The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. TOWNS) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 928, the Inspector General Reform Act of 2008, focuses on the important role of the Inspectors General in providing independent oversight within Federal agencies. By investigating and reporting waste, fraud and abuse to both agency leaders and to the Congress, Inspectors General play a critical role in maintaining checks and balances in the Federal Government.

This bill strengthens and reforms the Inspector General system by providing greater independence and accountability for IG offices. H.R. 928 first passed this House last October with more than 400 votes. The other body passed a similar bill sponsored by Senator MCCASKILL earlier this year. We have worked with the Senate to resolve the differences between the two bills and produce the amended bill now under consideration. It passed the Senate by unanimous consent last night.

H.R. 928 enhances the rank and pay of IGs within their agencies, and requires that Congress be promptly informed if an IG is transferred or removed from office. It provides a mechanism for IGs to report to Congress if their budgets are inadequate to perform their responsibilities and sets aside funding for training. And the bill establishes an Inspectors General Council, and sets procedures for investigating potential IG misconduct.

I would like to commend the sponsor of this bill, my good friend Mr. COOPER from the great State of Tennessee, for his work in crafting this legislation. He has worked on it for several years as part of his work on improving government accountability.

I also thank Chairman WAXMAN and Ranking Member DAVIS as well as the subcommittee Ranking Member BILBRAY for their work in moving this bill forward.

H.R. 928 will make sure that the IGs have the legal authority and tools necessary to continue their role as non-partisan, professional, honest brokers on behalf of the people.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I'm rising in support of this legislation. The Government Oversight and Reform Committee works very closely with both the general accountability office and the Inspector General's office. The Inspector Generals play a major role in our ability to weed out waste, abuse and fraud. We need to strengthen this office.

And we appreciate the work that Mr. COOPER has been involved in to bring this legislation forward.

I will insert my full statement into the RECORD.

Madam Speaker, today, we take up H.R. 928, the Improving Government Accountability Act. This legislation is intended to enhance the independence of inspectors general throughout government to improve their ability to monitor and oversee executive branch operations.

Since the enactment of the Inspector General Act of 1978, inspectors general throughout government have played an integral role in identifying waste and mismanagement in government. IGs have also been instrumental in aiding Congress and the executive branch to make government more efficient and effective.

We all agree IGs should operate independently, free from political interference. After all, both agency heads and Congress often rely on IG reports to provide frank assessments of the effectiveness of Federal programs.

However, inspectors general should also be part of an agency's management structure—albeit with some independence—rather than a “fourth branch” of the Federal Government. We must be careful not to separate the IGs from the day-to-day operations of the agencies they oversee so they may continue to perform a constructive, integrated role and not just “second-guess” the decisions made by agencies.

I believe the compromise legislation we are taking up today strikes the right balance between IG independence and the appropriate management role of inspectors general.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TOWNS. I would like to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee, who is a person who came to us early on with this idea which, I think, is an excellent one, so I am delighted to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. COOPER).

Mr. COOPER. Thanks to my friend and colleague Mr. TOWNS of New York and my friend from Connecticut, Mr. SHAYS.

This is a very important bill for cleaning up the mess in government. Inspectors General are the watchdogs on behalf of the U.S. taxpayer to make sure that the waste, fraud and abuse that can occur in any Federal agency is cleaned up.

This bill is long overdue. We've been working on it for a long time. Sadly, it took many years for it to be brought up for a vote. But now with the Democratic majority, it passed, as my friend from New York noted, overwhelmingly. It has been passed in the Senate, and now will soon be enacted into law.

The key points are these: We needed to professionalize the IGs. These are wonderful public servants, but due to historical accident, some of them are appointed by the President, some are appointed by the agency heads, some of them are more independent than others. There's been a lot of confusion there, and they simply haven't had the independence and the accountability that they need to have to serve the U.S. taxpayer.

I want to thank, in particular, previous legislative directors that I've had who've worked on this bill for literally many years. Anne Kim deserves great credit. Cicely Simpson deserves great credit. And my current Legislative Director, James Leuschen, deserves great credit because these are the folks who really carried the ball during the years in which we were, literally, unable to get a vote.

Believe it or not, this bill even faced, this year, a Presidential veto threat; they were so worried about reducing the patronage that they had had in past appointments.

But now, finally, the IGs of America will be professionalized. That is good news, not only for every Federal agency, but also, most importantly, for the Federal taxpayer.

No matter how much oversight we conduct in this Congress, and I'm proud to see the Oversight and Government Reform Committee revitalized under HENRY WAXMAN's leadership, because we are conducting the hearings that really should have been held over many years.

But no matter how watchful Congress is in looking over Federal agencies, we can't be on the ground in the agency every day the way Inspectors General can be.

So I want to congratulate my friends from New York and Connecticut because these two gentlemen are true public servants. Their hearts are in the right place when it comes to protecting the taxpayer, and now we've even persuaded the majority of the House and the Senate and the White House to do the right thing.

I hope we can have a substantial vote on the suspension for professionalizing Inspectors General of the United States of America.

Mr. SHAYS. Madam Speaker, this legislation is essential if the United States Congress is going to do its job. Our job is not just writing legislation; our job is to do proper oversight of all of the various departments and agencies.

We have Inspectors General that are assigned for each of our departments. We have some who do a really outstanding job, and we have some who do a good job, and some who, frankly, need to do a better job.

I think this legislation will help professionalize this agency in a way that's important for our people, for our country, and for the majority and the minority in this Congress. We want a more efficient government. We want a better-run government. Inspectors General help us do that.

I yield back my time.

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I really feel that this legislation is so timely, because when you talk to people, when we had hearings that Inspectors General would come in and talk about the fact that sometimes they would be in the middle of an investigation of some type and that the budget would be cut, or in some instances they were actually fired.

So I think this kind of brings about the independence that they need regardless in terms of the fact that if there is an investigation, if there's problems, it gives them the freedom to be able to move and get the things they need to get done.

I would like to commend all of my colleagues that have been involved in this issue. I would like to commend the staff for bringing us where we are today.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R.

928, the "Inspector General Reform Act" This legislation includes provisions of a bill that I introduced last year, along with Ranking Member TOM DAVIS, which will provide for the enhanced protection of the Internal Revenue Service and its employees.

In 1998, Congress passed the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act, which created the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA). The legislation gave TIGTA the responsibility for protecting the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) against external attempts to corrupt or threaten IRS employees. At the same time, it excluded the provision of providing "physical security" from TIGTA's responsibilities.

Prior to the enactment of this law, the former IRS Inspection Service had been responsible for protecting the IRS against external attempts to corrupt or threaten IRS employees. The IRS Inspection Service was responsible for providing armed escorts for IRS employees who were specifically threatened or who were contacting individuals designated as "Potentially Dangerous Taxpayers." The law transferred most of those duties to the new Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration. Inexplicably, "physical security" was excluded from TIGTA's statutory responsibilities.

In its current statutory mission, TIGTA investigates all allegations of threats or assaults involving IRS employees and assists U.S. Attorneys' offices with appropriate prosecutions. However, if TIGTA determines that any of the threats or assaults it investigates call for the provision of physical security, the language of the 1998 law precludes TIGTA from taking action.

Authorizing TIGTA to have armed escort authority would be both more efficient and more effective in advancing tax administration and ensuring the safety of IRS employees.

I am pleased that upon passage of H.R. 928 today, this bill will be sent to the president for his signature. I want to thank Chairman WAXMAN and Ranking Member DAVIS for their support of this provision, and I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 928.

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Madam Speaker, today, we take up H.R. 928, the Improving Government Accountability Act. This legislation is intended to enhance the independence of inspectors general throughout government to improve their ability to monitor and oversee executive branch operations.

Since the enactment of the Inspector General Act of 1978, inspectors general throughout government have played an integral role in identifying waste and mismanagement in government. IGs have also been instrumental in aiding Congress and the executive branch to make government more efficient and effective.

We all agree IGs should operate independently, free from political interference. After all, both agency heads and Congress often rely on IG reports to provide frank assessments of the effectiveness of federal programs.

However, inspectors general should also be part of an agency's management structure—albeit with some independence—rather than a "fourth branch" of the Federal Government. If we separate the IGs from the day-to-day operations of the agencies they oversee, IGs will cease to perform a constructive, integrated role and instead would become a "Monday morning quarterback" with their function solely second-guessing decisions made by agencies.

The House passed its version of this bill last October. At the time, while I supported the bill, I remained concerned that several of the provisions went too far in isolating inspectors general, removing them from the agency decision-making process.

After the Senate passed its bill in April, we began discussions with the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee and developed a compromise to both bills—which we are taking up today.

I will support the compromise bill as I believe it adequately addresses my remaining concerns by striking the right balance between IG independence and the appropriate management role of inspectors general.

Mr. WAXMAN. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the Senate amendments to H.R. 928, the Improving Government Accountability Act. This bill, introduced by Representative COOPER, was favorably reported by the Oversight Committee on August 2, 2007, with strong support from members across the political spectrum.

There is a simple reason why this bill has so much support: it strengthens the Inspectors General, who are the first line of defense against waste, fraud, and abuse in federal programs.

The last six years have given us examples of Inspectors General at their best and at their worst.

Stuart Bowen, the Special Inspector General for Iraq Reconstruction, has uncovered fraud and saved American taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars. Clark Kent Erving and Richard Skinner, the former and current IGs for the Department of Homeland Security, have identified billions in wasteful spending in the new Department. Glenn Fine at the Department of Justice; Earl Delvaney at Interior; and Brian Miller at the General Services Administration have all reported courageously on abuses within the agencies they oversee.

These and other IGs have fought waste, fraud, and abuse and saved the taxpayers billions of dollars.

Yet there are also IGs who seem more intent on protecting their departments from political embarrassment than on doing their job. The Oversight Committee is investigating allegations that the State Department IG has blocked investigations into contract fraud in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Energy and Commerce Committee documented serious abuses by the former IG in the Commerce Department. And the Science Committee has identified serious questions raised about the close relationship of the NASA IG to agency management.

This bill strengthens the good IGs by giving them greater independence. Under this legislation, they will have new budgetary independence, and the President or agency head will have to inform Congress 30 days before any IG is removed.

At the same time, the legislation enacts in statute new mechanisms for holding bad IGs to account. The legislation establishes an "Integrity Committee" that will investigate allegations that IGs have abused the public trust.

There have been several key champions of the legislation. Representative COOPER has worked tirelessly on this issue for years and deserves our thanks for his efforts. I would also like to acknowledge Subcommittee Chairman TOWNS for his tremendous leadership in moving this legislation forward and Ranking Member TOM DAVIS for his commitment to strong IGs and his many helpful contributions.

H.R. 928 would make needed improvements to the IG Act and I urge members to support it.

Mr. TOWNS. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. TOWNS) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill, H.R. 928.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Mr. SHAYS. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.
