CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET FOR THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2009—Continued

AMENDMENT NO. 4264
(Purpose: To provide a deficit-neutral reserve fund for a demonstration project regarding Medicaid coverage of low-income HIV-infected individuals)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. _. DEFICIT-NEUTRAL RESERVE FUND FOR DEMONSTRATION PROJECT REGARDING MEDICAID COVERAGE OF LOW-INCOME HIV-INFECTED INDIVIDUALS.

The Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Budget may revise the allocations of a committee or committees, aggregates, and other appropriate levels in this resolution for one or more bills, joint resolutions, amendments, motions or conference reports that provide for a demonstration project under which a State may apply under section 1115 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1315) to provide medical assistance under a Medicaid program to HIV-infected individuals who are not eligible for medical assistance under such program under section 1902(a)(10)(A)(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(A)(i)), by the amounts provided in that legislation for those purposes, provided that such legislation would not increase the deficit over either the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the total of the period of fiscal years 2008 through 2018.

AMENDMENT NO. 4265
(Purpose: To provide for a deficit-neutral reserve fund for reducing the income threshold for the refundable child tax credit under section 24 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to $10,000 for taxable years 2009 and 2010 with no inflation adjustment, provided that such legislation would not increase the deficit over either the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2009 through 2010.)

On page 69, after line 25, add the following:

old for the refundable child tax credit under section 24 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to $10,000 for taxable years 2009 and 2010 with no inflation adjustment, provided that such legislation would not increase the deficit over either the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2009 through 2010.

Mr. REID. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. WARNER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I understand we are now proceeding to the Boxer amendment.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, if I may just review for our colleagues, that is 30 amendments that were just cleared. We now go to an amendment by Senator Boxer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 4368, AS MODIFIED

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I have a modification at the desk seen by both sides. We left out the second page originally. It asked unanimous consent that the amendment be modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. Boxer] proposes an amendment numbered 4368, as modified.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase funding for the Department of Justice for the vigorous enforcement of laws protecting children)

On page 24, line 16, increase amount by $50,000,000.

On page 24, line 17, increase the amount by $50,000,000.

On page 27, line 16, decrease the amount by $50,000,000.

On page 27, line 17, decrease the amount by $50,000,000.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, this is a little complicated. The only reason I am offering this amendment is as a substitute to the Ensign amendment which is coming next. The Ensign amendment does something I have never seen in all my years in the Senate. It funds a program that is not the law of the land. It funds a program that Senator Ensign strongly supports. It did pass the last Congress—not this Senate, the last Senate. He is setting aside $50 million in the Justice Department for this particular priority. What if we each came down here with our priority bill? I have one to fund preschool for all kids, but it is not passed. If I asked you to set aside $50 million for a bill that was not law yet, it would make no sense. When I asked Senator Ensign, he said: Well, it could pass. The Child Custody Protection Act could pass. It could pass here. It could pass the House. It could be signed by the President. But my friends, what I do here is just say: Let’s take that same amount of money and use it for all child protection laws. I hope Senators will support my amendment.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, what we have done with the Child Custody Protection Act—Senator Boxer is correct, it is a bill that passed the U.S. Senate on a bipartisan vote of 65 to 34. What we are doing is setting up a reserve fund that says it passes this year, the money will be there to enforce it.

We know around here a lot of times things are authorized, things are passed, but then the money is not there to enforce it. So what we want to do is set up a reserve fund so that if the law is passed, we will have the money there to enforce it. This has to do with protecting minor children. There are many States in this country that have passed laws—parental notification, parental consent laws—that want to protect the rights of parents and children from being taken across State lines by adults. That is what this bill will allow the enforcement of, to make sure the Child Custody Protection Act has the money to be enforced by law enforcement across this country.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4368, as modified. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN, I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD), the Senator from Washington (Ms. CANTWELL), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. INOUYE), and the Senator from Vermont (Mr. LEAHY) are necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The foregoing tally has been changed to reflect the above order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, did we move to reconsider and table? The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been done.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, can we have order in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, we need to ask people to hold it down so we can conduct business. It will go much faster if we do that and respect the rights of Senators to be heard.

We now go to Senator SENGE for an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

AMENDMENT NO. 435

Mr. SENGE. Mr. President, the last amendment Senator BOXER offered was extra money to have laws that protect children. The same thing is fine. That is why I voted for that last amendment. We could actually have taken that amendment by a voice vote.

What my amendment now does is create money so we will be able to enforce the Child Custody Protection Act when we enact that law. Around here, as I said before, too many times we enact laws, we authorize things, and we do not fund them. This is going to set up funding so the Child Custody Protection Act when the law says we are going to protect young children from being taken across State lines to have a surgical procedure, a surgical abortion—we are going to make sure those people are protected.

Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4335.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. ENSIGN] proposes an amendment numbered 4335.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase funding for the Department of Justice for the vigorous enforcement of a prohibition against taking minors across State lines in circumvention of laws requiring the involvement of parents in abortion decisions consistent with the Child Custody Protection Act, which passed the Senate by a bipartisan vote of 65–34, with an offset)

On page 24, line 16, increase the amount by $50,000,000.

On page 24, line 17, increase the amount by $50,000,000.

On page 27, line 16, decrease the amount by $50,000,000.

On page 27, line 17, decrease the amount by $50,000,000.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I will finish very briefly.

This amendment strictly funds the Child Custody Protection Act that passed the Senate in a bipartisan fashion by a vote of 65 to 34. We will now vote to make sure it is funded. That is simply what my amendment does.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I wish to inform all colleagues on both sides of the aisle that you voted for $50 million to enhance the enforcement of child protective laws. If Senator ENSIGN's bill becomes a law—which it is not the law; it has not passed this Senate in this Congress and I do not believe people feel it is going to become law—if it does become law, then that money is already there to be used for such a program.

But now to set aside funding for a bill that is not a law is the oddest kind of precedent. It is kind of "Alice in Wonderland," to be honest with you. Every one of us could take our favorite bill and say: Let's set aside funding in case my bill becomes law.

This is not the way to legislate. We have put in $50 million to enhance the enforcement of child protective laws, including this particular bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I hope my colleagues will vote no.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

NOT VOTING—2

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, the next amendment ready to go is an amendment by the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. DEMINT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 430

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 4340 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from South Carolina [Mr. DEMINT] proposes an amendment numbered 4340.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To create a point of order against bills that would raise gasoline prices)

At the end of the resolution, insert the following:

SEC. 6. LIMITATIONS ON LEGISLATION THAT WOULD INCREASE NATIONAL AVERAGE FUEL PRICES FOR AUTOMOBILES.

(a) Point of Order.—

(1) In general.—If the Senate is considering legislation, upon a point of order being made against legislation, or any part of the legislation, that it has been determined in accordance with paragraph (2) that the legislation, if enacted, would result in an increase in the national average fuel price for automobiles, and the point of order is sustained by the Presiding Officer, the Senate shall cease consideration of the legislation.

(2) Determination.—The determination described in this paragraph means a determination by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, in consultation with the Energy Information Administration and other appropriate Government agencies, that is made upon the request of a Senator for review of legislation, that the legislation, or part of the legislation, would, if enacted, result in an increase in the national average fuel price for automobiles.

(b) Waivers and Appeals.—

(1) Motion.—Before the Presiding Officer rules on a point of order described in subsection (a)(1), any Senator may move to waive the point of order and the motion to waive shall be subject to amendment. A point of order described in subsection (a)(1) is waived only by the affirmative vote of 60 Members of the Senate, duly chosen and sworn.

(2) Appeals.—After the Presiding Officer rules on a point of order described in subsection (1), any Senator may appeal the ruling of the Presiding Officer on the point of order as it applies to some or all of the provisions on which the Presiding Officer ruled. A ruling of the Presiding Officer on a point of order described in subsection (a)(1) is sustained unless 60 Members of the Senate, duly chosen and sworn, vote not to sustain the ruling.

(3) Debate.—Debate on the motion to waive under paragraph (1) or on an appeal of the ruling of the Presiding Officer under paragraph (2) shall be limited to 1 hour. The time shall be equally divided between, and controlled by, the Majority leader and the Minority Leader of the Senate, or their designees.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, with high gas prices becoming an increasingly difficult burden for all American families, it is very important that we consider all the legislation we pass here to make sure it doesn’t further increase the prices of gasoline.

This is a very simple amendment that creates a 60-vote point of order against any legislation that would cause the price of gasoline to increase, as determined by the CBO in consultation with the Energy Information Agency.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask the Chair if the amendment by the Senator from South Carolina is germane to the budget resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is not germane.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask the Chair if the amendment by the Senator from South Carolina is germane to the budget resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is not germane.

Mr. CONRAD. The second question is, if this amendment is adopted, is it corrosive to the privileged standing of budget resolutions?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is corrosive.

Mr. CONRAD. No. 3, if this amendment were adopted and went to conference and if it came back from conference, would it be fatal to the budget resolution’s privileged status?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is not germane.

Mr. CONRAD. The second question is, if this amendment is adopted, is it corrosive to the privileged standing of budget resolutions?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would be.

Mr. CONRAD. This amendment is simply not in the jurisdiction of the Budget Committee. It is in the jurisdiction of the Energy Committee.

I raise a point of order that the amendment violates section 305(b)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974. It is not germane.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is premature. The Senator from South Carolina still has 29 seconds.

Mr. DEMINT. Parliamentary inquiry: Mr. President, if this point of order is waived and the amendment is adopted, would it cause the budget resolution to lose its privileged status at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would not.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, in that case, I move to waive the Budget Act and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion.

NOT VOTING—2

Byrd
McCain

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 39, the nays are 59. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn have voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The point of order is sustained, and the amendment falls.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CONRAD] asks if the amendment is the amendment of the Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN.

AMENDMENT NO. 431

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4313 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4313 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Texas [Mr. CORNYN] proposes an amendment numbered 4313.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
The amendment as is follows:
(Purpose: To protect the family budget from runaway Government spending by increasing the number of Senators necessary to waive the PAYGO Point of Order from 60 to 100.)

At the end of title II, insert the following:

SEC. 2. INCREASING THE NUMBER OF SENATORS NECESSARY TO WAIVE PAYGO POINT OF ORDER FROM 60 TO 100.

Section 201(b) of S. Con. Res. 21 (110th Congress) is amended by striking “three-fifths” both places it appears and inserting “two-thirds”.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, my amendment concerns pay-go or pay-as-you-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, my amendment concerns pay-go or pay-as-you-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go. Right now pay-go may be waived if 60 Senators support doing so. My amendment would strengthen the pay-go.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, so the challenge of this amendment is it is not germane. I, therefore, raise a point of order that the amendment violates section 305(b)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904(c) of the Congressional Budget Act, I move to waive section 305(b)(2) of the Budget Act for consideration of this amendment to S. Con. Res. 70. Why do I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion. The clerk will call the roll. The assistant journal clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is generally expiring tax provisions. If we devise another managers package, put together an extenders package that can be cleared on both sides and deal with these other votes that require rolcall, starting with Senator KYL on his extenders.

Do we want to go to Senator DEMINT?

Mr. GREGG. Senator KYL.

Mr. CONRAD. Senator KYL.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll. Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, let me thank all colleagues for their extraordinary patience. This will be, before the end of the day, I think, a record number of votes on a budget resolution in 1 day. I don’t think that is anything particularly to be proud of, but it is the reality of what we are confronting. We can go now to the KYL amendment?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, as I understand it, the next two amendments will first be KYL and then we will go to the DeMint amendment, which has been anxiously awaited by large numbers of people.

Mr. REID. Prior to that time, we are going to have a finite list.

Mr. GREGG. In between we agree to human a finite list and we will read them and that will be it.

Mr. CONRAD. We thank the leaders of both sides, and I especially thank our leader, Senator REID, for pushing to get a final definitive list. With that, we go to Senator KYL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for his courtesy.

One of the questions we are most frequently asked is, are we, for sure, going to do the tax extenders—the R&D tax credit, the sales tax deduction, the $250 teacher deduction, and the Dependent deduction, which have already expired at the end of last year, and there are three more that will expire at the end of this year. We need to provide a definitive answer—and yes, we are going to do the extenders package.

Now, the budget accommodates generally expiring tax provisions.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I am having a hard time hearing. I think the Senator deserves to be heard. This is a serious amendment.

Mr. KYL. While we are getting order, Mr. President, this amendment, I gather, had not been technically called up, amendment No. 4348.
On page 3, line 10, decrease the amount by $1,068,000,000.

On page 5, line 15, decrease the amount by $1,287,000,000.

On page 5, line 19, decrease the amount by $27,087,000,000.

On page 5, line 22, decrease the amount by $223,000,000.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide certainty to taxpayers by extending expiring tax provisions such as the Research & Development Tax Credit that helps U.S. companies innovate, the combat pay exclusion for our soldiers in the field, the education deduction to make colleges more affordable and the alternative energy incentive to make the environment cleaner through the end of 2009)

On page 3, line 10, decrease the amount by $10,346,000,000.

On page 3, line 12, decrease the amount by $8,659,000,000.

On page 3, line 13, decrease the amount by $2,396,000,000.

On page 3, line 15, decrease the amount by $223,000,000.

On page 3, line 18, decrease the amount by $28,000,000.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, just to conclude, the budget says expiring provisions are accommodated, but I don’t think the Senate is going to raise $50 billion in new taxes to pay for these, to pay permanently for 1 or 2 years of these extenders. In fact, in recent times, more often than not, we have extended these tax provisions without offsets. In fact, this was done when the Democratic Party was in control of this Chamber, of this body, in the year 2002.

So what this amendment does is it simply explicitly extends all of these expiring tax provisions, which would expire at the end of this year and that have already expired, and it would not be required to have a permanent increase in taxes in order to accommodate that extension.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time in opposition?

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, the budget resolution already provides for a 1-year package of extenders that is fully paid for. The Kyl amendment would add a second year without paying for it. Consequently, the Kyl amendment would drive us $28.6 billion into debt, driving us further away from the balance that we are seeking to achieve by the fourth year.

We anticipate that tax extenders will be dealt with in the regular order, and our resolution provides for longer term extensions, as long as they are paid for. I ask colleagues to resist the Kyl amendment.

The amendment (No. 4348) was rejected.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, this has been cleared by the minority and the majority managers. I ask unanimous consent the following numbered amendments be the only amendments in order, that if Senator GREGG or Senator CONRAD decide they want a so-called side-by-side with these, that is at their discretion.

I would ask unanimous consent there be no second-degree amendments in order.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide certainty to taxpayers by extending expiring tax provisions such as the Research & Development Tax Credit that helps U.S. companies innovate, the combat pay exclusion for our soldiers in the field, the education deduction to make colleges more affordable and the alternative energy incentive to make the environment cleaner through the end of 2009)

On page 3, line 12, decrease the amount by $8,659,000,000.

On page 3, line 13, decrease the amount by $2,396,000,000.

On page 3, line 15, decrease the amount by $223,000,000.

On page 3, line 18, decrease the amount by $28,000,000.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, is there any time remaining on my side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

NOT VOTING—1

Byrd

The amendment (No. 4348) was rejected.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, this has been cleared by the minority and the majority managers. I ask unanimous consent the following numbered amendments be the only amendments in order, that if Senator GREGG or Senator CONRAD decide they want a so-called side-by-side with these, that is at their discretion.

I would ask unanimous consent there be no second-degree amendments in order.

The amendments are: 4242, 4230, 4276, 4270, 4269, 4269, 4269, 4263, 4265, 4259, 4255, 4229, 4233, 4231, 4207, 4345, 4344, 4357, 4339, 4371, 4347, 4269, 4243, 4270, 4206, 4269, 4334, 4275, 4283, 4265, 4159, 4331, 4351, 4202, 4200, 4225, 4245, 4231, 4300, 4256, 4310 and an unnumbered amendment by Senator Brown, an unnumbered amendment by Senator Whitehouse, an unnumbered amendment by Senator Bingaman, an unnumbered amendment by Senator Kyl, an unnumbered amendment by Senator DeMint, an amendment No. 4268, an unnumbered amendment by Senator Conrad, and an unnumbered amendment by Senator Vitter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. VITTER. Reserving the right to object because I have no idea off the top of my head what all of those are, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader has the floor.

Mr. REID. I would say to everyone, there is no one trying to take advantage of anyone. If there is a problem we will be happy to work with you. This is a finite list. If there is some misunderstanding, we have two of the most generous, patient men I have ever seen, Senator Conrad and Senator Gregg. We will work with you. Let’s get this locked down. If there is a problem, we will work with you. No one is trying to take advantage of anyone.

I ask unanimous consent that we approve this agreement. If there is something that my friend from Louisiana has a problem with, we will talk with him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, point of clarification. If an amendment is not on that list, is it cut off for the evening?

Mr. REID. Yes.

Mr. VITTER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, while that matter is being resolved, could we go to the next amendment?

And the next amendment in order is Senator DeMint’s amendment No. 4347.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DEMINT. My colleagues, it is time for some straight talk on earmarks. And it is time for some real change that all Americans can believe in. All three of our colleagues running for President are cosponsors of this moratorium on earmarks.

All three of our colleagues running for President are cosponsors of this amendment. Senator McCain particularly for years of warning us of what earmarks and our earmark system were doing to undermine confidence in this Congress. I thank Senator McCain for her courage in standing up, and my Democratic cosponsors Senators Obama, Clinton, and Bayh, and all of my Republican cosponsors who know what we all know: that this earmark system is out of control.

It has undermined the faith and the confidence of the American people. It is time for a timeout. My amendment creates a 1-year moratorium on all earmarks by establishing—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired. Does the Senator offer an amendment?

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator be given 30 seconds to discuss this very important amendment.

Mr. REID. I have no problem with that. I renew my previous unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DeMint. My amendment creates a 1-year moratorium on all earmarks by establishing a 67-vote point of order against bills with earmarks. We have heard all the excuses; we will hear some more to the contrary.

I encourage all of my colleagues to vote against the status quo and vote for this moratorium to give us time and a sense of urgency to reform the system.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator offering an amendment?

Mr. DeMint. I call up amendment No. 4347 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina (Mr. DeMint), for himself, Mr. McCaskill, Mrs. McCaskill, Mr. Coburn, Mr. Kyl, Mr. Corker, Mr. Burr, Mr. Graham, Mr. Obama, Mrs. Clinton, Mr. Cornyn, Mr. Bayh, Mr. Martinez, Mr. Enzi, Mr. Barrasso, and Mr. Inhofe, proposes an amendment numbered 4347.

Mr. DeMint. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4347) is as follows:

(Purpose: To establish an earmark moratorium for fiscal year 2009)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 2. FISCAL YEAR 2009 EARMARK MORATORIUM.

(a) Bills and Joint Resolutions.—

(1) Point of Order.—It shall not be in order to—

(A) consider a bill or joint resolution reported by any committee that includes an earmark, limited tax benefit, or limited tariff benefit; or

(B) a Senate bill or joint resolution containing an earmark, limited tax benefit, or limited tariff benefit.

(2) Return to the Calendar.—If a point of order is sustained under this subsection, the bill or joint resolution shall be returned to the calendar until compliance with this subsection has been achieved.

(b) Conference Report.—

(1) Point of Order.—It shall not be in order to vote on the adoption of a report of a committee of conference if the report in-
The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would. Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I suggest the pending amendment is not germane; therefore, I raise a point of order that the amendment violates section 305(b)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Mr. DE MINT. May I ask the Chair a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. DE MINT. It is not the intent to bring down the budget or compromise a privilege in any way. If the Senator is worried about privilege, I ask unanimous consent if the motion to waive is successful, that the amendment be withdrawn and deemed passed in a separate Senate resolution.

Mr. CONRAD. I would be constrained to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. DE MINT. If that is the case, I now move to waive the Budget Act and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll. The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 29, nays 71, as follows:

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired. Ms. LANDRIEU. I call up the amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, a group of Senators, now for several years, has been working to reduce the estate tax. With the constraints on the budget, particularly with spending $348 million a day in Iraq, this has been difficult. But some of us have been working in good faith to reduce the 55 percent rate and to raise the unified credit. The tax in its current form is onerous, in my view unnecessary, and it clouds the ability of many of our successful business owners from planning the growth and expansion of their businesses that create jobs right here at home in America. Something should be done now, something that is real and does not increase our debt.

The amendment I offer will reduce the rate to 35 percent and increase the unified credit to $10 million. Most importantly, this is paid for by the President’s own offsets in the budget he submitted to us. So it is fully paid for. It reduces the tax rate to 35 percent and increases the unified tax credit to $10 million.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment is an amendment in order is an amendment agreed to.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for each of us to have a minute and a half.

Mr. GREGG. I object.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. Each Senator has 1 minute.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, next up is the Kyl amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4372

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, do we need to call up amendment No. 4372 first?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment should be called up.

Mr. KYL. If so, I ask unanimous consent to call up amendment No. 4372.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, this is a revote of a vote we had earlier in the day. If you supported the estate tax reform then, obviously you would want to do it now.

I appreciate the last vote. This is a better approach. This is an approach which is supported by groups such as the NFIB, which asked us—we only have 1 year to go before the estate tax is totally repealed. In the year 2010, there is no more estate tax, and then the year after that, it comes roaring back with a rate of 60 percent and an exemption of $1 million.

Clearly, we have to provide some certainty. The only way to do that is to adopt a rate not to exceed 35 percent, exempt a capped amount of $5 million per spouse, and to ensure that we can actually get it done this year, not require that we find some permanent tax increase in order to offset it. If that is what we are asking for, we know it won’t happen, the outside groups know it won’t happen, and they know this budget exercise then is a game rather than a serious attempt to reform the estate tax.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, Senator KYL, for his courtesy during all of the debates today.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the Kyl amendment because it is not paid for. It goes onto the debt some $200 billion over 10 years. This would knock us out of balance in 2012 and in 2013. The previous amendment that had the same more generous exemptions was paid for. It didn’t add to the debt, didn’t add to the deficits, and it kept us in balance.

So I would urge my colleagues to vote no on the Kyl amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 50, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 77 Leg.]
The amendment (No. 4372) was rejected.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the next amendment is from the ranking member of the Finance Committee, Senator Grassley.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 476, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a modification of amendment No. 4276.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The amendment proposes an amendment numbered 4276, as modified.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To exempt from pay-as-you-go enforcement modifications to the individual alternative minimum tax (AMT) that prevent millions of additional taxpayers from having to pay the AMT.)

SEC. 2. PAY-A-YOU-GO POINT OF ORDER IN THE SENATE.

(a) Point of Order.—

(1) In general.—It shall not be in order in the Senate to consider any direct spending of revenue legislation that would increase the on-budget deficit or cause an on-budget deficit for either of the applicable time periods as measured in paragraphs (5) and (6).

(2) Applicable Time Periods.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘applicable time period’ means either—

(A) the period of the current fiscal year, the budget year, and the ensuing 3 fiscal years following the budget year; or

(B) the period of the current fiscal year, the ensuing 4 fiscal years following the budget year, and the ensuing 9 fiscal years following the budget year.

(b) Determination of Budget Levels.—For purposes of this section, the levels of new budget authority, outlays, and revenues for a fiscal year shall be determined on the basis of estimates made by the Senate Committee on the Budget.

(c) Determination of Future Surplus.—This section shall expire on September 30, 2017.

(d) Repeal.—In the Senate, section 201 of S. Con. Res. 21 (110th Congress), the fiscal year 2008 concurrent resolution on the budget, shall no longer apply.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, remember, before Christmas the Senate voted to make sure that middle-class America didn’t pay the alternative minimum tax, and we did it without an offset by a vote of 95 to something. So here we are again with an opportunity to say to middle-class America that we are not going to tax the people who were not supposed to be hit by the AMT, and we are going to do it without an offset.

This amendment gives us an opportunity to get over that hurdle that is in this budget resolution that under pay-go, you would have to have an offset for the AMT. So even though the resolution sets aside money to deal with this year’s patch, unless my amendment is adopted, there is no guarantee that the patch will be done. The 25 million families who will be hit by the AMT increase will get a tax increase of over $2,000 apiece. So they deserve a guarantee of relief.

My amendment puts the budget money where its mouth is, and that is we are going to guarantee AMT relief. The principle is applicable to this year’s patch and AMT’s relief in future years.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, if you want to blow a hole in the budget as big as all outdoors, here is your opportunity—a trillion dollars not paid for, a trillion dollars that we are going to go out and borrow from the Chinese and Japan, this makes absolutely no sense. I urge my colleagues to vote no.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Is there a sufficient second. There is a sufficient second. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant Journal clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI).

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 47, nays 51, as follows:

The amendment (No. 4276), as modified, was rejected.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair needs a clarification of the bill manager, and that is, there was an earlier unanimous consent agreement that included an amendment No. 4289. The question is, Should amendment No. 4289 have been read as amendment No. 4249?

Mr. CONRAD. That is correct.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. It should have been amendment No. 4249.

Mr. CONRAD. That is correct. That is a Dorgan amendment. That is correct. It should have been read as amendment No. 4249.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thanks the Senator.

(a) CIRCUIT BREAKER.—If in any year the Congressional Budget Office, in its report pursuant to section 202(e)(1) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 projects an on-budget deficit for the budget year or any subsequent fiscal year covered by those projections, it shall not be in order in the Senate to consider a concurrent resolution on the budget for the budget year or any conference report thereon that fails to reduce on-budget deficits relative to the projections of Congressional Budget Office and put the budget on a path to achieve on-budget balance within 5 years.

(b) POINT OF ORDER.—If in any year the Congressional Budget Office, in its report pursuant to section 202(e)(1) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 projects an on-budget deficit for the budget year or any subsequent fiscal year covered by those projections, it shall not be in order in the Senate to consider a concurrent resolution on the budget for the budget year or any conference report thereon that fails to reduce on-budget deficits relative to the projections of Congressional Budget Office and put the budget on a path to achieve on-budget deficit reduction, except it shall not contain any reduction in Social Security benefits.

(d) SUSPENSION OF REQUIREMENT DURING WAR OR LOW ECONOMIC GROWTH.

(1) LOW GROWTH.—If the most recent of the Department of Commerce’s advance, preliminary, or final reports of actual real economic growth indicates that the rate of real economic growth (as measured by the real gross domestic product) for each of the most recently reported quarter and the immediately preceding quarter is less than zero percent, this section is suspended.

(2) WAR.—If a declaration of war is in effect, this section is suspended.

(e) SUPREMACY WAIVER AND APPEALS.—

(1) WAIVER.—Subsections (b) and (c) may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by an affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members duly chosen and sworn.

(2) APPEALS.—Appeals in the Senate from the decisions of the Chair relating to any

(3) Medicare low-income programs.—The Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Budget may establish a reprogramming allocation, and other appropriate levels in this resolution for a bill, joint resolution, amendment, motion, or conference report that makes improvements to the Medicare Savings Program and the Medicare part D low-income subsidy program, which may include the provisions that—

(A) provide for an increase in the asset allowance under the Medicare Part D low-income subsidy program so that individuals with very limited incomes, but modest resources, such as the assistance that the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act of 2003 was intended to deliver with respect to the payment of premiums and cost-sharing under the Medicare part D prescription drug benefit;

(B) provide for an update in the income and asset allowances under the Medicare Savings Program and provide for an annual inflationary adjustment for those allowances; and

(C) improve outreach and enrollment under the Medicare program and the Medicare and the Medicare part D low-income subsidy program to ensure that low-income senior citizens and other low-income Medicare beneficiaries receive the low-income allowance for which they are eligible in accordance with the improvements provided for in such legislation, by the amounts provided in such legislation for those purposes, provided that such legislation would not increase the deficit over either the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2014 through 2018.

AMENDMENT NO. 4393

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate that Medicaid administrative regulations should not undermine Medicaid’s role in our Nation’s health care system, cap Federal Medicaid spending, or otherwise shift Medicaid cost burdens to State or local governments and their taxpayers and health providers, or undermine the Federal guarantee of health insurance coverage (Medicaid provides))

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING MEDICAID ADMINISTRATIVE REGULATIONS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The Medicaid program provides essential health care and long-term care services to approximately 60,000,000 low-income children, pregnant women, parents, individuals with disabilities, and senior citizens. It is a Federal guarantee that ensures the most vulnerable will have access to needed medical services.

(2) Medicaid provides critical access to long-term care and other services for the elderly and individuals living with disabilities, and is the single largest provider of long-term care services. Medicaid also pays for personal care and other supportive services that are typically not provided by private health insurance or Medicare, but are necessary to enable individuals with spinal cord injuries, developmental disabilities, neurological degenerative diseases, serious and persistent mental illnesses, HIV/AIDS, and other chronic conditions to remain in the community, to work, and to maintain independence.

(3) Medicaid supplements the Medicare program for about 7,500,000 low-income elderly or disabled Medicare beneficiaries, assisting them with their Medicare premiums and co-insurance, wrap-around benefits, and the costs of nursing home care that Medicare does not cover. The Medicaid program spends over $100,000,000,000 on uncovered Medicare services.

(4) Medicaid provides health insurance for more than one-quarter of America’s children and is the largest purchaser of maternity care, paying for more than one-third of all the births in the United States each year. Medicaid also provides critical access to care for children with disabilities, covering more than 70 percent of poor children with disabilities.

(5) More than 21,000,000 women depend on Medicaid for their health care. Women comprise the majority of seniors (64 percent) on Medicare. Half of nonelderly women with permanent mental or physical disabilities have health coverage through Medicaid. Medicaid provides treatment for low-income women diagnosed with breast or cervical cancer in every State.

(6) Medicaid is the Nation’s largest source of payment for mental health services, HIV/AIDS care, and care for children with special needs. Much of this care is either not covered by private insurance or limited in scope or duration. Medicaid is also a critical source of funding for health care for children in foster care and for health services in schools.

(7) Medicaid funds help ensure access to care for all Americans. Medicaid is the single largest source of revenue for the Nation’s safety net hospitals, health centers, and nursing homes, and is critical to the ability of these providers to adequately serve all Americans.

(8) Medicaid serves a major role in ensuring that the number of Americans without health insurance, approximately 47,000,000 in 2006, is as low as possible. The system of Federal matching for State Medicaid expenditures ensures that Federal funds will grow as State spending increases in response to providing more Medicaid funding to help buffer the drop in private coverage during recessions.

(9) The Bush Administration has issued several regulations that shift Medicaid cost burdens onto States and put at risk the continued availability of much-needed services. The regulations relate to Federal payments to public institutions for graduate medical education, rehabilitation services, school-based administration, school-based transportation, Medicaid case management services.

(b) Sense of the Senate.—It is the sense of the Senate that administrative regulations should not—

(1) diminish the role the Medicaid program plays as a critical component of the health care system of the United States;

(2) cap Federal Medicaid spending, or otherwise shift Medicaid cost burdens to State or local governments and their taxpayers and health providers, forcing a reduction in access to essential health services for low-income elderly individuals, individuals with disabilities, and children and families; or

(3) undermine the Federal guarantee of health insurance coverage Medicaid provides, which would threaten not only the health care safety net of the United States, but the entire health care system.

AMENDMENT NO. 455

(Purpose: To provide for a deficit-neutral reserve fund for education reform)

At the end of title III, add the following:

SEC. 305. DEFICIT-NEUTRAL RESERVE FUND FOR EDUCATION REFORM.

The Chairman of the Senate Committee on Education, Workforce, and Human Resources may—

(A) use the reserve fund to—

(1) in any fiscal year, provide for a deficit-neutral reserve fund for education reform;

and

(B) in any fiscal year, make available for education reform purposes—

(1) an amount to be determined by the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Education, Workforce, and Human Resources, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, for each fiscal year in the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2018.
by the amounts provided by a bill, joint resolution, amendment, motion, or conference report that would provide an above the line Federal income tax deduction under section 62 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for individuals who do not receive health insurance through an employer and who purchase such insurance on the private market, provided that such legislation would not increase taxes and would not increase the deficit over either the period of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2018.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, the ranking member tells me we need to defer on this DeMint amendment because it involves another amendment, it affects another amendment, and the other amendment is still in the clearing process. So we need to defer on this amendment.

Senator DeMINT has another amendment on Semper Fi; is that correct?

Mr. DeMINT. Correct.

Mr. CONRAD. I ask the Senator from South Carolina if he can describe the amendment briefly, and if he will accept a voice vote, we can proceed to that amendment. We can accept that amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, if it is what I think it is, we will object. It will take all grants away from the University of California, if I understand the amendment correctly.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, we were told that amendment had been cleared. It appears it has not.

Mrs. BOXER. Excuse me, if I may. Mr. President.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, if I may have a moment, the amendment I agree with is the Vitter amendment which says that the rules surrounding FACE, which is the Freedom of Access to Clinics Act, would apply to recruiting stations because we do not want any demonstrating on those campuses. Whether it is at a reproductive health care clinic or a recruiting station, we fully agree, and we are very happy to accept that amendment.

The amendment by the Senator from North Carolina, on the other hand, would take funds away from the University of California, would take funds away from the police and firemen in Berkeley, would take funds away from the children who go to school there, would take funds away from transit—these folks had nothing to do with anything any city councilman in Berkeley said. And, by the way, P.S., they took it back. They took back what they said.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, we have to return to regular order if we can. Perhaps the best way to unwind this situation, as I understand, Senator DeMINT's amendment then will require a vote; is that the case? Then I think what we should do is ask Senator DeMINT to take his 1 minute to explain the amendment. Then we will ask for 1 minute in opposition by perhaps the two Senators from California, vote on the DeMint amendment, and then perhaps we can go to Senator Vitter's amendment, if that is OK.

Mr. DeMINT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, since there has already been more than a minute in opposition, that I have 2 minutes to speak on this amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I object.

Mr. CONRAD. No, no, that is fair. I think we need to agree to that request. That has to be done. That is fair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator call up his amendment?

AMENDMENT NO. 4380

Mr. DeMINT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DeMINT] proposes an amendment numbered 4380.

Mr. DeMINT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide for a deficit-neutral reserve fund for transferring funding for Berkeley, CA earmarks to the Marine Corps)

At the end of title III, insert the following:

SEC. 3. RESERVE FUND FOR BERKELEY RESECTIONS AND FUNDING THE MARINE CORPS.

The Chairman of the Senate Committee on the Budget may revise the aggregates, allocations, and other appropriate levels in this resolution for one or more bills, joint resolutions, amendments, motions, or conference reports that would rescind any congressionally directed spending item for the City of Berkeley, California, and any entities located in such city, and transfer such funds to the Marine Corps, by the amounts provided in that legislation for those purposes, provided that such legislation would not increase the deficit for the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2013 or the period of the total of fiscal years 2008 through 2018.

Mr. DeMINT. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the Chamber, I bring this Semper Fi amendment to the floor as a promise to a number of marines and their families. I admit this is somewhat unusual, but this amendment is not about free speech.

In Berkeley, there were some folks protesting the Marine Recruitment Office. They have their right to protest, to speak out. My case is against the city of Berkeley, which incited hate against our marines and encouraged them to disrupt recruitment, which is their Federal responsibility.

This is a terrible precedent for a local government to take a position against our constitutional role to defend our Nation, which requires recruitment.

The things that were said by the city council about our marines were disgraceful. What we are proposing is to make a point. The earmarks that are talked about that went to Berkeley, over $2 million worth of earmarks, should not have gone there anyway, and they do involve special gourmet-type meals for the schools and money to the University of California at Berkeley, where they already have a $3.3 million endowment.

We can argue about the earmarks all night, but I am trying to make a point on behalf of marines and everyone in uniform that it is not the role of city or State governments to try to disrupt and intimidate—whatever—our marines who are doing what we ask them to do.

So my amendment takes away those $2 million worth of earmarks as a symbol to every local government that may want to take on our Federal role and try to make an issue with our marines.

Semper Fi means "Always Faithful." It is the motto of our marines. They are always faithful to us, and I promise many of their families when I was in Iraq and back here, that I would stand up for them. I encourage all my colleagues to vote for this amendment to make a point.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. At this moment we have, unfortunately, not yet seen the amendment of the Senator. We do need to take a moment to review it, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, for the purpose of helping us move along effectively, in order to get this done it is very important that both sides have copies of the amendments that are offered. We can't do business efficiently if we don't—both sides—have copies of the amendments.

I say this because both of us are in such a rush to conclusion that sometimes we neglect to make sure the other side—we have done it, which we apologize for, and it is very easy to happen in this hectic families, when I was in Iraq.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, since we have had argument on both sides, I wonder if it would be fair now to have 2 minutes for those in opposition, 1 minute by each of the Senators from California.

Mr. DeMINT. Would it be OK to add an additional 30 seconds, just to clarify the misinformation?

Mr. CONRAD. I think we have to cut this off at this point, if I can say that to my colleague.

So Senator Feinstein.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from California.

Mrs. Feinstein. Mr. President, this amendment is an overkill. My colleague and I are the first ones to say Berkeley made a huge mistake. Berkeley apologized for that mistake. Following all of this, the recruiting station wrote a letter to the University of California and thanked them for their steadfast service and accommodation of the recruiting center.

Essentially, what the Senator is trying to do is punish by rescinding any congressionally directed spending item for Berkeley, any entities located in such city, such as the Roberts Center which treats paralyzed veterans, and to transfer such funds to the Marine Corps. They would remove transportation and police and fire funds, and nutrition funds for children.

I mean, the point has been made. The situation is solved, but it isn’t enough for the Senator. He has to come back and hit hard, and I disagree.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California.

Mrs. Boxer. Mr. President and my colleagues, this is a moment we could be together because we had some outrageous statements coming out of the Berkeley City Council. They rescinded. They apologized. And what the Senator wants to do is take it out on people who, A, had nothing whatsoever to do with this in the first place; and, B, the whole thing ought to be moot because they apologized.

Now, I don’t see how you are faithful to the Marines—and by the way, I hope everyone will donate, as I do, to the Semper Fi Fund. Since you mentioned semper fi, there is a fund that takes care of our wounded vets. I hope we will all write a personal check tonight.

You want to help the Marines? How do you help the Marines and their families when you take money away from paralyzed people, including paralyzed veterans? That is what the earmark was about. How do you help the Marines when you take money away from American kids who are learning about the importance of nutrition? How do you help the Marines when you take money away from police and fire?

Please vote this down. It is mean spirited.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mrs. Boxer. And it is not in the interest of—this is not to do this.

Mr. Conrad. Time for the vote. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second? Seeing a sufficient second, the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. Durbin. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. Byrd) is necessarily absent.

Mr. Kyll. The Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), the PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brown). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

NOT VOTING—2

Byrd                          Domenici

The amendment (No. 4380) was rejected.

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. Conrad. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. Conrad. Mr. President, in the previous list sent to the desk, we need to show amendment No. 4388, by Senator Thune, as having been modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Conrad. Mr. President, we are about to move. We are awaiting some additional amendments to clear. While we are doing that, we could go to the next amendments, which are on the unborn child. Senator Boxer has a side-by-side, followed by Senator Allard. These will require votes.

Senator Boxer.

AMENDMENT NO. 4379

Mrs. Boxer. Mr. President, I did not want to have to offer another amendment here to tonight. The only reason I am doing that is because the amendment that will be offered in a moment by Senator Allard says that the SCHIP program, our kids health program, should cover children—this is from his amendment—from the moment of conception until 19 years old. I am assuming the idea is to make sure pregnant women are covered. Yet it doesn’t say that. So my side-by-side says pregnant women will be covered. That means you don’t get into that whole area of when does life begin and so on.

We are saying, please vote for this. Let’s cover pregnant women, and that will indeed cover the pregnant woman and her fetus, all the way from the minute she is pregnant.

This is what we hope you will vote aye for. We hope you will vote no on the Allard amendment. I am sorry to trouble you with another vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from California call up her amendment?

Mrs. Boxer. I call up amendment No. 4379.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. Boxer], proposes an amendment numbered 4379.

Mrs. Boxer. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To facilitate coverage of pregnant women in SCHIP)

On page 60, line 8, insert “or pregnant women” after “children”.

Mrs. Boxer. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. Allard. Mr. President, I stand in opposition and ask for a “no” vote and ask for an “aye” vote on the Allard amendment.

What the Allard amendment does is redefine the child. The way the law right now reads, a pregnant woman is under the definition of a child. All we do is move the child out of the definition of the pregnant woman and say that the child is in the period from conception to birth, and then the rest of the program. If this is a health program for children, then we define the child as part of that population of children. The pregnant woman, who is the adult, would be kept separate.

As far as I am concerned, it is just a truth-in-labeling provision so we have a distinction between the child and mother. We have surgical procedures now that are just for the unborn child and not necessarily a surgical procedure, technically, on the woman.

Mrs. Feinstein. Mr. President, is all time used?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been used.

Mr. Allard. Mr. President, can I make one more point? My amendment is a pro-life vote.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the Boxer amendment. The ayes and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) and the Senator from Maryland (Ms. MIKULSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI).

Whereas, Philadelphia Housing Authority has used this agreement to leverage private and public resources to develop mixed-income communities that address the needs of the very poor while reshaping entire communities, and estimates that it will lose $50 million as a result of the agreement’s expiration;

Whereas, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has refused to grant Philadelphia Housing Authority a 1-year extension of its current agreement under the same terms and conditions;

Whereas, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development alleges that Philadelphia Housing Authority is in violation of fair housing requirements;

Whereas, Philadelphia Housing Authority denies this assertion and is challenging the fair housing requirements; and

Whereas, Philadelphia Housing Authority’s allegation of retaliation appears to be substantiated by these newly discovered emails;

Whereas, the expiration of the current agreement is imminent and will negatively impact 84,000 low-income residents of Philadelphia: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, that it is the Sense of the Senate that Philadelphia Housing Authority should be granted a one-year extension of its “Moving to Work Agreement” with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development under the same terms and conditions as the current agreement.

AMENDMENT NO. 4771

(Purpose: To express the Senate of the Senate regarding a Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution of the United States)

At the appropriate place, insert:

SEC. — SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING A BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) On January 26, 1996, the House of Representatives passed H.J. Res. 1, the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, by the necessary two-thirds majority (300–132); (2) On June 6, 1996, the Senate fell three votes short of the two-thirds majority vote needed to pass the Balanced Budget Amendment; and

(3) Since the House of Representatives and Senate last voted on the Balanced Budget Amendment, the debt held by the public has grown from $5,700,000,000,000 to more than $13,000,000,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that a Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution of the United States should be voted on at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. BOXER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4223

Mr. ALLARD. On the Allard amendment, it will codify the current unborn child rule by amending the SCHIP re-authorization reserve fund.

Many States’ definition of coverage for a pregnant woman leads to the strange legal fiction that the adult pregnant woman is a child. This amendment will clarify in statute that the term “child” includes the period from conception to birth and will not include a pregnant woman in the definition of a child.

I ask for an “aye” vote. This is a pro-life vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, in the Boxer amendment, we clarified SCHIP law. A pregnant woman’s coverage under SCHIP law is optional. We made it obligatory so every pregnant woman has the advantage of medical insurance. This amendment undoes that. It takes it away from the woman and gives it to the fetus. Now, if the woman is pregnant in an accident, loses the child, she does not get coverage, the child gets coverage.

We solved the problem in the Boxer amendment. If you cover the pregnant woman, you cover her fetus. What Senator ALLARD does is remove the coverage from the pregnant woman and cover the fetus.

I urge a “no” vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. ALLARD. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are requested. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 52, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 81 Leg.]
March 13, 2008

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

I encourage all of my colleagues to vote for the amendment to allow Americans to deduct 100 percent of the cost of the health insurance premium.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BUCUS. Mr. President, the effect of this amendment is pending.

Mr. BUCUS. Mr. President, the effect of this amendment is pending. It is similar to the amendment on privatizing Social Security. He said it was not; it was. He says this amendment gives people health insurance. It does not. What does it do? This is a death spiral for companies that provide health insurance for their employees because this amendment will have the effect of causing, for companies that have health insurance for their employees, those employees to leave the health insurance they have and get their own, particularly if they are young and healthy, which will mean the insurance plan the company provides will not work, and that is why it is a death spiral. This will have the effect of hurting small businesses that provide health insurance for their employees because younger, healthier people will leave to get their own, and that will cause the employer-provided coverage to disappear.

This should not be done in middle of the night. We should have overall health reform, not this pernicious amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, we would like to take two additional amendments at this point, 4206, Senator BARRASSO; and 4299, Senator VITTER. That takes us to the DeMINT amendment on deductibility.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. VITTER. Parliamentary inquiry. Mr. President: Is that a unanimous consent request to accept those amendments, because if it is, I object and would request a vote on 4299.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

AMENDMENT NO. 4398

Mr. DE MINT. Mr. President, was the chairman accepting the deductibility amendment?

Mr. CONRAD. No, sir. There has been objection by the chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mr. DE MINT. So you would like to bring it up and vote on it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is pending.

Mr. DE MINT. Mr. President, we have had some partisan and controversial amendments tonight. I hope this won’t be one. This amendment simply allows individuals who buy health insurance on their own to deduct it from their taxes.

All of us talk about the uninsured. This is a chance to give a number of the uninsured the opportunity to buy health insurance on the same basis that we do in Congress, and that is to make it deductible. Some will say this is a cost. We are already paying for this, and probably much more, as people seek health care in the emergency room and other places when they are not insured.
Mr. CONRAD. Senator BIDEN. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 4245.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment as follows:

The amendment as follows:

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To restore full funding for the international affairs budget, in support of the reconstruction of Iraq and Afghanistan, nuclear nonproliferation, foreign assistance, fighting global AIDS, promoting sustainable development, and other efforts, with an offset)

On page 10, line 12, increase the amount by $1,139,000,000.

On page 10, line 13, increase the amount by $2,127,000,000.

On page 10, line 17, increase the amount by $1,142,000,000.

On page 10, line 21, increase the amount by $418,000,000.

On page 10, line 25, increase the amount by $290,000,000.

On page 11, line 4, increase the amount by $161,000,000.

On page 27, line 16, decrease the amount by $4,139,000,000.

On page 27, line 17, decrease the amount by $2,127,000,000.

On page 27, line 21, decrease the amount by $1,142,000,000.

On page 27, line 25, decrease the amount by $418,000,000.

On page 28, line 4, decrease the amount by $290,000,000.

On page 28, line 8, decrease the amount by $161,000,000.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, this amendment reinstates the President’s international affairs budget to the number he called for. No. 1. No. 2, it has 34 cosponsors, evenly divided, Republicans and Democrats. Everyone from Senator LUGAR to Senator VITTER and everyone in between has cosponsored this amendment.

No. 3, the point I would like to make is, Deputy Secretary Gates, as well as 50 flag officers, represented by General Zinni and Admiral Smith, as well as our commanders in the field, all recognize we are spending $19 to $19—millitary dollars to every one civilian dollar we spend, we need to deal with international affairs. I will conclude by saying, when I was in Afghanistan last week, the commanding general made the comment the Taliban begins where the road ends.

I say to my colleagues this is critically important to our physical security to fund the international function because it is redevelopment money to go to Afghanistan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The President’s time has expired. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, 40 percent of the money in the United Nations is absolutely wasted. They will not report transparency in anything they do. We know on their procurement it is at least 40 percent. We know 25 percent of the last peacekeeping operation was wasted through fraud. We should not send another penny to the United Nations until they become transparent with how they are spending the money they have now.

I urge my colleagues to vote in opposition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

All time has expired.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask for yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

Mr. MCCAIN. Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The amendment (No. 4245) was agreed to.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4299.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana (Mr. VITTER) proposes an amendment numbered 4299.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the need for comprehensive legislation to legalize the importation of prescription drugs from highly industrialized countries with safe pharmaceutical infrastructures)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. __. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE NEED FOR COMPREHENSIVE LEGISLATION TO LEGALIZE THE IMPORTATION OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS FROM HIGHLY INDUSTRIALIZED COUNTRIES WITH SAFE PHARMACEUTICAL INFRASTRUCTURES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The United States is the world’s largest market for pharmaceuticals, yet consumers still pay the world’s highest prices.

(2) In 2000, Congress took action to legalize the importation of prescription drugs from other countries by United States wholesalers and pharmacists, and before such a program can go into effect, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) must certify that the program would have no adverse impact on safety and that it would reduce costs for American consumers.

(3) Since 2000, the Secretary of HHS has made the certification required to permit the implementation of a program for importation of prescription drugs.

(4) In July 2006, the Senate approved by a vote of 68-32 an amendment to the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act, 2007, that prohibits Customs and Border Protection from preventing individuals not in the business of importing prescription drugs from carrying them across the border with Canada.

(5) In July 2007, the Senate adopted language similar to the 2007 amendment in the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act, 2008.

(6) In October 2007, the Senate adopted language in the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2008, that prohibits anti-reimportation activities within HHS.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the leadership of the Senate should bring to the floor for full debate in 2008 comprehensive legislation that legalizes the importation of prescription drugs from highly industrialized countries with safe pharmaceutical infrastructures and creates a regulatory pathway to ensure such drugs are safe;

(2) such legislation should be given an up or down vote on the floor of the Senate; and

(3) previous Senate approval of 3 amendments in support of prescription drug importation shows the Senate’s strong support for passage of comprehensive importation legislation.
Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, this is about reimportation. There is a clear majority in the Congress to pass reimportation legislation. I think there is a clear 60-vote majority in the Senate to do so. So why aren’t we getting on with that business? Let’s do it. This simply says we should take this full-blown reimportation bill, with all the necessary safety provisions, and have that debate and vote on the floor of the Senate this year. It is as simple as that. We have the votes. Let’s do that.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, many of the Senators worked on this even prior to the Senator from Louisiana joining us in the Senate. I don’t object to the sense of the Senate. It will have no legislative impact and it has no relationship to the budget. It is 1 o’clock in the morning, 14 hours after we started voting. And on this issue, about 30 minutes ago, the managers of the bill indicated they would approve this. Yet my colleague insists on a recorded vote. I have fondly and affectionately pointed out that the Senate needs to be accepted. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

According to the Senate that has no legislative impact or relationship to the budget. I have no objection to it. We will vote for it. I observe again that the managers had agreed to this 30 minutes ago. I would have hoped we could have voice voted this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator’s comments. I only add my final comments that I was here Tuesday evening with this amendment, ready to briefly talk about this amendment and get a vote on the Senate rules on this amendment. For 48 hours, we did nothing in terms of votes.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 73, nays 23, as follows:
As a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I take seriously my responsibility to help craft a responsible budget for the Federal Government, and I know from long experience in working with my colleagues that this sense of responsibility is felt throughout the Congress. The overall amount of the annual appropriations bills forged by the Appropriations Committee and its 13 subcommittees comes in at or under the amount allocated under the budget process, and they often come in below the White House's recommended amount. Last year, the State and Foreign Operations appropriations bill that we brought to the Senate Floor last year for this fiscal year was $2 billion below the President's request.

Long ago I became used to seeing sensational headlines about spending priorities that are authored by Congress instead of by the executive branch. Lists are drawn up that label line item, chapter, and every project not explicitly proposed by the President as "pork-barrel spending"—regardless of their merit, need or importance to communities nationwide.

The Constitution confers the power of the purse to Congress, not to the President. As elected representatives from diverse districts, we each are closer to the needs of our states and communities than are the unelected staff in the White House. We also have an obligation to be responsive to our constituents' priorities.

As a senior member of the Appropriations Committee, I often advocate for projects that benefit Vermont and feel strongly that the carefully drawn initiatives that I have worked to secure have improved my State's infrastructure, economy and quality of life. Over the years I have secured funds to improve community wastewater systems, roads and bridges, public safety, and build affordable housing. These address real needs that often are unknown or overlooked by the federal bureaucracy. Similarly, I work each year to shape and address other priorities that are ignored in presidential budget requests, on issues ranging from developing safer antipersonnel landmines, or helping to save the lives of the poorest of the poor from preventable death or disease. Attempts to ban earmarks would limit the ability to address these and other initiatives.

The alternative would be to leave all spending decisions up to the executive branch, which—when given no direction by Congress—can descend into political favoritism, feasibility and retribution when it comes to choosing whose states receive Federal funding. That would also lessen accountability.

In 2007 the Democratic-led Congress added unprecedented transparency and accountability to the earmark process. More than ever before, we are now committed to openness and accountability. Projects receiving funds in fiscal year 2008 are identified by member,
The proponents of this amendment claim that they want to get our Nation’s checkbook in order, but what they do not say is that congressional earmarks are already paid for—the money is there to be spent, as prioritized by the appropriations bills. They urge my colleagues to support the President’s request to Congress for billions in emergency funding to continue the war in Iraq. Those dollars do not score against the budget, so the White House can advance the fiction that the President is fully responsible at the same time that he piles the debt for future generations.

Democracy depends on openness and accountability in government. Last year, the new Congress moved promptly to improve accountability by dramatically reducing earmark costs, and implementing a system of total transparency and total disclosure. We would be making a mistake to impose a rash and unprecedented moratorium on congressional earmarks. We will be shirking our constitutional responsibility by ceding the power of the purse to the Executive branch. I will vote no on the DeMint amendment, and I strongly urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the amendment offered by Senator from South Carolina that would create a point of order against consideration of any legislation that contains an earmark. I have stated in the past that I think earmark reform is a very good idea. I supported the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act, which was signed into the law last year and for the first time brought transparency into the earmark process. Additionally, I have fully supported the steps that have been taken to have greater transparency. I think to have legislation that brings light into the process is entirely appropriate.

I am concerned, however, that this amendment would cede Congress’s authority to participate in the appropriations process to the executive branch. Article I, section 8 provides the Congress with the power of the purse. As stated by the ranking member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, “this debate is not about the level of Federal spending, the size of the deficit, or the national debt. This debate is about who decides how Federal dollars are spent and where.” Congressional participation in the appropriations process is a fundamental constitutional issue and should not be readily yielded.

Additionally, I submit that Members of the House and Senate are intimately knowledgeable about the legitimate needs of their districts. It is important to recognize that members of Congress represent the constituents of their State, and there are a great many ethical issues that only Senators and Representatives know about. It is important that Senators and Representatives know more about their districts and States than the remote bureaucrats in Washington.

It is important to note the earmark allocation is a very small percent of the budget. Recognizing this fact, I was willing to make the tough decision to cut all of the earmarks in the appropriations bill when I was chairman of the Labor, Health and Human Services Subcommittee because there was insufficient funding available for healthcare, LIHEAP, and education.

For these reasons, I will oppose the amendment offered by Senator from South Carolina, but I look forward to working with my colleagues in the future on reforms that will increase transparency in the appropriations process.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to lend my strong support for the amendment offered by Senator DeMINT to impose a 1-year moratorium on earmarks. I thank him for his leadership on this important, fiscally responsible proposal, and am pleased to join with Senators McCASKILL, COBURN, Kyl, CORKER, BURR, and GRAHAM in cosponsoring the amendment. Additionally, Mr. President, I understand that my colleagues from New York, Senators Obama and Clinton, have recently signed on as cosponsors of our effort. I welcome them to our cause.

All of us in Congress should be paying very close attention to the current economic realities facing our country. Almost daily, we are informed of worsening news on the market front, widening subprime mortgage delinquencies, defaults, and foreclosures, declining housing values, and a broadening credit crunch affecting all sectors of the economy. Less than a month ago we passed an economic stimulus package in an effort to help arrest an even worse situation than exists now. While I have long railed against wasteful pork barrel spending, now more than ever, we have got to establish some commonsense budgetary guidelines to live within our means, just like most American families are doing, tightening their belts and not wasting their money on “wants” to ensure they have the funds available to cover their “needs.” We need to follow their lead. The American public is counting on us to represent their interests, not the special interests, and to stop spending their hard-earned tax dollars on needless earmarks.

Just over a year ago, in January 2007, 96 Members of the Senate voted to fund “fair and junket free” legislation in Washington when we voted to pass S. 1, the Legislative Transparency and Accountability Act of 2007. I was very proud to support the passage of that bill because in addition to sound ethics and lobbying reforms, which I had long championed, the bill also included the most far-reaching earmark reforms I had witnessed. Unfortunately, nearly all of the earmark reforms were gutted in the final version of the bill and I am committed to have to vote against its passage despite our support for some of the good reforms in the bill. We didn’t just miss... the opportunity to address a broken legislative system of earmarking. The opportunity was purposely and deliberately scuttled by those who didn’t want real earmark reforms, and they are the ones who had the seat at the table when the final version was drafted. And as I recall, not one of those seats was filled by a member of the minority party.

As a result, the earmarking practice continues, as proven by the more than 9,000 earmarks in the omnibus spending measure approved last December 18—3 months after S. 1 was enacted. Here is just a sampling of some of the earmarks that were included in the omnibus:

- $50,000 for the construction of a National Mule and Packers Museum in Bishop, CA;
- $100,000 for Cooters Pond Park in Prattville, AL;
- $625,000 for the Historic Congressional Cemetery;
- $1.628 million for animal vaccines in Greenport, NY;
- $477,000 for Barley Health Food Benefits in Beltsville, MD;
- $244,000 for Bee Research in Weslaco, TX;
- $10 million for the design and construction of the Derby Dam fish screen in Nevada to allow passage of fish;
- $1.796 million to develop an exhibit for the Thunder Bay National Marine Sanctuary in Michigan;
- $946,000 to the Father’s Day Rally Committee in Philadelphia, PA;
- $123,000 for International Mother’s Day Shrine in Grafton, WV;
- $707,000 for an Oyster Hatchery Economic Pilot Program, Morgan State University, MD;
- $449,500 for Horseshoe Crab Research, Virginia Tech, VA;
- $123,000 for the Polish American Cultural Center in Philadelphia, PA;
- $400,000 for the National Iron Worker’s Training Program;
- $350,000 for leafy spurge control in North Dakota;
- $1.75 million for the Hudson Valley Welcome Center in Hyde Park, NY.

Clearly, when it comes to earmarking in Congress, it is business as usual, business as usual. And that is what drives me and other sponsors of this amendment.

Long ago, a prominent member of the majority party in the House, Congressman HENRY WAXMAN, called for exactly what this amendment calls for: a moratorium on earmarks. Representative WAXMAN was quoted in the press as saying, “We have a problem in Congress. Unplanned spending through earmarks is out of control.” Congressman WAXMAN added “I think our best approach would be to suspend all earmarks for the 2009 appropriations cycle while we consider the right reforms for the earmark process.” You will not hear me say this very often, but I could not agree more with Congressman HENRY WAXMAN.

I encourage my colleagues to support this amendment. We need to start making tough choices around here—and we have to start today. We have to face the facts, and one fact is that we can’t continue to spend taxpayers’ dollars on wasteful, unnecessary pork-barrel projects or cater to the special interests any longer. The American people will not tolerate any more “bridges to nowhere,” and they shouldn’t.

AMENDMENT NO. 4297

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to speak about an amendment that would help our nation’s veterans. It is an extremely important program, the Federal traumatic brain injury—or TBI—program. This is the only Federal program that helps the 3.5 million Americans living with TBI and their families.

In 1996, I offered to create the Federal TBI program along with my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, most people had probably never heard of a traumatic brain injury. Many more people now are familiar with the term TBI because it has been increasingly highlighted in the media, but they may still not fully comprehend the gravity of such a condition.

TBI can strike anyone of any age without warning and with absolutely devastating results. This is common sense, it is often called the “silent epidemic.” TBI is defined as brain damage from externally inflicted trauma to the head resulting in significant impairment to an individual’s physical, psychosocial, and neurological abilities. According to the CDC, brain injuries are among the most likely types of injury to cause death or permanent disability.

People ages 15 to 24 years and those over age 75 are the two age groups at highest risk for TBI. Most TBI accidents, sports accidents, falls, and violence are the major causes of TBI. TBI is particularly common among young males and people of both sexes who are 75 years and older. Because of its unique nature, TBI affects the whole family and often results in huge medical and rehabilitation expenses over a lifetime.

TBI may also be caused by explosives, and medical experts have described it as the signature wound of the Iraq war. Up to two-thirds of injuries in the Iraq war may be brain injuries.

TBI affects people like no other condition simply because it affects the brain. Just imagine what the consequences could be if the brain did not work properly. The brain is the control center of the central nervous system and is responsible for behavior and information processing. It controls cognition, perception, memory, and the body’s ability to move. The brain is also in command of posture, reflexes, movement, and coordination, as well as motor skills and other forms of learning. It performs a variety of body functions automatically, such as coordinating blood pressure and body temperature and breathing.

Given this, it is clear that an injury to the brain is unpredictable and has the potential to cause catastrophic results. TBI can be mild, moderate, or severe, depending on the extent of the damage and the actual location of the injury. TBI can cause a host of physical, cognitive, emotional, and social effects. Results can be any-thing from complete recovery to permanent disability or death.

As I mentioned, TBI is different from other disabilities due to the severity of cognitive loss. Most rehabilitation programs are designed for people with physical disabilities, not cognitive disabilities. Cognitive impairments require more specialized accommodations than physical disabilities. Finding needed services is typically a logistical, financial, and psychological challenge for family members and other caregivers, however, more work needs to be done at both the national and State level to build an effective, durable service system for meeting the needs of individuals with TBI and their families. There are still too many dots that need to be connected. We must not stop now. We must sustain this program.

That is why I have been working with my colleague, Senator KENNEDY, to reauthorize the program once again. I am pleased that our TBI reauthorization bill—S. 793—passed the Senate by unanimous consent on December 11, 2007. Just this week, the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health acted on its companion bill, H.R. 1418, and amended it with language from our Senate bill. I am hopeful that we can secure a timely passage of this reauthorization and thereby reaffirm our commitment to helping the TBI community.

Under the President’s fiscal year 2009 budget proposal, funding is eliminated for this program. I support my President, and I support the need for funding programs with proven performance accountability while reducing the deficit; however, I disagree with the proposal to cut this important program—the only program that helps this vulnerable population.

I want to know that I am not the only one. This is not the first time elimination of the program has been proposed—but it keeps getting funded because others also feel it is an incredibly important program. It is a relatively small program, budget-wise, but that should not be a reason to ignore its significance or to let it fall by the wayside. That is why I have crafted this budget-neutral amendment to create a reserve fund of $9 million for the TBI program. This amendment will ensure the sustainability of this essential program, and the availability of services for individuals with TBI, and I urge my colleagues to support it.
Similarly, the Peace Corps, one of our most successful programs at both sharing American values and assistance while also exposing our young people to the peoples and cultures of other worlds, has seen its budget in real dollars cut by almost 40 percent since its inception in 1967. At a time when more and more failed states are in need of international peacekeeping missions, the United States is more than $700 million in arrears in U.N. peacekeeping dues. They recognize that our diplomatic, development, and economic engagement around the world not only lift the lives of others but also make us safer at home.

These investments in bringing stability, maternal and child survival programs, clean water and sanitation, economic development, and sustainable democratic institutions and processes create a foundation for potential military engagement. This amendment will not address all of our international engagement needs and challenges—that will only happen when we take such steps as closing Guantanamo, unequivocally renouncing torture, and taking responsibility for our contribution to global warming—but the amendment is an important step in the right direction.

Finally, I want to emphasize the importance of hard work and hard work and diversity in funding programs to fight HIV/AIDS, TB, and malaria, diseases that kill over 6 million people each year.

Through its contribution to the global fund, the U.S. has helped save almost 2 million lives in over 100 countries during the last 5 years. This highly successful program, which uses contributions from around the world and works directly with individual countries and their providers and organizations, is a leading force for the fight against disease, improving the lives of others, and improving America’s image around the world.

I believe America must work to meet a full one-third contribution to the fund’s efforts and I hope funds from this amendment can help meet this important goal.

I similarly urge the Senate to support the upcoming reauthorization of the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, also known as PEPFAR. The President deserves credit for supporting this effort—an effort that should be continued.
strengthen coordination among federal, state and local programs. We also need to do more to see that children have a safe and satisfactory environment to learn. Many schools across the country today are crumbling from neglect, which creates a discouraging, inadequate environment for learning. The backlog on repairs is now estimated at $100 billion, and we can’t afford to ignore it. This amendment makes a down payment on rebuilding the schools by authorizing $3 billion to begin the most urgently needed repairs.

Another key issue is the home heating crisis, which is also putting countless children across the country at unacceptable risk. They can’t grow and develop normally if their homes are too cold, and their families can’t even afford the fuel to cook their food. LIHEAP—the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program—was intended to help families in need pay their heating bills but it has not been sufficiently funded. Too many families are left out of the program, and left in the cold. The funds in this amendment will support millions of additional households, and bring vital assistance to those in need.

Finally, the amendment provides funds to expand the Food Stamp Program. In these difficult economic times, more and more Americans are struggling to put food on their table. Thirty-five million Americans live in hunger or on the verge of hunger, an increase of nearly 2 million under the Bush administration. One in every six children struggle with hunger in the United States each year. How can we let that happen in the richest country in the world?

The Food Stamp Program has long provided vital support for low-income families. It improves their children’s diet, their children’s health, and their children’s performance in school. The Sanders amendment will bring millions of additional families into the program, and give millions more children the chance for a brighter future.

Investing in our Nation’s children is the best money we can spend. The Sanders amendment provides the funds we need to truly start fulfilling our commitment to America’s children.

AMENDMENT NO. 2959

Mr. LEVIN. I am pleased to join Senator Collins today in offering the Collins-Levin energy independence amendment that sets forth important steps to be taken in the area of energy tax policy. The amendment that we are offering will provide some improvements to the work already done by the Budget Committee.

The budget resolution before us includes a reserve fund for clean energy and the environment that establishes a framework for Congress to enact legislation that will reduce our dependence on foreign oil, reduce our greenhouse gas emissions, and protect the environment. Tax incentives such as extension of the renewable energy production tax credit and the Clean Renewable Energy Bond, CREB, program will be key components of such legislation. Both will expire at the end of 2008, and both are critical to the development of new renewable energy projects. Without an extension of the production tax credit, many projects will be put on hold because they will be less financially viable. With the tax credit, these projects can go forward, and provide both investment in the economy and new jobs. Similarly, the CREB program provides interest free borrowing by public utilities for qualified projects, by providing a tax credit for the taxpayer holding the bond. Eligible renewable projects are the same as those that qualify for the new production tax credit, including wind, solar, biomass, geothermal energy, landfill gas, trash combustion, and qualified hydropower facilities.

The amendment we are offering today adds several important tax incentives that were included in the legislation under this reserve fund and it specifies an adjustment in the tax code that could be used to help pay for the tax credits proposed to be extended or established. The additions to the major oil companies will help us take strides toward increased use of renewable sources of energy and away from our dependence on oil.

I want to mention 3 tax incentives that are included in this amendment that have included in the legislation under this reserve fund and it specifies an adjustment in the tax code that could be used to help pay for the tax credits proposed to be extended or established. The additions to the major oil companies will help us take strides toward increased use of renewable sources of energy and away from our dependence on oil.

Of the amendments we are offering today also include tax credits for the following:

Finally, we propose a new tax credit for plug-in hybrid vehicles, including a tax credit for hybrid conversion kits that can modify current technologies with the latest in battery technology as it is developed. This new tax credit can provide a base tax credit of $3,000, with up to an additional $2,000 available based upon kilowatt hours of battery power capacity. This tax credit was previously included in the 2007 energy bill but not adopted in the final package. The combination of battery technology and advanced hybrid systems offer tremendous potential for reduction of oil consumption, but tax incentives will be necessary to offset the increased cost to consumers and to achieve widespread acceptance by consumers. These tax credits will accelerate significantly the availability of these new plug-in hybrid vehicles to consumers.

Lastly, I want to say something about the offset that we propose. Our budget resolution specifies that legislation under this reserve fund may include adjustments to the amortization of geological and geophysical expenditures for major integrated oil companies to help pay for the new tax incentives. In the event that major oil companies testified that they do not need all of these tax breaks. Adjustment to these tax breaks could provide billions over 5 years—with that investment put into renewable sources of energy instead. I believe that we can do both. These tax credits will help reduce our dependence on oil and protecting the environment.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, the Collins-Levin energy independence amendment will help set us on a path toward energy independence and provide a more sensible energy tax policy. The Collins-Levin energy independence amendment to the budget resolution specifies that legislation under the reserve fund for investing in clean energy projects and improving energy efficiency providing for certain settlements may also include tax credits for the following:

Our amendment expands energy tax credits to encourage replacement of old wood stoves with clean burning, more efficient stoves. Unfortunately, many of the wood stoves purchased decades ago are outdated, inefficient, and are contributing to both indoor and outdoor air pollution. The emissions from burning wood stoves present a serious health concern, contributing to such respiratory ailments as asthma and bronchitis. New, EPA-certified wood and wood pellet stoves can cut emissions by more than 70 percent and use as much as a third less firewood for the same amount of heat.

The production of ethanol from cellulosic sources and production of biodiesel fuels. These technologies each offer tremendous potential for reductions in our gasoline consumption and in greenhouse gas emissions and will help move our petroleum-based economy toward a renewable, sustainable forest bio-economy.
The purchase of plug-in hybrid electric drive vehicles. The combination of advanced battery technology and advanced hybrid systems offer tremendous potential for reduction of oil consumption, but tax incentives will be necessary to offset the increased cost to consumers and achieve widespread acceptance by consumers. It is estimated that a plug-in hybrid could get the equivalent of 100 MPG, having a large impact on reducing our use of oil.

We would pay for these by scaling back a tax preference for large oil companies which their executives have testified they do not need. The amendment also specifies that legislation under this reserve fund may include adjustments to the amortization of geological and geophysical expenditures by integrated oil companies to help pay for the tax incentives.

In 2005, the major oil companies have conceded that they do not need this tax break, adjustments to this tax break could provide billions over 5 years. There is no reason to provide reduced tax rates for one of the world’s most profitable industries at a time when so many families and small businesses are struggling. We need to address the long-term challenge of reducing our reliance on imported oil.

AMENDMENT NO. 4195

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have been a strong proponent for repeal of the estate tax. Over the years, I have voted repeatedly to get rid of this tax. It harms American families, farms, and businesses.

Once I realized that repeal would not be enacted immediately, however, I worked to get a compromise for the American people. I am continuing that fight.

Last fall, during the farm tax moratorium, I announced my goal to develop a workable estate tax compromise that could be passed this year. I continue to be committed to that goal.

As chairman of the Finance Committee, I have been using the Senate process to fully analyze what we need to do. I have been holding hearings on effective estate tax reform.

The first estate tax hearing was held in November. The hearing focused on the scope of the problem. We had a second hearing yesterday to explore alternatives to our current estate tax system.

And in April, the Finance Committee will hold a final hearing to discuss reforms to our current system that go beyond rates and exemptions.

After those hearings, we plan to roll up our sleeves and begin working on an estate tax bill—a bill that will pass in the Senate. Once we develop that bill, we will have a markup in Committee.

My goal is an estate tax bill that will get enough support to pass. That goal will take time and work on both sides.

AMENDMENT NO. 4197

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to lend my strong support for the amendment offered by Senator GRAHAM. We should always strive keep taxes low, but the threat of higher taxes is especially damaging during this time of subpar economic growth. I thank him for his leadership on this important, fiscally responsible proposal, and am pleased to join as a co-sponsor. I believe this amendment addresses the most important issue among any that will be discussed during this budget debate, and the one that most clearly defines the differing governing philosophies between the majority and the Democrats: The Democrat-controlled Senate wants to raise taxes by $1.2 trillion and immediately spend those tax dollars, while the Republicans want to prevent tax increases and reduce wasteful spending. It really is that simple.

All of us should be paying very close attention to the current economic realities facing our country. Almost daily, we are informed of worsening news on the market front, widening subprime mortgage defaults, and foreclosures, declining housing values, and a broadening credit crunch affecting all sectors of the economy. But we also need to look beyond the economic news—we need to focus on the American families who are struggling as a consequence, some close to giving up hope, and we need to help them. Having spent the past weeks and months traveling across America, I have heard first hand of the difficulties facing so many hardworking families. I assure you that not one of them has asked for higher taxes.

Instead, we should be focused on sound, meaningful pro-growth policies that will help create jobs. But the one thing that we should not do, under any circumstances given our present economy, is to raise taxes on American workers who are already struggling to put food on their tables and gas in their cars.

I have long fought against tax increases, as have my other colleagues supporting this amendment. This Congress has the power to keep taxes low. Instead, the majority party is actively seeking damaging tax increases on a broad spectrum of Americans 116 million taxpayers—$1,893 increase; 44 million women—$2,121 increase; 48 million married couples—$3,007 increase; 43 million families with children—$2,323 increase; 12 million single women with dependents—$1,091 increase; 16 million seniors—$629 increase; 27 million small business owners—$4,066 increase.

I oppose these efforts because millions of middle-class families will be hit with higher taxes, not just the rich. In fact, I believe the overwhelming tax increases that will occur under this budget will hit overwhelmingly the middle class.

Let me offer just a few examples of how families will be impacted if we fail to provide tax relief that our amendment would provide. A family of four with two children who earn $50,000 annual income today—$53,400 in 2011—would see a $2,155 increase, from $1,128 to $3,283, or a 191-percent higher tax bill. A family of four with two children who earn $60,000 annual income today—$64,100 in 2011—would see a $1,901 increase, from $2,733 to $4,634, or a 70-percent higher tax bill.

Instead of increasing taxes as the Democrats’ budget resolution envisions, and in turn spending that money on more Federal programs, or worse, earmarks, we should be focusing on less government, not more. Americans want jobs, not new Federal programs. Yet this budget provides for the largest tax increase in history—$1.2 trillion. And, not surprising, it calls for the largest spending increase in history—$1 trillion. And what does that get the average American family: a $2,300 tax increase. Thanks, but no thanks. Keep their taxes low and stop spending so much of their money—that is what most Americans will say—and I know because I hear that every single day.

What we should be doing within this budget resolution is considering the best long-term economic approach and acting accordingly. We need to adopt the amendment to ourpling tax increase for millions of Americans. We need to adopt the DeMint earmark moratorium amendment, which I am pleased to also cosponsor, to rein in wasteful pork-barrel spending. We should eliminate the AMT, not just provide another 1-year patch as the Democrats are suggesting. These are steps we should take now to end the uncertainty facing American families and businesses—not raising taxes by $1.2 trillion.

As I said, this is a defining moment. American families want us to fix our economy and help those along the way who are struggling the most. We have much ahead of us to do, and, unfortunately, the tax-and-spend budget resolution before us does not get us to where we need to be. Even worse, it is taking the country in the wrong direction.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.
In 2001, Congress doubled the child tax credit from $500 to $1,000, and I along with the Senator from Arkansas pushed to make the child tax credit refundable for workers making around the minimum wage as well. As enacted, a portion of a taxpayer’s earnings up to $12,000 would be refundable beginning in 2009, with the indexed, only taxpayers earning over $10,000 threshold above the indexed $10,000 threshold.

The consequences of inaction are serious for low-income Americans living paycheck-to-paycheck. It means that tens of thousands of low-income families will be completely ineligible for a credit they should receive. This year, because the income threshold is indexed, only taxpayers earning over $12,000 are eligible to receive the refundable portion of the child tax credit. Low-income families earning less than $12,050 are shut out of the child tax credit completely.

Today I am introducing legislation, the Working Family Child Assistance Act, with Senators LINCOLN, OBAMA, and ROCKEFELLER that will enable more hardworking, low-income families to receive the refundable child tax credit this year. My legislation returns the amount of income a family must earn to qualify for the child tax credit to $10,000. Moreover, my bill would “de-index” the $10,000 threshold for inflation, so families failing to get a raise each year would not lose benefits.

The Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated that this amendment will allow an additional 600,000 families to benefit from the refundable child tax credit. The Maine Department of Revenue estimates that 16,700 families in Maine alone would benefit from our proposal. Two thousand of these Maine families would otherwise be completely locked out of the refundable child tax credit under current law.

I am committed to this issue, thank the Senator from Arkansas, and urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this critical amendment that will make the child tax credit available to 2 million children who would otherwise lose this critical benefit. This amendment is identical to the refundable child credit proposal the Senate passed in May 2001 as part of its version of that year’s tax bill.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise to speak on an amendment, which passed today, that I introduced with my colleagues Senators Pryor and Bingaman. The amendment will create a deficit-neutral reserve fund for science parks. This deficit-neutral reserve fund will help highlight the need for funding so that critical industry can continue to expand. Science parks are concentrated high-tech, science, and research-related businesses, and are an important tool in strengthening America’s global competitiveness. Through the development of competitive technology, competing and complementary companies working within close quarters are able to build on each other’s ideas when entering the national and global marketplace. Unlike well-known industrial parks, science parks primarily focus on innovation and product advancement. These parks are a vital part of the Nation’s economy, creating 2.57 jobs for each core job in a science park.

As a strong supporter of expanding America’s science parks, I am the lead cosponsor of S. 1371, legislation which provides grants and loan guarantees to promote the development and construction of science, research, and technology parks. I am committed to ensuring increased investment in new and existing science, research, and technology parks throughout the U.S. This amendment highlights that science parks need more funding to help drive innovation and regional entrepreneurship by enabling existing science parks to make needed renovations while also encouraging rural and urban States to undertake studies on developing their own successful regional science clusters.

Congress recently passed, and the President signed into law, the “America Competes Act,” legislation authorizing $43 billion of new funding over the next five years. Our amendment will boost Federal investment in math and science education programs. Building on the efforts of the America Competes Act by increasing research funding and education for our innovative workforce is vital, and this amendment will help ensure that this workforce is provided with a place in which to operate.

Residency in science parks provides businesses numerous advantages such as access to a range of management, marketing, and financial services. At its heart, a science park provides an organized link to local research centers or universities, providing resident companies with constant access to the expertise, knowledge, and technology they need to succeed. Innovation centers are specifically geared towards the needs of new and small companies, providing a controlled environment for the incubation of firms and the achievement of high growth.

In my home State of Maine, we simply do not have the population density in any given area to support traditional science parks. However, Maine has been a national leader in providing business “incubation” services. Incubators, like this amendment, are critical to the success of new companies. To help start-up entrepreneurial companies in Maine, centers around the State provide business support tailored to companies in their region. The benefit of business incubators in Maine has been nothing short of monumental, with 87 percent of all businesses that graduate from incubators remaining in business. The seven technology centers located throughout Maine have played a pivotal role in promoting technology-led economic growth and enhancing their own regional competitive advantages. Under this amendment, funding can be made available for not only science parks, but business incubators may also be eligible for assistance.

It is also vital to point out that the jobs science parks create reflect the needs of a high-tech, innovative, and global marketplace. Science parks enable the Nation’s capacity to innovate is a key reason why our economy continues to grow and remains the envy of the world. Through America’s investments in science and technology, we continually change our country for the better. Ideas by innovative Americans in the private and public sectors have paid enormous dividends, improving the lives of millions throughout the world. We must continue to encourage the advancement of this vital sector if America is to continue to be at the forefront of innovation. I thank my colleagues for their support of this amendment, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to secure additional funding to ensure the growth and prosperity of science parks.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. Secretary, I want to talk for a moment about how important it is to encourage physicians to adopt e-prescribing. Some studies suggest that e-prescribing could save the Nation tens of billions of dollars. It can prevent doctors from prescribing a drug to a patient when he is allergic to it. It can prevent doctors from prescribing a drug that could cause dangerous interactions with a drug the patient is already taking. It can help doctors better use health plan formularies, saving themselves time and their patients money.

Senator SUNUNU knew this years ago. Well ahead of others, he was pushing to give incentives to physicians to buy and implement e-prescribing systems. Senator SUNUNU introduced a bill 3 years ago, but Congress wasn’t ready to take his lead. We should be ready now. Studies show that only 11 percent of physicians are using e-prescribing.

Adopting e-prescribing isn’t cost-free to doctors. Not only must they invest in the technology, but they also must reengineer their practices. This means lost time and money. And many doctors, especially rural doctors, cannot afford that. So providing some financial incentives to get them started makes a lot of sense.

There is bipartisan support for e-prescribing. Many members of the Finance Committee, Democrats and Republicans alike, have said how important they think it is. The administration, too, supports e-prescribing as an integral part of electronic health records. With all this support, it is time to get this job done. I support Senator SUNUNU’s amendment to provide financial incentives to encourage physicians to adopt e-prescribing. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.
Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss my amendment to the fiscal year 2009 budget resolution. S. Con. Res. 70, which condemns the unwise practice of diversion of funds from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, USPTO.

By stopping the short-sighted practice of fee-diversion, Congress would ensure that all funds collected are available to modernize the USPTO and increase the number of examiners so that U.S. entrepreneurs receive swift, precise decisions to secure their intellectual property.

The patent system is the bedrock of innovation, especially in today’s global economy. The USPTO is the sole intellectual property policy office in the U.S. Government and a leading agency for intellectual property protection and enforcement worldwide. The nature of the USPTO’s workload is constantly evolving and increasing year by year, and requires active, responsive management to keep the agency abreast of the ever-increasing number of patent applications. The backlog of unfinished applications reflects the vigorous, innovative spirit that has made America a world leader in science, engineering, and technology. No doubt, the urgent need for the USPTO to keep almost all of its fees will be a challenge for the next fiscal year.

Patent applications reflect cutting-edge technology, and are increasingly complex. More than ever, resources commensurate with the burdens placed on examiners are needed to efficiently and accurately prosecute patent applications. The backlog of unfinished applications for U.S. patents might reach well over 800,000 this year alone. It makes no sense to me why Congress would siphon off funds from the USPTO at this crucial time. It is the time to act to protect this important agency, which is so vital to our Nation’s economy.

Last year alone, more than 407,600 applications were filed at the USPTO. The sheer volume of patent applications reflects the vibrant, innovative spirit that has made America a world leader in science, engineering, and technology. No doubt, the number of applications is hampering the agency’s ability to keep pace with the innovative thought of applicants and to be flexible with the emergence of new technologies.

By prohibiting the practice of diverting fees to pay for other programs, the agency would be able to ensure that the fees paid by inventors are used solely for USPTO operations. The resources-starved agency is still trying to recover from the almost $750 million in patent and trademark application fees that were diverted away from USPTO between 1992 and 2004. As a result, the agency has been unable to hire, train, and retain the number of qualified examiners needed to handle the ever-increasing number of patent application filings. Moreover, the practice of diversion has inhibited the agency from playing more of a key role in combating counterfeiting and piracy, both domestically and abroad.

I note that the Congress and the administration have permitted the USPTO to keep almost all of its fees for the last 3 fiscal years. But, there is nothing to prevent this devastating practice of fee diversion from happening in the future. That senseless starving of the USPTO must end.

I believe this sense of the Senate is the first step in acknowledging that Congress must act in short order to stop depriving the USPTO of funds it so desperately needs. This senseless mismanagement of the USPTO is hampering the agency from its intended use, especially during these trying economic times.

For all of the above reasons, I encourage my colleagues to support this sense of the Senate.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the budget resolution that is before the Senate today. I want to thank Chairman CONRAD for his leadership—he and the Budget Committee must get together a smart, fiscally disciplined budget that will help put our economy back on track while bringing our budget into balance by 2012.

This is the time of year when middle-class families across the country are sitting down at their kitchen tables with stacks of bills, tax forms, and a calculator. They are adding up expenses and incomes—and the numbers are not good.

The cost of health insurance is up. Mortgage payments are up. Gas prices are up. Food prices are up. Heating bills are up. Inflation is up. Unemployment is up.

Families’ expenses are on the rise, but, for the last 7 years, wages have not kept pace. In times like these, it is hard to balance a budget, but American families don’t have a choice. They either balance their budget or face debts and bankruptcy.

The Federal Government should take a lesson from American families: when pennies are tight, we need to be making smart, disciplined decisions that bring budgets back on track. That is no easy task when you consider the fiscal mess this Congress inherited.

In 2000, we were running $236 billion in budget surpluses. In 2006, the Federal budget deficit was $248 billion. The national debt will have gone from $5.8 trillion in 2001 to over $10 trillion by the end of this year. Think of that for one second: in just 8 years, this administration will have almost doubled the entire national debt. It is staggering.

And it is the reason that Americans who are feeling the squeeze of stagnant wages, rising costs, and declining home values, must agree to efforts to balance our budget, and the amendment that Senator Baucus has offered would provide further relief.

The Baucus amendment would permanently extend a series of critical middle-class tax cuts and create new tax relief for two important groups: (1) homeowners burdened by high property taxes and (2) veterans and servicemembers that are giving so much. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, I believe that Congress should use the budget resolution to demonstrate its strong support for the tax policies that provide relief for middle-class families.

The Baucus amendment makes permanent the 10-percent tax bracket, the child tax credit, the adoption credit, the dependent care credit, and marriage penalty relief.

It helps address the housing crisis by allowing middle-income taxpayers an “above-the-line” deduction for property taxes. This would allow homeowners to deduct their property taxes whether or not they itemize their deductions, providing relief to a segment of the population that has been hard-hit by recent economic troubles.

In addition, the Baucus amendment includes a series of permanent provisions designed to provide tax relief to veterans and servicemembers, including a provision to allow servicemembers to count combat pay as income for purposes of the earned income tax credit.

Finally, this amendment will pave the way for meaningful estate tax reform by preventing any increase in the estate tax above the 2009 rate and exemption levels. The Finance Committee is working toward the goal of enacting permanent and comprehensive reform, and the Baucus amendment is an important step in the right direction.

These are not the only tax priorities that we intend to pursue this year, but they are at the top of the list for urgent need and priority.

In addition to these tax cuts for middle-class families, the budget establishes and funds priorities and programs that have been neglected for far too long.

For our Armed Forces, the budget provides full funding for our troops in Iraq and Afghanistan but also helps rebuild a military that has been under intense strain for five years. The Army
Chief of Staff, General Casey, has been very clear that the current operational tempo and repeated deployments is putting the Army “out of balance,” and less able to respond to contingencies.

The National Guard has also been hit hard by the administration’s policies—units have been short equipment for training, disaster response, and other missions. This budget, though, provides over $49.1 billion to recruit, train, equip and maintain the National Guard and Reserve—units; these funds are desperately needed to reset the force. The budget also provides a 3.4-percent pay raise for military personnel, and re-

For our veterans, the budget provides $48.2 billion for discretionary programs, including medical care. This is $3.2 billion more than the President’s proposal and brings funding for the VA in line with the recommendations in the independent commission each year to guide funding for the VA.

I am specifically proud that the committee was able to fulfill my request to restore funding for major construction projects in the VA, including the Fitzsimmons Hospital in Denver. The administration has been dragging its feet on the construction of major medical facilities that have been planned for years. The foot-dragging has only caused costs to rise and veterans to have to wait longer for modern medical facilities. This is unacceptable. I appreciate Chairman CONRAD and the Budget Committee for working with me to include funding and report language that will help get the VA back on track on these projects.

In addition to the good things that this budget does to rebuild our military, help our veterans, and cut taxes for middle class families, it also provides adequate funding for programs that are fundamental to Americans’ economic security.

As a Senator from a State where 57 of our 64 counties rely on payment in lieu of taxes, PILT, to offset tax revenue that can not be collected from the federally owned lands in their county, I know how damaging the President’s cuts to PILT are. For a county like Mineral County, which has over half a million acres of Federal land, cuts to PILT are devastating to its budget. That is why I am proud that the Budget Resolution rejects the President’s cuts to PILT and creates a deficit neutral reserve fund to accommodate revenue losses that will fully fund the program for five years.

I am also cosponsoring an amendment that Senator ENZI is offering that will help stop the Federal Government from raiding the State’s share of mineral leasing revenues. Those revenues from oil and gas leases in Colorado, Wyoming, and across the West should be divided 50-50 between the state and the Federal Government. The administration succeeded in changing this formula in 2008, but the reserve fund that Senator ENZI’s amendment creates would help ensure that this does not happen again.

But these aren’t the only steps we can take in this budget to help rural economies. The budget resolution also makes a dramatic new investment in renewable energy development and research. It puts $2 billion into the Department of Energy EERE account, which helps finance development at labs like the National Renewable Energy Lab in Golden, CO. This is a $738 million increase over the President’s budget. It will help accelerate the renewable energy revolution that is sweeping across the country, giving new life to rural economies.

On health care, the budget once again lays the groundwork for expanding health care coverage for children. On two separate occasions last year, the Senate passed legislation that would have expanded the Children’s Health Insurance Program. If not for those vetoes, 3.8 million more children would have health insurance today.

We are not going to give up that fight, so the budget provides up to $50 billion for CHIP so that we can expand coverage to 6 million more children.

And on law enforcement, the budget resolution rejects the President’s proposal to eliminate the COPS program. This is the sixth straight year that the President has proposed massive cuts to a program that has put over 100,000 police officers on the streets. As a former attorney general, I can tell you just how misguided these cuts would be, if we allowed them to go through.

As American families sort through their finances, stack up their bills, and calculate their 2007 taxes in this period, they know they have to set priorities in their budgets. They expect the Federal Government to do the same: they expect Congress to assemble and pass a budget that is fiscally disciplined, that provides tax relief, and that funds those programs that are fundamental to our security and our economy.

I believe that this budget meets those objectives by putting us on track to balance the budget by 2012, despite the fiscal recklessness that will be the legacy of this administration.

I again want to thank Chairman CONRAD and the Budget Committee for all their work on this budget. I am proud to stand behind it.

Mr. KOHL, Mr. President, I will be supporting this budget resolution and would like to offer a few observations as we go forward.

I begin by expressing my appreciation to the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Budget Committee, as well as their talented staff. Plotting a fiscal roadmap to the future is such a difficult task. While everyone may not agree on the outcome, I think we all appreciate and commend the dedication and expertise of those who are at the center of the process.

Sandwiched as it was, between Super Bowl Sunday and Super Tuesday, the President’s budget generated only passing scrutiny beyond the beltway when it was submitted earlier this year. I believe the budget before us improves on that plan substantially.

The President put forward a $3 trillion budget with near-record projected deficits and the biggest defense expenditure since World War II. It recycled a number of ill-advised proposals that have been roundly rejected in the past. It put the squeeze on Medicare and Medicaid. And it shortchanged future generations. Congress can and will do better in addressing the challenges Americans face on education, health care, job creation, crime prevention, and high energy costs. I look forward to working with Democrats and Republicans alike in developing bills that put the priorities of the American people first.

This budget invests in education by increasing resources for education and training programs. It provides for $13 billion in education tax cuts, which will help make college more affordable. It provides a $2 billion Re-serve Fund to provide for school construction and facility improvements, as well as the authorization of the Higher Education Act and the extension of education tax credits and deductions.

This budget gives a little more hope for American families raising children with disabilities. The President’s budget proposed $11.3 billion in funding for special education, which represents the lowest level of support since fiscal year 2002. Last year, over 56,000 Wisconsin students with disabilities did not receive needed services due to chronic underfunding of IDEA, and the President’s budget sought to continue this shameful trend.

This budget is better for Head Start, a program that prepares low-income children to succeed in school. For every dollar invested in Head Start, Wisconsin reaps $15 in future higher earnings, fewer crimes, and less remedial education. Head Start’s funding has not kept pace with inflation or had any cost of living adjustments. In fact, Head Start has been cut by 11 percent since 2002. Mindful of this, the budget resolution rejects the President’s proposal to eliminate 48 education programs, including vital student financial aid programs like Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants and the Perkins Vocational Education Program. The President’s proposal would have translated into a loss of $24 million in Federal aid for Wisconsin career and technical education.

This budget rejects the over $200 billion in cuts to Medicare and Medicaid that the President proposed. Such large cuts to these programs cannot be sustained without our Nation’s health care safety net suffering. The result would be fewer people with access to health care, and that is not acceptable. In Wisconsin, this would have meant $1.3 billion in cuts to hospitals over 5 years, decreased enrollment in BadgerCare, and drastic cuts in Medicaid. I am pleased that my home State of Wisconsin will not see President Bush’s unrealistic health care funding cuts implemented.

This budget resolution provides for more funding for the National Institutes of Health and other health care programs. I believe we must continue to invest in the NIH.

This budget anticipates a $4 billion allocation for the Community Development Block Grant Program, an increase of $58 billion from last year. The CDBG Program is the largest program that helps cities and states create job opportunities and affordable housing. For Wisconsin, that would translate into approximately $74 million if the increase is enacted. Given the economic crisis we face, an investment in a program like CDBG is vital for communities to combat rising foreclosures and create more affordable housing units through rehabilitation of those properties.

This budget resolution would allow restoration of the Manufacturing Extension Partnership program, MEP, at $122 million. MEP helps manufacturers streamline operations, integrate new technologies, shorten production times and broaden access to market information. At a time when we want to increase economic activity and strengthen the manufacturing base of our Nation, the MEP is a fiscally sound investment of Federal resources.

I am especially pleased that the budget resolution includes a reserve fund to address child support enforcement. This gives Congress the leeway to repair the damage done under the Deficit Reduction Act which slashed funding for child support enforcement program. Counties in Wisconsin are feeling the crunch of those cuts—and so are families relying on child support to make ends meet. I am hopeful that Congress will take the opportunity laid out in the resolution to help these families by restoring cuts to the child support program.

And finally, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture, I would be remiss if I failed to observe the need for meaningful cooperation between the Executive and Legislative branches of government.

Our Nation faces extraordinary challenges. War and terrorism demand resources and attention. An aging population struggles to find the money to educate the next generation while battling increased health care costs. Our economy is struggling to create jobs. We need a budget that does better on all these counts. We need one that sensibly faces these challenges. This budget may not be perfect, but it gets us closer to that goal and therefore earns my support.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter dated March 12, 2008, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, WASHINGTON, DC, March 12, 2008.
Hon. Ed Schafer,
Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Washington, DC.

Dear Secretary Schafer: The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2008 included the following language as part of its Explanatory Notes:

''... the Department is directed, beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, and thereafter, to provide monthly reports on the program performance and estimated funding requirements for the WIC program. Timeframes addressed in these estimates should include the prior year, current year, and budget year of the President’s budget proposals. The Department shall consider, and include in these estimates, current participation trends and current Economic Research Service food cost estimates in developing updated requirements.

Although this measure was signed into law by the President on December 26, 2007, the first report pursuant to this directive was not received until March 4, 2008. It appears the Administration was either unable or unwilling to meet the established deadlines. This is unacceptable. The intent was clear, and similar disregard will not be tolerated in the future. The letter accompanying the initial report notes that, while the Administration has consistently sought to ensure that all eligible women, infants and children seeking to participate in the WIC program can be served, they acknowledge that the FACIAL statement, this directive would not have been necessary in the first place.

Congress faced incredible difficulty fully funding WIC in FY 08 because program costs increased by more than $633 million above the President’s budget request. This situation was exacerbated by USDA in any responsible manner, nor were specific counter-measures recommended. Sadly, the Administration only recognized this problem in the last possible moment (in response to a request by this Committee). That lack of responsiveness forced Congress to rely on updated estimates from an outside (and historically reliable) organization. While I value the expertise of outside organizations, I do not believe this is the best way to make important funding decisions on such a vital program. The circumstances we face demand much more meaningful cooperation between the Executive and Legislative branches of government.

As we consider this budget in the future, I am obliged as Chairman of the subcommittee to turn my attention to the Administration’s FY09 budget request for WIC. I urge the Administration to move its proposal to be detached from reality. It is difficult to fathom, given current economic trends, that the Administration realistically believes an increase of $80 million is an appropriate amount for WIC. (The inadequacy of this request is tacitly acknowledged elsewhere in the budget which anticipates $1.8 billion in “contingency” funding for program participation, rather than reserving it for unforeseeable circumstances, which is its intended purpose.)

Outside estimates already provided to the Congress show that the WIC level requested in the President’s budget is at least $300 million below the amount necessary to fully fund participation, assuming that Congress will continue to reject the Administration’s attempt to cap administrative funding. My grave fear is that the Administration’s inadequate WIC budget request will greatly diminish our ability to provide sufficient funding levels for other important functions of the Department.

Mr. Secretary, Congress did not create this WIC funding directive to be difficult or require more work on the part of USDA. We are making an honest attempt to avoid the absurdity of previous budgets. I view this issue as one of several in which we faced last year when WIC costs increased suddenly and substantially, and we were forced to cut other important items at USDA and the Department of Health and Human Services.

My hope was that these reports will be useful in protecting the integrity of USDA programs. They will be useless if the Administration refuses to provide the information in a timely and honest manner.

We are not asking for a budget amendment to supply information. The budget resolution orders the Administration to provide the information in a timely and honest manner. The Administration was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

Sincerely,
Hers Kohl,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this budget resolution lays out a fiscally responsible plan with the right priorities, which include job creation, tax breaks for the middle class, and programs that ensure the safety, health, and education of our Nation’s children.

Our Nation is enduring hard economic times. Congress cannot neglect its responsibility to enact priorities which help our Nation return to a state of economic stability and prosperity. Through this budget resolution, we will set the blueprint for its work to help reverse the current administration’s failed fiscal and economic policies.
Since 2001, we have lost over 3 million manufacturing jobs nationwide. My home State of Michigan has lost over 250,000 manufacturing-related jobs. The manufacturing industry faces pressure from international corporations that are subsidized by their respective governments. The American manufacturing sector needs to act to keep American manufacturing companies competitive in the global marketplace and competing on a level playing field.

That is why I am glad that the Budget Committee included in this resolution my proposal to establish a deficit-neutral reserve fund to promote American manufacturing. Congress needs to act to revitalize our domestic manufacturing sector.

The American Manufacturing Initiative, which I announced last year with a number of my colleagues, would help address critical needs in the manufacturing sector by increasing Federal support for research and development; expanding and effectively funding manufacturing programs across the Federal government; increasing support for the development of alternative fuels and leap-ahead automotive and energy technologies; and creating tax incentives to encourage commercial U.S.-based production of advanced technologies and supporting infrastructure. Over the last year, we have been able to give more support to some components of the AMI—primarily increasing funding levels for the Manufacturing Extension Partnership and the Technology Innovation Program and providing significant new funding for defense manufacturing programs—but much more needs to be done.

I look forward to continuing to work with my colleagues and the next president to support the manufacturing sector in a meaningful way, and make a wise investment in the long-term growth, health, and stability of the manufacturing industry.

I am also pleased that this budget paves the way for a second, much-needed, economic stimulus package. The economic stimulus package that passed in January of this year was a very modest first step toward addressing our economy’s problems. Further initiatives such as an extension of unemployment insurance and housing relief are urgently needed and this budget provides $35 billion toward that effort. The completion of the pay-as-you-go rule, which would require any new spending or tax cuts to be paid for elsewhere in the budget unless a supermajority of at least 60 votes in the Senate agrees otherwise, shows that the Senate is committed to reversing the administration’s digging into a deeper and deeper ditch of debt. I hope the Senate will live up to this important standard we set for ourselves.

This budget resolution will also allow for more targeted tax relief for middle-class families by shielding them from the alternative minimum tax. Congress has long known that this is the only fair thing to do for America’s middle-class families, since the tax was never intended to impact them in the first place.

I am also pleased that we passed the Baucus amendment to pave the way for extending important tax cuts that help working families, including a tax credit provided for each child in a family and relief from the joint-filing penalty paid by America’s married couples. It also extends estate tax provisions of the 2009 Bailout Bill, tax reform legislation that I supported because married couples would be able to pass on to their beneficiaries estates worth up to $7 million before they become subject to the estate tax. The Baucus amendment also includes fully paid-for tax relief to members of America’s military, including a provision allowing combat pay to count toward a refundable federal income tax credit.

I am pleased that the Senate adopted the Collins-Levin amendment, which sets forth important steps to be taken in the area of energy tax policy.

Specifically, our amendment proposes extension of the current production tax credit for biodiesel fuel and the small-producer tax credit, both of which will expire at the end of 2008. Many of our small biodiesel producers are already having a hard time now because of the increasing prices of feedstock. Without this tax credit, they may not be able to stay afloat and we could lose these new sources of biofuels. We cannot afford to do that.

We also propose a new production tax credit for cellulosic ethanol, up to a limit of 60 million gallons. Ethanol produced from cellulosic sources offers the potential to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 80 percent or more. Again, this is a necessary boost needed by these businesses as they develop cellulosic ethanol to ensure that they are able to bring the technology to commercialization.

Finally, we propose a new tax credit for plug-in hybrid vehicles, including a tax credit for conversion kits that can modify current technologies with the latest in battery technology as it is developed. The combination of advanced battery technology and advanced hybrid systems offer tremendous potential for reduction of oil consumption, but tax incentives will be necessary to offset the increased cost to consumers and to achieve widespread acceptance by consumers. These tax credits will accelerate significantly the availability of these new plug-in hybrid vehicles to consumers.

I am also pleased that this budget plan provides for Congress to go after the offshore tax haven and tax shelter abuse problem, which must be addressed to keep the Treasury of up to $100 billion a year, and shift the tax burden from high income persons and companies who are principal users of offshore tax havens onto the backs of working families who pay their taxes.

This budget plan can provide for ample revenues by shutting them down, which is not only reasonable, but crucial to improving the integrity of our tax system. I applaud Chairman Conrad and the Budget Committee, as well as the Finance Committee and Chairman Baucus and Ranking Member Grassley, for their efforts on this front, and I look forward to working with them and other allies on this issue as we address these problems over the next year.

The blueprint set forth in this resolution is worthy of support. It sets us on a course of fiscal responsibility and paves the way for important investments in America’s future.

Mr. Lautenberg. Mr. President, from 1997 to 2000, I served as ranking member of the Senate Budget Committee alongside Chairman Domenici, and I am proud to say that by the end of my tenure, the Federal Government had a budget surplus for the first time.

Today we face a starkly different picture. Our country is more in debt than ever, owing an astounding $9.3 trillion.
Under President Bush’s watch, the national debt will have almost doubled, and he has sacrificed the stability of our economy in the process. He has effectively taken our Nation from one of economic stability and prosperity to a nation on the brink of recession, and our children and grandchildren will be stuck with the bill for generations to come.

Each year, the President has a chance to do the right thing and propose to Congress a responsible budget which meets the needs of our country and is fair to all Americans. I have been extremely disappointed these last 8 years as President Bush has continually presented us with budget proposals that have resulted in four of the five highest deficits in our country’s history, leaving us with a staggering budget deficit of hundreds of billions of dollars. At the same time, his proposals have rewarded the wealthiest members of our society at the expense of the middle-class, and Americans struggling to earn a living.

I am proud to have helped ensure that Congress rejected these Bush proposals. Once again this year, we find ourselves in the same process.

In rejecting President Bush’s fiscal year 2009 budget proposal, we in the Senate Budget Committee under the leadership of Chairman Conrad have brought forward a budget that is not only fiscally responsible but also morally responsible. As a member of this committee, I was pleased to be able to help shape this budget.

This budget focuses on the real problems that Americans face. It includes tax relief for the middle class, makes much needed investments in our economy and our future, and keeps America safe by responsibly funding our homeland security needs.

One of the most pressing concerns to New Jerseyans, and all Americans, is tax relief for the middle class.

New Jerseyans in particular need relief from the unfair and unintended consequences of the alternative minimum tax, AMT. This tax was first imposed on the richest 15 families to ensure they did not abuse loopholes to avoid paying any taxes at all. But it has grown to ensnare far too many people, even members of the middle class, and has become an unfair and unintended tax. That is why it is so important that our budget includes AMT relief for millions New Jerseyans who would otherwise be forced to pay this tax. That is a significant tax cut for the middle class.

I am pleased our budget includes this AMT relief, and I will continue to work diligently to help create a lasting solution to provide sufficient tax relief—from the AMT and other Federal taxes—for those who need it in New Jersey and nationwide.

I am also proud to be a cosponsor of the Bush amendment to the budget, which the Senate passed today, to provide further tax relief for America’s working families.

Our amendment permanently extends a lowered tax rate that affects every single-wage-earning American by keeping the tax rate on the first $7,000 of income earned to only 10 percent. This provision will save taxpayers an average of $490 per year.

Our amendment also provides for the permanent extension of marriage penalty relief. According to the latest estimates, this extension will benefit 29.5 million Americans with an average savings of $686 per year. In addition, our amendment extends the refundable child tax credit which will provide an average of $1,025 in tax relief to some 31.3 million families.

Important especially to New Jerseyans, this amendment provides new relief from high property taxes. We pay among the highest property taxes in the country, and many in our State need help.

While two-thirds of all Americans are homeowners, only one-third of homeowning families itemize deductions on their tax returns. That leaves 26.3 million Americans without a property tax deduction benefit, over 451,000 of whom live in New Jersey.

Our amendment provides tax relief to those who itemize by creating a standard property tax deduction. For single filers, this amendment will provide $500 in property tax relief and for joint filers that number increases to $1,000 in property tax relief.

As we consider all of the middle-class tax relief, our budget prepares for our economy’s future by making the necessary investments in critical priorities, such as infrastructure, energy, and education.

To keep America moving, we must invest in our transportation infrastructure.

Last year, we saw the I-35W bridge collapse in Minneapolis, MN. Some 25 percent of our bridges are still structurally deficient or functionally obsolete. Much of our surface infrastructure is in disrepair, and it will cost billions to improve it.

But less than 1 year after the collapse in Minneapolis, President Bush wants to cut funding for high and bridge repair by almost $2 billion.

He also wants to fund transit programs at $200 million below the level that Congress authorized. These cuts hurt States like New Jersey that need transit funding the most, and working families who depend on this transportation.

All of these programs are vital to commuters and travelers in New Jersey. After all, New Jersey is the most densely populated State in the country and is even more densely populated than the countries of India and Japan.

Traffic congestion on our roads costs our country nearly $80 billion a year—twice the Federal budget for highways. Commuters cannot afford to sit in traffic when gas prices are well over $3 a gallon, and our environment cannot afford the greenhouse gas emissions from these idling cars.

Our budget restores billions of dollars President Bush proposed in cuts to transportation and provides even more money to rebuild the backbone of our economy—our bridges, highways, skyways, seaports, airports, and transit systems.

Our budget is expected to create 475,000 new transportation jobs, 7,900 in New Jersey alone. I was proud to sponsor an amendment to this budget to ensure that infrastructure projects involving rail transportation, including high-speed rail, airports, and seaports are eligible for this new funding.

Airline travelers fared no better under President Bush’s budget proposal. The Bush administration’s failures on aviation have led to one of the worst years ever for flight delays. More than one in four flights was late. Our air traffic control system remains dangerously understaffed, and air traffic controllers are overworked and fatigued. And there is a lack of leadership in preventing new airport bills.

One billion airline passengers will be flying each year by 2015. Now is no time to be cutting funding for our Nation’s airports and runways by $705 million, as President Bush proposes.

Our budget restores these cuts to aviation infrastructure to keep passengers moving.

President Bush is also trying once again to bankrupt Amtrak.

In a time of record high gas prices and record airport bills, members of Congress should not be taking away this popular, energy-efficient, and convenient travel option, which people are using in record numbers.

Last October, the Senate passed my legislation with former Senator Trent Lott to provide $11.4 billion for Amtrak to expand passenger rail in the United States, and I am working with my House colleagues to get it taken up and passed into law this year. It is time for the Senate to sponsor an amendment to this budget that includes Amtrak funding.

I want to thank Chairman Conrad working with me to ensure Amtrak’s operations and capital needs are fully funded in this budget—a total of $1.8 billion, plus an additional $250 million for State passenger rail grants.

Another key feature of our budget is tackling the extremely important energy and environmental problems we are facing. Our budget shows real commitment to tackling our nation’s environmental challenges.

The proposal by President Bush would cut funding for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, which provides much needed assistance for many contend with expensive bills to heat their homes in the winter. The Senate proposal also proposed major cuts to programs that reduce our greenhouse gas emissions and help us combat global warming—the most serious environmental threat we face. At a time when the science of global warming is certain, President Bush attempted to cut the budget for renewable energy by almost 30 percent. This is not a strategy to fight the climate crisis; this is simply the same old, ineffective energy policy.

Our budget not only restores these cuts but goes even further and calls for new programs that will reduce our dependence on foreign oil and help us fight global climate change. When it comes to education, our budget addresses the real problems American families face with rising tuition costs. While New Jerseyans and the rest of the Nation have seen average tuition costs go up 52 percent since 2000, President Bush has continued to propose massive cuts in education programs. That is no way to ensure the future of Nation.

Not only does our budget reject these proposed cuts but it increases education funding by an additional $5 billion. That is a serious commitment to education.

Our budget puts in place policies that will help our children get the education they need to compete in a global society. It increases money for Pell grants and student loan programs so that our students can afford to go to college and achieve their dreams. Our budget also provides increased funding for early education like Head Start and puts additional resources into our public schools.

Another issue of importance to all Americans is ever-rising health care costs. Since President Bush took office, health care premiums have risen 40 percent in New Jersey. Our budget restores proposed cuts to Medicare, Medicaid, and other important programs to ensure all members of our society get the health care they need. In addition, no responsible budget would be complete without dealing with the continuing threat of terrorism here in the United States.

While spending over $3 billion a week on the war in Iraq, President Bush has badly underfunded our homeland security needs, leaving our Nation at greater risk.

This risk is very real in New Jersey. The FBI has called the 2-mile stretch between Newark Liberty International Airport and Port Elizabeth, N.J. “the most dangerous two miles in the country” for terrorism.

Yet President Bush proposed cutting funding for State homeland security grant programs by almost 80 percent. We all know that homeland security begins with hometown security. President Bush inherited a country where crime is down thanks to successful, proven programs like COPS and Byrne Justice Assistance Grants, Byrne JAG.

But after declining for years, violent crime has gone up in each of the past 2 years. That is why President Bush wants to eliminate critical funding for local law enforcement under COPS and Byrne JAG.

Thankfully, our budget restores funding for these programs and reaffirms our commitment to keeping our communities safe.

When it comes to taking care of the men and women of our military, I am very pleased that we have recognized the sacrifices our career military retirees make by rejecting President Bush’s proposal for TRICARE enrollment fees and deductibles. This is something I have been working to fix permanently. I also strongly support the 4.2 percent pay raise for our military personnel that our Senate budget resolution proposes. I believe our service men and women deserve the best benefits that a grateful nation can provide.

Last year, President Bush proposed cutting Medicare. If you don’t provide the right services in homes and in schools, you can’t coordinate health care plans to keep kids and the elderly healthy.

In Maryland, this rule would mean 200,000 poor adults and children with disabilities or chronic health problems may not receive case management services. And in these tough fiscal times, my State will lose over $66 million and 1,400 jobs: mostly nursing and social work jobs.

Our budget also recognizes that families need a government that is on their side. However, the Bush budget shortchanges children with special needs and their families by not providing enough for IDEA. For instance, we all know that many individuals with Disabilities Education Act, or IDEA, passed in 1975 Congress promised to pay 40 percent of costs. Thirty three years later, we don’t even come close.

This year, IDEA should be funded at $23.5 billion, but it only got $11 billion. Bush talks about leaving no child behind, but his budget abandons a generation of children by making IDEA an unfunded mandate.

Senator SANDERS’ amendment, which I cosponsor, would ensure funding by $10 billion over the next 3 years and would dramatically improve services for 7 million children. These are children who can’t make it on their own and who may need individual services like special attention from teacher’s aides, speech therapy, and smaller classes.

These aren’t “extras.” They are essentials that may mean the difference between self-sufficiency and a life of dependence for our nation’s most vulnerable people.

I am for this budget because it takes care of NIH. NIH is a jewel in the Nation’s crown. It is saving lives and improving our Nation’s health by bringing discoveries to patients from the lab to the bedside. NIH needs adequate resources to meet its mission.

That is why I strongly supported doubling the NIH budget from $13.6 billion in 1998 to $27 billion in 2003, but this year the President reduced NIH. His budget flat funds NIH at $29.5 billion which doesn’t even keep up with inflation.

Shortchanging NIH means we slow down research and slow down our transition from research to treatment. We need this research to improve the treatments for autism, Alzheimer’s, diabetes, cancer, and heart disease.

I am on the side of science, which is why I joined my colleagues Senator HARKIN and Senator SPECTER to co-sponsor an amendment to increase the NIH budget by $2.1 billion. This additional funding will improve the health of the Nation by supporting research on causes, diagnosis, prevention, and cures. So this funding will save lives today and tomorrow.

Our budget should save lives, and it should also improve lives—especially for the most vulnerable. In December, President Bush announced a new rule by which said CMS won’t pay for most Medicare case management services. This cuts our most vulnerable citizens off from their social workers and nurses.

This rule is just wrong. Without case management, many people who need help will fall through the cracks.

Our budget provides relief to those being hit hardest by the current downturn of our economy.

It is clear that our economy is struggling. In response to that, this budget provides an additional $35 billion for a future stimulus bill to help families and businesses boost the economy.

I am hopeful that this stimulus bill will include funding for our States, including increased Medicaid funding and even more infrastructure dollars.

I commend Senator CONRAD for his leadership on this budget resolution, and I am proud to be a coauthor. It is a much needed step in the right direction.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I congratulate Senator CONRAD on this budget. He has done a brilliant job, and this bill will give us a safer country and a stronger economy. It will meet compelling human needs and take care of the long-range needs of America.

This budget reflects America’s leadership on this budget resolution, and I am proud to be a coauthor. It is a much needed step in the right direction.

Mr. President, I concoldhearted but I am proud that the Senate budget rejects these cuts and restores funding to $1.7 billion.

My home State of Maryland will receive $32 million this year. I know our communities need it—especially during these tough times. These services help families, who are scrimping and saving to stay afloat.

I know about social services block grants. Before I was "Senator Barb," I was "Social Worker Barb." The services I have talked about more than once—checking boxes and pushing paper; they are about helping people with their problems and meeting them where they are.

The Democratic budget also helps families by helping them keep what they earn for things that they need with smart tax breaks for the middle class. We do it responsibly and realistically by using the budget surplus to extend the tax breaks that matter to working families like the $1000 refundable credit, so families can make ends meet; like marriage tax penalty relief so that we don't put a tax on getting married; and like the 10 percent tax bracket so lower income working Americans keep more of their hard-earned pay check. Finally, we also make sure that AMT doesn't hit more middle-class families.

These are the tax breaks that help Main Street, not Wall Street, and they are tax breaks we can afford.

I am always going to fight for our first responders because we need to protect the Americans who protect us. But President Bush wants to eliminate Community Oriented Policing Program, COPS, funding. That is a $587 million cut from last year.

The COPS Program pays for cops on the beat because the way that you reduce crime is to increase cops. That is why Democrats added $599 million to our budget for COPS.

Firefighters also protect our communities. They need tools to protect themselves—and to protect us. Yet the Bush budget slashes funding for our first responders—eliminating one grant program for firefighters and cutting another grant program by $260 million.

They put their lives on the line every day; they should never be shortchanged by their government. That is why our budget rejects the administration's reckless cuts and adds $2.2 billion more for law enforcement and first responders.

The Democratic budget also supports our troops with what they need on the battlefield—and what they need when they come back home.

We fully fund the President's request for the military, and we take care of them here at home. I am so proud that Senator BAUCUS's amendment includes the Defenders of Freedom Act. These are tax breaks to reward soldiers for their service, a credit for businesses who keep National Guard and Reserve on their payrolls when reservists and guards are called to help their country and a tax break on money earned because of service to the Nation.

I want everyone to look at what the Bush budget does for our veterans. It is unacceptable that the President underfunded programs for vets. Promises made must be promises kept. Vets who fought our enemies on foreign battlefields; they shouldn't have to fight their own Government for the services and benefits they deserve.

Democrats understand, and we keep our word. We have a plan that provides an additional $3.2 billion to come up to the funding suggested by Independent Budget.

Finally, as the chairman of the sub-committee that funds science and our space program, I am pleased that the Democrats have an innovation budget. This is a strong budget for NASA: $38.7 billion for NASA. That is $1 billion more than the President's request. NASA is our premier innovation agency. It creates new technologies that create jobs and excites our next generation of scientists and engineers. These extra funds will allow us to reimburse NASA for the costs of returning the space shuttle to flight safely after the Columbia disaster. I have been asking for extra funding for several years, and I hope we can make it a reality this year in the CJS bill.

The budget also says that we must have a balanced space program of science, discovery, and space exploration and that we should work to close the 5-year gap in our human space flight program.

I support these goals and thank Chairman CONRAD for his leadership.

Yet I am disappointed that the budget does not recommend full funding for the American Competitiveness Initiative at the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Standards and Technology.

That is why I am supporting the Bingaman-Alexander amendment, to provide the fully authorized levels for these science agencies as recommended by the America COMPETES Act. This funding will provide critical investments in education in science, technology, engineering, and mathematic, STEM. This is the research that creates new technologies and new jobs.

It is an important time for America. Our economy is in trouble, and we need to spend wisely and are making the hard choices to make America stronger, invest in our future, and balance the Nation's checkbook.

The budget reflects the best of our country. It keeps commitments to vets and our first responders, invests in our kids and our future, and meets our economic challenges head on.

Let's get the job done and pass this budget. Americans deserve it, and the Senate needs to deliver.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I join my colleagues in expressing great concern for families struggling during these tough economic times. Costs are going up. Prices for everyday goods are increasing. Food costs are skyrocketing. Heating and electricity prices are on the rise. The price of gas is breaking all-time records. The family budget is being strapped. We all agree this is a time of great economic uncertainty.

But we disagree about how Congress should respond to this situation. What is the Federal Government's role? I will tell you precisely how we should respond—when we put food and fuel for families are going through the roof. We should not add to that burden by increasing the cost of the Federal Government. Unfortunately, that is precisely what my friends on the Democrat side plan to do with their budget. With the family budget under serious threat, the other side of the aisle plans to expand the federal budget—at the expense of the family budget. I say to my friends: if there was ever a time not to increase the costs people pay for the federal government, that time is now. Yet this budget contains the largest tax increase in America's history.

We all hear about rising energy costs. However, families are also taking another big hit in the pocketbook with food prices that are increasing at their fastest rates since 1990. Prices for many groceries are rising at double-digit rates. Milk prices increased 26 percent last year. The price for eggs is up 40 percent. Cheese prices have doubled from a year ago. Beef prices are up 50 percent. Flour is up about 20 percent since last year. Take away food and beverage prices are rising at 4 percent a year, which is the fastest rate of increase in 20 years. All indicators point to this trend continuing, if not worsening.

Food, which accounts for about 13 percent of the family budget, is not the only expense that has seen dramatic increases. Energy costs now consume about 4 percent of a family's budget. On Monday, gas prices set a record high of $3.27 per gallon. The oil prices broke the all-time, inflation-adjusted record and rose to $108 per barrel. The cost of heating and powering a home is rising. The Energy Department is forecasting sustained increases in the demand and prices of electricity and residential energy usage. It is important to remember that even modest increases in home energy prices have a significant impact on the budgets of middle-income Americans.

Undoubtedly, the costs of many items in the family budget are increasing. In this context, Democrats are rolling out their budget plan, and what do we see? Unbelievably, we see plans to fully increase the cost that families will pay for the Federal Government. With the cost of so many household essentials skyrocketing, why are we raising the cost of the Federal Government? This is the last thing the economy needs. And it is the last thing families need.

This year, the Federal Government will tax $21,604 per household, spend...
The budget we are considering contains a $1.2 trillion tax hike. On top of the thousands of dollars families are already paying for their health care, the Federal Government will increase, or top of food costs and energy costs reaching stratospheric levels, the majority party is rolling out a budget plan with record tax increases. This budget plan increases taxes by more than $2,300 each year for 43 million families. I turn to what these families are already paying.

I watch my colleagues on the other side come down to the floor one after another and complain that the Federal Government does not have enough money. Might I remind my friends that this budget is a $3 trillion budget. This government spends more money than the entire economies of most countries. In 2006, only two countries had entire economies—every good and service produced within their borders—bigger than $3 trillion. One was the United States. The other was Japan at $4 trillion. Germany ranked third in world GDP. Amazingly, my colleagues have proposed a budget that is bigger than Germany’s entire economy in 2006.

Under the Democrat’s budget, 43 million families face tax increases of $2,300. What could $2,300 buy for an American family? I started by talking about food costs, which are rising at the fastest rate in two decades. $2,300 could buy 8 month’s worth of groceries for a family. Then I talked about record-setting energy costs; $2,300 could buy a family’s electricity and home heating oil for an entire year.

Now more than ever, we need to protect the family budget from the Federal budget. The Democrat budget does exactly the opposite, containing massive tax increases. It deserves to be defeated.

While the family budget is under threat by Democrat’s nondefense spending, our Nation is under threat by global terrorist forces. We must support our courageous men and women in uniform by adequately funding defense spending.

The greatest trust placed upon Congress by the American people is to provide for their security by maintaining a strong national defense. It is a trust we cannot and should not fail. However, we are rapidly reaching a crossroads—a nexus that will determine America’s security for the next several decades.

To better understand where we are today, it is important to understand how we arrived at this point. This Nation’s historical pattern has been one of a small professional military in peacetime, rapidly supplemented by a mobilization of civilians during war, followed by a rapid demobilization at the war’s end. This demobilization or downsizing occurs within a context of how we arrived at this point. Afghanistan and Sudan, but there was no real change. This inadequate response has been cited as a factor emboldening al-Qaida to undertake further plans. WMD proliferation through-out the world reached an unprecedented level.

The Chinese government learned that it could rely on our acquiescence. They transferred prohibited weapons technology to North Korea, Pakistan, Iran, and other countries. The Chinese government was threatened to absorb Taiwan, and intimidated our regional treaty allies, South Korea, and Japan. During this period, our country concluded, as Secretary Gates put it, “that the nature of man and the world had changed for the worse.” We are currently engaged in a worldwide disarming and dismantling institutions important to our national security—in the process, giving ourselves a so-called “peace dividend” . . .

We were wrong. The reason I talk about this is because it highlights what can happen when we don’t adequately fund our military and provide it with stability and predictability about its future. The United States must build and sustain military capabilities required to maintain stability across the spectrum of conflict.

The next war will not be like the past one—history has taught us this. We cannot assume freedom of the seas, freedom of air and space, and freedom of the ocean to provide stability. America must be able to deter or defeat any threat, be it an insurgency or a challenge from a near-peer competitor. In order to provide this stability, Congress needs to guarantee a baseline in funding.

Guaranteeing a baseline budget, one that is indexed to our GDP, is the best way to accomplish this. Historically, defense spending was 4.6 percent in 1991 during the gulf war; 8.9 percent in 1968 during Vietnam; and 11.7 percent in 1953 during the Korean war. Across the last century, it has averaged about 5.7 percent. The fiscal year 2009 defense budget is $541.1 billion—approximately 3.3 percent of GDP. We can no longer afford to kid ourselves that we are still sending our sons and daughters out with the best equipment available. In some cases, we simply can’t match the quality of our competitors. In other cases, while we may have developed a superior system, we have restricted the quantity to a point where many of our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines are forced into battle with the older, inferior equipment.

Many other countries are able to buy avionics, airframes, and weapons—often mixed and matched together—to create aircraft that rival our current F-15, F-16, or Navy and Marine F-18, such as Russian Su-30s and 35s, or upgraded MiG-29s and MiG-29s. We can solve this problem if we decide to make the investment in our F-22 and F-35 programs, and buy the number needed to ensure American air superiority in the future. Despite the Air Force’s requirement for 381 F-22 Raptors, it is not needed to buy only the plan for the F-22. Some systems in the Army are overrunbetter artillery systems than the U.S. The British AS90, the Russian 2S19, the South African G6, and the German PzH 2000 are all superior in rate of fire and range to our Paladin. Though we are currently investing in Future Combat Systems, the Army has been forced to extend the life of our current fleet. Our Navy and Marine Corps are being challenged by a variety of threats ranging from near-peer competitors, to non-state and transnational actors, to rogue nations and pirates. While trying to surmount these problems and recapitalize their ships, submarines, aircraft, and ground equipment, they are being challenged across the globe. Russian and Chinese submarines continue to threaten our forces with China operating over 60 submarines. China, Japan, Australia, India, Malaysia, Pakistan, Indonesia, Singapore, Bangladesh, and South and North Korea either now have or are planning to acquire submarines. While most do not pose much of a threat to our most advanced fleet, that dynamic is changing. It is simply unacceptable that we have been forced into this predicament.

One can never predict future threats accurately. Our level of defense spending more closely resembles the resources needed to meet current and future threats. A Pentagon official claimed 15 years ago that in 10 years we would no longer need a standing army. This is not the only example of flawed strategic thinking. We have to predict the fall of the Soviet Union, or the rise in asymmetric warfare that we are currently engaged in. We built a force for conventional war against the Soviets in 50 years that was predicated upon the current engagement. We built a force for the collapse of the Soviet Union, or the rise in increased costs.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I will support the Senate budget resolution brought to the Senate by the Budget Committee and Chairman CONRAD. This budget resolution acknowledges that the new Congress started last year to restore fiscal responsibility and order to our Federal budget. I commend Chairman CONRAD and his colleagues on the Budget Committee for producing a responsible budget resolution that strives to meet the real needs of the American people and to optimize our Nation’s most pressing challenges and opportunities.

As we debate the budget, it is important to recall how we got to this point. When President Bush inherited a record Federal budget surplus. Instead of steering the country on a prudent course that would have helped prepare for the retirement of the baby boomers, support the pensions of working families, met the pressing needs of those who are struggling, and paid down our large national debt, the President immediately pushed through more than $1 trillion in tax cuts aimed at the wealthiest Americans and corporations.

Since then, the Bush administration has pursued fiscal policies of recklessness and squander that have short-circuited the priorities of hard-working families, children and seniors. For the Bush administration, investments in health care, education, housing, the anticrime and antidrug work of our law enforcement community, our first responders, and the rising home heating and electricity costs that a family can afford them have taken a back seat to a costly, misguided and mismanaged war in Iraq and to the administration’s disastrous fiscal policies here at home.

Now that a worsening housing slump, high gas prices and dampened consumer confidence have caused jitters throughout our Nation’s financial markets—leading to continued job losses and weaker-than-expected retail sales—the President’s continued fiscal mismanagement has hamstrung the government’s ability to provide needed investments in programs that will help hard-working American families weather the financial storm.

We cannot continue on the path of fiscal irresponsibility the current administration has set, by holding to a course that will cost more than $3 trillion in Iraq and ignoring the needs of our most important domestic programs. As far as the White House is concerned, anything goes when it comes to war. While the real priorities of the American people have been forced farther and farther back in the line.

With the budget plans of the past 2 years, the new Congress has ended the days of rubberstamping the President’s budget, and the process has begun of shifting our country in a new direction that will be better for hard-working Americans everywhere. By strengthening our national security, by investing in our infrastructure, increasing our energy independence and supporting our military veterans and first responders, the Senate’s budget plan puts the concerns of the working families of America front and center. Moreover, by carefully targeting and reallocating resources, the budget resolution would return us to Federal budget surpluses in 2012 and 2013 and accomplish this without raising new taxes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I support this alternative to the President’s deeply flawed budget policies.

The President submitted a budget request with a shocking price tag, $3.1 trillion. In the entire history of the Republic, the Congress has never had to grapple with such an enormous budget request. In the entire history of the Republic, the Congress has never had to reconcile such enormous deficits, the highest ever proposed by any administration. In the entire history of the Republic from George Washington, to Abraham Lincoln, through Franklin Roosevelt—in 220 years, after a Civil War, two World Wars, and the Cold War, after severe economic depressions, and stock market manipulations and crashes that eclipse anything we have seen in our lifetimes—the Congress has never, ever had to wrestle with such an alarming explosion in the national debt. No administration has ever proposed to borrow so much money. Once you look past the Orwellian rhetoric about earmarks, and see through the phoniness about domestic programs somehow paying for everything else, you come to inescapable conclusion that this administration’s policies have been an unmilitated, indisputable fiscal disaster.

What’s most worrisome, is that the President’s budget continues a dangerous practice of squeezing domestic agencies, and gambling that they can get by for another year, and another year, and yet another year on a starvation diet. Hurricane Katrina exposed the consequences of this kind of budgeting when disasters occur and agencies like FEMA do not have the resources they need to respond. The same thing happened at the Mine Safety and Health Administration, where the administration chipped away at the mine safety budget for 6 years until it had lost inspectors, and teetered on the edge of disaster daily. Coal miners died because of budget decisions of this administration. Federal prisons are dangerously understaffed. Food safety inspections are alarmingly lessened, and the money going to forgoing investments year after year to replace aging and deficient infrastructure, and that is going to come back to haunt us one day. There are consequences, sometimes deadly consequences, when the necessary operations of government are denied adequate funding.

Now the administration is telling localities—some of them must do without Federal investments in State economies, threatening community and neighborhood projects that have been long planned and supported by the Federal Government. Some may deceptively disguise these investments as earmarks but they are real and vital stimuli for communities, especially in the midst of an economic slowdown. The President has even taken the brazen step of instructing Federal agencies and offices to ignore congressional committee report language related to future appropriations bills. To direct executive agencies to ignore the guidance of congressional committees on a spending bill, opens the door to its doing so on other bills—maybe an appropriate authorization bill, maybe a revenue bill, maybe on matters that are entirely unrelated to so-called earmarks. It is a dangerous, dangerous precedent, and something that is to be resisted.

After years that have burdened future generations with enormous debt and interest payments, and left behind physical infrastructure that is dangerously underfunded, let us do what we should have done many years ago, and reject the President's ill-conceived proposal. I am glad that the Budget Committee produced an alternative budget, and I look forward to supporting it.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in favor of the higher education tax provisions included in the fiscal year 2009 budget resolution. I would like to begin by commending Chairman CONRAD and the rest of the Budget Committee for their foresight in providing us with $33 billion in tax relief to help make college more accessible and affordable. Prioritizing education in this year's budget, in my opinion, is a step in the right direction. If we do not change the status quo, over the next decade, an estimated 2 million students will not attend college because their families cannot afford it. We must not stand idly by while the goal of providing a better future for our children becomes unattainable. Qualifed individuals should not be denied access to a college education because they cannot afford it.

Since my first Senate campaign in 1972, I have supported tax incentives to help families send their children to college. While we have come a long way since then, we must do more, such as enacting the bill I introduced last year—the College Affordability and Creating Chances for Educational Success for Students Act, S.1399—or "College ACCESS Act." I would encourage my colleagues to consider one specific provision in the College ACCESS Act: the creation of a single $3,000 refundable tax credit, or the ACCESS credit. The ACCESS credit would consolidate two existing tax incentives—the Hope credit and the tuition deduction—and replace them with a single $3,000 refundable tax credit. Families would no longer face the complex and varying eligibility criteria or the difficult task of determining which incentive has the greatest value. The ACCESS credit improves the existing tax incentives in several ways.

First, the ACCESS credit would allow families to claim the credit for each child. While currently the Hope credit can be claimed for multiple students in a household, the tuition deduction can only be claimed once per tax return. The ACCESS credit removes this discrepancy.

Second, the ACCESS credit would be available for all 4 years of college and 2 years of graduate school. Presently, the Hope credit is available only for the first 2 years of a student's postsecondary education while the tuition deduction can be claimed for multiple years. The ACCESS credit remedies this discrepancy.

Another improvement is that the maximum value of the ACCESS credit is $3,000 per student, which covers the first 2 years of tuition at a public 2-year college and half the average cost of tuition at a public 4-year college. In comparison, the Hope credit's maximum value is only $1,650 per student and the tuition deduction's maximum value is $2,500 per student.

One of the most important features of the ACCESS credit is that it would be refundable. The existing tax incentives for higher education are of limited or no benefit to low-income families who have no income tax liability. These families cannot claim either the Hope credit or the tuition deduction. The ACCESS credit's refundability provides relief for those that need it the most.

The ACCESS credit also broadens the income eligibility limits to help more middle-class families. Couples earning up to $130,000 could claim the full credit, while a reduced credit would be available for those earning up to $166,000.

A report issued by the Government Accountability Office found that 27 percent of eligible tax filers claimed neither the tuition deduction nor an education tax credit because of their calculations. One reason is that they do not benefit students and their families if they do not know about them or understand their eligibility criteria or their value. The ACCESS credit would eliminate existing discrepancies and reduce the complexity of the existing incentives for students and their families, helping approximately 4 million more hardworking American families pay for college.

While a college education has never been more important, a college degree is fast becoming a luxury good for too many families. This budget provides us with an opportunity to reverse that trend. If we expect to maintain our status as a leader in the global economy, we must do more for our students. The ACCESS credit I have introduced would do just that, ensuring that the doors that lead to opportunity in our country remain open to all our children.

GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the budget resolution proposes that Congress delay several CMS Medicaid regulations that are unpopular with states and advocates. I know some people have concerns with the CMS Medicaid regulations, but I must argue they are perfect. I have issues with some of them as well.

However, the regulations do address areas where there are real problems in Medicaid. States don't have clear guidance and could be inappropriately spending taxpayer dollars. This leads to improper payments and wasteful spending.

We see this throughout the regulations in question. I have a CRS memo that shows some that exist under current law that I am going to be quoting from shortly, and ask unanimous consent at this time to have it printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material is ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORANDUM

To: Senate Committee on Finance—Atten:

From: Elicia Herz, Specialist in Health Insurance Financing; Cliff Binder, Analyst in Health Care Financing; Jean Hearne, Specialist in Health Insurance Financing; Rick Aplin, Specialist in Education Policy

Subject: Responses to Medicaid Regulation Questions Governing: Graduate Medical Education, Intergovernmental Transfers, School-based Services, Rehabilitation, and Targeted Case Management

Per your request, we are responding to your specific questions on Medicaid regulations recently issued by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. Also as you instructed, we have framed our responses to your request in the context you described as if the proposed regulations did not exist: "The questions below assume that none of the regulations are allowed to go into effect. Therefore, current statute and any regulations or guidance in place prior to the issuance of these regulations remain in effect."

Your questions focus on specific aspects of selected issues addressed in the new Medicaid regulations regarding intergovernmental transfers (IGTs), graduate medical education (GME), school-based services, rehabilitation services, and targeted case management (TCM). Therefore, the responses provided in this confidential memorandum are neither intended to be a full discussion of CMS' justifications for each new regulation, nor the counterpoints raised by opponents of the regulations. The Congressional Research Service (CRS) is preparing several reports on these new regulations that will encompass fuller discussions of these issues.

In the meantime if you have additional questions or need clarifications, please contact staff as follows: IGTs, Jean Hearne or Elicia Herz, GME and school-based services, Elicia Herz, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), Rick Appling, and rehabilitation services and TCM, Cliff Binder.

1.1 Can a state pay a hospital and require the hospital to return a portion of the payment to the state?

Under certain circumstances, a state can require providers to transfer funds to the state. For example, if a provider’s Medicaid receipts are indistinguishable from other receipts, effectively a portion of Medicaid payments may be included in those transfers. There are two allowable methods states can use to require hospitals to transfer funds to states: intergovernmental transfers and taxes. Each method has its own set of requirements, specifically affecting the ability of states to collect funds from governmental providers through intergovernmental transfers, or to collect funds from non-governmental providers. States are able to collect funds through taxes as long as the taxes comport with federal Medicaid law.

2.2 Do states bill for IME and GME using a consistent methodology?

Most states make Medicaid payments to help cover the costs of training new doctors in teaching hospitals and other teaching programs. In Medicare and Medicaid, some states have recognized two components of GME: (1) direct graduate medical education (DGME) (e.g., resident salaries, payments to supervising physicians), and (2) indirect graduate medical education (IME) (e.g., higher patient costs in teaching hospitals due to treating sicker patients, residents ordering more diagnostic tests than experienced physicians).

There is one explicit reference to GME in the federal Medicaid statute, Section 1932(b)(2)(D) of the Social Security Act stipulates that non-managed care organization providers (non-MCO providers) that deliver rehabilitative services to children with disabilities, including a specially adapted school bus. However, in their ability to collect funds from non-governmental providers. States are able to collect funds through taxes as long as the taxes comport with federal Medicaid law.

2.3 Do all states separate out IME and GME in capitation rates paid to teaching hospitals; the other 8 states used other methods.

Under managed care, ten states recognized and included GME payments in capitation rates for MCOS, but only two of those 10 required MCOs to distribute DGME/IME payments to teaching hospitals; the other 8 states assumed MCOs provided these payments to their participating hospitals.

2.4 Does CMS know how much they are being billed for IME and GME?

States are not required to report GME payments separately. Payments made for inpatient and outpatient hospital services when claiming federal matching payments under Medicaid. For the Medicaid GME proposed rule published in the May 23, 2007 Federal Register, CMS used an earlier version of the AAMC survey data as a base for its savings estimate and made adjustments for inflation.

3.1 Based on the original intention of the program, are states under-funded by the federal government for the provision of IDEA services?

There are two reporting mechanisms that states may use to report expenditures for optional rehabilitation services: the Form HCFA 4360 and MSIS. States report expenditures on the Form HCFA 4360 in the financial accounting reporting form. There is a separate category on the HCFA-4360 form where states may report optional rehabilitative services. States report rehabilitation expenditures through Medicaid Statistical Information System (MSIS). MSIS data are derived from individual paid Medicaid claims. Even though there is a category for reporting rehabilitative service expenditures, states have discretion in deciding which paid claims will be classified as rehabilitative services.

3.2 Are school-based transportation services focused largely on children who are receiving IDEA services?

When certain conditions are met, the costs of transportation from home to school and back home again may receive federal matching funds. In order to receive a Medicaid reimbursement for transportation related to receiving special education and related services, there must be a certified Medicaid provider. In this context, “specialized transportation” means the child requires transportation in a vehicle adapted to the specific needs of the child.

rehabilitation had increased by 36.2% to more than 1.6 million. Further, average per beneficiary rehabilitation expenditures increased by approximately 30% between FY1999 and FY2005, six states reported no rehabilitation services expenditures and another state reported only 2 beneficiaries received rehabilitation services.

4.2 Is there clear guidance to states for appro- priate billing for rehabilitation services so that states bill on a consistent basis?

Guidance for claiming rehabilitation ser- vices expenditures and receiving FFP can be found in Section 1902(a)(13) of the Social Security Act (SSA) which states the other rehabilitative services requirements. Section 1906(a)(13) of SSA, and Medicaid regulations (42 CFR 40.130(d)) define rehabilitation services broadly as “any medical or remedial service, or any medical or remedial service and any device, supply, or treatment furnished to a recipient to his best possible functional level.”

States may receive more explicit guidance on what services may be included as rehabilitation when preparing and submitting state plan amendments to CMS’ Regional Central Offices. CMS’ Regional and Central Office staff must review and approve all SPAs before a state may add or change a service.

In addition, a state Medicaid director letter (SMDL) was issued by CMS in June 1992 (#FME-42) that provided states some guidance on using the rehabilitation option as a vehicle for providing services to mentally ill beneficiaries. This letter reiterated regulatory guidance that rehabilitation services were intended to be ‘‘medical and remedial in nature for the maximum reduction of physical or mental disability and restoration of a recipient to his best possible functional level.’’

The letter offered some examples of services that could constitute rehabilitation including: basic living skills, social skills, and counseling and therapy. The SMDL also described examples of services CMS believed to fall outside of the definition of rehabilitation including: vocational training, direct personal care services, case management (case management is covered under the rehabilitation option).

There have been several attempts to clarify in statute and regulation what activities states may cover as rehabilitation services. These administrative and legislative activities strived to define how rehabilitation service benefits should be used as well as to control or reduce states’ rehabilitation service expenditures. In 1999, the Secretary approved a few states to cover habilitative services in the 1970s and 1980s under the rehabilitation option for individuals with mental retardation. Rehabilitation, in contrast to habilitative services, are intended to help individuals acquire, retain, and improve self-help and adaptive skills, but are not intended to provide treatment to individuals with mental retardation. Although mental health services are important, even dominant, in combating the multi-dimensional nature of rehabilitation service benefits, they are not the only services encompassed by the benefit. States also utilize rehabilitation to assist beneficiaries with services such as physical, occupational, and speech therapy, as well as other comprehensive services to treat and help individuals manage their physical, mental, and behavioral disorders.

5.0 Targeted Case Management (TCM)

5.1 How does TCM work? CMS for case management services and how much has it increased recently?

In 2008, only Delaware did not cover TCM. Most states report TCM expenditures in their Medicaid Statistical Information System (MSIS) data. MSIS data are derived from Medicaid claims data, six states and the District of Columbia did not report any TCM expenditures in the MSIS data. In addition, states report Medicaid expenditures to CMS to determine eligibility for a financial accounting form (Form HCFA-64). The HCFA-64 has a reporting line for targeted case management. In FY2006, total federal and state expenditures for TCM reported on the HCFA-64 and MSIS data for the same years can vary considerably, since these systems for capturing and reporting Medicaid expenditures are independent of each other. HCFA-64 data were for FY2006, while the most recently available MSIS data were reported for FY2005. Medicaid expenditures for TCM have increased rapidly. As shown in Table 2, between FY1999 and FY2005, total federal and state TCM expenditures reported in MSIS have doubled from $1.41 billion in FY1999 to $2.9 billion in FY2005. For the same period, the total number of beneficiaries increased by 27% from 1.16 million in FY1999 to approximately 2.7 million in FY2005. The average expenditures per benefici- ary also increased during the period FY2005 rising by nearly 27%, from $838 in FY1999 to $1,058 in FY2005.

5.2 Is there clear guidance to states for appro- priate billing for case management services so that states bill on a consistent basis?

Guidance for states on appropriate claim- ing of federal financial participation for TCM services can be found in a number of official and unofficial sources including: a 2001 letter to state Medicaid and child welfare directors (SMDL 01-013); the Medicaid statute, Section 1902(a)(19) and 1915(g) of the SSA; the Medicaid Manual at Section 4402, Optional Targeted Case Management Services—Basics, Scope, and Pur- pose; CMS’ Regional Office staff and CMS’ Central Office staff representatives; three unofficial sources, such as reports from Health and Human Services (HHS) Office of Inspector General and the U.S. Government Account- ability Office (GAO) on audits and approvals of state plan amendments. In reviewing states use of contingency con- tractors, GAO found that CMS has allowed states to use contractors to cover TCM services even though other states were de- nied approval for state plan amendments. similarity proposals to provide TCM services. In addition, some states received disallowances, deferrals, and denials for TCM services, while other states were not audited for similar purposes. The State Medicaid Manual, has been misunderstood is non-duplicate staff and CMS purpose.

under the program authorities for this same administrative costs attributable to other programs where Medicaid is then charged for the direct services provided by the other program. A letter to state Medicaid directors (January 19, 2001, SMDL 01-013) indicates that FFP would not be available for the direct delivery of services by another program.

charted medical services: Medicaid case management services do not include payment for the provision of direct services (medical, educational, or social) to which the Medicaid-eligible individual has been referred. For example, if a child has been referred to a state foster care program, any activities performed by the foster care case worker that relate directly to the provision of foster care services cannot be covered as Medicaid case management."

Subsequent HHS/OIG audits recommended that CMS establish policies and procedures to ensure state FFP claims do not include direct medical services.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I will start with the public provider regulation.

We know that in the past, many states used to recycle Federal health care dollars they paid to their hospitals to use for any number of purposes beyond health care.

It was an embarrassing scam that several administrations tried to limit.

This administration has gone a long way towards cleaning that up and the oversight of payments to public providers is part of that effort.

I have taken issue at times with the administration’s methods. I don’t believe they have their public provider definition right in the current regulation.

That said, simply making the CMS regulation go away opens the door for a return to wasteful, inappropriate spending of the past.

Quoting from the CRS report, “Under certain circumstances, a state can require providers to transfer funds to the state and because a provider’s Medicaid receipts are indistinguishable from other receipts, effectively a portion of Medicaid payments may be included in those transfers.”

Intergovernmental transfers do have a legitimate role, but it is critical that states have a clear, correct understanding of what is a legitimate transfer and what is not.

If the regulation goes away, those lines will still not be adequately defined.

Now I would like to turn to the new regulation on graduate medical education. I personally think Medicaid should pay an appropriate share of graduate medical education or GME.

But I would like to see us put that in statute rather than return to the current rule because I don’t think the taxpayers are well served by the way Medicaid GME operates today.

If we simply make the regulation go away, what are the rules for states to follow?

There are five different methods States use in billing CMS, eleven States don’t separate IME from GME, and a number of States are paying States for GME.

Let me quote from the CRS memo: “States are not required to report GME payments separately from other payments and are allowed to divide Federal health care dollars they paid to their hospitals to use for any number of purposes beyond health care.”

To make their cost estimate for the regulation, CMS relied on a report from the American Association of Medical Colleges. To determine how much they are paying for GME in Medicaid. That’s because the states don’t provide CMS with data on how much they pay in GME.

That is simply unacceptable. You can disagree with the decision to cut off GME, but simply leaving the current disorderly and undefined structure in place is not good public policy.

Now let me turn to the regulations governing school-based transportation and school-based administration.

Is it legitimate for Medicaid to pay for transportation in certain cases? I think the answer to that is “yes.”

We should have rules in place that make it clear that Medicaid does pay for buses generally. We should have rules in place that make it clear that schools can only bill Medicaid if a child actually goes to school and receives a service on the day the school bills Medicaid for the service.

You can also argue that the school-based transportation and administrative claiming regulation went too far by completely prohibiting transportation, but if making this regulation go away allows States to bill Medicaid for school buses and for transportation on days when a child is not in school, we still have a problem.

It is also critical that Medicaid pay only for Medicaid services. States have recognized that the federal government does not pay its fair share of IDEA.

Quoting from the CRS memo: “States, school districts, interest groups, and parents of children with disabilities have long openly acknowledged the federal government does not pay its fair share of IDEA.”

We can also argue that the federal government is not living up to its obligation to ‘fully fund’ Part B of the Individual with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA, P.L. 108-446) (the grants-to-states program).

We can also acknowledge that just because IDEA funding is inadequate, States will try to take advantage of Medicaid to make ends meet.
Again quoting from the CRS memo: “It is generally assumed that such transportation is predominantly provided to Medicaid/IDEA children.”

We should define clear lines so that States know what is and is not Medicaid/IDEA children.

I certainly wouldn’t argue that Medicaid paying for rehabilitation services is a bad thing. We want Medicaid to help beneficiaries get better. But States must have a common understanding of what the word “rehabilitation” means in the Medicaid program.

Again quoting from the CRS memo: “Rehabilitation services can be difficult to describe because the rehabilitation benefit is so broad that it has been described as a catch-all.”

Also, States need clear guidance on when they should bill Medicaid or another program.

Again quoting from the CRS memo: “There is limited formal guidance for states in Medicaid statutes and regulations on how to determine when medically necessary services should be billed as rehabilitation services.”

You’re right, the CMS regulation went too far, but that does not mean there is not a problem out there.

As CRS notes, billing for rehabilitation services between 1999 and 2005 grew by 77.7 percent. I am far from convinced that all of that growth was absolutely legitimate.

Finally turning to the case management regulation, I first want to point out the issues relating to case management are a little different than issues associated with some of the other Medicaid regulations I have discussed so far.

The provision in the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 (DRA) relating to case management received a full review in the Finance Committee, along with Senator Wyden’s amendment and conference debate prior to enactment of the DRA. This regulation relates to a recently enacted statutory provision.

Certainly there is reason to believe that States have been using case management to supplement state spending. An example is child welfare. The income eligibility standard for the Federal entitlement for foster care is linked to a pre-welfare reform standard. This means that every year fewer and fewer children are eligible for federally supported foster care. States must make up the difference for these children. This has caused some to believe that states are shifting some of their child welfare costs to the Medicaid program through creative uses of case management.

Concern about the inappropriate billing to Medicaid for child welfare services extends back to the Clinton administration.

There are some that would disallow most child welfare case management claims from reimbursement from Medicaid. This goes further than I would support. Children in the child welfare system are arguably some of our Nation’s most vulnerable citizens, presenting with complex and multiple problems. Getting them the proper services requires thoughtful review, planning, and management and I believe that is the appropriate agency to support these activities.

On the other hand, driving a child in foster care to a court appearance and billing the caseworker’s time to Medicaid is not an activity that should be billed to Medicaid.

Certainly, the regulations are not perfect. I am not convinced that limiting individuals eligible for case management to one case manager will contribute to the quality of their care and provide for access to services. Requiring case managers to document their time in 15 minute increments seems overly burdensome and inefficient. Eliminating the 180-day period to transition from an institution into the community is contrary to a number of provisions supporting home and community based services, including the “Money Follows the Person” program, also included in the DRA.

But again quoting from the CRS memo: “Although there may be a number of issues related to claiming FFP for Medicaid addressed in these sources, at least two issues have been sources of confusion, misunderstanding, and dispute. One issue where there has been misunderstanding is non-duplication of payments. Another area where there has been some disagreement is over the direct delivery of services by other programs where Medicaid is then charged for the direct services provided by the other program.”

When CMS tried to come up with rules to increase accountability in case management, they had good reason to be trying to provide clarity and specificity for states.

Surely the answer is not to tell States they are on their own to interpret the case management provision in the DRA.

As CRS notes, billing for case management services between 1999 and 2005 grew by 105.7 percent. With spending growing that fast, we must make absolutely certain states understand how they should be billing CMS.

Mr. President, the budget resolution provides for 1.7 billion dollars to address the regulations.

This is only to delay the regulations until the end of March of next year. I know support for the current administration will pull back and undo the regulations.

What would it cost if we tried to completely prevent these regulations from ever taking effect?

Not $1.7 billion that’s for sure. It would actually cost the taxpayers 19.7 billion dollars over 5 years and 48 billion dollars over 10 years.

It is a real shame that anyone can argue that all of those dollars are being appropriately spent and that Congress ought to just walk away from these issues.

What we ought to do is insist the Finance Committee to replace the regulations.

That’s what this amendment does. Instead of just making the regulations go away, the Finance Committee should replace them with policy that fixes the problems.

Mr. President, that’s what we should be doing for the taxpayers.

Mr. President, on Monday, the chairman of the Budget Committee talked about the need for adequate funding to fight health care fraud and abuse and how they believe the budget accomplishes that.

Let me quote:

We have program integrity initiatives to crack down on waste, fraud, and abuse in Social Security and Medicare. In fact, I received a letter from the Secretary of Health, Secretary Leavitt, thanking us for the program integrity funds that we have included so that he can continue his important investigations to shut down these Medicare fraud criminals that he found in Florida and other parts of the country last year and that he is continuing to crack down on.

What the chairman failed to mention is that Democrat appropriators apparently do not think rooting out fraud and abuse in the health care system is a priority.

In fact, here is what actually happened last year. Last year, the Omnibus appropriations bill gave CMS near-$39 million less than the prior year to fight health care fraud and abuse in the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

And they cut all the new funding for fighting fraud and abuse—that is almost 100 million dollars they took from CMS for fighting health care fraud and abuse. That is an actual cut in funding to fight fraud from the prior year.

The funding we are talking about here is for the Health Care Fraud and Abuse Control Program known as HCFA. The HCFA Program was created in the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 and is jointly administered by the Department of Health and Human Services and the Justice Department. It is intended to help combat fraud and abuse in health care programs including Medicare and Medicaid and establishes a national framework to coordinate Federal, State and local law enforcement efforts to detect, prevent, and prosecute health care fraud and abuse.

These funds are used to pay for FBI agents, OIG investigators, as well as assistant U.S. attorneys who prosecute fraudseas. These funds represent the frontline defense we have for fraud against the Medicare and Medicaid programs and pay for themselves in savings.

I absolutely agree that CMS must be properly funded. Of course the agency needs funding to detect and deter fraud and abuse in health care—there are billions at stake. CMS also needs funding for general program oversight.

Congress actually cut funding last year, yet my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are given to criticizing the job CMS does.
Just to expand on this, the Finance Committee has had three hearings in the last 6 weeks that focused on how well CMS was enforcing the rules in Medicare Advantage. During those hearings, some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle were critical of the job CMS is doing.

For example, in Medicare Advantage, some want to let the States take over enforcement of the marketing rules. They say that CMS lacks the resources and time to do the job. But it is hard to conduct oversight when Congress cuts the money you need to get the job done right—and that is exactly what the other side did. It is a self-fulfilling prophecy. Without the right resources CMS can’t get the job done and CMS didn’t get the resources. CMS would like to improve its enforcement and oversight of Medicare Advantage plans.

For Fiscal Year 2009, CMS is requesting $198 million in new fraud and abuse discretionary funding. This would be 100 percent more than last year, when there was no funding.

The Administration plans to use $147 million of the $198 million—or about three-quarters—for the Medicare Integrity Program, which is used for Medicare Advantage oversight. Without these new funds, CMS cannot undertake and oversee activities Congress believes it should.

I agree with my good friend Senator Conrad that Congress must fund CMS appropriately to crack down on fraud and abuse. After all billions of dollars are at stake. It also needs to fund CMS appropriately to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries are well served by those selling and providing Medicare services.

I urge my colleagues on the other side to avoid last year’s mistake, which was to talk a good game in the budget process but zero out needed new funding in the actual funding bill. But to be blunt, the budget resolution is no better or worse.

Allocating $1.7 billion in the budget to stop CMS Medicaid regulations aimed at providing States clarity, stopping inappropriate spending and protecting the integrity of the Medicaid Program without the requiring any action to replace the regulations is irresponsible.

Money spent on fighting fraud and abuse is money saved in the long run. We have seen time and time again that when we invest money in fighting fraud, we get lots of dollars back. And rest assured that the deterrent value associated with those actions is significant too—crooks read the papers, and they will think twice when they see someone in their pinstripe suit for an orange jumpsuit.

While Democrats like to talk about how inexpensive Medicare administration is, that is no excuse to fund CMS at such a low level that it cannot actually do its own programs so that it can protect taxpayer money.

If you want to combat fraud and abuse in Medicare and Medicaid, you really do need to put your money where your mouth is. On this subject, the majority is toothless.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I am proud to support the Democratic budget that Chairman Conrad and the Finance Committee have so ably put together. This budget protects taxes, and it creates or maintains nearly a half million good-paying jobs here at home.

In contrast, the Bush-Republican budget that the President proposed last month proposes ideas that got us into this fiscal mess in the first place—ideas that have weakened the economy and hurt America’s middle class.

A budget is an expression of values: you choose what to spend your money on and you choose how much of it to spend now instead of later.

As families across America sit down at the kitchen table to create their own family budgets, they decide what they have to pay for now—the house, the food, the gas for the car—and then how much they can spend on other things without going too far into debt.

Creating a budget for the Federal Government is very similar. This week the Senate will have to pay for now—housing, education, energy, and infrastructure—and what we cannot afford without further burdening our children with our bills.

The Democratic budget recognizes that one of the key elements of the American economy—the housing market—is in very serious trouble, the worst we have experienced since the Great Depression.

For most families, the largest monthly expense is the mortgage or the rent, and as the housing market crumbles, increasing numbers of families are struggling to pay that bill. Our budget takes steps to support the families struggling in this housing market as well as communities that are coping with this crisis.

Our budget allows for the four main appropriations within the Foreclosure Prevention Act, a bill the Senate attempted to debate a couple of weeks ago. We allocate funding for Community Development Block Grants, housing counselors, mortgage revenue bonds, and net operating loss carrybacks.

The Republicans filibustered that bill. Every Republican but one stated that one of the key ingredients of the American economy—the housing market—is in very serious trouble, the worst we have experienced since the Great Depression.

Our budget allows for the four main appropriations within the Foreclosure Prevention Act, a bill the Senate attempted to debate a couple of weeks ago. We allocate funding for Community Development Block Grants, housing counselors, mortgage revenue bonds, and net operating loss carrybacks.

The Republicans filibustered that bill. Every Republican but one stated that one of the key ingredients of the American economy—the housing market—is in very serious trouble, the worst we have experienced since the Great Depression.

The Democratic budget recognizes both of these realities. The Bush-Republican budget recognizes neither.

Overall, the Democratic budget provides an additional $8.8 billion above the President’s request for training and education. Workers who are trying to learn new skills and parents who are trying to pay tuition bills will all benefit from the investments made by the Democrats in this budget.

The budget allows for $414 million in job training, which will help 165,000 workers build the skills they need to compete in the economy of the 21st century. For students, the resolution provides an additional $5.4 billion for the Department of Education, which funds Head Start, No Child Left Behind, and Pell Grants to make a quality education more accessible to students of all ages.

Compare that to the Bush-Republican budget. The impact of the Bush-Republican budget on education in my home State of Illinois would be severe. Mr. President, 119,871 Illinois elementary and high school students would be left without the full services promised by No Child Left Behind. Nearly 90,000 Illinois students would be hurt by the President’s decision to eliminate Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, Leveraging Education Assistance Partnerships, and Federal Perkins Loans.

Mr. President, 10,000 Illinois students would no longer have a safe place to go after school thanks to the President’s proposed cuts to afterschool programs. The Democratic budget supports the workers of today and tomorrow. The Bush-Republican budget cares about neither.

To create good jobs in America we must invest in industries that promise growth in the short and the long term. Green-collar jobs—which help America reduce its dependency on foreign oil and push us down the path of energy independence—represent perhaps the best opportunity for meaningful job creation for millions of Americans over time.

The Democratic budget focuses on these jobs by allocating $8.45 billion towards clean energy and another $2.7 billion specifically towards green-collar jobs. This funding will support weatherizing homes and office buildings, investing in battery research and development, developing wind and biofuel power generation, and much more. And all of those jobs can be created here at home.

The Bush-Republican budget? It has a 7-percent reduction in solar energy research, a 27-percent cut in energy efficiency programs, a 79-percent cut in weatherization programs, “intergovernmental” programs to help local and State governments become more efficient, and a reneging on the earlier commitment for the FutureGen clean coal energy program in Mattoon, Ill.

The Democrats believe that green-collar jobs should be the centerpiece of our economy. President Bush and the Republicans apparently do not.

Our budget also provides other forms of critical energy assistance at a time when the price of oil has reached $110 per barrel. The Democratic budget provides $2.5 billion for families who are struggling to heat their homes, $500 million more than the President’s request.

The Bush-Republican budget proposes to cut LIHEAP funding by $359 million. In Illinois, 15,000 low-income families and seniors would lose heating assistance.

That is unacceptable. The Democratic budget invests properly in the energy needs of the country, which supports the long-term strength of the economy and the short-term needs of the people who need it most.

The Democratic budget would create nearly 500,000 good-paying jobs here at home, including nearly 20,000 in Illinois. How? By investing in our infrastructure.

The general rule of thumb in the transportation infrastructure industry is that for every $1 billion invested in roads, bridges, airports, and the like, around 47,500 jobs are created. The Democratic budget invests over $10 billion more than the Bush-Republican budget to fix our infrastructure, which is good for short-term economic vitality and for longer term economic strength.

The demand for this funding is readily apparent, from the bridge disaster that has recognized the crumbling roadways in Illinois and throughout the country. The American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials reported last month that $18 billion worth of infrastructure projects were ready to go in 46 States and the District of Columbia, including 212 projects worth $831 million in Illinois. These projects are already designed and approved, and construction work could begin within 90 days from the moment that Federal funding was provided.

The Democratic budget would give the go-ahead to put Americans to work on many of these jobs. The Bush-Republican budget would not.

Overall, the Democratic budget lowers taxes and balances the budget by 2012.

Including Senator BAUCUS’s amendment, which I support, middle class Americans would benefit from the extension of the alternative minimum tax credit; the child tax credit; marriage penalty relief; the adoption credit; and the 10 percent tax bracket.

The Bush-Republican budget, on the other hand, would extend tax breaks that overwhelmingly benefit the wealthiest Americans and cut in half the tax breaks that overwhelmingly benefit the wealthy. Households with annual incomes over $1 million would save more than $150,000 a year in tax cuts from the Bush-Republican budget, on average.

Although this group makes up just 0.3 percent of the Nation’s households, its combined tax cuts would exceed the entire amount that the Federal Government spends on elementary and secondary education, or the entire amount that we devote to medical care for our veterans. That certainly doesn’t reflect this Senators’ priorities, and I don’t think that reflects the priorities of most Americans either.

Perhaps most importantly, the Democratic budget funds America’s economic priorities wisely, without running up more debts that our children will be forced to pay. Our budget balances by 2012.

The Bush-Republican fiscal record is far less sensible.

Seven years ago, President Bush inherited the largest budget surplus in our Nation’s history. Since that time, when both Houses of Congress were majority controlled by Republican majorities, Federal spending has increased by over 50 percent. The Federal debt has grown by over $3 trillion.

Enough is enough. It is time to manage the Federal budget like adults. It is time to manage the budget more like families must manage their own finances every month around the kitchen table—pay for what you must, and don’t spend what you can’t afford.

I urge my colleagues to do so.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the senior Senator from Colorado, Mr. ALLARD, for his service as a valued member of the Senate Budget Committee. Senator ALLARD and I have served through eight budget cycles together on the Budget Committee. This will be his last budget season as he has decided to retire when his term expires at the end of this Congress.

Since he joined the Budget Committee, Senator ALLARD has been an advocate for fiscal responsibility and a good steward of the taxpayers’ money. I think this was made clear through his contributions this year, especially in the constructive amendments he has offered both in committee and on the Senate floor. Senator ALLARD will be missed as an important voice for fiscal discipline in this body and most notably as a member of the Budget Committee.

I also wish to pay tribute to Senator DOMENICI, who essentially defined what it means for fiscal responsibility and a good steward of the taxpayers’ money.

At the start of the 108th Congress, Senator PETE V. DOMENICI stepped down as the longest serving chairman, and the only Republican chairman, in the history of the Senate Budget Committee. Senator DOMENICI has either been the chairman or ranking member of the Budget Committee for nearly two-thirds of the committee’s 34-year existence.

A member of the committee from 1975, one year after its formation, Senator DOMENICI held the chairmanship for 12 1/2 years, and was the ranking member for 9 1/2 years. As chairman, Senator DOMENICI provided the constructive amendments he has offered both in committee and on the Senate floor. Senator DOMENICI served with its first chairman, Edmund Muskie, and Muskie’s brief successor, Senator Hollings in 1980. DOMENICI first became the Committee’s Chairman in 1991, remaining in that position through 1996. After serving as ranking member from 1987 to 1994, he returned as chairman in 1995 and served in that role through May 2001. Over the years, he has served as the committee’s ranking member to three Democratic chairmen: Senators Chiles, Sasser, and Conrad.

Looking back over his distinguished career on the committee, Senator DOMENICI has been at the center of Federal budgeting. This year he is participating in his 34th congressional budget

Mr. President, little more than a year ago, offices were being relocated, stafs were being reorganized, and Cap-to Hill was readying itself for the change in majority in the House and Senate. The new majority’s leadership and Budget Committee membership immediately set out to put in place pay-as-you-go rules that would fulfill Democrats’ promise to return to “tough, old-fashioned pay-go.” What does “old-fashioned” or “traditional” pay-go mean? In November 2005, during debate on a reconciliation bill that became the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, the new Chairman of the Senate Budget Committee offered an amendment to change the Senate’s pay-go point of order and stated, “Our proposal is to go back to what has worked in the past. It is traditional pay-go.” In March 2006, during debate on the FY 2007 budget resolution, the same Senator again offerred an amendment to change the Senate’s pay-go point of order and stated, “This amendment would reestablish the budget discipline that worked so well in previous years, a rule that has been allowed to lapse by our colleagues on the other side of the aisle.”

These are just two examples. In fact, Democratic Senators have offered amendments to reinstate in the Senate “tough, old-fashioned pay-go” to every Republican budget resolution debated since 2004. They also proposed pay-go amendments to the 2005 tax reconciliation bill and during the Senate Budget Committee markup of the Stop Over

The Senate pay-go point of order amendments offered by Democrats when they were in the minority were remarkable in their consistency.
Every time Senate Democrats offered a proposal to reinstate the “tough, old-fashioned pay-go,” it would require direct spending and revenue legislation to be deficit-neutral in 2008, 2009 to Every instance of their proposal also included a cumulative pay-as-you-go scorecard, so that any net savings recorded from an enacted piece of legislation could be used to offset the cost of a future piece of legislation.

Why did Senate Democrats keep returning to the same version of the pay-go point of order? Because the Senate pay-go point of order was based on the original pay-go law, enacted in 1990 in the Budget Enforcement Act. That law put in place a 5-year pay-go scorecard that kept track of any accumulated deficit increases from enacted legislation. At the end of each year, the net effect of all enacted laws affecting revues and mandatory spending was to increase the deficit, then the Office of Management and Budget was supposed to issue a sequestration order—an across-the-board cut of certain mandatory spending.

Statutory pay-go, in effect, was the original “first-year” test, enforced by sequestration. In 1993, Senate Democrats created a 5-year pay-go point of order, for the Senate only, that was based on and paralleled the pay-go law but relied on the sanction of a point of order instead of sequestration to encourage compliance.

But some Members sought to increase spending after the 5-year pay-go window so they would not run afoul of the initial 5-year pay-go point of order. So in a 1994 revision to this initial point of order, the Senate added a second 5-year test, which covered years 6 to 10 of the “budget window,” to have the point of order cover a 10-year period instead of just 5 years. Given all this activity on pay-go in the 1990s, some assert that the pay-go concept—without being specific about whether it was the Senate’s point of order, or both—was responsible for reducing the deficit in the 1990s.

No question about it—Democrats are on record in support of traditional pay-go, and that support was carried through as a major theme of many 2006 Democratic candidates’ campaigns. We have heard again on the floor this week the familiar refrain: “If you want to increase spending you have to pay for it.
If you want to cut taxes you have to pay for it.” And when Democrats returned to the Senate in 2007, their efforts appeared true to their past pay-go efforts and campaign promises—at first.

As one of their “top 10” legislative priorities for the 110th Congress, the new majority leader along with the new Budget Committee chairman introduced S. 10, the Restoring Fiscal

Following the pay-go promise set out in S. 10, the 2008 Senate-passed budget resolution did include the same “old-fashioned” pay-go point of order requiring deficit neutrality in each of the periods covering year 1, years 1 to 5 and years 6 to 10.

In contrast, the 2008 House-passed budget resolution did not include pay-go budget enforcement because a House pay-go rule had already been put in place by the House and the Senate had any kind of pay-go point of order—not until January 5, 2007, when the House agreed to its rules package in H. Res. 6 for the 110th Congress. Title IV of that package included the first-time-ever pay-go point of order that applies in the House.

The House pay-go rule makes it out of order to consider direct spending or revenue legislation that increases the deficit or reduces the surplus over years 1 to 6 or over years 1 to 11. So in the case of legislation considered during 2007, the relevant periods were 2007 to 2012 and 2007 to 2017; for 2008, the relevant periods in the House are now 2008 to 2013 and 2008 to 2018. Each measure is considered on a bill-by-bill basis; savings from one bill cannot be “banked” and used to satisfy the pay-go requirement for future legislation.

When it came time to arrive at a conference agreement on the 2008 budget resolution, there were two good rea-sions to think that the agreement would include the Senate pay-go point of order in the exact same form as was included in the Senate-passed budget resolution, which was the old-fashioned pay-go they advocated for years.

First, the pay-go point of order in the Senate-passed 2008 budget resolution applied only in the Senate. The House-passed budget resolution did not include any pay-go point of order for the Senate or the House because the House already had adopted one. So there was no reason for the conference agreement to compromise or deviate from the version in the Senate-passed budget resolution.

Further, Senate supporters of “old-fashioned” pay-go had repeatedly insisted over recent years and throughout the 2006 campaign on the same version of pay-go contained in the Senate-passed 2008 budget resolution and had pledged to return to it if they were in the majority.

Apparently, 15 years of Senate Democrats’ support for “old-fashioned” pay-go was expendable when their conference on the 2008 budget resolution decided that the new, less-stringent time periods for deficit neutrality in the House rule weren’t so bad after all. Currently, in the Senate’s enforcement under the conference agreement on the 2008 budget rules for measuring pay-go compliance are 2008 to 2012, the first 5 years, and 2008 to 2017, the 10-year period. The year 2007 is no longer included in the sum because 2007 is over.

But there is no test for the first year, which currently is 2008, and there is no test for just the “second” 5 years, which are 2013 to 2017, aka the first 5 years.

The national news is that Senate leadership is on the verge of dismantling the 1-year deficit neutrality test in favor of an enforcement mechanism that is a much easier test that is now in place. Legislation cannot increase the deficit in excess of 5 years or over 10 years. But for the first time since pay-go began in 1990, legislation now has to come up with a $9 billion offset in 2008 that would allow them to skip a first-5-year test.

By throwing the first-year test overboard and swapping the old test for years 6 to 10 for a new 10-year sum, the Democrats’ new pay-go point of order has encouraged timing shifts to make legislation look like it is paid for over the near-term, even if it isn’t. Consider a simple example starting with table 3A to see how this has worked. Under old, good-fashioned pay-go, let’s say you wanted to increase spending or cut taxes by $9 billion in 2008 without a $9 billion offset there afterwards. To avoid an old-fashioned, traditional pay-go point of order, you would have had to come up with a $9 billion offset in 2008 so that there would be no net increase in the deficit, which would satisfy the first-5-year test and the first-5-years test.

But let’s face it—under old pay-go, coming up with an immediate reduction in spending of $9 billion this year or increasing taxes by $9 billion this year would be much tougher. So maybe you defer your spending to 2009 instead. Then you don’t need an offset in 2008, and you could come up with an offset that reduces the deficit by $9 billion over the next 4 years—say by $2.25 billion in each of the years 2009 to 2012—and still not have a pay-go point of order, as shown in table 3B.

But maybe you don’t even have an offset that is palatable over the next several years. On the other hand, you can come up with is to extend customs user fees past 2015, when they are currently slated to expire. For this example, table 3C shows that in the first session of the 110th Congress, six bills were enacted that include the corporate estimated tax shift. The Internal Revenue Code now says that corporations must send in $6.8 billion more to the Federal Treasury in 2012. Congress apparently thinks that corporations are OK with that, since corporations will send in $6.8 billion less in 2013.

In addition, there is $8 billion more in corporate tax shifts still in the wind, depending on the conference outcomes of the farm bill and energy tax provisions. Does that amount get shifted—say, corporations will send in $6.8 billion more to the Federal Treasury in 2012. Congress apparently thinks that corporations are OK with that, since corporations will send in $6.8 billion less in 2013.

In the past, these timing gimmicks have been occasionally used to fill in budget enforcement holes here and there by both Republicans and Democrats. However, in the 110th Congress, it seems like the corporate estimated tax payment shift is a required element in meeting new pay-go. The Internal Revenue Code now says that corporations must send in $6.8 billion more to the Federal Treasury in 2012. Congress apparently thinks that corporations are OK with that, since corporations will send in $6.8 billion less in 2013.

In addition, there is $8 billion more in corporate tax shifts still in the wind, depending on the conference outcomes of the farm bill and energy tax provisions. Does that amount get shifted—say, corporations will send in $6.8 billion more to the Federal Treasury in 2012. Congress apparently thinks that corporations are OK with that, since corporations will send in $6.8 billion less in 2013.

But the trick of using customs user fees—which won’t be collected until 7 years from now—to pay for spending today requires one more tweak. While customs user fees will satisfy the 10-year test of deficit neutrality, extending these in 2015 still would not satisfy the first-5-years test, as shown in table 3D.

So what to do? Do what many bills have already done in the 110th Congress do a timing shift as shown in table 3E. Specifically, tell corporations that at least $8 billion will in 2008 to 2012, for the next 5 years, skip a first-5-year test. This dynamic demonstrates that new pay-go is essentially only a 10-year test of deficit neutrality. The stricter tests of deficit neutrality in the first year and over the first 5 years have been dropped or emasculated, respectively. The corporate estimated tax payment shift is the linchpin for meeting new pay-go’s significantly weakened tests in the 110th Congress because it makes it impossible to satisfy the first-5-years test when the only real offsets occur near the end of the 10-year period.

Table 4 shows that in the first session of the 110th Congress, six bills were enacted that include the corporate estimated tax shift. The Internal Revenue Code now says that corporations must send in $6.8 billion more to the Federal Treasury in 2012. Congress apparently thinks that corporations are OK with that, since corporations will send in $6.8 billion less in 2013.

I am surprised that timing shifts have become so prevalent, especially considering the criticism that the current chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee has both raised in the past. The Senate from North Dakota has argued that timing shifts don’t pay for anything. During Senate floor debate on the 2004 highway bill he said: “I believe that the spending in this bill, which occurs over six years, should be fully paid for over the same six year period. However, I do not believe that the shift in corporate estimated tax payments is the most appropriate way to achieve the goal of fully funding this bill over six years. The provision proposed by the Chairman shifts a hole in general revenues from one year to another: ‘‘A timing shift only moves corporate pay-until 2015 to 2017. The corporate tax spending in 2008 do not start coming in today for as long as it takes for the off-the debt, at least not for many years, to provide for the new spending. If the “debt is the threat,” then why is it so virtuous that new pay-go requires the Treasury to borrow the $9 billion today and pay $4 billion in interest financing costs? This adds to the national debt forever the $4 bil-interest costs, which will never be offset under new pay-go.

By throwing away the discipline of a first-year test that had characterized all previous versions of pay-go from 1991-2006, the Democrats’ current pay-go is now Wimpy’s pay-go: “I’ll gladly pay you Tuesday for a hamburger today.” Any spending increase or revenue reduction in the first year of a budget period had to be deficit neutral and therefore matched in that same year with an offsetting spending cut or revenue increase. But now, that is mostly to the corporate tax payment shifts. If the interest impacts of spend now, pay later were taken into account, there would be only a very small surplus on the scorecard in the first 6 years and a deficit of $1.5 billion over 11 years.

Nonetheless, the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee is fond of saying, as he did during Senate floor debate on the Food and Energy Security Act of 2007 on November 16, 2007, that “pay-go is not full of holes but don’t take it away. We can look to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office.”

Actually, when you look at the cost estimates that the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office has prepared during the 110th Congress, you will not find one word about pay-go. CBO’s job is straightforward: it prepares estimates of the budgetary effects of legislation and displays them in each year for a 10-year period. A CBO cost estimate has never ever evaluated whether a House or Senate point of order applies against legislation or determined whether a piece of legislation complies with the budget resolution. That is the job of the chairman of the House and Senate Budget Committees, most often using CBO estimates to inform those determinations, but sometimes using alternate estimates.

For example, last year, the House Budget Committee chairman overrode a ensuing ruling and directed CBO to score savings for a particular provision in the House farm bill—without this directed scoring, the House farm bill would have violated pay-go. It was the House Budget chairman who de-decided whether the House pay-go point of order applied against the House farm bill. CBO did not decide. In addition, it was CBO’s estimate of the farm bill that let Congress know that some of the cost of the Senate farm bill was def-ded after the final vote and not enforced. So the Senate was dodging pay-go by hiding new spending from the enforcement period. CBO did not say that the Senate complied with pay-go, nor did it say that the Senate dodged pay-go. But any user of CBO’s estimates would come to the conclusion that pushing spending outside the enforcement window is avoiding pay-go.

In addition, CBO does not evaluate the merits of “paying” bills its estimates. CBO estimates the budgetary incidence of early sunsets and payment shifts exactly as written in legislation, gimmicks though they are. CBO’s job is... to simply provide the estimates of budgetary effects year by year. It is the budget chairmen who then say “CBO estimates this bill reduces the deficit” while abdicating themselves from responsibility for the gimmicks.

Finally, the Senate Budget Committee and House Budget Committees like to point to a provision, the bottom line of table 6 to illustrate how well pay-go has worked because there was a pay-go scorecard surplus for a brief period in the fall. But was there really a surplus? Over the 2008 to 2012 period, respectively, the pay-go surplus was $1.988 billion and $1.311 billion.

But what the scorecard omits is a cost of spending now and paying later that the Treasury does not have the luxury of ignoring. Because of enactment of all of these bills, the deficit is now increasing by $10.7 billion over 2007 to 2010. The Treasury has no choice but to go out right now to the credit markets and borrow $10.7 billion, and will have to pay interest in interest costs over the next 10 years until all the offsets in these bills finally come in and allow the Treasury to pay off that borrowing. Not only does that unrecognized interest cost get added permanently to the debt, but it is also so large that it more than wipes out the supposed and ephemeral pay-go scorecard surplus of just over $1 billion.

But another bill wiped out the surplus on the pay-go scorecard first. The enacted AMT patch increased the deficit by $4.1 billion in 2008 and actual offsets in later years. The House bill only satisfied the 2008 to 2012 deficit-neutrality test for pay-go by using a corporate estimated tax shift tax of $32 billion from 2013 into 2011.

Finally, let me address some of the protopay-go rules, both the House and Senate. The budget chairmen are the do-ers, and the Senate Finance Committee chairman is the enforcer, or MILC in the Senate and the House. The Senate Finance Committee chairman about my criticisms about the spotty enforcement of his vaunted pay-go rule after this past year. The story starts with confusion about how budget rules work. Consider in the following table some stylized discretionary caps roughly equivalent to the levels enacted for the last 5 years for which discretionary and pay-go were in effect. Those statutory enforcement mechanisms expired at the end of fiscal year 2002; similar, but not equivalent, mechanisms for discretionary caps and pay-go that are enforced by points of order rather than sequesters have continued in the Senate since then. Last year the House adopted a pay-go point of order for the first time.

The $2 billion AMT increase in 2008 was not offset and it did not comply with pay-go. Before it passed both the Senate and the House without an offset, the House passed a “paid for” AMT patch with the deficit increase in 2008 and actual offsets in later years. The House bill only satisfied the 2008 to 2012 deficit-neutrality test for pay-go by using a corporate estimated tax shift tax of $32 billion from 2013 into 2011.

Finally, let me address some of the protopay-go rules, both the House and Senate. The budget chairmen are the do-ers, and the Senate Finance Committee chairman about my criticisms about the spotty enforcement of his vaunted pay-go rule after this past year.

For example, I have criticized the gimmick of enacting a one-month extension of MILC in the 2007 supplemental in order to get mandatory MILC spending in the baseline and avoid pay-go enforcement to the tune of $2.4 billion over 10 years. My summary of this gimmick is as follows:

This story starts with confusion about how budget rules work. Consider a recent example, fueled by misinformation from congressional sources, from a daily Capitol Hill publication dealing with a provision to extend subsidies to certain dairy farmers—known as the $24 billion 1998 Farm Bill program, or MILC—in the House- and Senate-passed versions of the 2007 supplemental.

CBO has not included MILC in the baseline for the new farm bill because [MILC] was scheduled to expire at the end of August 2007, but [Senator] Kohl said in a release that the extension to the end of . . . fiscal year (2007) “will also build the cost of the dairy program into the baseline budget for the next farm bill.” The [House-passed] version of the 2007 supplemental . . . extends the program through the end of fiscal year 2007 at a cost of $23 billion, but the extension is as a discretionary program, which means CBO would not include it in the baseline. A Democratic House aide said the House did not include it as a mandatory program because under budget rules the bill had to account for the full 10-year cost of the program, which CBO estimated at $4.2 billion. But the Senate did not have that problem because it does not have similar budget rules.

To understand why this is a confused statement, requires a tutorial on several facets of budget enforcement history and rules.

The Budget Enforcement Act of 1990 established a two-sided budget enforcement system designed to measure the budgetary effects of every piece of legislation enacted by Congress and compare those effects against a standard of enforcement.

One “side” of enforcement was defined as discretionary spending—that is, spending on appropriation bills. The enforcement standard was discretionary caps or limits set out in law for a period of 5 years. If appropriations for a year exceeded the discretionary cap for that year, then the Office of Management and Budget would order a sequester—an across-the-board reduction of appropriations of a sufficient magnitude so that the remaining appropriations could fit within the cap.

The other “side” of enforcement was pay-as-you-go, or pay-go, which covered all spending provided in all legislation that is not an appropriation bill, aka mandatory spending, and all legislated changes in Federal revenues. If, at the end of a year, all the mandatory spending and revenue legislation enacted by Congress cumulatively increased the deficit relative to the OMB baseline, then OMB would order a sequester of mandatory spending.

All mandatory spending that was not exempted from across-the-board to achieve savings corresponding to the amount of deficit increase enacted by Congress that year.

That sounds easy since there are only two kinds of enforcement discipline to order a sequester—discretionary caps and pay-go that are enforced by points of order rather than sequesters have continued in the Senate since then. Last year the House adopted a pay-go point of order for the first time.

Assume all the appropriation bills for 1998 provided in aggregate the exact level of discretionary spending allowed for that year—$530 billion. Since the enacted level for all appropriation bills did not exceed the cap, there would be no sequester.

Out of this total, what if the Agriculture appropriation bill for 1998 included a $2 billion annual increase in a mandatory program that had been created by the agriculture authorizing committee in the 1998 farm bill? Budget experts will recognize this concept as a CHIMP, or Change In Mandatory Program. For purposes of scoring the 1998 Agriculture appropriations bill, the $2 billion increase would be considered discretionary spending in every year, even though it was for an existing mandatory program, because it was enacted in an appropriations bill, not an authorizing bill. This $2 billion increase in a mandatory program would not count against pay-go.

So where would it count? For 1998, the answer is straightforward—the $2 billion cost of increasing the mandatory program in 1998 would count against the discretionary cap of $530 billion for that year.

But what about subsequent years? Since the appropriation bill for 1998 is only measured against the 1998 discretionary cap, how would the “do-er” get charged for the “deed” of increasing the cost of a mandatory program by $2 billion in 1999 and each year thereafter? By reducing the amount that the appropriations committee would be able to spend in future years under their discretionary caps.

OMB would simply reduce the discretionary cap in each of those subsequent years by $2 billion. In 1999, the $2 billion in higher spending on farm bill programs would appear back on the mandatory side of the budget, which is known to budget-speak, but its effects would not have escaped enforcement because the 1999 discretionary cap would be reduced from $335 billion to $333 billion and so on for as many subsequent years as there are statutory caps. Under this system, no one could get away with free mandatory spending by hiding it in a different legislative vehicle to avoid pay-go.

When BEA and some supermajority budget points of order in the Senate were added late in 2002, Appropriations Senators were concerned that there would no longer be any budget enforcement, especially since there was no budget resolution for 2003.

After several failed attempts to extend mandatory budget enforcement of BEA, the Senate settled for adopting S. Res. 304 by unanimous consent on October 16, 2002. For a 6-month period, until the next budget resolution could be agreed to, S. Res. 304 extended the 60-vote requirement for waiving certain points of order, extended the Senate’s pay-go point of order, and applied the pay-go point of order to appropriation bills.

Why suddenly apply pay-go to spending in appropriation bills? Because there was no budget resolution or deemer for 2003, the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee did not have a discretionary allocation for 2003 and was concerned that members would up their new mandatory-type, permanent, automatic spending programs or increases in existing mandatory programs on his appropriation bills to avoid pay-go.

If those mandatory programs were enacted in authorizing bills, they would have continued to face a pay-go point of order because S. Res. 304 also extended the expiration date for the pay-go point of order. But since there was no discretionary allocation for appropriation bills in 2003, there was no budget enforcement for appropriation bills. Mandatory spending programs attached to appropriation bills would not have to be counted against anything. There would have been no 60-vote point of order to thwart them.

In an authorization bill reported by the Senate to adopt S. Res. 304 to discourage such behavior, the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and the Budget Committee went so far as to issue a warning to members: If a provision to increase a mandatory program for later years was somehow enacted on an appropriation bill, those two chairmen promised to see to it that whatever allocation that would have occurred for future years would be reduced by the amount of the mandatory spending added to the appropriation bills. But remember, there were no longer discretionary caps set out in law in advance for future years; instead, discretionary allocations were annual, year-by-year. This sabre rattling seemed to do the trick, but only temporarily since S. Res. 304 expired on April 15, 2003.

For the next 4 years, 2003 to 2006, the only point of order the pay-go tool available to prevent increases in mandatory spending programs from hitching a ride on appropriation bills was the advance appropriation point of order. Remember that until very recently, since enactment of BEA in 1990, when changes to a mandatory spending program are added to an appropriation bill, even if the changes seem mandatory-like, they have been considered as discretionary spending for purposes of budget enforcement on that bill.

The advance appropriation point of order in section 401 of the 2006 budget resolution, H. Con. Res. 95, 109th Congress, has included a definition of the term that captures this scoring practice: “the term ‘advance appropriation’ means any new budget authority provided in a bill . . . making general revenue appropriations . . . for fiscal year 2007, that first becomes available for any fiscal year after 2007.”

With the advent of the 110th Congress and a new chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, however, the Senate Parliamentarians—contrary to precedent in the 108th and 109th Congresses—have decided that this definition of advance appropriation somehow no longer applies to budget authority in appropriation bills when that budget authority is for increments in mandatory programs. As a result, folks in the Senate have flocked to the 2007 supplemental appropriations bill to augment their favorite mandatory programs for free.

For example, the Senate-passed version of the supplemental included the Wyden amendment, adopted on the Senate floor, that would extend “county payments” under the Secure Rural Schools and Community Self Determination Act of 2000, as amended, for the fiscal year 2007. Proponents of this program, which was initially enacted as a temporary, transitional program in 2000, have fretted for the past several years about the imminent expiration of the program and how they could find sufficient offsets to pay for its extension.

The proponents were not able to convince the authors of the 2008 budget resolution to include a sufficient allocation to the Energy Committee to extend it. But adding the extension to the supplemental means they did not have to pay for it under pay-go.

The sponsors of the county-payments amendment claimed that they “offset” the cost by increasing various revenues, but the revenue provisions add up to only $0.2 billion over 2008 to 2012, which is $2.0 billion short of offsetting the cost of the amendment.

In addition to persuading the Senate Appropriations Committee to include other provisions that pretended to raise revenues, but those provisions—amounting to $1.4 billion over 2008 to 2012—had already been incorporated by unanimous consent into the supplemental through the minimum revenue measure and you cannot use the same offsets twice in one piece of legislation. Regardless of the amount of the supposed revenue offsets, any revenue increases enacted in the supplemental will go on the Senate’s pay-go scorecard to be available to be spent on some other authorizing legislation in the future. Revenues cannot be used to offset spending in an appropriation bill.

Finally, also consider the confusing treatment of MILC. MILC is a farm-bill program that makes payments to certain dairy farmers. MILC was intentionally scheduled to expire on August 31, 2007, unlike most of the other farm bill programs that were scheduled to expire on September 30, 2007, with some variation depending on the type of crop. When Congress first enacted the MILC Program, it designed it that way on purpose so MILC would not be continued in the CBO baseline; consequently, the supplemental did not continue the county payments for 2008 to 2017, while the rest of the farm bill was by and large continued in the baseline.

In an authorization bill reported from the Agriculture Committee, an extension of MILC for 1 month—making it expire at the same time as the rest of the farm bill—would have allowed the program to receive the same continuing-in-the-baseline treatment as the rest of the farm bill. But then the Budget Committee, Agriculture Committee would have had to pay for the extension with an offset for the last month of 2007 as well as for the subsequent 10 years or else be subject to the 60-vote scrutiny of the pay-go point of order. Proponents of MILC were not able to convince the authors of the 2008 budget resolution to include a sufficient allocation to the Agriculture Committee to cover authorizing legislation to extend the MILC Program. But with the option of the 2007 supplemental, it appears they did not need to.

While a 1-month extension of MILC was added to the Senate supplemental, it is not automatic—contrary to the suggestion in Senator Kyl’s press release MILC cited earlier—that in the CBO would “build the cost of the dairy program into the baseline budget for the next farm bill.”

What happens instead is that CBO consults the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee on whether the Budget Committee wants CBO to continue an expiring mandatory program in the baseline. Note that in the case of counties payments mentioned above, the current Budget chairman had advised CBO not to extend the payments in the baseline after they would have expired under the supplemental at the end of 2012.

But in the case of the 1-month extension of MILC in the Senate-passed supplemental, the current chairman of the Senate Budget Committee has instructed CBO to parlay that 1-month extension, which cost $31 million, into a $2.4 billion increase in the 5-year allocation to the Agriculture Committee, or $2.4 billion over the 10-year enforcement period under pay-go, all without any offset or any 60-vote budget enforcement opportunity. The chairman chose not to direc-

The House-passed supplemental also included an extension of MILC, although it did so without amending the existing MILC law. In contrast to the Senate, the House supplemental simply appropriated money to USDA to make MILC-like payments to dairy farmers as if MILC were still in effect for the 13 months after August 31, 2007.

Even so, the distinction made in the news article cited earlier about the House extending MILC as a discretionary program and the Senate extending it as a mandatory program is misleading. MILC is by definition a mandatory program because it was created by an authorizing committee. However, any changes made to the MILC Program in an appropriation bill are considered discretionary for purposes of evaluating that appropriation bill for budget enforcement, regardless of whether MILC is extended by tweaking language in existing law or by creating parallel new language.

Further, the Democratic House aide cited in that article is not correct that “under [House] budget rules that [House supplemental] bill had to account [with an offset] for the full 10-year cost of the [MILC] Program” if the MILC program were going to be extended for that long. Note that the House supplemental did not “pay for” the $2.4 billion cost of extending MILC through 2008; it just designated it as an emergency to avoid budget enforcement.

Why was the House aide incorrect? Because the House pay-go rule of order does not apply to appropriation bills in the House. After the House adopted its pay-go rule in January 2007, there was some initial confusion and unsettledness about which legislation its pay-go rule would apply to. But now it is clear that the House pay-go rule applies to authorization bills only.

The House appropriators, however, do not want their bills to become the vehicle of choice to carry increases in mandatory spending programs that cannot find offsets in authorization bills to fit under the House pay-go rule. So, it is only the persuasive jailing by interested parties, such as the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, that has thus far been able to keep House appropriation bills nearly free and clear of multiyear changes in mandatory spending.

At least the House seems committed as a matter of practice, even if not as a result of its rules, to preventing its appropriation bills from becoming a huge loophole for avoiding pay-go enforcement. However, the Senate has shown no such restraint since it added $4.6 billion in mandatory spending increases over the next 10 years for county payments and MILC alone to its version of the 2007 supplemental.

There is a way to close this pay-go loophole. One way would be to reinstate the enforcement of pay-go for appropriation bills that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee succeeded in providing for six months in 2002 to 2003 through S. Res. 304. The Appropriations chairman, however, now opposes that approach.

Another way would be if the conference report on the 2008 budget resolution included an amendment offered by the chairman of the Budget Committee and myself, which was adopted by UC during Senate debate on that budget resolution. The amendment would have created a 60-vote point of order against net increases in spending for mandatory spending programs on an appropriation bill.

In fact, the conference report did include a weakened version of the Gregg- Conrad point of order that the Senate passed. That weakened point of order exempted the 2007 supplemental. So there was no 60-vote point of order available to strip the MILC provision out of the supplemental. The Budget Committee chairman’s excuse is that he did not want to change the rules in the middle of the game while the supplemental was being considered at the same time as the 2008 budget resolution.

But this is nonsense. If the MILC provision had instead been in an authorizing bill at that time, the pay-go point of order that was already in place in the Senate would have made it possible to subject the MILC provision to 60-vote scrutiny. That was the rule already in place at the time. By hiding the MILC provision in the supplemental and getting the Parliamentarian to change the precedent on what constituted an advance appropriation, they were changing the rules in the middle of the game in order to protect the MILC provision and, even more importantly, to stock the farm bill baseline with $2.4 billion more in spending that would never be subject to pay-go.

Some other things that the Budget chairman has wrong about pay-go are as follows.

He said this week that pay-go matters only when bills are enacted. This is exactly the opposite of the truth. Pay-go is a point of order. A Senator cannot raise a point of order after a bill has been enacted into law. The pay-go point of order is only worth anything when the Senate considers a bill before sending it on to conference; seldom do conference reports get blown up by a point of order.

The chairman also said pay-go has been defended nine times since the 2008 budget resolution was put in place and that it was never waived, so that is an indication of how successful and wonderful it has been. But I count only eight times that a pay-go point of order was raised since adoption of the 2008 budget resolution conference report, and in each and every instance it was raised against amendments offered to bills brought to the floor. The pay-go point of order has not yet been raised in its constitution against any of the several bills brought to the floor that by themselves violated pay-go.

The Budget chairman is defensive about pay-go. He should be. The pay-go he defends is not the pay-go that he promised for years that we would have if only his party were in charge. Now that he is in charge, pay-go is watered down and incredibly easy to gimmick or avoid.

I ask unanimous consent that the tables to which I have referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TABLE 1—PROPOSED PAY-GO AT START OF THE 110TH CONGRESS

| Description | Would create a point of order in the Senate against measures that increase or create an on-budget deficit in the current year, the budget year (1st year), the first 5 years, or the final 11 years (2007-2017) | No sequestration enforcement. No scorecard maintained.

Votes Needed to Waver Point of Order | 60 votes

Scorecard | Uses a cumulative scorecard, so that savings in earlier enacted bills could offset deficit increases in later bills.

In effect? | Must be enacted to go into effect. (Pay-go provision in S. 10 could be put into effect if written into a new budget resolution that Congress agrees to.)

Simple majority through adoption of a rule that waives the point of order.

House point of order applies on a bill-by-bill basis. No scorecard maintained.

House point of order is not a law and therefore can not include sequestration.

House point of order is effective for the 110th Congress only.

SPRINGTIME AND EASTER

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, this week, as the Senate debates proposed changes to the federal budget, our minds are focused keenly on the pros and cons of various amendments and on the consequences of the budget resolution for the authorization and appropriations process that lies ahead. We have much to do this year, and less time than usual in which to do it.

Personally, I am glad to be back amid the controlled chaos of the annual budget debate. As many people know, I fell last week. Fortunately, I only gave my back a good wrench, but my family and my doctors insisted on a lot of care and physical therapy, which was both therapeutic and frustrating. I do not like to be poked and prodded and cajoled any more than the next person, especially after I begin to feel better and am ready to get back to work. Nevertheless, the rest did let me spend a little time staring out the windows, watching the beauty of springtime steal across Washington. I hope that each of my colleagues will have a chance to enjoy the springtime show as the Senate breaks for the Easter recess.

This year, the vernal equinox falls in the middle of the Easter Holy Week, on Maundy Thursday. Therefore, the first day of spring is also the day that marks the Last Supper between Jesus and his disciples, the evening before the crucifixion Good Friday and the miracle of resurrection on Easter Sunday. It is fitting that the dawning of the spring and the resurrection of Christ occur in close conjunction. Both events celebrate renewal and rebirth, the awakening of new life. I, too, feel a sense of renewal this year, of restored health and energy that only enhances my usual affection for the springtime of year.

I welcome spring with the words of the English poet, William Blake (1757–1827) in his poem, “To Spring!":

O thou with dewy locks, who lookest down Through the clear windows of the morning, turn Thine angel eyes upon our western isle, Which in full chorus hails thy approach, O Spring!

The hills tell one another, and the listening valleys hear; all our longing eyes are turned up to thy bright pavilions: issue forth And let thy holy feet visit our clime!

Next week, Christians step through the liturgical calendar of Easter, observing and commemorating great events of two millennia past, the occupants of the northern hemisphere also count down to the days to Spring. In these first warm and fragrant days, we can most fully appreciate the beauty of the season, so easily compared to the cold and wet weather of the previous weeks. With each trumpeting daffodil, each nodding crocus, each arching branch of yellow forsythia, and each dainty petal of blooming pear and cherry tree, we find the undeniable evidence of the approaching season. In the ever-lengthening evening light, we spy the house wren flitting about as she seeks a sheltered spot to build her nest. We hear, clear and strong, the first evening chorus of frogs, a song that will be lost in the background noise later in the season. But this week, we hear it “a capella,” unaccompanied by the evening singing of crickets and the hum of air conditioners on hot summer evenings.

Each sign of spring, each glory of the Easter-tide, is a gift from the Creator, a promise made to each of us that there is life after death, and beauty after the dark days of winter. I urge my colleagues in the Senate and those listening at home to step outside and revel in the glory and the beauty of spring.

Mr. President, I close with a poem by the great American poet, Robert Frost (1874–1963), called “A Prayer in Spring.” I thank my colleagues for their many kind wishes for my renewed health.

Mr. President, give us pleasure in the flowers to-day; And give us not to think so far away As the uncertain harvest; keep us here All simply in the springing of the year.

Oh, give us pleasures in the orchard white, Like nothing else by day, like ghosts by night;

And make us happy in the happy bees, The swarm dilating round the perfect trees.

And make us happy in the darning bird That suddenly above the bees is heard, The meteor that thrusts in with needle bill, And off a blossom in mid air stands still.

That turned out to be the joke of the day; night;

And make us happy in the happy bees, The swarm dilating round the perfect trees.

And make us happy in the darning bird That suddenly above the bees is heard, The meteor that thrusts in with needle bill, And off a blossom in mid air stands still.

For this is love and nothing else is love, The which it is reserved for God above To sanctify to what far ends He will, But which it only needs that we fulfill.

TRIBUTE TO DR. HARRY CARLOSS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a good friend and respected Kentuckian, Dr. Harry Carloss. Dr. Carloss has worked diligently for over 32 years to treat thousands of his patients who face one of life’s most terrible illnesses, cancer. Originally from Lexington, KY, Dr. Carloss went to the University of Louisville Medical School and later worked at the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in San Diego, CA. Dr. Carloss, along with and his wife Barbara, returned a few years later to Kentucky and settled in Paducah to practice as an oncologist. Dr. Carloss worked in Paducah for 28 years, offering help to those who oftentimes were facing a death sentence.

Along with helping his patients, he became a point man in the campaign to battle cancer. He has written medical scientific papers, been involved in many research and clinical trials over his career, and been given numerous accolades in the form of honors and awards from his peers.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring a man who worked tirelessly and gave much of himself to the people he served. Recently the Paducah Sun published a story about Dr. Harry Carloss, which admirably illustrates the work, sacrifice and commitment Dr. Carloss gave to his patients, and to finding a cure for cancer. I ask unanimous consent that the full article be included in the Congressional Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

CARLOSS STANDING DOWN—AFTER A RELUCTANT WITHDRAWAL, COMBATANT IN WAR ON CANCER LOOKS BACK ON CAMPAIGN

By Steve Vantrease

PADUCAH, KY.—A cancer doctor dying of cancer—that sort of story has a dark irony.

In the case of Paducah oncologist Harry Carloss, happily it isn’t true.

“I’ve heard the rumor,” he said, not particularly offended. “I don’t have cancer. I have physical limitations that forced me to retire.”

Instead of his primary foie over 32 years as a cancer fighter, a fellow stopped the 57-year-old Carloss in his oncological tracks. He broke his back, had it surgically repaired as best as could be done—ruined spinal cord removed, at least temporarily—then de- bilitated. Not dead, not totally paralyzed, both of which he could have been. Just limited.

He returned to his practice after injury and surgery, but found after a trial period that he couldn’t remain on his feet for any length of time, or sit in most circumstances, for that matter. He makes little reference to that sort of story has a dark irony.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:
