

both the Sones family and the Dover Air Force Base community for their support of Karina Sones in her battle against cancer. Karina was diagnosed with acute lymphocytic leukemia when she was 4 years old. Although the doctors thought they had beaten the cancer after a round of chemotherapy in 2004, she unfortunately relapsed in 2006. I wish to commemorate the sterling efforts of her two younger brothers, her parents, and the men and women of Dover Air Force Base for encouraging and supporting Karina through this difficult time. Thankfully, she is now on the path to recovery.

When Karina relapsed, her parents were informed that a bone marrow transplant was her only option. Despite there being approximately 20 million bone marrow donations on record, there were no matches on the National Marrow Donor database for Karina. Her parents, however, remained optimistic that a solution would be found. In what can only be described as good fortune, Karina was lucky enough to be the recipient of an anonymous donation of umbilical cord stem cells that allowed her to have a second chance at life. Karina bravely endured radiation and 50 days of isolation before she could receive the transplant. Afterwards, the whole family had to work together to prevent her from getting sick. Although, Karina still suffers from graft-vs-host disease which has caused her skin to be inflamed, she remains brave and upbeat. She insists that she would like to go to Disneyland with her mother and be Cinderella.

Her two younger brothers, Braydin, age 10, and Torin, age 7, admirably refuse to be helpless as their sister battles leukemia. Karina's struggle inspired them to want to help other kids with cancer and to further support research, so they began collecting golf balls that had landed in their backyard and selling them on to golfers. Their goal was to collect $500, and they have already exceeded that amount. They will donate all the money to the Alfred I. duPont Hospital for Children where Karina still receives treatment.

This story is a true example of the Air Force, the Dover community, and the Sones family all coming together to unite against a common adversary. The city of Dover and the Dover Air Force Base are known for their tight-knit relationship which is certainly demonstrated by the Dover community having won the Abeliene trophy twice—the trophy designated for the base with the most supportive community—and this story only provides further evidence for that statement.

I believe that it is a mark of Karina's character and impressive bravery that she has persevered through all of her medical setbacks. To this day, Karina refuses to rest and is working on spreading awareness about becoming a bone marrow donor because she wants other children to have the same chance at life that she had. Most children, after spending so much time in hospitals, would wish to stay away from them, but Karina is not most children. She wants to become a cardiologist when she grows up.

Karina's brave story is one that we do not hear often. I wish to honor not just her courage but also the bravery and perseverance of her brothers and her parents and to wish them continued blessings in the future. I also want to emphasize the good work and support that Dover Air Force Base has offered the Sones family during such a trying and difficult time.●

TRIBUTE TO THE WHIFFENPOOFS

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, 100 years ago this winter, history was made at the old Mory's Bar on Temple Street in New Haven, CT, as Denton Fowler, James Merriam Howard, Carl Lohmann, Meade Minnigerode, and George Pomeroy formed an a cappella singing group known as the Whiffenpoofs of Yale University.

The Whiffenpoofs, as every Yalie knows, are unsurpassed in talent and tradition. They are now the oldest continuously functioning collegiate a cappella singing group in the United States.

Their history is rich and vibrant. During World War II, the brave men of the U.S. Army Air Force's Black Sheep Squadron adopted "The Whiffenpoof Song" as their theme song. And over the course of the 20th century, that famous tune has been recorded by such legendary artists as Bing Crosby, Ella Fitzgerald, Louis Armstrong, and Elvis Presley.

The Whiffenpoofs have inspired a cappella singing groups at colleges and secondary schools across America—in fact, there are now more than 1,200 such groups entertaining audiences.

But their influence is not limited by our borders. Each year, the Whiffenpoofs embark on an international tour, visiting foreign capitals and tiny villages, great palaces and humble churches, and U.S. Embassies around the world, spreading song and good will on behalf of Yale University and America's college students.

Next month, Whiffenpoofs alumni from around the world will descend upon Yale to convene with the current group in celebration of the Whiffenpoofs' centennial. It is sure to be an occasion filled with good cheer, great music, and tremendous fellowship—the trademarks of this beloved Connecticut institution.

Mr. President, I congratulate the Whiffenpoofs of Yale University on their centennial, I thank them for their many contributions to our Nation, and I look forward to another century of song and friendship.●

TRIBUTE TO STEVE AND SHELLEY BRUNE

● Mr. JOHANNIS. Mr. President, Steve and Shelley Brune are extraordinary Nebraskans who made a commitment to open their hearts and home to a foster child, which led to a remarkable story of love and compassion.

In September 1999, they welcomed Jonathon into their home as a foster child. In February 2001, Jonathon's biological brother, James, was also removed from the home. The Brune family recognized the importance of keeping siblings together and agreed to unite the brothers by welcoming James into their home as a second foster child.

The Brunos worked closely with the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services, HHS, in efforts to reunite Jonathon and James with their biological parents. When HHS determined that reunification was not in the boys' best interest, Steve and Shelley made a permanent commitment to the boys by adopting them; Jonathon on July 19, 2001 and James on January 17, 2002.

In October 2007, the biological sister of James and Jonathon, Mary Ann, was removed from the home. HHS contacted the Brune family to discuss the possibility of once again becoming foster parents. The Brunos recognized that this child needed a loving home and would benefit from being with her brothers. For a third time, they admirably opened their hearts and home, welcoming Mary Ann on July 15, 2008.

In April 2009, another sibling, Madeline Grace, was born and was also removed from the home. The Brune family showed tremendous compassion and devotion to the children of this family by agreeing to welcome Madeline Grace into their family. Steve and Shelley are currently in the process of adopting both Mary Ann and Madeline Grace.

It is with heartfelt admiration that I nominate Steve and Shelley Brune as Adoption Angels. Their capacity to love and care for these four children is an inspiration and worthy example for others to follow. My hope is that their story inspires others to consider opening their hearts and homes to the many children awaiting adoption, in need of loving families.

May God bless Shelley, Steve, Jonathon, James, Mary Ann, Madeline Grace, and all adoptive parents who give children the gift of a loving family.●
