stymied in being able to bring forward a bill on court security. I hope it is just a small minority of Senators on the other side holding up this bill. We have had violence in courtrooms all over America. In Reno, NV, a disgruntled man did not like what a judge was doing in a divorce proceeding. He drove to a garage with his high-powered deer-hunting rifle and fired, at almost 200 yards, through the window of the judge’s chambers. The shot did not kill him but badly wounded him.

We know what happened in Atlanta, GA, who was in cahoots, basically, with one of the violent prisoners. As a result of that, people were killed.

In Illinois, a disgruntled litigant waited in the judge’s home, and when the father and one of the children came home, he killed them both.

This legislation dealing with court security is extremely important. We just had this terrible incident in Blacksburg, VA, indicating how prone this country is to violence. This legislation dealing with court security allows States to beef up the security in courtrooms. It will allow bulletproof glass, as should have been in the judge’s chambers in Reno, NV, and metal detectors. It would allow jurisdictions to obtain metal detectors. It would limit what Federal judges have to list in their various personal papers. It would not be possible, if this legislation passes, for some disgruntled defendant, witness, or whatever the case might be, to go to the Internet and find out where the judge lives, as happened in Illinois. They would not have to disclose personal information like that. They would not have to disclose the jobs of family members so one of these violence-prone people could go to someone’s place of business and hurt and injure a child or loved one of one of these judges who make difficult decisions.

This legislation is important to allow us to better understand and protect against disgruntled litigants. It increases the penalties for people who do these bad things, who harass prosecutors, judges, and witnesses.

It is very important legislation, and we should have already completed it. But here we are. We are going to have to move to proceed to it. Once—I hope—cloture is invoked, then we have 30 hours to wait before we get onto the bill. It would be a shame that we have to waste the time of our country, time that could be spent on valuable legislation that could be done here in this Chamber, waiting to move forward because of people not wanting to legislate.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. There will now be a period of morning business for 60 minutes with Senators permitted to speak therein with the time equally divided and controlled between the majority and Republican leaders or their designees. Who yields time? The Senator from Arizona.

PRESEVING COMPETITION WITHIN MEDICARE

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I would like to speak for a few minutes on the bill on which we will be voting in approximately an hour, as the majority leader just said. I would like to speak directly to the point he attempted to make, which was why should there be a problem with allowing the Federal Government to negotiate for drug prices for Medicare by repealing Medicare’s so-called noninterference provision?

Nobody doesn’t support negotiation. Negotiation is at the heart of the Medicare prescription drug benefit. I was there when it was written in the conference committee when there was a conscientious decision to ensure that there would be competition for lowering prices by specifically designating pharmacy benefit managers to do negotiating with the drug companies to bring the prices down. So the first myth is that Medicare somehow does not involve negotiations. It involves extensive negotiations. What it does not do is allow the Federal Government to interfere in those negotiations and, in effect, put itself in between patients and doctors and the drugs.

The Medicare Fair Prescription Drug Price Act of 2007, on which we will be voting cloture, turns this law upside-down and basically inserts the Government into this process under these decisions. The purpose may sound simple—the Government, using its negotiating clout, forcing drug companies to give seniors deep discounts—but if you take a closer look and peel away the layers, you realize it is nothing more than a promise running on empty, void of details and muddled by political rhetoric rather than sustained by the facts. Let’s look at the facts.

First of all, Medicare Part D is working. When Congress crafted the bill, we heard from leaders and clearly. They wanted a prescription drug benefit that guaranteed access to affordable drugs and offered a choice of plans. They didn’t want to be packed into a one-size-fits-all Government-run plan that didn’t fit their needs, and in fact they asked us to model the benefit after the plan that is available to Members of Congress. We did that. We chose access over restrictions, choice over Government control, and competition over price control. As a result, we have provided everyone’s expectations. Approximately 90 percent of Medicare beneficiaries have some form of prescription drug coverage. The average premium was $22, in 2007, which is 42 percent lower than the Government projected initially. On average, seniors saved $1,200 on their prescription drug costs last year.

Eight out of ten Part D enrollees report they are satisfied with their current coverage, and the Congressional Budget Office estimates that the drug benefit will cost the taxpayers 30 percent less. $265 billion in savings over the next 10 years.

To sum it up, we have 90 percent Medicare beneficiaries with coverage, 80 percent satisfaction rate, and it costs 30 percent less than originally estimated. If it “ain’t” broke, don’t fix it.

The second fact, drug negotiation is at the heart of the Medicare bill. For the first time in history, health insurance plans and pharmaceutical companies and these benefit managers whom I mentioned are required to negotiate better prices for seniors, just like they Members of Congress. The noninterference provision, which first appeared in democratically sponsored legislation, prevents the Federal Government from interfering in those negotiations. It is a basic economic principle: competition of supply and demand interact, determining the price of the good or service. How do you get a good price? These pharmacy benefit managers I mentioned have significant market power. Consider this fact: The three largest PBMs have nearly 200 million members, compared to Medicare’s 44 million. So when you talk about the Government using its considerable bargaining clout because it would represent 44 million, appreciate that these pharmacy benefit managers represent 200 million. They insure all of these people-Americans in the private sector, as well as Americans who have Government insurance. So the private drug negotiators already enjoy a significant competitive advantage. They use that power to negotiate lower prices and, as I pointed out, that negotiation has worked.

Third, the secretarial negotiation cannot achieve any lower price without rationing choice in access. That was the testimony before the Senate Finance Committee, and I think every one of us appreciates that we should be very careful about anything which could restrict freedom to our citizens. When the Finance Committee marked up this bill last week, I looked forward to getting some clarity on exactly how Members contemplated this secretarial negotiation, how it would work.

To my disappointment, no one could explain exactly how it would work. In fact, my colleagues openly and candidly admitted they had no plan or any specifics. What they said was that the Secretary would have to use his imagination and that it could take a number of different forms.

So what we are buying, in effect, is a pig in a poke. Nobody knows what the
