The House met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BAIRD).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The Speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC, February 6, 2008.

I hereby appoint the Honorable BRIAN BAIRD to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NANCY PELOSI, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

Dr. Stephen L. Swisher, Lovers Lane United Methodist Church, Dallas, Texas, offered the following prayer:

Dear God, in this moment may we encounter a fresh experience with You. Give us peace in the uncertainty of this election season and renewed strength as we remember those who sent us here. We know in our hearts that without Your guidance we can do nothing, but with You we can do all things.

Let us not be afraid of the problems that challenge us but instead be grateful that You have called us to make a difference at this time in history. I pray Your blessings of health, happiness, and protection upon each Member of the United States House of Representatives, their families, and staff members as well.

In times of frustration, may we know that You are with us and ready to help, if we will ask.

May we be emboldened by the thought that as individuals we represent various cities, counties, and States, but together we stand for the greatest Nation ever created.

In Jesus’ name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Speaker pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MILLER of Florida led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

CITY OF SHAME: BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

(Mr. POE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. POE, Mr. Speaker. Berkeley, California, has fallen off the deep end, and it wasn’t caused by an earthquake either.

The city council passed a resolution telling the local United States Marine Corps recruiting station that it was “not welcome in the city, and if recruiters choose to stay, they do so as uninvited and unwelcome intruders.”

Mayor Tom Bates said, “The Marines don’t belong here, they shouldn’t have come here, and they should leave.”

Shame on Mayor Bates. He has flippantly and pompously denounced those noble few—the proud—the chosen—the Marines that represent everything that is good and right about America. These defenders of democracy deserve better than Berkeley’s arrogant disapproval. These deplorable anti-Marine city council members must still have a sixties peacenik, hippie mentality that world peace can occur by sitting around smoking dope and banging on the tambourine.

Berkeley should lose all Federal funding for their smug denunciation of the Marine Corps. Patriotic Americans should not subsidize cities that tell the Marines to “get out of town.” And as for the Marines, we’ll take them all in Texas. We’ll have a parade, fly the flag, and sing the Marine Hymn. So Semper Fi.

And that’s just the way it is.

MEDICARE ENTITLEMENT REFORM

(Mr. MILLER of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, during this election season, political candidates will address every issue in the room except for the 800-pound gorilla. Medicare is rapidly growing in our Federal budget.

Just last week, Medicare trustees again reminded Congress that Medicare is projected to draw more than 45 percent of its funding from the general government revenue, as opposed to the Medicare trust fund. If Congress doesn’t start to make some changes, the program will face over $34 trillion in unfunded obligations over the next 75 years, which is nearly seven times the size of outstanding public debt today. This rapid growth in Medicare expenditures is fiscally unsustainable.

Mr. Speaker, both liberal and conservative policy analysts, along with the GAO, have been warning Congress of the much-needed entitlement reform. Who else must weigh in on the issue before Congress will start addressing comprehensive Medicare reform?
HONORING FORMER OREGONIAN KEVIN BOSS
(Ms. HOOLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)
Ms. HOOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the New York Giants on their upset of the New England Patriots to win Super Bowl XLII. With hometown pride in representing Monmouth and Philomath, I want to congratulate the Giants’ starting tight end in the Super Bowl, Kevin Boss, a graduate of Philomath High and Western Oregon University.
Kevin was drafted as a backup to the Giants’ four-time Pro Bowl tight end Jeremy Shockey, but was thrust into the spotlight late in the season when Shockey broke his leg.
It is apt that friends gathered at Rookies’ in Monmouth to cheer their local son to victory. The Boss, as he is known, may be a rookie, but no one would have realized it from watching Sunday night’s game.
His biggest mark in the Super Bowl came when he caught a 45-yard pass, setting up the Giants’ first touchdown of the game to take a 10–7 lead in the fourth quarter.
Despite being about as far away from New York as one can be in the United States, the towns of Philomath and Monmouth couldn’t be more proud.

BERKELEY’S ACTIONS OFFENSIVE
(Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. SAM JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, you all know the Marine Corps Hymn. It starts, “From the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, we fight our country’s battles in the air, on land, and sea.”
Sadly, now the Marines have a new fight in the City of Berkeley. Recently, the city council voted to declare that a Marine recruiting station is “not welcome in the city.”
To rub salt in the wound, the council then granted carte blanche to the radical protest group Code Pink. The disappointing and despicable actions of the Berkeley council are sad, shameful, and sickening. Some would call it treasonous.
Marines volunteer to serve their country and spill their blood for this Nation. Berkeley ought to show more respect for our Armed Forces.
The Marines’ motto, “Semper Fidelis,” is “Always Faithful.” Although Berkeley may not be faithful to the Marines, I can guarantee you that the City of Berkeley wouldn’t exist in a free country without the United States Marines.
The council needs to reverse this absurd decision. Their actions are offensive and obnoxious.

COMMUNICATION FROM LEGISLATIVE DIRECTOR, HON. WILLIAM J. JEFFERSON, MEMBER OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from Angelle B. Kwemo, Legislative Director, the Honorable William J. Jefferson, Member of Congress:

COMMUNICATION FROM LEGISLATIVE DIRECTOR, HON. WILLIAM J. JEFFERSON, MEMBER OF CONGRESS

To the Congress of the United States:

At www.budget.gov, Americans will find the budget of the Federal Government for Fiscal Year 2009—Message from the President of the United States (H. DOC. NO. 110-84)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

At www.budget.gov, Americans will find the budget of the Federal Government for Fiscal Year 2009. Two key principles guided the development of my Budget—keeping America safe and ensuring our continued prosperity.

As we enter this New Year, our economy retains a solid foundation despite some challenges. Revenues have reached record levels, and we have reduced the Federal deficit by $250 billion since 2004. Thanks to the hard work of the American people and spending discipline in Washington, we are now on a path to balance the budget by 2012. Our formula for achieving a balanced budget is simple: create the conditions for economic growth, keep taxes low, and spend taxpayer dollars wisely or not at all.

As Commander in Chief, my highest priority is the security of the American people. So my Budget invests substantial resources to protect the United States from those who would do us harm. Continuing our Nation’s efforts to contain the war abroad and around the globe, my Budget provides for our men and women in uniform the tools they need to succeed in Afghanistan and Iraq, and it furnishes the resources needed for our civilians to help those nations achieve economic and political stability. My Budget also strengthens our overseas diplomatic capabilities and development efforts, advances our political and economic interests abroad, and improves the lives of people around the world.

Here at home, we are blessed to live in a country that rewards hard work and innovation. In our flexible and dynamic economy, people can pursue their dreams, turn ideas into enterprises, and provide for their families.

As we look back over the past 7 years, we see the economy has successfully responded to substantial challenges, including a recession terrorist attacks, corporate scandals, wars, and devastating natural disasters. It is a measure of our resilience and the effectiveness of pro-growth policies that our economy has absorbed these shocks, grown for 6 straight years, and had the longest period of uninterrupted job growth on record. Yet mixed indicators confirm that economic growth cannot be taken for granted. To insure against the risk of an economic downturn, I will work with the Congress to pass a growth plan that will provide immediate, meaningful, and temporary help to our economy.

Americans have real concerns about their ability to afford healthcare coverage, pay rising energy bills, and meet monthly mortgage payments. They expect their elected leaders in Washington to address these pressures on our economy. So my Budget puts forth proposals to make health care more affordable and accessible, reduce our dependence on oil, and help Americans struggling to keep their homes.

Above all, my Budget continues the pro-growth policies that have helped promote innovation and entrepreneurship. I will not jeopardize our country’s continued prosperity with a tax increase. Higher taxes would only lead to more waste in our spending in Washington—putting at risk both economic growth and a balanced budget.

As we work to keep taxes low, we must do more to restrain spending. My Budget proposes to keep non-security discretionary spending growth below 1 percent for 2009 and then hold it at that level for the next 4 years. It also cuts spending on projects that are not achieving results—because good intentions alone do not justify a program that is not working.

One of the best ways to reduce waste and increase accountability is to make Federal spending more transparent. 'To help Americans see where their money is being spent, we have launched a website called www.USAspending.gov and to help Americans see the kind of results they are getting for their money, we launched www.ExpectMore.gov. I invite all Americans to log on and find out for themselves how their hard-earned tax dollars are being spent.

Billions of those tax dollars go to something called earmarks. Earmarks are special-interest items that are slipped into big spending bills or committee reports, often at the last hour, without discussion or debate. Last January, I asked the Congress to reform earmarks, and lawmakers took some modest steps in that direction. But they failed to end the practice of concealing earmarks in report language—and they continued to fund thousands of them. So I will take steps to advance earmark reform. I also call on the Congress to adopt the legislative line-item veto, which gives the legislative and executive branches a tool to help eliminate wasteful spending. Common-sense reform will help prevent billions of taxpayers’ dollars from being spent on unnecessary and unproven programs.

As we take these steps to address discretionary spending, we also need to confront the biggest challenge to the Federal budget: the unsustainable growth in entitlement spending. Many Americans depend on programs like Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid, and we have an obligation to make sure they are sound for our children and grandchildren. If we do not address this challenge, we will leave our children three bad options: huge tax increases, huge deficits, or huge cuts in benefits. The longer we put off the problem, the more difficult, unfair, and expensive a solution becomes.

My Budget works to slow the rate of growth of these programs in the short term, which will save $208 billion over 5 years. This step alone would reduce Medicare’s 75-year unfunded obligation by nearly one-third. My Administration cannot solve this problem alone, though. We need a commitment from the Congress to reform and improve these vital programs so they can serve future generations of Americans.

In my 2009 Budget, I have set clear priorities that will help meet our nation’s pressing priorities and address the long-term challenges ahead. With pro-growth policies and spending discipline, we will balance the budget in 2012, keep the tax burden low, and provide for our national security. And that is what our country needs and more prosperous.

GEORGE W. BUSH

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

RECOGNIZING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF RECORDING ARTS AND SCIENCES

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 273) recognizing the 50th anniversary of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The text of the concurrent resolution is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 273

Whereas, in 1957, a group of visionary leaders gathered at the famed Brown Derby in Los Angeles to form the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences;

Whereas the Recording Academy soon created the GRAMMY Award which is the world’s most visible and prestigious award for music;

Whereas the GRAMMY was created as a peer award, given by music makers, for music makers, to honor the highest quality recording music of the year without regard to sales or chart position;

Whereas the Recording Academy expanded its mission beyond recognition of musical excellence to include groundbreaking professional development, cultural enrichment, advocacy, education, and human services programs;

Whereas through its 12 chapters across America, the Recording Academy serves more than 18,000 musicians, singers, songwriters, producers, engineers, and other music professionals;

Whereas, in 1961, the Recording Academy created the GRAMMY Foundation to cultivate the understanding, appreciation, and advancement of the contribution of recorded music to American culture, from the artistic and technical legends of the past to the still unimagined musical breakthroughs of future generations of music professionals;

Whereas that same year, the Recording Academy created MusiCares, to provide a safety net of critical assistance for music people in times of need;

Whereas the GRAMMYS on the Hill Initiative, based in Washington, DC, works to advance the rights of the music community through advocacy, education, and dialogue; and

Whereas through this initiative, the Recording Academy has become a leading advocate for music makers: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress congratulates the Recording Academy during its 50th GRAMMY celebration for its important work in improving the environment for music and music makers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) and the gentleman from North Carolina (Ms. FOXX) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent. Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire?

There was no objection.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, I am pleased to join my colleagues in the consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 273, which acknowledges the 50th anniversary of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences.

House Concurrent Resolution 273 was introduced by Representative MARY BONO MACK of California on December 19, 2007, and was considered by and reported from the Oversight Committee on January 29, 2008, by voice vote.

The measure has the support of over 60 Members of Congress, and provides our body a collective opportunity to both recognize and congratulate the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences on its 50th anniversary Grammy Awards celebration.

Established in 1957, the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, also known as the Recording Academy, serves as the premier organization of music creators through strong intellectual property rights, the music industry, and future.

The Recording Academy is best known for its presentation of the Grammy Awards, which is the only peer-presented award ceremony to honor artistic achievement, technical proficiency and overall excellence in the recording industry without regard to album sales or chart position.

In addition to the Grammys, the Recording Academy is also known for its philanthropic efforts to cultivate the understanding, appreciation and advancement of the industry’s contributions to American culture through music and education programs offered by the Grammy Foundation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this concurrent resolution, which recognizes the Recording Academy during its 50th Grammy celebration, and receiving its important contribution to the success and vitality of music makers.

Ms. BONO MACK. Mr. Speaker, this weekend millions of Americans will view the Grammy Awards Gala and I rise today to recognize a most important milestone for the organization responsible for this program.
I would first like to take this opportunity to thank the Majority Leader and his staff for working together with my office on this concurrent resolution. Additionally, I would like to thank him for his steadfast commitment to the Recording Arts and Sciences Caucus of which we both are co-chairs.

Today I am joined by over 60 of my colleagues—on both sides of the aisle—as I put forth this concurrent resolution which recognizes the contributions the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has made to our country over the last half century.

It is indeed an honor to celebrate this anniversary as we acknowledge that it has been 50 years since the Recording Academy was formed. Throughout that time the Recording Academy has expanded its mission beyond a peer music award to include professional development, cultural enrichment, advocacy, education, and human services programs.

These programs are helping develop and nurture the music industry and most importantly the musicians who make up that industry. The impact this has had on music and the arts in the United States cannot be overstated.

At its core, the Recording Academy’s support for artists and recording professionals has been and is essential to the creative life of our Nation. The Recording Academy’s constant push for the advancement of the rights of musicians, songwriters, singers, producers, and other recording professionals is essential to the future health and sustainability of the music community. Thankfully, the Recording Academy is there everyday, championing these worthy causes and educating all of us about their importance.

As such, I am proud to have authored House Concurrent Resolution 273 which recognizes the 50th Anniversary of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I ask for the support of Members from both sides of the aisle for H. Con. Res. 273, legislation I’m proud to have authored.

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) and the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Ms. FOXX) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Hampshire.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire?

There was no objection.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time to myself as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution H. Res. 867 which provides for the consideration of House Resolution 867, which provides for the recognition of the Dynamo soccer team, out of Houston, Texas, for their recent 2007 MLS championship win.

House Resolution 867 was introduced by Representative G ENE GREEN of Texas on December 11, 2007, and was considered by and reported from the House Committee on Oversight on January 29, 2008, by voice vote.

The measure has the support and co-sponsorship of nearly 55 Members of Congress, and its consideration today on the House floor allows our entire body the chance to commend the Dynamo on their winning the coveted MLS Cup. As is the case in most professional sporting or athletic leagues, ultimate success or winning of a championship title requires hard work, sacrifice, and innate desire to win.

The Dynamo, led by 2005 MLS Coach of the Year Dominic Kinnear, have clearly demonstrated their commitment to these ideals as they not only hold the 2007 MLS Championship Cup but are also the proud winners of the 2006 MLS Championship Cup as well.

The Dynamo’s recent wins mark the first time in 10 years that a team has won back-to-back MLS Cups. For this accomplishment, Mr. Speaker, we stand to commend the Dynamo, their players, coaches and supportive fans on a job well done.

I urge the passage of this measure. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in favor of H. Res. 867 which congratulates the Houston Dynamo for winning its second straight Major League Soccer championship.

In the season, the Dynamo team members weren’t so much worried about defending their title as merely maintaining respectability. They brought a 2-4-1 record into Washington’s RFK stadium, less than two miles from where we stand right now, on May 26.

Though they lost by the score of 2-1 that night, to a man, they agreed that was the game when things turned around.

The Dynamo did not lose again until July 10, a period that covered 12 games. After that, they went six more games without a loss. By then, they were back where they belonged, atop the MLS standings.

The key for this team, from all accounts, was its defense. The Dynamo scored 43 goals in 30 games. Not outstanding for a league champion, but it allowed just 23 goals as opponents wore defenders from all three lines of the Dynamo attack like a cheap suit for most of the season.

Brian Ching, Stuart Holden, Eddie Robinson, Ricardo Clark, Brad Davis, and Patrick Ianni formed the backbone of those three lines. Pat Onstead, who helped the team set a league record for best goal-against average, 0.73 per game, provided other-worldly goalkeeping.

The season was not without its drama. After recovering from the slow start, the Dynamo again flirted with elimination when it lost to FC Dallas, 1-0, in its first playoff game and trailed 1-0 and faced elimination in its second. But the Dynamo then buried Dallas in a four-goals-in-30-minutes barrage and never looked back. It beat New England in the finals 3-0. Does this sound familiar?

The Dynamo showed what can happen when the team recognizes its weaknesses and buys into a plan to fix them. Congratulations to Coach Dominic Kinnear and his players for showing what can happen when we pull together and rise above.
Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield to my distinguished colleague from Texas (Mr. GENE GREEN) so much time as he may consume.

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleagues and both the Government Reform Committee and Rules Committee for allowing this resolution to be considered by my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

The Dynamo soccer team arrived in Houston just 2 years ago, and in the team’s first two seasons, they won back-to-back MLS Cups. The Dynamo are the first team to do so in over a decade and have immediately drawn a huge fan base in Houston for their success.

Dynamo coach Dominic Kinnear has guided the team to 26 wins, 20 draws, and 18 losses. Over the years, I watched soccer grow not only in the suburbs but also in the very inner city, and you can hardly have a flat field, flat surface, without having soccer goals put up.

Four of the Dynamo stars, Brad Davis, Eddie Robinson, Ricardo Clark, and Stuart Holden, have been selected for the U.S. Men’s National Team roster that will face Team Mexico at Reliant Stadium tonight in Houston. This is the first time any club represented on our national team, and it includes the Houston native, Stuart Holden, who played his high school soccer in Houston.

The U.S.-Mexico soccer rivalry is one of the biggest matches the team plays and always draws enormous crowds and a large television following.

We wish the players luck tonight in their match and congratulate the Dynamos on their past success and look forward to their continued success in 2008.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution congratulating the Houston Dynamos on their 2007 Major League Soccer Cup victory.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 867 condemning the Houston Dynamo for winning the 2007 Major League Soccer Cup. I would first like to thank my distinguished colleague GENE GREEN of the 29th Congressional District of Texas for introducing this important resolution. The Houston Dynamo has consistently strived for excellence and dominated the MLS playoffs for 2 consecutive years and I am happy to commend their efforts.

The Dynamo played their first game on April 2, 2006, in front of a crowd of 25,462 in Robertson Stadium. The Dynamo finished their first season in Houston with an 11–8–3 record, earning them second place in the Western Conference. On November 12, 2006, at Pizza Hut Park in Frisco, Texas, the Houston Dynamo defeated the New England Revolution in an exciting match decided by the first shootout in MLS history, 4–3 on penalty kicks after a 1–1 tie to win the 2006 MLS Cup.

After regrouping, pulling off a win against rival FC Dallas, Houston began an winning streak of 11 games and a shutout streak of 276 minutes, a new MLS record. They finished in second place in the regular season in the Western Conference, advancing to the 2007 MLS Cup Playoffs, where they met State rivals FC Dallas in the first round. Just like in 2006, they faced the New England Revolution for the championship, and won it 2–1 on a game-winning goal by Dwayne De Rosario in the second half, thus winning their second MLS Cup in a row.

As a native Texan, I am proud to honor the Houston Dynamo for their sheer dominance since the premiere of MLS soccer in the United States. I strongly urge the community to support the Houston Dynamo as they will need it to sustain the expectations they have already lived up to. I strongly support this resolution and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of H. Res. 867, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 867.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by Mr. HODES.

There was no objection.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, I am pleased to recognize the significance of Black History Month as an important time to recognize the contributions of African-Americans in the Nation’s history, and encourages the continued celebration of this month to provide an opportunity for all peoples of the United States to learn more about the past and to better understand the experiences that have shaped the history of the United States.

(1) recognizes the significance of Black History Month as an important time to recognize the contributions of African-Americans in the Nation’s history, and encourages the continued celebration of this month to provide an opportunity for all peoples of the United States to learn more about the past and to better understand the experiences that have shaped the history of the United States;

(2) recognizes that the ethnic and racial diversity of the United States enriches and strengthens the Nation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FENNEY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire?

There was no objection.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield to myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, I am pleased to recognize the significance of Black History Month.
join my colleagues in the consideration of H. Res. 942 which calls for Congress to recognize the significance of February as Black History Month.

H. Res. 942 was introduced by Representative AL GREEN of Texas on January 28, 2008, and was considered by and reported from the Oversight Committee on January 29, 2008, by voice vote. The measure has the support and cosponsorship of 55 Members of Congress, yet gives us all an opportunity to pay tribute to the remarkable contributions that Americans have made to America’s growth, development, and rich history.

As we are aware, February marks the beginning of Black History Month, which was first celebrated as Negro History Week in 1926 by Carter G. Woodson, a noted African American author and scholar, but has since become a month-long commemorative celebration of the role black Americans have played since the existence of our country and the role they continue to play on a daily basis.

Across our great land, Black History Month is marked by the offering of educational and cultural programs, heightening the visibility of special celebrations and events, all designed to share with the world the strength, ingenuity, and accomplishments of our fellow American citizens.

Mr. Speaker, as we move to recognize Black History Month and this year’s theme of “Carter G. Woodson and the Origins of Multiculturalism in America,” let’s all recall the experiences and valuable contributions of African Americans to our fine country. Let us not forget that black history is truly American history.

And with that, Mr. Speaker, I urge the swift passage of H. Res. 942.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I am honored to speak today in support of H. Res. 942, recognizing the significance of Black History Month, sponsored by my distinguished colleague from Texas (Mr. AL GREEN).

Just a few weeks ago, we celebrated the life and accomplishments of one great man, Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and today we pay tribute to the contributions all African Americans have made to our great country.

Each February we express our appreciation of the struggles, determination, and perseverance of the African American community of the past and present. Nothing serves as a better example of this than the civil rights movement itself.

Rev. King would tell you that it was not the sole efforts of one man but the collective work of many that achieved so much. Without the collective movement, our Nation would not have the strong diversity of which it is so proud.

Beyond this, February is also a time to recognize the contributions of African Americans that have enriched our culture and our heritage. We must continue to learn the historical struggles of African Americans in order to better understand the experiences that have shaped this Nation.

There have been great activists, politicians, scientists, poets, artists, entertainers, and musicians that have all bettered our way of life. The achievements of so many have encouraged today’s youth to strive for a more equal and free country.

It is impossible to celebrate Black History Month without mentioning such noted leaders as Frederick Douglass, Harriet Tubman, Rosa Parks, Thurgood Marshall, and, once again, Dr. King himself. Their historic efforts inspired a Nation and brought past injustices to light, bringing forth beginning to an end of racial inequality.

Over time, it has become the month-long commemoration that it is today, and I am proud of the fact that I speak today in support of H. Res. 942.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOIDES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to a distinguished colleague from Texas (Mr. AL GREEN) and, in doing so, commend him for his extraordinary leadership in introducing this resolution and his service to the United States.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his very kind words and compliment him on the outstanding job that he is doing in the United States Congress, and I am always honored to have the opportunity to serve and work with the gentleman.

I also like to at least mention the prolific poetry of Phyllis Wheatley. We want to say that there was the scientific genius of Benjamin Banneker, who, by the way, was self-educated, a self-educated scientist, astronomer and inventor. We want to mention the brilliant brilliance of Macon B. Allen, who became the first African American admitted to the bar in the United States in 1845.

We should mention the colossal courage of Harriet Tubman, who, with her Underground Railroad, helped millions of persons of good will of all ethnicities and races, all genders. People of good will have been of service in this fight for freedom for African Americans, and we should never have this kind of celebration and not mention the fact that we are here because there were many other persons who made it possible for us to have the opportunities we have.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I am proud to yield 7 minutes to my distinguished colleague, Representative Eleanor Holmes Norton, who has represented the City of Washington, DC for many years and is known universally as a passionate advocate for truth and justice.

Ms. NORTON. I thank the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) for that generous introduction. And I thank my good friend, Mr. FEENEY from Florida, for also coming forward and robustly leading this bill forward today. We all owe thanks to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. AL GREEN), and robustly leading this bill forward from Florida, for also coming forward from whom we thank my good friend, Mr. FEENEY.

Mr. Speaker, as a journalist, I have always been moved only about 40 years ago. So you cause the shackles of segregation and a period for black history-making breakthrough is not surprising when close to, perhaps, getting the Democratic nomination for President. This breakthrough is not surprising when you consider that we are still living in a period for black history-making because the shackles of segregation and of nationwide discrimination were removed only about 40 years ago. You will hear many firsts, many record-breakers continue to come forward for years to come.

We don't really have to go to the history books in the 19th century, and earlier, to find history makers who should be revered this month. We are literally still surrounded by living black history on which history has spoken. Now, mind you I say ‘on which history has spoken.’ I mean you don't have the verdict of history until you can stand back from it. And, therefore, I want to make a few remarks about living history from the Congress of the United States.

It is probably the case that most Americans do not recognize that the first African American elected by popular vote to the United States Senate was Senator Edward Brooke, who served from 1967 to 1979. This is real living history. Now a absolute 87, Senator Brooke broke more records than anybody I know. He became a Senator, '67 to '79, at a time when breakthroughs hadn't begun to occur. And he became a Senator from an overwhelmingly white State that was also overwhelmingly Democratic, and he was a Republican, a life-long Republican. Before that, he had become the State's first black attorney general.

I know Senator Brooke for reasons that are close to home. If you grew up in Washington, you will know him because, in studying black history, we studied this living history in our midst. He is a native Washingtonian. He graduated from Dunbar High School, the same high school I attended; served in World War II in the segregated 366th; went to Howard University and Howard law school, lived a segregated life his whole life. Then he got out of law school, he went to seek his fortune, not in his hometown, but in Massachusetts, where he practiced law and then had the audacity to run for office in a State where his party was not even legal and in a State where he had to risk race when few had done so.

He tells the fascinating story of his life in his own autobiography called ‘Bridging the Divide.’ It was published in 2006. And that's exactly what Senator Brooke did. He bridged the divide, brought Democrats and Republicans together, brought blacks and whites together, and became a history maker of the first order and one who served in the Congress of the United States.

I must say that the President has already understood his significance in American history because a few years ago, President Bush awarded Senator Brooke the highest national honor, the Presidential Medal of Honor, and, once more, the Senate has the jump on us. Of course, Edward Brooke was a Member of the Senate, but the Senate has unanimously voted that Senator Brooke should receive the highest congressional honor, the Congressional Gold Medal. These are the highest honors that each branch of government can offer.

I can think of no better way for the Congress to celebrate Black History Month, not in talking about black history-making breakthroughs, but to give the Congressional Gold Medal. That requires two-thirds of the House to sign on. Many have, once this was brought to their attention, signed on. We’re going to send it again, of course, to Members, as we try to do something that I think will be history-making this very month, and that is to have the Congress of the United States, this month, this Black History Month, vote to give the Congressional Gold Medal to one of our own former colleagues, a former Member of the Senate, Senator Edward Brooke, the first African American to serve by popular vote in the Congress of the United States. The policy of the Omaha Star has been to print only positive news and to be a vigilant champion for African-American progress. The paper is located in the heart of Omaha's African-American community.

The Omaha Star was founded by the late Mildred D. Brown in 1938. She is believed to be the first female, certainly the first African-American woman, to have founded a newspaper in the Nation's history. When Mrs. Brown expired unexpectedly in 1989, the paper was then placed under the capable hands of Dr. Marguerita Washington, her niece, who now heads the newspaper.

Dr. Washington and the Omaha Star work for equal rights for all, the paper was on the forefront, leading the charge to open public accommodations to African-Americans, including hotels, restaurants, theaters and taverns. The paper was instrumental in working with Omaha Public Schools to ensure that black teachers had equal participation. Dr. Washington is one of the extraordinary people who continue to help build our great Nation.

Of the thousands of African-Americans in my District, I have the privilege of representing two individuals and an outstanding group: Marguerita Washington and Rudy Smith, both former editors of the Omaha Star newspaper and the highest national honor, the Presidential Medal of Honor. And, once more, the Senate has the jump on us. Dr. Marguerita Washington is the editor of the Omaha Star newspaper in Omaha. The paper has been in existence for more than 69 years and is Nebraska’s largest African-American newspaper. The policy of the Omaha Star has been to print only positive news and to be a vigilant champion for African-American progress. The paper is located in the heart of Omaha's African-American community.

Rudy Smith has lived in Omaha since age 6 and has been an Omaha World Herald photographer and editor for more than 40 years. He is in the process of completing a book of his photographs, many of which have been exhibited at black colleges, universities and museums around the country. As a journalist and photographer he has captured images of some of America’s greatest heroes. He has also worked hard to get the Omaha Star landmark status in the city of Omaha and the State of Nebraska.

Every picture he takes is a moment; each special moment holds a lifetime of memories that lives on after the moment has passed. Each of his photographs is a window to the story and has the ability to deeply connect you to the beauty of life itself. His talent is endless.

Omaha native Alphonza Davis graduated from Omaha Tech High School and later Omaha University. He finished last in his class in Tuskegee and was chosen squadron leader. He was killed in combat in 1944 while over in Germany. The local Tuskegee Airmen chapter in Omaha is named after him.
The chapter is one of 45 nationwide, and its membership includes four original Tuskegee Airmen. They are LTC (Ret) Paul Adams, LTC (Ret) Charles A. Lane, Jr., LTC (Ret) Harrison A. Tull, and Mr. Robert D. Holts. These members continue their service to our community by mentoring and working with youth through the local Civil Air Patrol.

The Tuskegee Airmen and their record of success during the war are unmatched. Not a single African American bomber protected by the Red Tails was ever shot down by enemy aircraft. By war’s end, the Tuskegee Airmen had flown over 1,500 missions and destroyed more than 260 enemy aircraft.

I join my colleagues in recognizing these and the millions of African-Americans in our country for their numerous achievements throughout history, today and the future. This designation is only a small token of the thanks they deserve for all of their contributions to our society. I urge the adoption of H. Res. 942.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I ask for unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

I rise today to voice my strong support for H. Res. 942. This bipartisan resolution recognizes the significance of Black History Month. I want to thank my friend and colleague, Representative Al. GREEN, for introducing this resolution.

February is Black History Month, a time for all Americans to learn about and recognize the heritage and achievements of African Americans.

African Americans have made historic contributions to this Nation in all walks of life—from economics, to education, to politics and the arts.

Sadly, African Americans have been victims of too much discrimination, segregation, and hatred in their history in the United States.

That is why it is so fitting we stand here together today, one body in unity, to recognize the amazing accomplishments of our Nation’s African Americans.

We also stand here to recognize that the ethnic and racial diversity within the United States is a wonderful thing, which only serves to strengthen our great Nation.

I urge my colleagues to embrace this diversity, to support Black History Month, and to cast a vote in favor of H. Res. 942.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H. Res. 942. Recognizing the Significance of Black History Month, introduced by my distinguished colleague from Texas, Representative GREEN.

This important legislation recognizes and celebrates the accomplishments and contributions of African-Americans in this Nation.

The celebration of Black History Month began with Negro History Week in 1926, the vision of Dr. Carter G. Woodson. Dr. Woodson, a noted African-American author and scholar recognized them, as we do today, that the achievements and contributions of African-Americans deserve not only to be acknowledged, but also to be celebrated by all Americans.

Over the course of 50 years, Negro History gained momentum, culminating in its transcendence to Black History Month. Not until February 6, 2008, do we express our appreciation of the struggles, determination and perseverance of the African-American community of the past and present. February is a month to recognize the contributions of African-Americans who have enriched our culture and our heritage.

There have been great African-American activists, scientists, artists, poets, athletes, politicians, writers, economists, musicians, engineers, and entertainers who have all bettered our way of life. From Langston Hughes to Barbara Jordan, Althea Gibson to Venus Williams, Marian Anderson to Elia Fitzgerald, Frederick Douglass to Martin Luther King, Jr., so many African-Americans have enriched this Nation that there are far too many to name them all. Unfortunately, African-Americans to gain recognition and celebration in this Nation continues beyond Black History Month. While we can be proud of the many achievements of our past, events such as Hurricane Katrina and recent floods demonstrate that we still have much to achieve in the way of equal rights and justice for all.

One of the great challenges facing the African-American community is the disproportionate rate at which our people are incarcerated.

According to the Department of Justice more than 2.3 million people are incarcerated in this Nation’s State and Federal prisons. As of December 2006, African-Americans made up 40.2 percent of Federal prison inmates, most of those African-American men.

When you compare these statistics with the fact that African-Americans only make up approximately 12 percent of the total population, the disparity becomes more apparent. The human toll—the wasted lives, shattered families, and disturbed youth—are incalculable, as are the adverse social, economic and political consequences of weakened communities, diminished opportunities for economic mobility, and widespread disenfranchisement.

In Jena, Louisiana, two African-American high school students sat under what some White students called the “white” tree on their campus. The White students responded by hanging nooses from the tree. When African-American students protested the light punishment for the students who hung the nooses, the District Attorney came to the school and told the students he could “take their lives away with a stroke of his pen.” Racial tensions continued to mount in Jena, and the District Attorney did nothing in response to several egregious race and threats against African-American students.

But when a White student—who had been a vocal supporter of the students who hung the nooses—taunted African-American students, allegedly called several African-American students “nigger”, and was beaten up by African-American students, the punishment was drastically different. Six African-American students were charged with second-degree attempted murder. Mychal Bell was one of the students tried and convicted and served up to 22 years in prison for essentially a school fight.

The African-American community came to the aid of these young men, as they have done in years past for other young men. While we take this month to celebrate the past and present African-American achievements and contributions, we must face the future with an understanding that there is more to be done and more to be achieved.

As a member of the Congressional Black Caucus, a Representative of the people of the United States, and an African-American woman, I am proud to cosponsor this legislation and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my full support for H. Res. 942, a resolution that recognizes Black History Month as a time to acknowledge the many contributions that African Americans have made in our Nation’s history and as a time for all Americans to fully understand the past and struggles that shaped our great Nation.

When Aristotle said, “If you would understand anything, observe its beginning and its development,” he suggested that we cannot fully know what something is if we do not consider its past. This certainly holds true for our country. Knowing our Nation’s history does more than tell us who we were; it tells us who we are. And if we look honestly at our past successes and mistakes, it tells us what we can become.

Unfortunately, the long practice of omitting, abbreviating, and misrepresenting African Americans in American history has resulted in an incomplete and skewed story of our country’s history. Fortunately, the social change of the civil rights movement inspired a change in the way that America told and understood its history. It became clear that American history—like America’s schools and lunch counters—needed to be integrated.

Over the years, Black History Month has become a chance to realize our rich diversity by studying the artistic, scientific, and political contributions that African Americans have made to the United States and the rest of the world. Realize Black history is American history, and February should not be the only time that we acknowledge the contributions of African American men, women, and children in U.S. history. African Americans have played a key role in just about every single moment in American history, and it is high time that our history books reflect that.

Driven by my commitment to the human and civil rights of all, I have worked hard to ensure that all people—regardless of their nationality, sexual orientation, gender, or race—have access to their most basic needs. My experiences in and before I came to this body have taught me that all people have influenced our country’s greatness. It is critically important that these contributions are acknowledged and retold.

Mr. Speaker, as we observe and celebrate the contributions of African Americans in America we must not forget that we are making history as we speak. We are living in an historical era in which extraordinary people from all walks of life are seeking opportunities that were previously not available to them. Outstanding Americans such as Barrington Irving, the youngest African descendant to fly around the world, teach us that we can achieve great things in this land of opportunity as long as we have the will and drive. As we all know, for the first time in history, the two contesting candidates for the Democratic nominee for President are a black man and a woman.

As we reflect on the numerous contributions and experiences of African Americans in this country, we must be cognizant of how we as a modern multi-ethnic and multicultural nation deal with the issues of our time. How do we determine how future generations will view us in the history books. I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on this important resolution.
Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, today I stand before you offering my generous support for the commemoration of H. Res. 942, recognizing the significance of Black History Month. This is a month to honor the tremendous strides and achievements made by numerous African-American leaders and activists, and to signify our continued celebration of diversity in the United States. I urge all Americans to use this month as an opportunity to recognize the accomplishments made by past African-American leaders while continuing to work for the advancement of racial equality.

The enormous contributions made by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Frederick Douglass, W.E.B. Du Bois and other notable leaders in the African-American community have championed improved race relations and equality. We must also highlight the achievements made by a host of prominent African-Americans in other fields such as the arts, athletics, politics, and academia.

This year’s theme, “Carter G. Woodson and the Origins of Multiculturalism,” honors Mr. Woodson, the founder of Black History Month and applauds his commitment to the preservation of African-American history. Woodson was instrumental in popularizing the role the African-American community has played in enriching the history of the United States. This mission and loyalty is one our country must uphold while continuing to inspire future generations to embrace diversity and equality.

Again, I would like to express my support for the significance of February 2008 as Black History Month. Let the following month serve as a reminder of our indebtedness to those leaders possessing the courage to combat injustice. They have completed the ultimate service not only for the African-American community but for all citizens.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of this most important month of February, deemed as Black History Month. Let us join with the rest of the Nation in highlighting the significant contributions that African Americans have made to our great Nation, while celebrating this year’s theme of “Carter G. Woodson and the Origin of Multiculturalism.”

Throughout this noteworthy month, we all should take a moment to reflect on the fact that February was designated to make note of the tremendous role that African Americans have played in the development and advancement of our country’s rich history. February embraces the birthdays of two distinguished Americans—Frederick Douglas and Abraham Lincoln—whose contributions to our society are immeasurable. Let us remember that not only are we honoring Black history; we are celebrating all of our history, African history.

This month we should remember the legacy of the illustrious Harlem Renaissance and the contributions this period had in shaping America’s cultural heritage. African American writers Langston Hughes, Richard Wright, Ralph Ellison, James Baldwin, and Toni Morrison have contributed so much with their voices in American literature. Military achievements, not only by the Tuskegee Airmen, the 54th Regiment from Massachusetts, and the 29th Regiment from Connecticut, but by other courageous Black soldiers, have helped to create the gallant Armed Forces of this country. In this month, let us all work together to ensure a positive future for the 40.2 million African Americans who contribute to this Nation on a daily basis.

In my home State of Connecticut, we make note of Hartford’s Black governors who oversaw the region from 1755 to 1800; fearless Connecticut abolitionists James Mars and J.W.C. Pennington who petitioned Connecticut’s legislature regarding voting and social rights for blacks in the 1840s and 50s; and of course the survivors of the Amistad slave ship, who spent days seated in a Hartford courtroom awaiting their fate by a U.S. circuit court judge. Through relics such as the Old State House, Mark Twain House, Harriet Beecher Stowe’s Birthplace, and the Amistad Center for Arts and Culture, we are paying homage to the extraordinary African Americans who have resided in our State.

Mr. Speaker, this year during Black History Month, I urge my colleagues and this Nation to remember all of the African Americans who have helped to weave the historical tapestry of America. I urge us all to realize the service, dedication and courage that have emerged throughout these decades. This year, let us truly celebrate Black History of us all. Like our motto says, E Pluribus Unum, Out of many we are one. We are a great Nation formed by the contribution of many, and this month we celebrate one of those outstanding groups.

Mr. FEENEY. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FEENEY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire?

There was no objection.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I yield to myself so much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, I am pleased to join my colleagues in the consideration of House Resolution 931, which expresses our support for naming a "Race Day in America" and recognizes the 50th running of the Daytona 500, which will occur on the 17th at the Daytona International Speedway in Daytona, Florida.

House Resolution 931 was introduced by my distinguished colleague, Representative TOM FEENEY of Florida, on January 17, 2008, and was considered by and reported from the House Oversight Committee on January 29, 2008, by voice vote.

The measure, which has the support and cosponsorship of 62 Members of Congress, couldn’t have been considered at a more fitting time as fans across this great country prepare for what is being called the most anticipated event in automobile racing history, the 50th running of the Daytona 500 on Saturday, February 22, 1959.

With a history dating back to February 22, 1959, the Daytona 500 at the Daytona International Speedway is a

WHEREAS the Daytona 500 is the most prestigious stock car race in this country;
Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge support for this resolution designating February 17, 2008, as Race Day in America.

Next Sunday over 200,000 people from all 50 States and around the world will converge at Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach, Florida, for the 50th running of “The Great American Race,” the Daytona 500.

The most prestigious stock car race in the United States, the Daytona 500 is a 200-lap, 500-mile grand opening to the NASCAR Sprint Cup Series. Boasting the largest purse and stock car racing’s most coveted trophy, the Harley J. Earl Trophy, the Daytona 500 has become the “Super Bowl of Stock Car Racing.”

Each year millions of fans, both at home as well as those serving overseas, tune in to the race by television and radio. Since 1995, the television ratings for the Daytona 500 have been higher than any auto race, and in 2006 the race drew the sixth largest television audience of any sporting event that year.

For 50 years, the popularity of Daytona, and racing in general, has grown throughout American society. I believe it is fitting that we celebrate this rising American tradition by passing this resolution in honor of the golden anniversary of its most prestigious event. I invite anybody who’s free this Sunday to come to Daytona Beach and enjoy this great tradition with us.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HODES. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. HODES) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 931.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMEMBERING THE SPACE SHUTTLE “CHALLENGER” DISASTER AND HONORING ITS CREW MEMBERS

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 943) remembering the space shuttle Challenger disaster and honoring its crew members, who lost their lives on January 28, 1986.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 943

Whereas January 28, 2008, marks the 22nd anniversary of the tragic accident of the space shuttle Challenger, Mission 51-L, and the loss of seven of America’s bravest and most dedicated citizens; Whereas the space shuttle Challenger disaster occurred off the coast of central Florida, at 11:39 a.m. on January 28, 1986; Whereas the space shuttle Challenger disaster integrated 73 seconds into its flight after an O-ring seal in its right solid rocket booster failed at lift-off; Whereas the seven-person crew on the shuttle included Commander Francis R. Scobee, Pilot Michael J. Smith, Mission Specialist Judith A. Resnik, Mission Specialist Ellison S. Onizuka, Payload Specialist Ronald E. McNair, Payload Specialist Gregory B. Jarvis, and Payload Specialist Sharon Christa McAuliffe; Whereas Christa McAuliffe, a schoolteacher from Concord, New Hampshire, was on board as the first member in the Teacher in Space Project; Whereas the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) selected Christa McAuliffe from a field of 11,000 applicants to be a part of the Challenger crew and teach lessons to schoolchildren from space; Whereas the Committee on Science and Technology of the House of Representatives conducted oversight hearings on the Challenger disaster and released a report on October 29, 1986, on the causes of the accident; and Whereas the House of Representatives continues to support NASA and its ongoing efforts to explore and educate the American public about space; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—
(1) honors the 22nd anniversary of the space shuttle Challenger disaster; (2) celebrates the courage and bravery of the crew of the Challenger, and Christa McAuliffe and her passion for encouraging America’s children to pursue careers in science and mathematics; (3) commits the Nation to using the lessons learned in inquiries into the space shuttle Challenger accident to ensure that the space agency always operates on a strong and stable foundation; and (4) recognizes the continued dedication of the United States to the goal of space exploration for the benefit of all mankind.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. MELANCON) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FEENEY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on House Resolution 943, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana? There is no objection.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to support House Resolution 943, a resolution honoring the astronauts of the space shuttle Challenger and honoring its crew members, who lost their lives on January 28, 1986. And I congratulate Mr. HODES for preparing this resolution.

The tragic loss of the Challenger and her crew of seven serves as a continuing reminder that space flight is anything but routine. As we continue to explore outer space, we here on the ground must do our part to ensure that we have learned the lessons of the Challenger accident and work tirelessly to make space travel as safe as possible for future generations of explorers.

In addition, I believe we can best honor the sacrifices of the crew of the Challenger made by our commitment to renewing America’s space program, continuing the Nation’s journey into space, a goal to which they dedicated their lives.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate that we pause today to honor the memory of the Challenger crew, and I urge all my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank my colleague Mr. MELANCON for shepherding this memorial to the floor today. With this resolution, the House of Representatives joins with all Americans to solemnly remember the loss of the space shuttle Challenger 22 years ago on January 28, 1986.

Many Americans remember where they were on that cold January morning when the shuttle Challenger leapt from its launch pad. After receiving the call “Challenger go at throttle up,” Challenger disintegrated in clear blue skies just 73 seconds into its flight.

We were stunned. One moment Challenger was flawlessly flying on a beautiful winter morning. Then, without warning, it was gone.

America turned to mourn its seven astronauts who gave the ultimate sacrifice for the advancement of exploration and discovery: Michael Smith; Dick Scobee; Judith Resnik; Ronald McNair; Ellison Onizuka; Gregory Jarvis; and Christa McAuliffe, a schoolteacher from Concord, New Hampshire, selected to be the first member of the teaching profession in a space project.

That evening, President Reagan spoke from the Oval Office to comfort a grieving Nation. Millions of children watched and heard about because Christa McAuliffe was to later teach science lessons from space. Instead, we were reminded of a deeper lesson. Reagan said:
“I want to say something to the schoolchildren of America who were watching the live coverage of the shuttle’s takeoff. I know it is hard to understand, but sometimes painful things like this happen. It’s all part of the process. And that is healthy. It’s all part of taking a chance and expanding man’s horizons. The future doesn’t belong to the fainthearted; it belongs to the brave. The Challenger crew was pulling us into the future, and we will continue to follow them.”

Reagan concluded his address by saying this:

“The crew of the space shuttle Challenger honored us by the manner in which they lived their lives. We will never forget them nor the last time we saw them, this morning, as they prepared for their journey and waved good-bye and slipped the surly bonds of Earth to “touch the face of God.”

Twenty-two years have passed. America has kept its word. We haven’t forgotten. The Challenger crew remind us that human space flight is mankind’s most difficult endeavor. America has achieved so many successes, space flight seems routine; yet every generation unexpectedly bears witness to space flight’s inherent peril.

Before the Challenger disaster, the Apollo I crew was lost on Pad 34 on January 27, 1967, in an accident known simply as “The Fire.” After Challenger, we waited on February 1, 2003, at the Kennedy Space Center’s landing strip for the voyagers of Columbia who never returned home. January and February are NASA’s cruelest months.

On each occasion the people of NASA grieved terribly, but they learned from adversity, and then they rededicated themselves to their mission. America landed on the Moon after The Fire. After Challenger, the shuttle flew again to pursue scientific discovery and begin constructing the international space station. On January 28, 1986, the Challenger crew returned to flight, and we will complete and use the International Space Station. Then we will turn our dreams to exploring beyond Earth’s orbit by establishing outposts on the Moon and then going further beyond.

Exploration, journey, and bravery define the American people. Each of us comes from a heritage where someone with great courage took a passage to a new beginning, many times with disastrous endings. But the living stubbornly persevered, pushed back vast frontiers, and built a great and glorious Nation. Adversity, including the loss of the Challenger crew, can never extinguish this American spirit.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to support this resolution honoring the brave and dedicated crew of Challenger. I urge my colleagues to support House Resolution 943.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. Hodges).

Mr. HODES. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Resolution 943.

I introduced House Resolution 943 to honor the courage and bravery of all seven crew members who died as a result of this tragic accident. The crew of the Challenger embodied the goals of the United States space program and our highest ideals: a commitment to knowledge of our universe and inspiring a new generation of scientific pioneers.

The tragic accident that day was especially poignant for those of us in New Hampshire. New Hampshire is a small State, and we pride ourselves on being a part of our national destiny. It is vital that safety is made our first priority, in order to protect future astronauts and ensure the tragedy of 22 years ago never happens again.

From the beginning, our Nation has recognized the importance of the exploration of space and has always taken a leading role in its development and expansion. The exploration of space is mankind’s most difficult endeavor. America has achieved so many successes, space flight seems routine; yet every generation unexpectedly bears witness to space flight’s inherent peril.

After Challenger, the shuttle flew again to pursue scientific discovery and begin constructing the international space station. On January 28, 1986, the Challenger crew returned to flight, and we will complete and use the International Space Station. Then we will turn our dreams to exploring beyond Earth’s orbit by establishing outposts on the Moon and then going further beyond.

Mr. Speaker, as we mourn the tragic loss of these extraordinary men and women, I would also like to praise those individuals who continued to accept the challenge posed by the exploration of space and the dedication of all connected with the manned space program. However, while space exploration continues to be a part of our national destiny, it is vital that safety is made our first priority, in order to protect future astronauts and ensure the tragedy of 22 years ago never happens again.

Forty-two years ago, on January 28, 1986, Ms. McAuliffe was on board the Challenger as the first participant of the Teacher in Space program, the pride of New Hampshire and of Concord and of the Nation, for which she was selected from a field of roughly 11,000 applicants as the primary candidate for the Teacher in Space Project. Her mission as a crew member was to teach schoolchildren lessons from space and to encourage students to pursue careers in science and mathematics.

Twenty-two years after the Challenger disaster, Christa McAuliffe’s goal of promoting scholarship in the sciences is more important than ever as our Nation works to stay at the forefront of innovation. I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing the anniversary of the Challenger disaster and to support House Resolution 943.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H. Res. 943, “Remembering the space shuttle Challenger disaster and honoring its crew members, who lost their lives on January 28, 1986,” introduced by my distinguished colleague from New Hampshire, Mr. Hodges.

Sharon Christa McAuliffe, Greg Jarvis, Judy Resnik, Michael J. Smith, Dick Scobee, and Ron McNair commenced on a risky journey, which only a few select few have had the opportunity to travel. Twenty-two years ago, these seven men and women embarked on what they knew would be a perilous flight, in pursuit of knowledge and driven by the spirit of scientific discovery. As we stand here today, on the floor of the House of Representatives, and commemorate the 22nd anniversary of the Challenger tragedy, I believe we should take a moment to recall the purpose to which the crew was dedicated. Astronauts Onizuka, McAuliffe, Jarvis, Resnik, Smith, Scobee, and McNair represent the best in all of us, and it is in their memory that we should devote ourselves to continuing what they began.

Mr. Speaker, as we mourn the tragic loss of these extraordinary men and women, I would also like to praise those individuals who continued to accept the challenge posed by the exploration of space and the dedication of all connected with the manned space program. However, while space exploration continues to be a part of our national destiny, it is vital that safety is made our first priority, in order to protect future astronauts and ensure the tragedy of 22 years ago never happens again.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to introduce an amendment to H.R. 3093, the Department of Commerce and Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Appropriations for FY 2008, reaffirming our strong commitment to ensuring adequate safety standards for the International Space Station. My amendment emphasizes the importance of safety and underscores the critical need for adequate funding for NASA to continue to pursue space exploration safely.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on House Concurrent Resolution 287, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Concurrent Resolution 287. This resolution celebrates the 50th anniversary of Explorer I, the first successful launch of a U.S. satellite into space, which took place on January 31, 1958, a date that also marks the 50th birthday of our U.S. space program.

With the launch of Explorer I, the United States was the first to send a scientific instrument into Earth’s orbit. The measurements from that instrument led to the significant discovery of the Van Allen radiation belts.

We owe our profound appreciation and gratitude to the late Dr. James Van Allen and science team and those individuals from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Army Ballistic Missile Agency who made possible the success of Explorer I.

The pioneering efforts launched the beginning of America’s journey beyond Earth, a journey that continues to generate remarkable accomplishments in geographical, technological, scientific, and political advancements. pushing back the frontiers of scientific knowledge and human space exploration. Since the launch of Explorer I 50 years ago, the United States has led the world in space exploration, with American astronauts taking humanity’s first steps on the Moon. American scientists working with their international colleagues to launch scientific probes to each of the planets in our solar system, to the Moon, asteroids and comets, and to study the Sun and its interactions with Earth and the solar system. Our astronomical observatories peer deeper and deeper into the universe and our Earth observing spacecraft deliver data that improves our quality of life and helps us preserve the health of our planet. Through these and many other exciting accomplishments, our space program has truly become one of our Nation’s crown jewels.

Mr. Speaker, as we celebrate the anniversary of Explorer I and past achievements, it is important that we also look to space as a story about America’s future. The U.S. space program is a catalyst for the advanced technologies and innovation that contribute to America’s economic competitiveness, and it also serves as a training ground for the scientists and engineers who are so critical to keeping America strong.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to join me in support of House Concurrent Resolution 287, and America’s space program.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I would yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 287, offered by my friend and Space Subcommittee chairman, MARK UDALL, as well as Mr. MELANCON, Technology Committee, RALPH HALL and myself, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the launch of Explorer I, America’s first satellite. With this launch, America became a spacefaring Nation.

Unlike the Soviets, who 4 months earlier had launched Sputnik I in secrecy, America’s space program was carried on in full public view. Our first attempt to launch a satellite, Vanguard I, ended in failure. As a consequence, some suggested that our preeminence as a world power was jeopardized. Explorer I proved otherwise. The successful launch came through a collaboration of brilliant and dedicated scientists and engineers led by Wernher von Braun, who designed the launch vehicle named after the Moon; Dr. Charles Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, who designed the satellite; and Dr. James Van Allen, who designed the main instrument carrying the satellite; and Dr. James Van Allen, that encircle the Earth.

Explorer I also stopped transmitting data on May 23, 1958 when its batteries died, but it stayed in orbit until March 31, 1970 and completed about 58,000 orbits around the Earth. Explorer I’s legacy was far greater than anticipated. Few imagined how satellites could maintain our Nation’s security and economy and extend man’s reach to the far corners of the solar system.

Government and private enterprise, scientists and engineers, worked together to expand the capacities of space. Today, a vibrant and critical commercial industry builds and launches sophisticated satellites.

In Earth orbit, satellites forecast weather and measure surface winds and ocean wave heights, monitor land-use patterns and remote sensing. They help farmers gauge the health of their crops; transmit data, radio and television signals into our homes and to businesses around the world; and they provide the infrastructure for the global positioning system, enabling the capability to accurately navigate to virtually any point on Earth.

Beyond Earth orbit, satellites have visited every planet in the solar system except for Pluto, although a mission is under way to visit this far-away planet in 2015. Satellites have carried rovers to the surface of Mars, they have captured samples of interstellar dust and returned them to Earth, photographed the Earth from space—its clarity, measured background temperatures and radiation to high precision, and landed on a moon of Saturn.

Explorer I also led to our human spaceflight program under which America learned to orbit the Earth, explore the Moon, and live for extended periods aboard the international space station.

H. Con. Res. 287 commemorates the achievements of the Explorer I team, and recognizes its role as the impetus for what has become a critical part of America’s greatness. I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of this bill, along with my good friend and ranking Republican member of the Science and Technology Committee, RALPH HALL, and I urge all Members to support it.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I don’t have any further speakers, and I would reserve my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, earlier I shamelessly invited people to come and experience the Dayton 500. While they are there, they may want to come visit a museum not far from the Dayton 500. Launch Complex 26, where Explorer I was launched, now houses the U.S. Air Force Space and Missile Museum. If you visit, you can tour the blockhouse from which the Explorer I was launched, see launch control equipment that enabled the U.S. to launch the pad. Just a few hundred yards away is Launch Pad 5 where America’s first astronaut, Alan Shepard, was launched into space. Emily Perry serves as the museum’s curator. Sixty volunteers, led by Gary Harris, guide these tours. Most of these volunteers are veterans of America’s space program, including some from the Explorer I era. Their stories provide a window into this fascinating past. Tours begin from the Kennedy Space Center’s Visitors Complex and operate 7 days a week.

We have talked about how Explorer I began America’s journey as a spacefaring people. If you visit the Space and Missile Museum, you can see and touch where that journey began.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, today we consider H. Con. Res. 287, Celebrating the 50th Anniversary of the U.S. Satellite and the Birth of the United States’ Space Exploration Program, which I introduced last week.

My statement about its introduction highlighted the inspiring accomplishments of our early space pioneers who contributed to the successful development and launch of Explorer I—America’s first space satellite—and the multiple achievements of our Nation’s first 50 years in space.

Today, I want to focus on one of the major enablers of America’s highly successful space program, namely our highly skilled science and engineering workforce.

As we celebrate 50 years of exciting accomplishments in space, we witness the return on our Nation’s past investments in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) education.

Those investments produced the cadre of highly skilled scientists and engineers who have led our Nation in pushing back the boundaries of scientific knowledge and making possible the human and robotic exploration of outer space.

Their contributions to our successes in space have also yielded critical benefits by promoting the innovation and advanced technology development that are central to America’s competitiveness.

As was expressed so clearly in the National Academies’ “Rising Above the Gathering Storm” report and in the America COMPETES Act that was signed into law last year, our Nation’s economic strength cannot be sustained without renewed investments in STEM education.

Space has always been an attraction for some of America’s best and brightest. Our space program provides a unique means of encouraging the pursuit of STEM fields. I urge my colleagues in Congress to support the STEM programs and educators we need to prepare the next generation of scientists and engineers who will lead America’s next 50 years of accomplishments in space and on Earth.

And I urge you also to maintain Congress’s commitment to making the investments necessary to continue a robust and vital space program for the Nation.
I would like to thank my colleagues Ms. Giffords and Mr. Rohrabacher for their support of the bill, along with the original cosponsors. I urge adoption of my resolution.

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res. 287 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Explorer I and the birth of an era of United States space exploration.

On January 31, 1958, the United States officially entered space as Explorer I successfully reached orbit. At a time when our Nation feared the worst from the Soviet Union, the successful launch of Sputnik supercharged anxiety. Our Nation responded, and responded quickly.

Explorer I, however, was more than just an emphatic response to Sputnik. It was achieved important scientific discoveries, as well. As mechanical engineer Carl Miggio noted, all involved “liked the difference between our satellite and Sputnik,” because “ours flew science, the Van Allen experiment.” Indeed, amongst the numerous discoveries made by Explorer I, one of the most important was the discovery of the Van Allen radiation belt, a discovery that would be considered as one of the most outstanding discoveries of the International Geophysical Year. This past weekend, I had the opportunity to visit the home of Jet Propulsion Laboratories. Seeing this extraordinary accomplishment in person, I couldn’t help but feel a swell of pride knowing that this satellite was the humble beginning of our Nation’s esteemed space program. An old proverb holds that even the greatest of journeys begins with a single step. The launch of Explorer I was that first step, and it helped pave the way for a half-century of space exploration. Today, JPL missions have rovers on Mars, evaluating soil samples on a microscopic level.

To conclude, I would like to quote the NASA Chief historian Steven J. Dick, who observed that “Like the railroad and the airplane, spaceflight has impacted society in ways even the visionaries could not have foreseen, and that we cannot fully fathom even today.” Indeed, through the space program, we continue to make discoveries whose benefits amaze generations to come.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res 287. recognizing the anniversary of the launch of Explorer I. The launch of Sputnik I by the Russians in October 1957 created an alarm in the U.S. Many Americans were fearful of what a Russian space program meant for our country. However, the United States quickly responded. In just 84 days scientists built the Explorer I satellite that would begin the next 50 years of exploration. Scientists from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory collaborated under the leadership of Dr. William Pickering to manufacture what would become Explorer I. On January 31, 1958, the United States launched its first satellite into space. Once in orbit, the satellite collected data on cosmic rays. The mission data was impressive, but the beginning of our space program was also important for the assurance it provided Americans. Explorer I signaled we would not fall behind Russia in space.

Today we continue to rely on scientists, engineers, and mathematicians to solve the pressing problems of our day. These innovators continuously rise to the challenges we as a Nation face. Explorer I stands as a milestone in space, and foreshadowed what we would achieve in just 50 years. Today, the United States remains a leader in space: landing humans on the moon; exploring our solar system; and gaining a better understanding of our land, oceans, and atmosphere. We must continue to reach for new goals in space. By doing so, we continue our leadership of this world and lead humanity to a brighter destiny. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. FEENEY. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, not having any other speakers, I yield back my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. MELANCON) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 287.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONGRATULATING THE X PRIZE FOUNDATION

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 907) congratulating the X PRIZE Foundation’s leadership in inspiring a new generation of viable, super-efficient vehicles, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 907

Whereas the United States is heavily dependent on foreign sources of oil that are concentrated in tumultuous countries and regions;

Whereas the national security and economic prosperity of the United States demand that we move toward a sustainable energy future;

Whereas the ability of foreign governments to assert great control over oil production allows unfriendly regimes to use energy exports as leverage against the United States and our allies;

Whereas continued reliance on the use of greenhouse gas-intensive fuels may impact global climate change;

Whereas the automotive sector is heavily dependent on oil, which makes Americans vulnerable to oil price fluctuation and is a major source of greenhouse gas emissions;

Whereas average fuel economy in the United States has increased slowly during the last 20 years;

Whereas many promising technologies exist that can lead to a breakthrough vehicle that will meet the need for sustainable transportation;

Whereas breakthroughs are often achieved by the free market fueling the entrepreneurial spirit of inventors and investors;

Whereas the Automotive X PRIZE is a private, independent, technology-neutral competition being developed by the X PRIZE Foundation to inspire a new generation of vehicles that will help break our addiction to oil and stem the effects of climate change;

Whereas the Automotive X PRIZE will award a multimillion dollar prize to teams that can design, build, and demonstrate production-capable vehicles that achieve 100 MPG or its equivalent; and

Whereas such prize competitions generate involvement and innovation across a broad spectrum of known and untapped talent such as the Ansari X PRIZE launched by Charles Lindbergh which leveraged $600,000 worth of additional research by teams trying to win the prize and spurred a $250,000,000,000 aviation industry, and the $30,000,000 Ansari X Prize which leveraged $100,000,000 worth of additional research; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives:

(1) congratulates the X PRIZE Foundation’s leadership for inspiring a new generation of viable, super-efficient vehicles that help break our addiction to oil through the Automotive X PRIZE competition;

(2) congratulates the X PRIZE Foundation on their innovation and vision to bring together some of the finest minds in the public and private sectors, including government, academia, and industry, to advise and participate in the Automotive X PRIZE competition; and

(3) applauds the X PRIZE Foundation’s ongoing commitment to find solutions to some of humanity’s greatest challenges as exemplified in the Automotive X PRIZE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, Mr. MELANCON and Mr. FEENEY each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on House Resolution 907, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on June 21, 2004, SpaceShipOne became the first privately funded craft to take a person into space. SpaceShipOne flew again on September 29, 2004, and on October 4, 2004, and upon successful completion of these flights, Mojave Aerospace Ventures, the developers of SpaceShipOne, captured the $10 million Ansari X Prize. Just as important as SpaceShipOne’s historic flights, the competition for the XPRIZE spurred the creation of a private spaceflight industry in this country.

It is with this past success in mind that I rise to speak in support of the new Automotive X PRIZE. This new prize will award a multimillion-dollar prize to teams that can design, build and demonstrate production-capable vehicles that achieve 100 miles per gallon or its equivalent. With the current price of oil hovering around $80 per barrel, it is more important than ever that our country develops technologies that increase the efficiencies of our... automobiles. To this end, I was pleased to support H.R. 6, which significantly raised CAFE standards, and would do much to increase the efficiency of American automobiles.

However, the government does not hold the key to innovation. Many of the great discoveries of our time were accomplished by private individuals and companies. From Thomas Edison's discovery of the light bulb to Henry Ford's perfection of the automobile, private innovators have changed the face of America. I hope that the Automotive X PRIZE will once again spur the creative and innovative spirit of American citizens to help in our fight for energy independence and security.

I would like to thank Mr. Lungren for introducing this resolution, and I urge my colleagues to support it. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of H. Res. 907, as amended, which recognizes and congratulates the forward-thinking X PRIZE Foundation on one of its latest contest endeavors, the Automotive X PRIZE.

There is a rich history in this country of prizes sponsored by private entities leading to innovations in science and technology. Starting with the Ansari X PRIZE, the privately funded X PRIZE Foundation has successfully been able to build on the concept of the 1927 Orteig Prize, which awarded $25,000 to the first person to be able to make a nonstop transatlantic flight. While the actual Orteig Prize name may not be well known, the recipient of this prize, Charles Lindbergh, certainly is. The benefits of the $400,000 of investment teams made in an effort to win this prize certainly have been realized, and the $250 billion aviation industry that took off shortly thereafter certainly continues to prosper. Likewise, the 2004 Ansari X PRIZE leveraged over $100 million in research by teams vying for a $10 million prize for private spaceflight. Won by Mojave Aerospace Ventures, the Ansari X PRIZE changed the public's perception of personal spaceflight.

Now the Automotive X PRIZE is poised to produce similar results for the next generation of automobiles, viable, super-efficient vehicles. As the resolution states, our "national security and economic prosperity demand that we move toward a sustainable future." This prize certainly helps us move in that direction. It will be awarded to the team that can design, build and sell super-efficient cars that achieve 100 miles per gallon and are not concept cars, but cars that people will want to buy. If successful, the end result in and of itself will be impressive, but the real benefits to the nation will be too numerous to measure. This prize, like those before it, will generate millions of privately funded research dollars producing research that may not in the end win the prize, but could spur additional technologies. Likewise, this prize will stimulate the entrepreneurial spirit of inventors and investors alike, both known entities and brilliant minds working in backyard garages.

I congratulate the X PRIZE Foundation's leadership in creating a private, independent competition designed to help move us closer to a sustainable energy future. I wish them much success, look forward to seeing the results it produces, and urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

With that, I would reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, at this time I have no recognized Members. I think Mr. Feeney does, so I will reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to yield 1 minute to Dr. Bartlett, my friend from Maryland.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Res. 907, that the rules be suspended and the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 907, as amended.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Melancon) that the rules be suspended and the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 283) calling for a peaceful resolution to the current electoral crisis in Kenya, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The text of the concurrent resolution is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 283

Whereas on December 27, 2007, the citizens of Kenya went peacefully to the polls to elect a new parliament and a new President and signaled their commitment to democracy by turning out in large numbers and, in some instances, waiting in long lines to vote; Whereas on December 29, 2007, the opposition presidential candidate, Raila Odinga, was reportedly over 300,000 votes ahead of the incumbent with 90 percent of the precincts reporting; Whereas on December 30, 2007, the head of the Electoral Commission of Kenya (‘ECK’) declared that Mwai Kibaki won the presidential election by 197,000 votes; Whereas Mr. Kibaki was sworn in as President within an hour of the announcement of the election results, despite serious concerns raised about the legitimacy of the election results by domestic and international observers; Whereas the lack of transparency in vote tallying, serious irregularities reported by election observers, the implausibility of the margin of victory, and the swearing in of the Party of National Unity presidential candidate with undue haste, all serve to undermine the credibility of the presidential election results; Whereas the Government of Kenya imposed a ban on live media that day, and shortly after the election results were announced, in contravention of Kenyan law, the Government also announced a blanket ban on public assembly and gave police the authority to use lethal force.

Whereas on January 1, 2008, 4 commissioners on the ECK issued a statement which called into question the election results announced by the Commission and called for a judicial review:

Whereas the head of the European Union Election Observation Mission stated that “Lack of transparency as well as a number of verified irregularities... cast doubt on the accuracy of the results of the presidential election as announced by the ECK” and called for an international audit of the results:

Whereas observers from the East African Community have called for an investigation into irregularities during the tallying process and for those responsible for such irregularities to be held accountable:

Whereas in 1991 President Daniel Arap Moi agreed to move from one party rule to multiparty politics, and in 1992, Kenyans voted in record numbers in the country’s first multiparty election in almost 20 years:

Whereas in 1997 Kenya held its second general elections to despite extremely high levels of tension between the opposition and the ruling party:

Whereas in 2002 the opposition succeeded in forming a new coalition despite the ongoing violence and described it as needed and that for the first time in history ousted the ruling party from power, demonstrating to Kenyans and Africans that incumbency and the entrenched clout of a ruling party can be defeated through the ballot box:

Whereas the violence and unrest in Kenya threaten to roll back the democratic gains made over the past 10 years:

Whereas more than 900 people have died and an estimated 250,000 people, 80,000 of whom are children, have been displaced as a result of the violence:

Whereas Kenya has been a valuable United States ally since independence, providing the United States with access to its military facilities and political support in the United Nations, and has been an important ally in the war against terrorism, especially since the United States embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania in 1998:

Whereas the political instability in Kenya is connected to a larger struggle for democracy and is not merely the result of tribal violence:

Whereas continued violence and unrest could have serious political, economic, and security implications for the entire region:

And whereas the Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs has stated that “serious flaws in the vote tallying process damaged the credibility of the process” and that the United States should not “conduct business as usual” in Kenya: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) commends the Kenyan people for their commitment and resolve for the democratic process as evidenced by the high voter turnout and peaceful voting on election day;

(2) strongly condemns the ongoing violence in Kenya and urges all parties concerned to immediately end use of violence as a means to achieve their political objectives;

(3) calls for a peaceful, negotiated settlement of the conflict in Kenya;

(4) calls on the 2 leading presidential candidates to continue to accept external and internal mediators and to find a solution to the current crisis which has the support of the people of Kenya;

(5) calls on Kenyan security forces to refrain from use of excessive force and respect the human rights of Kenyan citizens;

(6) calls for those who are found guilty of committing human rights violations to be held accountable for their actions;

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE).

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the concurrent resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the concurrent resolution and yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, “Kenya is at a crossroads.” Those are the words spoken this morning by the chairman of the Human Rights Commission of Kenya in a hearing that I chaired on the current crisis today.

Kenya had been considered a linchpin on economic and political stability in the East Africa region for decades. We were always proud of the accomplishments and the achievements of them, and we often pointed to Kenya as a beacon of how other African countries and countries throughout the developing world should move towards democracy. However, we have seen very sad occurrences during the past month or two. H. Con. Res. 283 seeks to address the unfortunate and still unfolding political crisis in Kenya.

As leaders from different African countries meet in Nairobi today, I commend them for their efforts to assess the situation and to encourage political, religious, community, and civil society leaders to find a peaceful resolution to the current situation. I visited the thousands of displaced children in Jamhuri Showground and met with volunteers from diverse backgrounds. It was remarkable and encouraging to see Kenyans coming together to help their fellow citizens, donating food and material to those in need.

Indeed, witnessing the violence and meeting the young victims was deeply troubling. Yet, I am confident that Kenyans will come out of this crisis united. Kenyans must put Kenya first. Kenyans are through the current crisis, and that the United States embassy in Kenya will remain open, because when the central government is affected, those other people, refugees and other groups in need, are also affected, as will be the lives of so many others in the countries surrounding Kenya. Many depend on Kenya for economic and industrial progress for their countries to survive.

On December 27, 2007, the citizens of Kenya went peacefully to the polls to elect a new parliament and a new president, despite the logistical challenges and long lines. More than 14 million Kenyans registered to vote. That is 82 percent of the eligible voters. An estimated 2,547 parliamentary candidates were qualified to run in the 210 constituencies, a clear indication of the desire and the determination of Kenyans to participate and to be a part of the political process in their country.

Incoming President Mwai Kibaki was hastily declared the winner by the Electoral Commission of Kenya, after a series of highly irregular events which cast significant doubt on his so-called victory. Let me be blunt: The election results announced by the ECK do not reflect the wishes of the Kenyan people. The people of Kenya voted for change. What they were given was more of the status quo.

In reaction to what occurred, Kenyans went to the streets to express their frustration and anger. The protests soon turned violent, and it is still unfolding as we speak. More than 1,000 people have been killed and over 300,000 displaced as a result of unrest, including an estimated 80,000 children under the age of 5, and these young lives are unfolding as we speak. More than 1,000 people have been killed and over 300,000 displaced as a result of unrest, including an estimated 80,000 children under the age of 5, and these young lives are unfolding as we speak.
January, reducing a five-member lead to three.

The instability in Kenya continues to threaten and affect the economies of neighboring countries, imposing serious threats to regional stability, a fragile region in the first place. This is going to make it even more fragile. The Kenyan economy has been hit hard and recovery may take a long time.

H. Con. Res. 283 does several critical things. One, it strongly condemns the ongoing violence in Kenya and rescues all parties concerned to immediately end the use of violence as a means to achieve their political objectives. It also calls for all parties to participate in good faith and dialogue mediated by former United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan, and asks President Bush to consider imposing asset freezes and travel bans on leaders in the Party of National Unity, the Orange Democratic Movement, and other relevant actors who refuse to engage in this dialogue to end the current crisis.

Additionally, the resolution calls for the international community to respond to the grave humanitarian needs of the people of Kenya and all neighboring countries to provide assistance to those affected by the violence.

At the same time, it calls for a review of our assistance to Kenya and rescinds any nonhumanitarian assistance.

Before concluding, though, I would like to point out that U.S. diplomatic efforts in the wake of the election have not been stellar. Indeed, the response to the Kenyan election crisis proves beyond a doubt that some of the administration officials are too quick to embrace a government that engages in electoral abuses and overlook rather than condemn its electoral and human rights abuses.

We must make this happen in the 2006 elections in Ethiopia. We must proceed carefully and thoughtfully and work with our partners in the EU and AU to help resolve this crisis. I also want to emphasize a very critical point. Despite statements by some to the contrary, what is happening in Kenya is not an ethnic conflict. It is a political conflict with ethnic overtones.

We must look closely at the historical and political context to really understand and to avoid making additional mistakes on how we characterize what is happening today in Kenya. However, if political leaders in Kenya do not make a serious effort to stop the violence now and address the systemic problems that exist in their political structures, the violence we are seeing could certainly reach a point of no return.

Once that happens, it will be very difficult to stop. It is critical that a transitional coalition government is established and mandated to implement necessary reforms such as a new constitution, a new electoral law, a new electoral commission, and address the root causes of the crisis and prepare the country for transparent Presidential elections within 2 years. The people of Kenya deserve no less.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Con. Res. 283, addressing the current crisis in Kenya. I, like much of the world, was shocked by the violence that followed the December 27 elections in Kenya, a country that has proven to be a great friend and ally of the United States over the years.

My heart and my condolences, as well as that of every Member of this Chamber, go out to the victims of this violence and their families, some 1,000 people who have been killed since that fateful election day.

There have been shocking events that few of us expected to see in Kenya, protesters shot by police, gangs with machetes butchering innocents, a crowd of people, including women and children, burned alive in a church. Two opposition parliamentarians, as Mr. PAYNE just pointed out, have been gunned down since the violence began. Now some 300,000 people have fled their homes, have fled their neighbors, and remain displaced. They are virtual refugees within their own country. Aid workers tell us that about 80,000 of these internally displaced people are children under the age of 5.

The priority for everyone has to be to stop the violence and to end the killing. In addition, we must examine the context in which the violence erupted in the first place.

The broad strokes of what happened during and after the December 27 elections are now well known. Millions of Kenyans voted that day in the country's fourth multiparty elections and it is a long story how people that some 14.2 million people, 62 percent of all eligible voters, were registered to vote. I won't recite the polling numbers or give an autopsy of the election, but suffice it to say that at some point the system went terribly wrong.

The European Union said the elections were "marred by a lack of transparency which raised concerns about the accuracy and final results of this election," according to observers from the East African community also raised serious concerns about the elections, and eventually the United States, too, asserted that "serious flaws in the vote tallying damaged the credibility of the process."

I want to commend my friend and colleague, Chairman PAYNE, for his leadership on this issue. I joined him to cosponsor this resolution, which calls for an end to the violence and an end to restrictions on the media. It condemns threats against politicians and others who are working for a peaceful solution to this crisis. It calls on President Kibaki and the challenger, Mr. Odinga, to work together for a mediated solution to this crisis.

The U.S. must do all that it can to encourage them to move in this direction. The resolution emphasizes our hope that this dialogue will lead to an establishment of an interim or coalition government that implements constitutional reform and establish a mechanism to investigate this crisis.

Mr. Speaker, I urge strong support and backing for H. Con. Res. 283. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE).

Mr. ROYCE. I would like to begin by commending the gentleman from New Jersey, Chairman PAYNE, of the Africa Subcommittee. I want to thank him for introducing this resolution that addresses the troublesome violence that is occurring today in Kenya, and I would like to recognize the good work of the subcommittee's ranking member, Mr. SMITH, as well.

Mr. Speaker, the situation in Kenya has been described as a fateful election erupted at the end of December, we know that now over 1,000 Kenyans have been killed. We know that a quarter million souls have been forced to flee from their homes. Many of those homes have been burned. Many individuals have been, can a result. As this resolution notes, international observers found the election to be seriously flawed, implicating the government. Today, as Kenya's politicians fight for power, its people suffer and some of those people are suffering terribly.

This resolution calls on President Mwai Kibaki and opposition candidate Raila Odinga to accept external assistance to find their way out of this. This has been occurring of late with the former UN Secretary-General bringing about some progress. But without this, the factions seem incapable of moving ahead on their own.

The resolution also calls for holding accountable those responsible for violence. Widespread violence can almost always be traced back to ringleaders. That was the case in Rwanda, where a small band sparked a genocide. Kenyans don't want their country ripped apart, but a small number of ringleaders, I suspect, is leading it in that way. We should do our best to let would-be killers, including government officials, know that the world is watching and they will face the consequences if they incite violence.

The State Department's top official charged with Africa recently called the violence "ethnic cleansing." We cannot be complacent. The potential for violence spiraling upward should never be discounted. This is the reason, of course, that our Peace Corps is leaving Kenya now.

Looking back a few months, the U.S. and the international community was complacent and somewhat naive about the Kenyan elections. News reports and analysts expressed surprise over the election violence. I chaired the Africa Subcommittee for 8 years working with Chairman PAYNE. There is a tendency, an understandable one, to see African "successes," and Kenya has been described as one. While many African countries have made progress, many African countries face fundamental and very difficult challenges that leave them very vulnerable. A better realization of that, a more realistic view, I think, would lead to a better Africa policy.

Kenya is a very important country. Its economy is key to East Africa. This violence has been economically devastating to many Kenyans. We have terrorism concerns in the region. So we have humanitarian and other reasons, other reasons besides just the question of the inhumanity here to help Kenyans move forward. It is Kenyans themselves who must look within to help help themselves. But the U.S. and others should help, and this resolution calls for that help. I urge support for it, and I commend Chairman PAYNE for authoring it.

Mr. PAYNE. Let me thank the subcommittee chairman from New Jersey and commend him for the outstanding work that he did as chairman of this subcommittee and his continued interest in the subcommittee's activities.

I would like to say that I appreciate the support of New Jersey, Mr. ROYCE, that our Subcommittee on Africa, regardless of which political party tends to chair it, has worked in a bipartisan manner for the 20 years that I have been a member of the committee, sometimes in the majority, sometimes in the minority.

But what has been very encouraging is that in 95, 96 percent of the time, I would say we are on the same page. We see things the same way. We might have a tweak a word or two here, but by and large, we have been able to move forward on so many important issues because of the bipartisan spirit.

Once again, Mr. ROYCE, I appreciate your continued support, and, of course, Ranking Member SMITH, who is not only doing a tremendous job here but with the Helsinki crisis but the U.S. for the fact that he is very interested in the situation in China, I appreciate your continued human rights efforts. It's a pleasure to work with you.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAYNE. I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island.

Mr. KENNEDY. I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey for his work in this area and just say, having just addressed an event in another part of the world that has been turned upside down by election disturbances in Pakistan, with the assassination of Benazir Bhutto, it's clear to me that the United States' interest in monitoring elections is paramount because of the national security implications in all of these parts of the world, that we have election monitors stationed in all of these places of the world where there are elections.

I know that the NDI and the NRI, the National Democratic Institute, National Republican Institute and these organizations that we promote as a country, we need to, as a Congress, get out of this crisis. But the U.S. has worked in a bipartisan manner for the outstanding work that he did as chairman of this subcommittee and his continued interest in the subcommittee's activities. With that, Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PAYNE. Let me thank you very much. Let me also commend you for the work that you continue to do in in the region. I appreciate your continued human rights efforts. We work very well together on that committee.

Mr. Speaker, this was very important, and it is very important that we get a very strong vote by the House on behalf of the Payne resolution. We need to send a clear message to Kenya that we are watching, that we care deeply about what is unfolding there, and that we stand in solidarity there with those who have lost loved ones, with the IDPs and others.

We want a robust democracy in Kenya because they want a robust democracy in Kenya. The people deserve it. We thought they had it to some extent.

I think the chairman's mention of Ethiopia was a very important one. We thought Ethiopia was moving in the right direction. An election was held. It was seriously marred with irregularities, and then a period of killings followed thereafter. That's still a very unsettled part of the world as well. Again, I want to thank the chairman for his important resolution.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H. Con. Res. 283, calling for a peaceful resolution to the current electoral crisis in Kenya, introduced by my distinguished colleague from New Jersey, Chairman PAYNE. This important legislation commends the Kenyan people for their significant efforts to bring the conflict to a peaceful conclusion. It calls for the peaceful resolution of their current electoral crisis.

As a senior Member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs as well as the Subcommittee on Africa and Global Health, I am deeply concerned with the current crisis in Kenya. It saddens me to see the once relatively stable country of Kenya explode into chaotic violence, which has left more than 900 people dead and forced 300,000 people from their homes. Democracy must move forward in Kenya, and the cry for clear, transparent and peaceful elections must not go unheard by the international community. As Kenya's political crisis also becomes a humanitarian emergency, with over 300,000 people displaced from their homes and the distribution of food and water complicated by a looming health crisis, it is vital for the people of Kenya that we work rapidly to bring this conflict to a peaceful conclusion.

This important legislation denounces Kenya's security forces from using unwarranted and excessive force and urges them to respect the human rights of Kenyan citizens. This legislation further condemns the callous terrorism to civil society groups, journalists, religious leaders, and civil rights leaders.

Kenya has long been an important friend and ally to the United States, at times our relationship has been strained due to concerns about corruption and human rights conditions in the sub-Saharan nation. However, this intricate relationship has been recently renewed and reinvigorated with the advent of the 1992 multiparty elections in Kenya. The people of Kenya have shown a desire and commitment for democracy that is unprecedented and sets a new standard for the region. Their unparalleled commitment to democracy and respect for the democratic process is indicated in the high voter turnout on election day.

On December 27, 2007, the desire of the Kenyan nation for a meaningful change in politics and the revival of democracy was manifested in the millions of Kenyans who took to the polls. The months preceding the December elections showed opposition candidate Raila Odinga leading in the polls over incumbent President Mwai Kibaki. Amidst domestic and international cries of polling irregularities, the Electoral Commission of Kenya declared President Kibaki as the winner. It is not the election itself but rather the aftermath of the elections and a way forward that concerns us here today. The Kenyan Constitution authorizes the establishment of the Electoral Commission of Kenya, ECK. While the ECK is comprised of 22 commissioners, 19 of the commissioners were appointed by President Kibaki last year, which is authorized by the Kenyan Constitution. What is not authorized was the appointment of the new commissioners without proper consultation with the opposition parties, which violated the Inter-Parliamentary Parties Group Agreement of 1997. While the ECK quickly declared President Kibaki the winner, the chairman of the commission later admitted that he was... under intense political pressure from powerful political leaders and the ruling party.” Furthermore, press reports quote the Kenya Electoral Commission Chairman Samuel M. Kivuitu as stating that “the day he went to deliver the certificate declaring Kibaki the winner, he saw the chief justice sitting at the State House reportedly waiting to swear in Kibaki.” The swearing-in ceremony itself was so rushed that it is said organizers forgot to include the national anthem in the program. Mr. Speaker, to call these events “irregularities” as the ECK commissioners and ECK staff have concurred, is a vast understatement. In order for Kenya to continue moving forward on its current democratic trajectory, elections must be transparent, free, and fair, none of which were seen in the December 27 election. This legislation calls upon the two leading presidential candidates to accept offers of external and internal assistance to help find a solution to the current crisis that has the support of the people of Kenya.

What is equally disturbing was the United States’ reaction to this electoral crisis. Witness the EU for its myriad of inconsistencies, on December 30, the United States government reportedly congratulated President Kibaki for his victory. In a recently released report, the EU concluded, “the 2007 general elections have fallen short of key international and regional standards for democratic elections. Most significantly, they were marred by a lack of transparency in the processing and tallying of presidential results, which raises concerns about the accuracy of the final results of this election.” Following both regional and international uproar, the United States seemingly changed its position in January as Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Jendayi Frazier, declared that “serious flaws in the vote tallying process damaged the credibility of the process.” Such inconsistency on the part of diplomatic corps of the United States sends a poor message to our friends and allies struggling for democracy across the sea. As outrage over the electoral results permeated throughout the country, so too did spontaneous demonstrations of anger and ultimately violence. Recent statistics reported by the UN and Kenyan sources state that since late December more than 900 people have been killed and an estimated 300,000 displaced, including some 80,000 children under the age of five. International observers have proclaimed that while some protestors died due to mob violence, many others were reportedly shot and killed by police. While the Kenya military did not engage in riot control for most of January, press reports and Kenyan sources state that Kenyan police and security were given superior to use lethal force to disperse mobs. In the wake of the disputed election results, the Kenyan government banned demonstrations and initiated media restrictions, which seem to have further stoked the fire.

Mr. Speaker, with the intolerable number of Kenyans dead and displaced, it is imperative that the United States play a meaningful role in resolving the current crisis. With, two failed international missions, it is time that we rethink our strategy in addressing the current crisis.

The ongoing violence as a means to achieve political objectives in Kenya must come to a halt. We need the superior support of the United Nations to assist those affected by violence, and use all the diplomatic means to persuade relevant political actors to commit to a peaceful resolution to the crisis. This legislation emphasizes precisely these issues.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this extremely important legislation that arbitrates for the Kenyan people.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to first thank my friend Mr. ROYCE of California for introducing this resolution which congratulates President-elect Lee Myung-Bak on his victory in the South Korean presidential elections.

In electing Lee Myung-Bak, the South Korean people have selected a man of exceptional accomplishment and proven leadership. During his 27 years at the helm of Hyundai Group, Mr. Lee transformed the company from a corporation into South Korea’s largest industrial conglomerate with a dominant worldwide presence.

Mr. Lee and Hyundai’s success helped drive the Republic of Korea’s dramatic success as an East Asian economic “tiger” in the seventies, eighties and nineties. The parallel is particularly appropriate since in English the Korean word “hyundai” means “modern.” As Mr. Lee led the company to new heights, he played a direct role in the spectacularly rapid modernization of the Republic of Korea.

Mr. Lee’s extraordinary professional career is right at home among the American Dream stories of our Nation. The son of a cattle rancher who fell onto hard times, Mr. Lee was born into poverty and worked his way through... college as a garbage collector. Relying on his talents and work ethic, he eventually rose to the pinnacle of the business world.

Committing himself to politics, he became the mayor of Seoul and applied his leadership skills and his no-nonsense, hardworking style to improve the city. Now as South Korea’s president, he is uniquely able to lead and further strengthen his country, one of the United States’ closest and most significant allies.

Mr. Lee Myung-Bak is a potent reminder that the friendship between the United States and the Republic of Korea is based not only on our shared interest but also our shared values. For over 50 years, our two countries fought together against common threats such as communism, but the foundation of our alliance is a common commitment to democracy, individual liberties, and human rights.

The end of the Cold War did not end the critical role of our alliance in promoting and protecting political and economic freedoms in Asia and around the world. Today, we work side by side to combat international terrorism, denuclearize the Korean Peninsula, and promote peace and stability in northeast Asia. This work relies on our strong military alliance, bolstered by 28,000 military personnel stationed in the Republic of Korea.

We also share a dynamic economic relationship. With two-way trade approaching $80 billion, South Korea is the United States’ seventh largest trading partner, and the United States is the fourth largest trading partner of the Republic of Korea. Our shared commitment to free, fair, and open political systems is reinforced by our commitment to free, fair, and open markets.

Further strengthening our bilateral relationships and our bonds of friendship are the millions of South Korean visitors that come to the United States and the millions of visitors from the United States that travel to South Korea every year. Many South Koreans who come to the United States do so to visit their Korean American family members, who make up a vitally important part of the United States’ social and economic fabric.

Based on these shared interests and values, the United States and the Republic of Korea alliance has helped move both countries forward. I know many of us in Congress greatly look forward to the opportunity to work together to further our already-strong partnership.

Mr. Lee Myung-Bak is a strong proponent of the U.S.-Republic of Korea Interparliamentary Exchange. This resolution congratulates Lee Myung-Bak on his election as president of the Republic of Korea and wishes him well during his time of transition.

In this country, Korean Americans watched the Korean presidential campaign with great interest, and their community has played a very important role in bringing greater attention to issues of mutual importance, and I would like to recognize their efforts.

The U.S.-Republic of Korea relationship is strong and is poised to grow even stronger.

The U.S.-Republic of Korea partnership with Korea dates back to 1950, with the signing of the Treaty of Peace, Amity, Commerce, and Navigation between the Kingdom of Chosun and the United States. This treaty contemplates everlasting amity and friendship between our two peoples, and for over 125 years, we have been able to honor this.

One of the truest tests of our partnership with South Korea came in June of 1950 when Communist North Korea invaded the South. American and South Korean forces fought valiantly side by side and they pushed back the Communist onslaught.

In the 60 years since, the U.S.-South Korean relationship has blossomed in every respect: economic, political, militarily. Nearly 30,000 U.S. troops stand along with the South Korean Army to preserve stability in northeast Asia. South Korea has grown into the seventh largest trading partner with the United States.

And on February 25 of this year, Lee Myung-Bak will assume the presidency of the Republic of Korea. He does so at a critical time during our partnership. The Republic of Korea and the U.S. once again face a great challenge in dealing with a nuclear-armed North Korea, a regime that denies its citizens the most basic of human rights. The Six Party Talks have stalled, and Kim Jong-II’s regime has continually failed to come clean on the extent of its nuclear programs. Yesterday, Admiral Michael McConnell, Director of National Intelligence, testified that “while Pyongyang denies a program for uranium enrichment, and they deny their proliferation activities, we believe North Korea continues to engage in both.”

I am hopeful that President-elect Lee Myung-Bak will offer a new, effective approach to these challenges. To date, Lee Myung-Bak has argued that the previous administrations gave too much unconditional aid to buy reconciliation with the North. In a recent press conference, President-elect Lee said he would like to discuss human rights and the whereabouts of abducted South Koreans with Pyongyang. Such “controversial” issues, amazingly, were taboo to previous governments which sat out a U.N. condemnation of North Korea’s human rights abuses just last fall.

Importantly, President-elect Lee is a strong proponent of the U.S.-Republic of Korea trade agreement. As the South Korean Army continues to strengthen, the economic relationship between our two countries will increasingly define this overall relationship. That is why I heard so much about the trade agreement on my trip to Korea last summer in my role as the vice chairman of the U.S.-Republic of Korea Interparliamentary Exchange.

At a time when many are worried about the future of our economy, it is essential that we expand into foreign markets. The Korea-U.S. PTA will do just that, opening up Korean markets to U.S. products. If KORUS isn’t passed, we won’t just lose the Korean economy that will suffer, but our relationship with the Republic of Korea.

In closing, I would like to congratulate President-elect Lee on his victory. In the past 60 years, the Republic of Korea alliance has helped move both countries forward. I know many of us in Congress greatly look forward to the opportunity to work together to further our already-strong partnership.

Mr. PAYNE. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROYCE. Madam Speaker, I would like to yield to the ranking member, Mr. SMITH, for as much time as he may consume.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Madam Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman on his authorship of this fine resolution. I rise today to express my support for the resolution honoring the upcoming inauguration of Mr. Lee Myung-Bak as 17th President of the Republic of Korea.

South Korea’s rise from the ashes of war and subsequent evolution as a vibrant and prosperous democracy is truly one of the miracles of the second half of the 20th century.

I believe that our Korean war veterans, who sacrificed so much and fought so valiantly, and all of the American people, can take great pride in the assistance that we provided for that remarkable evolution.

Today, the bright light in the night sky on the southern half of the Korean peninsula stands in marked contrast to the shadow of darkness that enfolds North Korea. North Korea is a tragic failed state and is one of the great losers of the Cold War; yet its starving and suffering population gives us a reason to breathe and share in the prosperity of South Korea.

The peaceful, democratic reunification of North Koreans with their southern brothers is a noble endeavor to which we should give our full and unflinching support.

Mr. Lee’s inauguration comes at a time when we have reached a crossroads on the Korean peninsula.
North Korea must decide whether to completely and unconditionally renounce its nuclear weapons program and finally join the family of nations. Its alternative is to slide slowly into the abyss as a dynamic South Korea leaves it far behind. I would urge that our two countries continue to forge strong relations that were forged in the crucible of the Korean War.

The fact that President Lee has given a firm indication that he wishes to work together with the United States and our allies as a team to resolve the North Korean nuclear crisis is welcome news indeed. Mr. Lee has also said that it is his priority to strengthen an alliance which was forged in the crucible of the Korean War.

From the dark days of the Pusan perimeter to the brilliant Inchon landing, American, Allied, and South Korean troops all fought together in the drive to victory with the liberation of Seoul. This is in part the shared history of our two countries which has linked us in a common destiny.

I would especially like to commend President Lee for raising the long-forgotten issue of the old soldiers of South Korea, left behind as POWs in the North and held against their will for over 50 years since the signing of the armistice. I would also like to note with extreme sadness that more than 8,000 U.S. servicemen remain missing in action from that conflict.

Finally, the alliance and friendship between the Republic of Korea and the United States have been promoted and deepened by the many contributions of our Korean American community. While ever mindful of the old country from which they came, Korean Americans have stepped forward in innumerable ways, in science, medicine, religion, business, education, music, athletics, and culture, to make invaluable contributions to the United States.

In saluting President-elect Lee and the strength of our alliance, we also honor those Korean Americans who want to show their appreciation for the Ethiopians who fought. I don't know of many countries that have done anything like that.

So, Mr. ROYCE, I certainly support your resolution.

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Madam Speaker, I am pleased that the House is considering H. Res. 947 today, congratulating Lee Myung-Bak on his election to the Presidency of the Republic of Korea. I was proud to co-sponsor this resolution and I join with my fellow Members in wishing him well during his time of transition this month.

When Lee Myung-Bak is inaugurated on February 25, I am confident that he will do much to broaden the longstanding relationship between the Republic of Korea and the United States of America. In the past month, he has already met with President Bush and Vice President Cheney, as well as several members of the President's Cabinet and Members of Congress.

President-elect Myung-Bak is well-qualified to assume his new role. He earned a B.A. in Business Administration at the Korea University and later served as a Visiting Scholar at George Washington University here in Washington, DC before being awarded two Honorary Doctor of Laws degrees.

Additionally, President-elect Myung-Bak's past professional experience has honed his vital business, diplomatic, and political skills. For 15 years, he was the CEO of 10 Hyundai Group affiliated companies. He then served as a National Assemblyman from 1992 to 1998 before being elected Mayor of Seoul in 2002. I applaud President-elect Myung-Bak for expressing his commitment to free market policies that encourage both foreign and domestic investors. I look forward to the ratification of the United States-Korea Free Trade Agreement and I welcome his proposed plans to reduce trade restrictions and lower tax rates. Furthermore, as the Republic of South Korea assists in negotiating Pyongyang's denuclearization, I urge the President-elect to closely integrate U.S. and Japanese initiatives related to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Today, I join my colleagues in congratulating President-elect Myung-Bak, and I wish him, his wife and four children success in the years ahead.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Resolution 947, sponsored by my friend and colleague from California, Mr. ROYCE, which offers the House of Representatives' congratulations to Lee Myung-Bak on his election to the presidency of the Republic of Korea.

Additionally, this resolution recognizes the very special and longstanding relationship between South Korea and the United States; a relationship whose modern day form was first forged by the joint effort of both U.S. and South Korean soldiers fighting together in the Korean War; a conflict from which the United States and Korea have a mutual defense treaty that dates back to 1953, and Korea has supported U.S. military efforts abroad, as recently as in both Iraq and Afghanistan. Korea has been one of only four partners and allies that stood with us throughout the conflicts since World War II. In addition, South Korea demonstrated its great friendship and generosity in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, pledging over $30 million in aid for relief and recovery efforts—the fourth largest amount donated by any foreign country.

On June 30, 2007, representatives of both governments signed the historic United States-Korea Free Trade Agreement. If and when this agreement is approved by Congress I believe it will open up more flowing through our agriculture, industrial, consumer products, automobile and financial services sectors. I believe this agreement will enhance the strong partnership between two great democratic nations and will open the door of the exchange of ideas that will cause us both to continue to prosper.

This agreement is a natural extension of the strong affinity between our two countries, marked by extraordinary diplomatic, political, military, and economic cooperation. Although the devil is always in the details, I understand that this agreement could potentially be the most commercially-significant free trade agreement signed by the United States in more than a decade.

As many of my colleagues already know, South Korea is already the United States' seventh largest export market and sixth largest market for U.S. agricultural products. In fact, according to the latest statistics, our annual bilateral trade totals nearly $80 billion. Any agreement that can open up market access to Korean markets to U.S. goods and services can only have a positive effect on the American economy by creating more and better jobs, enriching consumer choice, and boosting U.S. industry and manufacturing.

Koreans have invested nearly $20 billion in the United States, and have created American jobs through companies like Hyundai Motors, Samsung Electronics, and Kia Motors. And as the largest investor in Korea, the United States already has a leading presence in that country.

As I have said before and will continue to say, I think it is important to note that trade relationships do more than just facilitate economic growth; this FTA recognizes our special relationship with South Korea that I mentioned before and makes the strong statement that we will continue to stand with our allies.

South Korea is the fifth largest tourism-generating country to the United States with over 800,000 Koreans visiting the U.S. every single year. The number is expected to double (at the minimum) when South Korea joins the Visa Waiver Program. According to the Department of Homeland Security, South Korea also has the largest foreign student population in the U.S. Nearly 2 million Americans of Korean descent live in communities all across our Nation, representing all walks of life and making innumerable contributions to the enrichment of our Nation's culture and economy.
South Korea is a strong, unwavering ally in the U.S.-led Global War on Terror, having dispatched the third largest contingent of troops to Iraq, and to Afghanistan (where a South Korean soldier was killed during hostile action), and to Lebanon in support of peacekeeping operations; and South Korea is a key partner in the Six-Party Talks to resolve North Korea’s nuclear issue.

I firmly believe that South Korea may be the premier success story of U.S. foreign policy in the post-World War II period. Having assisted South Korea in transforming itself from a war-torn, humiliated nation into a successful democracy with a free enterprise economy (the world’s 11th largest), South Korea is now an indispensable partner with the United States in promoting democracy, a free market economy and respect for the rule of law around the world.

I believe that President-Elect Myung-Bak understands and appreciates the important history behind our bilateral relations. He desires to better relations with the United States through an emphasis on free market solutions encouraging the work we have begun and will continue to grow under his leadership. I look forward to a continuation of the United States-South Korean partnership during the President-Elect’s term and for many years beyond.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support H. Res. 947 and join me in congratulating President Lee Myung-Bak, and extending to him the very best wishes of the House of Representatives as he assumes office later this month.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Madam Speaker, let me first commend our distinguished colleague and member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Asia, the Pacific and the Global Environment, my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE) for being the author of and introducing this important resolution.

The underlying context for this important resolution, which congratulates President-elect Lee Myung-Bak and wishes him well as he assumes his new duties on February 25, 2008, is that despite the historic challenges that South Korea has faced, the industrious will of its people and the unyielding leadership of its elected officials, transformed itself into a successful democratic nation.

As the twentieth century taught us all too well, democratic governance is a fragile enterprise. That the Republic of Korea, in merely six decades, emerged from the ashes of colonial rule and war torn poverty to become the eleventh largest economy in the world and America’s seventh largest trading partner, is a tribute to their strong democratic principles and indule desire to live peacefully and prosperously despite the enormous challenges facing the Korean Peninsula and the Northeast Asia region.

Madam Speaker, the strong alliance between the United States and the Republic of Korea has proven itself to be a relevant and resilient relationship since our involvement when we fought side by side in the Korean War nearly 58 years ago. Out of that often “forgotten” conflict was born one of the most significant dividing lines of the Cold War, the demilitarized zone on the 38th parallel but, at the same time, one of the most successful alliances in our Nation’s history.

The Republic of Korea has remained a steadfast ally of the United States. South Korea has contributed the third largest coalition troop contingent in Iraq, pledged $460 million toward postwar reconstruction and had previously also committed troops for peacekeeping operations in Afghanistan, and Lebanon. As a key member of the Six-Party Talks to denuclearize North Korea, the Republic of Korea has played a leading role in the international community for broader security in Northeast Asia. Today, we are committed absolutely to compelling the North Korean regime to eliminate its nuclear program and to ensuring that promises made by Pyongyang are, in fact, followed through with verifiable action.

The combination of South Korea’s efforts to stand alongside the United States in meeting the global threats of the 21st century as well as the North Korean challenge makes this resolution particularly important today. President-elect Lee Myung-Bak has stated that he “will do [his] best to resolve the North Korean nuclear problem through cooperation and a strengthened relationship with the United States.” I am very encouraged by President-elect Lee’s remarks and, as Chairman of the Subcommittee on the Global Environment, I look forward to working with his administration to this end.

What is clear from our longstanding relationship over the past half-century is that it is reciprocal. As President-elect Lee’s Special Envoy to the U.S. Lee Young-choon, said recently after meeting Deputy Secretary of State John Negroponte last month, “We both need each other.” Let me also take this opportunity to once again congratulate my good friend, Dr. Han Seung-soo, on his nomination to become Prime Minister. I am confident that Dr. Han’s nomination will serve to further consolidate our alliance partnership under President-elect Lee’s leadership.

Madam Speaker, many years ago, I served in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War, and I remember vividly the presence of more than 300,000 soldiers from South Korea who bravely served and fought alongside our American forces. Through that particular experience, I learned quickly and firsthand, the special friendship and bond that existed between the United States and the Republic of Korea.

I personally will never forget the sacrifices that South Korean soldiers made in that terrible conflict in Vietnam. In fact, South Korea has the unique distinction of being one of only four allies that fought alongside the United States in all four major conflicts since World War II and I hope that my other colleagues will join me in thanking the leaders and people of the Republic of Korea for the untold sacrifices they made to be with us when we needed help.

This resolution, while focusing on the peaceful, democratic transition to the presidency of Lee Myung-Bak, honors our special alliance but also welcomes a strengthening and deepening of the relationship between our two countries and our two peoples.

I have had the privilege on several occasions to visit the Republic of Korea and have observed that the South Korean people are among the most industrious men and women in the world. However this trait for hard work and entrepreneurship developed, it has carried over despite geographic distance to the more than two million Americans of Korean heritage and descent that live throughout our own country today. The vibrant Korean American communities across the United States include some of the most prominent individuals that have contributed to every facet of American life in every state and territory.

Madam Speaker, this resolution is very important to show our sense of appreciation to all South Koreans, to express how much we care about them and how important they are to all Americans and to American interests in that important region of the world. Its effect is not just to deliver good wishes to President-elect Lee as he assumes office on February 25, but to send a message of solidarity to the government and people of the Republic of Korea and to all the Americans who live on their side with the men and women of our own armed forces over the past nearly 60 years.

For all these reasons, this resolution is most fitting, and proper. I wish to congratulate President-elect Lee Myung-Bak and commend again my good friend, the gentleman from California, for offering and proposing this resolution. I strongly encourage my colleagues to offer their own expressions of support and urge the House to adopt this resolution today.

Mr. PAYNE, Madam Speaker, I have no more requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time as well.

Mr. ROYCE, Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time as well.

Mr. PAYNE, Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pallone) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Murphy) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise to urge support for this bill which was developed jointly by the Energy and Commerce Committee, the Ways and Means Committee, and the Education and Labor Committee. This bill would extend the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996, the first-ever Federal parity law.

Over 10 years ago, Congress passed and President Clinton signed into law legislation that required partial parity by mandating that annual and lifetime dollar limits for mental health treatment under group health plans offering mental health coverage be no less than that for physical illnesses. This legislation was authorized for 5 years, and has been extended with bipartisan support since its initial authorization expired. The bill before us would extend the Mental Health Parity Act for another year. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support its passage.

Madam Speaker, let me also say that while the 1996 law was a good first step, we clearly have much further to go before we can achieve full mental health parity. That is why it is imperative that we extend the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996, the Paul Wellstone Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act of 2007, which was co-sponsored by the gentlelady from Pennsylvania (Ms. butterfly) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pallone). This legislation would ensure that all people—gay, straight, old, young, rich, poor—receive the same care for mental health and substance abuse and addiction treatment no matter their circumstances.

In spite of the 1996 law and widespread recognition that mental illness and substance abuse are treatable illnesses, there still exist glaring inequities between health insurance coverage for mental health and that for other medical conditions. As we all know, these inequities can have dire consequences for friends, families and society in general. H.R. 1242 will take our Nation one step further to ensuring that every American can access the mental health, substance abuse and addiction treatment that they need to live healthy, happy and productive lives.

Madam Speaker, by putting mental health on par with medical and surgical benefits, we will be improving the availability and affordability of health care for those who suffer from mental illnesses and addictions. This will not only reduce the pain and anguish of many of our constituents and their families, but will benefit our Nation as a whole. So let’s extend the good work that has already been done and work together to build upon the framework so that we can improve the lives of millions of Americans.

I reserve the balance of my time, Madam Speaker.
Unfortunately, when it comes to dealing with mental illness, our society, our culture and our government has failed to do the right thing. We have spent billions, hundreds of billions, I dare say, over the years to help those with mental illness, but we have remained insensitive, at best, or blind at worst as to what we truly must do.

It is my wish that people would be personally guided by their own sense of justice and compassion to do the right thing to the treatment of mental illness. Instead, we remain willfully and woefully ignorant to the causes, the diagnoses, and the treatment of mental illness. We have denied its very existence, perhaps wasting our hope in the hope it would go away. We have instead tried to wish away its effects. We have minimized the impact, trivialized the causes, and criticized the patients. We have used words to make mental illness the butt of cruel jokes. We have instead used derogatory words to make mental illness cry out for justice and compassion to do the right thing. We personally guided by our own sense of justice and compassion to do the right thing. We have failed to do the right thing. We have used words to make mental illness cry out for justice and compassion to do the right thing. We have failed to do the right thing. We have failed to do the right thing. We have failed to do the right thing.

One in five Americans will suffer from a diagnosable mental illness. One in ten young people suffer from mental illness severe enough to cause some form of impairment. Untreated drug and alcohol addictions cost Americans $400 billion each year. A Rand study estimated that depression alone cost employers $51 billion per year in absenteeism and lost productivity.

Suicide is the eighth leading cause of death in the United States. More years of life are lost to suicide than any other single cause except heart disease and cancer.

Thirty thousand Americans commit suicide annually, and half a million attempt it. Among college students, three die each day from suicide.

The Federal Government estimates that about 12 million people have alcohol problems. It costs businesses $134 billion a year in lost productivity.

Does treatment work to help people with mental illness? Yes, it does. Studies of depression in the workplace have shown thousands of dollars of savings per employee when they receive treatment.

We note that when 80 percent of health care costs are used to treat chronic illnesses, the risk for depression doubles among those who are mentally ill and not receiving treatment. The cost doubles as well.

The combination of appropriate medication and treatments have been very effective in treating anxiety, depression, bipolar, and behavior disorders. But when health plans do not pay for appropriate professional care, where does the treatment come from?

Seventy-five percent of psychiatric medications are prescribed by non-psychiatrists. Now look at that in the context of other illnesses. Would we tolerate it if 75 percent of insurance plans said that most babies would be delivered by people with minimal training? How about requiring that brain surgery is done by those who only had a few weeks of training in medical school. Would we accept that? We would not.

This bill extends what we have done before. It helps in a small but important way. But it does not take us to where we need to be. Perhaps the lesson here is that there are many things we need to do for ourselves, many things we need to do to reach out to others and help. But it does not cure the barriers. It does not identify which diagnoses need to be treated. We will need to do more. Eventually we as a Nation need to come to terms with what needs to be done. The cost savings of providing the right treatment instead of continuing to provide the wrong care, or denying care, are massive.

As Benjamin Franklin said, “By failing to prepare, you are preparing to fail.”

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. KENNEDY), who has probably done more to address the issue of mental health parity than any Member of Congress. He actually came to my district, we had a hearing on the issue, and I really appreciate all that he has done on the issue.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank Chairman PALLONE for his work in bringing the extension of this mental health parity law to the floor. I want to acknowledge his help on H.R. 1424, the Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Act, and say I join him in saying today that we should expect health insurance plans to cover the rest of our body, cancer, diabetes, everything else, we shouldn’t expect any less for mental illnesses.

And yet, unlike many other physical illnesses, mental illnesses are excluded from most health insurance plans. In fact, 98 percent of our health insurance plans in America charge higher copays and deductibles for mental illnesses simply because of stigma, simply because of discrimination.

Because of the shame and because Americans are too afraid to say that they are dealing with a mental illness severe enough to cause some form of impairment, our courts are packed with victims of child abuse or sex abuse. Our churches are sent to jail or even in the silence, even in the darkness, mental illness cries out for justice and compassion to do the right thing. We cannot afford one more day without parity because the Department of Justice estimates that drug-related crime costs our Nation $107 billion a year. We cannot afford one more day without parity because 80 percent of the trauma-related admissions in our emergency rooms in this country are drug- and alcohol-related, implicated in accidents, shootings, stabbings, and domestic and violent incidences, as well as overdoses.

We cannot afford one more day without parity because workers’ untreated depression cost their employers $31 billion a year in lost productivity and cost their employers $53 billion in lost productivity just due to alcoholism alone.

I will tell you this: We are paying for this in so many other ways, we cannot afford not to spend the money on treating people who are not in our care.
Many individuals go months or maybe even years without treatment for serious illnesses due to the stigma that our society has placed on these serious diseases. They feel like they must hide their illness from their friends or their family while trying to lead a normal life.

However, these illnesses and the individuals who suffer from them deserve care and treatment just as if they were suffering from some other illness or disease. The victims of mental illness should no longer have to suffer in silence and in secret.

For too long, people have been told they must take care of themselves while battling these diseases and illnesses. Those battling their debilitating effects haven't been able to receive the stability of care that's available when adequate health insurance coverage is in place.

The legislation we are considering today takes steps in the right direction by mandating mental health parity laws. However, current laws are not perfect, and they need to be amended to improve the health care of mental addictions and illnesses in our country.

I have been a proud cosponsor of the mental health parity efforts in the past, and I will continue to be an ardent supporter of these efforts to have full mental health parity in America. I support legislation that was already passed by my colleague Senator Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Equity Act, which is legislation that would make full mental health parity the law of the land. This legislation is needed, and it should have been passed long ago.

This legislation has been championed by my good friend PATRICK KENNEDY, the Member from Rhode Island, who we just heard from. He's been such a leader on this effort, and he and Jim RAMSTAD of Minnesota, from our side of the aisle, worked so hard and so diligently on this legislation. I really believe that through their work, and the work of many of us, we will help to deliver what people battling addiction and mental illness have long needed and want; that is, the help that they need.

We have to continue to ensure that every individual has access to the health care coverage that they need. Every single individual that's affected by these sicknesses should not be without mental health coverage in our country.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4848 to continue to provide mental health coverage to the thousands of individuals who are so desperately in need of that help.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES).

Mr. SARBANES. Madam Speaker, I want to thank my colleague Representative PALLONE on his work on H.R. 4848 which is important for us to support because it does extend certain mental health coverages. But as we've all been saying here today, it is just as important that we continue to work very hard to enact and pass H.R. 1424, which is the Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Equity Act, and I want to salute Representatives RAMSTAD and KENNEDY for their tremendous work on that bill.

Mental health parity is the right thing to do. Clearly, there are so many individuals and families that are in pain in this country because they are not receiving the mental health counseling services, the substance abuse and addiction treatment services that they deserve and that our society ought to provide to them.

It is also the smart thing to do. All of the statistics, even if you just wanted to look at this through the cold, calculating lens of what the bottom line represents in terms of cost to our system and our society, all of the studies that have been done show that there are tremendous savings to be had if we focus on these kinds of service.

There have been many statistics that have been cited today. I will cite a few more. Depressed workers lose 5½ hours a week of productive time. That adds up to tens of billions of dollars lost a year to employers. Alcohol-related illness and premature death cost over $130 billion in lost productivity in 1996, and the statistics go on and on and on.

Even the most tightfisted insurer will discover very quickly once we have mental health parity in place that those costs are a lot and that, in fact, there are savings to be had as you re-allocate dollars to mental health treatment and substance abuse treatment in terms of the savings in related medical treatment.

So it is absolutely the right thing to do, and particularly at this time when we have so many stories of returning veterans who are suffering from traumatic brain injury, from mental health issues and need the support that can come from this, from this larger bill, from the Paul Wellstone Act.

So I urge my colleagues to support this extension through H.R. 4848 of certain mental health coverages, but I join all those who are advocating very strongly that we move forward and enact the larger bill, the Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Equity Act of 2007.

Mr. TIM MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I am just inquiring how much time we have left as we try to reallocate dollars to mental health treatment and substance abuse treatment in terms of the savings in related medical treatment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 9½ minutes, and the gentleman from New Jersey has 10½ minutes.

Mr. TIM MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, one of the important points that we need to recognize as we address these issues of mental health and mental illness today are the causes. For so often, as I described earlier, when people are thinking about or talking about mental illness, we sometimes do not understand that it really Pennsylvania for the time. I want to thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES).

Mr. FERGUSON. Madam Speaker, I appreciate the compassion of the Member from New Jersey (Mr. FERGUSON), another great leader whose heart goes out to those in need of mental health parity.

Mr. FERGUSON. Madam Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for the time. I want to thank Chairman PALLONE for his work on this legislation as well.

I rise today in support of H.R. 4848. This important legislation will extend the current mental health parity laws to individuals that desperately need coverage and care.

Mr. FERGUSON. Madam Speaker, I dare say every single one of us in this Chamber, and probably everyone we know, knows someone, cares about someone, perhaps a member of our very own family, who has faced the challenge of mental illness and who could benefit from additional mental health coverage.

Thousands and thousands of people suffer from mental health illnesses and addictions in our country. My family is no different from any other family who may have had one or a member of that family who has dealt with these very significant and difficult problems. This legislation would continue bringing much-needed treatment to those who are in such need.

Addictions and mental illnesses are afflictions that have long been stigmatized and brushed aside by our society and our institutions. Not only is this societal perception deterring many individuals from seeking and receiving much-needed treatment, but also the lack of coverage for such treatments prevents many individuals from gaining access to the critical help and the treatments that they need.

is a problem of brain functioning. It’s written off too often as the worried well of people complaining or malingerers, when really we need to understand the following.

When we’re talking about problems with heart disease, it’s easy to do a blood test or to look at X-rays and other tests and MRIs and see if the function of the heart is appropriate, if the valves are working, if the arteries and veins are blocked or free. When we look at other illnesses throughout the body, there are so many tests which we have grown accustomed to, MRIs, CT scans, EEGs, etc. And we look at those things and we’re able to see that something is wrong based upon the results of those tests.

One of the problems with mental illness, leading to the prejudices about mental illness, is that there are no tests like that. One cannot take an X-ray of the brain and say that the person is either on the spectrum for anxiety disorders or bipolar illness. There have been multiple studies looking at patterns that may show up on some tests. But my point is this: Just because we cannot see it on a medical test like that does not mean it doesn’t exist.

Back in the 1800s, Louis Pasteur described the microbes that finally led us to understand germs and diseases. Before that, no one had any tests to look at that. It did not mean they didn’t exist. That merely meant that we did not know that they were there. But it was a full century later before we found that one could treat diseases with antibiotics, and we’re still learning more about it.

So, too, it is important we understand that so often when discussing these issues of mental illness treatment, people raise the question that you cannot really test for it. Now, those are areas that science and research are still needed to determine what they are, but it does not mean they don’t exist just because we cannot find those.

Instead, what we rely on is the comments made by persons themselves or watching the behavior of persons because, indeed, those are the indicators that tell us something is wrong with the function of the human brain. It is a neurological problem. It is a neurobehavioral exhibition of those problems. It is those problems that we have to understand that sometimes are treated with medication and sometimes are treated with counseling and sometimes both, but we have to make sure we understand that we cannot write these off with treatments just by ignoring them or just saying that something else without treatment because an insurance plan will cover that is enough.

Many times cardiologists will tell us that they recognize when they give someone a diagnosis that it’s terminal or severe, that many of those patients will themselves exhibit symptoms of depression, so they automatically write a prescription for an antidepressant drug. That’s not enough.

The comments I made before about how, when a person has a chronic illness, that it’s not enough if they have untreated depression, that alone should wake us up to understand that we need to be treating mental illness, not ignoring it. That alone should wake up employers to understand that improved productivity and lowered health care costs are enough to motivate us to do that. That alone should be information that the Congressional Budget Office, who scores these bills, should tell us that there are scores that are important in terms of savings. Unfortunately, they don’t tell us scores for prevention. And so it goes on.

These are things we need to continue doing and that’s why we will continue to support this bill.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, I yield the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey for his kindness and his leadership, and to add my appreciation as well for Congressman KENNEDY for the years that he has worked on this issue. And I join them in raising this issue.

I remember the leadership that came from another Member from New Jersey, and Congressman PALLONE has now embraced this issue in his capacity and leadership on the Energy and Commerce Committee. And my classmate, Congressman KENNEDY, has been pressing this message along with Congressman RAMSTAD for a very long time, that we have the capacity and the empathy and sympathy to address the question of mental health parity, but we have not yet had the energy and the results-oriented efforts that it needs.

I pay tribute, of course, to the late Senator Paul Wellstone, who came to our district some years ago through my invitation as cochair of the Congress Children’s Caucus and visited our juvenile detention centers and emphasized that many of the juveniles that were then incarcerated also needed greater access to mental health facilities and services.

Mental health parity and the extension thereof of the annual lifetime limits is crucial to save lives. How many of us have seen on the news or addressed our constituents where seniors, parents are calling the police for their adult children who are suffering from mental health needs? Tragically, some of those encounters end in death. There is no need for that.

In addition, we will be seeing, as the war in Iraq ends and Afghanistan war and conflict ends, numbers of individuals coming back who have been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress, and we will say that’s the Veterans Affairs’ concern, or brain trauma. Yes, in the realm of the framework of their return, it may be; but they will live, and through their lifetime may have encounters that need to have the coverage of a mental health parity bill. I support H.R. 4848, for the insight to move forward on this extension. But I pray that we will find it in our determination to move forward on the Paul Wellstone parity bill that is being carried by Congressman KENNEDY and a number of others. I have tried to pass this legislation for a number of years, so I rise enthusiastically for H.R. 4848.

And, if I might, having missed the discussion on H. Con. Res 283, the bill dealing with Kenya, I simply want to add my statement into the Record, but call out for the compliance with this legislation, as it is passed, that we have sanctions for those who will not come to the peace table, that we compliment Kenya for its democracy, but, as Senator Wellstone said, we paid a settlement of this vicious incident, having killed 900 people.

I end by commenting for enthusiastic support for H.R. 4848.

Mr. TIM MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, many important things have been said by several Members, and passionately, on this bill. What we also have to remember, as we stand in this chamber, that in America there are people who are suffering in silence, there are children who are facing abuse, angry spouses who are attacking one another, anxious mothers struggling to care for their children, and, of course, throughout the workplace, as has been so carefully documented here, so many problems. It is important that we not only pass this bill strongly but also continue to work together.

I commend my colleague, Chairman PALLONE, and the work that he does and to continue the work that he does in leading this. Myself and many Members from our side of the aisle continue to stand ready to make sure we work out any issues with regard to expanding issues of mental health parity. We know that all of us care deeply about those in need and all of us remain committed to helping those in need from our side of the aisle.

Mr. DINGELL. Madam Speaker, today we are asked to extend for the first time, through 2008, the 1996 Mental Health Parity Act. This act bars the use of arbitrary annual and lifetime caps on mental health services if they are not also used on other medical benefits. We need to extend this first good step taken by Congress more than a decade ago, but there is still work to be done somewhere in the treatment of mental illnesses and substance abuse disorders.

When the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 passed Congress, it provided only partial parity for mental illnesses and addiction, but the recent benefits from the equitable treatment other mental health services received under the bill. Left untouched were other important and potentially costly parts of an insurance policy. such as limits on inpatient days and outpatient visits and other out-of-pocket expenses such as copays, coinsurance, and deductibles. These limits result in denying millions of Americans needed treatment and/or incurring huge out-of-pocket costs.

The Government Accountability Office found in a May 2000 report that 87 percent of employers complying with the act merely substituted other restrictive limits on things already mentioned for the annual and lifetime limits prohibited under the 1996 act.

Today we must not only extend the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 but also continue to work on building this act to achieve true parity by passing H.R. 1424, the Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Equity Act of 2007. The legislation has been favorably approved by all three committees of jurisdiction in the House.

Mental illness and alcohol and drug addiction are painful and private struggles with staggering public costs, not to mention the toll these conditions take on families and communities. Representatives Kennedy and Ramstad have been faithful champions of the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 and speak courageously of their own triumphs.

I urge my colleagues to vote to extend the authorization of the current protections already in place and to continue to work for more comprehensive parity.

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4848. This legislation is an extension of the Mental Health Parity Act of 1996.

This bill requires that annual and lifetime dollar limits for mental health treatment under group health plans offering mental health coverage be no less than that for physical illnesses. Unfortunately, insurance plans may still limit the amount and type of mental health treatment covered. For example, an insurance company can cap the number of times a patient may visit the doctor’s office, not only annually, but over the course of a lifetime.

“Partial parity” is an oxymoron. Rather than rely on stop-gap measures and patch-work fixes, the need for true mental health insurance parity must be recognized and acted upon. I strongly encourage my fellow members to pass H.R. 1424, the Paul Wellstone Mental Health and Addiction Equity Act of 2007, which puts mental health coverage on an equal footing with medical and surgical coverage.

The inequity of coverage with regard to mental health and substance abuse treatment benefits is tantamount to discrimination against the mentally ill. It is built upon the insurance companies’ strategy of denying rather than providing care in order to maximize profits. The notion that an insurance company can limit medical care based on cost is immoral. Only medical professionals should dictate the amount and type of care a patient receives.

Unfortunately, the stigma of mental illness prevents millions of Americans from receiving the health care they need. Arbitrary limits on insurance benefits also serve as a significant barrier to the Americans seeking help.

The original Mental Health Parity Act of 1996 was an important first step toward mental health and substance abuse treatment, but it is our duty to end this intolerable discrimination against the mentally ill, and provide timely, appropriate, and adequate health care for all, free of the loopholes, pitfalls, and entanglements which exist under the current fragmented, non-system of care.

Mr. TIM MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tem. The question was taken.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The question was taken.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 781) to extend the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to collect Do-Not-Call Registry fees to fiscal years after fiscal year 2007.

There was no objection.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, I urge unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, the bill we are considering on the House floor today, which is Senate 781, the Do-Not-Call Registry Fee Extension Act, is identical to H.R. 2601, which was introduced by my friend Mr. STEARNS, the former ranking member of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Trade, and Consumer Protection.

On December 11 of last year, the House passed H.R. 2601 by voice vote, and I urge similar swift passage of S. 781 today.

Madam Speaker, this bill extends the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to administer and enforce the provisions relating to the national do-not-call registry. In 2003, Congress passed the Do-Not-
With that, Madam Speaker, I urge a "yes" vote.

At this time, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STEARNS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me thank, first of all, the discerning, clairvoyant, highly observant and eloquent statements from the gentleman from North Carolina for his kindness in recognizing that it is, indeed, my bill. I appreciate his very eloquent statement.

Mr. WHITFIELD was supposed to be here, but, of course, with the tornadoes, he cannot be here. He flew back to Kentucky to take care of his constituents, so he is to be commended for that.

But I rise today also in support of this bill, which is my bill which came through my subcommittee, the Do-Not-Call Registry Fee Extension Act of 2007. The Senate bill is 732.

As pointed out, this bill is identical to H.R. 2601 which I introduced and which passed this Chamber by voice vote under suspension of the rules on December 11, last year. As the sponsor of the legislation in the Senate bill and as the former ranking member of the committee with jurisdiction over consumer protection, I assured all my colleagues that this legislation is necessary and, of course, very timely. The gentleman from North Carolina mentioned that it is one of the most popular bills we have passed in Congress, and indeed it is.

I can also assure each of you that it will have an immediate and meaningful impact on our constituents, much more so than many of the bills that we've passed this year.

The Congress originally passed the Do-Not-Call Act in 2003 in response to the growing concern about the persistent invasion of unsolicited telemarketing calls to consumers' homes. Now, at that point I was chairman of the Commerce, Trade, and Consumer Protection Subcommittee, and I took great pride that our committee came together with JAN SCHAKOWSKY, who was the ranking member, to put together the do-not-call registry. She is to be commended today, too, for her support and her enabling of this legislation.

The idea was very simple: Consumers could place their home phone numbers on a list, and telemarketers would then be prohibited from making unsolicited phone solicitations. In order to avail themselves of the tranquility afforded then by the registry, consumers simply call a toll-free number from the telephone line they wish to register, or they could add their number via the Internet. Telemarketers then access the registry at the Federal Trade Commission to obtain a list of registered numbers over the Internet and then remove those numbers from their call list. Pretty simple. These telemarketers then pay a simple fee for such access. It is those fees that fund the registry, including the maintenance and, ultimately, the enforcement of the violators of this legislation.

The program has been a huge success, as the gentleman from North Carolina has pointed out, with one recent polling finding there is over 150 million active telephone numbers on the registry. My colleagues, that's roughly 70 percent of Americans who avail themselves of the registry benefit. That poll also found over 90 percent of those registered with the do-not-call list do indeed receive fewer unsolicited telemarketing calls.

The Federal Trade Commission must also be commended for its part in making the registry a success. Without vigorous enforcement, a prohibition would be meaningless. Consumers who receive unwanted telemarketing calls log complaints via either a toll-free telephone number or the Internet. As a result, the commission has pursued 35 cases for violations of this do-not-call provision in the bill and has collected $25 million combined in civil penalties and equitable relief.

Unfortunately, the commission's authority to collect the fees necessary to maintain the registry expired last September. This legislation restores the commission's authority to collect the necessary fees to maintain and simply update the registry in a timely manner. Further, this act provides businesses with certainty into the future regarding the fees they pay to access the registry.

So, my colleagues, while this bill sets specific access fees, it also ensures Congress will receive the information necessary to assess in the future whether those fees are simply sufficient and appropriate. The Senate bill requires the Federal Trade Commission and the SEC to submit two reports to Congress biennially. One report shall include information regarding basic registry statistics such as the number of consumers registered, number of persons paying for access, and the impact of new telecommunications technology on the registry. The second report addresses consumer reports of abuse of registry exceptions, including the recent reports of "lead generators," unsolicited mailers, and we've all gotten those things through the mail, used to establish a business relationship. Then once that business relationship is established, they can come back and call you or otherwise they trick you into answering these little lead generators.

And most frequently the people who do answer them are seniors, who are very conscientious, and then that, in fact, involves waiving their do-not-call protections. As time passes and people think of new ways to circumvent these protections, we will move to the necessary fees to maintain and implement good information to keep pace with these folks that are trying to trick our constituents, thereby protecting their original intent of the do-not-call registry.

In conclusion, Madam Speaker, many of our constituents still express their gratitude for enacting the original Do-Not-Call Act, simply enabling them to their home, peaceable without irritating telemarketing interruptions, especially around suppertime. The popularity and success of the do-not-call registry is without question. It is successful and it is one area in which this Congress has acted in a bipartisan fashion, almost unanimously on the House floor with approval. So I urge all my colleagues' support.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. I want to thank the gentleman for his comments. Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STEARNS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BURGESS).

Mr. BURGESS. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I thank both the chairman and the ranking member for bringing this bill to the floor.

Madam Speaker, as pointed out, this has been one of the most popular pieces of legislation that we could pass certainly during my short tenure in Congress. And, Madam Speaker, I would only point out that with a 10 percent approval rating, it is incumbent upon us to continue to pass legislation that is indeed popular.

I am an original cosponsor of the Do-Not-Call Registry Fee Extension Act, and as has been pointed out, this bill will extend the Federal Trade Commission's authority to collect fees and to administer and enforce the do-not-call registry. This registry is popular. This registry's effect has been profound.

Since the creation of this registry, as we heard testimony in our committee as we worked on the bill earlier this year, over 145 million numbers have been registered. And as we heard from Ranking Member STEARNS a little while ago, that number is now up to 150 million telephone numbers.

As the Director of the Federal Trade Commission, Linda Parnes, eloquently stated in her testimony before the Energy and Commerce Committee last October, the do-not-call registry "helps to restore the sanctity of the American dinner hour."

While I firmly believe in a free market and I believe that businesses should be able to and should be responsible for formulating their own business plans and business practices, I also believe that Americans have a right to privacy. People should be able to have the option of whether or not they want to receive telephone calls from telemarketers in the privacy of their homes. Thanks to the do-not-call registry, Americans can sign up and the tranquility afforded this decision and this discretion.

To keep the registry working in the future, it is imperative that we act swiftly and pass this important legislation to further extend the protection of privacy for all Americans. As Commissioner Parnes pointed out, let’s help restore the sanctity of the American dinner hour once and for all.

Mr. MADAM SPEAKER, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, I am going to urge my colleagues to vote “aye” on this measure, and let’s send it on to the President’s desk.

Mr. DINGELL. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 781, the “Do-Not-Call Registry Fee Extension Act,” and urge its swift adoption by the House.

This bill is identical to H.R. 2601, which the House passed on December 11, 2007, to extend the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to collect fees to administer and enforce the provisions of law relating to the ever-popular national Do-Not-Call registry. The registry was established by Congress to enable citizens to place their personal phone numbers on a national list to prevent unwanted commercial solicitations over that number. By any measure, this program has been wildly successful—more than 145 million telephone numbers have been placed on the list, pesky phone calls from telemarketers have declined, and the FTC’s enforcement has been vigorous—but the agency’s ability to collect fees to fund this operation expired after September 2007. Therefore, we need to act.

By agreement with the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce, we are sending the later Senate-passed bill to the President. At this time, I want to commend Representative STEARNS, the sponsor of the House-passed bill and then Ranking Subcommittee Member, for his leadership on this important consumer protection issue. I also commend Representative RUSH, a cosponsor of the House bill and Chairman of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Trade, and Consumer Protection, for expeditiously bringing this legislation. The agreement, the Senate today will take up the House-passed bill, of which I am the lead Democratic cosponsor, and I urge its swift adoption by the House.

As Commissioner and the Direct Marketing Association pointed out, let’s help re-store the sanctity of the American dinner hour once and for all.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BUTTERFIELD) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 781.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONTINUATION OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY RELATING TO CUBA AND OF THE EMERGENCY AUTHORITY RELATING TO THE REGULATION OF THE ANCHORAGE AND MOVEMENT OF VESSELS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 110-90)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication, which states that the national emergency declared with respect to the Government of Cuba’s destruction of two unarmed U.S.-registered civilian aircraft in international airspace north of Cuba on February 24, 1996, as amended and expanded on February 26, 2004, is to continue in effect beyond March 1, 2008.

SILENT GENOCIDE

The Speaker pro tempore.

Mr. FRANKS of Arizona. Madam Speaker, it is February 6, 2008, in the land of the free and the home of the brave. And before the sun set today in America, almost 4,000 more defenseless unborn children were killed by abortion on demand. That is more than the number of innocent American lives lost on September 11, 2001, in one day. It happened, Madam Speaker, every day in America. It has now been exactly 12,798 days since the judicial fiat called Roe v. Wade was handed down.
Wade was handed down. Since then, the very foundation of this Nation has been stained by the blood of almost 50 million of our own unborn children. And all of them, Madam Speaker, had at least four things in common: they were just little babies who had done nothing wrong, one of the most innocent of them all, a nameless and a lonely death; each of the mothers, whether she realizes it immediately or not, will never be the same; and all the gifts that these children might have brought to humanity are now lost forever.

Yet even in the full glare of such tragedy, this generation clings to blindness and invincible ignorance while history repeats itself, and our own silent genocide mercilessly annihilates the most helpless of all victims to date, those yet unborn.

Madam Speaker, perhaps it is important for those of us in this Chamber to remind ourselves again of why we are really all here. Thomas Jefferson said, "The care of innocent human life and its happiness and not its destruction is the chief and only object of good government." Madam Speaker, protecting the lives of our innocent citizens and their constitutional rights is why we are all here. It is our sworn oath. The very last time, and if it should be necessary yet another day to come, may the day that we find the humanity, the courage and the will to embrace together our human and our constitutional duty to protect the least of these, our tiny American brothers and sisters, from this murderously scourgic in our Nation can be written on demand.

Madam Speaker, it is February 6, 2008, 12,798 days since Roe v. Wade in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. WOOLSEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

HONORING FORMER FIRE CHIEF ED HANZEL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. SUTTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. SUTTON. Madam Speaker, I rise today with a sense of appreciation to pay tribute to former fire chief, Ed Hanzel, who passed away on December 31, 2007 while serving as a combat firefighter in Iraq.

Ed, who dedicated over 32 years of his life to his community as a firefighter, embarked on two separate tours in Iraq following his retirement in 2002. Retirement did not suit Ed, who felt he could make a positive contribution in Iraq while continuing to provide for his family.

And although Denise, his wife of 36 years, worried for his safety, Ed was determined to protect our brave soldiers by utilizing his professional firefighting skills on military bases as a combat firefighter. One morning, at the onset of his second tour, Ed informed a coworker he wasn’t feeling well and went to rest. Later that day, Ed Hanzel passed away.

Ed was a strong man. He had beaten cancer a few years ago. His death in Iraq surprised his family and friends who knew him for his easygoing nature, his sense of humor, and his ability to light up a room with his bright eyes and genuine smile. After his passing, countless firefighters, emergency medical personnel and other safety forces from 11 neighboring departments joined together to honor Ed’s memory. With fire truck ladders extended to form an arch, an American flag was flown at the peak, symbolizing Ed’s devotion to his country.

A medical helicopter flew low over the crowd, and a fire truck adorned with a black wreath sounded a traditional last call, concluding a ceremony to celebrate a former fire chief, a humble fire chief, who often appeared embarrassed by the name called "Chief."

The respect and admiration Ed earned as a firefighter, a paramedic and a SWAT medic could not have been more visible as his peers joined together around an empty pair of boots and a firefighter’s helmet to honor their fallen colleague.

We will always remember Ed for his ever-present smile, his commitment to his community, his sense of humor, and all who gave of themselves in behalf of the people of Ohio’s 13th District, I want to express my deepest sympathies to his wife, Denise, and son, Brian. We have lost a great man, and they have lost a great husband and father who gave all in service to others and our country.

We grieve Ed’s passing, but we celebrate his life and service and we take solace in knowing we are better people for having known him.
Conway for helping me ensure that the Lee family’s request was granted. I am also very grateful to Brigadier General Michael Regner and Major General Robert Dickerson for their role in enabling this adoption to proceed. I know that Dustin is in heaven, and happy that his family has Lex. Allowing the Lee family to adopt Lex was a fitting thank you to parents who gave the ultimate gift of their son for this country.

The United States Marine Corps has demonstrated its tremendous compassion and understanding by making this adoption a reality for the parents of one of our Nation’s fallen heroes. Again I extend my deep condolences to Mr. and Mrs. Lee, as well as all those in this country who have lost a loved one fighting in Iraq or Afghanistan.

Although Lex will never replace their son, welcoming Lex into the Lee family and home will keep a big part of Corporal Lee’s life alive for their family. Lex loved and protected Corporal Lee’s family and, as Corporal Lee’s family is now able to love and protect Lex in the peaceful surroundings of their home in Mississippi.

May God bless the United States Marine Corps and all of our men and women in uniform, and may God continue to bless America.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Poe) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. Poe addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. DeFazio addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

EDWARD W. BROOKE III, UNITED STATES SENATOR, RETIRED

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. Norton. Madam Speaker, I come to the floor for a special purpose this evening, a purpose that I think every Member of this House would want to join in during Black History Month. It is a rare bipartisan opportunity to honor a man whom I think Democrats and Republicans alike are equally proud of. He is a lifelong Republican, and yet, I, a lifelong Democrat, have come to ask Members to sign on to H.R. 1000, a bill to honor the first African American popularly elected to serve in the Senate of the United States. You heard me. He was not a Democrat, he was a Republican, and his name is Edward W. Brooke III, United States Senator from Massachusetts, 1967 to 1979.

I come during Black History Month because I think it would be a wonderful opportunity for the House on both sides of the aisle to do something together that both want to do and that is something of simply talking about Black History Month in the abstract, doing something for a former Member of the United States Congress who indeed was African American. His service was of such quality that in 1965, when the United States Congress, several years ago, already awarded former Senator Brooke the highest national medal that our government can offer, the Presidential Medal of Freedom. But the highest medal we can offer is the Congressional Gold Medal. The Senate, where Senator Brooke served, has already unanimously passed this resolution. This is a special time, I think, that the House would want to follow suit. I want to encourage all Members, Speaker, just how broad range was the support in the Senate. When you have Senator Harry Reid and Mitch McConnell, on the same bill to honor this former Senator, I think it says it all. When you have Senator Kennedy ranging from Senator Edward Kennedy to Senator Ted Stevens, I think that is the very definition of a bipartisan bill, and they were among the cosponsors.

Why did they do this? Why has Senator Brooke's request was granted. I am Edward W. Brooke III, United States Senator, Retired?

I received the Bronze Star, the Distinguished Service Award, and the Grand Cross of the Order of Merit from the Italian Government for his leadership during combat in Italy as a captain in World War II in the segregated 366th Combat Infantry Regiment. That, Madam Speaker, is the very definition of a patriot.

I, of course, know about Senator Brooke. This is perhaps somewhat personal to me, because he was born and raised in the District of Columbia. Mind you, his greatest service did not occur in this city as a native Washing-tonian, but only in this city after he was elected to the Senate.

He was born and raised in segregated Washington, DC. The city was as segregated as any southern city then, including its public schools, the very public school from which I graduated as well, Dunbar High School. He was educated at Howard University and then went to Howard Law School, and hadn’t left the District of Columbia until he went to serve in the Armed Forces of the United States.

Then somehow he realized there were greener pastures than his own hometown, and he went to Massachusetts to set up the practice of law and got the idea in his head that in a State with almost no African Americans, with almost no Democrat, he could get to be, first, the first black Attorney General in the United States, and then the first Senator elected by popular vote to the United States Senate.

We all know that it is very difficult for a minority or a person of any minority to be elected statewide. When this happened in the mid-sixties, I think we stand in awe of what kind of man it must have taken to have effected this change then.

So I ask Members if they will, before this month is over, and there are other Members trying to help me do so, join most of the Members of the House who have already signed on to H.R. 1000 to award the Congressional Gold Medal.

TIME TO WAKE UP ON THE BUDGET

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. Kaptur) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. Kaptur. Madam Speaker, this week, ExxonMobil reported it beat its own record for the highest annual profits ever recorded by any company with its net income rising to $40.6 billion in 2007, the highest record profits of any company in American history. Those profits are due to the surging oil and gasoline prices that we are all paying. Meanwhile, here in Washington, the establishment sits around the table in anticipation of the President’s budget proposal. Lobbyists, advocates, lawmakers, and agency heads wait in anticipation.

This year it seems that the President has outdone himself by pushing up our national debt to $9.2 trillion, nearly $10 trillion. When President Bush took office, gasoline cost $1.45 a gallon. When he took office, gasoline cost $1.45 and we were showing surpluses after the discipline we had exacted here during the 1990s, surpluses in our budget of $5.6 trillion. Now gasoline regularly rises above $3 a gallon and the annual budget is in the red, his latest budget as submitted by over $407 billion, and you know it is going to rise to over half a trillion dollars with the war costs.

What a story. While the Nation goes deeper into the red with higher gas prices and bigger deficits, oil companies are making out like bandits. Compare a $407 billion budget deficit for our country with $40 billion in exorbitant profits taken in by ExxonMobil in 2007. ExxonMobil posted the largest profit in U.S. history, sucking those dollars from our people.

While we are considering a stimulus package to jump-start our economy, imagine how solving our tremendous energy crisis could help every single American. We are talking about sending pennies to some Americans in this so-called stimulus package, while these giants are reaping billions and billions and billions of dollars. Where is the courage of this Congress to balance these accounts and to make sure that those who need help in our country actually get it?

If you add up the President’s budget request for the Army Corps of Engineers, the Small Business Administration, the Department of Labor, the National Science Foundation, the Department of Commerce, and the entire Environmental Protection Agency, it costs $2 billion less to run them all than ExxonMobil made in 2007. Think about that.

Let’s think about what it means for our Nation’s priorities. It is more important for Congress to balance the budget than it is for us to conduct scientific research or to clean up the environment or to extend unemployment benefits or to help businesses in this economy, small businesses try to survive, fix up our levees and our bridges and our roads.

Think about the millions of Americans we could help who are facing a meltdown in the housing market and losing their most important form of savings. Witness the nearly 200,000 homeless veterans living on the streets of our country. What an embarrassment. Think about the 33.5 million Americans that are food insecure and regularly go to bed hungry as our food pantries run dry.

It is often said that a budget is the real show of a nation’s values. When President Bush complains about how we had expected more. Congress and when is this President going to wake up?

Madam Speaker, I include the following for the RECORD.

[From the Blade, Feb. 2, 2008]

SURGING PRICES PUMP UP OIL GIANT’S RECORD $40.6B PROFIT

New York—ExxonMobil reported yesterday that it beat its own record for the highest quarterly profit, as oil companies around the world added by $40.6 billion in 2007 thanks to surging oil prices.

The company’s sales last year, more than $691 billion, exceeded the gross domestic product of 129 countries.

ExxonMobil made more than $1.297 of profit for every barrel.

The company also had its most profitable quarter ever. It said net income rose 14 percent, to $11.7 billion, or $2.13 a share, in the last three months of the year. Like most oil companies, Exxon benefited from a near doubling of oil prices, as well as higher demand for gasoline last year. Crude oil prices rose from a low of around $50 a barrel in early 2007 to almost $100 by the end of the year—the biggest jump in oil prices in any one year.

“Exxon sets the gold standard for the industry,” said Fadel Gheit, an analyst at Oppenheimer & Co. in New York.

Oil companies all have reported strong profits in recent days.

Chevron, the second-largest American oil company, said yesterday that its profits rose 9 percent last year to $11.6 billion. The backlash against the oil industry, which periodically has intensified as gasoline prices have risen in recent years, was swift.

One advocacy group, the Foundation for Taxpayer and Consumer Rights, called the profits “unjustifiable.”

Some politicians said Congress should rescind the tax breaks awarded two years ago to encourage oil companies to increase their investments in the United States and raise domestic production.

“Congratulations to ExxonMobil and Chevron—for reminding Americans why they cringe every time they pull into a gas station,” Sen. Charles Schumer said (D., N.Y.).

Exxon defended itself against claims that it was responsible for the rise in oil prices.

Anticipating a backlash, Exxon has been running advertisements that highlight the size of the investments it makes to find and access to energy resources or demanding a legal showdown in demand in the second quarter.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is set to meet again next month. The cartel signaled it would be ready to cut production to make up for a seasonal slowdown in demand in the second quarter.

OPEC’s actions mean the cartel is determined to keep prices from falling below $80 a barrel, according to energy experts.

The U.S. response to OPEC’s decision was measured.

“I think everyone is fully aware that having a reliable and steady and predictable supply of oil is a benefit to the global economy,” White House spokesman Tony Fratto said. “We hope that they understand that the decisions on oil production have a real impact on the economy.”

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING REQUIREMENT OF CLAUSE 6(a) OF RULE XIII WITH RESPECT TO CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS

Ms. SUTTON, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 110-552) on the resolution (H. Res. 955) waiving a requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII with respect to consideration of certain resolutions reported from the Committee on Rules, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4137, COLLEGE OPPORTUNITY AND AFFORDABILITY ACT OF 2007

Ms. SUTTON, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 110-523) on the resolution (H. Res. 956) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 4137) to amend and extend the Higher Education Act of 1965, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PAYING THE PRICE FOR THE PRESIDENT’S FLAWED PRIORITIES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BISHOP) is recognized for 5 minutes.
Mr. BISHOP of New York. Madam Speaker, at least President Bush is consistent. Like the other seven budgets that he has submitted to this Congress, it is no surprise that his eighth budget request continues to reflect spectacularly flawed priorities. There was some debate earlier this week about whether the budget should be printed and distributed to congressional offices. Perhaps the best decision would have been to spare us the bookish procedures.

For the eighth year in a row, the administration has degraded the budget process. This budget barely goes through the motions. Instead of formulating a blueprint to guide this Nation toward what should be our fiscal priorities, the budget continues the flawed policies of the past 7 years.

Without putting forth an honest or straightforward budget, the President has yet to attempt seriously to meet our goals, goals that we should all share of budgetary accountability, enforcement, and fiscal responsibility. This is why so many of our colleagues, Madam Speaker, have already described the President’s budget request has a pro forma document with little meaning or relevance, that has also been described as arriving on Capitol Hill “dead on arrival,” and that is perhaps a very, very good thing. Perhaps the lack of truth in budgeting represents the best example of why “change” has become the overriding theme of this coming election.

This Congress should refuse to be misled by a budget that hides the true costs of the devastating fiscal policies of this administration. For example, omitting total war costs gives an artificially deflated notion of what the deficit will be, and we now have the Secretary of Defense estimating that the true cost of the war in fiscal 2009 will be $170 billion, as opposed to the $70 billion that is put in the budget as a placeholder. That number alone will drive the deficit up to over half a trillion dollars. This President’s budget also omits the cost of extending the tax cuts, the 2001 and 2003 tax cuts, which disproportionately favor those who need those tax cuts the least.

Let me just cite two very troubling aspects of a budget that is shot through with scores of troubling aspects. The first is one that is of particular importance to my home State of New York. We have been fighting, those young men and women with access to education, while costs are rising and the ability of the student loan program, and does so while costs are rising and the ability of students to pay is declining.

How can we have a competitive workforce, how can we have a competitive Nation, if we don’t even provide our young men and women with access to college?

Future generations of Americans will pay the price for the President’s flawed priorities and more debt as a consequence of his actions. In fact, the debt that will be accrued over the 8 years of the Bush Presidency will amount to some $3.5 trillion. That is an amount that exceeds the combined debt of all of the Presidents from George Washington through the first President Bush.

In fact, we saw a repeat of that last year, and the President who was addressing the House on the floor of this House where that spending originates. I can’t help but observe the last speaker who was addressing the House on the subject of the budget was critical of the President’s budget, which is his prerogative and his right, but I would remind the previous speaker that it is his party that is in charge, as it was last year, and while it is the President’s obligation to get to the Congress every year, it is then the Congress’ obligation to work on that budget and pass a budget, which will be voted on later in the year, that either accepts or rejects those proposals put forth by the President.

Indeed, last year, that is exactly what happened. So the budget that went forward last year was not the President’s budget, I would point out to the gentleman from New York, but the budget that was passed by the majority on the House of Representatives floor last year, and the same thing will be true this year. They are in charge. It is their right and prerogative under the rules of the House that they will have absolute authority to create the budget and, as a consequence, those things that are felt to be important are going to be those things that are championed by their side. Those things that are felt to be less important will be those things that are left of the budget. That responsibility lies in the House of Representatives. Under the rules of the House, that responsibility lies with the majority party.

So while I appreciate his passion, I appreciate his fervor in talking about the President’s budget, I think he would be better served to actually spend some time talking to the leadership about the priorities as they come forward over this next year, because there are some significant problems that faced this House last year that were simply kicked down the road at the end of the last Congress.

In fact, we saw a repeat of that last week. We were obliged to reauthorize the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act so that we have the tools necessary, our intelligence community has the tools necessary to prevent terrorist attacks at home and abroad and to protect our soldiers who are serving in Iraq and Afghanistan. We couldn’t do it, so we kicked the can down the road a couple of weeks right at the end of the year, December.

We were supposed to do something about Medicare because physicians across the country were facing a 10.1 percent reduction in their reimbursements. And so we pay out if Congress didn’t act. Well, we did act. We prevented that, but we prevented it for 6 months. Six months. What an insult. What an insult to the physicians of this country who are taking care of our Medicare patients, the patients we have a responsibility to, that we could not even do our work to give them the certainty of what they would be reimbursed for the next year? No, it’s 6 months is all you get, Doc, and then we’re going to come back and visit it again. And, oh, by the way, we’re in the middle of that Presidential campaign by then, so don’t expect us to devote much more attention to it in June than we were able to muster in December.

But I digress. My purpose in being here tonight is to speak a little bit about what is going on in the practice of medicine, and, in spite of the fact that I may sound a little bit despondent, I will tell you that I am so optimistic about the world ahead, the day future holds for the young people today who are contemplating a career in health care.

When I was a young medical student in the mid-1970s in Houston, Texas, I could never have imagined that the day would come in my lifetime when a person could, of their own volition, go to the Internet and, with a couple of mouse clicks, find a place that would analyze their DNA and for less than $1,000 provide them vital insights into their genomic makeup so that they might be forewarned about some diseases, so that they might be forewarned about some conditions and use those tools to help manage their health well into the future.

Now, we hardly know what the results of this type of investigation are going to be. It has only been in the last couple of months, in fact, that I was practicing medicine, and have that type of analysis done. I will tell you that I am so optimistic about the world ahead, the day future holds for the young people today who are contemplating a career in health care.

the transformational. This is not just theoretical.

I had an opportunity to speak to Dr. Michael DeBakey, pioneer in heart surgery, a gentleman of great renown. We honored him on the floor of this House with a Congressional Gold Medal earlier this year. I had an opportunity to sit down with Dr. DeBakey. He talked about some of the changes that he has seen in his lifetime. He related how when he was a young man and graduated from medical school and then did his residency at Tulane Charity Hospital in New Orleans, he wanted to go to research. But he knew that in order to have the credentials to go into research he would have to go to Europe in order to obtain those credentials. This was back in the 1930s. Well, now in my generation I have seen in my lifetime. It gives me the ability to see things from the policy side.

Dr. DeBakey reflected what caused the change between the time he graduated in the mid-1930s and what we see now at the end of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st century. He maintained that cause of that change was the focus and attention, and, yes, the funding that Congress provided to medical research right after the Second World War. Indeed, the funding and the vision of the entire National Institutes of Health was a product of that type of visionary thinking.

So as Dr. DeBakey presented that thought to me, it was with the underscored emphasis that Congress can do this because Congress has done this before. It focused on by hospital, and protecting and promoting that transformation in medicine, then it is possible for Congress to be, again, a participant in that transformation and not an enemy of that transformation.

Now, I am fortunate, because I did spend a number of years practicing medicine, working one time in a multispecialty practice, part of my time in a solo practice, part of my time in a single specialty practice, having practiced medicine in several different modalities during my lifetime, it gives me the ability to see things from the provider's side and now to see things from the policy side.

It is so important that we spend the effort understanding those things that will work and understanding those things that will not work.

I alluded earlier when I first started speaking about the problems that we face because we couldn't do our work in December and we postponed any real reform on the reductions in physicians' payments that we see year after year. You have seen me put up the posters that detail how hospitals, drug companies, HMOs are paid on a cost-of-living adjusted basis year over year, but physician reimbursement is paid on a crazy formula that reduces and ratchets down reimbursement year over year. That just simply won't work.

When I talk about Congress being a transactional body and that transactional activity being the enemy of the truth, I mean that precisely the type of transactional activity to which I am referring.

Think of it. We always talked about the laws of supply and demand. What are we doing to the supply side of that equation if we are actually telling our doctors we don't value what you do, and we don't care about the fact that you take care of our sickest patients, our Medicare patients? That is just not important to us in Congress, and then we underline that by postponing dealing with the problem and taking an asylum sort of concept to the doctor who is tolling day after day to take care of the patients that we have asked them to take care of for us.

Another aspect of that activity, as the year wound down last year, was the attempt to attach a rather inflexible program of e-prescribing to whatever fix we managed to achieve for the Medicare payment. Now, e-prescribing is not inherently a bad concept. Madam, if you think about it, I am left-handed so my handwriting has never been good. And then I went to medical school and had to take notes fast, and my handwriting got worse. And then I got old, and my handwriting got even worse. And so it is very difficult to read those handwritten prescriptions that we scribble out quickly at the end of a patient visit. What a benefit it would be to the patient, to the pharmacist, and to the physician to have a method whereby that prescription was shot to the pharmacist via e-mail at the time of the patient encounter. It would save waiting time, no problems with legibility, and there could be computer algorithms that were developed that would prevent a patient receiving a medicine to which they were allergic or which would counteract or interfere with another medicine they were taking. So a good concept. And then like so many things, Congress deals with it in a way that makes it untenable.

The e-prescribing bill introduced by a Senator on the other side of the Capitol, said, Doctor, if you do this, we will provide you a carrot and a stick. The carrot is a 1 percent increase in your reimbursement for taking care of that patient and providing an electronically written prescription at the end of that patient visit. Just 1 percent.

Now I am going to make some numbers up because it makes the math work. In fact, the numbers are probably much lower than what I am going to make up. But assume a physician working in an average practice in a city like mine sees a Medicare patient, return visit, moderate complexity. Assume they are paid $50 for that visit. That is actually pretty generous if you look at most of the Medicare fee schedule reimbursement rates. But because it is just 1 percent, you say $50.

So if that doctor participates in an e-prescribing regimen, what does that mean? It means they get an extra 1 percent. That is 50 cents for those of you who are good at math. So the doctor is going to take about 15 minutes if you do it correctly. Again, remember it is a moderately complex Medicare patient, a senior citizen. So you get an extra 50 cents if you, instead of writing that prescription by hand, you put it into a laptop or Blackberry and send it off to the pharmacist electronically.

You can see four of those patients in an hour. If you are really pushing yourself and you have everything firing on all eight cylinders in the office and the computer is working along, you can see four patients in an hour. So four $50 visits. So that is $200 reimbursed for that hour's work. That is not the doctor's pay. Don't misunderstand me. He has to pay all of the overhead as well. Nevertheless, during that hour, that physician will generate $200 in revenue. For that, if they do e-prescribing, we will reward them and give them an additional $2 for that hour's work.

That is not a great incentive, but let's think about it also from the fact that it is not just one prescription that doctor writes for that Medicare patient, no. The average Medicare patient has three or four prescriptions. So when you figure it on a per prescription basis, the actual benefit to the physician is somewhat less than 10 cents for every prescription that is handled electronically. And it is a bit bit more involved to do that. A doctor's reimbursement is paid on a per prescription basis, the actual benefit to the physician is somewhat less than 10 cents. Nevertheless, during that hour, that physician will generate $200 in revenue. For that, if they do e-prescribing, we will reward them and give them an additional $2 for that hour's work.

You have seen me put up the posters that we think about it also from the fact that it is not just one prescription that doctor writes for that Medicare patient, no. The average Medicare patient has three or four prescriptions. So when you figure it on a per prescription basis, the actual benefit to the physician is somewhat less than 10 cents for every prescription that is handled electronically. And it is a little bit more involved to do that. A doctor's reimbursement is paid on a per prescription basis, the actual benefit to the physician is somewhat less than 10 cents. Nevertheless, during that hour, that physician will generate $200 in revenue. For that, if they do e-prescribing, we will reward them and give them an additional $2 for that hour's work.

What if you don't do it? You say it is that value what you do, it is that value what you do, that is not the doctor's pay. Don't misunderstand me. He has to pay all of the overhead as well. Nevertheless, during that hour, that physician will generate $200 in revenue. For that, if they do e-prescribing, we will reward them and give them an additional $2 for that hour's work.

So we are going to compensate for that. We are going to pay a little less than 10 cents per prescription as it is written. to utilize this technology. And the stick was a 10 percent penalty.

Wait a minute, a 1 percent uptick and a 10 percent penalty. That is imbalanced. Let’s go back to our hypothetical return visit, moderately complex Medicare patient, a $50 reimbursement, 10 percent penalty, there is a $5 penalty for that visit. And if you are seeing four patients an hour, that is a $20 penalty for that hour’s work. You see the balance. If you do it, we will pay you $2 because we think it is worth that. If you don’t do it, it will cost you $20.

And we wonder why our senior citizens call up to get an appointment with a physician when they get covered on Medicare and no one wants to see them? This is the way we behave. We cut their pay. We can’t agree amongst ourselves to do something rational to protect physician reimbursement rates at the end of the year. And by the way, we want to add this thing on top, this secondary insurance, to a true electronic prescription environment, who do you pay if you need on your side on that? I am telling you, if you don’t have the doctor on your side, it is not going to happen. Yes, you can frighten and cajole and preach all you want, but it is important for Congress to remember that this transformation will take place faster, with much more expediency, if we will take the time and trouble to instruct, educate, provide for, provide the proper support and proper compensation for our physician community if they undertake it, embracing this type of technology.

One of the things we are going to hear a lot of as we go through this year, the more we talk about, “universal coverage,” “universal access,” and they don’t mean the same thing, so it is important to spend a few minutes differentiating between the two. We will hear talk about mandates and whether they are a good thing or a bad thing. We will hear “individual mandates,” “State mandates,” “employer mandates,” and it is important to spend a few minutes discussing the differences between those terms as well.

Let’s deal with the concept of universality of medical care. That is one that many people in this body and many people on the Presidential trail today say they want to see.

Now, universal coverage, universal access. Universal access, everyone has insurance whether they want to do it or not. It is a little tough to do that in a free society, but yes, we can write laws that can make that happen. See the discussion on mandates in a few minutes. Universal coverage is one of the options available to us.

Universal access would say that everyone has access, everyone has the ability to go out and purchase an affordable policy. And if they can’t afford it, they have the ability to access a funding mechanism that will provide the type of premium support, the type of premium assistance to get them that coverage. And that debate will occur over the next few months.

Universal coverage, universal access.

On the whole issue of mandates, and this is an important concept for people to understand, is it better to say this is something you have to do, or is it better to create the types of programs that people will actually want to have? Let’s think about that for just a minute.

What does the term “individual mandates” mean? It means a law is passed by a legislative body, in this case the Federal Government, although it has been tried at the State level. An individual mandate means that everyone has to go out and buy insurance. In my home State of Texas, we have that with our automobile policies now. Everyone has to buy an automobile policy. With an individual mandate, that is how we would achieve universal coverage. You have to buy insurance, and if you don’t, there is a penalty to be paid. You have to buy insurance, or pay the fine.

In the State of Massachusetts, in reality what I consider a very bold attempt to provide coverage for everyone, an individual mandate was instituted. It hasn’t worked as planned. It appears that the difficulties encountered in Massachusetts were cited in California as a reason why that State’s plan for universal coverage was recently defeated in the California State Senate. Many people looked at the option, or the requirement, I should say, of buying insurance and said, I don’t know. And then remember the law of supply and demand. We increase the demand because we mandate it, you have to do it. What happens? The option is not up, and as a consequence some people looked at that and said, I really can’t afford that. I will pay the fine rather than buying the insurance. Truly a perverse incentive.

So some of the support for the concept being talked about in California found itself lacking when faced with that equation in another part of the country. How can you consider putting a mandate out, putting that obligation, correctly, in the hands of the citizen? I mean, that is the challenge.

In Massachusetts, people found themselves in a position that they would rather pay the fine for not having the insurance than they would to purchase the insurance itself?

When we talk of mandates, and there have been several studies done on this, think back to the 1960s. The United States Congress put a mandate out there that every motorcycle rider in the country would have to wear a helmet. They reversed that mandate and put that obligation, correctly, in the hands of the citizen that decision. And the reason Congress reversed that decision was the hue and cry and outcry from across the land from motorcycle riders saying that you can’t make me wear a helmet in a free society, and Congress eventually backed down. And so that was kind of an unpleasant experience with mandates.

Most States do have an individual mandate for automobile insurance, and these have been tried at the State level. But it is interesting, one of the States with the best compliance has no individual mandate. So mandates don’t always equal better compliance, and nowhere is that more evident than our current tax structure.

The Internal Revenue Service, which collects our taxes, there’s a mandate. An individual mandate on every person who earns above a certain income level that you will pay taxes. You will pay a percentage of that in taxes and, in fact, everyone knows, it’s no secret that if you don’t pay that tax the punishment is going to be sure, it’s going to be swift, and it’s going to be extremely unpleasant.

We’ve got 15 percent of the country right now that lacks health insurance. Can we get improvement on that number by putting an individual mandate on?

Look at the case with the Internal Revenue Service. A severe mandate, severe penalties for noncompliance, and what is our compliance rate with the Federal Income tax? It’s about 85 percent. In other words, 15 percent don’t comply. So this requires a good deal more study and a good deal more attention than just simply making that leap of faith and saying everyone needs insurance, therefore, there will be an individual mandate that everyone will have insurance.

Again, there were some problems with the cost structure when that was tried in Massachusetts to the point that the people in California, the State Senators in California, when they looked at that, said, maybe that’s not the best idea for us.

Well, once we determine what the overall goal is, then perhaps our path will be a little bit easier. Certainly we want to democratize our health care in a way that preserves choice, makes certain that patient focus is the central theme, and we want to continue to promote innovation, because, remember, America is the country that is known for medical and scientific innovation.

Well, what about the concept of creating products that people actually want? Do we have a model? Do we have a template that we can look at to perhaps discuss that a little further? And, in fact, we do. We passed a bill on the floor of this House, late in the night of November 22, 2003, called the Medicare Modernization Act which provided for a prescription drug benefit for citizens on Medicare who had not had one previously. It was called Medicare part D.

What’s been the experience with Medicare part D? And I will stipulate... that there were people on both sides of the aisle in this House, there were people on the right who were critical of the Medicare part D program, and there was certainly no shortage of critics on the left who were critical of the Medicare program.

But as that program was instituted and has now been up and running for over 2 years, what lessons have we learned from Medicare part D? Well, we’ve learned that more than 90 percent of the people who were eligible for that coverage have, in fact, enrolled.

Wait a minute. With the IRS, with severe and certain and sure penalties, we only get 85 percent compliance. With Medicare part D, by creating programs that had value to patients we’ve got 90 percent compliance, and 80 percent are happy with the program. If we go back to our friends at the IRS and say, what’s the percentage of people that are happy with the way our tax system works, I don’t think the number is 80 percent.

Consider that when we passed that bill on the floor of this House in the early morning hours of November 22, or actually I guess it started on the night of November 21. It was in the early morning of November 23 that the bill actually passed. Consider at that time we were told by the best actuaries at the Office of Management and Budget and the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services that it was going to cost about $37 a month for that coverage. What has the experience been? The average plan costs less than $24 a month now, over 2 years into the program.

So this is a Federal program that relies on some competitive forces and relies on some participation of the private sector, and, in fact, has reined in some of the increase in spending that was feared to accompany this program by restoring the savings and incentives and leveraging competition and getting the buy-in from the patients themselves. What would be the more favorable trajectory? Force people into a program, difficult to do in a free society, and your compliance rate may not be exactly what you want it. Or would it be better to create a program of value that also relied a little bit on some competitive forces to keep that cost down.

Now, one of the great debates that was fought on the floor of this House a year ago when the current majority party took over was the whole concept of reforming the part D benefit. And we don’t hear much about that anymore. They weren’t successful. One of the big proponents, or one of the big themes that was proposed was to cause or ask or demand that the Secretary of Health and Human Services negotiate drug prices with drug companies. I will just tell you from a lifetime in health care that HHS or CMS, they don’t negotiate prices with drug companies. That’s not what they do. And many of us on my side of the aisle felt that that would be countercreative to the way this program was working, and in fact, it was working.

And, you know, Madam Speaker, and this is only partly in jest, but if we wanted to create a program where the head of a Cabinet agency, an agency that, if my memory serves me right, we ought to look to the Department of Education and ask the Secretary of Education to negotiate prices with college deans for the cost of higher education, that might be a better trajectory. I’m waiting to see that legislation come forward from the majority.

But, nevertheless, part D was left untouched last January. I’m grateful that it was, and I think again the numbers speak for themselves. This is a template. This is a model, this is a program that we perhaps should seek to duplicate because it created a condition of value, that consumers, that patients, that individuals wanted, and the compliance rates are high. The saturation rates are high. Most importantly, seniors now are getting the medicines they need to keep them out of the hospitals and out of the doctors offices, and the overall cost for delivering Medicare, while it is still extremely high, is, I think, likely to be sustainable over time, it has at least moderated or ameliorated over the last couple of years. In fact, the trustees’ report from June of last year that came out said the bad news is Medicare is still going to be broke. The good news is it’s going to be broke later than what we told you before. So seeing the beginnings of that cost savings and how that can change the practice of medicine and the delivery of health care in this country, that’s a powerful anecdote for people to consider.

One of the things that we talked about is the speed at which information will come to us in the future. And there’s no question that it’s increasing every day. Most of us, I use the Blackberry on our belt that has more computing power than the big computers on Apollo 13. It’s astounding what’s happened with computer power over the last two or three decades. And we hear a lot about the improvements of health information technology, the improvements in the platforms and what that improvement can mean to patient care, what it can mean to the practice of medicine, what it can mean to bringing down costs. And, indeed, these are powerful influences.

Madam Speaker, I will tell you I haven’t always been a big proponent of things like electronic health records. But as my experience on the ground in Louisiana in 2005 and early 2006 taught, getting to visit the medical records room at Charity Hospital shortly after it had been dewatered, I didn’t know that dewatered was a verb, but, nevertheless, that’s what the Corps of Engineers said they did, and indeed, the showers were now flooding and available for people to go into, the scene in the medical records room, the medical records that were damaged by the high water, damaged by the chemicals that circulated in that water, the black mold that was going on these paper records made it abundantly clear that these were records that could never provide useful information to a patient in a timely fashion, that much more powerful it would have been to have that information available electronically, available to be transmitted from New Orleans to Dallas or Houston or wherever the person was, that if a patient got out of the hospital, and so their likelihood of a long term return to health and productivity was curtailed.
And again, they found this by analyzing financial data, that if they put someone in the hospital for a heart attack, successfully treated them, discharged them, but did not anticipate depression, they were very likely at some point after discharge, to go to the drug store to pay for treatment for depression, for pay treatment of another heart attack because they didn’t comply with the regimen after they got out of the hospital. Very powerful information. And as someone who spent 25 years in clinical medicine, I will tell you, that’s just exactly the type of information that would be extremely valuable to the clinician.

Well, what’s the problem? The Federal Government said 5 years ago that it was going to develop the platforms that private industry would then take up and follow, and we haven’t done it. And yet here’s an individual from the private sector excitedly telling me about what his company is doing and the benefits that they’ve found. And you have to ask yourself, would it not perhaps be better for the Federal Government to allow that to happen, allow a company to develop that type of software, to develop those types of programs, to allow the clinicians now and begin to populate some of those fields with clinical data so that they could get even better and more accurate information.

And that is individual, well, what would it take? What would you need to see from us to allow this to work better for you? And, no great surprise, he talked about the things that we talk about on the floor of this House all the time. He said, it wouldn’t hurt to have some regulatory reform. It wouldn’t hurt to have some reform in what are known as the Stark laws that prevent hospitals and physicians from doing too much together for fear of some type of unjust enrichment. We need to see from us to allow this to appear, he talked about the things that we have to see from us to allow this to happen.

And one of the things I don’t think I can stress enough on the floor of this House, because I don’t think Members understand this, they think, well, just throw him but we are just a part of the practice of medicine. That’s not the whole story. Well, it is about half the story. Actually, the Federal Government does pay for about half of the health care expenditure in this country. If you look at the first moments of this discussion, but the other thing is that the rates by which Medicare reimburses for health care informed the rates that are set by the private insurance companies in this country.

So indirectly, we have a system of Federal price controls on medicine in this country today. And that’s why, when we ratchet down the reimbursement rate for physicians on Medicare, and everyone in the body is quick to say, oh, well, doctors make plenty of money. There’s no need to worry about that. Remember, also, we are affecting not just Medicare, over which we have jurisdiction, but also affecting those reimbursements in the private sector as well because there is not a level playing field between provider and third-party payer. That’s one of the problems inherent in our system. People like the physician don’t actually pay the physician; they pay the insurance companies. Same with the employers. They don’t actually pay the physician; they pay the insurance company.

So that interposition of a third-party intermediary has created a good deal of the tensions and a good deal of the problems that we see today.

But we must not forget, that is a system that is there, that is a system that is in place, and when we make a decision about Medicare reimbursement rates, the ripple effect throughout the health care world in the reimbursements is significant. It’s profound, and it is immediate.

One of the things that I feel very strongly about is that we do need to help people know what they’re buying and what they’re getting in health care. And one of the bills that I introduced early in the first session, the last year of this Congress, was H.R. 1666, which does deal with health care transparency.

It sets a floor of a level of transparency that should be available in every State. Many States have already undertaken this work. My home State of Texas has, and, in fact, patients can go to the Internet to a Web site, it’s texaspricepoint.org, abbreviation tpxpoint.org. texaspricepoint.org, where they can get information about the hospitals in their county. Most of it is pricing information. Other information, other useful clinical information such as length of stay is also available. And I promise that if I expect there will also be the transparency about things like complication rates and infection rates, but it’s still a work in progress. Other States have done similar activities. The State of Florida with its RxCompare, People can compare prices for different prescriptions, which has been useful for the people of Florida.

What the intent of H.R. 1666 was to not provide a Federal standard but at least to provide a level of transparency beyond what States have done. And I would like to see this House of Representatives at some time take on this problem, because I think it is one that is extremely important.

It does lead into the other issue of how States and hospitals report complications, such as infections. And, again, I do think there is a role for Congress. I do think there is a role for the Federal Government, not so much in writing that legislation State-by-State, but providing the framework by which the reporting can occur to allow a Federal agency such as the Centers for Disease Control the ability then to aggregate that data and provide useful information back in real-time to the States and to the hospitals and to the physicians about infection rates in their particular areas.

Most epidemiologists will tell you the chance to measure is the chance to cure, or the chance to prevent, in the case of infections, and metrics, just the activity of undergoing the metrics in those conditions, will often times lead to improvements that were unanticipated at the beginning of that program of metrics.

Other legislation that’s out there that deals with our physician workforce, H.R. 2583, H.R. 2584, both bills designed to affect individuals earlier in their career, in the health care workforce even prior to the entrance into medical school, the ability to provide a little bit more flexibility and a little bit more balance in the health profession scholarship, a little bit more flexibility in loan forgiveness and tax incentives for individuals who are going to medical school and will agree to practice in medically underserved areas in high-need specialties, and that is essentially primary care, also fields like OB/GYN and general surgery, to provide a little bit more flexibility to help incent people who are willing to work in those areas.

And we know that there is significant lifestyle decisions that they are making to undertake those type of careers.
And then there’s another program to increase the number of primary care residencies that are available, again, in high-need areas, medically underserved areas for specialties that are in high demand, and, again, we are principally talking about the primary care specialties.

The barriers for entry for a medium-sized to moderate-sized hospital to start up a residency program are essentially the same as those startup costs in this legislation can be provided for in a loan. And there will be a loan that is paid back so that money will recirculate, and the overall return to the taxpayer is increased that way. It will allow those hospitals the ability to set up a residency program where none has existed in the past. And I can think of many, many hospitals in my home State of Texas that could benefit from that type of activity.

And one of the things when people study how physician manpower is distributed, you can say a lot of things about doctors, but sometimes we are not very imaginative and we don’t tend to go very far from where we trained, and they have valid reasons for that. You get comfortable with referral patterns. People know you from your training program, so they’re apt to refer to you. There’s a degree of comfort there. And myself, for example, I went into practice less than 25 miles from where I did my training. A lot of doctors do follow that same sort of trajectory.

So if we can move the training programs into the areas that need the physicians, it may then follow that those physicians who train in those programs will end up staying in those medically underserved areas.

It’s difficult for me to come to the floor of the House and talk about things related to health care and at least not mention some of the problems that we face with our medical justice system in this country. And I know there are lots of people out there with a lot of ideas, caps on noneconomic damages, medical courts, early offer arbitration. The time has come for us to have a serious discussion to put some of the partisan differences aside, to put some of the special interests aside and have a rational discussion about how we can meaningfully impact that problem in this country.

My home State of Texas passed rather significant legislation 4 years ago dealing with the issue of caps on noneconomic damages. It was patterned after an earlier California law, the Medical Injury Reform Act of 1975. It was passed out in California, which put a $250,000 cap on non-economic damages. The Texas legislation was a little bit different. Instead of a single cap, there were three different caps, each capped at $250,000, but the aggregate was $750,000 compensation available for noneconomic damages. It has worked very well in my home State of Texas.

The year that I left practice to come to Congress, we were in crisis. We had gone from 17 medical liability insurers down to two. You certainly don’t get much in the way of competition when you only have two insurers, and as a consequence, the price for those premiums was ever escalating. Now we have had many insurers come back to the State of Texas, and the price for those premiums has dropped without an increase in premiums. And, in fact, Texas Medical Liability Trust, my last insurer of record, has returned, the last time I checked, 22 percent reductions and has significantly reduced the premiums that they cover. And that’s significant because, remember, these premiums were going up by 10, 15, 20 or 25 percent per year over year, and then on the past 4 years, they’ve not only stabilized, but they’ve come down 22 percent.

Small and medium-sized hospitals that self-insure for medical liability have had to put less in reserve against a bad judgment, and as a consequence, there has been more money to spend on just exactly the kinds of things you want your community hospital to be spending its money on: things like nurses’ salaries, capital improvement, investing in their capital infrastructure.

So it is a good news story from the State of Texas in terms of what we’ve been able to do with liability in my home State, and I’m not going to say that’s the only answer, but I think it is a very good answer. I introduced legislation, H.R. 3509, to essentially provide the Texas legislation on a national scale.

In fact, we had a lot of talk about the budget earlier tonight. Last year, I offered that bill to the Budget Committee because the Congressional Budget Office scored it as nearly a $4 billion savings over 5 years. I realize that’s not much when you are talking about a $3 trillion budget, but that’s $4 billion. That’s a significant savings, and I was willing to donate that to the Congress.

Take up that concept, write it into law in your budget resolution, and let’s get something done to stabilize medical liability prices in this country, so much for my home State of Texas, as we’ve already done it. But what about Pennsylvania? What about New Jersey? What about Maryland? What about New York? Maybe those areas could benefit from some of that same type of thinking as well.

Well, I think it is important for me to make the point one last time that medicine is evolving in a big way. It’s going to change significantly in our lifetime.

Well, H.R. 4190 is an intriguing concept. I haven’t had much interest as far as cosponsorship is concerned, but it’s still out there. It’s still available, and I welcome Members from both sides of the aisle to think about that, to look at that, and see if we couldn’t forge a common bond and a good-faith effort to really do something for the people who lack insurance coverage in this country or the people who are fearful that they will lose their insurance company if their job changes or their financial situation changes.

There’s a lot of things out there on the horizon, Madam Speaker. There is a lot of good that this Congress can do. I think it is important for me to make the point one last time that medicine is evolving in a big way. It’s going to change significantly in our lifetime.
Mr. ALTMIRE. Madam Speaker, we’re here this evening as part of the Speaker’s 30-Something Working Group, and I’m going to be joined by some other members of that group who will be familiar faces to our colleagues who have participated in these Special Orders presentations.

We’re going to talk specifically tonight about the budget that the President dropped on our doorstep on Monday. It was an exciting set of days for the American people. We, of course, had Super Bowl Sunday, one of the most exciting Super Bowls we’ve ever seen. We had Super Tuesday last night, very exciting for all the American people. But what was going to unfold for the Presidential election for this year. And in the middle of that, we had Monday.

And what happened on Monday? Most Americans, well, not a whole lot happened, but in Congress a lot happened because the President put before us a $3.1-trillion budget. Now, the American people may say, well, that sounds like a lot of money, and it is a lot of money. But what does it look like? What does $3.1 trillion look like? Our colleagues may be interested to see that. This, Madam Speaker, is what $3.1 trillion looks like. This is what the President sent us, both electronically and in this document, the entire Federal budget as proposed by the administration for the coming fiscal year 2009.

I’m going to talk a little bit about what’s in this budget, but before I do that, I’d like to take a little look back down memory lane for our colleagues. And many don’t need to be reminded of this fact, but in the last 4 years of the previous administration we had four consecutive budget surpluses. And those surpluses, at the end of that administration, the beginning of the current administration, budget surpluses were forecast as far as the eye can see. And there was every reason to expect that we would see that continuing. And that was going to be balanced throughout the next administration. The projection over 10 years by the Congressional Budget Office was $5.5 trillion of budget surplus over 10 years. That was the projection. Well, now we’re 7 years, going on 8 years, into this new administration. This is the eighth and final budget that President Bush is going to send to this Congress. And what has been the outcome of this $5.5 trillion surplus? And we talk about the Presidential election, Madam Speaker, and I would remind my colleagues about the debate of the 2000 election. The number one issue that was discussed in that election was, what are we going to do with this surplus? And what does it look like we have an enormous budget surplus, $5.5 trillion, and all the ways that that money could be used. Are we going to pay down the debt? Are we going to shore up Social Security, put that money into the trust fund? How are we going to use this enormous surplus that’s facing us over the next 10 years? That was the debate in the year 2000.

Well, in this Presidential election year we’re not having that debate anymore because, you see, Madam Speaker, that surplus is gone. That surplus was gone in the first year of this administration. Instead of $5.5 trillion of budget surplus over a 10-year period, we’ve got $407 billion deficit spending over the first 7 years of this administration. And I’m going to talk in some detail about what this fiscal year 2009 budget says, and it includes an enormous amount of deficit spending. And this is a budget that for the eighth time in 8 years continues enormous deficit spending. But we can’t lose sight of the fact that when this administration first came into office, that wasn’t the projection. That wasn’t the way it was supposed to be and that wasn’t the way it had to be. But, unfortunately, decisions were made in a fiscally irresponsible manner, and now before us is a budget that is $407 billion over budget. We have a $4.1 trillion deficit for one year, fiscal year 2009, the third highest single year budget deficit ever submitted to the Congress behind only the budget that was sent to us last year by this President, which was $410 billion, and the 2004 budget also submitted to this Congress by the President. So we have a record here of destroying projected surpluses and creating record deficits. $9.2 trillion of debt, Madam Speaker, faces this country before this administration deficit that’s been submitted to us.

We can’t continue to charge things to the credit card. The way the previous administration turned the all-time record deficits of the 1980s into all-time record surpluses in the 1990s was through pay-as-you-go budget scoring. And that’s very simple: It’s what we all do in our own home checkbooks. It’s what every business in America is forced to do. You have to have money for the month. You can’t go against the future. And if you want to increase spending or if you see a decrease in your revenue, you have to have an offset on the other side to balance it out. Well, those are the rules that this Congress operated under from 1991 through 2001. Unfortunately, this administration did away, and the Congress, in conjunction at that time in 2001 going into 2002, did away with pay-as-you-go budget scoring. The President, before this current session of Congress, every penny that was spent through the Federal Government was charged to the national credit card. We’re going to let somebody else worry about it. We’re going to transfer this funding to our children, our grandchildren, and our grandparents’ grandchildren.

Well, unfortunately, the problem with using credit cards that way is the bill comes due, and the bill has come due, Madam Speaker.

We’re going to talk about the coming economic crisis that this country faces, the possibility, if not the certainty, of a recession, and the economic stimulus package that this Congress came together in a bipartisan way to put forward to help resolve that issue. We’re going to save that discussion for a little bit later.

But in the discussion over the budget, we can’t be losing sight of a $407 billion deficit budget before this Congress, that this President has made incredibly deep cuts in some very important programs that mean a lot to a lot of people in this country, Veterans programs, community policing initiatives, Medicare cut by $56 billion over 10 years, a cut in Medicare at a time when you’re exploding the deficit by $407 billion. And we’re going to talk specifically about the misplaced priorities included in this budget.

Before we go line by line and get into that level of detail, Madam Speaker, I do want to turn it over at this point to my 30-Something colleague, Mr. MURPHY from Connecticut, who has joined us and is going to give us some detail on what he views the budget as.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Thank you very much, Mr. ALTMIRE. I don’t want to take too much time because I know the American people are eager to hear your detailed line-by-line analysis of this President’s budget, so let me be brief.

You hit it on the head here. I mean, this budget that the President has proposed to us is the worst of both worlds. It cuts spending on programs that every American needs — middle-class seniors and the disabled use to simply grab hold of the apparatus of opportunity that has been stolen from them, and at the same time, it continues to spend wildly in other parts of the budget. It continues to give away massive, unjustified tax breaks for the richest 1 percent of Americans that aren’t even being asked for by many of those people. And it results in a pretty ugly picture over the next several years for this Nation if we were to adopt the budget that the President put before us.

It would mean massive cuts, as you’ve already laid out, to health care programs, to law enforcement programs. And, Mr. ALTMIRE, this budget has got a 100-percent cut to the COPS program. The COPS program is the acronym for the community policing initiative that was started by President Clinton over 10 years ago. It is one of the most successful government programs that this Nation has ever seen. Any Member of this House on the Republican side of the aisle or the Democratic side of the aisle can just go down to their local police department, any one of them, and ask their local cops whether or not community policing has worked. It has. That’s not me saying it, that’s not just the statistics saying it, that’s the experiences of thousands of community policemen who have been on the beat for years.

Now, what’s happened over time is the Republican Congress year after year slashed and burned that line item, and so many communities either had to take cops off the community policing beat or start picking up the tab themselves. That means increased property taxes for people because somebody has to pay for it. And this budget that we're looking at right now takes out the entire amount for community policing. I guess I just don't understand how you justify that. I mean, I would love to have somebody from the administration on this floor try to explain in a commonsense way why they don't believe that the experienced thousands of communities and thousands of police officers is true, that community policing works.

But here's the other side of this equation, Mr. ALTMIRe, and I know we're going to talk about this. At the same time, it's not like we're getting anywhere for all of the cuts in this budget because this budget envelopes the Federal deficit continuing to explode. Now, this is a small little chart, you probably think this is pretty dramatic, but accurate, representation of what's going to happen to the Federal debt.

In 2001, we had about $5.8 trillion in Federal debt, and you can at least see that we're going to have a double digit in one direction. Under the President's budget, by 2013 we're going to owe $13.3 trillion to foreign nations, Mr. ALTMIRe.

We are cutting funding for programs that matter, we are spending money wildly out of scope of the budget, primarily in the defense budget, and what we get in the end is a Federal budget that is more out of whack, more out of balance than it ever has been, and families who are struggling, amidst this economic slowdown, who are going to see less services and less help from their government.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Let me stop you there for a second, because I liked what he said, too. But I would have liked it if he had said it for the last 7 years of his administration. I mean, you know, I hope it wasn't lost on anyone watching that State of the Union speech that for the last seven Congresses, as the Republican-led majority has spiraled spending out of control, has added on political earmark after political earmark, the President was absolutely silent on that matter. And it is just incredibly convenient that in the year in which the Democrats take control of the House of Representatives, the gentleman has added on money to put cops on the streets. I don't think it's a coincidence that we sat here together in this Chamber and listened to the President's State of the Union Address. And I liked some of what the President had to say on fiscal responsibility, challenging the Congress, challenging his administration to take the budget and make tough decisions and be fiscally responsible.

Mr. ALTMIRe. Well, and again, the things that were said as far as fiscal responsibility made some sense, and I was happy to hear them. And you're right, we had not heard them over the past 7 years, and that led to the deficits that this gentleman and I have both talked about.

Now, we sat here and we heard that. And I thought that hopefully that would translate to the President submitting a budget where the actions actually matched the words that we had previously heard. But, unfortunately, it didn't. The President, a week later, submits to Congress a budget that's $407 billion out of balance. And we're living in a time when the second largest line item in the Federal budget that is before us is the interest on the national debt, which is $9.2 trillion. The second largest line item in this budget is interest on the national debt. Now, that alarms me, Mr. MURPHY, and I'm sure it alarms you. And I would like to be able to say honestly that if I was submitting a budget before Congress and I would want to show, having just talked about fiscal responsibility, that I was committed to fiscal responsibility. But, unfortunately, we have a budget that makes all the wrong decisions because it is fiscally irresponsible, it does have misplaced priorities, it does move in the wrong direction as far as increasing the deficit at a time when we already have a record debt, but it cuts programs like Medicare and Medicaid.

This is at a time when more and more Americans are struggling to afford health care, especially senior citizens. And to propose a budget that cuts Medicare by $556 billion over a 10-year period, at the same time freezing payments to hospitals, to nursing homes, to hospices, to home health agencies, it just doesn't make any sense because health care costs aren't going to stop. Health care costs have been going up above the rate of inflation every year for as far as anyone can remember.

The technology that's used for health care, the increase in the amount of baby boomers that are qualifying for the Medicare program for the first time this year, in 2008. The costs of Medicare are exploding. So to just say we are going to cut Medicare over the next 10 years doesn't mean health care is going to be less expensive, fewer people are going to qualify, and fewer people are going to put in the program. And certainly it doesn't mean that home health agencies, hospices, and hospitals are going to have fewer expenses just because we are going to be reimbursing them.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALTMIRe. I would.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Let's hammer that home in a real world way for people. What does it mean when the President's budget reduces payments to nursing homes? In Connecticut, we have had a real crisis with a particular nursing home group that has gotten a lot of attention in the paper, Mr. ALTMIRe, in the last several months regarding some really inexcusable conditions that the level of staffing, no remediation when violations had been found. And that problem is not going to get better if the solution from the Federal Government is to cut the funding that goes to those nursing homes. These nursing homes are already stretched very thin. There already isn't enough staff to cover the residents and make sure that seniors that are staying there are living under safe and humane conditions at all times in some places.

This cut that the President is talking about in the cut and reimbursement rates to nursing homes is going to have a direct effect on the care that many want to give away another mass of seniors get in this country. Your loved ones, your neighbors, their care is going to be compromised by this.

The safety of your community is potentially going to be compromised by a zeroing out of the COPS budget. Communities will be less safe because there will be fewer community police on the beat. Those are the real world consequences of the budget that the President is putting before us.

And the question is just a matter of choices. And that's what I hope that every Member of this House goes out and endeavors to ask over the next month or so as we debate this Bush budget, which is an economic and that your community wants to spend another $70 billion in Iraq rather than put cops on the beat or put staff in your grandmother's nursing home? Are you sure that the constituents in your district want to see a tax break to the richest 1 percent of Americans instead of putting cops on the beat or putting staff in your grandmother's nursing home? Those are the questions that people are going to have to ask. And I thought that hopefully that's the answer. And I thought, there's only one answer to that in any district in this country whether you are represented by a Republican or a Democrat.

Mr. ALTMIRe. And the gentleman knows that there are three legs to this stool that we are talking about. One is the increase in spending leading to the deficit. One is the misplaced priorities of the cuts to programs that are critical. And the third that's important that's left out of this budget that we all know we have to deal with, and I'm going to save that discussion for a little bit later as we walk through some of these programs. But the full cost of the Iraq war, the cost of the alternative minimum tax relief for this year are not included in this budget. So a $407 billion deficit without even including probably the two largest items that we are going to have to face in the next year, we'll get to that point, but there are a lot of issues here.

When I talk to people when I go back home in the district, I hear a lot about entitlement spending, and when I go home, I think I can make a pretty good case that Medicare is important and we shouldn’t be cutting Medicare at a time when the number of people qualifying for Medicare is rising exponentially and health care costs are going up. I can make a pretty good case, I think, for that. But I will still hear people say, You know what? I’m not on Medicare. That’s an entitlement program. I don’t care about that. Cut it. It’s a cut that nobody can justify or cut the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on the health side. That is a cut that everybody says that they’re wrong, but they say it. Well, there are some things in this budget that nobody, nobody in their right mind could justify freezes or cuts in these types of programs. And maybe our colleagues are out there and they say, Show me. What are you talking about? What is in the budget that we shouldn’t cut?

Well, how about research, health care research through the National Institutes of Health? I think that’s something that affects everybody. If you’re not directly affected by health care research, you certainly have somebody in your family or you have somebody, a loved one or a friend, that is affected. And let’s talk about the type of research we’re talking about.

This budget freezes funding for life-saving medical research at the NIH, National Institutes of Health, regarding diseases such as Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, cancer, and heart disease. At a time when we are struggling to compete in the global economy, this country is greater than anywhere else in the world and our research and our ability to find treatments and cures for these diseases exceeds any time in the history of the planet, we are going to cut funding for medical research for Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, cancer, and heart disease? I think, Mr. MURPHY, that we make a pretty good case that that’s not a cut that should happen.

This budget also slashes funding, and this is inexcusable, slashes funding by $433 million, 7 percent of the overall budget for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, responsible for infectious disease control, prevention programs, and health promotion. So we hear a lot about the avian flu, the bird flu, the possibility of a pandemic through diseases, whether it be a terroristic issue or just something we can’t control on the health side. That may be one cut that I would cut it. The possibility of a pandemic flu, a worldwide spread of some disease, and we’re going to take this opportunity to cut the Centers for Disease Control specifically for infectious diseases by 7 percent. That’s what we are going to cut in this budget when we are adding $407 billion to the national debt for 1 year? I think it’s inexcusable. So I really don’t think there is anybody that I am going to run into in my district that’s going to say that’s a good idea.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. I just want to share a story with you, if you will yield, Mr. ALTMIERE. I was getting on a plane this morning to come down to Washington from my district, and an older gentleman recognized me as I was going through the security checkpoint. And he stopped me, and he said, I have written you a letter. I’ve got a real problem with what you’re doing down there. And I said, Talk to me about it.

And he looked me in the eye and started to tear up, and he said, My wife died of cancer last year. And he said, I can’t for the life of me understand why you guys, and he lumped us all together, and I tried to explain the differences a little bit to him, but it’s a very emotional moment. He said, I can’t understand how you guys are cutting the funding for the programs that might save the life of the next wife who has cancer and instead you’re spending money, billions of dollars, cuts for the wealthy. The priorities that’s making us less safe. And he was tearing up.

I mean, this is a personal and emotional issue for so many people in this country, as they know they have a loved one who would be hurt by those cuts.

Mr. ALTMIERE. Absolutely. And I thank the gentleman for that story. And I’ve had many, many instances in my district where people wonder why we are cutting Alzheimer’s funding, where they have a loved one who has struggled with that disease.

I also want to talk about education and what this budget does for education. I think just about anyone should agree that’s a national priority. Few things in the budget are more important than education. Well, what does this budget do for education?

This budget freezes education funding, which results in cuts in real terms. And instead of investing in innovation in the classroom, the budget eliminates, the $267 million program providing grants to States for classroom technology. It freezes the $179 million mathematics and science partnerships. At a time when we’re struggling to compete in the global economy with countries like China and India, and we’re hanging onto our science education, we are cutting it. At least the President is proposing cutting it in his budget.

It freezes targeted improvement and achievement in math and science programs that that. And instead of making college more affordable, the budget eliminates, completely eliminates, supplemental education opportunities; the Pell grant. Then all the college assistance for higher education in this country, eliminates; and the Leveraging Education Assistance Partnership program, the LEAP program, the program that is necessary to provide financial support specifically targeted to needy students who otherwise wouldn’t have the opportunity to pursue a higher education. These are the programs that are being eliminated under this budget. Not frozen, not cut, but eliminated.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. At the very time, Mr. ALTMIERE, where our country is most in need of a skilled workforce, I mean you know it, because you do the same tours that I do to manufacturing facilities and worksites, that every company in our district is screaming to us, Do something about the workforce. I can hire people if you make sure that they are trained and educated and ready to work on day one. So we’re sort of seeing a massive slowdown in this economy, potentially on the way to a recession, this is the very worst time to be cutting back our commitment to higher education programs, to worker and job training programs. That’s going to run totally counter to what we have been doing here in this Congress.

I mean, we need to remind the President that he signed into law the biggest expansion in college aid since the GI bill, increasing the maximum allowable Pell grant, the direct grant to students by $500, providing for loan forgiveness to potentially tens or hundreds of thousands of students who go into public service professions; and, importantly, interest rate for student loans in half from 6.8 to 3.4 percent, which is going to save the average college student in Connecticut about $1,000 over the lifetime of the repayment of their loan. That’s real dollars when you couple it together with the other benefits that that package had.

And that was a bipartisan success. That was conceived by Democrats. It took Democrats taking control of Congress to put that on the agenda. But there were a lot of our friends on the Republican side of the aisle that voted for it, and there was a President, maybe reluctantly, because he changed his position over time, but there was a President that signed that.

So we have come together as a Congress to recognize the importance of helping kids and helping families pay for the increasing cost of higher education, and we should especially recognize the importance of that when our economy is having trouble getting its engine going. That’s when we should be investing in workers. That’s when we should be investing in education. And as you have so ably and accurately outlined, Mr. ALTMIRe, this President's budget does an immediate 180 degree turn on the investments that we have been making and should continue to make in higher education. Mr. ALTMIRe. And the gentleman from Connecticut represents a district in some ways that is similar to my district. We both have a manufacturing base that has suffered in recent years as a result of the global economy and a variety of factors. And as the gentleman mentioned, every time there should be finding ways to help people that have suffered as a result of these job losses and a loss of manufacturing, find new job training sources, find educational opportunities for our kids so they can stay in our communities instead of having to leave town, a problem that we are struggling with. I think, probably in both of our districts, the President uses this budget as an opportunity to eliminate, not freeze, not cut, but eliminate vocational education.

And he slashes the Safe and Drug-Free Schools program by 45 percent; afterschool programs by 26 percent; teacher quality State grants by $100 million, which helps incentivize high-quality people to go into the teaching profession, people who have other options, who could become doctors or lawyers or chemists or any other profession. We want to incentivize the best and brightest in this country to go into teaching our kids, and everyone knows the importance of what goes along with that. Well, the President proposes cutting the budget by $100 million for that program.

And, similarly, the gentleman from Connecticut talked about the fact that middle-class workers are seeing their wages stagnate and American jobs have been lost, 17,000 lost jobs just last month. And at this time when we should be finding ways to stimulate the economy, jobs, investment. President's budget slashes $234 million for job training programs.

Again, not to repeat myself, but it is worth pointing out, in an atmosphere of a budget that creates $407 billion in deficit spending, out of balance, and that slashes employment services more than $500 million in cuts for Americans looking for work. These are people who are motivated, who want to find jobs, who are looking for work, and he eliminates grants to States to provide employment services for job seekers and employers cutting one-stop career centers. This, I said, at the very time when we are trying to find ways to retrain those workers so they can move into other careers, educate themselves so they can stay in western Pennsylvania, and what are we doing? The President is proposing cutting these job training programs. It is just inexcusable.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. It doesn't make sense. It wouldn't make sense even in good economic times, Mr. ALTMIRe, because you know even in the so-called boom years of the 1990s and earlier in this decade, those jobs were still the least secure. And the jobs were still leaving the northwestern part of Connecticut. And you always need to have just that safety net, just enough help for people to bounce back, because the folks that live in our districts, as they do across the Nation, these are proud, proud people. They want a job. They want to work hard. They do not want to be out of work. They do not want to be undertaken. And they are going to take the opportunities that we give them just to be able to bounce back and reenter the economy. That is all we are talking about with these programs. This isn't permanent job assistance. This isn't the welfare state. This is just, listen, your company went out of business, shipped to China, shipped their jobs down to Mexico. We're going to help you for a certain period of time learn a new skill so you can get back and be a productive member of society. That is an important economic time but most critical now when more and more people need that help, Mr. ALTMIRe, that is critical right now.

Mr. ALTMIRe. And the gentleman knows there is another thing that our amigos in foreign are and that is that we have harsh winters. We have been known to have harsh winters. And another thing that gets cut in this budget inexcusably is home heating assistance. And with regard to energy generally, we have a time where we have all time record energy prices. Families across the country are struggling with finding a way to pay their bills directly related to the price of oil and gas. And at that time, you would think that the President would view that as a priority in his budget. But instead, it severely cuts assistance to seniors and to families with children in paying their home heating bills through the LIHEAP program. Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, very important in my area in western Pennsylvania. He cuts it by $570 million nationwide, $19 million of which comes from the State of Pennsylvania. And this program reduces the number of households getting help through the LIHEAP program nationwide by 1.2 million people. These are low-income families with children. These are senior citizens that simply don't have the financial ability to pay their heating costs, and you are going to knock, with this budget, 1.2 million of them off the rolls.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Let's view this through a broader prism, and I think if you do, you see that this cut, particularly, is even crueler because we were set up for this moment. I mean, this has been 7 years of an energy policy which has been designed to do only one thing, a cynic might say, put more money into the hands of the big international oil companies, run by a lot of the friends of the folks that are in this administration. We have had an energy policy which has done nothing, has done nothing, essentially, to decrease the amount of money paying to gas up their car or heat their homes. We have profits of record magnitudes coming from ExxonMobil and Chevron and BP and all of these major multinational oil conglomerates. We have had a Federal policy, led by this President and probably more accurately led by his Vice President, Vice President CHENEY in his secret, closed-door meetings that have constructed most of this energy policy, that have stolen billions of dollars from American consumers with the tax breaks and regulatory giveaways to the oil industry that have allowed them to continue with no abandon to rip off American consumers. The LIHEAP program is just an added insult to an energy policy which has taken money out of American taxpayers' pockets and putting it into the oil companies' treasuries.

The LIHEAP program simply says this, this has been the policy of this administration and the Republican Congress for the last 8 years, for the last 6 years, they have said, we're going to do nothing to help you with prices, we are just going to continue to watch energy prices spiral and spiral and spiral and have no short-term or long-term strategy to do anything about it. But on the back end, we're going to help you a little bit with some subsidy dollars for the people in your community that are so hard up they are going to need some help to pay those bills or else they would freeze in their houses, which is where you are talking about people who are potentially freezing in their houses if they don't get a little bit of help from their government to pay for their heating oil bills, largely seniors on fixed incomes in your community. And only do we have an administration that is not willing to work with us on reforming our energy policy to break our addiction to foreign-produced oil, to finally get a grip on these spiraling oil prices because we have got an administration that cares more about the pockets of their oil company friends than the pockets of the regular, average, everyday consumers, now also we are taking away that small, tiny little subsidy that prevents people from freezing in their homes because they can't afford to heat it.

When you step back a little bit, when you are right in that budget, everybody here should make it one of their top priorities, whether you live in a cold weather State or a warm weather State, to put the money back for the LIHEAP program that cares more for the heating assistance for low-income people. But let's also understand that it is even more egregious given the fact that we could have done something 10 years ago, 5 years ago, to prevent ourselves from getting into a position where we are continuing to subsidize these big energy companies and have to be reliant on low-income heating assistance to keep people warm in the winter.

Mr. ALTMIRe. I think this is exactly why it is important to have this discussion, to walk through these programs in the budget and talk about what exactly we are talking about when we talk about these tremendous cuts that we are facing? And as I said earlier, I have people in my district that say, cut it, cut it, Federal spending, we need to cut it. And we do have an enormous deficit. We have an all time record debt, and we do need to find a way to reduce the Federal deficit. Nobody can disagree with that.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. Just to make one point there, the Democratic budget that we passed last year balanced the Federal budget in 5 years. For the first time since the Clinton administration, we are going to have a balanced Federal budget. This isn't pie-in-the-sky rhetoric that you are putting out there, Mr. ALTMIRe. The Democrats found a way, and what we passed at the end of last year to invest money in education, in environmental protection, in health care and do it in a responsible way that provides for a balanced budget in 5 years. There is a way to do it, and we are finding it here. We can do it again.

Mr. ALTMIRe. That is exactly where I was going to go. I thank the gentleman for his comments.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. I'm in your head, Mr. ALTMIRe.

Mr. ALTMIRe. I appreciate that. The fact is the Democrats in this Congress have made the tough decisions. We submitted a budget last year, and I am sure we will do so again this year that achieve for the first time since the previous administration. Nobody can disagree that there is room for more cuts. There is room for more reductions. But what we want to do here tonight in this 30-Something Special Order is to talk about the programs that shouldn't be cut, the programs that are critically important to this country that the President has made a decision to reduce.

We talked about Medicare. We talked about Federal programs for health care, for research. We talked about the Centers for Disease Control, infectious disease prevention. We talked about education. We talked about the LIHEAP program, home heating energy assistance, and unfortunately the list doesn't end there. It is incredible to think that at a time when we are facing a recession in this country driven by a lot of different factors, but nobody can dispute perhaps the number one driving factor over the past several months and maybe the past couple of years is the subprime mortgage issue and home foreclosures and people struggling to afford their mortgages, finding a way to make that monthly payment. Despite the growing problems in the subprime mortgage crisis, inexplicably this budget that we are talking about tonight cuts loan counseling for those at risk of losing their homes. The name of the program is the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation. It cuts it by 87 percent, at a time when we are struggling as a Nation with a subprime crisis that the world has never seen before, or at least America has never seen before. At a time when the crisis is at almost at its peak point, and we are going to cut by 87 percent the program that helps those most at risk, 2 million people in this country at risk of losing their homes. The people most at risk of losing their homes are facing an 87 percent cut. It is ludicrous.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. I know we have our freshman colleagues coming in after us, so we are going to give them some room here.

But I want to turn for a few minutes to a subject that you alluded to earlier, and I know you may have some more areas here in which we want to talk about what the devastating cuts are going to do, but I want to talk for a second before we hand it off to some of our other freshman colleagues about what is not in the budget, and you alluded to it before, most importantly, the cost of the war isn't truly reflected in this budget.

In fact, some staff members on the Republican side made a comment earlier today that they even admit that the $70 billion that is put in this budget is essentially just a downpayment on what we are going to need to perpetuate the costs of this war in Iraq for the rest of the year. And it is just I think becoming impossible for our constituents to really understand why we can't include the costs of this war, whether you agree with it or disagree with it. We will save that for another day. I just want to talk to you about where I am on this question. I believe that we should get ourselves out of this mess sooner rather than later in a planned-for way. But while we are there, and while we are still spending money, let's pay for it. Let's budget for it responsibly.

Now, I think you could probably make the argument in the first year or 2 years of this conflict that it was emergency spending, and that there shouldn't be made in the first few years of the war in Iraq and the war in Afghanistan that we were going to need to borrow some money for that. I have no problem understanding that in emergency circumstances, we are going to have to do some deficit spending. Nobody likes that. But with regard to the economic stimulus package that we are passing, it makes sense in very narrow circumstances to borrow some money in order to get some short-term gain when things are going in an emergency basis. But we are 5 years into this war now, both in Iraq and Afghanistan. It is not catching us by surprise anymore. It is not an emergency expenditure anymore. We can plan years in advance for the money that we are spending on this war. There is no justification for this money not being in the budget. What happens is it is just hidden. When you get these figures about how big the deficit is, and you compare it to the President's budget, which we obviously won't do, but if we were to pass the President's budget, that doesn't even take into account the real costs of this war. If I were a taxpayer out there that was against this war, I would be greatly aggrieved, and I think they are greatly aggrieved by the fact that we are not paying for it. Well, we're going to. We're going to. Because these bills, whether they are on the tab of the war or whether they are on the tab of the domestic programs that haven't been paid for for years, they are going to be paid at some point. Those bills and those promissory notes are going to come due, and they are going to be paid for by your children and my future children, and your future grandchildren and my future grandchildren. We are hamstringing generations to come to pay for the costs of this war, and we should account for it.

The second thing that is not covered, Mr. ALTMIRe, is this thing that we keep on talking about down here called the alternative minimum tax. Now, I know there are still a lot of people out there that don't understand what the alternative minimum tax is because year after year, Congress has done the right thing and has held in abeyance the adjustment to the alternative minimum tax that would essentially make it cover most middle-class taxpayers in this country. In my district in Connecticut we have about 20,000 people that pay the alternative minimum tax that was initially set up just to cover the richest of the rich who weren't paying their income tax through deductions or were paying very little tax through deductions and credits. If we don't fix the Alternative Minimum Tax again this year, in my district it is going to go from like 19,000 people paying it to like 80,000 people paying it. It is going to be a huge problem, thousands of additional dollars in tax obligations for millions of Americans. Well, the President doesn't say anything about that in this budget. I think he just assumes that we are going to fix it again, but he doesn't put the cost of doing that in the budget.

As for the war, as for the costs of the war that aren't in this budget, if you tack on the costs of once again fixing the Alternative Minimum Tax which we should do and put that in the budget, this deficit is enormous, is enormous. I think we should be having a serious discussion here about where we are going to do this in the budget. Through all this sort of gimmicky that we see, all this trickery in how the numbers are accounted for, the war is not in there, the Alternative Minimum Tax fix isn’t in there. I know this sort of goes over the head of a lot of people out there, because they say this is just the logistics of a budget. This is just numbers, where you put one number, where you put another number. It makes it harder, because you can’t hide money that we have to spend. Whether you put it in the budget or out of the budget, if you spend the dollar, somebody is going to have to pay for it. Maybe not now, but in 10 years or 20 years.

Mr. ALTMIRE, part of the reason that the 30-Something Working Group talks so much about deficit spending is because we are going to be around when those bills come due. We have an obligation, I think a special obligation as some of the younger Members of this House, to cry bloody murder when this President tries to do more deficit spending than he is even telling us here, because it is going to be our generation, my generation, the generation that is going to have to pay for it.

Mr. ALTMIRE. That is right. The gentleman talked about the assumption in the budget being submitted. Because the gentleman wasn’t here when I should do it, gentleman, as he knows, what $3.1 trillion looks like. This is what it looks like. This is what the President dropped on your desk and mine on Monday. This is the budget we are talking about. So for our colleagues who are joining us late, this is the budget that we are discussing tonight.

The assumption that was made in putting this budget together by the administration, by President Bush, was that Congress would act on the Alternative Minimum Tax, and, of course, we will. We are not going to allow that to lapse, which would result in an increase for 23 million people in the country, a tax increase, 70,000 in my district, 80,000 additional in his district. So, of course, we are going to deal with the AMT.

It is tough. It is a difficult way to have to do policy, to do it year-to-year. It is probably not the best way. We made a tough decision in December, we will make another tough decision at the end of this year, and the President knows we are going to have to do it and we are going to have to pay for it, because that is what we have to do. It is not an option in the cost of this $3.1 trillion budget.

I know we are running short on time, so I did want to just summarize a few of the other programs, saving one in particular for the end near and dear to my heart, that are cut in this budget. Because, again, people say what are we talking about when you talk about all these cuts?

We talked earlier about the subprime mortgage funding and so forth. How about highway funding? Is there anyone in the country that can disagree that we have a national crisis with infrastructure? We had the unfortunate situation last fall with the bridge collapse in Minnesota which highlighted a problem that many knew but really in a very tragic way shined the spotlight on the incredible need that exists in this country for infrastructure improvement, for bridge repair, for highways, whatever the case may be. We have anywhere near close to the amount of money necessary to fix the roads and bridges that need fixing right now, let alone all the new construction that needs to take place.

The district that I represent, we are talking about funding for bridges and roads and docks and dams along the riverways. Well, with highway funding in particular, the President’s budget unbelievably proposes to cut funding for highways by $900 million below the amount guaranteed by the previous transportation reauthorization bill that we did several years ago.

Every $1 billion in new infrastructure investment creates 47,500 jobs in this country. All of those programs, every $1 million that is put into a bridge project is projected in fiscal year 2009, which is what this budget covers. So we have a projected shortfall, yet the President still recommends a $800 million cut. And at a time when we lost over 800,000 jobs in the past year, how many of those jobs are we going to lose in the months ahead as we face what may turn out to be a recession, we are talking about a problem that can create nearly 50,000 jobs for every $1 billion in new investment. This budget, which is to cut $800 million. It makes no sense.

Homeland security, the gentleman from Connecticut talked about the importance of homeland security, which nobody can dispute, perhaps the number one issue facing the country today. Well, so what does the President’s budget do? The calculation of his budget excludes $2.7 billion in border emergency funding from Congress, which was approved in fiscal year 2008. When you couple that with the President’s budget which is to cut $800 million, it makes no sense.

In addition, the budget slashes funding for State Homeland Security Grant programs, first responders, police, firefighters, EMTs, people right out there on the front lines in our communities, many of them volunteers. This President’s budget cuts $750 million, 79 percent below the current year’s funding level. Firefighter grants, $450 million, 60 percent below, just for firefighter grants, and 79 percent below for all first responders.

It is incredible that this is the budget that was put before us. Who could possibly argue that that is a good policy decision, to cut funding for first responders by 79 percent?

Mr. ALTMIRE. That is right. The good news is, is that we are going to find a way to push back most of those cuts, if not all of them. We are going to find a way to pass an infrastructure budget, which is a little bit closer to a balanced budget.

Now, the way we do that is sit here and expose all of the very harmful cuts and all of the very harmful spending in this President’s budget. But the American people should have some faith that you sent a new Democratic Congress here. You sent this new freshman class that we are a part of to pick apart that budget for the first time, and decide not only how to more comprehensively cut $800 million to be a recession, we are talking about a problem that can create nearly 50,000 jobs for every $1 billion in new investment. This budget, which is to cut $800 million. It makes no sense.

Mr. ALTMIRE. I thank the gentleman. I am going to talk about the most egregious, in my opinion, of all these cuts. And I know it is hard to believe having walked through them that there could be one in particular to point to. There is one that is particular to my constituents and to something that I support. We are going to turn it over momentarily to our freshman colleague, Mr. YARMUTH from Kentucky, who I am sure is going to talk more about some of these issues.

As Members of Congress, we are all given the opportunity to testify before the Budget Committee and say here are our priorities. These are the one or two or three at the most things that we care about that we really want to see addressed in the budget.

I was asked over the break that we had in between the first session and the second, I was asked during the holidays, somebody came up to me in a shopping center and recognized me and said, hey, you know, how has the first year been? What are your experiences? What are you most proud of?

With this setting, for me, what I am most proud of is that this Congress did last year was we had the highest funding increase for veterans care in the 77 year history of the VA. We had to fight tooth and nail. We had to do it over multiple opportunities throughout the year. But in the end, the budget that we passed exceeded even the recommendations of the service organizations. The VFW, the American Legion, the Vietnam Veterans of America, the American Veterans, those organizations every year present to Congress their recommended funding levels for what they feel that they are going to need. For the first time ever, this Congress exceeded that.

So proud of the work that we did as a Congress on veterans. And it was a bipartisan effort. It is something we can be proud to have worked together on.

Well, what does this budget do for veterans? Something that I have made my number one priority in this Congress. And I think we as Congress have a good record so far on veterans, and I want to keep that good record going, and I want to prevent the cuts that the President’s budget talks about.

It cuts veterans health care by $20 billion over 5 years. Let me repeat that. This budget cuts veterans health care by $20 billion over 5 years and cuts funding for constructing, renovating and operating medical care facilities in 2009, for which this budget is authorized.

Now, for me, that is very parochial, because I have $200 million of VA health construction going on in Western Pennsylvania, a lot of which is in my district. Two different projects, $200 million. So the President is coming in here at a time when we have the opportunity in Western Pennsylvania to be the preeminent health care system in the entire VA, top notch facilities. So I spent a lot of the constituent funding, and he is going to cut funding even more egregiously for veterans health care by $20 billion.

I am sure the gentleman can agree, there is no group that should stand ahead of our Nation’s veterans when it comes time to make funding decisions.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. It just begs the question. Mr. ALTMIER. What was going through the minds of the Bush administration budget negotiators when they were trying to gettable last year negotiating with us as we were insisting on the biggest increase in veterans funding in the history of the program? I mean, we pushed that and pushed that and pushed that. You were courageous from the very first day that you got here in making that a priority.

It is just so terrible to think that, well, the Bush administration was sitting there deciding that enormous and important increase in veterans funding, that all the while they were drafting that budget. All the while as they were agreeing just 60 days ago to the biggest increase in veterans funding since the VA program began, they were drafting secretly a budget that was going to reverse everything they just agreed to. That just speaks to the worst of what happens in Washington, D.C., Mr. ALTMIER.

Mr. ALTMIER. That is right. I thank the gentleman. We are going to wrap it up as our time has expired. I would only point out on that note that this is the sixth year in a row that this budget raises health care costs on 1.4 million veterans, imposing $5.2 billion in increased copayments on prescription drugs and new enrollment fees on veterans over 10 years. I wish I had more time to talk about that.

At this time I am going to thank the Speaker for the opportunity to address the House this evening with my colleague Mr. MURPHY from Connecticut.

THE BUDGET AND NATIONAL DEBT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ARCAURI). Under the Speaker’s announcement of January 18, 2007, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. YARMUTH) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. YARMUTH. I want to thank my freshman colleagues for the very insightful and compelling arguments they raised concerning our budget, this budget proposal by the President for the 2009 fiscal year.

Mr. Speaker, I will say that what we are dealing with here is a situation in which those of us who were elected in 2006, freshman Members, so known as the majority makers, came to this Congress because the American people in that election of 2006 thought that the country was going in the wrong direction, and it wasn’t so much one thing. I know a lot of people think that we were elected because of the war in Iraq, and certainly that was a factor.

I think more than anything else, the American people collectively decided that the priorities that have been established by the administration that was in office, beginning in 2000, we were taking the country in the wrong direction, that we were spending money, that we were emphasizing things that did not represent the best interests of the majority of the American people. They sent us here, therefore, to set the tone of doing business, a new way of setting priorities.

They wanted us to put the American people first. They wanted us to recognize the true needs of this society, to recognize that government is a way of reorganizing and organizing our responsibilities to each other, that we could, as a government, actually create an economy that worked for everyone and not just for a very few, but that we could set the country in a different direction, that we could use the tax revenues that were flowing to the Treasury to empower all people to make the best of their lives, to contribute to a more dynamic society. We did last year was we had the highest increase in this Congress, and I think we need to do much more.

But let’s think back to 2006 and think about what the American people were confronted with when they looked at Washington. They looked at Washington and they said, we have a government there that is arrogant, that tends to favor the richest people in the country, that tends to favor global corporations, that thinks that if we allow the wealthiest and most powerful people to keep the most money, as well as the financiers, individually, that there will be a trickle-down effect and it will, quote-unquote, float everyone’s boat, and that this is what the proper role of government should be.

The American people said no, we don’t buy that. We’ve tried that. We tried it under the Reagan administration. We saw then that trickle-down economics does not work. We tried that for a few more years under the Bush administration. We found that, no, that doesn’t work because, in fact, what we have seen is that from 2001 to 2006, 100 percent of the income growth in this country accrued to the benefit of the top 5 percent of the population, that, in fact, 95 percent of the people in this country did not see their standard of living increased during the Bush administration. That is what they are working harder, they are working longer.

The average family has been working, the average household, 95 hours a week. That’s two people working more than full time and still not getting ahead. So the American people said to us, we want to go in a different direction. We think that government can be a tool for progress, it can be a tool to create a society that distributes its benefits more broadly, and that we ought to take the position that rather than trying to let this trickle-down theory flow to everybody’s boat that we ought to make a society in which everybody has a really good boat, and that everybody can swim on their own. In fact, the way to create a society that truly works over the long term is to empower every individual to be productive, to contribute to society and to have the power and the freedom and the support to improve his or her way of life.

Now, we are confronted, once again, with a budget from the President of the United States which does exactly the same thing that they have been trying over and over and over again with very little success. We have a budget, deceitful in many ways because it pretends to reach a budgetary balance when it really doesn’t, and they do it by very deceitful mechanisms, but it sets the wrong priorities.

It takes money away from programs and policies that actually do empower individuals to improve their lives, to make a better society, to make a stronger economy, and it sends the money once again to basically non-productive activities. We have, once again, minimized and disguised the cost of our involvement in Iraq and Afghanistan. Many of us differ very strenuously on our priorities in Iraq and Afghanistan.

We all understand that we have some serious problems in Afghanistan, and we need to focus there. We also understand that we are spending $3 billion a week in Iraq, most of which we will never see. It never represents any investment in our future. It is money that simply runs out.

When you try to compare the benefits of our tax dollars being spent again to promote a vibrant and healthy economy and to help people who need to get their feet on the ground to become productive spending money overseas in ways that do nothing to enhance our own standard of living, that we know we have a skewed sense of priorities.

That’s what we are going to talk about for the next few minutes, and I am very proud to be here with one of my freshman colleagues, someone who is passionate about the need for this country to work for everyone, someone who is as passionate about working for working families as anyone in this Congress, JOHN HALL from New York.

I am proud to be his colleague, and I would like to recognize Congressman HALL to further this discussion.

Mr. HALL of New York. Thank you, Congressman. It’s my pleasure to join you tonight.

I wish I had as much pleasure looking at the budget the President submitted as I do discussing it with you, and all of us, of course, earlier this week received a copy of the President’s budget. Like all of us, I was disappointed by the questionable accounting and fiscal irresponsibilities contained within this budget. I wish I could say I was surprised, but unfortunately it represents the same missed opportunities and misplaced priorities that have highlighted this administration.

First of all, I would have to say for a President and an administration that claimed to be fiscally responsible and who constantly accuse Democrats of being fiscally irresponsible, it’s really shocking and deserving of mention that this President, George W. Bush, has been responsible, his administration, responsible for the five biggest deficits in American history. Here they are, out of control. The end of the 1990s when President Bush took over from President Clinton that we had a surplus, and we were, in fact, paying down some of the national debt for a change.

But due to his tax policies and his overspending and his penchant for borrowing, our President and his administration have run up, in 2003, a deficit of $378 billion; in 2004, a deficit of $413 billion; in 2005, $318 billion; 2008 actually is the next figure here, $410 billion; and for 2009 is a projected $407 billion budget.

We can’t keep this up. Any family knows that they can’t keep this up. In fact, too many families are finding this out, that the chickens eventually come home to roost. I, as a former school board president and school board trustee who had to balance the budget every year know that you can’t go on spending more money than you take in without some kind of disaster befailing you.

Unfortunately, what’s happening in terms of the value of the dollar, in terms of our exporting jobs, in terms of the strong surge in prices of the United States or corporations or infrastructure in the United States, in terms of our weakened markets, and volatile and declining markets, all these things have to do with the basic foundations of the underpinning of our country being massive debt.

The other thing about the President’s budget that I was surprised to see and disappointed to see, it does nothing to fix the alternative minimum tax, or the AMT, a tax which was originally designed, when it first took effect in 1970, to affect only 155 households, the most wealthy, the most affluent households in America who were using tax loopholes to avoid paying any tax at all. Congress wrote, in the late 1960s, this bill which the AMT took effect in 1970, to hit the very top of the most wealthy people in the country.

Now because it was never indexed to inflation, it was never given a cost-of-living increase, it was never allowed to float as the cost of living and the average salaries and income in the country changed, that AMT has dipped every year deeper and deeper and deeper into the American tax-paying public and dramatically increasing the tax rate paid by millions of middle-class families who were never intended to be hit by the AMT, over 20 million of whom will be forced to pay it next year.

Without a permanent fix, half of all taxpayers who report jobs report this AMT that was originally designed to hit 155 of the wealthiest households in the country.

But the President does nothing to stop this. Instead, he calls for more than $1 trillion in new AMT, for the top 1 percent of all Americans.

Once again, we have 5 years in a row of record increases in the poverty rate, we have record increases in personal debt, we have record increases in national debt, we have record increases in our balance of trade deficit. Strangely enough, at the same time, I read in the paper that ExxonMobil has declared 40 point some billion dollars in profit, the largest single yearly corporate profit in the history of the world, breaking the previous record which was held by ExxonMobil themselves.

Some people in this economy and in this country who believe financial schemes are doing very, very well and will continue to do very well. There are others, mainly the middle class and lower income Americans, who are being squeezed from all sides. Believe me, they are being squeezed up, they are being squeezed down.

The middle class is having their options and their opportunities cut, whether it’s the cost of sending their children to college, whether it’s the cost of purchasing health care for their families, the cost of property or property tax, the cost of fuel for their cars or for their homes. I mean, even the fact that the President in this budget slashed the low-income heating assistance program, LIHEAP, is scandalous.

At a time when we have families and seniors who are struggling to heat their homes in the northern parts of this country, I would have expected the President, a so-called compassionate conservative, to be so disinterested as to cut heating assistance for low-income people in this current climate of economic uncertainty and astronomical fuel costs.

I would just say that I am happy to be here to discuss this, and, more importantly, to talk about how we are going to move to a real budget, not a fake budget that’s based on platitudes and some kind of ideological belief, some faith-based budgeting that has nothing to do with reality and nothing to do with the well-being of the American people.

Mr. YARMUTH. I want to thank my colleague.

He referenced the annual profit of ExxonMobil that was reported last week. And I was struck last week on February 1, when I was in New York Times online version, the list of the headlines of the day, and I thought it was striking because I think it painted a vivid picture of where we are in this world and in this country. The first story was, “Microsoft Bids $44.6 Billion for Yahoo,” a lot of money, two corporations vying for each other.

The next story, “U.S. Economy Unexpectedly Sheds 17,000 Jobs,” the worst job report in years. Then, “Dozens Killed in Worst Baghdad Attack in Months,” then “Kurds’ Power Wanes as Arab Anger Rises” and, then, finally, “ExxonMobil Profit Sets Record Again.”

I think that was just an incredibly vivid picture of where we are in this world and where this economy stands and how out of whack the priorities of this administration have become.

That’s why I am so thankful that we are, at least, in control of this House of the Congress so that we can help to set the priorities of this country on a much more sound course.
I know that I have had so many opportunities to stand on this floor and discuss these issues with my colleague from Florida (Mr. KLEIN). I am proud to recognize him now.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman from Kentucky and the gentleman from New York for his kind remarks. I agree with all the statements you have made and would just share a few of my own thoughts on the budget.

A budget is a statement of our values, as Americans, collectively. We are not just a nation of taxpayers, we are not independents, we are Americans. We all are putting a lot of money, hard-earned money into the government. The question is what’s going to be done with it. What is the best value that can be used to help people achieve a better life, help our economy, help job creation and all those things that are important to our communities.

Mr. Speaker, there are many Republicans as well, but certainly the Democratic states have stood together, and we welcome everyone as Americans to focus on this together. We have to get the budget in line. The budget that is being proposed by the President right now is something that is relying on a lot of unrealistic assumptions that will never pass because the American people don’t want them to be cut, whether Medicare and a number of other things, and we have to find a way to get the budget deficit under control. That is the nationalization of this future of our country. We cannot allow our children to have to pay and our grand-children to have to pay for something that generation wasn’t prepared to stand up and say live within our means. Yes, we can have a strong economy and fight wars when necessary. And yes, we will take care of Americans when there are natural disasters, and it can all be done under fiscally responsible way, and it has not been the record of this administration. We are going to work hard in a bipartisan way to get this under control.

I appreciate the fact that the gentleman from Kentucky brought this to us, and I look forward to working with him and the gentleman from New York on fixing this problem.

Mr. YARMUTH. One of the things that is most disturbing to all of us is when you hear deceitful discussion of the best way into the future. We sat and listened to the State of the Union address in which the President said if we were to not renew the tax cuts that went into effect in 2001 and 2003, and the average American working family would pay a lot more taxes. So the average tax increase would be

And instead of sending that money overseas to pay interest, not even principal, that is $300 billion that is being thrown out the door offshore to some other country because we don’t have the wherewithal, as we do in this country, that hasn’t been willing to work with us in bringing this budget in line.

The President, who has been a big supporter of the Iraq war, as we know, and has continued to ask for more and more money of dollars, interestingly enough, in this budget sets it up for $70 billion of additional expenditures only through January 20. Now, what is January 20? That is Inauguration Day of a new President, whoever that may be.

But boy, is that an unrealistic way of looking at it, particularly after he has been criticizing Members of Congress saying that you can’t put a date at the end of funding because you are going to cut off our Warden funding of the bullets and all of the necessary support, which we are not prepared to do, but he is doing.

He is saying on January 20, if you pass this bill, there is no more money after that date to fund the Iraq war, not because he doesn’t want to fund the Iraq war, but that is how he is creating a smaller amount of a big deficit. Instead of $100 billion, it would be $50 billion or something like that.

So the question is what can we do, because I think there are a whole lot of assumptions here that are incorrect. I have a chart here that I have talked about before, and this is totally unacceptable. The lack of fiscal discipline of this administration over the last 6 or 7 years has resulted in increasing debt to an unacceptable amount in terms of us bringing our budget in line.

Put that issue aside for a second, this continues the budget deficit and increases it by another $400 billion. This is as, the gentleman from New York said, this does not stop the biggest tax increase, the alternative minimum tax, which we tried to fix. We had a very good way of fixing it this year, and the President refused. Some people on the other side of the aisle in the Senate refused to do it. It has to be fixed.

The President in his proposal cuts Medicare and Medicaid. I don’t know about you, I am sure you are hearing the same thing I am hearing. Our doctors, our hospitals, our providers, they are taking care of our Medicare population in our communities, and they are feeling it. They have been cut and cut and cut, and it is not keeping up with the cost of operating a practice. We know that they need to receive fair compensation. That is unacceptable, I don’t think that is something that this Congress is going to support again, we can’t accept this, it doesn’t have any bearing on where things are going.

The President, who has been a big supporter of the Iraq war, as we know, and has continued to ask for more and more money of dollars, interestingly enough, in this budget sets it up for $70 billion of additional expenditures only through January 20. Now, what is January 20? That is Inauguration Day of a new President, whoever that may be.

But boy, is that an unrealistic way of looking at it, particularly after he has been criticizing Members of Congress saying that you can’t put a date at the end of funding because you are going to cut off our Warden funding of the bullets and all of the necessary support, which we are not prepared to do, but he is doing.

Mr. Speaker, there are many Republicans as well, but certainly the Demo-
They got together and they started doing this. It is incredibly important. In fact, it was so important that in 2001, on White House stationery that I might have, President Bush himself went to South Dakota and said, a priority in work with States on important development projects, the Lewis and Clark rural water project is a project that will be in my budget, and something that we can work on together.

The idea of government is the collective will that we can do together, and our job is to prioritize the things that this country needs to do. I think Mr. Young’s just showed us that this Nation under this President has not prioritized. This President has set out an agenda that told us we could have something for nothing. He told us we can give tax cuts, and I appreciate you clearly illustrating the President’s creative use of facts and statistics which he quite often does to theatrical effect but to huge detriment to this Nation.

I want to talk about this for a couple of minutes. We have done a wonderful job of highlighting the overall principles. I want to talk about how this impacts individuals. I want to talk about the idea of fiscal discipline and the incredibly shortsightedness of this administration, even in cases where they may be able to cut something to save a little bit, the incredible cost not just in the suffering and what it is doing to the Nation, that aside, what it is doing in terms of just plain poor financial decisions.

In my southern Minnesota district, which stretches from the plains of South Dakota over to the Mississippi River, and Minnesota as the Land of 10,000 Lakes is very diverse. The southwest corner of my State that borders Iowa and South Dakota was the place where the glaciers never reached, and there are places that you don’t find a lot of the prairie potholes and lakes, and the shortage of water is important and on people’s minds. This is the area of Laura Ingalls Wilder’s “Little House on the Prairie.” This is the land where people want to raise their children. We have prosperous communities that are incredibly diverse that are leading the Nation in things like biofuel production. We are the fifth leading district in wind production. These are innovative people, but the one thing that they are missing and what makes life so difficult is the lack of drinking water.

We have places where people are living in 2008 where they have cisterns to collect water in order to drink good water. Water, the communities got together in Iowa, South Dakota, and Minnesota and they came together with a creative solution. They were going to use, where the abundance of water was along the Missouri River in South Dakota, they are going to use that river and deliver water to communities that are struggling along this Nation in order to provide drinking water and the life-blood of communities for 300,000 people in a bipartisan manner.

One of the things I would like to talk about because Mr. Klein mentioned this, the cost of interest on the national debt, which has increased by an extraordinary amount. According to this budget, it would be $4 trillion just since Bush’s $4 trillion based on a $5.7 trillion starting point. So we basically have almost doubled the national debt, the entire history, 220 years of this Nation, we have almost doubled the national debt just in the last few years.

But when we realize we really have a vivid depiction of what this means. We are talking about interest on the national debt of $300 billion a year. The entire expenditure on education from the Federal budget is $100 billion a year. Veterans care is less than that, and homeland security even less than that. This is what has happened to the priorities in our budget because of the irresponsibility of this government over the last 7 years.

So this is what we are talking about. This is what we are confronting, and this is why I think all of us in the majority party in the Congress say we need to speak honestly, openly, and intelligently about what confronts us, about the challenges that we face, but also about what has happened over the last few years.

All we ask of the administration is be honest about what you are saying, what you are telling the American people. We will have a legitimate debate with you and discussion about where our priorities should be. But first and foremost, we need to be talking about things in absolute terms and be honest and transparent as we discuss how we are going to spend the taxpayers’ dollars.

I am also proud to be joined tonight by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Walz), the president of our freshman class and a great spokesman for the working families of America.

Mr. Walz of Minnesota, Mr. Speaker, I had an opportunity to be at home and watch some of our colleagues speaking on this earlier. I think last night I saw in my State of Minnesota where we had caucuses, and we had four times the number of people turning out. The American people are starting to listen. They start to understand the consequences of what we have been living under, and I think all of what has been highlighted has been spectacular.

I will also say that each of us who have read this budget have no problem being up here late at night because it is hard to sleep after you see it. Each of us, you know, the critical issues and the things that we are getting done and prioritizing.

The idea of government is the collective will that we can do together, and our job is to prioritize the things that this country needs to do. I think Mr. Young’s just showed us that this Nation under this President has not prioritized. This President has set out an agenda that told us we could have something for nothing. He told us we can give tax cuts, and I appreciate you clearly illustrating the President’s creative use of facts and statistics which he quite often does to theatrical effect but to huge detriment to this Nation.

I want to talk about this for a couple of minutes. We have done a wonderful job of highlighting the overall principles. I want to talk about how this impacts individuals. I want to talk about the idea of fiscal discipline and the incredibly shortsightedness of this administration, even in cases where they may be able to cut something to save a little bit, the incredible cost not just in the suffering and what it is doing to the Nation, that aside, what it is doing in terms of just plain poor financial decisions.

In my southern Minnesota district, which stretches from the plains of South Dakota over to the Mississippi River, and Minnesota as the Land of 10,000 Lakes is very diverse. The southwest corner of my State that borders Iowa and South Dakota was the place where the glaciers never reached, and there are places that you don’t find a lot of the prairie potholes and lakes, and the shortage of water is important and on people’s minds. This is the area of Laura Ingalls Wilder’s “Little House on the Prairie.” This is the land where people want to raise their children. We have prosperous communities that are incredibly diverse that are leading the Nation in things like biofuel production. We are the fifth leading district in wind production. These are innovative people, but the one thing that they are missing and what makes life so difficult is the lack of drinking water.

We have places where people are living in 2008 where they have cisterns to collect water in order to drink good water. Water, the communities got together in Iowa, South Dakota, and Minnesota and they came together with a creative solution. They were going to use, where the abundance of water was along the Missouri River in South Dakota, they are going to use that river and deliver water to communities that are struggling along this Nation in order to provide drinking water and the life-blood of communities for 300,000 people in a bipartisan manner.
Well, what we did, as a joint delegation, between Iowa, South Dakota and Minnesota, Republican and Democrat, said that is wrong. And we went and asked, guess what, one of those awful earmarks appropriations to put the Federal Government’s responsibility back to where it used to be or, near where it was supposed to be at $27 million.

So now we’re approximately 5 years from completion of this, and this wonderful thing paid for by this administration sent out this week set his budget for the Lewis and Clark rural water project, zero dollars. He shut the project down. So I guess what he’s telling us is, the $300 million we’ve spent, the 300,000 people, communities, where, in my district, they cannot issue another building permit in their cities because they don’t have enough water. He is telling them, leave the pipes half finished. Let the people move elsewhere. And you know what I said in 2001, I will not rest until we fix it because I’ve got other priorities.

Now, remember, this is the same President that told us that our fiscal crisis now is simply being caused by our inability to make permanent the tax cuts on 1 percent of Americans that actually aren’t expiring until 2011.

Now I stand here in front of the people, Mr. Speaker, and with my colleagues to ask in a totally bipartisan manner, what sense does this make? What sense is this about prioritizing? What do these mayors tell their people when they made this decision based on what good government is? And if this President is going to think you’re going to do this alone, who’s going to dig the 400-mile long trench from the Missouri River to feed these areas of Iowa and Minnesota and South Dakota?

I guess the President’s message has been what it’s been all along, whether it’s been whether it’s the right thing, whether it’s been anything. I’ll be there until it comes time to make some prioritizing decisions. At that point you’re on your own. He’s given us his ownership society which truly does mean you’re on your own, and now we have a situation where we’re going to go as a delegation and have to fight for every dollar of something as basic as infrastructure to deliver water.

So I will have to tell you on the sacredness of this House floor, it’s been an overwhelming challenge to keep my tongue on some of this, and I applaud my colleagues in the same way.

But I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, and tell my colleagues, I will not rest for 1 minute until this budget starts to reflect the priorities of this Nation. There is nothing in this budget that reflects the priorities of this Nation. There is nothing, that reflects the priorities of this Nation. There is nothing in the people of my district, and I don’t care what political party is in the White House, that party does not reflect their values. And there is absolutely no vision in this. I don’t know if maybe this is just a cruel joke on the way out, leaving the White House; we’ll see what can happen if we do this. But I can tell you this: The people of Iowa and South Dakota and Minnesota aren’t laughing about it. And I can darn sure guarantee you that each of us is going to fight to make it right.

I thank you for indulging me on this, Mr. YARMUTH. You’ve done a fantastic job. You always lead a very important discussion. And I thank you and my colleagues for their open-mindedness. I agree with you. I’ll have this discussion. I will debate with any member of this administration or this House of Representatives on why, after the investments that we’ve made, the importance of this project and the agreement of constituents and the promise that was made by the President, why I’m just supposed to accept this, and why people say, can’t you all just get along and get something done?

If there was some sanity coming from the administration, I would say yes. But I think the answer is no because this is going to be fought tooth and nail until this wrong is corrected.

Mr. YARMUTH: I thank my colleague and want to yield again to Mr. HALL from New York. But before I do, I just wanted to add that, again, sitting and listening to the State of the Union address and talking about the honesty that we need to have when we have this discussion, and all of a sudden the President of the United States gives us an idea that the State of the Union address takes on the question of earmarks. And all of a sudden he’s critical of the Democratic Congress because we had 11,000 or something earmarks. But he never said a word for 6 years while the earmarks expanded to somewhere in the realm of 16,000.

Now we can have debates over earmarks. I happen to think, as my colleagues mentioned, that there are some very good earmarks. And I think they have been demonized probably unreasonably. But all of a sudden the President finds fiscal religi- on this year under a Democratic-controlled Congress when he was silent for 6 years. And the same is true of his position now for balanced budgets when over the first 6 years of his administration with the Republican-controlled Congress, he never issued a veto, never threatened a veto of any spending bill as we accrued $3.7 trillion more in debt, and now he wants to make it right.

All of a sudden now you have to suspect that the only reason is partisan- ship. That’s what we’re trying to get away from in this country, and that’s what we are trying to get away from as we dissect the priorities of this country. Because, as you said, we’re interested in where the rubber meets the road, programs that help the American people, doing the best for the American people and not necessarily what means doing the best for a particular party. And I think what we’re seeing, as you mentioned, in the turnout in voters in primaries throughout the country is that’s what American people want. They want people who are going to deal with our problems and not deal with partisanship.

With that, I will once again recognize my distinguished colleague from New York (Mr. HALL).

Mr. HALL of New York. Thank you, Mr. YARMUTH. I appreciate your leading this discussion. I also want to acknowledge my colleague from New York (Mr. ARCUCK) who is serving as Speaker pro tem during this period of time.

I’d just like to respond to Mr. WALZ’s comment about what kind of sense it makes to fight a water program in your district. Well, I can say it makes about as much sense as the President’s completely eliminating the Byrne Grant program and the COPS program, both of which are vital to my district to provide cops, additional policemen on the streets in the 9th District of New York. It makes about as much sense as cutting the important programs that provide local and State law enforcement agencies with funds to fight terrorism and crime, including almost $140 million that were cut from bioterrorism preparedness. They make as much sense as the President cutting Medicare and Medicaid at a time when health insur- ance costs are soaring. When more and more Americans are forced to live without health insurance. This budget cuts $200 billion out of health insurance from Medicare and Medicaid. At a time when we’re facing one of the most damaging housing crises in our history with foreclosures and evictions due to the subprime mortgage crisis, it makes as much sense as this President cutting the Nation’s largest rental assis- tance program. It makes as much sense, as I mentioned before, as cutting the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program by almost 25 percent, preventing people in the lowest income segment of our economy from being able to heat their homes during the winter.

We were talking about your district. I’ll talk about something specific to mine. We have, many of us think due to climate change, suffered from three 50-year floods in the last 3 years in the 19th District, the Delaware River, the Wallkill River, the Ten Mile River, all flooding farms, homes, businesses, golf courses, which might not sound too important, except they do employ people and they’re a source of economic input into the local economy. And, but as im- portantly, lives were lost. In Congress- man HINCHLEY’s district in Sullivan County, there was a drastic, catastrophic flood shortly after the April 29 nor’easter, which was third in 2007, the third in a row of our 50-year floods that came within 3 years.

So last year, when I was new, I was a freshman, wet behind the ears, just been sworn in for my first turn, we got your Appropriations Committee. And you know what it’s like. People come into your office from different depart- ments of the government asking to have funding restored to these different important programs that have been cut by the administration. One of those who came to my office was the general who is the Army Corps of Engineers director of the Philadelphia district, which includes the Delaware watershed. Now, the Delaware Corps of Engineers offices go by watersheds, not by State lines or any kind of political jurisdictions. Her district, the general's, ran from Philadelphia up to Delaware and from New York from Pennsylvania and all the way up to the reservoirs that feed New York City's drinking water system. This is one of the rivers that has had, at that point in time, three 50-year floods in a short span. She came in to ask if I could help re-store funding. And I said, well, what was it cut to? And she showed me in the President's budget it was cut to zero. It was a gooose egg. Now, flood control. In the days after Hurricane Katrina we all know it is a se-rious matter. This obviously is not a serious document any more than last year's budget was a serious document. This document is a fictitious document that is aimed at pretending to balance the books. And we all know how that can't be done. And, in fact, the general and others who have come from different departments to my office and others have said, off the record, that it's done with the knowledge that the Democratic majority will restore some of these funds at least to be able to keep the programs going and to protect people, and then we'll get blamed for being big spenders.

We, in talking about being big spenders, I just want to bring out this chart which I happen to have here which shows the surplus that was the United States budget surplus when, in 2001, the Bush administration began its term. There was $1.5 trillion surplus. In the time since then, there's red ink of $3.8 trillion, so that at this point in time we're at a $3.2 trillion deficit, including omitted items. Now, we all know there are items that are not included in this. For instance, the war is off budget. We fought wars in the past, World War II or the Korean War or the Vietnam War, World War I, during which time people were asked to sacrifice. People were asked to pay for the war as they went.

This is a war that we're borrowing money to pay for, and Congressman Klein's chart that he showed before of the increasing foreign ownership of our debt, I think, is really important and that we're really interesting for several reasons. Obviously it's not healthy for us to have this much debt and to accumulate an ever-growing interest payment that eclipses anything we can do for education or for housing or for veterans or for housing or for health care and that we're going to pass on to our children and our grandchildren.

That's really unconscionable. But the other thing that that does to have that kind of huge debt to the Chi-nese or to the Saudis or to the Mexican or Japanese Governments or investors from other countries is it loses our sov-eignty when we can't talk to China about Darfur or when we can't talk to China honestly about human rights violations in their country or about the obliteration of the history of Tibet or about whether they're being as tough with North Korea about their nuclear problem as we want them to be or about lead in toys that are being im-ported into the United States and lead in water or about contaminated food or animal feed or contaminated medicine. When we can't talk to the Saudis honestly about human rights violations in their country or about their funding of the madrasas, we have suffered what I call a loss of sovereignty. When you no longer can make honest, diplomatic, economic, military, international deci-sions or really state what is in your best interest because you are afraid that your hands are tied for want of getting the money to pay for the war or the money to pay the debt off from another place, then you have lost some of your sovereignty.

And I'm telling you, in this country, the American people are not aware of this, but they better get aware of it because this is already a major factor in our foreign policy, but it will be more and more of a problem and restrict our options more and more in the future if we do not get back to a surplus in terms of our budget, if we don't get back to a surplus in the bal ance of trade, if we don't start producing things here. I, personally, am especially fond of the options of renewable energy technologies and high tech and computer and medical advances and so on that we have traditionally led the world in.

But we need to invest in education, we need to invest in these innovation approaches to technologies and espe-cially to invest in energy to get us away from the billions of dollars a day that go to import oil.

But all of these things are our free-dom, and they equate our future sov-eignty. And I hope we make the right decisions, as opposed to the wrong deci-sions, that are embodied in this budget that the President just released so that our children and grandchildren will enjoy being a truly sovereign country and a leader in the world in these things rather than being subservient to whatever foreign interests happen to own our debt.

Mr. YARMUTH. I appreciate him mentioning the field of education because you can have, as I mentioned earlier, a lot of our expenditure in government. You can have expenditures that are nonproductive, and one of those, I think, is the war in Iraq. Inter-est on the debt is another one, because there is no long-term payback to those expenditures. Education, invest-ment in infrastructure and, Mr. WALZ was discussing, those are the types of things that over the long run do produce increased revenues for society productivity, and they are the type of investments we need to be focusing on.

And when we look at this budget, the field of education, and I'm on the Edu-cation and Labor Committee and we are dealing with trying to decide whether to reauthorize the No Child Left Behind Act which is already $55 billion below its authorized levels in funding. And the President, once again, has no increases in funding for edu-ca-tion in this budget, so I think means we fall further and further behind.

So while he called his act No Child Left Behind, where, in fact, we are leaving more and more children behind because we are not meeting our obliga-tions to make the kind of investments in people and in an infrastructure that really will pay off over the long run.

And I know this is something that is an entire range of topics that Mr. KLEIN has dealt with and has had to set priorities in his own legislature in Florida, and I would like to yield to him to advance the discussion.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. Thank you. I think both of you were talking about two priorities of our country and the shortsalls and where we need to be, where we've been, and where we are going as a country. And I think we look at ourselves, and you hear this in the Presidential debates right now about the vision. And any Presidential candidate that comes forward and talks about the vision of what our country needs to be, where we need to go, the heritage of our country, the legacy of all of the great innovation that's happened and that maybe we've missed a couple of steps. Not to say we can't regain and con-tinue to move forward, because that's exactly what we are going to do. But it is going to take some new leadership throughout the Presidency and through the American people, and through our business community as well. It is a cooperative ef-fort.

And I think about a few of the things that are the priorities that help us get there. Education, as you just said, is one of them. And one of the things that concerned me about the budget was the fact that the President had dropped the amount of college grants and the tuition assistance programs in the budget. And again, once again, this Congress, bipartisan, came forward and increased the Pell Grants and increased the college tuition, because if there's one thing I think we can agree on as Americans, every student, every teen-a ger, every adult who wants to get a higher level of education and create a greater level of workforce training which will only make their lives more productive, and country more productive, that's a good thing. It always has been. Education has been the great equalizer in the United States, and we ought to be doing everything we can to make sure that we are competitive and that opportunity for every student.

So, again, a misdirection in this budget which needs to be corrected.
Another thing that I think is extremely important, and all of us have some family history of illness whether it is Alzheimer’s, whether it is kidney disease, or whether it is cancer or heart disease. And one of the things that the Federal Government has consistently done working with the private sector is to support research, basic research, which will hopefully find cures.

I know my mother passed away at a young age of 52. She was a very vibrant personal cancer, and after she went through some treatments over a period of time, we lost her. But it certainly gave me that commitment, and I know I fought along with many Members of the Congress, and the people who are listening tonight have their own family histories. And we know that collectively, we have to find ways of curing diseases.

Cuts in this budget to the grants for research, wrong direction. Really wrong direction. I feel extremely strongly that we need to save the National Institute of Health grants to work with scientists or universities in our health institutions to find the therapies, to find the cures, to help make people’s lives better. It’s also a wonderful way of expanding our economic opportunity in exporting and licensing and creating technologies to help people around the world and selling those products around the world as well. So, again, something we need to fix in this budget.

I think the gentleman mentioned the COPS program, which is something that is very much on our streets, and that’s, of course, the ability to have safety and public safety and security in our communities. I know in my local community, $8.5 million in our area would be cut from that funding. That’s real dollars that affect real people in terms of putting police and security on our streets. It is one of the most important investments that government can do to provide for the public safety.

These are the kinds of things that are misdirections. They can all be fixed. It is a question of all of us coming together, putting a budget together, hopefully persuading the President that these were mistakes and we need to come back and fix them.

And lastly, of course, I just want to touch on the fact of our economy, and the people back home are hurting right now. Every day I get a letter, and it is subprime, whether it is foreclosures, any number of things; and the Congress is working right now, and we will be passing, in the next number of days, an economic stimulus, which is designed to be short term. It’s designed as a little bit of a prop up as a support of people. It will give them some cash and hopefully retire some of those responsibilities and pay for some of the necessities.

But long-term, we have got to work together on energy issues. It’s already been discussed. Paying $50, $60 for a tank of gas on someone who is earning $30,000 a year is a real issue. And at a time, as we already talked about, when energy companies are making incredible, historic amounts of money, we need to work together to substitute those resources for renewable energy programs, which I know the Congressman from New York has been all over and that’s why we are truly about.

This is our moment. This is our “Sputnik” moment. This is our putting-the-man-on-the-moon moment. This is the time for the American people to work together with the business, private sector, and government to create the markets and to do it. But we have to do it and start that process now.

So I think there are long-term and short-term issues on our economy. I look forward to working on infrastructure issues with everyone else, recognizing, as our Speaker said last week, in 1806 you had the Louisiana Purchase period of time, and that was a moment when President Jefferson said, This is our time, and we’re about making this our country: the Erie Canal and the canal systems, the road systems that got our country going in the industrial revolution.

A hundred years later, 1908, President Roosevelt coming forward and saying, This country is building and developing. Let’s preserve some of our great areas, and we developed the National Parks System.

Now 100 years later, to her credit, Speaker Nancy Pelosi saying this is our time to now focus on rebuilding this country: our road systems, sewer systems, bridge systems, all of those kinds of things. It has everything to do with the economy. It has everything to do with the quality of life. Our commerce, people’s quality of life, these are the things that we need to be working on together. Where there’s a will, there’s a way, and I know we are going to do this all together.

Mr. YARMUTH. It’s always wonderful to discuss these issues with my colleague on the floor.

And we have just a few minutes left. We have a fundamental decision to make in this country, and it is a basic choice, and that is what the role of government is, what the role of the Federal Government is. And on the one side, I think we have those that believe the role of the Federal Government is to get out of the way and to let whatever happens happen. And the other side, and I think most of us in this room would agree, that there is a legitimate role for the government to try to promote the type of progress through investments and the proper priorities that will make this a better country, and, basically, whether you believe government has a role in setting the direction of the country or whether it is basically just to get out of the way and let the most powerful people and the biggest corporations decide what is going to happen and let kind of a Darwinian atmosphere prevail.

So I would like to allow everyone to close briefly to whatever they have to say kind of related to that fundamental choice we face or to talk about the issue of priorities as we look forward to this budget process again this year.

Mr. WALZ of Minnesota. I so enjoy listening to the eloquence and thoughtfulness of this. The gentleman did sum it up about the priorities, and both gentlemen from Kentucky, Florida, and New York focusing on education and loving it as a fundamental.

Of course, being a high school teacher, every chance I get to get into a classroom, I jump at it. And Monday I had the chance to teach a government class in a small town actually in the area served by the Lewis and Clark Rural Water Project. And I will just leave you this, and you can decide, again, what sense does this make.

The teacher was very excited about their first-year teaching job. They came up with making the biggest corporations do with the quality of life. Our commerce, people’s quality of life, these are the things that we need to be working on together. Where there’s a will, there’s a way, and I know we are going to do this all together.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

I feel the American people are up to the challenge. We are up to sacrifice. And we’re going to do this. And we will convince the administration along the way here that it’s the right thing to do. And we’re going to continue to rebuild our country and be successful. But let’s put our nose down and work hard. And I look forward to working with all my colleagues to accomplish that.

Mr. YARMUTH. I thank all my colleagues. And I’d like to end where we began, and that is that when these major elections of our freshman class, was elected in 2006, we were elected because the country thought that the government of the United States had the wrong priorities, that we needed a new set of priorities, we needed a new direction. We’ve committed ourselves to that new direction. I think as we approach this budgetary process and all areas that we have to do, we will seek a new direction for the American people.

Let us pray.
Almighty God, Heavenly Father, open our hearts to Your movement in our midst. As we trust Your providence and cling to Your promises, give us wisdom and spiritual vision to see You at work.

Today, I claim for our lawmakers Your promise through Jeremiah: Call to Me, and I will answer you, and show you great and mighty things which you do not know.

Lord, keep our Senators from being intimidated by the challenges they face. Clothe them with the armor of integrity, shield them with Your truth, and guide them with Your power. Help them to please You by living holy and peaceful lives. Give them a hunger for Your words and a desire to apply Your knowledge in their daily walk.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER
The Acting President pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE
Mr. Reid. Mr. President, it is a big day today. Our three Presidencies are going to be here, and we have a 5:45 vote. We are looking forward to that.
We don’t see them as much as we used to.

Following my remarks today and those of the Republican leader, there will be an hour of morning business, equally divided, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each. The majority will con-

Mr. Reid, Mr. President, being from the desert and seeing, on occasion, storms in the northern part of the State, it is hard for me to understand the power of nature we see so often—and that we see more often than we used to with these tornadoes occurring throughout this country.

Last night and this morning, violent storms raged through five States, including Alabama, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Tennessee. They were violent. It appears there will be more than 50 people declared dead, scores of people have been injured, and there was a tremendous loss of personal property.
Our thoughts, of course, this morning go out to the victims. We, in all our States, have had occurrences relating to natural disasters. But I think we should all pause and think about the lives of these people who have been snuffed away by this violent set of storms throughout the country and the loss to their loved ones, their neighbors, and their families.

We have heard reports this morning of how our first responders reacted.
The police, firefighters, and National Guard medics worked through the night, around the clock, to save lives. The latest event we had in Nevada was so minor compared to this. We had a levy break and flood waters inundated hundreds of homes. We were very concerned about that. But the one thing we did recognize is how the police, fire-

THE ECONOMY
Mr. President, the top priority of this Congress right now is to bring relief to Americans who are struggling through a troubled economy. One need only listen to the morning news, as I did, to see that the economy is stumbling and staggering. The stock market fell by 3 percent yesterday. The Japanese markets, after that—we got reports today on that—fell by almost 5 percent. The European markets are down.

This “bullet” symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Today, our work continues to try to focus attention on this troubled economy, to try to help in some way. As I have indicated, at 5:45, we will hold a cloture vote on the plan to proceed to a cloture vote on the plan to proceed to the Senate Finance Committee’s economic stimulus plan. I spread on the record last night editorials from around the country supporting the Senate stimulus plan. It is the one that will get money into the pockets of people who need it and will spend it very quickly. This is in no way to denigrate the House plan. It was only a start.

Why do we need a stimulus plan? Look at the stock market, look at the rising gasoline prices, heating for our homes, and the housing crisis, the foreclosure rate is more than 600 percent in Reno, NV. It is 275, on average, in Florida. It is more than 300 percent in California, with 37 million people. The Labor Department’s recent jobs report showed the economy lost 17,000 jobs in January. That is a few of the problems we should be concerned about.

Whether American families are investing in the market—some are and some aren’t—the gathering storm clouds point to the need for Congress to take action.

The Finance Committee’s plan builds on the House bill and makes it better. I repeat, this is not HARRY REID speaking, it is from all over the country, talking about the need to do something quickly and focus attention on the Senate stimulus plan.

A couple of my friends on the other side have talked about why didn’t we do this. One referred to what we have in the stimulus package as “Christmas tree ornaments.” Another referred to them as “pet projects.” I have to plead guilty to the pet projects.

Providing rebate checks to 21.5 million seniors is a pet project of mine. I think it is a good program. All 51 Democrats agree it is a pet project we all support. Providing rebate checks to 250,000 wounded American veterans is another of my pet projects. Give the money to the seniors and to the wounded. Americans and veterans and they will spend it. Providing tax incentives to small and large businesses is also a pet project. Why? Because it will stimulate the economy and give them the money and they will spend it.

I was at a breakfast at 8 o’clock this morning. We had a number of groups there, but the homebuilders were there. They are out in force. They have covered Washington. They are focusing attention on Republican Senators because this legislation is the most important for the home-building industry to come about in the past decade. This is important legislation. The homebuilders have representives in Washington trying to help them.

One of the pet projects we have is extending unemployment benefits to people who have been out of work for a long time. I very much appreciate the homebuilders being advocates for our Senate stimulus plan. Those who are unemployed don’t have anyone here. They don’t have lobbyists calling for Republican Senators to support it. This is the package we got from the Senate Finance Committee. This is an important part of the stimulus package—to give rebates to people who are out of work and have been for an extended period of time. They will spend it.

Helping Americans struggling to pay their heating bills through the LIHEAP is a pet project. I have supported this project for years. We support this project. You give these people the money and they will spend it—and they will spend it now.

The growing housing crisis is certainly a pet project of mine, as indicated by the statistics we have in Reno, NV, and other places in Nevada. We should join to build on the House bill. The bill that comes from the House has to go to conference. That is important, because there is language in the House bill dealing with people who are undocumented who would have benefits.

I hope we can join to put this package out as quickly as possible, take it to conference and work with the President and come up with something better than the House bill.

The stimulus package will put money in the pockets of those who will spend it and help our country recover from this troubled economy. We are in for a long, slow grind, but we can shorten it by doing something to stimulate the economy now. The Senate Finance Committee package does that. It is bipartisan, and it needs to be done as quickly as possible.

RECOGNITION OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore, The Republican leader is recognized.

WINTER STORMS

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I will start the day by acknowledging the tragedy that has befallen several States in the South, including my own State of Kentucky.

According to news reports, rare winter storms struck across Kentucky, Arkansas, Tennessee, and Mississippi. News reports indicate that at least 44 people have been killed, and 7 of those were in my State—4 in Allen County, which is along the Tennessee border, and 3 in Greenville, which is in Muhlenberg County in the western part of our State.

Thousands more are left with damage or destroyed property or are without power. The authorities are still working to determine the extent of the damage.

I ask my colleagues to join me in praying for the families of the victims and to all who have been touched by these terrible storms. State and local officials are working as hard as they can to survey the destruction and get help to anybody who needs it.

STIMULUS PACKAGE

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, it has been 19 days since the President called for a stimulus plan, and economists called for swift action on it. Republicans and Democrats in the House got the message, and they made some hard choices, showed restraint, and forged a bipartisan compromise literally within days.

Unfortunately, Senate Democrats didn’t follow suit. They turned the idea into political gamesmanship, with the head of their campaign committee calling for “tough votes.”

The American people are tired of political “gotcha.” We don’t have time for it. The economy needs a boost right now. I think we can all agree that any illegal immigrants will get checks.

The White House and Treasury Secretary have indicated support for such a plan, so we can expect it will be signed into law.

Meanwhile, we have no such assurance for the alternative, larger proposal Senate Democrats apparently are still hashing out. We read this morning that “negotiations are still ongoing” among Democrats about what to include in the final package.

We started out united behind a proposal to help struggling taxpayers and stimulate the economy. Now some are insisting on a plan that might not even be signed into law.

However, there is still another choice. We can still pass a bill that is targeted and timely and which helps seniors and disabled veterans—and that is the amendment I will be offering later today with Senator STEVENS.

The Reid amendment, on the other hand, might not even pass. So should the Reid amendment fail, we should immediately move to include seniors and disabled veterans, exclude those who are not legal citizens, and then quickly send this good, bipartisan, House-passed bill, as amended, back to the House, which I am sure will pass it quickly, and send it to the White House for signature. To do less would break faith with the American people who were told nearly 3 weeks ago they could expect relief quickly.

I urge my colleagues and the whole body to support it so we can deliver timely help to the American people.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.
RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period of time for the transaction of morning business for up to 60 minutes, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with the time equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, with the majority in control of the first half and the Republicans in control of the final half.

The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

FOREST LANDSCAPE RESTORATION ACT

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, yesterday I introduced legislation that has been given the number S. 2393, the Forest Landscape Restoration Act of 2008. I developed this legislation with Senators Domenici and Feinstein and the other cosponsors of the bill. We also have as cosponsors Senators Allard, Wyden, Salazar, Cantwell, Craig, Akaka, and Crapo. I also am pleased to point out that Chairman Grudina in the House of Representatives has introduced companion legislation. And I look forward to working with him as his subcommittee in the Natural Resources Committee moves forward with that bill.

This legislation establishes a program to select and fund projects that restore forests at a landscape scale through a process that encourages collaboration, relies on the best available science, facilitates local economic development, and leverages local funds with national and private funding.

As many of my colleagues know, we are facing serious forest health and wildfire challenges throughout our country. A century of over-aggressive fire suppression, logging, and other land uses have significantly deteriorated entire landscapes.

These conditions have played an important role in the extraordinary wildfires and insect-caused mortality that we have seen literally on millions of acres of national forest and other lands. To address these problems, it is critical that we begin trying to restore our forests on a landscape scale.

Landscape-scale restoration is key for controlling wildfire suppression costs. It is an important component of successful economic development. It is important for the health of many of our forest ecosystems.

Despite the importance of landscape-scale restoration, neither the National Fire Plan nor the Healthy Forest Restoration Act, which we have adopted in the Senate, has been as successful as we would like. To address the problems we have made to date have been very successful in facilitating restoration and hazardous fuels reduction on landscape scales. A lack of sufficient funding is one of the primary reasons.

Restoring landscapes takes a significant amount of funding over a significant period of time.

To address that problem, the Forest Landscape Restoration Act authorizes $40 million for the next 5 years to be paid into a national pool. Eligible landscape restoration projects from around the country would compete for a portion of that money. Mr. President, $40 million is not nearly enough money to fund landscape-scale treatments in all of the forest landscapes that need restoration, but it is a realistic amount for us to pursue at this time, and it is enough to make landscape-scale restoration a reality.

Because of funding and other challenges, landscape-scale restoration remains largely theoretical. As a result, this legislation is designed to be both practical and experimental. It does not redirect existing efforts. Instead, it adds to existing efforts, creating a program that will make planning, funding, and carrying out at least a handful of these landscape-scale restoration projects possible.

Again, I thank Senators Domenici and Feinstein and the other cosponsors of this legislation for working with me on this bill. I also thank many stakeholders from across the spectrum for their input on the legislation, including the Natural Resources Conservancy which has been very supportive of this effort.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The assistant majority leader.

ECONOMIC STIMULUS PACKAGE

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader, Senator Reid, who was here earlier today talking about the economic stimulus package. What I have tried to do is to understand at this moment where the Republicans are, and it is hard to follow because initially there was agreement between the Republican and Democratic leaders in the House—Speaker Pelosi, Congressman Boehner, and Secretary Paulson of the Bush administration. They came up with the notion that to get the economy moving forward, we should send a rebate check of about $600 for individuals and $1,200 for families and additional money for children across the country, which is certainly an excellent starting point because the administration was persuaded to include the lower income families across America, and there were limits on family income as to eligibility.

The Senate Finance Committee took up this proposal from the House and suggested a few changes. I think each one of them is a positive change. For instance, they said: Let’s include 21 million seniors receiving Social Security checks. If the idea is to put the money in the hands of people who will spend it, certainly our seniors on fixed incomes, many who struggle with utility bills, keeping their homes warm, paying for gasoline, the cost of food and prescription drugs, they can use the money. An additional $500 or $600 will be spent by them. That was included in the Senate finance package. That was not in the original House version. I think that is a positive improvement.

Then they also said: If we are talking about groups of people who should be recognized, those disabled veterans from previous conflicts and certainly from Iraq and Afghanistan should be included as well. There is argument here. Those men and women certainly deserve special consideration for all they have given to America. So that was added to the House version of the bill on the part of the Senate Finance Committee.

Then they went to another category, and this is one the economists say is a very important category: people who are currently unemployed, those folks looking for jobs, many of whom are struggling to keep their families together while they find a job after they have been laid off from previous employment. If they receive additional money, economists say they are most likely to spend it in a hurry. So they encouraged us to include them in the relief we are providing with this tax rebate.

I have been listening carefully to see if our Republican colleagues believe these people deserve help as well. I am beginning to believe this is the real problem the Republicans have. They are concerned about giving additional money to people who are currently unemployed. Yesterday, one Senator from Texas on the Republican side said that just encourages them not to find work. I took a look at the amount of money that is paid to people on unemployment. It is hard to believe that is the kind of money that will lead to a life of leisure, where you decide: Heck, I don’t need a job; I have unemployment benefits.

It turns out that unemployment benefits are not that generous—$500 a week would be a big number, and for many it is a lot less. If we suggest people will stop working with that kind of income, I think it overlooks the obvious. Many people in lower income categories struggle from paycheck to paycheck. Losing a job creates a family emergency. What we are talking about is whether we should provide additional relief to those unemployed. This has been done before. It is not a new concept. In fact, historically, if you want to fire up the economy and put an end to the recession, that is the way to do it. To address that problem, the Forest Landscape Restoration Act authorizes $40 million for the next 5 years to be paid into a national pool. Eligible landscape restoration projects from around the country would compete for a portion of that money. Mr. President, $40 million is not nearly enough money to fund landscape-scale treatments in all of the forest landscapes that need restoration, but it is a realistic amount for us to pursue at this time, and it is enough to make landscape-scale restoration a reality.

Because of funding and other challenges, landscape-scale restoration remains largely theoretical. As a result, this legislation is designed to be both practical and experimental. It does not redirect existing efforts. Instead, it adds to existing efforts, creating a program that will make planning, funding, and carrying out at least a handful of these landscape-scale restoration projects possible.

Again, I thank Senators Domenici and Feinstein and the other cosponsors of this legislation for working with me on this bill. I also thank many stakeholders from across the spectrum for their input on the legislation, including the Natural Resources Conservancy which has been very supportive of this effort.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The assistant majority leader.
total. That is a way of providing special help in areas of high unemployment. I took a look at the estimated number of people who will exhaust their jobless benefits State by State. In my State, it is 57,000. People let me take a look at a State such as Senator McConnell’s State of Kentucky: 11,458 people will see their unemployment benefits end unless we enact this Senate Finance Committee version of the bill; Arizona, Senator Kyl’s home State, 18,846. Let’s go down to Texas where Senator Cornyn says he thinks this encourages people not to look for work: 49,000 people are about to lose their unemployment insurance benefits.

The point is, unemployment is at a relatively low level in this country, according to Senator Kyl. These are his words:

Unemployment is at a relatively low level in this country, and it would be a huge mistake to exacerbate the unemployment situation by extending unemployment benefits.

I am quoting from a statement that Senator Kyl made, not Senator Cornyn. I want to make that correction for the record. Senator Kyl was the one who questioned the wisdom of extending unemployment benefits.

So in Senator Kyl’s home State, it appears that 18,846 people are about to see their unemployment benefits come to an end, and he, I assume from his argument, believes that is a good thing because now this will prod them into looking for work, and he is not supporting extension of these unemployment benefits for 18,846 people in his home State.

That has become one of the major elements of debate in terms of whether the Republicans will support the Senate Finance Committee version. Let me add, it was a bipartisan vote that brought the bill out of committee—Senator Grassley of Iowa, joining with, I believe, Senator Smith of Oregon and Senator Bayh of Indiana. I am not mistaken. All three voted for the Senate Finance Committee version of the bill that was brought to the floor.

Let’s take a look at some other States where unemployment benefits might be important. In the State of Mississippi, 7,819 are about to lose their unemployment benefits unless the Senate finance version passes as an economic stimulus. As I mentioned, in my home State of Illinois, 57,000 are looking for assistance in that regard.

As I go through this list—North Carolina is another good example. North Carolina, 48,000 people in the State, obviously suffering from some high unemployment, are about to lose their unemployment benefits. The State of Ohio, 35,320 otherwise will lose their unemployment benefits.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a table on all the States, based on the current U.S. Department of Labor data, which will be reported officially in the Record.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, as this economy continues to deteriorate and we see these wild gyrations in the stock market, there are a lot of people concerned. Yesterday, the stock market went down over 300 points. I know it has its good days and bad days, but it has had more bad days than good days for a long time.

A lot of people in days gone by paid little or no attention to the stock market. My mom and dad did not own a share of stock during their married life. They were too busy raising three kids. They could not afford anything like that. If they could put a few bucks in the savings account to save up for the next used car, that is all they looked forward to.

A lot of people view it differently because that stock market reflects the value of 401(k) plans, IRAs, retirement plans, and savings that people count on in years to come. When the stock market is heading south, people are looking at it in worried terms.

What we are trying to do is invigorate this economy and get it moving. For the longest time, the Republicans have argued that the best way to invigorate the economy in good times and bad is to give tax cuts to the wealthiest people in America. They have this notion that if wealthy people have more money, they somehow will fire up the economy.

I come from a different economic school. It started with Principles of Economics that I took at Georgetown that I do not talk about. So when Father Zyzynski came into our class and explained the marginal propensity to save. If you are a wealthy person, you are more likely to save the next dollar handed to you than a poor person, who is more likely to spend it. So if you want to get the economy going and fired up, you will give as many dollars as you can to those in lower income categories.

Historically, the Republican approach has been just the opposite: Give the tax cuts, give more spending power to people who are wealthier—folks who have not asked for it and folks who, in many cases, do not need it. In my opinion, a tax code, if it is to be fair, is going to be progressive and say to the richest at the higher end—the working families and middle-income families—let’s be generous to them because they are the ones living paycheck to paycheck.

Let’s take a look at some other States where unemployment benefits might be important. In the State of Illinois, 57,000 are about to lose their unemployment benefits until Democrats took control of Congress last year. We point to that with pride today, as something historic. And Senate Democrats promised would be high on the priority list, and we did it. Again, we were focusing on people left behind in an economy that is not as powerful and as healthy as we would like it to be. Now unemployment benefits fit the same category.

When I think of plants across Illinois that have closed, putting people out of work—not to mention smaller businesses that are starving because of the very people that are facing sticker shock. The cost of college in Illinois has risen 51 percent since President Bush took office 7 years ago, relative to inflation, the median household income has decreased by 10 percent. So instead of an improvement in income, families in my State have seen their income go down during President Bush’s administration.

The number of residents of my State living in poverty since President Bush took office has grown by 10 percent. So instead of an improvement in income, families in my State have seen their income go down during President Bush’s administration.

The number of residents of Illinois, since President Bush took office 7 years ago, when he came into office and a national debt in the area of $5.7 trillion, and now it could virtually double by the time he leaves office. So this is the reality that we are facing.

Mr. President, how much time remains in morning business?

The national debt of America has doubled in the last 7 years under President Bush. We have accumulated more debt under President Bush than under all of the previous Presidents of the United States combined. Now, that is the kind of statement that could easily be challenged but I don’t think will be challenged because we have the facts to back us up. We have incurred this debt because we have had a war the President has not paid for, nor asked Congress to pay for, and we have had a tax cut policy which is unique in the history of our country. But the ownership society in our country has even asked for a tax cut in the midst of a war.

Here is a figure that ought to concern us as well. Since March 2001, foreign investors have financed nearly 80 percent of our budget deficit. It is not a healthy relationship when countries such as China, Japan, Korea, and the OPEC nations become the largest creditors of the United States. They have a lot more clout than we might like to see.

When I was in the Treasury Department, I was the Secretary of the Treasury, 20 years ago that there was speculation by one economist in China that they may decide to move away from a dollar-denominated international transaction to use the Euro, which is a stronger currency than the American dollar. Just that rumor, from a low-level economist in China, sent chills through the stock market, and we saw stock prices go down. It is an indication of how dependent we are becoming as a nation as we go further in debt to fund a war which now costs $4 billion a week and also to fund tax cuts in the midst of that war primarily for the wealthiest people.

The President has said many times that he believes in the so-called ownership society. But the ownership society hasn’t given most American families greater control over their financial destiny. The owners of the ownership society, by and large, have zip codes overseas. They are foreign investors who own mortgage securities. There are a lot of suggestions of how to get out of this. Some have suggested corporate tax cuts and others, but I think direct help to working families is the most effective way to do it. The rebates would work to send those families money that could be well spent. I think this extension of unemployment insurance has been proven to be very popular, Mark Zandi, with Moody’s Economy.com estimates this would be the second most effective stimulus measure of all the ideas under consideration, generating $1.64 in increased economic activity for every dollar of rebate. This money can be distributed very quickly, since the weekly benefits are capped at $350 for a single individual in Illinois, and it wouldn’t cost that much to extend it.

The Senate finance package is a great bill. We could have done better. I wish we could have included, for example, an improvement in food stamps. Over the holidays, last Christmas season, I went to food banks around Illinois. These are some great people. They do not work to make a lot of money, but they work to do a lot of good in their communities. They gather surplus food and distribute it to families who need it, and they are finding that more and more working families are showing up at food banks, and more and more families are finding that they are working, can qualify for food stamps. So food stamps, which, unfortunately, don’t provide enough money to really cover the cost of meals, could be improved, and that would help our economy. It would help the unemployed.

Finally, I think we need to understand that one of the other ways we can help bring this economy forward is to invest in the infrastructure of America. I just flew in this morning from Chicago—one of our great American cities. But even that city, with its mass-transit system, needs a massive capital investment, not only to repair what is there but to extend it for service to the outer areas, and for our economy, certainly good for the environment, and it will create good jobs.

These are jobs that can’t be outsourced. When we are doing infrastructure projects in Maryland or in Tennessee, we are doing projects that have real value, not only for the communities but for the men and women who are at work and whose paychecks are invested back into the communities.

So I am hopeful that at some point beyond this current discussion about an emergency stimulus package, we can extend our stimulus approach to even more investment—investment in highways and mass transit; in bridges, in making certain they are safe and we don’t witness the kind of tragedy we had not that long ago in Minneapolis; investments in water resource development—for instance, the locks and dams on the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers, desperately in need of rebuilding. All of these projects would help put people to work, to reduce the unemployment rate, and to put money back into the economy. There is hardly a State in our Nation that can’t come up with critical infrastructure projects we could invest in to make America stronger. It is one of the few things Government does which we can show has a direct relationship to economic growth.

Certainly we understand that this current economic crisis we face had its genesis in the subprime mortgage market, and we shouldn’t overlook the fact that 2.2 million Americans stand to lose their homes to foreclosure. I think the administration’s proposal so far has been anemic. This notion that we would ask mortgage companies and financial institutions to voluntarily restructure mortgages will take us, perhaps, a short walk down the road but not where we should be. We need to find better ways to give these families, if they can, the ability to stay in their homes and make their mortgage payments.

I have a bill that changes the Bankruptcy Code, that allows a bankruptcy court to take an honest look at a person’s income potential and restructure a mortgage so that they can stay in their home and won’t face foreclosure. Foreclosure is a disaster not only for the family losing the home but for those who loaned the money for that home and, ultimately, for the neighborhood surrounding it.

So Mr. President, there is certainly much we can do. I am sorry we didn’t get a lot more done yesterday. We tried, but the Republicans resisted again. They wanted another day off, and we had it. Instead of getting serious about amendments to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, instead of having the debate leading up to amendments and the vote on the economic stimulus package, the clock ran out.

Well, it is about time for the Senate to roll up its sleeves and get to work so America can get to work. I hope that today and tomorrow are scheduled will be the beginning of an honest debate and that at the end of the day we will pass an economic stimulus package, conference with the House, and send it to the President for his signature before we break for our Presidents’ Day recess period which begins next week.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. CORKER. Mr. President, I had originally scheduled time to speak a little about the stimulus package and the many frailties I see with this package. However, due to the tragedy last night in Tennessee, I wish to talk on a different subject matter.

The senior Senator from Tennessee joins me on the floor this morning, and, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent of any time to the great LAMAR ALEXANDER, the senior Senator from Tennessee, if that would be acceptable.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Chattanooga for his courtesy. I, too, would like to talk about the economic stimulus package and how we Republicans have been ready to go to work on it for 2 weeks, and will later today. But Senator CORKER and I have something that is closer to our heart today, and that is the devastation that came across our State last night from a string of tornados that was as rough and as pervasive as anything I have seen in my lifetime.

Most Americans saw reports of it while they were watching coverage of the elections, but the trouble began in Memphis in the middle of the day, with schools being closed because of tornados. It moved on to Jackson, where 3,300 students at Union University barely escaped, although the school was heavily damaged.

Often, tornados moved severe weather of this type head in one direction and then the other, but this one just kept going. It kept on going into middle Tennessee, to Sumner County and Macon County, where several lives were lost, and moved into east Tennessee and the mountain area just this morning. So there is a lot of trouble in our State as a result of that, and Senator CORKER and I want the people of our State to know we have been monitoring that during the night, and we and our staffs are working together today.

We have talked to the Governor and State officials, local officials. I talked to the athletic director of Union University on his cell phone a few minutes ago. I was trying to reach David Dockery, the president of Union University.

So for the next several days, we will be doing all we can do from the Federal level to the governor to the local officials in dealing with the devastation that was caused last night by the severe storms. Forty-five people were killed, more than another 100 injured, a lot of damage to buildings in areas across our State.

I thank Senator CORKER for taking this time to allow us to express to our constituents our feelings for them. We do want them to know they have our full attention today. The Governor is at the front of the line. That is the way we do things in Tennessee. We work closely with him and his staff and the local officials. We will stay in touch with them, and those who need to be in touch with our Senate offices can do that.

We will move promptly to deal with applications for disaster relief. Sometimes they say they need to take enough time to be accurately filled out rather than have a race to the mailbox to get those in. But we will be working with local officials with those to do all we can.

I thank the Senator from Tennessee, Mr. CORKER, for his courtesy in allowing me to express my remarks, and I look forward to working with him to help deal with the pain that has been caused to many Tennesseans.

I yield for Senator CORKER.

Mr. CORKER. Mr. President, thank you for letting me spend a few minutes on this topic that is such a huge issue in the State of Tennessee. I certainly thank our senior Senator for his leadership. Our senior Senator was also the Governor of Tennessee, and I know he knows full well what many people across our State today are facing.

Again, I thank him for his leadership on so many issues. I know both of us have spent time talking with county mayors across the State of Tennessee, talking with our Governor, talking with officials at Union University and other places. I know that for all of us our hearts and prayers go out not only to the people of Tennessee but also the Mississippi, Arkansas, and Kentucky people who also are dealing with some very tragic circumstances.

I know people in Tennessee are looking in their county and with our Governor for leadership, their officials with the National Guard, and FEMA. My understanding is they are providing outstanding leadership and that people have worked throughout the night to make sure that relief has been given, that people have been taken into homes and other places. Today, as they begin to dig out, if you will, and really see the extent of the damage, that will continue.

I am very proud to serve with LAMAR ALEXANDER and to be with him today. I know both of us want the people of Tennessee to know we are very aware of the tragedy they are dealing with. We are with them and their elected officials at the local and State level. We want to work with them as time goes on to make sure that much needed Federal relief, which will be on the way down the road, is forthcoming.

I wish to thank all of those volunteers. I have heard stories of heroic things throughout our State where ordinary citizens have done things to ease the pain and to create safety for many of our citizens in harm’s way.

Again, our thoughts and prayers are with all of our citizens, especially those who have been so tragically affected by the events of the last 24 hours.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I rise to unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

ECONOMIC STIMULUS

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I rise to talk about the economic stimulus package we are discussing in the Senate. I certainly appreciate the concern the President and all of us have in the House and Senate about our economy and wanting to do everything we can to make sure we avoid an economic slowdown that creates so much hardship through the loss of jobs and, in many cases, a loss of homes. It is something we definitely need to address. It is equally important, as we look at our economic situation, to make sure we allow economic growth and prosperity to work for more people. It is not just about our economic situation as a whole growing but making sure everyone can share in that prosperity.

It is important, as we look at the best way to stimulate the economy and keep it going, to remember that good jobs and a good economy depend on successful companies making good profits. In order for that to happen, we have to build a business environment. Our goal as a Congress should be to make sure America is the best place in the world to do business. Unless we do that, we will continue to lose ground to countries all over the world. It is going to be increasingly difficult to sustain economic growth. The world is becoming increasingly competitive. We hear it every day. We hear from Asia and India which are actually courting businesses with incentives to encourage companies to locate in their countries. It is creating a good business environment with less regulation and less taxes so that people will bring their manufacturing plants, their people, and their capital to their countries. It is working. Even stodgy old Europe that we imagine to be a high-tax and highly regulated network of countries is changing to be more competitive in the world economy. They have lowered their corporate tax rate to an average of about 25 percent. Some of the countries such as Ireland have gone down close to 10 percent and have seen remarkable economic growth as they have lowered their tax rate.

Why is this country not responding in the same way? It hasn’t been too long since I have been in the private sector working with businesses. I continue to hear the same sentiment. If we are going to do business in America today, before we get to the equipment, before we get to manufacturing and actually making things, we are making it very difficult for our companies to compete.

Add to that the cost of energy which is one of the highest in the world. That goes back to bad policy as well. For years we have known we have large oil and natural gas reserves. We have known we could develop more nuclear generation of electricity. Yet we have not allowed nuclear plants to be developed. We have large reserves of oil in Alaska, which we have consistently voted down in the Congress, and natural gas we don’t go after. Therefore, we are not only spending hundreds of billions of dollars for cars or oil to heat homes or more for electricity, we are sending hundreds of billions of dollars a year out of this country that could support our economy yet is supporting the Middle East and other economies around the world. Yet we will not change the policy. We will not develop our own energy resources. Instead, we are making it harder to produce automobiles in this country, putting the burden on them consistently.

Now, instead of trying to fix some of the systemic policy problems, we are talking about an economic stimulus plan which I have yet to hear, at least on the Republican side in our private meetings, one Republican defend as good policy. Maybe some will come out here and do so. But everyone on both sides is talking about good politics. We are doing nothing for long-term growth. We are doing nothing to create a simpler, more predictable Tax Code or reducing our regulation or litigation. What we are going to do in time for the election is to get a check in the hands of as many people as we can, and we are borrowing it from the future. The debt is growing. We are going to borrow the money to send checks home to Americans.

In 10 years on the present course, bonds for the American Government will be rated as junk bonds in the world because we continue to look at the next election rather than the future of the country.

It is obvious what we could do to develop a long-term, sustained economic growth pattern. If we made the current tax rates permanent, the ones we know have stimulated our economy, that would allow companies to plan past 3 years to build new plants, to buy new capital equipment, to hire new people. Right now American companies trying to do business in this country do not know that their tax planning to be after 2010. In fact, if we do nothing in Congress, they know they will experience the highest tax increase in history. Yet we are not even willing to talk about it. All of us know we need to lower our corporate tax rate to at least be comparable to Europe at 25 percent. Yet we are not doing it. So more of our capital, more of our jobs, more businesses will continue to move offshore. Sending people a few hundred dollars to pay down their credit cards is not going to help grow our economy.

There are other things we know we can do. We know we can bring capital from overseas back home for investment and growth by lowering our corporate tax rate as we did a few years ago, what we call repatriating those dollars. Even temporarily lowering that rate would bring capital home and encourage growth.

The one part of the stimulus package that does make sense is to allow companies to expense or to speed up depreciation of capital they buy so it will encourage them to grow and make decisions now because the people who make that equipment have jobs, and those who operate that equipment have jobs. So it would provide some stimulus. But it is most important that we have a predictable, permanent system where people can do business and be competitive around the world. It is unfortunate in all this debate that we are not even willing to talk about it.

I appreciate the time to express my concerns. I am thankful everyone is concerned about the economy and those who have lost their jobs and may lose them in the future. But what we are doing as a Congress is talking about doing something that we are not really doing: we are not stimulating the economy. This is not an economic stimulus package. It is a political stimulus package that is designed to help folks in November.

I know every American needs a check and probably none will turn it down. But the unfortunate part is we are making false promises that will not carry into long-term economic growth.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWN). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my remarks be considered as in morning business but fall in line with regard to the bill before us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE ACT

AMENDMENT NO. 3913

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I wanted to briefly mention my opposition to amendment No. 3913 offered by the Senator from Wisconsin. This amendment relates to reverse targeting, which is a theory that the Government could target a foreign person abroad when the real intention is to target a U.S. person, thus circumventing the need to get a warrant for the U.S. person. Quite simply, reverse targeting is already considered illegal under FISA. If the government was interested in targeting an American, it would apply for a warrant to listen to all of that person’s communications, wouldn’t it? Not just his conversations with terrorists overseas?

MUKASEY: Correct.

HATCH: Now, the topic of reverse targeting has been mentioned often during the FISA reform debate. From an intelligence perspective, reverse targeting makes no sense. From an efficiency standpoint, if the government was interested in targeting an American, it would apply for a warrant to listen to all of that person’s conversations, wouldn’t it? Not just his conversations with terrorists overseas?

MUKASEY: Absolutely.

HATCH: Are you aware of any instances of intelligence analysts utilizing reverse targeting?

MUKASEY: I am not aware of any such instances.

We are enacting national security legislation, and it is our responsibility to ensure that this bill does not lead to unintended consequences which provide protections to terrorists. This amendment is absolutely unnecessary, and I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

AMENDMENT NO. 3920

Mr. President, I wish to say a few remarks with regard to my dear friend, Senator WHITEHOUSE’s amendment to authorize the FISC, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, to assess compliance with minimization techniques. I rise to express my opposition to this amendment No. 3920.

My opposition to the Whitehouse amendment is related to the totality of this bill. This is an amendment that greatly expands the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court’s jurisdiction. Keeping in mind that the bill before us already expands FISC jurisdiction of foreign collection to an unprecedented high historical level, this amendment tips the balance and could lead to real-life instances of intelligence analysts’ operational decisions being second guessed by the court.

The original approach and goals of this legislation were simple and two-fold. Goal No. 1: Wire communications taking place in 2008 should receive the same treatment as radio communications taking place in 1978; and goal No. 2: Our intelligence community’s sources and methods should not be subject to exposure by litigation brought about by hearsay and innuendo. I am pleased the legislation before us provides more protections to American citizens than any intelligence bill in my recent memory, and certainly more than the original FISA law.

Over the last several months, a great deal of attention has been given to the FISC, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. The FISC was created by the original FISA law, and its jurisdiction was extremely limited by that law. Here is what the FISC was created to do.

Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court: “A court which shall have jurisdiction to hear applications for and grant orders approving electronic surveillance.”

This jurisdiction is purposefully limited, as the task of reviewing applications to intercept electronic communications is among the most important tasks our Government can do to protect our country. Terrorists have to communicate to plan and execute attacks, and our interception of these communications is paramount to stopping the next attack.

The jurisdiction of the FISC is greatly expanded by this legislation. Combined with other provisions in this bill, the new oversight created is prevalent and comprehensive. Since the breadth of this new oversight is critical when determining the necessity of the amendment we are debating, let’s look at the oversight created by this legislation.

Let me read these five charts.

No. 1, for the first time the FISC will review and approve minimization procedures used by the intelligence community.

No. 2, for the first time the FISC will review and approve targeting procedures used by the intelligence community. The FISC will determine whether the procedures are reasonably designed to ensure targeting is limited to persons outside the United States.

No. 3, for the first time, a court order will be required to target U.S. persons regardless of where they are in the world—for the first time.

No. 4, for the first time the Attorney General and the Director of National Intelligence will be required to assess the intelligence community’s compliance with court-approved targeting and minimization procedures. These assessments must be provided to the FISC and congressional Intelligence Committees.

No. 5, new congressional oversight—for the first time Congress is creating statutorily required Inspector General that is the Department of Justice and intelligence elements—semiannual assessments of compliance with court-approved targeting and minimization procedures. These assessments must be provided to congressional Intelligence Committees.

Now, given the staggering amount of new oversight, we should be very careful when creating mechanisms which could negatively impact our intelligence analysts, when these mechanisms provide no benefit, in this case, to the privacy of American citizens.

The intelligence community has a great deal of experience in the technical methods used to minimize incidental communications. From a very limited procedures for handling these communications are contained in the United States Signals Intelligence Directive 18, which has been in effect for over 28 years.

Remember, the Government is gathering information relating to foreign intelligence in order to protect national security, not necessarily for criminal prosecution. That is why different procedures are necessary. Other courts with national security gathering would be changed to fit within the procedures of title III criminal wiretaps, which is impossible.

Minimization techniques deal not just with retention and dissemination, but with acquisition. Analysts make decisions up front whether to acquire, keep, or share U.S. person information based on whether it has foreign intelligence value.

This means if a judge is reviewing compliance with minimization procedures, this review is much more than a factual check. The judge is not limited to simply making sure that technical and administrative guidelines are followed. Rather, this amendment could allow a judge to question specific decisions by intelligence analysts on why they chose to acquire, keep, or share certain communications.

Now this begs the question: Are judges better trained in intelligence collection than the intelligence analysts whose job it is to repeatedly perform this task? Not just the answer is no, but we should remember what the FISC said in their recently publicly released opinion, which is only the third public opinion released in the history of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court.

Here is what the FISC said:

Although the FISC handles a great deal of classified material, FISC judges do not make classification decisions and are not intended to become national security experts. Furthermore, even if a typical FISC judge had more expertise in national security matters than a typical district court judge, that expertise would still not equal that of the Executive Branch, which is constitutionally entrusted with protecting the national security.

Enactment of this amendment could result in judges making foreign intelligence determinations in place of the intelligence analysts. Based on this unjustified scrutiny, our intelligence analysts could become overly cautious when determining whether to deem information as having intelligence value in order to avoid unwarranted judicial scrutiny. This could result in less foreign intelligence information being accumulated, and thus could mean we may miss a vital piece of information we want to know. Why take this chance? That is what this amendment would do. Should we risk this type of unintended result?

In October of 2007, I asked Assistant Attorney General Wainstein if putting the FISC judges in the position of assessing compliance would effectively put the judge in the role of an analyst. Here is what he said in response:

And that is the problem, that it would get the FISC in the position of being operational to the extent that it’s not when it assesses compliance for, let’s say, the minimization procedures in the typical or traditional FISA context. It is not the same thing as order, one person. Here, some of our orders might well be programmatic, where you’re talking about whole categories of surveillance, and that would be a tall order for the FISA Court to assess compliance.

The Whitehouse amendment also contains language which lets the FISC fashion remedies it determines are necessary to enforce compliance. This is very broad language and gives the FISC in the position of being operational to the extent that it assesses compliance for, let’s say, the minimization procedures in the typical or traditional FISA context. It is not the same thing as order, one person. Here, some of our orders might well be programmatic, where you’re talking about whole categories of surveillance, and that would be a tall order for the FISA Court to assess compliance.

The House amendment also contains language which lets the FISC fashion remedies it determines are necessary to enforce compliance. This is very broad language and gives the FISC in the position of being operational to the extent that it assesses compliance for, let’s say, the minimization procedures in the typical or traditional FISA context. It is not the same thing as order, one person. Here, some of our orders might well be programmatic, where you’re talking about whole categories of surveillance, and that would be a tall order for the FISA Court to assess compliance.

The most common argument cited is that this legislation is too technical and too complex to have a 4-year sunset. This is certainly a complex bill, but this is not the first time the 110th Congress has tackled complex issues. We have already waded through several different and complex bills, such as immigration reform, ethics and lobbying legislation, and even a vast energy bill. We are not reinventing the wheel with surveillance law, as this is a FISA modernization bill. But it is important to note how Congress has previously legislated in this area. The 1976 FISA law made dramatic changes to our surveillance laws and oversight mechanisms. While FISA has been discussed extensively, what has not been stated nearly enough is that the 1976 FISA had no sunset. Given that FISA had no sunset, let’s look at how Congress has previously legislated FISA amendments with regard to sunsets.

Sunsets are not common in previous laws amending FISA. Other than the PATRIOT Act and the PATRIOT Act reauthorization, seven of the eight public laws amending FISA had no sunsets on FISA provisions, and the remaining public law had a sunset on only one of those provisions.

Now, this statistic speaks for itself. Why do we want to sunset about this bill? I do realize it contains massive new congressional oversight provisions which could possibly hinder our collection efforts, and that we may need to revisit it for this reason. However, if this is the case, we obviously do not need a sunset to do this. We can compile in this area whenever we want to.

A second reason I have heard that some support the Cardin amendment is that this sunset will keep Congress more engaged. One of my colleagues said that the sunset gives “Congress the ability to stay involved.” Congress should not need sunsets to stay involved. We do not need legislative alarm clocks to go off in 4 years in order to address national security. I wake up every day thinking about how we might protect our fellow Americans. I certainly do not need a sunsetting bill to remind me about national security and oversight, and neither should my colleagues.

The final reason I have heard for a 4-year sunset is the idea that the next administration should be given an opportunity to address this issue. That sunset fosters cooperation between Congress and the White House. Along these lines, one of my colleagues previously stated: Having a sunset gives us a much better chance to get cooperation from the White House. If Congress and the White House. Once again, the next President can weigh in on this topic whenever and however he or she wants to. And regarding the idea that we should include a 4-year sunset to keep Congress. Like so many other branches of Government — do we need a statute to influence the separation of powers? I say to my colleagues that the relationship between the branches of Government should be fostered by natural restrictions contained in the Constitution of the United States, not by an artificial sunset provision in an intelligence bill.

The very idea of a 4-year sunset understates the importance of timely implementation of new legislation. It takes a great deal of time to ensure that all of our intelligence agencies and personnel are fully trained in new authorities and restrictions brought about by congressional action. This is not something that happens overnight. We cannot wave a magic wand and have our Nation’s intelligence personnel instantaneously cognizant of every administrative alteration imposed by Congress. Like so many other things in life, adjusting for these new mechanisms takes time and practice.

While certain modifications are necessary, do we want to make it a habit of consistently changing the rules? Do we want our analysts to spend time actually tracking terrorists, or is their time better spent navigating administrative procedures that may be constantly in flux?

I know my preference is that our analysts be given the time to use the lawful tools at their disposal to keep our families safe.

I do not want to see them spending all their time burying their heads in administrative manuals which change from day to day whenever the political winds blow.

After all of the efforts by many in this body to write a bill that provides a legal regime to govern contemporary terrorism, the bill is certainly not alone in my opposition to a sunset provision. In fact, my views are completely in line with what the Senate has done in the past when amending FISA. The administration strongly opposes a sunset, and Attorney General Mukasey confirmed this opposition during last week’s oversight hearing here in the Senate.
The fact is that this administration will not be here to see this sunset occur. Why would they care if there is a sunset in the bill or not? Their opposition demonstrates that those who are in charge of protecting our country know that a sunset is a bad idea and their opposition is based in both and practical application. The administration knows that they will not be here, but the intelligence analysts who protect our country will. These analysts are not politically appointed, and do their job regardless of who the President is or what party the President represents. They need the stability of our laws to effectuate long term operations to prevent terrorist attacks, not guesswork which could hinder intelligence gathering practices.

We have already had a trial run with the 6-month sunset of the Protect America Act. Enough of the quick fixes, let’s have confidence in the work product created by the nearly 10 million dollars spent on this. A shorter sunset gives us an excuse to not legislate with conviction, and this is an excuse we should not make.

The 95th Congress had the ability to decipher complex problems and pass FISA Amendments Act, and the 109th Congress can certainly modernize it without second guessing our capabilities by approving the Cardin amendment. I will oppose this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I yield the floor.

ECONOMIC STIMULUS

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, in the remaining moments of morning business, I wish to highlight a couple important points about our economic stimulus efforts in the Senate.

We have had an opportunity over the last couple weeks to analyze carefully what the American people expect in terms of a jolt to our economy and what they expect this body to do. Unfortunately, we have been stymied by a lot of politics. I think it is important to point out very briefly the elements of what the Senate is trying to do, at least on the Democratic side and, secondly, to highlight its importance to the American people.

Firstly, I think with regard to the basic elements—I will not go into a long discussion—in order to stimulate this economy, we have to invest in strategies we know will work. One of those is unemployment insurance. We know that. All the economists say that. It is not because Democrats assert that; economists say one of the only ways that is proven to jolt our economy is to invest in unemployment insurance. This proposal on the Democratic side does that. The House proposal doesn’t do that. The area of unemployment insurance. It doesn’t address that.

The package this side of the aisle has been pushing is a $500 rebate. It is across the board for everyone and obviously for those who are married it is double that. But significantly, in this proposal 20 million American senior citizens are provided some relief. That wasn’t addressed in the House proposal. I think that is an important omission. In order to get this right, in order to jolt our economy, we need to help seniors. We also need to make sure a quarter of a million disabled veterans are helped as well. That is an important feature.

Thirdly, avoiding foreclosure; doing everything we can in this stimulus package in a short-term way to help families avoid foreclosure is another critically important element.

Some heating costs: In my home State of Pennsylvania—and I know the same is true in Ohio and across the country—there has been a 19-percent increase in the costs that families have to cover in a 1-year period. So if that is happening in Pennsylvania, we know it prevails around the country. This proposal in this Chamber does that. It adds $1 billion for home heating costs.

Finally, helping businesses and energy: As to the cost to businesses, I think small businesses should get help in this rough economy, and this proposal helps our businesses. It also makes investments we should have—or I should say implement strategies we should have done months ago when it comes to incentivizing energy efficiency and other tactics to move toward a more energy independent economy.

So whether it is energy, whether it is helping businesses, whether it is making sure our seniors get relief, that our families get relief and that we focus on unemployment insurance, home heat costs, all these elements are critically important. It is not perfect. The Presiding Officer knows—and he shares this view with me—we wanted to do more with regard to food stamps. We are still going to try on that. But if that doesn’t happen, and some other things don’t happen that I want, we still have to move this forward. I wish the other side of the aisle would allow us to go forward in a way that addresses these basic problems. We have seen a lot of talk on the other side but not nearly enough action to say we are going to support a proposal, not just what the House sent us but an improved and a much more significant proposal to hit this economy in the way we should hit it. With a stimulus to get the economy moving, to create jobs, to provide relief for our families, and to move into the future together. We can do that here. We should do it this week and make sure we don’t pass something which is watered down and which would not do the job.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.
The sponsor of the amendment says his amendment only requires the Government to certify to the FISA Court that the communication activities of the Government for whom there is a foreign intelligence interest. But the committee already requires the Attorney General and the Director of National Intelligence to certify to the FISA Court that the authority directed against the United States in order to obtain foreign intelligence information.

The amendment would have a devastating impact on foreign intelligence surveillance. Rather, the intelligence community shortfalls.

Under this amendment, none of that information could be collected if the communication was to or from the United States. That is a limitation that should make all of us uncomfortable. There is no basis for it, it is unreasonable, and it could lead our country into severe jeopardy.

The DNI and the Attorney General agreed with my amendment. Yesterday, we received a letter from them expressing their views about these amendments. The DNI and Attorney General stated that if this amendment is part of the bill presented to the President, they would recommend a veto. They wrote this in their letter:

"This amendment would have a devastating impact on foreign intelligence surveillance"
Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of our time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will use some of my time on a couple of these issues. I think it must be difficult for the Chair to figure out which time to apply to which amendments, but I will try to identify them.

First, I will speak with regard to Feingold-Webb-Tester amendment No. 3979, which the Senator from Missouri was addressing. He referred to our concern that the rights and privacy of Americans could be affected by this bill as a “tired accusation.” I object to that characterization. I think this is clearly the kind of thing we should be worried about. I will tell you what is a tired accusation: the notion that somehow our amendment would affect the ability of the Government to listen in on Osama bin Laden. That is a tired accusation. That is not an insult. That is not an empty and the DNI and of the targeting minimization procedures and disseminations. It would control the Government's access and use of incidental communications.

Mr. President, I turn now to amend- ment No. 3915, another amendment I offered known as the use limits amendment. As I explained earlier this week, my amendment simply gives the FISA Court the option of limiting the Government's use of information about information about U.S. persons that is collected under procedures the FISA Court later determines to be illegal. That is about as minimal a safeguard as you can get.

It is unfortunate that some of those who oppose my amendment are mischaracterizing what it does. The Attorney General and the majority leader have said that the amendment would place limits on the use of information that doesn't concern the U.S. persons. That is flat-out false, Mr. President. The use limits proposed in this amendment specifically apply to information concerning any United States person. That is what it says. That is not an empty and of the targeting minimization procedures and disseminations. It would control the Government's access and use of incidental communications.

The Intelligence Committee bill doesn't stop there. We took tremendous care to make sure there were specific protections for Americans' privacy violations that would protect against national terrorism, for example, an analyst will have to review the content of it. That actually results in more of an invasion of privacy than would ever occur under the standard minimization procedures that NSA uses every day. That makes no sense if we are trying to protect privacy.

Mr. President, it is news to me that the Intelligence Committee bill, as claimed on the other side, has no judicial involvement and no judicial oversight. I have said it before. This bill has more judicial oversight and involvement in foreign intelligence surveillance than ever before. There is court review and approval of the joint certification by the Attorney General and the DNI and of the targeting minimization procedures. If the court finds any deficiency in these documents, the Government must correct it or cease the minimization. That is not an empty oversight.

that the amendment would put limits on the use of information about non-U.S. persons. If this were true, then it is conceivable that my amendment would create an additional operational burden. But those statements are completely and utterly false, as I have already pointed out.

The amendment explicitly states that the use limits apply to "information concerning any United States person"—information that is already subject to minimization requirements.

I want to also address the argument the chairman of the Intelligence Committee made that this amendment is somehow different than the existing use limits for emergency surveillance. The chairman argued that the amendment, unlike the emergency use limits, could affect "thousands" of communications. As I pointed out yesterday, the amendment addresses that concern by creating a huge exception to the use limitations, an exception that is not present in the emergency use limits provision. Under the amendment, the FISA Court can allow the Government to use even information about U.S. persons that is obtained by unlawful procedures, as long as the Government fixes the problem with the procedures. So, in fact, this amendment is far less restrictive than the use limits for emergency surveillance, despite the claim of the chairman otherwise.

Even more important, we have to remember that thousands of communications are. The only information that would be subject to use limits is information about U.S. persons collected under illegal procedures—procedures that failed to reasonably target people overseas. The underlying bill prohibits the Government from collecting this information in the first place. My amendment gives this prohibition some teeth by limiting the use of information that has been illegally collected.

The opponents of this amendment may argue that the government has no intention of doing anything that would be unreasonable under the law. My response is, if it does, there ought to be some enforcement. There ought to be a way to make sure that doesn't happen, not just the assurance of the chairman and vice chairman.

Moreover, if the Government has collected thousands of communications illegally, all the more reason for us to try to contain the damage and limit the impact on innocent Americans? That is not hamstringing the Government; it is just requiring the Government to comply with the law that we are actually passing.

My amendment simply provides an incentive for the administration to follow the law as it is written. If we pass a law that has no meaningful consequence for noncompliance with the law, I think we are taking a real gamble and we ought to choose to comply. I am not personally willing to accept the odds on that one.

Once again, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, and I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I ask my esteemed vice chairman if I might have 6 minutes to oppose Senator FEINGOLD's reverse targeting amendment No. 3913.

Mr. BOND. I am happy to yield that time to the gentleman.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. The Senator from Wisconsin has an amendment that requires a FISA Court order if the Government is conducting surveillance of a person overseas, but a significant purpose of the surveillance is to collect the communications of a person inside the United States with whom the target is communicating.

I share the Senator's goal in protecting the privacy interests of Americans, but I am afraid this amendment, as drafted, is unworkable and unnecessary.

The amendment is described as a way to prevent reverse targeting—circumstances in which the Government would target persons overseas when its actual target is someone within the United States with whom the overseas person is communicating.

The fact is, reverse targeting is prohibited under FISA today. I repeat, it is prohibited under FISA today. If the purpose of the surveillance is the actual foreign intelligence target, the Government must seek a FISA order, and, in fact, the Government would have to have every incentive to do so in order to conduct comprehensive surveillance of such a person.

What is more, the base bill, S. 2248, makes the prohibition on reverse targeting explicit. The Government cannot use the authorities in this legislation to target a person outside the United States if the purpose of such acquisition is to target for surveillance a person within the United States.

In addition, the base bill, the Intelligence Committee bill, also strengthens the protection of U.S. person information that is collected in the targeting of foreign targets overseas by requiring that the FISA Court approve the minimization procedures that apply to this collection activity.

The Feingold reverse targeting amendment goes too far. The amendment would prohibit the Government from using the authorities of this act "if a significant purpose" of the acquisition is to "acquire the communications" of a particular known person within the United States. In order to acquire such communications, the Government would be required to seek a regular FISA Court order.

The problem is that we are revising the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act today in large measure precisely because we want such communications. The Intelligence Community has the ability to detect and acquire the communications of terrorists who call into the United States.

In other words, in order to detect and prevent terrorist attacks, finding out if a foreign terrorist overseas is in contact with associates in the United States is actually a significant purpose of this legislation, and it will always be a significant purpose. The purpose of collecting of a foreign terrorist target overseas by the intelligence community.

As the Statement of Administration Policy—that is objections usually that come over from the White House—points out:

A significant purpose of the intelligence community activities is to detect communications that may provide warning of homeland attacks and that communication between a terrorist overseas who places a call to associates within the United States. A provision that bars the intelligence community from collecting these communications is unacceptable.

Who is to say that person from overseas is not a terrorist and he is contacting a person in the United States that has something to do in the national interest or which has intelligence implications? You cannot in good conscience bar the intelligence community from collecting these communications. That is unacceptable.

Again, reverse targeting is prohibited under current law. I think that is the third time I have said that. Reverse targeting is prohibited by the committee bill. The amendment is not needed to achieve its stated goals. It will harm vital intelligence collection. I urge the amendment be defeated.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CASEY). Who yields time?

The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will speak with regard to amendment No. 3913, the one about which the chairman just spoke, the so-called reverse targeting amendment I have offered. Reverse targeting is what happens when the Government wiretaps persons overseas when what they are really interested in is the Americans with whom these foreigners are talking. I think most of my colleagues would agree that this bill should not open up a backdoor to get around the requirement in FISA for a warrant to listen in on Americans at home.

The lack of any substantive arguments against my amendment is made clear by the letter the DNI sent on Tuesday. The arguments just offered by the chairman were almost identical to the arguments offered by the DNI to the Attorney General. In fact, that letter, which severely mischaracterizes the amendment, actually underscores why the amendment is good both for civil liberties and for national security.

The letter confirms that reverse targeting is not, in fact, prohibited by the underlying bill. We keep hearing the chairman and vice chairman say it is already prohibited. It is not. The DNI writes that the Intelligence Committee bill only prohibits warrantless collection when the American is "the actual target." That cannot be read as a prohibition on reverse targeting. That is just a prohibition on direct targeting of an American at home, and it does nothing to protect Americans from what the DNI himself has said is unconstitutional.

Second, the letter cites "operational uncoordinated problems," but it does not bother to identify what those are. Yes, my amendment would require a new procedure, just like everything else in this bill, but the Government should already have procedures to protect itself. It is no constitutional right of Americans. If it does not, that is all the more reason to adopt the amendment.

Third, the letter actually makes one of the strongest arguments in favor of my amendment when it warns of insufficient attention to the American end of an international terrorist communication. If a foreign terrorist is talking to an American inside the United States, the intelligence community should get a FISA warrant on that American so it can monitor in real time what that American is doing for plotting. Yet the DNI’s letter seems to argue that the Government would not want to get a FISA Court warrant to listen in on all the communications, including the domestic communications of a terrorist inside the United States. I do not believe this is a serious argument, but if it were, it would suggest that our Government is not doing everything it can do to track down terrorists.

Finally, the letter seriously mischaracterizes the amendment. The amendment does not bar acquisition of communications between terrorists overseas and their associates in the United States. It does not in any way affect the DNI’s ability to listen in on his communications, and it certainly would have no problem getting that warrant. Without that warrant, the Government will never get the full picture of what that American is doing. Yet the DNI’s letter seems to argue that the Government would not want to get a FISA Court warrant to listen in on all the communications, including the domestic communications of a terrorist inside the United States.

Concerns have been raised that the PPA could result in the interception of U.S. person communications. As explained in the Department of Justice September 14 letter, and in a letter by the DNI’s Civil Liberties Protection Officer dated September 17, 2007, U.S. persons’ privacy interests are protected through “minimization procedures,” which must meet FISA’s statutory definition. In addition, “reverse targeting” is implicitly prohibited under existing law.

As a side note, Mr. President, this measure explicitly prohibits reverse targeting, but the Privacy Office goes on to say:

The SSCI bill in addition requires review of minimization procedures and explicitly prohibits reverse targeting. In addition, the bill provides the FISA court with ongoing access to compliance reports and information about U.S. person disseminations and communications and explicit authority to correct deficiencies in procedures. The bill also requires annual reviews of U.S. person disseminations and communications and expense reports.

This is a clear statutory framework. As a practical matter, if there was a desire to target someone in the United States, if that person was thought to have foreign intelligence information and acting as an agent of a foreign terrorist organization, the FISA Court order is the simplest way to do it. Nobody has explained how you can target a foreign terrorist to get communications on a particular U.S. person unless that person is engaged in a terrorist activity, and you have to target an overseas person. That is a very serious foreign intelligence information, and that is the legitimate reason for making the collection against the foreign target. No terrorist information. The information is minimized and not used. I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I have a friend. I have known him for a long time. His name is Steve Walther. Steve Walther was a very prominent Nevada lawyer, a senior partner in a law firm, with qualifications that are unsurpassed. I have always liked Steve very much. And he made a comfortable living. I called him once and said: Steve, if you were in the position you are now, would you consider doing something different?

A wonderful story about Steve, to show what a tremendously good guy he is. He has a little boy named Wyatt. He married a woman who raised their children. They were his children once married, but he had never had his own child. His wife went to the doctor, and she was nearing 50 years old and was sick, and found out she was having a baby. So late in life they had this baby, and I will never forget what she said. She said: When I had my first two babies, time went by so slowly. But she said: Now I am older and understand, and I want everything to be fine, so I can’t take enough time to make sure this baby is fine.

Anyway, I said to Steve: You could afford to come back here. How would you like to be a member of the Federal Election Commission? He is not a Democrat; he is an Independent. He has done things for the American Bar Association, held all kinds of prominent positions with the American Bar Association nationally. He said: OK, I think it would be a good idea.

Wyatt can come back and spend some time in Washington. So he served for nearly two years on the Federal Election Commission. Everybody said he was outstanding, as I knew he would be.

Also on that Federal Election Commission, prior to the first of the year, was another Democrat by the name of Bob Lenhard. He had served on the FEC with Steve. He and Steve worked well together. They worked well together with everybody on the Commission, and he and Steve worked well together.

The Federal Election Commission is critically important because it enforces our Nation’s campaign finance laws. Both these nominees lost their jobs at the end of last year because the Republicans refused to permit a vote on their nominations to the FEC. They said they would not allow an up-or-down vote on these nominees of Lenhard and Walther. Nothing about their qualifications. They were both outstanding members of the Federal Election Commission. The reason they would not allow a vote on them is they would not allow a vote on their own nominee, a man by the name of Hans von Spakovsky. They are filibustering their own nominee.

I said: Let’s vote on all of the FEC nominees, any order you want. We will vote on ours first, last, we don’t care. Let’s just have a vote on them. No. Unless we would guarantee von Spakovsky would pass, and he don’t know if Spakovsky would pass. I suspect the Republicans don’t think so. But it seems fair to me that we should have votes on these nominees.
The record over the years is full of remarks by my Republican colleagues characterizing the up-or-down vote as the gold standard of reasonableness in Senate process. That is apparently not the view when it comes to one of their nominees, who would actually stand a chance to be defeated. Republicans won’t allow a vote on our Democrats unless we approve this person. That doesn’t make sense.

The reason these FEC nominees, including Steve Walther, have not been approved is not because they’re in conflict with the White House and the Republicans. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two editorials.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Jan. 31, 2008]

WHILE THE ELECTION WATCHDOG WANDERS

The presidential campaign’s heated fund-raising sweepstakes finds lobbyists hurriedly “bundling” additional hundreds of thousands from donors to re-stake surviving contenders for the next primary rounds. (Lobbyists reportedly bundled $300,000 on McCain’s behalf the night in Washington after his stock revived on the campaign trail.)

In packaging political influence by superlarge chunks, money bundlers are at least as crucial to understanding where candidates stand as their campaign vows. Fortunately for voters, a new election law mandates disclosure of the names of lobbyists and other bundlers working the high-roller realm of donations of $15,000 or more. Unfortunately for the same voters, this vital law has been ignored.

A partisan standoff blocks the Senate from filling four existing vacancies on the Federal Election Commission. The six-member panel is powerless to form a quorum and write the regulations needed to shed sunlight on bundling. Senator Mitch McConnell, the Republican minority leader, is refusing to allow individual up-or-down votes on the nominees for the commission. Mr. McConnell threatens a filibuster unless they are voted on as a package. It is an obstinate tactic to protect a highly unqualified Republican nominee, Hans von Spakovsky, from rejection in a fair vote.

Mr. von Spakovsky is a notorious partisan who previously served the Bush administration as an aggressive party hack at the Justice Department. There, he defended G.O.P. strageties to boost Republican redistricting and mandate photo ID’s in Georgia—a device to crimp the power of minorities and the poor who might favor Democrats at the ballot.

President Bush refuses to withdraw the von Spakovsky nomination, while the Democratic minority leader, Harry Reid, has been unable to take action on the three other controversial nominees. We urge the Senate majority leader, John R. Bolton, to take another look at the Bush office’s selection process. Mr. Bolton properly recognizes that because of the terrible Democratic majority when it comes to one of their nominees, it turns out that Mr. Bush is in no hurry to press the issue. Why? Because the Senate Majority Leader, Harry Reid, to highlight this controversial nominee, we urge the Senate majority leader, Harry Reid, to stress that only two commissioners are in place, meaning that the agency, six members when it is at full strength, cannot initiate enforcement actions, promulgate rules or issue advisory opinions.

The standoff involves Hans A. von Spakovsky, a former official in the Justice Department’s civil rights division who had been serving as an FEC commissioner before his recess appointment last month. Democrats and civil rights groups argue, with some justification, that Mr. von Spakovsky’s tenure at Justice was so troubling that he should not be confirmed to the FEC post. Some Democrats had threatened to filibuster the nomination, but Senate Majority Leader Harry M. Reid (D-Nev.) managed to offer an up-or-down vote on each of the four pending nominations to the agency, two Republicans and two Democrats. But Mr. McConnell and fellow Republicans have informed us that these nominees must be dealt with as a package, with no separate votes allowed. To be fair to Mr. McConnell, the practice has been to vote on FEC nominees as a package to ensure that the politically sensitive agency remains evenly divided between the two parties. But that has not been an absolute rule; indeed, the last nominee who generated this much controversy, Republican Bradley A. Smith, had a separate roll call vote and was confirmed 64 to 35 in 2000. But Senate Democrats could not afford to have an unconfirmed FEC nominee, if they were able to muster the votes to defeat Mr. von Spakovsky.

We have suggested previously that it is more important to have an operating FEC than to keep Mr. von Spakovsky from being confirmed. But Mr. McConnell ought to explain why the up-or-down vote he deemed so critical in the case of Mr. Mukasey, Mr. Bolton or appellate court nominee Miguel A. Estrada is so unacceptable when it comes to Mr. von Spakovsky.

Mr. REID, Mr. President, I can gather one thing about the President’s unwavering willingness to resolve the Federal Election Commission problem. That is that they would rather have no election watchdog in place during an election year.

The background on the FEC makes the call from Mr. Walther particularly remarkable. Listen to this, now. It even gets better.

Steve Walther called to tell me he had been invited to the White House by the President to push for his nomination. I have heard this story before. People whom I have placed in the works to get approved by the Senate. They were all invited to the White House tomorrow morning. All nominees that the President has pending were invited to the White House, Democrats and all. Why? To complain about the Democrats not approving them.

This leads me to tell you a little personal story. I have had one, and we have had all, with this President. The President is in fact hoping to have breakfast with all the nominees, Democrats and Republicans, now pending in the Senate, in an effort to force the Senate to confirm all these people. They must live in some alternative universe. They talked yesterday about the Orwellian nature of this White House, and this is it. He has invited people to the White House to complain about not approving them when they—the President and the White House—are the reason we are not approving many of them.

He invited Mr. Walther, Mr. Lenhard and other Democratic nominees to the White House, along with all his Republican nominees, to get them to be a part of this show. Frankly, I’d rather eat from a manhole to have a quick vote on these nominees as a package to ensure that the political process is all but paralyzed: Only two commissioners are in place.

The President’s breakfast only needed one attendee. One only. That is because only one nominee matters to this President. It should be an intimate breakfast between Bush and a man by the name of Steven Bradbury. Why do I say that? I say that because of what the President will profess to care about at this breakfast, Steven Bradbury stands head and shoulders above all the others in the President’s esteem. I am not guessing; I was told so by the White House.

Right before the Christmas recess, I called the President’s Chief of Staff, Mr. Bolten. A wonderful man; I like him. I have had a talk with him about Mr. Bradbury. He invited Mr. Walther, Mr. Lenhard and Steve Bradbury to the White House, Democrats and all. Why do I say that? I say that because of all the nominees the President will profess to care about at this breakfast, Steven Bradbury stands head and shoulders above all the others in the President’s esteem. I am not guessing; I was told so by the White House.

He called me back and he said: Well, what we want is to have a recess appointment of Steven Bradbury. I said: Josh, we are going to go into recess, and why don’t we have an agreement on who the President wants to have recess appointed and, in fact, I will give you some suggestions. You can have a member of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors, you can have a Federal Aviation Agency, and you can have a couple of chemical Safety Board members. I said: Not only that, there are 93 other Republican nominees we will approve. There are 8 Democrats, 84 Republicans. Pretty good deal. He said: Let me check.

He called me back and he said: Well, what we want is to have a recess appointment of Steven Bradbury. I said: Josh, I didn’t recall the name. Let me check. I checked with Chairman LEAHY, I checked with Senator DURBIN, who is a member of that committee, I checked with Senator SCHUMER, who is on that committee, and they and others. You know, this is a man who has written memos approving torture, and that is only the beginning. for a number of Republican nominees. Democrats are willing to approve them and Republicans stand in the way. Why would he invite them down there also? But he did, because there is an Orwellian thought process that goes on down there saying Democrats aren’t allowing these people to get approved, which is the direct opposite of the truth.

All for one person it appears, Mr. Bradbury. Whatever the White House wants, Bradbury would give it to them in a day. I am not going to accept that. What the President is trying to do with this show tomorrow is so unreasonable, so unfair, and so out of step with reality—as is the budget he gave us on Monday—that I hope the American people understand what is going on in this country.

It is too bad we have a situation where the President of the United States would have a meeting in the White House and invite everyone to our country, jobs that are important tomorrow takes about as much gall as is the budget he gave us on Monday—that I hope the American people understand what is going on in this country.

Now, these jobs, all Republicans, all names given up to us by the President, are jobs that people have sought for their whole lives. Head of the Council, the head of the National Drug Control Policy, the Director of Violence Against Women’s Office, Assistant Attorney General, Under Secretary of Commerce for International Trade, Director of the Census, Solicitor for the Department of Labor—these are only a handful of the jobs of the 84.

No, now, here are the people we confirmed. They are right here. Everybody can see them confirmed all of them. And had it been up to the President, not a single one would have been confirmed.

The President’s Office. The assistant majority leader, Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I am glad the majority leader has come to speak about this issue. It is hard to imagine what is going through the mind of the President that he believes he can make an argument tomorrow with the meeting at the White House, that we have been unreasonable in dealing with his nominations.

Senator REID spelled out what happened. We tried, in many ways, to get some balance in nominations. That is done all the time so Republicans and Democrats will be approved. It is done by both parties. I have seen it in the years I have been around the Senate. When Senator REID made that offer in December, the White House said: No, they would not do it unless they could have this one nomination. Mr. Bradbury. And I will have to say I think Senator REID went that extra mile, an extra 404 miles, as a matter of fact, and he basically said 84 of those Bush nominees would be confirmed.

The majority leader recounted several phone calls he received this week from Democratic nominees to bipartisan confirmed friends from my friend, Tom Carper, not the Senator from Delaware but a friend of mine from McComb, IL, who has been nominated to serve on the board of directors of Amtrak.

Tom Carper, one Republican, both of whom had been favorably reported by the Commerce Committee.

The Republicans objected. They insisted that we confirm one Democrat and two Republicans, so to be notified at all. Now, this “all-or-nothing” approach is not new. We have seen this before when it comes to nominations.

As the majority leader described, I think the most glaring example of this is the nomination of Steven Bradbury to be Assistant Attorney General. The majority leader was willing to allow additional confirmations—and even recess appointments—for a number of nominations.

I can tell you, having dealt with Senator REID, he bends over backward to be balanced in this approach. That is the way it has to be in the Senate. That is the way the institution operates. But the White House turned down his offer. They turned down his offer because of one nomination, the nomination of Steven Bradbury.

It was clear this request, Mr. Bradbury, was going to be rejected. Mr. Bradbury’s nomination has been returned to the White House four times since he was first nominated for the job in June 2005. What part of “no” does the White House fail to understand?

Why does the President care so much about this one nominee that he is willing to sacrifice all these other nominees? He is going to fill the White House with people who are going to have this fine White House china in front of them, sipping coffee and tea and eating little cookies and complaining that somehow or another the Democrats in the Senate are ignoring their need to serve our Government.

We are not ignoring it. Senator Reid has offered repeatedly to confirm these nominees on a balanced basis, even giving the President 81 nominees without this balance. They have said: No deal unless we get Steven Bradbury. He is the one appointment, clearly, who is important to this administration. Why? What is it about this man? What would possibly be in his background or his potential for future service that would be so important? Well, this is worth talking about for a minute. Steven Bradbury is the head of the Office of Legal Counsel, also known as OLC. OLC is a small office and most people have never heard of it, but it has a great deal of power, especially in this administration. The Office of Legal Counsel issues legal opinions that are binding on the executive branch of Government.

In the Bush administration, OLC has become a rubberstamping for torture policies that are inconsistent with American values and laws. In August of 2002, the Office of Legal Counsel issued the infamous torture memo. This memo sought to redefine torture, narrowing it to a limited situation of abuse that causes severe physical pain or death. These words meant the United States was preparing to abandon generations of commitment to outlawing and prohibiting torture. This memo also concluded the President has the right to ignore the torture statute, which makes torture a crime. This memo was official Bush administration policy for years, until it was finally leaked to the media, and the administration was forced to repudiate it.

Jay Bybee was then the head of the Office of Legal Counsel, signed that memo. Unfortunately, Mr. Bybee was confirmed to a lifetime appointment on the Federal bench in the Ninth Circuit before Congress and the American people learned about his complicity in the creation of this infamous torture memo, a memo that was repudiated by the Bush administration once it became public.

Jack Goldsmith succeeded Jay Bybee as head of the Office of Legal Counsel. Mr. Goldsmith is a very conservative Republican, but even he was disturbed when he heard what was happening at the Office of Legal Counsel.

As head of that office, he revoked the misguided OLC opinions dealing with warrantless wiretapping and torture. He decided those opinions went too far.

Deputy Attorney General Jim Comey supported Mr. Goldsmith's actions. Let me say a word about Mr. Comey. My colleague and friend for years, Senator Schumer, told me about Jim Comey when he was chosen to be the Deputy Attorney General under Attorney General Ashcroft. Senator Schumer told me Jim Comey was a straight shooter, an honest man who would not compromise his principles in public service. He said I could trust Jim Comey. During the period Jim Comey served in our Government, Chuck Schumer and I both enjoyed the reputation that Jim Comey had earned.

We now know what happened because it has come to light that there was an infamous showdown at the bedside of Attorney General John Ashcroft, who was hospitalized in an intensive care unit on the advice of Chief of Staff Andrew Card and former Attorney General Alberto Gonzales tried to pressure a then-ailing John Ashcroft into overruling Jack Goldsmith and his acts in the Office of Legal Counsel. It is hard to imagine that they would go into a hospital wing, with the acting Attorney General and with the President's Chief of Staff, to a man in an intensive care unit and try to persuade him to sign a document to overrule Jack Goldsmith.

Fortunately, Attorney General John Ashcroft, to his credit, refused. When Jack Goldsmith finally left the Justice Department, the administration realized they did not need any more trouble from the Office of Legal Counsel, they needed someone in that office who would not rock the boat, would not question their opinions, someone who would rubberstamp their policies.

So, in June 2005, President Bush nominated Steven Bradbury to succeed Jack Goldsmith—Steven Bradbury, the person who has now become the centerpiece of the entire appointment agenda of the Bush administration. Although Mr. Bradbury has never been confirmed in this position, he has effectively been head of OLC for 2 1/2 years.

In 2005, Mr. Bradbury reportedly signed two OLC legal opinions approving the legality of abusive interrogation techniques. One opinion, on torture, was authored by Steven Bradbury, to succeed Jack Goldsmith—Steven Bradbury, the person who has now become the center of this infamously controversial opinion, which Jim Comey said would shame the Justice Department. This promise made by Attorney General Mukasey to me, to the Judiciary Committee, and to the Senate is a matter of public record.

Last week, Attorney General Mukasey appeared before the same Judiciary Committee for the first time since he was confirmed. I asked him point-blank whether, as he had promised, he had reviewed all of the OLC torture opinions. He specifically asked him about Steven Bradbury’s “combined effects” opinion, which Jim Comey said would shame the Justice Department if it became public. Sadly, the Attorney General said he had not reviewed those opinions. He realized that he had made a promise to me that he would, and we left it at that. He did acknowledge in the course of his testimony how much he respected Jim Comey, how he had turned to him for advice, and believed him to be a honorable man. I feel the same. I trust that Attorney General Mukasey is also an honorable man who will keep his word.

In the meantime, while all of this continues, Steven Bradbury remains as the effective head of the Office of Legal Counsel, even though it has been 2 1/2 years since he was nominated and he has never been confirmed. Legislation known as the Vacancies Reform Act prohibits a nominee from serving for this long without confirmation. It is up to the administration to avoid the process that Mr. Bradbury assumes a role he has never been given under the law. Apparently, he is so important to about Mr. Bradbury and other members the Judiciary Committee regarding his role in this.

Ironicly, the Vacancies Reform Act to which I referred was passed by the Republican-controlled Congress in 1998 to limit the ability of then-President Clinton’s nominees to continue to serve in an acting capacity. The legislation was specifically targeted at Bill Lann Lee, the first-ever Asian-American head of the Civil Rights Division. Apparently, the Bush administration is ignoring the very law which a Republican Congress passed to make it clear that the President does not have the authority to appoint people like Steven Bradbury in an acting capacity without confirmation.

What has Mr. Bradbury not been confirmed for? For years, the Justice Department has refused to provide Congress with copies of the opinions Mr. Bradbury authored on torture. Mr. Bradbury has refused to answer straightforward questions from myself and other members the Judiciary Committee regarding his role in this.

Here is what I said in November 2005 about Mr. Bradbury’s nomination:

Since the Justice Department refuses to provide us with OLC opinions on interrogation techniques, we do not know enough about where Mr. Bradbury stands on the issue of torture. What we do know is troubling. Mr. Bradbury refuses to repudiate un-American and inhumane tactics such as waterboarding.

As I have said before, I believe that at the end of the day, when the history is written of this era, there will be chapters that will not be friendly to this administration.

In past wars, Presidents of both political parties have been guilty of excessive conduct, in their own view, as part of national security. One can remember the suspension of habeas corpus by President Lincoln during the Civil War, the Alien and Sedition Act, World War I, and the Japanese internment camps of World War II. All of these examples, as we reflect on them in history, do not reflect well on this country. Decisions were made which many wish could be undone. The same is likely to be true when it comes to the issue of torture and the war on terrorism under the Bush administration; this issue of warrantless surveillance, where for years, literally, this administration went beyond the law and attempted to intercept communications when they could have come to Congress and received bipartisan support for an approach which would have kept America and our Constitution safe.

Yesterday, I learned why Steven Bradbury is so important to the White House. We also learned why he refuses to condemn waterboarding. It was on Super Tuesday, March 4, that political minds were focused on other places and other things. Unfortunately, it didn’t get a lot of attention, but every American should know what happened yesterday on Capitol Hill.

In testimony before the Senate Select Intelligence Committee, CIA Director Michael Hayden acknowledged that the United States of America has used waterboarding, a form of torture, on three detainees. Waterboarding, or simulated drowning, is a torture technique that has been used since at least the Spanish Inquisition. It has been used by repressive regimes around the world.

Every year, the State Department issues a report card on human rights in countries in which we are interested that engage in what we consider to be basic violations of human rights. Included in those basic violations is torture of prisoners. Included in that torturing is waterboarding. So once a year we stand in judgment of the United States of America. Why are we still engaged in it? Waterboarding to determine whether they respond to several requests we have sent, the questions we have asked, and I want you to respond to them. I hope I receive that response by the end of the day. If I receive that response and it is a good-faith response, even if it is a good-faith response, then Judge Filip can move forward. I hope he will.

It is now in the hands of Attorney General Mukasey. Let me highlight two of the questions I am asking: First, does Attorney General Mukasey agree with the legal conclusions of the Office of Legal Counsel torture memos written by Steven Bradbury, that Jim Comey believes the Justice Department would be ashamed of if they were made public? Second, will the Justice Department investigate the administration’s use of waterboarding to determine whether any laws were violated? I didn’t call for prosecution but simply for an honest investigation.

I recognize the Bush administration wants to confirm Steven Bradbury, to ensure they have a firewall to protect their torturous policies. But what is at stake here is more important than this one nominee. This is about who we are as a country. This is about the United States, our values, our standards of conduct. This is about whether the United States can, with a straight face, be critical of regimes and countries around the world that engage in abusive interrogation techniques. This is about whether we protect American soldiers and American citizens from torture by unequivocally condemning those forms of interrogation. The United States cannot be a country that defends a practice which the civilized world has considered torture for over five centuries.

Democrats are willing to work with the President, in a bipartisan manner, to ensure nominations are made and that the President’s response to the majority leader’s work in confirming more than 80 nominations in December by renominating Steven Bradbury last month is not encouraging. If the President truly wants to confirm his nominations, he should not be pouring coffee and tea at the White House.

I ought to have his Chief of Staff, Mr. Bolten, pick up the phone and say: Let’s get down to business. There are important Democrats and Republicans who can be appointed tomorrow if the President will understand that the entire fate and future of his administration should not hang on this one nominee. Steven Bradbury, who has been implicated in some of the most questionable practices of this administration. I hope the President and his Chief of Staff, after they have had their coffee with these potential nominees, will pick up the phone and work with us for the right result.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MENENDEZ). The Senator from Alabama.
Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to share some thoughts on the FISA legislation. It is critically important, and we need to pass the Intelligence Committee bill.

I will first say, in response to my able colleague from Illinois, that the Intelligence Committee bill.

I would like to share some thoughts on the floor of the Senate, which Senators Kennedy, Leahy, Biden, and others have ever dealt with.

As a result of the debate and discussion about that, we had an amendment that defined torture as infliction of severe physical or mental pain or suffering. I am glad we are no longer utilizing waterboarding. I hope we never have to do it again.

I just want to tell my colleagues, be careful how you portray the United States around the world.

Mr. Goldsmith, who has been quoted here and previously testified before our committee, has written a book. He said this was the most lawyered war in the history of the Republic. Lawyers have been involved in everything. Great care has been given to ensure the law was followed. To compare waterboarding of 3 individuals to what was done to American prisoners by the Japanese in World War II is just unthinkible. To date, not a single prisoner whom we have captured in the War on Terror has died, to my knowledge, in American custody—maybe or one or two from some disease, but certainly not from abuse.

I just finished reading the book “Hells Guest” by Mr. Glenn Frazier from Alabama, a Bataan Death March survivor. About 90 percent of those prisoners died. They starved to death. They were beaten on a regular basis and abused in the most horrible way.

To even compare what was done to American soldiers wearing a uniform lawfully being a combatant to what has been done to people without any physical or permanent injuries is not fair. It is part of a rhetoric designed for political consumption at a time that has embarrassed our country around the world and led decent people around the world to believe our military is out of control and we are systematically abusing and torturing prisoners when it is not so. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves to go on again and again about it.

We cannot continue to be confused. Our country faces very real dangers. Terrorists are determined to damage this country. It is not just talk. We know it is true. They have done it before. They have attacked us around the world. They attacked us repeatedly before 9/11, and they desire to destroy our country.

Our administration made a decision after 9/11 that we could not treat these people as though they were criminals, and they have had the bombs strapped to them. They died. The rules we gave them, but innocent Americans have to do it again.

I hope we have to keep this threat in the forefront of our minds. These are individuals dead set on the destruction of our country at any cost. There is nothing they will not do. I state that the FISA law should be made permanent. It should not merely be extended with another sunset provision. It is a fallacious argument to claim we cannot revisit a law unless there is some sunset when it ends. As Members of this Congress, it is incumbent upon us to continually review legislation we pass to ensure that the laws are accomplishing the goals set forth and that no unintended consequence was conceived. As the Vice President said in a recent speech:

The challenge to the country has not expired over the last 6 months. It won’t expire any time soon, and we should not write laws that pretend otherwise.

The Intelligence Committee bill is a collaborative, bipartisan compromise that was crafted in consultation with members of the Intelligence Committee, the Director of National Intelligence, the Department of Justice, and the intelligence community after months of negotiation and review of highly sensitive information, most of which was classified, secret, about the current surveillance procedures and how they were being utilized, a reason to pass critical legislation such as the Protect America Act and slap an expiration date on it.

Fighting the war on terror is a long-term enterprise that requires long-term institutional changes. As the Vice President said in a recent speech:

The challenge to the country has not expired over the last 6 months. It won’t expire any time soon, and we should not write laws that pretend otherwise.

The Intelligence Committee bill is a collaborative, bipartisan compromise that was crafted in consultation with members of the Intelligence Committee, the Director of National Intelligence, the Department of Justice, and the intelligence community after months of negotiation and review of highly sensitive information, most of which was classified, secret, about the current surveillance procedures and how they were being utilized, and is by the reason to pass critical legislation such as the Protect America Act and slap an expiration date on it.

Remember, it has been over 6 years 4 months since the terrible attacks of September 11, and we may be most thankful that not one attack has been carried out on our soil since that day. As we move further from that dreadful day, I fear our memories have begun to fade. Otherwise, there is no sound justification for doing anything other than to authorize the President to use the full power of the United States against the terrorists in any way that is necessary to protect our country.

The Intelligence Committee bill passed a bill, the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which I am a member, got involved and produced a partisanship bill. We already voted to table the bipartisan substitute, and we defeated the bipartisan Intelligence Committee bill. Let me point out, however, something that happened in the Judiciary Committee. The bill produced by the committee was given very little process during one committee meeting where 10 Democratic amendments were accepted along a strict party-line vote, and the bill itself, ultimately, was voted out with only Democratic support. No Republican voted for it. It was a purely bipartisan bill.

Strikingly, the one vote that garnered bipartisan consideration was against an amendment that was offered by Senator Feingold to strip the retroactive liability protections found in section 2 of the Intelligence bill. We had a discussion and vote on whether the liability protections to keep the companies that helped us and responded to Government requests—whether they should be sued for doing so—should be stripped from the bill. We voted in the Judiciary Committee, 12 to 7, to follow the recommendation of the Intelligence Committee that they passed 13 to 2, and keep the limited liability protections. So it was a 12-to-7 defeat of the Feingold amendment that would have removed those liability protections.

Directly after that vote, however—it was curious how it all happened—but directly after that vote, Chairman Leahy moved only the Committee of the Judiciary substitute bill out of Committee. When that passed, that effectively stripped the liability protection provisions the committee had just voted to keep.

The point is that the Democratic-controlled Judiciary Committee, when voting directly on removing retroactive liability, voted 12 to 7 to keep it. But by the time we passed out the Judiciary Committee’s version of the bill, we had taken it out. I’m not sure people fully understand how that occurred, but it certainly was an odd thing that it passed out of committee without liability protection, when we specifically voted to keep that language in the overall bill.

Now, the main area of disagreement is over this important question that will be coming up, I understand, in the amendment offered by Senator Dodd, amendment No. 3907—and a Specter-Whitehouse amendment that will allow substitution—which will, in effect, allow litigation to continue against telecom companies that responded to the requests of the Attorney General of the United States, certified by the President, that we had an opportunity to determine whether we should provide these good corporate citizens who cooperated with a formal written request by the Attorney General of the United States, certified by the duly-elected President of the United States, to provide information for a surveillance program implemented shortly after the attacks on September 11—and at that point in time, we did not know how many terrorist cells there were in the country and what plans they may have had.

Now, the nature of the program is highly classified, but after an uproar of complaints, the procedures were studied carefully by Congress, and we rejected by giving approval to the program in passing the Protect America Act overwhelmingly last August. I did not want to be too light-hearted about it, but I remember all the brouhaha that this program was somehow wrong and had to be eliminated, and people immediately believed all the things they were alleging. But after we went in great depth, we found, as Mr. Goldsmith said, that the lawyers have been on top of this since day one. It was a carefully constructed program. A court opinion even said it was not possible to continue the way it was being done, and the Intelligence community asked us for legislation so it could continue. The Congress passed the Protect America Act this summer, but it was a short-term bill that lasted only 6 months.

All I would want to say is, nobody apologized to President Bush or the Attorney General of the United States or the people at the National Security Agency, for all the bad things they said about them. After having studied what they did, we concluded it is constitutional and legal and proper and necessary, and we actually passed a law to authorize it to continue.

But some lawsuits have been over 30 lawsuits now filed against telecom providers for their alleged participation in the terrorist surveillance program—30 lawsuits. Analysis of these lawsuits leads only to the conclusion that the plaintiffs are substituting speculation and a fevered brow for fact and are ignoring the dangerous consequences these lawsuits can have on our national security.

I do not know who is actually filing these lawsuits. I will just say this, par- enthetically: Last October, before the last election, Lancet magazine produced a report—a medical magazine in England—that said 500,000 to 700,000 Iraqis were killed by the American military in Iraq. And ABC, CBS, and our Democratic colleagues all raised cane that, unbelievably, we would kill this many people. After the election was over—and by the way, the guy who wrote the report said he wanted to be sure it came out before the election—we learned some things about it.

In a fabulous article in the National Journal, an unbiased magazine, they detailed the fraudulence of that article, and pointed out that even an antiseptic, said, at most, it was 50,000, not 500,000 or 700,000. And where did they find out the money for the Lancet article came from? George Soros, and the MoveOn.org crowd. The “blame America first” crowd. Well, I don’t know who is actually funding these lawsuits. We ought to ask some questions about it. Certainly there is no indication that anybody’s liberties have been impacted adversely.

If these suits are allowed to continue, we face a number of problems. The sources and methods relied on by our intelligence community to conduct surveillance are highly classified, and if these lawsuits are allowed to proceed, even allowing for the Government to be substituted for the telecom companies, we run the risk of exposing the things our enemies really want: classified national security information. Make no mistake, if forced to defend themselves against lawsuits brought with a government request certified to be legal, companies will certainly hesitate or refuse outright to cooperate in the future. Even where substitution by the Government is an option, we would be forced to make national security decisions in the hands of corporate counselors in the future whose duties—and their first responsibilities—extend to the stockholders of their company, and not the national security.

If we ask a company to help us, do we want all the lawyers in that company to say: Wait a minute. The last time we worked with you government we got sued, and we are going to review all of this because some court may hold this. George Soros may fund some lawsuit and tie up the future. We don’t think we want to help. I think they would naturally take that tack in the future to resist cooperation.

During floor debate in December, the distinguished chairman of the Intelligence Committee, our Democratic colleague Senator Rockefeller, said this. This is what he said about the matter:

Our collective judgment—and he is talking about the Intelligence Committee members—

Our collective judgment on the Intelligence Committee is that the burden of the debate about the President’s authority should not fall on the telecommunications companies.

In other words, the debate about whether the President had authority to do this shouldn’t fall on the telecommunications companies—because they responded to the representations by Government officials at the highest levels that the program had been authorized by the President and determined to be lawful and received requests, compulsions to carry it out. Companies participated at great risk of exposure and financial ruin for one reason, and one reason only: in order to help identify terrorists and prevent follow-on terrorist attacks. They should not be penalized for their willingness to heed the call during a time of national emergency.

Senator Rockefeller said that.

The ranking member of the Judiciary Committee who favors substitution has stated this, flat out:

The telephone companies have acted as good citizens.

Certainly they have. In many instances, the Government must seek assistance from the private sector and private individuals to help protect our national security and even local security in our communities. In order for this practice to continue, we must allow them to rely on assurances that these requests and activities are only legal but essential to protect our national security without fear that they will have their names dragged through the mud by protracted litigation initiated by the “blame America first” crowd which subscribes to wild theories about Government conspiracies to deny people their liberty. They are forgetting the safety of America, and they are ignoring precedent.

Some in this body sincerely believe that liability protection is not needed if these companies did nothing wrong, they say. Well, this is faulty reasoning since either allowing the lawsuits to proceed without limiting the Government will still force them to be a party to lawsuits that run the risk of exposing national security information or doing irreversible financial and reputational damage to companies innocent of any wrongdoing. We are putting these companies in harm’s way when they, bound by a sense of patriotism and civic responsibility, participate in a government program that was certified to be legal by the Attorney General of the United States and the President of the United States.

If the Government is substituted—in accordance with one of the theories that has been offered—in the place of a particular company, it will most certainly assert the state secrets privilege. In effect, the company virtually impotent when it comes to mounting a defense and showing what their legitimate actions were. Due to the nature of this state secrets privilege, a company will be forbidden from making their case and will be left without the ability to even confirm or deny their participation in the program. We should applaud the actions of these citizens, not stab them in the back by suing them for their actions.

To refresh everyone’s memory, the Intelligence Committee, after months of negotiation in highly classified settings, rejected an amendment to strip liability protection from the bill for these companies by a vote of 12 to 3. It then turned out in the vote by a bipartisan vote of 13 to 2, protecting these companies from lawsuits.

The Judiciary Committee, on the other hand, had one markup after less than 2 weeks of reviewing the Intelligence Committee’s legislation, and rejected an amendment specifically that would have denied liability protection by a vote of 12 to 7. So we voted not to allow them to be sued either. Furthermore, the Judiciary Committee rejected a movement to allow the Government to be substituted for the plaintiffs by a vote of 13 to 5. We rejected substitution too, although the liability protections were ultimately removed from the bill the Judiciary Committee passed.

Even if the Government is substituted, plaintiffs in litigation will seek discovery, they will file depositions and ask for interrogatories and motions to produce. They will seek trade secrets and highly classified technical information the companies would still face many litigation burdens. They would be—we would be subjecting them to harm, not only from consumer backlash, but their international business partners will be pressured around the world.

Under the limited liability protections incorporated in the Intel bill, plaintiffs seeking to question the Government or any of these companies would essentially only protect good corporate citizens from civil suit. So the liability protections in this bill do not preclude lawsuits against the Federal Government from going forward. In fact, there are at least seven lawsuits pending against the Government that will proceed against the Government or Government officials. This was accepted by the Intelligence Committee.

Some wanted to say you couldn’t sue the Government for these activities also, but the Intelligence Committee reached an agreement, an overwhelmingly bipartisan agreement, that would allow those lawsuits to proceed.

The companies that helped the Government did so to help protect us from further attack, and valuable information has been gathered with their help. I have been out to the National Security Agency. I have talked with the people. I know they scrupulously follow the rules, and I know they have gained great, valuable information through this program, and I know they lost very valuable information when the program had to be stopped. This information has saved undoubtedly American lives by enabling our intelligence community to thwart attacks. Some have said this amounts to amnesty, but that couldn’t be further from the truth. Amnesty is an act of forgiveness for criminal offenses, such as granting citizenship to people who broke the law to come into our country illegally. The companies were operating under a certification of legality in a time of national danger doing what they believed was for the law and prevent future attacks. At no point during their participation were their actions illegal. For Heaven’s sake. To grant liability protection is to adhere to that great Anglo-American legal tradition for hundreds of years that when called upon by a law officer, with apparent legal authority, wearing a uniform, out on the street, a citizen is not to be held legally liable if, in responding to the officer, the officer was wrong. That is all we are talking about. That is a fundamental, historical, legal principle. The only question—the legal question has always been simply this: whether the citizen was responding to a legitimate request by a government law officer, a police officer to chase a bad guy. Was the citizen acting reasonably in believing this was a legitimate law enforcement request and he was helping by being a good citizen. That is the test. If he participated knowingly with somebody acting illegally, then that citizen could not be protected by the Attorney General and the President of the United States in written documents suffices as a legitimate request.

The bottom line is, we do not need to pass legislation that panders to the extreme interest groups in America who find fault in everything our people do, our law enforcement and intelligence officers, and that fosters a fundamental mistrust of those who are working daily to serve all of us. The burden should not fall on the shoulders of good corporate citizens who are acting patriotically to help save lives and protect our country.

I urge my colleagues to vote to support the Intel Committee bill, a carefully crafted, carefully studied, bipartisan bill. I also urge my colleagues to support the liability protections in the Intelligence Committee legislation and a vote against any amendments that attempt to strip these provisions or in any way alter the carefully structured, limited provisions of the bill.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

MR. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss Senate amendment No. 3907 offered by Senators DODD and FEINGOLD to the Intelligence Committee’s FISA legislation. I compliment my friend from Alabama for some very strong, very pointed remarks on this issue as well as the other issues he addressed.

I am pleased the leaders of the Intelligence Committee were able to come up with an agreement on how to proceed on this important legislation. I look forward to the debate on many of these amendments.

A couple of the amendments have been offered relating to title II of the bill which provides immunity to those telecommunication carriers that currently face lawsuits for their alleged assistance to the Government after September 11 and their participation in what is known as the terrorist surveillance program, or TSP. Senators DODD and FEINGOLD have an amendment striking this section. Senators SPECTER and WHITEHOUSE have offered an amendment which would substitute the Government as a defendant for the telecommunication providers currently being sued for their alleged support to the President’s TSP program. I do not support either of these amendments.

As a member of the Select Committee on Intelligence, I had access to classified documents, intelligence, and legal memoranda and all testimony related to the President’s TSP program. After careful review, as stated in the committee report accompanying this legislation, the committee determined that electronic communication service providers acted on a good faith belief that the President’s program, and their assistance, was lawful.

The committee reviewed the correspondence sent to clients who are electronic communication service providers stating that the activities requested were authorized by the President and determined by the Attorney General to be... lawful, with the exception of one letter covering a period of less than 60 days in which the counsel to the President certified the program’s lawfulness. The committee concluded that granting liability relief to the telecommunications carriers was not warranted but required to maintain the regular assistance our intelligence and law enforcement professionals seek from them.

Although I believe the President’s program was lawful and necessary, this bill makes no such determination. This is not a review or commentary on the President’s program; rather, it is a statement about how important this assistance by the electronic communication providers is to our Government.

I cannot underestimate the importance of this assistance—not only for intelligence purposes but for law enforcement purposes also. The Director of National Intelligence and the Attorney General stated:

Extending liability protection to such companies is imperative; failure to do so could result in the cooperation by such companies and put critical intelligence operations at risk. Moreover, litigation against companies believed to have assisted the Government in the collection of highly classified information regarding extremely sensitive intelligence sources and methods.

There is too much at stake for us to strike title II and substitution is not an acceptable alternative. This week, we have been alternating between legislation geared to helping our taxpayers and FISA. Yet substituting the Government in these lawsuits will force the American taxpayer to front the heavy legal bills associated with this legislation.

Substitution would allow these trials to continue and could risk exposure of classified sources and methods through the discovery process in the litigation. As a result in these frivolous lawsuits, the Government may be required to expose some of our most sensitive intelligence sources and methods. Let me emphasize the committee already found that these communication providers acted in good faith under ascertainations of the highest levels of our Government that the program was lawful. If an individual alleges he or she has a claim due to this program, that claim can be brought against the Government in a limited, yet specific, review of the assistance offered by the Intelligence Committee. Given the wide array of information I have heard on the Intelligence Committee, I question the benefits a Member would gain from such a limited, yet specific, review of the operation intelligence community. Rather, I urge my colleagues to support the determination of the Intelligence Committee, which is charged with regularly reviewing the intelligence activities of the United States and oppose the amendments offered by Senator DODD and Senator FEINGOLD.

Providing our telecommunications carriers with liability relief is the necessary and responsible action for Congress to take. The Government often needs assistance from the private sector in order to protect our national security and, in return, they should be able to rely on the Government’s assurances that the assistance they provide is lawful and necessary for our national security. America’s telecommunications carriers should not be subjected to costly legal battles.

With that, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to address the Senate as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

A You know what is going to happen then? They are going to stop spending. When that happens, we will have the full pressure of the economy in a downward spiral, and it begins to feed upon itself. That is precisely what happened in 1975.

In 1973 and early 1974, there was a great housing boom in the United States, like we have had over most of the last decade. And like what happened over most of the last decade with subprime loans and underwriting, back in 1974, money got awfully loose. Banks made loans with very little underwriting criteria, and we had a plethora of new loans all over the United States by newfangled homebuilders who had a hammer, a pickup truck, and easy credit. We found ourselves at the beginning of 1975 with a 3-year supply of vacant housing on the market in the United States. All of the unsold inventory in the market is a 6-month supply. So you had six times the volume of houses that would be considered a balanced market, and we went into a deep recessionary spiral.

A Democratic Congress and a Republican President passed a $6,000 tax credit: it available to any family who purchased a standing vacant house in inventory, and that allowed them to collect that credit over 3 years—the 3 succeeding tax years after the year of their purchase. The only thing they had to do, other than qualify for their loan, and qualify under good qualifying standards, is they had to occupy the home as their residence. In a 1-year period of time, we absorbed a 2-year supply of inventory. The only thing holding the market to balance and the economy stabilized. Although we had the impacts of the oil embargo, which was causing problems with inflation, the economy returned to a relatively stable period of time, we absorbed a 2-year supply of inventory, and that allowed them to consider the public was astronomical.

I hope, as we finish talking about a surgical, strategic, short-term stimulus real buying, which is what we are talking about in terms of either the Senate Finance Committee bill or the House bill, we take a look at what is coming. Because, believe me, in July of this year, if we do nothing, we are going to be dealing with a housing supply in this country bigger than it has ever been, with vacant houses by the thousands in neighborhoods, declining values on the value of housing, and people who are in good shape are not going to be able to either work or be able to move their house in the marketplace because of the tremendous inventory available.

History is a great teacher both in terms of things you should never repeat and terms of things that work and you should repeat again. I would submit the tax credit to qualified individuals to purchase and occupy a troubled house in this economy is an incentive that worked not only for the betterment of the market but for the betterment of our economy and in the best interest of the United States. Senate bill 2566 is an opportunity for us to join together to do something good and right for the American people.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ECONOMIC STIMULUS

Mr. REED. Mr. President, across the Nation, millions of Americans are struggling to make ends meet as our economy has slowed dramatically. In December, I spoke on this floor about how President Bush has presided over a period of divided prosperity in the United States, where a privileged few have done remarkably well but the rest of us are struggling to get by. For most working people, the trademark of the Bush administration and their economy is wage stagnation. Indeed, in my home State, real median wages have not increased since 2000.

Rhode Islanders are coping not only with flat wages but increasing prices in critical commodities they must consume. Energy, education, and health care have all gone up. In January, in Rhode Island, gas was $3.11 cents a gallon; heating oil costs in the Northeast are expected at least $2.00 this year, which is about a $400 increase from last year. These price increases would be difficult to manage even in good times, but again paychecks for most working families have not kept up. In fact, they have been flat.

With prices accelerating, wages flat, and a huge gap in the capacity of middle-income working Americans to keep up and try to get ahead, the subprime crisis remains. This housing crisis is having huge and devastating effects. Two years ago, most of our constituents, the vast majority of them, were sitting around the table thinking: Well, when my daughter is ready to go to college in the fall; we will put some of the equity in the house to provide the extra income she will need to go ahead and make it through college. A lot of those families now are recognizing they can’t do that. They are more concerned about a health care incident, because, unlike a few months ago, there is no reservoir in the value of their house to cushion the blow of unexpected expenses.

So this housing crisis, together with the wage stagnation, together with increased prices for energy and health care and education, and so many other things, is putting middle-class Americans in a vise and squeezing them. We have to do much better. The Joint Economic Committee and others have estimated some of the costs already in terms of this mortgage-related foreclosure crisis. In my home State, they think $670 million will be lost to the family incomes of Rhode Island families through the end of 2009. These economic conditions are being felt across the country. They are not localized warnings. The weakness in housing has spread to all parts of our Nation and across our economy. Growth in the fourth quarter of last year was .6 percent compared to a 4.9 percent increase in the third quarter.

We are slowing down, moving into a recession. Yesterday the market, Wall Street, went down over 300 points, largely due to a very poor survey of a nationwide survey on the service sector. We have known for many months now that the manufacturing economy was having difficult times, but the service sector was holding up a bit.

Yesterday, there was a chilling indication the service sector has also contracted. The market took the news very badly. The market also took the news very badly a few days ago, when we showed a loss of 17,000 jobs, the first time we have actually lost jobs in more than 4 years.

Again, the administration’s performance in terms of creating jobs has been less than stellar, barely keeping up with the new entrants into the labor market on a monthly basis. Now, for the first time in more than 4 years, we have lost jobs.

Furthermore, the average length of unemployment is increasing from 16.6 weeks in December to 17.5 weeks in January. More people are losing jobs and it is harder to find a new job. Yesterday, the Federal Reserve released a survey of senior bank loan officers who indicated that the credit crunch is spreading from consumer loans into the commercial and industrial loan sectors and that foreign banks are tightening their lending terms, in fact, even more so than some U.S. financial institutions.

Taleb clearly shows Wall Street is going into what one analyst called a recession panic mode and many economists are seeing signs that weaknesses in our economy are spreading internationally. In fact, one investment banker today, in a speech reported on the Internet, suggested that in the credit markets fear has overtaken greed, creating a situation of near panic in many respects.

So there is no doubt we have to act quickly on this stimulus package, not only to inject needed spending power into the economy to try to revive our consumer sector but also to signal to the American public we will act decisively to try to moderate, if not head off, the effects of a pending recession.

We have, I think, a lot to be grateful for in the work of Senator BAUCUS and Majority Leader REID and Senator GRASSLEY in terms of taking a House proposal and increasing it with important provisions, such as expanding the eligible income tax rebates, including 20 million seniors and 250,000 disabled veterans.

The package we are considering also includes $10 billion for a temporary extension of unemployment insurance and $1 billion of emergency funding for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, the LIHEAP program. Both of these initiatives are targeted to families, seniors and low-income households, and they would help jump-start the economy.

Economists agree these programs will fund families, low-income households, and they would help jump-start the economy.

Now, there is another aspect of the package we will consider later today, I hope, that their Government is responding to their concerns and that we will respond in the future, if necessary. Making the long-term unemployed eligible for a temporary extension of an additional 13 weeks at this time also makes good sense and is the right thing to do. Two weeks ago, I wrote a letter to the majority and Republican leaders asking that they include unemployment insurance in the stimulus package, and 26 other Senators joined me.

Senators DURBIN and KENNEDY have long led the fight on this issue. I commend them for their efforts. I hope unemployment insurance is part of the final package we are able to vote out of this body.

Now, there is another aspect of the package we will consider later today, I hope; that is the LIHEAP support. We have seen a huge increase in energy costs for consumers: spending about 11 percent more to heat their homes this winter. For Rhode Islanders who rely on heating oil, that is about 39 percent higher than last year in terms of their heating oil expenses.

We know that the timely, targeted, and temporary aspects of stimulus have to be met. LIHEAP will do this. It is timely because it will be delivered very quickly. We have a delivery mechanism in place. It is also something that will fund families, low-income families, who desperately need this money.

I do not have to belabor the point that today, around the kitchen table, people are figuring things out. They are thinking, first of all, they probably need to take off sending their first born or their second or third child to the expensive school; that may be off the table for a few years. But they are also talking very basically about which bills can they pay this month? Do we pay the mortgage? Do we pay the energy bill? Do we pay the credit cards which we are using to buy food at the supermarket these days?

I mean, these are the debates American families are having. They are not talking in terms that we are here, such as what is the best macroeconomic policy or how we can delay these expenditures, they are talking in terms of a real crisis in the family. We have to respond. One way we can respond quite clearly is with this LIHEAP money because that will go to one of their major concerns: How do we keep the heat on in the Northeast for the next several weeks and month; and in the South, the cooling problems in the Southeast and the South, parts of the country that clearly is with this LIHEAP money because that will go to one of their major concerns: How do we keep the heat on in the Northeast for the next several weeks and month; and in the South, the cooling problems in the Northeast for the next several weeks and month; and in the South, the cooling problems in the Southeast and the South, parts of the country that Again, these are the households who need LIHEAP. And so we know we have a program that works in LIHEAP. If we can deliver additional resources, it will go to the families who need it, particularly seniors, it will get out immediately. It will add to the stimulus effect because as the economists—both Mr. Blinder and Mr. Zandi—pointed out, it will leverage our investment in the economy.

So with the escalating costs for energy I would urge my colleagues that we go ahead and accept this amendment, particularly the funds for LIHEAP. I urge us all to support the Senate Finance Committee package, a package that provides for greater coverage to seniors and disabled American veterans and also provides unemployment insurance for those who desperately need it and heating assistance for, again, the families who desperately need it.

I hope that today, not only good sense, good economic sense, but a sense of our obligations to the most vulnerable in this country will persuade us to support this package strongly.

The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 10 minutes and then for Senator CRAPO to have up to 10 amendments to speak on the PISA bill. But I will be happy to yield the presiding officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I think our colleagues is going to speak in morning and if you would like to yield to the Senator from Texas. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?
Mrs. HUTCHISON. Was there an amendment?
Mr. BOND. If we can yield to the Senator from Texas for 10 minutes on the bill, the Senator from Idaho for morning business, and then go to a Member on the majority side of the aisle.
I believe there is a consensus developing for the unanimous consent request I have proposed.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would the Senator repeat his unanimous consent request?
Mr. BOND. Ten minutes to the Senator from Texas on the FISA bill, 10 minutes in morning business for the Senator from Idaho, and then a member of the majority side will be recognized for whatever he or she wishes to do.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The Senator from Texas is recognized.
Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I do rise to speak on the FISA bill, which I certainly support, and also to oppose some of the amendments that will be coming forward.
I hope very much that we will be able to start voting on amendments, because we have an agreement for voting on amendments, and I hope we can clear the FISA bill in due course and in short order. It is important because there is a deadline.
We are going to see the capability for our intelligence officials and our intelligence officials, to monitor calls between known terrorists and suspected terrorists, whether it is into our country, or out of our country from foreign countries, we need to have this capability continue.
We have it right now. The Senate passed a good bill about 6 months ago. It has now been extended. But we do have a deadline, and the deadline is on us in the middle of this month. So we do need to pass this bill. We need to make sure the technology of the day is covered by the foreign intelligence surveillance act and subject to the security needs of our country.
There are amendments that would take away the immunity for telecommunications companies that allegedly cooperated with intelligence officials.
One amendment, No. 3907, would strip the immunity from the bill completely. The Intelligence Committee is the key committee that has looked at all of the information and assessed the need for the ability to survey known terrorists and suspected terrorist helpers in our country and in foreign countries. It is important that we allow our intelligence agents to go to telecommunications companies and get the help they need to do this kind of surveillance. Amendment No. 3907 would take away immunity for companies that may have cooperated with government requests.
The telecommunications companies allegedly assisted the intelligence community because of the need to assure that plots against our country and our citizens were uncovered before they are implemented. Now we have the potential for catastrophic liability from a number of lawsuits, and some of my colleagues want the country to turn away from providing protection for these companies. We do not allow these companies the freedom to provide the evidence in court because the intelligence community says the evidence is too sensitive to be allowed in court. We let the telecommunications companies in a situation in which they cooperate. They are sued. But they don't have the ability to defend themselves in court because they cannot produce the evidence. It is untenable, and I hope we will reject such an amendment.
There is another amendment that would allow the Government to be substituted for the telecommunications companies as the defendant when they are sued. The problem with this amendment is that we do still have the ability to spend thousands of hours and millions of dollars on these lawsuits. They would have to subject their employees to depositions. They would need to participate in evidence gathering, and the discovery process, which will drain their resources in an unnecessary lawsuit in which they would be peripheral.
There is yet another amendment that would grant immunity after review by the FISA Court. Whether it is well intentioned, there are some problems with giving this to a court that doesn't have the capability to process this kind of request. They don't have statutory procedures. They don't have the administrative capacity to receive witnesses, to hear evidence, or to carry out the major provisions of the amendment.
Furthermore, it is unclear that there is an appellate authority from the immunity after review by the FISA Court. While certainly well intentioned, there are some problems with giving this to a court that doesn't have the capability to process this kind of request. They don't have statutory procedures. They don't have the administrative capacity to receive witnesses, to hear evidence, or to carry out the major provisions of the amendment.
I yield the floor.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senator from Idaho is recognized for 10 minutes as in morning business.
SECURE RURAL SCHOOLS AND COMMUNITY SELF-DETERMINATION ACT
Mr. CRAPO. I thank the Senator from Texas and my colleagues on both sides for allowing me this few minutes to have a break in the debate on the FISA bill to discuss a very important issue to the people of Idaho and, frankly, to the people in rural communities throughout the country. I rise to talk about the critical need to reauthorize the Secure Rural Schools and Communities Self-Determination Act of 2000 and to fully fund the payments in lieu of taxes, or the PILT payments, which we call them in Congress. I encourage my colleagues to make this overdue extension and funding a top priority for Congress in the coming days.
This year marks the 100-year anniversary of the passage of the act requiring the U.S. Forest Service to return funds from sales of timber on land owned by the States to assist counties that are home to our national forests and other Federal lands with school and road services. This program was put into place to compensate local governments for the tax-exempt status of national forests which we all enjoy. Otherwise, many rural communities that neighbor these beautiful national treasures are unable to fully meet the school and road needs of their communities.
One hundred years ago, the impact of large Federal forest reserves on neighboring local economies was discussed and debated on the floor of the Senate, as former Idaho Senators Weldon B.
Hayburn and William Edgar Borah joined their Senate colleagues in debating this issue which remains an issue today. However, the unfortunate reality of today is that in recent years, timber receipts have eroded to the point that the Federal obligation to our local communities is simply not being met. The receipts are not adequate for the needs of the communities and have been dropping off dramatically. Congress has acted in recognition of this to ensure that communities have the necessary assistance.

In the year 2000, I joined with my colleagues, Senators Larry Craig, Ron Wyden, Gordon Smith of Oregon, and many others to support and secure enactment of the Secure Rural Schools and Communities Self-Determination Act of 2000. This law provided the necessary assistance known as county payments to communities where regular Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management receipts-sharing payments have not been made for decades. The assistance has prevented the loss of essential schools and road infrastructure needs in our local rural communities. The law also enabled very significant forest improvement projects.

Threats to natural resource challenges are achieved through local collaboration, and the more than 70 Resource Advisory Committees—or RACs, as we call them—provided for in this law have created valuable partnerships in our country to address a wide variety of improvements on public lands. These projects include habitat and watershed restoration, reforestation, fuels reduction, road maintenance, campground and trail enhancements, and noxious weed eradication. At a time when increased public demand is being placed on our Nation’s natural resources, the RACs have provided the necessary cooperation to help resolve natural resource challenges throughout these local rural communities.

Additionally, payments in lieu of taxes, known as PILT payments, have augmented county payments to provide local governments with the means of offsetting a portion of the tax revenues they lose because of the tax-exempt status of these Federal lands in their jurisdictions. PILT payments have supported community services such as firefighting and police protection in rural communities but have not been made but more needs to be done to achieve the Federal Government’s commitment to these communities.

In March of 2007, the Senate overwhelmingly passed an amendment which I cosponsored to the fiscal year 2007 emergency supplemental appropriations act to reauthorize county payments for 5 years with offsets. However, this language was replaced with a 1-year extension, with the final payment made at the end of December 2007.

In December last year, Senators McCaskill, Craig, Smith, Dole, Murkowski, Bennett joined me in urging the Senate leadership to attach a reauthorization of county payments and PILT funding to any legislative vehicles expected to be enacted before Congress concluded its work last year. Unfortunately, the reauthorization was attached only to the energy package which also would have increased taxes on domestic oil and gas producers to pay for incentives for renewable power, energy efficiency, electric vehicles, and other technologies.

I supported alternative energy resources and the extension of county payments, but I am opposed to paying for those incentives by increasing taxes on our domestic oil and gas production. We are facing real and increasing constraints on our energy supply, resulting in higher energy costs daily. We simply cannot meet those needs by decreasing conventional energy production in the United States, which would further our dependency on foreign energy supplies and dramatically increase the cost for gasoline and electricity. This would negatively impact communities across the Nation, not just the rural communities we are seeking to help.

We need to again turn our attention to focusing on the reauthorization of the Secure Rural Schools legislation and increasing and achieving full and adequate PILT funding. It is unfortunate that the county payments extension was dropped from the enacted Energy bill and was not included in other legislative vehicles before the end of last year. However, today is another day. As we embark on the second session of this Congress, we have every opportunity to work together to extend and fund county payments and fully pay for PILT payments for students in rural areas. We must do this to prevent the closure of numerous isolated schools and to enable rural county road districts to address severe maintenance backlogs.

Time is of the essence for many rural communities across the Nation, and this important legislation impacts millions of students and their families in more than 4,000 school districts and more than 70 counties. I am hearing from Idaho communities that, absent an extension, personnel layoffs as a result of program closures are expected soon. Communities in more than 40 States are facing similar pressures.

The impact of Federal land ownership on neighboring rural communities has not been worn away by time, neither has this Nation’s responsibility to the States worn away. It is my hope that others will join me in working to meet this Federal responsibility by reauthorizing the Secure Rural Schools Act and providing the full funding for PILT. This must be achieved in a timely manner that prevents the outside of new services to rural communities nationwide and provides some long-term certainty to those rural communities.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I ask that I be given recognition to speak on the pending bill.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator is recognized.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I say to the Presiding Officer that far and away the most contentious issue in this FISA debate is whether private companies that assisted the Government in implementing the President’s warrantless surveillance program should be provided liability protection.

Three amendments will be offered that relate directly to this issue. First, Senators Dodd and Feingold have an amendment that would strike all of title II of the underlying bill—that is, S. 2248—on liability protection as reported by the Intelligence Committee.

Second, Senator SPECTER will offer an amendment—I think it is 874—that provides for a different remedy: namely, the substitution of the U.S. Government itself for the carriers in the lawsuits that have been filed against the carriers.

Third, Senator FEINSTEIN has prepared an amendment that would keep the basic structure of title II—to wit, liability immunity—but would have the courts, rather than the Congress, determine whether carriers relied in good faith on the representation made to them by the executive branch of our National Government.

I will address the particulars of each amendment as it is offered, but first I would like to describe the background behind the Intelligence Committee’s approach to this whole issue of immunity.

Critics have suggested that providing liability protection for telecommunications companies is akin to congressional endorsement of the President’s warrantless surveillance program. I understand the passion stirred by this issue. Rather than consulting with Congress or the courts, the President created a secret surveillance program—no question about that—based on very dubious legal reasoning. That was unnecessary, that was unwise, that would, therefore, cause passions and suspicion.

But anger over the President’s program should not prevent us as a deliberative body from addressing the real problems the President has created.
Because of the lawsuits over the program and the damage to the telecommunications companies’ reputations, companies that were once willing to help the Government, based on assurances of legality from the highest levels of Government, may now be questioning assistance.

Let’s reflect on that for a moment. These are corporations. They have no names at the present time. They have to make money. The Government comes to them one day and says, ‘We have the past on much smaller matters, and with the authority of the President saying, this is in the national interest; with the legal advice of the Attorney General saying, this is legal; and then the Director of the National Security Agency sending out letters that say, we require you, we compel you, we request you to—other words—that you cooperate with us.

People say: Well, they cooperated. Of course they cooperated right after 9/11. I think everybody is in the intelligence business understands what I am saying. There is no difference between the day after 9/11 and this day in terms of the threat to our country or those who are planning, plotting to do us harm.

The fact that no attacks have happened does not excuse the sense of relaxation on the whole subject perhaps the congressional sense of relaxation on the whole subject. We need to continue this intelligence collection.

What is it, I am wondering, that the telecommunications companies get from this? What prestige? What large amount of money? What praise? What do they get from this? Do they get good public relations? No. They get 40 lawsuits, most of which are not based on anything to do with the TSP program. In other words, they are picked out of newspapers. People are dissatisfied, and class action suits arise.

So have they been sued $10 billion. Maybe they have been sued $40 billion. We will not speculate on that at the present time. But in that they are corporations and in that they have no reward at all for doing this service for their country—which we call patriotism, and then cast that aside because that must mask some evil intent—they go ahead and they do it. Then, since they are corporations, their shareholders get extremely unhappy about it, which happens any day at the present time, and then they decide that maybe they will be less willing to do this. Several have done that. Several at the beginning did that.

Now, corporations are in business also to make a profit. The corporations that are involved in this are doing nothing but losing prestige, losing reputation, have angry shareholders. And I ask myself, what is it they get out of doing this, because people, particularly on my side of the aisle, are sometimes inclined to discuss the positions of corporations, that they have some kind of a purpose behind all of this. Nothing could be further from the truth. They are losing. They are being criticized. They are being sued. It is costly. It takes away from their energy to carry out their other missions. It is not a situation in which a whole bunch of people are sitting around in these corporate headquarters discussing this, they are forced by a court but true cooperation—this country’s law enforcement and intelligence agencies cannot obtain the information they need to protect this country. It is a fairly heavy statement to make. I chair the committee. I am not naive on these matters, as I have been told, and I will be telling you, these corporations are not going to tell the government or any company participated in the President’s program in good faith. Instead, the parties are fighting about access to classified information about the President’s program. I have not heard that much discussed in this Chamber. This litigation could continue for years without a court ever addressing the underlying issues about the legality of the program. We seek wrongdoing wherever, as some say, it is in the corporate boardroom, or, as others would say—as I would say—in the halls of Government.

I stress the point: No court is likely to resolve the question of whether the President or any private company violated the law in the near future.

Some of my colleagues have argued that without these lawsuits, the public will never learn the details about the President’s program. But litigation is hazardous, and I believe it is unlikely to learn about what happened with the President’s program. Too many of these facts dealing with intelligence sources and methods remain appropriately classified, and the executive branch is highly unlikely to agree to declassify additional information if it could affect the ongoing litigation.

Thus, the litigation is unlikely to result in a ruling in the near future about the legality of the conduct of the President or any corporate action. Nor, for that matter, the public disclosure of any additional information about the President’s program. Instead, it is possible the cases, as I indicated, will continue for years as the courts debate whether information must be disclosed.

In the meantime, however, as I mentioned, the litigation poses a serious risk to U.S. intelligence collection. That is my job and that is the job of the committee. That is why the job of the chairman of the Intelligence Committee in the House. We are about trying to balance civil liberties as best as we can.
with the ability of this country to collect an entirely different kind of intelligence that we were so busy doing recently in the Cold War era. Without the assistance of telecommunications providers, our intelligence community simply cannot obtain the intelligence it needs.

Is that a serious statement? Do Members of the Senate concern themselves with that? Is this just me, this Senator, standing up making a statement trying to influence events? Or is there the possibility it could be true? If there is a possibility—and I think it is a probability it is true—then I don’t understand why people can be confused on this subject because I think the choices are clear. Allowing companies to be dragged through the court system because of their alleged cooperation with the Government encourages them not to cooperate with any request, even those that are clearly legal without court compulsion. It also sends a message to companies to cooperate with the U.S. Government at your peril. Is that a bit of an overstatement? In the corporate boardrooms around this country, my guess is that is the discussion. Very few corporations have the capacity to help the Government in the way telecommunications companies do.

Discouraging private sector cooperation with the Federal Government is not, in the feeling of this Senator, the right long-term result for either the intelligence community or the American people.

Many have argued that providers who act unlawfully should be held accountable. I totally agree that all Americans, including corporate citizens, must follow the law and be held accountable for their failures. Companies that deliberately seek to evade privacy laws or legal restrictions on electronic surveillance can and should be subject to civil penalties, even if that is not the issue here, I would say to the Presiding Officer. That is not the issue.

The Intelligence Committee spent a lot of time, as I have indicated, this year looking into what happened over the past 6 years. Before deciding to provide liability protection for the companies, the Intelligence Committee heard testimony from relevant witnesses and carefully reviewed the written communications provided to participants in the program.

Participants were sent letters, all of which stated the relevant activities had been authorized by the President and all but one—and that was done by the legal counsel to the President—of which stated the activities had been determined to be lawful by the Attorney General of the United States. Shouldn’t private companies be entitled to rely on the written representations of the highest levels of Government officials that their cooperation is necessary and has been determined to be lawful? Can you argue that if they get those notifications from the NSA Director and it has been approved by the Attorney General and has been declared essential for the national interest by the President, should they instead say: Oh, well, we don’t care about that. That is not our business. We are not going to do that?

And isn’t it reasonable to assume that a U.S. citizen who has been told the Attorney General has found their cooperation to be lawful is acting in good faith? If they have been through this process and they proceed to act on it, where is it, if they are not acting in good faith? How does one show that? How does one imagine that?

I have been through this, this whole question of what the companies get from it, and it is the thing that bothers me so much. They get nothing but grief. They get suits. They get costs. They get a diminished reputation. They begin to pull away. Their shareholders lose confidence. Do they get money? No. They get nothing. So why would they cooperate? To cooperate would be my question.

The answer to these questions are at the heart of the Intelligence Committee’s determination that it is essential that Congress protect private companies that the Government after the terrorist acts of 9/11.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide a statement of the exclusive means by which electronic surveillance and interception of certain communications may be conducted)

Strike section 102, and insert the following:

SEC. 102. STATEMENT OF EXCLUSIVE MEANS BY WHICH ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE AND INTERCEPTION OF CERTAIN COMMUNICATIONS MAY BE CONDUCTED.

(a) STATEMENT OF EXCLUSIVE MEANS.—Title I of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“STATEMENT OF EXCLUSIVE MEANS BY WHICH ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE AND INTERCEPTION OF CERTAIN COMMUNICATIONS MAY BE CONDUCTED.

“(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), the procedures of chapters 119, 121 and 206 of title 18, United States Code, and this Act shall be the exclusive means by which electronic surveillance (as defined in section 101(f), regardless of the limitation of section 701) and the interception of domestic wire, oral, or electronic communications may be conducted.

“(b) Only an express statutory authorization for electronic surveillance or the interception of domestic wire, oral, or electronic communications, other than as an amendment to this Act or chapters 119, 121, or 206 of title 18, United States Code, shall constitute an additional exclusive means for the purposes of subsection (a).”.

(b) OFFENSE.—Section 109 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1809) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking “authorized by statute” each place it appears in such section and inserting “authorized by this Act, chapter 119, 121, or 206 of title 18, United States Code, or any express statutory authorization that is an additional exclusive means for conducting electronic surveillance as defined in section 101(f), regardless of the limitation of section 701”;

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(c) DEFINITION.—For the purpose of this section, the term ‘electronic surveillance’ means electronic surveillance as defined in section 101(f) of this Act regardless of the limitation of section 701.”;

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE.—Section 2511(2) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (a), by adding at the end the following;

“(iii) If a certification under subparagraph (1) is not made, the President shall make such a certification unless the Attorney General certifies that foreign intelligence information is based on statutory authority, the certification shall identify the specific statutory provision, and shall certify that the statutory requirements have been met;’’; and

(B) in paragraph (1), by striking ‘‘as defined in such Act’’ and inserting ‘‘as defined in section 101(f) of such Act regardless of the limitation of section 701 of such Act’’.

(2) CIVIL ACTIONS.—Table of contents.—The table of contents in the first section of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801 et seq.) is amended by adding after the item relating to section 111, the following:

‘‘Sec. 112. Statement of exclusive means by which electronic surveillance and interception of certain communications may be conducted.’’.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I voted for this FISA legislation in the Intelligence Committee. I indicated then that I had some concerns about it. I filed additional views with respect to the period for successive exclusivity provisions. Then the Judiciary Committee reported out a bill that included its view with respect to strengthening the fact that the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act be the exclusive manner in which electronic surveillance against Americans could be conducted.

The Judiciary bill subsequently failed on the floor of the Senate. The amendment I have at the desk is essentially the exclusivity language from that Judiciary Committee amendment. It has several cosponsors: the chairman of the Intelligence Committee, Mr. ROCKEFELLER; chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. LEAHY; Mr. NELSON of Florida; Mr. CARDIN; and Senator SPECTER.

As filed this is an amendment that only includes exclusivity. In the interim period, the vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee approached me about the possibility of a modification of the amendment that would allow the administration to be able to operate outside of the Act.

We have not been able to come to terms on that amendment. I could not agree to the length of time that Mr. BOND proposed, which was 45 days plus an additional 45 days, for a total of 3 months, enabling the administration to operate without a FISA warrant.

The fact is, since January of 2007, the entire Terrorist Surveillance Program has operated within the confines of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act and without orders from the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. That is, I believe, as it should be.

I have a modification to my exclusivity amendment that would limit the period of time outside of FISA following a declaration of war, an authorization for the use of military force, or a major attack against the nation to 30 days. The question is whether I would have unanimous consent from the vice chairman to be able to call up that modification of my amendment. But that has not been given to me yet.

So at this time, I am going to rest my case on the exclusivity amendment, and I will have an opportunity, I hope, to argue it later.

I would now like to call up my amendment, No. 3919.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SANDERS). Amendment No. 3919 is pending.

AMENDMENT NO. 3919 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3911

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I wish to make another amendment pending, so I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up amendment No. 3919. This is the FISA Court exclusivity amendment. This is my second amendment which is part of the unanimous consent agreement. I do this just to get it before the body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. FEINSTEIN], for herself, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. CARDIN, and Mr. CARDIN, as amendment numbered 3919 to amendment 3911.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide for the review of certifications by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court.)

On page 72, strike line 13 and all that follows through page 73, line 25, and insert the following:

(6) FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE COURT.—The term ‘‘Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court’’ means the court established under section 103(a) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1803(a)).

(7) FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE COURT OF REVIEW.—The term ‘‘Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court of Review’’ means the court of review established under section 103(b) of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1803(b)).

SEC. 202. LIMITATIONS ON CIVIL ACTIONS FOR ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION SERVICE PROVIDERS.

(a) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to paragraph (3), a covered civil action shall not lie or be maintained in a Federal or State court, and shall be dismissed, if the Attorney General certifies to the court that—

(A) the assistance alleged to have been provided was in accordance with the terms of title 18, United States Code, and the administrative order or directive from the Attorney General or the head of an electronic communication service provider did not provide the alleged assistance;

(B) the electronic communication service provider did not provide the alleged assistance;

(C) the assistance alleged to have been provided was provided in accordance with the terms of subparagraph (A) to the electronic communication service provider;

(D) the assistance alleged to have been provided was provided in accordance with the terms of subparagraph (B) to the electronic communication service provider; or

(E) the assistance alleged to have been provided was provided in accordance with the terms of subparagraph (C) to the electronic communication service provider.

(2) SUBMISSION OF CERTIFICATION.—If the Attorney General submits a certification that written request or directive from the Attorney General or the head of an electronic communication service provider alleged to have been provided was undertaken based on the good faith reliance of the electronic communication service provider on the written request or directive under paragraph (1)(A)(ii), such that the electronic communication service provider had an objectively reasonable belief under the circumstances that compliance with the written request or directive was lawful.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In reviewing certifications and making determinations under subparagraph (A), the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court shall—

(I) review and make any such determination en banc; and

(II) permit any plaintiff and any defendant in a reviewable case to appear before the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court pursuant to section 103 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1803).

(2) APPEAL TO FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SURVEILLANCE COURT OF REVIEW.—A party to a proceeding described in clause (i) may appeal a determination under subparagraph (A) to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court of Review, which shall have jurisdiction to review such determination.

(3) CERTIORARIO TO THE SUPREME COURT.—A party to an appeal under clause (ii) may file a petition for a writ of certiorari for review of a decision of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court of Review issued under that clause. The record for such review shall be transmitted under seal to the Supreme Court of the United States, which shall have jurisdiction to review such decision.

(4) STATE SECRETS.—The state secrets privilege shall not apply in any proceeding under this paragraph.

(5) SCOPE OF GOOD FAITH LIMITATION.—The limitation on covered civil actions based on good faith reliance under subparagraph (A)(ii) shall only apply in a civil action relating to alleged assistance provided on or before January 17, 2007.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I ask that the amendment be set aside.

The Senator from Maryland.

AMENDMENT NO. 3890

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, shortly we will be voting on the amendment I offered that provides for a 4-year sunset for the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

I thank first Senator ROCKEFELLER for his help, Senator LEAHY, Senator
Mikulski. Senator Kennedy, and others who have been instrumental in making sure that we have provisions in this bill so that we continue our congressional oversight.

This amendment is not unusual. Every major change in the FISA law has been accompanied by a sunset. When we passed the PATRIOT Act, we had a 4-year sunset on most of the provisions. When we revised it, we had a 3-year sunset on the most controversial provisions. When we passed the Protect America Act, we had a 6-month sunset on it because we were not certain we were getting it right.

This change is controversial. If my colleagues think it is not controversial, look at all the debate that has taken place on the floor of this body. We want to make sure that we get it right.

It is interesting that as we get closer to the time when Congress has to act, we seem to get a lot more cooperation from the executive branch of government. The sunset will ensure that we get the type of cooperation we need to carry out our responsibilities, to get the documents we need to make sure we get it right.

As pointed out, technology is changing quickly. I think a 4-year period is reasonable for us to take a fresh look at this issue.

This is not a question of whether we should have a sunset in the bill. There is a 4-year sunset in the bill. So why is it so important to have a 4-year sunset versus a 6-year sunset? The answer, quite frankly, is we want the next administration that is going to take office in January to focus on this issue and work with us so they can operate collectively with the authority of Congress and the laws we pass in the executive branch. It is important that the next administration focus on this issue, and that is why this amendment is particularly important.

My friend from Missouri pointed out that this is an election year. No, it is not. The sunset provision would terminate in December of 2011, so it is a year before the elections. I think it is the right time for a sunset.

I know the administration does not want any sunset in this bill. I understand that. As I pointed out before, they don’t want any congressional oversight. They don’t even think they need congressional laws on this subject. They don’t even think they need a Congress. But we have our responsibility, and I hope we would want this issue revisited during the next administration. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, we have discussed this issue before on the floor. I urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment. As I have stated previously, the current bill, the Protect America Act, had a 6-month sunset on it only because we were not able to bring a full, complete FISA modernization bill to the floor, given the failure of Congress to act. We had been requested in April, May, June, and July to change the law. This is a bill that should establish a permanent operating authority for the intelligence community and the private partners who work with it.

As part of the compromise we reached in passing the bill, I did not believe we should have a sunset, but we agreed on a 6-year sunset. That was a compromise, a short sunset, at least gives us certainty over the 6 years in time, that both the intelligence agencies, our private partners, and our allies abroad who depend upon us would have time to make this system work.

The problem we face is that any sunset withholds from our intelligence professionals and the private partners the certainty and the permanence they need to protect Americans from terrorist and other threats to national security.

As I pointed out before, technology is changing quickly. I think a 4-year period makes a lot of sense. I believe we should have a sunset, but we need to make sure it is a reasonable one.

Attorney General Mukasey has said there are no fatwahs with limitations by the terrorist leaders who seek to do us harm. They put out orders to keep trying to kill us, and these are not going to go away. There should be no sunset on this bill.

I disagree very strongly with my friend from Maryland that Congress is an important part of this. We passed a bill that the Attorney General pressed. The protections that Americans have ever had in intelligence collection. This bill is a good bill, but I can assure him that we have a strong bipartisan committee and a strong staff that will continue to oversee, supervise, and watch the surveillance to make sure it works. If we find it does not work, we should not wait for a 4-year sunset or a 6-year sunset. We should make those changes when they are needed.

We cannot be held hostage to how long we have had to fight to get this authorization through. There was no action from the majority from April, May or June, until the very end of July. We put this bill out on the floor in October. We could not get the bill up in December because of filibusters. We had to get another 15-day extension so it would not expire.

We can act on the bill any time we need, but we cannot deprive our partners, our intelligence community, and our allies the protection if Congress cannot work.

I yield time to the distinguished chairman of the committee.

Mr. ROYCEFELTER. I say to the Presiding Officer, I find myself in disagreement with my vice chairman. I think the bill would add years and we would not get to 6 years because of accommodations that yielded other results. In the wisdom of the joint Intelligence Committee and Judiciary Committee, setting on 4 years makes a lot of sense. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the amendment that Senator Cardin has offered is very simple, but it is absolutely critical to this bill. The amendment would move up the bill’s sunset date from 6 years to 4 years. Congress would need to revisit the law by the end of 2011 instead of 2013.

The amendment is good public policy. Whenever a significant new law is enacted, it is important for Congress to revisit it at an earlier rather than a later date.

The FISA bill we are considering is highly complicated legislation affecting Americans’ security and liberty. It grants the executive branch vast new authorities for electronic surveillance at a time of rapidly changing technology and rapidly changing threats. Even the country’s leading national security experts cannot say for sure what our national security challenges will look like in 3 years, much less how this legislation will work out in practice.

This is also highly controversial legislation. I don’t need to remind anyone in this Chamber of the intense debate that has been taking place over many parts of this bill. The FISA rules on electronic surveillance affect every American. They are the only thing that stands between the freedom of Americans to make a private phone call, send a private e-mail, or search the Internet, and the ability of the Government to listen in on the call, read the e-mail, and review the Internet search.

In this information age, FISA gives Americans basic protection against Government tyranny and abuse, and we owe it to the American people to revisit it promptly to make sure its protections are effective.

Congress also needs an earlier sunset because we need more information to assess how these new policies will work in practice. The ongoing confusion and controversy in this area is that Congress does not have enough knowledge or confidence to be sure the legislation is adequate.

With an early sunset, Congress will have to make an early assessment of how the legislation is being interpreted and implemented. We will be able to identify problems and abuses much sooner. If changes are made to the law in 2011, it will be because experience has shown that changes are needed.

We passed this exact same amendment in the Judiciary Committee in the middle of November, and in the weeks since then, I have heard only two arguments against it, both from the White House. Neither of them holds up.

The first objection is that there has already been sufficient consideration of these issues, so that Congress should be able to pass a permanent FISA reform right now. Everyone agrees that short sunsets are valuable when Congress has not had time to consider an issue thoroughly and develop a factual record. But if these claims there has already been a detailed and informed discussion of FISA modernization.
That objection is also wrong as a matter of policy. No matter how much discussion there may have been, this is highly complicated legislation that makes substantial changes in our surveillance laws. It is impossible for Congress to analyze these issues in the abstract, without any track record to evaluate. With a law as complex, new, and important as this, a short sunset is responsible policy.

The second objection I have heard is that a short sunset introduces too much uncertainty to the rules affecting our intelligence professionals. The administration says it is not efficient for agencies to develop new policies and procedures, only to have the law change within a brief period. They say the intelligence community operates more effectively when the rules governing intelligence professionals are well-established, and are not in doubt.

This objection is more serious, but it too dissolves upon consideration. It is true that there may be a little extra uncertainty that comes with a short sunset, but much more serious is the uncertainty is whether all of the changes made by this bill will be good for the country—and there is no way to be sure about this ahead of time.

Intelligence professionals should not be locked into a surveillance system that doesn’t work well for them, and Americans should not be locked into a system that fails to protect their security or their rights. The early sunset guarantees that the Intelligence Committee will review these extremely complicated, untested, and powerful new authorities and how they are actually being used by the executive branch.

The administration’s argument against a sunset is an argument against congressional oversight of FISA. The White House wants Congress to pass a new FISA law, and then to look the other way while the executive branch implements and interprets its new powers. They want Congress to trust them when they tell us how the law is working, rather than look into it ourselves.

Given this administration’s track record of warrantless illegal spying, “trust us” is not an acceptable way to proceed. Congress needs to stay on top of this issue to make sure that our surveillance laws are keeping Americans safe and protecting their freedom. That is what the Intelligence Community needs us to do, and that is what the Constitution requires us to do.

As I said at the start, this amendment is very simple. It moves the sunset date up by 2 years. Yet it may well be the most important thing Congress can do to ensure that we reform FISA in a responsible and effective way.

This sunset amendment is a win-win for national security and civil liberties. It will ensure that Congress remains engaged on the crucial issues of electronic surveillance that affect all Americans. To make sure that our new FISA law actually gets the job done, I urge my colleagues to adopt this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, let me briefly summarize the comments Senator BOND made. It is true that the terrorist groups do not have any types of restrictions on what they can do. They do not have any legislature. They do not have any courts. They do not have any constitution. They have no respect for human life. They have no civil liberties with which they have to deal. But that is what makes this Nation the great nation it is. It is our responsibility to make sure that we carry out what the people of our Nation expect us to do.

Let me point out that the PATRIOT Act, when it was passed, had a 4-year sunset. Then we reauthorized some of the provisions, but we kept a 3-year sunset. We have used sunsets that have been shorter, and on controversial laws, a 4-year sunset is the minimum we should have.

I urge my colleagues to understand that it is important that the next administration work with us so we never get back to where we are this year, where the executive branch is heading in one direction and we don’t know what they are doing. Let’s work together so we can keep Americans safe, having the administration work with us next year so we understand what they are doing, they have our support, and if necessary, we modify the laws to give them the tools they need to keep America safe.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, this is an important part of our compromise to get the bill through. Our intelligence collectors and troops on the battlefield need certainty, not rules that will expire in 4 years. That is why both the Director of National Intelligence and the Attorney General strongly oppose shortening the 6-year sunset in the bill.

I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, quickly, in closing, I thank the chairman of the Intelligence Committee for his support of this amendment. This amendment does nothing to jeopardize the bipartisan work of the Intelligence Committee. It preserves the appropriate role of the legislative branch of Government, and I would hope all my colleagues would want to support that change to make it clear that the next administration must come back to Congress.

With that, Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, there is a 60-vote agreement on this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 3930. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mrs. CLINTON) and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. BURR), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM), and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 49, nays 46, as follows: [Rollcall Vote No. 7 Leg.]. with keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit on him, his unit, and the U.S. Army. Mr. President, Members of the Senate, these are the words that describe the actions of heroism of Senator Inouye, when, as a young man, he put his own safety aside for others. As a result of that he was awarded America’s highest honor for gallantry and heroism, the Medal of Honor. The actions and the personal sacrifice that everyone’s attention today is that we have a lot of new Senators. I want every one of them to know this man Dan Inouye is a man who was born to be a hero. He never thinks of himself but of others. In my 25-plus years in Congress, that is how I have found him to be.

I rise to express joy and honor for my friend and colleague Senator Inouye on the occasion of his 15,000th rollcall vote, which was just completed. Dan Inouye was born to Japanese-American immigrants in Honolulu, the eldest of four children. Did he ever set an example—he sure did—for his siblings. On the day of the Pearl Harbor attack, he was only 17 years old, he volunteered to provide medical help to the injured, and there were a lot of injured. After high school, he wanted to become a medical doctor. At the time the U.S. Army was looking for Nisei in uniform. He joined the legendary 442nd regimental combat team which in no small part, perhaps it was fate that Dan Inouye joined. He was part of that. That is why when he sought a leadership position in the Senate, I was the first to stand up to support Senator Inouye. His heroism and extraordinary lifetime of public service are an inspiration to us all.

On a personal note, Landra and I, and all my colleagues, are so happy and pleased to hear the recent news that Dan and Irene will be married this May. All of us in the Senate family wish them happiness and joy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The president.

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, the U.S. Senate has been conducting its business here in Washington for just over 200 years. For more than one-fifth of that time, Senator Daniel Inouye of Hawaii has been cast rollcall votes. And just now, he cast his 15,000th. Making him the fourth most prolific voter in Senate history.

If Senator Inouye had anything to say about it, I have no doubt the moment would have passed without fanfare. Some Senators make their presence felt by talking a lot or by being flamboyant. Dan Inouye has always been another sort of Senator. He is one of only 10 Americans alive today to have received the Medal of Honor for combat bravery. He is the iconic political figure of the 50th State, the only original member of a congressional delegation still serving in Congress. And he has ensured through many years of diligent service on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee that an entire generation of America’s uniformed military has gone well prepared to battle and was well cared for when they returned.

Despite all this, Dan’s quiet demeanor and adherence to a code of honor and professionalism has made him a stranger to controversy and to the darkest hours many who lead by example and who expect nothing in return. Historians tell us about one of those dark moments early in our Nation’s history, just after the surrender at Yorktown. Hostilities with the British had ended, but America was on the brink of a military coup. Congress had promised to give officers and soldiers back pay, food, and clothing, and had failed. The situation grew so serious that U.S. officers threatened an armed revolt.

In a meeting at Newburgh, George Washington urged patience. He assured the officers Congress would act justly. And then, with anger and impatience still evident, he pulled a letter from his pocket from Congress. Stearing it for a few moments with a look of confusion, he reached into his pocket again and pulled out a pair of reading glasses that only his closest advisers had ever seen. “You will permit me, gentlemen, to put on my spectacles,” he said. “For I have not only grown gray, but almost blind, in the service of my country.”

Some of the officers wept with shame. A man’s heroism was enough to dissolve whatever hostilities remained. Revolt was averted, peace preserved, and a roomful of men learned that day what it meant to be an American.

More than a century and a half later, after another dark moment in our Nation’s history, another roomful of men would learn a similar lesson. The year was 1959, the place was the U.S. Capitol, and a young man named DAN INOUYE was being sworn into office.

The memory of a hard-fought war against the Japanese was fresh in many minds as the Speaker, Sam Rayburn, prepared to administer the oath—not only to the first Member from Hawaii, but to the first American of Japanese descent ever elected. Rayburn spoke: “Raise your right hand and repeat after me . . .”

Here’s how another Congressman would later record what followed: “The hush that followed the young Congressman’s raised hand was that of a young man who had just been called upon to lead in a battle against his own people. He remained there without a word, his face serious as he considered the situation before him.”

The 442nd Regimental Combat Team, the famous “Go for Broke” regiment, would become the most decorated military unit in American history. SGT Dan Inouye was one of its combat platoon leaders. He spent 3 bloody months in the Rome Arno campaign and 2 brutal weeks rescuing a Texas battalion that was surrounded by German forces, an operation military historians often describe as one of the most significant military battles of the 20th century.

After the rescue, Sargeant Inouye was sent somewhere on April 21, 1945, he described “extraordinary heroism,” in leading his platoon through tough resistance to capture an important strategic ridge. Crawling within five yards of the nearest man, but with grenades, then stood up and destroyed several other machine gun nests at close range—even as a sniper’s bullet shattered his arm. Despite the pain, he continued to direct his men until the enemy’s return. One of the most decorated soldiers of the war.

Dan would later spend nearly 2 years in an Army hospital in Battle Creek, MI, and it was there that he met a wounded soldier, as the majority leader mentioned, from Kansas. Dan had always wanted to be a surgeon, but that possibility was sealed when he received a seriously wounded soldier, as the majority leader mentioned, from Kansas. Dan had always wanted to be a surgeon, but that possibility was sealed when he received a seriously wounded soldier. Despite the pain, he continued to direct his men until the enemy’s return. One of the most decorated soldiers of the war.

When he finished his service, he used the GI bill, of which he was a recipient, to be educated. When he returned to Hawaii, he entered into politics and served in the State legislature. When Hawaii became a State in 1959, he was Hawaii’s first U.S. House of Representatives Member. It was from there he did run for the Senate and was elected and has been here since that time. Dan Inouye has served our country well over these years, and he has served Hawaii well. So today I rise to mark a historic occasion, which is Senator Inouye’s 15,000th vote. This historic milestone is compelling evidence of Senator Inouye’s devotion to public service. The people of Hawaii have given him their trust, and in return he has fought relentlessly for our State and our country.

Dan Inouye is an institution, without question, in the Senate, and I look forward to casting many more votes with my good friend and mentor and brother to benefit Hawaii and strengthen the United States.

God bless you, Senator Inouye, and with much aloha.

Thank you very much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. Inouye. Madam President, I am deeply moved and most grateful for the generous and warm remarks of my colleagues. I shall do my very best to live up to their praise.

I thank you very much.

(Applause. Senators rising.)

Mr. Cochran. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.
Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection.
AMENDMENT NO. 3927 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3911
(Purpose: To provide for the substitution of the United States in certain civil actions)
Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I now call up amendment No. 3927.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendments are set aside.
The clerk will report.
The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], for himself and Mr. WHITEHOUSE, proposes an amendment numbered 3927 to amendment No. 3911.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in the RECORD of Friday, January 25, 2008, under “Text of Amendments.”)

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, there is a substitute amendment set aside for this amendment. We have about 24 minutes between now and 4:30, when the Senate will move on to other business.

I have just discussed with my distinguished colleague, Senator WHITEHOUSE, and the manager, Chairman ROCKEFELLER and Vice Chairman BOND—my intent to speak relatively briefly on an opening statement and then yield to Senator WHITEHOUSE and give an opportunity for opponents of the amendment to speak because I think that will tell the Senators and staffs what this is about and perhaps generate more interest and more concern to follow, and then have additional debate at a later time on the remaining portion of the amendment.

At the outset, I compliment my distinguished colleague, Senator WHITEHOUSE, who is in his first term in the Senate. I thank him for the work he has done coordinately with me and others on this bill.

Senator WHITEHOUSE brings a very distinguished record to the U.S. Congress. He has served as U.S. attorney for Rhode Island. He served as Rhode Island’s attorney general. And he has made quite a contribution to the Judiciary Committee on what is a very complex matter.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator LEVIN and Senator CARDIN be added as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. The essence of the pending amendment is to substitute the U.S. Government as a party defendant in the telephone companies, instead of paying the current provision which provides for retroactive immunity to the telephone companies. The bill under consideration would give those companies retroactive immunity and foreclose litigation which is now pending in some 40 cases.

This issue is at the heart of the balance of values between national security and constitutional rights. There is no doubt on the face of the record—where we do not know all of the details as to what the telephone companies have been doing—but it is presumed, for purposes of this argument, and I think accurately so, that what the telephone companies are doing has provided high-level intelligence for the U.S. Government.

There is no doubt of the importance of high-level intelligence in our fight against terrorism. We sustained 9/11. We fight a deadly enemy around the world—al-Qaeda. We want to protect the United States and its people and others, so that high-level intelligence is very important.

At the same time, constitutional rights are very important. I believe the substitution in Senator WHITEHOUSE and I are proposing accomplishes the objective of a continuation of getting this very vital intelligence information for national security and, at the same time, protects constitutional rights.

The essence of the proposal is that the U.S. Government would step into the shoes of the telephone companies, have the same defenses, no more and no less. The Government could assert governmental immunity because the telephone companies could not assert governmental immunity. The Government could assert the State Secrets Doctrine, just as it has by intervening in the cases against the telephone companies.

I believe it is vital that the courts remain open. I say that because on our delicate constitutional balance of separation of powers, the Congress has been totally ineffective on oversight and on the maintenance of checks and balances. The courts have the capacity, the will, and the effectiveness to maintain a balance.

But we find that the President has asserted his constitutional authority under article II to disregard statutes, the law of the land passed by Congress and signed by the President.

I start with the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which provides that the only way to wiretap is to have a court order. The executive branch initiated the Terrorist Surveillance Program in flat violation of that statute. Now, the President argues that he has constitutional authority which supercedes the statute. And if he does, the statute cannot modify the Constitution. Only a constitutional amendment can. But that program, initiated in 2001, is still being litigated in the courts. So we do not know on the balancing test whether the Executive has the asserted constitutional authority.

But for a judicial decision, the courts are cut off. Then the executive branch has violated the National Security Act of 1947, which mandates that the Intelligence Committees of both the House and the Senate be informed of matters like the Terrorist Surveillance Program. I served as chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the 109th Congress. The chairman and the ranking member, myself, fought for long, this program, and the courts, ought to be notified about a program like that. But I was surprised to read about it in the newspapers one day, on the final day of argument on the PATRIOT Act Reauthorization. It was a shock. Vision of a lot of pressure—really to get the confirmation of General Hayden as CIA Director—before the executive branch finally complied with the statute to notify the full Intelligence Committees.

Now, on the other hand, the courts have been effective—and I will amplify this at a later time because I want to yield soon to Senator WHITEHOUSE and give the opponents an opportunity to speak before 4:30. But in the Hamdan case, the Supreme Court held that the President does not have a blank check in the war on terror. Justices held that the President cannot establish military commissions unless Congress authorizes it. In Hamdi v. Bush, the Supreme Court held that the habeas corpus statute gave district courts jurisdiction to hear challenges by aliens held at Guantanamo Bay.

Well, this is not Pakistan, where President Musharraf can suspend the Supreme Court justiciable and hold the Chief Justice under house arrest. This is America. The balance is maintained only because the courts are open. I believe it would be a major mistake to close the courts on this issue when the courts have provided the only effective way to check executive authority, which we have seen in many lives. I will amplify those later, on matters such as signing statements, that is the executive branch argument. I am going to yield now to my distinguished colleague from Rhode Island because I think it is useful, as we move forward in the debate, to crystallize the issues. We know Senators and even staff don’t pay a great deal of attention until the time for a vote is near, and when we see the essence of the two positions, I think we may create some more interest and have more people join this debate.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Madam President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania. I consider it a great personal honor to join him in sponsoring this important amendment.

He has served with great distinction as a prosecuting attorney for Philadelphia. I know Senators and even staff don’t pay a great deal of attention until the time for a vote is near, and when we see the essence of the two positions, I think we may create some more interest and have more people join this debate.

I yield the floor.
He has chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee, and he has always shown great intelligence and independence. In addition to all that, I am the junior member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and he also has shown exceptional courtesy and good will toward me, notwithstanding my junior status and notwithstanding my position on the other side of the aisle. So it is with considerable pride and also considerable affection that I join him in support of the amendment.

We face, as Senator SPECTER said, the critical balance between freedom and security, which will always be difficult to maintain as long as a threat of terrorism looms. As we all know, one of the many difficult issues that balance presents to us is the question of whether to grant immunity to telecommunications carriers who may have assisted the Government in this surveillance program.

On the one hand, the administration has called for a blanket grant of immunity to these companies. On the other hand, others have proposed preserving the status quo. We are proposing a more sensible, practical, middle path that poses less constitutional damage and still protects the essential equities involved.

The choice is to give immunity, to stop the litigation, to end the claims against the companies, and take away the plight against them which is not fair. Nothing yet suggests this is not completely legitimate litigation. The courts who are considering it are determined to maintain its legitimacy.

One, a judicial determination, constitu- tive interference with private judgments of the courts.

The problem is that if the companies acted reasonably and in good faith, that is a very simple determination that can be made with a very small amount of testimony based in many respects simply on the record before the FISA Court. So the FISA Court.

Second, if they did act reasonably and in good faith, there is then a well-es- tablished procedure under rule 25 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 25(c) to be specific, that can substitute the Government for these companies in this litigation.

First, let me talk about the good- faith determination. I hope we can all agree that if the companies did not act reasonably and in good faith, they shouldn’t get protection. I hope we can all agree on the simple procedure for the good-faith question to be answered by the FISA Court. We in Congress should not be the judges of that. We are not judges. Good faith is a judicial determination. This is ongoing litigation. We have, of course, asserted to us that they acted in good faith, but that is no basis for us to conclude that, and we surely should not rely on one side’s assertion in making a decision of this importance. Most Senators have had no input into the classified materials that would allow them to reach a fair conclusion.

This body is literally incapable of forming a fair opinion without access by most Members to the facts. So we need to provide a fair mechanism for a finding of good faith by a proper judicial body with the proper provisions for secrecy, which the FISA Court has.

Second, substituting in the Govern- ment. Well, if it turns out the Govern- ment, the principal, the company acting as in conduct that broke the law, the Gov- ernment is the proper authority. If the companies acted reasonably and in good faith but ended up somehow breaking the law because of what the Government directed them to do, the real is the Government. Lawyers in this body will understand this is analogous to a principal-agent relationship. The Government is in the right of the principal, the company acting as directed is the Government’s agent, and under that legal relationship, the principal is liable for the acts of the agent.

So the simple solution contained in this amendment follows the law, it is grounded in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and it fits the problem we face. Consider: No one has legitimate rights and due process summarily taken away. This is, after all, the United States of America.

Two, if the carriers acted reasonably and in good faith, the Government steps in for them. In fact, the carriers get a judgment in their favor dismissing them from the cases.

Third, no one is forbidden to defend themselves in ongoing litigation. No one is bound and muzzled but forced to stand in a judicial fight.

Fourth, there is no intrusion by Congress into ongoing adjudication, no separation of powers problem. So the FISA Court.

Finally, if the companies acted rea- sonably and in good faith at the direc- tion of the Government but ended up breaking the law, the Government truly is the morally proper party to defend this case.

The choice is to give immunity, to end the litigation, to take away their due process without taking away active claims. We would be taking away their rights and claims.

The solution that fits the problem we face is this Specter-Whitehouse amendment, and it has two very simple parts.

The sense of a sharp necessity to separate the legislative from the judicial power tri- umphed among the Framers of the new Consti- tution prompted by a crescendo of legisla- tive interference with private judgments of the courts.

So the question of a legislature inter- fering with ongoing litigation was the live concern of the Founding Fathers when they separated the powers. In a case called the United States v. Klein, the U.S. Supreme Court threw out a congressional statute that purported to provide the rule of decision in a particular case, saying of this relationship between the legislative and judicial Powers:

The answer is that doing nothing is not a great solution either. The solution that fits the problem we face is this Specter-Whitehouse amendment, and it has two very simple parts.

One, a judicial determination, constitu- tive interference with private judgments of the courts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no objection to the further amendment of the Senate. The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no objection to the further amendment of the Senate. The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no objection to the further amendment of the Senate.
Madam President, I simply rise to say I will oppose this amendment and I will oppose it strongly and I think for a series of very good reasons. But in spite of my eloquence and the ability to talk very quickly, I simply cannot do the task in 1½ minutes. So I ask unanimous consent to speak further at the appropriate time before the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. BOND. Madam President, with the time so graciously allowed us by the proponents of this measure—and I know it was not intentional—I will only say a couple of quick things. No. 1, the courts are not precluded. The underlying bill, the bipartisan bill, permits lawsuits to go forward against the Government and the Government employees. No. 2, there was notification of the Big Eight—the ranking members and chairmen of Intellegence Committees, and the leaders—when this program was started. No. 3, article 2 does give the President the power to exercise foreign intelligence collections.

I would say to my colleague who has been on the Intelligence Committee, if he doesn’t think Congress has been effective in overseeing programs, he has not seen the committee that is chaired by Senator ROCKEFELLER and on which I ride shotgun with him. The Judiciary Committee has not advised the Judiciary Committee’s primary responsibility is not intelligence. That is the Intelligence Committee. We get the sensitive information. We spend a great deal of time. We have reviewed it. We believe it is a disaster for our intelligence collection to have substitution because we would see our most sensitive means of collection exposed. The private parties that might have participated would be put through tremendous economic and commercial harm and subjected potentially to harassment, and perhaps even terrorist attacks, for having worked with us.

Therefore, I strongly urge that our colleagues defeat amendment No. 3927, the Specter-Whitehouse substitution amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, the amendment that I have offered with Senators KERRY and MENENDEZ addresses a serious problem with the FISA legislation, which is now considered the law of the land, and I am very pleased that it has been incorporated into the bill by unanimous consent.

The amendment clarifies that under the new authority provided in this legislation, the Government may not intentionally acquire a communication when it knows ahead of time that the sender and all of the intended recipients are located in the United States. When the Government knows ahead of time that both the person making the call and the person receiving the call are located inside the United States, it will have to get a court order before it can listen in on that call. This is the way FISA has always worked, and my amendment makes sure that the law stays that way.

There is broad agreement that communications known ahead of time to be purely domestic should continue to be governed by traditional FISA rules. Indeed, the Bush administration has repeatedly stated that it does not intend to use the new authority granted under the Protect America Act or this legislation to acquire communications that are already recorded without obtaining a court order first. The administration acknowledges that when the Government knows that all the parties to a conversation are in the United States, a specific court order should be needed to intercept that conversation.

I haven’t heard a single Member of Congress disagree with this point. But without this amendment, the FISA bill’s new authority could be used to acquire purely domestic communications without a court order. The new authority will allow the Government’s “targeting procedures” to be designed “to ensure that any acquisition . . . is limited to targeting persons reasonably believed to be located outside the United States.” The problem arises because some of the surveillance may be abroad, but the communications that the Government wants to acquire may occur entirely inside the United States, because the subject matter concerns the target who is abroad. The term “target” is not defined in FISA, but the legislative history states that the “target” is the person or entity “about whom or from whom information is sought.” That broad definition is capable of being interpreted to allow surveillance of people other than a “target.”

For example, the Government might believe that two Americans in the United States—let’s call them Tom and Mary—will discuss a third party who is located outside the United States. Under this draft, that third party could be a group, not just an individual, and the Government can obtain a blanket warrant that allows it to spy on everything that group does in the future. Although the authors of the bill have stated this should not occur, the concern is that when Tom and Mary talk to each other, the Government might claim the third party is the “target” who provides the legal basis for the surveillance—with the practical result being that the Government could listen in on the conversation without making any showing to any court about Tom and Mary.

My amendment makes clear that the traditional FISA rules apply when the conversation known to be occurring within the country. The Government could still spy on Tom and Mary—but it would have to obtain a warrant first, with the usual exception for emergencies.

According to the administration, the law already requires this. The administration has said flat out that it will not wiretap purely domestic communications without first obtaining a court order.

But these kinds of statements are no answer when Americans’ basic liberties are at stake. “Trust us” is not enough.

FISA experts such as David Kris, a highly respected former lawyer at the Justice Department and the author of the leading treatise on FISA law, believe that the legislation is not clear right now. And if the law is unclear, there will be tremendous pressure on the intelligence community to apply it as aggressively as possible, because it is their duty to do everything they can within the boundaries of law.

As Mr. Kris recently stated, even though the Intelligence Committee bill prohibits the targeting of persons known to be in the United States, it “does not, however, foreclose all surveillance of [purely] domestic communications . . . because surveillance can be targeted at an international terrorist group located abroad, but still be directed at a domestic telephone number or other domestic communications facility.”

Mr. Kris has said that his “principal concern about [this bill] . . . is that it resembles the Protect America Act in terms of surveillance of ‘pure communications’ without a warrant. This is a radical change to a FISA system that has protected Americans for three decades. If put to a vote, I have no doubt that Americans would reject it.

This concern can’t be waved away by the administration telling us that it takes a different legal view. When one of the top FISA experts in the country says that the law is not clear, we should listen.

Promises about how the Government will interpret the law in the future are not enough. If we all agree about a specific policy goal—and everyone should agree that in purely domestic situations, the traditional FISA rules should apply—then we should be very clear about that goal in the legislation we write. Any FISA law that Congress passes may set the rules on surveillance for years to come, and different administrations may interpret ambiguous language in different ways.

My amendment makes clear that the traditional FISA rules apply when the Government knows ahead of time that the communication is purely domestic. The amendment does not add any substantive changes to the current law; it adds clarity and certainty where now there is ambiguity and confusion.

Americans deserve to feel confident when they are talking with their friends, neighbors, and loved ones inside the United States that they will not be spied on without a warrant. Bringing clarity to this area of the law is good for Americans’ liberties, and it is good for national security. I congratulate my colleagues for adopting this amendment.

Reid amendment No. 3986 (to the instructions of the Reid motion to commit), of a perfecting nature.
Reid amendment No. 3987 (to amendment No. 3986), of a perfecting nature.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, could the Chair explain the unanimous consent order under which we are operating?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 45 minutes, evenly divided, to be followed by 30 minutes, evenly divided and controlled by the two leaders prior to a cloture vote.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to be allotted 10 minutes to discuss the fiscal stimulus package.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. Reserving the right to object, I understand that the Senator’s time will be charged to the Republican side.

Mr. COBURN. Absolutely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, we have heard a lot in the press, and we have certainly heard a lot from our Finance Committee, and we have seen what the House passed in terms of the stimulus package.

I think, once again, in our hurry to address a problem, we have not asked: Are we fixing the right problem, the problem in connection with the House leadership passing a bill that will spend $150 billion of the first question we ought to ask is, Where is that money coming from, the $150 billion? Nobody can dispute the fact that we are going to borrow that from our grandchildren; we are going to go to the markets and borrow the money to stimulate our economy. Nobody will dispute the fact that there is very little payback into the Treasury, in terms of tax collections, from this stimulus plan.

The facts as they are, we had an overheated housing boom. We can deny economic reality, but until we mark the market—the overinflated cost that has extended credit in our country—and recognize that is going to have to be paid for, we are not going to walk out of this slowdown we appear to be facing. The reality is that the model is the Japanese banking industry: When they refused to recognize the losses, what it did was impact their economy for the future. So, before that, there has to be an economic price when we have an economic excess. Our job should be to make that as easy on our economy as we can, thinking about the future of our economy.

Now, all the stimulus packages that have been presented, when scored in the long term, have very little beneficial effect for the economy other than the psychology we are putting through. The reason it is important to discuss alternatives is because there is a way, which is proven in economics, proven in capitalistic societies, in free market societies, where you can generate stimulus and revenue back to the Government so that, in fact, you solve the right problem, and you don’t bankrupt your children further, which is what we are going to do whether we pass the House bill or the Senate bill. We are going to steal $150 billion or $190 billion from our grandchildren. I think we ought to think twice about that. Do we really, as senior citizens, want to steal $600, to $800, to $1,200 from our grandchildren for us today? Do we want to do that? Is there another way in which we can stimulate the economy without stealing from our kids and ultimately the money back so that our children don’t have to pay for this stimulus package? There is. There are a lot of economic theories and experience in this country that prove that.

So let’s talk some about what we should be doing that we are not. Instead, we are pander to people, thinking they are going to get $600 or $800, and we don’t have any idea other than to think a third of that money might go to the stimulius effect, but it will have a negative effect in terms of what our kids have to pay back.

One thing we can do is create certainty about economic decision-making. We can extend the Bush tax cuts. We can extend them so people will continue to make positive decisions based on a tax rate they know is there rather than one they know is going to go away in 2 years, which will limit their investment. Second, we reduce corporate tax rates. We now have the second highest corporate tax rates in the world. That hasn’t been part of any discussion. We know that when we lower corporate tax rates, we see increased investment, which increases the tax revenues for the country, and we also see economic growth. So there is a positive there, but it is not complete. There is a cost associated with that, but at least there is some feedback. But we have not considered that.

We have not reduced the capital gains tax rate on corporations—the people who invest great sums of money on the basis of the fact that if there is a capital gain, if we were to lower that, they might invest more or they might recognize the gain they have today, consequently, even generating taxes. We can index capital gains for inflation. That creates a stable investment climate, or, Secretary business decisions will invest in capital, create jobs, which create salaries, which create income, which create tax revenue.

We can markedly advance—much more, however, than we do with this bill—depreciation schedules if we want to have an impact. We could go to full expensing for capital equipment forever. We don’t have to stop it now. What that would do is create investment in capital goods in this country, which would create jobs, which would raise wages, which would create incomes, which would create tax revenues for the country.

There are other things we can do besides just send money out the door. We could extend the Section 45Q for corporate taxes overseas. The best way to not ever have to deal with this again is to have a corporate tax rate equivalent to what is going on in the rest of the world—have one at 25 percent instead of 35 percent. In fact, we are competitive worldwide, so that corporations don’t refuse to bring income they have earned overseas back to this country because we have an excessive tax on it, so they decide not to do that. What we are doing is putting the Small Business Administration work. Seven years ago, the impact of Government regulation on small business was less than $4,000. It is $7,400 per employee. That is the impact of the Federal Government. That is not the taxes you pay, that is the impact of the regulations in terms of the cost imposed on small business by the Federal Government.

I will end with talking about the burden that was just imposed by the administration. We are going to spend probably $150 billion or $190 billion, and we are not going to pay for it. We are not going to reduce any of the wasteful spending, including the inappropriate payments in Medicare, and there is another $40 billion in fraud. Medicaid has $30 billion worth of fraud and another $7 billion in improper payments. Food stamps has $6 billion worth of improper payments, not counting the fraud. Nothing is happening. We are not fixing what is wrong with the Government so that the American people get value from it. We are going to throw money at a problem rather than secure the future for our children and grandchildren. We can do better. We ought to do better. We should not say we are just going to throw money at the problem.

Let’s make long-term structural changes in the Tax Code that raise the opportunity for our children rather than piling it up on their shoulders. Let’s make the long-term changes and tough choices of eliminating programs that aren’t working...
Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, the book of Leviticus teaches: “Rise in the presence of the aged, show respect for the elderly, and revere your God.”

Today, the Senate can show respect for America’s elderly. Today, the Senate can extend needed stimulus checks to 20 million seniors whom the House left behind.

America’s seniors have earned the right to get stimulus checks, every bit as much as other Americans. They worked hard all their lives. They paid a lifetime of taxes. They contribute to the economy.

And seniors can use the money. And because they can use the money, seniors are excellent targets for economic stimulus checks. Because they can use the money, they will spend it quickly.

Americans over age 65 spend 92 percent of their incomes. Households headed by a person over age 75 spend 98 percent. That is higher than any other group over the age of 25. And that means that a check sent to a senior will have a greater bang for the buck in terms of helping the economy.

The Finance Committee amendment would include stimulus checks up to $500. The underlying House bill would not help those 20 million seniors.

And the Finance Committee amendment would also provide stimulus checks for 250,000 disabled veterans who receive at least $3,000 in nontaxable disability compensation. The Finance Committee amendment would make them eligible to receive the same $500 rebate checks as other Social Security recipients. The Veterans Administration would distribute the rebate. The House bill would not provide rebates to disabled veterans who don’t pay taxes.

And the Finance Committee amendment would provide an additional 13 weeks of unemployment insurance. And high unemployment states would qualify for an extra 13 weeks. The House bill included additional unemployment insurance but no extension of unemployment insurance.

Almost a million more Americans are unemployed today than were a year ago. And 69,000 additional unemployed workers filed claims for unemployment insurance last week.

CBO found unemployment insurance to have a big bang-for-the-buck. It acts quickly to boost the economy.

I heard my friend from Oklahoma. Frankly, all of the big ideas and great ideas are ideas we cannot address at this point. We have to act now, immediately. The President wants us to act now with the stimulus package. The House wants us to act now. We in the Senate have to act now; that is, we have to act this week. We have laid it out to the American people so that they can spend those checks, those dollars, and prime the economy.

The Chairman of the Federal Reserve System has done his part by lowering interest rates to help keep our economy from going into recession, to keep our economy from facing very high unemployment rates, because we are facing a time of slow growth, primarily due to the problems in the housing industry. And those problems, which cascade into securitized loans and which, frankly, were peddled in a way that caused a lot of investors in our country to not know, frankly, what they were investing in.

The Chairman of the Federal Reserve System, Mr. Bernanke, also wants this rebate program. We do that in our package.

I yield to the Senator from New Mexico, Mr. DOMENICI, for 6 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I rise to outline my reasons for supporting the Senate Finance Committee stimulus package.

I have reviewed various proposals carefully. Clearly, the House-passed package is simply unacceptable. I predict that the House would not pass that bill again now that its flaws have been revealed. By denying rebates to Social Security recipients and veterans, yet giving it to illegal immigrants, the bill would not have passed in the Senate, no matter what kind of changes were demanded. The bill was completely unacceptable. It would not have been an acceptable package. It was unacceptable to the American people that we are thinking about them, that we are trying to add a stimulus to the Nation’s economy, the better, including showing to the housing industry that by making a change in the tax laws they can carry back current losses to earlier profitable years so they can make payrolls and not have to go belly up.

I might add, we also in the Senate Finance Committee eliminated the stimulus. This House does not do this—tighten up provisions that make it extremely difficult for illegal aliens to get these rebate checks.

That is very important. It is not in the House bill. We have that provision in the Senate bill.

Finally, this is clearly the right thing to do. It is clearly right that 20 million seniors and about 250,000 disabled veterans be included in the rebate check program. We do that in our bill.

I yield to the Senator from New Mexico, Mr. DOMENICI, for 6 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.
I say to the chairman of the full committee, I am not on this committee, but I follow it, and I know what is in the final package.

Yesterday, the Institute for Supply Management reported that business activity in the nonmanufacturing sector of our economy contracted. That is the part of the economy that has been holding everything together. It had not been contracting; now it has. The level of that key indicator is now at its lowest level since May. Right after the terrorist attacks of September 11, the stock market dropped 370 points and investors continued to move into ultra-safe areas, such as Government bonds.

Last week and earlier this week, we had more information about a devastated housing industry and the announcement of bankruptcy of a major home building firm. Last Friday, the Government reported that the Nation suffered a decline in job creation for the first time in 4 years.

In short, we clearly face the possibility of a recession. Worse, this recession may dovetail with the present near collapse in credit markets and when that happens, none of us knows how these two things may interact and what it may bring to us.

A prudent person would do as the House has done and has been proposed by the Senate and pass a stimulus package that will get money into the economy as soon as possible and will target particular sectors especially hard hit.

Another question is whether we should have a stimulus package. The question is, which do we prefer? The first thing to look at is the cost. The Senate Finance Committee package, as amended, will cost $158 billion. The House-passed package was $146 billion. In a $14 trillion economy, a difference of $12 billion is insignificant, almost a rounding error in an economy clearly the size we have.

Both packages cost about the same.

Second, it seems to this Senator that speed is the important ingredient. Therefore, if we invoke cloture on the Safety Finance Committee package before us, we can move quickly and move toward a Senate-passed package.

Third, I believe the Senate Finance Committee bill spreads the rebates, including veterans and Social Security recipients, and making sure no illegal immigrants receive the rebates.

Fourth, the committee recommendations will give a strong boost to housing and home building through its net operating loss provisions. We cannot ignore the weight that the collapsing housing market and home building sector have had on our economy and loss of jobs.

It used to be common knowledge that you would not have a robust American economy without a robust home building sector accompanying it. That may still be true. We have had a robust housing economy until now.

Finally, I believe the passing of the energy tax provisions in this Senate Finance Committee proposal as soon as possible is important. We can pass the provisions by invoking cloture, not waiting until later in the year to try to pass them on a different vehicle.

I have concluded that I will support cloture on the Senate Finance Committee proposal recognizing that a conference with the House is likely and that both Chambers will be able to fine-tune the ultimate package and get it quickly to the President.

In terms of the issue of speed, it would behoove us to reject what has been called the Christmas tree package out of the Senate Finance Committee which substantially raises costs, spends more money, is much more complicated than it would be to take up the House-passed bill which can be done more quickly.

I don’t mean to be pejorative when I talk about a Christmas tree, but that is puns. I talk about bills that start out relatively small, but because Members in the Senate, I do it, which is another favorite Christmas phrase, things we like to add to the bill, we end up with a bill that started out small but ends up looking like a tree with a lot of ornaments on it. Remember when Speaker PELOSI and Leader BOEHNER and the President struck the agreement they did that passed the House with 38 negative votes, there was a recognition this needed to be done quickly and cleanly. There were just parts to this legislation. Members of the House had a lot of other great ideas. There are a lot of other items they would have wanted to put on it, but their leaders convinced them to get bi-partisan support. It was a courageous decision. Sometimes it is hard to make a courageous decision. Sometimes it is hard to make a courageous decision. Sometimes it is hard to make a courageous decision.

homes to put on the market to add to those that already exist, as well as commercial buildings.

There has been a lot of talk about the rich getting too much in this package. One of the tax breaks is to remove the income limit for people who received tax rebates in 2001. Now, under the Finance Committee bill, take a tax break for investments they have made in marginal oil and gas wells. Maybe that is a good idea. I don’t know. But it clearly has no place on a stimulus package.

My point is that the Finance Committee did a variety of things which Members wanted done. They may or may not represent good policy, but they have nothing to do with the stimulus and simply add costs to this bill. Remember, this is all borrowed money. So it takes us further into a deficit situation.

One of our colleagues on the committee pointed out that these energy tax breaks actually are part of a larger bill, which I support, called the extenders package and, indeed, that is true. What is the extenders package? The extenders package is a package of legislation that each year we pass without question to ensure that various kinds of tax incentives are continued in the Tax Code, such as the research and development tax credit and a variety of provisions such as that. I asked for unanimous consent to offer that in committee, and it was rejected. We don’t know, however, for a certainty, that is going to pass this Congress. So these energy provisions, even to the extent people want them, are going to become law, but they don’t have to be put in the stimulus package to drag it down.

The other big expense added in the Finance Committee was the extension of unemployment. The Secretary of the Treasury and other people in the administration will tell you, in their view, this stimulus package could add anywhere from a half percent to three-quarters of a percent of growth to the GDP, if it is done very quickly and very cleanly. However, adding the unemployment extension, $30 billion or so to it, would eliminate the effect of a stimulus that otherwise would be provided. So the irony is that by adding the unemployment compensation extension provision here, we actually remove whatever stimulative effect there is in the bill, and we are right back to a bill that is not even as I said, looking like a Christmas tree.

Right now, unemployment nationwide is 4.7 percent. We have never extended unemployment benefits when unemployment was at that low a level. It has always been in the neighborhood of 6 percent or above, maybe a little below that, that has caused us to extend unemployment benefits. So there may well come a time, if we can’t get the economy moving in the way we want it to, so that there would continue to be a situation in the employment sector and people might actually begin losing more jobs, in which case we might have to extend it. But the best way to prevent that from happening is to do sensible policy in the meantime to try to obviate that situation. And the Secretary of the Treasury and the President and the House of Representatives clearly believe the best way to do that is to pass a package that doesn’t have this additional $30 billion in unemployment extension added to it.

The final point I wish to make is that there is some concern that there are political compromises in the Finance Committee package and it is hard to vote against those politically popular things. I think the Senator from Montana made a good point a moment ago in reference to a different matter, that when you do something as a matter of conscience, and it is hard to do, usually it represents good policy. This is a case where the House of Representatives was willing, on a bipartisan basis, under the leadership of Speaker Pelosi and Leader Boehner, to put together a package, with the administration, in the kind of bipartisan-ship our constituents would like to have us engage in more often, in order to pass a bill quickly, that could be and they did that even though I am sure many of them were tempted to add all kinds of other politically popular things to it. Now the attention turns to the Senate, and we don’t know ourselves, whether we will? I daresay not, if this Christmas tree package from the Finance Committee is adopted on the Senate floor. Instead, our constituents will look at us as the folks who slowed it down; we added a bunch to it.

The American people are already skeptical that getting a $500 or $700 rebate check is going to help stimulate the economy. But clearly they are going to look at the additional spending that is added to it, the increased deficit, and wonder whether we were simply acting in a political way rather than in a way best for the country.

So my view is we would be far better served, if we do the best policy, and that is to reject the Senate Finance Committee package as too much, more than the traffic can bear in this case, and to go back to the version of the House of Representatives, which would be modified ever so slightly, to send it back to the House to immediately pass it and on to the President and get this done.

My personal view is the kind of spending that is involved in the Finance Committee package will actually act to the detriment, not to the benefit, of stimulating the economy, and that is why it should be rejected.

In a few moments, we are going to have a chance to vote on this, and I hope my colleagues will vote no on the motion for cloture to bring up the Finance Committee-passed package of the stimulus bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Madam President, a special thanks to the chairman for all his hard work.

As we look across this great Nation, we all understand our economy needs some help, and that is why the Senate Finance Committee quickly took up the economic stimulus package which the House and the administration had put out there. I have to give an incredible compliment to our chairman and ranking member, Chairman Baucus and Senator Grassley, who went about this in such a thoughtful way, making sure there was no pride of authorship but recognizing what we had to do was to improve on this bill, to improve on what the House had done in such a hurried fashion, in order that we didn’t leave people out. This is very thoughtful with respect to the economy and the long-term debt issues out there, to keep a package that was small and reasonable, yet was comprehensive for the task that it had.

The package Speaker Pelosi and President Bush put together was a good start, but, unfortunately, there were some very important changes that needed to be made, and most notably some very hard-working and deserving Americans were disqualified from the stimulus rebate under their proposal: our seniors living on Social Security income and our disabled veterans. Why in the world would we want to leave behind these important Americans—fabric of our American family, people whose backs this country was built on and protected by—20 million seniors and at least a quarter of a million veterans who we know should qualify? The fact that there are disabled veterans who might qualify for that rebate is certainly reason enough to make sure we go back and get it right. I have no idea why the other side would not want to do that.

So the only thing we intend to do to stimulate the economy, but it is the joist we need. The Senator from Oklahoma was worried it was the only thing. No. No one thinks this is the only thing we are going to do. We are going to follow with a farm bill, which will have an impact into our rural areas. We will be looking at the energy tax package and a host of others—No Child Left Behind, which has been underfunded a tremendous amount.

And that is why the Senate Finance Committee took action quickly to address the inequities of the Pelosi-Bush package, and I am glad they did. The chairman and I know we are all going to get this done, but I believe it is very important we not neglect the seniors, 600,000 seniors in Minnesota. I have always believed this is a country where we wrap our arms around the people who have been there for us—our seniors and disabled veterans. When we signed up for war, there wasn’t a waiting line. Why would we put them at the end of the line when we are looking at these rebate checks?

So I believe it is important we move forward with the Senate finance package, which does some very good things, as the Presiding Officer knows, for the State of Colorado, to promote energy—renewable energy, and wind and solar—and I wish to move forward with it. But I believe that long after these rebate checks are cashed, we are going to have to change it for the long term. This means rolling back those tax cuts for the wealthiest people, making over $200,000 a year, investing in our infrastructure, and making this country in the right direction.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, let us remember that the stimulus package we are considering is a plan agreed to by the Democratic Speaker of the House, the Republican leader of the House, the President of the United States, and about 400 Members of the House. It is one that is timely, targeted, and temporary which will help people keep more of their own money and help small businesses to have more money to create jobs.

What began as a package to stimulate the economy in the House of Representatives has become an excuse for spending money in the Senate. That is why I hope we will reject the Senate Finance Committee proposal. It is too expensive, spends too much money, and it does not stimulate. The goal should be to move quickly, to show the American people we can act in a bipartisan way and get a good result that is to their benefit. The Finance Committee proposal does not do that.

I spoke with Senator M. CONNELL, who suggests we simply amend the House bill by adding the seniors and disabled veterans and send it back, send it to the President, and show the American people we can move promptly to give a boost to the economy.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I commend Senator Reid and Senator Baucus for their leadership in getting stimulus legislation to the floor so quickly. It is not a moment too soon. In recent weeks, the many warning signs of a troubled economy have turned into loud alarm bells that we cannot ignore.

Last week’s worrisome GDP figures show that economic growth has ground to a near halt. Savings are plummeting. Debt is rising. The Fed has cut short-term interest rates more rapidly than at any time in its history. For the first time in years, we are losing more jobs than we are producing. It is clear that we are facing an economic crisis that will present enormous challenges in the months and years ahead.

The crisis affects every man, woman, and child in our country, but it will be particularly hard on the millions of families who are already struggling who are having trouble finding work, heating their homes, and paying the mortgage. For these families, a recession is but one part of the business cycle—it’s a life-altering event from which they may never recover.

Already far too many families are on the brink. Unemployment has skyrocketed more than 7.6 million Americans are looking for work but can’t find a job. Foreclosures are rising 200,000 families each month are at risk of losing their homes. Bankruptcies soared by 40 percent last year, and experts predict they will rise even faster in 2009.

Our actions today are vital for the entire economy, but they are most critical for these struggling families. Our decisions will help determine whether they keep their homes, whether their children stay in college and whether their children go to bed hungry.

The current recession is a major turning point for our country. We have to choose a path out of this crisis, and the path we choose will determine the kind of America we will be for years to come. Do we choose to help some, or do we choose to help all? Do we choose a path of shared prosperity, or a path of more inequality?

These are questions of basic fairness, and the American people understand fairness. They don’t want to see their friends and neighbors who are struggling get left behind. They want us to do what is right for all.

Today we have the opportunity to take a few basic steps forward to demonstrate our commitment to a fair economy.

First, we have to tackle unemployment. It is clear that no matter what we do to boost economic activity, we will continue to have a significant unemployment problem for at least the next 2 years. Goldman Sachs predicts that the national unemployment rate will not be brought down by the end of 2009. Many States around the country are already struggling with high unemployment. Michigan’s unemployment rate is 7.6 percent. South Carolina’s is 6.5 percent. Ohio just hit the 6 percent mark as well.

Workers who lose their jobs are having much more trouble finding work now than before the last recession. Today, 18 percent of workers have been looking for a job for more than 26 weeks, compared to only 11 percent in 2001. This problem is affecting workers across the economic spectrum even those with college educations and years of experience can’t find work.

There are nearly two unemployed workers for every job opening across the country. Because it is becoming much harder to find a job, many more families are finding that our unemployment insurance doesn’t provide enough support. Across the country, 37 percent of workers are running out of benefits before finding a job, and more will follow as the recession deepens. Mr. President, 2.6 million people ran out of benefits in the year ending in October of 2007 that’s four times more than before the last recession.

These shocking numbers represent real hardship for millions of hardworking people across the country. It is all too easy for a job loss to turn into a financial crisis, and many families never fully recover. In the last recession we saw the real impact of unemployment on working families parents cutting back on spending for their children, or even pulling older children out of school to work to pay the rent. We saw teenagers who should be in school forced to take jobs to help support their families.

To prevent this downward spiral, we must act immediately to shore up the safety net for those struggling to find work. These workers have paid into the system for years. It is wrong to abandon them when they need our help the most.

The Senate bill is a major step forward. By extending unemployment benefits for up to 13 weeks, and providing as much as 13 additional weeks of benefits in high-unemployment States, we provide an immediate boost for our economy. And, at the same time, we help working families weather the storm.

Economists agree that extending unemployment benefits is a powerful, cost-effective way to stimulate the economy. Every dollar invested in benefits is matched with only pennies on the dollar. By returning just $1.64 increase in growth. That compares with only pennies on the dollar for cuts in income tax rates or cuts in taxes on investments.

I hope that all of my colleagues will join me in supporting an extension of unemployment insurance benefits. It’s an essential solution that will jumpstart our economy and help families in crisis get back on track.

Unfortunately, jobless families are not the only ones facing tough times. Millions of families today are facing a “perfect storm” of high costs and low wages. Every bill that comes in the mail just adds to the flood, until everyone ends up completely overwhelmed.

Working families are being swamped by the extraordinary increase in the cost of living. On President Bush’s watch, the price of gas is up 73 percent. Health insurance costs are up 38 percent. College tuition costs are up 43 percent. Housing costs are up 39 percent. And all of these skyrocketing costs, employees’ wages have been virtually stagnant, rising only 5 percent. Family budgets can no longer make ends meet, and families across the country are feeling the painful squeeze.

In the face of these economic pressures, workers are struggling to keep their families warm. The winter has not been particularly cold in many parts of the country, and the cost of heating oil is rising so rapidly that it is impossible to keep up. Since last year alone, the price of a gallon of heating oil has increased by more than 40 percent. A typical household may have to spend $3,000 on heating oil this winter, which is nearly as much as she spent all last year, and there are still 6 or more weeks of winter to go.

She told us that she tries to make ends meet by Social Security check stretch by asking her fuel company to deliver just 50 gallons at a time, because she can’t afford to pay for her tank. Most often, heating oil companies will not deliver less than 100 gallons.

For those fortunate enough to have fuel assistance under LIHEAP, the benefits cover less than a third of these costs. Most households won’t get any help at all—of the 35 million households eligible for fuel assistance, fewer than 6 million receive these benefits.

The high cost of basic essentials forces families to make impossible choices between paying for fuel, paying for groceries, paying for health care, or paying for their mortgage. If parents choose to keep their children warm and fed, they risk losing their home. The lack of even a small amount of assistance—just an extra 100 or 200 gallons of fuel oil—can mean the difference between security and homelessness.

There are simple steps we can take to end this “perfect storm.” One of the most important is the provision in the Senate bill providing additional home heating assistance for families struggling to stay warm this winter. Mr. President, $1 billion in additional LIHEAP funding will help 2.8 million families pay their heating costs and make it through the winter. Helping families meet this basic need is also one of the quickest ways to jumpstart the economy. An increase in LIHEAP benefits takes as little as 2 weeks to get to the pockets of working families.

This year, we provided a significant increase for LIHEAP. But it is far from enough and we still have a long way to go. The program’s authorized level of $5.1 billion.

It has been said that some people know the price of everything but the value of nothing. How else can you explain the administration’s latest budget request which cuts the program by 22 percent?

LIHEAP represents a tiny fraction of 1 percent of the entire Federal budget.

Our Senate HELP Committee held a field hearing on fuel assistance in Boston last month. One of our witnesses was Margaret Gilliam, a senior citizen taking care of her grandchildren in Dorchester. She has already spent $4,000 on heating oil this winter, which is nearly as much as she spent all last year, and there are still 6 or more weeks of winter to go.

She told us that she tries to make ends meet by Social Security check stretch by asking her fuel company to deliver just 50 gallons at a time, because she can’t afford to pay for her tank. Most often, heating oil companies will not deliver less than 100 gallons.

LIHEAP represents a tiny fraction of 1 percent of the entire Federal budget.
Yet it does so much for those most in need.

Programs like LIHEAP are the best economic stimulus money can buy. But even if they werent there, we would still have an obligation to support them—simply because it is the right thing to do.

Finally, there is widespread agreement that we need to put money into workers pockets to encourage consumption spending that will boost our declining economy. The Senate bill includes a tax rebate to do just that.

In order to create an effective stimulus, any tax cut must be designed to give the money to those who are most likely to spend it immediately. Low and low income families who are strapped for cash because of these dramatically higher costs.

These families are the ones who need the help the most, and the dollars they receive will be quickly spent. The money will be used to buy things they need but currently cannot afford. In contrast, wealthier taxpayers already have the money to purchase what they need. A tax rebate for them is much more likely to be deposited in their saving accounts than spent. Unless the tax cut is spent, there will be no increase in economic activity generated.

That is precisely what the rebate proposal in the Senate bill will do—provide direct assistance to the millions of working families who are feeling the squeeze of this economic downturn the most. They work the hardest, and they need help. They are also the ones who will spend the money most quickly, for necessities they otherwise couldnt afford.

The Senate package also includes needed relief for seniors and disabled veterans. Both of the tax rebates will be eligible to be spent on energy costs. The rebate will be more than $1,000 for federal taxpayers who have taxable income. These families have sacrificed so much and worked so hard to build up our country, and they deserve special efforts to help them weather the storm.

In all of these respects, the Senate bill makes major improvements over the measure passed in the House of Representatives. It is fairer, and it produces a greater stimulus effect by paying low and moderate income workers the same size tax rebate that more affluent taxpayers would receive. It also extends the tax rebate to include 20 million seniors struggling to make ends meet. The Senate bill will provide 14 billion more dollars in tax cuts to households with incomes below $40,000. That is the best way to get the American economy moving again.

Then again that every family in America is struggling in todays economy, and that they face difficult times ahead. But today we have a choice about how to move forward. Do we do what it easy, or do we do what is right? Is it much more likely or do we do what it takes to add dignity to the lives of all of Americas working families?

I hope that each and every one of my colleagues will listen to their conscience, do the right thing, and support the kind of stimulus that will help all Americans achieve better days ahead.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, first I would like to thank Finance Committee Chairman BAUCUS and Ranking Member GRASSLEY for their prompt action in developing this economic stimulus package. Last week, the House passed an economic stimulus package. All is not perfect, it did provide us with a solid foundation from which to build a comprehensive bill in the Senate. I believe the Finance Committee proposal that is before us today makes a number of crucial improvements in the delivery of a stimulus.

The Finance Committee package was designed in a bipartisan manner to improve upon the House bill, not to add pet projects or so-called goodies. Our goal is not to delay the passage of an economic stimulus bill, but to provide an economic stimulus that is targeted to Americans who need our help the most. According to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, the Senate package would not delay, but accelerate the delivery of a stimulus.

The Finance Committee makes improvements in the following areas: structure of the rebate; business tax incentives; housing; unemployment insurance; and funding for LIHEAP. Low-income families should not receive a smaller rebate just because they do not have taxable income. These families need our help and economists that testified before the Committee have pointed out the potential for this investment to stimulate the economy. The Finance Committee will provide a $500 rebate to all eligible singles and $1,000 to married couples.

The Senate Finance rebate is structured in a way that will allow senior citizens receiving Social Security benefits without taxable income to be eligible for the rebate. Senior citizens are facing the same increases in food and energy prices as are other Americans and cannot be left out of the package.

Many seniors in Massachusetts live on fixed incomes. They struggle to pay their medical and heating bills. Unfortunately, 20 million seniors were left out of the tax rebate in the House passed bill. When we are contemplating distributing stimulus checks broadly across most American families, it would just be wrong not to include 20 million seniors of the Greatest Generation.

Not only does the House passed economic bill exclude seniors from rebates, it excludes 250,000 disabled veterans who do not file a tax return. There is no valid reason to leave out those who have served while serving our country.

As Chairman of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I am pleased this economic stimulus plan includes two tax provisions which Senator SOWE, who serves as the ranking member of the Committee, and I believe will help small businesses.

The first provision doubles the amount of personal business purchase tax that small businesses can write off from $125,000 to $250,000 for 2008. This will provide an incentive for small businesses to purchase more equipment and expand their business.

The second provision expands the carryback period for net operating losses, from 2 to 5 years. This targeted provision will help businesses address losses. By allowing NOLs to be carried back for a longer period of time, business owners will be able to balance out net losses over years when the business has a net operating gain, helping small businesses with their cash flow. Any action we take to foster their growth benefits our economy as a whole.

At the Real Estate Roundtable earlier last week, Treasury Secretary Paulson said, the U.S. economy is undergoing a significant housing correction. That, combined with high energy prices and capital market turmoil could mean economic growth falls rather markedly at the end of 2007, as reflected in the gross domestic product numbers. The GDP fell from 4.9 percent in the third quarter of 2007 to only 0.6 percent in the last quarter. A strong economic stimulus package needs to address the root of the problem—the housing crisis. The unexpected losses on subprime mortgages and the breadth of the exposure has created uncertainty in the economy. Homeowners facing higher interest rates on the subprime adjustable-rate mortgages, ARMs, and lower housing prices are having trouble refinancing. Approximately 1.7 million subprime ARMs worth $387 billion are expected to reach during 2008.

Owning your own home is the foundation of the American dream. Home ownership encourages personal responsibility, provides financial security, and gives families a stake in their neighborhoods. According to the Mortgage Bankers Association's National Delinquency Survey, there were roughly 2.5 million mortgages in default in the third quarter of 2007—an increase of about 40 percent when compared to the same quarter in 2006.

Three weeks ago, I held a roundtable discussion on the economy in Massachusetts. Jim Harrington, the Mayor of Brockton, MA, told me that his city had 400 foreclosures last year and expects 400 more this year. In the City of Boston, there were 703 foreclosures in 2007 after just 261 in 2006. The dramatic increase in foreclosures in cities across the nation are lowering revenues and making it more difficult for them to respond to the housing crisis.

The Finance Committee amendment includes a provision to provide $10 billion for mortgage revenue bonds. This provision is based on a bill introduced... by Senator SMITH and myself. It passed in the Finance Committee by a 20-1 vote. It is also important to note that President Bush, during his State of the Union Address, asked the Congress to provide additional authority for mortgage revenue bonds and included a similar provision in the budget for fiscal year 2009.

Specifically, this provision would provide $10 billion of tax-exempt private activity bonds to be used to refinance home loans, provide mortgages for first-time homebuyers and for multifamily rental housing. This provision will help families retain affordable housing. The housing crisis also affects rental housing because many families who lose their homes will move into rental housing.

With the additional mortgage revenue bond authority, States and local governments could rapidly escalate demand for housing and stimulate the economy by increasing the flow of safe, non-pyramidal home loans. In 2006, State and local governments financed 120,000 new home loans with MRBs. With the additional $10 billion in funding, States and localities can match that amount and finance approximately 240,000 home loans. According to the National Association of Home Builders, every mortgage revenue bond new home loan produces nearly two, full-time jobs, $75,000 in additional wages and salaries and $41,000 in new Federal, State and local revenues. Also, each new home loan results in an average of $3,700 in new spending on appliances, furnishings, and property alterations.

Separate from mortgage revenue bonds, the Finance Committee extends unemployment benefits by thirteen weeks through the end of 2008. In December alone, the national unemployment rate shot up from 4.7 percent to 5 percent and half a million more workers joined the ranks of the unemployed. Labor statistics released last week show the labor market is faltering. In the past month, our economy lost 17,000 jobs. We need to extend unemployment benefits now. When it takes longer to find a job, current unemployment benefits are not adequate.

Extending unemployment benefits is one of the most effective ways to stimulate the economy. Families struggling to make ends meet after losing their paying jobs are the beneficiaries. Every dollar spent on benefits leads to $1.64 in economic growth. In addition, unemployment benefits will reach workers about two months before rebate checks start to be delivered.

Finally, the Finance Committee package has been modified to include an additional $1 billion for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program—one of the most effective programs to help low-income Americans struggling with rising energy costs. According to Mark Zandi, an increase in LIHEAP funding should be part of a stimulus bill. Increased LIHEAP funding will eliminate the need for families to choose between food and energy costs—a choice no family should ever face.

Home heating prices in Massachusetts are 44 percent higher today than they were just 1 year ago, and thousands of families will be facing difficulties paying their heating bills this winter. Massachusetts families will be able to benefit by approximately $22 million from this proposed increase in LIHEAP funding.

Mr. President, once again, I would like to thank Chairman BAUCUS for his efforts in developing this important stimulus package. I ask all my colleagues to support this amendment so that more seniors, small businesses, homeowners, and hard working families struggling to make ends meet can get the assistance they deserve.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we have come down to the crucial vote on whether we are going to greatly improve the House stimulus bill. In a few minutes, all Senators will have to undergo that balancing exercise I referred to last week.

On one hand, you have the legitimate concerns about the House bill. White House, and Senate Republican. Leadership. The concern is that a wide open Senate process would slow down and complicate a straightforward House bill. Those who hold this view correctly point out that the House bill was the product of tough negotiations. The White House and House Republicans made concessions in that negotiation. Likewise, House Democrats made concessions in that negotiation. Supporters of the House bill emphasize the need for speedy action to send the signal to workers, investors, and business people that the Federal Government is responding to the slowing economy.

On the other hand, are concerns about the substance of the House bill. There is a targeted process that limits the role of the Senate.

It comes down to this, Mr. President. The leaders’ concern with timing must be weighed against the question of the quality of the House bill. In other words, is a take-it or leave-it House bill, which passes quickly, better than a Senate bill which allows the Senate to work its will.

I have laid out the leaders’ concerns about timing. Now, we question of the adequacy of the House bill. That is the other side of the balance we need to strike.

Let’s examine this side of the question. Asked another way, did the committee process improve the House bill with a Senate amendment?

I think everyone would have to answer yes. That is, the Finance Committee amendment is an improvement over the House bill. Twenty million seniors will get the checks. Over 200,000 disabled veterans will get the checks. Medicare drug card beneficiaries will be entitled to checks. These improvements to the rebate structure were the direct result of deliberations in the Finance Committee. They were contributions by members on each side. We improved the business stimulus provisions as well.

Our goal was a bipartisan economic stimulus package. The committee worked on the bill and improved the bill. The committee bill responds to the needs of Americans and business and, if enacted, would provide a very much needed boost for the economy.

The best proof of this point is the concession by opponents of the Finance Committee. The House bill must be changed on the structure of the rebate.

Before you vote, I ask Members to go back to the basic question of balancing quick action on the House bill versus improvements made by the Finance Committee.

The House bill could be passed quickly without improvements. Or we could finish the process here in the Senate and add the improvements made by the Finance Committee.

If cloture is achieved on the Finance Committee amendment, then we will have a different challenge.

We must not load up this stimulus package else further or it is likely to sink. Our leaders are right that we need to act quickly.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT proclaims the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order of the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, in a few moments we are going to have an extremely important vote. Nineteen days ago, the President first proposed an economic stimulus package and implored the Congress to act. It was impressive to see the Democratic Speaker of the House, the Republican leader of the House, and the Secretary of the Treasury of the Bush administration all together having worked out an important stimulus package that we believe will help our economy.

Then in an apparent jolt of nostalgia from last year, Senate Democrats decided to co-op a bipartisan proposal produced by the House, to put together a carefully crafted political document coming out of the Finance Committee.

It may be a good proposal in some respects. I am sure it contains a lot of what is appealing to Members. But the point here was to try to do a targeted, temporary jolt to our economy, and to try to astonish the American people by doing it on a bipartisan basis, rapidly.

This package will not achieve that result. There is an opportunity, however, to do that. First, we must defeat the Reid proposal, and then there will be an opportunity to adjust the House proposal in a way that is acceptable to the Speaker of the House, the Republican leader of the House, and the President of the United States, thereby achieving an early signature.

So I will offer, along with Senator Stevens, after the Reid proposal does not achieve clout, an amendment to the House-passed bill that will deal with the same problem. Senator, with colleagues, and with the immigration problem. And with regard to the veterans piece of it, one of the deficiencies of the Finance Committee or Reid proposal is that it does not cover the widows of veterans. That omission will be corrected. And I will offer a bipartisan amendment, to approve the McConnell-Stevens amendment.

Now, let me say, Senator Stevens and I don’t have any pride of authorship. So don’t get this idea that if it will help us get this job done, we can call it the Reid-Obama-Clinton proposal as far as I am concerned. The goal is not so much to claim credit as it is to astonish the American people and do something on a bipartisan basis and do it quickly—do it quickly.

People will be astonished, and we think the markets and others around the world will watch in amazement to see that, on a bipartisan basis, the U.S. Government can do something effective and fast. So I would be more than happy to change the name of the amendment if that would make it more palatable.

We have no particular pride of authorship. This whole path we are going down started out on a bipartisan basis; I was hoping we would end it on a bipartisan basis. As far as the credit part of it is concerned, we can all take credit; it can go upstairs to the gallery together. Senator Reid and I, side by side, and say: We came together. We did something for the American people.

The House can simply take this up—we know; the majority leader of the House said today, he implored us, the majority leader; not to load up this bill with too many extras that would imperil the bill.

He was referring, of course, to the package upon which we will be having a cloture vote shortly. So the way forward is clear. Let’s defeat the proposal that we know well will not be accepted by the House, we know will not be signed by the President. Let’s modify the House bill—we can call it the Reid-Clinton-Obama bill as far as I am concerned—and get it back over to the House. We can see their assurance they will take it up, pass it, and send it to the President for his signature. But first we must defeat the Reid-Finance Committee package.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the President of the United States returned from the Middle East 2 weeks ago tomorrow. I had a conversation with him on the telephone, with the Speaker, and a number of other people.

At that time, the decision was made that the President would hold off on any statement on specificity on Friday following that Thursday, and that we should sit down and see what we could work out with his Secretary of the Treasury.

We did that. A decision was made, as I have said this floor on a number of occasions. This decision was made because of the House rules compared to the Senate rules, that this would be a bill that would come from the House. That bill has come from the House. I have never in any way disparaged it.

But it is not something that does not need fixing. That was the whole purpose of the House working on it and then we are working on it. So any intimation by my friend, the Republican leader, that whatever the House came up with was just a big stamp of approval on it does not speak well to the history of this body.

We have an obligation to do what we think is best to stimulate the economy. We have done that. What we have done is to get a political document. It is a piece of legislation. Now, from what I have heard from my friend, it appears that they would agree, by unanimous consent, the bill that is now the House bill—what I understand they would be willing to that is language that would prevent undocumenteds from drawing the benefits of those rebates. They would also be willing to accept senior citizens as listed in the Senate Finance bill, 21.5 million of them; wounded veterans, 250,000 of them; and the widows of those veterans.

It sounds good to me. I would be happy, and I ask unanimous consent at this stage. Are they willing to accept that, to add that to the package that we have put to that is language that would prevent undocumenteds from drawing the benefits of those rebates. They would also be willing to accept senior citizens as listed in the Senate Finance bill, 21.5 million of them; wounded veterans, 250,000 of them; and the widows of those veterans.

It sounds good to me. I would be happy, and I ask unanimous consent at this stage. Are they willing to accept that, to add that to the package that we have put to that is language that would prevent undocumenteds from drawing the benefits of those rebates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCONNELL. Would the majority leader restate his unanimous consent request?

Mr. REID. The Senate Finance package that is now before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that we add to that widows of the veterans. Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, this is what has been going on all week: adjustments to the package in order to play political games.

Now, with all due respect to my friend, the majority leader, we are going to have an opportunity to fix this problem on the widows of veterans at a later date.

We do not have to fix it on this first vote. How many different times do they want to change it? They originally told us they were going to give us the paper last Thursday night. It kept evolving and evolving and evolving. We will have a chance to fix this problem. The first opportunity would be the amendment that Senator Stevens and I intend to offer. Therefore, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection?

Mr. REID. That is somewhat unusual. It appears the changes as have been suggested by my friend—I wanted to be cooperative and say that is a good idea.

You can flip open any newspaper, tune in to any newscast; 7:30 in the morning in to any radio show, and you are bound to hear from professors, economists, analysts, and pundits debating about the state of our economy. It used to be a lot of them were asking: Are we in a recession now? Not too many are asking that now. They believe we are in a recession. But they do ask continually how deep will it be; how long will it last.

Those questions are valid and appropriate. But they are asked by those who are thinking about the economy, not by those who spend their lives working in the economy or building the economy, to those Americans working harder than ever who end up with less. There is no doubt the state of the economy is not good. Millions of working families are trying to make their paycheck stretch until the next paycheck, as their gasoline, heating, and grocery bills skyrocket, of course, medical bills are never able to be paid.

They know how our economy struggles. Millions of senior citizens are living on incomes that are fixed but face living costs that are anything but fixed. They know how our economy struggles. Small business owners are facing rising health care costs for their employees and greater difficulty finding capital to grow. They know how our economy struggles.

Millions of homeowners are in foreclosure or face it soon. In California, foreclosure rates have gone up more than 300 percent; Florida, 250 percent. We could go through a long list of problems. But they are difficult.

The housing market is in big trouble as these people watch their dreams and their security come crashing down. They, too, know how our economy struggles. It affects everyone.

I did a TV show down here with the mayor of the city of Fernley, NV. Mayor, how is the economy? He said: It is tough. They just had a levee break and a Bureau of Reclamation project has been there for a long time. You know, the water came and covered homes for 2 miles. Some of it was 8 feet deep. With the state of the economy, may not be so bad, a lot of people are saying: I don’t think it is going to do any good to rebuild my home. I don’t think I can borrow the money to fix it up or I can’t make the payments.

It is fair to say that President Bush will not be remembered as a good steward of our economy. When he took office, there was a surplus over the next 10 years of some $7 trillion. As Senator Conrad mentioned at a presentation earlier today, in his 7 years, he has run up the debt. That is gone. The surplus is gone. He has run up the debt by more than $3 trillion. We have now spent about $750 billion in Iraq. Every year of it has been borrowed. But even this President understands the urgent need for action, and we need to do that.

To his credit, President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic stimulus package, with both Democrats and Republicans, working with the White House, came together to craft a bill that serves certainly as a good starting point. That was always what it was supposed to be. But notably the House plan sends rebate checks out to the American people some time in probably May or maybe even June. They can’t do anything with the rebate checks until the income tax returns are filed. Americans will use that money to pay their bills, to buy books and clothing for their children, or perhaps to make a long overdue repair of homes or cars or pay a doctor bill. Democrats, Republicans, we all agree, if we give the American people the money, they will spend it.

Later the House sent the bill over here. In the Finance Committee, Chairman Baucus and Senator Grassley put their heads together, one Democrat and one Republican, and made a good bill far stronger.

Here are some of the things they did that we are going to be voting on in a little while. Through bipartisanship, this Finance Committee package sends stimulus checks to 21.5 million senior citizens who would get nothing from the House bill. The bipartisan Finance Committee package sends checks to 250,000 wounded, disabled veterans who were left out of the House plan, veterans unable to work because of the sacrifice they made for our country. The bipartisan Finance Committee package extends unemployment benefits for those whose jobs have fallen victim to this economy which is on this down spin.

The Department of Labor recently told us that the economy lost thousands of jobs in January, on top of the millions who are already unemployed. The House bill doesn’t extend unemployment benefits, and economists tell us that is one of the most effective ways to stimulate the economy.

The bipartisan Finance Committee plan helps both small and large businesses. Small businesses will have a greater ability to immediately write off purchases of machinery and equipment, and large businesses will receive bonus depreciation, an extended carryback period for past losses to recoup cash for future investments. The bipartisan Finance Committee package addresses the housing crisis by adding $10 billion in mortgage revenue bonds that States will use to finance mortgages. The reason I focus on this is the President of the United States in his State of the Union Message said:

...and allow state housing agents to issue tax-free bonds to help homeowners refinance their mortgages. (Applause.)

We stood and applauded when he said this. That was the right thing for him to say. It is the right thing for us to do. That is why the Senate Finance Committee package, something the President called for in his State of the Union Message, Why should we be criticizing for trying to improve the House plan because the President asked for it and we agree with what the President asked for?

The bipartisan Finance Committee package includes an extension of energy efficiency and renewable energy incentives to create jobs, lower energy bills, and begin to stem the tide of global warming.

The Arizona Republic Newspaper, a newspaper not known for being left-wing, said in an editorial recently: The economic stimulus package from Congress needs something to move renewable power. The plan should include an extension of tax credits for renewable energy sources such as wind, solar, geothermal. We get a 3-for-1 impact: creating jobs, diversifying our energy supply, and reducing pollution. These are actions Americans want and existing ones that are serving us well.

Last year nearly 6,000 megawatts of renewable energy came on line. That injected $20 billion into the economy. That is what we have in this legislation. It is good legislation. It is important legislation.

The amendment I have submitted adds two bipartisan measures to the committee’s bill. One is an amendment to increase loan limits for Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac as well as FHA-backed mortgages which will help more homeowners refinance and reduce mortgage interest rates. The other provides funds for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, LIHEAP. These funds will help low-income families—and there are lots of them—afford their heating bills which are skyrocketing even as big oil reports record profits. Shouldn’t we do this? Last quarter Exxon made more money than any company in the history of the world. They had a net profit of over $40 billion in one quarter. This effort to get individuals and companies investing in renewable energy is important. That is what is in this bill. We should not be criticized for this.

What the bipartisan Finance Committee accomplished, they took a good plan and made one much better. In the Senate Finance Committee, they made hundreds and thousands of phone calls to thank the Finance Committee for doing this. It was the right thing to do. This is not a partisan measure, and that is why these groups—many of these groups traditionally don’t support Democrats—like this. It is bipartisan.

I am happy that a majority—and we will find out if there are 60—this Senate approves of this package, a significant majority. We hope we will get 60, 61 votes. Time will tell. But the Republican leader and members of the Senate Finance Committee, working with the Chairman and the majority leader of the Senate, Democrats and Republicans, supports this bipartisan measure we got from the Senate. And it is interesting to note that as to this perfect plan we got from the House, the Republicans would like to change it. So the House plan obviously needs to be improved. It needs to be improved because of language dealing with undocumented people. It needs to be improved because of seniors and veterans. Which the Senate did. The House plan couldn’t have been that great if they accept those changes.

This is a good piece of legislation. That is why I am happy and satisfied that a majority of the Senate approves of the Senate Finance Committee did. Secretary Paulson, whom I have enjoyed working with, said this morning that the Senate Finance Committee bill is “coming to the trough.” My friend the Republican leader said the Republicans would like to change it. So the Senate does not approve of the Senate Finance Committee. Democrats and Republicans, disagrees with that. They do not think that seniors and veterans are pet projects. And if they are pet projects, I plead guilty, because they are our pet projects. Seniors are my pet project. Veterans are my pet project.

I have not served in the U.S. military. But during my entire career as a Member of Congress, I have been over backward because of the sacrifices of the people serving this country. I have made hundreds and thousands of phone calls to thank the Finance Committee for doing this. It is important.

So I think Secretary Paulson should retract what he said. This is not coming to the trough. We are coming to help people. We are coming to help veterans, seniors, people who are unemployed. Maybe my friend, the Secretary of the Treasury, has never been unemployed. Maybe he thinks those checks are not worth anything. We know the Secretary of the Treasury is a very wealthy man. People who are on unemployment benefits, without exception, are not wealthy. They are people who were depending on a check to come when payday came. Payday came, and they had no job. The unemployed are a pet project in my mind. I would say that the unemployed don’t have the advocates, the lobbyists that a lot of other groups have, but they are as important. Is it a pet project to help businesses weather the storm of this downturn? I don’t think so. Is it a pet project to help people pay for their heating bills? And if there is something negative to help people pay for their heating bills? I don’t have the advocate. She was a Social Security recipient. I know that a majority of the Senate supports people who want to stay here. So we have the stamp of approval of the House and Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on amendment No. 3983 to H.R. 5140, the economic stimulus bill. Hon. Kohl, Max Baucus, Mark L. Pryor, Byron Bird, Robert Bennett, Jon Tester, Christopher J. Dodd, Barbara A. Mikulski, Joseph I. Lieberman, Frank L. Lautenberg, Daniel K. The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 58, the nays are 41. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which cloture was not invoked on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to reconsider is entered.

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, first, let me express my appreciation to everyone who took my calls, who listened to Democrats and Republicans asking them to vote for this very important stimulus package. It was a good debate. The American people would have been better for having done this, but I appreciate the bipartisan nature of this vote. Fifty-nine Senators joined together to do what they thought was the right thing for the country.

I will have before the evening is out, in fact shortly, a conversation with the Republican leader in the immediate future this evening to let him know what I intend to do in the near future and not so near. So pending my conversation with the Republican leader, I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Cantwell). The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll. Mr. Durbin. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Casey). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. Durbin. Mr. President, Ed Molitor has been coaching basketball at Palatine High School for so long that when the local paper reported on his retirement, the sports trivia question it ran included the name of his predecessor.

When Ed Molitor was in college, he went to a playoff game between two Chicago high school basketball teams—DuSable and DePaul Academy. He credits this game with altering the course of his life.

At the time, Ed Molitor was a premed student at St. Procopius College. When he wasn’t consumed with his studies, he helped a friend coach basketball at an elementary school on the
HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

PRIVATE FIRST CLASS CHRISTOPHER F. PFEIFER

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, today I rise in honor of PFC Christopher F. Pfeifer of Spalding, Nebraska.

Private First Class Pfeifer grew up in Spalding, and, during high school, played football, as well as the drums in the school band. He enjoyed fishing, hunting, golfing, and especially music and playing his drums. His music teacher said he was one of the better drum players she had ever seen. After joining the Job Corps, he earned his high school diploma and met future wife, Karen. They married on March 22, 2006, and 1 month later, he joined the U.S. Army, partly influenced by his brother’s service as a Green Beret. His father said he loved the Army and, after completing his military commitment, wanted to use the G.I. bill to go to college.

Private First Class Pfeifer was serving in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, assigned to the 1st Squadron, 91st Cavalry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team, in Schweinfurt, Germany. On August 17, 2007, his unit came under enemy fire near Kamu, Afghanistan. Private First Class Pfeifer sustained wounds while bravely trying to pull fellow soldiers to safety. He passed away on September 25, 2007, at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, TX. Private First Class Pfeifer was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart.

Private First Class Pfeifer is survived by his wife Karen and newborn daughter Peyton; his parents Michael and Darlina Pfeifer of Spalding, NE; his brother, Aaron of Fort Bragg, NC; and his sister Nichole, of Hauppauge, NY. I offer my most sincere condolences to his sister Nichole, of Hauppauge, NY. I offer my most sincere condolences to his family and friends of Private First Class Pfeifer. He made the ultimate and most courageous sacrifice for our Nation, and his daughter will grow up knowing her father is a hero. I join all Americans in grieving the loss of this remarkable young man and know that PFC Pfeifer’s passion for serving, his leadership, and his selflessness will remain a source of inspiration for us all.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING B. LYN BEHRENS

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Dr. Lyn Behrens as she retires as president and CEO of Loma Linda University Adventist Health Sciences Center, drawing to a close a successful career in medicine and civic leadership.

After completing her degree in medicine from the Sydney University School of Medicine in Australia in 1964, Dr. Behrens became a general pediatrician at Loma Linda University Medical Center in 1966. By 1986, Dr. Behrens was the first female Dean of the School of Medicine, and by 1999 she had become the first female President of Loma Linda University. Five years later she assumed the position of CEO of Adventist Health System, which soon became the Loma Linda University Medical Center. In 1999, Dr. Behrens was chosen to serve as President of Loma Linda University Medical Center. Loma Linda University and Medical Center has prospered under her leadership, and has become a pioneer institution for patient care and medical technology. I have had the pleasure of visiting Loma Linda University and have found Dr. Behrens to be an exemplary model to her colleagues, capable of bringing out the best in her associates.

During Behrens’ tenure, Loma Linda University witnessed the development of a dedicated children’s hospital with the most advanced equipment and methodology. The university has also witnessed the development of a center for behavioral medicine, as well as a rehabilitation, orthopaedic and neurosciences institute. The university has also added new schools of pharmacy and science and technology, and has worked diligently to form partnerships with local research and institutes to develop innovation in the use of global information systems to assist with emergency medical response. The first hospital-based center for proton therapy and research has also been developed under Dr. Behrens’ leadership, and has become a leading institution in the treatment of cancer. The university has taken great strides to improve care, and for our Nation’s veterans at the Jerry L. Pettis Memorial VA Medical Center.

Dr. Behrens has also been a dynamic leader in her community, working to ensure positive community service to her area and throughout the world. She has been instrumental in bringing to fruition a great number of social and community services organizations and programs. Programs such as the Social Action Community Health Services Clinic, PossAbilities, Community Kids Connection and Operation Jessica, have brought medical and social support to a broad group of individuals. These organizations have assisted special needs and at-risk children and teens, and developed after-school programs and ESL—English Second Language—programs. Her leadership has also provided for increased medical and community support internationally, providing support in 12 nations, including the only teaching hospital in Kabul, Afghanistan, and the most advanced hospital in mainland China.

As she retires from more than four decades of service and leadership in medicine to the communities of California and beyond, I am pleased to ask my colleagues to recognize her for a career of visionary leadership. The future of medical education, research, and service will be forever changed thanks to her bold leadership.

50 YEARS OF SPACE EXPLORATION

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing and honoring the California Institute of Technology’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory, JPL, in Pasadena, CA, for 50 years of space exploration. Since the launch of Explorer I, America’s first spacecraft, on January 31, 1958, JPL has made momentous and historic contributions to our scientific understanding of our vast universe.

For the past five decades, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory has been a respected leader in furthering scientific knowledge around the world. Explorer I was built in less than 3 months, and was the first spacecraft ever launched into space that actually revolved around Earth and provided scientific findings from space. The immense success of Explorer I led to the passage of the Space Act in 1958, which established the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

Since the inception of NASA, JPL has been on the forefront of science and technology through its research and exploration of every known planet in our solar system. Subsequent to the success of Explorer I, JPL has continued to have a central role in accomplished space missions, such as exploring our vast solar system with Voyager 1 and 2 and the Mars Exploration Rovers. JPL has also been instrumental in understanding our planet.

I congratulate the California Institute of Technology’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory on 50 years of successful and insightful space exploration, and thank the original members of the Explorer I team for their contribution to American history.

BEST COMMUNITIES FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, each year, the America’s Promise Alliance names the 100 Best Communities for Young People in the Nation. Today, I am proud to honor five Minnesota towns that have achieved this tremendous designation—Landfall, Mankato, Northfield, Saint Louis Park, and Saint Paul, MN.

The 100 Best Communities for Young People is an annual competition that recognizes outstanding community-wide efforts that improve the well-being of youth and inspire other localities to take action.

There is apparently much to find inspiration from, as two previous award winners have now become five—a strong showing from the great State of Minnesota.

Each of these five Minnesota communities demonstrated a commitment to community support of children through resources including effective education, safe gathering places, and a wide range of activities. Their commitment generates real outcomes in the form of high graduation rates and educational achievement, healthy behaviors, and civic engagement by their young population.

Landfall, MN, is a small town with big plans for its young people. A town of just 700, they place a premium on expanding the horizons of young people. They provide students with “Extra Involvements,” a unique program that gives elementary through high school students one-on-one help with math, reading, and English as a second language.

Mankato, MN, a three-time winner of this honor, prides itself on embracing young people to help them reach their fullest potential. Among their initiatives is the LinkCrew, which pairs high school freshmen with junior and senior year mentors to help them make a successful transition to high school. And, as the town that raised six Bessler boys, including my husband John, I know firsthand of the high-caliber young people Mankato produces.

Northfield, MN, used to be a farm town, center of farm and wheat fields. Now, anchored by two of our Nation’s preeminent colleges, Carleton College and Saint Olaf College, Northfield has become an enriching place for young people. The Mayor’s Youth Council allows students ages 15 to 18 to advise the mayor and city council on issues related to the young population.

Saint Louis Park, MN, is also a three-time winner. They welcome the youth of their community into the process of government, inviting them to participate in decisionmaking on special neighborhood and community issues. Among other attractions, it is home to 51 parks thanks to the city’s initiative to reserve a percentage of all city land for public parks. And in a special nod to its young population, the city’s Web site lists the best sledding hills in its community.

Saint Paul, MN, is our State’s capital city and a model of how to engage children after school hours. Through the Second Shift and After School Initiatives, they provide positive places for children to spend their afternoons, develop new skills, and obtain academic assistance.

From his theater in downtown Saint Paul, Minnesota’s native son, Garrison Keillor, refers to his fictional Minnesota town of Lake Wobegon as a place where “all the women are strong, all the men are good-looking, and all the children are above average.” These five towns have certainly proven Keillor’s words are more truth than fiction.

I am proud to represent five of America’s Best Communities for Young People and to congratulate them before the U.S. Senate.

RECOGNIZING SAINT CLOUD, MINNESOTA

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a great achievement by the City of Saint Cloud, MN.

St. Cloud, MN, is located on the banks of the Mississippi River, 60 miles northwest of the Twin Cities. When it was founded more than 150 years ago, it was known as the Granite City. But now it also bears the title of the Most Livable Community in the World.

This award is the world’s only competition for local communities that focuses on environmental management and the creation of livable communities. This year, they have named Saint Cloud the “Most Livable Community in the World.”

The awards encourage best practice, innovation, and leadership in providing vibrant, environmentally sustainable communities that improve the quality of life for their residents and people worldwide.

Among the goals of the award is to model innovative community planning and living for other communities. I hope that Saint Cloud will inspire other communities to tackle challenging environmental and energy issues facing our nation.

IN HONOR OF 2ND LIEUTENANT SETH C. PIERCE

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, today I wish to honor 2LT Seth Pierce of Lincoln, NE.

Lieutenant Pierce was a proud member of the U.S. Marine Corps, whose friends remember him as a dedicated and passionate person who wore his heart on his sleeve.” While attending Lincoln Southeast High School, he ran the first leg on his relay team and won the State championship in 2001. His coach described his team as “the most overachieving boys I’ve ever coached. They won because they were connected to each other.”

A 2002 graduate of Lincoln Southeast High School and a 2006 graduate of Arizona State University, Lieutenant Pierce was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps in December 2006. Lieutenant Pierce passed away due to a car accident on October 21, 2007, in Quantico, VA, where he was stationed.

Lieutenant Pierce is survived by his parents, Larry and Linda Pierce of Surprise, AZ; his brother and sister-in-law, Aaron and Crystal Pierce, of Omaha; and his grandparents, Edwin and Ruth Steffens and Luther and Esther Pierce, all of Lincoln. I offer my most sincere condolences to the family and friends of Lieutenant Pierce. His noble service to the United States of America is to be respected and appreciated. The loss of this remarkable marine is felt by all Nebraskans, and his courage to follow his dreams will remain as an inspiration.

RECOGNIZING HODGDON YACHTS
- Ms. SNOWE, Mr. President, today I commend a Maine business that last month unveiled a remarkably sturdy vessel for use by our Nation’s Navy SEALs, a project for which I was honored to secure funding for. Hodgdon Yachts of East Boothbay, a family-owned company for five generations, has been a source of pride for Maine’s boatbuilding industry for nearly 200 years, and its recent accomplishment is without a doubt one of its most impressive.

Hodgdon Yachts began building boats in 1816, when the company launched the 42-foot schooner Superb. Since then, Hodgdon Yachts has developed a reputation as one of New England’s premier shipbuilders, persevering through difficult times and continually reevaluating its company’s methods to be consistently on the cutting edge of the latest technologies. Of particular note for the Navy is Hodgdon’s 44-foot schooner Boudoin, named for the Brunswick alma mater of Arctic explorer Donald MacMillan. The boat proved itself an invaluable tool in Arctic research and sailed more than 300,000 miles during its career. Prior to the Boudoin, the company turned its attention to building submarine chasers for the military in World War I, and continued its defense work by gaining minesweeper and troop transport contracts during both World War II and the Korean War.

By the late 1950s, Hodgdon Yachts returned to building more traditional wooden yachts for a variety of customers. By the mid-1960s, the company began to modernize its shipbuilding, providing clients with yachts of superb quality and strength while employing innovative technology in the creation of its boats. Hodgdon Yachts recently began using carbon Kevlar deposits to construct its yachts to make the boats as strong and secure as possible.

Hodgdon’s proficiency in using Kevlar proved useful when, in May 2005, the company won a contract from the U.S. Navy’s Office of Naval Research to build the prototype for a new special operations craft for the Navy’s special forces. The ship has a foam core surrounded by multiple layers of carbon, and its durability is reinforced by an outer layer of Kevlar. On January 11, 2006, the company launched this prototype, the 82-foot Mako V.1, named for a shark that frequents the Gulf of Maine’s waters. It is the first Navy vessel constructed with carbon-fiber technology and was designed to protect Navy SEALs from injuries caused by the harsh conditions of the open seas. Hodgdon teamed with Maine Maritime Manufacturing and the University of Maine in completing the Mako V.1, and I am so proud of the role that each played in supporting our nation’s armed forces. I look forward to successful trials by the Navy and the continued role Hodgdon Yachts will play in the production of this fine vessel.

Throughout its history, Hodgdon Yachts has produced over 460 boats, and ships, perhaps none more vital than its latest. The company’s work to keep shipbuilding alive and well in Maine is well documented, including President Tim Hodgdon’s involvement in the Maine’s Best Boats, an alliance whose goal is to present Maine’s boatbuilding industry to a wider global audience. I firmly believe that, given our seafaring history and established work ethic, Mainers build the best ships, and Hodgdon Yachts only further exemplifies this tradition. I commend everyone at Hodgdon Yachts for their remarkable accomplishment in the Mako V.1, and wish them well in their future boatbuilding endeavors.

STATMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Mr. MARTINEZ):

S. 2595. A bill to create a national licensing system for residential mortgage loan originators, to develop minimum standards of conduct to be enforced by State regulators, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today on behalf of myself and Senator MARTINEZ to introduce legislation that takes a major step forward in curbing the abusive lending practices which contributed to the subprime mortgage crisis. With foreclosures at record levels, the housing market in steady decline, a global credit crunch, and the economic near-recession, it is imperative that we act quickly to restore confidence in the American dream of home ownership.

Our legislation will eliminate bad actors from the mortgage business, and require that brokers and lenders meet minimum national standards which ensure they are professional, competent, and trustworthy.

First, it would create a comprehensive database of all residential mortgage loan originators. This includes mortgage brokers and lenders, as well as loan officers of national banks and their subsidiaries.

Second, it would establish national licensing standards to ensure that mortgage brokers and lenders are trained in lending, ethics, and consumer protection.

Our bill is similar to H.R. 3012, introduced in the House by Representative SPENCER BACHUS, the Ranking Member of the House Committee on Financial Services. The national licensing concept for loan originators has enjoyed bipartisan support and was included in the comprehensive mortgage reform bill, H.R. 3915, which recently passed the House.

A combination of low interest rates and sophisticated mortgage products, among other factors, helped increase home ownership to record levels just 3 years ago.

Subprime and exotic mortgages allowed millions of Americans—many with little or no down payment and questionable ability to purchase a home—by using adjustable-rate products with low initial monthly payments.

There was explosive growth in the use of these sub-prime loans: in just 2 years, from 2004 to 2006, the number of subprime mortgages in California increased 110 percent, from 273,000 to 573,000—29.4 percent of total mortgages in the State.

While the majority of lenders and brokers offered these mortgages in a responsible fashion, many others relied upon predatory lending tactics to place unsuspecting borrowers in mortgages they could not afford. Competitive pressures and lax oversight resulted in loans of increasingly poor quality being written.

To make matters worse, consumers were not adequately protected from bad actors in the mortgage industry.

The FBI recently reported that complaints of mortgage fraud have skyrocketed over the last few years.

In 2003, the number of suspicious activity reports reviewed by the FBI economic crimes unit numbered 3,000. The number of mortgage fraud complaints increased to 48,000 last year, representing a jump of 1500 percent.

Most mortgage brokers and non-bank lenders are only lightly regulated by State agencies. Standards of accountability have not kept pace with the increasing sophistication of the mortgage industry.

As adjustable-rate mortgages reset to higher rates, many American families find themselves in homes they can no longer afford. The percentage of homeowners currently behind on their mortgage payments is at its highest level in 21 years.

Mr. President, 2.2 million homeowners filed for foreclosure last year and many lenders have gone out of business or sought bankruptcy protection.

It is projected that as many as 2 million Americans will be forced to file for foreclosure before this crisis abates, representing $160 billion in lost equity. The Center for Responsible Lending has projected that one out of every five subprime loans issued between 2005 and 2006 will fail.

California has been especially hard hit. Mr. President, 5 of the 10 metropolitan areas with the highest foreclosure rate in the Nation are in California. The foreclosure rate in California is roughly twice the national average, with 1 foreclosure filing for every 258 households in the State.

Lenders repurchased 84,375 California homes last year, a sixfold increase from 12,672 in 2006. Default notices—the initial step in the foreclosure process—increased 143 percent between 2006 and 2007, rising from 104,977 in 2006 to 254,824 in 2007. In San Diego County alone, foreclosures were up 353 percent in 2007.

According to the FBI economic crimes unit, California has been identified as one of the top 10 “mortgage fraud hot spots” in the Nation.

American families are hurting, and Californians are at the center of the storm. With close to 500,000 adjustable-rate mortgages scheduled to reset in California over the next 2 years, the situation is likely to worsen in 2008.

The subprime mortgage crisis has threatened both the global economy and the American dream of home ownership. Accountability, professional standards, and oversight must be enhanced for everyone in the mortgage industry.

This bill will make it so, and will help to ensure such a crisis never happens again.

Specifically, the S.A.F.E. Mortgage Licensing Act would require that all residential mortgage loan originators are licensed, providing fingerprints, a summary of work experience, and consent for a background check to authorities.

Additionally, minimum criteria are established that individuals must meet to obtain a license, including: no felony

The U.S. enjoys good relations with Moldova and has encouraged Moldovan efforts to integrate with Euro-Atlantic institutions. Moldova is an active participant in Guam, Georgia, Ukraine, Azerbaijan and Moldova, a group of countries that has concluded a new trade agreement with the EU.

Since declaring independence from the Soviet Union in 1992, Moldova has enacted a series of democratic and free market reforms. Moldova became a member of the World Trade Organization. Until the U.S. terminates application of Jackson-Vanik on Moldova, the U.S. will not benefit from Moldova’s market access commitments nor can it resort to WTO dispute resolution mechanisms. While all other WTO members currently enjoy these benefits, the U.S. does not.

The Republic of Moldova has been evaluated every year and granted normal trade relations with the U.S. through annual presidential waivers from the effects of Jackson-Vanik. The Moldovan constitution guarantees its citizens the right to emigrate and this financial right is supported by the Minsk Group. Most emigration restrictions were eliminated in 1991 and virtually no problems with emigration have been reported in the 16 years since independence. More specifically, Moldova does not impose any emigration restrictions on members of the Jewish community. Synagogues function openly and without harassment. As a result, the Administration finds that Moldova is in full compliance with Jackson-Vanik’s provisions.

Since declaring independence from the Soviet Union in 1992, Moldova has enacted a series of democratic and free market reforms. Legislative elections in 2005 and local elections in 2007 generally complied with international standards in free elections. Moldova has also contributed constructively towards a resolution of the long-standing separatist conflict in the country’s Transnistria region, most recently by proposing a series of confidence-building measures and working groups.

The U.S. and Moldova have established a strong record of achievement in security cooperation. In 1997 the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program responded to a Moldovan request for assistance. The U.S. purchased and secured 14 nuclear-capable MIG–29Cs from Moldova. These fighter aircraft were built by the former Soviet Union for nuclear weapons. Moldova expressed concern that these aircraft were insecure due to the lack of funds and equipment necessary to ensure they were not stolen or smuggled out of the country. The price of a barrel of oil is reaching record highs and global supplies of oil continue to shrink. Continuing to top off, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve with highly valuable crude oil is putting upward pressure on oil prices and raising energy prices for consumers. I believe that we must take a "time out" on filling the reserve in order to send a signal to the market to reduce rising energy prices that are hitting American consumers’ pocketbooks. Lowering energy costs will put additional money back into consumers’ hands and help provide a real stimulus to our economy in my judgment.

Historically, the average price of oil used to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve has been about $27 per barrel. The Administration is now filling the Reserve with oil that averages over $90 per barrel, including highly sought after light sweet crude. This is a bad deal for American taxpayers and consumers.

On January 8, 2008, the Secretary of Energy sent me a letter stating that our Strategic Petroleum Reserve contains only 57 days of import protection and that the 50,000 barrels per day that they are filling with is a small amount of the oil used on the global market daily. This is only part of the story. The fact is that the SPR, combined with our private oil stocks and refining inventories, total more than 118 days of import protection. The current levels in our strategic petroleum stocks are more than adequate to meet our national treaty obligations requiring 90 days of protection for all OECD countries. I also disagree that taking 50,000 barrels per day off the market, especially light sweet crude, has no impact on energy prices. During the Clinton administration, Congress signaled that it wanted more than $200 million sold from the SPR in 1996, the price of oil dropped precipitously in the market.

The market looks at many factors, including our filling of the SPR. This is another reason we can afford to temporarily suspend filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Further, the Energy Policy Act of 2005 provides directional guidance to expand the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The provision in law clearly states that filling the reserve must be achieved “without incurring excessive cost or appreciably affecting the price of petroleum products to consumers.” I think filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve in today’s environment is indeed impacting the price of petroleum so that we must defer filling for now to ease pressure on the market.

Finally, the Congress enacted and the President signed historic legislation in December 2008—the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007. That legislation established a strong foundation to put our Nation on an alternative energy security pathway. This includes strong fuel economy standards and an expanded renewable fuels portfolio. The long-term vision provided by the Securing America’s Future Energy Coalition shows that the new legislation would reduce net oil imports by 1.75 million barrels per day by 2020, increasing to 2.26 million barrels per day in 2022 and rising thereafter. These estimates represent roughly half of the theoretical SPR drawdown capacity of 4.4 million barrels per day. They also increase the number of days of import protection by a given quantity of oil in the SPR. Thus, our enactment of historic Energy legislation will, over time, increase the insurance value of the SPR, even if the actual inventory level is frozen or slightly decreases.

I think filling the Strategic Reserve with oil that averages over $90 per barrel, that is, with higher valued crude oil, is not only unwise, but also unnecessary. The U.S. Government should suspend taking highly valuable oil off the market to store underground in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Strategic Petroleum Reserve Fill Suspension and Consumer Protection Act of 2008’’.

SEC. 2. SUSPENSION OF PETROLEUM ACQUISITION FOR STRATEGIC PETROLEUM RESERVE

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b) and notwithstanding any other provision of law, during calendar year 2008, the Secretary of Energy shall suspend acquisition of petroleum for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve through the royalty-in-kind program or any other acquisition method.

(b) RESUMPTION.—The Secretary may resume acquisition of petroleum for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve through the royalty-in-kind program or any other acquisition method under subsection (a) not earlier than 30 days after the date on which the Secretary notifies Congress that the Secretary has determined that the weighted average price of petroleum in the United States for the most recent 90-day period is $50 or less per barrel.

S. 2600. A bill to provide for the designation of a single ZIP code for Windsor Heights, Iowa; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, today I rise with my colleagues from Iowa to introduce a bill to provide the town of Windsor Heights, IA, its own ZIP code. Currently, the residents of Windsor Heights share three ZIP codes with surrounding communities, Des Moines, West Des Moines, and Urbandale. Consequently, confusion over ZIP code boundaries has caused delays in mail delivery, an increased amount of undelivered mail, and numerous complaints from frustrated citizens. Each day sensitive materials, including financial statements, credit cards, Social Security checks, and passports pass through the mail stream. It is imperative that residents are able to rely on the safe and timely delivery of these documents.

The complications from this problem reach beyond mail delivery. During the recent Iowa Caucuses, residents living in Windsor Heights Precinct 2 were directed to the wrong place when looking for their caucus location. Windsor Heights residents who use the 50322 ZIP code—one which is shared with neighboring Urbandale—were incorrectly advised that the caucus location was in Urbandale, rather than Windsor Heights. Furthermore, because insurance rates are based on ZIP codes, residents pay premiums based on neighboring Des Moines and Urbandale, rather than Windsor Heights, making it more difficult for providers to sell car insurance to residents.

City officials have tried in vain for almost 5 years to acquire a ZIP code for Windsor Heights. It is my hope that the Senate will quickly act upon this legislation to enable them to do so.

S. 2601. A bill to require the Secretary of Agriculture to convey to King and Kittitas Counties Fire District No. 51 a certain parcel of real property for use as a site for a new Snoqualmie Pass fire and rescue station; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Snoqualmie Pass Land Conveyance Act, together with Senator MURRAY. This bill would transfer an acre and a half of Forest Service land to the King and Kittitas Counties Fire District No. 51, also known as Snoqualmie Pass Fire and Rescue. This land would be conveyed at no cost but would be provided by the Fire District specifically for the construction of a new fire station or it would revert back to the Federal Government.

Snoqualmie Pass Fire and Rescue serves a portion of two counties on both sides of the Cascade Mountains along Interstate 90, a community of 350 full-time residents that peaks to 1,500 during the ski season. Additionally, the ski area estimates 20,000 patrons on busy weekends, and the Washington Department of Transportation estimates that up to 60,000 vehicles travel through the fire district on a busy day making it the busiest mountain highway in the country.

This area is also the major transportation corridor for goods and services between eastern and western Washington. The all-volunteer Fire Department averages over 300 calls a year with about a 10 percent annual increase in volume. The volunteer fire department triple the amount of calls a typical all-volunteer fire department would respond to in a year. Mr. President, percent of those incidents are for non-tax paying residents. Consequently, the Fire Department has the characteristics of a large city with the limited resources of a small community.

In recent years, this area has been the scene of snowstorms, multi-vehicle accidents, and even avalanches. The Fire District is often the first responder to incidents in the area, which is prone to rock slides and avalanches. The Forest Service. They operate out of an old school building that was not designed to be a fire station. Through their hard work and dedication, they have served the community ably despite this building’s many shortcomings. However, with traffic on the rise and the need for emergency services in the area growing, the Fire District needs to move to a true fire station.

The Fire District has identified a nearby site that would better serve the public safety needs at the Pass. This location would provide easy access to the interstate in either direction, reducing response times. The parcel is on Forest Service property, immediately adjacent to a freeway interchange, between a frontage road and the interstate itself. The parcel was formerly a disposal site during construction of the freeway and is now a gravel lot.

I recognize that the Forest Service does not normally support conveyances of land free of charge. However, I believe an exception should be made in this particular instance because of the important public service provided by the Fire District, the heavy traffic and emergency calls created by non-residents in the area, the distance of Snoqualmie Pass from other communities with emergency services, and because of the high amount of federal land ownership in the area, which severely limits the local tax base. In fact, the Forest Service has acquired 20,000 acres in King and Kittitas counties at a cost of more than $52 million over just the last 30 years.

Passage of this legislation would not guarantee that a new station would be built. The Fire District would have to work hard to gather the financing that would be required from State and local sources, as well as federal grants or loans. However, the conveyance of this site at no cost would not normally support conveyances of land free of charge. However, I believe an exception should be made in this particular instance because of the important public service provided by the Fire District, the heavy traffic and emergency calls created by non-residents in the area, the distance of Snoqualmie Pass from other communities with emergency services, and because of the high amount of federal land ownership in the area, which severely limits the local tax base. In fact, the Forest Service has acquired 20,000 acres in King and Kittitas counties at a cost of more than $52 million over just the last 30 years.

I am confident this can be done with little or no impact to the environment. Over the last year, following the introduction of this legislation in the House of Representatives, H.R. 1285, there were ongoing discussions in Washington State to address some lingering issues related to this conveyance. I am pleased those discussions reached resolution. I am also pleased that discussions with my staff, Senator Murray’s staff, and staff of Energy and Natural Resources Committee led to an amendment to H.R. 1285 before it passed the House of Representatives that would better tailor the conveyance to both the environmental and the emergency response needs at the Pass by reducing the amount of land to be conveyed from 3 acres to 1.5 acres.

It is my understanding that there are offers of support to construct a new fire station from state and local officials, the Cascade Land Conservancy, Snoqualmie Fire District, Sierra Club, and Conservation Northwest to identify opportunities for off-site habitat acquisition.

I appreciate the efforts of Senator Murray and my colleagues on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee to review this issue and bring this bill forward. I look forward to continuing to work with the community at the Pass and my colleagues to improve public safety needs at the Pass by reducing the amount of land to be conveyed from 3 acres to 1.5 acres.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be placed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2601

By Mr. SALAZAR:

S. 2602. A bill to amend the Department of the Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2008, to terminate the authority of the Forest Service to conduct amounts from certain States; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation—a companion bill will be introduced in the House by my colleagues Representatives SALAZAR and Udall—to restore Colorado’s share of oil and gas leasing revenue.

The 2008 Omnibus Appropriations bill includes a provision, requested by the Bush Administration, to reduce the share of mineral royalties paid to Colorado and other western states. Specifically, the administration’s proposal to reduce the State’s share of mineral revenues from 50 percent to 48 percent does not serve the taxpayers who fund the government nor does it serve the states that allow energy production to happen within their border. Colorado is blessed with an abundance of natural resources, including its deposits of oil and natural gas. Our State’s economy benefits from the production of these resources, and we deserve to continue receiving our fair share of the revenue.

The administration attempts to justify this reduction as necessary to defray the administrative costs related to the management of onshore leasing activity. We believe this assertion is unfounded and oppose any attempt to tax the money that is rightfully owed to our State in order to pay for more Federal bureaucracy. This is money that our state could use to help mitigate the effects of increased oil and gas drilling activity and for other important State priorities, such as education and health care.

Our legislation repeals the administration’s money grab and restores each State’s share to its full, equal 50 percent of mineral leasing revenues. We cannot allow the Federal government to take oil and gas leasing revenues intended to help the communities of Colorado. This language was inserted late into last year’s omnibus spending bill and must be corrected. Our legislation does just that.
Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Ms. MURKOWSKI, and Mr. HAGEL) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

HONORING EARL WILLIAMS

HON. BARBARA LEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Ms. LEE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the brilliant life of Mr. Earl Williams. Earl was a caring friend, family member, and leader in the community. He will be greatly missed, but the positive impact he has left will remain in the hearts of all who had the honor of knowing him.

It is with a deep sense of sadness that I rise today to deliver condolences to the family and friends of a great man, a brilliant human being and a true servant of God. However, it is also with a deep sense of gratitude to Earl’s family and friends for sharing this loyal, patriotic, and compassionate man with us that I rise to celebrate his life and honor his legacy.

As a person committed to those who are most vulnerable and most in need in our world, Earl was committed to creating safe havens for individuals who needed the love and kindness of their neighbors to see them through difficult times. He worked tirelessly as an administrator and part owner of Garden Plaza Convalescent Home in Los Angeles, CA. Earl was also the founder of Liberty Child Care Center in Chicago.

His wide reach—involving in communities as different as Chicago and Los Angeles—and his limitless compassion drove his intentions to service humankind, and to do the Lord’s work on this earth.

Earl was a true patriot, serving his country as an outstanding and dedicated member of the United States Army. He and his family were proud of his service, and our country owes him a debt of gratitude for his commitment to his country.

As a devoted family man, Earl always demonstrated his unwavering and unconditional love, loyalty, and devotion to each and every member of his family. He was a true role model to those whose lives he touched in so many ways.

Today, I join with Earl’s family and friends in bidding him farewell. I salute Earl Williams for a life well lived. Let us keep his legacy alive by recommitting our lives to his work and to his values to make this a better world. May his beautiful spirit continue to live and guide our lives, helping us to be true to our family, our friends, our community, our country, and most importantly, to our God.

Mr. GRAVES. Madam Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize Melissa Boosman, a very special young woman who has exemplified the finest qualities of citizenship and leadership by taking an active part in the Girl Scouts of America, Troop 1262, and by earning the most prestigious Gold Award.

Less than 1 percent of all Girl Scouts in the United States earn this prestigious award, the highest award in Girl Scouting. It symbolizes outstanding accomplishments in the areas of leadership, community service, career planning, and personal development.

Melissa has been very active with her troop, participating in many Scout activities. Over the many years Melissa has been involved with Scouting, she has not only earned numerous merit badges, but the respect of her family, peers, and community.

Madam Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in commending Melissa Boosman for her accomplishments with the Girl Scouts of America and for her efforts put forth in achieving the highest distinction in Girl Scouting, the Gold Award.

HON. THOMAS M. REYNOLDS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. REYNOLDS. Madam Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Clarence Center Volunteer Fire Company of Clarence, New York. For a century the members of the Clarence Hose Company have been volunteering to protect their neighbors.

The Clarence Center Volunteer Fire Company became the first fire company in the town of Clarence in 1908. The company began as a stock company and was able to purchase a hand drawn hose cart and chemical fire extinguishers. Land for a fire hall was donated to the fire company by a local businessman, and fundraising for the construction began in July 1908 with the first firemen’s picnic in Clarence.

Today, California’s Ninth Congressional District joins with the communities of Los Angeles, CA, Chicago, IL, and all the places where Earl Williams’s love touched the lives of those who knew him, to salute and honor a great human being. We extend our deepest condolences to Earl’s family. Thank you for sharing his great spirit with so many. May his soul rest in peace.

HONORING DR. RICHARD WITKOWSKI, SUPERINTENDENT OF THE GARDEN CITY PUBLIC SCHOOLS

HON. THADDEUS G. MCCOTTER OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. MCCOTTER. Madam Speaker, today I rise to honor and acknowledge Dr. Richard Witkowski, Superintendent of the Garden City Public Schools, upon his retirement from a distinguished 41-year career in education.

For just over four decades, Superintendent Witkowski has served the citizens of Wayne County. Richard began his 39-year tenure with the Garden City Public Schools in 1969 after 2 years with the Gibraltor schools. Throughout his distinguished career with the Garden City Public Schools, Richard served as both an educator and administrator. Mr. Witkowski began as a mathematics and science teacher at Garden City East High School in 1969 before moving across town and becoming Assistant Principal at Garden City West High School in 1971. Mr. Witkowski discovered an innate talent for administration, being promoted to director in the central office in 1974, business manager for the district in 1985, associate superintendent, and superintendent in 2001.

Superintendent Witkowski will be best remembered for his dedication, both to his job and community. Shortly after his promotion to superintendent, Richard was tested with several crises, including the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and a bacterial meningitis outbreak at the high school, which resulted in a first-ever schoolwide inoculation of the students. He also oversaw the rebuilding of the district’s five elementary schools, assisting school staff in moving students to buses, which would take students to their temporary classrooms. Witkowski remains active in the community as a member of the Garden City Rotary and the Garden City Chamber of Commerce. Richard has served as president of both organizations and currently serves as treasurer of the Rotary. Superintendent Witkowski will also continue his commitment to education and connection with students through the classes he teaches at Madonna University in Livonia.

Madam Speaker, for 41 years Superintendent Richard Witkowski has faithfully served Michigan citizens of all ages. As he enters the next phase of his life, he leaves behind a legacy of dedication, integrity, and excellence. Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Superintendent Richard Witkowski upon his retirement and recognizing his years of loyal service to our community’s and country’s future.

TRIBUTE TO NATIONAL CHILDREN’S DENTAL HEALTH MONTH

HON. MICHAEL K. SIMPSON OF IDAHO IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. SIMPSON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to National Children’s Dental Health Month. Each February, the American Dental Association sponsors National Children’s Dental Health Month to raise awareness about the importance of oral health. As a part of their awareness efforts, dentists and dental hygienists from across the country and in my home State of Idaho join together and volunteer their time to provide free care to children.

As a dentist, I understand the need for children to receive proper dental care. This includes going to the dentist regularly for check-ups and treatment when problems arise. Oral health is critical to a person’s overall health and means more than healthy teeth. Research continues to show that many diseases and conditions show themselves in the mouth. For people who don’t have access to dental care, oral disease is almost 100 percent inevitable—and almost 100 percent preventable.

This is particularly heartbreaking when it affects our children. Children with poor oral health can have problems eating, sleeping properly, paying attention in school and even smiling, because they suffer constant pain. Unfortunately, many of us don’t realize the extent and severity of untreated dental disease in children.

In my State of Idaho, over 35 percent of children lack dental insurance. More than 25 percent of elementary school-aged children in Idaho suffer from untreated tooth decay. If the problems go untreated, a child will often end up in a hospital emergency or operating room, which costs far more than a trip to the dentist. Hundreds of dentists and oral healthcare providers in Idaho are acutely aware of the country’s need to provide their time and energy to help this cause, and I graciously thank them. While National Children’s Dental Health Month will not solve the issues of access to oral healthcare by itself, it is a great opportunity to raise awareness of the importance of oral health and provide care to our most important and vulnerable resource—our children.

NICHOLAS ROYCE, FIFTY YEARS AND STILL FIGHTING THE GOOD FIGHT

HON. HOWARD L. BERMAN OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Speaker, the name Nicholas Royce deserves to be added to the list of dedicated Americans who exemplify the spirit of achievement. He has earned this recognition for his long and outstanding career as a performer, and his devotion to many entertainment industry humanitarian causes, typifying the altruism that is so much a part of the American character.

Of special significance is the fact that through his life, he has been in the forefront with the independent efforts and advocacy for civil, constitutional, human and spiritual rights. He was born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania to Theodore and Anastasia Vlangas, natives of Sparta, Greece. At the age of 6 years old his family moved to Baltimore, Maryland where he became aware that this faith and origin were different from most Americans. Challenged by ethnic and religious obstacles, he became motivated to learn every truth he could about his faith and his origin.

With the encouragement of his sister Stella, he made his show business debut at the Lord Baltimore Hotel and followed that with a successful tour of the east coast during school vacation, and all at the age of 14, and with his parents’ blessing.

After high school he entered the Armed Forces and entertained WWII vets in the Army base hospitals in the United States and Japan. Because of his ethnic look he became known as the Greek Fred Astaire in G.I. clothing.

The Armed Forces had limited religious choices; Protestant, Catholic and Jewish. Where’s a poor Greek Orthodox kid to go for religious salvation? Thanks to Nicholas and his late friend Senator Leverett Saltonstall, representing 500,000 Orthodox Catholics who fought and died for the constitution, a bill reached Congress in 1955 to create such a place in the military. Today servicemen wear tags designating Eastern Orthodox and have Orthodox chaplains. Thirty-three States quickly recognized Eastern Orthodoxy as a major faith.

After he left the service, the American Legion’s Pennsylvanian district honored Royce for his continued efforts as an entertainer to bring joy to veterans in hospitals.

After his visit to Turkey in 1965, Royce was a tireless caller to learn every truth. St. Sophia Cathedral in Istanbul to an open house of worship instead of a museum. It was converted to a mosque in 1453 and Royce changed history with that campaign. Thanks to Royce, “the Orthodox Christian cry for help” has been taken to the United Nations human rights office in Geneva, States’ parliament, European Union, and to every religious and world leader and to Every President since the Carter administration.

Ms. LEE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the extraordinary life of Dr. Asa G. Hilliard III (Baffour Amankwata II). A devoted father, husband, mentor, and world-renowned humanitarian who worked tirelessly and inspired us all, Dr. Hilliard will be sorely missed by us all. Asa passed away on August 13, 2007.

An accomplished academic and devoted professor, Dr. Hilliard affected the lives of thousands of students. He was not only a mentor in his community, but a hero in the African Diaspora Movement. Dr. Hilliard began his academic career at the University of Denver, where he earned a B.A. in Education Psychology, an M.A. in counseling, and a Ed.D in Education Psychology at the University of Denver.

Dr. Hilliard launched his professional career at the University of Denver, teaching at the College of Education and in Philosophy colloquium of the Centennial Scholars Honor Program. After moving with his family to California, Dr. Hilliard dedicated 18 years of his life to San Francisco State University. During this time, he served as Department Chair for two years, Dean of Education for eight years while also working as a consultant for the Peace Corps. Dr. Hilliard’s influence and reach was truly global. As he mentored and taught students in the United States, he also made constant visits to Africa, serving as the Superintendent of Schools in Monrovia, Liberia for two years.

Dr. Hilliard was a founding member of the association for the study of Classical African Civilization, serving as its first Vice President. He was co-developer of a popular educational television series Free Your Mind, Return to the Source: African Origins and produced many videotapes and educational materials on African-American History through his production company, Weeding Education Productions. Dr. Hilliard was so groundbreaking and forward-thinking in his approach to education that several of his methods have become national models in the field.

Dr. Hilliard was a purposeful man with an unquenchable passion for education and the preservation of his culture’s history and traditions. Without reservation, Dr. Asa Hilliard significantly changed the world with his dedication to the preservation, study, and spiritual understanding of Africa, African Americans, and Africans in Diaspora throughout the world.

One of my long standing desires was to travel to Egypt with Dr. Hilliard on one of his study tours. Each time I saw him I mentioned this and we both were very excited about the prospect. Due to my hectic schedule, this never happened. As God will have it, I was in Ghana, West Africa, at the Cape Coast Slave Castle when I learned from Reverend Jeremiah Wright through Congressman Jesse Jackson, Jr. that Asa had passed the day before in Egypt. Like many, I was devastated and saddened, yet thankful to his family and to God for his amazing life. I reflected upon his death in Egypt in a prayerful manner, and took pause to commemorate this great soul.

His loving wife, Mrs. Patsy Jo Hilliard, has quoted Asa as repeatedly saying, “It is not enough for us to be bright and competent. We must also have purpose and direction. It is not enough for us to ‘make it’ on our own—to save ourselves. As Abena says in Arma’s novel, Two Thousand Seasons, ‘There is no self to save without the rest of us.’” In this way, Dr. Hilliard touched and influenced the lives of all who were privileged to come into contact with him.

On behalf of California’s 9th Congressional District, we salute and honor a great human being, our beloved Asa G. Hilliard III. We extend our deepest condolences to Asa’s family, and our deepest gratitude to them for sharing this great spirit with us. May his soul rest in peace, and may we continue to benefit from the positive impact he left on the world.

TRIBUTE TO EGGERTSVILLE HOSE COMPANY

HON. THOMAS M. REYNOLDS
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. REYNOLDS. Madam Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Eggertsville Hose Company of Amherst, New York. For a century the members of the Eggertsville Hose have been volunteering to protect their neighbors.

The Eggertsville Hose began in 1906 in a corner meat packing store after a series of household fires could not be extinguished. The two home blazes were unable to be controlled by the bucket brigade, the fire fighting team at the time. Residents of Eggertsville then banded together to form an organization that would provide better fire protection to the community. This fire company was incorporated in May 1908. The Eggertsville Hose was the first fire company in the town of Amherst outside of the Village of Williamsville. Fighting to protect the members of their community is the main priority of this 100 percent volunteer fire district. No matter what it takes these volunteers rise to the call of duty.

The Eggertsville Hose is an indispensable part of the Amherst Community. The members of the Hose have dedicated countless hours of service to assist their neighbors. As the population in the district grows the Eggertsville Hose advances along with the rising need for their service. In 1995 the fire station was moved to the center of the district which allows the Hose to respond to emergencies in all areas in a shortened period of time. The new station location along with new equipment and technology makes it possible for the volunteer firefighters to be increasingly effective in their firefighting capabilities.

The citizens of Eggertsville know that they will be protected by the brave firefighters of the Eggertsville Hose whenever disasters occur or fires flare up. Madam Speaker, in

At this milestone in her life, I would like to take the time to commend the commitment to community and education. I extend my best wishes for her retirement and thank her for her invaluable friendship.

HON. AL GREEN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, January 29, 2008

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Madam Speaker, today, Congress passed a $146 billion, bipartisan economic stimulus bill that will quickly send hundreds of dollars to poor and middle-class working families while offering businesses one-time incentives to invest in new equipment. Although there is much more to do if we are to meet the needs of American families, including extending unemployment benefits and food stamps, I believe that this stimulus is an important first step in our effort to help hardworking Americans.

This broad-based stimulus package will provide tax relief of up to $600 per individual and $1,200 per married couple plus an additional $300 per child. Recovery rebate checks could be sent as early as mid-May, getting money to Americans who will spend it immediately to re-invigorate the economy. In Texas alone, approximately 8.6 million families will receive rebates averaging over $500. Nationally, over 111 million checks will result, totaling $115 billion in rebates, checks, including 35 million with earnings too low to pay income taxes. More than 19 million of these families are with children and 13 million are struggling seniors. Nearly $50 billion of the rebate will go to middle-income Americans and their families. In total, everyone estimates that each dollar of broad tax cuts leads to $1.26 in economic growth.

The economic stimulus bill also helps address the crisis we are facing in our home mortgage market by permitting more borrowers facing defaults to refinace through the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). For 2008, the bill increases the FHA loan limits up to $729,750 from $362,790 to expand affordable mortgage loan opportunities for families at risk of foreclosure. In addition, the bill also enhances credit availability in the mortgage market by including a 1-year increase in the conforming loan limits for single family homes from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac from $417,000 up to $729,750 for 2008. These increases in loan limits will benefit areas where housing costs are higher than the national average.

Mortgage rates on loans that currently exceed these loan limits are much more expensive than for smaller loans. These higher rates have hurt demand for housing in high-cost areas of the country. The provisions in the stimulus will lower borrowing costs for many Americans, including middle-class families in high-cost cities to those who may be facing foreclosure. More importantly, this will allow more home owners to refinance their existing mortgages, thereby increasing the effectiveness of the interest rate freeze for some subprime borrowers brokered by the Treasury in December. This is because more borrowers will be able to take advantage of the freeze to refinance into new FHA loans. Finally, this bill will promote small business investment in equipment, which will spur job creation and growth.

The bipartisan plan doubles the amount small businesses can immediately write off their taxes for capital investment made in 2008 from $125,000 to $250,000, for purchases of new equipment of up to $800,000 (from $500,000). It also provides immediate tax relief for all businesses to invest in new plants and equipment by speeding up depreciation provisions, so that firms can write off an additional 50 percent for investments purchased in 2008.

While more needs to be done, I am confident that this bipartisan economic stimulus package will help many American families in the weeks and months ahead.

IN HONOR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF DELAWARE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE OF DELAWARE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to pay tribute to the University of Delaware Department of Public Safety for being recognized by the Commission for Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, an independent organization created by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives, the National Sheriffs’ Association and the Police Executive Research Forum. The importance of public safety officers within our community, and particularly within the state of Delaware, cannot be underscored enough. I am proud to represent a State that is home to such selfless and dedicated officers as those at the University of Delaware Department of Public Safety.

The University of Delaware is now a member of an elite group of public safety agencies in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Barbados that have received this prestigious, international award. The men and women of the Department have shown great dedication and commitment to providing quality service and protection to all students, faculty, and staff at the University of Delaware campus.

Employing only a total of forty-two officers on its Wilmington and Lewes campuses with approximately twenty security offices, the Department of Public Safety has no easy task as the University of Delaware has a large enrollment with students living on and off campus in the town of Newark. Despite this challenging task, the Department continues to provide the highest quality protection and service to the University of Delaware community.

The citizens of Delaware deserve to know that the University of Delaware Department of Public Safety, has taken extraordinary steps to demonstrate their professionalism and pride in delivering quality public service to the University of Delaware community. I am tremendously proud of the Department of Public Safety and would like to commend and thank the men and women of the Department for the sacrifices and commitment that they make on a daily basis. The bravery and hard work of all those involved with this outstanding organization is responsible for making Delaware a safer place to live.
THANKING MS. ELAINE COMER FOR HER SERVICE TO THE HOUSE

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Madam Speaker, on the occasion of her retirement in January 2008, we rise to thank Ms. Elaine Comer for 32 years of outstanding service to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Elaine began her career at the House as a Programmer Analyst at House Information Resources (HIR) and has held and mastered many positions, each with increasing responsibility as she continuously served this great institution as a valuable employee of HIR within the Office of the Chief Administrator.

In the mid-1970s, when the House first began using minicomputers, Elaine designed, developed, and implemented the first House-developed Member Office Support System, as well as mission-critical legislative systems. Elaine was selected to represent the House in a cross-government team with the Senate and the White House that resulted in the House-wide implementation of an integrated Local Area Network to support House committees. These accomplishments led to her instrumental involvement in an HIR-wide PC LAN implementation automating project management and time accounting.

Elaine’s management abilities were showcased as she oversaw project support to 30 mission-critical House applications, provided key coordination in the modernization of the Data Center, was appointed the HIR representative to the CAO Business Process Improvement Team, and led the Process and Procedures project that supports the House Business Continuity/Disaster Recovery Program. Elaine’s contributions to the House culminated in her expert management of the Configuration Management and Quality Assurance programs for the CAO.

On behalf of the entire House community, we extend congratulations to Elaine for her many years of dedication and outstanding contributions to the U.S. House of Representatives. We wish Elaine many wonderful years in fulfilling her retirement dreams.

HONORING NATIONAL GUARD DAY CELEBRATIONS AT THE INDIANA STATEHOUSE

HON. BARON P. HILL OF INDIANA
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. HILL. Madam Speaker, today, the Indiana National Guard is hosting a National Guard Day at the Indiana Statehouse. This event will highlight our Hoosier citizen soldiers’ capabilities, and provide an update as to their status as they prepare to deploy to Iraq. The event will also show strong support for the families of our Hoosier Guardmembers.

I applaud Maj. Gen. Umbarger’s work with the Indiana National Guard. He has been an unwavering champion of the Indiana National Guard. His efforts are there to show support for Guardmembers and their families, as well as to help elected leaders and citizens better understand the role of the National Guard.

On this day, I too would like to express my support and deepest thanks to our Guardmembers, and their families. Many of these brave men and women are preparing to leave their homes, their loved ones, and their lives statewide in order to defend our Nation. Their commitment to duty and steadfast determination to defend all and all Americans alike. They all deserve our most heartfelt thanks and admiration. Our Hoosier Guardmembers and their families will be in my prayers.

HONORING THE BLUE STAR MOTHERS OF AMERICA CHAPTER #101 AND THE MARINES’ MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

HON. MIKE THOMPSON
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. THOMPSON of California, Madam Speaker, together with Representatives Miller, Stark, Tauscher and McNerney, I rise today to honor and thank the California East Bay Chapter of Blue Star Mothers of America and the Marines’ Memorial Association. With the support of the House of Representatives Association and Major General Michael Myatt (Ret.), the Blue Star Mothers are hosting their third event for Gold Star parents who have lost a child in service to our country.

The East Bay Blue Star Moms was founded when Patty Martin, Peggy Conkin and Nancy Ecker reached out to each other for support after the September 11th attacks. Each had a son in the Army, and in November, 2001, they established a support group for military mothers in the East Bay area. Membership has since grown to over 150 mothers, and they are affiliated with the national Blue Star Mothers of America. The East Bay chapter sponsors a variety of activities in addition to the Gold Star event, including providing care packages for troops stationed overseas, and Operation Post Card, connecting local community groups with soldiers abroad through letter writing campaigns. The moms have also taken their good works to veterans in our community through regular visits to the VA hospitals at Livermore, Palo Alto and Martinez.

The Marines’ Memorial Association in San Francisco was founded in 1946 as a living memorial to all the Marines who had lost their lives in the Pacific during World War II. Since then, its mission has expanded to include all branches of the United States Armed Services, including members of National Guard and reservists, and the U.S. Merchant Marine. The Memorial is currently led by Major General Michael Myatt, USMC (Ret.). General Myatt has overseen the development of the Memorial as a facility that both honors fallen service members and actively promotes the interests and needs of men and women currently in service.

The third Gold Star Parent gathering will bring together hundreds of parents from all over California for a 2-day event to honor the families of the fallen and allow them to celebrate the lives of their children and mourn their loss. The event encourages families to come together in private and share their experiences with others who are experiencing the same loss. The Marines’ Memorial Association provides the facilities and meals for the event at a considerably reduced cost, and additionally lends support to the participants throughout the weekend. The Blue Star Moms contribute an incredible effort to make the Gold Star event successful, including personally reaching out to all the Gold Star families in the state, and underwriting expenses for families who might not otherwise be able to make the trip.

Madam Speaker and colleagues, at this time it is appropriate that we thank the Blue Star Moms and the Marines’ Memorial Association for the hard work and dedication they have shown to sponsor the Gold Star parents event. Their efforts have provided an important forum for these families to come together and the event is greatly appreciated by the families who have participated.

TRIBUTE TO JACK FITZGERALD AND FITZGERALD AUTO MALLS

HON. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN OF MARYLAND
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a constituent for child passenger safety, my constituent Jack Fitzgerald, President of Fitzgerald Auto Malls. As you may know, motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death for children ages 2 to 14 and the leading cause of injury-related death for children under age 5. We know that when installed and used correctly, child safety seats and safety belts can prevent injury and save lives. In fact, young children restrained in child safety seats have an 80 percent lower risk of fatal injury than those who are unrestrained.

In order to ensure that child safety seats are properly used and installed, car seat check-up events, like those sponsored by Safe Kids Worldwide, are essential. At these events, child passenger safety technicians teach families how to safely transport their children and help make sure everyone in a vehicle is buckled up correctly on every ride. On average, technicians spend about 30 minutes with each child. These events, most of which are open to the public, are conducted by Safe Kids coalitions in central locations such as automobile dealerships, hospitals, community centers and shopping centers.

Since 1996, Safe Kids Worldwide has partnered with General Motors to help change the way parents and caregivers learn about child passenger safety. More than 13 million people have been reached by the Safe Kids Buckle Up Program and, to date, there have been more than 44,000 events that bring much needed car seat inspection services and education to families across the country.

Safe Kids is well on its way to checking one related child safety seat. Part of this success can be attributed to Jack Fitzgerald of Fitzgerald Auto Malls. In February 1999, Jack teamed up with Safe Kids Montgomery County in my home state of Maryland to hold a car seat check-up event. At that event, Stephen Guarino, who was then 5 years old, was involved in a car crash. In fact, it just one day before the family vehicle was hit by a truck. Mrs. Guarino and the police officers on the scene credit the saving of Stephen's life in that crash to the services received at the check-up event.

Since that incident, Fitzgerald Auto Malls has hosted hundreds of check-up events. Working with Safe Kids Montgomery County, local government agencies, and police and fire departments, Fitzgerald Auto Malls has inspected more than 55,000 child safety seats. The dealership hosts monthly car seat inspections free of charge for anyone in the community. If the monthly events are not compatible with a family’s schedule, that family is encouraged to call the dealership to schedule a private appointment. This service is only possible because Jack Fitzgerald has personally paid for his employees to become nationally certified car seat technicians. In fact, more than 80 Fitzgerald Auto Mall employees have been trained to check a child’s car seat for misuse.

I am honored to commend Jack Fitzgerald and the entire Fitzgerald Auto Malls family for their outstanding contributions to and involvement in our community. I applaud them for being a role model for all public/private partnerships and for their steadfast commitment and determination to keeping kids safe on our Nation’s roads. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Jack Fitzgerald, a remarkable advocate for America’s children.

HONORING HARTFORD, KENTUCKY

HON. ED WHITFIELD OF KENTUCKY

Wednesday, February 6, 2008
Mr. WHITFIELD. Madam Speaker, I rise in recognition of the city of Hartford, Kentucky, located in the First Congressional District of Kentucky. On February 3, 1808, Hartford was settled in an area that was once a scene of bloody strife between American Indians and 18th century pioneers. There is evidence that a settlement was made at the present site of Hartford in 1782 and this was the first fortified settlement in the lower Green River Valley of western Kentucky.

The presence of the town’s name is uncertain. There is one tradition that a man named Hart ran a ferry there, hence the name Hart’s Ford, which later became Hartford. Another tradition found in reminiscences of early times is that the town was so called because animals including deer, the male of which the English forebears called a “Hart” had a regular crossing or “Ford” at the location of Hartford on the banks of Rough Creek.

The town of Hartford was formally established on April 3, 1806, as a settlement designated and laid out for a town, in the county of Ohio, on Rough creek, on the land of the late Gabriel Madison, inclusive of the out and in lots by an Act of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, enacted February 3, 1806.

Madam Speaker, Hartford has a rich history from its pioneer founding to the battle of brother against brother during the Civil War. Some of Hartford’s famous past residents include Virgil Earp, brother of Wyatt Earp of the OK Corral acclaim, and impressionist painter Charles Courtney Curran, whose works hang in the Smithsonian Museum of Modern Art.

Hartford, Kentucky, is a progressive community welcoming those from near and far to visit or make their home in this inviting community. Opportunities from tourism to high tech industry attract visitors and new residents in this community located in the heart of western Kentucky.

Madam Speaker, it is with great pride that I bring to the attention of this House the historical significance and sense of community that the citizens of Hartford, Kentucky, have as they celebrate the 200th anniversary of a great American city.

HONORING CMW & ASSOCIATES

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS
OF ILLINOIS

Wednesday, February 6, 2008
Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to the contribution of a small business in my district to granting foreign workers their certifications necessary to work in this country. CMW & Associates, a female owned and 8(a) company located in Springfield, Illinois, has assisted the Department of Labor in Chicago in assuring that per Secretary Chao’s directive, there is no longer a labor certification backlog.

Recently, Secretary Chao commended her staff at the Office of Foreign Worker Certification. “Behind every application is a person or group of people, waiting to come to our country and work in jobs for which no qualified U.S. worker can be found. The Permanent Labor Certification program is really proud about people—their hopes and their dreams of greater opportunity, and that reunification with their families.” Secretary Chao presented a certificate of recognition to Bill Carlson, Administrator of the Office of Foreign Labor Certification for his leadership role.

I want to recognize the Department of Labor for its exemplary work in expediting the processing of granting foreign workers their certifications necessary to work in this country, both on a permanent and temporary basis. And I want to thank Charlene Turczeny, CEO of CMW & Associates for her role in making sure America is able to obtain the skilled workforce necessary to make U.S. employers successful.

As is often the case, small businesses play an integral role in the success of our government’s ability to achieve its goals.

SPEECH OF

HON. TOM UDALL

Tuesday, January 29, 2008
Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Madam Speaker, a lot of brilliant economists have spent a lot of time over the last few weeks telling the American people what we already know: our economy needs help. The debate goes on about whether today’s economic conditions will become an official recession, but most people aren’t interested in official definitions. We want help now.

Fortunately, members of the New Direction Congress, meeting on a bipartisan basis, have developed an economic stimulus package that will get America moving again.

There’s a lot to like about the proposed stimulus package.

The package will put money in the hands of working families who need it most. By helping families too poor to pay income tax, this proposal shows both compassion and common sense. We know that poor families are more likely to spend their rebate checks immediately, and that means more money flowing into our economy more rapidly.

And, finally, the package will not purchase short term growth at the expense of long term prosperity. This legislation does what must be done, but, more importantly, it does no more than is necessary. It contains no giveaways to any interest group, no pork barrel spending and no rushed changes in our tax code. The bill provides targeted, temporary stimulus. As a result, it will secure our present without burdening our future with debt.

But the package that we pass today is not perfect.

We have helped millions of families, but too many seniors still need our support. We have provided relief to millions of workers, but those who have seen their jobs disappear still face an uncertain future they did nothing to earn and can do little to change. We have provided temporary relief to millions of taxpayers, but we must renew the clean energy tax credits that give us hope for a stronger national economy and a more sustainable world.

Our work is not over. We should celebrate today’s accomplishment, but we must recognize that it is a first step, not a final one. Let’s take the bipartisan spirit that has been kindled in the House and use it to do the work that remains to be done.

HONORING JOAN MANN

HON. DEVIN NUNES

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008
Mr. NUNES. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the life of a wonderful woman. and friend. Joan was a devoted wife to Earl Mann of 49 years and mother to two daughters, Paula and Laura. For 29 years, she worked for the Woodlake Elementary School as a teacher’s aide and was active in the Parent-Teachers Association. She served on the Tulare County Grand Jury, was active in her church and served as the local representative of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. She loved to write poetry, sometimes about events or people in her life. The following poem is one of her family’s favorites.

I’VE SAILS UPON LIFE’S SEAS
I’ve walked upon the shores of life
A-kicking up the white foam
I’ve met each eye that chanced my way
And shook each friendly hand.
I’ve sailed upon the seas
To cross to other places
And when my days on earth are through
God grant me one last thought
I’d love to do it all again

IN HONOR OF DARRELL L. FANT,
DIRECTOR, HIGHLAND PARK DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

HON. PETE SESSIONS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to recognize Darrell L. Fant, Director of the Highland Park Department of Public Safety (HPDPS).

After years of dedicated service, Darrell will be retiring from HPDPS on February 29, 2008. The Town of Highland Park has been privileged to have such a devoted public servant working on their behalf to ensure Highland Park stays a safe and family friendly area in the heart of Dallas. He has served in various roles such as Public Safety Officer, Lieutenant, Assistant Shift Commander, and Captain before taking on the leadership role of Director. His colleagues affectionately refer to him as “Chief” as he has earned their respect and demonstrated exemplary performance. In addition, he has received numerous commendations, thank you letters, and awards such as the 1984 Firehouse magazine Heroism and Community Service Award.

I know his vision and leadership will be greatly missed and difficult to replace. The legacy he leaves speaks loudly of the impact he has had on Highland Park.

Madam Speaker, I ask my esteemed colleagues to join me in expressing our heartfelt gratitude for his hard work and dedicated service.

HONORING THE LIFE OF MR. J. RUSSELL COFFEY, A PUBLIC SERVANT AND WORLD WAR I VETERAN

HON. ROBERT E. LATTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. LATTA. Madam Speaker, Mr. J. Russell Coffey passed away on December 20, 2007, at the age of 109, and Mr. Coffey was 1 of 3 surviving veterans of World War I. Mr. Coffey was a student at Ohio State University when the United States joined the war in 1917 and Mr. Coffey enlisted in the Army at the age of 20 and was honorably discharged on December 12, 1918, a month after the signing of the armistice.

Mr. Coffey played baseball and was a track sprinter while in college and received both a bachelor’s degree and a master’s degree from Ohio State University, as well as a doctorate degree in education from New York University. Mr. Coffey continued his interest in sports and teaching by officiating high school sports for many years while he taught junior high and high school students in Phelps, Kentucky, at the former Glenwood Junior High School in Findlay and at the former Findlay College. Mr. Coffey served as an instructor at Bowling Green State University from 1948 through 1969, primarily teaching physical education but also teaching archery, psychology, swimming, and driver’s education. Mr. Coffey was the director of the university’s graduate studies in health and physical education from 1952 to 1968. Mr. Coffey was an active member of the Bowling Green Rotary Club for more than 50 years, and he was named the “oldest living Rotarian in the world” by the club in 2004, and in later years, Mr. Coffey credited physical activity and a healthy diet for his longevity.

The House of Representatives honors the life of Mr. J. Russell Coffey for his dedication to public service as a veteran, teacher, and member of the community.

CELEBRATING THE LIFE OF CARL A. DIPIETRO

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS
OF NEW YORK
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. HIGGINS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the memory of a true American, Mr. William C. Black, a loving husband, father and grandfather, successful entrepreneur, generous philanthropist, and courageous veteran. Mr. Black epitomized all that is good about our nation and indeed the world. On February 9th, an exceptional group of family, friends with gather to remember and thank a man who dedicated his skills, energy, and love to others. In the course of a remarkable life that began in Bayonne, NJ on June 7th 1930 and continued for sixty-six years thereafter, Mr. Black’s work ethic, intelligence, leadership, and basic decency made him a pillar of his community and a source of hope for multiple generations of patients and their families at Jersey Shore Medical Center.

Following graduation from Fordham University in 1952, Mr. Black immediately went to the defense of our nation in the United States Marine Corps. His seven years of service as an aviator in the USMC included duty in Korea and Japan, and a meteoric rise to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. From the Marine Corps, Mr. Black carried with him a fighting spirit and sense of purpose that helped him to become President of the New Jersey Zinc Company, our nation’s pioneer zinc producer and originator of all zinc alloys that revolutionized the modern die-casting industry.

However, it was after retiring from New Jersey Zinc that Mr. Black’s life reached its zenith. From his tireless work to improve the facilities of the Jersey Shore Medical Center, the “Mary V. Black Pavilion” was christened and thousands of trauma patients owe their health and lives to that state-of-the-art facility. This month at the 2008 Jersey Shore Sweetheart Cancer Ball, Mr. Black and his family will be recognized for their work to cure that devastating illness. I will never forget the moment my four year old daughter was diagnosed with...
COMMEMORATING CARTER BLOODCARE

HON. KENNY MARCHANT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. MARCHANT. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commemorate Carter BloodCare on pioneering the processes of the blood/capture industry operations.

Carter BloodCare (CBC) worked closely with the Texas Manufacturing Assistance Center and successfully implemented a methodology that has significantly achieved process improvements, increased productivity and doubled capacity while reducing floor space. These new changes were the result of CBC collaborating with Texas Manufacturing Assistance Center (an initiative of the U.S. Department of Commerce NIST Manufacturing Extension Partnership program) by participating in their training course: Fundamentals of Lean Enterprise. The Lean program was an "outside the box" way of thinking in the blood collection industry but it has proven to be an overwhelming success for CBC. This system allowed CBC to identify and correct problem areas, reduce needless work and create a more productive work flow. Their adoption of the Lean Philosophy approach will serve them well for years to come.

I commend Carter BloodCare for transforming the processes of the blood/care/capture industry and providing lifesaving units of blood to the people of Texas efficiently and expeditiously. It is an honor to represent Carter BloodCare in the 24th District of Texas.

HAROLD MILLER RECEIVES COMMANDER’S CHOICE AWARD

HON. HARRY E. MITCHELL OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Mr. Harold Miller, who has been selected to receive the Defense Logistics Agency’s (DLA) Business Alliance Award for the Commander’s Choice Category. This award program recognizes businesses and individuals who have made outstanding efforts in partnering with DLA to provide supplies and services to America’s war-fighters.

The Commander’s Choice Award is given to a person whose dedication and commitment to the DLA mission affects the quality of life for U.S. women and men in uniform. Mr. Miller is the Aerospace Global Pricing Compliance Leader for Honeywell Aerospace, located in my hometown of Tempe, Arizona. He has consistently led Honeywell from the inside to integrate DLA’s mission requirements into corporate and daily work processes. Through his tireless work, Mr. Miller has allowed DLA to provide superior customer support on Honeywell parts. He has an unsurpassed willingness to take risks and a strong commitment to making things work. Both of these characteristics have enabled DLA to navigate around potential crisis situations.

Mr. Miller should be proud of his accomplishments. Again, I say congratulations on the award and thank you for a job well done.

THE GLOBAL PEDIATRIC HIV/AIDS PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT OF 2008

HON. JIM MCDERMOTT OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Madam Speaker, I come to the floor today to introduce the Global Pedi- atric HIV/AIDS Prevention and Treatment Act. I am pleased to be joined by Congresswoman KAY GRANGER. This legislation will strengthen our commitment to preventing the new transmission of HIV infections in children. The legislation builds on the successful PEPFAR pro- grams aimed at reducing mother to child transmission of HIV and AIDS.

The legislation provides a comprehensive, five year strategy toward new HIV infections in children and ensure that the treatment of children infected with HIV keeps pace with their infection rate. We can achieve the birth of an HIV-free generation.

Reducing mother to child transmission and providing treatment to HIV positive children was one of the goals of the original PEPFAR legislation. The PMTCT or the Prevention of Mother to Child Transmission services were a critically important prevention effort included in the PEPFAR legislation. As we begin the process to reauthorize the programs we must use this opportunity to strengthen the original goals and mission of PEPFAR.

Every day more than 1,000 children around the world are infected with HIV; approximately 90 percent of those infections occur in Africa. With no medical intervention, HIV positive mothers have a 25 percent to 30 percent chance of passing the virus on to their babies during pregnancy and childbirth. Yet just one dose of an ARV drug given to the mother at the onset of labor and once to the baby during the first three hours of life reduces trans- mission of HIV by almost 50 percent. We know what works and we now how to reduce HIV babies. We just need to provide the com- mitment and resources to achieving this goal.

Children account for almost 16 percent of all new HIV infections but represent only 9 per- cent of those receiving treatment under PEPFAR. Without proper care and treatment, half of all newly infected children will die be- fore their 2nd birthday and 75 percent will not see their 5th birthday.

The bill establishes a target requiring that by 2013 15 percent of those receiving treatment under PEPFAR be children. This target simply keeps pace with the rate of infection.

In addition, it establishes a 5 year target for Preventing Mother to Child Transmission ef- forts. By 2013, 80 percent of pregnant women receive HIV counseling and testing, with all of HIV positive mothers receiving ARV medica- tion.

The legislation also requires integration of prevention, care and treatment with PMTCT services in order to improve outcomes for HIV affected women and families and to improve the continuity of care.

Prevention is our greatest tool in fighting this pandemic. We have no vaccine or cure. But we can work to achieve an HIV free gen- eration.

I want to thank the work of the Elizabeth Glaser Foundation who have worked to further the cause of preventing mother to child trans- mission. The Foundation is also a leader in the global effort to provide care and treatment to millions of HIV positive children. The Foun- dation’s recommendations for strengthening PEPFAR are the basis for this legislation. I also want to thank Senators DODD and SMITH who have introduced the Senate version of this legislation. Finally, I want to thank Con- gresswoman GRANGER for her willingness to work with me on this legislation and for her continued commitment to addressing the glob- al pediatric HIV/AIDS crisis.

I know that my colleagues on the Foreign Relations Committee are working to develop a strong PEPFAR reauthorization and I look for- ward to working with them to ensure that the final bill includes strong PMTCT provisions.

HONORING THE 180TH ANNIVER- SARY OF THE FOUNDING OF MCKENDREE UNIVERSITY

HON. JERRY F. COSTELLO
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. COSTELLO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in honor- ing the 180th Anniversary of the founding of McKendree University, the oldest college in ill-inois.

McKendree University was founded in 1828, by Methodist pioneers in Lebanon, Illinois. First named, "Lebanon Seminary," the name was changed in 1830 in honor of William McKendree, the first American-born bishop of the Methodist Church. McKendree University is not only the oldest college in Illinois, but it is also the oldest college in the United States with continuous ties to the United Methodist Church.

While McKendree University is justifiably proud of its rich history and tradition, it con- tinues to grow and modernize in order to at- tract the quality of students and faculty need- ed to maintain its excellent academic standing. This continuous evolution was made evident with the recent name change from McKendree College to McKendree University in 2007. This name change reflects the broad range of aca- demic opportunities available at McKendree, including the introduction, beginning in 2004, of several graduate programs. These graduate programs—including education, professional conferences, business administration and nurs- ing—have become so popular that their enroll- ment now accounts for one quarter of the en- tire student body.
McKendree has continued to evolve physically as well as academically. The university now includes two campuses in Kentucky as well as the main campus in Lebanon, Illinois. It also hosts off-campus offerings at nearby Scott Air Force Base, in addition to other locations in Illinois and Kentucky. In 2006, McKendree opened the new Hettenhausen Center for the Arts which has rapidly developed into one of the premier performing arts centers in the region.

As McKendree has continued to expand and evolve, it has earned more widespread recognition of the excellent academic reputation it has long enjoyed locally. Recent awards and rankings include being ranked among the top 14 percent of “Comprehensive Colleges—Bachelors’” by U.S. News & World Report’s Best Colleges 2007 and U.S. News & World Report’s “Great Schools, Great Prices” ranking.

McKendree University has come a long way from its humble beginnings in 1828, with 72 students in two rented sheds. It now boasts a dynamic, multi-state campus with a full range of extra-curricular offerings to complement its excellent academic programs. Throughout its impressive evolution, however, McKendree University has remained true to its roots. Students still come first at McKendree. The focus of the entire McKendree community on enabling each student to fulfill his or her potential continues to mark McKendree University as “Illinois” First and Finest.

Madam Speaker, I am proud to say that my wife, Dr. Georgia Costello, received her undergraduate degree from McKendree and is a member of the Board of Trustees of the University.

Madam Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the Board of Trustees, administration, faculty and students of McKendree University on the occasion of their 180th Anniversary.

RECOGNIZING INTERNATIONAL NETWORKING WEEK
HON. MARK STEVEN KIRK
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. KIRK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the importance of International Networking Week from February 4–8, 2008, and the prominent role my constituents play in preserving our competitiveness in the global economy.

As the co-chair of the U.S.-China Working group and a member of the State, Foreign Operations and Related Programs Appropriations Subcommittee, I know first-hand the importance that international relationships play in both diplomacy and in business.

Of special importance are organizations that create bridges between people for the mutual benefit of their members. As technology continues to bring us closer together, the relationships we forge will be more crucial than ever for companies seeking to grow their businesses.

Wherever it is one of the many multinational companies in the 10th Congressional District or a locally-owned small business, networking will continue to play a vital role in the growth of the U.S. economy. From manufacturing to distribution to the point-of-sale, we are strong for people throughout the world working together to expand their opportunities.

PRESIDENT’S FY2009 BUDGET REQUEST
HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN OF RHODE ISLAND
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. LANGEVIN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to express my deep concern about the budget request that President Bush transmitted to Congress earlier this week. By cutting programs important to working families and ignoring the significant economic downturn our Nation is facing, the administration has yet again demonstrated that its priorities are not those of the American people.

Our Nation is facing the real threat of a recession, and our government should be doing everything in its power to get our economy moving and to protect the American people from financial hardship. While the President has said he wants to work with Congress on an economic stimulus package, his budget request contains a number of devastating cuts to important programs that will make it even harder for our citizens to make ends meet.

Despite widespread recognition that fixing the U.S. economy will require addressing our weak housing market, the President’s proposal only adds to the uncertainty that families are facing. This budget will slash funding for public housing and rental assistance programs, eliminating critical aid for lower income families, the elderly and minorities, many of whom may be facing foreclosure as a result of the subprime mortgage crisis. In Rhode Island, 400 families are at risk of losing their homes under the President’s cuts to Section 8 vouchers. At the same time, he proposes to slash the Community Development Block Grant, CDBG, program, which provides vital funding for economic and community development in our State’s cities and counties.

Furthermore, we continue to support the President’s commitment to keeping health care costs down. President Bush has yet again demonstrated that its priorities in the President’s budget, and even proposed funding for No Child Left Behind, a program that the President touts as one of his biggest accomplishments, does not keep pace with the rate of inflation. If this budget is enacted, Rhode Island would lose $1.5 million less for after-school programs in the State Children’s Health Insur- ance Program, SCHIP. This amount falls drastically short of the bipartisan SCHIP bill passed by Congress in 2007 that would have expanded coverage for millions of children.

Unfortunately, the health care slated to receive additional reimbursement cuts under this proposal continue to struggle to properly treat the Medicare population. While I agree that we need to address the long-term solvency of Medicare, any reforms should be implemented in a manner that is responsive to the needs of beneficiaries and providers alike.

Also contained within the President’s budget is a suggested increase of $20 billion over 5 years in the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, SCHIP. This amount falls drastically short of the bipartisan SCHIP bill passed by Congress in 2007 that would have expanded coverage for millions of children.

Unfortunately, the President vetoed that legislation and has instead presented us with a proposal that might well be insufficient to cover current SCHIP participants, let alone cover children who are currently eligible but not yet enrolled in the program. As a longtime supporter of SCHIP, I cannot stress how important this program is to our children, expectant mothers, and parents alike. It is my hope that we will be able to work in a bipartisan manner to ensure that this program receives a proper reauthorization.
Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Madam Speaker, today I am introducing an additional bill to address the danger to Colorado’s communities, water supplies, and infrastructure from the increasing risk of very severe wildfires on our forest lands.

I have put a priority on reducing those risks since I was elected to Congress. In 2000, with the support of the President and the bipartisan leadership of Secretary Goss, I introduced legislation to facilitate reducing the buildup of fuel in the parts of Colorado that the Forest Service, working with State and local partners, identified at greatest risk of fire—the so-called “red zones.”

Concepts from that legislation were incorporated into the National Forest Plan developed by the Clinton Administration and were also incorporated into the Healthy Forests Restoration Act of 2003. As a Member of the Resources Committee, I had worked to develop the version of that legislation that the committee approved in 2002, and while I could not support the different version initially passed by the House in 2003, I voted for the revised version developed in conference with the Senate later that year—the version that President Bush signed into law.

Since then, welcome progress has been made—in Colorado, at least—in developing community wildfire protection plans and focusing fuel-reduction projects in the priority “red zone” areas, two important aspects of the new law. But at the same time nature has continued to do its work. The results of both new growth and dead and dying mature trees.

In recognition of the serious nature of the problem, the entire Colorado delegation—both here in the House and in the Senate, too—worked together to reintroduce consumers of a broad-scale legislative response. The result was legislation—H.R. 3072 and S. 1797, the Colorado Forest Management Improvement Act of 2007—which I introduced last year in the House with the cosponsorship of the entire Colorado delegation and the Senators SALAZAR and ALLARD introduced in the Senate. Together with two bills I introduced last week—H.R. 5216, the Wildlife Risk Reduction and Renewable Biomass Utilization Act and H.R. 5218, the Safe Community Act—the bill I am introducing today is designed to complement the Colorado Forest Management Act to respond to the increasingly widespread extent to which our State’s forests are being altered by infestations of bark beetles and other insects.

These insects help to balance tree densities and set the stage for fires and thereby the generation of new tree growth. And when forest fires are healthy and there are adequate supplies of water, their effects are relatively low-scale and isolated. But under the right conditions—especially warm winters, or when there are dense stands of even-aged trees—the insects can cause large-scale tree mortality, turning whole mountainous landscapes and valleys untamed.

And that is happening now in many parts of Colorado, as well as in many other states. And as these die, they impoverish our water supplies, and infrastructure from the increasing risk of very severe wildfires on our forest lands.

INTRODUCTION OF COLORADO FOREST INSECT EMERGENCY RESPONSE ACT

Before making a decision to exempt a project from NEPA review, the Forest Service or Interior Department would have to consult with relevant Federal and State agencies, seek comments from the public, and follow existing procedures for such decisions.

HONORING THE COCKE COUNTY NAVAL JUNIOR RESERVE OFFICER TRAINING CORPS

HON. DAVID DAVIS OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. DAVID DAVIS of Tennessee. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Cocke County Naval Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (NJROTC) program for their achievements this past year. In 2007, the Cocke County NJROTC program was ranked number one in the State of Tennessee and number six in the United States in competitions including academics, athletics, and military drill.

In addition to achieving such great accolades in competitions, the Cocke County NJROTC planned, coordinated, and completed 2,153 community service hours in the Cocke County, Hamblen County and Knox County areas during the 2006 to 2007 school year.

The Cocke County NJROTC is a citizen leadership program designed to develop informed and responsible young men and women who embody honor, self-reliance, self-discipline, and respect to authority in a democratic society.

This achievement is a true honor to all the young men and women involved in the Cocke County NJROTC program. The rankings, each respectively, show the dedication and commitment to service and our Nation.

It is exciting for me to see the young men and women of Cocke County NJROTC establishing such high standards at a young age and it bodes great promise for the State of Tennessee and our Nation alike.

Madam Speaker, I ask that the House join me this evening honoring the Cocke County NJROTC program for their commitment to excellence, dedication, and promise as future leaders of America.

HONORING NANCY HILTON FOR ENCOURAGING OUR NATION’S MILITARY

HON. JEB HENSARLING OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. HENSARLING. Madam Speaker, today I rise to recognize a talented and patriotic citizen, Nancy Hilton, for her efforts to honor and encourage our Nation’s military.

Overwhelmed with the sacrifices made by our men and women in uniform, Ms. Hilton sought a unique way in which she could personally honor the military. On a road trip to the East Coast, Ms. Hilton decided to hand-stitch a self-made pattern. Three years later, after investing 214.5 hours and over 20 miles of yam, Ms. Hilton proudly displays the 24-by-13 foot, 43 pound flag at her home in Athens, Texas.

In between stitching stripes, Ms. Hilton developed her crocheting ministry, The Love Stitchers. The Love Stitchers dedicate their time and effort to make afghans for people in nursing homes and hospice centers. They also make special red, white, and blue starred and striped blankets for veterans. With 100 members in three cities, The Love Stitchers have made over 1,500 afghans.

Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Fifth District of Texas, I recognize Ms. Nancy Hilton not only for her talent, but for her thoughtfulness and devotion in caring for our military, veterans, and seniors.

RECOGNIZING THE LATINA STYLE 50 AWARDS

HON. JOE BACA OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. BACA. Madam Speaker, in 1998, a unique program was launched with the purpose of creating awareness in corporate America and its connection to the growing world of professional Hispanic women. LATINA Style Magazine serves as a reflection of this increasing diversity. Because of the magazine’s dedication to informing its readers on career opportunities in corporate America, it was the catalyst for creating a prestigious analysis of Hispanic women’s presence there. It serves to show the continued efforts for promoting diversity and providing career advancement for these Latina professionals.

Today we celebrate the LATINA Style 50 Awards, a program which highlights the 50 best companies for Latinas to work for in our country. LATINA Style recruits up to 80 Fortune 1000 companies to participate in a survey regarding their role in increasing the number of Latina professionals in America’s workplace. The reports highlight each company’s leadership programs, employee benefits and Latina representation in senior positions. This past August, the tenth publication of these studies went to print. Today I stand here honoring this 10th year anniversary of a highly notable and beneficial publication.

Because of the dream of its late founder, Anna Maria Arias, the LATINA Style 50 provides today to Latina professionals a resource when looking for mentoring companies, education opportunities, employee benefits, women’s issues, and more in corporate America. With these resources we can continue to shed light and improve the status of Hispanic professionals in America’s growing corporate world. LATINA Style’s passion helps more Hispanic women become aware of companies that are providing nurturing environments, where they can continue to climb the corporate ladder. I commend LATINA Style on their commitment to open more doors to Hispanic women, and for their continued inspiration to all of us for informing Latins in the United States who seek to serve the vital roles in America’s social, political, and economic communities.

HON. ZOE LOFGREN OF CALIFORNIA

Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Ms. ZOE LOFGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I rise to acknowledge and honor Bahá’í Community of San Jose’s 50th anniversary. The Bahá’í Faith, in just 150 years, has become an independent, second most widespread world religion whose five million followers are made up of more than 2,100 diverse ethnic, racial and tribal groups. The organization has more than 157,000 members in the United States.

The Bahá’í Faith includes teachings that promote the principle of equal rights for men and women, advocate compulsory education, abolish extremes of poverty and wealth, honor work performed in the spirit of service to the rank of worship, recommend the adoption of an auxiliary international language, and provide the necessary agencies for the establishment and safeguarding of a permanent and universal peace. The Bahá’í Communities of San Jose and of the United States operate more than one thousand grassroots social and economic development projects throughout the world.

This faith-based organization not only provides spiritual guidance for their members, but they also provide charitable work to the community at large. Some of their local civic activities include the membership in the Martin Luther King, Jr. Association, membership in the Network for a Hate Free Community, Juneteenth Festival, Second Harvest Food Collections, highway cleanup, and 22 years sponsorship of a service awards banquet recognizing notable individuals and organizations for their community service based on Bahá’í principles. Bahá’í Community of San Jose provides these valuable services at no cost to the Bahá’í Communities of the South Bay and the Santa Clara Valley Community at large.

In their 50 years of dedication and hard work, Bahá’í Community of San Jose has assisted thousands of people. The Bahá’í Community of San Jose serves people of all beliefs, cultures, ethnicities and ages and serves a diverse population from various ethnic backgrounds.

It is indeed an honor and a privilege to have a warm, welcoming, and nurturing organization in my district that appreciates and honors the diversity that makes America, and specifically San Jose, California a most desirable place to live, work and raise a family.

FREEDOM FOR JUAN PEDROSO ESQUIVEL

HON. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Madam Speaker, I rise to bring to the attention of our colleagues the unjustified arrest of yet another dissident, Juan Pedroso Esquivel, by the totalititarian dictatorship in Cuba.

Recently dictatorship thugs working to stifle free speech raided Mr. Pedroso’s home after someone in the city of Colón posted stickers declaring “CAMBIO,” meaning change in Spanish. The regime charged Mr. Pedroso on January 7 with the crime of possessing “subversive propaganda.” It is not known yet how long a sentence Mr. Pedroso will face for this so-called crime. This may be because the tyrannical regime is attempting to scare other peaceful political dissenters by making an example with the unjust arrest of Mr. Pedroso.

Mr. Pedroso is a member of the Pedro Luis Boitel Democratic Party. He has a long history of nonviolent political dissent and has previously faced time inside the repressive gulags of the Cuban tyranny.

Even outside prison the regime’s thugs have repeatedly harassed Mr. Pedroso. According to reports, in September 1998, Mr. Pedroso was threatened by the despot chief of police in San José de los Ramos, Matanzas province. The policeman publicly said that he had orders to shoot Mr. Pedroso in the head and then a few days later said he had his gun ready.

A few months later Mr. Pedroso was summoned to the headquarters of the Sistema Unico de Vigilancia y Protección, SUIVP, Unified Vigilance and Protection System, where he was told that he needed to stop his human rights work and “get a job” or he would be charged with the crime of “dangerousness.” However, Mr. Pedroso was unable to find employment because of his past peaceful political activities. One week later, he was arrested and “convicted” of “dangerousness” and received a two-year sentence in the gulag.

My colleagues, it is unconscionable that someone can be sent to a gulag just because a dictatorship suspected he was posting stick- ers with the word “CAMBIO.” Why are they so afraid of the word “change”? What has them so scared of such a simple and peaceful word? What they are really scared of is anyone in any way challenging their tenuous grip on the Cuban people and putting a spotlight on their condemnable, abhorrent treatment of the Cuban people.

Madam Speaker, the arrest of Mr. Pedroso is yet another example of the totalitarian dictator- torship’s total disregard for human rights in that enslaved island. Our colleagues, we must demand the immediate and unconditional re- lease of Juan Pedroso Esquivel and every po- litical prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.

Scotty Lippert, Jr., is a standout in his field. For working years, he has worked for Clopay Plastics Products, a global leader in specialty films, extrusion coatings, custom- printing and engineered laminations. As a planned maintenance specialist and lubrication systems leader, he is one of only 745 people worldwide to meet the education, training, and examination required to achieve Machinery Lubrication Technician Certification. Scotty Lippert helped design and construct a lube room that was judged best in the world by a panel of national and international lubri- cation engineers. He is beyond doubt an ex- pert in his field, authoring training books on lube-room construction and articles on lubri- cation systems and lending his services to a number of Fortune 500 companies. Just as important, Scotty Lippert’s best practices in the field of lubrication, inspired, designed and implemented at Clopay, are now being used by the U.S. Navy.

On November 2, 2007, Scotty Lippert was chosen as the 2007 Kentucky Manufacturing Employee of the Year. He was chosen by a panel of judges to account of his innovation, teamwork, community service, and leadership credentials.

In addition to his dedication to his company and profession, Scotty Lippert serves his commu- nity as a magistrate in Bracken County. Scotty Lippert deserves praise for his con- tributions to his vocation and community, and I know the citizens of Bracken County and the Fourth Congressional District join me in recog- nizing his many achievements and contribu- tions to our region.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Madam Speaker, the arrest of Mr. Pedroso is yet another example of the totalitarian dictator- torship’s total disregard for human rights in that enslaved island. Our colleagues, we must demand the immediate and unconditional re- lease of Juan Pedroso Esquivel and every po- litical prisoner in totalitarian Cuba.
HONORING THE CAREER AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF DR. RONALD F. SURAL

HON. HOWARD COBLE
OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 6, 2008

Mr. COBLE. Madam Speaker, I join with those who are recognizing the extraordinary accomplishments of a distinguished constituent Dr. Ronald F Sural who recently retired. His career was one of remarkable contributions to the practice of medicine, and manifold successes and abiding dedication to the people of Greensboro, North Carolina.

Ron was born in Saginaw, Michigan, and educated in a one-room schoolhouse. He knew he wanted to be a doctor at an early age after seeing how a local physician took care of the people in his hometown and the respect and admiration the physician enjoyed. Not being from a wealthy family, Ron worked to put himself through college and medical school.

Ron is a 1967 alumnus of the University of Michigan Medical School. Shortly after his medical residency Ron joined the United States Air Force as a surgeon. He faithfully served his Nation during the Vietnam War, eventually being promoted to the rank of Major.

In 1974, after retiring from the Air Force, he moved his family to North Carolina after visiting the state only once. He immediately fell in love with Greensboro and decided that it was the place he would raise his family. Ron served the people of Greensboro area as a urologist for 33 years, providing help and healing to the young and old alike, sometimes without pay. He never refused to help anyone in need and those patients often showed their appreciation by bringing him vegetables from their gardens or firewood—the only payment they could afford.

He served the Greensboro community through his involvement with the Summit Rotary Club of Greensboro, the Knights of Columbus and as a parishioner of Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church. He is a member of the Greensboro Country Club, where he has skillfully won several golf championships.

He is the proud, adoring father of four children, three grandchildren, and the loving husband to his wife of 41 years, Sharon.

Dr. Sural exemplifies all of what is good and positive about the practice of medicine. And now, his 33 year career as a physician, servant and educator has come to a close. He has left an indelible mark on his patients and on the medical professionals with whom he has worked, mentored, advised, and inspired. On behalf of the citizens of the Sixth District of North Carolina, we commend Dr. Ronald Sural for being a distinguished physician, father and husband, and an exemplar of strong character and generosity.
