CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

S4729

Mullen, Admiral, U.S. Navy, Chief of Naval Operations; T. Michael Moseley, General, U.S. Air Force, Chief of Staff; James T. Conway, General, U.S. Marine Corps, Commandant of the Marine Corps, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. Tad Cochran, Ranking Member, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Cochran: On behalf of the Soldiers, Marines, Sailors and Airmen of our Armed Forces and their families, please accept our thanks and appreciation for continuing to provide the necessary resources and legislation to fight the Long War.

With the increasing pace of operations and materiel needs in Iraq and Afghanistan, we ask that the Congress expeditiously complete its work on the Fiscal Year 2007 Emergency Supplemental. Timely receipt of this funding is critical to military readiness and force generation as we prosecute the war on terror. Given the current status of this legislation, we are particularly concerned that funding could be significantly delayed.

Without approval of the supplemental funds in April, the Armed Services will be forced to take increasingly disruptive measures in order to sustain combat operations. The impacts on readiness and quality of life could be profound. We will have to implement spending restrictions and reprogram billions of dollars. Reprogramming is a short-term, cost-inefficient solution that wastes our limited resources. Spending restrictions will delay and disrupt our force modernization as they prepare for war, possibly compromising future readiness and strategic agility. Furthermore, these restrictions increase the burden on service members and their families during this time of war.

Thank you again for your unwavering support of our service members and their families. We are grateful for your steadfast interest in providing them the best equipment, the best training and a quality of life equal to the quality of their service. We look forward to working with you on measures to enhance our Nation’s security.

Sincerely,

Peter J. Schoomaker, General, U.S. Army, Chief of Staff.

Michael G. Mullen, Admiral, U.S. Navy, Chief of Naval Operations.

T. Michael Moseley, General, U.S. Air Force, Chief of Staff.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of the time available on this side.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I yield to Senator Coburn.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

COURT SECURITY IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2007

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume consideration of S. 378, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 378) to amend title 18, United States Code, relating to court security, procedures, victims, witnesses, and their family members and for other purposes.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today we continue to debate and consider the Court Security Improvement Act of 2007. It should not be a struggle to enact this broadly supported consensus legislation. We made some progress yesterday but failed to get to final passage of this important legislation. I hope we can get there later today.

I would like to thank the majority leader for his support and leadership on this bill. Senator Reid knows all too well about the need for greater court security and the terrible tragedy occurred in Nevada. Nobody has been a stronger supporter of this legislation. He helped us pass similar protections twice last year. It is no surprise to me that yesterday he met with the heads of the U.S. Marshals Service. Sadly, they reported a 17 percent increase in attacks this year. We cannot delay our response any further in the face of this trend.

Senator Durbin, our assistant majority leader, has been consistently dedicated to getting this legislation passed. The tragic murder of Judge Lefkow’s husband and mother in her home State of Illinois serves as a terrible reminder of why we need this legislation. Senator Durbin has worked tirelessly to prevent any further tragedies from befalling our Federal judges.

As I have noted before, this legislation has broad bipartisan support. Yesterday Senator Cornyn gave a powerful statement in support of this legislation. Senator Cornyn is a former member of his State’s judiciary. I urge Members to consider his views and support for these important provisions providing for increased security. Even the White House has issued a supportive Statement of Administration Policy.

Yesterday a number of amendments were filed, but none of them was relevant to the important purpose of court security. There will be other opportunities to consider worthwhile amendments. I look forward to working with Senator Coburn on Department of Justice reauthorization later this year.

We made some progress yesterday. The Senate adopted the Kyl-Finken amendment that was adopted in committee. I thank Senator Specter for working with me on an important managers’ amendment. That amendment made several technical fixes and clarified our treatment and protection of magistrate judges and the Tax Court judges.

Last night after significant debate we had a vote on an amendment offered by Senator Coburn. Regrettfully, it took from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for the Senator from Oklahoma to be ready to offer his amendment. Once offered we dealt with it promptly.

I would like to thank Senator Klobuchar and Brown for helping me manage this bill yesterday. Their eloquent words in support of this legislation were much appreciated.

I thank Senators Klobuchar and Brown for helping me manage this legislation today during the Judiciary Committee’s oversight hearing with Attorney General Alberto Gonzales.

I hope that today we can finish our work on this important legislation.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Nevada has an amendment he wishes to offer.

AMENDMENT NO. 897.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 897.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Nevada [Mr. Ensign] proposes an amendment numbered 897.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Purpose: To amend title 28, United States Code, to provide for the appointment of additional Federal circuit judges, to divide the Ninth Judicial Circuit of the United States into 2 circuits, and for other purposes.

At the end of the bill, add the following:

TITLE VI: NINTH CIRCUIT SPLIT

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “The Circuit Court of Appeals Restructuring and Modernization Act of 2007”.

SEC. 602. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) FORMER NINTH CIRCUIT.—The term “former ninth circuit” means the ninth judicial circuit of the United States as in existence on the day before the effective date of this title.

(2) NEW NINTH CIRCUIT.—The term “new ninth circuit” means the ninth judicial circuit of the United States established by the amendment made by section 602(b)(2).

TWELFTH CIRCUIT.—The term “twelfth circuit” means the twelfth judicial circuit of the United States established by the amendment made by section 602(b).

SEC. 603. NUMBER AND COMPOSITION OF CIRCUITS.

Section 41 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding the table, by striking “thirteen” and inserting “fourteen”; and

(2) in the table—

(A) by striking the item relating to the ninth circuit and inserting the following:

“Ninth __________________ California, Guam, Hawaii, N. Northern Mariana Islands.”
(B) by inserting after the item relating to the eleventh circuit the following:

"Twelfth .................................. 14'."

(2) by inserting after the item relating to the eleventh circuit the following:

"Twelfth .................................. 14'."

SEC. 605. NUMBER OF CIRCUIT JUDGES.

SEC. 606. PLACES OF CIRCUIT COURT.

SEC. 607. LOCATION OF TWELFTH CIRCUIT HEAD-QUARTERS.

SEC. 608. ASSIGNMENT OF CIRCUIT JUDGES.

Each circuit judge of the former ninth circuit who is in regular active service and whose official duty station on the day before the effective date of this title—

(1) is in California, Guam, Hawaii, or the Northern Marianas Islands shall be a circuit judge of the new ninth circuit as of such effective date; and

(2) is in Alaska, Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, or Washington shall be a circuit judge of the twelfth circuit as of such effective date.

SEC. 609. ELECTION OF ASSIGNMENT BY SENIOR JUDGES.

Each judge who is a senior circuit judge of the former ninth circuit on the day before the effective date of this title may elect to be assigned to the new ninth circuit or the twelfth circuit as of such effective date and shall notify the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts of such election.

SEC. 610. SENIORITY OF JUDGES.

The seniority of each judge—

(1) who is assigned under section 608, or

(2) who elects to be assigned under section 609

shall run from the date of commission of such judge as a judge of the former ninth circuit.
Mr. President, 20 percent of the country is in the Ninth Circuit. It is laden with immigration cases. It has too many cases per judge and, because of that, too many of the cases that need to be heard in a timely fashion are delayed, simply waiting for judges to be available. We have put forward a bill to divide the Ninth Circuit up in a very fair manner. We have put this through judges and through studies and over the years we have modified it on exactly how to break it up. If people disagree with how we are deciding to break it up, we can talk about that. But the bottom line is that it is too large of a circuit, and the Ninth Circuit needs to be split up.

I think all but one of the judges in the State of Nevada—by the way, almost all these same judges used to be against splitting up the Ninth Circuit. Today, nearly all of them have come out in favor of splitting up the Ninth Circuit. The reason for that is we live in the largest growing area in the country. Nevada, out of the last 19 years, is the fastest growing State. The other States in the Ninth Circuit, including Arizona, California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, all of these States have booming populations. While the largest circuit in the United States, it is going to increasingly worse in the future, as far as the size of the population, the number of cases per judge, while overwhelming now, it is only going to get worse in the future.

I believe this is an amendment that should be discussed as a separate bill on the floor. But we all know most bills cannot get time on the Senate floor. So you have to take the opportunity to offer amendments wherever you can. We have been trying to get this bill acted on for years and years and years. We now have a vehicle, dealing with the courts, where it is appropriate to offer this amendment. So that is why I am offering this amendment today.

Mr. President, again, amendment No. 897 would split the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Because my home State of Nevada is under the jurisdiction of the Ninth Circuit, I have taken particular interest in how the Ninth Circuit functions. As a Senator from Nevada, I represent people who are on both sides of this issue. I have heard arguments for, and against, splitting the Ninth Circuit but, when I listened to the debate, have concluded that it is time for Congress to split the Ninth Circuit.

The Ninth Circuit really has become too large to function as efficiently as it should. The population of the States in the Ninth Circuit is growing too fast for the circuit to manage its caseload. Cases working their way through the Ninth Circuit take far too long to come to resolution. The circuit is becoming increasingly dependent on visiting judges, who are not as familiar with circuit business, to manage the caseload. The reversal rate of cases heard by the Supreme Court which on appeal from the Ninth Circuit is much higher than the average of all Federal circuits. These problems require some form of action by Congress and, having studied the issue, simply adding more judges is not the solution.

Last year, the Judiciary Committee held hearings on the splitting of the Ninth Circuit. As several Federal judges who were witnesses testified, adding more judges, in a circuit so geographically large, is not going to adequately address the need for collegiality among judges. Mr. President, my primary motivation is to ensure that my constituents, the people of Nevada, have equal access to justice. Equal access to justice requires not only fair, but also prompt, resolution of a case. From my perspective, the current backlog in cases and the fact that the resolution of appeals takes far longer in the Ninth Circuit than any other circuit demonstrates that Nevadans are not guaranteed the equal protection of the law. The Judiciary Committee, Congress has used its authority to establish the Federal appeals courts and the Federal district courts, as well as other Federal courts. Congress has the ability to create courts of special jurisdiction, such as military courts, bankruptcy courts, and tax courts, and to limit the appeals jurisdiction of all Federal courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States. The Constitution clearly provides that the people, acting through their respective Congressional representatives, can enact legislation to split the Ninth Circuit. The prerogative of Congress to enact legislation to split the Ninth Circuit is consistent with the role of Congress established by the Constitution. The idea of splitting the Ninth Circuit is a proper action for Congress to take.

Finally, Mr. President, I would hope that Members of the Senate could agree that, regardless of where each of us stands on this issue, we could engage in an honest discussion and avoid attacking each other's motives. I have read with great interest the statements of people on the other side of this issue suggesting that split supporters, like myself, are only "politically motivated" or that supporters of a split are "trying to punish" the Ninth Circuit because of the perception of the circuit's ideology. Nothing could be further from the truth. I am sure many of you could engage in an honest discussion and avoid attacking each other's motives. I do not believe that it is in the Senate's, or the Nation's, best interest to attack someone else's motives. I have met with people on both sides of this issue and respect their views.

Let me conclude by saying this. The saying is that justice delayed is justice denied. In the Ninth Circuit that is what happens every single day. Nevadans are not guaranteed the equal protection of the law. We are not going to do what we could do in other areas. We are putting more and more of a burden on our Federal courts by the actions of the Senate. We need to now take the responsibility to make sure our various circuits around the country are not even more overburdened simply because of population growth. That is what has happened, and will continue to happen, in the Ninth Circuit. We have added a judge here and there. But the overall size of the Ninth Circuit, even if you add more judges, Congress has used its authority to do so.

I believe that it is not only the duty of Congress but also our obligation to ensure that the Judicial branch is operating efficiently. That is why we are considering the current legislation, the court security bill, because we want to ensure that the Judicial branch operates efficiently. And we know that it cannot, if those who work in the system—our judges and our court officers—do not feel safe. That is also why my amendment is so important.

I do not believe that splitting the Ninth Circuit would infringe on the "independence of the judiciary" as some might suggest. The Constitution does not provide an answer to "constitute" or establish "tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court," and also gives Congress the power to "ordain and establish" the lower Federal courts. Acting in accordance with the Constitution, Congress has used its authority to establish the Federal appeals courts and the Federal district courts, as well as other Federal courts. Congress has the ability to create courts of special jurisdiction, such as military courts, bankruptcy courts, and tax courts, and to limit the appeals jurisdiction of all Federal courts, including the Supreme Court of the United States. The Constitution clearly provides that the people, acting through their respective Congressional representatives, can enact legislation to split the Ninth Circuit. The notion of Congress to enact legislation to split the Ninth Circuit is consistent with the role of Congress established by the Constitution. The idea of splitting the Ninth Circuit is a proper action for Congress to take.
allow the full Ninth Circuit to hear many of the most difficult, challenging cases. The judges of the ninth are not able to work together as a full circuit and collaborate on some of the most difficult, challenging judicial cases. That is better to set up this circuit, so that more thoughtful decisions can be made in the administration of justice.

With that, I will yield the floor and ask my colleagues to support this very important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. KLOBUCHAR). The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, April 22 marks the beginning of National Crime Victims’ Rights Week, an annual commemoration that has been observed since the early 1980s to honor crime victims and call attention to their plight.

We have an opportunity to provide full justice to many victims of federal crime by passing legislation that will help federal criminal justice officials more fully recover court-ordered restitution that is owed to innocent crime victims. By ensuring victims receive the restitution they are entitled to, our proposal truly reflects the theme of this year’s Crime Victims’ Rights Week—Victim Rights: Every Victim, Every Time.

I intend to offer an amendment with Senator Grassley today to strengthen the collection of federal criminal debt. Our amendment is being sent over to the floor at this point. I will describe it and the reason for offering it.

The amendment will be one in the form of a bill, S. 973, which I authored with my colleague, Senator Grassley. We introduced it with Senators Durbin and Collins. It is called the Restitution for Victims Of Crime Act. This piece of legislation will give Justice Department officials the tools they say are necessary to help them do a better job of collecting court-ordered Federal restitution and fines.

In our court system in this country, there are, in many cases, fines that are levied against defendants who are found guilty of a crime. They are adjudged to be guilty and, therefore, are levied a fine by the court. In many cases, they are required to make restitution through orders of the court system. For some long while, I have been justice to this issue because I have discovered that in the Federal court system, Justice Department data shows that the amount of uncollected criminal debt—that is, fines and restitution—is growing out of control. Believe it or not, the uncollected Federal criminal debt is nearly $46 billion. Think of that. It is almost $46 billion. These are fines that have been levied in our Federal court system against defendants adjudged to have been guilty. Restitution orders have been made that order to make financial restitution; yet some $46 billion is the amount of criminal debt that is unpaid. It is spiraling upward. It was $41 billion just a year ago. When I first called attention to this problem, it was well less than half of that. Yet very little has been done.

In my State of North Dakota, the Federal courts have about $18.7 million in unpaid restitution. That is up some $4 million from the preceding year. In my judgment, crime victims should not have to worry if those in charge of collecting the restitution on their behalf are making every effort to do so. We would expect that to be happening. Yet it is not. In some cases, it is because the tools don’t exist. In some cases, it is because collecting the criminal debt has become kind of the backwater of the U.S. Attorney’s Office.

At my request, GAO reviewed five white-collar financial fraud cases. What they have found is that certain offenders, those adjudged guilty, had taken expensive trips abroad, traveled overseas; had fraudulently obtained millions of dollars in assets and converted those assets to personal use. GAO also found offenders who had established businesses for their children; held homes and lived in homes worth millions of dollars that were located in upscale neighborhoods. So here we have a circumstance where we have people who have been judged guilty of certain things by the Federal court system. They have been told you have to pay a fine or you have to pay restitution. Yet despite the fact that they have not made restitution or paid their fine, according to the GAO evaluation at my request, some of them have decided we are not going to pay those things, we are going to take a trip overseas, live in multimillion dollar houses, we are going to transfer a business to the children so federal justice officials cannot get at it.

All of this is going on at a time when victims are waiting for restitution that is due them by the court. The proposal that Senator Grassley and I have authored is a proposal based on a set of recommendations, some from the Justice Department, some from the task force on improving the collection of criminal debt. Justice Department officials believe the changes we suggest will improve the collection of federal criminal debt. Our legislation offers the tools that we think are necessary, having worked with the National Center for Murdered Children, Justice Solutions, and many others.

The U.S. attorney in North Dakota has said this legislation represents important progress toward ensuring that victims of crime are one step closer to being made whole.

I have mentioned S. 973, and that is what I intend to offer as an amendment to the court security bill. I recognize the legislation itself doesn’t deal with the narrower issue of the security of the courts, but it certainly deals with the functioning of the courts and the ability of a court to decide they are going to levy a fine or impose a restitution order on a person guilty of a crime and then be able to feel, at some point, they are going to be able to make that happen.

I mentioned earlier U.S. Attorney’s Offices, as most of us know, are about investigating and prosecuting. They are involved when given investigation capability or given the results of investigations. If they believe a criminal act has occurred, they are involved in preparing to go to court to prosecute criminal actions.

They have also been given the responsibility to collect fines and restitution. But the fact is, many U.S.
The Armed Services Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Carl Levin, is holding a hearing this morning on contracting abuses; that is, contracting abuses in Iraq especially under what is called the LOGCAP contract. I testified that I chaired in the Democratic Policy Committee, over the last 3 years, 10 hearings on these issues of contract abuses. I suggested to the Armed Services Committee that they look into what is not only called the LOGCAP contract which, in this case, Halliburton, or their subsidiary, KBR, provided certain logistics assistance to the Department of the Army under a contract worth billions of dollars, I suggested they also look into the RIO contract, which is Restore Iraqi Oil contract.

I pointed out to them that the woman who rose to become the highest contract official in the U.S. Corps of Engineers—she rose to become the highest contract supervisor said in the hearing of the Army Corps of Engineers—she said the awarding of the RIO contract, the Restore Iraqi Oil contract—Restore Iraqi Oil is what RIO stands for—to Halliburton and KBR was “the most blatant civilian contract officer that I have ever seen in my entire career.” This is from the top civilian contracting officer.

What happened to her? She paid for that with her job. For that she was demoted. Before she said that publicly, she was given outstanding evaluations every year. Once she said publicly what she had told them privately, and they ignored, they began the process of giving her performance evaluations that were inferior for demotion. A couple of nights ago, I called the general, now retired, who brought this contracting officer in as the top civilian contracting officer. I said: What’s the story?

He said: She has been dealt an awful hand, and it has been very unfair to her. She is a straight-shooter, she is competent, she speaks the truth. The fact is, she is paying for telling the truth.

I suggested to the Armed Services Committee that this woman, named Bunmatine Greenhouse, who had the courage to speak out against contracting abuse, should be called to testify.

We ought to put a stop to this stuff that when someone in the Federal Government speaks out and says there is abuse occurring, the taxpayers are being abused, the soldiers are being disserved, that somehow they injure their career by telling the truth. But let me go on.

I suggested the committee look into the RIO contract. I sent the issues raised by Bunmatine Greenhouse, who paid for her honesty with her job: she was demoted. I sent all that material to the inspector general. Seventeen days later, I got a letter from the inspector general saying they received it, they looked into all those allegations, it has now been referred to the Justice Department, it is for their action, and because it is a criminal matter, they would not comment further.

Obviously, they believed there was something that was serious. That is the RIO, the Restore Iraq Oil contract.

There is another contract, and that is the purpose of the hearing this morning, the LOGCAP contract, once again, given to Halliburton and their subsidiary Kellogg, Brown and Root. What I told them this morning is what I found in 10 hearings. I held up a white towel, a white hand towel that most would recognize. It hangs in the bathrooms in most homes.

A man named Henry Bunting came to us. Henry Bunting was in Kuwait. He was actually buying supplies for the troops in Iraq. Henry Bunting was a purchaser for KBR in Kuwait. They said to Henry Bunting: Buy some towels for the troops. So Henry goes about buying towels for the troops. But then they told him to buy those towels. You have to buy towels that have the embroidered name of KBR on the towel, triple the cost. Henry said it would cost a lot of money. It doesn’t matter, the taxpayers are paying for that. So, you can’t buy those towels. You have to buy towels that have the embroidered initials of the company on the towels.

How about $45 for a case of Coca-Cola? How about $7,500 a month to lease an SUV? Henry Bunting told us about that as well.

I described the other issues. Rory Mayberry—Rory showed up at a hearing. He was a food service supervisor for KBR in Iraq at a cafeteria. He said he was told by his supervisor: Don’t you dare talk to Government auditors when they show up. If you do, you will get fired or you will get sent to an active combat zone. So, you dare talk to a Government auditor.

He said: We routinely provided food to the soldiers that had expired date stamps on it.

The supervisor said: It doesn’t matter—the expired date stamps—feed the expired food to the troops.

We know from previous press accounts that at one point that company was charging for $42,000 meals a day for soldiers when they were actually only feeding 14,000 soldiers. Rory said the same thing. Rory Mayberry, a supervisor in one of the KBR food service situations in Iraq said they were charging for meals for soldiers who weren’t there, and the supervisor said: We are doing that because we had lost money previously, so now we are charging for meals that aren’t being served to soldiers.

How about an eyewitness to an $85,000 brand new truck left beside the road in a noncombat zone in Iraq to be towed because they didn’t have the proper wrench to fix the tire? It doesn’t matter, the American taxpayer is going to buy the new truck, cost plus.
The list is almost endless. It is unbelievable the stories we have heard from people who wish to come forward.

One company, the same company under the LOGCAP contract, was to provide water to the military bases in Iraq—all of the bases. A whistleblower came to me and said: I have something you should see. It is a 21-page internal report, and it is written by a man named Will Granger who is in charge of all water bases in Iraq. He is the KBR employee, Halliburton employee in charge of all water that goes to the bases in Iraq.

He said instead of treating the water, nonpotable water which soldiers use to shower, shave, sometimes brush their teeth, and so on, instead of treating the water as it was supposed to have been treated under the contract, the water was more contaminated with E. coli and bacteria than raw water from the Euphrates River.

He said: Here is the internal report. The internal report said this was a near miss. It could have caused mass sickness or death.

The way from the internal report I had in my hand. The company said it never happened. This is the internal report made by the man in the company whose name is Will Granger, who said: Here is what we discovered.

Just after I held the hearing and described this situation, I received an e-mail from a young woman in Iraq who was an Army physician. She said: I read about this hearing about the water issue, the nonpotable water which was contaminated, the raw water from the Euphrates River that was being used for nonpotable water for soldiers. She said: It has happened on my base as well. She said: I started seeing these illnesses, conditions with the soldiers, and I had a lieutenant follow the waterline back. It is exactly the same circumstance—untreated water. We were paying for it, and the company wasn’t doing what the contract requires, putting at risk those soldiers. The company denied it happened, but it is black and white. The evidence exists.

I described these issues and other issues this morning to the Armed Services Committee. I am pleased they are holding hearings. It is long past the time for them to hold these oversight hearings finding out what is happening and what we can do about it.

Mr. President, these are some important issues I would commend Senator LEVIN, Senator WARNER, and all members of the Armed Services Committee for taking a serious look at these issues. My interest is not in tarnishing any company or anything like that. My interest is in making sure the American taxpayers are not disserved, and they have been. And my interest is the American soldiers are treated properly, and they have not been. What I saw with the waste, the fraud, and abuse with these contracts, in my judgment, is a disservice to the American taxpayer and a disservice to the country’s soldiers, and the fact is, we can fix this.

I will describe at a later time the legislation I have introduced that deals with these contracting abuses so we can prevent them from ever happening again.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SANDERS. I ask consent to speak in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE ECONOMY

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, we hear much from the Bush administration and our Republican friends, almost on a daily basis, about how wonderfully our economy is doing. I recall not so long ago being at a Budget Committee hearing where we heard the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Paulson, indicating in fact that the economy is doing “just marvelous.”

Yet, for obvious reasons, the American people do not seem to agree with the Bush administration or with our Republican friends as to how well the economy is doing. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record segments of two polls that were recently released, one by CBS News and one by Gallup.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

AMERICANS MORE IN FAVOR OF HEAVILY TAXING RICH NOW THAN IN 1939

(From Frank Newport)

PRINCETON, N.J.—About half of Americans advocate heavy taxation of the rich in order to redistribute wealth, a higher percentage than was the case in 1939. More generally, a large majority of Americans support the principle that wealth should be more evenly distributed in America, and an increasing number—although still a minority—say there are too many rich people in the country. Attitudes toward heavy taxes on the rich are strongly related to one’s own income, and Democrats are much more likely to be in favor of income redistribution than are Republicans.

Basic Trends
A poll commissioned by Fortune Magazine in 1939 and conducted by famous pollster Elmo Roper included a question phrased as follows:

“People feel differently about how far a government should go. Here is a phrase which some people believe in and some don’t. Do you think our government should or should not redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich?”

At that time, near the end of the Depression, only a minority of Americans, 35%, said the government should impose heavy taxes on the rich in order to redistribute wealth. A slight majority—54%—said the government should not. (Eleven percent did not have an opinion.)

Gallup asked this question again in 1998 and found the percentage willing to say that the government should redistribute wealth had increased. Five percent of those who had previously responded (while the “no opinion” responses had dropped to 4%) and the negative stayed slightly above 50%.

Now, the attitudes have shifted slightly again, to the point where Americans’ sentiment in response to this question is roughly split, with 49% saying the government should redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich, and 47% disagreeing.

People feel differently about how far a government should go. Here is a phrase which some people believe in and some don’t. Do you think our government should or should not redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich?

One must be cautious in interpreting changes between the 1939 poll, which was conducted using different sampling and methods than is the case today, and the current poll. It does appear safe to say, however, that based on this question, the American public has become at least somewhat more “redistributionist” over the almost seven decades since the end of the Depression.

The current results of this question are in line with a separate Gallup question that asks whether society is fair to the rich, since most Americans do not consider themselves rich. (Eighty percent of those aged 25 and younger, the group most likely to consider themselves rich, were asked this question on the March 26 to 29, 1992 survey. It was not asked on other surveys reviewed in this report.) Ninety percent of Americans say society is fair to the rich, since most Americans do not consider themselves rich.

People feel differently about how far a government should go. Here is a phrase which some people believe in and some don’t. Do you think our government should or should not redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich?

There is no trend on this question going back to the 1939 poll, but the supermajority agreement that upper-income people pay too little in taxes has been evident for the last 15 years.

More on attitudes toward wealth and the rich:

The most recent Gallup Poll included two other questions measuring attitudes toward wealth and the rich.

Do you feel that the distribution of money and wealth in this country today is fair, or do you feel that the money and wealth in this country should be more evenly distributed among a larger percentage of the people?

The results of this question, asked seven times over the past 23 years, have consistently shown that Americans are strongly in favor of the principle that money and wealth in this country should be more evenly distributed. The current 66% who feel that way is tied for the highest reading on this measure across this time period in which the question has been asked.

A separate question asked:
As far as you are concerned, do we have too many rich people in this country, too few, or about the right amount?

Here we have evidence of a growing resentment toward the rich. The percentage of Americans who say there are too many rich people in the United States—although still a minority—is up significantly from the two times in the 1990s when this question was asked.

In summary, the data show that:
A significant majority of Americans feel that money and wealth should be distributed more equally across a larger percentage of the population.
A significant majority of Americans feel that the rich pay too little in taxes.
About half of Americans support the idea of “heavy” taxes on the rich to help redistribute wealth.
Almost 4 out of 10 Americans flat-out say there are “too many” rich people in the country.

IMPLICATIONS

Most societies experience tensions revolving around inequalities of wealth among those societies’ members. This seemingly inevitable fact of life has been at the core of revolutions throughout history. American society has been immune from massive revolts of the sort. But the bottom end of the spectrum in part because the public perceives that the United States is an open society with upward social mobility. A recent Gallup Poll found a majority of Americans believing that people who make a lot of money deserve it, and that almost anyone can get rich if they put their mind to it. And a Gallup News Scan on May 23 to 26, 1999 found that about a third of Americans, including a significantly higher percentage of younger Americans, believed that they themselves could one day be rich.

The findings reviewed in this report most likely reflect at least in part the fact that it is easy to advocate greater taxation of the rich since most Americans do not consider themselves rich.

In fact, a 2003 Gallup Poll found that the median annual income that Americans considered “rich” was $122,000. Since the average income in America is markedly below that, it follows that most Americans do not consider themselves rich. (Eighty percent of those surveyed put themselves in the middle class, working class, or lower class. Only 1% identify themselves as being in the upper class, while 19% are willing to say they are upper middle class.)

The data show that as one gets closer to being what Americans consider rich, one is also less interested in the rich being taxed heavily. This relationship is fairly linear: the more money one makes in general, the more likely one is to say that the government should not be imposing heavy taxes on the rich.

People feel differently about how far a government should go. Here is a phrase which some people believe in and some don’t. Do you think our government should or should not redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich?
There are also political differences in views on heavy taxes on the rich. Democrats are more than twice as likely as Republicans to agree that the government should redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich. There are also political differences in views on heavy taxes on the rich. Democrats are more than twice as likely as Republicans to agree that the government should redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich.

Mr. SANDERS. The American people were asked by CBS News the question, “Do you think the economy is getting better, getting worse or staying about the same?” 41 percent of the American people said the economy is getting better, 44 percent thought it was getting worse, and 44 percent thought it was about the same.

Then, interestingly, in that same poll, when the American people were asked by CBS the question, “Over the past 10 years, do you think life for middle class Americans has gotten better or worse?” 30 percent said life has gotten better, 59 percent, almost a 2-to-1 margin, said life is getting worse, and 7 percent thought it was about the same.

Technology has exploded in recent years. Our workers are far more productive than used to be the case. Yet by a 2-to-1 margin the American people have said that life for the middle class is getting worse, not better.

In terms of the Gallup Poll, the Gallup people, from April 2 to April 5, asked some very interesting questions that were not spoken about anywhere else here on the floor of the Senate. In my view, what we have seen since President Bush has been in office, in a general sense, is the shrinking of the middle class, an increase in poverty, and a growing gap between what the rich have and the money that is given to the poor—not something we talk about terribly often on the floor of the Senate, not something that is talked about terribly often in the corporate media. But here is the question, very interestingly, that Gallup asked the American people, between April 2 and April 5:

“Do you feel that the distribution of money and wealth in this country today is fair, or do you feel that the money and wealth in this country should be more evenly distributed among a larger percentage of the people?” Answer: Distribution is fair, 29 percent; should be more evenly distributed, 66 percent.

Then the next question they asked, which was rather a clumsy question, I thought, was, “Would you favor a tax on the rich?” Answer, but this was the question. Question: “People feel differently about how far a government should go. Here is a phrase which some people believe in and some don’t. Do you think our government should or should not redistribute wealth by heavy taxes on the rich?”

That is a pretty clumsy question. Do you know what the answer was to that rather clumsy question? Yes, should redistribute wealth, 49 percent; no, should not, 47 percent.

I mention this poll because it is important to understand that despite a lot of the rhetoric we hear from the White House and on the floor of the Senate, we need to understand that in terms of our economy, something is fundamentally wrong. They understand it because they are living the experience of working longer hours for lower wages; of working day after day, trying to pay the bills for their family, trying to send their kids to college, trying to take care of health care, trying to provide childcare for their kids. They know the reality of the economy because they are the economy.

Every single day the people of our country are seeing an economy which is forcing them in many instances to work longer hours for lower wages, an economy in which they wonder how their kids are going to be able to go to college, able to afford college an economy in which they worry that for the first time in the modern history of our country, their children will see a lower standard of living than they do. That is the reality of the economy, in the eyes, I believe, of millions of American workers.

That perception that the American worker has of the economy is, in my view, the correct perception of what is going on. Since George W. Bush has been President, more than 5 million Americans have slipped into poverty, including 1 million children. This country now has the very dubious distinction of having the highest rate of childhood poverty of any major industrialized country on Earth. How do we have a great economy, a booming economy, when 5 million more Americans have slipped into poverty? Median income has declined in this country for 5 years in a row. Americans understand that the economy is not doing well when the personal savings rate is below zero, which has not happened since the Great Depression. How do we talk about a strong economy when 7 million Americans have lost their health insurance since President Bush has been in office, and when we now have, unbelievably, 47 million Americans who have no health insurance at all?

How can anybody on the floor of the Senate, or anybody in the Bush administration talk about a strong economy, when we have 47 million Americans who have no health insurance at all; when 35 million Americans in our country, the richest country in the history of the world, struggled to put food on the table last year; and the number of the poorest, most hungry Americans keeps getting larger? The American people understand this is not an economy that is working for ordinary people. In this economy today, more and more of our brothers and sisters, our fellow Americans, are going hungry. Let’s not talk about a booming economy when we have children in America who are hungry.

Mr. President, you and I have heard, over and over again, people talking about the importance of education for this country. Yet millions of working families do not know how they are going to be able to send their kids to college. When when the cost of college education is soaring, when the average person graduating a 4-year college leaves that school $20,000 in debt, when hundreds of thousands of young people are now giving up the dream of going to college because they don’t want to come out deeply in debt? How do we talk about a booming economy when so many of our young people, some of the brightest, most able of our young people, are giving up the dream of going to college? How do you talk about the international and global economy if so many of our young people are not able to get the kind of education they need?

When we talk about a booming economy, how does that correlate with the fact that our manufacturing infrastructure is falling apart, that since President Bush has been in office we have lost over 3 million good manufacturing jobs, and when people go out to the store to shop, when they look at the product, they know where that product is made today? It is not manufactured in the United States. Over and over again they see it is manufactured in China.
We have a trade deficit now of over $700 billion. In my small State of Vermont, not a manufacturing center, we lost 20 percent of our manufacturing jobs in the last 5 years and that phenomenon is going on all over this country. How do you have a booming economy with the loss of millions of good-paying manufacturing jobs and we are on the cusp of losing millions of good-paying, white-collar information technology jobs?

Then we look down to the average American worker today has pension coverage than when President Bush took office. Half of private sector American workers have no pension coverage whatsoever. How does that speak to a strong economy? It was not so many years ago that workers understood that when they left their job, there would be a defined pension available to them. They knew what they were getting. Today, those days seem like ancient history. Fewer and fewer workers have solid pensions on which to depend.

What is important to understand is, while poverty is increasing, while the middle class is shrinking, while more and more people are losing their health insurance, while hunger is growing in America, while good-paying jobs are going to China, the truth is not all is bad in the American economy. We have to acknowledge that. Are there some people who in fact are doing well? The answer is yes. Today, the simple truth is that workers referred to the middle class and working families of this country are struggling so hard to provide basic needs for their families.

One of the reasons the gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider and why we now have by far the most unequal distribution of income and wealth of any major country is due to the passage of massive tax breaks for millionaires and billionaires since President Bush has been in office.

Now, you stop and you take a look at the needs of the people of our country in the most basic sense. Hunger is increasing. Well, what do we think? Should we eliminate hunger in America or do you give tax breaks to billionaires? I don’t think too many people would disagree with what we should be doing.

We have a crisis in affordable childcare in America. We have single moms, working families, both parents going to work, trying to provide well for their year-old, 3-year-old. They cannot provide affordable childcare. The Federal Government provides totally inadequate childcare. Do we increase funding for childcare or do we give tax breaks to billionaires?

We are all aware of the scandal at Walter Reed Hospital. We are all aware of the outrageously inadequate way we treat our veterans, men and women who put their lives on the line defending this country. Yet when they come home from Iraq, there is inadequate care and waiting lines at VA hospitals all over America. What is our priority? Do we take care of our veterans or do we give tax breaks to millionaires and billionaires?

In America, people of children do not have any health insurance. What are our priorities?

People are paying 50 percent of their limited income for housing because we are not building affordable housing. What are our priorities?

We have a major crisis in global warming. We should be investing in sustainable energy, energy efficiency, not giving tax breaks to billionaires. What are our priorities?

Let me conclude by saying that I think the American people, on issue after issue, are far ahead of where we are in Congress. So we are going to have to work very hard to catch up to the American people are. I think we should begin the process of doing that.

We need to fundamentally change our national priorities. We have to have the courage now to stand up to the wealthiest people and the largest corporations and say to those people: The free ride is over.

Our job is to represent the middle class, working families, the lower income people who are not getting justice from the Congress. When we stand and do the right thing for the middle class and working families of this country, I believe we are going to see a significant increase in the respect this body receives. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TESTER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I rise in support of this crucial legislation. I want to read into the record a statement from the Bush administration in support of the bill. It is from the Executive Office of the President, Statement of Administration Policy:

The Administration supports Senate passage of S. 378 to strengthen judicial security. The legislation would enhance the ability of the Federal government to prosecute individuals who attack or threaten participants in the Nation’s judicial system, including judges, lawyers, witnesses, and law enforcement officers. A Nation founded on the rule of law must protect the integrity of its judicial system, which must apply the law without fear or favor. The Administration also supports the provision to prohibit the filing of false liens against judges, prosecutors, and other government officials to retaliate against them for the performance of their official duties.

Another of the most important provisions of this bill was brought to our attention by Judge Carr of the Northern District Court in Toledo, OH. Judge Carr pointed out the importance of section 101 that “enhances the ability of the Judicial Conference of the United States to participate in determining the security needs of the judicial branch by requiring the Director of the U.S. Marshals Service . . . to consult with the Judicial Conference on an ongoing basis regarding the security requirements of the judicial branch.”

The legislation makes sense for a variety of reasons. Not only must our judges be protected, but they must have a seat at the table in determining the safety of our Federal courthouses and the personal safety of the employees of the Federal judiciary and the participants who come in front of the Federal bench.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MCCASKILL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment before us that will split the Ninth Circuit. We will be voting on a point of order at 2 o’clock.

I think it is very unfortunate that the pending bill, to make much-needed improvements in the security of our judges, is being threatened by a rehashing of an old and bad idea to split the circuit. There is a raft of reasons why the Senate should not divide the Ninth Circuit. First, it would be a serious blow to judicial independence if the circuit were to be split because of disagreement with its decisions. It would also result in an unfair distribution of the Ninth Circuit caseload. Judges in the new Ninth Circuit would be much more busy than their counterparts on the Twelfth Circuit. The proposal that is being made by Senator ENSIGN essentially takes caseload from those who know the circuit best, it is clear that splitting the Ninth Circuit would hinder its mission of providing justice for the people of the West.

The split proposal before us would unfairly distribute judicial resources to the West. This is the key. The Ninth Circuit would keep 71 percent of the caseload of the current circuit but only 58 percent of its permanent judges. Any split we look at, because California is so big, tilts the circuit and, of course, all of the new circuit split take the judges with them. So it leaves a disproportionate share of a heavy caseload in the Ninth Circuit—unless you split California, and to split California creates a host of technical and legal problems even more difficult.

Last year, the Ninth Circuit had a caseload of 570 cases per judge, as opposed to a national average of 381 cases per judge. So under the proposed split, the Ensign plan, the average caseload in the new Ninth Circuit would actually increase to 600 cases per judge, while the new Twelfth Circuit would have half that, 326 cases per judge. There is no effort to give the Ninth the new judges they would need to keep the caseload even. This inequitable division of resources would leave residents of California and Hawaii facing greater delays and with court services inferior to their Twelfth Circuit neighbors.

The uniformity of law in the West is its major advantage. The Ninth Circuit, with its 21 State circuits, offers consistency to States that share many common concerns. The size of the Ninth Circuit is an asset, offering a unified legal approach to issues from immigration to the environment.

Dividing the circuit would make solving these problems even more difficult. For example, splitting the circuit could result in different interpretations in California and Arizona of laws that govern immigration, different applications of intellectual property laws on the California and Nevada sides of Lake Tahoe, and different intellectual property law in Silicon Valley and the Seattle technology corridor. These differences would have real economic costs. These are border States, and trade and commerce in the Pacific is a huge part of what they do. Therefore, the legal consistency between them is an asset, not a disadvantage.

In a time of tight judicial budgets, splitting the circuit would add significant and unnecessary expense. The split actually would require additional Federal funds to duplicate the current staff of the Ninth Circuit and a new or expanded courthouse and an administrative building since existing judicial facilities for a Twelfth Circuit are inadequate. The Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts estimated that creating a Twelfth Circuit would have a $16 million start-up cost and another $16 million in annual recurring cost.

If we are going to do anything, what we need is more judges on the Ninth does. Fairly distribute the resources pressures already forcing our Federal courts to cut staff and curtail services, this is no time to impose new, unnecessary costs on the judiciary.

My colleague, Senator BARBARA BOXER, joins me in these remarks. She will have a separate statement.

Those who know the Ninth Circuit best overwhelming oppose the split. Of the active Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals judges, 18 oppose the split, to be exact, and only 3 support it. Every State bar association that has weighed in on the split—Alaska, Arizona, Hawaii, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington—opposes breaking up the Ninth Circuit, and more than 100 different national, regional, and local organizations have written to urge that the Ninth Circuit be kept intact.

I believe splitting the Ninth Circuit would create more problems right now than it would solve. It will not solve the caseload problem of the circuit, and that is the critical issue. Those who propose the split do so to unfairly benefit themselves because they also take the judges from the Ninth Circuit and they add them to the Twelfth Circuit. They would end up having a caseload per judge of one-half of what the caseload would be in a new Ninth Circuit. So it is not a fair plan because it does not fairly distribute the resources based on caseload. I believe there is only one criterion for resources, and that is caseload. The judges must be where the cases are, and that should be an inescapable truth that we follow.

I urge the Senate to vote to sustain the point of order on the Ensign amendment to split the Ninth Circuit, and instead let’s focus our attention on securing the courts and then, secondly, providing the judges who are necessary to stabilize caseloads throughout the Nation.

Mr. President, I raise a point of order that the pending amendment violates section 505(a) of H. Con. Res. 95, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2004; that at 2 p.m. today, a vote occur on Senator ENSIGN’s motion to waive the point of order, considered made by this agreement, with the time until 2 p.m. equally divided and controlled between Senators ENSIGN and their designees; that if the motion to waive the point of order is not successful, then without further intervening action or debate, the bill be read a third time and the Senate vote... on passage of the bill; that if the motion to waive the Budget Act is successful, the provision on third reading and passage be vitiated. I ask that the preceding be done by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to sustain the budget point of order because the underlying amendment, which would split the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, is not yet ripe for consideration by this body. The issue is a very complicated one as to what will happen with the Ninth Circuit. It is admittedly too large. In the present time, we have a lot of analysis to do as to which States ought to be in which divisions. It is an issue which the Judiciary Committee has wrestled with for some time. We took it up in the 109th Congress in November of 2005. It passed unanimously. We need during the 109th Congress in November of 2005. It passed unanimously. We need to be listening to the people on the ground who deal with this issue every day, not creating hardship from our offices in DC. Let’s be frank here. The motivation behind splitting the circuit is political. It is an attempt to control the decisions of the judiciary by rearranging the bench. The judiciary is supposed to be an independent branch of government. It must remain so. Splitting the circuit is not the right thing to do for Montana. It is not the right thing to do for the country.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, once again we are faced with a proposal to split the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes my home State of California.

The amendment before us today would create a “new” Ninth Circuit, with California, Hawaii, and Guam, and a new 12th Circuit, consisting of other Western States.

I oppose this amendment for three reasons: First, splitting the Ninth Circuit would place a greater burden on California Federal appellate judges. Under the new plan, California judges would constitute only 58 percent of the former circuit’s judicial staff, but required to handle more than 70 percent of former circuit’s total caseload. Second, splitting the Ninth Circuit is unnecessary. The Ninth Circuit has performed well using current performance measures, despite having one of the highest caseloads per judge in the country. Third, splitting the Ninth Circuit is opposed by the majority of people who would be most affected—the judges and attorneys of the Ninth Circuit.

I urge my colleagues to reject this unnecessary amendment that has nothing to do with court security, and create new problems for the parties, lawyers and judges that practice in the Ninth Circuit.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senator from Nevada is expected to make a motion to waive the Budget Act.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to rule on the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The point of order is sustained.

The amendment falls.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to comment on section 207 of the pending matter, the Court Security Improvement Act of 2007. Section 207 increases the statutory maximum sentence for the Federal offense of manslaughter. Pursuant to this legislation, the maximum penalty for involuntary manslaughter will be increased from 6 to 10 years, and the penalty for voluntary manslaughter will be increased from 10 to 20 years. This is a change that I sought to have included in last year’s various court security bills. I am pleased to see that it will be included in this year’s final Senate bill.

The need for an increase in the manslaughter statutory maximum penalty is made clear in testimony that was presented before the U.S. Sentencing Commission by Paul Charlton, the U.S. Attorney for the District of Arizona, on March 25, 2003. Despite recent changes to the guidelines for manslaughter offenses, the typical DUI involuntary manslaughter crime still is subject to a sentencing range of only 30 to 37 months. Yet, as Mr. Charlton noted in his testimony, under Arizona State law, the presumptive sentence for a typical DUI involuntary manslaughter offense is 10½ years. In other words, despite recent guidelines adjustments, the Federal Criminal Justice System still imposes a sentence for involuntary manslaughter in drunk driving cases that is only a third of the sentence that would be imposed for the exact same conduct under State law.

Mr. Charlton concluded that there is a “dire need for immediate improve—" to the mandatory penalty and sentencing guidelines." As he noted, “the respect and confidence of surviving victims in the federal criminal justice system is severely under—" and will continue to be un—"

With this bill, the Congress finally as—" the statutory maximum penalties are increased to reflect the seriousness of the crime and the sentencing groups are comparably changed to reflect that increase."
Charlton noted in his testimony, even after Congress increased statutory penalties for these offenses in 1998, the sentences imposed by Federal courts “remained inadequate to deter and punish offenders [as of March 2003] because those changes were not consistent with this perception. Our perception, and that of many Indian and non-Indian victims, is that the federal criminal justice system is severely undermined and will continue to fail. Consequently, the respect and confidence of surviving victims in the federal criminal justice system is severely undermined and will continue to fail. The maximum penalties are increased to reflect the seriousness of the crime and the sentencing guidelines are compared to reflect that increase.

In 1994, the United States Congress amended the penalty for involuntary manslaughter from three years to the current six-year maximum term. (Footnote: See H.R. Conf. Rep. 103-711 (1994).) The primary purpose for the amendment was to correct the inappropriateness of the sentence imposed, and it applied to drunk driving homicides. In passing the amendment, one Senator noted “Involuntary manslaughter most often occurs through drunk driving. A three-year maximum sentence is not adequate to vindicate the most egregious indiscretions that must account for an increasing toll of innocent victims’ lives.” (Footnote: 134 CONG. REC. S.7446-01 (statement of Sen. Byrd).) I applaud Congress’ efforts in improving the law. However, it has become abundantly clear that the current statutory penalties remain inadequate to deter and punish offenders because the federal manslaughter sentence is never changed to reflect the increased penalty.

Today, the average range of sentence for a defendant for involuntary manslaughter is 16-24 months imprisonment followed by three years on Supervised Release. I would like to share with you some of the experiences faced by federal prosecutors assigned to DUI homicides in Indian country to illustrate the gravity of these crimes, the complicity and bias of the court system, and the need for increased penalties and comparable sentencing guidelines:

Kyle Peterson, was charged with one count of involuntary manslaughter for the death of a 60-year-old man who was driving to work in Phoenix. Peterson was driving north on the southbound lanes of the Loop 101. The two vehicles collided head-on as they entered a portion of the freeway located in Indian country. The victim was killed instantly. Peterson suffered serious head injuries but his recovery has been positive. At the time of impact, Peterson’s blood alcohol level was .252 blood alcohol level. The court, applying other occupants, including children, received serious injuries. The defendant walked away from the scene and was located several miles away. The defendant admitted to drinking all night and into the morning. At the time of the crash, he is estimated to have had a 2.0 blood alcohol level. By fleeing the scene, the defendant violated his probation and later died as a result of her injuries. Five other occupants, including children, received serious injuries. range of sentence generally is 7–10½ years in custody.

Compare Arizona v. Bruguiere with United States v. Lomatuwayma. In Bruguiere, the defendant was sentenced to 13½ years for driving while intoxicated and striking and killing an individual who was jogging along a road.

Ironically, if any of the victims in the above-mentioned cases were injured, rather than killed, each defendant would have been sentenced to 1½ years for assault statutory sentencing involving in much harsher penalties. [Footnote: Similarly, the statutory maximum for Assault with a Dangerous Weapon and Assault Resulting in Great Bodily Damage is 10 years or a $250,000 fine. 18 U.S.C. §113. The Base Offense Level is 16 and allows for specific offense characteristics which substantially higher outer sentencing range.] To address the low statutory and guideline penalty for involuntary manslaughter cases, most courts alternated or additional charges in appropriate cases such as assault or second degree murder. This approach enhances the penalties available to the court. Also, the added charges will hopefully deter the defendant from future conduct, and provide a means to advocate on behalf of the surviving victims.

For example, Lopon pled guilty to Second Degree Murder for committing a DUI homicide and was sentenced to 11½ years in custody. At the time of this offense, Lopon was on a sentence of federal probation for a prior DUI homicide. In total, this defendant had four prior DUI convictions, three involving accidents and one involving death, yet he remained undeterred by his first DUI homicide crime and federal sentence.

Additionally, federal prosecutors routinely seek enhanced penalties to increase a drunk driving defendant’s final adjusted sentence. However, courts are reluctant to impose upward departures in manslaughter. In United States v. Merriw, 176 F.3d 1079 (8th Cir. 1999), a case prosecuted by the District of South Dakota, the defendant was charged with one count of Involuntary Manslaughter for the DUI homicide of his two passengers, which included a 5-month-old infant. The defendant pleads guilty to the indictment and the district court departed upward to sentence in custody. In imposing sentence, the court stated that the defendant’s conduct was extremely dangerous and resulted in two deaths and severe bodily injury to surviving victims. Upholding the sentence, the Eighth Circuit stated “[w]e make special note, however, that in imposing a departure of this magnitude, the district court acted at the outermost limits of its discretionary authority.” Id. at 1082. Consequently, federal courts themselves appear to struggle with finding a sentence for these crimes and remaining reluctant to impose an upward departure even in the most egregious cases.

Additionally, if a defendant’s tribal criminal history reflects repeated criminal conduct while they are under the influence of alcohol, a prosecutor may seek an enhanced sentence pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §472 which increase in for purposes of similarity federal criminal jurisdictional responsibilities. So, I am thankful and encouraged that this Commission continues to have an interest in this area. I am also encouraged that the Commission developed the Native American Ad Hoc Advisory Committee to more thoroughly review the perceptions of Indian Country Crimes and Sentencing disparity. My colleagues and I on the Attorney General’s Native American Issues Advisory Committee look forward to the Committee’s findings. Thank you again for extending to me the invitation to speak to you today.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I appreciate the hard work of my colleagues in coming to agreement to proceed to final passage of this important legislation.

This bill has been a top priority of the Federal judiciary. I introduce it back in January, and it proceeded through regular order. We held a hearing, issued a committee report, considered floor amendments, and debated the measure.

Now it is time to vote for its passage. We can and we must provide for constitutional security for our federal judges.

Physical attacks on our judges threaten not only the dedicated public servants who serve in these roles but also the institution. Our Nation’s Founders knew that without an independent judiciary to protect individual rights from the political branches of Government, those rights and privileges would not be preserved. Our Federal courts are the ultimate check and balance in our system of government.

We owe it to our judges to better protect them and their families from violence to ensure that they have the peace of mind to do their vital and difficult jobs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and the reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) are necessarily absent.

Mr. LOTT. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

(b) SUNSET.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall cease to have force and effect on September 30, 2010.
The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. KLOBUCHAR). Without objection, it is so ordered.

IRAQ

Mr. REID. Madam President, the White House has been telling America that Democrats are doing the wrong thing by calling for a change of course in Iraq. They say holding the Iraq Government accountable is wrong. They say finding a political solution in Iraq is wrong. They say redeploying troops out of a civil war is wrong. They have said even debating a strategy for changing course is dangerous, and many Senate Republicans have backed that up by blocking several of our attempts to debate this issue here on the Senate Floor.

The American people want us to debate the war, and they want us to change the course. Listen to what the President’s own Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said in the last few hours, and I quote:

‘‘The debate in Congress has been helpful in demonstrating to the Iraqis that American patience is limited. The strong feelings expressed in the Congress about the timetable probably has had a positive impact in terms of communicating to the Iraqis that this is not an open-ended commitment.’’

The President and some of my Republican colleagues have also attempted to create a false crisis by implying that Democrats are putting the troops in danger by not sending the supplemental bill immediately. But today, the Pentagon acknowledged what Democrats have long known—that President Bush continues to misstate the reality on the ground and in Iraq to score political points.

Like the nonpartisan Congressional Research Service, the Pentagon now acknowledges that it can pay for the Iraq war at least through June with the funds that have already been provided.

I hope the President and our Republican colleagues in Congress will put these false claims aside so we can get back to working toward a bipartisan solution.

Yesterday I met with President Bush to express the will of the American people, senior military officials, and a bipartisan majority of Congress that we must change course in Iraq. I told President Bush that, going on to 5 years, more than 3,300 American soldiers lost, tens of thousands wounded, a third of them gravely wounded, and billions and billions of dollars depleted from our Treasury, we as a country must change course in Iraq.

Conditions in Iraq got worse by the day, now we find ourselves policing another nation’s civil war. We are less secure from the many threats to our national security than we were when the war began. As long as we follow the President’s path in Iraq, the war is lost. But there is still a chance to change course and we must change course. No one wants us to succeed in the Middle East more than I do. But there must be a change of course. Our brave men and women overseas have passed every test with flying colors. They have earned our pride and our praise. More important, they deserve a strategy worthy of their sacrifice.

The supplemental bill we passed with bipartisan support offers that. It includes a reasonable and attainable timeline to reduce combat missions and refocus our efforts on the real threats to our country’s security. It offers a new path, a new direction forward. If we put politics aside, I believe we can find a way to make America safer and stronger.

I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that I may speak as in morning business for as much time as I may require.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Chair. (The remarks of Mr. ALEXANDER pertaining to the introduction of S. 1168 are located in today’s Record under ‘‘Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.’’)

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

GONZALEZ V. CARHART

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, yesterday was a good day for democracy. It was a great day for American constitutionalism. I have said it before. I will continue to say it. All too often, we see judicial decisions on America’s most important social issues made without any constitutional warrant.

Too difficult to convince your community that it should not pray before football games? No problem. Just find a judge to say that the practice is unconstitutional.

‘‘Too discouraged by the slow pace of the march toward same-sex marriage? Find a judge to declare that the State constitution has allowed it all along. A constitutional right to same-sex marriage—‘‘presto change.’’

Americans of all political stripes understand that this highjacking of social policy from the people’s representation is deeply misguided.

A good number of law professors, law students, judges, and politicians still continue to inject the judicial branch...
