colleges and universities to make certain that Boston remains the most prestigious destination in the world for research and innovation decisions do not establish a precedent that harms U.S. competitiveness for years to come.

I would appreciate your response to this letter and look forward to continuing our dialogue on these issues in the months ahead.

Sincerely,

PATTY MURRAY
U.S. Senator

TRIBUTE TO JULIA SERNA

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to honor and praise a longtime member of my staff, Julia Serna, who has served the people of New Mexico admirably. Julia works in my Las Cruces office and has been a member of my staff since April 1993. Julia will retire at the end of 2005.

Julia’s positive outlook is remarkable, and her smile and zest for life is contagious. And her jovial attitude and eagerness to deal with challenges is commendable. So many of those from my home State have come to know and love Julia over the years. Julia has always been known as someone always willing to listen to constituents and lend a helping hand.

During her work on immigration and veterans issues, she has gone to great lengths to help a great many people in my home State. Julia is loyal and one of many whom I have come to rely and depend on in that time. She has accomplished much, and I am extremely proud of those accomplishments. She will be greatly missed by me and my staff and by the people of southwestern New Mexico for whom she has worked for so many years.

Most importantly, Julia is my good friend. But the time has come. After over 12 years of service on my staff, I... know Julia’s children Susie, Gabriel, Adolfo, and her grandchildren and great grandchild will be glad to be able to spend more time with her. As she begins her well-deserved retirement, I extend my best wishes to Julia and her family. Julia, for all you have done for me, and for all you have done for the people of New Mexico, you have my utmost respect and deepest gratitude. Thank you, for a job well done. We will miss those tamales at the office.

JUDICIAL PHILOSOPHY

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President I rise to make a few remarks about a matter relating to judicial philosophy that has been discussed by some during the course of this year in connection with the public debate over Supreme Court vacancies that have occurred this year.

Some have attempted to create a false conclusion by criticizing a school of judicial philosophy sometimes referred to as the “constitution in exile.”

For example, earlier this year, my esteemed colleague from Delaware, Senator Biden, who, I understand, teaches constitutional law sometimes referred to as the “constitution in exile.”

In Corporation of Presiding Bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints v. Hodel, 830 F.2d 374, 381, DC Cir. 1987, Chief Judge Ginsburg, writing for the court, noted that “[t]he question of whether courts, as opposed to legislative bodies, can ever ‘take’ property in violation of the Fifth Amendment is an interesting and by no means settled issue of law.” He determined, however, that the court did not need to decide this issue. Similarly, in City of Los Angeles v. United States Dept. of Transp., 90 F.3d 591, D.C. Cir. 1996, unpublished, Chief Judge Ginsburg, writing for the court, determined that the takings claims were not ripe for resolution.

Many of my colleagues have denounced ideological decision-making by judges who are eager to promote their own speculative constitutional understanding at the expense of the American constitutional views. I actually think that is a fair description of judicial activism, and it is clear that Chief Judge Ginsburg has not engaged in it. Quite the contrary, in these cases where he declined the opportunity to reach for and resolve constitutional questions prematurely, he exhibited the moderation and prudence we should expect of our judges.

Similarly, Chief Judge Ginsburg does not appear to have written anything of significance on the tenth or eleventh amendments. In the one and only case in which he even mentions the tenth amendment, Chennoveth v. Clinton, 181 F.3d 112, D.C. Cir. 1999, Chief Judge Ginsburg, writing for the court, did not address the merits of the takings claim. Chief Judge Ginsburg’s “radical” contribution was to note, in Brown v. Secretary of Army, 78 F.3d 645, 653, D.C. Cir. 1996, that a case referred to by the appellant citing the eleventh amendment was inapposite to the case before the court. This is hardly the controversial statement in support of State sovereign immunity one would expect given my colleague’s remarks.

So, as far as I am aware, Chief Judge Ginsburg has not written substantively on the tenth amendment, the eleventh amendment, or the takings clause. How then can anyone fairly conclude that Chief Judge Ginsburg has such radical views about the constitutionally limited powers of the national government? Perhaps some are reading between the lines and seeing emanations and penumbras that others do not discern.

The only topic singled out for criticism by my friend from Delaware that I could find was, in fact, substantively addressed by Chief Judge Ginsburg is the non-delegation doctrine. In a 1995 book review of David Schoenbrod’s “Power Without Responsibility”, Chief Judge Ginsburg employed the term “Constitution-in-exile.”

Apparently some liberal critics of the President’s judicial nominees have seized on this expression, perhaps in the hope that it will scar the American people into fearing some super-secret rightwing led by wayward judges. Of course, this is nonsensical.

But it is worth noting that the many of the critics who talk today about the Constitution-in-exile have completely unmooed that term from Chief Justice Ginsburg’s original formulation.

In an article in the journal Regulation, Chief Judge Ginsburg wrote the following:

‘[F]or 60 years the non-delegation doctrine has existed only as part of the Constitution-in-exile, along with the doctrines of enumerated powers, unconstitutional conditions, and substantive due process, and their textual cousins, the Necessary and Proper, Contract Takings, and Takings Clauses. David Schoenbrod, “Power Without Responsibility: How Congress Abuses the People Through Delegation,” Regulation Magazine (1995) (Book Review)

He went on to explain that, “The memory of these ancient exiles, banished for standing in opposition to unlimited government, is kept alive by a few scholars who labor on in the hopes of a restoration, a second coming of the Constitution of liberty—even if perhaps not in their own lifetimes.” Id.

So two sentences equal a judicial scheme to advance substantive economic liberty and restrain Federal authority? For a careful reader, it is clear that Chief Judge Ginsburg promotes no such agenda. First, he was referring only to the non-delegation doctrine, the supposedly radical proposition that Congress, not unelected bureaucrats, should be responsible for making our laws. Second, Chief Judge Ginsburg was writing a book review, and his reference to those “few scholars” was obviously not a reference to himself because he had not written on this subject.

His point was that the author of the book he was reviewing was misguided in thinking that the Supreme Court was likely to put teeth back into the non-delegation doctrine. Far from arguing that courts should strip Congress of its authority to make laws, and give that lawmaking authority, he suggested that it would be more productive to ask Congress to change the way it delegates lawmaking authority to administrative agencies. Chief Judge Ginsburg was Administrator of Information and Regulatory Affairs of the Office of Management and Budget during the Reagan administration. This is the office within the Executive Office of the President charged with reviewing all Federal regulations. So Chief Judge Ginsburg has considerable experience and expertise in these matters.

In the referenced book review, Chief Judge Ginsburg endorses the Judge Breyer’s suggestion that “[p]roposed regulations, or at least those that would impose a burden in excess of a specified amount, say $100 million, would not take effect unless affirmatively approved by both houses of Congress.” In this regard, I would note that Judge Ginsburg was one of the seminal thinkers in the field of regulatory reform and I would recommend that everyone read his 1982 book, “Regulation and Its Reform” in which he lays out a clear and persuasive analysis of, and suggestions for, regulatory reform.

In Chief Judge Ginsburg’s speech, On Constitutionalism, published in the Cato Supreme Court Review in 2003, he articulates much the same position, stating that the separation of powers doctrine clearly indicates that “there must be a limit upon the ability of Congress to delegate lawmaking functions to the executive branch.” Id. at 16. That is, the Constitution does seem to provide an affirmative constitutional authorization for the EPA to set the national ambient air quality standards, NAAQS, for ozone and particulate matter so loosely as to render them unconstitutional delegations of legislative power. See American Trucking Ass’n, v. EPA, 175 F.3d 1027, 1034–40, D.C. Cir. 1999. More specifically, the court determined that it was unclear what in EPA’s view was the “intelligible principle” the Congress had directed the EPA to establish that would cure the defect of the lower court’s reliance on the doctrine of constitutional jurisprudence.

I encourage everyone to examine Chief Judge Ginsburg’s writings pertaining to the takings clause, the non-delegation doctrine, and the tenth and eleventh amendments. A fair reading warrants a conclusion that there is nothing radical about his reasoning or conclusions. Chief Judge Ginsburg’s writings on these matters are neither extensive nor extreme. Characterizing them as a “stark departure from current constitutional law” is not justified.

I might add that the issue of non-delegation is not as black or white as many have come to believe in recent times. Some appear—including many advocates of the liberal welfare state administered by so many Federal agencies—to argue, contrary to the Constitution’s clear commitment to limited government, that there should be little, if any, judicial oversight over congressional actions and claim that even modest judicial requirements that Congress act within its constitutional authority are radical changes to our law. It seems counterintuitive then that these same people argue for an unlimited congressional authority to delegate their law-making power to another branch of Government. On the one hand, Congress is all-powerful. On the other hand, they can give that power away.

The record reflects that Chief Judge Ginsburg is a mainstream conservative judge, who applies the Constitution faithfully. He is no judicial radical. He is one of the most respected judges in the Federal judiciary. Suggestions to the contrary are not supported by the facts.

NEPAL'S DOWNWARD SPIRAL

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, this is the third time in the past 6 months that I have spoken in this chamber about Nepal. I do so because this land of mostly impoverished tea and rice farmers who toil between India and China on precipitous hillsides in the shadows of the Himalayas, is experiencing a political crisis that may plunge the country into chaos.

As I said in February, King Gyanendra’s seizure of absolute power on February 1 and suppression of civil liberties has damaged Nepal’s foreign relations, triggered clashes between pro-democracy demonstrators and the police, and strengthened the Maoist insurgency.

The Maoists, whose use of extortion and brutality against poor villagers has spread throughout the country, announced a cease-fire on September 3 which they recently extended for an additional month. Although flawed, the ceasefire was the impetus for a loose alliance with Nepal’s weak political parties after the King refused to negotiate with them and sought instead to consolidate his own grip on power.

Last month, the Maoists and the parties endorsed a vaguely worded but important 12 point understanding that attacks civilians and army posts, and then disappeared into the mountains.

There are also concerns about Nepal’s political parties, who do not have a record of pursuing the interests of the national community, and the Maoists, who are the real representatives of the Nepali people. They urgently need to reform, but there is no substitute for them.

Despite these difficulties and uncertainties, it is clear that the King has failed to provide the leadership to build bridges with the country’s democratic forces and develop a workable plan. It is also clear that efforts by the international community, including the United States, to appeal to the King to start such a process, have failed. The Bush administration should apply whatever pressure it can, including denying U.S. visas to Nepali officials and their families.

With few options and no guarantees, Nepal’s hour of reckoning is approaching. There is a growing possibility that the King’s obstinacy and unpopularity will trigger massive civil unrest, shootings, extrajudicial killings of civilians, which has alienated many of the same people who have been victims of the Maoists.

On December 10, when hundreds of Nepali citizens took to the streets to protest the King’s repressive actions, the police used force to break up the rally and arrested several dozen people. The press reported another 120 arrests and dozens injured in demonstrations on December 17. More protests are likely, and it may be only a matter of time before Katmandu is in the full throes of a pitched battle between pro-democracy demonstrators and the King’s security forces.

This is the disheartening situation in which Nepal finds itself today. The immediate challenge for the United States is how to help promote a political dialogue which includes the broadest possible participation from Nepali society to restore and strengthen democracy and end the conflict.

The Maoist cease-fire, while welcome, was a tactical move to lure the political parties into an alliance and further isolate the palace. There is no way to predict with confidence if the Maoists would participate in a political process in good faith, or simply use it as a ruse to gain new recruits and weapons.

A resumption of attacks against civilians would be condemned and resisted by the international community. The Maoists should know that they cannot defeat the government by force, and as long as they extort money and property and abduct children they will be seen as enemies of the Nepali people.

Similarly, military experts have concluded that Nepal’s undisciplined army cannot defeat a determined insurgency that attacks civilians and army posts and then disappears into the mountains.

As I have already said, there is also clear that the Maoists, who are the real representatives of the Nepali people, urgently need to reform, but there is no substitute for them.

are at the root of the conflict, can only be solved through a transparent, democratic process. The Maoists have opened the door a crack for that to begin. The army should reciprocate. The international community should lend its support.

RECOGNIZING SENATOR CORZINE
Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise to wish Senator Jon Corzine the very best as he leaves his service in the Senate to become the next Governor of the State of New Jersey. Although we didn’t always agree on all the issues, it has been an honor to work with him. He has always been courteous and professional and I have enjoyed the opportunity to know him.

Senator Corzine’s career has taken him to the uppermost levels in the business world. He was a partner at Goldman Sachs at the age of 33 and he became CEO of that prestigious firm at the age of 38. As someone who has been extraordinarily successful in the private sector, I am sure Senator Corzine has had many life opportunities offered to him. The fact that he has chosen a career in public service speaks a great deal to his character. His tireless work ethic was infectious. His willingness to tackle issues which were new to him and to embrace the goals I have set for my staff on behalf of both the men and women of the armed forces and the citizens of New Jersey was extraordinary. In 19 years, he made over 3,000 statements on the floor exposing stud-

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR WILLIAM PROXMIRE
Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a long-time friend and an esteemed colleague William Proxmire, who passed away last week at the age of 96. I had the privilege of serving with him in this body for 8 years.

Senator Proxmire retired from this Chamber 16 years ago, but he is still remembered for his staunch work ethic and his unique dedication to a set of closely held standards of conduct as a U.S. Senator are legendary. In 22 years of service, he attended more than 10,000 rollcall votes—still a record in the Senate. In his last two campaigns for office, he declined all campaign contributions from anyone. During each race, he spent less than $200, all out of his own pocket, mostly to pay for postage and envelopes to return donations offered to him by his supporters. In both instances, he won by a landslide, a testament to the overwhelming support of his constituency in Wisconsin.

I have always felt a special affinity for Senator Proxmire and the issues that he championed. I, too, was one of the few Senators who served with both my father and me. And he dedicated a great deal of time and effort to an issue that both my father and I considered paramount to our Nation’s future. Over 19 years, he made over 3,000 statements on the Floor in support of ratification of an international treaty outlawing genocide. My father, as Senator Proxmire put it, “contributed a special zeal to this cause even before he entered the Senate. In 1950, as a member of a special committee of the American Bar Association, my father was one of the first witnesses to appear before the Foreign Relations Committee in favor of a treaty condemning genocide. Senator Proxmire’s efforts over the years to champion this issue meant a great deal to me and I am particularly honored to have brokered a deal with Senator Jesse Helms in 1988 to finally commit the United States as a signatory to this treaty.

I also had the privilege of serving with Senator Proxmire on the Banking Committee when he was the chairman of that body, and I can tell you, that he performed his duties with a unique commitment both to competition and the rights of the consumer. Early in his career, he passed the Truth in Lending Act, ensuring consumer access to information and forcing banks to compete openly and on equal terms. He also helped pass a bill deregulating the banking industry, which helped financial institutions offer better services at lower costs to consumers.

Senator Proxmire is perhaps best remembered for his fervent devotion to slowing Government spending. He returned over $1 million of his staff budget to the Treasury and traveled abroad at the expense of the taxpayers. And he developed the “Golden Fleece” award to expose government programs that he considered wasteful. He gave statements on the floor exposing studies that explored the effects of alcohol on fish, documented the body measurements of airline flight attendants, and examined why people fall in love. Each “Golden Fleece” not only illuminated Government programs that might be considered profligate, but reminded us of the humor and personality of this noble public servant.

My wife Jackie and I offer our deepest condolences to his wife Helen, to his family, and to the people of Wisconsin and the citizens of our Nation, for the loss of such a dedicated public servant and an exceptional man.

LCDR ANDREW J. SCHULMAN, USN
Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise to recognize LCDR Andrew Schulman, U.S. Navy for the outstanding contributions this distinguished officer has made while serving as a legislative fellow on my staff. Andrew is completing his Capitol Hill fellowship this month, and it is my hope that he has benefited as much from this experience as have I from knowing him.

Lieutenant Commander Schulman is a member of the U.S. Navy Civil Engineer Corps and is a Seabee Combat Warfare qualified officer. To my great benefit, Andrew joined my office in a few Senators who served with both my father and me. And he dedicated a great deal of time and effort to an issue that both my father and I considered paramount to our Nation’s future. Over 19 years, he made over 3,000 statements on the Floor in support of ratification of an international treaty outlawing genocide. BROADCASTING BALANCE
Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to reaffirm the Corporation for Public Broadcasting’s requirement to ensure “strict adherence to objectivity and balance in all programs or series of programs of a controversial nature.” CPB requires $400 million from Congress as part of the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education Appropriations bill.

CPB’s requirement to see that recipients like the Public Broadcasting Service and National Public Radio uphold the objectivity and balance standard does not stem from congressional micro-management or partisan interference. Rather, it is a matter of complying with the law under which CPB dispenses taxpayers’ money.

That law mandates CPB to see to both “maximum freedom of the public telecommunications entities” and their “strict adherence to objectivity and balance." These mandates are not in conflict. Instead, they complement each other, and to maintain Americans' confidence in public broadcasting the Corporation for Public Broadcasting must see that both mandates are fulfilled. Congress and the taxpayers expect nothing less.

GUANTANAMO PRISONERS

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to express my strong disagreement with the language in the Defense appropriations and Defense authorization conference reports concerning the treatment of prisoners being held in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Under the McCain amendment, U.S. personnel are prohibited from engaging in torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment. I strongly support this. This ban applies to all military and intelligence personnel regardless of whether the treatment is conducted throughout the world. This is a clear statement that the United States will abide by its obligation to follow the law, and it is a step forward in reinstating our Nation's moral authority.

However, the Graham amendment would undercut much of what we are accomplishing with the McCain amendment in two respects. First, it would undercut our commitment to prohibiting the use of torture by allowing evidence produced as a result of torture to be used in military legal proceedings. Second, it would undercut any enforcement of this prohibition by barring individuals from seeking judicial review of the legality of their detention or bringing a suit to stop unlawful treatment.

When the Graham-Levin compromise passed the Senate, it had some good language in it, and it had some very troubling language.

On the good side, the amendment provided that the Combatant Status Review Tribunals at Guantanamo, which are charged with determining whether individuals should be classified as so-called enemy combatants, are not allowed to use evidence that is derived through "undue coercion," such as torture. This was an important step forward. We should not be relying on information that is inherently unreliable in deciding whether to indefinitely detain a person. Unfortunately, this provision is now gone.

In the conference report the outright prohibition on using evidence derived through torture was replaced with a mere assessment of whether the evidence has any probative value. I would hope that a military tribunal assessing such evidence would realize that evidence derived through torture is not reliable. However, as drafted, this bill would allow a Combatant Status Review Tribunal to find evidence derived through torture if the tribunal finds that the evidence is helpful.

To the best of my knowledge this would be the first time in U.S. history that the United States would be on record as allowing this type of evidence in any type of legal proceeding. This is wrong and a huge step backwards. Further, it would stand the assessment with regard to whether the evidence is derived though torture is essentially pointless. The conference report states that this assessment is only applicable prospectively. The problem is that of the over 500 prisoners being held at Guantanamo, every single one has already undergone a status hearing to determine whether or not they are an "enemy combatant." Under the existing procedures, there is no exclusionary rule prohibiting the use of evidence derived through torture. Therefore, the Government may be basing its finding that some of these prisoners are "enemy combatants" on faulty evidence that is completely unreliable.

Let me provide an example of why this language is so problematic. Suppose a person is detained by the U.S. Government and handed over to a foreign intelligence service for interrogation. While U.S. personnel are prohibited from using torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment, other countries use interrogation techniques that amount to torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment. Even if the evidence is obtained from torture, the use of this type of evidence in any legal proceeding is prohibited.

It is inconsistent to say that we will prohibit the use of torture by our military and intelligence personnel because it is legally and morally repugnant, but we will allow evidence derived in this manner to be used in our military proceedings. "We don't do it, but if you do it we will use it." This is hardly a position of clarity with regard to our commitment to uphold the prohibition on torture, or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment.

The conference report also limits the ability of a prisoner at Guantanamo to file a writ of habeas corpus. This fundamental right has its foundation in the Magna Carta and is enshrined in our Constitution. Simply, it is the right to go to court when a person is detained by the Government and ask whether or not one's detention is justified. Contrary to how this right was characterized during debate on this bill, this is not about prisoners suing to gain access to DVD movies or because they are uninterested in political and news programs. It is about an individual being unthat they are not “enemy combatants,” the Defense Department has refused to release them from Guantánamo because it can’t find a country to take them—if they are sent to China they will likely be arrested and tortured, as such as Saudi Arabia, where many have lived previously, won’t take them back. And the United States will not allow them to enter our country because it does not want them to apply for asylum.

In recent months, they have been taking away the right of a person who is being held without charge, indefinitely, to go to court and ask for their release after the Department of Defense has said that they are essentially innocent. Not only is this repugnant to our Nation’s values, it is also blatantly unconstitutional.

Mr. President, over the last several years this administration has diminished our standing in the world by backing away from our longstanding commitment to human rights and the rule of law. I look forward to the day when the United States is once again the leader of the free world and we have offered no public explanation.

Like a group of five Chinese Uighurs (pronounced wee-gurs), Turkistani remains incarcerated because the United States simply does not know what to do with him. He does not have U.S. officials are having trouble getting his home country to take him back. U.S. officials do not want to send him to China, where he lived for more than four years, because he is suspected of being involved in the Al Qaeda conspiracy and told U.S. officials that he had contact with Bin Laden. China has repeatedly refused to accept him because the United States simply does not know what to do with him. He does not know what to do with him. He does not know what to do with him.

Turkistani is one of nine detainees who live at Guantánamo Bay’s Camp Iguana, a less restrictive area of the prison where detainees have limited privileges including access to television and a few DVDs. Besides five detainees who have not been accepted by any country, there is a Russian, an Algerian and an Egyptian. All have been cleared for release but have not been given their freedom.

A former U.S. official familiar with detention operations said mistakes were made in Afghanistan, where some detainees were shipped to Cuba because space at the U.S. facility in Bagram was limited and there was no clear plan where to house suspected enemy combatants. “It’s possible to get stuck there if you don’t have a plan,” the former official said. “Particularly at that time, when there were a lot of people getting picked up in Afghanistan, cases people were unsure about tended to end up in lockup. People did get caught up in the situation.”

Another U.S. official familiar with Guantánamo Bay said it is likely that other “stateless” people will surface as the military prepares to release more detainees. The Defense and State departments are working to return those who have been cleared for release to their home countries, if possible, and have unsuccessfully tried to persuade at least 20 nations to take the Uighurs, to Sweden, Finland, Switzerland and Turkey.

“The government is serious about finding a place for some of the Uighurs and will continue diplomatic efforts to accommodate that goal,” said Lt. Col. Mark Ballesteros, a Pentagon spokesman. “The United States has made it clear that it does not expel, return or extradite individuals to other countries where it believes it is more likely than not they will be tortured.”

Turkistani is one of 200 Guantánamo Bay detainees who have filed habeas corpus petitions in U.S. District Court in Washington. They are being held unlawfully and asking the court to order their release.

Turkistani told his lawyers that his case had been torpedoed because he is an ethnic Uighur and is not a suspected terrorist. “It’s entirely possible that it’s just a mistake, that they are not enemy combatants but have not found a country to accept them. U.S. officials are not willing to send the Uighurs back to their own homeland on what is now part of northwestern China—to their native country for fear that they would be tortured or killed.”

U.S. authorities have tried to persuade nearby nations to provide refuge for the Uighurs but have refused to allow them into the United States. No Guantánamo Bay detainee has been allowed to travel to the United States and appear before a federal judge. The government has fought efforts at judicial review after a 2004 Supreme Court ruling entitling detained enemy combatants to a “competent tribunal” to determine whether they are enemy combatants. The issue is currently before the appellate court for the District of Columbia Circuit.

Government lawyers are concerned that such a move could allow the Uighurs to immediately apply for asylum when they arrive on U.S. soil.

But Sabin Willett, an attorney for the detainees, said his chief concern is his client’s ability to move forward in a case that would allow them to live with ethnic Uighurs in the Washington area while their cases are considered.

Robertson, who in August sought more time to consider the cases, said yesterday that he is frustrated by his client’s inabilty to move forward, essentially standing when the United States is once again the leader of the free world and we have offered no public explanation.

Mark Ballesteros, a Pentagon spokesman. “The United States has made it clear that it does not expel, return or extradite individuals to other countries where it believes it is more likely than not they will be tortured.”

Turkistani is one of 200 Guantánamo Bay detainees who have filed habeas corpus petitions in U.S. District Court in Washington. They are being held unlawfully and asking the court to order their release.

Turkistani told his lawyers that his case had been torpedoed because he is an ethnic Uighur and is not a suspected terrorist. “It’s entirely possible that it’s just a mistake, that they are not enemy combatants but have not found a country to accept them. U.S. officials are not willing to send the Uighurs back to their own homeland on what is now part of northwestern China—to their native country for fear that they would be tortured or killed.”

U.S. authorities have tried to persuade nearby nations to provide refuge for the Uighurs but have refused to allow them into the United States. No Guantánamo Bay detainee has been allowed to travel to the United States and appear before a federal judge. The government has fought efforts at judicial review after a 2004 Supreme Court ruling entitling detained enemy combatants to a “competent tribunal” to determine whether they are enemy combatants. The issue is currently before the appellate court for the District of Columbia Circuit.

Government lawyers are concerned that such a move could allow the Uighurs to immediately apply for asylum when they arrive on U.S. soil.

But Sabin Willett, an attorney for the detainees, said his chief concern is his client’s inability to move forward in a case that would allow them to live with ethnic Uighurs in the Washington area while their cases are considered.

Robertson, who in August sought more time to consider the cases, said yesterday that he is frustrated by his client’s inability to move forward, essentially standing when the United States is once again the leader of the free world and we have offered no public explanation.
part of the detention facility known as Camp Iguana, which is less restrictive than the rest of the prison. The five Uighurs are living in the Washington area. Willett said that government officials have been working on a diplomatic solution but that he could discuss it only in private. Robertson declined to hear the information off the record.

"The government is seriously about finding a place for resettlement for the petitioners," Henry said.

The Uighurs, through their lawyers, have argued that because they are not a threat they should be moved to more hospitable living conditions and have asked to be released to live in the Washington area. Willett said his clients have gone from elation in August—when they were moved to Camp Cropper and given hope of release—to frustration as their cases have dragged on.

"I am deeply concerned about the human impact of the indefinite nature of this," Willett said.

Rabia Kadeer, president of the Washington-based International Uyghur Human Rights and Democracy Foundation, attended the brief hearing yesterday and pledged to provide jobs for the petitioners should they be released to the United States.

HONORING WINTER WONDERLAND WALK FOR THE CURE DAY

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, breast cancer is one of the most frequently diagnosed cancers in women. More than 240,000 new cases of breast cancer in women will be diagnosed in the United States in 2005. In my own State of Connecticut, more than 2,600 women are expected to be diagnosed and 530 are expected to die from breast cancer this year. Overall, it is believed that 1 in every 10 women will develop breast cancer at least once in their lifetime.

The best defense against breast cancer is early detection. The sooner one can detect breast cancer, the better the chances that the disease can be successfully treated. It is because of this that the American Cancer Society suggests that all women age 40 and over have a mammogram annually. As important, women must learn to do regular self breast exams. Women generally will understand their bodies better than doctors. In Connecticut early detection from mammograms and self breast exam has helped our State achieve a 5-year survival rate, for those women diagnosed with breast cancer, of 97 percent. That is one of the highest such survival rates in the country.

As successful as my State has been, we have not been successful enough.

We must strive to increase awareness and education of breast cancer so that all women are aware of the risk it poses and the indisputable benefits of early detection. We must increase research into the relationship between estrogen, genetic predisposition, and breast cancer risk and also seek new drugs and tools that will allow health care professionals to better treat breast cancer patients with the goal of curing breast cancer.

It is in this spirit on January 21, 2006, Eastern Mountain Sports Connecticut stores will sponsor the Winter Wonderland Walk for the Cure to benefit both breast cancer research and the Connecticut chapter of the Susan G. Komen Women Breast Cancer Foundation, at Tarrywile Park in Danbury, CT.

Therefore, it is my pleasure to join Connecticut's Governor, M. Jodi Rell, herself a breast cancer survivor, in celebrating, in recognition of the need to increase awareness about breast cancer and the need for early detection, January 21, 2006 as Winter Wonderland Walk for the Cure Day in Danbury, CT.

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS IN ETHIOPIA

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the disturbing reports of political chaos in Ethiopia. With allegations of vote tampering and emerging pluralism, the persistence of human rights abuses taking place in Ethiopia, that the administration must impress upon Prime Minister Meles Zenawi and other global neighbors, that severe consequences follow actions which undermine democratic ideals.

Ethiopia held its first ever democratic elections on May 15, 2005. Revelations since then of violence and mass detentions of Ethiopian citizens by the government, • have raised serious concerns about the integrity of the election. Rather than a sentiment of accomplishment or progress, the mood of the country remains unhappily somber. According to international human rights observers, increased repression of the Ethiopian people is connected to the seeming loss of power from the ruling Meles government to the opposition party, the Coalition for Unity & Democracy, CUD—has shown by early vote counts during the election. With the Meles government accused of voting irregularities, it is not surprising that the people of Ethiopia protested the unofficial election results.

Recent reports of human rights abuses in Ethiopia range from arrest and intimidation by government authorities of innocent people, including ranking members of the CUD party and media representatives, to the loss of life. For example, some 14,000 people were detained when riots ensued following the election. Among other journalists, Getachew Simie, former editor of the Amharic-language weekly, and Leykuin Dengda, former publisher of the Dagm Tokeb Weekly, have been given sentences for covering the anti-government protests. Even Prime Minister Meles reported that 48 people were killed last month in relation to the unrest caused by the alleged fraud in the May elections.

Prime Minister Meles must fulfill his good faith commitment to human rights. With any successful transition to democracy, civil society requires the firm accountability of its government authorities. Until the Meles government brings an end to the intimidation of its people, political unrest will remain high and America's support for the democratisation of Ethiopia will be muted by concern for the country's political instability.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR EUGENE MCCARTHY OF MINNESOTA

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, Minnesota and the Nation have lost a great leader and deep thinker, Senator Gene McCarthy of Minnesota. He played an import part in the history of this body and of this Nation, and we should carefully consider the lessons of his unique and deeply significant public life.

Gene McCarthy has been described as a philosopher who was a Senator. In his youth, many describe Gene as the brightest of scholars and later in his life; he was celebrated as skilled poet. In between, he was a five term Congressman and two-term Senator. His time in Washington and on the national political scene was a display of thoughtfulness, serious inquiry, and passionate pursuit of the truth. In the business of politics where there is safety in conformity, Gene McCarthy celebrated the role of the maverick. He says his role was to provoke thought among his colleagues. In our measure we adhere more closely to lasting principles.

Eugene Robert McCarthy was born in the town of Watkins, in rural Meeker County, MN, on March 29, 1916. He began a life time of teaching in the schools of Watkins. He graduated from St. John's University, Collegeville, MN, in 1935 with the highest GPA in the school's history. He also studied at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis until 1939. Professionally, he was a high school teacher in Minnesota and North Dakota for 5 years and eventually became a professor of economics and education at St. John's University from 1949 to 1943 an instructor in sociology and economics at St. Thomas College, St. Paul, MN, from 1946 to 1949.

In 1944, his service to the United States began during World War II, when he was a civilian technical assistant in the Military Intelligence Division of the War Department.
He was first elected to the U.S. Congress as a Representative from Minnesota in 1948 and served five terms. In 1958, he won a seat in the Senate where he remained for two terms. One of the focuses of his Senate career was the work of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which has been the center of interest of most of Minnesota's Senators and an indication of the strong international character of our State.

I first became aware of Gene McCarthy's thoughtfulness and seriousness. He was an unlikely leader for “youth revolution,” but he balanced our youthful over-exuberance with a steady articulation of principles and commitment. He encouraged young people to “Get Clean with Gene:” to stop “tuning in, turning on and dropping out” and to clean up our act and get involved in the political process. He knew that a movement based on self-indulgence should not rest on raw emotion. Instead, to sustain your position you need to “do your homework,” which could mean years of study.

Second, you should not be intimidated by the generation in power. The great movements of history have been led and supported by young people, so the force of youthful enthusiasm should never be underestimated. Third, Gene McCarthy demonstrated that you earn the right to have your ideas taken seriously by engaging responsibly in the political process. He believed that the solution to all problems in a democracy is more democracy, which means participation, ideas, hard work and personal experience. In 1968, even though he was politically unsuccessful, opened a door into the political process that can’t be closed. Young people of all political persuasions should seize that opportunity and help shape the world in which they will grow old.

In 1968, Gene McCarthy certainly seized opportunities. He announced that he was willing and available to be President in November of 1968 and two months later was elected President Johnson, and the political world with a close second place finish in the New Hampshire primary. His success encouraged Robert Kennedy to enter the race and President Johnson withdrew shortly thereafter. McCarthy did not win the nomination, which went to fellow Minnesotan Hubert Humphrey, but he changed the dynamics of politics in America. He helped create the phenomenon of bringing young people into the process in large numbers to challenge the power of the “smoke filled room.”

When Gene McCarthy left the Senate, he returned to the place he always was most at home: the world of ideas and words. When you look at the list of the 15 books he published, it is remarkable to see that they are either challenging works of non-fiction policy analysis or poetry. As a poet, Gene McCarthy probably knew Samuel Johnson’s statement that “there is no art ofvention of uniting pleasure with truth.” That sums up his life.

Like a lot of Minnesotans, Eugene McCarthy took great pleasure not in the usual ways, but through service. He served as a teacher and as a scholar. He served as a public policy leader. He served as a motivator and organizer of youth. He served as a brave voice, challenging the powerful status quo. And he served as a poet, rendering great ideas into beautiful words.

Gene McCarthy lived a bold and uncompromising life, which is the only kind of life that creates real change. He was always more interested in the truth than in fame. He lived out Amelia Earhart’s statement that “Courage is price that life exacts for granting peace.” His life was about living out the courage of his convictions and that was his peace. He embraced a nation by choosing that tough road instead of a life of complacency.

We are grateful for his service and memory, and we should all be inspired to take up his courage of conviction for the new challenges facing American life and progress ahead.

EXTEND RELOCATION EXPENSES TEST PROGRAMS

Ms. COLLINS, Mr. President, on Tuesday, December 20, I introduced a simple but important bill that would allow an existing General Services Administration, GSA, program for streamlined Government employee relocation of career ladder promotions within the Federal travel regulations, CBP, program for border protection of their mission. I urge my colleagues to join me, Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator AKAKA, in co-sponsoring this legislation.

The Department of Homeland Security began using the Voluntary Relocation Program to relocate hundreds of Border Patrol agents to critical U.S. border locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. As part of its new mission to protect national borders from security threats, agents from the Office of Border Patrol, OBP, eagerly volunteered to transfer to border locations deemed most vulnerable. However, these transfers took a long time to process and were very costly under the Federal travel regulations, FTR.

According to Customs and Border Protection, CBP, relocation of personnel under the Federal travel regulations typically cost the Federal Government an average of $72,000 per Border Patrol agent move. Understandably, the agency’s ability to relocate significant numbers of Border Patrol agents was limited, so customs and border protection, CBP, sought alternative funding sources.

This voluntary program, employees receive a lump-sum payment to cover relocation costs, rather than submitting expense reports supported by receipts. Transferees that choose to relocate under the Voluntary Relocation Program manage the details of their own move and are fully responsible for determining how to spend the pre-determined lump-sum payment allocated by the Federal Government. Furthermore, employees enjoy greater input in how funds are allocated and transferees have more control over the logistics of their move. To date, the VRP has saved customs and border protection more than $250,000 in Border Patrol agent relocation costs. This Voluntary Relocation Program has provided both the government and its employees with both reduced administrative burdens and increased responsiveness to employees and the organization’s mission.

From April 2004 through September 2005, CBP processed 435 relocations at an average cost of $18,888 per move. Interim reports publicly released by customs and border protection on the VRP indicate that participating employees are satisfied with the program and are interested in its continuation. It is anticipated that if the VRP program is extended, several hundred, CBP agents will seek to take advantage of the VRP for career ladder promotions within the first year of it being offered. Based upon the promise of the program’s early results, the continuation of the VRP test program would benefit national security needs and the agency’s mission.

I believe that the VRP is an excellent example of how Government can work better and more cost effectively to best serve the interests of the public and Government employees. This legislation would allow Federal agencies to provide an additional relocation incentive that would assist them in the accomplishment of their mission. I urge my colleagues to join me, Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator AKAKA, in support of this legislation.

HEALTH AND WELFARE RELIEF ACT OF 2005

Mr. BAUCUS. I support the Health and Welfare Relief Act of 2005. This bill
The Health and Welfare Relief Act also contains a fix to the Medicare physician payment formula, which is set to cut Medicare physician payments by 4.4 percent on January 1. It prevents a cap on Medicare physical therapy from taking effect. And it extends an important provision to protect hospital patients' outpatient departments, helping them stay afloat. The bill also provides $60 million for CMS administrative funding, which is set to help educate seniors about the new Medicare prescription drug benefit. The TANF Program, originally mandated the Congress's immediate action voice of courage and conviction.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise to seek clarification from our esteemed majority leader, Senator FRIST, on the scheduling of S. 147, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act, for consideration of the full Senate. As you may recall, in December of last year, the majority and minority leaders joined us in reaching agreement on a schedule for the Senate's action on the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act bill with Senators DOMENICI and Kyl. Specifically, in an exchange of correspondence that was made part of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the 108th session of the Congress, the leaders agreed that S. 147 would be brought before the Senate on or before August 7. Specifically, the bill would contain $80 million for important legislation that I have sponsored related to high-risk pools, which are often the insurer of last resort.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his clarification and his commitment. We look forward to working with both leaders to bring S. 147 to the Senate floor at the earliest possible time in the second session of the 109th Congress.
I, like all who had contact with Bob Tisch, treasure my times with him. I send my deepest condolences to his wife and family.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a statement re- lating to the 50th anniversary of Tisch’s organization that so perfectly describes the life and accomplishments of Bob Tisch. He will be long remembered by all who knew him.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record.

PRESTON ROBERT TISCH (1926-2005)

Preston Robert “Bob” Tisch, the Giants’ Chairman and Co-Chief Executive Officer, one of the nation’s most respected and successful businessmen, a former United States Postmaster General, and an extremely generous philanthropist, died Tuesday night.

Tisch passed away from inoperable brain cancer, which was first diagnosed in the summer of 2004. He was 79. His death comes just three weeks after the passing of his fellow owner, Wellington Mara, who died of cancer on the age of 82.

Tisch realized a longtime dream in 1991 when he completed negotiations with Wel-lington Mara’s nephew, Tim Mara, and his family and purchased 50 percent of the Giants for $500 million. “Our company owned a radio station at that time, WHN. During the 1950s they broadcast Giants games. The president of the radio station had ten 5-yard-line tickets at Yankee Stadium. When we sold the radio station he decided he wanted to stay with us, so he came over to Loewes Theaters to become the controller. So for about seven or eight years, I had the use of these tickets. “Also, when we came to New York we moved to Scarsdale, and my son Jon Sherman, who was then coach of the Giants. Actually, Allie’s son Randy and my son Jon were born one day apart. So we got to know the Sherman family. Then in 1975 or ’76, Pete Rozelle moved to Harrison. We lived in the city, but we have a house in Harrison, which was a mile away from where Pete Rozelle lived. I was family friends with Pete Rozelle. So I have a history in the last 40-something years of being involved. I went to most of the owners meetings all the Super Bowls going back with Pete Rozelle. I was chairman of a group of his friends called Rozelle’s Raiders—I was responsible for getting the right place for them to stay at the right time. He finally gave me a whirl-tle and a sign that said ‘Rozelle’s Raiders.’ I’ve been very lucky. In my own mind, I’ve been involved in football since 1960.

It was about that time that Tisch first began to consider buying a professional team. “I had tried several times before (purchasing his interest in the Giants),” he said. “Steve Ross, who ended up as CEO of Time-Warner, Inc. and I, were interested in about 1976 or ’86 and it didn’t work out. I looked at other things. In 1988, when I came out of the Postal Service, I decided I would try to buy a sports team in many of the cities, both in football and basketball. I looked at the Dallas Cowboys and a couple of other teams. But I made up my mind I was not going to buy a team that was more than one hour from New York. I was interested in becoming owner of the new franchise that was in Baltimore. We were putting together a group when I came about to become the 50 percent owner of the New Giants, which I jumped at and dropped everything else.”

The additional statements were printed in the R ECORD a statement re-

December 21, 2005
Tisch’s business success was but a small part of his life’s achievements. His generosity and commitment to civic and charitable causes was legendary. Tisch was a tireless and active participant in civic affairs throughout his adult life.

In Feb, 2000, he helped found Take the Field, Inc., a non-profit organization dedicated to constructing and rebuilding athletic fields at New York City’s public high schools. Tisch, a product of those schools who graduated from Erasmus Hall High in Brooklyn, was also Chairman of Take the Field, Inc. He launched the organization with a $1 million donation, and as of earlier this year he had raised more than $147 million in public and private dollars.

Tisch and two partners in Take the Field, Tony Kiser and Richard Kahan, believed the private sector had to play a leading role in repairing sports fields at schools throughout the city that had been slowly destroyed by more than two decades of neglect. Tisch approached then-mayor Rudy Giuliani with his idea. The city agreed to match every dollar raised by Take the Field with three of its own, and the mission was to re-do every athletic field in the city that was classified as ‘‘needy.’’

‘‘Take the Field is one of the most innovative and wonderful ideas of my life in the city,’’ Tisch said. New York Mets owner Fred Wilpon, one of Tisch’s best friends. ‘‘And it doesn’t happen without Bob. At a time in his life when he could have just sat back and enjoyed everything he had accomplished, he went to work.’’

That’s what Tisch did throughout his life. He was a founding Co-Chairman of Citymeals-on-Wheels, President of the Board of Directors from 1993 to 2002, and later served on the Board as Honorary Chairman. He also served as chairman of Public Private Initiatives, a public-private partnership that raises funds for important community programs, from 1997 to 1999.

Tisch’s philanthropy continued even after he became gravely ill. His family picked a physician at the Duke University Medical Center to supervise his treatment for the brain cancer. Tisch and his family recently donated $10 million to the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center and the school’s Brain Tumor Center.

The money accounted for the majority of a $16.3 million package of subsidies that Duke will use to support research into the treatment of brain tumors.

‘‘I was very, very impressed by the program at Duke, and very taken by more than just its medical approach,’’ said Steve Tisch. ‘‘For me, there was the intangible that became so important, of the spiritual and emotional commitment that these programs and their doctors have.’’

Duke officials have pledged to use $5 million from the Tisch family to underwrite the hiring of additional researchers. The medical center is matching that with $5 million of its own money. Another $2.5 million from the Tisch Foundation will finance the screening of drugs that might be useful in treating brain tumors. Duke officials are now calling the treatment center the Preston Robert Tisch Brain Tumor Center.

Given his many accomplishments and interesting ventures, Tisch was asked in that 2002 interview what was most rewarding to him.

‘‘My brother (Laurence, who died of cancer at age 60 two years ago today on Nov. 15, 2000) took the Loews Corporation from a corporation that did about $20 million worth of business and built it up to a $13 billion company, which is now run by the next generation,’’ he said. ‘‘Building the company and seeing it grow has been extremely gratifying. I also enjoyed my time at the Postal Service when I was appointed Postmaster General. People said, ‘How can you stand a job like that?’ I loved it. I made one mistake—I stayed two years when I should have left. And then the White House said, ‘Then, of course, my involvement with the New York Giants has been very rewarding. I’ve been very, very lucky in my life and what I’ve done’.

Everyone who knew him, worked with him or were touched by his generosity were just as fortunate. Preston Robert Tisch was born on April 29, 1926 in New York City. He attended Bucknell University before entering the Army in 1944. After military service in World War II, he received a B.A. degree in economics from the University of Michigan in 1948. Tisch is survived by his wife, the former Joan Hyman, and their three children, Steven, Laurie and Jonathan, and nine grandchildren.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, today I join my colleagues, Senators NELSON, MIKULSKI, LANDRIEU, MURkowski, BOXER, SNOWE, REED, ROBERTS, Lautenberg, DeWine, Smith, Jeffords, Corzine, Sarbanes, Kerry, Lincoln, Murray, Durbin, Coleman, Feinstein, Johnson, Collins, Schumer, Baucus, Cochran, Brownback, Cantwell,Clinton, Dodd, Lieberman, and Stabenow in cosponsoring S. 1272.

RELATEd THANK YoU TO THE MERCHANT MARINERS of WORLD War II acT

This legislation would rectify that inequity by recognizing these American heroes with the status of ‘‘veteran,’’ and it would grant a small monthly stipend to these veterans or their widows in order to offset their lost benefits.

As a veteran, I will always seek to protect the honored place of our military heroes. I cherish their service, and I will do everything in my power to support their efforts. I look forward to working with my Senate colleagues to pass this important piece of legislation.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, all over this great country in the last few years, high school football championships have been won and lost. I am delighted to report that the team in my hometown of Silver City, NM, after decades of effort, has won the championship trophy in Class 4A football in New Mexico. All of us who attended it before it changed its name to that—and are thrilled with this achievement. Seven times in the past, our team has been in the final game, and seven times we have come in second. This year, the Silver High School Fighting Colts came away with the winner’s trophy for the first time in the school’s history.

This was accomplished under the leadership of Head Coach David Carrillo and his fine staff, and because of the skill and heart of all those enthusiastic players and their supportive families. They all have the congratulations and praise of those of us who have watched the team over the years. Somehow it is reassuring to know that no matter how old we get, we are always Colts.

RECOGNIZING MATRIX HUMAN SERVICES ON ITS 100TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Matrix Human Services, one of Michigan's oldest and largest nonprofit social service organizations, as it celebrates 100 years of tireless and dedicated service.

Matrix Human Services was founded in 1906 by a small group of Catholic women, later known as the League of Catholic Women, who recognized a growing need to provide support for low income and at-risk populations in the Detroit Metropolitan area. Over the years as the League’s membership continued to grow, it was able to dedicate more resources and personnel to its mission of fostering self-sufficiency and hope to those in need. These efforts ultimately lead to a broadened scope of services that sought to address the growing and diverse needs of the community, which grew into what we now refer to as Matrix Human Services.

Today, Matrix Human Services is a diverse organization with more than 300 staff members and dedicated volunteers, serving 30 locations across the Detroit Metropolitan area. It continues to focus on its mission to help prepare individuals and families to live a more positive, productive and meaningful life. Matrix Human Services has organized educational training, childcare, social work, mentoring, abuse prevention, and housing assistance for the homeless programs. Each year, Matrix is able to serve thousands of individuals through a network of specialized divisions that include Head Start Family Service Center, Project Transition Housing, Walter and May Reuther Senior Services, Project Child and Family Services, Casa Maria Family Services, Vistas Nuevas Head Start, and Off the Streets.

I know my Senate colleagues join me in congratulating Matrix Human Services on its many years of excellent service, outstanding staff, volunteers, and community partners many more productive years of service to the community.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DURBIN (for himself and Mr. MURkowski):
S. 2156. A bill to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 332 South Main Street in Flora, Illinois, as the "Robert T. Ferguson Post Office Building."

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mr. BOXER:

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2156

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. ROBERT T. FERGUSON POST OFFICE BUILDING.

(a) DESIGNATION.—The facility of the United States Postal Service located at 332 South Main Street in Flora, Illinois, shall be known and designated as the "Robert T. Ferguson Post Office Building".

(b) REFERENCES.—A reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the facility referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to reference to the "Robert T. Ferguson Post Office Building".

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce legislation to designate the U.S. Post Office at 332 South Main Street in Flora, Illinois as the "Robert T. Ferguson Post Office Building".

Mr. Ferguson was a distinguished public servant who began his postal career at the Harvey Post Office, where he worked as a city carrier from 1954 to 1957. He then moved to the Flora, Illinois Post Office where he worked his way up from clerk/carer to Assistant Postmaster to Postmaster in 1986. During the final three years of his career before he retired in 1988, Robert Ferguson served as Postmaster in Collinsville, Illinois.

In recognition of his hard work and dedication, Mr. Ferguson received five Outstanding Superior Accomplishment Awards and qualified as a Postmaster Trainer on October 1, 1976. He worked tirelessly on behalf of postal workers and traveled throughout Southern Illinois training newly appointed Postmasters. He was well liked by his colleagues who knew they had a leader they could trust.

In addition to his active professional life, Robert Ferguson found time to serve his community. As President of the Clay County Shrine Club in 1952, he organized events to raise thousands of dollars for the Shriner’s Hospital for Children. In 1996, he raised money to assist a local family after a storm destroyed their mobile home. In 2002, Mr. Ferguson created a Hospital Directory for Southern Illinois which aid local citizens by providing phone numbers and addresses of local hospitals.

In 1996, the Flora Chamber of Commerce named Robert Ferguson the ‘Outstanding Citizen of Flora’.

Mr. President, post offices are often designated in honor of individuals who have made valuable contributions to their community, State, and country. I can think of no more fitting way to permanently and publicly recognize Robert Ferguson’s work than to name the Flora, Illinois post office in his honor. It would be a most appropriate way to commemorate his exemplary service to the Flora community and to postal workers and patrons throughout Southern Illinois.
S. 2157. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to provide for the Purple Heart to be awarded to prisoners of war who die in captivity, regardless of the cause of death. The “Honor Our Fallen Prisoners of War Act” has been endorsed by the United States Code, to provide for the Purple Heart to be awarded to prisoners of war who die in captivity, regardless of the cause of death. The “Honor Our Fallen Prisoners of War” Act was previously introduced by Representative Bob Filner in the House of Representatives. I am proud to join him in this effort.

The “Honor Our Fallen Prisoners of War Act” would make members of the Armed Forces who die in captivity of any circumstance eligible for the Purple Heart. Currently, only prisoners of war who die during their imprisonment of wounds inflicted by an instrument of war are eligible for posthumous Purple Hearts. Those who die of starvation, disease, abuse, or other causes during captivity are not.

I believe this is an injustice to the thousands of POWs who paid the ultimate price in service to our Nation. The purpose of the Purple Heart is to honor those who are killed or wounded in action as the result of an act of an enemy of the United States. It makes no sense that prisoner of war camps—where thousands of Americans have been held against their will and have endured great suffering at the hands of enemy forces—are not considered a battlefield.

The legislation is retro-active to December 7, 1941 and would therefore include all POWs who have died in captivity since World War II.

The “Honor Our Fallen Prisoners of War Act” has been endorsed by the Tiger Survivors, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Military Order of the Purple Heart, Korean War Veterans Association, American Ex-Prisoners of War Families, and a number of other prominent veterans organizations. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Mr. LIEBERMAN (for himself and Ms. COLLINS):

S. 2158. A bill to establish a National Homeland Security Academy within the Department of Homeland Security, to provide for the Homeland Security Academy to educate and train the best and brightest of our future leaders. The bill Senator COLLINS and I are introducing today, the National Homeland Security Academy Act of 2005, is the fulfillment of that promise.

It was clear to me as I was working to create a Department of Homeland Security that we would need to find a way to make sure Department professionals, as well as the State and local officials with whom they work, understand the full scope and range of responsibilities entrusted to the Department—not just the details of their own particular jobs. This academy would accomplish that. It would cultivate leaders who teach the full range of skills necessary for robust homeland security, and provide cross-disciplinary and joint education and training to government officials at the Federal, State and local levels so that they can develop the lasting relationships that will make their work more efficient and effective.

The National Homeland Security Academy Act of 2005 is the product of my work with the Chairman of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator COLLINS, as well as homeland security experts, scholars, and education and professional development experts. Together, we have refined the concept of homeland security education and training to meet the Department’s needs today and into the future.

The academy I envision would be a professional development institution, much like the War College created by the Department of Defense to provide its leaders with a deep and thorough understanding of military and defense matters. The National Homeland Security Academy would ensure that new and mid-level executive employees at the Department of Homeland Security—as well as other Federal, State, and local leaders with homeland security responsibilities—have a thorough understanding of the strategic missions of the Department, as well access to the hands-on-instruction, exercises, and real-time simulation.

Four months ago, Hurricane Katrina reminded us in no uncertain terms that our homeland security workers at all levels still have much to learn. How and when to share critical information? What does it mean to activate the National Response Plan? Who is responsible for which emergency response mission? These are the types of questions we on the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee have been asking as we investigate why the preparedness for and response to the hurricane was so lacking. The National Homeland Security Academy would provide answers to these and many more questions and ensure homeland security officials are better equipped to respond to the next disaster.

The centerpieces of the Academy would be the National Homeland Security Education and Strategy Center, where Federal homeland security officials would receive initial and continuing homeland security education. The Academy would also incorporate the Center for Homeland Defense and Security run by the Naval Postgraduate School at the Direction of the Office of State and Local Government Coordination and Preparedness. In addition, the bill establishes a National Homeland Security Education Network comprised of the academies and training centers within the jurisdiction of DHS—like the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center—as well as a communications network capable of providing distance learning opportunities.

It also creates a new State and Local Education and Training Coordinator within the Office of State and Local Government Coordination and Preparedness to address one of the most frequent criticisms local first responders have with the Department of Homeland Security, and that is the fact that many people in the Department seem to be unaware of or unwilling to make use of excellent state and local education and training programs. A liaison officer would rectify that.

This bill does not replace the system for first responder training. Local first responders will continue to work with the Office of State and Local Government Coordination and Preparedness to ensure they have the necessary training to deal with the situations they face everyday. But we believe that bringing people together from all levels of government to study homeland security issues from different perspectives will make the homeland security we would create a healthier one. And we do think that homeland security will benefit overall from the relationships that would inevitably form between officials at every level and from every corner of the country.

The National Homeland Security Act of 2005 addresses a deficiency in the education and training of our homeland security professionals by helping to foster connected, experienced, and knowledgeable leaders who will be able to provide the best possible protection for the American people. I look forward to working with Chairman COLLINS in the next session to mark up this bill and make it law.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

S. 2158

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “National Homeland Security Academy Act of 2005”.
SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) homeland security poses a complex challenge for the Nation that can only be successfully and efficiently met by the combined effort of Federal, State, and local governments and the private sector;

(2) the United States fields a dedicated workforce of personnel to meet homeland security needs who lack a coordinated homeland security education system that links a strategy-based education with hands on training and real time simulation, and that fails to make such a system available to the appropriate government and private sector personnel on a wide scale;

(3) officials at all levels of government should understand the strategic mission of the Department of Homeland Security, and have access to continuing education and hands-on training exercises;

(4) the development of a program of professional education and training that links strategy and training, and coordinates current training among the many academies and training facilities that fall under the jurisdiction of the Department of Homeland Security, is essential to meeting the goals and intent of the Homeland Security Act of 2002;

(5) lessons learned from the Department of Homeland Security’s Top Official Exercises (TOPS) and the tragedy of Hurricane Katrina, demonstrate there is a need to build up institutional knowledge within the Department and cultivate leaders capable of guiding the Department and the Nation when catastrophic incidents occur;

(6) modern information technologies provide uniquely powerful tools for ensuring that training is presented in a way that facilitates rapid and effective learning for a diverse student body, material being taught is continuously upgraded and reviewed, and training is available anytime and anywhere it is needed; and

(7) as the Homeland Security Act of 2002 brought together a number of Federal agencies with specific and often nonredundant functions to form a single department, the National Homeland Security Academy will draw upon the expertise of a variety of existing academic institutions and innovative programs to educate our homeland security workforce.

“MRS. BOXER. Mr. President, each year Congress appropriates millions of dollars to institutions of higher learning that serve minority students. Currently, funds go to historically black colleges and universities, Hispanic-serving institutions, tribally controlled colleges and universities, and Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian–serving institutions. These funds—which exceeded $890 million in fiscal year 2005—help institutions provide more higher education opportunities for low-income minority students.

For schools that serve a large number of low-income Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders, however, Federal assistance is not available. A need is not being served.

Over 42 percent of Cambodian Americans, almost 35 percent of Laotian Americans and 25 percent of Vietnamese Americans live in poverty. And the graduation rates among these populations are low. Only 13.8 percent of Vietnamese Americans, 5.8 percent of Laotian Americans, 6.1 percent of Cambodian Americans, and 5.1 percent of Hmong have college degrees.

So, today, I am introducing the Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders Higher Education Enhancement Act. I am pleased to be joined in this effort by Senator AKAKA.

This legislation creates a new Federal grant program for institutions where these minority students make up at least 10 percent of the undergraduate student body. Priority will be given based on the number of low-income students.

The grants—authorized at $30 million in the first year, and such sums as necessary for the next 4 years—could be used for a variety of purposes, including outreach to secondary and elementary school students, curriculum development, tutoring, counseling, and student services.

Mr. President, we need to make college accessible for low-income Asian American students as we do for other minority students. This bill is an important step toward this goal.

By Mrs. BOXER (for herself and Mr. AKAKA):

S. 2160. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to authorize grants for institutions of higher education serving Asian American and Pacific Islanders; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, as a member of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, the only Chinese American in the U.S. Senate, and sole native Hawaiian in the U.S. Congress, I thank my colleague from California, Senator BOXER, for introducing a bill to establish Asian American and Pacific Islander Serving Institutions which will improve the educational opportunities available to Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders throughout our Nation. I am proud to stand with her as a cosponsor of her bill. I also commend my colleagues, Congressmen DAVID WU and MIKE HONDA, in the other body for working to advance an AAPI Serving Institution bill.

This legislation would authorize the Department of Education to establish an Asian American and Pacific Islander Serving Institution designation under the Higher Education Act. A higher education institution with an AAPI undergraduate enrollment of at least 10 percent would be eligible for grants to address and improve the institution's capacity to serve the AAPI community. In the Higher Education Act, titles III and V were established to provide aid for colleges and universities to expand educational opportunities for historically under represented and financially disadvantaged students. However, we need a program specifically for Asian American and Pacific Islander Americans. This legislation would provide equal educational opportunities for Asian American and Pacific Islander students with the equal opportunity to pursue a quality education.

The AAPI community has made many significant contributions to our country, and is known as having the highest percentage of undergraduate and advanced degrees when compared to other racial or ethnic groups according to the College Board. However, as one of the most ethnically, culturally, and linguistically diverse groups in America, the success of this community as a whole masks the needs of its disparate groups who may not be doing so well. This is the "model minority" myth. In fact, serious challenges face Cambodian, Hmong, and Pacific Islander students, particularly in the acquisition of the English language.

The AAPI population is one of the fastest growing populations in this country, including nearly 12 million Asian Americans and 1 million Pacific Islanders. Census projections show the AAPI population doubling by 2050 and comprising about 9 percent of the total U.S. population. As a significant part of our society, AAPIs and their higher education needs should be better understood and addressed, and the establishment of AAPI Serving Institutions would be a major step in the right direction for this multifaceted population.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting Senator BOXER's legislation to enhance educational opportunities for Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders.

S. 2161. A bill to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act to prevent the enforcement of certain national primary drinking water regulations unless sufficient financial assistance is available or variance technology has been identified; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce The Small System Drinking Water Act to assist water systems throughout the country comply with the numerous Federal drinking water standards. My bill will require the Federal Government to live up to its obligations and require the EPA to use all of the tools given the Agency in the 1996 Safe Drinking Water Act amendments (SDWA).

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the “Local Development Business Loan Program Act of 2005.” This bill will improve the Small Business Administration’s (SBA) Certified Development Company Loan Program as the “504 Loan Program” by streamlining the lending process and providing small businesses with greater opportunities to obtain affordable financing. The 504 Loan Program provides small businesses with long-term, fixed-rate financing for real estate and machinery.

As Chair of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, one of my primary responsibilities is to ensure small businesses are afforded the best possible environment to grow and flourish. The fundamental purpose of the SBA is to maintain and strengthen the nation’s economy by aiding, counseling, assisting, and protecting the interests of small business concerns. This bill would strengthen the SBA’s ability to pursue those goals.

The legislation responds to one of the primary needs of small businesses: access to affordable capital. For many small businesses, expansion plans face constraints by facilities that are too small, or equipment that has insufficient capacity or outdated features. These small businesses often lack capital to remedy these needs, and without the SBA they would be limited to obtaining financing with higher, often variable, rates. As a result, the 504 loan program is a key element of these small businesses’ eventual success, because the program provides long-term capital, at fixed rates, that allows businesses to obtain new facilities, expand existing facilities, and update their machinery.

In Fiscal Year 2004, the SBA’s financing programs, combined, supported over $20 billion in loans and venture capital for small businesses. In the 504 program alone, small businesses obtained 8,357 loans in 2004. Through those loans the SBA guaranteed over $4 billion in financing. The SBA portion of each 504 program loan is only 40 percent of the total loan size. This program thus produced approximately $10 billion in financing for small businesses in 2004! That financing allowed small businesses to create or retain 140,000 jobs in 2004.

Although the 504 program is already assisting entrepreneurial small businesses throughout the nation, it can be improved. The program works by combining in each financing package provided to a small business a loan from a Certified Development Company (CDC) that is guaranteed by the SBA, this is 40 percent of the total package; a non-guaranteed loan provided by a private “first-mortgage” lender, 50 percent of the total package; and a 10 percent down-payment provided by the small business. This bill offers improvements to all three aspects of the program, to increase the program’s efficiency and impact. If approved by the Congress and signed into law, this bill will increase the number of small businesses that can utilize the program to grow and succeed.

Job creation and retention is a bedrock element of local development efforts. One of the statutory purposes of the 504 loan program is to create new jobs and to help small businesses retain existing jobs. This bill’s purpose is to further strengthen the local development impact of the SBA’s program. To reflect that, the bill re-names the 504 loan program as the “Local Development Business Loan Program” (Local Development Program). This new name will also help borrowers to understand the intent of the program; many small business owners had commented to the Committee that the name “504 program” was neither clear nor indicative of the program’s purposes. The bill will not require the SBA to waste money by discarding existing program materials that refer to the previous name; the SBA may continue to use those materials, but it will use the new name on any new materials produced after the bill’s enactment.

If the Local Development Program continues at its current pace, it may exceed $6 billion in guaranteed loans during 2006. The bill would authorize a maximum program level of $8 billion in guaranteed loans in fiscal year 2007, and $8.5 billion for fiscal year 2008.

This legislation will also reduce regulatory barriers that have constrained CDCs from expanding their operations into new areas. By increasing competitive opportunities for CDCs, the bill seeks to increase the number and quality of financing options available to small businesses. For instance, existing SBA regulations require CDCs to have a separate loan committee for each State and to account for all revenue and costs on a State-by-State basis. Regulations of this type have made compliance both costly and difficult and have deterred many CDCs from expanding into new areas. Simplifying these regulations will result in increased access to capital for small businesses.

The bill allows borrowers to provide more than the required minimum amount of equity when initiating their loan, and to use the excess equity to reduce the amount of the first-mortgage made by a private lender in the program. By contributing a larger down-payment at the onset of the loan, this provision will provide an opportunity for these borrowers to reduce their periodic payment obligations.

This legislation would also designate Local Development Program loans that qualify under the New Markets Tax Credit Program as a public policy goal under the Local Development Program, and thus make them eligible for larger financing. The New Market Tax Credit Program permits taxpayers to receive a credit against Federal income taxes for making qualified equity investments in designated Community Development Entities.

The Act will also permit the ownership interest of two or more small business owners to be combined to determine whether the small business is a 51 percent owned by minorities, women, or veterans in order to qualify as a business eligible for a public policy loan. The Act’s goal of improving access to capital for small businesses is also furthered by another provision that permits Local Development Program borrowers to obtain financing in the maximum amount permitted under this program and also under the SBA’s “7(a) loan program.”

This legislation would also allow a borrower to refinance a limited amount of existing debt. The amount that could be refinanced could not exceed 50 percent of the expansion project funded by the loan, and would be limited to certain situations. By giving these small businesses the opportunity to refinance and obtain lower-cost capital, the bill would provide them a greater chance to succeed.

The bill would also eliminate a fee now imposed on the first mortgage lenders, private banks, in a Local Development Program financing package. The lender’s fee is a one-time fee equal to 0.5 percent of the first mortgage loan. Currently, the first mortgage lenders pass this fee on to CDCs and to borrowers. The bill will not increase the total fees paid by the CDCs or the borrowers, but clarifies that the CDC’s stipulated annual fee would be increased by 0.06 percent, to 0.5 percent of the first mortgage loan.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. KERRY:

S. 2163. A bill to amend titles 10 and 38 of the United States Code, to increase and index educational benefits for veterans under the Montgomery GI bill to ensure adequate and equitable benefits for active duty members and members of the Select Reserve, and to include certain servicing members previously excluded from such benefits; to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, the original GI Bill of 1944 was intended to help veterans readjust to civilian life, and to recognize the service they provided to their country. Subsequent GI Bills, including the one in force today, have been important tools to recruit the world’s best troops.

The GI Bill is meant “to help meet, in part, the expenses of individual’s subsistence, tuition, fees, supplies, books, equipment, and other educational costs.” At certain points historically the payment has met over 100 percent of these costs.

Yet, today’s troops, performing with such distinction in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other locations around the world, are returning home to a GI Bill that covers only 63 percent of the average cost of a public four-year secondary education. Veterans are struggling to make up the difference in the price of their education.

We’ve heard of a 28-year-old Navy veteran who served two deployments in the Persian Gulf between 1996 and 2002. When he went to school he had to supplement his GI Bill benefits by working part-time as a bartender and taking out tens of thousands of dollars in emergency loans.

We’ve heard of a veteran who served 4 years in the airborne infantry prior to enrolling in a local community college in California under the GI Bill. He has been able to make ends meet at the community college by subsidizing his GI Bill benefits through part-time work, but he worries that he will be unable to fulfill his dream of finishing up at UC Davis because his benefits and part-time job will not cover the higher costs at the 4-year public secondary institution.

But not all veterans are in a position where they can worry only about their education. Almost 60 percent of enlisted men and women are married today, compared with 40 percent in 1973. These veterans are faced with choosing to borrow in order to invest for the future or take care of their families.

We know of veterans who have lost that fight. One was unable to come up with the remaining third of the cost of his education and support his wife and baby daughter. His wife had convinced him to use his GI Bill, but for this young veteran, “the benefit just didn’t match up to the cost of living” and he dropped out of school after only one semester.

Over the past 10 years, less than 10 percent of eligible veterans who signed up for the GI Bill from 1985 to 1994 used their entire educational benefit, although 70 percent have used some portion of it.

This legislation I introduce today is the start of an effort to help veterans meet the ever-increasing costs of education. It is only a start. I recognize that the cost of this proposal has to be addressed for the legislation to advance. I thank the Veterans’ Affairs Committee seeking reauthorization of a reporting requirement that will inform this process. And I plan to work with my colleagues in the coming months to find a solution that meets the needs of America’s veterans.

We know that improving GI Bill benefits isn’t just about saying thank you. It is critical to recruiting the world’s finest military. As recently as 2004, a survey of active duty service members found that GI Bill education benefits were the primary reason individuals chose to enlist. We recently increased sign-up and reenlistment bonuses for members of the military. The GI Bill must increase too.

This legislation, the Armed Forces Education Benefits Improvement Act, would increase GI Bill educational benefits to cover the average price of a 4-year public secondary education, to the most recent report by the U.S. Department of Education, an average public 4-year education cost $14,280 in 2004-05, compared with the $9,036 provided under the current GI Bill for the same time period.

The Armed Forces Education Benefits Improvement Act would also provide for real growth in future benefits that keep paces with the ever-increasing cost of education. As recently as 2004, a survey of active duty service members found that GI Bill education benefits were the primary reason individuals chose to enlist. We recently increased sign-up and reenlistment bonuses for members of the military. The GI Bill must increase too.

This legislation would also increase the base amount provided for members of the Selected Reserve by approximately 50 percent. Act II maintains the same ratio in the FY06 Defense Authorization Act for those members of the Selected Reserve called up to active duty for at least 90 days.
Finally, the Armed Forces Education Benefits Improvement Act would open enrollment for updated Montgomery GI Bill benefits to certain active duty service members who declined to accept the Veterans Education Assistance Program (VEAP) offered between January 1, 1977 and June 30, 1985. These veterans are the only group of active duty service members—other than service academy graduates and recipients of certain ROTC scholarships—who have not been able to sign up for GI Bill educational benefits.

I am pleased that this legislation has been endorsed by the Military Officers Association of America and the Reserve Enlisted Association.

I know my colleagues are as inspired as I am by the dedication, courage, and honor of the soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines we meet around the world. They serve with a selfless devotion to their country and their mission—and we are all so very proud of them. The least that we can do is ensure the GI Bill benefits keep pace with the cost of education in this country. I look forward to working with my colleagues over the coming months to bring this legislation to fruition.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. LOTT (for himself and Mr. DODD):

S. 2166. A bill to direct the Election Assistance Commission to make grants to States to restore and replace election administration supplies, materials, records, equipment, and technology which were damaged, destroyed, or dislocated as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Hurricane Election Relief Act of 2005. I thank my friend Senator Dodd—the ranking member of the Senate Committee I chair, the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration—for joining me in sponsoring this important legislation.

It has now been over three months since Hurricanes Katrina and Rita wreaked havoc throughout the Gulf coast region, leaving almost unimaginable wreckage and destruction in their wakes. The good people in the region have suffered a terrible toll in terms of lives lost and property destroyed. Though their plight no longer dominates the headlines, the sufferies and hardships that these individuals continue to confront on a daily basis remain formidable. However, one thing that gulf coast residents should not have to face in the aftermath of the hurricanes is an impediment to their ability to fully participate in our Nation’s democracy. The right to vote must not become a further casualty of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita.

The hurricane-related damage to election infrastructure was extensive throughout my home State of Mississippi as well as Louisiana and other states. Voting equipment was destroyed; voter records were lost; polling places were leveled. If this infrastructure is not restored in a timely manner, the voting rights of thousands of citizens in the region will be substantially impaired. This is not acceptable.

But replacing damaged and destroyed election equipment and technology is not the only election-related challenge these States face. Thousands and thousands of individuals were forced to evacuate their homes and their communities and relocate to other areas and, in some instances, other States. Large numbers of these displaced individuals will have to do so largely by means of absentee ballots. This increased demand for absentee ballots will, in tum, present significant logistical challenges for localities that are already cash-strapped and struggling to recover in the aftermath of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Therefore, to ensure that gulf coast residents remain fully enfranchised, it is essential that the impacted States receive sufficient resources to restore their election infrastructure to pre-hurricane levels.

For this reason, I am proud to introduce today the Hurricane Election Relief Act of 2005, which provides much needed funds to the States that bore the brunt of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita to aid in rebuilding election infrastructure that was destroyed or destroyed. Specifically, the Hurricane Election Relief Act authorizes $50 million in grants to be distributed by the Election Assistance Commission, EAC, to assist affected States in restoring and replacing supplies, materials, records, equipment, and technology used in the administration of Federal elections in the State which were damaged, destroyed, or dislocated as a result of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. These funds will help ensure the full participation in such elections by individuals who were displaced as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita.

The Act also permits the authorized funds to be used to ensure the full electoral participation of displaced individuals. Thus, State and local election officials could use monies furnished by the Act to offset the costs associated with printing and processing voter registration and absentee ballot materials for displaced voters. Finally, the use of the funds provided under this act would have to be consistent with the requirements of title III of the Help America Vote Act of 2002.

Much work remains to be done to help the communities impacted by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita get back on their feet. I realize this fact more than most. Thus, it is my hope that my fellow Senators will enthusiastically support this important legislation, which will ensure that those individuals in my home State as well as those throughout our surrounding communities were thrown into such turmoil as a result of the hurricanes will retain their ability to fully exercise their right to vote.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2166

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. Act may be cited as the “Hurricane Election Relief Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. GRANTS TO STATES FOR RESTORING AND REPLACING ELECTION ADMINISTRATION SUPPLIES, MATERIALS, RECORDS, EQUIPMENT, AND TECHNOLOGY WHICH WERE DAMAGED, DESTROYED, OR DISLOCATED BY HURRICANES KATRINA OR RITA. (a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Election Assistance Commission shall make a grant to each eligible State, in such amount as the Commission considers appropriate, for purposes of restoring and replacing supplies, materials, records, equipment, and technology used in the administration of Federal elections in the State which were damaged, destroyed, or dislocated as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita and ensuring the full participation in such elections by individuals who were displaced as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita.

(b) USE OF GRANT FUNDS.—Funds received under a grant under subsection (a) shall be used in a manner that is consistent with the requirements of title III of the Help America Vote Act of 2002.

(c) ELIGIBILITY.—A State is eligible to receive a grant under this section if it submits to the Commission (at such time and in such form as the Commission may require) a certification that—

(1) supplies, materials, records, equipment, and technology used in the administration of Federal elections in the State were damaged, destroyed, or dislocated as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita; and

(2) the system of such State for conducting Federal elections has been significantly impacted by the displacement of individuals as a result of Hurricane Katrina or Hurricane Rita.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS. There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2006 for grants under this Act $50,000,000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, nearly three months have passed since Hurricanes Katrina and Rita ravaged the lives of the good people of our Gulf Coast region. Congress has taken great efforts to address the immediate needs of those affected by the hurricanes and continues to consider how we can assist the long-term needs of these communities. I previously came to the floor with the distinguished Chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, Senator Lott, to discuss the needs for... funding to restore the elections infrastructure of the impacted States, including not just those directly hit by the storms but also States that welcomed and provided shelter to those displaced by the storms. As the ranking member of the Rules Committee, I rise today to introduce with Senator LOTT, the Hurricane Election Relief Act of 2005, a bill that authorizes the necessary funding to impacted States for the purpose of ensuring they be capable of conducting the up-coming Federal elections next year, consistent with the Help America Vote Act (‘HAVA’). This bill will ensure that impacted States will be able to strengthen the foundation of our democracy and the process by which we build communities. Specifically, this bill provides funding to States to restore and replace supplies, materials, records, equipment and technology that were damaged, destroyed, or dis located as result of the storms. The Election Assistance Commission (EAC) is charged with distribution of the appropriate funding to the States.

Earlier this month, Louisiana Secretary of State Al Ater postponed for up to eight months the election for mayor and City Council in New Orleans from the scheduled February 4, 2006 date, after explaining that the infrastructure to hold an election is simply absent. Secretary of State Ater noted that the voting systems must be repaired, poll workers must be located, and a system to process the anticipated increase in absentee ballots must be developed. Following the storms, Ater requested $2 million from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) solely to repair voting machines. To date, he has not received any of the requested funds and there does not yet appear to be a projected FEMA disbursement date for such funds.

Mississippi Secretary of State Eric Clark surveyed the 43 counties affected by the storms in his State and announced that in order to facilitate elections without long lines, Mississippi needs $3.3 million to replace 966 voting machines as well as additional funding to assure that the counties meet the HAVA requirements effective January 1, 2006.

In light of the above, it is essential that we act together to ensure that all States, including those States impacted by the hurricanes, may conduct timely Federal elections that enable every eligible voter to cast a vote and have that vote counted, regardless of race, ethnicity, language, age, disability or community resources. The health of our democracy depends upon it.

As we approach the end of the first session of the 109th Congress and prepare to return to the comfort of our families and communities, let us offer thanks for the well-being of our communities and provide the authority to allocate funding to those States which are rebuilding their communities in the aftermath of these devastating natural disasters.

S. 2171. A bill to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to reauthorize the temporary mortgage and rental payments program; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Ms. LANDRIEU:
S. 2172. A bill to provide for response to Hurricane Katrina by establishing the Louisiana Recovery Corporation, providing for housing and community rebuilding, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

MS. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I will speak just for a moment about each of these important measures. Before I do, I know today has been a long day, and it has been complicated by many procedural votes and a series of bills that we just passed out of here, many important bills. Of course, the Defense appropriations, Defense authorization bill, two of the major bills that Congress works on throughout the year, and it is important we get them through.

On the Defense appropriations bill, as it was agreed to, there was an important piece for the gulf coast, $29 billion direct relief package. I will speak just for a moment about that because it has bearing on what we are going to do in the future when we are faced with catastrophic events.

Senator VITTER and I, my colleague from Louisiana, returned to the Congress over 4 months ago to try to describe to our colleagues the devastation that occurred with not one but two hurricanes and then multiple levee breaks which have devastated a major American city and a region, the southern part of Louisiana and Mississippi.

I have said now on many occasions that FEMA, on its best day, is not adequate to address the emergency and enormous needs of the people who have been affected: their need for housing, their need for employment, their need for capital, their need for emotional security, their need for public infrastructure, their need for police, their need for firefighters, their need for health care, their need for education.

I cannot even describe the tremendous angst, anxiety, and despair setting in on many communities in the gulf coast region because help has been slow to arrive. When it is offered, it has been inadequate to address the situation we find ourselves in.

I do not know if we have ever considered what needs to be done when we have a catastrophic incident such as we had. So we are going to come back after the recess and I hope talk about how FEMA can be restructured, how it can be made to be more efficient, how it can be made to be more accountable, how it can be made to act more quickly. But that is also going to need some additional tools.

That is what the two bills address I have introduced tonight as a companion to a House bill that was introduced and has been worked on very diligently by my colleague Congressman RICHARD BAKER from Baton Rouge, who is the ranking member on the Banking Committee in the House. He has spent a lot of time on this bill and has moved it out of the House committee. It establishes a brand new corporation that can step in. It would be established by appointment by the President and by the Governor, with some private and public capital, a corporation that could then access the capital markets by issuing bonds, to step up and into the gulf coast area to work with our local officials, to work with the officials at the city level, at the parish level, to provide opportunities, to provide equity for homeowners who find themselves with homes that are uninhabitable, with mortgages that need to be paid and no possible way to sell their property because it is of questionable value, given the situation.

We are about to go through a situation in America that we have not had to face these tragedies very often, and this is the first time we faced a tragedy of this magnitude. Mr. President, 275,000 homes destroyed, 10 times the amount of homes destroyed by Hurricane Andrew in 1992. Mr. President, 28,000 homes were destroyed in the worst disaster before we faced Rita and Katrina. But with 275,000 homes destroyed, clearly, we have to do more than send money through.

Money is not the only answer for the challenges before us. So we need new tools. That is why I have come to the Senate tonight to introduce, after a long day, a bill that was crafted in the House by Congressman BAKER, amended through input from a variety of his colleagues in the House, input from myself and some Senators in anticipations of the bill moving over here, and have had a verbal commitment from the Senate side, from the Banking Committee, and very positive comments from Democrats on the Banking Committee that we could have an expedited hearing on this bill when we return.

Because even with the $29 billion in direct aid that is included in the Defense appropriations bill, I can promise my colleagues, to stand up the great city of New Orleans and the region and the gulf coast is going to take more money. I suggest that we take aid through community development block grants and aid to our schools and universities and hospitals. It is going to take some new tools we are going to have to invent, we are going to have to place into a toolbox and then give out to local elected officials, to business leaders, to community organizations, to rebuild this great community.

But the great opportunity is, if we can invent these tools, and we can design them appropriately, they will then be available for us in the event a catastrophe such as this or something similar strikes again, whether it is an earthquake in San Francisco, massive tornadoes in the Midwest or, God forbid, a terror strike that would decimate or destroy a population or vast area such as we are experiencing from a hurricane and levee breaks in New Orleans.

So this is all the work we can do on this housing corporation bill when we get back. I urge my colleagues’ involvement because of the extraordinary need, as outlined and expressed so beautifully by Senator STEVENS’ remarks tonight and of this evening about how he was so emotionally taken aback by what he saw in New Orleans. I can most certainly understand it. Senator VITTER and I have been living that as we have moved through New Orleans and the region and all through south Louisiana, and share his view that more has to be done.

So these two bills that I introduce—one is a companion bill to Congressman BAKER’s bill with some important, I think, improvements or important amendments. One is to ensure a strong local input through local advisory committees, appointed by parish governments and municipalities. Also there is an underlying or emphasis, if you will, that the corporation must work in conjunction with state and local planning directions and direction.

This Senate version will also increase the potential equity recovery from 60 percent to 80 percent and will increase the potential cap of recovery from $50,000 to $750,000. Also something in this bill to try to give corporate or commercial property owners some relief.

So between the Baker bill in the House, which needs to continue to move through the process, and this bill which will get, hopefully, some expedited hearings when we return, hopefully, we can quickly put into the hands of our communities, our large cities, our suburban areas, our rural areas, individuals—our individuals—people who have seen in the last 4 months everything they have worked for in their life, perhaps even a little bit they were able to inherit, and all they hoped to pass on to their children or their grandchildren gone, without a whole lot of options for recovery—assistance.

We have every intention to rebuild our city and to rebuild our region. Just as if there were an earthquake in San Francisco, I don’t think Congress would stand by and do nothing. But we have a responsibility and I think we have a responsibility to the people who live there should simply pick up and move to New York and abandon the city of San Francisco, we have no intention of abandoning the city of New Orleans. We may lie 5 feet below sea level, but let me assure you, there are places in this world that are as or more productive than this region that lie 20 feet below sea level and manage their water properly and invest in their civil works properly in a way we could model ourselves after and do very well.

The city of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana have contributed billions of dollars to the economy of this Nation and to the general fund of this Nation, and we want to continue to do so. We are not asking for a handout but a hand up. We are not asking for charity. We are asking for a portion of the taxes we pay, a portion of the money we send to the national Government for our rental assistance, our security for our coast and our hurricane protection that we warrant and the industries this infrastructure protects warrant for the benefit of not just the 4.5 million people who live in the State and the 3 million plus people who live in Mississippi, but which protect and support the almost 300 million people who live in the United States of America.

So these two bills are very important, I look forward to working on them when we get back.

The second bill is a bill where we picked up an idea from the New York situation, 9/11—a terrible situation that is 4 million gone into our memory and our collective conscience.

There were some real problems with housing following the destruction of that neighborhood. This second bill I have introduced would allow FEMA to extend their rental assistance programs to give some immediate help to families who find themselves unable to recover their equity for whatever reason out of the houses they have that are uninhabitable but who have to find a decent place to live so they can rebuild and regroup. That bill will address that situation.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation that will help the 6.4 million seniors and disabled Americans who are dually eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid, the so-called “dual-eligibles,” make a smooth and successful transition from Medicaid prescription drug coverage to Medicare Part D.

These seniors and disabled Americans are the most vulnerable members of an already vulnerable population. They are the poorest of the elderly, with incomes of less than $10,000 per year. And they are the sickest of the elderly, with approximately 25 percent residing in a long-term care facility. They have significant health care needs, have often been diagnosed with multiple chronic conditions, and are in greatest danger of being affected by poor implementation of Medicare’s new prescription drug benefit.

On November 15, beneficiaries began signing up for Medicare Part D prescription drug coverage, and on January 1, the drug benefit actually begins. But this date does not only mark the beginning of a new Medicare drug benefit. For the 6.4 million dual eligibles, January 1 is also the day that they stop receiving their Medicaid drug benefit.

I voted against the Medicare bill when it was before the Senate in 2003 and we are all well aware of the many flaws and shortcomings: the insurance company slush fund, the “donut hole,” the prohibition on the Government negotiating for lower drug costs and on the safe importation of prescription medications, among others.

But the short timeframe in which dual eligibles have to complete this transition is one of the most worrisome.

There are only 6 weeks between the time when seniors began signing up for the new drug plans, and the date when Medicaid coverage ceases. That means that dual eligibles—the poorest and sickest portion of the Medicare population—have very little time in which to accurately balance the benefits and drawbacks of their prescription drug plan choices.

We’re giving most seniors 6 months to consider their options of a prescription drug plan, but we’re giving the most vulnerable only 6 weeks.

While it would be my preference that the existence of a Medicaid drug benefit be extended beyond January 1 to provide adequate time for the transition, Republicans in Congress have said that doing so would take too long.

In response to the concern over the short implementation period, CMS announced that it will automatically enroll dual eligibles in a randomly chosen prescription drug plan by January 1, 2006.

CMS reports that at the end of November they had automatically enrolled over 5 million of the 6.4 million dually eligible beneficiaries in a Medicare Part D plan. But this leaves more than 1 million of our poorest and sickest vulnerable to falling through the cracks if they are not enrolled in a Medicare Part D plan in the next several weeks.

CMS Administrator Mark McClellan has himself said that some dual eligibles may not be automatically enrolled before January 1, when their Medicaid drug benefit ceases to exist. In fact, if CMS is able to auto-enroll 95 percent of all dual eligibles, more than 300,000 would still be left without prescription drug coverage and access to critical medications. At 98 percent enrollment, almost 130,000 would be left without coverage. These are unacceptable numbers.

In light of growing concern that some dual eligible beneficiaries will arrive at their pharmacy counter on January 1 without coverage, CMS has announced a procedure to allow pharmacies to fill the prescription and a contractor to follow up with the beneficiary to facilitate enrollment in a Part D plan.

While I am glad that CMS has taken this step, I am concerned that pharmacies will not be aware of this option and some beneficiaries will still fall through the cracks if they have or if they have coverage at all.

The legislation I am introducing today aims to address this problem.

The Medicare Dual Eligible Identification and Enrollment Facilitation Act would require outreach and education to pharmacies, particularly independent pharmacies, and a hold harmless provision for transaction fees that pharmacies incur when they use this procedure.

It is critical that we do everything we can to ensure that our most vulnerable seniors do not fall through the cracks and the pharmacies across the country are now our last line of defense. Helping them help these beneficiaries and eliminating fees they incur for doing so are simple but critical steps we should take to ensure that not a single dual eligible beneficiary is left without prescription drug coverage.

I urge speedy passage of the Medicare Dual Eligible Identification and Enrollment Facilitation Act.

SA 2695. Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, we have a lot to do in wrapup tonight. As we get those papers ready and bring the year to a close, I want to take a moment to look back at what we have been able to accomplish and then look ahead at what we can expect.

In a letter to John Adams in September 1717, Thomas Jefferson, our third President, wrote: “A morsel of genuine history is a thing so rare as to be always valuable.”

This past year has presented far more than a morsel. We have witnessed to an abundance of extraordinary historic milestones, from the Iraqi elections and Saddam’s cedars revolution, the selection of a new Pope in Rome, and a new Chief Justice to lead the Supreme Court to the outpouring of generosity for the American people, first for the tsunami survivors, and then to their fellow citizens on the gulf coast.

Mr. President, 2005 has been a year of outsized events.

I commend to my colleagues an article that appeared in Sunday’s Washington Post. It was on the continuing success of the Army in reenlisting our GIs. It appeared on A–27 entitled “GIs in Iraq Choosing to Re-up.”

Across Iraq, U.S. soldiers on the front lines are reenlisting by the thousands. Since 2001, the Army has surpassed its retention targets by wider and wider margins each year. Conjouring up vivid scenes of daring and service, the Post reports that:

“On palace rooftops and poimarked squares, GIs are reenlisting in rituals that range from dramatic to harrowing. Soldiers have taken the honor of former residents of Saddam Hussein and in the spider hole near Tikrit where the gray-bearded fugitive was captured in December of 2003. . . . Despite the risks and long months away from home, many soldiers . . . say serving in Iraq gives them a powerful sense of purpose.

So during this holiday season, I ask every American to offer their prayers, to offer their thanks to these brave young men and women who are risking their lives in far away lands to protect us and to provide us security.

I am gratified by the passage of the Defense appropriations bill tonight. This important legislation helps ensure that our armed services will receive the resources and authorities they need to protect America. From delivering advanced technologies to improving personnel protection, this bill delivers for the purpose of research, development, operations, testing or training; or has been driving up consumer prices for everything from toothpaste to blue jeans. It has been clogging our courts. It has been making our health care more expensive, and that drives people to the ranks of the uninsured. It generally wastes our taxpayer dollars, taxpayer dollars that can be spent more productively.

For years, Republicans have fought for reform, have talked reform, but in this Congress we have delivered on litigation reform, bankruptcy reform. We passed class action reform. We passed bankruptcy reform. We passed gun manufacturing liability reform. That is three reforms in terms of liability. Tonight, just a few hours ago, we passed very targeted vaccine manufacturing protections in emergency situations to make America safer, to help rebuild that manufacturing capacity which has been decimated over the past 20 years. This brings fairness to our system. This brings rationality to the system. This brings down the litigation lottery that injects inequities into our system. As a result, appropriate compensation will go to the people who really need it. Those resources which are wasted and which are taken out of the system are directed to those people who do deserve appropriately to be compensated. These are the economic issues.

At the same time we were addressing those economic issues, we also continued to improve our homeland security, focusing on our homeland security, strengthening our national security.

Earlier this year, I had the opportunity to travel in part as a Senator but in larger part probably as a physician to Sri Lanka, where I had the chance to witness the devastation that occurred as a result of that natural tsunami disaster. In the wake of that particular disaster, in this body we passed a generous relief package that helped those people recover and rebuild. This critical help paid immediate dividends in lives saved and—we cannot dismiss this—it helped improve the way others around the world look at us. They recognize America’s good will. They recognize America’s compassion. I say this because I think it particularly is important among Muslims in Southeast Asia.

Likewise, our outpouring of aid and assistance to Pakistan following their earthquake disaster has significantly improved our image in that region. Disaster, as we all know, unfortunately, was a dominant thing throughout 2005, and here at home we were hit through Katrina and Rita by the worst natural disaster in the history of this country. Hundreds of thousands of residents across Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi were flooded from their homes. Katrina devastated 90,000 square miles. That is an area larger than the United Kingdom.

For a few hours ago, on the Senate floor, Senator Stevens was recounting his experiences having spent several days along that gulf coast. About 3 to 4 days after the levees broke in New Orleans, I, too, had the opportunity to be in the airport as patients were being brought in and people were being evacuated out of New Orleans. I had the opportunity to talk to people on stretchers who 3 days before had homes that they had been living in for years. Those homes were totally washed away and destroyed with all of their belongings. Whole towns were washed away.

We traveled also on the first trip, as well, up to Alabama and to Mississippi, along that entire gulf coast. One can see the utter catastrophe of that coast, inland for miles. The Senate immediately set to work providing aid, relief, and support, and that continued tonight.

We passed numerous measures to help people get up off the ground and to get their boots back on the ground and be able to reestablish some element of normalcy and also to support the rebuilding efforts that have begun, all of which we know will continue long into the future.

Tonight, as part of the Defense appropriations bill, we passed $29 billion in hurricanes Katrina and Rita relief. We will continue to work hard to help the citizens of the gulf coast rebuild, renew, and restore their communities in the days ahead, in the weeks and months ahead, and, indeed, in the years ahead. The American people stand firmly behind their neighbors in the gulf area.

We also took action tonight to prepare for another potential disaster that is waiting to happen, and that is the threat of avian flu. We do not know if avian flu is going to become transmissible from one person to another person to another, but what we do know is that it is a novel virus. It is a new virus. It is very similar to that virus of 1918 which we know killed about 50 million people—actually killed almost 100 million people, somewhere between 40 million people worldwide and half a million people in this country.

We know that novel virus we do not have any immunity to. We don’t have any natural immunity to it. We know with that novel virus today, that people who have been infected have a 50-per cent mortality rate. One out of every two people we know were infected with that virus died. We know that virus has jumped to other species. It jumps from birds, that it starts in, to cats, and from cats we know that it has jumped to humans. We know that 5 million—20 million birds died, and 100 million, now 200 million birds died, and it started in southeast Asia and is now moving across to eastern Europe. We do not know if it is going to become a pandemic, but what we do know is we are unprepared, we know it is fast moving.

The Congressional Budget Office study the other day said if that virus does become transmissible, and if it has the same fatality rate and prevalence rate as that virus in 1918, the so-called Spanish flu, the economic impact on this country could be as high as $675 billion.

The good news is we know if we become prepared, we can reduce that markedly, and we can save lives. But we are unprepared today. How do we respond? Again, about $29 billion, and to do that, we put in money, additional resources, and we put in appropriate targeted liability protections to help build our manufacturing base, and we added an element of compensation in the event that somebody was incorrectly put in some way by a vaccine or a countermeasure that was necessary in emergency situations, they could seek and receive compensation.

We are going to be better prepared as a product of this. Whether it is in the next 5 weeks, 5 months, or 5 years, we will be able to look our constituents in the eye and tell them that we did the right thing on December 21, 2005, and that, indeed in this body, it is a tremendous achievement that has not been achieved in years. We passed the Health and Human Services bill a couple of hours ago, the 12th of those bills. These are the bills that ensure that Government is capable of its most basic function: to protect and serve the American people and to do so in a fiscally responsible way.

This year we were also able to overcome partisan obstruction, which was very frustrating, which continued for about 2 1/2, almost 3 years. We were able to overcome the judicial obstruction, this partisan obstruction, and indeed successfully confirm eight Federal judges who had previously been obstructionists, who had previously been filibustered. These judges now are serving America proudly. They allow our courts to be able to function at full capacity and thus provide the justice that has been lacking because of not being able to fill those seats.

Of course, this fall we had the privilege of confirming a new Chief Justice to the Supreme Court: a man all of us have gotten to know, the eminently qualified and highly respected Justice John Roberts.

All of this is just a partial accounting of the work that we were able to do.
this year to strengthen America, to move us forward, to strengthen our economic security, to strengthen our national security. In the new year, we are going to have a lot of challenges. We have a lot to accomplish over the next year. But I am absolutely confident that by keeping our eye on the ball, by staying focused, by working together in a bipartisan way we will be able to continue to cut bureaucratic red tape, to have more efficient Government, to demonstrate more fiscal restraint, to lower Government spending, to support our troops in the field, and to promote policies that will make America safer and more prosperous and healthier and stronger.

I extend my warm wishes to my colleagues for a joyous holiday season. The holidays also are an opportunity to gather with loved ones, to cherish achievements, and to recommit ourselves to the challenges that lay ahead. May we all find strength and renewal in the new year.

The holidays also are an opportunity to think about others—our families, our friends, our neighbors—throughout the year to come.

To our colleagues, to our staff, to the pages who are here tonight, the colleagues who hopefully are at home and in bed now, to the press corps who has been so actively covering us up until about 15 or 20 minutes ago and are probably writing their stories right now. I wish you all happy holidays, and to all a very Merry Fristmas.

CHARITABLE GIVING

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. Con. Res. 75 which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the concurrent resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 75) was agreed to.
The preamble was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. CON. RES. 75

Whereas individual charitable giving rates among Americans have stagnated at 1.5 to 2.2 percent of aggregate individual income for the past 50 years;

Whereas a 1 percent increase (from 2 percent to 3 percent) in charitable giving will generate over $90,000,000,000 to charity;

Whereas a 1 percent increase in charitable giving would provide some of the funds that will allow the Nation to meet our health, education and welfare goals. Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress encourages all Americans to increase their charitable giving, with the goal of increasing the annual amount of charitable giving in the United States by 1 percent.

NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2005—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Senate amendment to the conference report of S. 1281, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Authorization Act of 2005—conference report as agreed to by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The Senate clerk read as follows:

The Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1281), to authorize appropriations for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for science, aeronautics, exploration, exploration capabilities, and the Inspector General, and for other purposes, for fiscal years 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, and 2010, having met, have agreed that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(Conferees report printed in the House Proceedings of the Record of December 18, 2005.)

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, last Friday, when I spoke to my colleagues about the NASA authorization bill, the Senate, in the press of other business at the end of the session, was unable to take up the conference report on S. 1281, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Authorization Act of 2005. Since then, the House of Representatives has adopted the report under suspension of the rules, demonstrating wide support for the compromise bill. I am very pleased that the Senate is now poised to approve the conference report as well.

I want to thank my ranking member on the Science and Space Subcommittee, Senator NELSON of Florida, for all his hard work. Chairman STEVENS and Senator INOUYE were active participants throughout this process, and I certainly appreciate their efforts. Senator LOTT was a key member of the Senate team that has brought us to this point.

My subcommittee staff, Jeff Bingham and Tom Cremins, and Senator NELSON’s staff, Jean Toal Eisen and Chan Lieu, have done too much to bring us to this point, and I want to say thank you to them.

When President Bush announced a new Vision for Space Exploration in January of 2004, he was not simply describing a new mission for NASA; he was describing a pathway to a future for the next generation. The legislation embodied in this conference report represents a statement by the Congress that the Vision for Space Exploration is the right vision for America in the new age of space. At the same time, the bill provides guidance to help NASA do its part in leading the way along this new path to the future by building effectively on lessons learned and by efficiently using resources, especially the talent and expertise of its workforce.

S. 1281, as modified by the conference report, provides authorization for NASA funding at $17.9 billion in fiscal year 2007 and $18.7 billion in fiscal year 2008. The conferees believe these levels of funding will ensure the successful return to flight of the space shuttle and the completion of the international space station, as well as continuing the important research in life sciences, aeronautics and education.

These funding levels also take into account the recently identified shortfall between what the administration had been projecting for shuttle flights and the number of flights needed to complete the international space station, meet our international commitments, and provide an important research capability in space.

I am especially pleased that the conference report provides the designation of the U.S. portion of the space station as national laboratory. This is an important and significant part of the bill. First, it demonstrates that the Congress understands the great value and potential represented by the research that can be done aboard the space station. It underscores the need to ensure that the laboratory is as capable, efficient, and well equipped as we can make it. Second, it provides a framework for important NASA resources to bear in supporting research aboard the space station. This will enable NASA to focus its resources on research needed to support the Vision for Exploration, while continuing to provide space station research opportunities for important exploration, science, aeronautics and education.

In my previous statement, I mentioned briefly a perfect example of the kind of fundamental research that the space station enables, which was described in a recent hearing before the Commerce Committee. Dr. Sam Ting, of MIT, discussed the Alpha Magnetic Spectrometer, scheduled to be attached to the space station. This device takes advantage of the unique space environment to measure—and help understand—the characteristics of matter in the universe. The results of this experiment could revolutionize our knowledge of the universe, and potentially lead, for example, to the development of new, and virtually unlimited, energy sources.

As we move forward with the Vision for Space Exploration, we will need new vehicles and launch capabilities. NASA has made the decision to base those new vehicles on much of the existing capabilities and designs of the space shuttle program. This legislation ratifies that decision and provides the policy foundation to ensure its successful implementation. The evolution of our launch vehicles to a new generation requires that we be especially careful not to undermine our existing capabilities for human space flight. The legislation ensures a smooth transition between the shuttle and the new crew exploration vehicles by providing adequate resources to continue shuttle flights and accelerate CEV development so as to minimize any gap between the two systems. In addition, the report authorizes NASA to make the maximum possible utilization of the personnel, assets, and capabilities of the space shuttle program in developing the next generation of crew and cargo vehicles. The bill will provide the flexibility to carry out a variety of missions. It will specifically be designed to provide access to the space station, and thus fulfill the role of a crew rescue vehicle, CRV, if needed, to ensure the safety of our crews aboard the international space station.

In order to further facilitate the evolution of current human space flight systems into those needed for the Vision for Exploration, the bill has provided for the merging of human space flight activities into a single account. This is intended to provide the closest possible interaction between these activities, in those areas where they can be mutually supportive. At the same time, the legislation contains language to ensure that both the exploration activities and the human space flight, or space operations activities, retain sufficient resources to fulfill their core objectives.

The important and historical NASA research activity is aeronautical research, a fundamental part of NASA’s activities since its inception. All of us recognize that the continued health of the Nation’s aerospace industry in a very competitive global marketplace makes it essential that we have solid aeronautical research capabilities. This legislation directs the development of a national policy to guide the Nation’s aeronautical research—including that conducted by NASA. This bill will enable informed decisions about the future directions for aeronautics research and the necessary resources to support them.
One of the more exciting new developments in space exploration is the expanded role of commercial interest in supporting and expanding space exploration. This legislation encourages those developments. It provides expanded authority to the international partners to promote commercial development and it encourages the use of commercial services and capabilities in servicing the space station, to cite just two examples. This is clearly an important new development in space exploration, which the bill fully endorses.

Finally, let me say something about the broad range of science activities for which NASA has always been known. This conference agreement expresses very clearly the need for maintaining a balanced science portfolio throughout all NASA programs and provides the funding authority necessary to ensure the space sciences, earth sciences, and education activities remain vigorous parts of NASA's mission.

Mr. President, this legislation provides a comprehensive, forward-looking and responsible approach to the transition of our Nation's space exploration programs into a new era of discovery. I believe, in close cooperation with the conferees in the House, we have crafted a congressional consensus that will help ensure this Nation's leadership in space exploration and provide benefits beyond measure and beyond imagination to the world.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I urge passage by unanimous consent of the 2005 NASA Authorization Act and managers' package that has been agreed to by conferees from the House and Senate.

I express my thanks for the work that my fellow conferees, the committees, subcommittees, and our staffs have done on this bill. I am confident that it will help Administrator Griffin to lead NASA to accomplish its many missions.

America is a nation of explorers. NASA explores the frontiers of aviation by atmospheric flight; the frontiers of space by going where others have never been; and the frontiers of science by conducting scientific endeavors that broaden our understanding of life, our home planet, and the heavens. NASA has not been authorized by Congress for some time. In fact, the last time NASA was authorized was 1993 and in fiscal 2000.

This is the first authorization of NASA in 6 years. NASA must be held accountable to the Congress through the oversight of the agency. With an authorization bill passed only once every 5 to 7 years, the role has defaulted to the Appropriations Committee, which has many other items on its plate. Now with this NASA authorization legislation, hopefully there will be a healthier and more meaningful communication between the agency and the Congress.

The NASA Authorization Act of 2005 will help the Congress to do a better job of performing oversight of NASA. The act is a 3-year bill, authorizing NASA from 2006 through 2008.

Because appropriators have already funded NASA for fiscal year 2006 the authorizing conferences receded to the fiscal year 2007/8 authorization. The bill authorizes $17.952 billion for fiscal year 2007 and $18.686 billion for fiscal year 2008, and provides more funding than the President's budget projections.

Like many of our colleagues, Senator HUTCHISON and I believe that recent NASA budget requests have been below the levels required for the agency to perform its varied missions effectively. That was made apparent recently when Administrator Griffin testified at a committee hearing before the U.S. House of Representatives, that the space shuttle program will have a $3 billion plus shortfall over the next 5 years. Dr. Griffin's concerns have been echoed by a letter recently provided by Senator NELSON to the White House calling for the space shuttle program to be fully funded.

This legislation authorizes NASA to return humans to the Moon, to explore it, and to maintain a human presence there. In line with the President's vision, it also requires using what we learn and develop on the Moon as a stepping-stone to future exploration of Mars.

To carry these missions, this act requires NASA to develop an implementation plan for the transition from shuttle to crew exploration vehicle, CEV. The plan will help NASA to make a smooth transition from retirement of the space shuttle orbiters to the replacement spacecraft systems. The implementation plan will help make sure that we can keep the skills and the focus that are needed to assure that each space shuttle flight is safe through retirement of the orbiters, and to retain those personnel needed for the CEV and heavy lift cargo spacecraft.

The bill should be helpful for reducing if not eliminating a gap in America's ability to put humans in Earth orbit. The act also directs NASA to plan for and consider a Hubble servicing mission after the second space shuttle return to flight mission has been completed.

This NASA authorization bill calls for utilization of the international space station for basic science as well as exploration science. It is important that we reap the benefits of our multi-billion dollar investment in the space station. This act ensures that NASA will maintain a focus on the importance of basic science.

This legislation directs the Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel to monitor and measure NASA's improvements to their safety culture, including employee focus for that, and to provide for safety improvements about safety. The bill encourages NASA to more effectively utilize lessons learned and best practices, and to implement cost controls that are more effective for making better use of our taxpayers' money.

This authorization bill addresses NASA aeronautics and America's preeminence in aviation, calling for the President of the United States to pursue important national priorities. The Europeans have stated their intent to dominate the airplane market by 2020. It is not in our national interest to let that occur.

The bill includes a limitation on repurposing funds. For explorations and operations, includes the space shuttle and international space station, to exploration systems, and vice versa. This limitation will ensure that no more than 10 percent of shuttle and station funds can be transferred into the exploration systems program to be used for a shortfall in an exploration-related development program. However, it will not limit the exploration systems and space shuttle programs from utilizing the same personnel, equipment, and launch vehicles to safely operate the shuttle while developing the shuttle-derived crew exploration vehicle.

This act gives America the opportunity for implementing the vision for space exploration: our commitment to U.S. civil aviation and NASA aeronautics research; conducting important science activities at NASA; and assuring that America has continuous human access to space. Enacting this legislation will continue to strengthen our economy and inspire the next generation of scientists, engineers, and explorers.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I wish to thank Senators HUTCHISON, NELSON, and STEVENS, for their leadership in bringing together the different bills from the Senate and the House. The final product is the result of hard work and compromise. It provides the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, as well as NASA aeronautics, an explicit congressional direction on how to proceed with human space exploration, and it emphasizes NASA's invaluable work in science and education.

Human space exploration is a key component of this bill. I am confident that space discovery will continue to excite young minds and, hopefully, inspire them to pursue an education in math and science. The skills and talents they develop will not only help them reach the stars, they will propel them to a greater innovation and define our country's future.

At the same time, we must not overlook safety. I applaud Senator NELSON and the other conferees for keeping safety a top priority in this legislation. In addition, I want to express my appreciation for the conferees' willingness to accommodate my efforts to promote the design and development of new science facilities, such as telescopes through the National Science Foundation, as well as NASA.

NASA plays a strong role in astronomy from the Hubble Telescope to the Keck Outrigger Project in Hawaii. I am... pleased to see that the bill affirms NASA’s commitment to astronomy by ensuring that the Hubble will be serviced. It is my hope that Section 616 will also help NASA work with institutions, such as the Mauna Kea Astronomy Education Center, to make the work of world-class science accessible to their neighbors and children.

Finally, I would like to thank Jeff Bingaman, Tom Cremins, Jean Toal Eisen and Chan Lieu of the Commerce Committee staff, and Mike Dodson, a fellow Bill Nelson Office, for their hard work on this important measure. I understand Mr. Dodson will be leaving at the end of the year. We will miss his counsel and expertise.

I urge the swift adoption of the conference report.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, my fellow Senators, I am pleased to join Senators HUTCHISON, STEVENS, INOUYE, and LOTT today in presenting the 2005 NASA Authorization Act and managers Bill Ndonek oversees that has been agreed to by conference from the House and Senate.

I express my thanks for the work that my fellow conference, the committees, subcommittees, and our staffs have done. I am confident that it will help Administrator Griffin to lead NASA to accomplish its many missions.

America is a nation of explorers. NASA explores the frontiers of aviation to the edge of space, and the frontiers of space by going where others have never been; and the frontiers of science by conducting scientific endeavors that broaden our understanding of life, our home planet, and the heavens. NASA has not been authorized by Congress for some time. In fact, the last two times NASA was authorized was 1993 and 2000.

Congress needs to authorize NASA more often. When NASA is authorized infrequently, then oversight may become lax. The lack of an authorization bill leaves the authorizing function to the Appropriators—and they don’t have time and it’s not their job. In fact, the lack of oversight provided by authorizers over the last several years may have contributed to the loss of the Space Shuttle Columbia.

Because appropriators have already funded NASA for fiscal year 2006 the authorizing conference will reconcile the appropriations bill for that fiscal year. The bill authorizes $177.932 billion for fiscal year 2007 and $188.686 billion for fiscal year 2008, and provides more funding than the President’s budget projection.

Like many of our colleagues, Senator HUTCHISON and I believe that recent NASA budget requests have been below the levels required for the agency to perform its various missions effectively. That was made apparent recently when Administrator Griffin testified at a committee hearing before the House of Representatives, that the Space Shuttle program will have a $3 billion plus shortfall over the next 5 years. Mr. Griffin’s concerns have been echoed by a letter recently provided by several Members of the House to the White House calling for the space shuttle program to be fully funded.

This legislation authorizes NASA to return to the Moon, to explore it, and to maintain a human presence on the Moon. Consistent with the President’s vision, it also requires using what we learn and develop on the Moon as a stepping-stone to future exploration of Mars.

To carry out these missions, this act requires NASA to develop an implementation plan for the transition from shuttle to crew exploration vehicle, CEV. The plan will help NASA to make an annual assessment of the space shuttle program to the replacement spacecraft systems. The implementation plan will help make sure that we can keep the skills and the focus that are needed to assure that the CEV is safe through retirement of the orbiters, and to retain those personnel needed for the CEV and heavy lift cargo spacecraft.

The bill should be helpful for reducing if not eliminating a gap in America’s ability to put humans in Earth orbit. The act also directs NASA to plan for and consider a Hubble servicing mission after the second space shuttle return to flight mission has been completed.

This NASA authorization bill calls for utilization of the international space station for basic science as well as exploration science. It is important that we reap the benefits of our multi-billion dollar investment in the space station. This act ensures that NASA will maintain a focus on the importance of basic science.

This legislation directs the Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel to monitor and measure NASA’s improvements to their safety culture, including employees’ fear of reprisals for voicing concerns about safety. The bill encourages NASA to more effectively utilize lessons learned and best practices, and to implement cost controls that are more active for making better use of our taxpayers’ money.

This authorization bill addresses NASA aeronautics and America’s preeminence in aviation, calling for the President of the United States to pursue a national policy for aeronautics. The Europeans have stated their intent to dominate the airplane market by 2020. It is not in our national interest to let that occur.

This act gives America the opportunity for implementing the Vision for Space Exploration; renewing our commitment to U.S. civil aviation and NASA aeronautics research; conducting important science activities at NASA; and assuring that America has continuous human access to space.

By passing this legislation, we will continue to strengthen our economy and inspire the next generation of scientists, engineers, and explorers.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the conference report be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this is the NASA authorization bill.

I congratulate Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON for this particular piece of legislation, because as we look to the future, science and the technology, and the importance and significance of this legislation stands out.

A few minutes ago, I was talking about SMART grants—these math, education, science, and engineering grants which are being given to juniors and seniors in college. This marries with that beautifully in terms of making sure that we have a strong technology base in terms of jobs and competitiveness.

I congratulate our distinguished colleague from Texas, Senator HUTCHISON, for her leadership on this bill.

WHEREAS, according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis at the Department of Commerce, personal income has fallen more than 25 percent in Louisiana in the third quarter of 2005;

WHEREAS, in the time since Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma, the Small Business Administration has only approved 20 percent of disaster loan applications for homeowners in the Gulf Coast and has a backlog of more than 176,000 applications for this assistance as of December 21, 2005;

WHEREAS, of the 20,664 businesses in the Gulf Coast area that were affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma, 70 percent of small businesses had previously subject to forbearance; and

WHEREAS, foreclosures on homes and businesses in the Gulf Coast will have a detrimental impact on the economy of the area, will deprive property owners of their equity at a time when they can least afford it, and will have a negative impact on lenders who will be holding properties that may not be readily marketable on the open market: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) Congress should act early in the second session of the 109th Congress to consider legislation to provide relief to homeowners in the Gulf Coast; and

(2) commercial banks, mortgage banks, credit unions, and other mortgage lenders should extend mortgage payment forbearance to March 31, 2006, in order to allow Congress the time to consider such legislation.

S. 1315

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “International Cooperation to Meet the Millennium Development Goals Act of 2005”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:
(1) At the United Nations Millennium Summit in 2000, the United States joined more than 180 other countries in committing to work toward goals to improve life for the world by 2015.

(2) Such goals include reducing the proportion of people living on less than $1 per day by ¼, reducing child mortality by ¼, and ensuring primary schooling for all children, while also sustaining the environment upon which human life depends.

(3) At the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development, the United States representative reiterated the support of the United States for the Millennium Development Goals, along with other international participants, for a stronger focus on measurable outcomes derived from a global partnership between developed and developing countries.

(4) On March 22, 2002, President Bush stated, “We fight against poverty because hope is an answer to terror. We fight against poverty because opportunity is a fundamental right to human dignity. We fight against poverty because faith requires it and conscience demands it. We fight against poverty with conviction that major progress is within our reach.”

(5) The 2002 National Security Strategy of the United States notes that “a world where some live in comfort and plenty, while half of the human race lives on less than $2 per day, is neither just nor stable. Including all of the world’s poor in an expanding circle of development is prerequisite to securing human security.”

(6) The National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States concluded that the Government of the United States must offer an example of moral leadership in the world to all of its citizens and children a vision of the future that emphasizes individual educational and economic opportunity as essential to the efforts of the United States to defeat global terrorism.

(8) The summit of the Group of Eight [scheduled for] held July 6 through July 8, 2005, in Gleneagles, Scotland, will bring together the countries that can make the greatest contribution to alleviating extreme poverty in Africa, the region of the world where extreme poverty is most prevalent.

(9) On June 11, 2005, the United States helped secure the agreement of the Group of Eight Finance Ministers to cancel 100 percent of the debt obligations owed to the World Bank, African Development Bank, and International Monetary Fund by countries that are eligible for debt relief under the Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, the initiative established in 1996 by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to finance a program of reducing the development burdens of the world’s poorest countries, or under the Enhanced HIPC Initiative, as defined in section 1625 of the International Financial Cooperation Act of 1999 (22 U.S.C. 7202–8), which are poor countries that are on the path to reform.

(10) The report prepared by the Commission for Africa and issued by Prime Minister Tony Blair on March 11, 2005, entitled “Our Common Interest,” called for coherence and coordination of an overarching package of actions to be carried out by the countries of Africa and the international community to address the complex interrelationships of the continent, many of which have already been addressed individually in previous summits and under the Africa Action Plan enacted by the Group of Eight.

(11) The United States has recognized the need for strengthened economic and trade opportunities, as well as increased financial and technical assistance to Africa and other countries with their extreme poverty, through significant initiatives in recent years, including—

(A) the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act (19 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.) that has opened United States markets to thousands of products from Africa;

(B) the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief developed under section 101 of the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria Act of 2003 (22 U.S.C. 7611), the major focus of which has been on Africa;

(C) the Millennium Challenge Corporation established under section 604 of the Millennium Challenge Act (22 U.S.C. 7700) that is in the process of committing new and significant levels of assistance to countries, including countries in Africa, that are poor but show great promise for boosting economic growth and bettering the lives of their people;

(D) the United States has canceled the cancellation by the United States of 100 percent of the bilateral debt owed to the United States by countries eligible for debt relief under the Enhanced HIPC Initiative.

(12) The report prepared by the Commission for Africa entitled “Our Common Interest” includes the following findings:

(A) The people of Africa must demonstrate the leadership necessary to address the governance challenges they face, setting priorities that ensure the development of effective civil and police services, independent judiciary, and an independent media, all of which reinforce a stable and predictable economic environment attractive to investment.

(B) Many leaders in Africa have pursued personal self-interest rather than national goals, a tendency that has been in some instances exacerbated and abetted by the manipulation of foreign governments, and by the people increasing fourfold since 1991.

(13) The report prepared by the Commission for Africa entitled “Our Common Interest” includes the following recommendations:

(A) At this vital moment when globalization and growth, technology and trade, and mutual security concerns allow, the United States demands a substantial and coherent package of actions should immediately be taken by the international community, led by the most industrialized countries, in partnership with the countries of Africa, to address the poverty and underdevelopment of the African continent.

(B) The people of Africa must take responsibility and show courageous leadership in addressing problems and taking ownership of solutions as the means for ensuring sustainable results. For example, while in 1985 countries of sub-Saharan Africa ruled by dictators and government, protect the rights of women, and work to increase the number of women in leadership positions so as to capitalize on the ability of women to deliver scarce resources effectively and fairly.

(i) The international community must work together to dismantle trade barriers, including the immediate elimination of trade-distorting commodity support.

(j) International donors should strengthen multilateral institutions in Africa to respond appropriately to local and regional crises as well as to promote economic development and ensure the people of Africa are granted a stronger voice in international forums.

(K) The international community must join in providing creative incentives for commercial research and development products that improve water, sanitation, health, and the environment in ways that would dramatically reduce suffering and increase productive life-spans in Africa.

TRAFFICKING VICTIMS PROTECTION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2005

A bill (H.R. 972) to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 2006 and 2007 for the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I support reauthorization of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000. This legislation, which was dear to the heart of my late friend Senator Paul Wellstone. I supported him then and when it was reauthorized in 2003, and I continue to support this effort. It is part of his extraordinary legacy. The people of Minnesota, the Senate, the Nation and the world suffered a great loss when we lost Paul Wellstone.

The United States has long played a leading role in the international community in combating these heinous crimes, and furthered its efforts by enacting the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 and reauthorizing the law in 2003. This reauthorization confirmed our commitment to effectively and successfully combating this horrific problem by combining tough law enforcement strategies with important safeguards and services for victims.

Information about severe cases of human trafficking will continue to be provided in the annual State Department Country Report for each foreign country, in a continued effort to raise awareness about this issue. In addition, the Inter-Agency Task Force will continue to monitor trafficking by providing annual and interim reports on countries whose governments do not comply with the minimum standards. Efforts to establish initiatives to enhance economic opportunities for potential trafficking victims, including training and education programs, will also continue.

I am especially pleased that this reauthorization package has been improved significantly. For the first time, the bill focuses not only on the important role of prosecution and prosecution of human trafficking, but also on preventing the human trafficking that occurs within our own borders. Children here in the United States are at tremendous risk, especially those who are homeless or runaways, and they are particularly susceptible to being domestically trafficked for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. I will not rest until this alarming trend is stopped.

Over the last 30 years, I have worked with my colleagues to write and enact legislation aimed at protecting children and assisting victims. In the last Congress, Senator HATCH and I joined forces to introduce the PROTECT Act, which provides prosecutors and law enforcement with tools necessary to combat child pornography and human trafficking. The final legislation signed into law included a number of provisions I had also either authored or strongly supported. The Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2002, also known as the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 and reauthorizing the National AMBER Alert Network Act; the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act, which provided prosecutors and law enforcement with tools necessary to combat child pornography and human trafficking.

trafficking. Although our work is far from finished, the reauthorization of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act is another important step in the right direction.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, when one of our Nation's heroes lost the life of Rosa Parks, we were reminded that the walk to justice is a long one. Her life reminded us that justice starts with individuals standing up for what is right; but also that the struggle does not quickly end until we faithfully take this task to heart.

While we have made a good start in our efforts to address the global crime of human trafficking, the millions of victims who still suffer in slavery today are urgently looking to see if we will finish as well as we have started.

I am pleased to say that the passage of the Trafficking Victims’ Protection Reauthorization Act is one more step in that direction.

Each year it is estimated that at least 300,000 human beings are trafficked across national borders. They are bought and sold in the sex industry as prostitutes, or forced into domestic servitude. Recent estimates on the number of victims trafficked into the United States range from 18,000 to 40,000 per year. Most of these victims are women and young children who languish in brothels, being raped and abused by the traffickers and their clients. An estimated 27 million human beings suffer from some form of slavery and forced labor.

The late Senator Paul Wellstone and his wife Sheila were passionately devoted to the issue of trafficking and to assisting countless victims. I will always remember their courageous fight in addressing modern-day slavery.

Senator Wellstone and I teamed up in the Senate and were able to see the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 signed into law. Some called us strange, but we felt the political and religious spectrum that supported our efforts were a clear reminder that this is not a partisan issue.

While Paul Wellstone is no longer here to carry the torch, I am pleased that other colleagues from across party lines have worked to make a difference by uniting under the common principle of freedom.

“The Victims of Trafficking Protection Act of 2000,” Public Law 106-386, established a monitoring system and sanctions for countries that fail to take minimal efforts to combat trafficking. “The PROTECT Act,” Public Law 10821, made it a crime for any person traveling abroad or entering into the United States to do so for sex tourism involving children. The Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2003, Public Law 108-193, established a Senior Policy Operating Group within the executive branch to coordinate between interagency departments. These measures have brought about both deep understanding and awareness and much needed laws to protect and combat against trafficking.

I congratulate Congressman Chris Smith and my colleagues in the House for their tireless devotion to this issue and the passage of the 2005 reauthorization legislation.

The bill reauthorizes ongoing programs of the Department of State, U.S. Agency for International Development, Department of Justice, Department of Health and Human Services, and Department of Labor to combat trafficking in persons for fiscal years 2006 and 2007. Additionally, it authorizes new funds to the FBI for domestic and international investigations of acts of severe forms of trafficking in persons, as well as grants to State and local law enforcement for the investigation and prosecution of acts of severe forms of trafficking in persons involving domestic victims of trafficking.

For the first time, we have authorized the State Department to reduce the demand for commercial sex in the United States and prevent trafficking of U.S. citizens through the creation of grant programs for States and local law enforcement.

As a result of last year’s tsunami, the legislation incorporates child protection and trafficking prevention activities into USAID, State, and DOD post-conflict and post-natural disaster relief programs. In addition, given recent sex scandals within peacekeeping missions, this bill aims to strengthen efforts to combat sexual exploitation and trafficking in persons by peacekeepers.

Finally, the bill authorizes studies on the linkage between trafficking and terrorism and trafficking and HIV/AIDS, as well as requires a worldwide report on steps taken to prevent and eliminate the abduction and enslavement of children for use as soldiers.

I would also like to applaud the work of theamerican Women’s Office of the State Department. Through their sustained diplomatic efforts, countries around the world are signing into law provisions that prevent and punish human trafficking. Even in the United States, we have places like the Kansas Legislature working on legislation to combat human trafficking. It is a true testament to the strides that we have made in ending modern-day slavery and I hope other states and nations around the world will also consider taking action against this type of organized crime.

I am driven by the conviction that every individual counts. This principle comprises the heart of the democratic form of government. It is based on a belief in the universal nature of human rights and a commitment to the dignity of every human life. Addressing modern-day slavery is driven by that very conviction.

Rosa Parks’ remarkable story tells us that the walk to freedom has to begin somewhere—but also that such a walk is a long one. And for the journey we take encouragement from the assurances of a Baptist pastor who went to jail with Rosa Parks. “The moral arc of the universe is long,” said Dr. King, “but it bends toward justice.”

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, in March of this year, I—along with Senator Clinton and other colleagues—introduced S. 559, the Protection of Vulnerable Populations During Humanitarian Emergencies Act of 2005, a bill to make vulnerable people, especially women and children, a priority of our foreign assistance programs. The Committee on Foreign Relations approved the bill in S. 2594. Unfortunately, S. 600 was pulled from floor consideration in April, and remains stalled.

In the last few days, I have attempted to add the provisions of S. 559 as an amendment to H.R. 972, the Trafficking Victims Protection Act, which was approved by the other body just last week. I support the trafficking bill, which addresses a serious problem in parts of the world, including this country. I have been told, however, by my friends on the other side of the aisle that my amendment is not acceptable at this time. Several reasons have been given, foremost among them being that the bill is not a part of the trafficking bill, because the other body has essentially closed up shop for the year.

But as my colleagues know we have another problem—victims of sexual exploitation and abuse who are not trafficked—such as those who are forced to seek sanctuary in refugee or internally displaced camps. The trafficking bill deals with people who are trafficked from those camps. But it does not address the need to protect those left behind.

Last May, I visited a refugee camp in Chad where nearly 30,000 refugees from Darfur had settled. I have seen and heard the problems they are facing firsthand.

Over the last 2 years, civilians have been targeted by Khartoum in one of the most horrific genocides the world has ever seen. Villages have been bombed, government-sponsored militia have destroyed crops and have fouled the water supply. They have burned homes, leaving mothers no choice but to flee for their lives and their children’s lives.

Civilians forced to flee during war find their way to camps, but instead of relative safety, what do they find? They find more suffering. The camps become virtual prisons. Women and girls are beaten and raped if they venture outside the camps for firewood.

Sudan is not the only part of the world where such travesties are occurring. A report by a United Nations investigative team released earlier this year states that a number of U.N. peacekeepers—U.N. peacekeepers, mind you—employed to protect civilians from ethnic violence in the Democratic Republic of Congo were sexually exploiting girls as young as 13 years old. The peacekeepers were asking... these children for sex in exchange for small sums of money or food. And the report found that the abuse continued even while UN investigators were on the ground.

Reading that report and others reinforced what we have struggled by any longer. More must be done, and S. 559 provides an important framework to do so.

I firmly believe that the objective of my legislation is entirely consistent with the objectives of the trafficking bill—to protect vulnerable people, whether they are trafficked from one country to another, or left behind in a refugee camp.

It enhances the U.S. Government’s ability to see that women and children are protected before, during, and after a complex humanitarian emergency. It directs the Secretary of State to designate a special coordinator for protection issues who will be charged with making sure our embassies are made aware of the warning signs that an emergency which may put the lives and safety of women and children at risk is imminent.

It directs the coordinator to compile a watch list of such countries and regions that the Agency for International Development can plan to meet potential need for protection programs. It prohibits U.S. funding for relief agencies that do not sign a code of conduct that outlaws improper exploitative relationships between aid workers and recipients.

It calls upon the United States Executive Director of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development to try to make sure World Bank demobilization, disarmament, and reintegration programs extend the same benefits provided to ex-combatants to the women and children who were associated with them.

As it now stands, women and children who were used as cooks and porters and so-called “wives,” a euphemism for women who were kidnapped to serve as sexual slaves, may well not be given benefits through these programs—nothing with which to rebuild their lives and to put them not there by choice. Yet the very people who forced them into such conditions receive assistance without conditions.

Finally, it amends the Foreign Assistance Act to authorize programs and activities specifically aimed at making vulnerable people—especially women and children—who are affected by humanitarian emergencies safer from further exploitation and abuse.

In recent days, some supporters of the trafficking bill have suggested my bill is about abortion. My response is this: my bill has nothing to do with abortion, but I am willing to make any changes that are necessary to make clear that abortion-related restrictions in foreign aid laws are not affected.

I am grateful for the cooperation of those who have worked with me to get these changes that are necessary to make clear that abortion-related restrictions in foreign aid laws are not affected. I am willing to make any changes that are necessary to make clear that abortion-related restrictions in foreign aid laws are not affected.

In the meantime, I am pleased that today the Senate will approve the Trafficking in Persons legislation and it will proceed to the President. It is a very important bill and I commend the sponsors in both chambers for their good work.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act approved by the House on Thursday, December 15. This legislation increases the Government’s ability to combat human trafficking and provides greater protective measures for victims of this deplorable crime. I thank my colleagues in the House for working with us to give the Department of Justice the tools that it needs, and for their leadership in responding to these challenges.

The Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act includes language from the End Demand for Sex Trafficking Act of 2005, a bill that I introduced earlier this year. That bill is important because it expresses Congress’ commitment to reduce U.S. domestic demand for sex trafficking—which disproportionately victimizes women and children—by increasing enforcement and it incorporates more stringent provisions to penalize human traffickers, and it enhances protective measures for the victims of trafficking crimes.

This is accomplished by establishing Federal grants which could be used to focus on prosecution efforts. In addition, it strengthens and clarifies Federal criminal law, making it easier to prosecute those who transport persons who are then used for prostitution across international borders. And it includes an important oversight element: the Attorney General will be required to release an annual report on best practices for reducing the demand for unlawful commercial sex.

The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution states: “Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude . . . shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.” This provision is unique to our Constitution. Many constitutional amendments protect individual rights against actions by Federal, State, and local governments. But the Thirteenth Amendment is unique because it provides that slavery and involuntary servitude cannot exist—neither in public nor private.

Yet, even to this day, men, women, and children are trafficked into the United States and coerced into lives ravaged by forced labor and sexual slavery.

I join the administration in commending the House International Relations and Judiciary Committees who joined me in addressing this important issue. Indeed, this bill lays out the terrible facts: as many as 800,000 human beings are literally bought and sold worldwide into some form of slavery or involuntary servitude—approximately 80 percent are women and girls and up to 50 percent are children. Roughly 100,000 of those individuals are brought into the United States each year, coerced into lives of forced labor or sexual servitude which, of course, is slavery.

The fact is the current administration has responded to the call by dramatically increasing its efforts to providing substantially more resources to combat human trafficking. This has been done principally under the auspices of the civil rights division at the Justice Department. The Department has initiated more than three times the number of trafficking investigations, filed almost four times as many of these cases, and doubled the number of defendants convicted for these heinous crimes than in the prior 4-year period.

Mr. President, I am pleased this important piece of legislation has passed, and look forward to working with my colleagues on this very important issue in the future.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to support passage of the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005.

This law will help continue the progress in fighting the insidious global practice of trafficking in human beings. It is estimated that nearly a million people are trafficked across international borders each year and pressed into labor or servitude by the use of force, fraud, or coercion. Human trafficking represents the commerce in human misery.

Today we reauthorize a bill that was passed and signed into law in October 2000. In doing so, we honor one of the great champions of that bill—the late Senator Paul Wellstone. We honor Paul Wellstone’s commitment to combating human trafficking and other human rights abuses stands as one of his most enduring legacies. The Senate and the Nation miss his courage, passion, and leadership on this issue and so many others.

The passage of today’s bill is also a tribute to the tireless advocacy of one of my constituents, Oprah Winfrey. She has helped put a spotlight on the tragedy of human trafficking, and she has been a powerful and eloquent voice for those who are silenced by oppression.

Human trafficking is most prevalent in foreign lands, but the U.S. Government has estimated that over 10,000 people are trafficked into the United States every year. In my own State of Illinois, for example, a Russian trafficker was prosecuted in 2008 for forcing women and children to work in Chicago-area strip clubs. The State of Illinois has risen to the challenge. This past summer, Illinois Governor...
Rod Blagojevich signed a law that provides more legal tools for State prosecutors and more protections for trafficking victims. The Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 will help combat human trafficking throughout the Nation and around the globe. It extends the provisions given to Federal law enforcement in 2000 to prosecute traffickers, protect victims, and prevent future abuses. And it will allow our government to continue holding other nations accountable for their efforts to combat human trafficking abroad. I have discussed this issue with Ambassador John Miller, a former member of Congress who is now the director of the State Department’s Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons. I am pleased that the number of countries to which the State Department has given a failing grade—so-called “Tier 3” countries—has dropped from 27 in 2001 to 14 in 2005.

Earlier this month, we commemorated the International Day for the Abolition of Slavery. On this occasion, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said:

The world is now wrestling with a new form of slavery—trafficking in human beings, in which many vulnerable people are virtually abandoned by legal and social systems into a sordid realm of exploitation and abuse. People who perpetrate, condone or facilitate slavery or slavery-like practices must be held accountable by national and, if necessary, international means. The international community must also do more to combat the tools of exploitation, corruption, and the despair that drive individuals to engage in these acts, and the concealment of victims. People who perpetrate slavery must be held accountable. Those who finance and facilitate trafficking must be made to feel the weight of international law. The United Nations and its member states must lead the way.

By passing the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005, we are heeding the advice of Kofi Annan and carrying the torch of Paul Cellucci and Representative Sue Myrick, my colleagues on the Helsinki Commission, for their continued commitment to this act since its initial passage. I am proud to see that this reauthorization enhances the 3 P’s strategy—prevention of trafficking, prosecution of those who engage in these acts, and protection of the vulnerable individuals who have been trafficked—that we developed in the Clinton administration. It gives the Justice Department the authority to pursue extraterritorial prosecutions of Federal employees or those accompanying them if they engage in trafficking activities. It encourages the prevention of trafficking by requiring organizations or contractors engaged in U.S.-supported peacekeeping efforts to have anti-trafficking policies in place. It will protect those who have been trafficked overseas by increasing funding for programs like residential treatment facilities.

But there is still so much work to be done. Although reliable statistics are difficult to find, we know that 800,000 individuals—the vast majority of whom are women and children—are trafficked from one country to another every year. The United States is one of them. The FBI estimates that trafficking generates $9.5 billion annually for organized crime syndicates around the world.

I am deeply concerned about the growing domestic commercial sex trade, and I believe that we need to increase funding and target efforts to end all forms of exploitation. Any expansion of our focus must not dilute our commitment to eradicating human trafficking in all its forms in the United States. I believe that, as part of the progress we have made in increasing prosecutions and working with law enforcement agencies, we must ensure that our Government has all the resources it needs to make inroads against these awful acts on our own soil.

In the fight against trafficking in persons, patience simply is not an option. I ask my colleagues to end this barbaric practice in both the United States and around the world, because this is not about politics, but about what we all share: universal freedom and universal human rights. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the bill be printed in the Record.

They are instrumental in allowing us to carry out our work each day. It is very rare that we actually say thank you. I want to take this opportunity to say thank you for volunteering to be with us over what has been a pretty long last couple of days. So I thank Rafi Bortnick, Katie Rember, and Dan Timley.

I wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a happy and healthy holiday season. I hope that everyone does get some rest and spends some time with family and friends and neighbors and others in their communities and returns back here in January ready to roll up your sleeves and continue right where we left off.
