

indeed, his economic policies were the heart and soul of the Reagan Revolution.

But his influence and his friendship went across party lines. He was a man who was beloved by those of his own party and those in the opposition, even though I don't think he ever called them the "opposition."

I was fortunate enough to know Jack Kemp for more than 30 years. I'm proud to have considered him a friend. His passing will be mourned by all of us. He was really a truly outstanding American. And certainly my thoughts and prayers go out for his wife, Joanne, and his children, all of whom loved him the way all of us who knew him loved him and cherished him.

And with that I yield to the dean of the New York delegation, Mr. RANGEL.

Mr. RANGEL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would just like to join in by saying those who knew Jack Kemp, you couldn't help but admire and respect him. He wasn't just a quarterback for the Buffalo Bills, but he was a quarterback for America and what's good for America.

It wasn't really working across the aisle when working with him; it was working with someone that was trying to improve the life conditions of people in this country no matter what color or what religion they had. I worked with him on the empowerment zones. I got all the credit; he did all the work. I worked with him on the African Growth and Economic bill. He was one of the first to testify not because of Africa but because it was the right thing to do.

When he became Secretary of HUD, everybody in public housing knew him as the "godfather." He would visit when he was running for Vice President, and in Democratic districts, they would come out to pay respect to a guy that respected people regardless of their color. So he was one of those people that when they asked, "What can I do for you? What do you need from me?" it wasn't just an expression. Jack Kemp really meant it.

His wife, Joanne, was a partner. He's got a great family. I know he's in heaven because he lived a straight life. He was a great guy. We all will miss him, especially the New York delegation and those who were honored to work with him and respect the work that he has done.

Mr. KING of New York. Madam Speaker, I ask for a moment of silence for Congressman Jack Kemp.

The SPEAKER. Members will please rise to observe a moment of silence in honor of our colleague, the Honorable Jack Kemp.
