ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to 15 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

THE COST OF THE WAR IN IRAQ

(Mr. MORAN of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN of Virginia, Madam Speaker, the Congressional Budget Office just released an analysis that on top of the half a trillion dollars that we have already spent on the war in Iraq, it will cost us another $2 trillion over the next decade. That includes $564 million of interest, because every dime of this war in Iraq has been borrowed, from our children and from our grandchildren. It will come to a greater cost than the cost of the Korean, the Vietnam War and all three theaters of operation in World War II. It boils down to about $7,000 for every man, woman and child.

And here we thought the only real sacrifice was being borne by our soldiers and their families. We are beginning to see the real implications for all of America. In fact, just last week, the President vetoed a bill that would have cost $35 billion but would have provided health care to 10 million children over the next 5 years and at the same time demanded that we instead spend that same amount of money for 3 weeks in Iraq. This is not what America expects from its President or its Congress, Madam Speaker.

VETERANS AFFAIRS APPROPRIATIONS BILL

(Mr. AKIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. AKIN, Mr. Speaker, last week on ABC’s news program, Charlie Gibson announced the news in Iraq. He said, “The news is, there isn’t any news.” That’s right. Across all of Iraq, there were no fatalities, shootings and bombs going off. As the media has started to recognize that we have turned the corner and are winning the war in Iraq, this pressing question, once again, comes before the House, and that is, what are the Democrats going to do with the bill that we have already passed and that the Senate has already passed to provide money for our veterans?

Eighteen million dollars every day is being wasted for the last 130 days because we won’t bring this veterans funding bill back for final approval. It has the votes. What are we waiting for, post-traumatic stress syndrome? Veterans hospitals? Veterans clinics? We have to ask the Democrat leadership why a 130-day wait.

It’s time for us to fund our veterans.

HONORING GALESBURG, ILLINOIS

(Mr. HARE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HARE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay honor to my hometown, the city of Galesburg, IL, for publicly speaking out against hate crimes. Galesburg has a rich tradition of promoting equality for all of its citizens. It was a stop on the Underground Railroad and home to the first anti-slavery society in the State of Illinois.

Mayor Gary Smith recently declared October Not in Our Town Month, an effort to combat violent, bias-motivated crimes designed to cause fear and intimidation among an entire group of people.

The Not in Our Town Month proclamation states, “Hate groups shall not divide communities.” It also urges the residents of Galesburg to “Join together to eliminate racism and violence and to declare that respect, equality and freedom for all people be our goal.’

Crimes based on prejudice are a poor reflection on our communities, and I congratulate Galesburg for refusing to stand by in silence.

VETERANS FUNDING

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Good morning, Mr. Speaker.

My colleagues, the House passed the largest increase in veterans funding in the 77-year history of the Veterans Affairs Department. The bill provides more than $37 billion for veterans programs. This is a $4.4 billion increase over last year. As pointed out earlier, it has been over 130 days since the House passed the VA/Military Construction funding. Yet they have refused to appoint conferees like the Senate, their counterparts, have already done. So at this point the bill can’t move forward and be signed by the President.

By the Democrats’ failure to move forward on this bill, veterans are losing out on $600 million for posttraumatic stress disorder care, traumatic brain injury research and care; $4.1 billion to improve VA facilities, hospitals and clinics; and, Lastly, $480 million for prosthetic research to help our wound-sick veterans retain a positive quality of life.

Mr. Speaker, we urge our Democrat colleagues to move forward on this bill and have it to the President so he can sign it on Veterans Day.

NATURAL DISASTERS

(Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Our hearts go out to the almost million people forced to flee their homes from wildfires in Southern California. At the same time a drought has gripped North Carolina and Georgia which in the long run may be end up being as devastating. These disasters are almost unimaginable, except we’ve been there before, like in Southern California in 2003. And two-thirds of the new development in the last 10 years in Southern California has been in areas we know are subject to wildfire. What are we going to do about it?

The administration’s refusal to deal meaningfully with global warming is the most glaring example of behaviors that doom us to reruns for years to come. Georgia has no real plan to deal with its water and doesn’t even know what supplies it can count upon. Here in Congress, we fail to prioritize the right infrastructure and give billions of dollars for relief after a disaster and won’t spend millions to invest in programs to protect before it happens.

I hope and pray that the message sinks in and that we use this disaster as a wake-up call to get our act together to help people before these things happen to save both lives and money in the future.

CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise this morning to express on behalf of California’s congressional delegation our appreciation to our colleagues here in the House of Representatives and to the administration, President Bush and Secretary Chertoff and Director Paulison and others in the administration who are at this moment on the ground in Southern California, and to the courageous firefighters and Governor Schwarzenegger and his entire team for all that is being done to deal with what has been described by one battalion chief in San Diego, California, as the worst fire that the State has ever faced. Last night, Brian Williams of NBC News said that the fact that nearly a million people have been evacuated from their homes means that this is the largest movement of people since the Civil War.

We are going to go through some very difficult and challenging days ahead, and to the firefighters, to those who have suffered losses, our thoughts and prayers are with you. And again my appreciation to our colleagues who represent States across this country, North Carolina, Wyoming, Arizona, Idaho, States all across this country, Mr. Speaker, that have stepped up to the plate to help us. I also want to express my appreciation to Speaker Pelosi as well.

CHIP

(Mr. SIRES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SIRES. Mr. Speaker, the bipartisan CHIP Reauthorization Act had the support of over two-thirds of the U.S. Senate, nearly every U.S. Governor, and an overwhelming majority of the American people. Unfortunately, it did not have the support of two crucial parties, President Bush who vetoed it and his Republican friends who voted to uphold his veto.

Instead of helping us extend health care to low-income children, the President claims this fully-paid-for bill is excessive spending and instead he proposes to spend just $5 billion more than we do now on the CHIP program. According to the Congressional Budget Office, the President’s plan will lead to more than 800,000 children losing their coverage.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to know how the President and his Republican enablers would determine which 800,000 children lose their coverage. And what do they tell the 4 million children who are currently eligible for CHIP, but will have no hope of getting this coverage unless our bipartisan bill passes? It is time for Republicans in this body to reject the President’s plan to cut health care for children and stand with us in strengthening the CHIP program.

PROVIDING HEALTH CARE FOR MILLIONS OF AMERICAN CHILDREN

(Mr. WALZ of Minnesota asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WALZ of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, the last week 10 million children were denied health insurance because some of my colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle chose to stand with President Bush over the children.

It is disappointing that some of our colleagues stood with the President and stood with the smoke-and-mirrors campaign to distort what the SCHIP legislation was. But it is not the end; it is only the beginning of the effort of this Congress to stand with American families to protect health care for our children.

Democrats in this body, along with 68 Members of the Senate and 43 of our Nation’s Governors and over 80 percent of the American public want this piece of legislation to move. We are committed to ensuring that States have the resources and flexibility necessary to provide health care to our children.

Mr. Speaker, the American people, Governors and many Members of Congress, both Democrat and Republican, were disappointed that more of our colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle didn’t vote to override the veto. However, we will give them the opportunity soon and often to change that vote, stand with America’s children, and reject the President’s veto.

DEMAND THAT HOUSE APPOINT CONFEREES ON VA APPROPRIATIONS

(Mrs. BLACKBURN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. Speaker, more than 4 months ago the House passed an appropriations bill designed to provide benefits for our soldiers and veterans. H.R. 2642 passed the House by an overwhelming 409-2 vote. A similar bill went through the Senate 92-1. But since then, nothing has happened.

It has been 131 days since we passed the legislation, and still nothing has been done. It is President Bush’s desk for him to sign. The Senate appointed conferees to hammer out a compromise between the two bills 6 weeks ago. But the House leadership? Nothing has been done.

The question is why. Why would the new majority play politics with the health care of our brave men and women in uniform? There is no reason, a month into this fiscal year, that the bill is unresolved.

I ask all my colleagues, all 408 of them who voted for this bill, to demand that the House appoint conferees. Stop doing nothing. Do what needs to be done to meet the needs of our men and women in uniform.

CONGRATULATING THE UNITED NATIONS ON UNITED NATIONS DAY

(Mr. FARR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise on a happy note. It is a happy birthday today, the birthday of the United Nations. It was 62 years ago when 50 countries gathered in the great City of San Francisco, California, to make the cause of international peace and security a global mantra and launched the United Nations. It was a good idea then, and 62 years later, it is still a good idea.

In a world that is tense with war, the U.N. fights for peace every day. Where hunger plagues the poor, the U.N. provides food aid to more than 80 million people every day, every year. In 166 nations that suffer devastating poverty, the U.N. offers proactive programs to buttress economic development. And, most important of all, the U.N. deploys 100,000 peacekeepers around the world on missions vital to stabilization of regions under threat of conflict.

The answer to global distress is found in solving the problems that are the root causes of poverty, the lack of health care, shelter and legislation. The U.N. is the only organization worldwide dedicated to this grand mission.

I congratulate the United Nations for its hard work, and ask Members of this body to support and invigorate America’s commitment to this vital international organization.

SUPPORT THE SCHIP REAUTHORIZED

(Ms. SOLIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of reauthorizing the Children’s Health Insurance Program. President Bush, as you know, has callously denied health care for 10 million poor children due to his misplaced priorities.

More than 800,000 children in my home State of California depend on the Healthy Families Program. More than half of those children happen to be Hispanic. The health of millions of children will be endangered and millions more will continue to suffer if we do not reauthorize this program.

In Congress have an incredible opportunity to do what is right for our children, especially those children who are disadvantaged and come from low-income families. All children, regardless of race, income or geography deserve a healthy start in life.

It is time to end this false allegation that undocumented immigrants are receiving this coverage. Ten million children are counting on us to do the right thing. We have a moral obligation to protect the health and well-being of all of our children.

IRAQI CONTRACTS WITH IRAN AND CHINA CONCERN UNITED STATES

(Mr. ENGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, a very disturbing report has come out that Iraq has agreed to award $1.1 billion in contracts to Iranian and Chinese companies to build a pair of enormous power plants. That is what the Iraqi Minister of Electricity said on Tuesday. Word of the project prompted serious concerns among American military officials who fear that Iranian commercial investments can mask military activities at a time of our heightened tension with Iran.

Mr. Speaker, at a time when young Americans are dying in Iraq and when the U.S. is spending billions of dollars in Iraq, this makes absolutely no sense at all. The Iraqi Electricity Minister said that the Iraqi project would be built in Sadr City, a Shiite enclave in Iraq. He added that Iran had also agreed to provide cheap electricity from its own grid to southern Iraq and to build a large power plant, essentially free of charge, in an area between two Shiite holy cities.

The expansion of ties between Iraq and Iran comes as the U.S. and Iran clash on nuclear issues and about what American officials said was Iranian support for armed groups. This is an outrage and should not stand.

THE PRESIDENT’S MISPLACED PRIORITIES: WHAT WE COULD DO HERE WITH MONEY GOING TO IRAQ

(Mr. ARCURI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ARCURI. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week, President Bush proposed that our Nation spend another $196 billion in Iraq next year. Today we will spend $330 million fighting the war in Iraq. Imagine that. Every day, $330 million in taxpayer dollars is going to Iraq.

Just imagine for one moment what we could do here in the United States with that money instead. We could hire an additional 1,700 Border Patrol agents to work our borders for an entire year. We could provide health care to 50,000 more veterans so they receive the essential health care treatment that they need. We could enroll 46,000 more children in Head Start for 1 year, so they can receive early childhood education. If we took 1 day of funding from the Iraq war, we could help nearly 890,000 families in the U.S. pay their rent this winter through the LIHEAP program. We could provide 270,000 more children health care coverage through the CHIP program.

Mr. Speaker, while President Bush has no problem sending billions of dollars to Iraq, he is neglecting essential needs here in America. The Democratic majority in this Congress refuses to follow that lead.

BUSH NEGLECTS DOMESTIC PRIORITIES TO CONTINUE TO FOCUS ON WAR IN IRAQ

(Mr. YARMUTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. YARMUTH. Mr. Speaker, when President Bush vetoed a bill earlier this month that would provide health care coverage to 10 million American children, he said the spending was excessive. The bipartisan bill invested $35 billion to fight the war in Iraq over the next year. If $35 billion for children’s health care over a winter is excessive, what exactly is his request for the war.

I know the President believes that Congress is his personal ATM machine, but article I of the Constitution says different, and we will not rubber-stamp his funding request for the war.
troops home. There is no military solution to the war; yet the Bush administration refuses to put pressure on the Iraqi Government to enact the political reforms that are necessary to bring about stability in the country.

While we push the administration to change course in Iraq, we also remain firm in our conviction to pass the children's health care bill that covers 10 million American children.

TITLE V—SENCE OF CONGRESS REGARDING FUNDING

SEC. 5001. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING FUNDING.

It is the sense of Congress that the Federal Government should not fund a national heritage area in perpetuity.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) and the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Bishop) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill, H.R. 1483.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today, as America continues to grapple with the war and citizens throughout these United States deal with their daily struggles, I think it is important for us to harken back to our heritage and to celebrate our culture.

From the coalfields of western West Virginia to the Land of Lincoln in Illinois; from the hallowed ground of the Virginia Piedmont, where battles were fought to unify this Nation, to the Santa Cruz Valley of New Mexico, this is the fabric of America. This is her heartbeat. Let us take time to listen to it and to celebrate it.

The legislation we are considering today was introduced by my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Ohio, Representative RALPH REGULA, who has been a strong and effective advocate for heritage areas, not only in the area he represents but also throughout the country, and I commend and salute him for that leadership.

Heritage areas help to preserve and interpret the geological history, the natural history and the human history of an area in a comprehensive fashion so that we and our children will better understand how our land has shaped our history and how our history has shaped our land.

National heritage areas are local community-driven preservation projects. Most of them arise out of the concerns of a core group of committees, local folks who want to work together to preserve the places and resources that make their country or town or region unique. These citizens bring their proposals to their elected representatives in Congress because they need technical and planning assistance from their government and matching funds to use as seed money to help get their program off the ground.

Now, 23 years after the first national heritage area was designated, the program is at a crossroads. Congress can either provide the program with the tools and support it needs to continue, maturing into a successful preservation model, or the Congress can turn our backs on heritage areas and leave local communities to fend for themselves as they try to save those things that make them special, that make America special.

We are moving this legislation today because we support national heritage areas and we want to see them succeed. Ever since Congress established the Illinois and Michigan Canal National Heritage Corridor in 1984, heritage tourism has been growing, and today it is a significant economic driver. Heritage areas are worthwhile, not only as a way to help local economies, but also as a crucial tool for preserving our communities’ and our people’s links to the past.

By providing Federal recognition and financial support, we encourage preservation and interpretation of important periods in our Nation’s history in a way that traditional units of the national park system cannot do.

Our initial investment ‘primed the pump’ if you will, and ensures that those areas get a solid start toward financial and operational independence. Given that each Federal dollar is matched by local funds, the Federal investment in the heritage area program is money well spent.

In rejoinder these Rules Committee Monday, my colleague Mr. REGULA noted that the $8 million made in his heritage area has yielded more than $270 million in non-Federal funding. For affected local communities, heritage areas are a program that works.

H.R. 1483, as amended, would establish six new heritage areas, increase the funding authorization for non-existing areas, and make mostly technical changes in the establishing legislation for several of those areas. The bill also includes a study of the Northern Neck of Virginia, requested by our late colleague, Representative Jo Ann Davis.

Bringing this bill before the House today responds to the frequent and energetic requests of numerous Members on both sides of the aisle, Republicans and Democrats. In total, H.R. 1483 includes bills that are cosponsored by dozens of Members in both parties, including our House delegation in Illinois and New Jersey.

We also had very helpful input from the administration on this legislation, including detailed studies of the suitability of each new heritage area. Most of the changes being made to existing heritage areas were added at the request of the National Park Service.

This is a good bill, Mr. Speaker, and I want to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) for his commitment and leadership on heritage areas. We support passage of H.R. 1483 and urge its adoption by the House today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I am actually saddened to rise today on this particular bill. The 16 heritage areas that are either existing or proposed, many of them are very, very good, things that I would readily support.

Unfortunately, they have been packaged into what the government book my high school students read called ‘A these mice bring in a variegated way, in which bad proposals can be packaged around the few good proposals that are in here in hopes that people will tolerate the bad in hopes of getting a favorable recommendation from the good. My State Senator and State legislators would never have tolerated this type of bill. This bill would be split up in our State so that each proposal would stand on its own merits and go up or down. Unfortunately, we do not use that procedure here. We ought to, but we do not.

Even in areas where something like an appropriation can be justified by lumping things together, in an authorization, area dedication is why I rise in opposition to H.R. 1483.

When this bill was originally introduced, it was to reauthorize nine heritage areas, giving each an additional $10 million. Since the reauthorization on expiration, it should not. That is why I said during the hearings on this bill, the National Park Service testified that no heritage area has become self-sufficient. Unfortunately, it gets worse.

The Heritage Area Alliance, the association which represents all heritage areas, has told us in committee hearing that they should never become self-sufficient and they should always rely on continuous Federal appropriations for every heritage area. In fact, the Heritage Area Alliance has become a cottage industry where groups get grants from the Federal Government to go around telling other people how to get more grants from the Federal Government. And they are now wishing to reward. While a public-private partnership can yield positive results, this program has taken on a life of its own.

In the Resources Committee, the bill was amended to cut back additional funds to existing heritage areas from $10 million to $5 million. I compliment Chairman Grijalva for his amendment and the chairman of the full committee for accepting it. It is like taking the ball off the bottom branches of the Christmas tree so the cat won’t play with them.

And after taking that positive step, they reverse course and tack on six new heritage areas that never had hearings, but in fairness, only one has gone through the regular order that the chairman of the full committee established when we first met this year.

The Democrats also decided to make changes. In the Resources Committee, the majority of our colleagues have asked their party colleagues to remove their districts, but it was re-rejected. And because this is a closed rule, our colleagues do not have the opportunity of coming down here and on the floor of the House presenting their reasons why they wish to be withdrawn from this particular district.

We should not take Federal designations of this type. It is a difficult process; a specified area is supposed to still be locally operated. One must ask how a Virginia-based management entity will represent the local interests of four States. It is a legitimate question, but the bottom line is we still should respect our colleagues' privilege to represent their constituencies.

There has been criticism that private property protections in this bill are inadequate. The majority claims that the protections in this bill are sufficient because it states that participation is voluntary. If two of our Members want to voluntarily opt out of this particular bill and are not allowed to do so, how will any property owner sitting in one of these new proposed districts get any kind of assurance that this provision will be implemented when it is not voluntary for any Member to remove their districts from these types of recommendations?

In the Resources Committee, I offered an amendment that would have simply provided for the right of private property owners to withdraw their land from a heritage area boundary. This is the exact same provision that has been on the 12 prior heritage areas. This is the case with that provision that Mr. Wolf added in his bill and was taken out by the committee even though he objected to the removal of that language from his own particular provision. Why are we treating these heritage areas different than the precedent we established in the other heritage areas? It is not an additional burden to the management. It would go a long way to assuring constituents that their rights would be protected. Unfortunately, the amendment was defeated again because the Democrats claim that their language was sufficient, an argument that has proved inaccurate on other occasions. In light of the infamous Kelo decision, we need to be extra cautious in the House when we deliberate on property rights.

The other side will claim that there is no risk to property rights. While I hope that is correct, we need to be very sure because boundaries have a consequence, or why should we have them. Proposing this bill on the one hand say we need boundaries to protect historical properties, but on the other hand there is no regulatory authority. You can’t have it both ways. It is an invitation to lawsuits. We have already seen cases brought forward based on these amendments that are safeguarding our colleagues to Pogliani v. United States Corps of Engineers. It has already happened that lawsuits have been filed to discontinue actions based on inclusion in a heritage area. The right to opt out of the boundary we proposed would have prevented this type of situation in the future.

In some respects this legislation is simple provided for the right of private property owners to withdraw their land from the bill. The Muscle Shoals proposal, which is another one I like a lot, I think it is good, but it has not yet completed a feasibility study. In other words, we don’t have the assurance this heritage area could get off the ground before we wish to actually make the check for it.

We were promised in this particular bill that there would be a map included. If you see in the self-executing rule of the Rules Committee, they have put a number in place that used to be blank. A small little detail. But we have not been provided with a map of what the boundaries of this new heritage area actually are. So how can we tell people they can be voluntarily in or out of it when we don’t even know what the levels are? No wonder this has become a closed rule.

There is another area in this bill that was created, a Niagara Falls region, at the behest of the very powerful chairwoman of the Rules Committee, Ms. Slattery. As is the case with the amendment, it is not clear what is needed to protect the falls. Protect the falls from what? What potential harm to the falls can be protected by the provisions of this particular bill? Remember, proponents say there are no restrictions or regulations imposed. Perhaps the totally unique commission that is established in this portion of the bill that has the Secretary of the Interior creating a new entity and staffing it with Federal employees and paying for it can finally answer that particular question. There is little more in this particular provision than using the National Park Service to conduct economic redevelopment projects. The Park Service does not have the expertise, or the funds, or the desire to be burdened with this subject.

At the center of the economic development plan for Niagara Falls is a new casino. Niagara Falls, honeymoons, gambling, there may be a nexus there somewhere for us. But while the State of New York has the right to pursue casinos and help their development, it is inappropriate to use national heritage areas to promote the casino. An amendment was offered when the Niagara Falls area of this measure went through the committee to put a firewall between the Federal funds in this bill and the casino. Committee Democrats rejected again this simple amendment. Whatever my colleagues feel on the issue of gaming is irrelevant. We should all agree, though, that this is not an appropriate use of Federal funds, especially when one area is given an advantage over the other.

Finally, concerns have been raised that these heritage areas and their boundaries may be used to impede the expansion of energy transmission lines. While this may not be the full intent of the sponsors, we must proceed cautiously before we further damage our ability to keep up with the demand for energy. The grid is already heavily taxed, and it would be a tragedy to see blackouts as an unintended consequence of these designations.

Speaker, I do not have an opportunity to improve this bill via amendment as a result of the closed rule, I have to urge my colleagues to oppose this legislation, unfortunately.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I am honored at this point to yield 2 minutes to the gentlelady that the gentleman from New York, Representative Louise Slaughter, who has been a true fighter for her Niagara Falls National Heritage Area.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding the floor. Our colleagues do not have the opportunity of coming down here and on the floor of the House presenting their reasons why they wish to be withdrawn from this particular district.

will assist our local and State organizations to develop and implement a plan to conserve and promote Niagara’s natural attributes. Niagara Falls is one of the seven natural wonders of the world. We should all cherish it. The benefits are obvious for all to see.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 3 minutes to the sponsor of this particular bill, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), at the conclusion of which it would be very nice if the other side would have additional time for him because he’s supporting your side.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Ohio 1 minute, also.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

As a matter of fact, our chamber of commerce brought in an expert on economic development as to what we could do to keep young families in our community, and the said you’d need one asset is the corridor, the trail, because young families want to use it, and they do use it and put a human face on it, not only do we see young families all the time out on the towpath with their bicycles, with their family groups, but I see handicapped people who are wheeling their wheelchairs down the trail. So they, too, can benefit from the value of open space, a touch of environment and touch of nature.

It is a terrific asset in our community. Over 3 million people use it. In terms of costs, this is not an appropriation. This is an authorization. So let’s not be confused here by what it costs. That will be a decision for the Appropriations Committee to make as to how much they want to commit. All this bill does is authorize this expenditure.

But what we found is that we get a huge outpouring of community support, foundations, village councils, private individuals who support this. For every dollar of Federal support, there’s probably been $10 of local community involvement because they appreciate the recreational value. They appreciate the fact that this corridor that comes from using these facilities. They appreciate what it means to have this kind of thing in our community.

The Ohio and Erie Canal Towpath, which was originally there as part of the canal system, had brought their proximity to Ohio many years ago. In fact, we had had a system of canals that were the original expressways of yesterday, and it started with George Washington and John Quincy Adams who pushed this for people.

Of course, we all know about the grandaddy of all canals, the C&O Canal. That was saved. It was originally designed to be a highway. The highway folks said, yeah, this is wonderful; we’ve got 160 miles here of corridor where the canal and the towpath run so we’ll put a highway on it. And Justice William O. Douglas got the Washington press corps together and said, “Come with me; we’ll hike this place ourselves that was a little strenuous at the time, but they managed it, and they wrote such glowing editorials about it that it was preserved.

And to date, it’s the C&O Canal National Parkway, and all you need to do is go out there on a Sunday afternoon or any weekday and you see people, thousands of people, from the City of Washington and the area using the C&O Canal for recreation, for an understanding of environment, for an understanding of history. It’s a terrific asset.

And I think what we’re saying here is that other communities want to preserve their heritage corridors to tell the story of how their communities were built originally, and this is the case in Ohio. But you get all the additional benefits of health, of walking and bicycling on a towpath, the benefits of being together as a family, the benefits of having a community asset.

It was written that it costs, but I don’t think we are ready to charge for Yellowstone or Gettysburg. We preserve these things, and it’s part of the national responsibility to preserve these historic artifacts and places that are very much a part of our Nation’s history.

So I would urge my colleagues to support this bill. Let the communities raise their money. Let them go to the Appropriations Committee and get whatever they can by way of support.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, continuing with the strong bipartisan support for this bill, I yield 2 minutes to my very good friend and dear colleague, the gentleman from Peoria, Illinois, Mr. LOHOD, whose bipartisan nature and friendly relations we’re going to truly miss in this Congress next year.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I’d also like to yield the gentleman 1 minute of our time as well.

Mr. LOHOD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. LOHOD. Mr. Speaker, I thank both gentlemen for the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 1483, legislation to amend the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act to establish six new national heritage areas, including one running through my own district known as the Abraham Lincoln National Heritage Area.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, as it will lead to an opportunity for all in Illinois and all in our country to really have a better understanding of President Lincoln.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 1483, legislation to amend the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act to establish six new national heritage areas, including one running through my own district known as the Abraham Lincoln National Heritage Area.

I would first like to thank Chairman RAHALL and Ranking Member YOUNG for bringing this important matter to the Floor today. I would also like to thank Chairman GRIJALVA and Ranking Member OSWALD for their hearings on the Abraham Lincoln National Heritage Area in their Subcommittee.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the establishment of heritage areas provides us with a unique opportunity to take a closer look at some of the most culturally significant areas of our country. As a former school teacher, I believe very strongly in the need to study the past in order to understand how we got to where we are today. Many of the issues that shaped President Lincoln’s legacy were explored, and it is worthwhile to continue to explore these issues. The establishment of the Abraham Lincoln National Heritage Area within H.R. 1483 would accomplish these goals.

The purpose of creating this national heritage area in Illinois is to manage, study, and promote Lincoln-related historical sites. Scattered throughout the central Illinois landscapes are countless places where Lincoln traveled and lived. As children, we are taught the basic history of our country, including the basic facts of President Lincoln’s life and legacy. What the history books usually don’t teach are the stories and events that shaped President Lincoln and made him the man he became. By designating this heritage area, we can tie many Lincoln sites together in order to create a tapestry that will allow us to better understand the influences that shaped President Lincoln’s life.

During my time in Congress, I have had the unique honor of representing all 11 counties that originally formed Abraham Lincoln’s congressional district when he served one term in the House of Representatives. The year 2009 represents the 200th year since Abraham Lincoln’s birth. I am a co-chair, along with Senator DURBIN, of the Abraham Lincoln Bicentennial Commission, which is in charge of celebrating this event. What better way to honor one of the most prominent figures in American history, who affected millions of lives, than preserving and studying further those places where he lived and worked that had a profound effect on his later life.

I urge my colleagues to support the preservation of Abraham Lincoln’s legacy by voting in favor of H.R. 1483.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf), once again speaking in favor, and I would ask maybe perhaps the other side would be a little bit more generous than the last time with their giving him some additional time.

Mr. RAHALL. I beg your pardon, it’s your side of the aisle that should be yielding the time totally, but I’ll be glad to yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Virginia, who has been very instrumental in crafting this legislation, and I appreciate his help. (Mr. Wolf asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlemen. I want to thank the chairman very much for his help and his support and your staff. I also want to honor Mr. REGULA, who has probably made such an impact on these issues over the many, many, many years.

I rise in strong support of this. The journey through hallowed grounds is hallowed growth. It begins with Monticello where Jefferson came out and wrote those words “that all men are created equal, endowed by their Creator. The Ronald Reagan said those words were a covenant, a covenant with not only Americans but with the entire world.

Then we move up to Antietam, Antietam where President Lincoln took that win, that battle, that victory there of 20,000 deaths and then had the Emancipation Proclamation. That is hallowed ground because when you walk in 1 day, 20,000 people died.

And then we move up to Gettysburg, Gettysburg where President Lincoln, probably the greatest or second greatest President after President Washington, gave that famous speech that made sure that nation came together. This is hallowed ground. It is areas that we have helped define ourselves and who we are and why we are who we are.

Also in this area is Monroe’s house, Oak Hill; Montpelier, President Madison; also Zachary Taylor’s house; Eisenhower’s farm; Teddy Roosevelt’s cabin; Kennedy’s house; Marshall’s house, who helped devise the Marshall Plan. This will help commemorate, preserve and promote.

Let me read you what David McCullough said. He said, “This is the ground of our Founding Fathers. These are the landscapes that speak volumes, small towns, fields, mountains, rivers with names such as Bull Run and Rappahannock. They are the real thing, and what shame we will bring upon ourselves if we destroy them.

For those who have objected, this is what the bill says: nothing in this subtitle alters any duly adopted land use regulation, approved land use plan or other regulatory authority of any Federal, State, tribal or local agency. It goes on to say: nothing in this subtitle conveys any land use or other regulatory authority to any local or coordinating entity.

And the bottom line is, this bill cannot and does not affect the rights of any property owner.

In closing, let me say here’s what Lincoln said. When Lincoln was in this area he said, “We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have hallowed it far above our poor power to add or detract.”

This region, this area is sacred. It is hallowed. I strongly urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, please pass this bill so we can preserve and protect and promote together, to educate our young people so when they hear the word “Antietam” they understand what took place, how it all happened.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Cramer).

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of today’s legislation, amending the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996.

I would like to applaud Chairman RAHALL and his commitment to preserving our Nation’s heritage. I would also like to thank Subcommittee Chairman GRIJALVA and members of the National Parks, Forest and Public Lands Subcommittee for their consideration of this important legislation.

Also, I would like to congratulate Mr. REGULA for his leadership over many years and offering today’s basic underlining bill.

There’s been some harsh criticism of this process. My area, the Muscle Shoals National Heritage Area, is one of the six new heritage areas included in this bill. This process has worked the way I would assume a process like this should work.

It has taken us years to bring our counties together, six counties in the northwest corner of Alabama, the birthplace of Helen Keller, the birthplace of W.C. Handy, Thomas Shoals. Rich history there. We shall have not the opportunity to partner with the private sector to develop a management plan, a feasibility study to come up with a management entity that could further the issues that we want to help preserve for our area. This whole process has allowed us to do that, and I think that’s the way this process should work.

Look, we will have the public sector much more involved with us. We have a Helen Keller Festival every year at her birthplace, Ivy Green. Her home has deteriorated. It is an embarrassment to the country. It’s an embarrassment to our area how much it’s deteriorated. But now the public and private sector are coming together. Nancy Gonzi, who was associated with the University of Alabama and brought together resources from all over that section of Alabama to make sure that the festival that honors her heritage is there. That’s what we’re talking about in this area.

As I said earlier about the process, a woman there, Nancy Gonzi, teamed with the University of Alabama and brought together resources from all over that section of Alabama to make sure that we had the chance to have this national heritage area determined there.

I congratulate this process and urge the passage of this bill.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bartlett).

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Thank you very much for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1483 and ask my colleagues to vote “no” on this bill.

The Journey Through Hallowed Ground is not Mr. Wolf’s bill. It is a Democrat substitute bill that has been added to a larger bill, H.R. 1483, that is also a Democrat substitute bill. H.R. 1483 reflects a big government, big spending philosophy that tramples over taxpayers’ interests and private property rights. This is such a great idea. This is such a great idea. Supporters of the establishment of the Journey Through Hallowed Ground when it was perceived as a collective marketing effort. I thought, gee, what a great idea to include in one marketing effort all these grand historic sites in these four States, many of which are in the district I have the honor of representing. The Battle of Monocacy, the Battle of South Mountain, the Battle of Antietam, the C&O Canal that was mentioned by my friend, Mr. REGLA, are all in Maryland. What a grand thing for it, the Journey Through Hallowed Ground. In fact, this was such a great idea, it was such a fantastic name, that I was a little embarrassed when I thought to myself, gee, Roscoe, why didn’t we do that, such a great idea. Then, regrettably, it has metamorphosed into this big government, big spending bill. If you read the fine print in this bill, you will see that there is a Virginia-based, Virginia-controlled designated management entity that has an exclusive vision that I don’t think is consistent with most of the voters in my district.

I have consistently stated and testified on both September 28, 2006, and March 21, 2007, that any Federal solution to create the Journey Through Hallowed Ground Heritage Area should retain local control of its management by Marylanders concerning sites in Maryland. I also believe that if the value of land is reduced as a result of actions by the management entity, or local zoning ordinances, for instance, then affected property owners should be compensated at fair market value. I don’t only think this, this is a requirement of the fifth amendment of the Constitution, and I urge my colleagues to adopt the amendment which would be the proper way to deal with this. The proposed initiative embodies the intimate connection between personal liberty, taxpayers’ interests and property rights. H.R. 1483 tramples over, rather than honors, these hallowed principles.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time is left on both sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia has 17 1/2 minutes, and the gentleman from Utah has 8 minutes.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLIVER) who has been very instrumental in crafting this legislation.

Mr. OLIVER. I thank the gentleman from West Virginia for yielding time and for his dedicated leadership of the Resources Committee.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1483, but I will address my specific comments to subtitle D of title II which authorizes the Freedom’s Way National Heritage Area.

New England provided four of our original 13 States and has been long associated with our Nation’s formative years, our major social and intellectual movements and, of course, great natural beauty. The area that comprises the proposed Freedom’s Way National Heritage Area, which is included in this bill, has provided the backdrop for many other events and movements that shaped America.

Freedom’s Way includes 37 communities in Massachusetts and eight in New Hampshire that are historically rich. Freedom’s Way chronicles and celebrates the Revolutionary War stories of Lexington and Concord. Additionally, Freedom’s Way includes the free religious expression and social movements of the Shakers and Transcendentalists that had their roots in the region. The area also hosted the social justice and the social criticism development found in the writings of Emerson, Hawthorne, Alcott, Fuller and Thoreau. And finally, the movements for the abolition of slavery, women’s rights and environmental conservation all have roots within the boundary of Freedom’s Way.

The proposed initiative duplicates the National Park Service’s criteria for national heritage areas. It will conserve historic, cultural, scenic and natural resources for the benefit of current and future generations. The idea has received widespread support from local residents and has the support from every Member of the House whose district includes a portion of the proposed area.

With this designation, the communities included will benefit from a better resource to create a cohesive learning experience, using the natural setting and historical and cultural artifacts to tell the story of American democracy.

incorporate protections of taxpayers and private property owners. That is why I introduced an alternate bill, H.R. 1270, and approved an amendment to remove the Sixth District of Maryland if we couldn’t have majority voting rights. This was defeated in committee. I am concerned that the federal government has not taken action. That much of the funding has been in federal and state management entities and the $135 million in taxpayers’ money that will be matched and spent by management entities speak louder than the weak and toothless language in section 2008.

Let me just quote a couple of things from some outside groups that have looked at this. First from Americans for Tax Reform/Property Rights Alliance Vote Alert: “We urge all Members to side with Americans and protect the right of land use by voting ‘no’ on H.R. 1483.”

From the National Taxpayers Union: “NTU urges all Members to vote ‘no’ on H.R. 1483. NTU testified against H.R. 1483 in committee, and we’re dismayed to see a bill has been grown in both cost and potential harm since introduction. Rollcall votes on H.R. 1483 will be significantly weighted in our annual Rating of Congress.”

From the Heritage Foundation, in a report that is called National Heritage Areas: Costly Economic Development Schemes that Threaten Property Rights, Backgrounder 2008: “In fact, non-National Park Service funds amount to nearly 70 percent of the costs associated with the national heritage areas. If this pattern continues, H.R. 1483 would lead to an additional $270 million in NHA spending by Federal, State, local and not-for-profit entities.”

“One of the most controversial aspects of H.R. 1483 is the establishment of the Journey Through Hallowed Ground, which is in my district. ‘The effort is sponsored and promoted by mainly two factions, Virginia-based environmental groups with a long history of opposition to most residential and commercial development in the region and wealthy estate owners who would benefit from the cachet and exclusivity that the designation might bring. The opposition includes local property owners and a large majority in Congress.

“Other NHAs have used their federally authorized authority to impose restrictive zoning requirements on the region’s property owners. The development and/or to force it into directives agreeable to those who guide the management of the NHA.’”

Let me review. Members may be concerned that H.R. 1483 would, one, increase Federal funding by 50 percent from $10 million to $15 million per national heritage area, an amount neither requested nor reviewed in hearings, with total additional Federal spending of $335 million.

Two, it would expand the boundaries of three existing national heritage areas and, in addition, it would create six new national heritage areas, including the Journey Through Hallowed Ground, at a total initial authorization of $90 million.

It would reauthorize, increase and extend Federal funding for nine existing national heritage areas through 2012 at an additional cost of $45 million.

Three, our Nation has known of the intimate connection between personal liberty, taxpayers’ interests and property rights. H.R. 1483 tramples over, rather than honors, these hallowed principles. Therefore, I oppose it.
I urge all my colleagues to support H.R. 1483.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a letter signed by 110 organizations interested in property rights who are opposed to this particular bill, including such groups as the Taxpayers Union, supervisor of the affected area, Property Rights Foundation of America, Family Research Council and a mayor in my district.

COALITION LETTER DETAILING RISKS OF NATIONAL HERITAGE AREA DESIGNATION

The following letter—signed by a diverse group of more than 110 organizations, elected officials and citizens—was delivered on September 14, 2007 by Majority Leader Harry Reid, Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, House Minority Leader John Boehner, Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Chairman Jeff Bingaman, Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Ranking Member Pete V. Domenici, House Committee on Natural Resources Chairman Nick Rahall, House Committee on Natural Resources Ranking Member Don Young as well as all the members of the House and Senate Natural Resources Committees.

DEAR [ELECTED OFFICIAL]: The U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Kelo v. City of New London ignited a national outcry against government abuse of property rights. The “bridge to nowhere” and other wasteful programs triggered angry protests against the practice of earmarking National heritage areas in the Kelo decision and earmarks rolled into one.

National heritage areas are preservation zones where land use and property rights can be restricted. They give the National Park Service and preservation interest groups (many with histories of hostility toward property rights) substantial influence by giving them the authority to create land-use “management plans” and then the authority to disburse federal money to local governments to promote their plans.

As a March 2004 General Accountability Office report on heritage areas states: “[National heritage areas] encourage local government officials to impose land use policies that are consistent with the heritage areas’ plans, which may allow the heritage areas to indirectly influence zoning and land use planning in ways that could restrict owners’ use of their property.”

The proposed “Journey Through Hallowed Ground National Heritage Area Act” provides a good case study on how heritage areas can be self-perpetuating federal pork and influence projects. The chief lobbying organization for this heritage area, the Journey Through Hallowed Ground Partnership, received a one million-dollar earmark in the 2005 federal transportation bill at the behest of Members of Congress sponsoring legislation to establish a heritage area—an earmark that was granted before the organization was even incorporated. A million-dollar earmark thus was issued to buy create a steady stream of future pork, at the expense of the rights of local landowners.

We believe zoning and land use policies are best left to local officials, who are directly accountable to the citizens they represent. National heritage areas corrupt the principle of representative government and this inherently eroding representative democracy creates an accountable special interests the authority to develop land management plans and federal money with which to finance their efforts.

Once established, National heritage areas become permanent units of the National Park Service, and as such, permanent drains on an agency that currently suffers a multi-billion-dollar maintenance crisis. According to the GAG, “sunset provisions have not been effectively or efficiently working for (National Heritage Areas); since 1984, five areas that reached their sunset dates received funding reauthorization from the Congress.”

Supporters of new heritage areas have the public will precisely backward: Americans want stronger property rights protections and less pork-barrel spending—not more earmarks to programs that harm property rights.

Please do not support the creation of additional national heritage areas or federal funding for area management entities that support granting for or advocate the creation of new heritage areas.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, with the development of such strong bipartisan legislation of this nature, it obviously takes a lot of work by Members' staffs on both sides of the aisle and by members of the originating committee, our Committee on Natural Resources, as well.

I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona, Mr. RAUL GRIJALVA, one of those gentlemen that has taken the reins of leadership this year as chairman of our Parks Subcommittee and done a tremendous job.

Mr. GRIJALVA. Let me thank the chairman for the time.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be here to support H.R. 1483 as chairman of the subcommittee, but also supporting the larger heritage area bill. One section in particular that applies to my community is the designation of a new heritage area in the Santa Cruz Valley of Arizona.

The Santa Cruz Valley has national significance and deserves the recognition that this designation would bring and highlight what is a shared border with Mexico. The Santa Cruz Valley encompasses many diverse cultures and histories. These include native peoples whose heritage dates back 13,000 years, and the descendants of Spanish, Mexican and American territorial settlers who shaped the region, its land, its customs and its traditions from the 1890s to the present date.

For me it's an important designation. I grew up on a ranch, Caona Ranch, that is located within the Santa Cruz Valley. It's a historic ranch, been designated as such and presently is being renovated to bring and honor what that ranch life was in the 1890s and 1900s.

The towns and cities of the Santa Cruz Valley support this. The amount of support that this proposal has is truly outstanding. I want to say something not only about the Santa Cruz Valley and its importance, but I think it transcends the discussion that we are having about heritage areas. Heritage areas, through the designation, is also a recognition of a mosaic of history, people, traditions, the environment, a mosaic that shapes this country. Each one is as different and diverse as our Nation. To get to a designation point takes a great deal of work and cooperation among communities and peoples, and that's what we are acknowledging with heritage areas, the work that went into it, the diversity of this great Nation of ours, and the mosaic that makes this Nation of ours as special and privileged as it is in the world.

I would also like to say that we are going to hear things about taking property rights, the cost. A GAO study was commissioned, and many of the organizations which have submitted for the record as private property rights advocates were solicited to provide specific examples where heritage areas did indeed interfere with, take or prohibit the use of someone's private property. Not one instance came up in that study. I just want to reaffirm that these projects, these heritage areas are cooperative, bipartisan and truly deserving of the designations. I want to thank the chairman for the entire bill. Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, the GAO report was just referenced, it is one of those unique things, not wishing to actually criticize the Federal Government for what they do, but in the entire report, not one property owner was interviewed, not a single property attorney was interviewed, nor a Realtor, nor appraiser, nor a local zoning official. Simply put, the report neglected to ask those who actually know what the impact of a heritage area has on the property rights of their land.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California, Mr. SAM FARR. Mr. FARR. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, it’s a pleasure to rise as a former member of this committee and to congratulate the chairman and the ranking member and the fellow committee members bringing this bill to the floor. Much of the committee work in the past, I think, was focused a lot on the Federal lands in the West. This bill, interestingly enough, focuses on land mostly east of the Mississippi.

Congressional authorization is essential to sound management of these important places. But this just isn't about land designation; it's about the beauty and heritage of American spirit, our cultural spirit.

As chairman of the House Tourism Caucus, we have learned that we need to increase travel in this country, particularly outsourcing to foreign visitors, because the image of the United States around the world is not that good.

However, visitors coming to this country, seeing this beautiful land, and meeting the people in this country, and looking at our history and our beauty of what I think is the best culture in the world, the American spirit, can only be done by showing them places that we have preserved, so that it's just not all sort of sprawled-out urbanism.

These special places need to be protected, because they need the guidance of a good government structure like the Federal Government along and in partnership with State and local government. I want to associate myself with the words of the other speakers that have long been involved in land-use planning and land use, and there has never been an eminent domain or taking of this land.

In fact, the prices, if they do buy them, are agreed upon by the landowner and they're agreed upon without having to have any disputes. So I think it's worked very, very well.

America is a beautiful place, but it's beauty is not just in its scenery. It's also in its people and the people's heritage.

I urge my colleagues to authorize the celebration of America's great assets, this bill, the heritage of our people.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield an additional 2 minutes, the sponsor of this particular bill, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA).

MR. REGULA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I want to commend Chairman RAHALL and the staff for their effective working on this.

This is a people's bill because what it does is allows the local communities to develop their heritage legacy. As Mr. WOLF pointed out, the historic corridors, as was pointed out also by Mr. LAHOOD, would bring these things to life. It would bring these battlefields to life to understand what happened there and how important it is in the case of Lincoln, as to what his life has meant to all of us.

It's not an encroachment on local control. In fact, it's the epitome of local control, because the decision to make heritage corridors work is up to the people. In our own experience, as I say, we've raised over 250 million private dollars to match something like 8 or 9 million of Federal dollars.

But putting the Federal imprimitur on this gives it a certain status that allows foundations, that allows private individuals to contribute to making these corridors a success.

And as I said earlier, it enhances family values. It enhances property values. It enhances understanding.
Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, in sum- mation, these are not good times for the ratings of the United States Con- gress in the public opinion polls. We all know this. We all know that if the American people would see Congress in action this very moment that those poll ratings might very well go up.

We’ve seen examples on this legisla- tion of Members on both sides of the aisle in a bipartisan, nonpartisan man- ner, working to preserve what is the best of America. I look at the gentle- man from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), I look at the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF) has quoted, the former chairman of the Parks Subcommittee. And the gentle- man from Utah mentioned that he did not want to try to get these heritage areas to last longer than 10 years. I’m reasonably sure, however, that our late colleague did not foresee these areas having to contend with close to $90 a barrel oil and the other increase in costs, I might add, that the numerous, heritage areas created under Repub- lican Congresses that were all author- ized for 15 years. We have provided an increase in authorized funding for her- itage areas to ensure that heritage areas have enough funds to get on their feet.

So the issue here is not private prop- erty rights. The issue is not gaming in these areas. The issue is not earmarks. I would say to my colleagues, imagine, for example, if Yellowstone National Park did not exist and Members of Con- gress introduced legislation to provide for such a crown jewel of our national park system. Would that be called an earmark? That issue is not lobbying by local people, our local legislators, They have a right to try to secure that additional State and local funding necessary to match Federal funding. We provide...
Chairman RAHALL, Ranking Member YOUNG of this extension. I would also like to thank the Jersey delegation for their continued support of this important legislation, I fully support the authorization of the New Jersey Coastal Heritage Area. As an original co-sponsor of this important legislation, I fully support the reauthorization of the National Heritage Areas. I am especially pleased that this bill authorizes additional funding for Silos and Smokestacks. The Heritage Area in Iowa was also pleased that the bill establishes six new Heritage Areas, because they have so much to offer. My District, the 1st District of Iowa, is home to Silos and Smokestacks, one of the 37 current federally designated heritage areas in the nation. Silos and Smokestacks covers 20,000 acres and 37 counties in Iowa, and preserves and tells the story of Iowa and American agriculture, both past and present. Silos and Smokestacks also helps convey the global significance of Iowa and American agriculture through partnerships and activities that celebrate and honor the land, people, and communities of the area. Agriculture in Iowa is as crucial as it ever was, but has evolved significantly. Through museums, farms, schools, and historical societies, Silos and Smokestacks takes visitors on a tour through Iowa’s rich agricultural history, showing how Iowa farmers have come to be where they are today, and supports the hope for a strong and prosperous agricultural future. I urge all of my colleagues to support our Nation’s National Heritage Areas, and to vote in support of this bill today.

Mr. LOBIONDO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1483, which includes legislation to extend the authorization of the New Jersey Coastal Heritage Trail Route. I would first like to thank my colleagues in the New Jersey delegation for their continued support of this extension. I would also like to thank Chairman RAHALL, Ranking Member YOUNG and their staff for their support and guidance. Established by Congress in 1988, the New Jersey Coastal Heritage Trail incorporates the very best of what the great State of New Jersey has to offer to the rest of the Nation. The Trail unifies New Jersey’s many scenic points of interest. These points of interest include a wealth of environmental, historic, maritime and recreational sites found along New Jersey’s coastline from the southern tip of the State and Deepwater to the west.

The Trail’s area includes three National Wildlife Refuges, four tributaries of a Wild and Scenic River system, a Civil War fort and National Park, a number of historic lighthouses, and other sites tied to southern New Jersey’s maritime history. Through a network of coastal communities, the New Jersey Coastal Heritage Trail connects people with places of historic, recreational, environmental, and maritime interest.

One exciting aspect of the Trail is its focus on maritime history. There is a rich story to be told about the industries once sustained by the Delaware Bay, such as whaling, shipbuilding, crabbing and the harvesting of oysters. While we often define our Nation’s history through military or political milestones, the Trail will serve to remind visitors that maritime-dependent commerce was a major factor in the growth of the United States.

“Eco-tourism” along the Trail has proven to be a huge success. There is an abundant variety of natural habitats and species to be found on the Trail. Whale and dolphin watching have become extremely popular, and bird lovers from throughout the world, in fact around the world, are realizing what Southern New Jersey residents have known all along: our region is unmatched for observing migratory birds, ospreys and bald eagles.

The Trail has also helped to foster important partnerships between the Federal government, State and local governments. Since the Trail began, these partnerships have resulted in additional funding amounting to almost double the investment of the Federal government. The legislation that reauthorized the Trail was included in S. 203, the National Heritage Areas Act of 2006, which the President signed into law in October of 2006. S. 203 requires a strategic plan for the Trail to be prepared “Not later than 3 years after the date on which funds are made available.” Unfortunately, under S. 203, the Trail is only reauthorized through September 30, 2007.

The language pertaining to the Trail included in H.R. 1483 has the support of the entire New Jersey Congressional delegation. It would allow the Trail to continue and flourish. I urge my colleagues in the House to support this legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I have several concerns with H.R. 1483. While I may support several subtitles within this bill, changes have been made that harm the positive intent of the legislation.

An unexpected and unrequested increase, from $10 million to $15 million, in the authorizaprotection. Federal law prohibits any other lobbying by local groups.

So the issue, as I conclude, Mr. Speaker, is not about earmarking, not about lobbying, not about private property rights; it’s about the American people’s interest in what we do, and protecting our American people a place in which they can take their families, can spend quality time of life in these times when it’s so hard to spend quantity time together, that they spend quality time together. And that’s what we’re talking about in this legislation. That’s what we’re talking about in our heritage areas, in America’s heritage.

So I conclude by urging my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to continue the nonpartisan, bipartisan spirit that has brought this bill to the floor and pass this legislation by a tremendous margin.

Mr. BRALEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Celebrating America’s Heritage Act. As an original co-sponsor of this important legislation, I fully support the reauthorization of the National Heritage Areas.

I am especially pleased that this bill authorizes additional funding for Silos and Smokestacks. The Heritage Area in Iowa was also pleased that the bill establishes six new Heritage Areas, because they have so much to offer. Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Yes, in it's current form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAHALL. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 1483, the “Celebrating America’s Heritage Act,” which would, in part, designate the Freedom’s Way National Heritage Area in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The Freedom’s Way National Heritage Area would recognize the important historical contributions made by communities throughout New England to the historic events of the American Revolution.

This national heritage area would include the communities of Arlington, Lexington, Lincoln, Malden, Medford, and Wobum in my district along with 39 other communities throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire that played a role in the birth of our Nation. H.R. 1483 would also allow for cooperation between the communities in the heritage area and the National Park Service to conserve these special places and develop increased recreational and educational opportunities for these tremendous resources.

I am proud to support the creation of this important National Heritage Area, which will help preserve the unique history of New England. Sometimes we forget that the small towns and cities where we were born and live are also the birthplace of this great Nation. The Freedom’s Way National Heritage Area designation will ensure that future generations will be able to visit, tour and learn about the communities in New England that shaped our young Nation.

This heritage area designation will allow for the commemoration of the important role that these New England communities played in shaping our Nation and I urge passage of the bill.

Mr. RAHALL. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 765, the previous question is ordered on the bill, as amended. The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. BISHOP OF UTAH

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Yes, in it's current form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bishop of Utah moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 1483, to the Committee on Natural Resources with instructions with report to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

At the end of the bill, add the following new title:

TITLE VI—APPLICATION OF CERTAIN LAWS

SEC. 6001. APPLICATION OF CERTAIN STATE AND LOCAL LAWS.

All designated and future designated lands within any natural heritage area for which funding is provided under this Act shall be exclusively governed by relevant State and local laws regarding hunting, fishing, and the possession or use of a weapon, trap, or net.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his motion to recommit.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

This particular motion to recommit ensures that the rights of State and local governments within heritage area designations will be able to regulate hunting and fishing which will be unharmed by this legislation.

This bill currently provides that heritage area designations shall not diminish the right of States to regulate hunting, but it is silent on the issue including the right to carry firearms.

The motion to recommit also clarifies that laws regarding fishing and possession or use of a weapon or trap shall be governed exclusively by States and localities.

The second amendment is a critical, right. We want to protect our constituents against consequences of this legislation that could harm that right.

National parks have regulations that limit hunting and fishing. So any of these heritage areas would prohibit in heritage areas those rights that are currently allowed by State and local regulations.

These regulations harm wildlife and the environment because even local wildlife management officials are impeded in their work.

Before any attempt is made to restrict the rights of gun owners and second amendment defenders, this motion to recommit protects their legal existing rights now and in the future. It is important that it be said and be said clearly.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, is this an issue, as is typical of a minority of the majority, that has not been mentioned one iota in any of today’s debate, in any of the committee debate developed on a bipartisan, nonpartisan nature in bringing this bill to the floor, not in any way brought up in any of the existing hearing prior to this subcommittee chairman, Mr. Grijalva, and is brought up at this last second out of the clear blue, which, again, I say should not be surprising because it is typical of a minority of the majority to make such efforts.

But I would ask the gentleman from Utah, is he referring to all Federal lands? Because as I am sure he knows, the heritage areas are not part of the national park system, the chart that that was brought forward, nor are they under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service. The heritage areas are part of a collaborative effort between Federal and State and local people with local governing units with matching dollars, not all Federal dollars, as I am sure the gentleman knows.

So I ask that question. Are you intending this language for all Federal lands?

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAHALL. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. As I am sure the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia knows, and every one of the divisions within the Department of the Interior has different sets of rules and regulations. BIA land would not be a problem. A National park designation would be. So any of these heritage areas that were under the direction of the National Park Service, and there are some within this new bill, would fall under title 36. That’s why this legislation desperately needs to be there, the same amendment that we actually did present at another time in one of our committees.

So, yes, it's still significant. It's still important. It needs to be there to clarify specifically. If the intent is not to change what has been happening by the localities, this change sets in all these areas what has been local will continue and State and local regulations will have precedence.

Mr. RAHALL. I am not sure we are talking about the same definitions here.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore.

Mr. RAHALL. I am not sure we are present at clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair that I demand the yeas and nays.

The question is on the motion to recommit. So the motion to recommit was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore.

Mr. Speaker, I did present at another time in one of our committees.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GREEN) announced that Members advised they have 2 minutes to record their votes.

So the bill was passed. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 505, NATIVE HAWAIIAN GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION ACT OF 2007

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 764 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLUMENAUER) announced that a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
As my good friend from Hawaii, Representative NEIL ABERCROMBIE, mentioned in the Rules Committee, the current system of land tenure for Native Hawaiians is organized under the Office of Hawaiian Affairs. This State agency does not meet the needs of Native Hawaiians and is not effective. The proposed measure, in a manner as it is currently arranged, what the community demands and needs is an entity in which the Native Hawaiians can be effectively engaged. Rightfully, this legislation will give Native Hawaiians an opportunity to create such an entity and empower themselves with self-determination.

I do want to make note of my concern that there are some in this body who are seeking to create controversy where none exists. Contrary to what some say today, this bill does not allow gaming on Native Hawaiian lands, nor does it lay the groundwork for gaming.

Additionally, similar legislation has passed the House in the 106th Congress and was reported out of the Natural Resources Committee in both the 107th and 109th Congresses. Unfortunately, the measure was never taken any further until today.

Mr. Speaker, this rule provides the appropriate framework for debate on this bipartisan legislation, which is the culmination of many years of negotiation. I have been in this body, and I have seen NEIL ABERCROMBIE, and now MAZIE HIRONO, and before, Patsy Mink, work actively on this particular legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this rule provides the appropriate framework for debate on this bipartisan legislation, which is the culmination of many years of negotiation. I have been in this body, and I have seen NEIL ABERCROMBIE, and now MAZIE HIRONO, and before, Patsy Mink, work actively on this particular legislation.

The lack of amendments submitted to the Rules Committee for this legislation is a testament to years of bipartisan collaboration. It is only right that we bring this legislation to the full floor today in this manner.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend and namesake from Florida (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) for yielding me the customary 30 minutes, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend and namesake from Florida (Mr. ABERCROMBIE), would create a process, and I want to emphasize “process,” because that is what this is, for establishing and recognizing a Native Hawaiian government entity that would be empowered to act on behalf of its members with the State and Federal Government.

However, Mr. Speaker, as the Wall Street Journal noted in 2005, the practical effect of granting this status to self-identified Native Hawaiians would be to allow this new class of American citizens to declare, and I quote again from the Wall Street Journal, “complete legal and territorial independence from the United States and the establishment of a Hawaiian nation-state.”

Mr. Speaker, before this statement is dismissed out of hand as a completely unbelievable statement dreamed up by the editorial board of the Wall Street Journal, I raise the question that they were not the ones that were making this claim. They were merely reporting on a statement made by the State Office of Hawaiian Affairs, which first acknowledged this fact.

In addition, a recent statement made by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission raised concerns that this legislation, and, again, I quote from the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, “would discriminate on the basis of race or national origin and further subdivide American people into discrete subgroups according to various degrees of privilege.”

Despite the best efforts of this legislation’s advocates to compare Native Americans with Native American tribes who govern reservations and who are the beneficiaries of this legislation, would make it possible for our next-door neighbors in Hawaii to suddenly coexist under different legal regimes, a clear violation of the 14th amendment of the Constitution’s equal protection clause.

Mr. Speaker, because this legislation would grant broad governmental powers to a racially defined group, to include all living descendants. The new Native Hawaiians created by this bill would need no geographic, political or cultural connection to Hawaii, much less a physical connection to a distinct Native Hawaiian community. As the Federal courts have recently explained, this is problematic. Again, I quote the Federal courts: “The history of the indigenous Hawaiians is fundamentally different from that of indigenous groups in federally recognized Indian tribes in the continental United States.”

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this legislation raises significant constitutional concerns, which have been raised on other bills this year, namely, H.R. 8345, the Hawaiian Ownership Act of 2007, which the House considered in March of this year. The House bill initially failed under suspension of the rules because 162 Members of the House recognized, and in 2000, the Supreme Court ruled in Rice v. Cayetano, that the current configuration of Justices would likely strike down the Federal benefits flowing to Native Americans as an unconstitutional racial set-aside, if given the chance.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that there are legitimate constitutional concerns that must be addressed in the underlying Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act. I am pleased, Mr. Speaker, that the rule makes in order an amendment to be offered by Mr. FLAKE of Arizona that would attempt to address the constitutional concerns and ensure the underlying legislation complies with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to my friend, the distinguished gentlewoman from Hawaii (Ms. HIRONO), who is an original sponsor of this measure.

Mr. HIRONO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule. I thank Chairman SLAUGHTER and Vice Chair MCCGOVERN for the rule which fairly gives the only amendment to be filed due consideration pursuant to House rules. I disagree with the amendment because it, if adopted, unnecessarily creates confusion where none exists.

The National Hawaiian Government Reorganization bill is a good one, the result of over 6 years of fine-tuning and negotiations, significant compromises with the Department of Justice, Department of the Interior, and the Office of Management and Budget to conceive a law that should be approved by all persons concerned with the welfare of Native Hawaiians.

This bill is supported by the Republican Governor of the State of Hawaii, the Hawaii State legislature, the American Bar Association, the National Congress of American Indians, the National Education Association, the NAACP, League of United Latin American Citizens, and dozens of other civil rights, professional associations and unions.

I will enter into the RECORD a list of all supporters of this measure, as well as letters of support from the Governor of the State of Hawaii, Linda Lingle; the American Bar Association; National Congress of American Indians; and the Japanese American Citizens League, and thank them for their wholehearted support.

Mr. Speaker, let me close by quoting a sentence from the letter from the National Congress of American Indians, which is of particular relevance to the proposed amendment to be offered. “To invoke the equal protection or due process clause of the Constitution in this context, as some of the legislation’s critics attempt to do, is a perversion of what those clauses were intended to do. Those submitting this amendment are using the very cornerstones of justice and fairness in our democracy to deny equal protection to one group of indigenous people.”

Mr. Speaker, I urge this body to adopt the rule so we may get on to the merits of this important legislation that will at long last afford the Native Hawaiian people self-determination and self-governance long given to other indigenous people of the United States but denied to Native Hawaiians.

Native Hawaiian people in their efforts to wards a path to self-determination, and we urge you to do the same by voting in favor of H.R. 565. H.R. 565 would reaffirm the Native Hawaiian right to self-government and enable the creation of a process that will lead to self-determination and self-sufficiency for Native Hawaiian people. Like all of the nation’s indigenous peoples, Native Hawaiians lived on their homelands and governed their affairs before the first contact with Europeans until the overthrow of the Native Hawaiian government in 1893. Since that time, Native Hawaiians have continued to suffer more than a century of injustice, including neglect and abuse of Native Hawaiian entitlements and civil rights, by the United States. Like all of the indigenous peoples of the United States, Native Hawaiians deserve the right to determine their own future. The purpose of self-determination is not simply for its own sake. Rather, it is what enables indigenous people to maintain their culture, language, and identity. This is a purpose that all American citizens can support. Congress, the nation, and supported Native Hawaiian recognition through numerous programs intended to benefit Native Hawaiians along with the other indigenous peoples of the United States. Furthermore, it is a purpose that was recently affirmed by the United Nations in the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, which passed with overwhelming support.

Some critics have misstated the effect of H.R. 565. Let me be clear that this bill, like all legislation impacting tribal governments, concerns U.S. policy toward and relationship with the nation’s sovereign, indigenous peoples and is not race-based legislation. The unique historical and cultural relationship that indigenous Hawaiians have with the United States is like that of all Native Americans and is based on our status as aboriginal people with pre-existing governments with whom the U.S. entered treaties and other agreements. It is this historical, political reality that provides the foundation for the unique relationship that has always existed—and continues to exist today—between the United States and the indigenous people whose homelands fall within the borders of what is now the United States.

The argument that recognition of a Native Hawaiian governing entity would establish a race-based government is antithetical to the unique political relationship that Indigenous Hawaiians have with the United States and is the oldest and largest national organization of American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments; and Whereas, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) was established in 1944 and is the oldest and largest national organization of American Indian and Alaska Native tribal governments; and

Whereas, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) has adopted the same resolution that the Hawaiian Nation’s goal is federal recognition as a sovereign indigenous nation with inherent rights to self-determination and self-governance and, now therefore be it resolved, that the NCAI does hereby support federal legislation calling for recognition of the Hawaiian nation, a self-determined entity created by and for Native Hawaiians and their descendants in furtherance of a true government-to-government relationship with the Hawaiian nation; and

Be it further resolved, that the NCAI further supports the return of land to the Hawaiian Nation; and

Be it further resolved, that this resolution shall be the policy of NCAI until it is withdrawn or modified by subsequent resolution; and that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Hawaii state legislature, the Governor of the state of Hawaii, the Hawaiian congressional delegation, the Congress of the United States of America, the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, the Interior Department, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of State, the President of the United States and the Trustees of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs; and

The foregoing resolution was adopted at the 119th Annual Session adopted Resolution #00 – 001 – 01, all of which support the sovereign rights of native Hawaiians and recognize and affirm a true government-to-government relationship with the Hawaiian nation; and

Be it further resolved, that the NCAI supports the return of land to the Hawaiian Nation; and

Be it further resolved, that this resolution shall be the policy of NCAI until it is withdrawn or modified by subsequent resolution; and that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Hawaii state legislature, the Governor of the state of Hawaii, the Hawaiian congressional delegation, the Congress of the United States of America, the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, the Interior Department, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of State, the President of the United States and the Trustees of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs; and

Be it further resolved, that this resolution shall be the policy of NCAI until it is withdrawn or modified by subsequent resolution.
Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my friend, the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this act. Having great familiarity with the peoples of the Hawaiian Islands and Native Hawaiians, I understand their concerns that we should have codified a stronger statement of what their rights are as indigenous peoples. This is really about making sure that language and culture and history are preserved. It also is consistent with the law which created the admission of Hawaii to this Union. I think the date, Mr. ABERCROMBIE could correct me if I am wrong, it was August 21, 1959. That was an important date for this Nation, because it is a day that we embraced not only Hawaii but Alaska. It was a day that we embraced the potential of this country to extend its reach and embrace peoples of many different cultures. This act is an act that needs to be passed so that we can keep unfolding the real purpose and quality of America.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased at this time to yield 6 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE), the sponsor who has labored with this legislation actively in several Congresses, who is from the Committee on Natural Resources, and the author of this bill.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as this is a discussion on the rule and not necessarily on the bill itself, I will make some remarks, at least in this initial phase of dealing with the issue, on some of the points raised by my good friend and colleague Mr. HASTINGS. I am appreciative of the points that he raised, because I think they are in need of not so much refutation but perhaps clarification.

It is easy to understand why those who are not necessarily familiar, and I am not speaking about Mr. HASTINGS personally, I am talking about the references that he cited in his comments, it is easy to understand why people who are not familiar with a little bit of the history could come to some of the conclusions or make some of the observations that they have. Absent the context within which this bill is coming forward, it is understandable. That context then is what I want to establish, so that it becomes clear.

I certainly don’t want to get in an argument with the editorial board of the Wall Street Journal either, and they dealing with various quotations. The about complete territorial independence.

Well, I think what is being referred to there, and what the likelihood of the reference is, is that there was in fact not territorial in the annexation of territory, like the Philippines or Hawaii or Puerto Rico or that kind of thing that occurred during the kind of “imperial phase” of the United States, but there was in fact territorial independence, because Hawaii was a kingdom. It is one of the things that kind of gets lost in the shuffle, and that is one of the reasons we are here today, Mr. Speaker.

The United States of America has in fact had, over a 175-year period leading up to the overthrow of the kingdom in 1893, a series of treaties and conventions; 1826, 1842, 1849, 1875, 1887, dealing with commerce, dealing with trade, annexation of territory, like the Philippines or Hawaii or Puerto Rico or that kind of thing that occurred during the kind of “imperial phase” of the United States, but there was in fact territorial independence, because Hawaii was a kingdom. It is one of the things that kind of gets lost in the shuffle, and that is one of the reasons we are here today, Mr. Speaker.

The United States of America has in fact had, over a 175-year period leading up to the overthrow of the kingdom in 1893, a series of treaties and conventions; 1826, 1842, 1849, 1875, 1887, dealing with commerce, dealing with trade, annexation of territory, like the Philippines or Hawaii or Puerto Rico or that kind of thing that occurred during the kind of “imperial phase” of the United States, but there was in fact territorial independence, because Hawaii was a kingdom. It is one of the things that kind of gets lost in the shuffle, and that is one of the reasons we are here today, Mr. Speaker.

So as a result of that history, we have a succession of land claims and policies that have come from the one of the kingdom to the shotgun republic that occurred after the overthrow of the kingdom and the annexation of the United States into the territory, and into finally becoming a State, as was indicated, in 1959. We are in fact the last State to enter the Union, along with Alaska in 1959.

I bring this up simply to point out that far from subdividing the American position as was claimed by my good friend, quite the contrary; it incorporates the politics as well as the historical reality of this land secession and the assets associated with it, because this land generates income.

I think this is about, Mr. Speaker, is land and other assets, including money, and who controls it. When this land came in, it wasn’t worth anything. The Wall Street Journal did not comment, I am certain, on the ceded lands. They are called “ceded lands” because they were ceded from the kingdom to the succeeding governmental entities. They could care less, the Wall Street Journal, about these lands when they were worth nothing, when they were not seen to be able to be marketed.

But let me explain now, and I ask my good friend as I look at him now with a smile on my face, we are talking about land in Hawaii? You are talking big bucks. You are talking money here. That is what this is about is land and money and who controls it. And this land has, from the time of the kingdom, the Native Hawaiians. That is who is to be the beneficiary.

That takes me to the point, Mr. Speaker, of the entry into the Union. The Admissions Act requires us, requires us, the Admissions Act of 1959 requires us to utilize those lands and assets for the benefit of Native Hawaiians. That is in the Admissions Act.

We are not here on the floor today because we didn’t have anything better to do in Hawaii than to try to bring this to the Federal Government. On the contrary, the Admissions Act requires us to make certain that these lands are utilized for the benefit of Native Hawaiians. The reason we have the bill here is that in order to accomplish that, we need to get a governing entity that can come to the Department of the Interior for approval in order to be able to conduct the affairs, similarly to, parallel to what now happens with Native Americans in the so-called lower 48 in the mainland of the United States, and various Alaska Natives and corporations and other entities that have been set up in Alaska.

This is a history of indigenous people. They are different from other indigenous people because they were a kingdom, and we would not have the 2 million acres we are talking about had those acres not been associated with an indigenous people. They are not imaginary, they are real.

First, I want to say with Rice v. Cayetano, Governor Cayetano, the first Filipino American to be elected Governor, that issue was settled on a question of whether those lands can come to the Department of the Interior for approval in order to be able to conduct the affairs, similarly to, parallel to what now happens with Native Americans in the so-called lower 48 in the mainland of the United States, and various Alaska Natives and corporations and other entities that have been set up in Alaska.

But there are always unintended laws when we write national laws that appear to one State or one set of people. That is what we have to be cautious about. That is why I simply raise these concerns. The issue is before us. We have a rule and we have made in order amendment that deals with the 14th amendment. I think that is important to be discussed, and I doubt if this issue will be completely decided here today.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. I am the last speaker, and I will reserve my time until the gentleman closes.

Mr. Speaker, I will be asking Members to oppose the previous question so that I may amend the rule to have Speaker PELOSI, in consultation with Republican Leader BOEHNER, immediately appoint conferees to H.R. 2942, the Military Construction and Veterans Affairs Appropriations Act for 2008.

Two days ago a number of new publications, including Roll Call, reported that the Democrat leadership intends to play politics and hold off on sending any appropriations bills to President Bush so that they can use an upcoming anticipated veto of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill to serve as “an extension of their successful public relations campaign on the State Children’s Health Insurance Program.” Roll Call is the one that made that observation on October 22, 2007.

While the House Democrat leadership plays politics on this issue, however, the Nation is paying the price. The Senate has already done its work and appointed conferees for this bill. And for every day that House Democrats allow the veterans funding bill to languish without conferees for their only political advantage, our Nation’s veterans lose $18.5 million, money that could be used for veterans housing, veterans health care, and other important veterans support activities.

On October 18, American Legion National Commander Marty Conater, five national vice commanders and all 55 Legion national executive committee members sent Speaker PELOSI a letter pleading with her to put partisanism aside and provide this funding for the troops.

Mr. Speaker, I include a copy of the letter for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

THE AMERICAN LEGION, Indianapolis, IN, October 18, 2007.
Hon. NANCY PELOSI
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.
DEAR SPEAKER PELOSI: Today ends the Fall meeting of The American Legion’s National Executive Committee, at The American Legion’s National Headquarters in Indianapolis, Indiana. The National Executive Committee consists of an elected leader from each of The American Legion’s 55 Departments (50 States, the District of Columbia and four foreign commands), The American Legion’s National Constitution and By-laws, the National Executive Committee serves as The American Legion’s governing body.

The National Commander Marty Conater briefed The National Executive Committee on array of issues discussing the status of the VA budget for FY 2008. The fiscal activities of the 110th Congress—the FY 2007 Continuing Resolution, the Budget Resolution for FY 2008, Native Hawaiian Construction, Veterans’ Affairs and Related Agencies Appropriations for FY 2008 were reviewed.

However, in trying to grasp why such a bipartisan bill, which passed overwhelmingly in both chambers, still hasn’t moved in over a month is rather difficult, especially since the President has already said he would not veto the bill, even though it exceeds his recommendations. Understanding why the appropriations process has come to a complete halt is difficult. What is the appointment of conferees, the Conference Committee, or passage of a Conference Report? We are now in the midst of both with no idea when the Mil Con-VA appropriations will be passed. If history repeats itself, this standoff may last well into the second quarter of the fiscal year. This is disturbing to not only The American Legion and other veterans’ and military service organizations, but to every veteran who is dependent on VA for timely access to quality health care, earned benefits, and other services provided by a grateful nation.

Madam Speaker, the newest generation of wartime veterans are reporting to VA medical facilities every day as troops are returning from deployments to Iraq and Afghanistan. Some will be determined to be service-connected disabled because of medical conditions incurred or aggravated while on active duty. Others may very well have invisible scars that need attention as soon as possible. As VA welcomes new patients, the existing patient population cannot be ignored nor should their health care be rationed due to limited available resources. There are veterans dependent on VA as their life-support system.

The American Legion represents 2.6 million wartime veterans, but speaks for the 24 million veterans of the United States Armed Forces and their families.

Please continue the appropriations process—name conferees, convene the Conference Committee, and pass the Conference Report.

Sincerely,

Mr. Speaker, on that same day, the commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, General Larry Tailor, urged the Speaker to pass S.862 and the Democrat leadership to put partisanship aside for the benefit of our Nation’s veterans and troops. These pleas from the American Legion and the VFW fall on deaf ears. Instead, we only hear one request from Republican Members of this House to both Speaker Pelosi and Democrat Majority Leader Senator Reid, urging them to end their PR campaign and begin conference work on the Veterans appropriations bill.

Unfortunately, it appears as though all of these commonsense requests have fallen on deaf ears. Our Nation’s veterans are being forced to pay the price for continued Democrat partisanship and lack of leadership on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD these two letters so everyone watching today’s debate across the country can see the efforts that have been made by the Republican Party to end this impasse on the important issue of providing adequate funding for those who have sacrificed so much on behalf of the country.

OFFICE OF THE SPEAKER, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC.

MADAM SPEAKER: We write to urge you in the strongest possible terms to reach a prompt agreement on the conference report on the FY2008 Military Construction and Veterans Affairs Appropriations Act (H.R. 2642). Few issues are more important than adequate funding for our Nation’s veterans. The leadership in the House cannot allow this critically important funding to fall victim to the usual partisan wrangling which occurs all too often in Washington.

Veterans should not be used as tools for political bargaining and gamesmanship. Both the House and Senate passed the FY08 MilCon-Veterans appropriations with overwhelming majorities to ensure our commitment to veterans rises above partisan squabbling. Tragedies such as the recent revelations at Walter Reed Medical Center must never be repeated. The findings of insufficient care at Walter Reed and other facilities should be seen by Congress as a mandate to finish the work and live up to the promises we have made to our veterans.

After decades of flat funding, total VA budget rose from $48 billion in FY 2001 to approximately $70 billion in FY 2006, a 46 percent increase. This year, the House voted to increase funding by $6 billion over FY07, one of the largest increases of the Department of Veterans Affairs. Both the Senate and House versions received overwhelming majorities support passing by a vote of 469-2 in the House and 92-3 in the Senate. Earlier in the year, the new Majority agreed they would continue the trend of significant increases in veterans funding begun by the Republican Congress. We ask you to honor that agreement and see that the commitment we made to our veterans is upheld.

We must never forget the sacrifice of our veterans. As members of Congress, we have a solemn obligation to fulfill our promises to them. We ask you to look past the heightened partisanship of our times and unite us on this issue by making it a first priority to quickly bring a stand alone Veterans appropriations bill through conference so the Congress may present the President with a bill no later than October 12, 2007.

Sincerely,

Stevan Pearce; Steve Buyer; Don Young; Jim Sensenbrenner; Wally Herger; Jim Saxton; John Kline; Geoff Davis; Tom Tancredo; Louie Gohmert; Ginny Brown-Waite; Doug Lamborn; Darrell Issa; John T. Doolittle; Lincoln W. Davis; Jeff Miller; Sue Myrick; Geo f Davis; Thelma Drake; Steve King; Jeb Hensarling; Barbara Cubin; Scott Garrett; Spencer Bachus; K. Michael Conaway; Tom Feeley; J. Randy Forbes; Jon C. Porter; John Shimkus; Jim Gerlach; Mike Ferguson; Mary Bono; Dean Heller; Jeff Miller; Sue Myrick; Geoff Davis; Thelma Drake; Steve King; Jeb Hensarling; Barbara Cubin; Scott Garrett.

OFFICE OF THE SENATE MAJORITY LEADER, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR MAJORITY LEADER REID: We write today to ask you to keep the Senate in session the week of October 8, to help pass this years’ veterans appropriations. Now that we are already into the new fiscal year, it is imperative that the House and Senate reach a prompt agreement on the conference report on the FY2008 Military Construction and Veterans Affairs Appropriations Act (H.R. 2642).

It is unfortunate the Senate has been unable to act upon many of its Constitutionally mandated appropriations bills. While the House continues to call upon the Senate to complete its work, we call upon you to quickly move veterans appropriations through conference so a final version of the bill can be passed and presented to the President. We believe that veterans issues rise above the partisan divisions of Washington, which is evident by the passage of the FY08 MilCon-Veterans appropriations with overwhelming majorities in both Houses, 503-3 combined.

The Senate cannot allow this critically important funding to fall victim to the usual partisan wrangling which occurs all too often in Washington. If tragedies such as the recent revelations at Walter Reed Medical Center recur in the future, we must pass veterans funding now. From FY 2001 the total VA budget rose from $48 billion to approximately $70 billion in FY 2006, a 46 percent increase. This year, the House voted to increase funding by $6 billion dollars over FY07, one of the largest in the 75 year history of the Department of Veterans Affairs. Because we have asked so much of our brave men and women in uniform during the War on Terror we must uphold our commitment to veterans upon their return home.

Earlier in the year, the new Majority agreed they would continue the trend of significant increases in veterans funding begun by the Republican Congress. We ask you to honor that agreement and see that the commitment we made to our veterans is upheld.

We must never forget the sacrifice of our veterans. As members of Congress, we have a solemn obligation to fulfill our promises to them. We ask you to look past the heightened partisanship of our times and unite us on this issue by making it a first priority to quickly bring a stand alone Veterans appropriations bill through conference so the Congress may present the President with a bill no later than October 12, 2007.

NATIVE HAWAIIAN GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION ACT OF 2007

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 764, I call up the bill (H.R. 505) to express the policy of the United States regarding the United States relationship with Native Hawaiians and to provide for a process for the recognition by the United States of the Native Hawaiian governing entity, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 764, the bill is considered read.

The text of the bill is as follows:

H.R. 505

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa- tives of the United States in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act of 2007.”

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the Constitution vests Congress with the authority to address the conditions of the indigenous, native peoples of the United States;

(2) Native Hawaiians, the native people of the Hawaiian archipelago that is now part of the United States, are indigenous, native people of the United States;

(3) the United States has a special political and legal relationship to promote the welfare of the native peoples of the United States, including Native Hawaiians;

(4) under the treaty making power of the United States, Congress exercised its constitutional authority to establish a prior history of treaties between the United States and the Kingdom of Hawaii, and from 1826 until 1893, the United States—

(A) recognized the sovereignty of the Kingdom of Hawaii;

(B) accorded full diplomatic recognition to the Kingdom of Hawaii; and

(C) entered into treaties and conventions with the Kingdom of Hawaii to govern commerce and navigation in 1826, 1842, 1849, 1875, and 1887;

(5) pursuant to the Hawaiian Homes Com- mission Act, 1920 (42 Stat. 108, chapter 42), the United States set aside approximately 203,500 acres of land to address the conditions of Native Hawaiians in the Federal territory that later became the State of Hawaii;

(6) by setting aside 203,500 acres of land for Native Hawaiian homesteads and farms, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act assists the members of the Native Hawaiian community in maintaining distinct native settlements throughout the State of Hawaii;

(7) approximately 6,800 Native Hawaiian families reside on the Hawaiian Home Lands and approximately 18,000 Native Hawaiians who are eligible to reside on the Hawaiian Home Lands are on a waiting list to receive assignments of Hawaiian Home Lands;

(8)(A) in 1959, as part of the compact with the United States admitting Hawaii into the Union, the United States published a public trust (commonly known as the “ceded lands trust”), for 5 purposes, 1 of which is the bet- term of the conditions of Native Hawaiians;

(B) the public trust consists of lands, including submerged lands, natural resources, and the revenues derived from the lands; and

(C) the assets of this public trust have never been completely inventoried or segregated;

(9) Native Hawaiians have continuously sought access to the ceded lands in order to establish and maintain native settlements and distinct native communities throughout the State;

(10) the Hawaiian Home Lands and other ceded lands provide an important foundation for the identity of the Native Hawaiian community to maintain the practice of Native Hawaiian culture, language, and traditions, and for the survival and economic self-suffi- ciency of the Native Hawaiian people;

(11) Native Hawaiians continue to main- tain other distinctly native areas in Hawaii; (12) on November 23, 1993, Public Law 103– 150 (107 Stat. 1510) (commonly known as the “Apology Resolution”) was enacted into law, extending an apology on behalf of the United States to the native people of Hawaii for the Kingdom of Hawaii in the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii;

(13) the Apology Resolution acknowledges that the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii occurred with the participation of agents and citizens of the United States and further acknowledges that the Native Hawaiian people never directly relinquished to the United States their claims to their inherent sovereignty as a people over their national lands, either through the Kingdom of Hawaii or through a plebiscite or referendum;

(14) the Apology Resolution expresses the commitment of Congress and the President—

(A) to acknowledge the ramifications of the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii;

(B) to support reconciliation efforts be- tween the United States and Native Hawaiians; and

(C) to consult with Native Hawaiians on the reconciliation process as called for in the Apology Resolution;

(15) despite the overthrow of the govern- ment of the Kingdom of Hawaii, Native Hawaiians have continued to maintain their separate identity as a single distinct native community through cultural, social, and political institutions and self-expression in their rights as Native people to self-deter- mination, self-governance, and economic self-sufficiency;

(16) Native Hawaiians have also given ex- pression to their rights as Native people to self-determination, self-governance, and economic self-sufficiency—

(A) through the provisions of governmental services to Native Hawaiians, including the provision of—

(i) health care services;

(ii) educational programs;

(iii) employment and training programs;

(iv) economic development assistance pro- grams;

(v) children’s services;

(vi) conservation programs;

(vii) fish and wildlife protection;

(viii) agricultural programs;

(ix) native language immersion programs;

(x) native language immersion schools from kindergarten through high school;

(xi) college and master’s degree programs in native language immersion instruction; and

(xii) traditional justice programs, and

(B) by passing laws to enhance Native Hawaiian self-determination and local control;

(17) Native Hawaiians are actively engaged in Native Hawaiian cultural, tradi- tional agricultural methods, fishing and sub- sistence practices, maintenance of cultural use areas and sacred sites, protection of burial sites, and the exercise of their traditional rights to gather medicinal plants and herbs, and food sources;

(18) the Native Hawaiian people wish to preserve, develop, and transmit to future generations of Native Hawaiians their lands and Native Hawaiian political and cultural identity in accordance with their traditions, beliefs, customs and practices, language, and social and political institutions, to control and manage their own lands, including ceded lands, and to achieve greater self-determined power over their own affairs;

(19) this Act provides a process within the framework of Federal law for the Native Ha- waiian people to participate in the development of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act to consult with Native Hawaiians for the purpose of giv- ing expression to their rights as Native people to self-determination and self-governance;

(20) Congress—

(A) has determined that the United States has a special political and legal relationship for the welfare of the native peoples of the United States, including Native Hawaiians;

(B) has identified Native Hawaiians as a distinct group of indigenous, native people of the United States within the scope of its au- thority under the Constitution, and has en- acted statutes of status; and

(C) has delegated broad authority to the State of Hawaii to administer some of the United States’ responsibilities as they relate to the Native Hawaiian people and their lands;

(21) the United States has recognized and reaffirmed the special political and legal rela- tionship with the Native Hawaiian people through the enactment of the Act entitled, “An Act to provide for the admission of the State of Hawaii into the Union”, approved March 18, 1959 (Public Law 86–3; 73 Stat. 4), by—

(A) ceding to the State of Hawaii title to the public lands formerly held by the United States, and mandating that those lands be held as a public trust for 5 purposes, 1 of which is for the betterment of the conditions of Native Hawaiians; and

(B) conferring on the United States’ responsi- bility for the administration of the Hawaiian Home Lands to the State of Hawaii, but retaining the exclusive right of the United States to consent to any actions affecting the lands included in the trust and any amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Com- mission Act, 1920 (42 Stat. 108, chapter 42) that are enacted by the legislature of the State of Hawaii affecting the beneficiaries under the Act;

(22) the United States has continually rec- ognized and reaffirmed that—

(A) Native Hawaiians have a cultural, his- toric, and land-based link to the aboriginal, indigenous, native people who exercised sov- ereignty over the Hawaiian Islands, and

(B) Native Hawaiians have never relinqu- ished their claims to sovereignty or their sovereign lands;

(C) the United States extends services to Native Hawaiians because of their unique status as the indigenous, native people of a once-sovereign nation with whom the United States entered into a special political and legal rela- tionship; and

(D) the special relationship of American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians to the United States arises out of their status as aboriginal, indigenous, native peo- ple of the United States; and

(23) the State of Hawaii supports the reaffir- mation of a special political and legal relationship between the Native Hawaiian governing entity and the United States as

If any section or provision of this Act is held invalid, it is the intent of Congress that the remaining provisions shall continue in full force and effect.

SEC. 11. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. After 1 hour of debate on the bill, it shall be in order to consider the amendment printed in House Report 110-404 if offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE) or his designee, or on which shall be in order without intervention of any point of order or demand for division of the question, shall be considered read, and shall be debatable for 10 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and the objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 505.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself myself such support as I may command and be in order without intervention of any point of order or demand for division of the question, shall be considered read, and shall be debatable for 10 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and the objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 505, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act of 2007. Without the hard work, dogged determination, persistence and leadership of our colleagues from Hawaii, we would not be where we are today on this legislation. Indeed, Mr. NEIL Abercrombie and the States Constitution. In recognition of this authority, we passed similar legislation in the House under the suspension of the rules during the 106th Congress. My committee, the Committee on Natural Resources, has passed similar legislation three times, each time with overwhelming bipartisan support.

We need to make a clear statement. We need to pass H.R. 505 overwhelmingly, and I would urge all my colleagues to vote “yea” on this important bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) very appropriately recognizes Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 505 today, but he is on his way to an annual convention of the Alaska Federation of Natives, something that’s very important to him as well as to that particular group. So I have consented to manage this issue, though there are few Members in this House who feel as strongly in favor of H.R. 505 as Mr. Young.

The sponsor of this bill, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. Abercrombie) has done something that is very unique in this body. He’s written a bill that only affects his own State. Recognizing the Native Hawaiian governing entity does not affect Native American tribes in my State, does not affect the lands or resources in my district. That is something that’s becoming very unusual around here.

Mr. Abercrombie, you need to be careful, you’re almost becoming a Republican.

Congress has already enacted dozens of authorizing laws and appropriations bills to the benefit of Native Hawaiians. This bill does not create a new source of funds, nor does it let Native Hawaiians seek funds through the BIA.
This bill has the support of the Hawaiian delegation, Governor Lingle and the State legislature. Their judgment should be given some respect.

Georgetown Professor Viet Dinh, who was the U.S. Assistant Attorney General for Legal Policy in 2001 to 2005, testified that “Congress has constitutional authority to enact the Native Hawaiian Government Recognition Act, and to recognize a Native Hawaiian governing entity as a dependent sovereign government within the United States.” In other words, to treat Native Hawaiians just as it treats Native Americans and Alaska Natives.”

Professor Dinh explained that when Congress recognizes Native people, it does so in a political way, not a racial way, and he established two criteria that Congress must deem having met in order to exercise this authority. Basically, one, that people must have a native ancestry on lands that became part of the States; two, they must be members of a distinct native community. H.R. 505 appears to have passed these two tests.

This bill deserves a fair and open debate in this body, just as the native people deserve formal recognition from the government do.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I’m very happy to yield to the gentleman from the western district of Utah, Mr. Abercrombie.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I’m very grateful and thank you. I want to thank Mr. Bishop for his kind remarks. It exemplifies, I think, the kind of relationship we have on the Resources Committee. And I want to repeat that for those who are in their offices, maybe are not here on the floor but in the gallery and may be tuning in. I want to emphasize that the tenor of his remarks and the courtesy with which he put it forward, including his sense of humor, which is well recognized in the committee and appreciated, reflects that this legislation is not only bipartisan, it’s nonpartisan. That is to say, it’s not a Republican issue or a Democratic issue and has never been presented on this floor, through all the different sections of the Congress, from its introduction over the past 7 years and as it has moved through the Congress over past sessions, it has never ever been presented as a partisan issue, Republican or Democrat. And I say “nonpartisan” because the committee reflects the full gamut of the left of the Democratic Party and the right of the Republican Party. Whether you are characterized as a progressive or a conservative, this issue transcends that precisely for what Mr. Bishop so rightly pointed out.

This bill directly affects and only affects the ceded lands and the Hawaiian homelands and the assets associated with Native Hawaiians in Hawaii. Everybody who’s on the Resources Committee and everybody who has dealt with issues that have come before the body as a whole coming out of the Resources Committee understands that there’s been a longstanding issue in the salmon runs in the Northwest and whether or not they’re the water issues based on treaty obligations in the Southwest, whether it’s indigenous people in Alaska or American Indians in Hawaii. Each area has particular contexts and situations that need to be addressed legislatively. And so what the committee tries to do in a nonpartisan way is address those issues in a very specific manner so that they can be resolved without impinging on any other aspect of constitutional consideration.

Let me point out practically how that happens. For those of you who have visited Hawaii, when you land at the airport, you’re landing on what’s called ceded land. That ceded land produces revenue. Now, obviously the airport didn’t exist when the Kingdom of Hawaii was overthrown in 1893, and it didn’t exist when the United States annexed the Kingdom of Hawaii as a territory of the United States, and that airport as it is configured today did not exist with the advent of statehood. And so what we have now is very, very valuable land producing revenue, and it’s what is called about 1.8 million acres of ceded land coming in a continuum from the time of the overthrow of the kingdom down to the State of Hawaii today where the ownership of the land, and the benefit’s very clearly recognized, including in the Admissions Act of Hawaii to the State of the Union: Public Law 8-3, March 18, 1959, which specifically requires us to address questions of beneficiating Native Hawaiians through the lands that have been ceded to them or held for which were created for them by the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920. That’s what we’re dealing with here today.

So we are asking that deference be given to the committee’s work, which has been nonpartisan, which has no ideological difficulties associated with it, that deference be given and understanding to what the Admissions Act requires of us.

And I say it’s ironic that support comes from Mr. Young, Mr. Don Young, as it came from other Republican chairmen. In fact, this was first introduced under Republican chairmen, passed under Republican chairmen. Mr. Hansen of Utah and Mr. Pombo of California and Mr. Young of Alaska, as well as Mr. Miller and Mr. Rahall, all have supported this act, as have the committees. Mr. Young is now in Alaska speaking to the Federation of Natives, of Alaskan Natives, because we’ve recognized over those indigenous people who were not a party to the Constitution when it was formed and first passed but have activities, and in the contemporary context, their lives’ affected by how we deal with them. The Constitution requires us as a Member of Congress to be able to do that.

So what is at stake here very, very simply for the Members is that this is an enabling legislation that creates this opportunity for Native Hawaiians to take responsibility for their own actions with regard to the control and administration of their own assets. That is not in dispute. The land boundaries are there. The amount that’s coming in is noncontroversial. What’s in dispute is who’s going to control those assets. That’s what this is about. This gives this opportunity to Native Hawaiians to organize themselves to come back to the Secretary of the Interior, whoever that may be, and to ask the Secretary of the Interior to recognize that governing entity over these assets. If the Secretary of the Interior disagrees with it, they have to go back to the drawing board and that asset is enabled, and it’s enabling legislation that has been put together responsibly by responsible members of the Resources Committee in consultation with one another and with various administrations, and we would ask for your favorable consideration on the floor today.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah, Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Cole).

Mr. COLE of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, our decision on Native Hawaiian recognition ought to be governed by two very basic principles: First, the concerns of the people of Hawaii, and second, the established principles of sovereignty of indigenous people under which this Republic has operated for over 200 years.

This bipartisan bill is supported by the Hawaii delegations in both the House and the Senate, which are Democratic, by a Republican Governor for the State of Hawaii, and by the Hawaii State Legislature, which has adopted bipartisan resolutions overwhelmingly in 2000, 2001 and 2005, by the National Congress of American Indians, and by the Alaska Federation of Natives.

We are concerned that the establishment of a Native Hawaiian governing body is only a Federal issue. I would submit, as has been suggested, it’s as much a State question as a national one, and we ought to respect, as conservatives, the wishes of people at the State level.

Despite what some believe or say, this is not about race; this is about the sovereignty of an indigenous people. The Native Hawaiian governing body, having the same characteristics as Native American governments, deserves Federal recognition.

Some sometimes say that Native Hawaiians should not be set apart as a separate category, yet our Congress has passed over 160 statutes addressing the conditions of Native Hawaiians and repeatedly recognizing the United States’ political and legal relationship...
Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization in Hawaii schools. Everyday use of the Hawaiian language was reinstalled in schools. The Republic of Hawaii prohibited the use of the Hawaiian language in school. The constitutional convention also created the Office of Hawaiian Affairs, or OHA, so that Native Hawaiians would have some ability to manage their own affairs. Native Hawaiians were pressured to assimilate and many was lost.

Hula, which had been suppressed by the missionaries and then restored by King Kalakaua a few years before the overthrow, survived but did not thrive. Hawaiians were pressured to assimilate and much was lost.

Whale oil was important to all the people of Hawaii. The gentlelady, Ms. Mazie Hirono, for 5 minutes.

Ms. Hirono. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 505, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act, which begins to provide a measure of justice for the indigenous native people of the Hawaiian Islands. I’d like to take a few moments to share some of the history to show why this bill is so important to all the people of Hawaii.

The Kingdom of Hawaii was overthrown in 1893. Hawaii’s last Queen, Lili’uokalani, was deposed by an armed group of businessmen and sugar planters who were American by birth or heritage, with the support of U.S. troops. The conquerors took the Hawaiian throne, under protest, to avoid bloodshed. She believed the United States, with which Hawaii had diplomatic relations, would restore her to the throne. As we now know, despite the objections of President Grover Cleveland, the injustice of the overthrow was allowed to stand and the Republic of Hawaii was established.

A few years later, in 1898, the United States annexed Hawaii. Prior to annexation, a petition drive was organized by Native Hawaiians securing signatures of almost two-thirds of the Native Hawaiian population opposing annexation: 29,000 signatures out of an estimated Native Hawaiian population of 40,000 at that time.

These petitions are now in the National Archives.

The Hawaiian culture was under siege. The Republic of Hawaii prohibited the use of the Hawaiian language in Hawaii schools. Everyday use of the Hawaiian language diminished greatly.

As we now know, despite the objections with which Hawaii had diplomatic relations, a petition drive was organized by Native Hawaiians, who has labored long and hard for this legislation and has garnered significant bipartisan support, and I look forward to your success today.

Mr. Rahall. Mr. Speaker, I’m very happy to yield to the other Representative from Hawaii, the gentlelady, Ms. Mazie Hirono, for 5 minutes.

idea that we are one that has come from many people. I think the legislation is divisive and will give a group of U.S. citizens special rights over other citizens based solely on race.

Our Constitution seeks to eliminate racial discrimination and promote it. How can we promote equality while separating our people? Some people here today have characterized this legislation as nothing more than a kind gesture to Native Hawaiians. This is not the case. This bill will not only create a new race-based government but it will allow rights and privileges to Native Hawaiian descendants throughout the United States that their neighbors and friends throughout this country do not enjoy.

The Federal Government today will decide what is best for 20 percent of the Hawaiians who have Native Hawaiian ancestry. The Federal Government should not have this power. The Bush administration has rightly promised to veto the bill if it passes because it will “discriminate on the basis of race, color, or national origin, and further subdivide the American people.”

This attempt to divide America sets a frightening precedent for separating groups of Americans based on racial backgrounds. This bill is irresponsible, I believe, and simply unconstitutional.

My good friend from Oklahoma got up and spoke about that the leaders of the State want this legislation. Well, in 2006 there was a survey done of the Hawaiian people by a nonpartisan grassroots institute of Hawaii that found that 69.89 percent of Hawaii’s residents want to vote on a Native Hawaiian government before it is considered at the national level, and 80.16 percent of Hawaii’s residents do not support laws that provide preferences for people based on their race.

This bill will grant broad governmental powers to Native Hawaiians including all living descendants of the original inhabitants of Hawaii. Geographic, cultural, and political connections are not required.

This bill does not effectively define what it means to be a member of the new Native Hawaiian government. Anyone with one traceable drop of Native Hawaiian blood could claim the same rights and powers from the alternate government, regardless of how far removed they are from their ancestors or even what State they live in.

There is nothing in this bill that prohibits this newly organized government entity from including non-Native Hawaiian backgrounds from Arizona or Connecticut. Furthermore, this new government entity will then have to come up with a system for assessing and cataloging all the people who claim to have Native Hawaiian heritage. This could be more costly and time consuming than anyone today realizes.

The new government will have authority over more than 20 percent of Hawaii’s population, and possibly countless more nationwide. And no where in this legislation is there an opportunity for citizens of the State of Hawaii (Native or not) to vote to accept this newly created government. This is a Federal imposition of the worst kind, one in which the citizens who this bill affects most, have little or no say in accentionation.

In fact, a 2006 survey of the Hawaiian people done by the nonpartisan Grassroots Institute of Hawaii found that:

- 69.89 percent of Hawaii’s residents want to vote on a Native Hawaiian government before it is considered at the national level.
- 80.16 percent of Hawaii’s residents do not support laws that provide preferences for people based on their race.
- 68.3 percent of residents in the First Congressional District (Rep Neil Abercrombie) want that vote.
- 66.95 percent of the entire State opposed the 2006 bill to create a Native Hawaiian government.

77.83 percent of Hawaiians would vote for statehood if the vote was held today. (In 1959, 94 percent voted for statehood.)

NATIVE HAWAINIANS ARE A RACIAL GROUP, NOT A TRIBE

The Bureau of Indian Affairs has seven mandatory requirements for tribal recognition. Among other things the tribe must have existed as a community—considered to be a community—including 50% of the group residing together; and possess governing documents and membership criteria.

The Supreme Court’s definition of a tribe in Montana v. United States asserts that a ‘tribe’ must be a united community under one leadership or government, and inhabiting a particular territory. Former Attorney General Ed Meese emphasizes the distinction between racial groups and tribes, “If sharing one drop of aboriginal Hawaiian blood makes a tribe, then Chicanos, Latinos, African Americans, and Mexicans could become a tribe if Congress so decrees.”

Meese went on to say that the phrase “Indian Tribe” has a fixed and distinct Constitutional meaning that cannot be changed by a simple act of Congress. This definition limits “tribes” to preexisting tribes within North America, or those tribes, that were thought to be “dependent nations” at the time of the framing of the Constitution. Such American Indian tribes had to live an independent existence in a separate community, apart from the rest of American society.

By these standards Native Hawaiians would never qualify as a tribe. Hawaii is the most integrated society in the U.S.—there are no Hawaiians living apart from other Americans. All U.S. citizens who reside in Hawaii are equally citizens of Hawaii and the United States and are entitled to enjoy all the privileges and immunities common to other citizens, including protection against discriminatory laws, and racially-discriminatory laws.

Even the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights have objected strongly and consistently to the “race based” classifications in this legislation. Their report released on May 18, 2006 said that passage of a similar bill would “discriminate against Native Hawaiians and current residents living in Hawaii by placing on them new responsibilities and costs that are not shared by other communities in the United States.”

CONSERVATIVE CONCERNS: CONGRESS CAN’T CREATE TRIBES

Congress lacks the power to invent Indian tribes. In U.S. v. Sandoval, the Supreme Court reaffirmed that Congress can recognize existing tribes, but does not have the authority to create them. “It is not the role of this Court to bring into existence a new Federal entity by an act of Congress.”

Congress can only acknowledge groups who have long operated as a tribe with pre-existing political structure and who live separately and distinctly from other communities both geographically and culturally. Neither is true of the Native Hawaiians today who live in different States, and under different State laws and systems, and who for years have co-existed in the same communities with non-Native Hawaiians.

COMMUNITY DISTINCTIONS

The fact that Native Hawaiians have lived and currently live in Hawaii in the same communities as non-native Hawaiians will cause many potential problems should this bill become law—in effect creating one set of laws for Native Hawaiians and a potentially drastic different set of laws for non-native Hawaiians living in the same house.

Different codes of law would apply to people differently based on race. Even though all Hawaiians now currently live and function in one community, attend the same churches, shop at the same stores and attend the same schools. One business may be exempt from State taxes, State business regulations, and laws while the other one is not. Because of this, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act could be found in violation of the 14th amendment equal protection clause.

BILL PROVISIONS

Creation of New Federal Offices: This bill will create a Native Hawaiian Relations Office within the Department of Interior and a new interagency coordinating group to coordinate political and legal relationships between the new tribe and all agencies of the U.S. Federal government.

Formal Negotiations—Government to Government: This legislation would allow for negotiations between the three governments, the United States, the State of Hawaii, and the new Native Hawaiian government. The Native Hawaiian people would be able to negotiate with these governments on the transfer of lands, natural resources, and other assets and the authority over these transferred lands.

The Native Hawaiians could renegotiate the exercise of civil and criminal jurisdiction in their government, possibly changing laws or even Constitutional rights they will adhere to by having the option of redrawing various jurisdictional lines. This new government will also be able to negotiate on the delegation of powers and authorities they have from the Federal and State government and possible separations or grievances for historical wrongs committed against Native Hawaiians.

HAWAII CASES—RACE

Rice v. Cayetano—2000: Currently there are more than 150 statutes that confer Federal benefits to the Native Hawaiian people. Rice v. Cayetano put many of these benefits in jeopardy and costs serious doubt on the Constitutionality of this legislation.

The Court held that the State of Hawaii’s limitation on voting for certain posts to only “Native Hawaiians” contradicted the Fifteenth Amendment because it used ancestry as a substitute for race.

Morton v. Mancari—1974: In this 1974 case, the Court noted there was a large distinction between a racial group consisting of “Indians” and a political group, a federally recognized tribe.

The Court asserted that all government programs that extend benefits according to racial classifications must be “strictly scrutinized” and are presumed invalid under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Hawaiians—pushing for the passage of this bill before us today—seek to provide a process for the United States to recognize Native Hawaiians as a governing tribe that is political in nature. The stated goal of this legislation is to ensure that “Native Hawaiians are treated as a unique and distinct, indigenous, native people with whom the U.S. has a special political and legal relationship.”

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to yield 5 minutes to another distinguished member of our Natural Resources Committee, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 505.

First, I want to commend the author of this bill, my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Hawaii, for his leadership and tireless efforts in bringing this legislation to the floor for consideration, and also to commend my good friend the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Ms. HIRANO) for her co-authorship of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL); and the senior ranking member, Mr. YOUNG, for their support of this legislation.

This bill is important for many reasons but none more critical than to address the serious needs of the indigenous Native Hawaiians who are the indigenous and aboriginal people who not only inhabited these islands way before Europeans ever arrived, but they are still there, I submit, Mr. Speaker.

In 1893 a great injustice took place. The government of the sovereign nation of Hawaii, then ruled by its Queen Liliuokalani, was overthrown by U.S. military forces, which later the President of the United States stated that this overthrow of the Queen’s government was done without authorization either from the President nor from the Congress of the United States. It was not until 1993 that Congress passed a joint resolution to acknowledge and apologize on behalf of the United States on the illegal and unlawful overthrow of the Hawaiian Kingdom in 1893 and for the deprivation of the rights of Native Hawaiians to self-determination.

This is not the first time Congress has shown deference towards the status of the indigenous Native Hawaiians. In the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1921, Congress expressed and reaffirmed the “special” and “trust” relationship between the United States and the Native Hawaiians. Moreover, Congress, in passing the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1921, also recognized Native Hawaiians as “a distinct and unique indigenous people.”

This bill sets the institutional framework for the establishment of a relationship between the United States and the indigenous Native Hawaiians just as Congress has done for the indigenous American Indians and the indigenous Native Alaskans.

At this point I want to personally commend the gentleman from Oklahoma for his support of this legislation, not only as the cochair of our Native American Congressional Caucus but certainly as a proud member of the Chickasaw Nation from Oklahoma. I cannot think of a better person who understands and appreciates more the plight and sufferings of his own indigenous people, al. ian, exact replica of the fate of the indigenous people of Hawaii, the Native Hawaiians. I hope my colleagues in their offices have had a chance to listen to Mr. COLE’s eloquent statement that he just shared with us. Mr. Speaker, I want to note the particularly strong support of this bill from the senior ranking member of our committee, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG). In my opinion, the gentleman from Alaska is probably the most recognized expert in this Chamber who understands historically how Congress has also accepted Native Alaskans as a “trust responsibility” in the same way that American Indians are treated under the U.S. Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I submit to my colleagues that this should not be a partisan issue. If there are doubts among our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, I would strongly suggest consultations with the gentlewomen from Oklahoma and Alaska.

Mr. Speaker, after 114 years our national government, especially this body, the Congress of the United States, with authority under the Constitution to deal with issues affecting the rights and general welfare of the indigenous population of our Nation, this bill seeks to correct that remaining group, the indigenous people who inhabited the Hawaiian Islands and later established a sovereign nation and later established treaty relations with other countries, even with our own country.

After the unlawful and illegal overthrow of the Hawaiian Kingdom, the status of the indigenous people of the Hawaiian Kingdom was never properly addressed by the Congress of the United States. Mr. Speaker, Congress has properly determined that American Indians of the lower 48 States are an indigenous people. We have also declared Native Alaskans as an indigenous people. The only remaining group to be recognized are the indigenous people of the State of Hawaii, some 400,000 Native Hawaiians.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not based upon race. It is a bill to establish a reconciliation process by giving the indigenous Native Hawaiians the same status as we have done for the indigenous American Indians and the indigenous Native Alaskans.

I respectfully urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE).

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. I want to thank my friend, Mr. WESTMORELAND, for his kind compliments that came my way. I knew something would follow on that, and of course it was his reservations about the bill.

But he cited a poll which seemed to indicate, I believe he said, that people were obviously against race-based legislation and so on. I don’t blame them; I would think they would be. I’m surprised it wasn’t 100 percent. But let me read what the question was. I didn’t read the question. Here’s the question: “If 505 would allow Native Hawaiians to create their own government not subject to all the same laws, regulations and taxes that apply to other citizens of Hawaii, do you want Congress to approve this bill?” Well, I’m dumfounded they couldn’t get 100 percent against that question. And, of course, 505 doesn’t do any of that; quite the opposite. As Mr. RAHALL indicated, we specifically address those issues, and taxes, of course, are going to be paid.

Let me give you the Ward Research Poll, done this year, that is a real poll, and I will tell you the question: “Have you heard of the bill, the Akaka bill?” Yes, 84 percent. “Do you think Hawaiians should be recognized by the U.S. as an indigenous group similar to recognition given American Indians and Native Alaskans?” Yes, 70 percent. “Do you believe Hawaiians have a right to make their own decisions?” Yes, 87 percent. “Do you believe programs that have been passed by the Congress for Native Hawaiians should continue?” Yes, 83 percent. This goes on and on at that kind of level in Hawaii.

So, I appreciate my good friend bringing up the question of polling, but I think it’s useful for us to know that when the people of Hawaii are polled on an objective basis, there is overwhelming support, Republican and Democrat, and independent, for resolving this issue in the manner in which 505 addresses.

Mr. BISHOP. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE).

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I have an amendment that has been made in order which I plan to offer later.

As I came on the floor yesterday, I was approached by several Members who pointed out that my amendment was, perhaps, overly broad. I went back to the office and took a look, and I... happen to agree, it is. And it might confuse people. Because in my original amendment I said nothing in the action will relieve any sovereign entity within the jurisdiction of the United States, including the Native Hawaiian governing authority, from complying with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution.

And so I would like to see if the proponents of the measure would agree to a unanimous consent request to narrow the amendment so that it would simply apply only to the Native Hawaiian governing authority, as opposed to the Native American or any sovereign entity within the United States.

I would yield to the gentleman from Hawaii.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Well, I regret to say that I don’t have the revised language in front of me. And I understand the intent of the first amendment. Mr. FLAKE knows that I supported the opportunity which put that forward for discussion before the Rules Committee. But I’m sorry, I can’t consent, despite my friendship and respect for Mr. FLAKE, because I’m not sure that the revised language, even if I had it in front of me, which I don’t, would not be subject to the same kind of difficulty, perhaps an interpretation that we can’t foresee on first glance. So I reluctantly cannot accede unanimous consent.

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the gentleman.

Let me just state what the narrowed one would do: “Nothing in the act shall relieve the Native Hawaiian governing authority from complying with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment to the United States Constitution.”

I’m not trying to play a game of “gotcha” here at all. I have the utmost respect, and that respect has grown over the years, for the gentleman from Hawaii. No Member of Congress works harder for his constituents and is more thoughtful in legislating than Mr. ABERCROMBIE. But for those of us who have some concerns that this goes beyond land disposition or other smaller issues, this is not an idle concern that we have.

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission noted recently that this legislation “would discriminate on the basis of race or national origin and further subdivide the American people into discrete subgroups according to varying degrees of privilege.”

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. I would be glad to yield.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Could I then yield to the expert on the civil rights matter? Because you did kindly referring it to my attention yesterday and we did have a discussion, so I deferred my inquiry to the expert in the House of Representatives on civil rights and Native Americans; that’s Mr. KILDEE. Would you be willing to have a dialogue with you on this?

Mr. FLAKE. That would be fine with me.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

First of all, no one questions your sincerity on this. I do think that we could really create a legal situation here without knowing the consequences of what we do.

Now, Congress, back in 1968, recognizing that in certain areas, the 14th amendment, by the way, says “States” shall not do certain things. So they wrote the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968. That was written very, very carefully by both Houses. The great constitutional attorney Senator Sam Irwin played a major role in that, and they carved out how the basic rights contained within the fifth and the 14th amendment would apply on Indian tribes.

It’s a well-done bill. And had we had the chance to discuss this in committee, perhaps we could have reached some agreement; I’m not sure. But I’m very concerned about adopting anything that would be precedent-setting consequences when it took them months, in 1968, to craft the Indian Civil Rights Act. It’s a two-page bill, and it really enumerates pretty well the fifth amendment and the 14th amendment.

So, at this time, I think that we would be treading on rather dangerous territory to have the courts have to look at, first of all, the Constitution, the treaties, the 14th amendment and the Flake amendment and decide where they conflict, which one to apply.

So, despite your sincerity, I wish we had discussed this in committee, perhaps we could have arrived at some remedy there. But here I think we’re going to create a lawyer’s delight.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. If the gentleman would continue to yield for a moment.

Mr. FLAKE. Yes.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. And I won’t take more than a moment or two.

The question, nonetheless, as I indicated when we spoke yesterday and as I indicated to the Rules Committee, is an important one that needs to be addressed. I don’t want to run anything by anybody where they might feel even for a moment that they haven’t had full consideration of important fundamental issues like civil rights and equality before the law.

If the gentleman would consider the idea of not offering the amendment right now for the reasons that have been stated, we’re not quite sure where we’re going with it, I can assure the gentleman that, should the bill pass, it has to go to the Senate, it has to come out of the Senate, and we can address those issues, as has been done with other bills with which we are acquainted again and again. You have my word that I will sit down and go over with you in detail and in depth the issues involved here, and, should the gentleman yield, I will yield to those served speeches where they are addressed in whatever comes from the other body, if it’s able to move forward.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLAKE. I would.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. I would take that as a very helpful and constructive suggestion.

First of all, Mr. FLAKE, you and I are friends, and you are a friend of Mr. ABERCROMBIE, also. And I think what he suggests would be a good thing. Perhaps, I’m just saying, I’m not sure, perhaps the 1968 law somehow could be worked into this. But we aren’t prepared to do that now without knowing exactly what we’re doing. And I think it would be helpful. I would take Mr. ABERCROMBIE’s willingness to sit with you. I will be glad to sit with you. We all believe in civil rights, we all believe in the principles of the fifth and the 14th amendment, and I think we could very well work this out in conference.

Mr. FLAKE. I thank the gentleman, and I thank him for providing the text of ICRA yesterday. I did read through it, and it was convinced and compelled that my original amendment was overly broad, and that’s why I sought to restrict it here.

Seeing that we cannot restrict it, I will withdraw the amendment. But I reserve the right to move the motion to recommit in later. And the motion to recommit is pretty much similar to what the amendment would have been, further restricted.

I take the gentleman’s concerns. We don’t know what the implications will be with the amendment, but I would submit that we don’t really know what the implications might be without the amendment. And what the motion to recommit will do will simply have three sections. It’s just one page here. It will say that what will apply is the U.S. Constitution’s Bill of Rights, the Federal civil rights laws, and that no racially defined burdens of immunities, so we will make sure that no persons should be a result of a conclusion of this act, be exempted from any Federal or State law, regulation tax or legal burden that is the basis of the law.

I would say that it is true, this needs to go to the Senate and then come back here. And if there are problems in that this is overly broad, the motion to recommit, then that, perhaps, can be fixed as the bill works its way through. But I think that, because we swear an oath to uphold the Constitution, that we should endeavor to make sure that what we pass does not run afoul of, in particular, the 14th amendment.

I understand the gentleman’s concerns in talking about ICRA of 1968, but I think we can all agree here that the sovereign nature of Native American tribes in the United States is a little different than what we’re talking about here.

So, I think it would behoove us to be careful here and to make sure that we aren’t doing anything that might upset that. And I’d be aromatise that we need to make sure that we’re not creating something here that might run afoul of the Constitution. I think that’s our obligation.
So, that’s what the motion to recommit will be. It will be “forthwith,” so this will not take any time. It won’t have to come back to committee. And I will be glad to give copies across so people can be familiar with it before we’re voting on it.

But, again, this is not a game of “gotcha” at all. I have great respect for those on the other side of the aisle who have worked hard on this legislation.

With that, I would yield to the gentleman from Hawaii.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Rather than having a motion to recommit, because I would ask you not to do that for the reasons already enumerated, this deserves our specific attention. And we both know, I think, what happens on a motion to recommit: people come to the floor; they see superficially what’s involved. Who can argue about everybody wanting to have civil rights?

And I don’t want to have to get into a debate about the merits of a revocable title. This is the main thrust of the bill. The bill as written under the existing law contains provisions that are redundant at best, or at worst, but it does address this concern, it would be better. That is the stance I have taken on this. I have not been subject to partisan rhetoric from the other side. I have confidence in this legislation, and I am doing it on blind faith. Not on blind faith in you. I have faith in your good faith within the existing bill. But I am doing it on blind faith as to what the safe harbor would be or not be or what the consequences would be. I am sorry I can’t accept that and I ask you once again to give us the opportunity to work on this in the quiet if we simply accept the motion to recommit or preferably the actual amendment that simply says, and let me read it again, “Nothing in the act shall relieve the Native Hawaiian governing authority from complying with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment to the United States Constitution.” That’s a pretty safe harbor. And I think that if it goes to the Senate and we find there is something in there that needs to be modified or tweaked, we can do that as the bill goes back. But I think we have at least that, I would submit. And so with the knowledge that we can’t modify that, then we will offer the motion to recommit later.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, before yielding to my next speaker, I do want to certainly recognize the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE) who has, for the first time in quite a few months if not this year, been so gracious and so kind as to give us at least 5 minutes’ notice of what the minority side’s motion to recommit is going to be all about instead of at the last nanosecond receiving such recommittal motions as we have on so many bills before this body in an effort to play gotcha. So I do appreciate knowing what that recommittal motion is going to be ahead of time.

Thank you, Mr. FLAKE.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. HONDA).

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, today as chairman of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus in unconditional support of H.R. 566, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act of 2007. This bill provides a process for the reorganization of the Native Hawaiian government entity for the purposes of a federally recognized government-to-government relationship.

Since the annexation of the Territory of Hawaii, Native Hawaiians, Hawaii’s indigenous peoples, have been treated by Congress in a manner similar to American Indians and Alaska Natives. Congress has passed over 160 statutes to address the conditions of Native Hawaiians and has repeatedly recognized the United States’ political and legal relationship with Native Hawaiians.

H.R. 505 formally extends the Federal policy of self-determination and self-determination to Native Hawaiian, thereby providing parity in Federal policies toward American Indians, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians.

This bill does not grant Federal recognition, but provides a process for Native Hawaiians to be federally recognized. The Secretary of Interior will be required to certify the Native Hawaiian governing entity before it is federally recognized.

This bill will also provide a structured process to address the long-standing issues resulting from the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii. The bill provides for a negotiation process to resolve these issues with the Federal, State, and local governments and will alleviate the growing mistrust, misunderstanding, anger and frustration about these matters.

This measure is supported by Hawaii’s Republican Governor, Linda Lingle, as well as the Democratic congressional delegation, and the Hawaii State legislature. The bill is supported by the National Congress of American Indians and Alaska Federation of Natives as well as numerous other national organizations. The bill is also supported by a number of organizations in Hawaii who have passed resolutions in support of enacting this bill.

I ask my colleagues to support this measure and advance the reconciliation process for our people.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I will continue to reserve.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I have the right to close and I will reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I will say some of Utah. In closing, I will merely state I have appreciated this particular dialogue we have had, without the long colloquy we went through in this particular area. I would humbly submit that at least some of the times in the past when more than adequate time to consider a recommittal has been given, the bill tends to disappear from the floor before the vote takes place. So we are happy this may not necessarily be the case today.

With that, I will yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, according to the American Bar Association, “The right of Native Hawaiians to use of property held in trust for them and the right to govern those assets is not in conflict with the equal protection clause since it rests on independent constitutional authority regarding the rights of native nations contained within articles I and II of the Constitution.”

The ABA further adds, “Our courts have upheld Congress’ power to recognize indigenous nations and has specifically recognized that this power includes the power to re-recognize nations whose recognition has been compromised in the historical past.”

Indeed, I would note that this body, the Congress, has recognized 530 of the 561 federally recognized Indian tribes. It is my hope that this authority and this process will be used to address the conditions of Native Hawaiians. I again want to commend the delegations of Mr. ABERCROMBIE and Ms. HIRONO, for the work that they have put into this legislation. I commend our Committee on Natural Resources and the staff that have worked so hard to, once again, bring this effort to the floor of the House in a non-partisan, bipartisan piece of legislation. I join my colleague from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) in hoping that the motion to recommit is not offered by the gentleman from Arizona. But should it be offered, then I hope my colleagues would recognize that what we are attempting to prevent by arguing against that motion is a discrimination against Native Hawaiians. And we are asking that we treat them no differently than other Indians.

I would like to commend my colleagues to join, once again, in supporting this legislation in a strong bipartisan manner and I would urge a “no” on any motion to recommit.

Mr. HIRONO of Hawaii, Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 505, the Native Hawaiian Government Reorganization Act, which begins to provide a measure of justice for the indigenous, native people of the Hawaiian islands. I could argue the legal and constitutional arguments on why this bill should be passed, but I want to take a few minutes to share some of the history to show why this bill is so important to all the people of Hawaii.

As many of you know, the Kingdom of Hawaii was overthrown in 1893. Hawaii’s last Queen, Lili’uokalani, was deposed by an international congress of sugar planters, who were American by birth or heritage, with the support of U.S. troops. The Queen agreed to relinquish her throne, under protest, to avoid bloodshed. She believed the United States, which with Hawaii had diplomatic relations, would restore her to the throne. As we now know, despite the objections of President Grover Cleveland, the injustice of the overthrow was allowed to stand, and the Republic of Hawaii was established.

A few years later, in 1898, the United States annexed Hawaii as a territory, a annexation, a petition drive organized by Native Hawaiians secured signatures of almost two-thirds of the Native Hawaiian population opposing annexation (29,000 signatures out of an estimated Native Hawaiian population of 40,000). These petitions are now in the National Archives.

The Hawaiian culture was under siege. The Republic of Hawaii prohibited the use of the Hawaiian language in Hawaii’s schools. Everyday use of the Hawaiian language diminished greatly and it was in danger of dying out. Hula, which had been suppressed by the missionaries, began to revive. King Kalakaua a few years before the overthrow, survived but did not flourish. Hawaiians were pressured to assimilate and much was lost.

When Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalaniana’ole was elected to serve as Hawaii’s delegate to Congress, he succeeded in passing the Hawaiian Homelands Commission Act of 1920, which set aside some 200,000 acres of land for Native Hawaiians. The reason for the legislation was the landless status of so many Native Hawaiians, and the occupation of their assets, who became the most impoverished population in their native land. In recognition of its trust responsibility toward Native Hawaiians, Congress passed the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, which is still in force. Beginning in the late 1960s and early 1970s, a Native Hawaiian cultural renaissance began in music, hula, language, and other aspects of the culture. This cultural renaissance was inspired by hula masters (kumu hula), who helped bring back ancient and traditional hula; musicians and vocalists, who brought back traditional music and sang in the Hawaiian language; and political leaders, who sought to protect Hawaii’s sacred places and natural beauty.

This flowering of Hawaiian culture was not limited to Hawaii but spread across the United States, which with Hawaii had diplomatic relations and an increased connection with each other. People of all ethnicities in Hawaii’s respect and honor the Native Hawaiian culture. We are not threatened by the idea of self-determination by Native Hawaiians.

The constitutional convention was designed, in part, to right some of the wrongs done to Native Hawaiians. The constitutional convention created the Office of Hawaiian Affairs or OHA so that Native Hawaiians would have some ability to manage their resources. The Constituent Assembly also ratified the creation of OHA and voted to allow the trustees of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs to be elected solely by Native Hawaiians. Although the Supreme Court in Rice v. Cayetano decided that limiting the vote in this manner violated the 15th Amendment, that decision was based on the fact that the State of Hawaii ran the elections, not whether or not Native Hawaiians are an indigenous, native group with an inherent sovereignty. In fact, the court expressly avoided the issue of whether other Native Hawaiians are analogous to an Indian tribe.

The Constitutional Convention also laid the groundwork for the return of some federal lands to Native Hawaiians, including the island of Kaho’olawe, which is currently held in trust for a future Native Hawaiian governing entity. The ConCon, as it is known in Hawaii, also designated the Hawaiian language (along with English) as the official state language of Hawaii for the first time since the overthrow in 1893.

I was in the Hawaii State Legislature when we approved creation of Hawaiian language immersion schools, recognizing that language is an integral part of a culture and people. The Hawaiian language was in danger of disappearing. Public Hawaiian language preschools, called Pu’ukola Leo, were started in 1976. We now have Hawaiian language elementary, middle, and high schools in Hawaii, and a new generation of fluent Hawaiian language speakers are helping to keep this beautiful and culturally important language alive.

Other native peoples are looking to the Hawaiian model as a means of preserving and perpetuating their native languages.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 505, and I do so in recognition of the long-standing ties between Native Hawaiians and Alaska Natives, who themselves underwent a struggle to be recognized for the purpose of settling their aboriginal land claims. H.R. 505 concerns a struggle involving Native Hawaiians, who are seeking to formalize a kind of relationship among the Federal government, the States, and Hawaii’s original peoples based on the powers of the Congress to regulate Indian affairs. I have been proud to work with my good friend, the Gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE), to work on passing this bill for all the years we have worked together. I want to recognize and congratulate the Gentleman for his iron commitment to this legislation and to the well-being of Hawaii and the nation.

This Congress has passed several laws of unique application to Native Hawaiians, invoking the authority of the so-called Indian Commerce Clause of Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution. An important example of these laws is when Congress conveyed lands in Hawaii for the purpose of benefitting the Natives. This has been supplemented with additional benefits exclusively for Native Hawaiians based on their status as Natives.

But there is a shortcoming in these laws: Congress has not yet authorized the Natives to organize a governing entity. At some point, we the Congress have to provide for the Native Hawaiians to administer benefits in accordance with our current policy of promoting self-determination among Native American people in general. Native Hawaiians have largely stayed intact as a distinct community and we would be doing a great disservice to them if we did not set up a process for their recognition as a governing entity. The governing entity will be the vehicle they use to advance their economies, and preserve and pass on their special heritage and language to future generations.

I understand that some Members have a problem with this bill. It has been said many times already but it’s worth emphasizing again: H.R. 505 has the endorsement of the Governor, the Congressional Delegation and the State Legislature of Hawaii. It does not cut into projects for American Indians and Alaska Natives. Enrollment to the governing entity is elective.

We can trace the genesis of this bill, embodying the hope of an indigenous people to control their own fate, all the way back to the overthrow of 1893. It has been a long road. I believe how we treat our native indigenous people reflects our values and who we are.

Clearly, there is much in the history of our interactions with the native people of what is now the United States that makes us less than proud. The attributes of America has always been the ability to look objectively at our history, learn from it, and where possible make amends.

Native Hawaiians, like American Indians and Alaska Natives, have an inherent sovereignty based on their status as indigenous native people. They desire the right to exercise management over their own affairs and land. By law, a portion of income from the former crown lands of the Kingdom of Hawaii (also called ceded lands) is allocated to benefit the native Hawaiian people. At present, that income comes from the Office of Hawaiian Affairs, a state agency. Management of this income and Hawaiian lands should be done by a Native Hawaiian governing entity now that the trustees of the Office of Hawaiian Affairs are elected by all the residents of the State of Hawaii and not just Native Hawaiians.

As has already been mentioned today, this legislation is supported by the great majority of Hawaii’s people, by its Republican governor, by our State Legislature, and by dozens of organizations, including the Congress of American Indians and the Alaska Federation of Natives.

This legislation primarily affects the State of Hawaii. Our state motto, which is the same as that of the Kingdom of Hawaii, is “Ua man ke ea o ka aina i ka pono,” which means “the life of the land is perpetuated in righteousness.” This is a historic vote and one that helps to perpetuate righteousness by righting a historic wrong. I ask that you stand with the people of Hawaii and oppose the Flake amendment, oppose the motion to recommit, and support passage of the bill.

Mahalo nui loa (thank you very much).

For these reasons, we owe a great deal of deference to the judgment of the elected representatives of the State of Hawaii. They are representing the people of Hawaii and the operation on their islands. The Delegation of Hawaii understands best that Native Hawaiians have struggled for decades to achieve a status that adequately promotes their self-determination.

Let’s keep in mind that Congress has recognized Native Americans for various purposes over the years. We are not limited by a strict set of criteria such as those set forth in the Interior Department’s Federal acknowledgment regulations. While these criteria are sensible to apply in some cases, a quick look at some of the Indian statutes passed in the early days of our republic make it clear that Congress viewed its powers to deal with Indians in a very broad sense.

Opponents often say that Native Hawaiians are not a tribe and that Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution limits Congress to recognize only tribes in the contiguous 48 States. The meaning of “tribes” in Article I, Section 8—commonly called the Indian Commerce Clause—is broad in scope. There is nothing that limits Congress to recognizing only the tribes of the Lower 48 States. In fact, Congress was recognizing Indians for special reasons when they were in lands that were not part of the United States. And Congress has authorized the reorganization of reservations that were broken up and tribes that were terminated. Again, Congress has broad, plenary authority to recognize Native peoples.

H.R. 505 is a good bill and it is a first, critical step for Native Hawaiians to deal with Hawaii and the Federal government in a fashion befitting their special status as a distinct Native community. In their wisdom, the Representatives from Hawaii have left issues reserved for this operation on their islands. The Delegation of Hawaii understands best that Native Hawaiians have struggled for decades to achieve a status that adequately promotes their self-determination.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to recommit be considered as read.

Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit the bill H.R. 505 to the Committee on Natural Resources. This motion to recommit is very similar to that.

As I mentioned before, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission has concerns about the legislation. They said, “This would discriminate on the basis of race or national origin and further subdivide the American people into discrete subgroups accorded varying degrees of privilege.” I think there is sufficient concern that we should find the safe harbor here of making sure that the 14th amendment applies. This motion to recommit, I will read the entire thing, it is not long. So I will read all of it.

It simply says: “Page 44, after line 22, insert the following: Applicability of the United States Constitution’s Bill of Rights. The Native Hawaiian governing entity shall be subject to United States Constitution’s Bill of Rights and other protections in the same manner and to the same extent as a State or local government of the United States. Section (i).

No racially defined burdens or immunities. No person shall, as a result of the operation of this Act, be exempted from any Federal or State law, regulation, tax, or other legal burden on the basis of that person’s race or ancestry or on the basis of any classification that is defined by race or ancestry.”

This is a pretty good default, a default back to the Constitution, and says that no line in this act will be compatible, has to fit within the Constitution. That is all that this motion to recommit does. Some will raise the question that this might apply to Native American groups here on the mainland and not. This only applies to this act, to the Native Hawaiian governing entity.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very narrowly drafted motion to recommit. It is drafted “forthwith” so it will come immediately back so it won’t spend any more time in committee. Then, if there are issues unforeseen, when it goes to the Senate and comes back, we can work on them. But in the meantime, I think we would better option to actually have this default and to go back to the U.S. Constitution.

The gentleman mentioned earlier that the act provides that the Secretary of the Interior has to certify that the act, as it is drafted, is consistent with the U.S. Constitution. I would just state for the record that we haven’t had the best record relying on the Secretary of the Interior to manage trust accounts or other things. We shouldn’t delegate that. We shouldn’t delegate our responsibility to uphold the Constitution to an official in the executive. That is our purpose here. We make the laws. We should ensure that they are given the guidelines and given the protections here that the Constitution affords.

So I would urge adoption of the motion to recommit. As I mentioned, I offered it reluctantly. I would have rather, sometimes become political, and this is not, so I would have preferred to offer this as a straight amendment narrowed to this specific act, but wasn’t afforded that opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to say again that I want to commend those on the other side of the aisle for working so hard on this legislation and for their diligence in working to make sure that this is a good bill. This will improve it. This will simply say that those under this act are afforded the guarantees and the protections of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Hawaii is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, this bill before us is the result of years of bipartisan and nonpartisan work, which has been mentioned. I take second to none my regard for Mr. Flake and recitation once again of our personal regard for one another; however, I am afraid that the reason I have to oppose this motion to recommit is for precisely the reasons I mentioned during our previous dialog.

I am pleased that he actually read what the motion to recommit says because the part here, and you may recall in my previous commentary where I said we can’t be sure what the consequences might be, we have had a chance to vet them. The bill itself has been vetted again and again by counsel on both sides of the aisle and by groups that have an interest in the bill. This is the consensus that this meets all relevant legal technicalities. Here, look: “The Native Hawaiian governing entity shall be subject to the United States Constitution’s Bill of Rights and other protections in the same manner and to the same extent as a State or local government of the United States.” That is an invitation to an avalanche of litigation. How are you going to define “same manner” and “same extent” of a State or local government?

The indigenous people, whether they are Native Americans in tribes, whether they are Alaska Natives in corporations, Native Hawaiians trying to put together a government, and they are not a State, they are not a local government, and to say in a motion to recommit that we are going to require them to exactly replicate State and local governments, which is subject to litigation all the time, you would have to have a trust fund set up to handle the litigation, I think, that would result from that.

Mr. Speaker, I don’t think that that is Mr. Flake’s intent. In fact, I would stipulate that that is not his intent. Our problem is we haven’t had a chance to sit down and go over this to see whether we can address any of these contingencies. I wish he had accepted my plea, my offer, and I wish he would stand up now and say, I have seen the light and I am going to withdraw my motion to recommit. Because if you go to number (i), applicability of Federal civil rights laws, it says the same thing with respect to civil rights and antidiscrimination laws in the same manner and to the same extent as a State or local government of the United States.

My friends, my colleagues, I agree that Mr. Flake has brought this not for political reasons but because of his sincere belief that this needs to be addressed. I can assure you that if anything is political, this is political by default. Far from saying simply that it is a simple explication of his point of view, it is an absolute wellspring of complication to try and figure out what the same extent of State and local government has to do with regard to civil rights, antidiscrimination or Bill of Rights and other protections. “Other protections,” what does that mean? That will be litigated to death.

So, Mr. Speaker, I ask Mr. Flake, having heard the analysis, I have analyzed a simple language for him. If he would reconsider withdrawing the motion to recommit. If he does not, I pledge him now that if we are able to defeat the motion to recommit, which I think should be defeated by anybody who’s worked on this bill. I make this final plea in all seriousness, Mr. Speaker. We have worked too hard, come too far on a nonpartisan basis, Republican and Democrat alike, to come to this conclusion and throw ourselves into the bickering patch of State and suit some sort of applicability of laws as recommended in the recommittal. The bill itself deals with all these issues on civil rights.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the motion to recommit be defeated and that we move to a vote, an overwhelming vote on the underlying bill, H.R. 505, which is an exemplary product, a singular stalwart example of what bipartisan work can do in this House of Representatives.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit. The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. Flake. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand a roll call vote, pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote on the question of passage.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 178, nays 235, not voting 19, as follows:
Mr. SHULER. I yield to the gentleman who showed up to the game. Some of you came out: HENRY BROWN, MIKE CONWAY, STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES, JESSIE JACKSON, GREGORY MEeks and LINCOLN DAVIS. Thank you guys for coming out there to the game. I think that’s extremely important that when you are out there, we’re out there, leaving a little skin on the field, a little blood, but all of it’s for a great cause to the Capitol Hill Police. Sergeant at Arms, Bill Livingood, thank you. The Chief of Police, Philip Morse, thank you for all your help. And also a special thanks to Vardell Williams, who’s now become the voice of the Longest Yard Classic. Thank you. He works here for the superintendent, but he volunteered to be out there to be the voice of the Longest Yard Classic.

So again I thank everybody, and congratulations to the Capitol Hill Police.
ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced that the yeas and nays were ordered as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FLY OUR FRIENDLY AND SAFE SKIES?

(Mr. POE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, “Fly the friendly and safe American skies.” That’s what Americans are being told by our government. But not so fast.

NASA just completed a 4-year survey of thousands of pilots on the issue of air safety. The results have been compiled, but NASA not only won’t release the results, they have ordered the survey to be deleted from official computers.

NASA officials have said if the results are public, the airline customers’ confidence in air safety will be jeopardized. The taxpayers paid $8 million for this survey, and the results should be open and not held hostage just because the results may reveal bad news.

The American public and the airline industry should know what the pilots say about air safety. If it wasn’t for the press, the mere knowledge of this survey would have remained a dark secret behind the curtain. Our “Challenge” is to continue to “Endeavor” to “Discover” the truth.

NASA should not be in the business of hiding the truth. Americans can deal with the truth, even if NASA cannot.

And just that way is it.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SARBANES). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 18, 2007, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members are recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

HONORING DEVEN AMIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. DENT) is recognized for 5 minutes.
Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of one of my constituents, Mr. Deven Amin of Easton, Pennsylvania. Deven, a senior at the Blair Academy in Blairstown, New Jersey, recently raised $7,500 in local contributions for the Nyumbani Village Project in Kenya.

Nyumbani Village, located a short distance from Kenya’s capital, Nairobi, is a settlement where HIV/AIDS affected children are placed under the stewardship of elderly Kenyans in mutually beneficial family settings. Founded in 1992, the village today provides shelter, nutrition and education for roughly 180 orphans, over 100 of which are infected with HIV/AIDS, and 63 elderly adults. From infants to teenagers, these orphans represent nearly every tribe and ethnicity in Kenya.

In the past 2 years, Deven has twice traveled to Kenya to volunteer at Nyumbani, where he helped cultivate the village’s farm, organize children’s activities and assist families with various household duties. After witnessing firsthand the impact of this unique project on many participants in Nyumbani, Deven returned to Easton eager to share his experiences, enhance awareness of the global HIV/AIDS epidemic and generate local support for the continued development of the Nyumbani Village.

This year, Deven raised an astonishing $7,500 for the project through an ambitious letter-writing campaign that targeted local businesses and health care professionals. The funds gathered by Deven allowed him to help construct a critical multipurpose hall in Nyumbani. This structure will provide necessary recreation space for children during times of inclement weather and serve as a gathering place for the entire Nyumbani community. Construction of the facility has been identified as a top priority by the program’s directors, who envision the settlement housing between 1,200 and 1,600 individuals in the future.

While raising money, Deven also educated residents of the Lehigh Valley about the devastating impact of HIV/AIDS in Africa through various speaking engagements at local organizations. Recently, Deven spoke at the Palmer Township Kiwanis Clubs, and he will address an audience at a local Rotary International chapter in the near future. He also plans to host a chapel service at his high school in late November in an effort to enhance local awareness of global HIV/AIDS through firsthand accounts of his experiences in Kenya is truly commendable.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues today join me in recognizing the achievements of Mr. Deven Amin, whose selfless efforts will undoubtedly improve the lives of hundreds of Kenyan orphans impacted by HIV/AIDS. We are all extraordinarily proud of Deven for his efforts on behalf of myself and all the people of the 15th Congressional District. I congratulate him and thank him once again for what he has done to help make this world a better place.

IRAQ AND AFGHANISTAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Woolsey) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, when General Petraeus testified before Congress last week, he had a lot of happy talk from the administration about how much improved things had gotten in Iraq. From the way they talked, you would have thought that Iraq had become a sort of paradise, a middle eastern Shangri-La. But now it’s back to harsh reality.

Yesterday, when the administration announced its funding request, the President said, and I quote, “I often hear that war critics oppose my decisions, but still support the troops. Well, I’ll take them at their word, and this is the chance to show that they support the troops.”

Well, a few weeks ago, the administration had a chance to show that it supported the troops, and it blew it. The SCHIP bill that was vetoed included the bill that I sponsored, H.R. 3481, the Support for Injured Servicemembers Act. This bill amends the Family Medical Leave Act to allow family members of a soldier wounded in Iraq or Afghanistan or any other conflict to take up to 6 months leave from work to care for that soldier.

This change in the Family Medical Leave Act is desperately needed by the families of our brave troops. The Dole-Shalala Commission reported that 21 percent of active duty soldiers, 15 percent of reservists and 24 percent of retired or separated soldiers have had family members or friends give up their jobs to care for them while they recovered from their wounds. And 31 percent of active duty soldiers, 22 percent of reservists and 37 percent of retired or separated soldiers have had a family member or close friend relocate, relocate for extended periods of time to care for them while they were in the hospital. So extending the Family Medical Leave Act benefits would help many military families when they actually need the help the most. That’s why I am disappointed that the Military Officers Association of America, the Enlisted Association of the National Guard of the United States, the National Military Family Association, and the National Partnership for Women and Families support this legislation.

The administration’s veto of SCHIP was a slap in the face, not only to the children that will not be covered, but to all of these fine organizations.

Let’s support our wounded troops and their families and let’s support our courageous troops in the field in Iraq by rejecting this administration’s request for supplemental funding, but, instead, fully funding the safe, orderly and timely redeployment of all of our troops and of all of our military contractors. That way we will be supporting the troops in Iraq.

This is what Congress must do. This is what the American people want. And if we fail to do this, then we have failed the American people and our troops.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3867, SMALL BUSINESS CONTRACTING PROGRAM IMPROVEMENTS ACT

Ms. SUTTON, from the Committee on Small Business, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 110-407) on the resolution (H. Res. 770) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 3867) to update and expand the procurement programs of the Small Business Administration, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SARBAJNE). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. HINCHEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, it was with great sorrow that I learned of the passing of Mr. Muhammad A. Nassardeen, a Los Angeles community. I... to encourage African Americans and others to patronize African American-owned businesses and promote the practice as a much needed strategy for revitalizing the community and addressing problems such as unemployment.

Muhammad Nassardeen never saw the City of Los Angeles as it is, but he envisioned what it could be. He was “connector” extraordinaire. He connected black consumers with black businesses, and black business owners with one another. It is estimated that some 2,000 to 3,000 businesses benefited from the work of Recycling Black Dollars.

Muhammad Nassardeen’s vision and focus on the economic empowerment and advancement of ethnic minorities in Los Angeles will be sorely missed. He was a beacon of light out of economic darkness for many.

The City of Los Angeles, colleagues, family and friends all mourn the loss of Muhammad A. Nassardeen, and I extend my most heartfelt condolences to his family, his colleagues, his many close friends in the Los Angeles business community and here on Capitol Hill.

(Mr. CUMMINGS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. SPRATT, Mr. Speaker, I am transmitting a status report on the current levels of on-budget spending and revenues for fiscal years 2007 and 2008 and for the 5-year period of fiscal years 2008 through 2012. This report is necessary to facilitate the application of sections 302 and 311 of the Congressional Budget Act and sections 204, 206 and 207 of S. Con. Res. 21, the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 2008.

The term “current level” refers to the amounts of spending and revenues estimated for each fiscal year based on laws enacted or awaiting the President’s signature.

The first table in the report compares the current levels of total budget authority, outlays, and revenues with the aggregate levels set by S. Con. Res. 21. This comparison is needed to enforce section 311(a) of the Budget Act, which creates a point of order against measures that would breach the budget resolution’s aggregate levels.

The second table compares the current levels of discretionary appropriations for fiscal years 2007 and 2008 with the “section 302(b)” suballocations of discretionary budget authority and outlays among Appropriations subcommittees. The comparison is needed to enforce section 302(f) of the Budget Act because the point of order under that section applies to measures that would breach the applicable section 302(b) suballocation.

The third table compares the current levels of budget authority and outlays for each authorizing committee with the “section 302(a)” allocations made under S. Con. Res. 21 for fiscal years 2007 and 2008 and fiscal years 2008 through 2012. This comparison is needed to enforce section 302(f) of the Budget Act, which creates a point of order against measures that would breach the section 302(a) allocation of new budget authority for the committee that reported the measure.

The fourth table gives the current level for fiscal years 2009 and 2010 for accounts identified for advance appropriations under section 206 of S. Con. Res. 21. This list is needed to enforce section 206 of the budget resolution, which creates a point of order against appropriation bills that contain advance appropriations that: (i) are not included in the statement of managers; or (ii) would cause the aggregate amount of such appropriations to exceed the level specified in the resolution.

1 Discretionary levels based on annualization of continuing resolution. Pending action by the House Appropriations Committee on spending covered by section 207(d)(1)(E) (oversized deployments and related activities), resolution assumptions are not included in the appropriate level.

2 Not applicable because annual appropriations acts for fiscal years 2009 through 2012 will not be considered until future sessions of Congress.

BUDGET AUTHORITY

For purposes of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, appropriations bills will generally be scored without regard to levels in the continuing resolution that expire on November 16, 2007. The continuing resolution provides $923,554 million in budget authority on an annualized basis. Thus enactment of measures that provide new budget authority for FY 2008 in excess of $928,523 million (if not already included in the current level estimate) would cause FY 2008 budget authority to exceed the appropriate level set by S. Con. Res. 21.

OUTLAYS

For purposes of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, appropriations bills will generally be scored without regard to levels in the continuing resolution that expire on November 16, 2007. The continuing resolution results in $385,600 million in outlays on an Enactment of measures resulting in revenue reduction for FY 2008 of $34,577 million would cause FY 2008 revenue to fall below the appropriate level set by the House Committee.

Enclosure.
THE COST OF SCHIP AND THE COST OF WAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Hastings) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I customarily do not find myself on the floor after the close of business, but I am here today because I genuinely find myself in the position of concern that I believe is significant in the number of Americans share.

We have passed, out of the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate, a measure that will provide health care to many of this Nation’s children who presently are uninsured. The President, exercising his prerogative, vetoed that...
Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to the House’s attention that it was on October 25 a few years ago, not long it seems, only days ago, in 2002 that our State of Minnesota lost Senator Paul Wellstone.

Paul Wellstone, as the Chair of the Jackson for President campaign in 1988. Paul Wellstone was truly a friend of all working people everywhere on the globe. And I just wanted to let you know, Mr. Speaker, that as we approach October 25, and I reflect back upon my personal experience and friendship with Paul Wellstone, whose picture is right now, that I just wanted this day to go by with us in contemplation of what a true servant leader represents.

Paul Wellstone was a friend of mine. I’m proud to say that he was a political ally of mine and those of us who have the awesome benefit of knowing him, and I’ll never forget some of the things he said to me. But, among those things was to make sure that you never ever stop listening to the people.

Paul Wellstone was comfortable anywhere he went. He was comfortable in the hair shops, the beauty salons and the laundromats. Paul Wellstone obviously was comfortable in the halls of power in Congress.

Paul Wellstone, wherever he went, was a person who understood that he carried a sacred trust, that government service was a trust that the people of the State of Minnesota entrusted in him, that it was not a privilege, but it was an awesome responsibility, and he never forgot it.

Paul Wellstone was a leader in many ways and was an example to young people like myself. And as I think what his life means to me, means to the people of Minnesota, I have to consider that it is also that awesome responsibility that he laid out there. A servant leader, Mr. Speaker. Not just somebody who was looking to be served but a person who was looking to serve.

Paul Wellstone was a person who was very passionate about the color green, that was the color of his campaign literature, because it symbolized life. And I shamelessly copied it, Mr. Speaker, because I wanted to carry on that spirit of service, of being evergreen, of being evernew, and being committed to the idea that we have to constantly and continuously renew ourselves, our values, our faith, and our consistency when it comes to serving people all over the world.

So, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that whether we are a Senator of which Paul Wellstone was a tireless advocate, or whether it was students or whether it was the poor in our country, and I will never forget the tour he took around this country to highlight poverty in America, Paul Wellstone could always be found serving people. His loss was a tragic loss.

Only the day before we lost him, he was scheduled to come to my office, and I believe we were going to be campaigning together. It was a long night, Mr. Speaker, when we heard back the reports as the news reports said that a plane has gone down in Ely, Minnesota, and it was thought to be containing Paul Wellstone and his partner Sheila Wellstone, and their daughter and several other campaigners. We hoped all night that what we thought might have happened didn’t happen, but at the end of the evening, we learned that that tragedy had actually occurred, and we had hoped against hope. I will never forget that night.

Mr. Speaker, as I wind down my remarks, I just want to say that in many ways I have dedicated my service and take great inspiration from Senator Wellstone. I will never forget him, and I hope that this House and Senate never do, either.

30-SOMETHING WORKING GROUP

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 18, 2007, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MEEK) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to address the House once again.

I share the sentiment of my colleague in recognizing Senator Wellstone. He was definitely a cornerstone here in this building for public service, and really was a student of many of our great leaders of the past and gave voice to health care in a way that no other can do it.

As you know, in the 30-Something working group, we come to the floor every day, or just about every day we are in session, to share with the Members the things that we have to continue to work on here in the House in a bipartisan way and also share with the Members the importance of making sure that we stand up on behalf of those Americans that need our assistance.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield to my colleague to address the House for as long as he would wish to do so.

Mr. LAMPSON. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me and for allowing me to take a minute or two to talk of a person who has done something significant for our country.

Mr. Speaker, it is a distinct honor and a privilege to be a Member of this House and to be from the great State of Texas and to have in my district the home of American manned spacecraft, the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, or JSC as it’s called. The largest industry contractor at JSC is a company called United Space Alliance, or USA, and it operates the space shuttle for NASA and helps train our astronauts, who call JSC home.

For more than a decade, the head of USA has been a gentleman whose name is Michael J. McCulley. The company’s president and CEO, Mike has led his company through some of the most difficult times of the most exciting, days in the history of the space shuttle. In just a few short weeks, he will step down from USA to begin a well-deserved retirement. He probably won’t go far away. I rise today to salute this good man and his leadership.

Mike came to his duties at USA from the front lines of space exploration. As a shuttle pilot, he has flown Atlantis into Earth’s orbit and seen firsthand the majesty of this planet from space. But even before that, Mike was a naval aviator, then, having flown more than 50 different types of aircraft, flown from the U.S.S. Nimitz and the U.S.S. Saratoga, and at the beginning of his naval career even served aboard atomic submarines in the depths of the ocean. Mike’s friends, is a true explorer of both inner and outer space.

People like Mike McCulley show that in some of our most challenging times, there will be those ready and willing to serve the American people, placing their country before their own personal gains of recovery, and achievement. Only through that kind of courage, that kind of selflessness, will our Nation’s scientific advancement in space be assured and be continued.

On behalf of this Congress of the United States of America, I hope that Mike and his wife, Jane, and their family will accept our thanks and our best wishes on his well-deserved next phase of an exciting, all-American life. Congratulations, Mike.

Mr. Speaker, if I may continue while our colleague who has control of the time has gone to make a critical vote in the Ways and Means Committee, in speaking about Michael McCulley, there are two other things I would like very much to raise as an issue. I started speaking about space because Mr. McCulley is one of the great Americans who has played a significant role in moving us forward technologically in this world and for exploration, and now that we are not moving ourselves, as a Nation, forward in science and technology, engineering and math studies for our youth. We are not challenging. It seems, to have the same kind of commitment for research and development, for exploration as we once had. And, unfortunately, other nations are stepping up to the plate to take our place. So it is my hope that we will find a new and renewed interest in funding space exploration and making sure that NASA has the money necessary to perform the tasks that it is required to do as a science organization for our Nation.

I find it fascinating that in the early 1960s, when we were having difficulties as a Nation, when our Nation happened to be at war and we were having civil strife and were having financial problems in the 1960s; yet John Kennedy, a young, very new President, stepped up to the plate and challenged us to go to the Moon, doing something that not many people thought was possible. And at the same time many of the naysayers and doubters were saying, how can we possibly do that financially? But we made the commitment. We put the money where it was necessary. And our young people learned how to do it and made an unbelievable success for us and changed the world, created new industries.

The information technology industry has grown from our need to be able to communicate with people in space. We have seen medical advances to the extent that lives are now being extended. People are living a higher quality of life. We have learned, and what the technological advancements have been because of our involvement in space. All of these things changed America and, to a large extent, changed the world.

But in the several years, we seem to have had a continuous slackening of the support and the commitment that we made or we saw in earlier years in space. For example, during those Apollo years in the 1960s, when we were going back and forth to the Moon, and in the early 1970s, 6 percent of the Nation’s budget was committed to NASA. Today, that number is around six-tenths of 1 percent, 10 times less. So we have expected a major science agency of this government to do more but to do it with significantly less, and we can’t continue to do that.

Now we are starting to see the impact of other programs that we have learned along the way. We have critical areas fragmented all over the space in science that will give us information about weather and about Earth science, about the environment of the Earth. Those satellites in many instances are getting old. As they get old and cease to operate, we must have something to take their place, and that something must be in place before these existing satellites die or else there will be a gap in knowledge and information. And a gap in information, for example, on the health of our children, how many of our children will live to helping us along the way in the sciences, not to compete against States but to our young people and those that have contributed and dedicated their lives to helping us along the way in the sciences, not to compete against States but to compete against other countries as it relates to the forward lean that we have to have.

We are going to talk about children’s health care and a number of other issues, but we are glad that we kicked off with the NASA program.

Mr. LAMPSON. The Children’s Health Insurance Program is critically important. It’s critically important to giving children the opportunity to grow up healthy enough to want to do well enough in their early years in school so that they will have an opportunity to go off and study math and science and engineering later on. It’s a big deal for all of us.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. You’re 110 percent right. And being from Florida, as you know, we have a number of NASA assets in Florida. And even when I was in the Florida legislature, we were very supportive of programs that gave kids a jump start in the math and sciences to be eligible for NASA programs and other private programs that are out there as it relates to innovation and space.

Mr. LAMPSON. Well, I thank you for your commitment. I thank you for all the work that you have done to further the Children’s Health Insurance Program. This body has come very close to making it law, and it’s my hope that we work very quickly to make sure that the 10 million children in this country who do not have access to this health care are covered.

So thank you for your good work, and I look forward to continuing to work with you to make it a success.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Thank you so very much. And as we speak, there are those in the Capitol dome trying to make sure that children’s health care gets its fair share from this country of ours.

I would just like to share with the Members some of the good things that are happening under the Capitol dome. We have passed, Mr. Speaker, a number of measures that have been bipartisan and relates to legislation. The 9/11 Commission recommendations are something that the House and Senate both passed, and that was signed into law. The largest college aid expansion since the 1944 GI Bill saved on average almost every American because, as it relates to college loans and student loans, the responsibility for paying many of those loans back fall back on parents and grandparents. So that’s $4,400 in interest that the American people don’t have to pay.

The first minimum wage increase in a very long time, double-digit years, was passed by this Congress. And it was because of the Democratic leadership and stands on the minority side that voted for the passage of that bill that we now have an increase in the minimum wage.

Innovation Agenda to promote 21st century jobs, passed by this House, signed into law. The Reconstruction Assistance Program for gulf coast disasters and hurricanes was passed and signed into law. The largest veterans health care increase in the 77-year history of the VA passed off of this floor and is still in a holding pattern as it relates to that becoming law or empowered by the President but the legislative process. Also, the landmark Energy Independence and Global Warming Initiative that was passed by this Congress.

Now, I think it’s important that we look at the record-breaking roll call votes that have been taken thus far by this Congress and the work philosophy that we have in the 110th Congress versus previous Congresses. And you know that the type of the initiatives that have passed on a bipartisan vote that I did not mention that the President has vetoed was the expansion of the life-saving medical research on stem cells that passed in a bipartisan way by this House and by the Senate and was vetoed by the President. And the most recent veto is the one that’s dealing with health care for 10 million children and working families. Passed on this floor on a bipartisan vote, came 13 votes shy last week of overriding the President’s bad veto, had the votes in the Senate to do so, but it’s something that we’re working on right now, Mr. Speaker. And I want to just update why I come to the floor today, and my other colleagues that will be joining me a little later on, to talk about the SCHIP plan.

I can tell you, as we stand here, Mr. Speaker, to address these issues dealing with children’s health care, one said, when I was on the floor last week, well, the Congressman is talking about health care. The CHAMP, or SCHIP, bill is dealing with insurance. Well, I can tell you, when you’re talking about health care, especially preventive care, you’re talking about health care.

If you don’t have insurance, you’re not going to be able to afford health care, especially the preventive care that the CHAMP bill or the SCHIP bill calls for. So, if you take the opportunity that we have as Americans that has a child that is not covered under health insurance, you’re going to find an individual who will share with you that, without it, they can go to many of the doctors offices here and pay a small fraction or at least afford preventive care and the annual checkups that children need.

We’re in a situation right now, Mr. Speaker, that we have children, if this SCHIP bill or CHAMP bill is not reauthorized, we’re going to have children without health care, without health insurance. Whichever way you cut the cookie, they’re going to need a way to pay for health care or you might as well put the cake down the drugstore aisle trying to correct the sniffles and trying to head off other situations that young children run into. But those are just the minor issues. What about the bigger issues that, if detected early, can be prevented if we have the kind of health insurance that would be helpful for children?

As we start to look at a re-approach on this bill after the President’s veto, I add the Speaker and every child I read in reading through not only the newspapers but also in meetings that have taken place, we are still holding hard papers but also in meetings that have taken place, we are still holding hard

Mr. MEEK. And that is why I said earlier, I think it’s important for us to realize our place in this debate. I commend those that voted. You were supposed to vote for that. I’m glad you did. I’m glad you voted for the SCHIP program.

Mr. MEEK. And let me just run some numbers. One may say, well, we’re concerned about cost as it relates to providing insurance for children to have health care. Well, one day we’re going to compare this to what it relates to war because a lot of folks get into the chest-beating posture or session when it comes down to the war in Iraq. And we’re concerned about what happens with children tens of thousands of miles from the United States of America. I'm concerned, also. But I'm really concerned about what is happening with children here in the United States. And I think it's something that we all should pay very, very close attention to.

One day in Iraq costs $330 million. That will cover 270,000 kids. One week in Iraq costs $2.3 billion. That's 1.8 million kids who can be covered under the children's health care bill. One month in Iraq costs $10 billion. That's one month's worth of programs that can cover 8.1 million children as it relates to health care. And the cost of 40 days in Iraq is $12.2 billion. That will cover 10 million kids' health care. I think it's important to look at just over one month that will cover a full year of health care for 10 million children. Just a couple of days over the average month will cover 10 million children.

So, when we start lining our priorities up of where we stand as a Congress, and I'm talking to the real minority here because there are very few Members of this House that are voting opposite of where the American people want to be and that's providing health care. Polls have shown here in the United States over 80 percent of Americans are saying that it's important for us to have children's health care. So, you have a very small percentage saying that they don't agree with this, and maybe they need more information.

But when you have Members of Congress, and we're talking about lights on, lights off, health care for 10 million children or not, that's a simple decision for one to make. If you have issues with the application of it, it has to be better than what we will not have if we don't reauthorize it and reauthorize it for 10 million children.

I think it's important that you understand a number of the coalitions that are here. And I'm spending the time on the floor, Mr. Speaker, to share this with the Members because this is how I like to look for in legislation? We look for bipartisanship. That's what the American people always say. They would love for Democrats and Republicans to work together. You have that in this bill. I mean, for this to be a partisan body, you have to look at the significance of having a bipartisan piece of legislation with major Democrats and major Republicans that are on board on the legislation.

You also have to look at the second issue that I think is very, very important: the fact that it passed both House and Senate overwhelmingly. And you have to look at that as a component and at the leadership and the reason why we have to insure children, 10 million children in the United States of America. That's very, very significant. Don't let anyone belittle the work that has happened on both sides of the aisle with Democrats and Republicans sending a bill to the President. I would also add on to that point the fact that the President vetoed the bill. And you had a commitment from the Senate, the United States Senate, that they would override the President of the United States on this issue because he's wrong. That's what is so good about our democracy. That goes back, not just a bill on Capitol Hill, it goes back to those acronyms that are used to come on Saturday morning to let young Americans know how this process worked. And then in the House we took the vote and we fell 13 votes short of overriding the President. That's very, very significant.

I came last week and commended those groups, those nonpartisan, volunteer groups that are dealing with children's diabetes, that are dealing with a number of issues, polls, the doctors there in the Capitol Hill, the March of Dimes, all the different foundations that are out there doing good things and passing good information out and encouraging Members to sign on and get that vote. We couldn't have had the best 120 votes last week if it wasn't for those outside organizations and Americans and parents and grandparents and children saying we should have health care.

When they see the kind of numbers that I am reading off, spending $330 million in Iraq in 1 day, that's just 1 day. I can get down to $3,300 and change and spending in Iraq. And you have folks here that are mumbling and grumbling about the cost of an insurance bill that will provide health care to 10 million children, we have 40 plus Governors out there saying that we need this bill. I don't want to use a lot of acronyms, I don't want to get into a lot of programs and all of that because I'm on the Ways and Means Committee and there isn't enough acronyms there to talk about health care. I'm on the Armed Services Committee and there is a plethora of acronyms that we could use there and all kind of big words. I want to make sure that everyone understands what it comes down to. You are either with insuring 10 million children or you're not. Period. Dot. There is no in between. There is no "maybe I need to take more consideration" or "maybe I need to take another vote." No, it's almost like three strikes and you're out.

Mr. Speaker, I have been on this floor now coming on 5 years, speaking not only to the Members but also making sure that staff and everyone else understand the second that we are going to take. And if this was about politics, I always say it, look in the Congressional Record time after time again, if it was about politics, I could just sit in my office and let just the electoral process take its course. I do believe that Members who are not voting for children's health care are making a career decision. That's what they're doing on the last day of school for Members and they're retiring after this term that is a whole other thing. But for those who want to continue to serve not only their districts and the American people, they have to pay very close attention to the vote that they are taking here on this floor. Insuring 10 million kids is bigger, in my opinion, than winning some sort of, you know, one or two political races. I am not into that. I was sent here to Congress, and many of us were sent, all of us were sent here to represent the folks back home. And I guarantee you, the folks back home are not saying, "Please don't insure children. Whatever you do, Congress, make sure we have 10 million children or 5 million children. Just make sure you don't do that, and you have my vote." There is not anyone back there saying that. And so I think it's important for us, when we get into this process, I think it's important for us to present what we are making to the American people what we are here for. Like I said, once again, there are some things in the bill that I don't agree with, but when you start talking about the insurance for children that my children celebrate, I won't even vote for health care for children to have health care and I look at my constituents and say, "Run for Congress one day and you can be like me." That's not what it's about. It's about us being able to stand for them.

I think it's also important to look at even with some of the media accounts about some of the things that are going on here in Washington that we are working hard on, the Democratic side of the aisle, because Americans voted for change. Mr. Speaker, I didn't vote for the status quo. Republicans had the majority last time. There were Democrats and Republicans and independents who said, You know something, we gave you an opportunity. My kids and my grandkids and the fiscal situation this country is in is more important than my party affiliation. And we have seen throughout the country, Republicans say, "I'm going to vote for the Democrat this time because I want change." No one should be saying that if they have to say that. There is here and I read off a list of bills that were passed in a bipartisan way. These are not just Democratic bills, we beat our chests and say, "Not one Republican voted for it." Yes, there are one or two there. But the majority of the major bills that have passed have passed with some Republican votes, and that is important to the process.

USA Today, War Costs May Total $2.4 trillion. When you look at the cost of the war in Iraq and Afghanistan, it could cost $2.4 trillion the next decade or nearly $8,000 per man, woman and child in this country according to the Congressional Budget Office that is scheduled for release and that took place here today earlier. A previous Congressional Budget Office estimate put the war cost at more than $1.6 trillion. This one adds to the $705 in interest. And if you take into account, Mr. Speaker, as we continue to go on at the rate we are going at, we will be at work at the borrowing from foreign nations and then we turn around and we also bring a bill. I’m going to add to those points, we bring a bill that we show how we are going to pay for the bill so that we don’t have to continue to borrow from foreign nations, so that we don’t have to continue to see our kids having to pay some $8,000 per man, woman and child because of the decisions that were made here on this floor in previous Congresses.

So how do we have a paradigm shift? Well, we come about bringing about that paradigm shift through good policy and bipartisanship. So I am speaking to the 13 that voted against, helped us fall short of that, of overriding the President. It could have been a different day the following day after that vote, but it wasn’t because we had some of our Republican friends not voting with us.

I am going to put a pin there, and I am going to allow my good friend from Ohio (Mr. RYAN). First of all, I just want to say, sir, that I’m sorry about your Indians. I’m really sorry. As you know, I e-mailed you and told you that I was a big Browns fan, I’m switching sports now, but I’m hav- ing a rough year, and I wanted someone to have some joy that I knew. And I know you, sir, and I know you’re ex- cited about your Cleveland Indians. And they fought hard. But I’m sorry, sir, that they didn’t make it through the process.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. We’re still struggling. There are a lot of emotional issues that Cleveland Indians fans have had for a long time. And then you fac- tor in the Cleveland Browns and the drive and the hum and Michael Jor- dan singlehandedly beating us a couple of times in the playoffs and you add this to the mix, we have some psychological issues we need to deal with, Mr. Speaker, and hopefully we will be able to work through them.

But today is the day that we are talking about the excess in spending on the war. We hear a lot back in our dis- tricts, I’m sure you do in the Seven- teenth District in Miami, and I hear in the Seventeenth District of Ohio, we hear about the rising cost of health care. We hear about the rising cost of education. We hear the problems that we have incurred in this country be- cause we haven’t invested into devel- oping alternative energy sources in the United States of America, and we haven’t developed them fast enough.

We have all these issues that local communities deal with. Community Development Block Grant money that they get from the Federal Government that local communities can build side- walks and roads and sewer lines and they can use all this money. That is Federal money that works its way down to local communities. And when we look at the needs of local commun- ities, every single day in the paper in Ohio, it is water lines, it is sewer lines. In the summer it is the heat. Why do we have to ask the kids and the parents to pay for this year? Why are we cutting the art programs? Why don’t we have enough money to handle the septic and the sewer systems in our local commu- nities? For years, the Federal Govern- ment continued to make those invest- ments. And what we hear now coming out of the executive branch, Mr. MEEK, is that we don’t have the money to do it.

Now, we are talking about providing health care for 10 million kids, poor kids, who live within 200 percent of poverty, a family of four making maybe $40,000 a year. What we are ar- guing on our side is that we think it is in the best interest of this country, all of us together, not one family or this family, all of us, is that if we provide and pay for health care for these 10 million kids and their families, because we believe on this side and our friends, the President, not the President, we believe that if we make this very small investment of $35 billion over 5 years, that we are going to have a healthier country, that we are going to have kids who are sitting in the classroom getting other children sick. The children going to be able to concentrate and focus.

We sit here and we say, “We need more people to major in math. We need more people to major in science. We need to compete with the Chinese. They graduated thousands and thou- sands of more engineers than we did in the United States of America.” Part of that is we need our kids to be healthy. We need them to be able to concentrate in school, not sneezing and getting colds. If they are sneezing and missing classes. We need them to be healthy. And that is the basic concept behind the State Children’s Health Insurance Program.

To have the President, after he began a war that is going to cost us $2.4 trillion, with a T; tell us that we don’t have enough money to provide health care for these 10 million kids is a com- plete outrage and doesn’t really make any sense. Now, I think it is important, Mr. Speaker, to know and be reminded that over the past 6 years, with a Republican President, a Republican House and a Republican Senate, that this President and that Congress, those Congresses have bor- rowed more money from foreign inter- ests than every President and Congress before them combined. Over $1 trillion in foreign money. Now, the same Con- gress and the same President asked to raise the debt limit, meaning we can go out and borrow, as a country, more money. I’m wondering if we can raise the debt limit. Then, on top of that, the final number is the increase of the debt under this President is $3 trillion. So he raised the debt by $3 trillion, raised the debt limit five times. Now we have a war that is going to cost us $2.4 trillion, with a T, and he says, “We don’t have enough money, Mr. Speaker, to provide health care for 10 million kids at $3 trillion, with a T.”

For 40 days in Iraq, we could pay for 10 million kids to get health care for a whole year. Forty days in Iraq. And what is the investment going to get us? It is going to get us healthier kids. It is going to get us kids who can con- centrate and pay attention in school. It is going to save us money in the long run because we are not going to cart these kids off to the emergency room 2 weeks later with pneumonia when we could have taken care of them with maybe a small prescription. Those are the kind of prudent investments that we want to make in this country. Those are the kind of investments that we should be making in this country.

We talk a lot in this country about what are we going to do in the next century? We lost manufacturing, and we are not sure what the new economy is going to look like. But there are some things we know about. Mr. Speaker. We know that, as I stand here in Niles, Ohio, or Youngstown, Ohio, or, Miami, Florida or wherever you are, are competing more directly with the students in China. We know that our kids are now competing. The old steel belt and the old rust belt in Ohio is Cleveland and Youngstown and Akron and Pittsburgh. For the longest time, those cities used to compete with each other and those businesses used to compete with each other. Now this whole region is competing with Shang- hai. And our kids are competing more directly with those kids in China, India and all over the world, 1.3 billion peo- ple in China, 1.2 billion people in India. We only have 300 million people in the United States of America. We are at a real disadvantage when it comes to workers rights, human rights and all kinds of different things that citizens in China don’t have.

But my point here is this, we only have 300 million people. So if you look at what the Democratic agenda, the 6 in ’96 and what my friend from Florida has been stating, what we have been trying to do is very, very simple. We’re trying to invest into those 300 million people so that they’re healthier, so that they’re more educated, so that they are able to live the American dream. Now, no one here has said that everyone needs to be a winner. We un- derstand that life is life. There are win- ners and there are losers. But as a... country, we want to make these investments because we all benefit from it. We all benefit from that.

The investments we are making now, just look at our agenda now. One of the first things we did, we raised the minimum wage for the first time since 1997 so that we are lifting people up. One of the second things we did is we reduced the cost of college education, or tried to. We cut student loan interest rates in half. So when you go out and borrow for your kids to go to school or a student borrows next year to go to school, the interest rate will be 3.4 percent, as opposed to last year when it was 6.8 percent and that money was going to the banks. They were making a heck of a lot of money off of it.

Mr. Speaker, we are saying keep those rates low; let’s improve access so that everyone can go to a community college and get a skill or they can go off to college and get an associate’s degree or a master’s degree or Ph.D. so that they are educated to compete. What we also did was increased the Pell Grant by $1,000 over the course of the next 5 years. Is that as much as we can do with the money? No. Absolutely not. We are not even close. But we are moving in that direction. It’s tough, when you have a war that is costing you $2.4 trillion, to come up with any money to make these kinds of investments. But that is what we wanted to do, and we have changed the direction in regard to college education.

Now, if you’re a kid going to school in Ohio, where we had the new Governor come in and he froze college tuition for 2 years so there will be a zero increase next year and a zero percent increase the following year, if you add that to what we have done with the student loans and the Pell Grants, you’re talking about saving average families the cost of tens of thousands and thousands of dollars. An average student loan, because of the interest change we made, an average family will save $4,400 over the course of the loan.

Now, we are not coming out here beating a drum, saying we have got to cut taxes, we have got to cut taxes for millionaires. We are saying if you send your kid to school and you take out a loan, we just saved you $4,400. If you have a see-saw in your family, or one of your students, kids that are going to school that are working for minimum wage, they got a pay increase. If you’re utilizing the Pell Grant, you’re going to get more of that. These are good, solid investments we’ve made. In addition to this, we have the State Children’s Health Insurance Program. So these kids have opportunity.

Now one of the other things that really isn’t on the agenda to talk about, but the Senate just passed it last weekend and I was trying to get the House to sign it, but the President said he was going to veto it, is the Health and Education bill, where we are making investments to build community health clinics so that people who don’t have health insurance now can at least go to a health care clinic and get some preventive care.

Mr. Speaker, I just found it stunning, and I think a lot of other citizens of this country did as well, and I know many Members of Congress have found it stunning too, when we were having this big debate about children’s health and the President, neither position, the President, and we are talking about our successes, some of the things that have happened in this Congress, I wanted to relay a story that took place over the weekend. I was holding a town hall meeting in my district and we were taking questions and someone asks the question, Well, when are you guys going to do something about the cost of college? I have got a kid in college. When are you going to lower the cost of higher education?

That is a great question and I want to apologize to you because you should be aware of the fact that we have done something about that. This is not something that is on the drawing board or just passed the House or is under signature and been signed, $20 billion of relief for parents and students for higher education. The largest expansion of higher education funding since the GI bill in 1944 passed this House, passed the Senate, and has been signed into law by the President.

Maybe we haven’t done as good a job as we should be doing in getting the message out. This is a major legislative victory for this Congress and for this country. We cut in half the interest rate on student loans, from 6.8 percent to 3.4 percent, which, by itself, if we did nothing else, would save the average student borrower in this country $1,400 by itself.

That is not all we did. We increased Pell Grant funding to $5,400, the largest increase and the highest amount available in history, in the history of the Pell Grant program. We increased funding for Perkins loans. We increased the availability and the types of students and the types of schools that can qualify for Perkins loans. Just as important, we capped at 15 percent of discretionary income the amount that the student borrower will be required to pay in paying back their loans.

So they will not be forced into debt over their heads, and they will be able to have a more manageable debt burden when they graduate and when they start in the workforce and their income is not that high. These are good achievements. That was all in that bill.

So what I said to the person who asked this question was, this was something you took the time to show up at the town meeting to ask this question. This was the time and the thing of concern to you, and that is why you asked me this question. And we did something about it. This Congress has helped you on the issue that is of the greatest concern to you. It is going to help millions of Americans, parents and students around this country, afford higher education, afford the cost of college.

We have had tremendous legislative success. As you have talked about, more days in session, more rollcall votes, more legislation passed, than any Congress in recent history, maybe in the history of the country to this date. So we have legislative success.

I wanted to not let the time go by without talking about that College Cost Reduction Act, because that is going to affect people’s lives.

I yield back now to the gentleman from Florida. Mr. MEKK.

Mr. MEKK of Florida. Thank you, Mr. ALTMIKE. The good thing about it, and Mr. RYAN and I were in a meeting the other day, and I think it is important, very important, and I was sharing a little bit about how I am giving thanks to those out in the field. And when I say “those out in the field,” those Americans out there, because the President said he wasn’t going to sign the College Interest Rate Reduction Act or what have you, the $4,400 that Mr. RYAN alluded to.

If it wasn’t for the American people pushing for that, it wouldn’t have happened. If it wasn’t for the American people saying that we wanted a minimum wage after double-digit years of no minimum wage, it would not have happened. If it wasn’t for the American people stepping up at the last given Tuesday when we had the election for this House saying that we wanted to move in a new direction, it would not have happened.

I think it is important for us to look at this American spirit rising up again on the children’s health bill. When we look at health insurance and we look at health care for children, the American people are going to make that happen, because hopefully we will have an opportunity to vote on that bill again. Hopefully after taking the number one vote that was a bipartisan vote, sending a bill to the Senate, the Senate sent a bill to us, and we voted out the bill and sent it to the President, and the President, two votes that took place, overwhelmingly bipartisan, the President vetoes the bill, okay? And now you are going to have a real third opportunity to vote again.

I do have a vote that has voted against the previous bills, if they want to continue to do it, because their excuse is to say, Well, you know, there was something I didn’t understand on that first vote. Congressman, you mean on this second vote you still didn’t understand? And then on the third vote? Well, maybe you are not in the business of making sure that children have health insurance so they can have health care.

So I am hoping that we can come together in even a greater way in passing a children’s health care bill that covers 10 million children. I think it is important. I agree with the Speaker. I am glad she has put her foot down and this Congress has put our foot down and said we are going to do this. Because at the end of the 110th Congress, there is not going to be a short list of accomplishments and there is going to be a long list, because there has been a drought for a very long time to bring the issues and concerns back to those who attended your town hall meeting.

Congressman, what are you doing for the children in your district? I mean there are concerns and what is going on? I always think it is wonderful the art. We know that is going on. All of us share in making sure our men and women have what they need to have and all of those different things, but that Care you vote in an extremening way? How does this affect my children?

Mr. RYAN talked about someone is going to sit next to a child that doesn’t have health care, and if that child is sick, you can have all the health care in the world. Your child is coming home and they are going to bring whatever that other child has into the household and then everyone is sick, and now we have employers without employees, and everyone is going on and on and on. It is a domino effect. I think it is important that we continue to highlight that.

But I appreciate the fact you all have brought light to all of this. Even Mr. RYAN when he talked to democracy. I think a democracy is a good thing. I think it is playing out well. Even though we fell on the short end, 13 votes short of overriding the President, a major accomplishment with having the Senate vote in an extremening way and having the votes to override the President, and having a super-majority vote here in this House based on the strong Democratic leadership of even bringing the issue to the floor in the first place.

So I am excited about it. I do have faith in the American spirit. I know it will rise up. Those that have sent us here, those that do not work in the Capitol, those counting on us to do the right thing.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. I think it is important, too, to recognize we are just beginning. I think we have moved into a new direction. We are clearly not done. We are clearly not close to being done. No one here is satisfied. No one here will say, This is great; we have really accomplished everything we wanted to. We can go out and turn out the lights and let someone else finish the business. We have got a lot more to do, if you look at what we want to do with alternative energy, if you look at what we want to do as far as continuing to try to reduce the cost of education, K-12 and whatnot.

Mr. MEKK of Florida. We are out of time. Mr. RYAN. I want to thank Mr. ALTMIKE and yourself.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE H12001

MANAGING PUBLIC LANDS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MANNERS). Under the announced policy of January 18, 2007, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. BISHOP) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I applaud the efforts that have been made to give us an opportunity to speak about public lands and about how the public lands are treated and how the future will and will not deal with those public lands.

One of the facts that we have to deal with is how a government deals with property, whether personal property or public property, is a window to the soul of that government. Personal property is tangible and civil liberties are intangible, but both of them are at the center of the historic purpose of this American government, and the preservation of one is indeed the precondition for the preservation of the other.

Sir Henry Maine once wrote a book called ‘The Village Communities’ in which he said: Nobody is at liberty to attack several property and to say at the same time he values civilization. The history of the two cannot be disentangled. The desire, the use of property, whether it is on land or whether it is the use of public property, that desire is what raises mankind from political slavery.

One of the things that we do not often enough around this place is to consider why we are doing what we are doing. Indeed, one of the concepts that is there is that we do what we do because we have done what we always did; and sometimes when you take a moment to look back and reflect on that, in this particular Congress we have been inundated by proposals which have huge and significant impact on personal and public property in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things I would like to do is try to go through with several Members who are in the West, public land states who understand firsthand the responsibility and relationship of this, specifically what we are doing in these particular areas.

One of the people I would like to address some of these issues deals with the public property in our forests. As you know, we are having major fires in this country, and the Speaker on this floor said now is the time we need to do what is right.

I would like to yield some time to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WALDEN) and simply ask him to address that, of what can this Congress do to make it right, especially when we deal with our forests and our processes for the future of our forests to make them healthier or better.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Thank you, Mr. BISHOP. I appreciate your work on the issues we have worked on in the past.

The California fires are tragic in what is happening to the people who live there, the loss of life, the loss of habitat, the pollution that is going into the water. Here in this room we have been told that the California wildfires have burned the equivalent of 10 times the square mileage of the District of Columbia. Ten times the size of the District of Columbia has gone up in smoke in California so far.

In my district in Oregon this year, 11 times the size of the District of Columbia has gone up in fire. Now fortunately we have not seen the loss of life and we haven’t seen the loss of homes. But what we have seen is the loss of land for grazing and habitat and clean water as our watersheds have gone up in smoke.

This picture here I brought down to the floor for my colleagues to see. It is of two young children who are from Harney County, Oregon. This is the Egley fire which burned in my district 140,000 acres; 140,000 acres, the Egley fire burned in Harney County. America’s forest lands going up in smoke.

There are 192 million acres of national forests. According to the Forest Service, 52 million of those acres are at high risk to catastrophic wildfires. Twelve million acres in Oregon are considered high risk; 26 million acres, or just under the size of the State of Kentucky, are at risk to insect infestation.

You have to understand that our forests are not static. They continue to grow and suffer bug infestation, drought devastation, and ultimately fire. The total net national forest growth in the United States is currently about 20 billion board feet a year. Total mortality is about 10 billion board feet. So our forests are expanding at 20 billion board feet a year. America’s owned forests, and 10 billion board feet die. We harvest less than 2 billion board feet.

That is part of our topic today, the lack of active management in our Federal forests. I want to show you what happens on a watershed. This is up in northeastern Oregon. In 1988, the Tanner Gulch fire wiped out the spring Chinook salmon run in Oregon’s Upper Grand Ronde River. This used to be habitat for salmon. There was a creek that ran along here. Unfortunately, it is just judge and debris and blackened trees and ashen slopes.

Now in an extreme fire, scientists tell us that the most catastrophic fire that occurs in our forests emits about 100 tons of carbon and greenhouse gases. For those concerned about trying to do something about carbon emissions in our atmosphere and trying to reduce other pollutants in our atmosphere, we need to do something to manage our forests better to prevent these catastrophic fires. That is on the extreme, the 100 tons per acre. A healthy green forest will sequester between 4 and 6 tons of carbon per acre.

So these are the choices we are facing: How do you manage the forests for better forest health, for reduced fire and reduced fire intensity, and get them back into balance with nature. My colleague from Utah said what do you do about these wildfires.

Well, a few years ago we passed the Healthy Forest Restoration Act. It was bipartisan in its nature and scope. It was designed to allow Federal agencies, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Land Management, to more rapidly, while still involving the public, go in and do the kind of thinning and debris removal to address this issue of the overgrown forests you heard me mention, the 20 billion board feet a year that grows in our forests and the 10 billion that dies, so we can go in, especially in the wildland-urban interface, near communities where homes are, the kind of homes we see burning today, although they are not necessarily in a Federal forest, but it is a Federal forest, you go in and do it quickly and have scientifically proven plans, based on community wildfire plans, in many cases, to go in and remove that debris and reduce that fire hazard.

That legislation which I coauthored with former Representative Scott McNerney from Colorado and Senator Feinstein and Senator Wyden were both very much involved, has worked in many cases, especially the communities, because that piece brought diverse groups together, environmentalists, community leaders, firefighters. We have a group here from Bend who have been on the forefront of this very effort, firefighters from my own district. They came together and developed plans on how do we safeguard the communities and the things we really want to protect, our watersheds and habitat. They came together, and now they can even educate more of the public about those community wildfire plans.

The problem we face in this Congress is virtually every Member of the leadership of this Congress voted “no” on the final conference report that passed the Senate unanimously, and that includes the Speaker, majority leader, the caucus chairman, the Resources Committee chairman, the subcommittee chairman, and the Rules Committee chairwoman all voted against the bipartisan legislation in the final conference report. This is what we worked out with the Senate. It passed and became law. We now have these community wildfire plans in place. We need to continue to work and expand them elsewhere. It is so important.

So far this year in America’s forests and grasslands on Federal land, more than 8 million acres have burned. We are setting records. This is down a little bit from last year, but over the last few years, we are at record levels. American taxpayers have spent $12.22 billion fighting fires, and that is before these awful fires in California have broken out. So it is very expensive when we don’t manage properly and have fires break out.

Let me tell you what has happened. In my district, it is 70,000 square miles of eastern Oregon. It is beautiful. We have nine national forests there. We have the Klamath Mountains, the wilder-ness areas. We have Crater Lake National Park and high desert plateaus, wheat land, and we have had all these fires. They have destroyed communities and many homes in the past. They have destroyed forests, they have burned, and it takes years to recover. In fact, we have cattle ranchers in central and eastern Oregon who may be off their allotments for 2 years because it will take that long for the range to recover from fires that, frankly, shouldn’t have gotten so out of hand if we had done the right management to begin with.

In the meantime, the infrastructure that needs to be there for our scientists and professional forest managers to be able to do this type of work, this investment is going away because, you see, the allowable harvest of timber off Federal land has declined in my part of the world by 80 percent, 80 percent reduction. And with it, the timber receipts to these communities.

So this chart going back to 1976 shows the various timber receipt levels. And you get out here, and you see there is virtually no revenue coming off our Federal land, revenue that used to be shared, revenue that used to help pay for conservation efforts, that used to help pay for parks and other things, the activities people like to do when they recreate. And, most importantly, revenues that used to be shared with the local counties to fund their schools and their roads.

In the largest county in my district, Jackson County, this year because timber receipts are virtually eliminated, and because the county replacement fund was stolen by the federal government, is fundamentally flawed in my opinion, they had to close all the libraries. This is not some thousand-person county. This is largest populated county in my district. Every library had to close.

Another county down on the south Oregon coast, they were looking at declaring bankruptcy. Another was going to have to lay off all their sheriff’s deputies except those mandated by State law. They were on the verge of the law because this Congress hasn’t passed the Secure Rural Schools Reauthorization. I would hope that could be brought to the floor and passed so that those of us in the West, and the gentleman from Utah (Mr. BISHOP) has a wonderful map that helps pay for federal town wool, but where most of the Federal lands are in the West, my district is over half Federal land. And it is important.

When Teddy Roosevelt created the national forest reserves in 1905, he said it needed to be a partnership with the communities in the management of these lands and in the revenues that are shared, and these lands need to be properly managed. I think he would roll over in his grave today if he knew what had happened in terms of the disassociation with the communities in terms of the bug-infested nature of our forests, the droughts that have occurred, and the disease that has come in, and then how they burn. And then we leave them.

In the last Congress, I wrote, and many of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, including the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD), a Democrat, former Sierra Club chapter president, helped me write the Forest Emergence Recovery and Research Act.

So we, like private forest landowners and State forest landowners and county forest landowners and others, could get it means that we have to change some appropriate, where environmentally appropriate, in sensitive ways the dead trees that still have value, create the jobs, recover the wood, and replant sooner. We passed it in this House, big bipartisan majority pass it. It went up on the rocks in the great gray graveyard we call the Senate, where all good ideas go to founder and die, and it did. The fires in California, fires in my district, the fact that forests continue to grow exponentially, global climate change means they’re going to be more under threat from higher temperature and, therefore, more drought and more bug infestation, more disease and more fire. This Congress, this country needs to adopt new policies.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I appreciate the gentleman from Oregon who’s been a leader in trying to make sure that we have a healthy forest environment, and it means that we have to change some of the policies that we’ve had in the past, and I appreciate his leadership in those areas. I would like him to address just maybe one element.

Because, I think, that we have made in the past on how we have decided to handle the forests in the future, those counties, those areas where citizens live next to the forest and where the forest becomes an integral part of their lifestyle, are facing a huge and significant problem, and especially their kids in secure rural schools. I wonder if the gentleman for just one second would take a moment to explain what we should be doing right now with relationship to secure rural schools, forest area schools.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Well, we need to pass the legislation that’s just come out of the Natural Resources Committee that would reauthorize the county payments program for 5 years, at a minimum, and we need to keep the Federal Government’s commitment. If we’re not going to do that, then we need to. And we probably need to do this anyway, frankly, get in with a new strategy on how to manage forests...

Now, I’m told in Canada where bugs have wiped out the lodgepole pine, the Canadian Government has come in and said actively get in there, take out the dead trees and get’s new forests going quickly. And they are rapidly clearing out the dead trees and starting new forests.

Our alternative here appears to be let it burn, let it rot, and 100 years from now we’ll come back and take a look. I think we need to be more stewardship Teddy Roosevelt had in mind when he talked about the great forest reserves and their use for water, for agriculture, and wood for home building. If you go back and read his speeches when he was creating these reserves; he wanted this long-term land at management of this wonderful resource we have.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. You have long been involved in bipartisan efforts to solve this problem for your constituent schools. I wonder if you would just take a couple more minutes before we segue into the next speaker, next area, simply talking about what we practically can do for secure rural schools right now, as well as what we should probably ask our leadership to do that we should be practically doing right now in the long term for healthy forests in the future. Mr. WALDEN of Oregon, 1, there are two things. One is, the secure rural schools. Let me take that first, and then I’ll talk about county payments.

You’re right. I always figured people sent us back here not because of our party label and we’re only supposed to use that; they sent us back here to solve problems. And that’s how I’ve tried to approach this, and that’s why on the Healthy Forest Restoration Act, it was bipartisan when it passed this House, although the leadership in place today, from the Speaker all the way to the subcommittee chairman, opposed that bill, the bill that passed bipartisanly, unanimously in the Senate in its final form. They voted against it. But that’s law and that’s the way it is.

We need to pass a version similar to the Forest Emergency Recovery and Research Act so that we can go in and clean up after these fires and use the burned, dead trees while they still have value. You don’t get a second chance to grow the trees. So, when you stop doing productive work on our national forests and they continue to grow and die at the same time, you don’t have the revenue; yet, you still have greater and greater demand, people moving in to the wild land urban interface.

So this Congress gave us a 1-year reappraise of the emergency supplemental this spring. We need to reauthorize the county payments program for another 5 years, at a minimum, and we need to keep the Federal Government’s commitment. If we’re not going to do that, then we need to. And we probably need to do this anyway, frankly, get in with a new strategy on how to manage forests...

Our alternative here appears to be let it burn, let it rot, and 100 years from now we’ll come back and take a look. I think we need to be more stewardship Teddy Roosevelt had in mind when he talked about the great forest reserves and their use for water, for agriculture, and wood for home building. If you go back and read his speeches when he was creating these reserves; he wanted this long-term land at management of this wonderful resource we have.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. You have long been involved in bipartisan efforts to solve this problem for your constituent schools. I wonder if you would just take a couple more minutes before we segue into the next speaker, next area, simply talking about what we practically can do for secure rural schools right now, as well as what we should probably ask our leadership to do that we should be practically doing right now in the long term for healthy forests in the future. and moving it to the Senate or they should be sending us a bill. But right now, it appears to be, I don't know, held up, and that's not good for our children. It's not good for our libraries, not good for our first responders. It's not good for country roads.

These school districts in some States have to send their layout notices out in March to tell teachers whether or not they're going to have the money for the following year. As you know, this year that happened in some school districts.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I appreciate the comments from the gentleman from Oregon. I especially appreciate his comments about our bipartisan bill that has been referred out of Resources. The Speaker of the House does have the ability of helping to move that bill along and can change the referral process to bring this one to the floor. I believe it's important, as with these particular counties for the so-called secure rural schools, schools that are impacted by our policies in the passed-over forests. We need to have that on the floor now, and it has a funding stream that can be moved right now. I think I would probably join you in asking the Speaker publicly to bring that bill to the floor, let us vote on it, let us move the process forward, get it over to the Senate so we can solve that problem.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. As the gentleman knows, the clock is running. Time is running out, not just on our Special Order tonight but on the school kids and the counties and the services that our citizens rely upon in these forested areas, because that funding stream we got that 1-year extension on is running out, as is the time in this Congress running out.

We have got 4 weeks after Thanksgiving, a week. We're going to be in for a day and a half or 2 days, couple of weeks in December. Then we're into January and maybe in 1 week there. You know, it's the way Congress works, running out of time, and we shouldn't run out on the promise that this Congress should uphold to the school kids and the communities in America's rural counties.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I appreciate the gentleman from Oregon for specifically and very eloquently stating what the problems are in our national forests.

He, as well as I and many of those who will be speaking this evening, come from what are called public lands. You see the map that I have to my left. Everything that is blue in those States is the amount of that State which is owned and controlled by the National Government, and you can obviously see there's a unique difference between the States in the West and the States in the East.

Now, a big chunk of this blue in the West is national forests, which Representative WALDEN understands very definitely, very clearly, and needs to deal with that particular issue. And he's given us some directions on what we need to do to do it right.

The other part of this blue deals with land that's owned by the Bureau of Land Management, BLM land, and all of these lands, whether they be forestlands or BLM lands or parklands, have an impact on the States in which we find them. I'd ask my colleague from Utah, Mr. CANNON, if you'd maybe take a moment and talk about how we try to help these Western States that don't have control over their lands but still have the responsibility of providing services to those lands. You maybe also have a suggestion on easterners that are coming directly on these lands with a program known as PILT, payment in lieu of taxes.

I yield to Mr. CANNON.

Mr. CANNON. I thank the gentleman from Utah, my colleague, for recognizing me and organizing this event, and you've seen his blue chart. I grew up thinking that blue meant Republicans. We had this anomaly here recently, because red normally meant the Soviets. I have here a map of the United States, and when Ronald Reagan saw this map it was in red, that is, the public lands that you see mostly in the western part of the United States were in red. He looked at that chart and he compared it to the Soviet state, and he said he'd never seen so much government domination as is expressed by that since the Soviet Union.

So, not being partisan about these issues, which are really in fact not partisan, let me just suggest that there is something terrifying wrong with the Federal Government owning so much of these States. You can see that in Nevada, 93 percent of the State is owned by the Federal Government. In Utah, it's over 70 percent. In California, it's about 50 percent. This is a huge amount of public ownership of our lands.

As a result, you can see also that the ownership by the Federal Government is spread around the whole United States. In fact, there are about 19,000 counties in the United States that have public lands of some sort in them, and in those counties the Federal Government pays to those counties money that substitutes for the taxes that those counties would otherwise receive. We call this payment in lieu of taxes, and it's fair.

It's fair in the East where we have small amounts of land and the pay- ment is spread out among the whole United States. State has a regime for taxing public lands. But we can’t, because the Federal Government is sovereign, we can’t tax lands that are owned by the Federal Government.

So if you want people to be there for search and rescue when you get lost in some of the beautiful parts of my county or my State, we expect to be paid for that. It’s not an expectation that’s vacuous or whiny, it’s an expectation based upon what we are giving up in these western States and in Utah, in particular.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. We are talking about what these lands can do and how we can benefit the constituents that are out there in these western lands as well. One of it deals with the bounties that have been placed in there in these western lands, what we can do if we actually bring them about.

I am often amazed how we sit under this quotation from Daniel Webster saying that in actuality if we want this country to move, we need to take the resources that are here and develop them. That’s where progress comes.

The gentleman represents a State in an area that has a significant amount of natural resources that have yet to be developed, and we need to talk specifically about oil shale. I notice that he has been joined here on the floor by Representative PETERSON of Pennsylvania, two people who understand our energy policy specifically and who realize some of the energy policies that we have been talking about passing on this floor are going to have a negative effect on people, on real people.

I wonder if he could spend some time talking about the potential of oil shale and what it can do. I guess the basic question is, is it really possible to remove ourselves from a dependency on foreign sources of energy?

Mr. CANNON. I thank the gentleman. In fact, I paid. I think, $3.09 the last time I bought gas. When I took my daughter, one of my daughters up to school about 5 years ago, there was a gas war. We had low prices, it may have been 6 years ago. I paid 75 cents a gallon for gas and of that 75 cents, 42 cents was tax. We are not paying 42 cents on a gallon of gas that is over $3.

These are amazing numbers. Why are we there? Well, we are there because we have had policies that have restricted the development of oil and gas. These are things that we need a commitment on just quickly in response to that question.

The first is that we have 250 billion tons of coal in America representing about 6 or 800 billion barrels of gasoline if we did coal-to-liquids. A lot of people know that we are the Saudi Arabia of the world for coal, but very few people know that we are the Saudi Arabia of oil in the Middle East. If we could just develop the oil that’s in our shale, we would do remarkably well for America.

Let me just give you a sense of this. In other words, think of all the oil that comes out of Saudi Arabia, all the oil that comes out of Venezuela, all the oil that comes out of Mexico. We could easily replace that at a ten-year fraction of the oil we have available in shale in this country. By the way, you asked the question, Mr. BISHOP, is it possible to actually get the oil out of that shale?

Well, the Estonians have been doing it for 60 years. They have been producing oil out of shale for 60 years. The shale that we have in Utah is better, has much more oil, and, in fact, in 60 years, we have made massive progress technologically. The answer is unequivocal. We can do it.

The Federal Government owns the bulk of this shale. We need to assure that we can do it quickly without the kind of red tape. In fact, take a moment to tell you, we have a mine in Utah, it cost $330 million to develop that mine in 1977. The first thing I did when I came to Congress was to stop the BLM from spending $50 million to shut that mine up so it would be as, they said, safe.

We have now released that mine, but it has taken almost 2 years in a mine that’s already developed to get to the point of licensing that so the people that lease the mine can produce. Their production is based on a very narrow, limited set of circumstances. We are in the way.

The Federal Government is in the way of energy self-sufficiency for the United States. The people of America ought to say we want to get out of the way.

By the way, for the people of America, this body is actually an interesting place. People do what Americans want us to do. If you want cheaper oil, tell Congressmen to work out their differences and help us change the policies so we can develop our oil, particularly the oil and gas in the shale in the United States.

I know that Mr. PETERSON is going to talk about oil and gas.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I appreciate it. I hope Mr. CANNON may have a chance to join us a little bit later.

We are talking about energy policies. It has an impact on people. We all like alternative forms of energy. That’s important to me. But for the short term, we have to make life bearable for people. We have some options without having to rely simply on foreign sources.

Mr. CANNON understands oil shale very well, and he explained how that is one of our options. Another option we have is natural gas, which is a forte of Mr. PETERSON at the same time. I guess the question has to be, we understand how high natural gas prices terribly impact citizens trying to live their lives, rent their homes. They impact one of the most important jobs in America, which is the impact farmers when it comes time for fertilizer. I guess the question is, can we make domestic natural gas reserves available so it improves the lives of people?

If I could ask Mr. PETERSON to spend a few minutes, 5 minutes or so, maybe explaining how that part of the energy puzzle can be dealt.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Yes. Natural gas. I call it America’s clean, green energy, no NOX, no SOX, a third of the CO2. It’s almost the perfect fuel. Now, a lot of people don’t realize what all we do with natural gas, but natural gas is the basic ingredient of many of our products, plastics, petrochemicals. Everything we manufacture has some form of natural gas in it or we have used natural gas to do it.

Natural gas is America’s hope for the future. I call it the bridge fuel.

Now, just a few years ago, in fact, 6 years ago, we had $2 natural gas, and we had $16 oil. Just 6 years later we now have $7 natural gas, but we had a storm at that point, we haven’t started our winter heating yet. We know those prices will skyrocket much higher.

Well, it amazes me. I am going to speak a little bit about oil. $87.50 was the price of oil, that it just closed at. $87.50. I think in this session we haven’t heard any rustling of activity. We have a Senate bill and a House bill not conferenced on yet. I haven’t seen where the House and the Senate have agreed to have their conference committees and move forward with their bill.

Now, maybe it’s a good thing they don’t, because let’s just look at it. With the natural gas prices we have today, highest in the world, here is what their bill does. Their bill locks up 9 trillion feet of natural gas in the Roan Plateau. The Roan Plateau is a huge, clean natural gas field in Colorado that was once set aside as the Naval Oil Shale Reserve in 1912 because of its rich energy resources. That means that 9 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, more than all the natural gas from the OCS bill that passed last Congress in the gulf, will be put off-limits.

The Roan Plateau is ready to go. It has already gone through NEPA. It’s ready for lease sale. This provision was not in the original Resources Committee bill and was added without any hearings in the 11th hour. That’s the kind of legislation this Congress is putting that is so important to cause natural gas prices to continue to increase, locks up 18 percent more by policy changes.

I had some amendments in the energy bill in 2005. This guts the categoric exclusions if we stop allowing for road and NEPAs to stop the process. We had leases in the West where they had leased the land for oil and gas production, and 5, 6 and 7 years later, they are doing redundant NEPAs.

They had to do a NEPA for the whole layout. Then they had to do a NEPA for each site. Then they had to do a NEPA for every location. A NEPA study takes about a year. There is no reason that an overall NEPA on the project couldn’t cover all those aspects in a year’s time and make sure we did it right. No, we are going to take away that, and that will lock up more natural gas. Of course, we just heard from our friend about the 2 trillion barrels of oil from Canadian oil shale.

Well, it’s similar to the deposits in Canada. Everybody thought that wasn’t a good thing. Well, they are now producing 1.5 million barrels a day. Their goal is 4 million a day. They are increasing every month, because they figured out how to release the tar sand oil, and we need to be working at re-leasing the oil shale oil because we have trillions of barrels there.

Should we have policy? Should we have legislation going that’s going to take oil and gas? Then we go on down here a little further, we are going to have a $15 billion tax increase on the production of energy and the processing of it. Does that make sense?

There is nothing in the bills before us about coal-to-liquids. We are the Saudi Arabia of coal. It is a tragedy in America that we are not moving forward with coal-to-liquids and coal-to-gas, because, you know, today we are 66 percent dependent on foreign oil, and we are growing 2 percent a year, and we have to use the cleanest, greenest fossil fuel somewhere down the road. Should we be taxing the production of oil and gas? I don’t think so.

about what does it matter. What does it matter if we add an 8 percent royalty on to the price of minerals?

At one point yesterday in the debate, the chairman of our Resources Committee, Mr. RAHALL of West Virginia, said, "I see no reason to raise a tariff what ever why good public land law should be linked to the gross national product. Now that is, to me, a stunning statement because I think policy should always consider the jobs in America. It should consider our standard of living, and it should consider the ramifications for our communities.

Communities in the West, where mining occurs on public lands, will be affected most by this new royalty that is being suggested by the majority party. Now, we had comments at a field hearing, and we find the comments are very similar from the Democratic witnesses to the Republican; in other words, both sides agree. There's a James Otto, "8 percent is excessive," he says.

"I'm only aware of a single royalty that is as high as the royalty proposed in the bill just one in my 20 year of practice. An 8 percent royalty would really be ruinous," says James Cress of Washington on October 24/27.

"I am particularly concerned about the potential impacts of the 8 percent net metal return royalty called for in the last legislation. All the royalty costs will be absorbed by the mining companies, and this will be a direct adverse impact on the amount of mining tax revenues that flows into the State and to the counties."

We had testimony from one country, and I think it was British Columbia, that increased their royalties and saw a tremendous decrease in their net tax revenues because companies simply moved out. Today, companies can move their mining assets; they can move their mining investments by simply a flick of the computer. If it’s that easy, then we should be very cautious. We should be concerned about the gross domestic product before we jump into these very significant arguments.

One of the letters that I have, and I would like, Mr. Speaker, to submit this as a part of the RECORD.

Hon. Nick J. RAHALL, II, Chairman, Committee on Natural Resources,

House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN RAHALL: This is to request that the Committee hold additional hearings regarding our national policy as it relates to military and economic security before we convene a markup of H.R. 2262. Notwithstanding the amendment in the nature of the subject, a discussion draft circulated late last week, we are very concerned that H.R. 2262 moves our country’s mineral policy in the very opposite direction of recommendations outlined in the two recent National Research Council ("NRC") reports.

1. Managing Materials for a 21st Century Military and
2. Minerals, Critical Minerals and the U.S. Economy.

We are entering a challenging time for our nation which is only now beginning to become clear. China and India are consuming huge amounts of energy and minerals which they are willing to secure from parts around the globe and with which they are fueling unprecedented economic growth. At current rates of relative economic growth, one or both of them will surpass the United States in economic output within two decades. We are in a race. Now is not the time to rest. We must examine the consequences of the intentions and unintended consequences of our actions. We owe nothing less to our children’s future.

MINERAL POLICY AND AMERICA’S MILITARY SECURITY

One of the most fundamental functions of the Federal government is to provide for the common defense and our national minerals policy is inextricably linked to providing for that defense. America’s natural resources—and the ingenuity and strong backs of American workers—that made us "The Arsenal of Democracy" that supplied the tools of victory in World War II. In many ways, minerals are the foundation to a strong modern military.

Requiring our military to import the strategic and critical minerals it needs from hostile foreign nations puts our military on its knees before the battle begins. It will make the United States military the "paper tiger" China’s Mantzur wrote in 1956 when he coined the phrase. Attachment 1 provides examples of strategic and critical military materials upon which our military already relies on. If we rush to create a minerals policy that further discourages a domestic minerals industry that is already shrinking because of the existing regulatory constraints, we will have left a grave legacy that is threatening to our long term stability.

As discussed in the NRC’s report, restarting or jump-starting a U.S. mining operation in response to supply interruptions would be very time-consuming, expensive and in all probability, impossible. Consequently, the mineral policy moved by this Committee should take into account military needs. To this end, we request joint hearings with the House Armed Services Committee so that this issue can be fully understood by the Committee.

MINERAL POLICY AND AMERICA’S ECONOMIC SECURITY

Mineral availability is a cornerstone to robust economic activity because minerals support the broadest range of manufacturing and industrial businesses, including transportation, defense, aerospace, electronics, energy, agriculture, communication, construction, and health care. According to the NRC’s report, "current lifestyles in the United States require per capita annual consumption of over 25,000 pounds... of new minerals... to make the items that we use every day."

While our reliance on foreign sources of minerals may be less visible than petroleum, Attachment 2 illuminates the gravity of America’s exposure in this regard. Our country is rich with minerals; however, the ‘political availability’ compromises our independence on foreign sources of minerals. The NRC’s report describes ‘political availability’ as a significant part of mineral availability. The concept of ‘political availability’ encompasses (a) legislation, rules and regulations that influence investment in mineral exploration and development and (b) the risks and results of change in these policies.

While God has blessed our Nation with a rich natural resource base, it appears that the common sense with which He endowed our policy makers has not been used by its recipients.

We are concerned that H.R. 2262 will adversely affect both of these ‘political availability’ components. We are unaware of any witness in the three legislative hearings held by Subcommittee on Energy and Mineral Resources thus far who testified that H.R. 2262 will increase domestic mining activity. Rather, several witnesses testified that H.R. 2262, as drafted, will be devastating to our domestic production of minerals, will be crippling our economy and will end up costing more jobs overseas. We believe that moving H.R. 2262 out of this Committee in advance of an analysis of its impact on the overall U.S. economy is premature.

On page 1 we’re referring to two recent National Research Council, NRC, reports. And one quote is, “We are entering a challenging time for our Nation which is only now beginning to become clear. China and India are consuming huge amounts of energy and minerals which they are willing to secure from parts around the globe and with which they are fueling unprecedented economic growth. At current rates of relative economic growth, one or both of them will surpass the United States in economic output within 2 decades. We are in a race. Now is not the time to rest. We must examine closely the consequences, intended and unintended, of our actions. We owe nothing less to our children’s future.”

In light of this worry by the National Research Council, yesterday I had an amendment which would have simply required that to pay for a bill or pass any country and become the second largest economy in the world, that the implications of this bill simply be done away with; that is, that we would begin to do the things that would heal our economy.

I accept the fact that we could be overestimating the impacts of this bill that is coming to the floor, the mining legislation. But what I will not accept is that we have consequences in our economy without having some way to reverse those impacts.

The Chinese economy doubled gross domestic product in 5 short years. The combined economies of China and India have tripled in size over the last decade, and some predict that, at the current rate, the U.S. could very well become the second largest economy in the world. That’s what I mentioned when we very first started, that the consequences of too hasty an action here could place our children into a position where they no longer have the standard of living to which we, as Americans, begin in a steep decline economically, so that we do not have the hope and the opportunity for the future which we currently have.

The National Research Council pointed out three ways in which they are very concerned about the potential ruinous effects. They’re concerned about how much of the minerals that we are going to import. And again, I would show a chart to my left, that all of these elements in this picture get minerals that are currently mined in the U.S. Some are strategic, some are not, but our daily life revolves around minerals that we get from deep inside the ground. When we acknowledge that and when we understand that these minerals come from, we might have a different opinion than just trying to regulate the companies out of existence. We’re going to use these elements whether or not they come from U.S. mines or not.

My recommendation is that we continue to mine these minerals inside the United States. Don’t transport our jobs. Don’t transport our national security to firms outside. Don’t make us subject to another country to get the minerals which are required for national security considerations. Please, let’s take time before we pass this legislation. Let’s send it back to committee. Let’s contemplate the effects of it.

And I would yield back to the gentleman and thank him greatly. Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I appreciate the gentleman from New Mexico coming and talking about these issues, and I think people can realize we feel very strong and deeply about these particular issues. This is what happens in our States. We live with this issue all together.

You’ve heard today about the nature of our forests and what we must do to have healthy forests in the future. You heard about it has on school children in those forest counties. But there is a proposal, it needs to come to the floor that we can debate about that as well.

You’ve heard about the significance of payment in lieu of taxes and what it means to Western States, about oil shale development, natural gas development, mining development, all of these which have an impact.

Now, I said earlier on, but once again I’m just an old school teacher. And it does have impacts beyond what we naturally think about. And I’m thinking specifically about my kids, about my salary, my retirement as a school teacher and what we do in the future in our Western States.

We noticed before, this is the chart, the amount of blue is how many, how much land is owned by the Federal Government in each State. I’d like you to contrast that, if you would, with this chart. The States in red are the States that have the most difficult time increasing the amount of money and paying for their education. The States that are red have the growth in education but they also have the most difficult time in adjusting for that growth, and the impact that and then compare it once again with the public land States, you’ll find an amazing correlation. The public land States are having the most difficult time funding their education, and I think there is a relationship to it which we would like to fully investigate and then compare it against the public land States, you’ll find an amazing correlation. The public land States are having the most difficult time funding their education, and I think there is a relationship to it which we would like to fully investigate and then compare it against the public land States.

I would yield back to the gentleman and thank him greatly.
that country, must continue in effect beyond October 27, 2007.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

CONSTITUTIONAL CHECKS AND BALANCES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNERNEY). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 18, 2007, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. WALZ) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WALZ of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to be here with my colleagues, the members of the class of 2006, and I’m going to defer to my colleague from Kentucky who brought an initiative forward and one that we are excited about talking about. It’s something that the American people should be excited about talking about. It’s a refresher course and, I guess, to bring to the forefront again the most important document in this country, the Constitution.

With that, I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. YARMUTH).

Mr. YARMUTH. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Minnesota, the distinguished president of our class, for his introduction here and I thank him for the superb job he has done in leading us through this wonderful year that we are spending as Members of Congress.

I want to start this segment by actually reading the first few words of the Constitution of the United States because too often I find that, as I go around the country and go around my district, the people have lost sight and I think many Members of Congress have lost sight of exactly what the Founding Fathers did 220 years ago. I think we are all familiar with the preamble of the Constitution, and it starts with these wonderful words “We the people,” those incredible words that actually go to the heart of what we are about as a democracy:

“We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.”

Now, following those words, following that brief preamble, it says in article I, section 1: “All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.”

I think it’s amazing to think back to what was going on in those formative years of our Republic in 1787. The country had just rebelled against a monarch in England, and when they were establishing a government that would reflect the dreams of the people who had gone through that incredible war of revolution against England, they decided to create a government in which the ultimate power would rest in the people. That’s why they said at the beginning of the preamble, “We the people.” They created in article I the representative body of government that we sit in today. They did that because they didn’t want a government that decided the affairs of everything that affected their lives. They wanted to vest the power to govern in themselves through their representatives in Congress.

And so we sit here as successors to that noble legacy. And it is not only our power that we must that rested by the Constitution in article I; it is our responsibility. We have an obligation to govern on behalf of our citizens, “we the people,” as reflected in our representation here.

I think those of us who were elected for the first time last November know that, yes, we were elected partially because of the war in Iraq, but we were also elected because the people of the country decided that they really wanted to make their voice was heard in Washington. They thought their voice was being ignored. They said this is our government. We are going to change it by sending people there who will listen to us and will put our desires into action through the legislative process.

So I thought it would be wonderful to call attention to the fact that article I does impose, again, not just these powers, but it also imposes responsibilities. And that’s what we came here to do, and we recognize that. We want everyone in Congress, both parties, to share in this acknowledgment of what our responsibilities are under the Constitution, I am so proud to have with me tonight and so proud to serve with wonderful people who are committed to the same ideals.

I would like to recognize BETTY SUTTON from Ohio, one of our wonderful new Members, to elaborate on article I and what we need to do and to fulfill our responsibilities under article I.

Ms. SUTTON. I thank the gentleman for his introduction here and I thank you for your leadership. The gentleman from Kentucky is taking us, hopefully, on what will be a bipartisan effort to restore the responsibilities of this Congress has under article I and just sort of bring that back to the forefront because checks and balances are very important. What we need to do now is to commend the leadership of our president, Tm WALZ, the gentleman from Minnesota, who is an outspoken advocate for the people that he represents, and, frankly, that’s what article I is all about.

As you point out, when we were elected to Congress, we were elected to represent the people of our districts. Not lobbyists on K Street and not operatives at the White House or even the President himself. Our responsibilities and our loyalty are to the Americans, the people, first and foremost, who sent us here. That means we have to do the job that they asked us to do. And that job is important, and we know exactly what that job is because article I in some ways is a job description. As you point out, it’s not about really just authority; it’s about responsibilities. Nowhere in that job description in article I do we have to protect egos or political interests of the executive branch. Nowhere does it say that we have to do only things that the President tells us to do. And nowhere in that job description does it say that Congress answers to anyone but the American people.

There has sort of been a slope here where past Congresses have ceded legislative power to the executive branch, and, frankly, I believe that that happens. Congress is falling down on their job. I am really glad that we are here tonight to reinvigorate and re-dedicate ourselves to make sure that we are fulfilling our obligations and it is sort of a re-freshing course and I guess, to bring about as a democracy:

I think the very strong message that came out of all of us coming to Washington was a very strong message from back home, and that is the responsibilities were suggested by our colleagues, that we all know, from our civics classes back in high school and elementary school, that the beauty and the strength of the United States and our democracy is and always will be about checks and balances. It’s what makes our system a democracy. We can look at other models in Europe and Asia and around the world and dictatorships and things like that, but the strength of what works in this country is checks and balances.

What we believe is going on and the reason this emphasis on article I is so important and for our public and the people in this country to jump on this and work with us and recognize this and talk about it is because there has been a falling down of one side. We’re out of balance. There are three legs to the stool. Each one has a specific set of authority. The judges, the judiciary, interpret. The legislature, that is, the Congress has the authority to make the laws. And the executive has certain authority into executing and following and, through the agencies, doing certain things. But when one branch gets out of whack, it means the power is not where it should be. That’s about personal power. That is about the strength of our democracy. That is the exciting piece here.
So this check and balance is not about President Bush, or any President. It’s not about anybody in particular because there are future and past leaders that have all tried to exercise in certain ways. This is about whether we are going in the future. I think as the gentleman from New Hampshire who already correctly mentioned, there has been a failure over the last number of years in the legislative branch, the Congress, in fighting back and asserting itself in terms of oversight and accountability, and follow-through to make sure that the executive branch, the President and the executive branch, are doing what they are supposed to do, whether it is executing the war in Iraq and making sure that billions of dollars are not flowing out without any follow-up, whether it is an Attorney General that may not have necessarily been following some of the laws as we understand them or at least having the opportunity to ask the questions and not be stonewalled by the executive branch. This is what it is all about. It is a balance. It’s a beautiful thing, truly, but it has got to work.

As the gentleman from Kentucky has correctly stated, and I thank him for bringing up this discussion article I, this conversation that is going to happen throughout our country for the next couple of months is, let’s make sure Congress does its job, let’s minimize the executive branch to do what it has to do, and make sure that our system works in its form of accountability that we have.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank the gentleman. I would now like to recognize another colleague, another member of the freshman class and the first president of our class and also a member with me on the Oversight and Government Reform Committee, where I think we perform a major power of responsibilities that article I vests in the Congress: the function of oversight.

Mr. HODES. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. YARMUTH. Mr. HODES, let me start by saying how proud I am to stand with my colleagues, other new Members of the class of 2006, to talk about an initiative which you began, the article I initiative, to talk about reasserting the constitutional balance of power in Washington.

For me, in coming to Congress as a new Member of this House from New Hampshire, it was absolutely fundamental to what I talked about in my campaign that the people of New Hampshire sent me to Congress to restore accountability, integrity and oversight to government. They sent me there because what I said to them and what we now see is that Congress was a broken branch. Congress had not been exercising its oversight and accountability functions. And when Congress does not exercise its important power, its important right, its important obligation to the people to exercise oversight and accountability over the executive branch and other branches of government, things get unbalanced. It was that sense of checks and balances that our Founding Fathers put into the Constitution, and they put it in there for a reason.

They won a Revolutionary War against an empire, the British empire, with an imperial ruler at the top, the King of England. We wanted to make sure that we had a different form of government where the people were the top dog in the fight; that the ruler would never become imperial. That is why we have a President, we have a Congress which is divided between the House and the Senate.

In article I, section 1, our founders were very clear. They said, “All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.” What I saw and many of us saw when we ran was a President who was abusing presidential power in an unprecedented way. This wasn’t a matter of parties. It was this President abusing power in an unprecedented way, and it could have happened with any President that was in, but this is what we saw, and we ran.

The article I initiative, which you began, which we have joined, and which we are spreading, seeks to heighten the public consciousness of the importance of checks and balances in our system.

As newly elected Democratic Members of Congress, we feel with particular importance the obligation we have to reassert the power that the Founding Fathers wisely gave to Congress. When we came, we took an oath of office to protect and defend and uphold the Constitution. Article I is the first article, and it is the first article for a reason. And we are well on our way as we have begun to exercise oversight throughout Congress with hundreds of hearings held in this 110th Congress on many issues and especially the war in Iraq and what has happened with this President and this administration. In the Oversight and Government Reform Committee, we have held oversight hearings about administration interference with the work of GSA, the folks who deal with Federal buildings, turning it into an arm of politics; admittedly, an arm of politics, at NASA; administration incompetence with FEMA, delivering formaldehyde-filled trailers to the victims of Katrina; incompetence and mismanagement by the State Department, failing to exercise oversight over contractors in Iraq, the Blackwater scandal that is beginning to emerge now. We have been holding the hearings that constitute the function of Congress not just to make the law but to exercise the oversight that keeps things in check.

I am delighted to be with you tonight. We are going to talk about numbers of ways in which we are re-asserting Congress’s power and taking steps to bring the people back to the People’s House and serve the interests of the American people.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES).

And now, Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to introduce one of our more illustrious new Members, Mr. HALL from New York, who has done a great deal in his term of office to uphold article I.

Mr. HALL of New York. Thank you so much, Congressman, for yielding.

I am proud to join my fellow new Members of the class of 2006. Freshmen, fellow Members, when they ask what to call us, I am really honored to be here with all of you and to tell you, speaking of oversight, about my trip this last weekend to Iraq. I think it’s one of the most important functions the Constitution gives to Congress, the power, the sole power, to make war and to fund that war should it decide that it needs to happen.

I flew out on a congressional delegation that was led by our fellow classmate, Dave Loebuck, Congressman of Iowa. And after a few hours of sleep in Kew members, what we found out in a G-230 to Baghdad Air Base in Iraq. On the way in, the plane’s crew deployed flares against a perceived threat from the ground. I never found out exactly what they saw, but they fired flares for protection.

We got a tour of the base and the Air Force Theater Hospital there. We spent a night in the Green Zone. I slept in a guest room in one of the pool houses by one of Saddam’s palaces, with a big Olympic swimming pool and gold fixtures and a marble bathroom that the guesthouse had. I understand this is a subject of some friction with the Iraqis who feel that after 4 years we should have handed over the national palaces to the Iraqi people rather than inhabiting them ourselves, but that’s another subject.

I have good news and I have not so good news. The good news is I first perceived on my trip is that, first of all, I cannot state strongly enough my admiration and respect for our Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine personnel. Officers, medical teams, enlisted men and women, all are displaying incredible commitment and effort that should make all of us proud, even when they’re carrying out duties other than they were trained for, such as an artillery officer doing civil affairs or training Iraqi police. They are more than up to the mission.

The good news is the money that we and our fellows here in Congress voted for MRAPs was definitely money well spent. We saw a picture of a Cougar MRAP that was hit by such a powerful explosive that it blew it up 25 feet or so into the air, hooked the utility lines, and brought them down with it as it landed upside down. Four soldiers inside that MRAP, two of them... walked away; the other two spent a night in the hospital with relatively minor injuries and returned to their units. Their commander told us that in any other vehicle all four would have been fatalities.

Now for the bad news. We have a lot of other vehicles. We were shown a huge parking lot. Imagine the biggest used car lot that you ever saw full of Humvees, Bradley vehicles, tanks, trucks, all kinds of vehicles that had been hit by IEDs. Some, including Abrams tanks, looked like they had been opened up by a can opener and had metal inside that had melted and resolidified. Tires, treads, electronics and other useable parts were being salvaged, and the twisted steel that was left sold for scrap to Kuwait.

Some vehicles were deemed fit for repair, but most of what we saw was clearly far beyond repair. The lot we looked at represented thousands of American casualties and billions of taxpayer dollars. We were not, by the way, allowed to take photographs of it.

In the Green Zone, the most heavily guarded part of Baghdad, one of the safest, supposedly, parts of Baghdad, we were shown the concrete shelters every 100 feet that I had been warned to duck inside one of these shelters if an alarm sounded, because just the week before, two American troops were killed by mortar fire in the Green Zone. Even sleeping in a guest room in Saddam’s pool house, with the Olympic swimming pool and gold fixtures, we had to be ready to duck and cover.

We had meetings with Ambassador Ryan Crocker, General Petraeus, briefings by the intelligence staff. And my synopsis of the conversations goes like this: Ambassador Crocker said, “the Maliki government is somewhere between challenged and dysfunctional.”

I asked repeatedly about what progress we were making toward restoration of clean drinking water, sewer service, and uninterrupted electrical supply. The answers from all of our briefers were vague. And current estimates are that electricity is only on 2 to 3 hours in Baghdad, maybe 12 hours a day in Ramadi or the Shia-controlled south.

The next day we got to go to what they called the safest part of the country, which is Ramadi in Anbar province. In the last couple of months there has been a decrease in violence there as what they call the Anbar awakening happens with the sheiks deciding they’re going to side with us rather than siding with the terrorists.

Nonetheless, as we rode in the helicopter to the safe part of the country, we flew low and fast, close to the deck, with two .50 caliber machine guns out each of the front doors, and a couple of times they fired bursts of automatic weapon fire. And afterwards I asked what it was for, and the gunners said they were clearing intersections. I presume that means firing in front of the lines of vehicles to make them stop and not drive directly underneath us.

When we entered the marketplace to see the new, safe Ramadi market and the new business center, the small business center that had opened, we were driven there in a Cougar MRAP and told to wear our body armor and our helmets while we were inside the MRAP. And when we took them off and walked around the marketplace, we probably were surrounded by a ring of dozens of soldiers carrying automatic weapons, and they were wearing their helmets and their body armor. So, if that’s the safe part of Iraq, I wonder what the dangerous part is.

On the way home we stopped in Ramstein, Germany, launched to a medical center, visited some of our troops. I saw one of my constituents there and had my picture taken with him, and interrupted his lunch to shake his hand and thank him for his service.

There were several Romanians there who were injured, a number of Americans, all of whom from Iraq were hurt in Baghdad, Baghdad and then there was one attacked or wounded in Afghanistan.

Their spirits, in general, were great, and the medical staff was terrific. I can’t say enough about our medical core either. And they really appreciate the visits. They really appreciate the donations from home that are coming from individuals, from school kids, from veterans groups and from corporations of everything from fleece and coats and boots and toothbrushes, anything you might need, duffel bags, because these are soldiers evacuated from the point where they were wounded in the field by helicopter to Balad and then stabilized and sent off to Germany.

So, there are good things, but there are also enough negative things going on there so that I returned with the same conclusion that I went there suspecting, which is that we’re being asked for by President Bush for Iraq, based on the presumption that the Maliki government, which our own ambassador describes is dysfunctional, will be up to the task of resolving and reconciling the differences between the different sects is wishful thinking; and that after a year and another $200 billion, where will we be? What kind of guarantee, what kind of even probability do we have that any of this money is going to be used for organizing, arming and disciplining, this is the militia. But all of these powers and responsibilities are given to the Congress not just to say okay to the President, the Commander in Chief, but to make the decisions as to what appropriate levels of support for those various responsibilities are.

So when we talk about going to Iraq to assess the situation there, to talk to our troops, that is not just to go for a matter of curiosity or journalistic curiosity. It’s actually to fulfill our responsibilities because we are responsible to make decisions as to what appropriate levels of support are.

And would you like to call on my distinguished colleague from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON).

Mr. ELLISON. Well, my colleagues, let me thank you again for this excellent dialogue.

We have to, as the difference makers in this 110th Congress, tell the people what’s going on, what we’re here for, and to reclaim the Congress as a co-equal branch of government articulating the expectations which are being handed to the government that reside and have all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in the Congress of the United States and shall consist of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

And so as I heard my colleague, Mr. JOHN HALL, articulate his trip to Iraq, I was forced to reflect upon my own. And I didn’t go there out of an idle curiosity seeker, a person trying to go on an interesting trip, but as somebody who wanted to be there and to execute a vote, to push a button, red or green or otherwise, as to monies that will be sent forth and as to other business that will be happening in Iraq.

That’s our job, we claim it, we do not spend up to 18 months at a time as they face extended deployments.

And I also want you to know that I sat down at a table with young people from my district in Minnesota where we ate lunch. I was struck by the fact that wherever they go, they’ve got these big old guns that they carry with them, everybody. It’s like a wallet, but it probably weighs quite a bit more than that. And that’s just the lives that they lead. But they distinguish themselves and make us proud by their courage. And it is political authority, politicians like us that make decisions whether they stay or whether they go. So we had better spend a little bit of time there with them, and we had better at least try to get in their shoes and identify with what they’re going through just a little bit and feel that 180-degree heat that they’re in every single day and feel the dust and sand under their feet and the hum of those helicopters. I’m sure you were humming around in those Black Hawks with the windows out and the machine guns on either side, strapped in four places and feeling the heat of those propellers as the air hits against your helmet. It’s the kind of experience that we go through so that we can have some real sympathy and empathy with the people who we are charged to represent. So, hats off to you, Congressmen. I appreciate it.

I’m not going to talk long because I love the switching around that we do. But I just want to make one other point as we look at article I and we reclaim and assert our responsibility under the Constitution as Congress. It is also important to understand that we have asserted our authority in the area of promoting working-class prosperity for people.

I am so proud that one of the things we did for the first time in 9 years is raised the minimum wage, Mr. Speaker. The hardest working people in America getting paid the least got a raise under this Congress. And I don’t want people to make that into any kind of a new Constitution. Thousand and thousands of Americans benefited by raising the minimum wage for the first time in 9 years. I’m talking about the folks that clean the bedpans, mop the floors, sit in those cold or hot parking booths all across this country and really do the tough, tough work, getting paid not much of nothing. And you know that if you make minimum wage, basically, if your employer can pay you less, they probably would. So what we did is minimum wage, and people can have a little bit better of a life. So now instead of moms having to tell kids, “Honey, you can’t go on that class trip,” “Honey, you’re going to have to wear those sneakers a few more months longer,” now, instead of dad saying, “No, son, you can’t sign up for baseball,” or, “Yes, we’re having macaroni and cheese again,” now they can say, “No, we’re going to do a little better this time. We’re going to make your life a little better. We’re going to make your quality of life a little better.”

So I just want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I’m so proud of my colleagues and this whole 110th Congress to be able to do a little bit better for the hardest working Americans in our country.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank the gentleman. And it’s interesting because, again, you can find a foundation for all these things we’re doing in these very words in article I, section 8. One of our responsibilities is to provide for the general welfare. And when we’re talking about the minimum wage, we’re talking about the general welfare of the people. I would like to return to our distinguished president, who has a distinguished military record of his own, since we’ve been talking about our efforts with regard to Iraq and the military.

Mr. WALZ of Minnesota. Well, I thank the gentleman. And I thank the gentleman from New York for his clear testimony and for fulfilling his obligations, not only as a Congressman, but as a citizen, to ask the hard questions. Whenever we send our warriors into harm’s way, it’s all of our responsibility to ask, is this the right mission? Are they being provided for with the right equipment? Are we doing everything necessary to ensure that that’s happening?

And quite honestly, the problem around here up until January of this year was that people were being told that it was unpatriotic, it wasn’t right to question those things because the President, under his administration, was determined that he was the unitary executive, he was the decider. Now, that’s the President’s right, that’s this President’s right or any right, I guess, to determine how they’re going to look at that.

The foundational principles, though, of this country don’t let us just get to pick and choose. We go back to the document that the gentleman from Kentucky keeps referring to. The Constitution of the United States clearly lays out our powers. But I think it kind of interesting and maybe even critical for us, it might be the teacher in me that goes back to this, I have been rereading a book on the Constitutional Convention by two professors from Georgia that take James Madison’s notes about what was happening at that time and that summer when they were thinking how they were going to form this government.

The foundational principles, though, of this country don’t let us just get to pick and choose. We go back to the document that the gentleman from Kentucky keeps referring to. The Constitution of the United States clearly lays out our powers. But I think it kind of interesting and maybe even critical for us, it might be the teacher in me that goes back to this, I have been rereading a book on the Constitutional Convention by two professors from Georgia that take James Madison’s notes about what was happening at that time and that summer when they were thinking how they were going to form this government.

When the President talks about he doesn’t need 435 commanders in the field or whatever, what he does need to understand is that these 435 Members were the very first piece of decision-making that went into that convention.

I would like to quote a little bit if I could from this, to my colleagues and to you, Mr. Speaker, about what was going through their minds as they were doing this. And it’s my understanding that he was minimum wage of $5.15 an hour. It was about the framework of the government about where the pillar and where that foundation should lay.

I think it is interesting, then, to take a look at this of when they talked about the next branch, when they started talking about the executive branch. On June 1, the delegates began considering the structure of the executive. They were not sure yet what duties would fall to the executive or even whether a single person would hold that position, an executive. The major issue that faced them was one of balance. If the executive branch was too strong and independent, many delegates feared it might result in another monarchy like the ones they had recently revolted from. But if the executive was too weak and depended solely on the legislature, it might be ineffective. Thus, checks and balances were key to this.

In going through and looking at these, the different issues that are coming up or the clauses that went into this, it was apparent from the very beginning that the Founders of this nation clearly understood that. As we said earlier, and my colleagues each said, isn’t that important? This is a platform or a framework to get back to where this country came from. This isn’t about President Bush. This is about all subsequent Presidents. And so be it, be that Democratic or Republican. The end result would be, that those individuals still must fall within this framework.

I believe, and I think my colleagues that are here tonight believe, that that was one of the motivating factors for sending many of us here almost a year ago to the day. It wasn’t just ideology. It was about the framework of the genius that went into the Constitution and the thought processes that formed it.

So in listening to this and listening to Mr. HALL describe his trip to Iraq, he is fulfilling his constitutional duties as an elected official and fulfilling the things that we asked about very early. I would go back to talking about this MRAP. If you remember, without the oversight, it was the administration that sent our soldiers with the army that we had, not the one that we would want or the one asked about very early.

No one asked about up-armored Humvees. Those were the questions that should have been asked in this chamber. But they were told, no, go along with the executive.

Well, article I is about saying, we will never just go along because that is not our duty. I am pleased to see each of my colleagues here. I know the passion that each of them feel for this issue is a passion for this great Nation. It is a passion for the founding principles that we represent.

And I, too, have visited Iraq. We hear about our responsibilities that are worthy of those soldiers and are worthy of the American people.

I am so proud to be here with you all tonight, the members of the freshman class as we begin this campaign to reclaim our responsibility. Before I yield back, I just want to mention one thing that was striking. The gentleman from Minnesota mentioned that the President has rights under article II. But I think that we would all be better served that rather than thinking of the President’s privilege, we should think of them as responsibilities, because they are not personal rights. It is a job description for him, too, in article II.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank my distinguished colleague from Ohio. It is kind of interesting, because since we are going back to the kind of legislative history of the Constitution, in the Federalist Papers which do constitute, I guess, whatever official legislative history there was, one of the things that James Madison wrote in article number 51 was, he said, “But the great security against a gradual concentration of the several powers in the same department” which would be the executive or the Congress “consists in giving to those who administer each department the necessary constitutional means and personal motives to resist encroachments of the others.”

So when you talk about the efforts of the White House, in this particular case, to withhold information that the Senate requires, and we issued subpoenas, which would be our constitutional means of requiring the information to resist the encroachments of the other branch of government, we have been stonewalled on a number of occasions. And this is the type of activity that the Founding Fathers anticipated. They gave us the constitutional means to resist those encroachments. We need to continue to recognize those and to use them when we must.

Now, my colleague from Florida has been standing there for quite a while.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Thank you. I return to the gentleman from Kentucky and the gentleman from Minnesota. It was great. It reminded me of being back in school of reading the Federalist Papers and those kind of things. But for those folks listening in this room and around the country, I think we all understand very clearly this is a living, breathing document that the Constitution is. It has changed over the years, not the language, but the belief, but the fundamental goals and the values behind it are all the same.

I think when I speak to people back in Florida, and they say to me, “Get control over the problems in Iraq,” whether that is changing the policy or making sure that the armor is there and that our military is properly equipped and supported.

And they are kind of wondering, well, in Katrina? How could our government, when we saw those pictures on TV, how would this be the United States? We look at third-world countries around the world and surely we go there to support them?

But we need help from the executive branch, run over and not allow the Members of Congress and the American people to ask the questions, get the answers, learn and move forward in a very, very positive way, which is the American value that we all have.

Americans can do anything they want. We know that. But you can’t have Washington stopping it. Unfortunately, until this most recent Congress and this administration, we as a part, had we year after year after year where Congress unfortunately didn’t do its job in many of our opinions. I am very proud to say that we are making many of the right moves here. We have a lot more work to do. Let’s make no mistake.

And if we take the administration at its word and expect us to do our job, to do it with fervor and excitement and make sure we correct some of these mistakes and move forward.

But we need help from the executive branch. They have to realize there are limits to those responsibilities. There are no personal issues here, but responsibilities of moving this country ahead.
If everyone will get out of their corner a little bit and come together, I think we can solve all these problems and do it in a very positive way.

Mr. YARMUTH. I would like to recognize my colleague from New Hampshire with a question. And that is, we are about to engage in a fairly contentious series of votes concerning appropriations measures. According to article I, section 8, one of the most important powers that this Congress has is the power of the purse. As a matter of fact, in the Federalist Papers, number 58, James Madison said that, "This power over the purse may, in fact, be regarded as the most complete and effectual weapon with which any constitution can arm the immediate representatives of the people, for obtaining a redress from every grievance, and from carrying into effect every just and salutary measure."

As we look forward to our deliberations and our discussions of the appropriations, I would like the gentleman from New Hampshire to discuss our responsibilities in that regard.

Mr. HOEDE. Thank you. As I have listened to the colloquy we have had here on the floor today in this Chamber whereby our states have made war and peace, spending, raising revenue are debated on a daily basis now and thinking about the beginnings of the country, and you have asked about the questions coming up about appropriations, and we have had passed numerous bills. I think we have passed 12 here in the House of Representatives. The Senate has not yet acted on all of them, because, of course, once we pass the appropriations bills, and they must originate under the Constitution here in the House of Representatives, they go to the Senate. The Senate has to pass them. They come back and forth and they go up to the President. Of course the President has now threatened a veto on the spending, in another effort to run the Federal Government, to run the program for health and human services, to educate our kids, to heal the sick, all the programs that we have in the Federal Government, he has threatened to veto. And then if he vetoes a bill as we saw in the Appropriations, he is going to send it back. Threatened vetoes for our appropriations bills to run the Federal Government. He is going to send them back.

This is a new light, apparently, that has dawned on this President, that suddenly a Democratic Congress sending him legislation is all of a sudden going to be subject to veto. With this initiative, we are here to reassert the importance, the power, the responsibility of this Congress to act for the people who sent us here.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank the gentleman from New Hampshire. I would like to yield to the gentleman from New York, with this segue; that we all come from different parts of the country. Isn’t it amazing that the Constitutional Convention in its wisdom, the Founding Fathers, I think recognized that even if you had an all-powerful executive, that person, that man or woman could never know the needs and the priorities of every nook and cranny of the country and that you coming from New York or from New Hampshire or Ohio or Florida would all assimilate all of our needs and priorities into a budget and a priority list for the Nation. That is why he vested this type of power in the Congress and not in the executive.

Mr. HALL of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman. It is true that all of our areas and our districts around the country are different in many ways, but it is also true that they are the same, and our people have the same needs in every corner of the country.

The gentleman from Florida talked about Hurricane Katrina. The gentleman from Minnesota mentioned the trailers that FEMA didn’t know were contaminated with formaldehyde. Two weeks ago, in my district, the town of Deer Park discovered they had lead contamination in their highway department building and their town hall and unusual punishment. Not many and unusual. So that is a little basis sure that punishment was not cruel and unusual. This was added to make the Constitution and made it the law, this should not be cruel and unusual. Included the phrase that punishment was not cruel and unusual of their State constitutions, they in-cluded the phrase that punishments of torture, such as drawing and quartering, embarrass-ing alive, such as took place in the movie Braveheart with William Wallace, be-headings, public dissecting, and burning alive, and all others in the same line of unnecessary cruelty, are forbidden by the eighth amendment to the Constitu-tion. I doubt there are many Amer-i-cans who would disagree with that interpretation of what “cruel and un-usual” means.

But we have a new issue before us today, and this issue is coming before the United States Supreme Court which meets right down the street from us. Those nine members of the Supreme Court have decided to take two cases from Kentucky that deal with the issue of cruel and unusual punishment.

Two men in Kentucky received the death penalty for crimes against the citizens of Kentucky. And they argue now, that later, that the means by which they are executed is cruel and unusual. That means, Mr. Speaker, is by lethal injection. Kentucky’s lethal injection procedures are the same as many States, including my home State of Texas. Just to be clear, three chem-i-cals are used for lethal injection. The first is sodium thiopental which renders a person unconscious, and pavulon which paralyzes the muscles, including those which control breath-ing, and potassium chloride which causes cardiac arrest. Those are the three chemicals that most States use and are administered to the person who has received the death penalty and is to be executed for their crimes.

The Supreme Court will consider one of these cases, it is called Baze v. Rees, the way that lethal injection is actually administered by the adminis-trating process, whether it causes se-vere pain such that it is a violation of the cruel and unusual punishment prov-i-sion of the amendment. Baze was scheduled to die on September 25, 2007, for the 1992, that’s right, 15 years ago he murdered a sheriff and deputy sheriff who were trying to serve him with a warrant. The Kentucky Su-preme Court stayed his execution pend-ing the outcome of the Supreme Court decision.

The second case involves the execu-tion to make it home, also from Kentucky. In 1990, that is 17 years ago, he killed Tina and Edward Early outside their Lexington dry cleaning busi-ness. He also shot the Early’s then 2-year-old son, but the son did not die. He was able to survive. Bowling was supposed to be executed 3 years ago, in 2004, but his execution was halted in part because of a challenge on how the State of Kentucky executes prisoners. Both of these offenders, Baze and Bowling, sued the Commonwealth of Kentucky in 2004 claiming lethal injec-tion amounts to cruel and unusual punish-ment and violates the eighth amendment to the Constitution. The State Supreme Court of Kentucky ruled against both of these men, but the State Supreme Court of Kentucky now will hear their case. This marks the first time that the United States Supreme Court will address the merits of lethal injec-tion without also a request for a stay of execution. The Supreme Court’s precedent is that death penalty and the method of execution must not be “contrary to evolving standards of decency” and may not inflict “unnecessary pain.” Let me say that again. The Supreme Court has ruled that the method of execu-tion must not be contrary to evolving standards of decency and may not in-FLICT unnecessary pain.

Our Supreme Court really has only ruled on a direct method of execution once, and that was in 1878 when it upheld the use of a firing squad for execu-tion. But since that time, the Supreme Court in 1972 stopped all death penalty cases because of a different legal issue. The issue was that juries that decided whether a person should get the death penalty or not had too much discretion in making that deci-sion. So the Supreme Court struck down death cases in the United States until State law conformed with the Su-preme Court ruling, and then juries were given a more exact way of deter-mining whether the person should live or die. I am not going to go into those issues at this time, but basically the jury is asked a series of questions, and if they answer all of the questions, the person would receive the death penalty or a life sentence. In 1976, juries once again started hearing death penalty cases and making that deci-sion.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, prior to coming to this House, I served in Texas first as a prosecutor in the district at-torney’s office in Houston for 8 years, and I also served on the bench trying felony cases after that for 22 years. During those 22 years when I served as a prosecutor, I tried death penalty cases. And those people that I tried when I was a prosecutor have all been exe-cuted.

When I served on the bench, most of those individuals who were tried and juries heard those cases, those people who received the death penalty have also been executed. But there are still some even now who are on death row. And guilt should never be an issue. The rule of law was enforced in every situation because of the fact that the person that is on trial receives the ulti-mate punishment.

And guilt should never be an issue. What I mean by that, juries must be absolutely convinced beyond all doubt that a person committed this crime be-fore they assess the death penalty. That cannot be controlled by a trial judge over those 22 years on the numerous death penalty cases I tried to make sure that the rule of law was enforced in every situation because of the fact that the person that is on trial receives the ulti-mate punishment.

And guilt should never be an issue. The State of Texas, as many know, has executed more folks than any other State. Let me just mention a little his-tory here. Before it was even a part of the United States and before it was even a country, Texas was a country for 9 years from 1836 to 1845. But even before that time, Texas assessed the death penalty and death penalty cases were assessed by hanging. That was until 1993 when the State of Texas moved to the electric chair until the Supreme Court stayed all execu-tions. And then lethal injection has been used ever since 1976. Texas was the first State to use lethal injection in 1962 as the means of punishing a per-son who received the death penalty.

There are 38 States now that assess the death penalty or have death pen-nilty statutes on their books; 37 of those use lethal injection. Nebraska still uses electrocution. So 38 States, most of the States make that decision that some cases are so bad that the death penalty should be a form of punishment in those cases.
Now, I say all of that to address just one case. There are many cases that I could mention here. It would fill more than my allotted 60 minutes, but I want to talk of one case that occurred in my district back in Texas in Port Arthur. It involves a person by the name of Elroy Chester. He was born in Port Arthur in 1969. His criminal record begins in 1987 when he turned 18 years of age. I have before me here, Mr. Speaker, the 4-page resume of Elroy Chester. I don’t have time to read all of the life and times of Elroy Chester, but I would like to put his rap sheet, as we call it, into the record.

Mr. Speaker, Chester’s crime spree started when he was young with burglaries, and it ends up with capital murder in 2004. I want to tell you something about this case as to just tell you the type of people that live among the rest of us and what they do and how eventually they are caught.
In September of 1997, John Henry Sepeda, and the people I mention tonight are ordinary people. He was an elderly man in southeast Texas and he was bedridden and he was shot to death in his home in his bed. Four local gang members were first arrested and later released. And Chester, when he was finally released, confessed to this murder.
Three months later in November of 1997, Etta Stallings, 86 years of age, was gunned down in her home where she allowed someone to be living for her invalid husband. A 22-caliber revolver was stolen from her home, and nearby during the same evening, two women were shot with a 22-caliber handgun as they lay in their bed. Shots came through an open window. Both women suffered multiple gunshot wounds, but miraculously they lived. The dog that was shot did not live.
Chester later when he was arrested confessed to all of these crimes.
Five days later, Cheryl DeLeon, an employee at a cafeteria in Port Arthur, Texas, was found shot to death outside her front door. Robbery was the apparent motive, and there weren’t any witnesses.
The next month, in December 1997, Lorenzo Coronado was shot in the head as he lay in his bed after someone broke in. He miraculously also survived even though he was shot in the head.
Two weeks later, Albert Bolden, another real person, was found dead in his residence in Port Arthur. He had been shot in the head, but he had been dead for some time before his body was found.

Then finally, just a few months later in February of 1998, Port Arthur’s reign of terror ended with the murder of Willie Ryman, III.
Mr. Speaker, Willie Ryman was a firefighter at Port Arthur Fire Department. He was twice named Firefighter of the Year, and in February of 1998 he decided he would stop by his sister’s home to check on his two teenage nieces who were there alone. His sister was also a firefighter, and he wanted to make sure that they were okay because his sister was working as well.
Ryman was concerned about the nieces’ welfare. It’s interesting he was very concerned because he had heard of this crime spree that was going on in Port Arthur. Unbeknownst to him, it was all Chester’s doing, this crime spree.
Be that as it may, he comes into the house, and he found that it was dark. He turned on the light, and he confronted a masked intruder who pointed a .380 revolver pistol at him and shot him in the chest. He fell right there in this room, and he died in his own blood.
Ryman never knew that the intruder had already been in the house and sexually assaulted both of the teenage girls. Not only had they been sexually assaulted, they’d been tied up and duct-taped, as well as one of their friends.
Chester left the house and saw Ryman’s fiancée in his truck parked in the driveway. In other words, the fiancée had come to the house looking for Ryman, wanting to know why he hadn’t returned. Chester tried to gain entry into this truck, but she locked the doors. Chester fired several shots into the vehicle but missed Ryman’s fiancée, and then he takes off in the darkness to his car. It’s how the murder occurred.

He was later arrested for a minor city ordinance violation in Port Arthur, and while he was in custody, he was charged with several offenses, including burglary of the home where Ryman was killed.

The next day, Chester agreed to speak with the investigators, and they obtained a search warrant ordering a sample of Chester’s blood and hair to be taken for comparison with evidence from the sexual assault victims.

He was taken to the district attorney’s office to execute the warrant and obtain the samples, but before the blood samples could be taken and the hair samples could be taken, he blurted out that he killed Ryman.

During the course of the search, the police found the jewelry that belonged to Kim DeLeon, that was Willie Ryman’s sister and mother of the two girls that Chester sexually assaulted. This property that the police had been taken at the time of the murder and the sexual assault.

Chester was in recent, unexplained possession of stolen property, which had been missing for only 30 hours. Police later learned that Chester that they’d found and recovered the stolen jewelry, found the masks that were used in the rapes in his residence, and so Chester volunteered to show the police where his gun was.

He had hidden the pistol over at his father’s house, and here’s what happened when they go to Chester’s father’s house. As Elroy Chester informed the police where he hid the gun, he also tried to reach for a gun he had hidden and pulled it on the police, but the police forcefully and adequately and successfully took that gun away from him as well.

He later confessed to stealing Etta Stallings’ jewelry. That’s the 88-year-old woman that I mentioned some minutes ago that took care of her invalid husband and murdering her. He confessed to killing her. He confessed to killing John Sepeda, and he later confessed to the murders of DeLeon and Albers. He also confessed to other attempted capital murders of three other victims.

Now, his case has already worked its way to the Supreme Court once on a different issue, but yet, as he was tried in 1998, he has still not received his appropriate sentence.

And what was his sentence from the jury in 1998 after they heard about the death, murder, and pillaging that he committed in Port Arthur, the five murders, the numerous burglaries, the numerous killings, and the total number of the attempted murders? The jury, Mr. Speaker, in 12 minutes, 12 minutes, assessed the death penalty for Elroy Chester.

Now, as I mentioned, both as a prosecutor and as a judge, I have heard several, many death penalty cases, but I’ve never heard a case where a jury only took 12 minutes to all agree on what should happen to this person who did these dastardly acts against other people. It’s a remarkable time frame. DWI cases take longer than 12 minutes for a jury normally to reach a verdict. That’s how overwhelming his guilt was in this case, Mr. Speaker. So guilt is not an issue here.

But he also faces execution by lethal injection. So one issue is now before the Supreme Court, throughout the fruitless plain in all States, whether or not lethal injection violates the eighth amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. That is one of the issues in his case, and he is avoiding his day with his Maker because of this issue.

But I think it goes further than that, Mr. Speaker. I don’t think it’s just an issue that the Supreme Court is going to decide whether or not lethal injection violates the eighth amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. That is one of the issues in his case, and he is avoiding his day with his Maker because of this issue.

But I think it goes further than that, Mr. Speaker. I don’t think it’s just an issue that the Supreme Court is going to decide whether or not lethal injection violates the Eighth Amendment prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. That is one of the issues in his case, and he is avoiding his day with his Maker because of this issue.

Based upon prior rulings of the Supreme Court, it seems to me that there are three people of the Supreme Court that are always opposed to the death penalty as a form of punishment. Sometimes there’s a fourth member opposed to the death penalty, and they find ways to prevent the death penalty. No matter what the circumstances are, even though State law, written by State legislators and the will of the people and the will of a jury of the community says otherwise, some of those members of the Supreme Court don’t care. They found ways to avoid assessing or allowing the death penalty, even though we had in this country the death penalty that goes all the way back to colonial days.

Going to the first issue, whether or not lethal injection is a violation of the Eighth Amendment, cruel and unusual punishment provision, my question is, if we don’t use lethal injection, what do we use? All of these other forms of execution are basically no longer used, whether it’s hanging, the firing squad, the gas chamber. So I ask the question, what would those individuals oppose lethal injection have the system, society, justice, the jury, the courts use as an alternative to lethal injection? I don’t know the answer to that question.

Is the Supreme Court going to rule that the pain inflicted by the administration of lethal injection in itself is cruel or unusual? It will be interesting to see if they draw that fine line to say that since it is painful, it’s a moral thing, in my opinion, that that is a moral thing, in my opinion.

But be that as it may, we use the term “justice” quite frequently in courts of law. We use it in this Chamber, “justice.” What is justice? Well, justice to me seems to be the right decision for the right reason, but sometimes we compare justice to the scales of justice, where Lady Justice is holding the scales, and justice occurs when the scales are balanced, that they are not overweighted for one side or the other.

And what do we put on those scales? Well, maybe we put the concerns and the rights of the offender. But also, on the other side, what do we put? Maybe the rights of the community, of the public and of victims.

But be that as it may, justice only occurs when the scales of justice are balanced, and when either side is out of sync, we have injustice in our courts of law.

The defendants that are on death row, who hope that the death penalty may be thrown out or the lethal injection system is thrown out, have their concerns, but those people who have been murdered also have their day and rights in court.

You know, Mr. Speaker, the silent graves of the murdered cry out for justice in these types of cases for several reasons; not just the fact that the delays and the delays for execution of these sentences take so long, but by the method or, rather, by the total reversals, whether or not a person should receive the death penalty or not. If justice is delayed, it’s denied.

So I would hope that the Supreme Court would review this law based upon American law, and I say that because our Supreme Court, Mr. Speaker, from time to time goes and uses international law and international court decisions to make determinations and interpret our United States Constitution. They’ve done that in the phrase “cruel and unusual punishment” in the past, and they did do that when they said that 17-year-olds can’t be executed. They made that decision even though it was the State law in several
Some people actually earn the death penalty on their own by their conduct, and I am one of those that believes that is just in appropriate cases. An injustice would occur if he were allowed to have some other sentence other than what the jury verdict so imposed in his particular case. So, Mr. Speaker, this whole issue of cruel and unusual punishment, the eighth amendment, the history of the eighth amendment, what the Supreme Court now interprets to mean, the method of execution, execution in any form, all of those issues now once again will be before the nine black-robed Justices down the street, and it would seem to me that they should follow the Constitution to the letter, the historical content of the eighth amendment and where it came from and the history of it and uphold the right of States and, in some cases, appropriate cases, to let juries make a determination that a person should pay the ultimate price for the crimes they have committed against society. They should make it very clear what method should be used in all cases for the execution of those like Elroy Chester who have earned the right to be executed for the crimes that they have committed. Because you see, Mr. Speaker, justice is the one thing that we should always find in every case. Although the death penalty is a very serious punishment for crime, in cases of overwhelming guilt and overwhelming evidence and overwhelming cruelty and criminal conduct and a slew of murders, a person has earned the punishment that juries impose.

And that’s just the way it is.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, we are going to immediately return to executive session to continue the consideration of Judge Southwick to be nominated to one of our circuit courts. The 20 minutes prior to the 11 a.m. vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the nomination will be for the two leaders who will be recognized to speak, with the majority leader controlling the final 10 minutes. That order is already in effect. The consent agreement says if cloture is invoked the Senate would go to confirmation following that cloture vote. Following disposition of the nomination, there will be 20 minutes of debate, equally divided, prior to the vote on the motion to invoke cloture.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF LESLIE SOUTHWICK TO BE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to executive session to resume consideration of the following nomination which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Leslie Southwick, of Mississippi, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Fifth Circuit.

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the time until 11 a.m. shall be equally divided between the two leaders or their designee, with the time from 10:40 to 11 a.m. divided and controlled between the two leaders and with the majority leader controlling the final 10 minutes. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. Specter. How much time remains on each side?
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-seven and a half minutes on the majority side and 58 minutes on the minority side.

Mr. SPECTER. How much again on the Republican side?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-eight minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I spoke extensively last night after Senator LEAHY, the chairman, spoke about the nomination. I will make a few comments now, and I will invite my colleagues to come to the floor on the Republican side. For those who are interested in time, we have only a limited amount, but we will apportion it as best we can, obviously equitably. It is my hope that we will move through the cloture vote to cut off debate and then proceed to confirm Judge Leslie Southwick.

As I said yesterday—and, again, I spoke at some length—Judge Southwick’s nomination within an outstanding academic, professional, and judicial record. On the Court of Appeals in the State of Mississippi and the intermediate appellate court, Judge Southwick has distinguished himself by participating in some 6,000 cases and in some 950 cases as a party. His critics have singled out only two cases against that extraordinary record. I commented yesterday at length about the fact that in neither of the cases in which he has been criticized did he participate, but only concurred, and there were good reasons for the positions he took.

An extraordinary thing about Judge Southwick is that he got a waiver to join the Army Reserve at the age of 42 and then at the age of 53 volunteered to go to Iraq into harm’s way to serve on the Judge Advocate General’s staff, receiving the commendation of the major general which I put into the RECORD yesterday.

His record shows that he has been very concerned about plaintiffs in personal injury cases, about defendants in criminal cases, and has looked out for the so-called little guy. As I enumerated yesterday, a number of very prominent members of the African-American community from Mississippi have come forward in his support—one young lady who was his law clerk and others who knew him. It is my view that on the merits, there is no question that Judge Southwick should be confirmed.

There has been some concern about the seat he is filling, whether there should be greater diversity on the seat. That really is a matter in the first instance for the President and then in the second instance for the Senate to consider the merits of the individual. It is the American way to consider Judge Southwick on his merits as to what he has done and as to what he stands for.

We have seen this body very badly divided in the past couple of decades, along partisan lines. In the final 2 years of the administration of President Reagan when Democrats had control of the Senate and the Judiciary Committee, President Reagan’s nominees were stonewalled to a substantial extent. The same thing happened during the last 2 years of the administration of President George H.W. Bush. Then, Republicans asked in kind during the Clinton administration and refused, in many cases to have hearings or to call President Clinton’s nominees up for confirmation. I think that was the incorrect approach and said so, in fact, on a number of President Clinton’s nominations.

This body had a very tough time 2 years ago when we were considering the so-called nuclear constitutional option which would have taken away the filibuster opportunity to require 60 votes, and we succeeded in a compromise with the so-called Gang of 14. The Judiciary Committee has functioned more smoothly during the course of the past 3 years with Senator LEAHY now the chairman and during the course of the hearing in 2005 to 2006 when I chaired the committee.

So it is my hope that comity will be maintained, that Judge Southwick will be considered as an individual as to whether he is qualified, without any collateral considerations as to the history of nominees to the Fifth Circuit. I think if that is done, Judge Southwick will be confirmed. It would be most unfortunate, in my judgment, if we were to go back to the days of excessive partisanship.

It is an open question as to who the President will be following the 2008 elections, and it would be my hope that however the Presidential election works out and whoever may control the Senate, that we will consider the nominees on their individual merits. To repeat, I think that will lead to the confirmation of Judge Southwick.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH). The Senator from New Jersey is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the nomination of Judge Southwick. With a long and consistent history of insensitivity toward discrimination and of siding with the powerful against the powerless, Mr. Southwick is the wrong person to take a seat on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and he is the wrong person to sit on the Federal bench in the State of Mississippi.

Before I explain why I oppose this nominee, let me say that my concerns are based entirely on Judge Southwick’s judicial record. They have absolutely nothing to do with Judge Southwick as a person—or whether he is a nice man, a good employer, or a devoted family man. That is not what this confirmation process is all about. This confirmation process is about the kind of judge Leslie Southwick was on the Mississippi State Court of Appeals and what he stands for, and the powers that be, if he is confirmed to the Fifth Circuit.

On the basis of Judge Southwick’s record on the State court, I have a fairly clear picture of the kind of judge he will be if given a lifetime appointment. He will be the type of judge who consistently rules in favor of big business and corporate interests at the expense of workers’ rights and consumer rights. I know this because in 160 out of 160 written decisions, he ruled in favor of the powerful and against the powerless.

What I do know is that he interprets the law in a way that is not blind to color, blind to race, or blind to sexual orientation, but is fact-focused on these factors and sides against them. In fact, his record reveals a long history of discriminating against individuals based on race and sexual orientation, a long history of siding with the powerful over and to the detriment of the powerless.

Finally, what I do know is that when given the opportunity, he stands by those opinions. When asked by my colleagues on the Judiciary Committee, under oath, Judge Southwick was unable to give even one example—of standing up for the powerless, the poor, minorities, or the dispossessed, not when he was asked during the hearing and not when he was asked for a second time in written form.

This kind of judge we need on the Federal bench.

Remember the circuit this judge was nominated to—the Fifth Circuit. It is the circuit that covers Mississippi, Texas, and Louisiana, the circuit that has the largest percentage of minority residents of any Federal circuit in the United States—44 percent. Let’s not forget that he is nominated to take one of the seats within that circuit reserved for a judge from Mississippi—the State with the highest percentage of African Americans in the country.

President Bush made a commitment to the residents of the Fifth Circuit, the people of Mississippi, and the people of this country that he would appoint more African Americans to this circuit. Not only has he gone back on this commitment, he has nominated someone whom the Congressional Black Caucus vehemently opposes on the grounds that he would not provide equal justice in a circuit where racial discrimination has always been the most pronounced. He has nominated someone who the NAACP, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, the National Urban League, and the Rainbow PUSH Coalition have all called to protect the civil rights of the millions of minority residents living within the Fifth Circuit. Judge Southwick is an unacceptable nominee to any position on the Federal bench, but he is particularly ill-suited for the Fifth Circuit. Mr. President, let me give you one example of how Judge Southwick’s insensitivity toward racial discrimination affects how he decides cases.

In the case of Richmond v. Mississippi Department of Human Services, Judge Southwick had to decide whether it was racial discrimination for a White employer to refer to an African American as “a good ole’ N word. Reversing Judge Southwick was the deciding vote in that decision. He had strong opposition from four dissenting judges who wrote:

The ("N" word) is, and has always been, offensive. Search high and low, you will not find any non-offensive definition for this term. It is a pejorative word, which by its nature and definition are so inherently offensive, that their use establishes the right to offend.

It is incomprehensible to me that anyone could disagree with that statement. It is even more incomprehensible that the President of the United States could nominate an individual who does not believe the law sees such a term as offensive to the Federal appellate bench.

The "N" word is one of the most hateful, most denigrating words in the English language. It has no place in our society and certainly should never be tacitly permitted in the workplace. The fact that Judge Southwick joined the majority opinion—which I should add was reversed by the State supreme court—is not an anomaly. Judge Southwick also has a troubling record in cases reviewing racial bias in the selection of jurors. Of the 59 instances that an African American defendant challenged their conviction on the grounds that the prosecution systematically struck African-American jurors, Mr. Southwick refused the challenge 54 times. That is an over 91 percent refusal rating.

When the color of the juror’s skin was different, when African-American defendants challenged their convictions on the grounds that their defense attorneys were prevented from striking Caucasian jurors, Mr. Southwick refused their challenge and allowed the Caucasian juror to remain in the jury 100 percent of the time. So if a defendant claimed an African American was unjustly kept off the jury, Judge Southwick denied his claim. If a defendant claimed a Caucasian was unjustly kept on the jury, Judge Southwick denied his claim. Thus, it seems like Judge Southwick favors keeping Caucasians on juries and keeping African Americans off—even in a State like Mississippi.

One of Judge Southwick’s own colleagues criticized this apparent policy because it established a low burden for the state to keep Caucasian jurors on a jury and a high burden for defendants to keep African Americans on a jury. Any double standard of justice, especially one that gives the benefit of the doubt to the Government at the detention of rights, is antithetical to our justice system and its presumption of innocence. It is absolutely unacceptable on a Federal appellate court.

Another area of concern I have involves Judge Southwick’s rulings in cases involving discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. In the case S.B. v. L.W., Judge Southwick joined an opinion that took an 8-year-old child away from her birth mother largely because of the mother’s sexual orientation. The fact that Judge Southwick joined this overtly discriminatory opinion is extremely troubling. However, the concurrence he himself authored is even more so.

His concurring opinion stated that homosexuality was a choice that comes from sequence. Despite the fact that the American Psychological Association has found that sexual orientation is not a choice, Judge Southwick decided to give his personal opinion, his personal belief, that is was a choice, the weight of the law. Judges must always remember the predominant value of their words and their opinions. That a judge would base a legal judgment on personal opinion is disconcerting. That a judge would base a legal judgment on such misguided personal views regarding sexual orientation is absolutely intolerable.

Before I conclude, I would like to discuss one other problem I have with Judge Southwick’s nomination. That is the distinct trend in Judge Southwick’s decisions of deciding in favor of big business and against the little guy. Judge Southwick ruled against injured workers and consumers 89 percent of the time when there was a divided court; 89 percent of the time Judge Southwick put the interests of corporations ahead of average Americans; 89 percent of the time a judge sided with the government over defendants, particularly African-American defendants. He routinely finds in favor of big business at the expense of individual workers and consumers. He does not seem to approach his cases with an open mind.

We cannot place a judge like this on the Federal appellate bench. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to vote against the motion to invoke cloture, and should that succeed, to unanimously vote against the nominee and giving a lifetime appointment to someone who consistently decides against African Americans. In a circuit in which they are such a huge part of the population, it is simply unacceptable.

I ask unanimous consent that letters of opposition and concern from groups concerned about the environment, the Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law, the United Auto Workers, and the African-American Bar Association of Dallas, Texas be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
COMMUNITY RIGHTS COUNCIL; EARTHJUSTICE; FRIENDS OF THE EARTH; SIERRA CLUB, ENDANGERED HABITATS LEAGUE, LOUISIANA ENSIGN, LOUISIANA ENVIRONMENTAL ACTION NETWORK, SAN FRANCISCO BAYKEEPER, TEXAS CAMPAIGN FOR THE ENVIRONMENT, VALLEY WATCH, INC.

Re nomination of Leslie Southwick to a lifetime position on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY, Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER, Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Hon. AHLEN SPECKER, Ranking Member, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY AND RANKING MEMBER SPECKER: We are writing to express serious concerns with the pending nomination of Mississippi attorney and former Mississippi Court of Appeals Judge Leslie Southwick to a lifetime seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which decides the fate of federal environmental and other safeguards in Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi.

Some of these concerns are based upon points made by Judge Southwick in two Mississippi Law Review articles that were published in 2003, while he was on the Mississippi Court of Appeals:

LESLIE SOUTHWICK, Separation of Powers at the State Level: Interpretation and Challenges in Mississippi Separation of Powers at the State Level, 72 Miss. L.J. 927 (2003). [Hereinafter Powers at the State Level, 72 Miss. L.J. 927 (2003).]

JUDGE SOUTHWICK SUPPORTS THE MAJORITY SIDE IN THE SUPREME COURT’S FEDERALISM REVOLUTION AND, POTENTIALLY, THE “CONSTITUTION IN EXILE” MOVEMENT

Between 1990 and 2001, a 5-4 majority of the Supreme Court struck down federal legislation at a rate rivaled only by the discredited “Lochner” which blocked the labor reforms of the Progressive Era and the Congressional response to the Depression in the early stages of the New Deal. The Court’s rulings were made together under the inaccurate label of “federalism,” undermined important laws protecting women, senior citizens, minorities, the disabled, and the environment. These decisions have engendered withering criticism from both sides of the political spectrum. For example, Judge John Noonan, a conservative appointed by President Reagon to the Ninth Circuit, declared that the Rehnquist Court had acted “without justification of any kind” in doing “intolerable injury to the enforcement of federal standards, which blocked the labor reforms of the Progressive Era and the Congressional response to the Depression.” Judge Noonan warned, “points to the present danger to the exercise of democratic government.”

As Senator Specter noted in a letter to then Judge John Roberts, these cases represent “the judicial activism of the Rehnquist Court.”

Judge Southwick, writing in 2003, had a much more positive view of these cases. Indeed, he analogized the Court’s “return to first principles” to a Christian following the Scriptures: “The Court is insisting on obedience to the scriptural, constitutional and commandments. It is as if the text that is being followed begins along these lines: In the Beginning, the New World was without Form, and void.” Judge Southwick continued, “Let There be States.” Behold, there were States, and it was Good.”

The past decade, Mississippi judges have been engulfed in what Judge Southwick calls “never-ending and ever-escalating tort wars being fought out at every level of the Mississippi court system.” Recent Trends at *11. Judge Southwick is clearly a partisan in this war. He criticizes former Mississippi Governor Haley Barnett for “an interest in crafting precedents that were favorable to the interests of plaintiffs in personal injury actions.” Judge Southwick is also critical of former Mississippi Governor Ronnie Musgrove’s “middle way” toward the outcome in thorny cases in which the court ruled 8-2 that the statute of limitations did not begin to run until the plaintiff had reason to believe the chemicals that she was exposed to caused her illness. *11.

Concerns about the ability of a judicial nominee to be unbiased go to the heart of the Senate’s constitutional advice and consent role. We urge you to carefully consider these concerns, raised by Judge Southwick record, before voting on his proposed nomination to a lifetime position on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Sincerely,

DEAR SENATORS LEAHY AND SPECTER: I write to express the opposition of the Bazelon Center for the Legal Strategy of the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Bazelon Center... is a national nonprofit organization that advocates for the rights of individuals with mental disabilities through litigation, policy advocacy, education and training. The Center opposed Judge Southwick's nomination because of his record of opinions on at least one case that would violate portions of critical civil rights legislation if appointed. He has characterized the Fifth Circuit as returning to the "scripture of the Constitution by striking down portions of the Violence Against Women Act and Gun Free School Zones Act, and has even power to declare the sovereign immunity to protect Native Americans.

Leslie Southwick, Separation of Powers at the State Level, 72 Miss. L. J. 927, 930-31 (2003). He indicated his apparent support for the "Constitution in exile," a radical ideology that would undo seventy years of Supreme Court rulings, dramatically undermining the federal government's power.

These issues are of paramount concern to the disability community because the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act, and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) have been the targets of repeated attacks on federal grounds, and the constitutionality of these laws has been hotly contested in the federal courts.

Southwick's nomination to the Fifth Circuit is especially troubling because that court is already closely divided on the constitutionality of disability rights legislation. See Pace v. Bogalusa City School Bd., 325 F.3d 609 (5th Cir. 2003) (Congress did not validly abrogate state sovereign immunity in the IDEA), rev'd, 493 F.3d 272 (5th Cir. 2005) (judge Southwick); Martin v. Haywood, 491 F.3d 407 (5th Cir. 2004) (upholding ADA's community integration mandate against commerce clause challenge in divided vote); Nelsest v. Texas, 217 F.3d 276; (5th Cir. 2000) (Congress lacked authority under Fourteenth Amendment Section 5 to enact the ADA's bar on imposing handicapped parking placard surcharges on individuals with disabilities). Southwick's addition to the Fifth Circuit would increase the likelihood that critical disability rights protections would be eroded in that Circuit.

This lifetime position should be held by someone who respects Congress's authority to enact needed civil rights protections, including protections for individuals with disabilities.

Sincerely,

ROBERT BERNSTEIN

INTERNATIONAL UNION, UNITED AUTOMOBILIST WORKERS OF AMERICA—UAW.

DEAR SENATOR: This week the Senate may take up the nomination of Mississippi Judge Leslie H. Southwick to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. The UAW urges you to oppose his nomination and to vote against any attempt to invoke cloture on this nomination.

Judge Southwick's record as a judge on the Mississippi Court of Appeals is deeply troubling. He has consistently ruled against workers seeking compensation for injuries suffered on the job. He has also opined that the "benefit of the doubt" doctrine, which allows employers to fire workers for any reasons, "provides the best balance of the competing interests in the employment situation." He also indicated his opposition to the National Labor Relations Act, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, and other laws that protect employees in the workplace and limit "employment at will.

Judge Southwick also joined the court's 5-4 decision in Richmond v. Mississippi Department of Human Services, upholding the reinstatement of a state social worker who was fired for using a despicable racial epithet in a conversation with a co-worker. This decision reveals a disturbing lack of understanding for the negative impact of this language. In addition, a review of Judge Southwick's decisions reveals a disturbing pattern in which he routinely rejects defense claims regarding racially motivated prosecutors who strike African-American jurors, but upholds claims of prosecutors that defense attorneys are striking white jurors on the basis of their race.

For all of these reasons, Judge Southwick's confirmation would endanger core worker and civil rights protections. Accordingly, we urge you to vote against his nomination and against any attempt to invoke cloture to cut off debate on his nomination.

Thank you for considering our views on this issue.

Sincerely,

ALAN REUTHER

THE AFRICAN-AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION OF DALLAS, TEXAS

Re nomination of Leslie Southwick to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

HON. PATRICK LEAHY
Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary
Russell Office Building, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR S. PATRICK LEAHY: The J.L. Turner Legal Association ("JLTLA"), the premier organization for African-American attorneys in Dallas, Texas, writes to register its opposition to the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the United States Court of Appeals to the Fifth Circuit. In so doing, we join with Senator Barack Obama, the Magnolia Bar Association, the Alliance for Justice and the National Employment Lawyers Association, among others, in voicing concerns about Judge Southwick’s fitness for a lifetime appointment to the federal appellate bench.

More significantly, the JLTLA is deeply disturbed by the Bush Administration’s consistent and colleague pattern of selecting ultra-conservative, non-diverse candidates to serve on the most racially diverse federal circuit in the country. The Fifth Circuit, comprised of Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, is home to more African-Americans than any other federal circuit, with the possible exception of the Fourth Circuit, comprised of only African-American judge, Carl Stewart, currently serves on the Fifth Circuit. Bush has, moreover, nominated no African-Americans to the Fifth Circuit. In his tenure, Mike Wal Charles, the nominee to the Fifth Circuit, has been severely criticized. Judge Southwick’s nomination could only very generously be described as yet another "slap in the face" to the diverse populations of the Fifth Circuit.

Further, this appointment reflects the Bush Administration’s clear disregard for the will of the American people given the significantly dynamic change in Congress. The dramatic outcome of the midterm Congressional election signals that Americans are seeking a new landscape rather than leaving an even more conservative footprint on what is now one of the most conservative Circuits in the nation.

Historically, the Fifth Circuit served as the vanguard for the advancement of civil and human rights, particularly with regard to the implementation of the U.S. Supreme Court’s dictates following its historic ruling in Brown v. Board of Education et al. The last twenty years, however, have marked a notable retreat in commitment to civil rights. Judge Southwick’s elevation to the Fifth Circuit would only strengthen the conservative leanings of this Circuit, further alienate the diverse citizenry of this Circuit.

We trust that you will call upon all of your colleagues on the Judiciary Committee to reject this nomination, and call on the President to select a consensus nominee that would bring greater balance to the Fifth Circuit.

Very truly yours,

VICKI D. BLANTON, ESQ., President, JLTLA.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARDIN). The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I rise to make a few brief remarks on this nomination to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which serves the residents of Mississippi, Louisiana, and my State of Texas.

Judge Leslie Southwick has served for almost 12 years on the Mississippi Court of Appeals where he participated in thousands of cases in almost every area of State civil and criminal law. He is, by all accounts—notwithstanding some of the attacks by interest groups that we have heard recounted here today—a respected member of that court and an honorable and decent man. Notably, he took a leave from the bench to volunteer to serve his Nation in Iraq. I ask: What kind of man would give up a cushy job on the Fifth Circuit’s appeals to put his life on the line in Iraq?

The American Bar Association has unanimously found Judge Southwick “well qualified” to serve on the Fifth Circuit, which is the highest rating the American Bar Association gives. It is my goal to point out that the American Bar Association investigates the background of these nominees, talks to litigants who appeared before them, talks to other judges and leaders of the legal community, and they have concluded that, in Judge Southwick’s words we have heard today attacking the integrity of this public servant, that he deserves the highest rating of the American Bar Association.

For whatever reason, this honorable public servant has been dragged through the mud in this confirmation proceeding and, in my opinion, has been slandered by some of his critics. Judge Southwick has been called an “arch-reactionary,” a “neoconfederate,” “hostile to civil rights,” “everything but the word “racist,” although that has been implied time and time again.

Judge Southwick’s nomination was opposed by 9 of the 10 Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee. But, to her credit, Mrs. Feinstein, the Senator from California, declined to be strong-armed by the interest groups who are whipping up manufactured hysteria when it comes to opposing this nominee. Announcing that she found “zero evidence to support the charges against Judge Southwick,” Senator FEINSTEIN joined the nine Republicans on the committee to advance the nomination to the Senate floor.

When Senator Specter testified in the Judiciary Committee’s debate over this nomination is why the same panel had, just a year earlier, unanimously approved him for a seat on the Federal District Court bench. I posed this question to my colleagues during the Judiciary Committee’s debate:

If there is a concern out there that Judge Southwick is not qualified because of some perceived racial problem, why in the world would that opposition deem him acceptable to be a Federal District Court judge?

Think about that a second. The discretion afforded a District Court judge is so much greater than that on the court of appeals—from the start of a trial, through voir dire and juror strikes, through evidentiary rulings, and jury instructions. I trust that my colleagues would never vote for someone with a known bias who made it a problem for tenure in a role with such enormous discretion. We all know that there was no objection at the time of the committee’s hearings for a Federal District bench because, the fact is, the allegations against him had been manufactured since that time.

There is no legitimate concern about Judge Southwick’s character or record. This is just the latest incarnation of the dangerous game being played with the reputations and lives of honorable public servants.

The Republican leader put it this way:

When do we stop for the sake of the institution, for the sake of the country, and for the sake of the party that may not currently occupy the White House? When do we stop?

The Washington Post’s editorial page, along with the respected legal affairs columnist Stuart Taylor, both lamented the treatment afforded Judge Southwick who has yet to be confirmed by the Senate but hopefully will be today. Stuart Taylor’s column is appropriately titled “Shortsighted on Judges Well.”

The long-term cost to the country is that bit by bit, almost imperceptibly, more and more of the people who would make the best judges—liberal and conservative alike—are less and less willing to put themselves through the ever-longer, ever-more-harrowing gauntlet that the confirmation process has become.

The attacks on Judge Southwick, unfortunately, have come to typify many kinds of vicious, gratuitous, personal attacks that are occurring with greater frequency against judicial nominees.

I wonder if there is a Member of this body who doesn’t think we need to improve the tone and rhetoric of the judicial confirmation process. When good men and women decline the opportunity to serve on the Federal bench out of disdain for this unnecessarily hostile process, the administration of justice in this Nation can only be the worse for it.

I urge my colleagues to send a strong message today with this vote that these unwarranted, baseless attacks on Leslie Southwick are beneath the dignity of the Senate. At some point in time we have to stop it, and I can think of no better time than now with this outstanding public servant.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, after the Senator from Illinois speaks, I would like to yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Arizona, Mr. KYL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, a few weeks ago, our Nation witnessed one of the largest civil rights rallies in decades. It was a rally to condemn hate crimes and racial disparities in our criminal justice system. It occurred in a town in Louisiana that most of us never heard of, Jena, LA. That small town captured the attention of America. Why? Well, because of an incident that occurred at a high school where there was a tree that White students traditionally met.

School officials came to the conclusion it was time that all students could sit under the tree. In protest for that decision, White students hung nooses from the tree. Nooses, the ancient symbol of hatred and bigotry.

Well, that incident led to other incidents, fights between Black and White students at the school. Three Black students who put the nooses in the tree were given a 3-day suspension from the school, a 3-day suspension. In contrast, the Jena district attorney, who was White, brought criminal charges for attempted murder against six African-American teenagers, the so-called Jena 6.

If convicted on all the charges, the African-American students could have served a combined total of more than 100 years in prison. One hundred years in prison for one group of students, a 3-day suspension for others. It is no wonder this captured the attention of the Nation.

Squabbling, fighting among students, led to serious criminal charges for some and a very slight reprimand for others. This is not the first time America has faced this kind of disparity in justice. Sadly, it is not likely to be the last. Some of us in my age group can recall the struggles of the 1960s when civil rights became a national cause in America. When all of us, Black, White, and Hispanic, faced death threats. They were enforced to step back and take a look at the America we live in and make a decision as to whether it would be a different country.

We look back now as we celebrate Dr. Martin Luther King’s birthday and observe with some remembrance of that era. But I can remember that era, too, as being one of violence and division in America. I can recall when Dr. King decided to come to the Chicago area and lead a march. It was a painful, violent experience in a State I love.

I look back on it because I want to make it clear: discrimination is not a Southern phenomena, it is an American phenomena. But in the course of the civil rights struggle in the 1960s, there were some real heroes, and one of them was a man I dearly love and served with in the House, John Lewis.

John Lewis, a young African-American student, decided to engage in sit-ins, and when that did not succeed, he moved on to the next level, the freedom bus rides. He risked his life taking buses back and forth across the South to establish the fact that all people, regardless of color, should be given a chance.

And then, of course, the historic march in Selma. John Lewis was there that day. I know because I returned to that town a few years ago with him and he retraced his footsteps. He showed me how he walked over that bridge as a young man. As he was coming down on the other side of the bridge, he saw gathered in front of him a large group of publicans on the committee to advance the nomination is why the same panel had, just a year earlier, unanimously approved him for a seat on the Federal District Court bench. I posed this question to my colleagues during the Judiciary Committee’s debate:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

with him, but I heard so many wonder-ful things about him, Howell Heflin. Senator Howell Heflin of Alabama introduced a bill to name the U.S. courthouse in Montgomery, AL, for Frank Johnson, Jr.

This is what he said: Judge Johnson’s courtroom has been a living symbol of decency and fairness to all who come before his bench. It is from this courthouse that the term “rule of law” came to have true meaning; it is from this courthouse that the term “equal protection” became a reality, and it is from this courthouse that the phrase “equal justice under law” was dispensed despite threats to his personal life.

Frank Johnson, circuit judge, Fifth Circuit, had the courage to make history and the power to change America. It is a high standard, and it is not for all of us, whether you are a Member of the Senate or seek to be on the Federal judiciary.

It is particularly an important standard to consider with the nomination of Leslie Southwick. There are so many good things to say about Leslie Southwick, if you read his biography, things he has done in his military service, his service in many respects.

But he is asking to serve on Frank Johnson’s circuit court, the Fifth Circuit. I guess many of us believe it is a particularly important circuit for the same reason it was in the time of Frank Johnson.

That Fifth Circuit is still a crucible for civil rights. That Fifth Circuit contains Jena, LA. That is a circuit which many times has been called upon to make important historic decisions about fairness and equality in America.

So, yes, I know we ask more of the nominees for that circuit. We know it has a higher minority population than any other circuit in America. We know the State of Mississippi, the home of Leslie Southwick, has the highest percentage of African Americans.

Yesterday, the Congressional Black Caucus came to meet with the Senate leadership. It is rare that they do that. Congresswomen Carolin Kilpatrick and Eleanor Holmes Norton and others came to speak to us.

The depth of emotion in their presentation is something that touched us all. Members of the Senate who have been through a lot of debates and a lot of names of many of them were misty-eyed in responding to the feelings, the deep-felt feelings of these African-American Congresswomen about this nomination.

Bennie Thompson of Mississippi, the only Black Congressman from that delegation, talked about what this meant to him, how important it was to have someone who could start to heal the wounds of racism and division in the State he lived in. It touched every single one of us.

I asked Leslie Southwick a question at his nomination hearing under oath: it was as open-ended as I could make it. I asked him:

Can you think of a time in your life or career where you did bend in that direction, to take an unpopular point of view on behalf of those who were voiceless or powerless and needed someone to stand up for their rights when it wasn’t a popular position?

Judge Southwick responded:

I hope that a careful look—and the answer is, no, I cannot think of something now. But if I can give you this answer, I cannot recall my opinions, and I don’t think of them in those terms.

By every standard that was a softball question. I asked this man to reflect on his personal and professional life and talk about an act in his lifetime. He stood up to do something that was unpopular but right for someone who did not have the power in his courtroom.

I even sent him a followup written question because I wanted to be fair about this. And he still could not come up with anything. It is troubling. I hope that if the Senate rejects this nomination, the Senators in the Fifth Circuit, particularly from Mississippi, will bring up a nominee for this circuit who can start to heal the wounds, who can bring us back together, who can give hope to the minorities and dispos-sessed in that circuit that they will get a fair shake if their cases come to court.

I hope they can reach back and find us a Frank Johnson, someone in that mold, someone who can answer that open-ended question in a very positive way.

Today, I will vote against cloture and oppose the nomination of Leslie Southwick.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, how much time remains on the Republican side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 45 minutes 17 seconds.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I yield 7 minutes to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, it is my understanding that Senator Schumer of New York wishes to be recognized for 10 minutes at 10 o’clock, which just about coincides with what the Senator from Pennsylvania has indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise in support of Judge Southwick. There is no question that the nominee is qualified to serve. I do not need to repeat his qualifications. Senators SPECTER and FEINSTEIN did that very well last night.

There is no question that he has had an impressive life of service.

Nobody can question the service of a man who joins the Army Reserves at age 42 and then requests duty in a war zone when he is past the age of 50. I will suggest, by the way, that might have been a good answer to the question that Senator Durbin proposed a moment ago. His life is a life of service, and I believe we should honor him for that.

There is no question the Nation would be well served by his service on the bench. There is also no question the questions about him have been considered. But there is more at stake today than the confirmation of Judge Leslie Southwick.

My colleagues should think long and hard about voting against cloture and about what has happened to this nomination. Until the year 2000, no circuit court nominee has been denied confirmation in this body due to a filibuster. Only Abe Fortas faced a real filibuster attempt, and obviously he had ethics issues which caused him to withdraw after it was clear he lacked even majority support.

Since that time, the convention throughout the 1970s and 1980s and 1990s was to reject this path of filibustering nominees. Senators did not like nominees, but they required cloture. When a few Senators tried to impose a cloture standard, the Senate united, on a bipartisan basis, to reject that 60-vote standard.

In fact, then-Majority Leader LOTT and then-Judiciary Chairman HATCH led the fight against cloture in 2000 when we voted on Clinton nom-inees Paez and Berzon. The vast majority of Republicans rejected any filibuster of judicial nominees.

But in 2003 things began to change. Legislative activist groups pursued many Democrats to apply a different standard. From 2003 to 2005, Democrats actively filibustered several nominees.

I recall the Senator from Nevada saying: “This is a filibuster.” Well, it was a brand new world, and many realized it was not good. A group of Senators, seven from both parties, got together and worked out an arrangement which would preclude this happening in the future because it was not good and was setting a very bad precedent in the Senate.

In 2005, most of the people on both sides of the aisle backed down from this precipice and the Democrats agreed that in light of the opposition to what they had been doing, their obstructionism, that they would no longer do that.

Unfortunately, today we are seeing a rise, a rejuvenation of those earlier efforts. It strikes me as exceedingly shortsighted and needs to stop. Senator FEINSTEIN’s thoughtful speech last night set the standard.

She concluded the speech with the following words, relating to Judge Southwick:

He is not outside the judicial mainstream. That’s the primary criterion I use when evaluating an appellate nominee. And I expect future nominees of Democratic Presidents to be treated the same way.

Mr. President: Will Senator FEINSTEIN’s expectation become the reality? I wish I could say yes, but it may not occur that way if cloture is not granted to Judge Southwick, and that is the larger question.

Until now, my Republican colleagues and I have been clear that we think judicial filibusters are inappropriate. I suggest today’s vote is a watershed. If Senator Feinstein holds to her word to filibuster Judge Southwick today, a clearly qualified nominee, they should not be surprised if they see similar treatment for Democratic nominees. This cannot be a one-sided standard. So this isn’t just a vote about Judge Southwick; it is about the rule of the judicial nomination process. If Leslie Southwick can’t get an up-or-down vote, then I suspect no Senator should expect a future Democratic or Republican President to be able to count on their nominees not to be treated in the same fashion. Any little bit of controversy could be created to create the kind of hurdles that can’t just a vote about Judge Southwick; it is about the rule of the judicial nomination process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record letters of opposition from People For the American way, the West Texas Employment Lawyers Association, the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, and the National Council of Jewish Women.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Re Leslie Southwick.

Hon. Patrick Leahy, Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. Arlen Specter, Ranking Member, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS LEAHY AND SPECTER:

I am writing on behalf of People For the American Way and our more than 1,000,000 members and supporters nationwide to express strong opposition to the confirmation of Mississippi lawyer and former state court judge Leslie Southwick to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Apart from the fact that much of Judge Southwick’s record has not yet been provided to the Committee for its consideration, what is known of that record is disturbing, particularly in connection with the rights of African Americans, gay Americans, and workers.

Moreover, given that the states (Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas) have the highest percentage of minorities in the country, we deem it of great significance that the NAACP, the Congressional Black Caucus are among those opposing Southwick’s confirmation.

As you know, Judge Southwick has been nominated by President Bush to fill a seat on the Fifth Circuit that the President has previously attempted to fill with Charles Pickering and then with Michael Wallace, both of whom were met with substantial opposition, in large measure because of their disturbing records on civil rights. As you will recall, on May 8, 2007, the joint Committee on the Fifth Circuit (which has since announced its opposition to Southwick’s confirmation), we sent the Committee a letter expressing our very serious concern over Judge Southwick’s nomination, observing that, once again, President Bush had chosen a nominee for this seat who appeared to have a problematic record on civil rights issues.

In one of the cases discussed in our earlier letter, — a chancellor in Mississippi in a meeting with two of the top executives of the Mississippi Department of Human Services no less — had “overreacted” in firing the worker, and was concerned that other workers seek relief if they were called “a honkie or a good old boy or Uncle Tom” or chubby or fat or slim” at 22–23.

Significantly, Judge Southwick chose not even to join this three-judge dissent that would have remedied the case so that some disciplinary action short of firing the worker could have been imposed on her for having referred to a co-worker by a gross racial slur. — “in a meeting with two of the top executives of DHS.” Id. at *28.

As we discussed in our earlier letter, the Mississippi Supreme Court unanimously reversed the ruling that Judge Southwick joined.

The Supreme Court majority ordered that the case be sent back to the appeals board to impose a penalty other than termination or to further delineated the circumstances under which no penalty should be imposed — the position taken by three of Judge Southwick’s colleagues.

Some of the justices on the Supreme Court would have gone even further and reinstated the decision by DHS to fire the worker. But the Supreme Court majority rejected the view of the Court of Appeals majority (which included Southwick) that the board had not erred in ordering the worker’s reinstatement without imposition of any discipline.

In the second case that we discussed in our May 8 letter, S.B. v. L.W., 783 So. 2d 656 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001), Judge Southwick joined the majority in upholding — over a strong dissent — a chancellor’s ruling taking an eight-year-old girl away from her bisexual mother and awarding custody of the child to her father (who had never married her mother), in large measure because the mother was living with another woman in “a lesbian home.” In addition to the disturbing substance of the majority ruling, its failure to commit to social justice progress to which Americans are entitled from those seeking a lifetime appointment to the federal bench. Judge Southwick’s decision did not ameliorate the harm because the intermediate state appellate court on which Judge Southwick sat does not routinely consider the types of federal constitutional and civil rights matters that would shed a great deal of light on a judge’s legal philosophy concerning these critical issues.

As further demonstrated by Judge Southwick’s confirmation hearing on May 10, she did not allay the concerns raised by these decisions or by other aspects of his record.

One of the cases that we raised in our earlier letter, Richmond v. Mississippi Department of Human Service, 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 637 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998), 254 Miss. (Miss. 1999), Judge Southwick joined the majority in a 5-4 ruling that upheld the reinstatement with back pay of a white state worker who had been an African American co-worker a “good ole nigger.” The decision that Judge Southwick joined effectively ratified a hearing officer’s decision that the worker’s racial slur was “in effect calling the individual a ‘teachers pet.’ ” 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 637, at *19. The hearing officer considered the word “nigger” to be only “somewhat derogatory,” felt that the employer (the Mississippi Department of Human Services no less) had “overreacted” in firing the worker, and was concerned that other workers seek relief if they were called “a honkie or a good old boy or Uncle Tom” or chubby or fat or slim.” Id. at *22–23.

Four of Judge Southwick’s colleagues dissented. Two would have upheld the decision by DHS to fire the worker. Two others, also joined by one of the other dissenters, objected to the Employee Appeals Board’s failure to impose any sanctions at all on the worker, noting a “strong presumption that some penalty should have been imposed.” Id. at *18. The three judges issued a separate dissent and would have remedied the case so that the board could “impose an appropriate penalty or produce detailed findings as to why no penalty should be imposed.” Id. at *18.

Significantly, Judge Southwick chose not even to join this three-judge dissent that would have remedied the case so that some disciplinary action short of firing the worker could have been imposed on her for having referred to a co-worker by a gross racial slur. — “in a meeting with two of the top executives of DHS.” Id. at *28.

But all of the Supreme Court justices rejected the view of the Court of Appeals majority (which included Southwick) that the board had not erred in ordering the worker’s reinstatement without imposition of any discipline.

In the second case that we discussed in our May 8 letter, S.B. v. L.W., 783 So. 2d 656 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001), Judge Southwick joined the majority in upholding — over a strong dissent — a chancellor’s ruling taking an eight-year-old girl away from her bisexual mother and awarding custody of the child to her father (who had never married her mother), in large measure because the mother was living with another woman in “a lesbian home.” In addition to the disturbing substance of the majority ruling, its failure to commit to social justice progress to which Americans are entitled from those seeking a lifetime appointment to the federal bench. Judge Southwick’s decision did not ameliorate the harm because the intermediate state appellate court on which Judge Southwick sat does not routinely consider the types of federal constitutional and civil rights matters that would shed a great deal of light on a judge’s legal philosophy concerning these critical issues.

the majority, he joined a concurrence by Judge Payne that was not only gratuitous, but gratuitously anti-gay. As we have previously observed, the concurrence appears to have been written for the sole purpose of scorning and defending Mississippi’s hostility toward gay people and what it calls “the practice of homosexuality” (at 683), in response to the attorney of the chancellor that the chancellor had erred. (The word gay is not used; the concurrence refers repeatedly to “homosexuals” and “homosexual persons.”) The concurrence suggests that sexual orientation is a choice, and explicitly states that while “any adult may choose his or her sex life or sex ‘behavior’,” that “‘person that is not thereby relieved of the consequences of his or her choice.” Id. at 683. In other words, according to Judge Southwick, is Mississippi entitled to deny the right of homosexuals to treat gay people as second-class citizens and criminals. The views of Judge Southwick are quite disturbing, and further calls into question whether he can apply the law fairly to all Americans.

Unfortunately, Judge Southwick’s testimony at his May 10 hearing and his response to post-hearing written questions did not resolve the serious concerns that we and others had raised about his record and in particular his decisions in these cases. For example, in response to Senator Kennedy’s post-hearing question about why, in the Richmond case, Judge Southwick had “accepted[ed] the employee’s claim that [the racial slur] was not derogatory,” Judge Southwick stated that while the word is derogatory, “there was some evidence that [the worker] had not been motivated by hatred or by animosity to an employee of a different race.” According to the concurring opinion he joined, the employee’s use of the racial slur “was not motivated by a desire to offend.”

Judge Southwick’s decision in Southworth v. Hardwick, 452 U.S. 1 (1981) is an example of the magnitude of the use of this gross racial slur anywhere, let alone to refer to a co-worker in Mississippi. Senator Kennedy also asked Judge Southwick why, “[e]ven if you did not think a worker should be fired for using a racial slur—why didn’t let the employer dismiss the employee? Do you have some form of discipline?” Southworth replied that “[n]either party requested that any punishment other than termination be considered,” as noted above, the Richmond court harshly criticized the majority opinion written by Southworth of “establishing one level of obligation for the State, and a higher one for defendants on an identical issue,” NELA, 576 So. 2d 113, 114 (Miss. 2000). The National Employment Lawyers Association has cited this decision as an example of being gay, [he] cannot be given the responsibility to protect the basic rights of gay and lesbian Americans.” Every American, regardless of his or her sexual orientation, should likewise be accorded the opportunity to treat and dignity under the law.

Unfortunately, Judge Southwick’s decisions in Richmond and S.B. call into serious question his qualifications and commitment to these fundamental principles. Moreover, these decisions are far from the only troubling aspects of his record. As the Mississippi State Conference of the NAACP has observed, in connection with Judge Southwick’s rulings on race discrimination in employment, “[d]ozens of such cases reveal a pattern by which Southwick rejects claims that the prosecution was racially motivated in striking African-American jurors while upholding claims that the defense struck white jurors on the basis of their race.” Indeed, in one such case, three other judges on Southwick’s court harshly criticized him in a dissent, accusing the majority opinion written by Southwick of “establishing one level of obligation for the State, and a higher one for defendants on an identical issue,” NELA, 576 So. 2d 113, 114 (Miss. 2000).

During his time on the state court of appeals, Judge Southwick also compiled a long record of alleged breaches of judicial ethics. According to an analysis by the Alliance for Justice, “Judge Southwick voted, in whole or in part, against the injured party in some civil rights cases brought by corporations or insurance companies, in 160 out of 180 published decisions involving state employment law and torts cases in which at least one judge dissented. In 2001, a business advocacy group gave Judge Southwick the highest rating of any judge on the Mississippi Supreme Court in Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 556 (2003).”

However, when Senator Durbin in his post-hearing questions expressly asked Judge Southwick whether he would have voted with the majority or the dissent in Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 556 (2003). Judge Southwick did not answer this question, instead giving answers that were not truly relevant.

In one case heard by his court involving an alleged breach of an employment-at-will, which allows an employer to fire an employee for any reason. Despite the fact that neither the existence nor merits of the at-will doctrine were at issue in the case, Judge Southwick overruled Bowers, allowing the state to deprive the mother of custody of her child. role with the President in the confirmation process, nominees must demonstrate that they meet the appropriate criteria. These include not only an “exemplary record in the law,” but also a “commitment to protecting the rights of ordinary Americans,” and a “record of commitment to the progress made on civil rights, women’s rights, and individual rights concern across the nation.” The nominee’s record must reflect a commitment to protecting the rights of ordinary Americans, and a “record of commitment to the progress made on civil rights, women’s rights, and individual rights concern across the nation.”

While on the Mississippi Court of Appeals, Judge Southwick joined an opinion removing an eight-year-old child from the custody of her mother, in part because the mother had a lesbian home. This decision was based on a negative perception about the sexual orientation of the mother and ignored findings by the American Psychological Association, along with every other credible psychological and child welfare group that lesbian and gay parents are equally successful parents as their heterosexual counterparts.

Further, Judge Southwick was the only judge in the majority to join a deeply troubling concurrence written by Judge Payne. The concurrence asserts that sexual orientation is a choice and an individual who makes that choice must accept the negative consequences, including loss of custody. This statement underscores Judge Southwick’s disregard for commonly accepted psychiatric and social science conclusions that sexual orientation is not a choice. Regardless, it also demonstrates Judge Southwick’s callous disregard for the well-being of LGBT families.

A nominee to the federal bench bears the burden of demonstrating a commitment to rigorously enforcing the principles of equal protection under the Constitution for all Americans. The judicial record of Judge Southwick makes clear that he cannot meet that burden. It also makes clear that the individual for whom Judge Southwick’s record speaks would be in real jeopardy if he were confirmed.

We therefore oppose his nomination and request that you vote against his confirmation. It would be unconscionable for this Senate to confirm any judge who has illustrated such a clear anti-LGBT bias to a lifetime seat on the federal bench.

Sincerely,

MATT FOREMAN, Executive Director.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY, Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee, Washington, D.C.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY: I write on behalf of the National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW), to urge the Senate to reject the nomination of Judge Leslie Southwick to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Southwick has many impressive credentials. Most impressive to me is his record of intolerance. I have been a member of the NCJW for 25 years, and I have never seen a提案 from some on this side of the aisle and some others that we should change the rules of the Senate so that only 51 votes would be necessary to confirm a judge in this time. I opposed that idea because I thought that it would then put us on a slippery slope to other requirements, further erode the 60 votes necessary to confirm a judge. I thought that it would then put us on a slippery slope to other requirements, further erode the 60 votes necessary to confirm a judge.

I think it is pretty obvious that agreement has broken down. I would like to remind my colleagues that not that many years ago the benefit of the doubt went to the President and his nominees and that elections have consequences. Among those consequences are the appointments of judges—in some respects, perhaps the most important consequence of elections—and, as we all know, these are lifetime appointments, and some of us on the conservative side have viewed over the years legislating from the bench in certain kinds of judicial activism as very harmful to our principles and philosophy and our view of the role of Government and the various branches of Government but the effects of some of that judicial activism.

So here we are now with a person who is clearly qualified, served in the military, and is now being accused of perhaps having an “inclination toward intolerance or insensitivity.” I can assure my colleagues there are some people living in Iraq today who don’t believe Judge Southwick has the inclination toward intolerance and insensitivity. In fact, he has earned their gratitude for his efforts in installing the fundamental effects of democracy, and that is the rule of law.

Mr. President, once we get this over with, perhaps we can sit down again. Republicans and Democrats alike, and try to have a process where we could move forward with these judicial nominations. As we know, there are more vacancies every day. And I would urge you to give them a may day, which they seem to feel is rather important.

This is an important decision right now, which I think is larger than just the future of this good and decent man. Will others who want to serve on the bench be motivated to serve or not serve as they watch this process where someone accused of an inclination toward intolerance and insensitivity seems to be a new criteria?

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I would like to echo the sentiments of Senator McCAIN and add my two cents’ worth to this debate. In this regard, there will be some good news today. I anticipate that this fine man will have a vote on the floor of the Senate, that the cloture motion will pass, and we will allow an up-or-down vote and he will get confirmed.

To my two colleagues from Mississippi: Well done. You have sent to the Senate an unusually well-qualified candidate by any standard you would like to apply to a person in terms of his humanity, his intellect, and his judicial demeanor. It is one of the best selections I have had the privilege of reviewing since I have been in the Senate.

The unfortunate news is that we are having to go through this particular exercise to get 60 votes. Quite frankly, I think the accusations being made against Judge Southwick are unfounded and just political garbage, to be honest with you.

He has received the highest qualified rating from the American Bar Association. Everyone who has ever served with Judge Southwick, in any capacity, whether he, or private citizen, has nothing but glowing things to say about the man. And really, we are trying to use two legal events to cast doubt over the man. Six hundred cases he has sat in judgment upon, and the American Bar Association has reviewed all these cases, I would assume, and come to the conclusion that he is at their highest level in terms of judicial qualification. Judge Southwick has done things as a person that have really been beneficial to Mississippi. He has tried to bring out the best in Mississippi. These are the types of people you would hope to represent the State of Mississippi—or any other State, for that matter—in terms of their demeanor, their tolerance, their willingness to work together with all groups to move their State forward.

Now, the two cases in question are just complete garbage—the idea that the term like ‘‘investigator’’ was used in an opinion that he concurred in involving a custody case. That term, if you research it in the law, has been used in hundreds of different cases—over 100 cases. President Clinton mentioned it in a way talking about his policy regarding the military. It is a term that was used in the Mississippi court cases that were the precedent for the case involved. And to say that he concurred in an opinion where the authoring judge used that term has somehow tainted him means you better go through the records and throw a bunch of judges off, Democrats and Republicans. That is ridiculous, completely ridiculous, and if applied in any fair way would just be—it would be chaos. You would have politicians, you would have judges, you would have people from all over the country who somehow, because of that term having been used in a judicial opinion, couldn’t sit in judgment of others. That is ridiculous. Just go search the record of how this term has been used. To suggest that it means something in Judge Southwick’s case but no one else’s has a lot to say about this body, not Judge Southwick.

Now, then, when he was sitting in judgment of an administrative board that decided not to dismiss an employee who used a racial slur in the workplace. To suggest that by somehow giving deference to the administrative board, whether or not their decision was capricious and arbitrary—the review standard at the appellate level—he embraces this term or is intolerant is equally ridiculous. I have an administrative board in the State of Mississippi that is above, in the area of employment discrimination law, hiring and firing practices. The case is decided at the administrative level, and it comes up to appeal, and every judge involved says this is a terrible word to use but, as a matter of law, the board’s finding it was an isolated incident did not justify a complete dismissal was the issue in the case.

Mr. President, do we really want to create a situation in this country where the judges who want to get promoted will not render justice or apply the law, that they will be worried about themselves and what somebody may say about the context of the case? Are we going to go so far that you cannot represent someone? What about the person who was being accused of the racial slur? What if you had represented them? Would we come here on the floor of the Senate saying: My God, you represented someone who said a terrible thing; therefore, you can’t be a judge? I don’t know about you, but as a lawyer, I have represented some pretty bad people. It was my job. And judges have to apply the law and use their best judgment.

So I hope this man will get an up-or-down vote and that this garbage we are throwing at our nominees will stop.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, could you tell me how much time we have remaining on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-three minutes 45 seconds, including that.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. This is, indeed, an important debate, and I think you can look at it at two different levels.

First, I wish to argue strongly against the confirmation of Leslie Southwick to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. We do not assess judicial nominees in a vacuum. In addition to the particular record of the nominee, there are a number of factors that figure into a Senator’s proper evaluation of a candidate. We may consider, among other things, the history behind the seat to which the candidate has been nominated; the ideological balance within the court to which the nominee aspires; the diversity of that court; the demographics of the population living in that court’s jurisdiction; the legacy of discrimination, injustice, and legal controversy in that jurisdiction. In this case, the context and circumstances of the nomination require us to view it with particular scrutiny. In this case, the court is unbalanced and least diverse in the country. The circuit has deservedly earned a reputation as being among the most conservative in the Nation. It has 15 judges, 11 filled by Republican Presidents. It has a large African-American population. There is only one African-American judge serving on it. The circuit has three seats traditionally reserved for Mississippians. That honor has not been swiped by African Americans, even though Mississippi’s population is more than one-third African American. Of course, the Fifth Circuit services areas that still suffer the scars and effects of decades of deep racial inequality and discrimination.

So you have to put things in context. We have had two other nominees who were extremely unsuitable candidates: Judge Pickering, whom this body rejected, and Michael Wallace, whom many, when you speak to them in Mississippi and in the African-American community there, said an African American might not get a fair trial in Michael Wallace’s court. But they were nominated. The exact same reasoning could have been used for them. Those were the two previous nominees. We have to evaluate Judge Southwick against this backdrop.

When we do so, we cannot have confidence that he is a moderate jurist who will apply the law evenhandedly. Most disturbingly, Judge Southwick’s judicial record provides no comfort that he understands or can wisely adjudicate issues relating to race, discrimination, and equal treatment. In this circuit above all, that should be a criterion. Whether you are from Mississippi or Arizona or South Carolina or New York, we should all care about that.

Let’s go over some of the record. There is the Richmond case. The majority opinion in the Richmond case reflects an astonishingly bad decision. In that case, Judge Southwick joined a 5-to-4 ruling that essentially ratified the bizarre finding of a hearing officer who reinstated a State worker who had insulted a black worker by using the worst racial slur, the “n” word. To join that wrongheaded decision was to ignore history and common sense and common decency, to find a basis for excusing the most deeply offensive racial slur in the language. As the dissenters in Richmond pointed out, and there were four of them, the term “is and always has been offensive. Search high and low, you will not find any non-offensive definition for this term. There are words in English whose history, nature and definition are so inherently offensive their use establishes the intent to offend.”

Of course, the Mississippi Supreme Court, the highest court in Mississippi, unanimously reversed. The Richmond case cannot be dismissed, as some would like, as just one case that Judge Southwick merely joined. He could have joined the very vocal dissent. He could have written a separate concurrence. He did not, nor is there a single word from Judge Southwick every word of the Richmond majority opinion—and the case is a benchmark. It is a predictor and it is all the more important because there is little or nothing in the record to offset the impression it gives about Judge Southwick’s jurisprudence.

Judge Southwick, at his hearing, said some of the hearing officer’s analysis “does not now seem convincing to me,” even though he endorsed it only 9 years ago. This mild attempt at back-tracking at his confirmation hearing does not provide comfort. In fact, it smacks of a nominee trying in some small way to please Senators who will decide his fate.

Beyond this defining case, moreover, Judge Southwick has shown over more than a decade of adjudicating cases that we should be concerned about his legal philosophy in so many areas: consumer rights, workers’ rights, race discrimination in jury selection. He has shown a bias. I am not going to get into those cases, but, again, I would say there is a special onus on us all here.

Most of my colleagues—some on this side of the aisle—have said: Well, he issued thousands of opinions and only made one mistake. First, I am not sure that is true. When you look at his opinions, there are more than that. But let’s even say he made this one mistake. Normally that would be a good argument. We all make mistakes. None of us before God is flawless, is perfect. Of course we are human beings. But certain mistakes are not forgiv-able. They may be forgivable of a person as a man or a woman, but not forgivable when you are elevating someone to the Fifth Circuit.

We have had a poison in America since the inception of this country. This is a great country. I am a patriot. I love this country dearly. It is in my bones. But the poison in this country, the thing that could do us in, is race and racism. Alexis de Tocqueville, the great French philosopher, came here in the 1830s. He made amazing predictions about this country. We were a tiny nation of farmers, not close to the power of Britain or France or Russia, the great European nations. De Tocqueville comes from France and says this country, America—this is in the 1830s—this country is going to become the greatest country in the world. He was right. Then he said one thing could do us in—race, racism and its poison. He was right about that.

When it comes to the area of race and racism, we have to bend over backwards. The African-American community in Mississippi, in the country, is strongly against the Southwick nomination. They know this discrimination, this poison of America, better than anybody else. They know, even in 2007, the little winks and gestures that indicate a whole different subplot. When you comb out using the “n” word, you are doing just that. Unfortunately, Judge Southwick is one who for a good man and I certainly don’t think he is a racist, but his words have to be seen in context. Like it or not, when he is nominated to the Fifth Circuit he is carrying 200-some-odd years of bigotry that has existed in this country, and particularly in this circuit, on his back. That is the issue here. This is not just any mistake; this is not just any flaw. This comes in a whole subtext.

Then I heard yesterday that Judge Southwick has not met with the one African Member of the Mississippi delegation, BENNIE THOMPSON. He has not met with me. I believe it was called the Magnolia Bar Society, the African-American bar society in Mississippi. Should not Judge Southwick, after these allegations, have gone out of his way? He called yesterday, after BENNIE THOMPSON, Congressman THOMPSON, presented this to us. Shouldn’t he have been camped out at BENNIE THOMPSON’s door to try to explain what he did? It is the same kind of attitude. It is the same kind of subtext that, frankly, unless you are African American, you don’t see.

JOHN McCAIN is right. Elections have consequences. I do not expect our President to nominate to the Fifth Circuit somebody who has my views or the views of other Members of this side. Election does have consequences. But on the issue of the race, the poison of America, where the Fifth Circuit has been a cauldron, I do expect the President to nominate someone who is above reproach. Because we are not just judging one case, we are judging the way that a man and I certainly don’t think he is a racist, but his words have to be seen in context. Like it or not, when he is that standard. I urge my colleagues, every one of them on both sides of the aisle, to look into their hearts when they cast this important vote.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that several letters regarding this Nomination be placed in the Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

MAY 8, 2007.

Re Leslie Southwick

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Ranking Minority, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY AND SENATOR SPECTER: We are writing on behalf of People for the American Way and the Human Rights Campaign and our combined grassroots forces of more than 1,700,000 members and other supporters nationwide to express our serious concerns regarding the nomination of Mississippi lawyer and former state court judge Leslie Southwick to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. As you know, Judge Southwick has been nominated by President Bush to fill a seat on the Fifth Circuit that the President has previously attempted to fill with Charles Pickering and then Alito and then Souter. These nominations were met with substantial opposition, in large measure because of their disturbing records on civil rights. Now, with Judge Southwick, President Bush once again appears to have chosen a nominee for this seat who has a problematic record on civil rights, as further discussed below. And once again, in his portrayal of qualified African Americans in a state with a significant African American population that has never had an African American judge on the Fifth Circuit.

At the outset, we are constrained to note that there are significant concerns regarding the insufficient time provided to the Judiciary Committee to consider Judge Southwick’s record in the careful manner required by the Senate’s constitutional responsibilities in the confirmation process, as well as concerns that Judge Southwick’s complete record does not appear to have been provided to the Committee. The confirmation hearing for Judge Southwick was so brief that it left the Committee, providing insufficient preparation time for the consideration of a controversial appellate court nominee. In addition, there has not been sufficient time since Judge Southwick submitted his responses to the Committee’s questionnaire, in late February, for the Committee to review his responses. Indeed, it appears that some of his record has not yet even been provided to the Committee.

Leslie Southwick served as a judge on the Mississippi Court of Appeals from 1995-2006.

The number of cases in which he participated during that time is voluminous, well in excess of 1,000 cases a year. Judge Southwick’s complete record does not appear to have been provided to the Committee. The confirmation hearing for Judge Southwick was so brief that it left the Committee, providing insufficient preparation time for the consideration of a controversial appellate court nominee. In addition, there has not been sufficient time since Judge Southwick submitted his responses to the Committee’s questionnaire, in late February, for the Committee to review his responses. Indeed, it appears that some of his record has not yet even been provided to the Committee.

In Richmond, Judge Southwick joined a 5-4 ruling upholding the reinstatement of a white state social worker, Bonnie Richmond, who was fired for referring to an African American co-worker as “a good ole nigger” at an employment-related conference. Richmond worked for the Mississippi Department of Human Services (DHS), which terminated her employment after other employees raised concerns about her use of the racial slur. The ruling that Southwick joined joined with the Supreme Court of Mississippi. The facts are as follows. After she was fired, Richmond appealed her termination to the State Employee Appeals Board (“EAB”), which ordered her reinstatement. The hearing officer ordered that Richmond’s use of the racial slur “was in effect calling the individual a ‘teachers pet.’” 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 637, at *19. He considered the word “nigger” only “somewhat derogatory,” felt that DHS had “overreacted,” and was concerned that employers might seek relief if they were called “a honkie or a good old boy or Uncle Tom or chubby or fat or old.” Id. at 22-23.

The opinion that Southwick joined upheld the EAB’s reinstatement of Richmond, essentially ratifying the astonishing findings of the EAB and continuing the circuit court’s decision. Moreover, the opinion that Southwick joined accepted without any skepticism Richmond’s testimony that her use of the racial slur was not offensive to the individual [a co-worker] or animosity directed at her co-worker or toward blacks in general, but was, rather, intended to be a shorthand description of her perception of the individual [a co-worker] and [a] DHS supervisor.” Id. at *9-10 (emphasis added).

There was a strong dissent by two judges who were obviously appalled by the hearing officer’s findings and opinion. Unlike the majority, they openly criticized the hearing officer’s findings and held the majority for presenting a “sanitized version of [those] findings.” Id. at *29. According to the dissenters, the hearing officer’s ruling that calling [the co-worker] a ‘good ole nigger’ was equivalent to calling her ‘teacher’s pet’ strains credibility. . . . The word ‘nigger’ is, and has always been, offensive, offensive. . . . you will not find any nonoffensive definition for this term. There are some words, which by their nature and definition are so inherently offensive, that their use establishes the intent to offend.

Id. at *26.

The dissenters would have held that the EAB’s actions were not supported by substantial evidence, and would have upheld the decision by DHS to fire Richmond. Another judge wrote a separate dissent, joined by two other judges, in which he would have remanded the case to the EAB so that some penalty could be imposed on Richmond, or detailed findings made as to why no penalty was appropriate.

DHS appealed the ruling of Southwick’s court to the Mississippi Supreme Court, which unanimously reversed Judge Southwick. The Supreme Court majority ordered that the case be sent back to the EAB to impose a penalty other than termination or reinstatement. In contrast, they find no convincing reason why no penalty should be imposed.

Some of the justices on the court would have gone even further and reinstated the decision by DHS to fire Richmond. But all of the Supreme Court justices rejected the view of the Court of Appeals majority (which included Southwick) that the EAB had not erred in ordering Richmond’s reinstatement. S.B. v. L.W., 793 So. 2d 656 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In this case, Judge Southwick joined a decision by the Mississippi Court of Appeals, upholding—over a strong dissent—a chancellor’s ruling ordering an eight-year-old girl away from her bisexual mother and awarding custody of the child to her father (who had never married her mother). The mother was living at the time with another woman, and in awarding custody to the father, Judge Southwick reversed an administrative hearing officer’s decision based on the mother’s sexual orientation and his obvious concern about having the girl continue to live in what he called “a lesbian household.” Judge Southwick joined the majority opinion, which included Southwick that the EAB had not erred in ordering Richmond’s reinstatement. S.B. v. L.W., 793 So. 2d 656 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

In taking the girl away from her mother (with whom she lived), the chancellor quoted a number of factors that he claimed weighed in favor of the father, but it is clear that he was heavily influenced by the mother’s sexual orientation. For example, the chancellor stated that the factor of “‘[s]tability of the home environment’ weighed in favor of the father, because “he is in a heterosexual environment.” 793 So. 2d at 666. Meanwhile, the chancellor said, “[t]o place the child with [the mother], the child would be reared in a lesbian home, which is not the common home of today. To place a child with [the father], the child would be reared in a home which is considered more common today.” Id.

The mother appealed to the Court of Appeals which, as noted above, upheld the chancellor’s ruling taking her daughter away from her mother, awarding custody to the father. Judge Southwick, joined by the chancellor, held that the chancellor had not erred in taking the mother’s sexual orientation into consideration as what it viewed as one factor in its ruling. In addition to the disturbing substance of the majority’s ruling, its language is also troubling, and refers to what it calls the mother’s “homosexual lifestyle” and her “lesbian lifestyle.”

Notably, Judge Southwick sign on to the majority opinion, but he also made an affirmative decision to join a concurrence by Judge Payne that was gratuitously anti-gay—and was to strike in the majority to do so. The concurrence appears to have been written for the sole purpose of underscoring and defending Mississippi’s hostility toward gay people. The majority concurrence calls “the practice of homosexuality” (id. at 662), in response to the position of the dissenters (see below) that the chancellor had erred. (The word gay is not used, but the concurrence repeatedly uses “homosexuals” and “homosexual persons.”)

The concurrence begins by stating that the Mississippi legislature has “made clear its public policy position relating to particular rights of homosexuals in domestic relations setting.” Id. at 662. It then proceeds to note that Mississippi law prohibits same-sex adoption and same-sex marriage, although this law had nothing to do with the case, since the mother was the birth mother—and also notes that state law makes “‘the practice of homosexuality’—which it says includes ‘homosexual acts’—a ten-year felony. Id. at 664. The concurrence takes issue with the troubling states’ rights turn, claiming that “[u]nder the principles of Federalism, each state is permitted to set forth its own public policy guidelines through legislative enactments and through judicial renderings. Our State has spoken on its position regarding rights of homosexuals in domestic situations. We cannot accommodate the separate concurrence that Southwick chose to join, federalism gives Mississippi the right to treat gay people as second-class citizens and criminals. The views expressed in this concurrence strongly suggest that Judge Southwick is hostile to the notion that gay men and lesbians are entitled to equal treatment under the law.

Two judges dissented, and in particular noted that there had been no finding that there was any conduct harmful to the child, and that the ten-year trend to reject the United States of America to reject legal rules that deny homosexual parents the fundamental constitutional right to parent a child, id. at 664.

As more than 200 law professors wrote to the Senate Judiciary Committee in July 2001, no federal judicial nominee is presumptively entitled to confirmation. Because federal judicial appointments are for life and significantly affect the rights of all Americans, it is because of the Senate’s co-equal role with the President in the confirmation process, nominees must demonstrate that they meet the appropriate criteria. These include a record of exemplary resolve in the law, but also a “commitment to protecting the rights of ordinary Americans,” and a “record of commitment to the progress made on civil rights, women’s rights, and individual liberties.”

The burden is on Judge Southwick to demonstrate that he satisfies these important criteria for confirmation. In addition to addressing the serious concerns raised by the matters discussed herein and those that have been raised by others, Judge Southwick must demonstrate that his full record is available, and the Committee must have a reasonable opportunity to examine it. Because the Supreme Court hears so few cases, the Courts of Appeals heard a much greater share of legal issues, in most cases and for most Americans. It is therefore imperative that the Committee not engage in a rush to judgment over anyone seeking a lifetime seat on a federal appellate court, and that it insist upon being provided with the nominee’s complete legal record.

It is a matter of regret that the Committee chose to scrutinize Judge Southwick’s full record and his jurisprudential views and legal philosophy, particularly with respect to matters critical to civil and criminal rights. Until the Committee has the opportunity to do that, and unless the significant questions raised to date by Judge Southwick’s record are resolved, the Senate should not proceed with consideration of Judge Southwick’s nomination.

Sincerely,

GERALD B. JOSEPHSON
President, Human Rights Campaign.
that the hearing officer was not acting arbitrarily and capriciously when he (the hearing officer) concluded that the use of the word “nigger” was similar to the terms “good Tom” or “chocolate dumpling” or “cretin” or “salt or slim.” Judge Southwick responded by saying that “[i]t was the EAB’s[’ Employee Appeals Board] decision, though, not that of the hearing officer, that was subject to our analysis . . . .” But that statement is misleading. The Richmond majority opinion, which Judge Southwick joined, states: “The hearing officer’s decision,28 necessarily adopted by the full board, address two separate aspects of the matter under consideration, and the majority opinion adds: “In order to reverse the EAB, we must determine that there was not substantial evidence in the record to support the finding of the hearing officer ratified by the full board.” Id. at 7. As explained by the dissent of Judge King (a distinguished African-American from Mississippi who is now Chief Judge of the Mississippi Court of Appeals having been appointed as Chief by the Chief Justice of the Mississippi Supreme Court and who would make an excellent federal appellate judge) “Because the EAB made no findings of its own, we can only conclude that it incorporated by reference and adopted the findings and the hearing officer’s decision.” Id. at 19. As Judge King later said: “The majority opinion is a scholarly, but sanitized version of the hearing officer’s findings and is subject to the unfortunate found in that opinion.” Id. at 28-29.

Moreover, we agree with Judge King, that one can “[r]ead high and low, [and] you will not find any non-offensive definition for [the] term [nigger], and it “is so inherently offensive that it is not altered by the use of modifiers or the term ‘good Tom’.” Id. at 19. Having used the term, which has always been offensive, within a 60% black division of a state agency with more than 50% black employees demonstrated a gross lack of judgment that the agency should have dismissed the employee. As Justice Fred Banks, the African-American member of the Supreme Court at the time, explained in his concurring opinion:

“It is clear that the Department of Human Services” had an interest in terminating Bonnie Richmond’s employment. A case not to be hotly contested. The only question is whether some sort of action regarding the comment made by her, could possibly have subjected the agency to a claim of racially hostile environment, but it is unanswerable and who are marginalized by the political process. The Fifth Circuit needs a moderating influence at this point in history, but it appears this appointment will have the opposite effect.

As far as Mr. Southwick’s“pointed out at the hearing on Judge Southwick’s nomination, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals was once a collection of several heroic judges who steadfastly defended civil rights of African Americans and other dispossessed groups even though many white people in the South were quite hostile to the notion of equal rights of all races. Unfortunately, the present-day Fifth Circuit has often retreated from that legacy by applying a narrow and overly technical interpretation of the constitution and the civil rights laws. Moreover, at a time when the bars of Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas have become racially integrated, and the African American populations in those states have achieved significant racial diversity, the Fifth Circuit presently stands as an almost all-white judicial body in the South. Are we allowing a sad legacy and the Senate Judiciary Committee should do everything it can to end that legacy rather than perpetuate it. This is up to you consideration.

NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT LAWYERS ASSOCIATION

HON. PATRICIA J. LEARY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
Washington, DC.

HON. ARLEN SPECTER,
Ranking Member, Committee on the Judiciary,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS LEARY AND SPECTER: I am writing to you as President of the National Employment Lawyers Association (NELA) to express our strong opposition to the nomination of Hon. Charles G. Pickering to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. After reviewing Mr. Southwick’s background and legal experience, we believe he is not qualified to be appointed to the federal bench.

Mr. Southwick has been nominated to the same Fifth Circuit seat that has been steeped in controversy: President Bush nominated Michael Wallace to the seat in January 2004 and nominated Michael Southwick to the seat in 2006. NELA strongly opposed both of those nominees and takes a similar position on Mr. Southwick’s nomination.

Like Pickering and Wallace, Mr. Southwick has espoused extreme views reflecting a lack of commitment to equality and justice in the workplace. For example, Mr. Southwick joined a troubling 5-4 decision from the Mississippi Court of Appeals that excused the use of a racial slur by a white state employee. In Richmond v. Mississippi Dep’t of Human Services, Bonnie Richmond, an employee of the anti-poverty agency of the Mississippi Department of Human Services (DHS), was terminated when she referred to an African-American co-worker as a “good ole n.” at a meeting of federal health officials. An employee appeal board appealed her termination to the Mississippi Employee Appeals Board (EAB). A hearing was conducted by one member of the EAB who had been designated to act as hearing officer.

Among other things, the hearing officer concurred with the “DHS overreacted, to Richmond’s comments, because the term ‘was not a racial slur, but instead was equivalent to calling [the African American employee] ‘teacher’s pet.’” The hearing officer further stated, “I understand that the term n*r is somewhat derogatory, but the term has not been used in recent years in the conversation that it was used in my youth; and at that point—at that time it was a derogatory remark . . . I think that in this context, I just don’t find it was racial discrimination.”

The majority, which included Mr. Southwick, affirmed the EAB hearing officer’s decision without reservation. They found that, taken in context, the EAB had sufficient ground to terminate Richmond’s employment in part because it “was not motivated out of racial hatred or racial animosity directed toward a particular worker or towards blacks in general.” The dissent, rightly disturbed by the majority’s failure to acknowledge the inherent offensiveness of the epithet, stated that “the hearing officer and the majority opinion seem to suggest that absent evidence of a near race riot, the response of a state agency with more than 50% black employees for virtually any reason, in Dubard v. Biloxi, H.M.A., the court addressed the issue, among others, of whether there was sufficient evidence to show that the defendant failed to breach the plaintiff’s employment contract or that the defendant did not wrongfully discharge the plaintiff. In a dissenting opinion that found evidence of both the case and more on the virtues of the employment-at-will doctrine, Mr. Southwick went to great lengths to justify a legal theorem that has been intense legal, legal, and academic controversy. He wrote: ‘I find that employment at will, for whatever flaws a specific application may have, is not only the law of Mississippi but it provides the best balance of the competing interests in the normal employment situation. It has often been said about democracy, that it does not provide a system of government, but just a better one than everything else that has ever been suggested. An equivalent view might be seen as the justification for employment at will.”

Mr. Southwick casually, and without any supporting citations, equated the doctrine of employment at will with democracy. In fact, it is its polar opposite. That doctrine is often used to justify employers’ decisions to discharge employees who have engaged in union activities or in other conduct protected by law. Employment at will, which provides for wage and overtime, occupational safety and health, family and medical leave, whistleblower protection, and other federal and state statutes. An employer’s devastatating financial and emotional harm to an employee; an individual employee rarely has that same power. Mr. Southwick’s endorsement of that doctrine calls into question his willingness to vigorously enforce federal legislation that imposes restrictions on an employer’s ability to fire employees without a good reason or, for that matter, without any reason.

Based on his demonstrated insensitivity to race and the failure to be able to divorce his views from his judicial obligation to be fair and independent, NELA believes that Mr. Southwick would be in the mold of previous nominees like Charles Pickering and Michael Wallace who had never been friendly to employee rights. As such, NELA is strongly opposed to Mr. Southwick’s nomination. Mr. Southwick has been nominated to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and believes he should not be confirmed by the Senate.

Thank you for your consideration. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact NELA Program Director Marissa Tirona.

Sincerely,

KATHLEEN L. BOGAS, President, National Employment Lawyers Association.
Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Judge Leslie Southwick to serve on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Article II, section 2 of the U.S. Constitution explicitly provides the responsibilities of the executive branch of Government and the Senate with respect to judicial nominations. Article II, section 2 of the Constitution reads, in part, that the President ‘shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the Supreme Court and all other Officers of the United States . . . ‘

Thus, the Constitution provides the President of the United States with the responsibility of nominating individuals to serve on our Federal bench. The Constitution provides the Senate with the responsibility of providing advice to the President on those nominations and with the responsibility of providing or withholding consent on those nominations.

In this respect, article II, section 2 of our Constitution places our Federal judiciary—a co-equal branch of Government—in a unique posture with respect to the other two co-equal branches of our Federal Government. Unlike the executive branch and unlike the Congress, the Constitution places the composition and continuity of our Federal judiciary entirely within the coordinated exercise of responsibilities of the other two branches of Government. Only if the President and the Senate fairly objectively, and in a timely fashion exercise these respective constitutional powers can the judicial branch of Government be composed and maintained so that our courts can function and serve the American people.

For this reason, in my view, a Senator has no higher duty than his or her constitutional responsibilities under article II, section 2—the advice and consent clause.

During the course of my 28 years in the Senate, I have always tried to fairly and objectively review a judicial nominee’s credentials prior to deciding whether I will vote to provide consent on a nomination. I look at a wide range of factors, primarily character, professional career, experience, integrity, and temperament for lifetime service on our courts. While I certainly recognize political considerations, it is my practice to render a decision independent of them.

Having reviewed Judge Southwick’s nomination, in my view, he is eminently qualified to serve on the Federal bench. I note that the American Bar Association, often cited as the ‘gold standard’ of judicial ratings, agrees with me as it has given Judge Southwick its highest rating of ‘well-qualified.’

Judge Southwick’s credentials are well-known but worth repeating. He received his bachelor’s degree, cum laude, from Rice University and then proceeded to law school at the University of Texas. Subsequent to his law school graduation, he served as a law clerk for two jurists: a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit—the court for which he now has been nominated—and for a judge on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Upon completing his clerkships, Mr. Southwick entered private practice with a law firm in Mississippi, starting as an associate but rising to the level of partner 6 years later. After 12 years of private practice, he joined the U.S. Department of Justice and the George H. W. Bush administration, working as Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division.

From 1995 until 2006, Leslie Southwick served as a member of the Mississippi Court of Appeals. During this time, Judge Southwick also served his country in uniform.

From 1992 through 1997, he was a member of the Judge Advocate General’s Corps in the U.S. Army Reserve. In 2003, he served in a line combat unit, the 155th Separate Armor Brigade. In 2004, he took a leave of absence from the bench to serve in Iraq with the 155th Brigade Combat Team of the Mississippi National Guard.

Mr. President, Judge Southwick is obviously very well qualified to serve on the Federal bench. Not only does he meet the requisite academic requirements, he also has real world experience in practice and a dedication to public service.

In my view, he deserves to be confirmed to the Federal bench. I urge my colleagues to support this eminently qualified nominee.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I strongly support the nomination of Judge Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. His confirmation is compelling for two reasons. Judge Southwick should be confirmed because of his character and integrity. Judge Southwick’s merits are obvious. He is a good man and a good judge. Leslie Southwick has long been active in public service. Not only does he obviously very well qualified to serve on the Federal bench. Not only does he meet the requisite academic requirements, he also has real world experience in practice and a dedication to public service.

Our colleagues from Arizona, South Carolina, and Virginia, Senators McCAIN, GRAHAM, and WARNER, have given and given their perspective as veterans about Judge Southwick’s military service. He volunteered for service in Iraq when he was old enough to have children serving in Iraq. He did not have to do that, he offered to do that. It seems to me that what we want men and women on the Federal bench who have this selfless commitment to serving others. Leslie Southwick is also a good judge. What could be more directly relevant to a Federal appeals court nomination than 12 years of State appeals court service? During that time, he participated in more than 7,000 cases and wrote nearly 1,000 opinions.

Earlier this year, the Congressional Black Caucus said that, in deciding whether to confirm Judge Southwick, we should consider how often his majority and concurring opinions were reversed on appeal. I do think that is a legitimate factor to be considered. I would find an unusually high number, that he has been repeatedly rebuked, rebuffed, and reversed, that Mississippi Supreme Court had to routinely put him in his judicial place. I found just the opposite. On Judge Southwick’s majority or concurring opinions were reversed or even criticized by the Mississippi Supreme Court. That is less than 2 percent. I am indeed impressed by that low figure because it shows that Judge Southwick’s work as a judge stands up under scrutiny. If that is an appropriate standard for evaluating his nomination, we should confirm him immediately.

Judge Southwick’s critics suggest that he was altksheeted on the mainstream. That is the phrase liberals invented 20 years ago to attack judicial nominees who they predict will not rule a certain way on certain issues. This is a completely illegitimate standard for evaluating judicial nominees. It is based on winners and losers, as if judges are supposed to decide winners and losers by looking at the parties rather than at the law and the facts. Perhaps my liberal friends could publish a confirmation rate card, telling us how they would be supposed to rule for one party or another in certain categories of cases. But the case against Judge Southwick is even more ridiculous than that. The case against Judge Southwick’s nomination rests on just two of the 7,000 cases in which he participated. It rests on two opinions, just two, that he did not even write. No one has argued that those cases were wrongly decided. No one has argued that the court ignored the law. No one has argued that they made a mistake. No one has argued that Judge Southwick is that, in just two cases with opinions he did not write, the court was legally incorrect instead of being politically correct. The case against Judge Southwick is that, in just two cases, the court did not ignore the law. What kind of crazy, topsy-turvy argument is this, that Judge Southwick should not be confirmed because as a state court judge he stuck to the law? I think that exposing the real argument against him is enough to show that there is no real argument against him at all. I thought we wanted judges on the Federal bench who would rule based on the law, who would be committed to equal justice for every litigant coming before them.

When it comes to evaluating Judge Southwick's record, whom should we believe—partisan and ideological critics here in Washington or lawyers and judges who have worked with Judge Southwick for many years? That is not even a close call. Everyone who actually knows him, everyone who has actually worked with him, says that Judge Leslie Southwick is fair, decent, hard-working, and committed to equal justice under law. You would have to twist and contort his record into something entirely to conclude otherwise.

The American Bar Association also looked at Judge Southwick's fitness for the Federal bench. They evaluated his qualifications and record not once but twice, first when his name was submitted to the U.S. District Court and again this year after his nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals. I must be candid with my colleagues regarding the ABA's two ratings of Judge Southwick. In the interest of full disclosure, I must be honest that the ABA's two ratings of Judge Southwick are not the same and, quite frankly, I think this must be considered when we vote. The ABA's rating for Judge Southwick's current appeals court nomination is higher than their rating for his district court nomination. The ABA says that it looks specifically at a nominee's compassion, freedom from bias, openness-mindedness and commitment to equal justice under law. The ABA's highest "well qualified" rating means Judge Southwick receives the highest marks for these qualities. I thought we wanted judges on the Federal bench who are compassionate, free from bias, open-minded, and committed to equal justice under law. Judge Southwick's critics have offered nothing, absolutely nothing, to rebut this conclusion. Nothing at all.

I think the record of the evidence, and the facts of the case Judge Southwick is a good man and a good judge, and, based on his merits, he should be confirmed.

Judge Southwick should also be confirmed because of the traditions of this body. Traditionally, the Senate has respected the separation of powers when it comes to the President's appointment authority. Under the Constitution, the President has the primary appointment authority. We check that authority, but we may not hijack it. We may not use our role of advice and consent to undermine the President's authority to appoint judges. That is why, as I have argued on this floor many times, it is wrong to use the filibuster to defeat judicial nominees who have majority support, who would be confirmed if only we could vote up or down. That is why I have never voted against cloture on a judicial nomination. That is why I argued against filibusters of President Clinton's most controversial judicial nominees. And believe me, the case against some of those nominees was far greater, far more substantial, by orders of magnitude, than the nonexistent case against Judge Southwick.

Traditionally, the Senate has not rejected judicial nominees based on such thin, trumped-up arguments. We have not rejected nominees who received the ABA's unanimous highest rating. In fact, I remember when this body confirmed judicial nominees of the previous President whom the ABA said were not qualified at all. We have not rejected judicial nominees who received such uniform praise from those who know them well. We have not rejected judicial nominees for refusing to ignore the law.

Traditionally, the Senate has respected the views of home-state Senators. Our colleagues from Mississippi, Senator Cochran, and Senator Wicker, are respected and senior members of this body. They strongly support Judge Southwick, and we should respect their views. Such home-state support was an important factor in moving even the most controversial Clinton judicial nominees to this floor and onto the Federal bench.

So I say to my colleagues that Judge Southwick's merits and our traditions mean that he should be confirmed. Judge Southwick is a good man and a good judge. Our traditions respect the separation of powers, respect the obvious merits of nominees, and respect the views of home-state Senators. I urge my colleagues not to veer from that path, but to support this fine nominee and keep him from slipping further into the political mire.

I urge my colleague to vote for closure and to vote for confirmation.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will vote against the nomination of Judge Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. I believe he should not be confirmed.

The context for this nomination is important, so I want to turn to that first.

During the last 6 years of the Clinton administration, this committee did not report out a single judge to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. And, as we all know, that was not for lack of nominees to consider. President Clinton nominated three well-qualified lawyers to the court of appeals. None of these nominees even received a hearing before this committee. When Chairman LEAHY held a hearing in July 2001 on the nomination of Judge Edith Brown Clement, only a few months after she was nominated, it was the first hearing for a Fifth Circuit nominee since September 1994. Judge Clement was quickly confirmed. We have also confirmed two other Fifth Circuit nominees during this administration, Edward Prado and Priscilla Owen.

So there is a history here. Some may think this is ancient history, but the fact is that nominees to this circuit were treated particularly unfairly during the Clinton administration, and there was a special burden for the current administration to work on nominees for it. To ignore this history would be to simply reward the behavior of the Republicans during the last 6 years of the Clinton administration. And the numbers tell a very clear tale—three judges confirmed for this circuit during the first 6 years of this administration, versus none in the last 6 years of President Clinton's term.

President Bush did not act in a bipartisan way, of course, in the case of the seat for which Judge Southwick has been nominated. First, he nominated Judge Charles Pickering, leading to one of the most contentious floor fights of his first term. Judge Pickering never konnte for the Senate, but in a further slap to this institution, the President put him on the court through a recess appointment. Then, when Judge Pickering retired, the President nominated Michael Wals, whom the ABA judicial nominations screening committee unanimously gave a rating of "not qualified" based on comments from judges and lawyers in his own State concerning his temperament and commitment to equal justice. Mr. Wals reluctantly withdrew his nomination when it became clear he could not be confirmed.

Another important part of the context of this nomination is that except for the DC Circuit, the Fifth Circuit has the largest percentage of residents who are minorities of any circuit—over 40 percent. Thirty-seven percent of the residents of Mississippi are African American. Yet only 1 of the 19 seats on the circuit is currently held by an African American judge. The Fifth Circuit is a court that during the civil rights era issued some of the most significant decisions supporting the rights of African-American citizens to participate as full members of our society. It is a circuit where cases addressing the continuing problems of racism and discrimination in our country will continue to arise.

In this context, as we come to the end of this President's term, I wanted very much to see, if not an African-American nominee, at least a nominee whose commitment to equal rights for all Americans and equal justice under law is unassailable. Judge Southwick is not such a nominee and we have been able to review is not extensive, two decisions he made as a judge raise real red flags.

In the Richmond case, Judge Southwick joined the majority in a split decision holding the decision of two other Circuit judges on the use of the most offensive racial slur in our Nation's history was not adequate grounds for dismissal. That hearing examiner said that the slur was “some-what derogatory, but the term has not been used in recent years in the convers-ation that it was used in my youth, and at that point—at that time it was a derogatory remark. I think that in this context I just don’t find it was rac-ia! discrimination.”

A unanimous Mississippi Supreme Court reversed the decision that Judge Southwick joined. Mr. Chairman, in the year 2007, in a State where 37 per-cent of the residents are African Amer-icans, we need a judge on the Fifth Cir-cuit who recognizes that such a deci-sion had to be overturned.

I am also disturbed by Judge Southwick’s role in the child custody case, S.B. v. L.W., and particularly by his joining a stridently antigay opinion concurring in the decision to take a woman’s child away from her and give custody to the unmarried father of the child. I found Judge Southwick’s explana-tion for his reasoning in joining this opinion, and his assurances that he harbors no bias against gay Americans, unconvincing. I am simply not con-vinced by his assurances that he will give all litigants who come before him a fair hearing.

Mr. President, it gives me no pleas-ure to vote against this nominee. As my colleagues know, I do not start with a predisposition against the Presi-dent’s choices, I have supported well over half of the President’s judicial nominees. But no one is entitled to a lifetime appointment to our powerful Federal courts, and Judge Southwick has not demonstrated that he is the right nominee for this vacancy. I will vote no.

I ask unanimous consent that letters of opposition and concern from the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, the National Partnership for Women and Families, the California State Conference of the National Associ-ation for the Advancement of Colored People, the Congressional Black Caul-cus, and the NAACP be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the mate-rial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.
Re nomination of Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY, Chair, Senate Judiciary Committee, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.
Hon. ARLEN SPECTER, Ranking Member, Senate Judiciary Committee, Hart Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Leahy and Senator Specter:

On behalf of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus (CAPAC), we write to express our strong opposition to the nomi-nation of Judge Leslie Southwick to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

The Southwick nomination fails to address the lack of diversity on Mississippi’s federal branch. As you know, the Fifth Circuit pre-sides over the largest percentage of minority residents (44%) of any circuit. Mississippi has the highest African American population (36%) of any state in the country. Yet, out of the seventeen seats on the Fifth Circuit, only one is held by an African-American. Ad-ditionally, the Fifth Circuit has issued deci-sions important to minority communities such as employment, voting rights and affirmative action. The lack of di-versity of the Fifth Circuit, compounded with Judge Southwick’s flawed record on race, further unacceptability of Southwick’s nomination.

Judge Southwick’s record as a judge on the Mississippi State Court of Appeals clearly demonstrates that he is an objectionable nominee for the Fifth Circuit. In the case of Richmond v. Mississippi Department of Human Services, Judge Southwick joined a 4-3 decision of a white state social worker, Bonnie Rich-mon, who had been fired for calling an Afri-can-American co-worker a “good ole n*e” at a meeting that included top agency execu-tives. The ruling that Southwick joined was unanimously reversed by the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

CAPAC is furtherly disturbed by Judge Southwick’s rulings against consumers and workers in divided torts and employment cases and won 50 out of 180 published decisions, Judge Southwick votes against the injured party and in favor of business interests, such as corporations or insurance companies. With the lifetime judicial position at stake, Southwick’s record has failed to re-flect the values of social justice, fairness and writing a fair opinion and his assurances that he will provide the Judiciary Committee to reject Leslie Southwick’s confirmation to the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL M. HONDA, Chair, CAPAC.
BOBBY SCOTT, Chair, CAPAC—Civil Rights Task Force.

Renomination of Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY, Chair, Senate Judiciary Committee, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.
Hon. ARLEN SPECTER, Ranking Member, Senate Judiciary Committee, Hart Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Senators Leahy and Specter:

We write to urge the Senate to reject Leslie Southwick for a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. As an organization committed to protecting and promoting women’s rights and eradi-cating discrimination in the workplace, the National Partnership for Women & Families is troubled by Judge Southwick’s record and his implications for rights that are vital to ensuring equal opportunity and access to justice. Judge Southwick’s failure to produce significant portions of his record—effectively preventing the Senate from conducting a comprehensive review every federal appellate nomination de-serves and demands—only exacerbates these concerns.

INCOMPLETE RECORD

For the committee to consider fairly any nominee for a lifetime appointment to a seat on the federal court of appeals—the court of last resort in the vast majority of cases—the nominee’s entire record must be fully re-viewed and evaluated. Judge Southwick’s failure to produce unpublished opinions in which he participated and joined during his time on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals makes such review impossible. These gaps in Judge Southwick’s record alone should give the committee pause in moving Judge Southwick’s nomination for-ward.

A SETBACK FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

A review of Judge Southwick’s record calls into question his commitment to pro-moting equal protection of the law and enforce-ment of rights critical to ensuring fair workplaces and access to justice. In Rich mond v. Mississippi Department of Human Serv-ices, Judge Southwick joined a 4-3 decision of a white state social worker, Bonnie Richmon, who had been fired for calling an Afri-can-American co-worker a “good ole n*e” at a meeting that included top agency execu-tives. The ruling that Southwick joined was unanimously reversed by the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

CapAC is furtherly disturbed by Judge Southwick’s rulings against consumers and workers in divided torts and employment cases and won 50 out of 180 published decisions, Judge Southwick votes against the injured party and in favor of business interests, such as corporations or insurance companies. With the lifetime judicial position at stake, Southwick’s record has failed to reflect the values of social justice, fairness and writing a fair opinion and his assurances that he will provide the Judiciary Committee to reject Leslie Southwick’s confirmation to the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL M. HONDA, Chair, CAPAC.
BOBBY SCOTT, Chair, CAPAC—Civil Rights Task Force.

Re nomination of Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY, Chair, Senate Judiciary Committee, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.
Hon. ARLEN SPECTER, Ranking Member, Senate Judiciary Committee, Hart Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Senators Leahy and Specter:

We write to urge the Senate to reject Leslie Southwick for a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. As an organization committed to protecting and promoting women’s rights and eradi-cating discrimination in the workplace, the National Partnership for Women & Families is troubled by Judge Southwick’s record and his implications for rights that are vital to ensuring equal opportunity and access to justice. Judge Southwick’s failure to produce significant portions of his record—effectively preventing the Senate from conducting a comprehensive review every federal appellate nomination de-serves and demands—only exacerbates these concerns.

INCOMPLETE RECORD

For the committee to consider fairly any nominee for a lifetime appointment to a seat on the federal court of appeals—the court of last resort in the vast majority of cases—the nominee’s entire record must be fully re-viewed and evaluated. Judge Southwick’s failure to produce unpublished opinions in which he participated and joined during his time on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals makes such review impossible. These gaps in Judge Southwick’s record alone should give the committee pause in moving Judge Southwick’s nomination for-ward.

A SETBACK FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

A review of Judge Southwick’s record calls into question his commitment to pro-moting equal protection of the law and enforce-ment of rights critical to ensuring fair workplaces and access to justice. In Rich mond v. Mississippi Department of Human Serv-ices, Judge Southwick joined a 4-3 decision of a white state social worker, Bonnie Rich mon, who had been fired for calling an Afri-can-American co-worker a “good ole n*e” at a meeting that included top agency execu-tives. The ruling that Southwick joined was unanimously reversed by the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

CapAC is furtherly disturbed by Judge Southwick’s rulings against consumers and workers in divided torts and employment cases and won 50 out of 180 published decisions, Judge Southwick votes against the injured party and in favor of business interests, such as corporations or insurance companies. With the lifetime judicial position at stake, Southwick’s record has failed to reflect the values of social justice, fairness and writing a fair opinion and his assurances that he will provide the Judiciary Committee to reject Leslie Southwick’s confirmation to the Fifth Cir-cuit.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL M. HONDA, Chair, CAPAC.

the circuit with the largest minority population—are free of discrimination.

Judge Southwick displayed similar insensitivity to the rights of minorities in S.B. v. L.W., 793 So. 2d 656 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001), a case in which the Mississippi Court of Appeals granted custody of a child to the child’s father based on a number of factors, including the mother’s sexual orientation. Not content simply to review the lower court’s application of the custody standard and explain why the application was or was not correct, Justice Southwick joined a separate opinion to emphasize the immorality of the mother’s “choice” to engage in a “homosexual lifestyle.” His decision to join an opinion that injected personal views and divisive rhetoric into the legal analysis raises concerns about whether he will apply the law without prejudice to all who may come before him as a judge on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

HURDLES FOR INJURED PARTIES

Judge Southwick’s ability to apply the law fairly is also called into question by his lopsided record favoring business interests over individuals and his tendency to deny plaintiffs their right to have their cases decided by a jury of their peers. According to published reports, Judge Southwick voted, in whole or in part, against the injured party and in favor of the defendant, in 180 out of 180 non-unanimous published decisions involving state employment and tort law. In a troubling number of cases, Judge Southwick voted to prevent an injured party’s case from being heard by a jury based on cramped legal interpretations that erect unreasonable barriers to pursuing one’s day in court. See, e.g., Cannon v. Mid-South X-Ray Co., 738 So. 2d 274 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

CURTAILING CIVIL RIGHTS PROTECTIONS

Finally, Judge Southwick’s view of the “federalism revival” raises doubts about his commitment to civil rights laws that have been essential to advancing equal employment opportunities. In a 2003 article, Judge Southwick indicated that he approved of the Supreme Court’s limitations on Congress’s ability to pass civil rights legislation under its commerce power, and on Congress’s power to abrogate state immunity and allow state employees to sue to vindicate their rights under federal law. See Judge Leslie Southwick, Separation of Powers at the State Level: Interpretations and Challenges in Mississippi, 72 Miss. L. J. 927 (2003). This narrow view of Congress’s authority to combat and remedy domestic violence and workplace discrimination raises significant concerns for those who have looked to Congress to ensure that crucial rights and protections extend to every American.

CONCLUSION

It is critical to ensure that judges elevated to the federal appellate bench inspire confidence that the law is being administered fairly, consistently, and without bias. Because the standards outlined above, we urge the committee to reject Judge Southwick’s nomination.

Sincerely,

prepared to do so. Given existing housing patterns and common sense, there are generally, common racial characteristics shared by persons, who reside in so-called high crime areas, without reservation, a strike which on its face, appears geared to a racially identifiable group, has the potential for great mischief." (King, J., concurring in dissent).

It is clear from this record that Mr. Southwick is not properly suited to serve on the Fifth Circuit. In 160 out of 180 published decisions on state employment law or torts in which one judge dissented, Southwick voted in favor of the corporate defendant, in whole or in part. Mr. Southwick's intolerant racial views and his fixed right-wing worldview make support for him a vote against everything the CBC and African-Americans are striving for in 2007. Your continued support of Mr. Southwick would make a bad Fifth Circuit problem worse. We trust that your reconsideration of this nomination will result in a fairer Fifth Circuit that is truly representative of the diverse populations served by the Circuit.

WASHINGTON BUREAU, NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE

Washington, DC, August 1, 2007.

Re NAACP reiteration of strong opposition to the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the 5th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

MEMBERS,
U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS; On behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), our nation's oldest, largest and most widely-recognized grassroots civil rights organization, I am writing to reiterate our organization's strong opposition to the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. Our opposition is based on a careful and thorough review of Judge Southwick's record, and our resulting dismay with his dismal record on civil rights. Our opposition to his nomination is not to the circuit on which he will serve, but the circuit which covers Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas, the highest concentration of both African American and Hispanic minorities in our country.

Judge Southwick's record as a judge on the Mississippi State Court of Appeals clearly demonstrates that he is an inappropriate nominee for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. In the case of Richardson v. Mississippi Department of Human Services, 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 637 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998), which concerned a racial discrimination issue, Southwick joined a 5-4 ruling upholding the reinstatement of a white state social worker, Bonnie Richmond, who had been fired for reinstatement of a white state social worker, Bonnie Richmond, who had been fired for her use of the racial slur. The ruling Judge Southwick joined was unanimously reversed and reinstatement was upheld on appeal.

Finally, given Mississippi's long history of racial apartheid, disenfranchisement, interposition, suffusive resistance, it is unfathomable that President Bush has in fact nominated a single African American to serve on the Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit on one of the district courts during his tenure in office. This is especially mind-boggling, given that 37% of Mississippi's population is African American, the highest percentage of African Americans in the country.

The ruling Judge Southwick joined is anathema to the NAACP's strong opposition to the nomination based on his clear lack of qualifications and merit. This will provide President Bush with the opportunity to nominate a well-qualified racial or ethnic minority individual with the appropriate judicial temperament and sense of justice as intended by our Constitution.

Thank you in advance for your attention to the NAACP's strong opposition to the nomination and our continuing to treat this matter with the urgency that the Senate Judiciary Committee must give it, and the Senate as a whole must approach.

Sincerely,

HILARY O. SHEPPARD,
Director,

NAACP.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I will oppose the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the Fifth Circuit of Appeals because I have serious questions about his ability to be an impartial jurist.

I am concerned that Judge Southwick's views of racial discrimination in jury selection reflect a lack of genuine sensitivity that concerns me. In Richmond v. Mississippi Department of Human Services — a case which upheld a criminal conviction where the prosecution used peremptory challenges to strike African-American jurors — Judge Southwick joined the majority, lost the challenge to the NAACP's objection, but was, rather, intended to be a short-hand description of her perception of the relationship existing between the [co-worker] and [the DHS supervisor].

In dissent, two judges criticized the ruling Judge Southwick joined a majority that held that the use of the racial slur was “not motivated out of racial hatred or animosity directed at her co-worker or toward blacks in general, but was, rather, intended to be a short-hand description of her perception of the relationship existing between the [co-worker] and [the DHS supervisor].” If, in fact, such use establishes the intent to offend.

The ruling Judge Southwick joined was unanimously reversed and remanded on appeal by the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Further, in Brock v. Mississippi, a case which upheld a criminal conviction where the prosecution used a peremptory challenge against an African-American juror purportedly because he lived in a high crime area, the dissenting judge criticized Judge Southwick's opinion for accepting the action of the prosecutor, which, “on its face appears geared toward a racially identifiable group.”

Some have tried to make the point that Judge Southwick did not write most of these opinions; rather that he merely signed on to them. If Judge Southwick did not agree with those opinions, he could have dissented. If he agreed with the holding but not the reasoning, he could have written a separate concurrence. To the contrary, he simply voted with the majority and supported their opinions.
Because I do not believe that his record reflects the objectivity and even-handedness necessary to serve in a lifetime appointment on the Federal bench, I cannot vote to confirm his nomination.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, today the Senate has a golden opportunity to take a big stride forward in working its way out of this judicial nomination mess we are in. At some point we as a body are going to have to take partisanship out of this judicial nomination process if we hope to continue to attract great candidates to the Federal bench. We have seen other great nominees withdraw because of the stress and difficulty of this process. Fortunately, Judge Southwick has stood firm so that the Senate has a chance to confirm him.

Leslie Southwick is an Iraq veteran and has already demonstrated that he is a great jurist. From the testimonials of people in Mississippi, regardless of political or cultural differences, he is fairminded, not biased, and is an outstanding pick for this seat.

It is incredible to observe the vitriolic opposition to this nomination that is built wholly on two written opinions in question. I believe Judge Southwick did not even write. How can the Senate seriously say that those two opinions, in a vacuum, show that Judge Southwick is racist or insensitive to minority litigants? The support from African-Americans in Mississippi exposes that the opposition is politically motivated.

The Senate and the Judiciary Committee must step away from the politically based litmus tests that currently control the nominations process. We must also stop focusing purely on the results of cases, without any context to the facts and law at issue, as the sole indicator of a nominee’s judicial philosophy.

I ask my colleagues to seriously reconsider our current course and let Judge Southwick have a fair up-or-down vote.

When we are reviewing judicial nominees, we should ask ourselves three questions:

First, does the nominee have the basic qualifications to be a good judge?

In this case, the answer is yes. The American Bar Association twice rated Judge Southwick “well qualified,” with the ABA actually increasing their rating to “impeccably well qualified” when he was nominated to the Fifth Circuit vacancy.

Second, does the nominee possess the appropriate judicial temperament so that every litigant will be treated fairly when they come before this nominee?

The answer again is yes. If you read the many letters from lawyers and judges in the Mississippi legal community, they clearly believe litigants are treated fairly and impartially before Judge Southwick.

Third, does the nominee respect the proper constitutional role of a judge to not create law from the bench?

Again the answer is yes. The record clearly demonstrates that Judge Southwick is and will be a restrained jurist.

As Congress we should be thrilled when a judge shows that he will be restrained in his rulings from the bench. We wrote the Constitution and we should be grateful that a judge knows he is not a Member of Congress and will defer to us in the task of writing law.

Again, I ask my colleagues to move beyond petty partisanship with quality nominations. Judge Southwick, and let’s give him a vote.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There remain 27 minutes, including leadership time.

Mr. SPECTER. Is that 27 minutes on the Republican side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Correct.

Mr. SPECTER. How much on the Democratic side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

Might I inquire of the senior Senator from Mississippi how much time he would like?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I would be happy to speak for up to 10 minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Mississippi.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi is recognized.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, it is very difficult to listen to the criticism of those who have not known Leslie Southwick in the context and with the experiences of those, obviously, who have worked with him, observed him in close range as a fellow lawyer, seen him take positions of public support for candidates who were running for office in Mississippi, being active in our Republican Party in Mississippi; being admired widely by all who have come to know him, practicing law with him, observing him as a lecturer at the Mississippi College School of Law, observing him serving voluntarily as an officer in the Mississippi National Guard, the U.S. Army Reserves, being deployed to Iraq, volunteering for duty to serve as a judge advocate, and accompanying Mississippi soldiers who were deployed to that region in time of war.

He is way beyond the age of most of those who were engaged in that operation and in that responsibility to protect the security interests of our country.

It is so inconsistent—all of that—to those of us who know this nominee compared with the harsh, shrill pronouncements being made on this floor of the U.S. Senate by leaders of the opposition to this nomination. I am not going to criticize their right to disagree with those of us who support Judge Southwick, but I do want to point out that I hope Senators will look at the record that has been accumulated in the Senate as a result of statements made by Senator LOTT, me, and others who have known Judge Southwick and others who are the most respectable and trustworthy people in our State and Nation who have a totally different view of him as a person and of his record as an appellate judge, as a lawyer, and as a professor of law.

I hope Senators will take a look at who is saying what and base a judgment on this nomination on the things that have been said. We have been shown information that has been made available to the Senate from those who have spent time with Judge Southwick, who know him, or whether that will be outweighed by the harsh and shrill blanishments and criticisms and hyperbole and exaggerations and inaccuracies in the description of this person as a lawyer, as an individual, as a citizen who is here being subjected to totally unfounded criticism.

I hope those words aren’t too harsh. I believe they are just as true and accurate as can be. And it would be a disgrace on this body to block the confirmation, to vote against invoking cloture which, in effect, would kill the nomination. We are on whether to invoke cloture. It will take 60 votes to shut off debate so we can get to a vote on the confirmation.

I have spoken on the floor on two or three occasions on this subject. Back in June, I think, the first time. I have been reading the RECORD and looking at what I said July 19, 2007. I included after my remarks letters that I had received and that the committee had received from lawyers, judges, and acquaintances of Leslie Southwick over the past 30 years of his life. I am not going to burden the RECORD by putting all those letters in or reading them or reading excerpts from them, but these are some of the finest people, and some of them are liberal Democrats. Some of them are active today as elected officials in our State. Others are just fellow lawyers, people who have worked with him closely, a State supreme court justice. Former Gov. William Winter is an example.

This morning, I found on my desk in my office when I came to work a letter that had been faxed to me, I guess, this morning. At 9:01 a.m. It was received in my office. It is from the Secretary of State of Mississippi, Eric Clark. And because this is a new letter, I think I will read it. It is actually addressed to me and Senator LOTT:

Dear Senator Cochran and Senator LOTT:

I am at home last night and listen to C-SPAN to the debate on Judge Leslie Southwick, and I feel compelled to write you this letter.

As the senior Democratic elected official in Mississippi, I have been elected to office eight times as a Democrat. I am retiring from politics in January, so I have no ax to grind by commenting on. During my entire career in public service, I have aggressively promoted the inclusion of all Mississippians, and particularly African-Americans, in the decision-making table in Mississippi. I take a back seat to no one in promoting inclusion in our state.
It has been my pleasure to know Leslie Southwick for more than twenty years. If I had to name one person who is kind, fair, smart, thoughtful, and open-minded, it would be Leslie Southwick. For any Senators who have been told or who have concluded otherwise, that is wrong—as wrong as it can be.

We in Mississippi are quite accustomed to being the objects of negative stereotyping. Of course, it is much easier to believe a stereotype about someone than to make the effort to get to know that person. It is perfectly clear to me that this is what is happening to Judge Southwick.

It seems to me that what is being decided in this nomination is whether Leslie Southwick would be a good and fair judge—we could not have a better or fairer one. What is being decided, I think, is whether the United States Senate considers judicial nominees based on truth and merit, or based on politics and partisanship.

Let me make my point as plainly as I can: Leslie Southwick is the polar opposite of an ignorant and bigoted judge—the polar opposite of that stereotype. I hope that the Senate passes the test of recognizing the truth and acting accordingly.

Thank you. Sincerely, Eric Clark, Secretary of State of Mississippi.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield the floor.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, how much time remains on the Republican side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 16½ minutes remaining, including the leader's time.

Mr. SPECTER. I see the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, Mr. LOTT, on the Senate floor. How much time would Senator LOTT like?

Mr. LOTT. Just a couple minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. Senator LOTT can have as much time as he wants. It sounds as if he wants 5 minutes. I yield to Senator LOTT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I don't want to repeat everything that has been said. I was going to read this letter from our secretary of state, Eric Clark. My senior colleague just read it, and I am glad he did. I appreciate how he feels.

I feel hurt in some ways by what has happened in this particular case. This is a good and honorable man, qualified by education, by experience, by temperament. He deserves to have an up-or-down vote. We should vote for cloture, and then we should have an up-or-down vote on this judge for a position that is a judicial emergency for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which is a very broad-based circuit court of appeals. He will be a fine addition to that court.

I want to end on a positive note because Judge Southwick has waited a long time, has been open and available to anybody who was willing to meet with him, not just the Judiciary Committee members but others, including House Republicans.

We are here because Senator DIANN FEINSTEIN showed unbelievable courage by voting to report this nominee out of the Judiciary Committee after very careful analysis, looking at the cases, meeting with the nominee. I will always be indebted to her and appreciative of what she did.

I have to acknowledge that the Judiciary Committee, led by the very aggressive support of Senator SPECTER, has done its job, and has done it well, and we have reached a point of final determination.

I also thank the majority leader and the Republican leader for working together. I hope this happens. I know from experience, majority leaders do not have to allow votes such as this to occur, and I suspect the majority leader has been criticized for it.

I do believe that this is a moment in time—I hope it is not fleeting—where we can return to some modicum, some small amount of bipartisanship, non-partisanship, and civility. I think Senator REID, Senator MCCONNELL, Senator FEINSTEIN, and Senator SPECTER have made the right steps to make that possible.

I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture and vote for this nominee. He will be a credit to the court on which he serves. He will exhibit the character and the positions that I believe the people in the Senate will think are appropriate for the rest of his life.

I believe confirmation of this judge will reflect well on the Senate and will pay dividends in many ways not visible at this moment.

I thank Senator SPECTER for yielding this time.

Mr. SPECTER. How much time remains, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 12½ minutes remaining.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we have only the Senators from Mississippi and myself on the floor. For any other Senator who wishes to speak, now would be a good time to come to the floor. I know our leader, Senator MCCONNELL, will be speaking shortly, at 10:40 a.m., but there is still 11 minutes remaining.

I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Florida, Mr. MARTINEZ.

Mr. President, that will take us right up to 10:40 a.m., at which time it is my understanding there is an order for the two leaders to speak. I yield 10 minutes now to Senator MARTINEZ.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Florida is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Pennsylvania has made the point that he saw what it is about calling balls and strikes. It is not about pitching. It is not about catching, not about hitting. It is about calling balls and strikes. That is the role of the judge. That is the role of the judiciary. We must be able to accept a judicial candidate who is otherwise qualified, who has an impeccable record. I used to be called from... time to time by the ABA committee, the American Bar Association, that looks at candidates and they would ask: What kind of judge would he make? Would he have the right judicial temperament? These are the things we want to know. Is he knowing the law? Would he be a fair and impartial judge? Does he have the ethical considerations to be the kind of person who is going to set higher standards for those on the bar, who is going to be the kind of person society will accept when he makes a ruling that sometimes has to come from the court?

It is with great pleasure that I support this nominee. I hope my colleagues will do so as well. It is important we restore a certain normalcy to the confirmation process. I say this fully understanding that in about a year and some months, there could very well be someone of a different party who has a very different philosophy about who should be on the bench than the President of our country. At that time, I will be prepared to live by the standard I have laid out today, which is a standard of qualifications, a standard that puts aside political considerations, a standard that looks at a judicial nominee, as we have done for most of the history of our country. The departure we have had over the last several years is not a healthy one. It is not positive for the judicial system and for the admission of justice. This is a standard I will be prepared to live with, even if someone from a different party than mine is making judicial nominations. I will look to their qualifications, experience, ethical standing. Is this the kind of judge I would have been happy to have my client take matters before.

I would expect a fair and impartial judge to make a learned and reasonable decision based on the facts, the evidence, and the law. That is what judges are about, analyzing facts and law and making a judicial determination of how to rule in a given case. It is not about politics that more belong in a courtroom. It is about politics that more belong in a courtroom.

How much time remains?

PRESIDING OFFICER. There remains 5½ minutes before leadership time.

Mr. MARTINEZ. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, shortly we will have an extremely important vote in terms of our ability to deal with our confirmation process in the future. There has been widespread bipartisan concern that the confirmation process has descended to a point with which most of the Members on both sides of the aisle are uncomfortable. We will have an interesting test shortly as to whether the Senate can use cloture not to defeat a judge but to move a nomination forward. That is what I will be watching for time past.

We have had controversial judicial nominations from time to time over the years, controversial with a few but not all of the Senate. The way cloture was used in those situations was to adjourn the Senate to stop it. I am reminded when Senator Lott was the majority leader, there were a couple of controversial nominations from California. His view was they were entitled to an up-or-down vote. We invoked cloture on the nomination. I remember voting for cloture because I believed judges were entitled to an up-or-down vote and then not supporting the judge on final passage.

We have before us the nomination of Leslie Southwick. He wanted to serve his country in the Armed Forces. At 42, he was too old to do so. But service to others is a duty Leslie Southwick has always taken very seriously, whether in the military or on the State bench or with Habitat for Humanity or in doing charity work for inner-city communities. So in 1992, 42-year-old Leslie Southwick sought an age waiver to join the U.S. Army Reserves. The country had the good sense and the good fortune to grant this request.

Leslie Southwick continued to serve in the Armed Forces after he was elected to the State court of appeals in 1994. He conscientiously performed his military and judicial duties, even using his vacation time from the court to satisfy the required service period in the Mississippi National Guard.

In 2003, LTC Southwick volunteered for a line combat unit over a safer one “because of a commitment to service to country above self-interest.” He was subsequently promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel. His commanding officer, MG Harold A. Cross, notes that his decision “was a courageous move; as it was widely known at the time that the 155th was nearly certain to mobilize for military duty in the near future.” Colleagues such as attorney Brian Montague were not surprised.

“Despite the love of wife and children,” Leslie Southwick volunteered for a line combat unit over a safer one “because of a commitment to service to country above self-interest.”

In August of 2004, Leslie Southwick’s unit mobilized in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. His commanding officer states he distinguished himself at forward bases near Najaf. Another officer, LTC Norman Gene Hortman, Jr., described Leslie Southwick’s service in Iraq as follows:

Service in a combat zone is stressful and challenging, often times bringing out the best or the worst in a person. Leslie Southwick endured mortar and rocket attacks, travel through areas plagued with IEDs, extreme in temperature, harsh living conditions and dealt with the stress of an Iraq that shouldered a heavy load of regular JAG Officer duties which he performed excellently. He also took on the task of handling the claims of numerous Iraqi civilians who had been injured or had property losses due to accidents involving the U.S. military.

Lieutenant Colonel Hortman concludes that Leslie Southwick “has the right stuff”—the right stuff—for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals: “profound intelligence, good judgment, broad experience, and an unblemished reputation.” He adds:

I know him and can say these things without reservation. Anyone who says otherwise simply does not know him.

Stuart Taylor writes in the National Journal that Leslie Southwick “wears a distinctive badge of courage—service to his country,” and that he “is a professionally well-qualified and personably admirable” nominee to the Fifth Circuit.

Leslie Southwick does not seek thanks or notoriety or charity for his military and other civic service. He asks to be judged fairly—to be judged on the facts, to be judged on his record. It is the same standard he has applied to others as a judge, a military officer, and a teacher. It is a standard for which he is well known and admired. By that standard, he is superbly fit to continue serving his country, this time on the Fifth Circuit. Senators Cochran and Lott, his home State Senators, know this. They are strongly behind him. As everyone knows, his peers on the State bar know this. They honored him. As everyone knows, his peers on the State bar know this. They are strongly behind him. As everyone knows, his peers on the State bar know this. They honored him. As everyone knows, his peers on the State bar know this. They are strongly behind him. As everyone knows, his peers on the State bar know this. They honored him.

The American Bar Association knows this. It has twice given him its highest rating: “well-qualified.” In doing so, the ABA found him to be exemplary in the areas of “compassion,” “open-mindedness,” “freedom from bias and commitment to equal justice under law.”

Democrats on the Judiciary Committee knew this too. Last fall all of them—every single one—looked at his qualifications and approved him for a lifetime position to the district court. Congress adjourned before he could be confirmed, and Judge Southwick was re-nominated to fill a judicial emergency on the Fifth Circuit. Two things then occurred. First, the ABA increased his rating—increased his rating—from “well-qualified” to “unanimously well-qualified.” In other words, not a single person on the ABA committee found him anything other than the most qualified. Second, in August, the committee favorably reported his nomination to the floor with bipartisan support.
Unfortunately, some of our colleagues on the other side who had supported his nomination to the Federal bench last fall seem to have changed their mind. Since there is no material change in Judge Southwick’s credentials either than the ABA actually giving him higher ratings for the circuit bench than they gave him for the district bench, the sudden change is indeed puzzling.

Critics now point to two cases out of 7,000, neither of which Judge Southwick participated in, where the committee unanimously approved him last fall. One of our colleagues even asserts that because these two cases create a perception among some outside groups about potential unfairness, this “perceived fairness standard should determine our vote on Judge Southwick.

That is a standard I would say I would hate to have applied to nominations by a Democratic President. And remember, we are standards here that will apply not only to this nomination but to other nominations in the future.

The notion that mere perception, not reality, should determine whether someone is confirmed is troubling, to say the least. We expect the judges we confirm to rule based on the facts. We should not judge their fitness for office based on perception rather than the facts. In the case of Judge Southwick, the sudden “perception” about his fairness is driven by those who do not even know him, and it is simply disproven by his long record and by those who know him very well.

But more broadly, if we start opposing well-qualified nominees because outside groups have manufactured an unfair perception of them, then we will have abandoned the standard that will affect us all, as I indicated a minute ago, and for the worse—regardless of who is in the White House and which home State Senators support a nomination. Is the standard going to be any different whenever an attorney or academic by some outside group? I think that is a standard that would be very dangerous, no matter who is in the White House.

I urge my colleagues not to undo the good work and goodwill that brought us back from the precipice we had almost descended into a few years ago on judicial confirmations. I urge them to think hard about the ramifications of their vote for the future, and to vote for cloture on the Southwick nomination.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that letters of opposition and concern from numerous organizations regarding the nomination now before the Senate be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY, Chairman, U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY: The National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA) is strongly opposed to the nomination of Leslie Southwick to the Fifth Circuit. NFHA is dedicated to ending housing discrimination and ensuring equal housing opportunity for all Americans. When the committee unanimously approved him last fall, we were deeply concerned that based on his record, Judge Southwick does not share these ideals, and we question his ability to be a fair and impartial decision-maker.

As these cases demonstrate, our federal courts acknowledge that harmful racial slurs like “nigger” are powerful tools in the denial of fair housing. We are strongly concerned that based on his record, Judge Southwick does not share these ideals, and we question his ability to be a fair and impartial decision-maker.

The use of a procedural device by Judge Southwick to deny an injured worker her day in court is chillingly similar to the rule announced by Justice Alito in Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 550 U.S. 618 (2007). In that case, Lilly Ledbetter’s pay disparity claim was not “easy to identify” because the impact of that discrimination, like Ms. Cannon’s, was not clear for a time and then it reached the point that it was clear that discrimination, or work place chemicals, was the cause, an action was filed. In upholding the district court’s decision to dismiss Judge Ledbetter’s case, Justice Alito relied upon same statute of limitations procedural device employed by Judge Southwick in denying Ms. Cannon her day in court.

In another dissent, Judge Southwick offers a gratuitous insight into his judicial philosophy on the subject of employment at will. The employment at will doctrine, which is premised on the illusion that employers and individual workers have equal power in the employment relationship, has been consistently criticized and limited by legislative and judicial action over the last hundred years. However, in Dubard v. Biloxi H.M.A., 1999 Miss. App. Lexis 468 (1999), rehearing 778 So. 2d 113, 114 (Miss. 2000), Judge Southwick opines that “employment at will...provides the best balance of the competing interests in the normal employment situation.” It has often been said about democracy, that it does not provide a perfect system of government for one thing that has ever been suggested. An equivalent view might be seen as the justification for employment at will.” Judge Southwick’s radical statement of judicial philosophy calls into question the legitimacy of most federal employment laws enacted in the twentieth century, from the Family and Medical Leave Act, implying that they are incongruent with the employment at will doctrine. He should not be given a lifetime appointment to enforce laws that he clearly disdains.

federal bench is at stake. To allow this already-questionable nomination to move forward while substantial gaps in the record exist would be highly unfortunate and unwarranted.

No judicial nominee enjoys a presumption in favor of confirmation; rather, it is the nominee who carries the burden of convincing the Senate that he or she should be confirmed. NWLC respectfully urges the Committee not to vote Judge Southwick out of committee while his record remains incomplete, and while substantive concerns raised by his available record have not been allayed. PARENTS, FAMILIES AND FRIENDS OF LESBIANS AND GAYS,

Senator PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Leahy and Senator Specter: On behalf of more than 200,000 members and supporters of Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (PFLAG), I am writing to urge the Judiciary Committee to reject the nomination of Judge Leslie H. Southwick to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. There is absolutely nothing in Judge Southwick’s troubling record, written responses, or testimony to the committee to indicate that he can fairly judge cases involving gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender families or any other minority parties.

As a member of the Mississippi Court of Appeal, Judge Southwick joined a majority opinion which took custody of an eight-year-old child away from her mother, citing in part the mother’s “lesbian home” and “homosexual lifestyle” as justification for the decision. Additionally, Judge Southwick was the only other judge to join in a concurring opinion by Judge Payne that unnecessarily referenced the state’s probation on gay and lesbian adoption, despite the fact that this was not an adoption case, using the phrase “the practice of homosexuality” throughout. Most disturbingly, the concurrence states that even if the mother’s sexual acts are her choice she must accept the fact that losing her child is a possible consequence of that choice.

We hope that you will agree that all American families, including those living in Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, deserve a federal court system free from bias, regardless of their sexual orientation. Judge Southwick’s record reveals an extraordinary and disturbing lack of respect for the rights and fair treatment of all Americans, regardless of their race, sexual orientation or economic status.

Sincerely,
Nan Aron,
President.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, let me say I have the greatest respect for my senior colleague, the Senator from Mississippi, Mr. Cochran, who is always a gentleman in everything he does. I have worked on the floor with Senator Lott during the time I was assistant leader, and I have the greatest respect for him. I think the way they have handled this and not making it personal in nature simply because I oppose something they want.

I say in response to my friend, the distinguished Republican leader, there is a different standard, as well there should be, for someone who is going to be placed on the trial court than somebody placed on the appellate court. So the reasoning that Senators approved in the committee for a district court judge, the standard for the Senate is, with rare exception, they are approved—so the argument that we have approved somebody for a trial court so they should automatically be approved for an appellate court simply is not valid.

Our Constitution outlines the shared responsibility between the Senate and the President of the United States to ensure that the judiciary is staffed with men and women who possess outstanding legal skills, suitable temperament, and high ethical standing.

As a leader, I have worked hard to ensure that the Senate carries out its work with respect to judicial nominees fairly and promptly, and with a lot of time.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE S13299

have a Judiciary Committee that has helped this significantly. Senator Pat Leahy, Senator Arlen Specter—the chairman and ranking member of that committee—have as much collegiality as I have ever seen in a committee since I have been in the Senate. They have been fair, and they have been fast.

This year alone, the Senate has confirmed 32 judicial nominees, including four court of appeals nominees—in addition to the more than 250 others who have been approved during the past 6 years of Republican administration.

In contrast, my Republican colleagues and my Democratic colleagues will clearly recall that during the Clinton administration, the Republican-controlled Senate refused to confirm 7 nominees. Think about that: 70 nominees. Many of them did not even have the courtesy of a hearing. Some of them waited almost 4 years for a hearing. I remember how we were treated. But we have chosen to live by the Golden Rule. We have chosen this is not “get even; time” this is a time to be fair and to be open. The Golden Rule: Treat people as you would want them to treat you. I am happy to say that is how we have—to the best of our ability—lived this.

Judges with impeccable records, such as Ronnie White and Richard Paez, were maligned by Republicans merely for partisan political gain. That is wrong. We do not intend to initiate any of that while we are in charge of the Senate.

But today we face a judicial nomination that has attracted strong opposition. I turned in what is part of this Record a stack of organizations and individuals who simply oppose this nomination for lots of different reasons.

Opposition to the nomination of Judge Leslie Southwick for the Fifth Circuit Court is neither partisan nor political. These facts are present deep within the fundamental American commitment to civil justice and equal rights, which is something we must stand by.

In the past few weeks, our Nation has seen the recurrence of racial issues that we had assumed and hoped were behind us. Yet, the recent events in Jena, LA, and at the U.S. Coast Guard academy—where nooses were hung to intimidate, demean, and belittle people of color—demonstrate that issues of race and intolerance are sorrowfully still present in our society.

For many Americans, for many African Americans, and for the Congressional Black Caucus—of which this body only has one member. When I first came to the House of Representatives, there were about 20 members of the Congressional Black Caucus. Now there are 78. I believe that is the number. That is good. That is good for our country. But these individuals, concerned known to the Federal courts have historically represented the first, last, and often the only form of redress against racism and civil injustice. For that reason, I believe this body has little choice but to consider the nomination of Judge Southwick to the Fifth Circuit Court in the context of race and civil rights.

I heard Senator Schumer here this morning. Not about the demography of the State of Mississippi. That has to be something we take into consideration. President Bush is asking us to confirm Southwick for one of the highest judicial positions in the United States: the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. It is a lifetime appointment. But for a court as important as the Fifth Circuit, Judge Southwick is the wrong choice. His record on the Mississippi State court does not justify a promotion. That is why I rise, once again, as I have many times regarding Judge Southwick, to express my strong opposition to this nomination. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting “no.” As a member of the Mississippi State appellate court, Judge Southwick joined decisions that demonstrate insensitivity to, and disinterest in, the cause of civil rights.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the hour of 11 o’clock time for the vote be extended. I should be finished shortly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I do believe that as a member of the Mississippi State appellate court, Judge Southwick joined decisions that demonstrate insensitivity to, and disinterest in, the cause of civil rights.

For example, in the Richmond case, he voted to uphold the reinstatement with back pay of a White State employee who had used a racial epithet about an African-American coworker. Judge Southwick says the decision was about technical legal issues, but the dissent in the case by his colleague, Judge King, explains what was at stake. It was not a technical legal issue. As I said when I began, it was based on the facts. Judge King wrote, regarding the “N” word—and I quote him: There are some words, which by their nature and definition are so inherently offensive, that their use establishes the intent to offend.

It was clear in this decision that Judge Southwick would have joined what would have been the majority. The majority would have been with Judge King who went on to say what would have been the majority and created his own majority to, in effect, agree that using this “N” word was nothing more than an offhand remark that meant nothing. It took the courageous action of judges on the Fifth Circuit to challenge the Court’s desegregation decisions and destroy the vestiges of the Jim Crow era.

Judge Southwick, from what I have learned about him, is not capable of being that. Yet Judge Southwick’s record gives us absolutely no reason to hope that he will continue this tradition of delivering justice to the aggrieved.

That is why there is no shortage of opposition to this nomination, first and foremost, as I have said, from our colleagues, Members of Congress, the Black Caucus. They cite opposition by the Magnolia Bar, the Mississippi NAACP, and countless other organizations that stand for justice. They have asked us to remember that their constituents are our constituents—some 45 million of them—and they deserve representation on this issue.

The presumption in the Richmond case is his most serious problem, but Judge Southwick has failed in many other areas. He sides continually with plaintiffs in bad cases. He always, with rare exception, joins with corporations and not the workers. He appears to favor defendants.

There is no reason why the President can’t find a nominee with a record fairly representing all people. If we reject Judge Southwick, the President will still have an opportunity to nominate another candidate. Judge Southwick’s record has been fully documented by my colleagues who have spoken before him. His most grievous failure—I repeat—a failure to give full weight to the vile meaning and history of the “N” word—is deeply disturbing. I cannot overlook it.

I urge all my colleagues to join me in voting “no,” so we can find a candidate truly befitting this important lifetime appointment—a candidate who will give the people of the Fifth Circuit the confidence they deserve that their claim to justice will be heard with the respect and equality every American citizen deserves.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time for debate has expired.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan will state his inquiry.

Mr. LEVIN. How many votes are required to invoke cloture and end the debate on the pending nomination under the rules and precedents of the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be three-fifths of the Members duly chosen and sworn, that being 60.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the motion to invoke cloture.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on Executive Calendar No. 20, the nomination of Leslie Southwick, of Mississippi, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Fifth Circuit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the nomination of Leslie Southwick to be United States Circuit Judge for the Fifth Circuit shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 59, nays 38, as follows:

MOTION TO PROCEED

The motion was confirmed. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the motion to recon sider is laid upon the table, and the President is notified of the Senate’s action.

MRS. CLINTON, Mr. President, I opposed the nomination of Leslie Southwick to serve a lifetime appointment on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. His tenure as a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. I urge the President to select judicial nominees who embrace the principle that all are equal under the law.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

DEVELOPMENT, RELIEF, AND EDUCATION FOR ALIEN MINORS ACT OF 2007—MOTION TO PROCEED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will now be 20 minutes of debate equally divided before a cloture vote on a motion to proceed to S. 2206.

The majority leader, Mr. REID, Mr. President, I am going to use my leader time so it does not interfere with the 20 minutes allocated. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID, Mr. President, earlier this year, we had a chance at comprehensive immigration reform. I agree with the President of the United States that we should do comprehensive immigration reform. President Bush and I, I repeat, were in agreement. That effort brought people together from both sides of the aisle, from all parts of the political spectrum. We agreed on our current immigration system works well for no one. That effort brought Democrats and Republicans together in pursuit of a common good.

Many of us then were profoundly disappointed when this issue was stopped, not because of the President, but by Republicans in the Senate and a few Democrats. It was a real disappointment to me. We had spent so much time on the floor trying to move forward on comprehensive immigration reform.

I continue to believe that tough, fair, practical and comprehensive reform is the only way to get control of our broken immigration system and restore the rule of law. I remain committed to enacting comprehensive legislation as soon as we can. But until we can once again look forward to comprehensive immigration reform, we should, at the very least, enact the DREAM Act. We tried to offer this crucial legislation as an amendment to the authorization bill, but we were blocked from doing so by a small number of Republicans.

At that time, I committed to moving the DREAM Act for a vote before November 1st. Today, that is where we are. We now turn to the DREAM Act as stand-alone legislation, and I once again rise to offer my strong support for this legislation. Anyone who believes as I do that education unlocks the opportunity should join me in voting for this legislation.

We should vote for this legislation because the DREAM Act recognizes that children should not be penalized for the actions of their parents. Many of the children this bill addresses came here when they were very young. Many don’t even remember their home countries—in fact, most of them don’t—or speak the language of the country they came from. They are as loyal and devoted to our country as any American. Only children who came to the United States when they were 15 years old or younger and have been in the United States for at least 5 years and are now not yet 30 years old can apply. Those who are eligible must earn a high school diploma, demonstrate good moral character, and pass criminal and security clearances. They must also either go to college or serve in the military for 2 years.

I have met many star students in Nevada who qualify for the DREAM Act. With it, their futures are limitless. Without it, their hope is diminished greatly. What a waste it is to make it more difficult for these children—children of our country—to go to college and get jobs or join the military when they can be making meaningful contributions to their communities and to our country. What good does it do anybody to prevent them from getting the education they need, or to prevent them from serving in the military?

I am very much appreciate the hard work of Senators HATCH and Senator HAGEL to bring this legislation to the floor. They have worked tirelessly to ensure this important bipartisan bill does not go away. We must now invoke cloture and pass this bill. Vote cloture and pass this bill. Vote cloture and pass this bill. So let us take a first step toward sensible immigration policy and move beyond the rhetoric and give these people a chance of fulfilling the American dream.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in today’s New York Times.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, October 24, 2007]

A CHANCE TO DREAM

The Senate has a chance today to pluck a small gem from the ashen immigration debate. A critical procedural vote is scheduled on the Dream Act, a bill to open opportunities for college and military service to the children of undocumented immigrants. Roughly 65,000 children graduate each year from high school into a constrained future, a fate they cannot overreach. The opportunity is not squandering the potential of young people, is part of what America is all about.

This says: If you have lived in the United States for more than 5 consecutive years, even though you came in illegally, and if you entered this country at age 16 or before—and you could have been here for as long as 14 years illegally, because they have the cutoff at age 30—then you will be getting a conditional, lawful permanent residence—a green card—for up to 6 years. What can you do during that 6-year period? During that 6-year period you can actually bring in other members, parents and others, who were brought here illegally in the first place, so they can enjoy that same type of citizenship.

Now, I know I am prejudiced on this issue because I have had the honor of speaking at naturalization ceremonies. When you look at the people who have done it right, done it legally—they have learned the language and the history—this or any other type of an amnesty bill would be a slap in the face to all those who came here legally.

So I would ask the question: When do we learn? We went through this thing before—and you could have been here for as long as 14 years illegally, because they have the cutoff at age 30—then you will be getting a conditional, lawful permanent residence—a green card—for up to 6 years. What can you do during that 6-year period? During that 6-year period you can actually bring in other members, parents and others, who were brought here illegally in the first place, so they can enjoy that same type of citizenship.

The bill is one of the least controversial immigration proposals that have been offered in the last five years. But that doesn’t mean much. Like everything else not directly involving border barricades and punishment, it has been branded as “amnesty,” and has languished.

But this bill is different, starting with its broad, bipartisan support, from its original sponsor, the Utah Republican Orrin Hatch, to its current champion, Richard Durbin, Democrat of Illinois. They have forced Mr. Durbin to pare away at the bill’s inclusiveness. It focuses now on a narrow slice of a worthy group: children who entered the country before age 16, lived here continuously for at least five years and can show good moral character and a high school diploma. They would receive conditional legal status for six years, during which they could work, go to college and serve in the military. If they completed at least two years of college, or if they served in the military, they would be eligible for legalization.

These young people—their numbers are estimated at anywhere from a million to fewer than 100,000—are in many ways fully American, but their immigration status puts a lock on their potential right after high school. They face the prospect of living in the shadows as their parents do, fearing deportation to countries they do not know, yearning to educate themselves in a country that ignores their aspirations.

The Dream Act rejects that unacceptable waste of young talent. The opportunity is there, provided the votes are there in the Senate.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield the floor, and I yield the remainder of my time to Senator DURBIN.
Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, many speeches are made on the floor, many amendments are offered, many bills, and many resolutions. Very few of them tell us what they are about. A handful of people may follow them closely, a handful of people may care. The DREAM Act is a different thing. The DREAM Act is a bill which I thought about and introduced 2 years ago, and it has finally reached this moment of truth where it comes to the floor of the Senate. The reason why this bill will be noticed is that literally thousands of young people across America know that their fate and future will be determined by this vote.

Yesterday, I had a press conference with three of these young people. A Congressman from the State of Colorado sent out a press release arguing that these kids will be arrested in the Capitol. Of course, he didn’t take the time to determine that they are all here now with the understanding of and disclosure to the Department of Homeland Security. But his press release is an indication of how badly this debate is going in America.

To turn on these children and treat them as criminals is an indication of the level of emotion and, in some cases, bigotry and hatred that is involved in this debate. America is better than that. America is a better nation than what we hear from the likes of that Congressman. What crime did these children commit? They committed the crime of obeying their parents; following their parents to this country. Do you think there was a vote in the household about their future? I don’t think so. Mom and dad said: We are leaving. And the kids packed their suitcases and flowed. That is their crime. That is the only crime you can point to. What did they do after they got here? To qualify for 2B visas. Well, how can we, on one side of the argument, say we need more talent and then turn these children away, turn these young people away? Give them a chance. Give them hope. Give them a chance to prove themselves in this country.

This bill puts them through a long process. It will not be easy. Some will not make it. Most will not make it. But those who do will make this a better Nation. Isn’t that what we should be about? Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. President, I think there are millions of Americans all around the country who wish no ill will on these minors whom we are talking about, listening. Because this is a bill which has no enforcement but does have clear amnesty. The American people have no ill will toward these minors we are talking about. But they do have complete confusion regarding what we are doing—not fixing the problem, making it worse. Inadequate enforcement plus a liberal amnesty is a contradiction in terms.

They know that out of innate common sense. We do nothing to stop the magnet that attracts illegal aliens here because we have little or no workplace enforcement, in particular. Yet we continue with amnesty and other programs.

Please vote no, my colleagues, on proceeding to the DREAM Act.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am voting against the motion to proceed to the DREAM Act today. Even though I support the end goal of this legislation; that is, to provide children with an education, I do not think the bill is perfect. I would like to see changes made. The bill didn’t go through the proper channels and was not approved by the Judiciary Committee. Moreover, the majority leader has indicated that he will fill the tree and prevent the minority from offering amendments to the bill. ‘Filling the tree’ by the majority leader is what is called and it freezes me out of offering amendments to improve the DREAM Act. For these reasons, I will oppose proceeding to the bill today.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I strongly support the DREAM Act. This bill would give promising children, who played no part in their parents’ decision to come to this country illegally, the chance to earn legal status through college attendance or military service. Some of my colleagues have suggested that this bill constitutes amnesty. But the term ‘amnesty’ implies that these children did something wrong and are being absolved of the consequences of their actions. It is difficult to imagine how these children can be blamed for actions that their parents took when the children were too young to have any say. The United States does not visit the sins of parents on their children in other contexts and should not do so here. Furthermore, to call a ‘mass amnesty’ that these children would be required to earn their legal status through academic achievement or military service.
Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, today, I rise in support of the DREAM Act, introduced by Senators DURBIN, LUGAR, and myself. Each year, thousands of hard-working young people who graduate from American high schools are unable to attend college or serve in the military because of their illegal immigration status. These young people were forced into an economic situation that we have today? People stay in the shadows, we don’t collect taxes, we don’t have the complete involvement of the students who we have always had from our immigrants. There is a national security element to it. There is a law enforcement element to it, and there is certainly an economic element to it. Are we really winning? No, we are losing. We are losing everywhere.

You can take pieces of each and pick and choose which might make you more comfortable politically, but it doesn’t work that way. It is all wrapped into the same enigma. It is woven into the same fabric. That is what we are dealing with.

It is leadership to take on the tough issues. Immigration is one of those issues which defines a country. It tests and defines a country. And the precious glue that has been indispensable in holding this country together for over 200 years has been common interests and mutual respect. I want to proceed on my leader time and preserve the remainder of time on this side for Senator SPECTER.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, earlier this year, a bipartisan group of Senators took up the issue of illegal immigration. It was clear from the debate that ensued that there are deeply held beliefs on both sides. It was also apparent that this is not a problem with a simple solution; it is one that requires time and consideration.

And to live up to the expectation of our constituents, it seemed clear to me that Congress must take steps to secure our borders and provide for our national security first. The Senate is ready to get the message, because it voted overwhelmingly in July to dedicate $3 billion in emergency spending to help promote our border and interior security.

I am disappointed my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are not continuing on the bipartisan path of enhancing our security. Instead, they are bringing up a controversial issue with the DREAM Act. This bill is an attempt to put illegal immigrants who graduate from a U.S. high school or obtain their GED on a special path to citizenship.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I don’t know whether I am in control of time or not, but how much time is left on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican side has 5 minutes 47 seconds. Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I want to proceed on my leader time and preserve the remainder of time on this side for Senator SPECTER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, earlier this year, a bipartisan group of Senators took up the issue of illegal immigration. It was clear from the debate that ensued that there are deeply held beliefs on both sides. It was also apparent that this is not a problem with a simple solution; it is one that requires time and consideration.

And to live up to the expectation of our constituents, it seemed clear to me that Congress must take steps to secure our borders and provide for our national security first. The Senate is ready to get the message, because it voted overwhelmingly in July to dedicate $3 billion in emergency spending to help promote our border and interior security.

I am disappointed my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are not continuing on the bipartisan path of enhancing our security. Instead, they are bringing up a controversial issue with the DREAM Act. This bill is an attempt to put illegal immigrants who graduate from a U.S. high school or obtain their GED on a special path to citizenship.

Though I recognize and appreciate the tremendous contributions to our country made by generations of immigrants, I do not believe we should reward illegal behavior. It is our duty to promote respect for America’s immigration laws and fairness for U.S. citizens and lawful immigrants.

The DREAM Act fails that test and I will oppose it.

This is not an issue that can be solved in one day, and there are pressing matters which we must address. Here we are, 4 weeks into the new fiscal year and we have yet to send a single appropriations bill to the President’s desk. We should be focused on funding our troops in the field, ensuring our intelligence forces have the tools they need to find and catch terrorists, and holding the line on budget-busting spending bills.

The Internet tax moratorium expires in exactly 1 week. Unless we act soon, Internet users across the country will be hit with yet another tax.

And we still have yet to see any plan for addressing the looming middle class tax hike known as the alternative minimum tax. Secretary Paulson told Congress that we must act by early November if we don’t want to see 50 million taxpayers ensnared in a confused filing season next year. This deadline, too, is just around the corner. We still have an enormous amount of work to complete, and we are running out of time. I urge my colleagues to oppose this attempt to bring up a divisive issue, further delaying the essential, unfinished business of the Congress.

The Senate has more than enough to do without also tackling issues that divide this body and the Nation.

Mr. President, I wish to extend my time just 1 more minute. It has been made clear to me in discussions that this will not be an open amendment process if we get on the bill. It is my understanding that the tree will be filled up, which, of course, would put the majority in control of deciding what amendments, if any, are offered. So this is not going to be an open debate, as far as I can tell.

Maybe the majority would decide to bless some amendment on this side and allow a vote on it. I guess that is possible. But for the balance of the people on this side of the aisle, on my side of the aisle, the Republican side, I want them to understand that even if we get cloture on the motion to proceed, there is certainly no guarantee that this will be an open process that will allow a broad array of amendments.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CORNYN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MCCONNELL. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments made by the distinguished Republican leader with regard to the process we can anticipate and the fact that the majority leader has indicated he will fill the amendment tree, blocking any ability of any Senator, both on this side of the aisle and the other side of the aisle, to offer amendments to improve the bill or perhaps add other provisions that cry out for something better.

I ask the distinguished Republican leader whether the types of amendments or suggestions that have been discussed informally would include things like adding a requirement of securing the borders and having an enforceable system at the worksite, or a trigger, before any other provisions like the DREAM Act would be considered or implemented; whether it would also consider—for example, we know that in the agricultural sector there is a lot of concern about a shortage of workers—whether there would be an ability to provide an amendment which would allow for not a path to citizenship but for a temporary workforce to satisfy the needs within the agricultural sector; or, for example, in places like Texas that are fast growing States, whether there may be an opportunity to offer any amendments that would provide for a temporary worker program—not a path to citizenship—that would be a legal, legitimate way for American business? Are those going to be precluded under the plan by the majority leader?

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Texas, I don’t know for sure, but the way the process will work—we have seen it before under majorities of both parties—is that the majority leader has the ability to fill up the tree and then deny any amendments or force a vote. Only the majority leader would be able to answer the question whether an amendment dealing with workplace enforcement or an amendment dealing with border security or, in the case of this Senate from dealing with the H-2A agricultural worker program, which is important to my State—all of that would be within the sole authority of the majority leader, who would pick and choose if any amendments were allowed, pick and choose which ones were given a chance to have a vote.

I say to my colleagues here on the minority side, we will have little or no control—or none, no control at all over what amendments would be allowed. It would be entirely controlled by the majority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. MCCONNELL. How much time do we have on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republicans have 5 minutes 45 seconds.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I know Senator SESSIONS is seeking time. Is Senator HUTCHISON trying to get some of the time on our side as well?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I was really trying to have an opportunity to ask Senator DURBIN a question. I don’t want to take from your time on that. I ask if I could have a colloquy with Senator DURBIN on his time?

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, there has been some conversation here about procedure. If you would be kind enough—if the minority side will allow me 2 minutes for a colloquy with Senator Hutchison, and I would offer the same 2 minutes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Would that be off the time of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. DURBIN. No, no. I asked consent for an additional 2 minutes. I have 3 minutes remaining, so it would be a total of 5 minutes, 2 minutes for a colloquy with Senator Hutchison and myself, and I would extend 2 minutes to the time of the minority side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Unless the Senator from Alabama or Pennsylvania wants to speak, I would enter into a colloquy with Senator Hutchison at this point?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I have no objection to that. I believe it is a colloquy—but I would not want to concede that rather small amount of time remaining on this side.

Mr. MCCONNELL. We would lose no time, as I understand it. We would end up, actually, with more time. 7 minutes remains from the time from Alabama to have 5 and the Senator from Pennsylvania to have the remaining 2.

Mr. MCCONNELL. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, during the course of preparing this bill for the floor, I have been working on both sides of the aisle. I hope the vote in a few minutes will vindicate that. I have been working with Senator Hutchison of Texas and Senator Martinez of Florida and others about modifications of the DREAM Act. I believe the proposals they have made in principle are positive proposals that move us toward our goal.

I say to the Senator from Texas, and I certainly am going to open this to her comments when I finish, it is my intention to offer a substitute amendment as the first amendment that is brought forward by the majority, a bipartisan amendment with Senator Hutchison which will achieve our mutual goals. I hope we can reach that agreement in the next 30 hours, after this motion prevails. Failing that agreement, the minority is protected because it will require another cloture vote, another 60-vote margin before this bill moves forward.

So they have my word to work in good faith on the substitute bipartisan amendment. Failing that, their protection is a cloture vote which they could join in defeating.

I yield to my colleague from Texas if she has any comment or question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I appreciate what the Senator from Illinois has said because I do believe there is a compromise approach to the DREAM Act that could have bipartisan support. As has been mentioned on the floor, there is no opportunity that has been laid out for a substitute to be considered. But the Senator from Illinois has given me his word. I have been working on something that I think will integrate us on this and it is such an important piece of legislation, and I do think this is isolated from the entire immigration issue because there—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s 2 minutes has expired.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, there are young people who have been brought to this country as minors, not of their own doing, who have gone to American high schools, graduated, and who want to go to American colleges. They are in a limbo situation. I believe we should deal with this issue. We should do it in a way that helps assimilate these young people with a college education into our country. They have lived here most of their lives. If we sent them home, they wouldn’t know what to do. It is a compassionate reason for us to try to work this out. But I will say, if we cannot work on a bipartisan amendment, we
Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I yield myself 4 minutes. I yield Senator DeMINT the remaining time.

Mr. DEMINT. I appreciate the motion. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, how much time is left on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senators now have 8 minutes 47 seconds.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to Senator SPECTER, please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I believe that the DREAM Act is a good act, and I believe that its purposes are beneficial. I think it ought to be enacted. But I have grave reservations about seeing a part of comprehensive immigration reform go forward because it weakens our position to get a comprehensive bill.

Right now, we are witnessing a national disaster, a governmental disaster at the county and city levels, and the lawlessness and the criminality that are occurring in our communities and municipalities every level of government are legislating on immigration because the Congress of the United States is derelict in its duty to proceed.

We passed an immigration bill out of both Houses last year. It was not conferred. It was a disgrace that we couldn’t get the people’s business done. We wanted in June in trying to pass an immigration bill. I think we ought to be going back to it. I have discussed it with my colleagues.

I had proposed a modification to the bill defeated in June, which, much as I dislike it, would not have granted citizenship as part of the bill, but would have removed fugitive status only. That means someone could not be arrested if the only violation was being in the country illegally. That would eliminate the opportunity for unscrupulous employers to blackmail employees with squddl living conditions and low wages, and it would enable people to come out of the shadows, to register within a year.

We cannot support 12 to 20 million undocumented immigrants, but we could deport the criminal element if we could segregate those who would be granted amnesty only.

I believe we ought to proceed with hearings in the Judiciary Committee. We ought to set up legislation. If we cannot act this year because of the appropriations logjam, we will have time in late January. But as reluctant as I am to oppose this excellent idea of the Senator from Illinois, I do not think we ought to cherry-pick. It would be expected of comprehensive immigration reform, which is the responsibility of the 1 st session of Congress. We ought to act on it, and we ought to act on it now.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I yield myself 4 minutes. I yield Senator DeMINT the remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may proceed.

Mr. SESSIONS. The Executive Office of the President of the United States, OMB, has issued a veto threat on this bill and said they will veto it because they believe it is not part of comprehensive reform, as Senator SPECTER said. They also go forward to note a number of specific problems with it.

They note that we:

[ must be careful not to provide incentives for renewable illegal conduct that has brought the Nation to this point. By creating a special path to citizenship that is unavailable to other prospective immigrants—including young people whose parents respected our Nation’s laws—S. 2255, this bill falls short.

They go on to note:

This path to citizenship is unavailable to any other alien, no matter how much promise he or she may have, no matter how much he or she may contribute to American society.

They note that it would:

[ Allow illegal aliens to obtain a green card before many individuals who are currently lawfully waiting in line.

They note that it would:

[ Petition almost instantly to bring family members into the country.

By the way, it would be 1.3 million people admitted under this program, according to the Migration Policy Institute, a fair and objective—not certainly not a conservative group, I will say it that way.

They go on to note that the persons would be eligible for welfare benefits within 5 years.” The bill would be indiscriminate in that it would make eligible for the program through certain loopholes:

Certaint aliens convicted of multiple misdemeanors and even felonies.

They note that it would be vetoed. So that is President Bush who has been strongly favoring immigration reform. I have disagreed with him consistently on a lot of other issues.

Let me make mention of a couple of things that are fundamentally important. Most importantly, individuals are not going to take the military route. I would estimate at least 90 percent would take the option of just 2 years of college without any requirement to have to attain a degree.

I submit this will strike a dagger in the heart of the decided will of the American people which is to create a lawful system of immigration. It would put illegals ahead of legals. It will make clear that even after our national debate and vote a few weeks ago, the Congress still does not get it; that the Congress is still determined to stiff the will of the decent majority of American citizens; that the Senate will move forward with an amnesty bill that puts 1.3 million people on a swift and guaranteed path to citizenship, ahead of millions who applied and are waiting in line lawfully, to give them a right of citizenship this country has to offer.

That is what I think amnesty is, giving every single right that we have to offer to someone as a result of illegal conduct. So before—and this is important—before we make any real progress toward a lawful system of immigration, we have less than 100 miles of the 700 miles of fencing this Congress called for. There is no workplace enforcement. A modicum attempt to do something like that has been blocked by the courts, and nothing has been followed up. There has been little or no—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for an additional 30 seconds?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator may proceed.

Mr. SESSIONS. I will just conclude by saying, this would be the wrong direction. This would be to signal that, once again, we are focused on rewarding illegality rather than taking the steps necessary to create a lawful system. At that point, we can more fairly go to the American people and ask them to consider what to do in a compassionate way for those here illegally.

I yield the remainder of the time to Senator DeMINT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has 1 minute.

Mr. DEMINT. I appreciate the motives of those who sponsored the bill. It is true that by us not enforcing our laws over many years, we have created a lot of tragic circumstances. But the solution is not to reward lawbreaking and create incentives for more illegal immigration in the future.

America has asked us to secure our borders, create a worker ID system, and an immigration system that works. If we do this, if we build that foundation, then the possibility of comprehensive reform becomes a reality.

I would encourage my colleagues not to chip away in the way of trying to provide compassion through amnesty, but let’s fix the system like we promised and revisit this next year. Then, hopefully, we can achieve the comprehensive reforms that my colleagues have talked about. I urge my colleagues to vote against proceeding to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. DURBIN. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 3 minutes 8 seconds remaining.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, what are we talking about? We are talking about children. We are talking about children who are brought to this country by their parents. Since when in America do we visit the sins and crimes of parents on children?

If a parent commits a crime, does that mean the child goes to prison? If a parent discards himself or herself from American citizenship, does that mean the child can never have a chance? Is that what America has come to amidst the confusion and distortion and vitriol on this debate on immigration, children such as Marie Gonzalez? She was brought to this country from Costa Rica by her parents at the age of 5. Her parents have been deported as illegals. Because I have made a special request, she has been allowed to continue to finish her college education at Westminster College in Missouri. Her goal is to be an American and to give to the only country she has ever known. Costa Rica is not her country; America is her country.

What we are talking about is turning these children out. And what sin, what crime did they commit? They obeyed their parents; they followed their parents. And for some, that is going to be a mark of Cain on their head forever in America. Is that what we are all about? Give these kids a chance. Meet them. Take time to see these children. Many of us have.

And what you will see in their eyes is the same kind of hope for this country we want to see in our own children’s eyes, to be doctors and nurses and teachers, engineers, to find cures for diseases, start businesses, the things that make America grow.

Give these kids a chance. Do not take your anger out on illegal immigration on children who have nothing to say about this. They were brought to this country, they have lived a good life, they have proven themselves, they have beaten the odds. We need them.

Do not turn around and tell me tomorrow that you need H1-B visas to bring in talented people to America because we do not have enough. Do not tell me you need H2-B, H2-A, and all of the rest of them if you are going to turn away these children, if you are going to say: America doesn’t need you, go about your business, find someplace in the world. Do not come back to me and tell me that we need a bigger labor pool and more talent in America.

How can we say no to hope? How can we say no to these kids when all they want is a piece of the American dream? Please, vote to proceed to the DREAM Act. I will work with Senator Hutchison on a bipartisan amendment. We will do our best. I think we can come up with something. Give us a chance. Give these kids a chance.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I need to correct one statement I made previously. I said the President had issued a veto threat. He does not normally do that on a motion for cloture situation. It was a statement of objection for the bill without an explicit threat of veto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 431, S. 2205, DREAM Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The questions is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the motion to proceed to S. 2205, a bill to authorize the cancellation of removal and adjustment of status of certain alien students who are United States residents and who entered the United States as children, and for other purposes, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote “yea.”

Mr. LOTT. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MENENDEZ). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 52, nays 44, as follows:

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I now tell all Members, I have had a conversation with the distinguished Republican leader, and we are going to make a decision in the next hour or so as to what we are going to go to next. We were planning, of course, to go to this legislation. Cloture on the motion to proceed was not invoked. We have a number of things we are talking about, and we will make that decision this afternoon.

Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period not to exceed 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, either my colleague Senator BOXER or I have updated the Senate each day on the California wildfire situation. Senator BOXER is in California now, and I believe the President is as well. I wish to give a brief update to the Senate. So far, this is the largest evacuation of people in California history. It is the largest evacuation in the United States since Katrina. San Diego remains the worst of the burning regions.

As of this morning, the President has approved individual assistance programs that will allow FEMA, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, to make payments for rental assistance, home repair, and pay for some home replacement costs.

As soon as the fire is down and the wind in places is easing, FEMA will set up centers. I urge Californians, who have been evacuated from their homes, who have had their homes partially burned or burned to the ground, to go to FEMA centers and see what assistance is available to you.

This morning, on television, I heard a family speak. I think they are from Escondido. I think they have a few acres and a home. They have children. The home was burned down, but the father said: We have fire insurance.

Then I heard of another family, with four young children, and no fire insurance, no relatives in the area. Fortunately, the wife has a mother with whom the family will be in the near term. But they said: We don’t know what we will do.

For those people who are in the “We don’t know what we will do” category, this is the job of FEMA, to be out there, to open those centers, and to offer help and aid to these people.

So, Californians, use this. More than 950,000 people have been ordered evacuated. More than 420,000 acres have burned. That is roughly 656 square miles. If you think of it, it is a huge area.

More than 40,000 firefighters are battling 19 active fires. They range from north of Los Angeles to San Diego, and they have crossed the Mexican border. More than 1,155 homes have been destroyed and 68,000 are threatened.

Two deaths are reported so far. I believe there are others. Now, if the winds die down today, we will be able, hopefully, to get a handle on it. The vast bulk of the damage now is occurring in populated areas.

The canyon fire in Malibu is 75 percent contained. The bad news: Most of the other fires are uncontained and out of control.

Interstate 5, the main artery between San Diego and Los Angeles, was closed in both directions earlier, near Camp Pendleton, because of smoke. North-east of San Diego, the town of Julian has been evacuated. I am particularly concerned about the coming days and the Herculean task of feeding, caring, and providing shelter to hundreds of thousands of displaced Californians. We have more than 10,000 in Qualcomm Stadium, another 2,000 at the clubhouse at the Del Mar Race Track.

The Red Cross is doing great. Thank you, Red Cross. Thank you, Red Cross volunteers. They are manning at least three shelters that I know about, and up to this point food, water, and sanitation have been adequate.

I think there is a lot of food for thought for Californians in what is happening in terms of the future, and perhaps it is too early to begin to talk about it. I do not think there is any blame to be cast on anyone. I think everyone is doing what they can to help. I think there is going to be a lot of focus for thought coming out of these fires in terms of public policy, and I am delighted that my colleague, Senator BOXER, is there, and I look forward to her report tomorrow. I believe we will have much more to say about the public policy that goes forward for our State and other States that are catastrophe prone.

I will just tell my colleagues one other little story. I received a call a week ago from the San Francisco Fine Arts Museum saying that they had an opportunity to bring two paintings to show in San Francisco from the Met, and the insurance for those two paintings was $8 billion, just to bring them out for show. Why? Because insurance was being denied because California was a catastrophe-prone area. This is just one other example of what is ricocheting out there under the surface now, and I think this body has to become involved. Any one of us can have a catastrophe. Any one of us can have a major bombing. Any one of us can have a major earthquake, a major flood, or major fires. I think it is up to us to see that we have in place the regulations and the laws that enable people to get the insurance they need on a cost-effective basis to be able to restore their lives and rebuild once again.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.
DREAM ACT

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to share a few thoughts on the vote we cast on the DREAM Act. I really believe it was an important issue. It went beyond what some might think in that it dealt with some issues that are important to America, what we as the United States as a country need, why we need to get the immigration issue correct. We can do it. It is something that is important. But once again, we sort of fell into the trap of focusing on helping to meet what the needs of those individuals who are here illegally and not focusing on restoring the rule of law to immigration enforcement. So I think the Senate leadership’s commitment to moving this legislation would have been a step in exactly the wrong direction. I believe the strong bipartisan vote against it indicates that there remains grave concern about this kind of amnesty proposal, particularly in light of the fact that we have not achieved significant progress toward enforcement of our laws at the border, at the workplace, and in other areas.

I would just say as a person who has worked on this with some determination, and I think the proposal is a discrete piece of legislation that they never really take place, or the bill or this provision or that provision, — has continued to stiff them American people have been requesting grants. It is really directed at us. The American people have been requesting that we have absolutely come to believe that if we do a series of things, we can create a lawful system of immigration in America. That is important because I think a lot of people think it is just not possible, that nothing we do will work. But that is not true. If we have a good legal system, if we have a good enforcement system at the border, if we make it difficult for people to work, eliminate the job magnet and create a work card, an identification card that is biometric and can’t be easily counterfeited, we could see a dramatic return to lawfulness in immigration. That would be so good for America. It would so reduce the frustration and anger that is out there.

As I have said before, I don’t think people are angry at immigrants, although some of the people who support these legislative acts that I think have been bad have tried to suggest that the anger which is out there among the American people is directed at immigrants. It is really directed at us. The American people have been requesting for 30, 40 years that we create a lawful system of immigration, and Congress has stiffed them—just confused to do it—and talks about it and promises and passes this bill or that bill or this provision or that provision, all the time suggesting that these are going to make a difference. Then, either we don’t fund them adequately, so they never really take place, or the bill is a discrete piece of legislation that never has much impact on the overall situation we have confronted and does not do any significant—does not take us in any significant way toward a lawful system.

I hope this strong vote sends a message that this Senate, prior to creating a lawful system of immigration both at our border and in the workplace, is not prepared to undertake the huge Ag-JOBS legislation. Senator REID has said he would bring that up again, but maybe this vote will encourage him not to do so.

The DREAM Act, which we just rejected, would have given, in short order, every benefit of citizenship—including citizenship—to 1.3 million persons. The Ag-JOBS bill that we keep hearing will be brought up will be an additional 1.3 million. This is a third of the population of people who would be provided the benefits of amnesty, a third of the number that was in the bill this summer that the American people rejected. The DREAM Act, as I said, would have provided amnesty for over 1.3 million, according to the Migration Policy Institute—not a conservative group. It would give current illegal aliens a financial bonus. They would be eligible for instate tuition, subsidized student loans, and Federal work study benefits. So if you have a problem with illegality—and I just want to share this with my colleagues; these are not insignificant points I am making—if you are going to create a lawful system of immigration into America, you are going to have to have some sanctions and punishments and prosecutions. More than that, you absolutely can’t give benefits to people who have violated our laws, who have gotten past us a few years ago, and then start rewarding them with benefits. So a number of years ago, in 1996, we said that if you are a person coming to our country illegally and you were illegally here, you at least shouldn’t get instate tuition when you go to college. You ought to not be in a better position than a lawful American who might live a few miles across the State line. That was the deciding vote here. This would have reversed that—not only that; as I said, Senator SANTORUM stated that if you subsidize something, you get more of it. So this would have given current illegal immigrants stop rewarding it, please. That is what we are talking about.

So this bill I think went too far in a number of ways. I was actually pleased that President Bush’s administration analyzed it and strongly opposed it and sent us a letter to that effect. So even President Bush, who strongly supports an immigration into America and has supported a lot of the legislation here, opposed this bill. I think they were right in doing so.

I would note that under the DREAM Act, individuals, once they have been here 5 years and did 2 years of college without a degree being required—they got 2 years of college—they would then be able to bring their family members.

Some say: Well, they would have brought here as a young child and through no fault of their own, and so they ought to be given the benefits of this amnesty. Well, that is not a uniform picture. It does tug at our heart strings, and we do care about that. It is something we are going to have to deal with sooner or later: how are we going to deal with people who came here a long time ago? But many people came here at age 15. You only have to look age 15. Maybe they came and lived with their brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts and uncles, and then they are immediately put on a path to citizenship. They are then able, after that, to be a citizen and to bring their parents on maybe the same track here. They would also be able to bring in their wife and children, plus bringing brothers and sisters. That is the way the system would work. I think it is not a good process. I am pleased the Senate agreed with that.

I will conclude by making some points about policy and the question of the rule of law in our country. If we are serious about securing our borders, the first thing you do is stop providing something that encourages it. That is the first and most obvious step we can take. The principle is clear: If there are benefits to breaking the law, people will continue to do it. When you subsidize something, you get more of it. So we need to say to those who come illegally by giving them student loans and instate tuition, you will encourage the United States, the United States does not have a system that will educate them all the way through college—and we do that. We don’t require you to be a legal America citizen to go to schools in Alabama or anyone place in America, nor to college. But you are not supposed to get instate tuition if you are here illegally.

Not only would you be able to carry through with that, but you would be able to, in 5 years, get a permanent resident status, a citizenship, and then you would be able to bring your family into this country. That is not the right direction. I submit, we should be going in. We don’t want to send the wrong message.

The question sort of comes down to, do we have the will to enforce our immigration law? Do we have the will to do it? Will we stand on principle and law and sound public policy? Or will we allow emotion and politics to further erode an already weak immigration system and further erode the perception that we are serious about creating a lawful system. Passing the DREAM Act today would, in the wake of failed comprehensive reform that we had this summer—if we had done that before we have been securing our borders and before we have been able to create a lawful system of immigration, that is not the right way for us to go. It is not. It cannot be gotten around. It sends the wrong message. It will say we have immigration laws but no intent to enforce them. It will send a message that if you break our laws, not only will that be forgiven, but you will be put at the head of the line and you will be financially rewarded for it.

That is what we have to do to create a lawful system. The rule of law in this country is important. I was a Federal prosecutor for almost 15 years. I was attorney general of Alabama. I have worked with law enforcement all my professional life. I remember distinctly talking with law enforcement officers about the sale of marijuana in neighborhoods. Sometimes local police would say: You know, these are small amounts of marijuana and we cannot focus on the small cases. We only focus on that was a mission a lot of police departments had. They discouraged that. I would tell them, that, in effect, if you take that policy, you have legalized the sale of marijuana in that neighborhood. Not only that, but you have created a unlawful system in that neighborhood and you will have created violence and instability that adversely impacts the good and decent people who live in that neighborhood. You cannot do that.

You see, there are moral and legal and practical consequences of having a legal system that is not enforced. It adds up. That is what we have done in immigration. We have looked the other way and denied it is happening, and we have let people with special interests dominate the debate and we have talked about making the system lawful, but we have never done it. That is why the American people are not happy with us. We have not been trustworthy. We have not been reliable. We have not. If we would get this system right, we could do a lot better job about making it work in an effective way. The American people want us to do that.

I have to tell you, why do people want to come to America? They think they can make a better life here. If there has been crime and instability and theft and abuse and unfairness in the system that was in the place they came from, they feel like if they come to America and they have a problem here, they can go to court and they will be protected and they can make money and build assets and people will not come and steal it from them. They can leave something for their children and they can have a head start and send their children to college and they will be able to do even better. That is why they want to come here. It is all founded on the rule of law. The reason we are a unique nation—and you know that great hymn that says our liberty is in law—is that our legal system has made us great, prosperous, and free.

I don’t think it is a good policy that we allow people to come to our country in violation of our law. I think that sends a wrong message to them and undermines the very legal system that makes the country so attractive. I remember in the debate, Senator Specter, who is a direct speaker, a farmer from Iowa and now the ranking member on the Finance Committee, made a speech. He said he was here in 1986 as a Member of this body. He remembered the debate. During those debates, it was said that in 1986 this would be amnesty, but it is the last time, we would never do it again. He said: Let me ask you why nobody this time, in this debate, a few months ago this summer, is saying we will not have anymore amnesty again. Why are people not saying that? He said the answer is obvious. If we had amnesty in 1986, and 20 years later we have it again, nobody with a straight face can stand up before the world or the American people and say that we would allow this to happen. That is why that is going to be the last one. How silly is that? We said that a few years ago.

So this is not a small matter. What principle can you utilize to say to a young person, or any other person, who came into our country illegally today, 10, 15 years from now—what principle can you articulate as to why they should not be given amnesty when we gave it to people today? You see, this is a matter of seriousness. It cannot be ignored. I feel strongly about that. I want my colleagues to know our country needs to create a lawful system of immigration. Once that is accomplished and the American people feel comfortable about that, we can think about a way, I believe, that would be effective and compassionate for those who are here today and that is rational and that we can defend. I don’t believe we can defend that today, when our system is not working.

I see my time has expired. I will wrap up and say I think we did the right thing in this vote today. Hopefully, we will continue to work toward a lawful system of immigration and, if we do that, a lot of things will become possible in the future, that we can think about and appropriate and should not be done today.

I ask unanimous consent that a Statement of Administration Policy that opposes the DREAM Act, which we rejected a short while ago, be printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Statement of Administration Policy—S. 2205, AMERICAN FAMILY RELIEF AND EDUCATION FOR ALIEN MINORS ACT OF 2007

The administration continues to believe that the Nation’s broken immigration system requires comprehensive reform. This reform should include strong border and interior enforcement, a temporary worker program, a program to bring the millions of undocumented aliens out of the shadows without amnesty and without animosity, and assistance for new-comers assimilate into American society. Unless it provides additional authorities in all of these areas, Congress will do little more than perpetuate the unfortunate status quo.

The administration is sympathetic to the position of young people who were brought here illegally as children and have come to know the United States as home. Any resolution of their status, however, must be careful not to provide incentives for recurrence of the illegal conduct that has brought the Nation to this point. By creating a special path to citizenship that is unavailable to other prospective immigrants—including young people whose parents respected the Nation’s immigration laws—S. 2205 falls short and the administration therefore opposes the bill.

The primary change wrought by S. 2205 would be to establish a preferential path to citizenship for a special class of illegal aliens. Specifically, S. 2205 awards permanent status to any illegal alien who is under 30, has been in the United States for five years after arriving as a child, and has completed two years of college or in the uniform services. This path to citizenship is unavailable to any other alien, no matter how much promise he or she may have, no matter how much he or she may contribute to American society. Moreover, the path that S. 2205 creates would allow illegal aliens to obtain a green card before many individuals who are currently lawfully lining in line.

Sponsors of S. 2205 argue that the bill is necessary in order to give children who are illegal aliens incentives to obtain an education. But it is difficult to reconcile that provisioned with the by the retroactivity. Even those who attended college years earlier will be eligible for a green card.

The legal status that the bill grants its beneficiaries means that they can petition almost instantly to bring family members into the country. It also places them on the fast track to citizenship because they can immediately begin accruing the residence time in the United States that is necessary for naturalization. Finally, this legal status entitles the bill’s beneficiaries to certain welfare benefits for years.

The bill is also indiscriminate in whom it would make eligible for the program. For example, S. 2205 includes loopholes that would authorize permanent status for certain aliens convicted of multiple misdemeanors and even felonies.

The open-ended nature of S. 2205 is objectionable and will inevitably lead to large-scale document fraud. The path to citizenship remains open for
That is why a bipartisan group of Senators agree that we need to adopt biennial budgeting by the Federal Government, such as I had as Governor of Ohio, so Congress can get its work done on time while also conducting the oversight necessary to ensure that our Nation’s entitlement systems and programs are functioning effectively.

Senator DOMENICI has been a leader on biennial budgeting for years. We should adopt it during this Congress and name it the Pete Domenici Biennial Budgeting Act as part of Pete’s legacy to this country.

Putting aside our short-term failures and focusing on our long-term problems, in January I introduced the Securing America’s Future Economy, or SAFE Commission Act, legislation that would create a bipartisan commission to look at our Nation’s tax and entitlement systems and recommend reforms to put us back on a fiscally sustainable course and ensure the solvency of entitlement programs for future generations.

I commend two of my colleagues, the Budget Committee chairman from North Dakota, Representative VAUINOVIET, and the ranking member from New Hampshire, for recently introducing a bipartisan bill that would create a tax and entitlement reform task force very similar to my SAFE commission. In fact, I saw them on CNBC recently talking about it. The only major difference is that Senators CONRAD and GREGG require every congressional appointee to be a sitting Member of Congress, whereas the SAFE commission would include outside experts. I have signed on as a co-sponsor of the Conrad-Gregg proposal, and I am pleased to learn they intend to hold a hearing on the bill in the very near future. I look forward to working with them to get the bill passed.

I also commend the bipartisan Congressional Jim Cooper of Tennessee and Republican Congressman FRANK WOLF of Virginia who introduced a bipartisan SAFE commission bill in the House of Representatives for my work with Congressman WOLF for more than a year on this proposal, and I welcome Congressman COOPER’s decision to join us.

This bipartisan, bicameral group has support from corporate executives, religious leaders, and think tanks across the political spectrum, from the Heritage Foundation to the Brookings Institution, and former Members from both parties, such as former Senators WARREN BURTON and JOE KERRY, and former Congressmen BILL FRENZEL and LEON PANETTA.

Our entitlement programs are creaking under the strain of an aging society and our future demographic tide that will soon overwhelm our resources. We need a system for raising the revenues necessary to meet these priorities that does as little damage to the economy as possible. We need to start focusing more on the future. We need to start recognizing that we’re on an imprudent and unsustainable fiscal path, and we need to get started now.

Everyone in this great body should heed Comptroller Walker’s warning. Our commitments to the war on terror, to securing our borders, to educating our workforce, and to investing in our Nation’s infrastructure demand tremendous resources and require long-term financial commitments. At the same time, we cannot ignore the demographic tide that will soon overwhelm our resources. We need a system for raising the revenues necessary to fund these priorities that does as little damage to the economy as possible. In short, now, not every day we wait, the solutions become more painful.

In the simplest of terms, the Federal Government continues to spend more than it brings in. Running up the credit card for today’s needs and leaving the bill for future generations should not be the policy of this country, this Congress, or this administration. It represents a recklessness that threatens our economic security, our global competitiveness, and our future quality of life. The Federal Government has become the biggest violator of credit card abuse in the world.

Comptroller David Walker has said:

The greatest threat to our future is our fiscal irresponsibility.

He added:

America suffers from a serious case of myopia, or nearsightedness, both in the public sector and the private sector. We need to start focusing more on the future. We need to start recognizing that we’re on an imprudent and unsustainable fiscal path, and we need to get started now.
Security surplus, as well as surpluses in other trust funds, to hide the true size of the Government’s operating deficit. The Social Security surplus, however, must be reserved for future retirees. As far as I know, you cannot spend the surplus twice, but Congress keeps pretending that it can.

If you walk off the Social Security surplus so Congress cannot spend it on other programs, as I believe we should do, then the Government’s operating deficit will double to $344 billion, not $163 billion. And if you add back the money the Government is borrowing from other trust funds, such as Federal employee pensions, the deficit explodes to $441 billion, almost triple the reported deficit.

In other words, we are hiding from the public how much we are borrowing because we don’t tell them about the money we are borrowing from trust funds. As I pointed out last year, the deficit is as small as $163 billion, and they think things are getting better, but we are hiding the fact that we are spending every dime of these trust funds to keep the Government going.

The difference between revenues and outlays is not what is truly threatening our future. It is the cumulative, ongoing increase in our national debt that matters.

Remember, in 1992 when Ross Perot ran for President and he showed us those frightening fiscal charts? Well, I have my own charts, and I call these charts my Halloween charts. I call them that because, No. 1, the Government’s fiscal year starts in October and No. 2, because the fiscal picture is terrifying.

Fifteen years ago, when Ross Perot was sounding the alarm, the national debt was about $4 trillion. He showed a chart projecting that by 2007, the debt would increase to $8 trillion. Well, guess what. As of 2007, the national debt stands at almost $9 trillion. Ross Perot’s doomsday predictions turned out to be too rosy. In the more than 20 years since Perot’s campaign, the debt has increased dramatically, and the outlook is even more frightening. The Government accumulated $4 trillion in debt. We have now added even more than that in the last 15 years.

This Congress has acknowledged that it will pass right by $9 trillion. A few weeks ago, Congress very quietly voted to allow the national debt to increase by another $800 billion, from about $9 trillion to close to $11 trillion.

What does that mean, $9 trillion? How do we even fathom that number? For one thing, it represents two-thirds of our entire national economy, the worst number in 50 years. For another thing, each man, woman, and child in the United States owes $30,000 of the Federal Government’s debt. I want my colleagues to think about these young people, the pages here today. All of you, every one of you, owe $30,000 on the debt we have accumulated.

That $30,000 only represents the debt racked up by the Government in the past. Because we continue borrowing more than we bring in, that number is increasing every single day. And those numbers pale in comparison with the budget problems looming in our future as the baby boom generation begins to retire. Today, we’re looking at a January 1, 2008. In fact, just last week, the first baby boomer applied for Social Security retirement benefits. Reality is setting in that this is not just a far-off prediction. It is a growing storm that threatens to overwhelm our economy if we do not act now.

Perhaps even more concerning is that 55 percent of the privately owned debt is held by foreign creditors, mostly foreign central banks. That’s up from 35 percent just 6 years ago. Foreign creditors provided more than 80 percent of the funds the United States has borrowed since 2001, according to the Wall Street Journal.

And who are these foreign creditors? According to the Treasury Department, the three largest holders of U.S. debt are China, Japan, and the OPEC nations. Borrowing hundreds of billions of dollars from China and OPEC puts us in a very unstable situation, but also puts our national security, at risk. It is critical that we ensure that countries that control our debt do not control our future.

If after hearing all this, one still thinks this is a problem that exists only in the distant future, consider recent projections by the major credit rating agency, Standard & Poor’s. For decades, U.S. Treasuries have been considered the safest investment against which the risks of all other investments are judged. A good place to invest, our Treasuries. In fact, the global financial system is largely based on the notion of U.S. Treasuries as the only risk-free investment out there.

But in just 5 years, that will cease to be true. According to Standard & Poor’s, U.S. Treasuries will lose their triple-A credit rating in 2012 because of the Government’s deteriorating long-term fiscal position. In short, the world markets aren’t looking at what we are doing in the United States. What kind of global economic turmoil awaits us 5 years from now when the U.S. Government is considered as risky as a typical corporation? What happens if the foreign banks decide they are going to move their money out of the United States and send it somewhere else? And what economic catastrophe awaits our children and grandchildren when Standard & Poor’s projects that U.S. Treasuries will be classified as junk bonds?

Why do we refuse to see the warning signs? A decade ago, who ever would have imagined that a London dollar would be worth just as much as a U.S. dollar? A few years ago, the Euro was worth 83 cents. Now it is worth $1.42. Meanwhile, our trade deficit has gone through the roof as we Americans are forced to borrow the money we need to buy foreign products.

What is driving this train wreck? Certainly additional revenues have to be part of the solution. But this is not a problem that will be solved simply by reaching deeper into the American people’s pockets. Many colleagues are familiar with Pete Peterson, former Commerce Secretary. He made it clear that “The minute you start looking at a tax increase as a solution, you’re confronted with tax increases that are clearly beyond anything anyone can imagine.”

Even the Democratic chairman of the Budget Committee has acknowledged that most of the heavy lifting will have to be done on the spending side. Revenues will be on the table for sure, but the coming storm will require significant changes to entitlement programs.

Here are some numbers that help put this situation in perspective. Forty years ago in 1967, Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid made up only 3 percent of the GDP. In 2007, their cost has tripled as a share of the economy to 9 percent. The Congressional Budget Office projects that over the next 40 years, this number could double again to 18 percent, a frightening thought when we consider that in 2006 total federal revenues accounted for only 18 percent of GDP. It reminds me of when I was Governor of Ohio, and called Medicaid the Pac-Man in Ohio.

Well, today I would refer to entitlements as the Pac-Man in terms of our national finances. If entitlement spending continues on this path, we will be required to spend 9 percent of our Federal revenue to fulfill these entitlement obligations. Our grandchildren will have no money for national defense, energy security, education, the environment, or our infrastructure. And, they’ll look back at our generation and ask how we could be so reckless with their futures.

Our Nation faces one of the most competitive environments in its history, and the question is, in this new world of global competition, will future generations be able to enjoy the same standard of living we are experiencing? Will my kids, will my grandchildren be able to enjoy the same standard of living I have enjoyed? Will they have the opportunity for the same quality of life? With the largest national debt in 50 years, will we be able to remain competitive with foreign economies?

Congress must view our Tax Code, entitlement system, and the budget process as three components or pillars of the Nation’s fiscal foundation, and not as separate problems. Each is linked to the other two pillars, and we must reform all three to raise the necessary revenue to fund the Government in an economically efficient manner, to keep our obligations to future generations, and to keep the size of Government to a manageable level.

We must enact fundamental tax reform to help make the Tax Code simpler, fairer, transparent, and economically efficient. According to the President’s Advisory Panel on Federal Tax Reform, headed by former Senators Connie Mack and John Breaux, only 13 percent—think of this, only 13 percent—of taxpayers file without the help of either a tax preparer or computer software. Since enacting the Tax Reform Act of 1986, over 15,000 provisions have been added to the Internal Revenue Code.

It is not just a matter of saving taxpayers’ time and effort. This is about saving real money. The Tax Foundation estimates that comprehensive tax reform could save Americans as much as $265 billion a year in compliance costs associated with preparing their returns. Now, that would be a real tax reduction that wouldn’t cost the Treasury one dime.

Mr. President, I have been working on tax reform for years. In 2003, I attached an amendment to the Jobs and Growth Tax Relief Reconciliation Act that would have created a blue ribbon commission to study fundamental tax reform. The amendment was adopted by voice vote but later removed in conference. Then, in the autumn of 2004, I offered my tax reform commission amendment again, this time to the American Jobs Creation Act. The Senate again adopted my amendment. During committee negotiations, the White House contacted me and requested I withdraw my amendment because the President was preparing to take a leadership role by appointing his own tax reform panel. I enthusiastically agreed to defer to his leadership, and I withdrew my amendment. It seemed to me that the tax reform bandwagon was finally starting to roll.

In January 2005, President Bush announced the creation of the all-star panel headed up by former Senators Connie Mack and John Breaux, and that panel spent most of the year engendering the American public to develop proposals to make our Tax Code simpler, fairer, and more conducive to economic growth. In November of 2005, the panel issued its final report. While not perfect in everyone’s mind, the panel’s two plans provided a starting point for developing tax reform legislation that would represent a huge improvement over the current system. The panel’s proposals belong as a key part of the national discussion on fundamental tax reform.

Tinkering with the current Tax Code won’t get it done. Tinkering is what has brought us to this mess in the first place. It’s time to rip the Tax Code out by its roots and replace it with something that works.

The President’s panel had a number of great ideas that we should incorporate into tax reform legislation. For example, we should simplify the code by repealing the complex, unfair, and antigrowth alternative minimum tax. We should consolidate all the various tax-preferred savings plans into just two or three plans that average workers can understand and utilize. We should scale back the tax subsidies that we use to pursue social engineering and dictate economic policy, forcing Americans who fail to qualify for tax breaks to pay higher rates to make up the lost revenue.

We must create a tax system that is conducive to job creation and economic growth. We should start by addressing one of the biggest problems with the current code, and that is it rewards moving production overseas. We are taxing our exports heavily and taxing our imports lightly. Such a system sounds absolutely perverse, but that’s what we have in the United States.

In fact, a constituent of mine, Tom Secor, from Norwalk, OH, who owns his own small business, came to my office and told a story about a business trip he made to China. He said he saw an editorial in a Chinese newspaper that was discussing the concerns of Americans about Chinese competition. The conclusion of the editorial was that Americans could solve most of their problems with Chinese competition if they would just reform their own Tax Code. Tom Secor and others like him tell us China knows the United States needs tax reform to stay competitive. But for some reason we refuse to learn that lesson ourselves.

We must also understand that unless we do tax reform, the lower marginal rates, the lower capital gains taxes, the lower taxes on dividends will evaporate and we will have gained nothing in regard to fundamental tax reform and entitlement reform. And I think such reform would help us account for our failure to pay for the Iraq war. This administration will have to explain why they are leaving us holding the bag and why they did not keep their promise for tax reform. They promised us.

I know there is bipartisan support in this chamber to move forward on fundamental tax reform. Some of our colleagues have already taken steps towards developing legislation that would represent the beginning of movement over our current system. As I already mentioned, we have Senator Gregg and we have Senator Kent Conrad who want to get going, so we should endorse the approach they want to take and submit legislation that Congress could consider under fast-track procedures. The proposal basically is to appoint eight Democrats and eight Republicans, including two top administration officials, and it would require a three-fourths vote for submitting a proposal to Congress.

In other words, they do their work, and if three-fourths have said this is what we want to do for tax reform and entitlement reform, we have to vote on it up or down. That is really important. We cannot ask some of our colleagues to spend that kind of time on tax reform and entitlement reform and not guarantee them that if they agree on something, they will get a vote on it.

Some say to me: George, it is too late to do something. Well, it is not. And I think of Bill Bradley. Bill Bradley, in 1982, came up with a tax reform program. It took 4 years, but it was adopted in 1986. In other words, Ronald Reagan, working with Congress, reformed the Tax Code in 1986, and President Reagan is still fondly remembered as the leader who set the stage for years of prosperity at the end of the 20th century. That was done on a bipartisan basis. I think this President really has an opportunity to do something in regard to this. I think the President and the administration should say to Congress: Everything is on the table. No holds barred. Let us sit down with you, and I will work on it. And you know what. Maybe we will not get it done, but at least we will start it. We will let the American people know that we understand that tax reform and entitlement reform is fundamental to the future of our country. What a nice legacy for our President, to at least say he got into the game and did something about it and didn’t say you guys worry about it; it is your problem.

In November of 2005, the President, the Democratic Congress, and the American people were anxiously awaiting the President’s proposal. Within 30 days, we all learned the President’s proposal was dead. When you look at the numbers, it is self-evident we must confront our swelling national debt; that we must make a concerted bipartisan effort to reform our tax system, slow the growth of entitlement spending, and halt this freight train that is threatening to crush our children and grandchildren’s future.

Right now, in my lifetime, where I am at this stage, what I am worried about is the kids of America. I am worried about my grandchildren and other people’s grandchildren. What is the legacy that we are going to leave those children and grandchildren? I don’t know about my colleagues, but I am worried. I am really worried. I am worried about whether we are going to develop the infrastructure of competitiveness so those kids can compete in that global marketplace.

It is in our hands. Folks back home sent us here to take on the tough problems and make the tough decisions and do what is right for our country.

THE DREAM ACT

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, our Nation was built on the belief that no matter where we start from in life, we all have a shot at the American dream. I, for one, am very proud of this reputation and I believe it is one we continue to promote and maintain. Unfortunately, Mr. President, somewhere along the way, amid politics and rhetoric, the belief that we should now turn our backs on certain children in our communities has gained a voice.

Mr. President, I am here on the floor of the Senate today because I believe we need to make sure that America remains a country of opportunity for all children, no matter where they come from, no matter what language they speak at home, and no matter what obstacles they have to overcome. Earlier today in the Senate we had a chance to pay more than just lip service to the idea of opportunity for all. Unfortunately, a few Members of this body didn’t think it was an American priority.

I still believe in the DREAM Act and its power to not only give hope to many today but to make our country stronger in the future. In fact, we can still give hope to many by passing the Development, Relief and Education for Alien Minors Act. This DREAM Act was narrowly tailored bipartisan legislation that would give undocumented students the chance—to become permanent residents if they came to this country as children, are long-term U.S. residents, graduated from high school, and are prepared for college.

The DREAM Act also would make qualified students eligible for temporary, legal immigration status upon high school graduation that would lead to permanent residency if they attend college.

Mr. President, critics of this amendment would have you believe this is simply a matter of politics. Well, it is not. This is a real issue which touches nearly every aspect of American life, from our economy to our security, from our classrooms to our workplaces. Most importantly, it speaks about our values.

Senator Durbin previously brought up the DREAM Act as an amendment to the Defense authorization bill to address critical manpower shortages that are facing our military forces. Under the DREAM Act, tens of thousands of well-qualified potential recruits would become eligible for military service for the first time. These are young people who love our country and are eager to serve in the Armed Forces during a time of war. The DREAM Act would add a very strong incentive to enlist because it provides a path to permanent legal status.

The DREAM Act would also make qualified students eligible for temporary, legal immigration status upon high school graduation that would lead to permanent residency if they attend college.

Mr. President, critics of this amendment would have you believe this is simply a matter of politics. Well, it is not. This is a real issue which touches nearly every aspect of American life, from our economy to our security, from our classrooms to our workplaces. Most importantly, it speaks about our values.

I received a letter recently from a high school senior named Victor. Victor lives in Walla Walla, a small town on the Washington-Oregon border. Victor wrote to me and he said:

I came to the U.S. when I was 18 years old. My most difficult and only challenge I faced since I came to the U.S. is education. I came to this country not knowing a single word of English, therefore I had to learn it as fast as I could. I was held back a grade and put into English as a Second Language classes. It took me about a year to learn it well enough to where I was able to be in classes with native speakers.

I am currently part of the National Honors Society and I also take part in fall and spring sports. I have been accepted to the University of Washington and three other Washington universities. My plans are to go to the University of Washington and get a degree in computer science.

Unfortunately, I come from a low-income family, making it hard for me to make further plans about my education. Currently the federal government will not help with student loans for children in my country, in the United States. How do you expect us to improve ourselves and succeed in this country?

I would like to ask my colleagues how they answer Victor’s question, how they expect our Nation to continue to be one of hope, one of opportunity, if we close down our children’s future rather than handing them the keys to success. All of our children should have the opportunity to become more successful than their parents, and none of them should be punished for their parents’ decisions.

We have thousands of dedicated, motivated, and gifted students who have been forced into the shadows through no fault of their own. Like Victor, like Maria, they have beaten odds many of us could never even imagine, and they want to serve now and contribute back to America’s future. It would be our mistake to say no.

I hope our colleagues will reconsider their votes today. I hope they will say yes to the DREAM Act and yes to a richer, stronger, more vibrant American dream for all of us, for generations to come.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, more than 65,000 immigrant students will graduate from U.S. high schools this year only to see the doors of opportunity closed to them. These are gifted and highly motivated children who grew up in the United States. For these children, many of whom arrived to this country as babies, America is the only home they know. They speak English fluently, and for many it is their first and only language. Many have never even visited the country of their birth. They were educated in our public school system. They have stayed in school and stayed out of trouble. These kids are honor students, team captains, student body presidents, and valedictorians. They would like nothing more than to contribute to the only country they have ever known as home. But for these children, because of their immigration status, they are often effectively barred from pursuing a post-secondary education and reaching their full potential. Through no fault of their own, they are forced to live in the shadows and denied their chance at achieving their God-given potential.

What are we saying to these hardworking students? Well I will tell you. We are saying they are not welcome in the only country they have ever known as home. For these children, because of their immigration status, they are often effectively barred from pursuing a post-secondary education and reaching their full potential. Through no fault of their own, they are forced to live in the shadows and denied their chance at achieving their God-given potential.

There is a solution to this crisis, but, sadly, the Senate today failed to act. The DREAM Act—which I have proudly cosponsored for several years—would help expand opportunities for our Nation’s children. These students who have grown up in the United States, have demonstrated good moral character, and are pursuing a college education or have enlisted in the military, the DREAM Act will provide an opportunity to earn legal status in this country.

There are many good reasons to enact the DREAM Act. In today’s 21st century economy, where a post-secondary education is quickly becoming the minimum requirement for higher earning jobs, we need to provide the children in our country with every opportunity to achieve academically, both for their benefit but also for the benefit of our society. The DREAM Act would also strengthen our Nation’s military readiness, allowing these well-qualified young men and women to serve their country with honor. But most importantly, the DREAM Act ensures that the promise of the American dream becomes a reality for all our children.

I am disappointed that the Senate failed to pass the DREAM Act. The enactment of this legislation is long overdue, and I will continue to fight for its passage, for all of our children and our Nation.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues for their remarks that were just concluded on the DREAM Act and for the vote in support of it. It is interesting to me that those who have taken no time to meet the students who were involved in this issue come away with a much different feeling. Once this goes beyond cliches and inflammatory rhetoric that you hear in what passes for entertainment—television and radio—and you actually sit down and hear these life stories, you just can’t help but have your heart touched by them. It happened to me a long time ago, 6 years ago, and it continues to happen to me. But, unfortunately, we didn’t have the votes. We had 52 votes when we needed 60. In the Senate, 60 votes is a threshold requirement.

I thank the 11 Republicans who voted with me. I will tell you, it took some courage for them to do it. It is not an easy vote for anybody. It is surely not an easy vote for them when the vast majority of their colleagues are going the other way.

I also thank the 41 Democrats who stood by me. Some of them did it with tears in their eyes. One constituent thinking about: Now I have to go home and explain this one. I understand that. I thank them for doing that.

After you have been around Capitol Hill for a few years—and I have—you try to put things in perspective about your public service. I don’t believe there are many, if any, who come to the Senate with the ambition of retiring. Most of us come here with the ambition of doing something important for our Nation and serving our Nation. These children in a career where risks have to be taken for important things to happen. What I did today was no great risk. I will probably hear about it back home, and I already have a little bit, but I will just say in the course of our history the important things that have occurred here in this Chamber have involved political risk and controversy—whether it is a question of voting on war or voting on issues involving human rights. It is rare that you find a great issue that makes a career that everybody agrees with.

I say to my colleagues who joined in the fight today, from the bottom of my heart, but thanks also to the thousands of young people across America who continue to follow this debate and follow this issue so closely. The toughest part was not standing in the well and being told that I lost with only 52 votes; the toughest part was walking up those stairs and facing 3 of the kids in my office. I didn’t quite know what to expect. These young people have been through a lot, through no fault of their own.

They are the young man whose stepgrandfather failed to file the appropriate documents is 20 years old. A few years ago, he was arrested and detained in jail over Christmas and New Year’s. How is that for a high school student present, to be told you are illegal and subject to deportation? Another young woman—her parents were ousted as being illegal and deported. I pled with the Department of Homeland Security to let her stay in school and finish her college degree, and they have allowed her to do that. I hope they will continue to. But she doesn’t know where she is going from here. She has lived in the United States since she was a very young girl and this is her country, this is where she wants to be.

Another one is literally a young woman without a country. A refugee from Vietnam, she went to Germany and then came to the United States. Vietnam is not a safe place to return to, and Germany doesn’t want her. She is without a country. She has a bachelor’s degree and no place to turn.

I didn’t quite know what to expect when I went up to see them after this disappointing vote, and they greeted me with smiles and encouragement. It is great to work around young people; they have such determination and energy, and they are not going to let anything destroy their dreams. They are just not going to let it happen. They are not going to let it happen, and I am glad we did it even though we weren’t successful. It renewed my commitment to this issue.

I am not going to quit. I don’t know when the next chance will be. I know we have a busy schedule, and Senator Reid was kind enough to give me the chance today for a vote, but this is an idea whose time will come because it is an idea based on justice and fairness. To think these young people would see their lives ruined because their parents fled from war, and their parents brought them to this country, to think we would turn them away from America, saying we don’t need any...
Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IRAQ

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, last week marked the 5-year anniversary of President Bush’s signing the Congressional resolution that authorized him to use military force in Iraq. That resolution has proved to be a disaster for our country. The door to war that has undermined our top national security priority, the fight against al-Qaeda and its affiliates.

More than 5 years after the authorization of war, America is mired in a conflict that continues to have no end in sight. More than 40,000 of our soldiers have died and more than 27,000 have been wounded. Hundreds of thousands of Iraqi civilians have been killed, if not more, and at least 4.5 million have been displaced from their homes. The region is more unstable, and our credibility throughout the international community has been significantly damaged.

We have spent over a half trillion dollars and stretched our military to the breaking point. Who knows how many more billions will be spent and how many brave Americans will die while the President pursues a military solution to problems that can only be solved by a political settlement in Iraq. At the same time, al-Qaeda has reconstituted itself along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border region and has developed new affiliates around the globe. Al-Qaeda has been strengthened, not weakened, since we authorized military action against, and then want to war in, Iraq.

Indeed, this senseless war has made us more vulnerable, not more secure. We cannot afford with only a small token drawdown of forces expected in the coming months, and no timeline from this administration as to when more troops will come home.

The American people know this war does not make us safer. They want us to do everything in our power to end it. Now that does not mean neglecting domestic priorities, and there are plenty of those to address, but it does mean we cannot, in good conscience, simply put Iraq on the back burner. We cannot simply tell our constituents we have done everything we could. Finding the votes to end this war is not an easy task, but for the sake of the country, we must keep trying. I, for one, am not prepared to say, in late October, with weeks to go before we adjourn for the year, that Iraq can wait until we come back in 2008. Believe me, the administration and its supporters would like nothing better than to change the subject from Iraq. Every time we debate and vote on Iraq, they complain loudly that we are taking time away from the country’s true priorities. But as we were reminded last November, however, ending the disastrous Iraq war is one of the American people’s top priorities. It may well be their top priority, and we owe it to them to make it our top priority as well.

While the administration continues to refuse to acknowledge that we are losing the war, the war and its consequences drag on and on, and more brave American soldiers are being wounded or killed. But it is not only the President and his administration that is at fault; many of my colleagues here in Congress have expressed concerns about the war and refuse to take real action to end it. They have prevented Congress from acting to secure our country and restore our global leadership.

I will not stand idly by while this mistaken war continues. I will continue to work to end this war and bring our troops home. I will continue looking in the days and weeks ahead for opportunities to debate and vote on ending the war, this year, and, if necessary, next as well.

My colleagues may complain, they may be inconvenient, they may prefer to focus on other matters. But this Congress has no greater priority than making right the mistake it made more than 5 years ago when it authorized this misguided war.

I do not want to have to come to the floor again in a year to mark another anniversary of the war’s authorization, and to again implore my colleagues to not want the horrible outcome of those who lose faith in their elected leaders for pursuing a war they rightly oppose. I do not want more American troops to be killed for a war that does not serve our national security interests.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are in morning business.

ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, this country is headed toward a total meltdown on taxes. I am going to spend a few minutes this afternoon to talk about how that can be cooled off for a bit.

Yesterday Treasury Secretary Paulson warned that unless Congress acts within the next month on the alternative minimum tax, up to 50 million households, more than a third of all taxpayers, could be clobbered with new taxes. Congress has known for a long time that unless the alternative minimum tax, which has a completely different and more complex set of forms.

Having to do your taxes once is bad enough. On average, that takes something like 15 to 30 hours, depending on whether a taxpayer is itemizing. But having to do your taxes is simply bureaucratic water torture.

Yesterday’s announcement by Treasury Secretary Paulson revealed that twice as many taxpayers as previously estimated could be put in bureaucratic limbo by the alternative minimum tax and face delays in processing their returns and getting a tax refund. The problem is going to get worse each year, as more and more tax-paying Americans are dragged into the alternative minimum tax parallel universe of tax rules, because the tax law is now stuck in a time warp.

It was never indexed for inflation. If Congress does not act, an estimated 30 million taxpaying Americans are going to be hit by the alternative minimum tax double whammy in 2010.
The Congress has not been able to get ahead of the problem. It is simply, at this point, trying to keep the problem from getting worse. Each year, the cost of even the so-called temporary patch to keep the AMT from clobbering more persons goes up. This year it will cost $55 billion, double the cost of the last year. The next year the cost will go to $80 billion. Over 10 years the cost is an astounding $870 billion.

The Senate Finance Committee, on which I serve, is trying to find a way to pay for the Social Security reform in a way that is about as good a deal for the middle class as the Bush tax cut. For purposes of Government work, that is about the same thing. We can get bipartisan agreement on tax simplification, if the President engaged the Congress fairly quickly. Certainly, the other issues will take a great deal more thought and involve more complexity, but I have been asking witnesses who come before the Finance Committee their views about tax reform. These are experts who come from across the political spectrum. They share widely differing views. But of the witnesses who came to the Finance Committee, 19 out of 20 witnesses agree with my fundamental premise that the model of 1986, holding down rates for everybody, keeping progressivity and financing it by getting rid of the competition between tax preferences all said the 1986 model, put together by the late President Reagan and Democrats in Congress, is still a model that makes sense for today.

One of the witnesses even said: Baseball fans remember the moment when Babe Ruth pointed at the stands and said "You can’t catch me." That should be the message that the Congress ought to be looking at and should lead to comprehensive tax reform in our country.

This week the House Ways and Means Chairman planned to unveil his proposal that would repeal the alternative minimum tax as part of a larger tax reform effort. Over the summer, Treasury Secretary Paulson called for corporate tax reform. Ways and Means Chairman Rangel has indicated he is going to look at the issue of corporate reform as part of broader legislation he wants to consider. But I think there is an opportunity now, if the administration would engage the Congress on tax reform, and there is a model. The model is one where a Republican President, Ronald Reagan, worked with the Democratic Congress to achieve historic reform in 1986. It was based on a simple set of principles. Those principles are about as a nation, not pitting one against each other but looking to make the Tax Code flatter to make sure that instead of six individual brackets, we would have perhaps three. I start with the rates Ronald Reagan started with, but I am not wedded to those particular rates. Ronald Reagan’s rates in 1986 looked at something in the vicinity of 15 and 28 percent. The point is, if Members of this body, working with the President on a bipartisan basis, want to get into this, it would be possible to get a comprehensive tax reform now. The alternatives, as the Senator sees how difficult it is to fix the alternative minimum tax and deal with various proposals as it relates to investment and hedge funds, strike me as nowhere near as appealing as dealing with comprehensive tax reform.

Many have raised the question of the issue of the differential treatment between work and wealth. It is a fact that the cop walking the beat today is not going to be paying the same income taxes at a significantly higher rate than somebody who makes their money from investments. That is a fact that ought to trouble all Americans. What we ought to be trying to do is not pit those two against each other but look at an approach such as the one pursued in 1986 so that all Americans would have a chance to get ahead. That is what we are about as a nation, not pitting one group of people against another. We want people who work for a wage and people who make money through investments to get ahead.

It was a system that kept progressivity so that there was a sense of fairness for all Americans. It was a system based on cleaning out a lot of unnecessary tax breaks, clutter in the Tax Code, in order to finance reform.

There were proposed to do in legislation that I call the Fair Flat Tax Act. I believe there are real opportunities for bipartisan reform, starting with the issue of tax simplification. In our Fair Flat Tax Act we have a 1-page 1040 form, something like 30 lines long. The President Bush had a tax reform commission that looked at reform. Their simplification process involved a form that was something like 34 lines long. For purposes of Government work, that is about the same thing. We could get bipartisan agreement on tax simplification, if the President engaged the Congress fairly quickly. Certainly, the other issues will take a

The standard deduction would be tripled for standard filers from $5,000 to $15,000 and raised from $10,000 to $30,000 for married couples. As a result, the vast majority of Americans would be better off claiming the standard deduction instead of itemizing their deductions, so filing will be simplified for all Americans. We also keep the deductions most used by middle-class families, as Ronald Reagan and Bill Bradley and others who worked so hard in 1986 said. We protect the home mortgage interest break, the one for charitable contributions, and the credits for children, education, and earned income. But nobody would have to calculate their taxes twice under the Fair Flat Tax Act.

The alternative minimum tax would be eliminated. This is particularly important right now as citizens look at the challenges they are going to face next year.

What makes the Fair Flat Tax Act unique is it also corrects one of the most glaring inequities in the current tax system; that is, regressive State and local taxes. Under current law, low and middle-income-taxpayers get hit by a double whammy. The Federal government allows tax deductions for State and local taxes. Poor families pay more than 11 percent, and middle-income families pay about 10 percent of their income in State and local taxes, while more fortunate individuals pay only about half. Because many low- and middle-income taxpayers don’t itemize, they get no credit on their Federal forms for paying State and local taxes. In fact, two-thirds of the Federal deduction for State and local taxes goes to those with substantial incomes. Under the Fair Flat Tax Act, for the first time the Federal code would look at the individual’s entire income, the Federal, State, and local tax burden, and give credit to low and middle-income individuals to correct for regressive State and local taxes.

What this all means—and we had Jane Gravelle and her excellent team at the Congressional Research Service work on these numbers—is that the typical middle-class family with wage and salary income up to approximately $150,000 a year would see tax relief in a way that the President and the Federal Government to lose revenue.

Finally, by simplifying the code, there are other benefits. With a simpler system, it would be harder for individuals to take advantage of the system and easier for the Internal Revenue Service to catch those who do cheat. At present, there is a tax gap between taxes owed and collected of over $300 billion per year. Chairman BAUCUS and Senator GRASSLEY have done yeoman’s work on this issue. I believe the Fair Flat Tax Act can provide a significant dent in dealing with the tax gap, raising a significant amount of revenue from a source that would not increase taxes. The Fair Flat Tax Act, as it relates to the tax gap issue, is a win for all Americans except for those who have been cheating the system.

I am obviously aware that the clock is ticking down on this session of Congress. Certainly, by early next year, in the midst of a presidential election, something such as this is daunting. But it is time for Congress to get started now on what witness after witness after witness in the Finance Committee is saying; that is, the urgent need to make tax changes, to get about draining the swamp.

To give you an idea of what the numbers are with respect to tax changes, the latest analysis shows we have had something akin to 15,000 tax changes. That comes to three for every working day. Even regional IRS offices, according to practitioners I talk to, cannot agree among themselves as to how to apply this increasingly complicated Tax Code.

It is time to get started. The Bush tax cuts expire in 2010. Certainly, that is going to cause additional confusion and chaos for taxpayers. With the problems the Congress is wrestling with now, such as the immediate crunch of the alternative minimum tax and with the hammer poised to come down in 2010 with all the other expiring tax laws, there is a strong incentive for members of both political parties to come to the table and get to work on tax reform.

I hope colleagues will look at the Fair Flat Tax Act as a way to start the debate. I don’t consider it the last word on this extraordinarily important subject, but I hope we can begin the debate now.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARDIN). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, what is the order of business at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We are in morning business.

Mr. LOTT. Until what time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no time limit.

AMTRAK

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, while we are in this morning business period and in anticipation of going to the next legislation, I wish to make some opening comments about what happened here and make a plea to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, but particularly my own side of the aisle, that we not object to going to consideration of Amtrak legislation.

I have been working on this issue for several years now. I think it is an important issue. It is an important part of our transportation system in America. I believe that for the future development of our country, for the mobility of our country, for the creation of jobs, the maintaining of jobs, for safety, security, and access, we should pay attention to infrastructure in America, and it is a railroad system, not just Amtrak trains, and harbors. This is critical to our future economic development and to our American lifestyle.

I have been working for years to upgrade and improve the Federal Aviation Administration, the air traffic control system so we can have less congestion in the airways and fewer delays, and modernization. We are still working on that. We did get FAA reauthorization a few years ago. Now it is back up but, unfortunately, stalled right now. We did pass a highway bill a few years ago that had many good things in it. But here is my point: You can only build so many lanes until you can’t build any more. You can only have so many inches in the way until you can’t have any more. So what is the other alternative? Trains.

Now, I am not from a State that is hugely dependent on the rail passenger system. We get some of the benefits of it. But what is true is we don’t have enough access, enough opportunities in that area, or we have delays and problems such as that. Why do we have delays? Because we haven’t modernized the Amtrak system. Because we have not worked with the Transportation Department to put in some reforms, decide what is needed in terms of money, and how to get more capitalization. We haven’t done the reforms.

I was pleased to be involved the last time we did some Amtrak legislation. That was several years ago. I stood right in this very spot and told my friend JOHN MCCAIN from Arizona if it didn’t work and if Amtrak didn’t do a better job, I would eat it without salt.

Well, I have probably eaten it without salt later on. It didn’t do everything I hoped it would. But what is the alternative? Do we want a national rail passenger system or not? I think we do. I don’t mean only on the Northeast corridor, although I love the Northeast corridor. I have been delighted to work with my friend and colleague from New Jersey, Senator LAUTENBERG, on this legislation, because I want good Amtrak service between Washington and New York City. Frankly, I would rather ride the Acela to New York City than the shuttle, the airline shuttle. You go to the airport; you wait; you are delayed. You get on the train. You ride the Acela. You do your computer. You are not crowded. It is nice. Clean. It works. You can get a little something to eat, and you arrive in New York City.

I realize Acela is one of the best in the country, but we need to do more. In fact, putting money in it—and by the way, we are starving it to death and then we are saying, Why didn’t it do better? It is because we haven’t given them more opportunities, we haven’t had more requirements, we haven’t had reforms. I tried for the past 2 years to get this legislation up. We had some objections. We had some Senators who wanted to offer amendments. My attitude is: Fine. If you have amendments, let’s go with them. Administration: If you have some reforms, fine, let’s do it. But we need to get this thing done.

Now here we are, we have a different majority. Senator LAUTENBERG is the chairman of the committee. But basically, this is the bill he and I put together 3 years ago. It is time to do it. It is not perfect. It has some reforms in it. It has some requirements in it. By the way, more people are riding Amtrak, and they have more income. They are doing better. If we give them more incentives, if we get them to close some of the routes that are never going to be profitable, they are not going to do it. It would be even better than that.

I am not going to give my full opening speech now, even though I sound like it. I am saying to my colleagues, we would not object to the motion to proceed on every bill, and filibuster the motion to proceed. That is bad business. Do it judiciously? Yes. If you want to slow this place down, time after time after time, yes, we can do that. But I stood here on the floor earlier today and last night and said: If the Senate will do the right thing on this judicial nomination, Leslie Southwick, that will be a step forward to show that this place can work together. We can be less partisan, and there will be some benefits. I am standing right here right now saying this is the next step. Let’s not tangle this bill up because we are not ready, or because we may not like it. You don’t like it? Vote against it. You want more? Bring your amendments. Let’s get this done. I hope my colleagues will not try to block the motion to proceed. Senator REID is going to ask unanimous consent that we go to the bill, and I hope to that if it is objected to, he is going to file cloture and he is going to make us eat it, because we ought to take this up and deal with it. If we want to kill it, shoot it down, but doing nothing is unacceptable.

The Senate has become very proficient at doing nothing; not just this year, but last year and the year before. We paid a price, because we didn’t get anything done in the previous 2 years. And we are going to do it again or then we do something for the American people? This is one way we can do it.

So I make that plea and I hope we can get something worked out when we get on this bill. I will not be a party to try to ram it through so quickly people can’t get their amendments ready.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to yield to my distinguished colleague and leader on this effort now, and to my friend from New Jersey, and I look forward to working with him on this legislation.
Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, the obvious obstinacy at getting this on the floor serves to lower the question of whether you cannot or you have no idea where to begin, or you have no idea where to proceed.

Is it necessary for me to ask the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, how difficult is it for the country right now? You can’t get an airplane that will leave on time or arrive on time with any degree of certainty. I, for instance, here up to Amtrak or to LaGuardia Airport, both of which are convenient to my home in New Jersey, and a flight that takes 36 minutes of air time takes 3½ hours to get there, more often than not.

So do the Senator’s friends understand that this is a crisis moment for this country of ours? We have seen incidents so many times where the absence of a rail system—for instance, we threw away billions of dollars some years ago for our power plants that were built, ready to operate, couldn’t get a license to go because there weren’t satisfactory evacuation routes and it had to be by rail because the highways were unable to provide for it.

If we look at Katrina and we see how much better we could have done if rail was sufficiently employed down there, and we didn’t get it, and people were jammed and stuck in there.

There is no difference in what—when you cross the aisle, when you ask the question: Do we want to get things operating better? Do we want to facilitate our corporations to operate efficiently? Do we want to provide the jobs that go along when you have facilities for travel in place? Would people do better if they could travel by rail rather than have to get in a car and pay who knows what for gasoline? It is predicted that oil is going to go up to $200 a barrel in 30 to 60 days. Well, Heaven forbid that does come. We are not going to close shop and say we will go home and rest.

Do the Senator’s colleagues recognize that those who don’t want to let us get this train on its trains of started, do they realize that these problems are in front of us, I ask?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, let me say to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, I am sorry I went ahead and spoilt the thing that you are chairman of the committee and you have been providing real leadership in trying to get this legislation brought up. I did it because I wanted to make a plea to my colleagues on this side of the aisle to let this move forward. Let me emphasize that I have no indication there will be objection. They want to take a look at it. They want to make sure they will have a chance to offer amendments or substitutes. I have assured them we will work with them. I believe we are going to be able to clear the hurdles, but I wanted to make a public plea so we could get on this legislation and guarantee the Members that their amendments will be considered and, in fact, in the past, when we worked together, we have accepted amendments and fought some of them, and we had votes. It is a novel idea in the Senate, to have a debate and have a vote.

But I would like to make a public plea, I have enjoyed working with Senator LAUTENBERG. This is a lot bigger issue in New Jersey and along the eastern seaboard, I guess, but more and more it is important on the west coast, it is important to the Chicago area, it is important all over the country. We will be taking the rail for one region or the other region, or trying to accommodate business or labor; this is about American people. So I think my colleagues, hopefully, are going to realize that we ought to do something about Amtrak, and this is the way to get it done.

I thank the Senator for his question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, in response, A, I want to respond to what my friend from Mississippi has said. We have worked together in the past and we have gotten things done in the past. We know that Amtrak finally has come into its place. We have a lot of work to do yet about what travel is like these days in all forms. The highways are too congested. The airways are getting even more congested. The expectation is that delays are going to become even longer. So I hope we can discuss it and those who want to amend it—the Senator is right, we should consider amendments. As a matter of fact, I think it is good if we do hear from people and see what problems they foresee. But we can’t get it done unless we talk about it, unless we prepare for a vote. Are we about to say to the American people: No, continue to suffer? Stay stuck in traffic? Stay stuck at the airports? Time will take care of it? All who do is spend more time away from home, away from your job and away from things you might enjoy.

American people, get used to spend more time away from home in useless activities, such as listening to an idling engine or listening to the car radio or something like that. We cannot function this way.

Now the time is upon us where we have to do something about this. I believe this is an opportune time. I know a lot of the Members of the other side of the aisle want to see this happen. After all, we touch 40 States across the country. Wherever you look and see where there has been new or upgraded rail service, people are responding to it: On the west coast, and some of the routes out of Chicago, people are responding to it, and they are getting on trains.

I use the trains frequently. The other day I got on an Amtrak train here and, it was a full train with barely a seat left. So people are demanding it. If we look at the example that exists, let’s say in Europe or in Japan, and see what happens. When I wanted to take a plane one time from Brussels, where a NATO meeting was ongoing, to go to Paris, I tried to get a flight. They said: You cannot get an airplane from here because we go by train—200 miles in 1 hour and 20 minutes. Imagine what it would do for travel in this country and bring about progress.

So I am ready whenever my colleagues and our friends on that side of the aisle are ready. I am told we are all set here and ready to go.

Mr. LOTT. If the Senator will yield, since I have worked with the Senator on this issue, some of my colleagues have taken to calling me Senator “Lott-enberg.” I know there is a bit of a regional difference. It is not quite as crowded in our neck of the woods, so you might come on down South and it would be a lot less crowded. However, I would like for them to be able to get there on Amtrak, to be able to catch that train in Washington or in Newark and run on down and come through Atlanta to Jackson. I think they would enjoy it once they got there. I invite the Senator from New Jersey to take the ride to Jackson, and we will show him around down there.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. A, I would like to do it; and B, I wonder if people realize how many new lines are being dreamt up—I say “dreamt up” because unless we get the base going, nothing else is going to happen.

I hear from colleagues in other States besides mine who say, you know, we could use train service here or there. We have seen something in New Jersey that exemplifies the value of rail service. We keep from the southernmost tip of our State to Trenton, our State capital. The ridership, at first, was very low. Before you knew it, we began to see buildings, factories, warehouses, et cetera, being built along the way. And now the area is beginning to prosper where it was just dead and nothing was going on. That is what we have seen.

There is a lot of talk about something called transit villages. In New Jersey, the most crowded in the country, we don’t think about villages really, but we have transit villages centered around a rail hub. People know they can get back and forth to work and they can run an efficient operation.

So this is a point in time when opportunity presents itself, and we ought not to miss it. If we cannot see it, we ought to keep the public seeing it. At this point in time, we ought to be able to discuss it. We should not have any obstruction to bringing the issue to the floor of the Senate. Let’s get out in this public forum and have a discussion about what we might do. I don’t think there are problems that can be dealt with or maybe we can go to some other kinds of travel—I don’t know what kind, but we at least ought to take the one nearest to us that is the best option.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, we are working on when we are going to be able to get this up. I have a couple of points. One, we have a catch-22. Our Members want to make sure they have a chance to offer amendments, and we want to do that. At the same time, our leadership on both sides has to pay attention to when and how we get it done. And I think it is important that we come in on the leadership from the committee to work with Members to get amendments but also not to let this become a punching bag and have Members throwing everything out but the kitchen sink.

I believe we can move this through in a reasonable time. My attitude is, when Senators have amendments, come over and offer them. We will debate them and then have a vote. We will not shove it over until 9 or 10 o'clock tomorrow night. I think there is hesitation on both sides of the aisle, and we have to work through that. But we have done this before. We did this bill two years ago, or so, and we got 90-something amendments done that.

Mr. President, one other observation: As I have worked on this, another part of the equation of having a good national rail passage system is encouraging our States to be able to do more on the build lines like we have in San Francisco to the L.A. area—there is incentive to do more—and at the same time, not telling poorer States that they have to do way more than they are capable of doing.

Also, of a couple of weeks ago, I thought about this bill. I was at Big D’s Barbeque at Pocahontas, MS. The City of New Orleans, a sleeper Amtrak train, came whizzing by Big D’s Tee Pee. They were ballin’ the jack headed to New Orleans. It had about six or eight cars, which is relatively short. But the important thing was that they were going lickity-split.

If we are going to be able to get these trains, in a reasonable way, where they want to go, part of the problem is the freight lines have. If they are going to get off on a side track and let the Amtrak go through, they have to build side tracks. We need more lines all across America. Union Pacific, Burlington Northern, Santa Fe—they need to build more lines across this country. We need to encourage the freight lines to build more capacity, more lines, and more side tracks, so they can work with Amtrak, so that Amtrak is not adding to the problems of doing the freight lines. So I am looking at that equation too. We don’t want a conflict between Amtrak and freight lines. We want them both to be able to make a profit and deliver the goods and services to the American people.

So we are working on that side of the equation too, to make sure that Amtrak has a way to be on time.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. The Senator from Mississippi remembers the days when we had a hearing on freight railroads, and that traffic is going to be up some 44 percent by 2020. They are concerned about how to get it done. At the same time, we have to provide for passenger rail service. This is a good time for all sides to get together and start moving.

Does the Senator remember this bill was processed on the Senate floor last year? We had a vote that was 93 to 6. I lost a vote. It was actually in 2006.

Mr. LOTT. Yes, I think that is right.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. The vote was 93 to 6, I remind everybody. This was popularly supported, totally understood. We were on our way to the next station, and it didn’t work out. Things were a little tumultuous, to put it mildly. Now there is a cooler moment to think about it and present it. We have time available on the floor, and I think to waste it would be a terrible loss when we can discuss this important problem with a solution for the country.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I thank my colleague. The occupant of the chair, the Senator from Maryland, I suspect, supports this too. I am ready to do business when we get the go-ahead to take up this legislation.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. McCaskill). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Parliamentary inquiry, Madam President: Is the Senate in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business, with 10-minute grants.

Mr. MARTINEZ. I wish to speak for a period of 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CUBA

Mr. MARTINEZ. Madam President, in the last couple of hours, the President took the opportunity to speak at the State Department on the condition of relations between the United States and Cuba. For me, as an immigrant from Cuba, born on that island and an immigrant to this country, it was a very moving and transcending kind of moment. The President, for the first time, I think, in many years that any American President might do this, detailed the problems in Cuba and the cruelty of that regime toward its own people.

The President put a human face on the suffering of the Cuban people by inviting to the stage with him three families of Cuban political prisoners. These families, each with their own tale of hardship and suffering, were representatives of what I think is the most central 21st century long suffering of the Cuban people. He spoke about their plight, the unjust nature of their relatives’ incarceration, which is nothing more than a representative sampling of what the Cuban people have suffered over so many years of brutal repression.

He also detailed the many failed promises of the Cuban revolution to their own people. He said of the failed promises; that the revolution would bring a better life and so many other things that have simply not occurred. He detailed frankly, the economic misery the Cuban people suffer from today, the fact that housing is deteriorating faster than is necessary that many families have to, obviously, live together. He spoke about the irony that while the Cuban system touts the greatness of their medical prowess; in fact the Cuban people do not have access to the kind of quality medical care that medical tourists can obtain.

Just as an anecdote, sitting next to me was a foreign diplomat who mentioned to me that she had been to Cuba for eye surgery some years earlier. I asked her how she managed it. To the same time—I think she said that was in 1992—I had a relative, an uncle of mine, whom we had brought to this country so he could have eye surgery here because he couldn’t get it in Cuba. So as Cuban visitors, they can get first-rate medical care in Cuba, but it is not always available to the Cuban people.

He spoke about the oppression of those who seek to be a voice for change and the fact that many of those in prison, these patriots, are in prison for nothing more than having a fax machine in their home or a willingness to speak and talk about the human rights conditions on the island. The fact is that each of these brave souls takes great risk in order to facilitate the opportunity for Cubans to speak to one another, for the opportunity to speak in freedom, the opportunity to freely express an idea. These are things which are congruent to the Cuban plight.

The President made an offer. He made an offer that the United States, through non-governmental organizations and religious entities, would send computers and provide Internet access to the Cuban people, if only the Cuban Government would allow the average, everyday Cuban—what today is part of international trade, commerce, and communications—Internet access.

Internet access in Cuba today is only allowed under the strictest of Government authority, and it is a way in which the Cuban people are held back from achieving the promise that the 21st century has for so many people, in so many other places.

He also spoke about the opportunity for Cuban children to be a part of a scholarship program and all they would have to do is to be freely allowed to participate.

He spoke to the international community using the example of the Czech Republic, Hungary, and Poland, which have, with such determination, stood clearly on the side of freedom, stood clearly on the side of those in Cuba.
who are not satisfied with the current conditions but look to the moment of their liberty, look to the moment of freedom. These new democracies in Europe, who still well remember the days of their oppression at the hands of another Communist dictator, are very much helping the Cuban dissident movement, in allowing them to come to their embassies and just stand in their lobbies and have access to a magazine or a newspaper or a book that would otherwise not be permitted by the Cuban authorities.

We can all do more. The United States has been at the forefront of assistance to a free Cuba, but no doubt many other countries, many other capitals across the world could well heed the example these Eastern European governments are today giving to the rest of the world as they stand clearly on the side of freedom.

The fact is that the most important take-away, if you will, that I heard today moving, emotional, and I thought historic speech was the fact that the President today said that in the future of Cuba, we should be clearly on the side of freedom and not on the side of stability.

You see, the Cuban people are in the throes of change. Change is happening on that imprisoned island today, and that change can take one of several forms. One of them would be for us to side with stability and more of the same. The other would be to chart that uncertain path that freedom often brings but a path that ultimately leads to the opportunities for free people to live freely, that opportunity to simply stand in a town square and speak your mind.

So often people ask me: Have you ever been back to Cuba?

And I say: No.

And I say: Yes, I will go back the day I can stand in the park of my little town where I grew up, in Sagua La Grande, Cuba, and stand there and freely express my thoughts or the day I can pick up a book and read it freely.

Those are the times and those are the conditions under which the Cuban people will really begin to taste freedom.

All of Latin America today in one measure or another is moving to the march of democratic governments and clearly enjoying the fruits of a free market trade. The agreements currently pending with Latin American countries will only continue to expand the wave of prosperity that is today sweeping that continent. But one example remains, one example of absolute tyranny, one example of an old-fashioned, brutal military dictator, and that is Cuba.

The fact is, I do believe freedom is on the march and that freedom can come to the Cuban people. I hope we can continue to encourage the voices of freedom.

The President spoke to the military, he spoke to the governmental structures of the Cuban Government, and he pleaded with them to side with the people of Cuba, who seek to live free and not use the elements of repression at a critical and decisive moment in the future of Cuba.

I have no doubt that many of those who today might have been, at one time, supporters of the Cuban regime, who believed in the promises of the revolution, as at one time or another all of us did, that they would now understand that this failed system has a limited lifespan and that it is time to side with the forces of freedom and not with the forces of repression and tyranny. For those who have no blood on their hands, they do have a future in a free Cuba.

One of the more touching moments today was when the President discussed dissidents, such as Oscar Elias Biscet. Oscar Elias Biscet is a physician who has been sentenced, to believe 20 years, for merely speaking and expressing his desire to see a change within Cuba. He is in deplorable conditions, in rat-infested conditions, needing medical care and getting none. He is the face of the future of Cuba. He is the face of the dissidents in Cuba. He is a young man, born and raised under the Castro regime. He does not belong to any rich families of the past. In fact, he happens to be an Afro-Cuban. He is a physician. He believes in life at all stages, from conception to death, and that was one of the big sins for which he has been punished in Cuba.

So I would say that today is an important day in the history of U.S. relations with Cuba. I hope it will also be a historic marker for the future of the Cuban people. The President spoke about a popular song, both in Cuba and outside, and it basically talks about “our day is coming.” I don’t think there is any doubt that the freedom of the Cuban people is coming and that our day, our day is coming.

I look forward to continuing to help the dissident movement inside Cuba in any way that we can, to continuing to help the voices of freedom that so much yearn for an opportunity. I believe the President made it clear that the standard by which we should judge our future relations with Cuba is the way in which the Cuban Government treats its own people; by releasing political prisoners, by allowing freedom of expression, freedom of the press, and by ending these despicable acts of repression or repudiation, which are nothing more than a government-organized gang of neighbors banging up on someone who, for whatever reason, seems to be out of step with the orthodoxy of the Government of the day. These are horrible beatings and harassment that cut across age groups. It is not just about the head of the household who has expressed himself in a way the Government doesn’t like or about the guilt of that ill-defined crime of dangerousness. But the children of that family suffer, the elderly, and all of the members of any family who is chosen for these repudiation acts. They all suffer. Those are despicable acts. Those have to end—those kind of repression—and the freeing of political prisoners. These simple things.

When people talk about what is going to be in the future, the future is in the hands of the Cuban people. I know the United States will stand clearly on the side of freedom. That is, what makes our country so very different and so very special, is the fact we do put freedom first; that freedom is on every human being, every human life, and the dignity of each one; that we do understand there is a difference between freedom and oppression and we choose to stand clearly on the side of freedom.

I will always be proud to stand with our President, who so clearly spoke today about his desire to stand on the side of freedom. I hope many of my colleagues in the Senate will take the time to read the speech the President gave today. If you care about Latin America, if you care about Cuba, if you care about the future of that oppressed island, I think this was a very good moment.

I see my dear colleague from New Jersey and fellow Cuban American here on the Senate floor, and I know we share the same passion for the opportunity for Cuba to be free. This isn’t a partisan issue between us; this is about the right of the Cuban people to live freely. I say to Senator MENENDEZ that it was a momentous speech and I think one that will be a historic marker, as I said, in the relations between our countries and the opportunity for the Cuban people to live in freedom. I think it was an important moment, and I hope my colleague will have an opportunity to see and read it. It was the kind of speech so many of us have wished for and were delighted to hear today.

Madam President, I appreciate the indulgence of the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Madam President, I come to the floor primarily to speak about a vote we took earlier today on the DREAM Act. I do appreciate my distinguished colleague from Florida’s comments about the President’s speech. We look forward to getting a further focus on what the President had to say. We certainly appreciate any movement, any policy that tries to create an opportunity for freedom for the people of Cuba, for them to be able to achieve what we enjoy here in the United States—the right to choose our Representatives, to worship at the altar that we chose freely, to be able to associate with others freely, to be able to protest when we believe our Government is moving in the wrong direction. We look forward to getting a further focus on freedom of religion, freedom of speech. All of those things are denied the Cuban people.
Certainly, the efforts the President speaks about, trying to move in the direction that creates that moment in which those freedoms can be fulfilled for the people of Cuba, we applaud.

THE DREAM ACT

Mr. MENENDEZ. Madam President, I came to the floor to talk about the earlier vote on the DREAM Act. I have heard some of my colleagues define it in ways that make me believe the future of any other form of immigration reform is going to be incredibly difficult. We did not get to cloture and cannot move to have a full debate on the bill and a vote to move in a direction in which we could give young people in this country—who did not choose to come to this country themselves, as they were brought here by their parents at a young age, and who in many cases could achieve great success for the Nation—an opportunity to earn citizenship and achieve their dreams.

To see that those hopes have been snuffed out by the votes that were taken here leads me to believe the future of any other form of immigration reform is going to be incredibly difficult.

It was not the decision of these children to come to the United States. It’s hard to make a decision about where you are moving to when you are in a stroller. If we cannot give hope to children, how can we expect them to do their part, to talk about the high-tech industry and their needs, who talk about the hotels and motels and poultry plants and seafood establishments and the list goes on and on—and let’s give those people who have met across the landscape of the country the opportunity to have the status to perform that service.

Those in the service industries, such as the hotels and motels of our cities and highways, who want people to clean the toilets and the bathrooms, or those who want workers to pluck the chickens at poultry plants or work at seafood establishments and the list goes on and on—let’s give those people the status to earn citizenship and let’s use their human capital. I am for any American who wants to do any of those jobs first and foremost. Whatever is necessary to create that opportunity, I am for. But in the absence of it, I wish to challenge some of our colleagues to talk to others and to do their needs, who talk about the high-tech industry and their needs, who talk about the hotels and motels and poultry plants and seafood plants—and then vote against these children. I doubt I hear how they can justify the differences.

What the DREAM Act said was if you had no choice, you made no choice in coming to this country—your parents brought you here, you grew up here and you have been a good citizen, you have lived the type of life we want all our young people to live in terms of being good citizens, being of exemplary character, being individuals who have the intellectual capacity on their own to work, and put them in the opportunity to have the status to do that. I would rather have our kids going to school than hanging out on the streets, but I guess we would rather have them hanging out on the streets than rather than having them get an education and serving our Nation.

I don’t understand how a military that is straining, in terms of the volunteer Armed Forces that we have, that has now downgraded whom they are willing to enlist, the Armed Forces that we have, and is willing to include people who have criminal records and those who are high school dropouts, we will have those people serve, but we will not have young people who are incredibly talented, have no criminal records whatsoever, exemplary individuals, and some of them, some very smart ones, but who want to serve America because they believe themselves to be Americans—oh, no, let’s not have them serve in the Armed forces of the United States. By virtue of that, we are diminishing the possibility that they could die on behalf of their adopted country, no, let’s not give them that opportunity either. We would rather take people who have criminal records. We would rather take people who have not even finished high school.

The first U.S. soldier who died in Iraq was someone who was not a U.S. citizen. He died in Iraq in the service of the country he loved as his own.

I believe there are going to be challenges going forward. As Members of the Senate who represent different parts of our economy come forth and say, ‘This is all going to change, because we need to get people in those fields, we can’t get anybody to do the job’ or, ‘I need to have someone at that poultry plant and make sure that we are able to pluck chickens and go through the bone-breaking job, their hands are cut from the processing.’ I want to see how, in fact, that discussion is going to take place.

We will certainly be here to challenge our colleagues to think about how can you promote those desires and aspirations of young people and the hard way to the United States, then this is not the America I know.

If, by no choice of your own, you came to this country and have now grown up—for many of those children I have met across the landscape of the country have grown up as Americans, and thought of themselves as Americans—we then are going to let those children be responsible for the sins of their parents, in making the decision they did to come in an undocumented fashion to the United States, then this is not the America I know.

I have colleagues who represent a lot of sectors, and they want people to come to this country and use their human capital to do some of the tough jobs that exist in America, to bend their backs and be on their knees picking crops for Americans to be able to consume.

There are some who suggest we are going to even change the makeup of what AgJOBS is, so even though you come year after year, you bend your back, you give your sweat, you do some of the toughest jobs no one wants to do—we will not give you any pathway to earn legalization.

I doubt I hear how they can justify the differences. We will certainly be here to challenge those who want to see the AgJOBS bill move think it can move when we turn down children who had no choice of their own. Our friends in industries that request H–B visas say we need to bring people from other countries in the world to America because we don’t have enough human capital here to meet our Nation’s high-tech demands, but in that case it doesn’t make sense to refuse to take advantage of the proven capacity of so many children in this country, some of whom have graduated as val- edictorians and salutatorians from high school. A vote against the DREAM Act says, we are not going to use that intellect; no, let’s bring in somebody from outside the country to perform that service.

We will certainly be here to challenge our colleagues to think about how can you promote those desires and aspirations of young people and the hard way to the United States, then this is not the America I know.
Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Madam President, as my colleagues know, earlier this week President Bush announced he will ask this Congress to provide an additional $46 billion for the war in Iraq next year. That is $46 billion more than the $150 billion he already told us he would ask for. Taken together, that is close to $200 billion more than the hundreds of billions of dollars the taxpayer has already poured into the sands and marshes of Iraq—for a war this President has made clear he has no intention of ending.

The people of Rhode Island are tired of watching their sons and daughters, their neighbors and their friends, sent off to war by a President who won’t trouble himself to make a plan to bring them home. They are tired of spending money our country has to borrow on a war with burdens our country should no longer bear. And they are sick and tired of hearing this President veto or threaten to veto legislation passed by this Congress that supports the real and urgent needs of Americans and their families—all because he says it costs too much.

Clearly, this President is an expert when it comes to irresponsible and excessive spending. Look at the war. Look at the private contractors. Look at the national debt he has run up. But look at the real and urgent needs of Americans. How can he keep a straight face and tell the American people it is more important to borrow and spend $35 billion for 3½ more months of the Iraq war than it is to provide budgeted health insurance for 5 years to 10 million American children? What a sobering revelation of this administration’s misplaced priorities.

No American should doubt for 1 minute what is going on here. Every time President Bush vetoes bills to fund children’s health care, every time he threatens to veto legislation that will send our Nation’s children to college, keep families warm during the winter months, invest in job training and technical education programs, or offer the promise of medical cures through research at the National Institutes of Health, President Bush is making a choice. He is choosing prolonging a war in Iraq over battling cancer. He is choosing his no-plan war over helping families in poverty. It is a choice, and it is the wrong choice.

Last night, the Senate passed a bill to provide funding for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and other agencies. On October 17, the administration expressed its opposition to this appropriations bill based on what it calls “an irresponsible and excessive level of spending.” As I said, this President is certainly expert in finding irresponsible and excessive levels of spending, but what does he mean? The President means that $10.8 billion spent to help millions of Americans lead healthier, more productive lives is irresponsible and excessive, but the nearly $200 billion more that the President wants to borrow and spend on the war in Iraq is just fine.

Let’s look at two areas in this bill where the funding levels we propose exceed those in the administration’s budget to see just how irresponsible and excessive we are.

The first is at the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute at NIH. Our bill funds the institute at $677 million more than the President’s request. I want to reproduce my colleagues to one man who does not think this increase is irresponsible and excessive.

This is a picture of Richard Pezzillo on his last visit to Washington, DC. Rich is a bright, kind, thoughtful man from North Providence, RI, who hopes one day to become a meteorologist. Rich also suffers from hemophilia and right now lies in a hospital bed in Rhode Island, too sick to attend his classes at Western Connecticut State University where he hopes to graduate this May. Sadly, Rich, now 24, has missed 2½ years of school due to his illness.

One of these absences was caused by an activity most of us would never even think about—something we do, in fact, to save lives—putting on a seatbelt. Three years ago, Rich unfastened his seatbelt from the airplane, collected his things, and walked off into the airport and suddenly started to feel tremendous pain, vomiting blood. Simply wearing his seatbelt had caused Rich to bleed internally, inside of his stomach, eventually requiring that his gall bladder be removed. Rich spent roughly 3 weeks in the hospital, accumulating bills totaling nearly $1.5 million. Luckily, Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Rhode Island, his family’s insurer, covered most of these costs. But Rich is desperately afraid what will happen to him when he graduates from college and no longer qualifies under his parents’ health care plan. Hemophilia is one of the most expensive conditions a person can have, one that few insurance companies will want to take on.

Richard Pezzillo is a fighter. He is an example for us all. But he will continue to face tremendous difficulties with his health throughout his life. Soon, thanks to research going on at the National Institutes of Health; specifically at the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute, hemophilia could be the first disease cured by gene therapy. The funding in this appropriations bill will go toward research which could save Richard’s life and the lives of 18,000 people across this country who suffer from hemophilia. This spending is not irresponsible. This spending is not excessive. This spending is vital and it is working and it has the potential to save thousands of people like Rich Pezzillo.

A second place where this bill calls for spending above the President’s budget—$128 million above his budget to be exact—is at the National Cancer Institute. Here I want to relate the story of Benjamin Haight. I met Ben’s parents this summer when they came down to my office from Warwick, RI, to share their little boy’s story. Ben was diagnosed with neuroblastoma early in 1999 when he was just 4½ years old. At the time, Ben’s dad was a senior chief in the Navy, serving aboard the USS Miami. He was airlifted off the submarine to join his son, as Ben underwent five rounds of chemo, surgery, radiation, and endured two stem cell transplants. These treatments left Ben with no high frequency hearing, requiring him to wear the two hearing aids, and they left him with a severely compromised immune system. But Ben refused to let any of this keep him from becoming a sailor. A snorkel, a swimmer, a fisherman, a climber, an artist, and an animal lover. He was, as his parents say, a child first and a child with cancer second.

Though Ben and his family enjoyed 2 years of remission, he relapsed again in October 2001 at the start of second grade. This new round of treatment consisted of more chemo and over 200 blood and platelet transfusions. Ben lost his battle with neuroblastoma on August 8, 2003, at the age of 9. The night before he died, Ben turned to his mom and asked: “Can’t we try a stronger medicine?”

Well, Ben, at the pediatric oncology branch of the National Cancer Institute, they are trying to create that stronger medicine. Ten phase I and four phase II clinical trials are currently being conducted on neuroblastoma, and scientists are closer and closer every day to the stronger medicine you asked for.

Is it really so irresponsible and excessive to provide the funding for these studies, to find the treatments that could have saved Ben Haight and could save so many more children like him?

To me, irresponsible and excessive is borrowing and spending $450 billion for an endless war that undermines our national security and then asking the Congress for another $196.4 billion without a plan to bring our troops home. Nearly 50 million Americans go without health insurance and millions of families hover at the door of poverty.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TESTER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are going to move to the Amtrak bill. There is an understanding that I have, with Senator Lott, that a number of Members on the Republican side want to be able to have a little extra time to do some amendments dealing with this bill. There are no games being played with this legislation. This is something which is long overdue, and we want to complete this.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to consideration of Calendar No. 158, S. 294, the Amtrak authorization measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, let me say this. We have a lot to do here. For people who are concerned with why we haven’t been doing things this afternoon, it takes time getting things done, and I appreciate that. This is a bipartisan effort to move forward on this legislation. It is something I think we can do. There is no effort to do anything other than get a bill passed.

I have had a conversation with Senator Lott and with two other Republican Senators, and we have agreements with what we have talked about with them. It is a gentleman’s agreement, but we will live up to it on our side.

Mr. President, there will be no more votes today. We hope there will be a good debate on this important issue today and hope there will be some amendments offered tomorrow and Friday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title. The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 294) to reauthorize Amtrak, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate agreed to theAmtrak authorization measure, as follows:

to an entity for which Amtrak operates intercity passenger rail service. Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Senator from New Jersey and the Senator from Mississippi for allowing me to proceed.

The remarks of Mr. ALEXANDER are printed in today’s RECORD under “Morning Business.”

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I thank the bill managers, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, our bill has been sent to the desk, and I want to start off by saying that I am pleased, obviously, that the Senate is considering S. 294, the Passenger Rail Investment and Improvement Act of 2007.

The first thing I want to do is to say thanks to my friend and chief cosponsor of the bill, Senator TRENT LOTT. We have worked together on matters related to transportation in the past, and there is no question that he understands the potential for passenger rail, and his long-standing efforts to improve our country’s transportation systems are well known and deeply appreciated.

Like him, I believe this is a critical moment—with delays, unavailability of reliable planning for work, personal opportunity to spend time with kids and family or other activities of choice. Anyone who spends any significant time on our roads does not need reminders that highway congestion is a major problem. In almost every city and town of any size throughout our country, it is experienced.

A recent study by the Texas Transportation Institute showed that highway congestion costs our country over $78 billion per year, including $4.2 billion in lost productivity and 2.9 billion gallons of wasted fuel and an indeterminable loss in the quality of our lives. These things all cascade upon us.

Congestion, however, isn’t just limited to our roads. One in four flights was late last year at our airports. At Newark Liberty International Airport, it is almost one in two flights. Other metropolitan regions are experiencing worsening delays. The DOT finally had to cap the number of flights at Chicago’s O’Hare Airport a couple of years ago and is considering doing the same at Kennedy Airport this year.

Even airlines are throwing in the towel. The 38 minutes in the air between here and New York City is now scheduled to take almost 2 hours, gate to gate. It is on the schedule—38 minutes of flying time and almost 2 hours to make the trip. It is outrageous. Coupled with long security lines, these delays make air travel increasingly stressful and inconvenient. How about those who are stranded in airplanes, for sometimes as long as 9 hours to make a 2-hour trip? Without the amenities that necessarily should be there, like food and potable water and working restrooms and so forth?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New Jersey.

Passenger rail is not just a matter of convenience. It is also an important security asset. One of the lessons we learned on 9/11 was that our country cannot afford to rely on any single mode of transportation. When our aviation system shut down that terrible day, and for days after, Amtrak was a principal way to reunite thousands of travelers with their families. We also saw chaotic evacuations during Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, with resulting floods, with evacuees without cars stuck for hours, and some without cars were left behind altogether. Some investigations showed that with better preparation, passenger trains could have been used to help move thousands out of harm’s way.

It is clear that rail service can help move our citizens to safety during emergencies, but you can’t do it without the trains and the track that are part of the system. Other nations around the world understand the benefits and, unfortunately, we have been lagging behind. I will never forget a trip I took from Paris to Brussels. There are 18 trains a day between these two cities. You cannot get an airplane that goes between the two. The 210-mile trip takes about 85 minutes. Think about it, 210 miles taking 85 minutes, with trains leaving practically every hour. If you go to Union Station here and travel approximately 210 miles, a 4-hour or 2½-hour train ride. We can do so much better.

The Europeans are not better at these things than we are. They are not smarter than we are. But from Spain to Germany, they have simply made the decision to invest in passenger rail. These investments extend worldwide.

Taiwan recently opened its $15 billion, 208-mile rail line this year, where riders can travel its length, 208 miles, in 95 minutes—approximately the length of the trip between Washington, DC, and New York City.

The benefits of these systems are obvious to anyone who travels there. We need the same world-class system in this country. The potential of new rail corridors in our country is enormous. Higher speed, more frequent rail service between Chicago and other Midwestern cities, such as St. Louis, Detroit, and Milwaukee, would revolutionize the way people travel in an entire part of our country.

Likewise, expanded rail service between Atlanta, Charlotte, Richmond, and Washington would allow people options besides having to brave traffic and trucks on Interstate 95. I am reminded that the train service between Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington, called the Cascades line, is enjoying tremendous ridership, over 600,000 passengers each and every year. It is an invaluable asset. We see something similar occurring in California between San Diego and Los Angeles, where over two and a half million people took the train this past year.

There is enthusiasm for passenger rail service in America, and States are planning rail corridors throughout the country. They are prepared to spend their limited funding for rail projects. But our Federal policies encourage them to build more roads. That is why we need to do it this way that Senator LOTT and I have presented. Our bill paves the way for an improved modern passenger rail network. It authorizes funding for Amtrak’s capital needs as well as State grants for passenger rail. We think this investment in roads. We spend $40 billion a year. By comparison, we spend almost half that amount on airports and air traffic control towers. Our bill will start to address this investment gap by authorizing nearly $2 billion a year for Amtrak in the States that participate the next 6 years.

A yearly average of $237 million of this money will be used to create a new State grant program for rail projects. One of the things the rehabilitation of Amtrak’s Northeast corridor and mandates that Amtrak work with the Department of Transportation and the States to develop plans to do so.

Our bill also requires changes at Amtrak—Senator LOTT pursued this diligently—to make sure these funds will help the railroad continue moving in the right direction.

While we had record ridership and revenues last year, we can still improve its efficiency and management practices. That is why our bill would require Amtrak to reform its operations to reduce its Federal operating subsidy by 40 percent over the life of the bill. It also, at the suggestion of the Department of Transportation’s Inspector general, will allow the Federal Government to refinance Amtrak’s $3 billion in outstanding debt.

With this bill, we are hitting so many of the important problems. It not only addresses the funding, but it also helps the management to focus on getting this railroad in a condition that it should be in.

One of these major reforms is for Amtrak to develop a new financial accounting system, which will provide more transparency into the company’s financial management and better cost controls.

Most importantly, the LAUTENBERG-LOTT Amtrak bill focuses on improving service for passengers. I learned when I was in the private sector that if you provide a good product, people will buy it. We will require new standards for service quality—on-time performance, onboard and station services, cost recovery, connectivity, to name a few. The public is going to know what Amtrak is doing and would be kept apprised of their performance through quarterly reports from the Federal Railroad Administration.

Our bill also addresses the problem of train delays. On many routes outside the Northeast, freight trains delay Amtrak riders from reaching their destination on time. It is against the Federal law. As we know in the airline industry, delays frustrate passengers and hurt the company’s bottom line. Our bill would authorize the Surface Transportation Board to issue fines to freight railroads that delay Amtrak trains. We all have to share the system and share it efficiently.

Some have suggested another provider could be more efficient than Amtrak. I doubt this claim, but our bill does authorize a program to allow a freight railroad to bid for Amtrak’s subsidy on up to two long-distance or State-supported corridor routes. So we are saying, even if there is some skepticism on our part, the bill authorizes a change in policy as can be done with practical output. This pilot program could allow freight railroads to maximize efficiencies between the tracks already. As many Northeast corridor States have called for more involvement in how that essential corridor is run, this bill will improve governance by giving Northeast States, such as New Jersey, a bigger voice in infrastructure and operations decisions.

The State will join a newly formed commission that will develop recommendations about the short- and long-term capital investments, among other things.

And speaking of governance, our bill restructures Amtrak’s board of directors by ensuring a bipartisan nine-member board of qualified members. That gives an opportunity to bring more people into the management decision process, and we think it will be a much more efficient and involved board. One board member, nominated by President Bush, sits at his Senate confirmation hearing that he had never even been on an Amtrak train. Well, it does not suggest he is going to be working with knowledge in hand that is significant or helpful to the company.

Currently there is a seven-member board, no qualification requirements, and for years the Administration had taken the position that the board need not be bipartisan at all. Well, it was originally structured as a bipartisan board to give all sides to the principal parties to be able to be engaged in this process.

We worked hard to forge this bipartisan compromise plan. Last Congress, our plan, which was nearly identical to this one, was approved by the Senate as an amendment to the budget bill by a vote of 93 to 6. That tells us this is a well thought-out plan.

There are only slight changes to our bill from the last Congress, and we will have a managers’ amendment to address other minor modifications. Our Congressional Record — Senate

S13346

Nation’s passenger rail programs have not been reauthorized for a decade, and the result is chaos in our transportation system. I urge my colleagues to vote for this Amtrak bill, to provide millions of Americans with more transportation choices. It is fair and only fair that the public has agreed with this change in droves. They are sick and tired of being delayed, paying more for fuel, and including a more polluted atmosphere at the same time. It is time to make this change.

Amendment No. 3451

Madam President, I send a managers’ amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. Launtenberg. Madam President, this amendment will strike the title on security which has already become law this year. It adds a study on trip time in the Northeast corridor, and makes several technical corrections.

I yield the floor to my distinguished friend and colleague, Senator Lott.

Mr. Lott. Let me say with regard to the package that was agreed to, the changes, we did work together on that. It was cleared on both sides. I want to thank the leaders for allowing us to move forward on this legislation. It is never easy to go straight to a bill these days. There are Senators who have reservations about going to this particular bill at this time. Some Senators wanted to make sure they were going to have an opportunity to look at the legislation and prepare thoughtful amendments, amendments that might, frankly, improve the legislation, add additional reforms, the HHS appropriations bill, the Southwick nomination, and the DREAM Act. Maybe it moved a little quicker than people thought because of some of the earlier actions today.

I want to emphasize this too. While I have been involved in working on this legislation for some 3 years with Senator Lautenberg as chairman of this subcommittee and ranking member, and I think there are some good things in here worth having, maybe we can even strengthen it more. That would be positive for the future of Amtrak. I am personally willing to be anxious to see if there are good ideas of how we can make it even a stronger bill. I want Amtrak to succeed. If we are going to keep it, let’s fix it where it will work. I do not think it is wise to continue putting money into a system that is not enough, and then complain because it is not doing the job. We are slowly starving it, using it more, and complaining that it is not doing better. I think we need some reforms. I think we need to do what we need to do to modernize the system. I want good passenger airline service. I also want to continue to work to improve highways in this country. But I do not believe that lanes and planes will allow enough to what you can do in the air and on the ground with highways. I think we need passenger rail service also.

This is not something, again, that is going to be critical in my State. But I think it is important for our country. My State will benefit, too, when the rest of the country benefits.

I also think if we are going to have this system, it ought to not be just the Northeast corridor. I think we should continue to work to try to find ways to make other routes profitable, on time, provide good service. That is what we are trying to do here.

Some of my friends look at me and say: Well, why are you trying to do this? This is costing money. It is too overly subsidized. They have union problems, this, that and the other. I admit it has problems. I think we are part of the problem, because we are not engaged in trying to improve the law, give them more power to do what they need you to do to make the tough decisions, get outside advice, try to figure out how to do a better job. That is what we do here.

So this is an area I have worked on for most of my career in Congress, transportation and infrastructure. I believe they are critical to the future of our country. We have worked on this before. I worked on the last Amtrak reform legislation. I had higher hopes from that legislation than the results we got. But I think we have made some progress. And when you do legislation that does not achieve all you want it to do, my attitude is, come back and try again.

But to show you the amount of support we have, when we brought this up on the reconciliation package in 2005, it got 90 votes. Some people said: Well, it is not a perfect bill, we can do better. But when they voted, 93 Senators voted for it. That is part of the process.

This time, hopefully, we can get it through here freestanding, get the House to act, let us get to conference, let’s bring the administration in. If the administration has recommendations or concerns, great, let us hear them.

My problem with the administration is, they have tried to ignore it. So let’s try to get them involved. I am not going to be in a time about this. I do not want to blast Amtrak. I don’t want to blast the board or the administration. I want us all to get together. That is part of the effort of what we are trying to do here.

This legislation, S. 294, makes a number of important reforms in Amtrak. It has three major themes: Amtrak reform and accountability; cost cutting; and creating funding options for States.

Now, whether are you from Illinois, California, or Missouri, or whether you are from New Jersey, you ought to like this. And if you are a conservative Republican, did you hear what I said? Cost cutting, reform, and accountability. This is made in heaven.

I think we should get this done, and work in good faith with each other. I think we need to increase the executive branch oversight and involvement in Amtrak. The bill ensures that taxpayer money is being used more effectively and it builds on the improvements that have been made in recent years. I think you have to give credit to the fact that David Gunn, when he was the president of Amtrak, made some improvements in his management. He did a good job. He finally wound up leaving because he had other opportunities, and maybe some people were critical of him. But I have to say I think he did a great job, and he moved it in the right direction.

The bill requires Amtrak to develop better financial systems and to evaluate its operations objectively. It forces Amtrak to improve the efficiency of long-distance train service. There are some lines that are losing too much money. I think the Amtrak officials should look at it and try to make those lines more profitable, put some guidelines on them, put some pressure on them, and if they do not meet them, shut them off. I cannot defend a line that is losing money and is costing $400 a head subsidy for a passenger.

So the bill reduces Amtrak’s operating subsidy by 40 percent by 2012 by requiring Amtrak to use its funds more effectively. I think that is one way you get real savings.

But it does not just say “do it,” it provides a number of things that will lead to making that possible. The bill promotes a greater role for the private sector by allowing private companies to bid on operating Amtrak lines.

The bill also creates a new rail capital grant program that States can use to start new inner city passenger rail service. There has been a real increase, some people say, and I agree, with the number of boardings. A lot of boards, a lot of passengers. They are using that service where that opportunity has existed. This would be the first time that States will have a Federal program they can use for passenger rail service. There are about 2,000 miles of track now. We want to see more passenger rail on similar footing with highway transit and airports, all of which have Federal assistance programs for infrastructure.

Some people complain about the money in Amtrak, and yet if you look at what we have in these other areas, highways and transit and airports, Amtrak is terribly shortchanged. We provide all of this infrastructure in these other areas, and then we are not prepared to do that with the passenger rail system.

States will not have to rely only on Amtrak for their inner city passenger rail service. It gives them more opportunity, says this is for those lines that are losing a lot of money to have a Federal program work with them to achieve that.

Now, while discussing reform, we should not forget there is good news here. Someone says: Well, it is still losing money. In fiscal year 2007, there was a record number of 25.8 million passengers who traveled on Amtrak. People are using it and using it more. It is the chicken-and-egg deal. Once you get better equipment, on-time service, better food, going to places people want to go, they will ride. In the past they haven’t done it because maybe the equipment was old or they got delayed. As they have provided better service they started riding. The boarding ticket revenues increased 11 percent to $1.5 billion in fiscal year 2007. Of course, the Acela Express. I guess the standard of what Amtrak should do, can do—and we are going to do this year—that had a 20-percent increase in ridership and achieved an on-time performance of 87.8 percent, proving it can be done. Passenger service can be on time. The Acela is so popular that another roundtrip between New York and Washington was created in July.

We should not focus solely on the Northeast corridor though. I want to make sure we have some service in the South and the Midwest and the West and in the Northwest. The Capital Corridor operating in California between Auburn and San Jose increased ridership by 15 percent and has an ontime performance of 73 percent. Most notably, the Lincoln service connecting Chicago to St. Louis is up 42 percent. Chicago to St. Louis, that is a tremendous increase. It is a direct result of the State more than doubling its commitment to Amtrak. Across the country, States are interested in passenger service, and passengers are responding in record numbers to the better service.

S. 294 is the best mechanism to reform Amtrak. I encourage my colleagues to support this bill. Implicit in it is a not a long, complicated bill. But if you have a better idea, come on out here. Let’s hear it. Tomorrow we will be ready for business. We will have some amendments. The way I like to do business is to get cooperation of our chairman, if you have an amendment, let’s have you offer it. Let’s talk about it, and let’s vote. Let’s don’t be setting them aside and piling them up for later on in the day. Let’s do business. I think that you get Senators to actually be here and doing work, actually have some votes. I don’t want to go on too long.

Let me just run down some of the areas where we have worked in this bill. It does provide for management improvement. The bill requires a financial accounting system for Amtrak operations and a 5-year financial plan. Why in the world wouldn’t they have that? I don’t know. Farmers have plans for their budgets and what they are going to do in the future. Amtrak ought to do that.

It deals with debt. The bill directs the Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and Amtrak, to negotiate the restructuring of Amtrak’s debt within 1 year. This is something Senator Lautenberg has talked about. They can actually save money. Why would they not do that? So we would direct that in the bill.

It does improve corporate governance. It adds the Amtrak president to the Amtrak board, bringing the total number of members of the board to nine. Think about that, the Amtrak president was not on the board. That doesn’t make any sense.

It calls for metrics and standards. In consultation with the Surface Transportation Board and the operating freight railroads, the Federal Railroad Administration and Amtrak shall jointly develop metrics and standards for measuring the performance and service reliability of intercity train operations. They would include cost recovery, on-time performance, ridership per train mile, onboard and station services, the whole package.

It does improve the route methodology. It would provide access to Amtrak equipment and services.

States wishing to use operators other than Amtrak would be able to do so under this legislation. It would improve the Northeast corridor. It would work to improve the long distance routes.

I think we have touched on the very important areas, but the one I think that we have the greatest diffERENCE is the State Capital Grant Program for intercity passenger rail. When I have talked to Governors and transportation officials, railroad people, they say this is what we need. This could really make a difference. I see the President nodding in agreement. I suspect her State is one that would have an interest up there in the northwest corner of Washington and Oregon.

So there are significant reforms. This is a good effort. This is the kind of work we ought to do more of in the Senate. We have managed for the last few years to find what we could disagree about, something we could fight about. We haven’t taken the time to take up issues that affect real people’s lives that we, obviously, are bipartisan. I appreciate the leader putting this in the agenda. He did it at the request of a number of Senators who care about this. Senator CARPER obviously is one of them, Senator LAUTEN-BERG, myself, and others. We have been pleading with them. I pleaded with the previous majority leader. Let’s get this bill up.

Some people say there are other things more important we could be doing, you don’t do something about health care, more appropriations bills? That is a good question. All I know is, this is an issue that matters. We don’t know when we are going to have another incident in America with aviation, or somewhere else, when we need trains. We need good service. I am also working in the Finance Committee to see if we can’t get a tax credit so that we can continue to improve the capacity of our freight rail and allow them to build off ramps so the freight trains out of the yards can run without losing time and money. We are looking at that side of the equation too. I know some of our friends in the freight rail industry are not all that excited about this legislation because we want Amtrak to be on time and to get by the slower moving freight trains. Sometimes that costs them money, and it is an inconvenience for them. After all, Amtrak is running on their tracks. But we will work with the freight lines and make sure their points of view are considered in the process.

I won’t go on any longer. I would like for us to get to some amendments that may be available on Amtrak. I know Senator SUNUNU has some. We will continue tomorrow.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Madam President, once again it is obvious to all that Senator LOTT understands what we have to do to get things done around here, and that it can’t be all one way because each of us does represent a different State. We are brought here to bring in the opinions of the people whom we serve, our constituents, so we do get a mix of views. Sometimes I wish we didn’t, but for the most part that is the way the world is.

The thing we sometimes fail to see is, when we do something for the infrastructure, when we do something for rail service, it is in the national interest, even though there are many more folks in the very densely populated Northeast corridor. The fact is, as I related before, other places around the country are examining rail service as an alternative to their own congestion and pollution problems. When we look at something called essential air service, it is essential. That is why it is done. The Government does subsidize its existence because communities need that. So it is with rail service.

Interestingly enough, only four States have no contact with Amtrak. One of them is Hawaii, which involves a very long train ride. The other is Alaska. We have heard Senator STEVENS talk about having a railroad that goes to Alaska. But otherwise we have been talking with Amtrak. Some of them are more active than others. But as was said by our colleague, Senator LOTT, some of these States don’t have the traffic or they are not on route enough. The mission is to get service expanded with Amtrak, with rail service as we can, national rail passenger service.

We look at ways of improving the management of Amtrak, that which we would with any business. I spent much of my life in business before I came to the Senate. Businesses run differently than government. But there are some principles that are the same; for instance, investments in product. If you don’t put the money in, you don’t get the money out. There is, since the creation of Amtrak, which goes back to 1971–1971 was the creation of the Amtrak quasi-government corporation. It had been in private hands under different names for many years and never succeeded. Why? The thing that is obvious; that is, with rail passenger rail service, there is going to always be some assistance required from government, just as there is for the aviation system and the highway system as well. We spend more on highways in a year than we have spent on Amtrak since its creation, never having quite put in enough resources to bring the infrastructure up to the level it should be related to the period of time we are talking about.

In Germany, there was a program to establish a rail system that cost about $70 billion in a 10-year period. China now is establishing a passenger rail system which could cost up to $200 billion. And here we are in the most powerful nation in the world playing catch-up. We are not talking about insigni-cant sums of money, but we are talking about substantial opportunities for us to improve what we are doing with this bill that will run almost $2 billion a year for 6 years, plus some additional funding in another bill raised by bonding authority. Senator LOTT has been very helpful in the Finance Committee to make this system work. What it ought to be. Whenever we look for opportunities to improve life in America, certainly this looms high on the horizon.

We have made it clear that we are ready to accept amendments. We would work with the Senate colleagues on this this evening or tomorrow. But we will not be able to stay here and not see any response, if there isn’t enough interest by fellow Members to come down and bring us their amendments.

I ask unanimous consent that the previously agreed to committee amendments be considered as original text for the purpose of further amendments; that the pending managers’ amendment be considered and agreed to be considered as original text for the purpose of further amendments; that the bill, as amended, be considered as original text for the purpose of further-amendments; that no points of order be considered waived by virtue of this agreement.

As Senator LOTT well knows, this is kind of professional language for the institution.

Mr. LOTT. Madam President, I will not object. I just want to say, we have worked through this, and it is cleared on our side. We have no objections.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3451) was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT. I thank the Chair and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceded to call the roll.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, we are moving on into the early hours of the evening, and I appreciate the work that the bill managers, Senator LAUtenberg and Senator LOTT, have done on this legislation.

I am a member of the Commerce Committee as well, and there is no question that there was strong support for this legislation when we voted on it last year. As Senator LAUTENBERG indicated, it was a 98-to-6 vote. I am sorry to say, at least from his perspective, I was one of the six who voted “no.”

Despite the work that has gone into this legislation, I do think it has some real weaknesses. Both Senators LOTT and LAUTENBERG touched on some of those weaknesses in their opening remarks—that at times Amtrak has not delivered the kind of service we would expect; at times they have not delivered, year after year, the kind of financial results we would hope for and expect as taxpayers who are providing the subsidies and the support for Amtrak. Since its creation well over 25 years ago, the Federal subsidies have amounted to over $20 billion. Amtrak was originally created with the intention of becoming self-sufficient. There was an Amtrak reform bill passed in 1997, recommitting to this goal, and yet it still has not happened.

As a taxpayer and as a Senator, it causes me great concern we have not done better—better both in terms of performance on the service and the quality side—but also on the financial side.

There was discussion of the Northeast Corridor. The Northeast Corridor does provide for a great opportunity to serve millions of people running from my State of New Hampshire all the way down to Washington, DC, and be my State of New Hampshire all the side. The Northeast Corridor quality side.

We have had that ban on Internet taxes in place, and I think it is important we make that tax ban permanent. Unfortunately, when introducing legislation at the beginning of this year, we have not had a single vote on this issue. We have not voted on it in the Commerce Committee or any subcommittee. They have not voted on it in the Finance. We have not had a vote on it on this floor.

Many of us have been trying very hard to get a vote to make this Internet tax moratorium permanent. The moratorium expires on Halloween, of all days. On that day, because the ban will no longer be in effect, States, cities, towns, and counties would be in the position to levy new taxes on Internet access. That is not right. It is not good for consumers. It is not good for the economy. It is not good for the communication system, the data system, and the commerce system we have come to count on with the Internet.

A number of Senators—Senator Wyden; Senator McCain; Senator McConnell; and numerous House Members, such as Anna Eshoo from California—have worked very hard on making this ban permanent. For those who have listened to this debate from around the country, I am sure they wonder why it is we cannot do anything in a consistent way. We have research and development tax credits that last only for a year. We have a death tax that is repealed in 2011 and comes back from the dead in 2012. And we have a ban on Internet access taxes that only lasts 4 years. It ought to be made permanent for the sake of consistency.

While I do not want to cause any unnecessary delay in underlying legislation, I think that addressing the Internet tax moratorium is something that is important.

For that reason, Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk at this time and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. SUNUNU] proposes an amendment numbered 3452.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend the Internet Tax Freedom Act to make permanent the moratorium on certain taxes relating to the Internet and to electronic commerce)

(B) the subject of litigation instituted in any court of the United States, or any State or political subdivision thereof.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.

Section 1105 of the Internet Tax Freedom Act (47 U.S.C. 151 note) is amended by adding at the end the following:

(A) generally imposed and actually enforced on telecommunications service purchased, used, or sold by a provider of Internet access, but only if the appropriate administrative agency of a State or political subdivision thereof issued a public ruling prior to July 1, 2007, that applied such tax to such service in a manner that is inconsistent with paragraph (1), such tax on telecommunications service purchased, used, or sold by a provider of Internet access.

(3) If no inference—No inference of legislative construction shall be drawn from this subsection or the amendments to section 1105(c) made by the Internet Tax Freedom Act Amendments Act of 2007 for any period prior to November 1, 2007, with respect to any tax subject to the exceptions described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2).
“(B) includes the purchase, use or sale of telecommunications by a provider of a service described in subparagraph (A) to the extent such telecommunications are purchased, used or sold at retail; and

(ii) to provide such service; or

(ii) to otherwise enable users to access content, information or other services offered by a provider of commercial activity; and

(C) includes services that are incidental to the provision of the service described in subparagraph (A) when furnished to users as part of such service, such as a home page, electronic mail and instant messaging (including voice- and video-capable electronic mail and instant messaging), video clips, and personal storage capacity; and

(D) does not include voice, audio or video programming, or other products and services (except services described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C)) that utilize Internet protocol or any successor protocol and for which there is a charge, regardless of whether such charge is separately stated or aggregated with the charge for services described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).”.

(3) by amending paragraph (9) to read as follows:

“(9) TELECOMMUNICATIONS.—The term ‘telecommunications’ as such term is defined in section 3(45) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 153(45)) and includes services that are incidental to the provision of the service described in subparagraph (A) when furnished to users as part of such service, such as a home page, electronic mail and instant messaging (including voice- and video-capable electronic mail and instant messaging), video clips, and personal storage capacity; and

(II) replaced, in whole or in part, a modification made in 5 years or 10 years or 15 years, as applicable, under the provisions of section 1107 of the Internet Tax Freedom Act (47 U.S.C. 151 note) to make it permanent. A lot of good work was done in the House to strengthen the current moratorium and ban on Internet access taxes. Unfortunately, despite the fact there were over 240 Democrats and Republicans who supported this legislation on its delivery, you did not receive an up-or-down vote to make the ban on Internet taxes permanent.

So what we do is take the House language in this amendment and make it permanent. It provides clarification with regard to services and technologies that are dealt with and not dealt with. If you are an Internet business, you still pay property taxes and payroll taxes. You pay business income taxes. But the Government should not be allowed to tax access to the Internet for the consumers themselves.

There are certain States that are affected by grandfather clauses that were included in the House language. We maintain that language. All we do is fully extend it permanently so that if you are a consumer you know the Internet will not be taxed. If you are a small business, you know your cost of Internet access will not go up. If you are an Internet service provider, you know there will continue to be investments in the infrastructure necessary to increase broadband deployment.

I think at the very least we should have an opportunity to vote on making this Internet tax moratorium permanent. I think it is a commonsense approach. We can always come back and look at the technical issues associated with the language if it needs to be modified in years of 5 years or 10 years or 15 years. That is what Congress does. But we should say, once and for all, we are not going to tax Internet access at the Federal level, at the State level, at the local level.

Madam President, I thank you for the consideration and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, this legislation would simply take what has already been done in the House—which is to pass a 4-year extension—and to make it permanent. A lot of good work was done in the House to strengthen the current moratorium and ban on Internet access taxes. Unfortunately, despite the fact there were over 240 Democrats and Republicans who supported this legislation on its delivery, you did not receive an up-or-down vote to make the ban on Internet taxes permanent.

So what we do is take the House language in this amendment and make it permanent. It provides clarification with regard to services and technologies that are dealt with and not dealt with. If you are an Internet business, you still pay property taxes and payroll taxes. You pay business income taxes. But the Government should not be allowed to tax access to the Internet for the consumers themselves.

There are certain States that are affected by grandfather clauses that were included in the House language. We maintain that language. All we do is fully extend it permanently so that if you are a consumer you know the Internet will not be taxed. If you are a small business, you know your cost of Internet access will not go up. If you are an Internet service provider, you know there will continue to be investments in the infrastructure necessary to increase broadband deployment.

I think at the very least we should have an opportunity to vote on making this Internet tax moratorium permanent. I think it is a commonsense approach. We can always come back and look at the technical issues associated with the language if it needs to be modified in years of 5 years or 10 years or 15 years. That is what Congress does. But we should say, once and for all, we are not going to tax Internet access at the Federal level, at the State level, at the local level.

Madam President, I thank you for the consideration and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minor leader is recognized.

Mr. McCONNELL, Madam President, I thank the Senator from New Hampshire for his important amendment. We are running out of time. The Internet tax moratorium does expire in a week. As the Senator from New Hampshire has indicated, State and local governments across our country could impose taxes on Internet access as soon as a week from now.

I think it is important we address this issue—not that the underlying measure is not important as well. I know it is important to many Senators. But the Internet needs to be protected. Here is our chance to go on record: Are we for a tax on Internet access or not?

The Internet has been at the heart of America’s economic growth over the past decade—all because Government has not gotten in the way. Those days are over if we open the Internet to new taxes. I think there is bipartisan support for a permanent ban, for continuation on Internet access taxes and multiple discriminatory taxes on electronic commerce permanent.

Mr. McCONNELL. Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, I thank the Republican leader for his remarks and for the support he has provided to us. He is not a member of the Commerce Committee. He has a lot of other duties in the Senate, but he has taken great interest, as I think most any legislator would, because the Internet is something we all understand, we deal with, we work with at one level or another. Our families, our friends, our neighbors, and businesses we may have worked for before, depend on it in different ways.

Everyone understands when you tax something, you raise its cost; when you tax something, you end up getting less of it—especially in the long run.

Some people stood up and said: Well, there are some States that have some taxes on the Internet, but there has still been broadband deployment in their State. That may well be, but you cannot argue with the economic fact that when you tax something, you raise its cost; and when you raise its cost, you create a barrier to investment. Those are economic facts of life we cannot change, and those are the economic facts that make implementing a permanent ban on Internet taxes so important.

Opponents of making this ban permanent have also suggested it is an unfunded mandate to tell States they cannot tax the Internet, that it is an unfunded mandate because if we allow them to tax, they could raise money, but because we are telling them they cannot tax Internet access, they cannot raise that money, so there is a cost.

I think that is classic Washington-speak, a classic inside-the-beltway mentality, that if we prevent a State from imposing taxes, we have to compensate the State for that. That is plain wrong. If that were true, then we should be compensating every State in the Union because we do not allow them to arbitrarily impose taxes, fees, and tolls on every mile of interstate highway in the country, or because we do not allow every State in the Union to impose unreasonable taxes on any flight or aviation that comes into or leaves their State. We do not allow that because we recognize our aviation system is a national system, because we recognize our interstate highway system is a national system, and because we do not allow States to tax exports for the same reason. And yet, we do not call those examples unfunded mandates. We do not compensate the States for these activities because the Federal Government has recognized these are important facets to interstate commerce that need to be dealt with in a systematic and uniform way at the Federal level. So I think it is an enormous mistake and very misleading to refer to this as an unfunded mandate.

The second objection that some have made is they recognize: Well, the technologies may change, so defining what is Internet access or data service or voice service—those definitions may have to be modified, as we have modified them over the last 6 or 8 years since the first ban on Internet access taxes was first put in place in 1998. But if the fact that technology may change is a reason for not legislating or not providing a given amount of compensation, we could use that as an excuse not to do anything ever or at least to do every bill on a 1- or 2-year basis. Especially in an area where we are dealing with investment and taxation, it is counterproductive at times to do such short-term legislation because those in the economy who are taking risks, making investments, creating jobs and economic opportunity for other people, will not be able to calculate and estimate what long-term returns and benefits may be given a given amount of compensation. They do not know what the tax rate will be or they do not know what the regulatory burden will be. As a result, you get fewer investments in that area. So we know that technology, services, and the approach to the Internet that businesses take may change in the future, but Congress can always and should always revisit laws, rules, or regulations, whether it has to do with Internet access or a different area. So this is a piece of legislation whose time has come. I hope we can get expedient consideration and approval because I think this is something that has been shown to have bipartisan support in both the House and the Senate. At this time, I would like to turn my attention to another amendment I mentioned earlier in my remarks, and that has to do with the long-distance train routes. As I said, I think there are 14, 15, or 16 routes in operation now. None of these long-distance train routes make any money. They do not make any operating profit. They all lose money. They all lose money at different levels. Some of the long-distance routes, by GAO accounting estimates, lose as much as $200 per passenger. That means there is a Federal taxpayer subsidy, not of $1, or $10, or $20, or $40, but $200 for every passenger riding that route over the course of a year. That is a level of cost and subsidy which just cannot be justified; especially at a time when we are trying to deal with difficult Federal priorities.

Today and throughout this week, there has been a lot of discussion about SCHIP, the State Children’s Health Insurance Program, and the fact that SCHIP is an important program. I agree. I supported the legislation here in the Senate. Its goal is to provide coverage for lower income families who aren’t covered by Medicaid, but may not be covered at their place of employment by a health care policy. As we are having a debate about providing that funding and targeting it to the neediest, whether it is health care or other initiatives, it is so hard to justify running trains across the country that have a subsidy of $200 for every passenger riding that train through the year. So what I would propose is that we set a standard of $200. If your per-passenger subsidy through the course of a year is less than $200, we will allow the train to operate. Now, we hope it improves. We hope the reforms that were described at the beginning of the amendment—improve the management, reduce the costs, improve the efficiency, and improve the performance. But if they do not, and that subsidy level remains above $200 over the course of a year, that route should not remain in operation. Then, in subsequent years, we bring that threshold down, and the second year after this amendment would be in effect, the threshold would be $175. So if you have to subsidize passengers at $170 for every passenger who rides that train in a given year in operation, but if it is more than $175, that route would have to be closed. So on over the lifetime, until at the end of the authorization period for this bill we would have a cap of $100 subsidy per rider. I think that is still too high, but I certainly don’t think it is too much to ask in an authorization bill of this type.

Mr. President, at this time I ask unanimous consent to set aside any pending amendment and send this amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CASEY). Without objection, it is so ordered. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. SUNUNU) proposes an amendment numbered 3043.

Mr. SUNUNU. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

A M E N D M E N T N O . 3 4 5 3

(Purpose: To prohibit Federal subsidies in excess of specified amounts on any Amtrak train route.)

On page 32, before line 21, insert the following:

(c) LIMIT ON PASSENGER SUBSIDIES.—(1) The Inspector General of Transportation shall prohibit any Federal funds to be used for the operation of an Amtrak train route that has a per passenger subsidy, as determined by the Inspector General under paragraph (2), of not less than—

(A) $200 during the first fiscal year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(B) $175 during the second fiscal year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(C) $150 during the third fiscal year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(D) $125 during the fourth fiscal year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(E) $100 during any fiscal year beginning after the time period described in subparagraph (D).

(2) DETERMINATION OF SUBSIDY LEVEL.—The Inspector General of the Department of Transportation, using data provided by Amtrak, shall determine the difference between the average fully allocated operating cost per passenger and the average ticket price collected for each train route operated by Amtrak during the most recent 12-month period for which data is available.

(3) REPORT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 6 months before the end of each fiscal year, and every 6 months thereafter, the Inspector General shall publish a report that—

(i) lists the subsidy levels determined under paragraph (2); and

(ii) includes a statement that Amtrak will terminate any train route that has a per passenger subsidy in excess of the limits set forth in paragraph (1).

(B) DISTRIBUTION.—The Inspector General shall distribute the report published under subparagraph (A) on the Internet and submit a copy of such report to—

(i) the President of Amtrak;

(ii) the Secretary of Transportation;

(iii) the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate; and

(iv) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SUNUNU. Mr. President, I thank you for the time. The amendment I have just submitted is as I have described, and I hope this is an idea and an approach which can be incorporated into the legislation. I think it is common sense. I know a lot of Members of the Senate believe strongly that we should have long-distance trains, with long-distance routes to communities. I would like to see those routes maintained and sustained as well, if it can be done in an economically reasonable way.

But the last years have shown that for some of these routes, the passenger levels are so low, the costs of operating are so high, they just can’t compete. They can’t compete with buses, they can’t compete with automobiles, and they can’t compete with airplanes in terms of cost and efficiency. So I think a step like this is long overdue. Again, I thank the bill managers, Senator Lautenberg and Senator Lott, for their time and consideration and for allowing me to offer these amendments this evening.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

2007 FARM BILL

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I appreciate seeing from Pennsylvania in the chair. We were both in the Agriculture Committee today. I thank him for his leadership for dairy farmers and for nutrition and feeding kids and all that he did that way.

The 2007 farm bill is a chance for Congress to make historic strides in agriculture, alternative energy, and to literally help improve the lives of millions of families across the country—families struggling from Harrisburg to Erie, from Aspinwall to Gallipolis, from Lima to Toledo.

In a State such as Ohio, with a long and rich agricultural history, this means a bright future for our agriculture industry, for our family farmers, and for our families.

I applaud the leadership of Senator Harkin. I am proud, as Ohio’s first Senator to sit on the Agriculture Committee in four decades, to be part of this process.

This bill would mean that low-income families will have more access to better nutrition by increasing Food Stamp Programs and access to affordable healthy foods. That means more fruits and vegetables into the schools in Hamilton, Middletown, and Akron, and more fruits and vegetables available, grown by local farmers, to go into farmers markets in Columbus and Zanesville and all over our State.

Earlier this year, in the course of an inquiry by my staff when they gathered in the committee, we heard from Rhonda Stewart of Hamilton, OH. Rhonda is perhaps in her early thirties and has, I believe, a 9-year-old son. She is a single mother, struggling and working full-time making $10 an hour, with no health insurance. She was president of the local PTA and her son is involved in the Cub Scouts and she is a food stamp beneficiary. She struggled every month. At the beginning of the month, she told the committee back in February, she would serve her son pork chops that first week, which is his favorite meal. By the middle of the month, they went to McDonald’s or another fast-food place and by the end of the month, as times got tough and she struggled financially, she would almost invariably sit at the dinner table, at the kitchen table with her son, he would be eating and she would not. He would say: What’s wrong, Mom? Aren’t you hungry? She would say: No, I don’t feel well. She simply ran out of money at the end of the month.

In the farm bill, we are helping people like her and her family who work hard and play by the rules and do everything in the workplace and in their homes that we ask them to do as citizens of their communities and our country. This bill could mean new investment and a new direction for farmers in Ohio.

The 2007 farm bill reflects the values of farmers across Ohio: forward-thinking, responsible, and working to protect our natural resources and our rural communities.

This bill will help family farmers in my State and in Pennsylvania and across the country by strengthening the farm safety net, one that will provide better protection for farmers against disasters, such as either low yield or low prices. Either one can be obviously devastating to farmers.

The Average Crop Revenue Program, which Senator Durbin and I introduced a bill to create as part of the farm bill—amended by Chairman Harkin—provides a much needed choice to farmers. It represents significant reform for farmers and huge savings—literally $3.5 billion—for taxpayers.

Farmers can stay in the current or old program that does little to protect against drops in revenue or, for the first time ever, farmers will be able to switch to a forward-looking policy that better protects against volatile crop prices, natural disasters, and rising production costs. If farmers are doing the right thing, prices are good, producers will not be taxed. If prices are bad, the farmer will get help.

As times are bad—the yield is low or there are floods or tornadoes that cause major crop yield drops or if the price is low—then the farmer will get help. That is the way that agriculture should be. That is the way most farmers I find in northwest Ohio and all over my State want to do it too. I traveled throughout Ohio this Spring—to Middlesex County, to counties with fruit and vegetable farmers, and in Montgomery County, not too far from Troy, and Piqua, near Dayton. We talked to farmers there, and near Wooster, OH. We talked to dairy farmers, to citrus growers, to specialty farmers, especially those who do landscaping and greenhouses. In northwestern Ohio we talked to farmers who grow corn and soybeans.

I met with a corn farmer in Henry County who will be supplying corn to one of the first ethanol plants in Ohio. I met with a hog farmer in Montgomery County who uses wind turbines to provide on-farm energy.

This farm bill makes a commitment to shift the incentives, farmers can help decrease our dependence on foreign oil and produce clean, sustainable, renewable energy.

In a State such as Ohio, with a talented labor force and a proud lead-the-nation manufacturing base, that doesn’t just mean stronger farms and more prosperous farmers; it means a stronger economy.

Rural communities across the Nation will benefit from additional Federal assistance in the farm bill and small towns not far from where I grew up in Zanesville and all over my State want to do it too. I traveled throughout Ohio this Spring—to Middlesex County, to counties with fruit and vegetable farmers, and in Montgomery County, not too far from Troy, and Piqua, near Dayton. We talked to farmers there, and near Wooster, OH. We talked to dairy farmers, to citrus growers, to specialty farmers, especially those who do landscaping and greenhouses. In northwestern Ohio we talked to farmers who grow corn and soybeans.

This farm bill will provide more than $4 billion in additional funding for conservation programs to help farmers protect our water quality, expand wildlife habitat, and preserve endangered farmland.

While I am pleased with the bill overall, it can be improved. The public is perfectly willing to help family farmers when they need it, but taxpayers will not support massive payments to farmers that have substantial net incomes.

We should not be sending tax dollars to Florida real estate developers, to city farmers who live in New York, to NBA players, or to media personalities. Those are not the farmers who should benefit from the farm bill.

I regret that we have not funded the McGovern-Dole international feeding program. I hope as this legislation progresses we will do just that.

The agricultural industry in Ohio has experienced unprecedented change in recent years, but the values of Ohio farmers—hard work, stewardship of the land, caring for their families—remains steadfast.

We, too, must be steadfast in our support for farmers, but we must also change how we go about providing that support.

I applaud the proposal put before us in the Agriculture Committee today. I hope we can even improve upon it in the weeks ahead.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Amendment No. 3452 is pending.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator CARPER, which is No. 3452.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG], for Mr. CARPER, proposes an amendment numbered 3454 to Amendment No. 3452.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the first word and insert the following:

1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Internet Tax Freedom Act Amendments of 2007”.

2. MORATORIUM.

The term “Internet access” means telecommunications services purchased, used, or sold by a provider of Internet access, but only if the appropriate administrative agency of a State or political subdivision thereof issued a public ruling prior to July 1, 2007, that applied such tax to such service in a manner that is consistent with paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of section 11065 of the Internet Tax Freedom Act Amendments of 2007 that applied such tax to such service in a manner that is inconsistent with paragraph (1) of such subsection.

3. INTERNET ACCESS.

(a) ACCOUNTING RULE.

Section 1105 of the Internet Tax Freedom Act (47 U.S.C. 151 note) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking “services”, (2) by amending paragraph (5) to read as follows:

(5) INTERNET ACCESS.—The term “Internet access”—

(A) means a service that enables users to connect to the Internet to access content, information, or other services offered over the Internet;

(B) includes the purchase, sale of telecommunications by a provider of a service described in subparagraph (A) to the extent such telecommunications are purchased, used or sold—

(i) to provide such service;

(ii) to otherwise enable users to access content, information or other services offered over the Internet;

(C) includes services that are incidental to the provision of the service described in subparagraph (A) when furnished to users as part of such service, such as a home page, electronic mail and instant messaging (including voice- and video-capable electronic mail and instant messaging), video clips, and personal electronic storage capacity; and

(D) does not include voice, audio or video programming, or other products and services (except services described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C)) that utilize Internet protocol or any successor protocol and for which the owner or supplier of such service charges is separately stated or aggregated; with the charge for the services described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

(3) by amending paragraph (9) to read as follows:

“9) TELECOMMUNICATIONS.—The term “telecommunications” means telecommunications as such term is defined in section 3(43) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 153(43)) and “telecommunications services” as such term is defined in section 3(46) of such Act that includes communications services (as defined in section 4251 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4251)), and

(4) in paragraph (10) by adding at the end the following:

“(C) SPECIFIC EXCEPTION.—

(1) SPECIFIED TAXES.—Effective November 1, 2007, the tax on Internet access also that does not include a State tax expressly levied on commercial activity, modified gross receipts, taxable margin, or gross income of the business by a State law or specifically using one of the following terms, that—

(I) was enacted after June 20, 2005, and before November 1, 2007 (or, in the case of a State business tax, was in effect after January 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1996);
The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INTERNET TAX MORATORIUM

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, the House voted recently 405 to 2 to extend the current Internet tax moratorium which expires at the end of this month. They voted to extend it for 4 more years. I believe the Senate should do the same thing and do it before the end of the month rather than enact a permanent moratorium, as some want to do, because permanent action is likely to invoke a far higher law— the law of unintended consequences.

We cannot anticipate the future impact of the World Wide Web, and a permanent moratorium could produce at least two unintended consequences: No. 1, a big unintended tax increase, or No. 2, a big unintended, unfunded Federal mandate.

Here is an example of how a permanent moratorium could produce an unintended new tax. At the time the original moratorium was enacted in 1998, Internet access meant dial-up. Today, Internet access also includes broadband. Fortunately, Congress updated the moratorium definition in 2004 so that access to broadband is exempt from taxation.

Our example is an example of how an outdated moratorium could produce an unintended, unfunded Federal mandate on States, cities, and counties. States and local governments collect billions of dollars in sales tax on telephone services to pay for schools, roads, police, and hospital workers. Under the old definition of Internet access, telephone calls made over the Internet might have escaped such taxation. That might sound good to conservatives like me who favor lower taxes, but most members of my Republican Party were elected promising to end the practice of unfunded Federal mandates—that is, those of us in Washington telling Governors, mayors, and county commissioners what services to provide and how to pay for them. In fact, Republican candidates for Congress stood with Newt Gingrich on the Capitol steps in 1994 and said, as part of a Contract With America, “No more unfunded mandates. If we break promises, they go out.” In 1995, the new Republican Congress enacted a new Federal Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, banning unfunded mandates.

Make no mistake, Mr. President, the permanent extension that is proposed would be an unfunded Federal mandate because it would not allow the grandfathered States—and there are currently nine of them collecting this tax—the ability to continue to make their own revenue decisions. What revenues continues to collect. It would freeze into place forever an Internet access definition that might not be wise for industry and that might not be wise for State and local governments.

That is why I ask unanimous support the idea of a 4-year moratorium on taxation of Internet access. It has the support of the National Governors Association, the National Association of Counties, The U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National League of Cities, the Multistate Tax Commission, and the AFL-CIO.

In addition to that, even though many in the industry would like to have a longer moratorium, the Don’t Tax Our Web Coalition has written a letter to JOHN CONYERS, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, saying that they prefer the permanent extension but that they believe the House-passed bill is a step forward and one they can support.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the letter from the Don’t Tax Our Web Coalition and also a copy of the Congressional Budget Office cost estimate from September 9, 2003, which makes 4 years a law and a law that would be an unfunded Federal mandate under the terms of the 1995 Unfunded Federal Mandate Act.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DON’T TAX OUR WEB COALITION, October 2, 2007.

Hon. JOHN CONYERS, Jr., Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Conyers: On behalf of the Don’t Tax Our Web Coalition (“Coalition”), I am pleased to express the Coalition’s support for S. 150, the Permanent Internet Tax Moratorium. Your continued leadership on Internet access for broadband is critical to consumers, and to strengthening the economy and job creation.

H.R. 3678, if enacted, would provide a temporary, four-year extension of the moratorium that is set to expire on November 1. Your bill also contains important definitional and statutory changes that improve current law. H.R. 3678 will provide much needed clarity to the communications and Internet industries. By helping keep Internet access affordable, the moratorium promotes ubiquitous broadband access.

As you know, the Coalition has long endorsed H.R. 743, the Permanent Internet Tax Freedom Act. While we prefer a permanent extension, we believe that H.R. 3678 is a step forward and thus a bill we can support.

We look forward to working with you on this most important issue.

Sincerely,

BRODIECK D. JOHNSON

S. 150—Internet Tax Nondiscrimination Act

Summary: S. 150 would permanently extend a moratorium on certain state and local taxation of online services and electronic commerce, and after October 1, 2006, would eliminate an exception to that prohibition for certain states. Under current law, the moratorium is set to expire on November 1. CBO estimates that S. 150 would have no impact on the federal budget, but beginning in 2007, it would impose significant annual costs on some state and local governments.

By extending and expanding the moratorium on certain types of state and local taxes, S. 150 would impose an unfunded Federal mandate as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA). CBO estimates that the mandate would cause state and local governments to lose roughly $80 million annually beginning in 2007. The bill contains no new private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA.

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: CBO estimates that enacting S. 150 would have no impact on the federal budget.

Intergovernmental mandates contained in the bill: The Internet Tax Freedom Act (ITFA) currently prohibits state and local governments from enacting taxes on Internet access until November 1, 2003. The ITFA, enacted as Public Law 106-277 on October 21, 1999, contains an also contains an intergovernmental mandate, sometimes referred to as the “grandfather clause,” which allows certain state and local governments to tax Internet access if such tax was generally imposed and actually enforced prior to October 1, 1998.

S. 150 would make the moratorium permanent and, after October 1, 2006, would eliminate the grandfather clause. The bill also would state that the term “Internet access” or “Internet access services” as defined in ITFA would not include telecommunications services except to the extent that such services are used to provide Internet access (known as “aggregating” or “bundling” of services). These extensions and expansions of the moratorium constitute intergovernmental mandates as defined in UMRA because they would prohibit states from collecting taxes that they otherwise could collect.

Estimated direct costs of mandates to states and local governments: CBO estimates that repealing the grandfather clause would result in revenue losses for as many as 10 states and for several local governments to total the revenue loss: $80 million annually, beginning in 2007. We also estimate that the change in the definition of Internet access could affect tax revenues for many states and local governments, but we cannot estimate the magnitude or the timing of any such additional impacts at this time.

S. 150 includes in its definition of the direct costs of a mandate the amounts that state and local governments would be prohibited from raising in revenues to comply with the mandate. The bill also would eliminate the grandfather clause would be the tax revenues that state and local governments are currently collecting but would be precluded from collecting under S. 150. States also could lose revenues that they currently collect on certain services, if those services are reclassified as Internet access under the bill.

Over the next five years there will likely be changes in the technology and market for Internet access. Such changes are likely to affect, at minimum, the price for access to the Internet as well as the demand for the provision of such access. Technological and market changes will ultimately affect state and local tax revenues.
HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

STAFF SGT JARRED SETH FONETON

MR. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the sacrifice of SSG Jarred Seth Fontenot of the 2nd Battalion, 12th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Infantry Division, out of Fort Carson, CO. Sergeant Fontenot was killed last Thursday in an engagement with insurgents in Baghlan, Afghanistan. He died of injuries from an explosion and small arms fire that rained down on his patrol. Sergeant Fontenot was 35 years old, a loving husband, and a father of four.

Jarred Fontenot grew up in a family steeped in military service. His grandfather, who helped raise Jarred after his parents died at an early age, served in the Army. His two great uncles attended West Point, later joining the Navy and Marines. One of his great uncles died in Korea, a place Jarred would later serve.

Jarred’s family speaks of him as a man who loved his job and who embraced the virtues of military service. “He loved being a soldier,” his grandmother recalls, “and he died doing what he loved.”

Sergeant Fontenot was on his second tour in Iraq, on a mission to help bring security and stability to a region torn by violence and tragedy. Every day, he and his unit put themselves in harm’s way to give Iraqi citizens a chance at a society governed by the rule of law, free from the threats of sectarian strife, terrorism or autocratic rule. He served bravely and was highly decorated, earning the Overseas Service Ribbon, the Parachute Badge, and the Army Commendation Medal, an honor bestowed upon those who have distinguished themselves by their service and acts of heroism.

Between deployments, Jarred devoted himself to law enforcement in his hometown of Port Barre, LA. On his days off, he would volunteer his expertise and his time to help his fellow peace officers. Needless to say, he earned the respect and appreciation of those whose lives he protected.

Mr. President, how can we properly honor the deeds of a man such as Jarred Fontenot, so devoted to his country, his family, and to those with whom he served? No words can match the magnitude of his virtue.

Pericles, the great Athenian general, suggested that we honor the sacrifices of soldiers like Jarred Fontenot by reflecting not only on his life and loss, but also on the rewards that he and other soldiers have delivered to the nation for which they fought.

At a funeral oration to honor soldiers who had died in one of the first battles of the Peloponnesian War, Pericles told the crowd that.

Any one can discover, you for ever about the advantages of a brave defense, which you know already. But instead of listening to him I would have you day by day fix your eyes upon the greatness of Athens, united with the lovely city of her and when you are impressed by the spectacle of her glory, reflect that this empire has been acquired by men who knew their duty and had the courage to do it, who in the hour of conflict had the fear of dishonor always present to them, and who, if ever they failed to do their duty, would lose their virtues to be lost to their country, but freely gave their lives to her as the fairest offering which they could present at her feast.

In this Chamber, the greatest deliberative body in the world, I ask that we honor Sergeant Fontenot by fixing our eyes on those freedoms which, for more than two centuries, have endured and prospered in this Chamber and across America. Our freedom of speech, our freedom of assembly, our freedom of conscience, our freedom from tyranny and violence—these are the rewards that the American soldier has delivered, generation after generation, to a grateful and humble nation. So long as the United States remains a beacon for freedom, democracy, and justice, their sacrifices will never be forgotten.

To the family of SSG Jarred Fontenot—to his wife, Dana, his four children, to his grandparents Charles and Dorothy, and to his sister—I know of no words that can do justice to your pain or aptly express the pain you feel. I pray that in time you can find comfort in the knowledge that Jarred was doing something he truly loved, of which he was extraordinarily proud, and for which his country is eternally grateful.

“For where the rewards of virtue are greatest,” Pericles reminded the departing Athenian crowd, “there the noblest citizens are enlisted in the service of the state.” Jarred Fontenot was among the noblest of our citizens. May his legacy endure in the strength of our democracy.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, another 2 months have passed, and more American troops lost their lives overseas in Iraq and Afghanistan. It is only right that we take a few moments here in the US Senate. Outside my office here in Washington, we have a tribute called ‘Faces of the Fallen.’ Visitors to the Senate from across the country have stopped by the memorial. I encourage my colleagues to come see this tribute on the third floor of the Hart Building.

I last came to the Senate floor to honor our fallen troops in early August. Since that time, the Pentagon has announced the deaths of 182 troops in Iraq and in Operation Enduring Freedom, including in Afghanistan. They will not be forgotten. So today I will read their names into the RECORD:

CPF Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I voted, yesterday, in favor of the Ensign amendment to deny credit toward Social Security benefits claimed in violation of the Social Security Act. This would deny benefits to people, including undocumented workers, who have, in the words of the Senate act, "willfully, knowingly, and with the intent to deceive used false Social Security numbers."

The Ensign amendment was more carefully focused on denying benefits based on illegal use of a fake Social Security number, unlike previous Ensign amendments which I did not support.

Yesterday’s Ensign amendment requires the Commissioner of Social Security to deny Social Security benefits for work performed by any individual using a Social Security account number which was not his, in violation of section 208 of the Social Security Act at 42 U.S.C. 408.

The Ensign amendment was adopted yesterday by the Senate.

This amendment differs from a previous amendment offered by Senator Ensign in the 109th Congress, which could have harmed senior citizens and other individuals who may have made an honest error.

That amendment was rejected by the Senate.

In July of 2007, Senate Ensign proposed an amendment to the College Cost Reduction Act which could have led to a highly unfair loss of benefits to naturalized citizens or others who are legally present. The provisions of that amendment would have posed great problems because it would have denied Social Security benefits to legally naturalized citizens, for instance, unless the Social Security Administration could affirmatively determine that the individual was legally authorized to work. This amendment would have placed an unwarranted burden on the Social Security Administration and seniors who have been legally present for decades, who could have unfairly lost their benefits.

This amendment also failed in the Senate.

Mr. SNOWE. Mr. President, the Social Security Administration, SSA, is currently facing nothing short of a crisis when it comes to processing disability claims. Indeed, SSA Commissioner Michael Astrue has called this issue his agency’s most pressing challenge. Currently, there are over 756,000 individuals who are waiting for a hearing to have their claims adjudicated, and the average wait time is a staggering 512 days. That is the longest amount of time in SSA’s history. In contrast, disability applicants had to wait an average of 308 days for a hearing. While that was still far too long, individuals now have to wait 66 percent longer. Sadly, some people have died waiting for a hearing.

‘To process disability claims more quickly, I was proud that, on October 24, 2007, the Senate voted 88 to 6 to approve an amendment to the Department of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act that Senators BINGAMAN, BAUCUS, and I offered to require the SSA to produce this report and make recommendations to improve disability benefits processing. Senators HARKIN and SPECTER presciently asked for the SSA to produce this report when the Appropriations Committee approved the underlying Labor-HHS bill. Commissioner Astrue submitted this Agency’s plan to Congress on September 13.

I believe it would be extraordinarily useful for GAO to look at the SSA’s plan and make recommendations to make it even more effective. The bottom line is that it is crucial that we ensure the plan to rectify problems of disability processing will be productive. While the SSA has been among our most efficient agencies, this GAO evaluation will help ensure that the plan put in place will best use the funds we are acting to provide.

Mr. President, in closing, I hope that conferees will retain the two SSA administrative costs amendments the Senate already passed by the House and proposed in the Senate, that eliminate RRW funding.

Further, the cuts proposed to RRW would also reduce the impact of current plans to cut more than $500 million in funding for the nuclear weapons complex that supports, maintains, and refurbishes the weapons currently in the complex. These proposed cuts to RRW are not just misguided, but they have been rejected by individuals of great authority, including Secretaries Kissinger and Schultz, and Dr. Sidney Drell. The second reason the Senate rejected the treaty in 1999, and would do so again today, is that the treaty is not verifiable. Militarily significant covert nuclear testing can—and almost certainly will—be conducted at low yields or in other ways aimed at masking the force of an explosion.

Assistant Secretary Paula DeSutter of the State Department’s Bureau of Verification, Compliance, and Implementation recently made this point. She agreed that the Monitored System set up to monitor compliance with CTBT is “aimed to detect detonations over 1 kiloton; smaller or concealed detonations are less likely to be identified. Evasion techniques can easily reduce the signature of a nuclear explosion by factors of 50 or 100.”

CTBT’s unverifiability means a ban will not have uniform effects.
Our inability under CTBT to monitor the state of foreign nuclear weapons programs effectively means that hostile or potentially hostile countries will be able to modernize their weapons even as the U.S. arsenal steadily degrades. As a result, the long-term effect of abandoning CTBT would be to contribute into the inevitable, if gradual, unilateral disarmament of our Nation’s deterrent.

Fourth, CTBT would damage the struggle against proliferation. On the one hand, the inherent unverifiability of the CTBT can be expected to encourage rogue state regimes to believe they could pursue nuclear weapons programs with impunity. On the other, the attendant erosion of our deterrent would mean that allied countries—notably, Japan, Taiwan and perhaps South Korea—that currently rely on the U.S. deterrent “umbrella” would be more likely to develop their own nuclear weapons.

As Dr. James Schlesinger remarked in testimony before the Armed Services Committee in 1999, “the chief barrier to proliferation in these last 55 years since Hiroshima has been confidence in the protection offered by the American deterrent. It is the reason, quite simply, that nations like [South] Korea or Japan, or more complicated, in the case of Germany, have not sought nuclear weapons. Because of the NATO agreement, because of the Japan Treaty, because of our agreements with the Koreans, they have not felt the necessity of taking that final plunge. As confidence on their part in the U.S. deterrent wanes over a period of . . . years, what is the likelihood that those nations will refrain from seeking nuclear weapons? I think that it is very modest.”

Finally, the Senate rejected the CTBT in 1999 because it realized that the Stockpile Stewardship Program, SSP, as a successor to a retired Department of Energy nuclear scientist, referred to in his testimony before the Committee on Foreign Relations in 1999. It remains doubtful whether the SSP, supported by CTBT advocates as a substitute for nuclear testing, can adequately meet the maintenance and refurbishment needs of the U.S. nuclear arsenal. As a result, it will become ever more likely that dangerous anomalies in our weapons will pass unnoticed.

Despite these abiding concerns and the Senate vote in 1999, the 2008 Defense authorization bill would put the Senate on record in support of CTBT’s ratification without hearings or debate. How can new Senators—37 since 1999—be expected to have reached such a conclusion?

Preordaining the ratification of a treaty, as is done in section 3122 of this bill, does a disservice to the Senate’s history of thoughtful consideration of treaties, proposed for ratification, especially when the treaties were on issues with the gravity of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

I would be remiss if I didn’t reference the comments of Secretary of State Rice in a recent letter. She stated that the administration does not support the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty and “does not intend to seek Senate advice and consent to its ratification.”

I also call the attention of the Senate to the Statement of Administration Policy on this bill which states strong opposition to section 3122 due to its dangerous implications for the reliability of our nuclear deterrent.

Mr. President, I note that these are not simply the words of this Senator. The letter I will ask to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD makes clear that 40 of my fellow Senators share many of these concerns about the CTBT and the unprecedented approach taken by this bill. My colleagues recognize as I do that since the reasons for the rejection of this treaty in 1999 have not changed, neither should the Senate’s position.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the letter to which I just referred printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. CARL Levin, Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEVIN: One of the Senate’s most important national security debates of the last decade was whether to ratify the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT). In the end, following a rigorous and thorough debate, 51 Senators voted to reject the CTBT, 17 more than necessary to assure its defeat.

The principal reasons the Senate rejected the CTBT were its lack of verifiability, adverse effect on the safety and reliability of our nuclear stockpile, and potential to increase nuclear proliferation. We are not aware of any congressional hearings on this treaty since its rejection in 1999. The total absence of discussion in the more than eight years since its rejection belies the assertion in section 3122 of S. 1547 that the CTBT now should be ratified. Moreover, the 37 Senators who have joined the Senate since this treaty was rejected deserve to have the benefit of a careful and measured review of this treaty. There is no basis on which they can conclude that CTBT should be ratified.

The Constitution of the United States invests an extraordinary responsibility in the Senate to provide measured and thoughtful review of treaties other than those submitted by the President for our consideration. The Senate has not had the opportunity for such review since 1999. In a recent letter, Secretary of State Rice stated that the Administration does not support the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty and “does not intend to seek Senate advice and consent to its ratification.”

The Statement of Administration Policy on S. 1547 likewise states strong opposition to section 3122 due to its dangerous implications for the reliability of our nuclear deterrent.

Under all of these circumstances, we believe it denigrates the serious role of the U.S. Senate to claim in section 3122 to express the “sense of the Congress” that the CTBT should be ratified.

Sincerely,

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CONGRATULATING MOOSEHEAD MANUFACTURING COMPANY

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate Moosehead Manufacturing Company, a small firm in Monson, Maine, that will soon be reopening its doors. For 60 years, Moosehead Manufacturing had been a thriving business that exemplified the quality of Maine production. Unfortunately, after facing tough challenges from the global economy earlier this year, Moosehead ceased production. With the help of new investors, the company recently announced that it will recommence production and hire 48 employees in Monson, continuing its legacy of providing quality furniture to the State of Maine and beyond.

Moosehead Manufacturing specializes in producing exceptional Maine-made furniture. The company prides itself on the durable and hand-finished aspects of its products, which it offers to consumers at competitive prices. Not only does Moosehead Manufacturing provide additional economic opportunities, it procures all of its production resources from within the State, helping Maine’s economy. The furniture is built from hardwoods harvested from neighboring forests, cut in Moosehead’s own saw mills, and dried in its own kilns. Moosehead has been described as “an amazing corporate citizen” by Tom Lizotte, a Piscataquis county commissioner.

Moosehead Manufacturing was founded in 1947 by the Wentworth family. At its peak of production in the late 1990s, it was the largest privately owned furniture factory in New England, employing about 250 workers. Recently, increasing imports of cheap, foreign-made furniture had threatened Moosehead’s business. In 2003, Moosehead Manufacturing joined a group of furniture makers nationwide in petitioning the Government to place duties on some of the furniture that China imports to the United States. I joined their ratification letter I sent to Secretary of Commerce Evans stating my deep concern with the impact Chinese imports were having on Moosehead had been a thriving business that exemplified the quality of Maine production.

TRIBUTE TO DR. EILEEN SCHMITT

• Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, at the end of this year, Dr. Eileen Schmitt, a friend and fixture in our Wilmington community, is retiring, and I want to share her inspirational story because there is much all of us can learn from her.

As we debate health care, again, and again, and again in this Chamber, Dr. Schmitt has lived the life. Mother Teresa called for when she said: Do not wait for leaders; do it alone, person to person.

A talented medical doctor who rose to become president and chief executive officer of St. Francis Hospital, she walked away from her fancy title and big desk in 2001 to do her true calling, healing the poorest in our community. She became the medical director for the St. Clare Medical Van, making her rounds in a mobile van to provide free healthcare to those who have no insurance. The van pulls up, and there may be 20 people waiting—someone earns minimum wage, some don’t have a job, some are homeless, many are children—and she asks for no money, no insurance. She just sees the need.

As part of her work, she arranges for doctors to donate their time, and launched drives to create a pharmaceutical fund for prescription medicines for her patients. If funds are low or a patient needs something right away, she buys it herself. That is the type of person she is.

And in her spare time, you can find her teaching her patients English, and bringing clothes to the families she visits. When someone asked her why she does it, she explained:

“When I first went into medicine, I wanted to do missionary work. I think getting back to taking care of people—especially people who don’t have the means to get medical care—helps to fulfill my initial calling.

The acts of love and compassion she provides every day may seem small in our prosperous country of 300 million people, but America would be much less of a Nation were it not for Dr. Schmitt.

Her patients call her their angel, and indeed she has been one to them. But she also is an inspiration to all Americans, reminding us that small acts, one person at a time, touch and change our neighborhoods.

I know Senator CARPER, Congressman CASTLE, and all my colleagues thank Dr. Schmitt and wish her happiness and health as she retires.

CONGRATULATING GEORGE F. POTARACKE

• Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I would like to take this time to congratulate Mr. George F. Potaracke on his retirement from the Wisconsin Board on Aging and Long Term Care, where he has served as executive director since 1981.

Mr. Potaracke has been with the Board on Aging and Long Term Care since its inception in the early 1980s and was selected as its first executive director. Under his leadership, the Board on Aging and Long Term Care has grown from an agency of only 3 employees to an agency of 30 employees with offices throughout the State.

Along with his duties as executive director of the Board on Aging and Longterm Care, Mr. Potaracke directs the Wisconsin Medigap hotline, which provides counseling services for Medicare beneficiaries in Wisconsin. He is the treasurer of the National Citizens Coalition for Nursing Home Reform and an adviser to the National Health Policy Council and the Aging Leaders Council. Mr. Potaracke has served as president of the National Association of State Long Term Care Programs and leads fundraising efforts for this organization.

In addition to his work on behalf of seniors, Mr. Potaracke is actively involved with the national Human Rights Campaign, the AIDS Support Network of Southern Wisconsin, Frontier Men of Dane County, and the New Harvest Foundation, where he chairs fund-raising efforts.

Throughout his career, Mr. Potaracke has dedicated himself to a wide range of aging services. As chair of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, I have had the distinct privilege of working with Mr. Potaracke on a variety of issues and hold his opinion in the highest regard. He is nationally recognized as an advocate for our aging population and has truly made a difference on behalf of all seniors.

On behalf of our State and Nation, I thank Mr. Potaracke for his service and wish him good health, happiness, and prosperity for many years to come.

TRIBUTE TO WALGREENS’ 6000TH STORE IN NEW ORLEANS

• Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, Walgreens, a leading national drugstore chain, is today hosting a celebration for the opening of its 6,000th store, which is located in New Orleans, LA. I am thrilled that for this milestone the company has chosen my hometown, which is enduring a long recovery from Hurricane Katrina.

The greater New Orleans area is one of Walgreens’ oldest and most distinct markets. The first store in the region opened in 1938, and the historic Carrollton neighborhood is the city’s 48th. The company currently employs nearly 1,400 people in the area who serve thousands of patients and customers every day. Walgreens will become a wellness resource for Carrollton residents, some of whom have underserved health care needs.

In honor of the grand opening, Walgreens is today offering free blood glucose screenings in every New Orleans store to drive awareness of the diabetes epidemic and get more people on the path to prevention or early detection and treatment.

The Walgreens wellness tour bus will also travel to locations throughout the area, today to provide a variety of tests, including cholesterol, blood pressure, bone density, and body mass index for individuals who otherwise may not have access to basic health screenings.

Immediately following Katrina, 74 Walgreens stores had to close because of physical damage and loss of power. It was the most significant operational challenge in the company’s 106-year history. More than 700 Walgreens employees traveled from across the country to help with recovery efforts, filling hundreds of thousands of emergency prescriptions and providing vital supplies to evacuees. Walgreens was one of the first retailers to reopen, proving New Orleans was on the road to recovery. I am grateful for their great help to our region during the extremely challenging days following the storm and the flood that followed.

Through its investment in New Orleans, Walgreens is demonstrating its continued commitment to our great city and region. By next summer, Walgreens will have more stores in the New Orleans area than it did prior to the hurricane. I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating Walgreens and New Orleans for this long-standing and growing relationship.
IN MEMORY OF DELAWARE STATE
SENATOR JAMES T. VAUGHN

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, earlier this month James T. Vaughn, a longtime State Senator who was a legend in Delaware, passed away, and I want to pay tribute to him.

Jim spent a lifetime in public service, enlisting in the Marine Corps during World War II, serving as a Delaware State Police trooper for two decades and as the State Corrections Commissioner; and entering our State Senate 27 years ago.

His sincerity put him in powerful positions either as the chairman or member of the committees that oversaw budgets, revenues, taxation, judiciary, and corrections matters. In other words, he had his hand in everything, and most recently that meant establishing a veterans' home at Milford.

Jim had this tough image, always set in his way, and always an honest man, who scrutinized every matter and paid incredible attention to the taxpayers' dollars. Throughout his career no one worked harder for the people of Delaware than Jim Vaughan.

His constituents were his No. 1 priority, and last year when he became ill and was unable to campaign during his re-election, the voters still handily put him in office, recognizing a lifetime of responsiveness to their needs. It set a standard we can all admire.

Like this Senator, Jim was a lifetime Yankees fan. And he had a special place in his heart for Little League baseball. Babe Ruth once said: I won't be happy until we have every boy in America between the ages of six and sixteen wearing a glove and swinging a bat.

Babe Ruth would have appreciated Jim. For four decades he volunteered with the Smyrna-Clayton Little League, a group he originally helped organize. He served as its director, treasurer, equipment manager, and grass cutter—in fact, his wife Sylvia would joke that he loved to cut the grass there, but not at the family home in Clayton.

A few times I had the honor of throwing the first pitch to start the season, and today the Smyrna-Clayton Little League Park is named for Jim.

The people of Delaware will miss Jim, and I extend my prayers and thoughts to his loving family.

RETIREMENT OF AIR FORCE MAJOR GENERAL ROGER P. LEMPEKE

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, it is with great pride and privilege to pay tribute to one of America's finest military leaders, Air Force MG Roger P. Lempeke, on the occasion of his retirement as adjutant general of the Nebraska National Guard.

The National Guard has been tested by the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan more than any period since World War II. Nationally, it has been a true test of the Guard to maintain strength at home and abroad during a time of lengthy deployments, mounting casualties, declining recruitment, and a shortage of equipment. Yet, in Nebraska during this period, under the competent leadership of General Lempeke, the Nebraska National Guard has continued to pull in record numbers of recruits, increasing retention, and establishing an active family support program.

General Lempeke instills confidence, not only in the troops he commands but in the elected officials he serves. Since the tragic attacks of September 11, 2001, and during the time of war that has followed, we are fortunate to have had his very capable leadership as he oversaw the National Guard's changing role into an active duty combat force. The American people have seen vividly that the National Guard is no longer a supplemental force; it serves in seamless fashion with the active duty.

As past president of the National Association of Service Adjudants General, General Lempeke has been a vocal advocate for the National Guard, working with the Pentagon to help shape policies on issues ranging from base closures to troop strength. A graduate of the Air Force Academy, this even-tempered Nebraska farm boy and devoted husband and father rose through the ranks to become a respected military leader, not only in Nebraska but among his peers nationally. He and I have white-knuckled many projects which benefited not only Nebraska but helped our Nation's military as a whole.

I will miss that close association with the general as our professional relationship comes to a close, but on a personal level, I will always be proud to call Roger P. Lempeke a trusted and respected friend.

REPORT ON THE CONTINUATION OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY DECLARED IN EXECUTIVE ORDER 13413 WITH RESPECT TO BLOCKING THE PROPERTY OF PERSONS CONTRIBUTING TO THE CONFLICT TAKING PLACE IN THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO—PM 30

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report, which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

The situation in or in relation to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, which has been marked by widespread violence and atrocities that continue to threaten regional stability and was addressed by the United Nations Security Council in Resolution 1596 of April 18, 2005, Resolution 1649 of December 21, 2005, and Resolution 1698 of July 31, 2006, continues to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States. For this reason, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared in Executive Order 13413 of October 27, 2006, and the related measures blocking the property of certain persons contributing to the conflict.

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication, stating that the national emergency with respect to the situation in or in relation to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the related measures blocking the property of certain persons contributing to the conflict in that country, must continue in effect beyond October 27, 2007.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

At 11:43 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills:

H.R. 327. An act to amend title 38, United States Code, to direct the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to develop and implement a comprehensive program designed to reduce the incidence of suicide among veterans.

H.R. 1284. An act to increase, effective as of December 1, 2007, the rates of compensation for veterans with service-connected disabilities, and the rates of dependency and indemnity compensation for the survivors of certain disabled veterans.

———EXPRESSION OF SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING BOSTON’S CELEBRATION OF THE LITTLE ROCK NINE ON THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR COURAGEOUS AND SELFLESS STAND IN THE FACE OF HATRED, VIOLENCE, AND INTOLERANCE———

Whereas, in 1832, Garrison and other abolitionists gathered at the African Meeting House in Boston on Boston Day to protest slavery and the evils of slavery in the United States;

Whereas Massachusetts was the center of the United States abolitionist movement and a national leader in providing public education to all students, regardless of race or ethnicity;

Whereas abolitionist leader and Newburyport, Massachusetts native William Lloyd Garrison fueled the abolitionist movement through his powerful writing in his newspaper, “The Liberator”, and fiery public oratory;

Whereas the “Father of American public education”, Franklin, Massachusetts native Horace Mann, advocated for the end of slavery and improved access for all students to quality public education;

Whereas, in 1832, Garrison and other abolitionists gathered at the African Meeting House on Boston’s Beacon Hill and founded the New England Anti-Slavery Society;

Whereas, in 1855, the Massachusetts legislature outlawed segregation in the State’s public schools;

Whereas, on May 17, 1954, the United States Supreme Court issued its ruling in the case of Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka and declared that segregated education was unconstitutional;

Whereas many elementary and high schools and colleges and universities throughout the United States continued to enforce a system of educational inequality in which students of color were denied access to their right to a quality public education;

Whereas, 3 years after the ruling in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, the school board, after many years of delay, announced it would implement a gradual integration of its school system beginning in September 1957;

Whereas the Little Rock chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People selected 9 outstanding African-American students to attend previously all-White Little Rock Central High School;

Whereas on September 4, 1957, those 9 African-American students, Minnijean Brown, Elizabeth Eckford, Ernest Green, Thelma Mothershed, Melba Pattillo, Gloria Ray, Terrence Roberts, Jefferson Thomas, and Carlotta Walls attempted to enter Central High School;

Whereas, on September 4, 1957, Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus mobilized the Arkansas State National Guard and federalized the entire Arkansas National Guard to the President to send Federal troops to Little Rock to the Arkansas State National Guard, police officers and citizens of Little Rock took up positions at the entrances to Central High School and continued to block the African-American students from entering;

Whereas, on September 23, 1957, after learning by television and radio that students of African American heritage were not being allowed to enter Central High School, 2,500 students who had successfully entered the school, a segregationist mob gathered at Central High School and the African-American students had to be escorted from the school for fear that they would be killed;

Whereas, on September 23, 1957, Little Rock Mayor Woodrow Mann, in a telegram to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, appealed to the President to send Federal troops to protect the students and ensure the integration of Central High School;

Whereas, on September 24, 1957, President Eisenhower ordered the 101st Airborne Division of the United States Army to Little Rock and federalized the entire Arkansas National Guard;

Whereas, on September 25, 1957, Minnijean Brown, Elizabeth Eckford, Ernest Green, Thelma Mothershed, Melba Pattillo, Gloria Ray, Terrence Roberts, Jefferson Thomas, and Carlotta Walls walked through the front doors of Central High School, as thousands of White students had done before them; whereas despite the constant presence of United States soldiers, the 9 African-American students were physically and verbally harassed throughout the school year;

Whereas, Minnijean Brown, after enduring months of physical and verbal harassment and assaults, was expelled from Central High School for a verbal retort aimed at one of her antagonists;

Whereas, at the end of the 1957–1958 school year, Ernest Green became the first African-American graduate in the history of Central High School;

Whereas Minnijean Brown Trickery became a prominent social activist and works as a writer and social worker in Ontario, Canada;

Whereas Ernest Green attended Michigan State University, later served as Assistant Secretary of Housing and Urban Affairs under President Jimmy Carter, and is currently a managing partner and vice president of Lehman Brothers;

Whereas Elizabeth Eckford had a successful career in the United States Army that protected her at Central High School, raised 2 sons in Little Rock, and now works as a social worker;

Whereas Thelma Mothershed-Wair returned to school as a teacher and now volunteers in a program for abused women;

Whereas Melba Pattillo Beals is an author and journalist for People Magazine and NBC Universal;

Whereas Gloria Ray Karimk graduated from Illinois Technical College and is a successful computer science writer whose work has been published in 39 countries;

Whereas Terrence Roberts is now Dr. Terrence Roberts, who teaches at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA) and Antioch College and also works as a clinical psychologist;

Whereas, on September 4, 1957, those 9 African-American students, Minnijean Brown, Elizabeth Eckford, Ernest Green, Thelma Mothershed, Melba Pattillo, Gloria Ray, Terrence Roberts, Jefferson Thomas, and Carlotta Walls attempted to enter Central High School;

WHEREAS the courage of the Little Rock Nine, broadcast for the entire world to see, inspired other students of all colors to take a stand on behalf of tolerance, integration, and equality;

WHEREAS the courage of the Little Rock Nine demonstrated to segregationists throughout the United States that hatred and intolerance, that rage for victory of 9 high school students; and

WHEREAS, 50 years after the integration of Central High School, all Americans must remain vigilant in order to ensure that every child has access to quality public education, regardless of race or ethnicity. Now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Senate

(1) joins with the people of Massachusetts in honoring the courage of the Little Rock Nine;

(2) pledges to advance the legacy of the Little Rock Nine;

IN HONOR OF CARNE C. CUNNINGHAM, UNITED STATES NAVY

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in honor of Carne C. Cunningham, a World War II veteran. He received his ensign commission in September 1943.

His military service began with his assignment to LST–291, a landing ship for tanks, where he served as the officer in charge of supplies in addition to his watch officer duties. On September 10, 1944, Carne was assigned as a division officer to a cargo personnel ship, the Aurgia, where he served for the remainder of the war. He was involved in the invasion of Leyte, Lingayen Gulf, Luzon Island, the Philippines Islands, and Okinawa, where he witnessed the death and destruction of war.

World War II is known as the deadliest conflict in history, taking the lives of over 70 million people. During this difficult time, our country stood united behind our brave service members and women who so willingly took to the battlefields to defend freedom and democracy. It is veterans like Carne that helped us emerge victorious from World War II and re-store hope and humanity in a world that was shattered by the darkness of hatred and violence.

His patriotism, courage, and selflessness are an example of what make America great. Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest gratitude for his service to this great Nation. May God bless all those he loved, and may I convey to them my sincerest condolences and the gratitude of the American people.

RECOGNIZING THE UNVEILING OF A MONUMENT HONORING HAITIAN SOLDIERS

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. RANGEL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the erection of a monument in Savannah, Georgia honoring the more than 500 Haitian soldiers who fought there during the Revolutionary War, and to introduce the Tribute of the American Revolution’s Haitian soldiers. Savannah had a monument dedicated in their honor last Monday.

About 150 people, many of them Haitian-Americans who came to Savannah for the event, gathered in Franklin Square where life-size bronze statues of four soldiers now stand atop a granite pillar 6 feet tall and 16 feet in diameter.

This is a testimony to tell people we Haitian didn’t come from the boat, said Daniel Fils-Aime, chairman of the Miami-based Haitian American Historical Society. We were here in 1779 to help America win independence. That recognition is overdue.

In October 1779, a force of more than 500 Haitian free Blacks joined American colo-nists and French troops in an unsuccessful push to drive the British from Savannah in coastal Georgia.

More than 300 allied soldiers were gunned down charging British fortifications Oct. 9, making the siege the second-most lopsided British victory of the war after Bunker Hill.

Though not well known in the U.S., Haiti’s role in the American Revolution is a point of national pride for Haitians.

After returning home from the war, Haitian veterans soon led their own rebellion that won Haiti’s independence from France in 1804.

Fils-Aime’s group has spent the past seven years lobbying Savannah leaders to support the monument, which the city approved in 2005, and raising more than $480,000 in pri-vate donations to pay for it. Fils-Aime said the historical society still needs $250,000 more to finish two additional soldier statues.

As it stands now, the monument features life-size bronze statues of four soldiers and standing atop a granite pillar 6 feet tall and 16 feet in diameter.

The fourth statue, a drummer boy, depicts a young Henri Christophe, who served in Savannah as an adolescent and went on to become Haiti’s first president—and ultimately king—after it won independence.

Records show that 545 Haitian soldiers sailed to Savannah in 1779, making them the largest Haitian unit of the Savannah battle. The Haitians are also believed to have been the largest black unit to serve in the Amer-i-can Revolution.

This is a testimony to tell people we Haitian didn’t come from the boat, said Daniel Fils-Aime, chairman of the Miami-based Haitian American Historical Society, one of the many Haitian Americans who came to Savan-nah for the dedication.

We were here in 1779 to help America win independence. That recognition is overdue.

VIOLENT RADICALIZATION AND HOMEGROWN TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT OF 2007

SPEECH OF
HON. SHEILA JACKSON-LEE
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, October 23, 2007

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 1955, the Violent Radicalization and Homegrown Terrorist Prevention Act of 2007, introduced by my distinguished colleague from California, Representative HARMAN. This im-portant legislation recognizes the threat of homegrown terrorism and seeks to address this burgeoning problem while maintaining the civil rights and liberties of American citizens.

Since May of this year, two separate plots against strategic American targets have been foiled and prevented by American officials; what distinguishes them from previous terrorist plots against the United States is that the potential terrorists here had no support from Al-Qaeda or any other overseas terrorist cells. America must be unique in its approach to homeland terrorism, civil rights and civil liberties protections that are unique to America and enjoyed by all American citizens.

As a senior Member of the Committee on Homeland Security and Chair of the Subcommittee on Transportation Security and Infrastructure, I believe we can secure our homeland and remain true to our values simultaneously. In our fights against global ter-rorism, it is critical that Muslim Americans continue to be our allies. The Muslim American Community has grown in size and prominence, and is an integral part of the fabric of this Nation. Muslim Americans share the same values and ideals that make this Nation great. Ideals such as discipline, generosity, peace and moderation.

Many years of civil rights jurisprudence and law have been ignored and thrown out the window when the racial profiling, harassment, and discrimination of Muslim and Arab Americans is permitted to occur with impunity. These practices show a reckless and utter disregard for the fundamental values on which our country is founded: namely, due process, the presumption of innocence, nondiscrimina-tion, individualized rather than group sus-picion, and equitable application of the law. We cannot allow xenophobia, prejudice, and bigotry to prevail, and eviscerate the Constitu-tion we are bound to protect.

The securing of our homeland and protec-tion of our national security is on the forefront of my agenda. However, using 9/11 as an im-petus to engage in racial profiling, harass-ment, and discrimination of Muslim and Arab Americans is not only deplorable, it under-mines our civil liberties and impedes our suc-cess in the global war on terror. We must fight our war on terror without compromising our freedoms and liberties.

Precisely for these reasons that I so strongly support H.R. 1955. This Act calls for the creation for the creation of the National Commission to examine the various causes of violent radicalization and homegrown terrorism in order to propose concrete and meaningful recommendations and legislative strategies in order to alleviate these threats. It also establishes a Fund of Excellence for the Prevention of Radicalization and Home Grown Terrorism that will study the social, criminal, political, psychological, and economic roots of the problem as well as provide homeland security officials across the government with suggestions for preventing radicalization and homegrown terrorism.

Furthermore, it requires our homeland security officials to thoroughly examine the experiences of other nations that have experienced homegrown terrorism so that our government might learn from those experiences. As such, H.R. 1995 does more than merely address the current situation with regard to homegrown terrorism but also works to identify the causes behind the problem and address them as well. I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.

RECOGNIZING THE 62ND ANNIVERSARY OF THE UNITED NATIONS

HON. TED POE
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. POE. Madam Speaker, today we recognize the 62nd anniversary of the United Nations. The United Nations was founded in the aftermath of the Second World War. Leaders across the world came together to form this international organization with the hope that nations united in purpose might never again have to face the devastating consequences of a third World War. Since its inception, the mission of the United Nations has been focused on advancing the cause of fundamental human rights around the world. It is a noble cause.

Unfortunately, the lofty goals of this institution have been blemished by a record of past actions which challenge the U.N.’s very existence. This year, Madam Speaker, I am serving as one of two Congressional Delegates to the United Nations. As a representative of the people I would be remiss, on this United Nations Day, if I did not address some of the concerns that Americans have with the United Nations. In a poll conducted last year by political consultant and pollster, Frank Luntz, 71 percent of Americans agreed that the U.N. is no longer effective and need to be reformed. In addition, the poll found that 75 percent of the participants agreed that the United Nations no longer effective and needs to be held accountable. Most telling, for the first time since the U.N. was founded, a majority of Americans believe that if the U.N. cannot be reformed it needs to be gotten rid of all together and replaced.

Like most Americans, Madam Speaker, I am concerned with the ineffectiveness of the United Nations. I am concerned with the anti-Semitic factions that exist within the U.N. I am concerned with the human rights abuses—claiming to preserve human rights, while not holding some of the world’s worst human rights violators responsible. I am concerned with the corruption of U.N. officials and mismanagement of U.N. programs. And I’m concerned with the United Nations inability to actually take a lead in fighting the threat of global terrorism.

If the United Nations expects the United States to support its mission, it had better take the concerns of the American people seriously and implement the reforms that are necessary to gain the trust of the American public. And that’s just the way it is.

TRIBUTE TO SHIRLEY L. JOHNSON

HON. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Shirley L. Johnson, a remarkable woman who has distinguished herself with a long and impressive record of dedicated public service and advocacy for human rights and social justice.

A resident of Rockville, Maryland, Shirley worked for the U.S. Public Health Service where, for many years, she served as Deputy Director of the Department of Medicine. At the time of her retirement, she was the Director of the Office of Program Development, Bureau of Health Professions. Her tenure at the government health agency spanned 37 years and was highlighted by numerous awards, including the Public Health Service Superior Service Award, the highest public service level award to be granted to a civilian.

Since her retirement, Shirley has worn many hats and taken volunteerism to new heights. An outspoken champion of health care for the disenfranchised, Shirley was appointed to the Montgomery County Commission on Health and served as its Commissioner from 1995–2000. She also served on the Board of the Primary Care Coalition of Montgomery County, a charitable organization committed to bringing high quality, accessible, and efficient health care services to low-income, uninsured county residents.

Combining her concern for public health with her knowledge of the governmental process, Shirley testified frequently before the Montgomery County Council and the Maryland General Assembly, urging lawmakers to pass legislation to ban smoking in public places. From 1997–98, she served on the board of directors of Smoke Free Maryland and as co-chair of the Montgomery County Smoke Free Coalition.

In the civil rights arena, Shirley challenged local officials to eliminate prejudice and injustice and lobby persistently for fair housing to local officials to eliminate prejudice and injustice. Shirley is a 1996 graduate of Leadership Maryland, and serves as chair of the Montgomery County Commission for Women, a resource and an important voice for women throughout the Washington metropolitan area.

In 2002, Shirley was inducted into the Montgomery County Human Rights Hall of Fame. Two years later, she was named Volunteer of the Year by the Montgomery County Democratic Central Committee. In 2005, she was named a “Woman of Achievement” by the Montgomery County Business & Professional Women’s Clubs, Inc., the “Civil Rights Award” from the Montgomery County, Maryland Branch of the NAACP, and the “Distinguished Leadership Award” from the Community Leadership Association.

Madam Speaker, Shirley L. Johnson exemplifies community service. She is an individualist and an idealist who believes in equal opportunity for all men and women. She cares deeply about the quality of life in her community and is a model to others of what one person can accomplish through commitment, hard work and perseverance.

On Sunday, October 28, 2007, Shirley Johnson will be honored at an event at the Bauer Drive Community Center in Rockville, Maryland. Referred to by her friends as “One Classy Lady,” Shirley will be “cherished, toasted, and appreciated.” I am proud that she is my constituent and am pleased to add my praises to the chorus of family, colleagues and friends who will gather to salute her.

TRIBUTE TO ALABAMA POLITICAL JOURNALIST BOB INGRAM

HON. TERRY EVERETT OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. EVERETT. Madam Speaker, I rise in tribute to a man who for a generation symbolized great class and professionalism in Alabama political journalism, Bob Ingram.

Alabamians statewide, and, in particular, in the political and journalism communities, were saddened to learn of the passing of Bob Ingram on October 18 at the age of 81. To all those who knew him, Bob was an unquestioned authority on State politics. He possessed a comfortable familiarity with the historical and personal side of Alabama government and the key players who shaped it going back some 6 decades. He was unequalled in his political wisdom because he was a witness to and participant in government. He covered our State through both tough and brighter times but he never lost his love for Alabama and its often colorful political figures.

Bob began his career as a reporter for the Cherokee Herald in his hometown of Centre. His mother, the town librarian, instilled in him a passion for writing which pointed him on his way to a remarkable journalism career, but also to authoring several insightful books on the Alabama political scene.
A World War II Marine Corps veteran, reporter for the Montgomery Advertiser, writer of a statewide political column for nearly 50 years, State Finance Director for Governor Albert Brewer, and respected television political commentator in central and southeast Alabama, Bob Ingraham was a man of many talents, united by his love of politics.

There were no sacred cows with Bob’s political commentary. That’s why we trusted him. You knew his opinions were well-researched and from the heart.

From Big Jim Folsom to Gordon Persons, Patterson Reed, Bob Brewer, James, Hunt, Baxley, Siegelman, Riley—he knew them all. Whatever occurred in Alabama politics, you wanted to get Bob’s thoughts. He also brought touches of grace, humor, and humility to his commentary—always realizing the pressures and vicissitudes of human nature in the political arena.

Thank you, Bob, for your love of Alabama and her political institutions. Your indelible mark will be felt as strongly as any public servant. And that’s the way we see it.

RECOGNIZING NANCY BERRY FOR BEING NAMED TO USA TODAY’S 2007 ALL-USA TEACHER TEAM

HON. JEFF MILLER
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Madam Speaker, on behalf of the United States Congress, it is an honor for me to rise today to recognize Nancy Berry for being named to the USA Today’s 2007 All-USA Teacher Team.

Nancy Berry is a first grade teacher at Liza Jackson Preparatory School, a charter school in Fort Walton Beach, Florida. She has been an educator for 34 years, which includes five years as a principal.

As the USA Today panel sifted through hundreds of nominations, they judged the teachers on how well they identify and address their student’s needs and the impact they have on students and learning. A parent of a former student, Dawn Fisher, was so impressed with Mrs. Berry that she nominated her for this prestigious distinction. Only 20 teachers nationwide were chosen.

Each year Mrs. Berry welcomes her students to “Berryland USA: A Place Where Children Love to Learn.” She is known for her gentle encouragement, individualized attention and a plastic, heat-reactive fish to make learning a “self-fulfilling prophecy” for her first-graders. On the first day of class she brings out the fish and tells the children that if the fish curls up in their hand then they are smart, worthy and good. “Children have to have concrete ways of seeing that they are smart or are able to be successful,” she says.

Through her hard work and dedication in the field of education, the impact she has had on her students and the difference she has made in their lives has proven her to be among the great teachers of the nation. We are honored and proud to have her as one of our own.

Madam Speaker, on behalf of the United States Congress, I rise today in order to offer an explanation of having missed rollcall vote number 995 earlier today. I missed this vote because I was visiting wounded warriors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. I enjoy the opportunity to visit with soldiers from my district, today visiting soldiers from Adrian and Jackson. I believe it is our duty as elected representatives to see to it our soldiers are receiving the proper care and resources needed for their recovery.

Madam Speaker, whereas I missed this vote today, I wish for my constituents to know I did not miss this vote in haste. Rather, I was seeing to the needs of these brave soldiers who represent the best America has to offer. As an avid outdoorsman and conservationist I supported the bill, H.R. 1483 and, had I been present, I would have voted “aye.”

ON THE AUDUBON OHIO URBAN CONSERVATION CREW SUMMER CAP AT THE ROCHEFELLER PARK GREENHOUSE IN CLEVELAND

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Audubon Ohio Urban Conservation Crew Summer Cap at the Rockefeller Park Greenhouse in Cleveland.

The Ohio program of the National Audubon Society is working hard to ensure that children in the central city have the opportunity to connect with nature and, in doing so, improve their educational achievement and their sense of community and self-esteem.

During the recent August recess I had the good fortune to visit the Ohio program of the National Audubon Society which is also a program in my own district. The program, a free summer camp for neighborhood children ages 8 to 11, is known as the Urban Conservation Crew. Through this program, Audubon Ohio, in less than five weeks, has succeeded in developing a group of budding scientists who have mastered the fine points of bird identification and behavior, focusing on the birds and plants of their own neighborhood.

Audubon Ohio chose as its location for the camp the Rockefeller Park Greenhouse. The Greenhouse is located in the heart of Cleveland’s historic Glenville neighborhood. Owned and operated by the City of Cleveland, the Greenhouse’s official function is to develop plants for indoor and outdoor use at other city properties. But the facility includes classroom space, extensive gardens (including a community garden), and a large meadow ringed with mature trees that makes an excellent habitat for birds.

I grew up near the Greenhouse, yet during my visit I learned a lot of new things about it. Chief among these was the fact that the Greenhouse property immediately adjoins an “Important Bird Area,” or “IBA.” IBAs are part of an international network of areas that are important to the survival of migratory birds. This network was created by a European-based organization, Birdlife International. Audubon Ohio is the Birdlife partner responsible for designating and protecting IBAs in the United States.

The Greenhouse sits next to one of 63 IBAs that Audubon has designated in Ohio. Specifically, it is next to the “Doan Brook/Dike 14 IBA,” a key migration corridor for Lake Erie with the upland Shaker Lakes on the western edge of the Appalachian Plateau. In practical terms this means that a lot of interesting birds pass through the area, with many species nesting in it. This in turn creates an opportunity for children in Glenville to explore an important natural area right near where they live.

From what I saw of the camp, Audubon Ohio is taking full advantage of the location of the Greenhouse and the convergence of a central city neighborhood with an interesting natural area. During one of the sessions of the camp, children walked the Greenhouse grounds and the surrounding neighborhood with Audubon instructors who taught them how to identify birds both by sight and by sound. Audubon also took advantage of the great life inside and outside of the Greenhouse to teach the children about what plants they could grow in their neighborhood and how the birds of the neighborhood would both help the plants survive by eating pests and, in turn, benefit themselves from the seeds and berries produced by the plants.

During my visit the children showed off the knowledge that they had picked up in only a few weeks. They explained to me the concept of “field marks” of birds and how I could use field marks to distinguish different species. They identified the various body parts of birds and explained how I could distinguish the sexes of different species, such as the Northern Cardinal. They told me what kind of food birds could find around the neighborhood and how people could help birds by supplying this food. They explained how to protect birds from man-made threats, such as plastic “six pack” holders that, they said, I needed to cut up so that birds would not get their necks stuck in them and choke.

Beyond the knowledge and conservation values that the children were displaying, I was impressed by the passion with which the children were discussing the birds and plants of their neighborhood. I kept having to remind myself that these children were all less than 12 years old, some as young as eight, but they had no prior interest in birds or nature, let alone experience in identifying them. These children were learning complex fundamental scientific techniques, including observation, distinction, grouping by similarities, understanding food chains and identifying threats and barriers. Introducing children to birds and plants was a great way of teaching them science by drawing on children’s inherent desire to explore and understand the natural world around them.

Cleveland is blessed with a number of outstanding institutions that have offered nature-based education to children over the years. These include our fabulous Metro Parks network as well as stand-alone institutions such as The Nature Center at Shaker Lakes, the Lake Erie Nature and Science Center and the...
Cuyahoga Valley National Park Education Center. These institutions have gone to great lengths to reach out to the central city by bringing children out to their suburban and exurban facilities. I appreciate all of the efforts they have made over the years, and I hope they continue.

What distinguishes Audubon Ohio’s Urban Conservation Crew is that it is being conducted right in the neighborhood where the children live. Given the enthusiasm I saw in the children during their visit, I am confident that they will continue to explore Rockefeller Park, looking for birds, plants and other animals, long after the camp is over.

After my visit I learned that Cleveland is not the only location where Audubon has been offering programs like the Urban Conservation Crew to central city children. In Columbus, Audubon is developing the Grange Insurance Audubon Center, a nature-based education center slated to open in 2009 in a central city neighborhood just a mile south of downtown. Audubon already has similar facilities at Prospect Park in Brooklyn and in Debs Park in East Los Angeles. Another urban center, known as “the Rio Salado Center,” is under development in the heart of Phoenix.

It is notable that Audubon Ohio produced the Urban Conservation Crew program almost entirely with private funds. Support came from the Cleveland Foundation, the Kent H. Smith Charitable Trust, and the Shaker Lakes Garden Club. Audubon Ohio did, however, receive a small amount of federal money, specifically a $5,000 grant from the U.S.D.A. Natural Resources Conservation Service. It goes to show how a relatively small amount of federal dollars can be leveraged to produce great results.

I commend Audubon, Ohio for helping to reconnect children with nature, particularly in the central city. Audubon and its Ohio program deserve high marks for their creativity and skill in doing so at the Rockefeller Park Greenhouse in Cleveland and elsewhere. They provide great hope for the future.

Mr. KIRK. Madam Speaker, I am honored to welcome His Holiness Karekin II, Supreme Patriarch and Catholicos of All Armenians to the 10th Congressional District of Illinois. His Holiness Karekin II was a pivotal figure in rebuilding the Armenian Church in the aftermath of the Soviet period and providing spiritual leadership for 7 million Armenian Apostolic Christians around the world. He has undertaken extensive philanthropic and humanitarian work, including opening orphanages, hospitals, soup kitchens for the elderly and cultural centers for the youth of Armenia. We would like to honor His Holiness Karekin II for his dedication to the people of Armenia and thank him for visiting the 10th District of Illinois.

I hope this trip to the United States compels my colleagues to bring the Armenian Genocide resolution, H. Res. 106, to a vote before the full House of Representatives. For more than 90 years, Armenians were denied recognition for the Genocide of 1915.

We promised in 1945 to never forget the Holocaust, to never again let such atrocities be committed. As defenders of human rights, America must formally recognize the genocide Hitler once dismissed so easily. From 1915 to 1923, the Ottoman Turks systematically annihilated more than 1.5 million ethnic Armenians. There is no other way to describe this organized campaign of murder than as genocide.

As a defender of human rights, America should be committed. But the world could forget the Holocaust, to never again let such atrocities be committed. Our nation stood united behind our brave service men and women who so willingly took to the battlefield to defend freedom and democracy. It is veterans like James that helped us emerge victorious from World War II and re-store hope and humanity in a world that was shattered by the darkness of hatred and violence.

His patriotism, courage, and selflessness should be commended and his dedication to public service deserves our highest regard. Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest gratitude for his service to this great Nation.
have been used to deadly effect, beginning inermously with the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing. We need to balance these very real security concerns against the vital value of ammonium nitrate fertilizer to the U.S. plant food industry, its many local retail agribusiness outlets, and the farmers and livestock producers they serve.

Ammonium nitrate fertilizes our Nation’s crops, and it helps the American economy grow. It provides a relatively inexpensive source of the nitrogen required to grow crops, and it has economic, econometric, and environmental benefits to the entire society. It can also, however, be used to create explosive devices, as demonstrated by the Oklahoma City bombings.

H.R. 1680 will require the creation of these controls and regulations. This bill will provide the Department of Homeland Security with the authority to develop a nationally consistent, ef-factive, and integrated approach to control access to ammonium nitrate, and it will require the Department to develop a regulatory sys-

H.R. 1680 offers an opportunity to strengthen our defenses against the threat of terrorism without placing an extraordinary burden on industry. This legislation has the support of the Fertilizer Institute, a group representing most fertilizer producers. Mr. Speaker, as our Nation’s leaders, it is our responsibility to be proactive, and to make every effort to remain several steps ahead of any who might attack our country. This bill is an opportunity to do just that, to not wait for another devastating attack to address what we already recognize to be a serious security threat.

I strongly support this legislation, and I urge my colleagues to do likewise.

FOREIGN GANGS OPERATING IN THE UNITED STATES

HON. TED POE
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. POE. Madam Speaker, since June, national law enforcement agencies have teamed up with their state and local counterparts. The result? The arrest of more than 1,300 violent street gang members, associates, and illegal aliens in 19 states.

In 2005, the Department of Homeland Security’s U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement launched a national effort called Operation Community Shield. This effort has already led to the arrests of over 7,600 gang members from 700 different gangs; 107 were gang leaders. ICE agents also seized 340 grams of cocaine and over 1 lb. of marijuana and crack cocaine.

Operation Community Shield focuses on keeping criminal gangs off our streets. ICE agents investigate the crimes and the immigration status of the criminals. Since 2005, ICE charged 5200 gang members with immigration violations and processed them for deportation.

This is a great example of successful law enforcement partnerships. Local, state, and federal anti-gang efforts are leading the fight against street gangs. These partnerships allow law enforcement agencies to share resources and leadership and to arrest, prosecute, imprison and deport criminal and illegal alien gang members. And that’s just the way it is.

TRIBUTE TO DAVID B. HUMPTON
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mr. David B. Humpton for his twenty-two years of service to the City of Gaithersburg, Maryland.

Mr. HUMPTON began his career with the City of Gaithersburg in 1986 as an intern and quickly rose to the position of Deputy City Manager. Having proven himself as a dynamic and capable leader, Mr. Humpston was appointed City Manager in 1995. During his 17-year tenure, Mr. Humpston has guided the city through significant change and growth with dedication and commitment.

As City Manager, Mr. Humpston has had numerous significant accomplishments. Among other successes, he developed a strategic planning process, implemented new procedures to streamline the budget process, and served as an effective advocate for inter-governmental collaboration. Mr. Humpston’s management style has been instrumental in the completion of several notable development projects, including the Washingtonian Center and the Kentlands. Under his leadership, Gaithersburg has been recognized for its “livability,” economic development initiatives, budgeting and accounting, communications and recreation services.

Mr. Humpston’s “retirement” will be short-lived as he will soon join Montgomery Village,

Maryland as its top administrator. His experience as an effective administrator will serve him well as he meets the challenges of his new position.

Madam Speaker, I am pleased to honor Mr.

David Humpston for his outstanding service.

TRIBUTE TO THE LIFE OF OFFICER SERGIO CARRERA, JR.
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. BACA. Madam Speaker, I stand here today in remembrance of a distinguished member of the Rialto community, Officer Sergio Carrera, Jr.

While serving his community, Sergio

Carrera, Jr., 29, a 4-year veteran of the force and a member of the SWAT team, lost his life in the line of duty. Despite efforts by doctors at Arrowhead Regional Medical Center in Colton, Officer Carrera passed away leaving his wife, Louise Andrea Carrera, 2-year-old son, Sergio Carrera III, and 1-year-old daughter, Izabella.

A dedicated member of the Rialto community, Officer Carrera was hired by the Rialto

Police Department in June 2003 and loyally served 4 years of his life to ensure the safety of the citizens of Rialto. Along with Carrera’s wife and children, his father, Sergio Carrera caring mother, Aurora Carrera, and siblings, Shirley Magana and Susan Colao, mourn the sudden loss of their dear son and brother.

While it is with sadness that we mourn the unexpected death of this valiant officer, we think of him with joy and fondness as we recognize his devotion to family, friends, and the city of Rialto. The use of his life to protect and ensure the safety of our community is unquestionable. Although now gone, in his absence

we will remember the significance of selfless service that so many of our public officers show for our citizens on a daily basis.

I thank Officer Sergio Carrera, Jr., for dedicating his life to the city and people of Rialto,

CA. I am honored to consider him a hero and I truly appreciate all he gave to our community and our country.

Barbara, my family, and I extend our deepest condolences to Officer Carrera’s family during this difficult time. May God bestow his comfort upon them as they grieve the loss of their loved one.

SUPPORTING OUR TROOPS

HON. RON KLEIN
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Madam Speaker, today I voted to table H. Res. 767, a motion that would have delayed the business of the day in order to censure Congressman STARK. I felt that Congress should spend its time prudently, on important issues that matter to the American people, not on issues that divide us.

With that said, I do not condone or support Congressman STARK’s statements of October 18, 2007. I believe that he was right to apologize on the House floor. Our brave men and women fight wars because they believe in protecting American citizens and their freedoms.

Just a few days after Mr. STARK made his comments, I visited our wounded soldiers at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, and I saw their determination and patriotism. I could not be more proud of our troops serving around the world, and I will continue to work hard to provide them with the best supplies and protection when they are in battle, and then, the best care when they return home.

HONORING THE 130TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BAKERSFIELD FIRE DEPARTMENT

HON. JIM COSTA
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. COSTA. Madam Speaker, I rise today, along with my colleague Congressman MCCARTHY, to congratulate the Bakersfield Fire Department on the celebration of their 130th anniversary.

The Bakersfield Fire Department dates back to 1877, when community members recognized a need for a well-organized, professional fire department and held local fundraisers to buy equipment. Since those early days, the department has expanded and now serves the public with 13 engines, 3 ladder trucks and over 180 firefighters.

For over a century, the Bakersfield Fire Department has served the Bakersfield community, and their deep and longstanding commitment to public safety is evident by the many public education programs they conduct every year. Throughout the year, the department hosts many informational sessions such as: fire safety and home evacuation, the installation and maintenance of smoke detectors, earthquake preparedness and chemical safety. Bakersfield’s firefighters also deliver presentations in local classrooms, educating our children on helping to make their communities a safe place to live.

Through the efforts of their public education and fire prevention services division, the firefighters are working hard to ensure fire disasters never occur in the first place. However, should the worst occur, the operations, training and arson divisions stand ready to assist our citizens at a second’s notice.

The Bakersfield Firefighters have always prided themselves on serving the community not only through first-rate emergency services while on-the-job, but also a commitment to volunteerism that extends beyond their job responsibilities. As active members of the community, the firefighters are involved in a wide range of volunteer activities, from serving on local boards of community organizations to helping disadvantaged children get school supplies for the upcoming school year.

The 130th anniversary of the Bakersfield Fire Department is a perfect opportunity to pay tribute to the men and women who risk their lives every day for the safety of our community. Often, when people are running out of buildings, away from the danger, these brave men and women advance towards the flames. They are our everyday heroes and both my community and myself are eternally grateful for their service.

IN HONOR OF DR. ELAINE MAIMON

HON. JESSE L. JACKSON, JR.
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Dr. Elaine Maimon as Governors State University’s fifth president.

I am proud to represent Governors State University, the public university in the Chicago’s south suburbs. Established in 1969, GSU’s student body currently numbers 6,000 students, consisting primarily of young adults transferring from community colleges as well as older working adults returning to complete their education and advance their lives.

On November 3, GSU will formally install Dr. Elaine Maimon as its fifth president. Dr. Maimon will lead a university committed to the principles of diversity. Forty-five percent of GSU’s students are minority. Thirty-one percent of its faculty is minority—double the national average.

Dr. Maimon will lead a university that is accessible. A study conducted by the Lumina Foundation has recognized GSU as the most accessible university in the region.

Dr. Maimon will lead a university that meets the highest standards of demonstrable academic quality. Eighty percent of its faculty hold doctoral degrees or the highest degree in their field. The university itself is fully accredited, as is each program with an associated national accrediting body.

Dr. Maimon will lead a university connected with its community. Approximately 25,000 elementary, middle-school, and high school students visit Governors State each year for educational and cultural experiences. GSU faculty members work closely with local governments, school districts, and law enforcement agencies to help meet the needs of the region. The university’s business development center has helped secure nearly $55 million in financing since 2000 and has created and retained more than 1,100 jobs in the region.

More than 30 percent of men and women have graduated from GSU since its founding. Most graduates still reside in the region, where they serve as teachers, healthcare professionals, executives, entrepreneurs, and municipal leaders. Their lives have been transformed and their communities enriched because they had access to a quality education.

GSU is a model for the kind of university Dr. Maimon has advocated, developed, and enriched throughout her academic career. Over the years, she has invested her considerable talents to provide access and opportunity, to encourage dreamers to help dreams come true, and to help meet the needs of the underrepresented and underserved.

She has demonstrated the integrity, vision, and commitment required to take GSU to new levels of excellence and service.

Welcome, Dr. Elaine Maimon, and congratulations, Governors State University.

RECOGNIZING THE 35TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE SKYLINE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1972

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the 35th anniversary of the 1972 graduating class from Skyline High School in Dallas, TX. Located in my Congressional District, Skyline High School has the distinction being the first high school to offer a magnet school curriculum in the United States. As the first graduating class of our Nation’s first magnet school, I am pleased to honor them today as they celebrate this important milestone in their education.

After graduating the Dallas Independent School district, Skyline’s construction and development was guided by J. Stamps, the first high school principal, and Gene Davenport, the first Career Development Center Principal. Their vision for the school has helped shape it into the institution it is today, offering 22 career development clusters under the magnet school program. These exemplary cluster programs have directly yielded the creation of additional DISD magnet school. Graduates of the magnet school include authors, politicians, athletes and scholars.

Skyline High School aims to instill upon their graduates and students integrity, knowledge and ethics to prepare them for their future pursuits in life. The class of 1972 truly embodies these attributes, and is a shining example of our Dallas citizenry. Again, I am honored to congratulate them on the occasion of their 35th graduation anniversary.

HONORING JAMES ROWLAND

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. RADANOVICH. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Mr. James Rowland for his years of service to the criminal justice system in California, and upon the dedication of the James Rowland Crime Victim Assistance Center in Fresno, CA.

James Rowland, now retired, has provided over 30 years of service to all aspects of the criminal justice system in California. In October 1972 he began his career as a Fresno County chief probation officer, where he worked hard to give victims the consideration, fairness, and support that he felt was lacking in the system. With these efforts he was instrumental in adapting the way the justice system handles crime victims. In 1975, as a result
Mr. Rowland's efforts, Fresno County Probation Department became the first probation department to open a unit specifically designed to provide services to crime victims, including victims of homicide, domestic violence, and crimes against children. Mr. Rowland developed the first victim impact statement, to provide the judiciary with an objective currently part of the law.

After his time with the Fresno County Probation Office, Mr. Rowland served as the director of the California Youth Authority and the director of the California Department of Corrections. He established the Office of Victims of Crimes in both agencies. While working with the state, he instituted classes within the prisons for inmates to attend. In these classes they learned about the impact of their crime on their victim. Mr. Rowland has also taken the initiative to change the justice system within California by developing a system that is more accommodating, appreciative, and responsive to the suffering of those that are victims of a crime.

Mr. Rowland's work within California has extended nationwide and even worldwide. He has been the recipient of many prestigious awards from Pepperdine University and Harvard University, as well as various criminal justice and private agencies, for his contributions to the field of corrections. Mr. Rowland has become internationally known as a crime victims advocate, and he has changed the way people perceive the victim. In his retirement Mr. Rowland continues to provide direction and assistance to persons and agencies that work within the justice system.

Madam Speaker, I rise today to commend and congratulate Mr. James Rowland for his work toward crime victims assistance and the dedication of the James Rowland Crime Victims Assistance Center. I invite my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Rowland many years of continued success.

Mr. PUTNAM. Madam Speaker, on October 22, 2007 I was unavoidably detained and missed rollcall votes 983, 984 and 985. Had I been present, I would have voted: rollcall vote 983, “no”, rollcall vote 984, “aye”, rollcall vote 985, “aye”.

IN MEMORY OF DR. PARMER RICHARDSON, UNITED STATES NAVY

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in memory of Dr. Parmer Richardson, a World War II veteran, and in honor of his patriotism and a life dedicated to service. He joined the United States Navy in the summer of 1941.

Though he spent most of his service as a radioman specializing in communications technology, he originally joined with the intent to become a pilot and was persuaded by a Navy recruiter who promised him flight training. He was sent to various areas in the United States as well as Canada and Madora in the Philippines. After being discharged, Parmer began his 55-year dental practice.

World War II is known as the deadliest conflict in human history, taking the lives of over 70 million people. During this difficult time, our country stood united behind our brave service men and women who so willingly took to the battlefields to defend freedom and democracy. It is veterans like Parmer that helped us emerge victorious from World War II and restore hope and humanity in a world that was shattered by the darkness of hatred and violence.

He is survived by his wife, Jane Richardson, of Duncanville, TX. He will be remembered as a devoted family man, a lover of flying, and a proud veteran and American. His patriotism, courage, and selflessness are example of what make America great. Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest gratitude for his service to this great Nation. May God bless all those he loved, and may I convey to them my sincerest condolences and the gratitude of the American people.

SPEAK ENGLISH

HON. TED POE
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. POE. Madam Speaker, walk into any public school, police station, or hospital and you will surely hear public officials speaking in another language than English. We are using taxes from hardworking Americans to hire employees for the sole purpose of being able to communicate with people who refuse to learn English. These people are making the choice not to assimilate as Americans and learn English, but keeping their allegiance to Mexico or whichever country they immigrated from. The United States has had a long history of immigrants, but all of the different cultures desired to become one unified America. The English language was the common bridge to which these cultures could relate, and the same can still hold true today. That is why I passionately encourage the passing of H.R. 997, the English Language Unity Act of 2007.

This bill will require official functions of the United States to be conducted in English only. In addition, it declares that the English language requirements and workplace policies, whether in the public or private sector, shall be presumptively consistent with the laws of the United States.

I believe Teddy Roosevelt had it right when he said: “There can be no divided allegiance here. Any man who says he is an American, but is something else also, isn’t an American at all. We have room for but one flag, the American flag. We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language...and we have room for but one solvency, and that is a loyalty to the American people.”

And that’s just the way it is.

TRIBUTE TO MOBILEMED OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MARYLAND

HON. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to express my appreciation and gratitude to Mobile Medical Care, Inc. for its 40 years of service to the medically disadvantaged of Montgomery County, Maryland.

MobileMed was founded in 1967 by the late Dr. Herman Meyersburg and Dr. George Cohen. While serving as a volunteer tutor in a home-study program in the Kensington community, Dr. Meyersburg noticed that many program participants were without health insurance or access to medical care. In its early years, MobileMed was funded largely through the contributions of its own volunteer physicians. Its first clinic was located in the basement of a Kensington church.

Today, 27 staff members and over 200 volunteer medical professionals provide health care services to approximately 5,000 Montgomery County residents each year, including 1,500 Head Start children. Through increased funding and volunteer participation, MobileMed seeks to expand its ability to serve more of the estimated 100,000 Montgomery County residents who cannot afford health care.

Throughout the last 40 years, MobileMed has fulfilled its mission of providing low-cost medical care to our community’s homeless, low income, uninsured, and working poor in a respectful, competent, and compassionate manner. We in Montgomery County, Maryland are grateful for the dedication and efforts of MobileMed and its volunteers.

Madam Speaker, please join me in recognizing and honoring forty years of dedicated and outstanding service by MobileMed.

Mr. KING of New York. Madam Speaker, due to the recent passing of my mother, I did not return to Washington until yesterday afternoon. TRIBUTE TO MICHAEL HEIERMANN

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the patriotism of Michael Heiermann. Michael is a High School Junior from Mt. Vernon, Illinois. For several years now, he has put out small American flags throughout his neighborhood to mark special national holidays.

President Kennedy said, “A nation reveals itself not only by the men it produces but also by the men it honors.” Today, America is a better place because of young men and women like Michael. And America is a better place because of good parents like Edward and Dorothy Heiermann.

Small acts of great love are the unmitting actions that make America great. It is my honor today to recognize the service of this young man as an example of a true patriot—a testament to which we should all aspire.

HON. STEVE R. ROTHMAN OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. ROTHMAN. Madam Speaker, I would like to state for the record my position on the following votes I missed on October 22nd and 23rd.

On Monday, October 22, and Tuesday, October 23, 2007, I was unable to be present in the Capitol due to prior commitments and thus missed rollcall votes Nos. 983, 984, 985, 986, and 987. Had I been present, I would have voted “aye” on all votes.

In particular, I want to note my strong support for H.R. 189, the Paterson Great Falls National Historical Park Act of 2007, which was introduced by my colleague from New Jersey, Congressman Bill Pascrell, Jr., and which was considered as rollcall No. 983. This legislation establishes the Paterson Great Falls National Historical Park as a unit of the National Park System, thereby enriching a truly unique national historic district in New Jersey. Had I been present during the consideration of this bill, I would have voted “aye” with great pleasure and pride.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF CONRAD AND FRANCES C. GASKIN, PHD

HON. DONNA M. CHRISTENSEN OF VIRGIN ISLANDS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Madam Speaker, I rise to introduce you and my colleagues to a very special couple who happen to be my cousins.

Conrad and Frances are first generation African Caribbean Americans who were born in New York State. The parents and grandparents of Conrad hail from Guyana, South America, continental United States and Jamaica, West Indies. Frances is rooted in five generations of the Christian and Farrelly clans on St. Croix, United States Virgin Islands and Guyana and Nigeria, by enslavement, and also West Meath, Ireland, respectively. The two met while attending St. Augustine’s Elementary School in Brooklyn, New York. After elementary school Conrad and Frances went on to Bishop Dubois High School for Boys and Blessed Sacrament High School for Girls. Upon graduation he enlisted in the United States Air Force and was honorably discharged four years later. He followed in his parent’s footsteps. His father, Lionel Gaskin was a Merchant Seaman and prolific mathematician and Lillian his mother, a health care companion and a storytelling humorist.

Frances went on to City College of the City University of New York (CUNY), where her father, Clement Christian had graduated several years before, and Fordham Hospital for Registered Professional Nursing, initiated by her mother, Therese, who was a Licensed Practical Nurse and an omniscient resource person.

Frances is a second generation graduate from the CUNY system. They were married by Monsignor Cornelius Drew on September 14, 1957 at St. Augustine Roman Catholic Church in the Bronx, New York. Three children were born from this union: Conrad II (1995), Trace and Troy.

Being Catholics, the children received the sacraments at St. Augustine and Most Holy Trinity in Brooklyn, New York. The family continued its affiliation with St. Augustine until immigrating to Brooklyn, New York where Our Lady of Charity became their new Church home under the pastorship of Reverend Doctor James E. Goode, OFM. During the marriage Conrad and Frances reared their children, along with the “village”: for it takes a Village to raise even one child. Their children learned the Montessori Method of Education at the United Nations Church Center, New York and continued their basic education at Most Holy Trinity Elementary School.

During the marriage, Conrad and Frances attained undergraduate and graduate degrees. He is an alumnus of Brooklyn College (CUNY) and Antioch University and she earned degrees from Hunter College (CUNY), Adelphi University and Fordham University. Their children were educated at Fordham Prep, New York Brooklyn Technical High School and Cascadilla Prep School in Ithaca, New York and Stuyvesant High School, New York. Conrad II, Trace and Troy went on to graduate from Bates College in Lewiston, Maine; Fordham University and Long Island University, New York, and Xavier University in New Orleans, Louisiana, respectively. A Fordham family tradition was upheld: Trace completed her undergraduate degree; Conrad graduated from Fordham Prep and Troy completed coursework at the University. Trace is a second generation graduate of Fordham. Some overlapping occurred in the family’s quest for education: Four family members were in college at one time. The children went on to become responsible citizens in banking, education and brokering real estate.

Of the marriages, Conrad II; Trace and Troy united in marriage with Adrienne, Mario, and Angela who brought four five grandchildren: Conrad III and Kayla; Soleil Mustafa, and Briana and Troy Ashly II. Briana attends Hunter College High School and is the third generation in the CUNY system.

For a career change, Conrad and Frances emigrated from Brooklyn to Albany, New York and helped found an additional Church home in the Faith Community of the Black Apostolate, which later expanded to include St. Joan of Arc and Sacred Heart Churches of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Albany, New York. Father Kofi Ntsiful-Amissah serves as Pastor.

The family demonstrated entrepreneurial strengths by starting a skin and hair care business called Frances Christian Gaskin, Inc. Four patents were awarded in the United States for dissolving melanin and placing it into the MELANIN PLUS products.

The family enjoys interstate and international travel, exposing their children and grandchildren to strong family values, and other places and cultures in the United States, the Caribbean, and their own children, to Europe.

Conrad is retired from The New York State Teachers’ Retirement System; Frances is a former College Professor in Nursing and is pursuing her studies in Medicine.

Conrad and Frances, recognizing that “giving back” is the highest form of service, continue to advise the youth in academics and sports. Conrad coached basketball and swimming. Frances has also worked with the American Red Cross and is a Staff Officer with the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary. Both are Ministers of the Eucharist.

They love participating in Church activities and sports, particularly swimming and SCUBA diving. They are also communicants and members of Our Lady Star of the Sea Church and the Polar Bears on Martha’s Vineyard, and also members of the Holy Cross Church and the “Ii” Bay Posse morning swim on St. Croix.

The theme song on their 50th Wedding Anniversary was “I Believe.” They are indeed people of faith!

We thank God for this special couple and our family and we thank Him for the 50 wonderful years He has given them. I ask the entire Congress of the United States to join me in wishing them many more loving years together and His continued blessings.

IN HONOR OF ROBERT M. ALLEN, UNITED STATES NAVY

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Robert M. Allen, a World War II veteran. He joined the United States Navy on December 7, 1940 and was assigned to a small seaplane protector, the U.S.S. Avocet (AVP-4).

Upon completion of signalman school, he returned to the Avocet in February 1942 and received orders to transfer to the Convoy Control Center in Algiers, Louisiana. For the next two years, Robert piloted the Gulf, Caribbean, and the Atlantic, which were teeming with German U-boats. Fortunately, none of his ships or convoys were attacked, during which time he attaining five years of dedicated service to the Navy, Robert was discharged on January 14, 1946.

World War II is known as the deadliest conflict in human history, taking the lives of over...
70 million people. During this difficult time, our country stood united behind our brave servicemen and women who so willingly took to the battlefield to defend freedom and democracy. It is veterans like Robert that helped us emerge victorious from World War II and restore hope and humanity in a world that was shattered by the darkness of hatred and violence.

His patriotism, courage, and selflessness should be commended and his dedication to public service deserves our highest regard. Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest gratitude for his service to this great Nation.

RECOGNIZING Verna Rutherford of Port Arthur, Texas

HON. TED POE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. POE. Madam Speaker, today I am proud to recognize a distinguished Texan and long time community leader in Southeast Texas. After nearly a decade of service Mrs. Verna Rutherford is stepping down as Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce President. As Chamber President Mrs. Rutherford has worked tirelessly for the economic expansion of Port Arthur and all of Southeast Texas.

Mrs. Rutherford has always been a dynamic leader in her community. She is past president and 1981 Quota Club member of the year, 1984 Port Arthur Noon Business and Profes-Sional Woman of the Year, 1993 Chamber Athena Award recipient, a member of the Port Arthur NAACP, Rotary Club, and Aurora Sertoma Club.

Mrs. Rutherford’s level of commitment goes far beyond the organizations she is a member of and this commitment was on full display after Hurricane Rita ripped through the Texas Gulf Coast. Hurricane Rita has often been forgotten by all but those who have lived through it on the Texas Coast. After Rita, the role of Chamber President grew much broader; instead of business development, Mrs. Rutherford was concerned about getting the citizens of Port Arthur food, water, and housing—there was not much time for business or any of the formal activities. Though Hurricane Rita slammed into the Texas coast almost 2 years ago Verna is still helping those who cannot find help elsewhere.

On behalf of the Second Congressional District of Texas, I want to congratulate Mrs. Rutherford on a job well done and wish her the best as she moves forward with her career. Through her diligent efforts and dedication she has made Southeast Texas a better place to live.

And that’s just the way it is.

IN HONOR OF JAMES ROWLAND AND THE DESIGNATION OF THE JAMES ROWLAND ASSISTANCE CENTER IN FRESNO

HON. JIM COSTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. COSTA. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate James Rowland of Fresno, Caliifornia. A great honor is being bestowed upon James, as the new Fresno County Probation Department Crime Victim Assistance Facility will be officially named the James Rowland Crime Victim Assistance Center.

James Rowland began his career as the Fresno County chief probation officer on October 2, 1972. His efforts to give crime victims the consideration, fairness, and support they so desperately deserve has been instrumental in changing the way the justice system perceives and treats crime victims. In 1976 James Rowland created the first victim impact statement to provide the judiciary with an objective inventory of victim injuries and losses at sentencing. The victim impact statement has brought not only nationwide but worldwide recognition that crime victims need additional assistance. This happened through James Rowland’s resolve and fierce determination to provide appropriate and comprehensive servces to Fresno County crime victims.

After 10 years of service as Fresno County’s chief probation officer, James Rowland went on to serve as the director of the Caliifornia Youth Authority and the director of the California Department of Corrections. He also established the Office of Victims of Crimes in both State agencies. Furthermore, he insti-tuated classes in State prisons where inmates learned firsthand the impact of their crimes on their victims.

James Rowland took responsibility for changing the justice system to accommodate and respond to the suffering and trauma of those victimized by crime. He has received prestigious awards from both Pepperdine and Harvard Universities, as well as various criminal justice organizations for contributions to the field of corrections worldwide. He is now known internationally as a crime victim advocate.

Although James Rowland is now retired after 40 years of public service, he continues to provide direction and assistance to persons and agencies that change the justice system. It is with great pride that I congratulate him for receiving this distinguished honor and for all that he has done on behalf of the county of Fresno.

TRIBUTE TO RON PRESCOTT

HON. DIANE E. WATSON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Ms. WATSON. Madam Speaker, I rise with great sorrow that I learned of the loss of my dear friend and colleague, Ron Prescott, a real trailblazer in the field of education in Los Angeles. I am speaking of Mr. Ron Prescott, retired Deputy Superintendent of the Los Angeles Unified School District.

Ron was more than a trailblazer, he was a man with a vision for all students in the Los Angeles Unified School District. Although he had retired from everyday active duty in the day to day running of the Nation’s second largest school district, he felt strongly about the importance of getting appropriate funding for students who had to be removed from regular schools that operated year round due to overcrowding.

Ron was an imposing figure during his tenure with the school district and later on, as a

One of his most important achievements as a lobbyist was leading a way for new dollars to pay for integration programs. His efforts led to funding that became the genesis of L.A. Unified’s popular program that created magnet schools to promote voluntary integration.

As Ron stepped into the role of the first teacher hired for a 1960’s program that paired white and minority students in district schools, he also found time to found the District’s Of-icy of Multicultural Education. He was a front-runner in leading early voluntary integration efforts before the era of court ordered forcing busing.

Ron’s vision and focus on the education of students in the Los Angeles Unified District will be sorely missed. He stands as an icon of effective, ethical advocacy for the rights of students.

The students of Los Angeles, colleagues and friends, all mourn the loss of Ron Prescott. I extend my most heartfelt condolences to his family, his students, his many close friends in the Los Angeles Unified District, and here on Capitol Hill.

INTRODUCTION OF THE TRUTH IN ACCOUNTING ACT OF 2007

HON. PAUL RYAN OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the Truth in Accounting Act of 2007, which I am introducing today along with Ms. BACHMANN, Mr. KIRK, and Mr. COO-PER. I am hopeful that this bipartisan legislation will shed greater light on the long-term fiscal challenges facing our Nation and will encourage Members to take a greater interest in addressing our out-of-control entitlement spending. At the same time, I am also hopeful our approach illustrates a potential way forward for the Federal Accounting Standards Advisory Board (FASAB) as they continue to discuss different options on how to account for our social insurance programs in the Financial Report of the U.S. Government.

This legislation, which is similar to a bill intrودuced last session by Mr. KIRK, Mr. COO-PER, and Mr. Chocola, consists of three main components. First, it requires the Financial Report to include an audited calculation of the net present value of our primary social insurance programs, such as Medicare and Social Security, among others. Second, it requires the President consider this value when making a budget proposal to Congress and fully re-eveal the impact of his proposal on our long-term fiscal situation. Finally, it also requires the Secretary of Treasury and the Comptroller General of GAO to testify before Congress and provide their assessment of our Nation’s long-term fiscal exposures on an annual basis. I would like to briefly discuss each of these components in greater detail.

The proposal to include the net present value of the Federal government’s fiscal exposures comes from last year’s Truth in Accounting bill. This provision would give the American public a clearer picture of the dire fiscal situation that we are facing, and it would require the Federal government to take responsibility for addressing this issue. According to for his leadership on the matter. I am hopeful that the Budget Committee, of which I am the Ranking Member, will seek to permanently enact this provision. I look forward to working with Mr. SPRATT and other distinguished Members of the Committee to accomplish this.

Finally, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller General of the GAO to testify before Congress on our fiscal exposures. The Secretary of the Treasury would have to testify on the Financial Report, which is a document that far too few Members of Congress and the public are aware of. While Members such as Mr. COOPER and Mr. KIRK have done a great job in recent years in starting to build awareness of this document, this proposal would take the next important step.

The Comptroller General would also have to report to Congress on the full extent of our fiscal exposures on an annual basis. This would go a long way toward ensuring that Members of Congress and the public start paying attention to these daunting figures. Our current Comptroller General, Mr. Walker, has fought vigorously on this matter and has done an excellent job of alerting people to the challenges we face. This would give him a regular forum in which to do so and allow him to continue performing an excellent service to the Nation. Before closing, I would like to thank the other lead cosponsors for allowing me to join their effort. This issue is something that Mr. COOPER and Mr. KIRK have worked diligently on for years and I am glad to be a part of the most recent version of their bill. Ms. BACHMANN also deserves immense credit for drawing on her financial background and striving to become a leader in Congress in this area. She was instrumental in putting together this legislation and ensuring the participation of such a strong bipartisan coalition.

I am truly hopeful that our fiscal exposures will not continue to go unnoticed and that we can help build congressional support for entitlement reform. The challenges we face are too big to ignore. If we do not level with the American people about the true nature of this problem and work to address it, we will be jeopardizing the economy and standard of living of future generations.

INTRODUCTION OF A BILL PROVIDING TAX RELIEF WITH RESPECT TO THE CHILDREN OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES WHO DIE AS A RESULT OF SERVICE IN A COMBAT ZONE

HON. KENDRICK B. MEEK
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to introduce H.R. 3961, which would increase from $1,000 to $5,000 the maximum amount of the child tax credit allowed under section 24 of the Internal Revenue Code for those widows and widowers with children of the members of our Armed Forces who have been killed in combat in Iraq and in and around Afghanistan. The bill would also eliminate the income limits for our soldiers’ families that have paid this ultimate sacrifice.

Madam Speaker, we can and should do everything we can to help out those families of our brave men and women who have made the ultimate sacrifice for our country. Those families have borne the brunt of this war—and all of us owe them a debt of our gratitude. Mothers are being forced to have tough conversations with their sons on why daddy is not coming home. Fathers are being forced to have tough conversations with their daughters on what happened to mommy. Families are being put in position where they have to struggle both emotionally and economically because of the stress a loss of a loved one places on them. Congress has a duty to do what we can to help these families in their time of need.

While nothing can make up for the loss of these precious lives, at least we can provide some tax relief for these families. These families now have a financial burden to face from the loss of a spouse’s income. In many instances, the spouse that was killed in combat was the main breadwinner for the family. Increasing the child tax credit and eliminating the income limits will at least provide some tax relief.

This will provide real relief for almost 2,000 families. Of the troops killed in Iraq and in and around Afghanistan, many were married with children. According to a report from the Military Homefront for the Department of Defense, 37.8 percent of active duty troops are married with children. The Department of Defense reports that as of October 22, 2007, the total number of military fatalities in Iraq and in and around Afghanistan totaled 4,273 for both conflicts. Based on this data, the Congressional Research Service has estimated that 1,615 single parents have died.

Single parents have also been killed in defending our country. The Military Homefront states that 5.4 percent of active duty American troops are single parents. Using this data, CRS has estimated that 231 troops who were single parents have died.

Madar Speaker, we need to provide all of the help we can to these families of our fallen military. H.R. 3961 is a small way to assist those families who have lost a spouse and a parent to their children.

HONORING THE HUNGARIAN FEDERATION ON ITS 100TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. DANIEL LIPINSKI
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. LIPINSKI. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the American Hungarian Federation on their 100th anniversary. This group, formed in 1906 as a vehicle to advance and protect the interests of Hungarian-Americans, is one of the oldest ethnic organizations in the United States.

Hungarians have been outstanding contributors to our republic since the days of its inception, with the notable exception of Mihaly Kovats, the Hungarian officer who led the first American cavalry into battle, died fighting the British at Charleston, S.C. in 1779. Their exceptional contribution, when Col. Commandant Mihaly Kovats, a distinguished member of the Santa Barbara community, has been a consistent advocate in favor of scholarship and education, a man dedicated to expressing and revealing the richness of Mexican, Latin American and Chicano literature and culture.

Leal was born in 1907 and grew up in Mexico City during the Mexican Revolution. He came to the United States seeking a college education and earned a bachelor’s degree at Northwestern University. After a hiatus to serve in World War II, Leal earned his doctorate from the University of Chicago.

After a career teaching at the University of Mississippi, Emory University, and the University of Illinois, Leal “retired” to the Santa Barbara area at the age of 69, only to be invited to join the faculty at UC Santa Barbara as a scholar and teacher, first in the Spanish and Portuguese Department and then in the newly established Center for Chicano Studies.

Leal has enjoyed a distinguished career as one of the most highly regarded scholars of Mexican and Latin American literature, and was one of the first to draw attention to this relatively new field of study. He is the author of over 30 books and 300 articles. In 1988, he received the Distinguished Scholar Award from the National Association for Chicana and Chicano Studies in recognition of his lifetime achievement. In 1995, UCSB created the Luis Leal Endowed Chair in Chicano Studies in recognition of his accomplishments.

Leal has also received renowned cultural honors from the Mexican and American governments. In 1992, Mexican President Salinas awarded Leal the Mexican Order of the Aztec Eagle, the highest award granted to foreign citizens. It was President Bill Clinton who presented Leal with the National Humanities Medal in 1997.

As a man who has devoted his life to education and to advancing the study of Mexican, Latin American and Chicano Literature, I today recognize Luis Leal as a distinguished scholar and professor, and as a man dedicated to making our community and this Nation a richer, more vibrant place.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. TIMOTHY H. BISHOP
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. BISHOP of New York. Madam Speaker, I was speaking at the U.S. Navy Memorial ceremony in honor of my constituent, Lt.
Michael Murphy, who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor this week and I was not present in the House chamber to vote on rolcall 994. I would have voted “yea” on rolcall 994 had I been present.

JOSHUA OMVIG VETERANS SUICIDE PREVENTION ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, October 23, 2007

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 327, the Joshua Omvig Veterans Suicide Prevention Act. As an original cosponsor who voted for its passage in the House earlier this year, I am pleased that this bill has passed both the House and the Senate. I look forward to sending this bill to the President for such overwhelming support.

H.R. 327 in recognizing the serious problem of suicide among veterans suffering from PTSD and of the special needs of veterans at high risk for depression. Furthermore, it would develop and implement a program that would include mandatory training for professionals with veterans, screening for suicide risk factors, counseling and treatment for at-risk veterans, and 24-hour veterans’ mental health care availability.

It is a sad reality that we as a Nation must face once again the repercussions of war, and it is equally tragic that we are forced to acknowledge where our system has failed our servicemembers and veterans. I will continue to work with my colleagues to forge solutions in correcting our military care structure to ensure they receive the care that they earned and deserve.

Mr. Speaker, passing this bill is one way to correct what is wrong with the current system. May we all recognize the service of those who have selflessly given to our country, especially those brave men and women who are serving today around the world. I know you join me in praying for their safe and quick return home.

IN PRAISE OF THE TRANS- ATLANTIC LEGISLATORS’ DIALOGUE MEETINGS HELD EARLIER THIS MONTH IN LAS VEGAS, NEVADA

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. LANTOS. Madam Speaker, I would like to call the attention of my colleagues in the Congress to a highly successful meeting of the Transatlantic Legislators’ Dialogue (TLD) that was held in Las Vegas from October 5–8, 2007. The United States delegation is currently benefiting from the excellent leadership of Chairwoman SHELLEY BERKLEY, the gentlelady from Nevada. She worked tirelessly to make this meeting a great success and introduced me to the fine city of Las Vegas that she represents.

Chairwoman BERKLEY first became a member of the TLD in April 2006, served as its vice-chair in December 2006, and took the reins during the new Congress in 2007. She has long been an advocate for transatlantic relations. She is ably joined by her Republican vice-chairman, Representative CLIFF STEARNS from Florida, who also has a history of European engagement.

The TLD constitutes the formal response of the European Parliament and the U.S. Congress to the commitment in the New Transatlantic Agenda (NTA) of 1995 to enhance parliamentary ties between the European Union and the United States. Building on the existing interparliamentary relationship, the TLD includes bi-annual meetings between American and European legislators that address topics of mutual interest with a view to fostering an ongoing dialogue and enhancing the level of transatlantic discourse.

The most recent session in Nevada focused on a wide range of foreign policy challenges, including the Middle East, Kosovo, Russia, and China. Another session focused on regulatory initiatives being addressed under the auspices of the newly established Transatlantic Legislative Forum (TLSF), which legislators are involved for the first time in administration discussions regarding more effective regulation.

I particularly welcomed Representative BERKLEY’s initiative to place anti-Semitism on the TLDF’s agenda for the first time ever, as this issue must be seriously addressed by legislators on both sides of the Atlantic. The delegates also discussed the growing challenge of climate change. In addition, Representative BERKLEY showed her European counterparts a wide range of issues facing contemporary America, bringing the delegation to Nellis Air Force Base to view military training facilities and arranging a briefing on Department of Energy plans to establish a safe repository for nuclear waste at Yucca Mountain.

I commend Chairwoman BERKLEY for the energy that she has brought to the Transatlantic Legislators’ Dialogue, as well as the outstanding job she did organizing a productive and informative session in Nevada. Her attention to detail was remarkable as were her efforts to involve knowledgeable hostess, including inviting European consuls to attend evening events and renowned speakers to make opening remarks during meeting sessions. Chairwoman BERKLEY is an excellent ambassador of American goodwill towards the European Union, and I am deeply grateful for the outstanding work she has done as leader of the American delegation of the TLD.

Madam Speaker, I would like to enter into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the joint statement that was agreed upon by American and European legislators at the 63rd meeting of the TLD in Las Vegas. It highlights the rich agenda of this meeting, as well as the numerous areas in which there was strong agreement across the Atlantic.

TRANSLANTIC LEGISLATORS’ DIALOGUE 63RD MEETING OF DELEGATIONS FROM THE UNITED STATES AND THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT—JOINT STATEMENT

Building on the joint statement issued following our last meeting in Charleston on 1–2 December 2006, the importance of regular dialogue on a range of political, social and economic issues that affect all of our citizens. We agreed to report back to our parent bodies on the content and outcome of our discussions, particularly in the areas where joint efforts are likely to result in positive outcomes.

We agreed that legislators on both sides of the Atlantic should increase dialogue and consultation amongst themselves in order to present possible candidates. Direct and timely contacts between specialist committees from Congress and the European Parliament—such as those that have occurred in recent months within the TLD framework—have been valuable means of enhancing cooperation; the exchange of information should be continued and enhanced.

The European delegation welcomed the invitation from the U.S. House Subcommittee on Horticulture and Organic Agriculture to discuss agricultural issues and organic farming in greater detail.

We examined a wide array of foreign policy issues, agreeing that joint action by the United States and the European Union is the most effective way to approach problems that affect both sides of the Atlantic. We had a stimulating discussion led by Ambassador Dennis Ross on the myriad of challenges in the Middle East, particularly regarding the nuclear threat posed by Iran and efforts to further the peace process in the region. We discussed the future of NATO, including the importance of maintaining peace and stability in the Balkans. We expressed concerns about worrying developments in the Middle East, particularly regarding the humanitarian crisis in Darfur. We also called upon China to assist in solving the horrific human rights crisis in Burma. During the dialogue we explored the current status of anti-Semitism, anti-discrimination, race hate and civil liberties in the United States and Europe. Abe Foxman of the Anti-Defamation League provided an overview of the current situation and agreed to continue our open discussion about these issues at future meetings as well as to address them within the United States and EU Member States.

We discussed climate change following an informative presentation by Michael Totten of Conservation International. We agreed to continue exchanging strategies for combating the environmental challenges confronting our planet.

We also: 1. had a briefing at Nellis Air Force Base and visited a facility designated for training American and coalition military personnel; and 2. saw a presentation about the Thunderbird pilots and viewed F-22 fighter planes. We agreed to continue exchanging strategies for combating the environmental challenges confronting our planet.

IN HONOR OF DR. WILLIAM J. LAWHORN, UNITED STATES ARMY AIR CORPS

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in honor of Dr. William J. Lawhorn, a World War II veteran. In 1944, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps at the young age of 18. His original intention was to become a pilot, but two weeks before he was due to enter flight school, it was shut down. Out of his squadron of 125, only eight were selected to remain in the Air Corps while the others were sent to the infantry. He went on to attend radio school and was assigned Kitchen Police duties.

World War II is known as the deadliest conflict in human history, taking the lives of over 70 million people. During this difficult time, our country stood united behind our brave service-men and women who so willingly took to the battlefields to defend freedom and democracy. It is veterans like William that helped us emerge victorious from World War II and restore hope and humanity in a world that was shattered by the darkness of hatred and violence.

His patriotism, courage, and selflessness are examples of what make America great. Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our deepest gratitude for his service and dedication. May God bless all those he loved, and may I convey to them my sincerest condolences and the gratitude of the American people.

CONGRATULATING LA VEGA HIGH SCHOOL CLASS OF 1957 ON ITS 50TH REUNION

HON. CHET EDWARDS
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. EDWARDS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the members of the La Vega High School Class of 1957 on their 50th reunion. It is a privilege to represent La Vega High School, located in Bellmead in my district.

The members of the La Vega High School Class of 1957 have made great contributions to our Nation, State, and Central Texas communities. They have served us as soldiers, teachers, doctors, clergy, leaders in Federal, State, and local government, captains of business and industry, and all facets of American life. In short, the diverse lives and accomplishments of the La Vega High School Class of 1957 have contributed significantly to the social fabric of our State and Nation and their ongoing contributions to our American way of life will be felt for years to come.

I congratulate them on this special occasion and wish them all the best in the years ahead.
Mr. PITTS. Madam Speaker, due to the current crisis in Burma, it is vital that even while media coverage of the situation in Burma has decreased we still maintain a constant watch over Burma. The regime’s human rights violations are horrific. I have stacks of reports in my office detailing the dictatorship’s use of rape as a weapon of terror, the use of ethnic minorities as human landmine sweepers, and other abuses.

On September 18, 1988, the military forced its rule on the people of Burma, a rule that has been dominated by severe violence and oppression. Ever since, the people of Burma have struggled to survive under this brutal regime.

While the Buddhist monks and democracy leaders have received much deserved attention recently, the struggle of the ethnic minorities remains difficult and also must receive the spotlight of international attention’. Article 2 of the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, defines genocide as “any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group, as such: (a) Killing members of the group; (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or in part; (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group; (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group.” Reports make clear that the ironically-named State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) of Burma, the ruling military junta, has engaged in a deliberate policy to eliminate the ethnic minorities. The regime engages in a scorched earth policy, destroying entire villages along with food storage and production sources; use systematic rape as a weapon of terror; uses ethnic minorities, including women and children, as human landmine sweepers; engages in forced labor, also known as slavery; has the highest number of child soldiers in the world; and refuses to allow the duly elected leader of the country to take office.

While there is extensive photographic evidence of more recent massacres, I want to draw attention to a massacre that took place in Burma’s Dooplaya district on April 28th, 2002. The regime targeted children. These photos, which show the bodies of the victims stacked neatly, are incontrovertible evidence of more recent massacres. I want to draw attention to the massive inhumanity and the increasingly horrific human rights situation in the country. The regime’s soldiers shot and killed the Karen villagers in their quest to completely subjugate the entire country. The dozen who were killed include Naw Pi Lay, who was just a baby, Naw Daw Bash, a 2-year-old girl, and Naw Play and Naw Bie Po, two five year old girls. Nine others were shot and lucky enough to escape, including a six-year-old boy who played dead until the regime’s troops left. What possible threat could these babies and young girls have presented to Burma’s military regime?

The various ethnic minorities of Burma, which comprise approximately 60 percent of the population, are not of the Burman ethnic group. The desire of the junta, composed of members of the Burman ethnicity, is to ensure that it remains the “master race,” or maha bama. In 1988, the regime issued a blood assimilation order which stated, “With a view to attaining success in accordance with our basic aspiration, which holds that our one race, the Burmans alone must inherit prosperity with an achievement of a long standing dominion. The easiest way to realize our above aim, we, the superior sons of the mainland of Burma are to make them more Burman. While some might dispute the use of genocide in relation to this situation, it is clearly, at the very least, ethnic cleansing. Astonishingly, other nations are enabling the dictators to continue their attacks against the ethnic minorities, democracy activists, protestors, and ethnic Nazis. Reports suggest that since 1989, the Chinese government has provided the dictators in Burma with over $2 billion worth of weapons and military equipment. This Chinese weaponry has allowed the regime to quadruple the size of its forces to 450,000.

Russia also is supporting the dictatorship by helping build a nuclear reactor in Rangoon. The regime says the reactor is for peaceful purposes for medical research. However, Burma is ranked second from the bottom by the World Health Organization in terms of national health care, thus begging the question why they need nuclear medical research when there are barely even provisions for basic medical needs.

The Union non-governmental organizations recently released a report entitled Indian Helicopters for Burma: making a mockery of embargoes? The report provided details on India’s negotiations with Burma’s military junta since late 2006 and focused on the transfer of Advanced Light Helicopters (ALH) to Burma’s military. India, a democracy, has increasingly spurred democracy supporters in Burma in favor of increased cooperation with Burma’s military regime, even providing Burma’s ruling generals with tanks, aircraft, artillery guns, radar, small arms, and the ALH. Absent any external enemy, Burma’s military rulers have employed these arms and military equipment against its ethnic minority civilian population, resulting in the destruction of more than 3,000 villages, the use of forced labor, and the rape and murder of thousands of ethnic minority civilians.

Even more appalling than the increased military cooperation and sales between the Government of India and Burma’s military regime is evidence that the transfer of military hardware risks violating both European Union and U.S. arms restrictions in place against Burma’s military regime. Parts and technologies vital to the manufacture of the ALH were provided by several European companies and two American companies, Altech Systems, Ltd. and Lord Corporation. It is essential that our government immediately investigate these transfers and prohibit defense transfers to India and Burma. The U.S. government spent approximately 100 million trying to help the people of Serbia against Milosevic—the people of Burma are as important as the populations of Southeast Europe and we need to put our money where our mouth is.

Further, the U.S. government must take immediate steps to implement the recommendations outlined in the report on Indian helicopters and other weapons by commencing negotiations with the Government of India to cease the transfer of Advanced Light Helicopters to Burma’s military regime; discontinuing all future defense production cooperation with India that might lead to transfers of embargoed controlled equipment to Burma; attaching to all future licenses for transfers of controlled goods and technology to India a strict and enforceable condition, with penalty clauses prohibiting reexport to states under an embargo to which the original exporting state is party without express governmental permission; and drawing attention to the high likelihood of that military equipment being used by Burma’s military to commit ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity in Burma. In addition, I urge the international community to press Burma’s regime to cease the violence and murder perpetrated against the people, to immediately and unconditionally

Burma's brutal military generals violate U.S. export control regulations and the U.S. arms embargo on Burma.

Sadly, until recently, the international community generally has turned a deaf ear to the cries of the ethnic minorities, the refugees, the IDPs, and the democracy activists. While a number of states and international organizations currently have made helpful statements condemning the dictatorship for its actions, they long ago should have been helping the people of Burma. Action is what will bring change to the situation in Burma.

The SPDC regime deceives the international community again and again by saying one thing and then doing another. The international community, on behalf of the people of Burma, should make it clear that the oppressive dictators of Burma will no longer be tolerated—we do not want to remember another anniversary of the human rights violations against Burma’s people. Instead, next year, we should be celebrating the return of democracy and freedom to the people of Burma. I commend our Administration and colleagues in Congress to act to support democracy in Burma and provide increased aid to the suffering ethnic minorities. We should exponentially increase the U.S. aid program to Burma by increasing aid to IDP, refugee, and democracy organizations, as well as by providing funds to help rehabilitation centers, establish health programs addressing malaria, TB, and HIV/AIDS, support education programs, increase human rights documentation capabilities, and assist with protection capabilities. The U.S. government spent approximately 100 million trying to help the people of Serbia against Milosevic—the people of Burma are as important as the populations of Southeast Europe and we need to put our money where our mouth is.

Further, the U.S. government must take immediate steps to implement the recommendations outlined in the report on Indian helicopters and other weapons by commencing negotiations with the Government of India to cease the transfer of Advanced Light Helicopters to Burma’s military regime; discontinuing all future defense production cooperation with India that might lead to transfers of embargoed controlled equipment to Burma; attaching to all future licenses for transfers of controlled goods and technology to India a strict and enforceable condition, with penalty clauses prohibiting reexport to states under an embargo to which the original exporting state is party without express governmental permission; and drawing attention to the high likelihood of that military equipment being used by Burma’s military to commit ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity in Burma. release all political prisoners, and to allow the legitimately elected leaders of the country to govern. Further, the government of Singapore should freeze the bank accounts of the dictators.

Madam Speaker, it is time for the world to act to stop the honors taking place in Burma. While the military regime woos diplomats and guests in downtown Rangoon, Burma’s people outside the realm of international scrutiny endure intensifying and acute repression. I demand that Burma’s military regime immediately stop its campaign of terror against the Burmese people, and urge my colleagues to raise their voices for freedom.

I reiterate, public statements in support of the people of Burma are helpful, but only issuing statements is like putting a tiny band aid over a gaping, infected wound—it will not help where massive surgery is needed. The only thing that will solve the problem of the brutal dictatorship in Burma is to get rid of the SPDC.

I look forward to working with my colleagues in the House, the Senate and the Administration, and the international community to see that Burma’s military regime soon joins the Soviet Union, Ceausescu’s Romania, Milosevic’s Yugoslavia and other regimes and dictatorships that now reside in the ashbin of world history.

Finally, I say to the people of Burma: You are not forgotten. We stand with you and will continue to work with you for as long as it takes to ensure that the people of your nation are able to live in peace and freedom.

RECOGNIZING THE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MENDEZ V. WESTMINSTER DECISION

SPEECH OF
HON. HILDA L. SOLIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, October 22, 2007

Ms. SOLIS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H. Res. 721, which would recognize the 60th anniversary of the Mendez v. Westminster decision. This landmark decision ended segregation of Mexican and Mexican-American students in California schools.

On March 2, 1945, a group of concerned Mexican-American fathers, led by Gonzalo Mendez, challenged the practice of school segregation in the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, California. These fathers claimed that their children, along with 5,000 other children of Latino descent, were victims of discrimination by being forced to attend separate “Mexican” schools in the Westminster, Garden Grove, Santa Ana, and El Modena school districts of Orange County, California. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit ruled in favor of the families and held that the segregation of Mexican and Mexican-American students into separate schools was unconstitutional. This California case won access for Mexican-Americans to all schools in 1947 and helped lay the foundation seven years later for the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Brown v. Board of Education case.

Latinos are the fastest-growing student population. Approximately 32 percent of children enrolled in our Nation’s public school are Latino. The status of Latino education suggests a number of missed opportunities from early childhood education through higher education. For example, families of 67 percent of Latino children under the age of three have an income that is 200 percent below the federal poverty threshold. Economic harder is a reality for these families and has an adverse effect on child development and readiness. In 2004, only 58 percent of Latinos had completed high school and 12 percent completed college.

Madam Speaker, it is important that Congress honor and recognize the civil rights implication of the Mendez v. Westminster case. I urge passage of the resolution and learn from the lessons of this Nation’s history. Like Gonzalo Mendez and the rest of the fathers who led the fight in Mendez v. West-

HONORING THE TOWN OF BARNSTABLE

HON. WILLIAM D. DELAHUNT OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. DELAHUNT. Madam Speaker, I rise today so that my colleagues in the House of Representatives can join me in recognizing the Town of Barnstable, Massachusetts for its distinguished achievement in being named one of 2007’s “All-America Cities.”

For 58 years, the National Civic League’s “All-America City” Awards have been presented to localities that demonstrate an exceptional ability to rise to the challenges involved in building and sustaining safe, healthy communities. Toward this end, the Town of Barnstable continues to be a model for civic engagement, excelling in its efforts to involve the business community, nonprofit organizations, and citizens in developing ingenious solutions to local problems.

While the Town of Barnstable has applied the same cooperative approach in tackling a wide array of challenges, three in particular merit its designation as one of this year’s ten “All-America Cities.” Under its visionary “eco-

HONORING THE MINISTRY OF CARING OCTOBER 24, 2007

HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE OF DELAWARE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Speaker, it is my great pleasure to rise today and recognize the Ministry of Caring on its 30th anniversary. Over the past three decades this remarkable charity has done extensive work with underprivileged populations in my home state of Delaware. This important milestone is cause for much celebration.

The Ministry of Caring began when its founder, Brother Ronald Giannone, set out on a mission to provide the poor with hospitality, friendship, and basic needs in such a way that would enable them to become independent and self-sufficient. Brother Ronald was unaware of his impact at the time, but he was actually setting out on a mission that would later become Wilmington's largest charity for the poor. Brother Ronald's vision first took shape in 1977 with the creation of the Mary Mother of Hope House, a shelter for homeless and destitute women. From there, the ministry's vision spread throughout our community at staggering speeds. The Ministry of Caring now operates nearly 30 facilities throughout the greater Wilmington area. Through these facilities, the Ministry runs over a dozen programs geared toward providing the poor with food, shelter, clothes, healthcare, and other essentials. Furthermore, the organization provides tools of empowerment such as job training and placement; resources that address root causes of poverty.

Though the ministry remains focused on helping disadvantaged populations, I can say from personal experience that the Delaware community as a whole is positively impacted by this organization. For many years now, my wife and I have had the privilege of volunteering our Thanksgivings at the Emmanuel Dining Room, serving meals to Delawareans in need. I cherish these opportunities because they allow me, and others just like me, to help less fortunate community members, while also spending quality time with family, friends, and fellow volunteers.

Recently the Ministry of Caring was given the highest possible score from the largest evaluator of charitable organizations in the world. While news of this accomplishment is certainly exciting, it is not at all surprising. The score attests what many of us knew already; the ministry efficiently manages its finances, is worthy of the public's trust, and is highly regarded within its field.

On this 30th anniversary, I would like to recognize the many accomplishments of the Ministry of Caring. The hard work and dedication of its founder, Brother Ronald Giannone, along with many of its employees and volunteers, have made these past 30 years a tremendous success. I highly commend this great organization for their immeasurable contributions to the state of Delaware and wish them all the best on this momentous anniversary.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 125TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF CROOK COUNTY, OR- EGON

HON. GREG WALDEN OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to the citizens of Crook County who are commemorating the 125th anniversary of the establishment of their county this month.

The Enabling Act, creating Crook County from the southern portions of Wasco County, was approved and signed by the Governor of Oregon on October 24, 1882. He appointed 10 officials to govern the county; County Judge; 2 Commissioners; Assessor; County Clerk; Coroner; School Superintendent; Sheriff; Surveyor; and Treasurer.

Prineville, the county seat, is the oldest community in Central Oregon. In 1868 Barney Prine came to the Crooked River Valley and set up a blacksmith shop, saloon, and primitive country store along the banks of the Crooked River. A Post Office was established in 1871 and was named Prine in Barney's honor. The name of the Post Office was changed to Prineville in 1872.

The county is named after Major General George Crook, U.S. Army. General Crook was an 1852 graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, a hero of the Snake Indian Wars, and, at the time of his death in 1890, was Commander of the Army's Department of the West.

When it was founded in 1882, Crook County encompassed an area of 8,600 square miles and had a population of only 2,500. In 1914 and 1916 Jefferson and Deschutes counties were carved out of Crook County leaving it at just under 3,000 square miles today, with a population of approximately 23,000.

Some of the more noteworthy events in the county's early history include: the building of the first county courthouse in the county seat of Prineville at a cost of $5,474 in 1886; the first electrical service in Prineville in 1890; the first telephone service in the county in 1899; the opening of the first high school in 1905; and the first movie theater in 1909.

Between 1930 and 1940 Prineville became the nation's largest shipping point of pine lumber; in 1934 the Prineville Airport was dedicated; in 1940 the first dial telephones were installed in the county; and in 1952 the late Les Schwab opened his first tire store in Prineville, the very beginning of what is now one of the leading independent tire dealerships in the country with more than 7,000 employees and 400 stores throughout the western United States.

Today, Madam Speaker, the citizens of Crook County celebrate 125 years of rich pioneer heritage in their Central Oregon home, and look forward to an increasingly bright future in a growing and revitalized county. I am proud to represent the citizens of Crook County in the U.S. House of Representatives, and look forward to county's continued success.
This was the largest deployment of the Alaska National Guard since World War II and thankfully all 586 guardsmen who were deployed overseas returned home safely. Many of these guardsmen had never left Alaska prior to joining the National Guard, but none hesitated to serve their country.

As I told the National Guardsmen at their welcome home ceremony at Camp Shelby, Mississippi, “You can’t support the troops unless you respect them. And I humbly respect you because you have done your job as you were charged to do so, and as volunteers. You left your families and you went forth and accomplished what you were taught to do.”

I truly believe that the importance of the National Guard to our country cannot be overstated, which is why it is important that we honor these citizen-soldiers. For this reason I am introducing the following resolution to honor these Guardsmen for their outstanding service to our country.

H. CON. RES. 240

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry of the Alaska Army National Guard deployment of 586 Alaskans was the largest deployment of the Alaska National Guard since World War II;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry came from 80 different communities across Alaska;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry included soldiers from New York, Mississippi, Illinois, Georgia and Puerto Rico;

Whereas the 586 soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry were mobilized in July of 2006 and deployed to Camp Shelby, Mississippi;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry was deployed to Camp Navistar and Camp Buehring in northern Kuwait;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry courageously performed route and perimeter security missions, mounted combat patrols and inspections and searches of vehicles going into Iraq from Kuwait, among other assignments;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry, over the course of 15 months in Kuwait and Iraq, inspected and searched over 30,000 semi-trucks;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry designed all force protection plans in northern Kuwait;

Whereas the families of the members of the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry have provided unwavering support while waiting patiently for their loved ones to return;

Whereas the employers of members and family members of the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry have displayed patriotism over profit, by keeping positions saved for the returning soldiers and supporting the families during the difficult days of this long deployment, and these employers are great corporate citizens through their support of members of the Armed Forces and their family members;

Whereas the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry has performed admirably and courageously; gaining the gratitude and respect of Alaskans and all Americans;

Whereas members of the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry received 7 Bronze Stars, 23 Meritorious Service Medals, 142 Army Commendations and more than 200 Army Achievement Medals for their outstanding service; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress—

(1) commends the 3rd Battalion, 297th Infantry of the Alaska Army National Guard upon completion of their deployment and brave service to the Commonwealth of Alaska and the citizens of the United States; and

(2) directs the Clerk of the House of Representatives to transmit a copy of this resolution to the Adjutant General of the Alaska National Guard for appropriate display.

HON. BETTY SUTTON
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Ms. SUTTON. Madam Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to forward a resolution to the House honoring Congressman Charles Vanik, who served his constituents with honor and integrity in this body for 26 years.

On behalf of the people of Ohio’s 13th District, I want to express my deepest sympathies to his wife of 62 years, Betty Best Vanik, their two children, John Vanik and Phyllis Vanik, his two grandchildren and the rest of the Vanik family.

We have lost a man who dedicated his life to serving our great State and this great country. Prior to being elected to Congress in 1954, Congressman Vanik served on the Cleveland City Council, in the Ohio State Senate and as a Cleveland municipal judge. He also served in the Navy during World War II.

In Congress, he earned a reputation as a savvy legislator and a tireless advocate for the people of northeast Ohio. His 1974 amendment to the Trade Reform Bill is widely remembered for forcing the Soviet Union to allow fair treatment and increased emigration of Soviet Jews. This accomplishment had a significant impact on American-Soviet relations.

And Congressman Vanik was ahead of his times on civil rights, sacrificing his own congressional seat in 1968 so that Louis Stokes could become Ohio’s first African American Congressman.

But Charles Vanik was so well-regarded in northeast Ohio that the people of his home district would not stand for him leaving this House, and they chose to send him to Congress instead of the Representative who had served for nearly 30 years. Congressman Vanik returned to Congress and continued to work with Congressman Stokes and others to advocate for the people of Ohio.

Although I did not have the privilege of serving in the House with Congressman Vanik, I am honored to follow in his footsteps as a public servant and a voice for the people of northeast Ohio. His 1974 amendment to the Trade Reform Bill allowed fair treatment and increased emigration of Soviet Jews. This accomplishment had a significant impact on American-Soviet relations.

It is truly an honor to stand on the Floor of the House of Representatives, where Charles Vanik stood for so many years fighting for northeast Ohio, to celebrate his life and his accomplishments.

And it is wonderful to hear so many touching stories about the memories my colleagues have of him and the influence he had on this House and its Members.

Although Congress, the United States, and the State of Ohio have lost a great statesman, he has been outlived by his legacy, and I am confident that he will continue to fondly recall Charles Vanik and the great work he did for years to come.

Again, I want to express my condolences to the Vanik family.

HON. MARCY KAPTUR
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Ms. KAPTUR. Madam Speaker, it is my honor to pay tribute to a fellow Ohioan, Charlie Vanik, who served honorably for 26 years in this House.

Charlie passed away last month at the age of 94, and I thank the gentlewoman from Cleveland for organizing this special order in his memory.

Charlie Vanik was a beautiful person. In many ways, he was the quintessential Cleveland—born of Czechoslovakian ancestry, he represented Cleveland’s east side and eastern suburbs and did so with distinction and with class. He was learned and determined. As Dick Feigler, the well-known journalist in Cleveland said of Charlie, “It was all about hard work and humility. Charlie Vanik was a showman, but he wasn’t a showoff. He was charming and he was humble.”

He threw himself into public service with a style and gusto that his constituents enjoyed and appreciated. He took his responsibilities seriously, but he didn’t take himself seriously. He rose to a position of prominence on the Ways and Means Committee. In fact, he became chairman of the trade subcommittee.

But make no mistake: Charlie Vanik never sold out. He never succumbed to the seduction of what the pundits call “Gucci Gulch.” Charlie never forgot where he came from: 55th and Broadway had a different values set than Gucci Gulch. Still does.

So Charlie Vanik fought tooth and nail against tax loopholes for big business. He never forgot where he came from. Charlie Vanik may have retired from Congress, but his heart and mind kept working for America everyday.

On a regular basis, I would get phone calls from Charlie, just to say hello. He was never representing a client for monetary compensation—he always just kept working for America, and wanted to share his great ideas. He gave away his ideas—MARCY, he would say, Congress needs more strong voices to protect consumers in our nation, or on another occasion he would call to remind me to replace the sand on the public beaches of the Great Lakes that had either washed away or been used by construction companies over the years.

Early on in my career, he advised me to work with Congressman Stokes and others to advocate for the people of Ohio.

It was all about hard work and humility. Charlie Vanik was a showman, but he wasn’t a showoff. He was charming and he was humble.”

He shared his love of life, and always wanted to visit many of the foreign embassies located in Washington to link to diplomats and scholars. He used by construction companies over the years. Early on in my career, he advised me to visit many of the foreign embassies located in Washington to link to diplomats and scholars. He used by construction companies over the years. time. In an era that predated Bill Clinton’s de-coupling of human rights and trade, Scoop Jackson and Charlie Vanik insisted that the Soviet Union respect human rights before it could receive most favored nation trading status. Because of Scoop Jackson’s and Charlie Vanik’s courage and commitment, hundreds of thousands of oppressed people—mainly Soviet Jews—were able to leave tyranny behind and start new lives as free people.

Madam Speaker, it is no longer fashionable to talk about the linkage between human rights and trading privileges. But, if anything, the issue is even more relevant today than when Charlie Vanik stood up for oppressed people. That’s why I say Charlie Vanik was ahead of his time.

Just ask Wei Jing Sheng, who continues to fight for human rights for the millions of oppressed people in China. Ask the family and friends of Santiago Rafael Cruz, who was murdered earlier this year in Monterrey, Mexico, where he fought hard to get human rights for peasant workers.

We see the trafficking in human beings from Mexico to the United States. But the proponents of free trade fundamentalism still deny any linkage between trade and human rights. We see the gross human rights abuses in China and the growing unrest among rural people there. Yet we’re told there’s no connection between trade and human rights.

Despite the abuses that perpetrated against poor people around the world in the name of globalization, the free trade crowd refuses to acknowledge any connection between trade and human rights.

We see all these things and we can’t help but wish for more Charlie Vanik—for more Members like him—genial, compassionate and humble public servants who have the eyes to see injustice and the heart to do something about it.

HONORING FORMER CONGRESSMAN CHARLES VANIK

HON. JIM JORDAN
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. JORDAN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I am honored today to join in the tributes to the life and career of former Ohio Congressman Charles Vanik, who passed away in August at age 94. Born in Cleveland in 1913, Charles Vanik recognized the call to service long before his 26-year House career began. After earning his law degree, he was elected to the Cleveland City Council and the Ohio State Senate—all before the age of 30. His career in elective office was interrupted by World War II, where he served in both the Atlantic and Pacific theatres as a member of the Naval Reserve. Following the war, he held a judgeship in Cleveland prior to his election to Congress in 1954.

As my colleagues have noted in prior Floor tributes to Congressman Vanik, his congressional legacy was defined by his many contributions to human rights around the world—especially through what came to be known as the Jackson-Vanik Amendment. This measure, which passed with broad bipartisan support, requires the United States to gauge the human rights records of foreign nations when assessing potential trade deals. As a result of Jackson-Vanik, the Soviet Union was compelled to allow more than two million people of faith to escape the religious persecution they faced under this cruel regime. The Amendment made Charles Vanik a target of scorn from the Soviet-controlled media—something he wore as a badge of honor.

Throughout his career, Congressman Vanik well served the people of his district and fought for freedom around the world. I offer his family and loved ones my condolences at their loss.

HONORING FORMER CONGRESSMAN CHARLES VANIK

HON. JOHN A. BOEHNER
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. BOEHNER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor former Congressman Charles Vanik, who passed away earlier this year. There are two things we do in Washington—politics and policy. Congressmen Vanik excelled at policy and understood politics well enough to make a difference with the policies that he fought to see enacted. A champion of the underdog and an unflagging advocate for the poor, Congressman Vanik’s legacy was solidified in 1974 by the Jackson-Vanik Amendment to the Trade Reform Bill linking the former Soviet Union’s trade status with the ability of Russian Jews to emigrate freely.

Congressman Vanik served in the House from 1955 to 1981, representing his Cleveland-area constituents. A 13-term veteran of the U.S. House, Congressman Vanik gravely stepped aside from his original district in 1968 to make way for Louis Stokes, who became the first African-American Congressman from Ohio. He also had his own particular style, and those privileged to have served with Congressman Vanik remember his black suits and bow ties in addition to his utter disdain to having to raise re-election funds. His constituents responded to his hard work and his commitment to them by continuing to re-elect him, proving that a hard-charging public servant who’s in Congress for the right reasons will be returned to continue his work.

Congressman Vanik’s public service began after graduating from Western Reserve University and Law School when he entered the Navy during World War II. Following the war, he served as a municipal judge and in the Ohio Senate before first running for Congress in 1954. My thoughts and prayers continue to be with Congressman Vanik’s family and friends, and we are grateful for his dedicated public service.

TRIBUTE TO FORMER CONGRESSMAN CHARLES VANIK

HON. TIM RYAN
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay respect and tribute to former Rep. Charles Vanik of Ohio, who died Wednesday August 31 at his home in Jupiter, Florida at age 94.

Looking back at the career and mission of Representative Vanik, it is an utterly refreshing example of a legislator who didn’t let politics get in the way of his goals and vision for his constituents and people all over the world. Many of my colleagues have already mentioned the historic Jackson-Vanik amendment to the Trade Reform Act of 1974. This critical human rights legislation was the mark on the map for Charles Vanik with regards to those outside the state of Ohio, but for us Ohioans, we know Congressman Vanik as a lifelong stalwart for all of those who are socially and economically oppressed.

Charles Vanik led a life of complete selflessness. After receiving his law degree he was on the City Council and in the Ohio legislature where he was valued for his consistent effort and achievements. He then joined the Navy during World War II. After his time in the service, Charles Vanik became a municipal judge until 1954 when he first ran for Congress. As a member of the Ways and Means Committee with jurisdiction over tax law, Congressman Vanik was known for his fights against big business tax breaks in the halls and corridors of Congress as he was known for his signature bow ties.

Congressman Vanik served honorably and long as a dedicated public servant. Mr. Vanik, who had rarely spent little more than $3,000 for any of his re-election bids, became increasingly discouraged with the changing political world and the need to siphon time and resources away from addressing the concerns of his constituents. He chose not to run for re-election in 1989.

Charles Vanik’s life and his commitment to principle are truly remarkable. I believe one of the most important things we should learn from the actions and words of Charles Vanik is to constantly hold ourselves to the highest possible standards, no matter what the political environment or what criticism you might face. The United States Congress and the state of Ohio will miss one of its greatest public officials, Congressman Charles Vanik.

HON. CHARLES A. WILSON

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Madam Speaker, it is important to commend the service of one of Ohio’s distinguished public servants. Charles Vanik served for 26 years in the U.S. House of Representatives, and we are better for his service. He died at the age of 94 in September.

Representative Vanik is best remembered for his work that allowed more Russian Jews to immigrate to this country. During his tenure in the House, Representative Vanik of Cleveland also fought tirelessly for Social Security and Medicare.

Nearly all of Representative Vanik’s life was devoted to public service. In the Navy, as a Cleveland Municipal Judge, in the Ohio Senate and through 26 years here in the House, he worked tirelessly for the public. The great State of Ohio and this country mourn his passing.

Our thoughts and prayers go out to his wife, Betty, their children and grandchildren.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF CHARLES VANIK

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. KUCINICH. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of one of our former colleagues, Congressman Charlie Vanik. For 26 years, he was an admirable spokesman not only for the people of his district, but for the nation.

During his time in office, Congressman Vanik was one of Congress’s most vocal advocates for human rights. In 1974, he co-authored an amendment to a trade law that required the United States to assess the human rights records of foreign countries before granting them special privileges. This law put pressure on the Soviet Union to allow freer immigration, and as a result, more than 2 million people were able to leave the Soviet Union in search of a better life.

While he was a member of Congress, he never forgot where he came from or the people he represented. During his time in office, he helped to pass several federal programs, including the federal school lunch program, that would help the people in his district and throughout the country improve their livelihoods. In addition, he is remembered by his former colleagues as a savvy, gifted speaker who had the ability to make every person in a room smile.

Madam Speaker and colleagues, please join me in remembering the life of Congressman Charlie Vanik. May he rest in peace, and may his service to his country and to this body always be remembered honorably. He is survived by his wife, Betty; his son, Jon; his daughter, Phyllis; and two grandchildren.

Ms. JONES of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a remarkable man, a 26-year veteran of this distinguished body and an outstanding American. The Honorable Charles Albert Vanik worked tirelessly to promote the civil rights of all people. His dedication to this cause extended further than the boundaries of our country and touched countless lives. The Congressman felt it necessary that every individual throughout the globe should fully enjoy the natural rights of mankind.

This commitment was most evident in his decision in 1958 to shift to the 22nd Congressional District following redistricting to allow a then-up and coming African American politician by the name of Louis Stokes to run for and ultimately win the 21st Congressional District seat.

Charles Vanik was a native of Cleveland, Ohio. He represented my city and my extended community in a distinguished fashion. Serving as a councilman, a judge and a member of the state legislature before joining the United States Congress, he developed a reputation as a champion of public service.

Congressman Vanik was wholeheartedly a representative of the people. As a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, he felt that both individuals and enterprises alike should equally contribute to society. The respect that his friends and fellow Members of Congress held for him, presented several opportunities for his policy objectives to be adopted in statutes relating to both taxes and trade.

Most importantly, this son of immigrants personified all that is great about our Nation and our people. He cared for his neighbors, he was passionate about freedom and he wanted to help those in need.

I had many opportunities to personally speak with Representative Vanik. The most memorable of these meetings was when the National Institutes of Health dedicated their new laboratory facility in honor of my predecessor Congressman Louis Stokes.

It is with great respect and admiration that I ask this esteemed body to keep his wife, Betty, and children, Jon and Phyllis, in our hearts and prayers. May we all rejoice in having known such a great man and cherish both our memories and his legacy.

ON THE PASSING OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN CHARLES VANIK

HON. ZACHARY T. SPACE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. SPACE. Madam Speaker, the news of the passing of Charles Vanik was truly a sad event for Ohio. We lost a genuine statesman who always worked for the betterment of his country, state, and community.

While I was not privileged to have met him personally, his reputation, legislative accomplishments, and dedication to making life better for those less fortunate were well known throughout the state.

Congressman Vanik was best known for the Jackson-Vanik amendment to the Trade Reform Bill in 1974, which forced the Soviet Union to open up its borders. Arguably one of the most successful pieces of legislation in forcing foreign policy changes, this provision was highly successful in opening up the USSR. This was just one of the many principles that he stood up for his beliefs in defense of those who needed the most help.

My heart and prayers go out to his family. Ohio and the rest of the country join in mourning this great loss.

HONORING FORMER CONGRESSMAN CHARLIE VANIK

HON. STEVE CHABOT

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, October 24, 2007

Mr. CHABOT. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the passing of a former member of this body from my home state of Ohio—Mr. Charles Vanik—who represented Ohio’s 21st Congressional district, the east side of Cleveland, which later became the 22nd District.

After serving on the Cleveland City Council and in the Ohio State Senate, Charlie Vanik enlisted in the Naval Reserves during World War II and fought in both the Atlantic and the Pacific. He later went on to serve as a local judge before being elected to the United States House of Representatives in 1954.

For his black suits and bow ties, Charlie was a champion of working class families and was most famous for his strong stance against nations that denied freedom to its citizens—particularly the Soviet Union.

In 1974 he partnered with then-Senator Henry “Scoop” Jackson to craft what became known as the Jackson-Vanik Amendment, which denied normal trade relations to certain countries that oppressed its people and restricted the freedom of emigration. That amendment was offered to a trade reform bill and was intended to allow Jewish refugees to escape from the Soviet Union. The Jackson-Vanik Amendment is still on the books today.

Charlie Vanik is survived by his wife, two children and two grandchildren. I ask my colleagues to keep his family and friends in their thoughts and prayers in the coming months.
Ms. MATSUI. Madam Speaker, I rise in honor of the Sacramento International Airport and their 40 year anniversary. In 1967, the first flight was flown out of the Sacramento Metropolitan Airport and since that time the Airport has become a gateway to Northern California destinations and major cities across the United States. I ask all of my colleagues to join with me in saluting the 40 years of service provided by the Sacramento International Airport.

Located just northwest of downtown Sacramento, the Sacramento International Airport is situated on 6,000 acres of former farmland. The Airport was constructed when the region’s aviation needs outgrew the Sacramento Executive Airport. The $17.8 million dollar project was completed in 1967 and in the following year the nearly a million people flew on the airport’s five initial carriers; Delta, Pacific, United, West Coast and Western. Since that time airlines have come and gone at the airport, but the high level of customer satisfaction remains.

Over the last 40 years the Sacramento International Airport has made great strides to improve its facilities. Nine years ago, the Sacramento Metropolitan Airport was officially renamed the Sacramento International Airport when it started hosting nonstop flights to Mexico and Canada. These international flights were made possible by the completion of an International Terminal and Terminal A, which represented a stark contrast to the older and outdated Terminal B.

In 2006, Airport officials announced they would be replacing the aging Terminal B with a brand new terminal. Under the leadership of Sacramento County Airport System Director Hardy Acree and the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors, this modernization of the Airport will be complete in 2012. The state-of-the-art facility will be equipped with 23 new gates, a two-level access roadway designed to reduce traffic congestion and additional taxiways that will allow aircrafts to reach terminals more promptly. All of these features will improve the overall efficiency and enjoyment of the traveling experience.

Forty years after being built, the Airport welcomes more than 10 million passengers each year and has two fully operational runways. It is estimated that by 2020, the Airport will serve over 17.7 million passengers as a growing regional hub and international transit point. With flights to New York City, Washington D.C., Atlanta, Chicago, Guadalajara, Mexico City, Vancouver, Ontario, Honolulu, all of California’s major cities and many more, the airport is an attractive option for all Northern California travelers. Thanks to the construction of a new six-story parking garage three years ago, the Airport now accommodates over 16,000 cars, making the traveling experience more enjoyable.

Madam Speaker, I am honored to recognize the 40 years of growth and prosperity at the Sacramento International Airport. In the coming years the Sacramento International Airport will continue to expand as an international airport and gateway for our region. As the Airport's supporters gather to celebrate their 40 anniversary, I ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring their storied past and vision for the future.
