crops, and provide better insurance programs. One of Williams’ most storied accomplishments was getting the average farmer involved in the leadership and policy development process, most notably by developing the National Cotton Council’s Producer Steering Committee. To this day, the Steering Committee continues to ensure producers have an active voice on policy issues. He never underestimated the knowledge and influence carried by the producer. Farmers all over Arkansas appreciated that and never forgot the respect he gave their opinions.

Cecil Williams took each event in stride and persevered with leadership and optimism. His ability to develop and foster leadership among the producers ranks was and still is an impressive feat. His relentless defense of agriculture, and the years he spent cultivating active and knowledgeable producers in Arkansas will be long remembered by those whose lives he touched through his tireless devotion. I am always proud to see Arkansas farmers when they make their way to Washington or when I am traveling the state. These are, without a doubt in my mind, the best farmers in America thanks to the leadership of people like Cecil Williams.

During his lifetime, Williams always led by example and stayed true to his cause; rarely will you find such a noble and grounded leader. This was a man who could see the big picture and still thoroughly understand the comprehensive knowledge and influence carried by the average farmer involved in the leadership and policy development process, to enhance the ability of the board of directors of The American National Red Cross to support the critical mission of The American National Red Cross in the 21st century, and for other purposes.
