

600 men at the age of 23. Our friend and colleague was truly a remarkable man.

After serving our country so valiantly during the war, Lloyd returned to his native Rio Grand Valley in Texas where he became a county judge and then ran successfully for the House, where he served for three terms. In 1955, he decided to leave public service temporarily and began an impressive career in business and finance in Houston, which ended in 1970 when he decided to run for the Senate.

Mr. President, Lloyd Bentsen was one of the modern giants of the Senate. Of course, I did not always agree with him, or him me. However, I respected him. He was respected on both sides of the aisle, and by all who came to know him.

Many words come to my mind when I think of Senator Bentsen. He was bright. He was fair. He was serious. He was dedicated. He was dignified. The State of Texas and all America have lost a great son.

My heart goes out to Lloyd's wife, Beryl, and to their children, grandchildren and other family members. May they find peace and joy in their memories and in knowing of the great contribution Lloyd gave to his country.

Mr. AKAKA. I join my colleagues in tribute to my dear friend and tremendous public servant, Congressman, Senator, and Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, on his recent passing. His tenure in Federal service is notable and well documented three terms in the House of Representatives and four terms in the Senate representing the people of Texas and 2 years as Secretary of the Treasury under former President Bill Clinton.

I remember Lloyd as a giant in the Senate leadership when I first came to this body in 1990. He wielded the gavel at the Finance Committee and had already ascended to national recognition as a formidable Vice Presidential nominee in 1988. He was a Senator who worked hard every day to benefit the people of Texas and of this country.

As a distinguished World War II veteran, Lloyd was always supportive of our veterans and fulfilling their urgent needs. He fought to preserve and protect women's rights, including the Equal Rights Amendment. He understood the needs of America's entrepreneurs and business owners and carried his acumen in economic policy from the Senate into the Clinton administration.

Millie and I remember Lloyd and his wife B.A., from our years in the Senate together, with fondness. We join others in extending to his family our warmest wishes in this difficult time. We say farewell to a true statesman. This Nation is richer for his life and poorer for his loss.
