

any way cap executive salaries nor does it diminish the board's legal authority. It simply provides shareholders with a mechanism to voice their support or opposition to an executive compensation package.

This legislation is supported by the International Corporate Governance Network, the Council of Institutional Investors, labor unions, and shareholder organizations. Further, this approach to corporate governance is not new, and it has been shown that it works. The non-binding advisory vote has been successfully implemented in the United Kingdom and more recently in Australia. It was also adopted voluntarily by the insurance company, Aflac, and 52 other companies have similar proposals pending.

Mr. Chairman, American families cannot afford to continue subsidizing excessive CEO compensation packages. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 1257.

These young ladies have participated and volunteered their time in numerous community activities. They have raised funds and awareness for organizations and charities that include the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society and the Bosom Buddies. I ask that you and my distinguished colleagues join me in commending the athletes of the Laurel Highlands High School Cheerleading Squad in Uniontown, Pennsylvania. Their presence has been felt not only throughout the school but throughout the community as well. Mr. BURGESS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commend Kristofer K. Bjerga for being selected as a 2007 National Merit Scholarship Awards winner. Kristofer is a student at Keller High School in Keller, Texas.

CONGRATULATING MONROEVILLE, ALABAMA NATIVE CYNTHIA TUCKER FOR WINNING THE PULITZER PRIZE

HON. JO BONNER

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 25, 2007

Mr. BONNER. Madam Speaker, it is with both pride and pleasure that I rise this week to honor Cynthia Tucker, a beloved native of Monroeville, Alabama, for receiving the highest honor in American journalism, the Pulitzer Prize.

Raised in Monroeville, where her father was a school principal, Cynthia went to Auburn University, graduating in 1976 with a degree in journalism. She joined the Atlanta Journal-Constitution staff in 1976 and also worked a short while at The Philadelphia Inquirer. As a reporter, she covered local government, national politics, crime and education, in addition to filing dispatches from Africa, Central America, and Cuba.

Over 30 years have passed since Cynthia first joined the Journal-Constitution. She has risen to editorial page editor, and her syndicated column now appears in more than 70 newspapers throughout the United States.

The third time proved to be the charm for Cynthia, who was also a Pulitzer finalist in 2004 and 2006. This year the journalism department at the University of Alabama, my alma mater, also recognized her long, distinguished writing career by awarding her the 2007 Clarence Cason Writing Award. Last year, Cynthia was named the National Association of Black Journalists' Journalist of the Year. In 2000, the American Society of Newspaper Editors honored her with the Distinguished Writing Award for commentary, and she has won the Cox Newspaper award for column writing four times.

Nelle Harper Lee, Truman Capote, and Mark Childress firmly established Monroeville as the "Literary Capital of Alabama." Cynthia Tucker's name is now very much a part of this prestigious list.

Madam Speaker, Cynthia Tucker has been an inspiration to countless young women—and men—from Alabama and across the country for her distinguished career. I know her colleagues, her family, and her many friends join with me in praising her significant accomplishments and a job well done.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE KENNETH MICHAEL KAYS

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 25, 2007

Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the late Kenneth Michael Kays. Mr. Kays, a native of Fairfield, Illinois was a recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor. A monument in his memory is being dedicated on May 5, 2007 in Fairfield, Illinois.

Mr. Kays, a Private First Class in the United States Army, was cited for his heroic action in Thua Thien province, Republic of Vietnam, on May 7, 1970. His rank at that time was Private and he was serving as a medical airman with Company D, 1st Battalion, 101st Airborne Division near the Fire Support Base Maureen.

When enemy forces assaulted Company D's night defensive position, Private Kays began assisting his fallen and injured comrades. In assisting his fellow soldiers, he became a target and enemy fire and explosive charges severed the lower portion of his left leg. Private Kays applied a tourniquet to his leg and continued to search the perimeter and help his fellow soldiers who were injured. Private Kays did not allow himself to be treated until his fellow soldiers had been treated for their own wounds. He was cited with the Congressional Medal of Honor for his heroism.

My thoughts and prayers will be with the family and friends of Private First Class Kays as the monument is dedicated in his honor. May God bless his memory and may He continue to bless America.

TRIBUTE TO SENIOR MASTER
SERGEANT MARSHA A. ROWE

HON. JAMES T. WALSH

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 25, 2007

Mr. WALSH of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the career of Senior Master Sergeant Marsha A. Rowe, who retired March 9, 2007 from the 174th Fighter Wing, New York Air National Guard in Syracuse, New York after having served over 31 years of dedicated service in the United States Armed Forces. Her last duty position was Non-commissioned Officer in Charge of Plans, Scheduling, and Documentation in the 174th Fighter Wing Maintenance Operations Flight.

A native of Central New York, Sergeant Rowe's long and distinguished career in the United States Armed Forces began in January of 1976 when she enlisted in the New York Air National Guard. As a recent graduate of Indiana University, Sergeant Rowe was recruited for officer training but chose to join the enlisted ranks so she could work on the aircraft. All maintenance fields were combat positions and at that time not open to females, but Sergeant Rowe persisted and a waiver from National Guard Bureau allowed her to become a member of the 174th Maintenance Squadron Armament Section, working on gun and release systems and loading weapons on the A-37B Fighter Aircraft. Sergeant Rowe was named to the Load Standardization Crew, responsible for training all load crews, and earned the Maintenance Person of the Quarter Award. Soon after, Sergeant Rowe became the first female Recruiter in the 174th Fighter Wing. After her recruiting tour, Sergeant Rowe held numerous positions in the 174th Fighter Wing including Missile Shop Chief, Avionics Technician, Precision Measurement Equipment Lab Chief, Engine Manager, and Production Controller. In addition to the A-37B Dragonfly, she has worked on the A-10 Thunderbolt and the F-16 Falcon. Sergeant Rowe served in Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm, where she maintained the Electronics Counter Measure system on the F-16 Aircraft. Upon her return, she was chosen to carry the NY State Flag in both the Washington, DC and New York City Victory Celebration Parades.

In addition to her full-time position, Sergeant Rowe has served as the Program Manager for the Base Security Augmentee Program for the past 13 years. She was a member of the Base Honor/Color Guard from 1976-1998, a member of the Base Pistol Team, served on the Board of Directors for the All Services Club, and was instrumental in organizing the trip to Washington, DC for the dedication of the Women's Memorial in Arlington National Cemetery. An animal advocate, Sergeant Rowe is involved in several organizations, and will be dedicating her retirement years to their causes.

Sergeant Rowe's military decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal; the Air Force Commendation Medal with 3 oak leaf clusters; and the Air Force Achievement Medal with one oak leaf cluster. Her military unit awards include the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award with Combat 'V' device and four oak leaf clusters and the Air Force Organizational Excellence Award. She also holds the Air Reserve Forces Meritorious Service Medal with nine oak leaf clusters; the National Defense Service Medal with one bronze service star, the Southwest Asia Service Medal with three campaign stars; and the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal. Other service awards include the Air Force Longevity Service Award with six oak leaf clusters; the Armed Forces Reserve Medal with silver hourglass device, Mobilization "M" device, and Numeral 2; the USAF NCO Professional Military Education Graduate Ribbon; Small Arms Expert Marksmanship Ribbon; and the Air Force Training Ribbon. Her Foreign Service awards include the Kuwait Liberation Medal from Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and the Kuwait Liberation Medal from the Government of Kuwait. She is also the recipient of the N.Y. State Commendation Medal.

Sergeant Rowe is a very special person. She willingly served her Nation in time of war, and in time of peace, exuding integrity, loyalty and pride. For her unrelenting service to her country, Sergeant Rowe can retire knowing she has earned such a status. I wish her well in retirement and thank her for her years of hard work and dedication.

AWARDING OF CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL TO THE TUSKEGEE AIRMEN

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 25, 2007

Mr. RANGEL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the awarding of the Congressional Gold Medal to the Tuskegee Airmen on March 29, 2007.

The Tuskegee Airmen were welcomed into the Capitol Rotunda to an excited and proud crowd of more than 700 people including family members, friends, press organizations, members of Congress, Colin Powell, and President Bush. As they came in walking and some being escorted in wheelchairs, I could clearly see the happiness on their faces. This was a day they had been anxiously waiting and living for. Finally, they received the honor and recognition that was so long over due. I was overwhelmed with joy and excited to see those in attendance.

Never in the history of Congress has such a large group been awarded a Congressional Gold Medal and I'm extremely proud to have been a part of this historical ceremony. I was overwhelmed with joy to see the excitement of the Tuskegee Airmen and their guests. The Rotunda was absolutely filled to capacity. This clearly demonstrates the value and appreciation people have for the contribution and sacrifice of the Tuskegee Airmen.

Their outstanding service during World War II was legendary. They fought the enemy abroad and racism at home. Despite being discriminated against, they rose to the challenge and broke down racial barriers in the United States Armed Forces. I'm forever grateful for their courage, bravery, and leadership.

I extend special thanks to Senator LEVIN for his leadership. I also extend thanks to you, Speaker PELOSI, Colin Powell, the United States Mint, and the Smithsonian Institution. My heart was warmed by the salute to the Tuskegee Airmen by President Bush. The entire ceremony was a memorable event and I will never forget it.

SUBPRIME LENDING

HON. JOE BACA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 25, 2007

Mr. BACA. Madam Speaker, I ask for unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks. As the Chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus and as a member of the House Financial Services Committee, I consider helping ensure equal access to homeownership for all Americans a high priority of mine.

Therefore, I've grown increasingly concerned over the past several years about the disproportionate amount of higher priced subprime lending that is concentrated in the minority population and in minority neighborhoods. According to the 2005 HMDA data, 52% of African Americans and 40% Latino are in high-cost, subprime loans as compared to 19% of white families. I wonder whether some or most of these families could have qualified for a better, more affordable loan but were instead steered into a subprime loan by a lender or broker eager to make a profit.
