

science education, which can develop interest among children in future technological and scientific scholarship and careers. Brookfield Zoo has a remarkable research and professional training program organized under the Center for the Science of Animal Well-Being. Through the Chicago Zoological Society, field programs are sponsored and undertaken, now including long-term research on bottle nose dolphins, western lowland gorillas, and African lions, among other species.

I would like to commend Brookfield Zoo, as well as the Chicago Zoological Society, on their successful completion of 75 years of operation, and their continuing efforts to promote conservation leadership through education, research and family enjoyment. Congratulations on this notable anniversary, and I wish Brookfield Zoo and its dedicated staff and leadership many more years of success, effective research, and valuable education and outreach.

STATEMENT ON JANE MARGARET O'BRIEN AND TORRE MERINGOLO

HON. STENY H. HOYER

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 26, 2009

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize the efforts of two individuals who have been key in the success of St. Mary's College of Maryland. Unfortunately, both of them have chosen to move on to new challenges and will be leaving this summer, so I wanted to reflect on the incredible contributions they have both made to the College.

Jane Margaret O'Brien leaves as the president of St. Mary's College of Maryland, having served in that capacity since 1996. Maggie is a personal friend and I want to salute her years of leadership as President, along with Torre Meringolo, who has served during much of that time as Vice President for Development. Together, they brought to St. Mary's College a strong reputation for excellence in scholarship, research, and community engagement.

Dr. O'Brien received her bachelor's degree from Vassar College in 1975 with a major in biochemistry. She completed a Ph.D. in chemistry at the University of Delaware in 1981. In her early academic career she was a member of the chemistry and biochemistry department at Middlebury College where she also served as dean of the faculty. She was president of Hollins University from 1991–96.

Dr. O'Brien received a Kellogg National Leadership Fellowship from 1989–92, served as an International Fellow with the American Association of Colleges and Universities in 1990–91, and was an Eisenhower Fellow to Malaysia and Hungary in 1999. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the science honors society Sigma Xi. After stepping down as president, Dr. O'Brien will continue to work for the College with the Centre for Medieval and Renaissance Studies in Oxford, England.

Dr. O'Brien assumed her post in July 1996 and dedicated herself and the College to the newly adopted Honors College Curriculum. She provided critical guidance to the College's external relations and fundraising, which included the $40 million Heritage Campaign in support of the faculty's academic leadership, the extension of the residential college, and the enhancement of community programs. Fundraising during Dr. O'Brien's tenure re-shaped the College's scholarships, professorships, lecture and learning series, and arts, athletic, and community programs. External support made possible the Paul H. Nitze Scholars Program, the annual River Concert Series, over 40 new scholarships, nine endowed professorships and chairs, and many student and faculty awards presented at the annual Awards Convocation.

The Center for the Study of Democracy was established with a $2 million NEH grant and challenge matches. Private funds now support the William Donald Schaefer Internships, the Ben Bradlee Lectures, the Andrew Goodpaster Lecture Series and the Patuxent Defense Forum.

In honoring the successful accomplishments at St. Mary's College under Maggie's leadership, we should also recognize the accomplishments of Torre Meringolo, who has been instrumental in carrying out much of Maggie's vision for the College. Torre also leaves this month after serving most of his 15 years at St. Mary's College as the Vice President for Development. He has accepted the position of vice president for university advancement and external relations at the University of Maryland Washington.

Torre leaves a proud record of accomplishment at St. Mary's. Hired originally as director of the library and information services, he directed a comprehensive modernization effort that encompassed library partnerships with the University of Maryland System, raised $2 million for library endowment, and provided the foundation for a contemporary IT system. Torre's previous employment at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Penn State University, and UNC Charlotte brought a strong knowledge of information systems to St. Mary's, which he deftly adapted for a smaller-scale campus with modest resources.

In concert with Trustee Terry Rubenstein, chair of the board's development committee, Torre led a professional development team that successfully completed a $40.4 million campaign. During his time, endowment funds at the College grew to over $24 million. Torre worked to create a modern, professionally run Foundation, which granted over $16 million for the College's programs over the past 10 years. His passion for supporting students with financial needs made possible the graduation of many alumni.

Under Torre's leadership, the Alumni Office now serves 11,000 proud alumni with regular events and mailings to keep alumni involved and informed. His work has led to the creation of major campus events such as Reunion Weekend, Governor's Cup, Madrigals, and now the River Concert Series on the Townhouse Greens, all successful programs that bring thousands of alumni and friends to the College annually.

As Maggie O'Brien and Torre Meringolo depart, St. Mary's College is today a nationally recognized leader. Newsweek has called it "an Ivy-level College with a public-school price tag." It is now consistently ranked as one of the best liberal arts schools in the nation by U.S. News and World Report, and the Princeton Review named it a "best value college" this year.

I want to congratulate Maggie and Torre for their contributions to higher education. Their accomplishments at St. Mary's College of Maryland have greatly benefitted their community and our State of Maryland. Both of them will be sorely missed.

HONORING CAPTAIN MARK GINDA FOR HIS LEADERSHIP OF NAVAL SUBMARINE BASE NEW LONDON

HON. JOE COURTNEY

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 26, 2009

Mr. COURTNEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Captain Mark S. Ginda, who, after three years of service as Commanding Officer at Naval Submarine Base New London, will be moving on to his new position at the Defense Liaison Division in Washington, DC.

Captain Mark Ginda has served our nation through his service in the Submarine force since 1982, when he graduated from the United States Naval Academy. He went on to serve on the USS George C. Marshall (SSBN 654), USS Alexander Hamilton (SSBN 617), USS Sand Lance (SSN 660) and commanded the USS Pasadena (SSN 752). Back on shore, Captain Ginda served as an instructor at Naval Nuclear Power School, flag aide to the Commander of the Atlantic Fleet, directed readiness preparations at Submarine Squadron FIFTEEN in Guam, helped to coordinate intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR) resources at the United States Strategic Command.

In August 2006, Captain Ginda became the 48th Commanding Officer of Naval Submarine Base New London. Since then, he has overseen one of our nations most historic and important naval bases, which covers 680 acres, serves as home to 70 tenant commands, and supports the officers and crew of nearly one-quarter of our attack submarine fleet. He has done so with enthusiasm, with passion and with a dedication not only to strengthening the base for the future, but with a renewed commitment to our nation's most import asset: the young Americans who serve our nation.

In his three years there, Captain Ginda has overseen a flurry of activity unmatched in the recent history of SUBASE New London. From a new crane facility at the waterfront, to a long-needed renovation of the Liberty Center for bachelor sailors, the completion of an initiative to improve housing options and a number of other critical projects, there isn't a corner of the base where Captain Ginda hasn't had an impact. Under his leadership, SUBASE embarked on one of the most ambitious demolition projects in the Navy, pulling down more than 35 buildings and structures through a more than $18 million undertaking of projects that will trim down the excess infrastructure at the base and lower operating costs. He's also been a commander who takes things into his own hands, and recently manned the controls of a backhoe and helped demolish buildings.

More important than the bricks and mortar, however, has been Captain Ginda's efforts to improve the quality of life for the sailors, and their families, stationed at SUBASE New London, and breath new life into the base not just as a military facility—but as a home to its residents and a contributing member of the southeastern Connecticut community.

Not too long ago SUBASE New London was threatened with closure. While advocates and supporters from across the state joined together to reverse this decision and keep the base open, there hung over the base a sense that it was a "relic," that it was somehow an outdated and gloomy place in which to serve. Each and every day since arriving at the base, Captain Ginda worked to reverse that perception by reconnecting the base with the community around it, by looking forward at what the base could be, and by ensuring that the base is able to accomplish its most important goal—the support of the sailors and families who make up our submarine force.

Not too long after Captain Ginda took command of the base, I was honored to be elected as the representative of the second Congressional district of Connecticut. As a new member from the other side of the district, it was important for me to get up to speed fast on the needs of the base and the challenges it faced. From day one, Captain Ginda made sure to reach out to me, and take the time to walk me through his vision for the base and ensuring that no question of mine went unasked. His help, and counsel, was instrumental in making sure I had the knowledge I needed to come to Washington to advocate on behalf of the base and its importance to our nation. I am so grateful for his assistance and the close working relationship he has had with me and my office. I am also especially thankful for the warm friendship that he and his wife, Terry, have shown and their efforts to ensure that I felt at home as a member of the SUBASE New London community.

Madam Speaker, it has truly been an honor to work with Captain Ginda, and I have no doubt that his legacy will be felt at the base and in the region for some time to come. He has been a terrific resource for me and my office, a trusted advocate for his base, and a respected partner in the southeastern Connecticut community. I ask all my colleagues in joining me in thanking Captain Ginda for his service to the Navy, recognizing his tireless efforts at SUBASE New London, and in wishing he and Terry good luck as they prepare to move on to this next step in their lives.

TRIBUTE TO CHARLES PRATHER,
FIRE CHIEF ORANGE COUNTY
FIRE AUTHORITY

HON. KEN CALVERT

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 26, 2009

Mr. CALVERT. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to an individual whose dedication and contributions to the community of Orange County, California are exceptional. Orange County has been fortunate to have dynamic and dedicated community leaders who willingly and unselfishly give their time and talent and make their communities a better place to live and work. Fire Chief Charles "Chip" Prather is one of these individuals. Chief Prather is retiring from the Orange County Fire Authority (OCFA) and today I honor his years of public service.

Chief Prather became Fire Chief for the Orange County Fire Authority on October 1, 1997. In this capacity he is responsible for the daily operation of one of the largest fire organizations in the State of California. Under Chief Prather's direction are a total of 1,500 firefighters, reserves and professional staff. The OCFA serves 22 cities and unincorporated areas of Orange County, with a total population of more than 1,300,000, from 62 fire stations and has an annual operating budget of 260 million dollars.

In addition, Chief Prather currently serves on the Orange County Emergency Council, Chairs the Orange County Emergency Operational Area Council, Fire Scope Board of Directors, Co-chairs an Orange County Joint Law/Fire/Health anti-terrorism advisory committee and is a member of the California Fire Chiefs Association Executive Board of Directors. In 2002, Chip was appointed by Governor Davis to the State Emergency Council which advises the Governor on policy matters during times of disaster and served on the states 2003 Blue Ribbon Fire Commission.

Chief Prather is also is a member of The Raise Foundation's Advisory Board (formerly Prevent Child Abuse Orange County), serves as a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board and the Trauma Intervention Program Advisory Board and numerous other boards and commissions. Chief Prather was honored as the recipient of the Boy Scouts Spurgeon Award 2000 for his involvement in Explorer Scouting and in 2002 was selected as the Fire Chief of the Year by the California Fire Chiefs Association.

Chief Prather is a member of the following organizations: Orange County Chambers of Commerce, International Association of Fire Chiefs, Metropolitan Fire Chiefs' Association, California Fire Chiefs' Association, California State Firefighters' Association, the Orange County Fire Chiefs' Association and the National Fire Protection Association.

Chip holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Management and has completed the Harvard University John F. Kennedy School of Government Program for Senior Executives in state and local government. He has also attended the United States Fire Administration National Fire Academy, completing the Executive Fire Officer Program.

Chief Prather and his wife Katie live in San Clemente California with their two children.

Chief Prather's tireless passion for community and public service has contributed immensely to the betterment of the community of Orange County, California. I am proud to call Chip a fellow community member, American and friend. I know that many community members are grateful for his service and salute him as he retires.

MT. CARMEL HOSPITAL OF
COLVILLE, WASHINGTON CELEBRATES 90TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. CATHY McMORRIS RODGERS

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 26, 2009

Mrs. MCMORRIS RODGERS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mt. Carmel Hospital in Colville, Washington. Mt. Carmel Hospital was founded in 1919 as a non-profit, critical access, Catholic hospital and is currently run by the Sisters of Providence. For 90 years, the hospital has carried out its mission of providing medical care to members of the rural community in the Stevens, Ferry, and Pend Oreille counties of Northeast Washington.

Mt. Carmel Hospital is dedicated to assuring medical service is provided in accordance with its core values of respect, compassion, justice, excellence, and stewardship. In addition to its operating emergency services, a surgery center, rehabilitation, and diagnostic imaging, Mt. Carmel serves the community's underprivileged and provides education to professionals and laymen alike. Through their partnership with various other regional nonprofits, such as Christ Clinic and Project Access, Mt. Carmel compassionately reaches out to those who have limited or no health insurance. Additionally, the hospital's Resident Physician program offers training for new medical personnel while its Community Health Education Center provides classes and support groups on awareness and health improvement opportunities. The excellent care and community support contributed by Mt. Carmel Hospital offers the rural counties of Northeast Washington the kind of healthcare options often only available in large urban centers.

In early June, 2009, Mt. Carmel Hospital completed its renewal and expansion project, which doubled the hospital's size and renovated the existing building. Construction of the new hospital building will increase the hospital's area by 70,000 square feet, which will include a new inpatient facility and an expanded outpatient area, emergency room, and laboratory, as well as other additions.

Madam Speaker, I believe the ongoing efforts to provide excellent medical assistance to the counties of Northeast Washington make Mt. Carmel Hospital worthy of recognition before this body. I invite my colleagues to join me in honoring Mt. Carmel Hospital and the Sisters of Providence by observing and celebrating 90 years of dedication to wellness and health education in the community.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE THIRTY-SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF TITLE IX

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, June 26, 2009

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Madam Speaker, I wish to take a moment this week to recognize the thirty-seventh anniversary of Title IX. When I think of this historic legislation that champions equal rights for women, I am reminded of something Betty Friedan said in her book, The Feminine Mystique. She said, "The problem that has no name—which is simply the fact that American women are kept from growing to their full human capacities—is taking a far greater toll on the physical and mental health of our country than any known disease." Ms. Friedan—a leader of the women's rights movement and a founding member of the National Organization for Women—described an ongoing battle; a battle that has plagued our country for far too long.

Title IX was enacted with the purpose of removing the barriers that could negatively constrict the potential of over 50% of our population. This monumental advance in equal rights for women was passed on June 23, 1972, with the goal of prohibiting gender discrimination in education programs, especially concerning athletic opportunities for young men and women. I have time and time again
