The Chair renders the title of the bill. The CHAIR. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered read the first time.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. REYES) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOECKSTRA) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. REYES. Thank you, Madam Chair. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, I am proud to rise today in support of H.R. 2701, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. This is an unusual time of year for us to be considering this legislation. However, it is and remains a very important bill which addresses critical national security issues, and one that we ultimately need to see enacted.

As chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, my most important job is to guide the committee in providing appropriate tools, resources, and authorities to aid the dedicated men and women of the intelligence community in keeping our Nation safe. I believe that H.R. 2701 does just that.

First and foremost, this bill authorizes the activities and the funds for the 16 agencies of the intelligence community. It is difficult to talk about their roles and their missions in the open, but in some ways it is probably one of the most important things that we do on the Intelligence Committee. In addition to providing authorization for intelligence activities, this bill takes the important initial steps to improve congressional oversight of that intelligence community.

I want to highlight two legislative provisions from this year’s bill that I believe will significantly improve oversight.

When this bill was marked up in committee, we made significant changes to the so-called “Gang of Eight” procedures. As Members know, the President has had the statutory authority to limit briefings to the Gang of Eight when there were covert actions. It was the sense of the committee that the Gang of Eight statutory authority had been overused, and that, on matters of critical importance, the committee as a whole should have been informed. For that reason, that earlier version of the bill removed the statutory authority for limiting briefings to the Gang of Eight.

Last July, the administration issued a statement of policy on H.R. 2701 that included a veto threat with respect to the provisions that would modify the Gang of Eight notification procedures. I believe that some level of concern at that point was justified and I have been working with the administration over the past several months to resolve those differences. Since July, there have already been noticeable improvements in the way the administration and reporting of the President are communicating and briefing Congress.

Accordingly, the manager’s amendment I will offer includes a revised provision on Gang of Eight reform. I know that it was a very difficult vote. I think it reflects in many ways Members’ feelings about this issue on both sides of the aisle. The provision is that in the manager’s amendment is intended to be a strong and significant step towards better oversight which still reflects the important role of the President. It recognizes that both elected branches have a role in national security.

I fully expect that once we pass this bill we will then revisit this issue during the conference between the House and the Senate. And I am happy to work with Members to seek improvements at that time. Through this process, we will be able to find a workable solution to a problem that has persisted over the past several years, if not longer.

Another provision that I think is absolutely critical establishes a statutory Inspector General for the intelligence community. This provision will eliminate waste, eliminate waste, and it will also help keep a close eye on the protection of the rights of Americans.

This year’s bill is truly a product of many hands. The Inspector General provision, which I just spoke about, in large part is due to the efforts of Ms. ESHOO, the chair of the Intelligence Community Management Subcommittee. The vice chairman of the full committee, Mr. HASTINGS, has offered an amendment to include critical provisions on our shared interest in promoting diversity as a mission imperative. He has been working at this long and hard for many, many years.

Our newest majority member, Mr. BOREN, has worked hard to develop a pilot program to improve language capability in African languages. The chairman of the Technical and Tactical Subcommittee, Mr. RUPPERSBERGER, has worked hard on the classified annex to make sure our approach to acquisitions and our most technical programs make good sense. He has been a pivotal part to the committee’s oversight process in these very important areas.

The bill includes several provisions offered by Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, the chairwoman of the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, which relate to

INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2010

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2701.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2701) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2010 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes, with Ms. EDWARDS of Maryland in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The CHAIR. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered read the first time.

Mr. REYES. Thank you, Madam Chair. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, I am proud to rise today in support of H.R. 2701, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. This is an unusual time of year for us to be considering this legislation. As chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, my most important job is to guide the committee in providing appropriate tools, resources, and authorities to aid the dedicated men and women of the intelligence community in keeping our Nation safe. I believe that H.R. 2701 does just that.

It is difficult to talk about their roles and their missions in the open, but in some ways it is probably one of the most important things that we do on the Intelligence Committee. In addition to providing authorization for intelligence activities, this bill takes the important initial steps to improve congressional oversight of that intelligence community.

I want to highlight two legislative provisions from this year’s bill that I believe will significantly improve oversight.

When this bill was marked up in committee, we made significant changes to the so-called “Gang of Eight” procedures. As Members know, the President has had the statutory authority to limit briefings to the Gang of Eight when there were covert actions. It was the sense of the committee that the Gang of Eight statutory authority had been overused, and her longstanding interest in appropriately monitoring and managing contractors in the intelligence community.

Mr. HOEVT, the chairman of the Select Intelligence Oversight Panel, advocated for a provision addressing the videotaping of interrogations and other on intelligence information on the health risks faced by Desert Storm veterans.

Mr. THOMPSON of California, another subcommittee chairman, has worked hard on this bill as well. He pushed successfully for the inclusion of a provision to study the benefits paid to the families of the men and women of the intelligence community who have made the ultimate sacrifice. I am proud to support that as well.

We also received important input from the committee's minority members. Mr. KLINE of Minnesota offered an excellent amendment, which we were pleased to accept, that requires the National Reconnaissance Organization to rewrite its charter to meet its current missions. Mr. CONAWAY's personal interest in auditability and analysis of human intelligence, signals intelligence, and geospatial intelligence.

MADAM CHAIR, I believe that this bill will provide the resources and the tools that the intelligence community needs to do its important work in keeping our country safe. That includes collection and analysis of human intelligence, signals intelligence, and geospatial intelligence.

It includes funds to detect and disrupt terrorist plots, to provide for intelligence support to the warfighters in Iraq and Afghanistan, and also improves the recruitment and training of a diverse and capable workforce.

During my time on this committee, I've had the good fortune to be able to travel and to meet the brave men and women of the intelligence community, both uniformed and civilian, and I am continually impressed and in awe of the great work that they do and the great morale that they have. They are dedicated, professional and highly skilled patriots, and I'm proud to provide a bill that supports them and all that they do for our nation.

This past December, we lost seven of those brave men and women in the attack in Khost, Afghanistan. It is for them, and for those who carry on their mission, that I proudly submit this bill today.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOEVTSTRA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself as much time as I shall consume.

Madam Chairman, annual Intelligence authorization bills should be bipartisan legislation designed to address critical national security issues and deal in a deliberate and considered way with legislation affecting the intelligence community, the personnel within the intelligence community. Unfortunately, this bill does neither. I'm forced to rise in strong opposition.

When this bill was first reported almost 8 months ago, the bill failed to address critical national security issues such as Guantanamo detainees, attempts by this administration to convert intelligence and counterterrorism into matters of criminal law and meaningful reforms to the congressional notification process.

In the nearly 8 months since this bill was reported out of committee, our country has suffered two major terrorist attacks and a significant number of near misses. During that time, the majority took no time and no action to bring this bill to the floor.

In 8 months nothing was done to fix the flaws in our intelligence community that were apparent to every American in the wake of the first attack at Fort Hood and the Christmas bombing attack on an American airliner.

In 8 months, nothing was done to clarify who is in charge of interrogation of high-value terrorist detainees, the assurance around the world that the world who want to do harm to America.

In 8 months, nothing was done to provide a long-term renewal of our critical intelligence authorities under the USA PATRIOT Act.

In 8 months, nothing was done to once and for all, stop hard-core, radical jihadist terrorists from being brought into the United States, despite the clear opposition that has arisen to this ill-considered idea from average Americans across the country.

In 8 months, nothing has been done to clarify how covert actions should be conducted or authorized when they could have deadly effects on American citizens. Nothing has been done.

Then, you go through and you take a look at the amendments that we wanted to propose that would have addressed these issues, and all of these were thrown out by the majority, an amendment that would direct the DNI to establish a panel to review the intelligence relating to weapons of mass destruction programs of Iran. Politically speaking, our intelligence community is now to the left of the United Nations as far as its assessment of what Iran's capabilities are, to the left of the ill-fated National Intelligence Estimate that came out under the previous administration.

We've asked for an independent panel of experts to get unfiltered review. Our colleagues on the other side of the aisle said, no, that's not necessary.

We asked for an amendment that would require the CIA to release publicly unclassified versions of documents relating to the use of enhanced interrogation techniques, this controversial background as to who knew what when, including some of the leading Members of this body. We asked for those documents to be released. The majority said no.

We asked for the prohibition of funds to bring Guantanamo detainees into the United States. The majority said, we won't even debate it. We won't consider it. We won't allow for an amendment that would do just that.

We asked for a report requiring the DNI to submit a report detailing steps taken to fix problems identified in the President's Fort Hood intelligence recommendations prior to December 25. Because the incident on November 5 had striking parallels to what happened on December 25, and we thought it was fair to ask the question and ask the Director of National Intelligence: With the information that you gained on November 5, what actions did you take that might have helped prevent what happened on Christmas Day? And the answer was, no, we don't think that would be a worthwhile effort to ask the intelligence community those questions of the administration.

And then we said we had another amendment that said, don't we think it would be appropriate that we actually establish a process for the administration and the notification of covert actions that may result in the death of a targeted U.S. citizen? It doesn't get into a debate as to whether that is appropriate, an appropriate course of action. It just says, don't we think that the intelligence community and the executive branch should have in place a detailed process of how these decisions are made, how they are authorized, and when Congress would be notified? And the answer from the majority was no.

And then, we said we have another amendment. A process that would give us an idea as to how the administration would authorize and notify Congress when they took actions that might result in the death of a targeted U.S. citizen, a targeted U.S. citizen.

And then we have the amendment that were not considered, substantive, serious issues that the majority is unwilling to debate, to discuss and to address.

Later on, as we go through the day and as we take a look at the manager's amendment and the other amendments, we'll take a look at the striking contrast between what the majority is willing to debate and discuss and to act on, and what they are unwilling to debate and discuss. And it has a direct impact on the safety of each and every American.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYES, Madam Chairman, now it's my privilege to yield five minutes to my good friend and chairman of the Armed Services Committee, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKEWTON), who actually has jurisdiction over some of the issues that the ranking member mentioned just a couple of minutes ago.

Mr. SKEWTON. Madam Chairman, first, let me thank the gentleman from Texas, Chairman SILVESTRE REYES, for the hard work that he did on this bill. So I rise today in strong support of the Intelligence Authorization Act.

From my perspective as chairman of the Armed Services Committee, it’s a good bill, one that will support the intelligence needs of our soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines every day. American men and women who are deployed into harm’s way depend on the intelligence capabilities authorized by this bill to achieve their missions. I cannot state strongly enough about how those in uniform who are in harm’s way depend upon the intelligence that they receive.

This legislation ensures continued delivery of quality intelligence products and capabilities through our warfighters. It will lead to important improvement in the future.

As I’ve said before, the relationship between the intelligence community and the Department of Defense is fundamental to the success on the battlefields. The relationship by expanding the intelligence community’s technical and human collection capabilities.

It adds significant resources to modernize signals intelligence capabilities, and intelligence technology that are the foundation for intelligence support for our warfighters in Afghanistan. The bill also adds resources for HUMINT collection against terrorists and other enduring and emerging global security issues in Asia, Africa, as well as in Latin America.

This measure will improve oversight of the intelligence community by creating a statute and independent intelligence community-wide inspector general.

And, finally, this bill enhances cybersecurity, which is becoming very, very important, cybersecurity efforts by authorizing significant investments to support the President’s comprehensive cybersecurity strategy.

And I might add, Madam Chairman, that we, on the Armed Services Committee, have dealt with some, and have the jurisdiction of dealing with some matters that my friend from Michigan mentioned a few moments ago. They are within our jurisdiction.

Mr. THORNBERRY from Texas, who will talk about the continued efforts by this administration in what appears to be a war on the intelligence community, a legal war on our intelligence community, the brave men and women in that community.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Madam Chairman, I appreciate the distinguished ranking member yielding to me.

In many ways this bill is a tale of two bills. Part of this bill is the classified annex where specific dollar amounts are allocated to various programs. And the classified annex, I’m happy to report, is a bipartisan product. And I appreciate the chairman of this committee, Subcommittee Chairman RUPPERSBERGER, and others working with Republicans compromising from both sides but having a bipartisan product that has the support. I believe, of the full Intelligence Committee and should have the support of the full House. Unfortunately, that is not the case with the other provisions of this bill, the policy provisions of this bill, which are deeply disturbing.

As the ranking member has indicated, a number of key issues, whether it’s Guantánamo, to reading Miranda Rights, have not even been allowed to be debated and voted on the floor of the House. Those issues have been shoved aside.

Instead, what we have in the underlying bill are 41 new reports, plus an additional 17 more reports that would be required of the intelligence community in any way threaten physical harm or coercion against a terrorist in order to get information from a terrorist that can prevent future terrorist attacks.

And I think it would be helpful for all our Members to just remember a bit of the history here. Last year the Obama administration released a number of classified memos detailing interrogation techniques, despite the appeal of five former CIA directors not to do it, because doing so would harm our efforts against a terrorist. They did it anyway.

Then, secondly, last year, the administration decided that they would re-investigate CIA personnel who were involved in interrogations, even though it had been thoroughly investigated and there was no basis found for any criminal proceedings. The Obama administration decided they wanted to appoint a special prosecutor to go after those people again.

Third, there’s an effort to bring lawyers up on ethics charges because some people disagree with the legal opinion that they reached. And, of course, just recently we found that that effort has failed.

Fourth, last year, the Speaker, under pressure from questions about what she knew about those interrogations, alleged that the CIA lied all the time, despite the considerable evidence that she had been fully briefed about the interrogations. And the Speaker’s charge was so indefensible that this bill got postponed for 7 months and couldn’t even come to the floor, in order to protect her.

So you see that string of going after the intelligence community of making accusations against them. And then what we find in the manager’s amendment is this provision that creates new crimes only for the intelligence community when they try to illicit information. It is rather remarkable.

Anywhere in America, if a prison guard tries to wake a prisoner up, it’s okay; it’s part of the prison routine. Under this provision, if a terrorist does not want to talk, the intelligence community can be prosecuted and sent to jail for 15 years.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I yield the gentleman an additional 2 minutes.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Anywhere in America there is a criminal investigation, it might be pointed out to a criminal suspect that it would be better to cooperate or the death penalty could be a potential punishment for his crime. It is against the law under this McDermott provision for an intelligence professional to in any way threaten physical harm or coercion against a terrorist in order to get information from a terrorist that can prevent future terrorist attacks.

It is in many ways unthinkable. In many ways, it’s topsy-turvy land where we forget who the good guys are, who the guys trying to keep us safe are, and who the bad guys are. It’s all turned upside down.

We all remember the photos of abuses from Abu Ghraib in Iraq. They were deplorable. The people responsible were prosecuted under the criminal law, as they should have been. But to extrapolate from that, the source of restrictions here starting on page 33 of the manager’s amendment is, I think, indefensible.

Intelligence is a serious business. The people who are involved in it risk their lives to keep us safe. And to threaten, as this law would, to put them in jail for 15 years if they don’t give some somebody, whatever the terrorist says is part of their individual religious beliefs, I think, is dangerous, irresponsible. And it tells the intelligence community that we talk so much but we’re not going to back up our words; in fact, we’re going to prosecute you. That’s a mistake.

I am deeply disturbed by some of the trends in this bill, and I hope that the manager’s amendment will not be adopted, and if it is, this bill should certainly be rejected.

Mr. REYES. It’s now my pleasure to yield 1½ minutes to my good friend and former member of the House Intelligence Committee who still is a valued resource for us, Mr. BOSEWELL from Iowa.

Mr. BOSEWELL. Madam Chair, I would like to engage the chairman of the Intelligence Committee for the purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I am happy to oblige my good friend, Mr. BOSWELL.

Mr. BOSEWELL. I would like to clarify the intent of section 312 of H.R. 2701
Regarding the authorization of the Intelligence Officer Training Program.

As I understand it, that section will authorize the Director of National Intelligence to provide grants to institutions of higher learning to develop, among other things, innovative methods of teaching high-priority foreign language skills.

Is my understanding of this provision correct?

Mr. REYES. You are correct, Mr. Boswell.

Mr. BOSEWELL. My understanding is that Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, has a highly innovative foreign language skills program. Under that program, Drake students work with native speakers in groups of five or fewer three times a week. Such students may also take a ‘strategies’ course, which has several goals, including helping students approach the culture they are studying through a nonethnocentric lens.

Former students of this program have gone on to teach in China, become Fulbright Scholars, provide translation services, perform nonprofit and missionary work in El Salvador, complete advanced degrees in languages, and excel in the corporate world more generally.

Is Drake University’s language program the type of program that the intelligence community believes would be a good candidate to receive a grant from the ODNI under section 312 of H.R. 2701?

Mr. REYES. Having had the opportunity to visit Drake University with you, you are correct.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. REYES. I yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. BOSEWELL. Thank you, Chairman Reyes, for that comment and that visit. That is correct. I appreciate that.

I want to thank you for the clarification.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I would like to yield 4 minutes to my colleague from Michigan, a strong defender of the Intelligence Committee, Mr. ROGERS.

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. I can’t tell you how disappointed I am in this bill for all that is at stake in the country.

When there was a switch in debate about how we approach the war on terror, that’s a legitimate argument, a legitimate debate to have, and we should have that debate.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I yield my colleague 1 more minute.

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. They made a fundamental shift, from proactive intelligence overseas to find them where they train, to where they finance, to where they recruit, to a law enforcement effort to bring them back to the United States. We’re bringing the farm state-drug lords and terrorists from the United States and putting them in mainstream courtrooms. We’re prosecuting CIA officers for following legal advice from the Department of Justice in interrogation. So we’re treating CIA officers like criminals, but we’re treating foreign-trained terrorists like Americans with all of the benefits and the privileges therein.

You almost couldn’t make this up. You couldn’t come to this conclusion. And with it, we’ve got consequences.

When you look at the series of events from the Fort Hood shootings to the Christmas Day bomber and the mistakes that were made and the lost opportunity for disruption, we all ought to hang our heads down and wonder why we got us back to where we’re putting the interests of Americans first versus the interests of the rights of terrorism before the safety and security of the United States.

I strongly urge a rejection of this bill.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I don’t quibble with the opinions that my friends on the other side of the aisle have. It’s just facts that don’t support the opinions that I quibble with. They’re not entitled to their own facts.

I now yield 1½ minutes to a new member of our committee, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Boren), a valued member of our committee.

Mr. BOREN. Madam Chair, I rise today in support of H.R. 2701, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. This bill makes an excellent product and much needed investment in many critical areas, including those that have historically been underresourced.

One of the most important investments is this bill’s commitment to developing foreign language capabilities, specifically in African languages that have historically been underrepresented within the intelligence community.

The bill creates a pilot program under the National Security Education Program, or the NSEP. It expands the David Boren Scholars by reauthorizing the Director of National Intelligence to identify high-priority African languages for which language education programs do not currently exist. The NSEP would then develop intensive training programs for implementation in both the United States and in countries where these languages are spoken.

Let’s not forget that 10 years ago we didn’t anticipate the conflicts along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border and the need for speakers of the local languages and dialects. When the need arose, we didn’t have the capabilities to meet immediate demands, and to this day, we are still playing catch-up.
Similarly, we cannot predict from where the next crisis will emerge, but by recognizing the current instability in the Horn of Africa, Sudan, and Congo, we can anticipate crises that will impact national security. The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. REYES. I yield the gentleman an additional 15 seconds.

Mr. BOREN. We should be training the linguists and translators in the relevant languages now so that once again we can be proactive in our efforts; we’re proactive in our actions. I urge support for this bill.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. At this time, I’d like to yield 2 minutes to my colleague from Texas (Mr. Burgess).

Mr. BURGESS. I thank the ranking member for yielding.

This is a very unfortunate bill, and I think this side of the aisle has sufficiently laid out abundant reasons why it should be sent to the committee and fixed. The Intelligence community is too important to our national security to allow a bill with as many concerns as this one to pass.

However, I am here also to discuss what I see as a fatal flaw in the way information is disseminated to Members of the House who are not committee members.

Nothing is more critical to the role each of us plays in representing our districts and this country than for us to have every relevant piece of information available to us prior to casting a vote on one updating the authorizations for the way our government gathers intelligence. Yet many Members of this House have been denied access to key pieces of information simply by virtue of the fact that they do not sit on the Intelligence Committee.

I recognize that membership on any given committee in this Chamber means you are not given access to matters in a special capacity. I respect that. I would even say that dividing up responsibilities is critical in achieving everything in a body as large as this one, but not being a member of the committee should not prevent one from having access to nothing that falls under the jurisdiction of this committee. Certainly, there are some pieces of information that are so important, of such importance to national security, that every Member of this body, should they so desire, should have access.

Last summer, the story broke about photographs alleging detainee abuse at Guantanamo.

I formally requested, through the Intelligence Committee, access to these photos. I assumed it would be a simple request. In 2008, similar photos at Abu Ghraib were readily available to every Member of this House by the same committee under the leadership of then-Chairman Hoekstra.

This year, after months of no response, I was informed that the committee did not retain the photos and could not or would not allow nonmembers of the Intelligence Committee access. At the same time as my request to view these photos, I requested to review the classified CIA Inspector General report titled “Counterterrorism Detention and Interrogation Activities.”

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. BURGESS. After months, I was denied my request, no reason given for the denial. I can hardly believe that on an issue as critical and crucial as this I would not be allowed access. I believe strongly that for me to vote on something as important as the Intelligence Authorization Act I should have access to every bit of information.

Finally, on the shooting at Fort Hood, I asked to have attendance at the briefing that was being given. But because a business meeting had to occur before I would be granted permission and now has scheduled, I simply could not attend.

Madam Chair, this bill has problems on many, many levels, but it is impossible for me to vote in the affirmative given the restrictions on activities of members of the minority from this committee.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, just so we are clear, it doesn’t appear that some members of the other aisle realize how important the rules of the House apply to everyone on a bipartisan basis. The information he sought was denied from our committee because it didn’t fit the criteria and the rules of the House.

With that, I now yield 2 minutes to my friend from the Armed Services Committee, chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee, and a new member of our House Intelligence Committee this year. I urge support for this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. I certainly think there are a lot of very good things in this bill. Our intelligence community is a critical piece of fighting terrorism. Their counterterrorism efforts are absolutely at the top of the list of what the Intel Committee does.

We are supporting all of our agents in the CIA and throughout the intelligence community, and we thank them for their service and their brave efforts. We are going to tell us and when, and to make sure there is a record of it, which is in this bill, so that no one can later dispute what they were or were not told.

The minority has a critical role to play in making that happen. Instead of these hearings, somehow we have given up in the fight on terror and we are not supporting the intelligence community. That is absolutely untrue. Majority and minority strongly support our intelligence community, and we are absolutely committed to prosecuting this war to the fullest extent possible.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, how much time do we have remaining on each side?

The Acting CHAIR (Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas). The gentleman from Michigan has 10½ minutes and the gentleman from Texas has 13½ minutes.
Mr. HOEKSTRA. I would like to reserve my time until we are more equal.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I now yield 2 minutes to the chairman of the Terrorism-HUMINT, Analysis and Counterintelligence Subcommittee, my good friend from California (Mr. THOMPSON).

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for yielding.

I am pleased that this legislation supports critical U.S. intelligence capabilities at a level higher than we have ever had in past years. This bill improves the intelligence community’s ability to understand hard targets, those countries that pose the greatest strategic threat to U.S. interests.

But it also increases funds for intelligence collections that will support U.S. policy decisions in other important regions such as Africa, Latin America, and Asia. We must continue to focus our resources on our priority targets, but we can’t neglect emerging threats. This bill does both.

The bill also includes an amendment that I introduced in committee in conjunction with our colleague, DAVID PRICE of North Carolina, to improve the effectiveness of Interrogations and prevent post-transfer abuse.

It calls on the Director of National Intelligence to evaluate scientific research on interrogations and assess how to improve our U.S. interrogators’ training. It also requires the DNI to assess whether he would provide to interrogators so they understand the boundaries within which they can operate.

Finally, the bill contains a provision that I sponsored that requires the newly created Inspector General of the intelligence community to study the intelligence community’s electronic waste disposal procedures. This provision was designed to protect not just our environment, but also our security. The Inspector General must assess both the environmental impact of these practices and the steps taken to ensure that discarded devices do not contain sensitive information that our adversaries would be able to exploit.

Madam Chair, this legislation will strengthen the capabilities of our intelligence communities and makes our Nation safer.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield myself 1 minute.

I hope that as we have the general debate on this bill right now that we have at least one person who will come up on the other side and explain exactly what is in the McDermott amendment. I mean, what is the implication. I wonder if our amendment, and I am glad it’s in the manager’s amendment.

Second, Madam Chair, the manager’s amendment requires the Director of National Intelligence, in consultation with the Attorney General, to assess intelligence on harmful radiological materials, including highly dispersible substances like Cesium-137. It’s not possible in this open setting to describe the threat posed by unsecured radiological materials, but range of experts, including the Defense Science Board, have warned about the danger posed by medical equipment that uses this material.

These machines are in hospitals across the country, in every major town and city. They are not tamper-proof. The Departments of Energy and Homeland Security are adding short-term hardening measures to these machines, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is investigating alternatives. They need more support.

My thanks to the Rules Committee and to Chairman REYES for including my provisions in the manager’s amendment.

I urge an “aye” vote.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I thank my colleague from California for coming down and explaining her amendments. These are issues that we have talked about in the past, and congratulations for having them included in the manager’s amendment. I support those kinds of amendments, because they have been discussed and they have broad bipartisan support.

There are other parts of the manager’s amendment which I am strongly opposed to because they haven’t even had any dialogue, debate or hearings on that.

To discuss one of those, I yield 2 minutes to my colleague from Texas (Mr. THORNBERY).

Mr. THORNBERY. Madam Chair, I agree with much of what has been said on the other side of the aisle about the good provisions in this bill. I am also disappointed, as the ranking member talked about, that a number of substantive issues were not even allowed to be discussed and voted on.

But in my mind all of that is dwarfed by the provisions in the last section of the manager’s amendment beginning on page 32, and I would recommend every Republican and Democrat in this House read for him- or herself this language, because it is a devastating blow to the professionals in our intelligence community who we ask to keep us safe.

This language delineates a number of specific acts that it says by law are cruel and degrading treatment. One of those acts is prolonged isolation.

As I mentioned earlier, any prison or county jail anywhere around the country sometimes has to put a prisoner into solitary confinement. But under this law, if an intelligence community professional does that, he is liable for up to 15 or more years in jail for prolonged isolation.

If he does anything that would blaspheme a terrorist’s religious beliefs, or cause him to participate in action intended to violate his individual religious beliefs, he is guilty of violating a criminal statute and that intelligence professional whom we count on to keep us safe goes to jail—not the terrorists, but the guy or lady that we are counting on to keep us safe.

There is provision after provision, whether it’s deprivation of sleep, even threatening to use force, the religious provisions, as I mentioned, or any act that is the equivalent of this laundry list—sensory deprivation—the terrorist would be captured would be treated no differently than any criminal in any county jail or any prison across the country. This is wrong, and it’s reason enough to reject the bill.
Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I now yield 2 minutes to the chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Intelligence Community Management, a valued member of my committee, Ms. ESHOO from California.

Ms. ESHOO. I thank the chairwoman, and I thank our distinguished chairman for his wonderful and dedicated leadership of the House Intelligence Committee.

It’s been far too long since we’ve had an Intelligence authorization bill enacted. Because Congress has the responsibility to set guidance for the intelligence community to strengthen our national security, which is really our highest obligation here in Congress, I am really pleased that this critical legislation is on the floor today.

This bill takes some very important steps to increase congressional oversight of the intelligence community, which is very much needed. I would like to address two in particular that came out of the subcommittee that I am proud to chair.

First, this bill creates an independent intelligence community inspector general. So many of the issues in the intelligence community cut across multiple agencies, and today there is no one who can look at all sides of these issues. This inspector general will have the dual responsibility to report to the Congress, not just to the Director of National Intelligence, increasing our oversight.

Second, this bill allows the GAO to conduct audits and reviews of the intelligence community. We all know the value of the GAO’s assessments firsthand. Their reputation for objective, thorough reviews is second to none.

But today, the intelligence community refuses to allow GAO in the door, even when the inspector general has asked them to investigate. This is not going to stand because the bill corrects it.

The bill increases oversight of the security clearance process and takes steps to improve information sharing, both high priorities of my subcommittee. We have had numerous hearings on these topics and will continue to do so.

Finally, my colleagues, we all take this responsibility to oversee the intelligence community very seriously. We are the eyes and ears of the American people to examine the issues that are hidden behind the walls of classification, and as the voice of the American people to ask the questions which they cannot. This bill strengthens our ability to do just that, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman’s time has expired.

Mr. REYES. I yield the gentlelady 15 additional seconds.

Ms. ESHOO. Finally, I would like to say in response to really a terrible charge that was made by one of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle that this bill weakens the intelligence community, that it is an attack on the intelligence community: we can’t let that stand. There isn’t anything farther from the truth. This is singularly the largest Intel authorization with its base budget in the history of the United States of America. We are giving to the intelligence community the very tools that it requires, that it has requested, and are glad to do so.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I would like to yield 2 minutes to my colleague from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS).

Mr. ROGERS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I, too, along with my colleague from Texas, and certainly the ranking member from Michigan, want to bring to the attention of this body just how dangerous the amendment is that says this, “Any officer or employee of the intelligence community who, in the course of or in anticipation of a covered interrogation, knowingly commits, attempts to commit or conspires to commit acts of inhumane, or degrading treatment.” And it goes on to talk about infringing on their religious beliefs by any notion whatsoever that isn’t defined in the bill.

Sleep—talks about lack of sleep. As a matter of fact, the interrogators are probably getting a lot less sleep than actually the terrorists they are interrogating because they also process the information before and after the interrogations.

You have created a whole new direction to go after the very people who are interrogating people trying to kill Americans, and you are saying we are going to put you in jail if you push your limits. And by the way, torture is already against the law. Nobody, and I mean nobody, is pushing torture. What we’re saying is, you cannot make this so unreasonable that they won’t do it. And if you don’t think that this will have an impact on an agent making the decision of whether I or shouldn’t I, you know what? I was hoping to turn around and find 300 screaming, cheering Americans saying thank you for your patriotism and your service, not 25 Justice Department lawyers with subpoenas.

You will absolutely freeze the intelligence community’s ability to go out and get information that they need, and it is absolutely naive to believe that they’re going to do it anyway. I’m sorry, that’s not the way it works. These folks want to follow the law; they want to follow the Constitution. And guess what? At the end of the day, they’re willing to risk their lives to protect their country and their fellow Americans, and this is the treatment that we give them.

This one provision alone will disrupt I can’t tell you how many operations worldwide and is worthy of our rejection of this direction in the intelligence community.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, it is now my privilege to yield 2 minutes to the chairman of the Subcommittee on Technical and Tactical Intelligence, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. RUPPERSBERGER).

Mr. RUPPERSBERGER. Madam Chair, first, I would like to focus on two of this bill’s most important provisions as it relates to technical and tactical cybersecurity, and, number two, space.

The bill makes significant investments in the variety of critical cybersecurity programs, a need highlighted the recent attacks on the space technology systems of the Federal Government and private industry over the past year.

As cybersecurity evolves and intensifies, our intelligence community must be able to respond quickly and with the latest technologies available. The National Security Agency, which I’m proud to say is in my district, has already developed a number of technologies that are already helping to protect us from cyber threats, but we need to ensure that NSA and other intelligence agencies have the resources that they need to develop and deploy the defenses that will keep our networks running and information secure. This bill helps that.

Second, this bill makes important investments in space. It supports the President’s request to develop a new Imagery capability. In addition, it supports the Senate proposal, which we must start funding to continue building upon our known capabilities.

These are critical investments, and we are prepared to see them through. We must keep major space acquisitions on budget and on schedule. We do not have unlimited resources and cannot afford to have these critical acquisitions spin out of control.

I am also pleased that the bill encourages the DNI and Director of the NRO to leverage commercial capabilities to the fullest extent possible. Commercial tools have significantly improved in recent years. Using these capabilities to complement government efforts will not only provide a cost-effective way of meeting our needs; it will support the revitalization of the long-struggling commercial space industry.

I also want to make a few observations from our peers on the other side. The Intelligence Committee is a very important committee; national security is at stake. We must come together as citizens first. There are a lot of allegations—we understand there are allegations in this world—but when it comes to national security intelligence, we have got to find a way to make sure we focus on the priorities. Those priorities are in this budget.

There are some things that we might not agree with; I yield for the record, we vote on the bill that we feel is right for our Nation. And believe me, there is nothing that either side will do to help the terrorists; we will go after the terrorists with a vigor.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair. I yield myself 1 minute.

There are a lot of things in this bill that are not addressed, that were not allowed to be put in order as we went through the rules process. One of those things is how we are going to deal with the detainees from Guantanamo.

You know, at one time they were going to be moved into Kansas; the people said yes, and said no. They then were going to moved to Michigan, and the people in Michigan stood up and said no. They then were going to be moved to South Carolina, and the leadership in South Carolina said no. Now it is the people in Illinois that are fighting the valiant battle and saying, no, we don’t want them in our State either.

There has been a fundamental problem in each case where the administration has proposed moving these individuals into a State; there has been absolutely no transparency. People in Michigan, people in Illinois, people in South Carolina and Kansas have all asked for the fundamental information: Who are these individuals? Why are they in Guantanamo? What did they do to deserve to be there? What has their behavior been while they have been in Guantanamo? In each case, for each of those States, they said, before the States make up their mind as to whether they are going to accept these individuals or not, share these individuals with the policymakers and the decision-makers in that State.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, it is probably a good point that the ranking member makes that there should be a debate on Guantanamo; unfortunately, this is not the right bill to have that debate on.

I now yield 2 minutes to the chairman of the Select Intelligence Oversight Panel, and a member of the House Intelligence Committee, a valued member, Mr. HOLT from New Jersey.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Chair, I thank the distinguished Chair of the House Permanent Select Committee for bringing this bill to the floor. As he said, it is not perfect, and there are some things that have developed since the committee sent this bill to the floor, but on balance, we need it and I support it.

I am pleased that the bill includes language I developed that mandates video recording of detainee interrogations by the Central Intelligence Agency. This provision’s purpose is simple: to improve the intelligence operations of the CIA and enhance our national security by ensuring the video recording of each interrogation. It requires the Director of the CIA to promulgate and provide to Congress the guidelines under which such video recording shall be done. And it requires that the video recordings have to be maintained and preserved. I must stress, like this provision is extremely similar to the one that was included in last year’s National Defense Authorization Act and that now serves as the legal basis for video recording of detainee interrogations within the Department of Defense.

The benefits of video recording and electronically recording interrogations are evident, and law enforcement organizations across the United States routinely use the practice to both protect the person being interrogated and the officer conducting the interrogations and, importantly, to get better, more useful information. Clearly, the CIA itself valued this tool as well, otherwise it would not have made the recordings that it did of interrogations of “high-value” detainees that were captured in the wake of the 9/11 attacks. The amendment will allow the CIA Director to determine how to conduct the recordings in a way that protects the identity of interrogators and prevents other material that must be secret.

Finally, the bill also advances some of my other priorities, including a sustained emphasis on improving foreign language capabilities, expanding GAO’s ability to conduct investigations of intelligence community activities, and a long-overdue declassification review requirements for war illness-related records at the CIA.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for this bill.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield my colleague from Texas (Mr. THORNBERY) 1½ minutes.

Mr. THORNBERY. Madam Chair, our colleague on the Intelligence Committee from New Jersey talked about the importance of interrogations. It is absolutely true that much of the information that the United States has received since September 11 prevented further successful terrorist attacks on our homeland has come from interrogations. That is why it is so important that we maintain that tool done by professionals in the right way, absolutely. But to tie their hands and allow those professionals conducting interrogations of terrorists even less latitude than the county sheriff or the FBI investigating a bank robbery have just seems to me to be madness. And yet the manager’s amendment, which has traditionally been used for technical-type corrections, less controversial sorts of issues, the manager’s amendment on this bill includes an amazing expansion of criminal liability only for those in the intelligence community.

It seems to me that before we start prosecuting members of the intelligence community for not giving terrorists the amount of sleep they ask for or for doing something that may violate whatever they describe as their religious beliefs, we ought to think twice about it.

It is important to say there is no reasonableness standard to say what is reasonably your intelligence belief or a reasonable amount of sleep; this is all at the discretion of the interrogator. We are jumping to their tune under this language. It is dangerous, and it should be rejected.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, may I inquire of the time remaining on both sides?
Chairman REYES, has said now is not the time to spin out of control. The country, like the scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, wouldnt be possible without the work of some of the most brilliant minds in the country, like the scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Second, the bill makes critical investments in our overhead infrastructure and architecture. This is essential to our capability and wouldnt be possible without the work of some of the most brilliant minds in the country, like the scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, my colleague on the other side of the aisle, Chairman REYES, has said now is not the time to talk about getting an independent assessment of what is going on in Iran. Now is not the time to talk about the release of unclassified versions of documents related to the use of intelligence capabilities techniques. Now is not the time to talk about bringing the Gitmo folks here.

Now is not the time to talk about the time lapse between Fort Hood and Christmas Day and what did and did not happen during that period of time. Now is not the time to talk about a process for the authorization and notification of covert actions that may result in the death of a targeted U.S. citizen.

So it is not time to talk about any of those or to debate any of those issues which are absolutely critical to the effectiveness of our intelligence community and to keeping America safe.

Interestingly enough, it is the day not to talk about but to bury into a manager’s amendment 22 different amendments, including one that will fundamentally change the way our intelligence community has to do business. No debates. No discussions. No debate. Buried in there is the McGromm amendment. We are now limited to, at most, 10 minutes per side to talk about 22 amendments in the manager’s amendment, which will come immediately following this general debate. Yet it is interesting that, in the discussion of general debate, not one person on the other side was willing to defend this amendment and the process by which it was included—which means no discussions, no debate—or to defend the content of what is included in the manager’s amendment.

Is this what the process in the House has now come down to, that we bury these critical amendments between 22 other amendments? If we split up the time equally, let’s see. We have 22 amendments divided by 20 minutes. We will, maybe, have 1 minute of debate. We will have no debate on this amendment. It will be interesting when our folks in the intelligence community see what our friends on the other side of the aisle have done to them today, our friends on the other side who talk about so strongly to defend our intelligence community. When they go visit them in the field, I would guess that they are going to get a very cold reception.

The other thing that they are going to do is they are going to have questions, and they are going to expect the majority to explain how they did this with no hearings. They are going to have to explain exactly. Now, what does this amendment do? How does it impact us? What does it mean? How is it operational?

I assume you knew that before you voted on it on the floor of the House, and my answer is going to be, I don’t think they do.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I understand the frustration on the minority side. As an Army veteran, as a veteran of Federal law enforcement for 20 1/2 years, I understand and value the United States Constitution, I understand and value that we have to live by the rules. I understand and value the fact that we are a global leader that is much respected.

The gentleman talks about one amendment, and that amendment simply says, Follow the rules. Follow the law. Follow the principles that have made this country great. I understand that.

Apparent, the minority does not understand that, and I feel for them because, in the final analysis, I have been with members of the intelligence community in faraway places around the world. I have been with them and their families at Bethesda when they were recuperating from the attack in Khost. I have been to the ceremony at the CIA. I understand what they go through. This is a good bill. It deserves everybody’s support.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Chair, I rise in support of this Intelligence Authorization bill, which authorizes the tools America needs to detect and combat its greatest threats, including what President Obama called “a far-reaching network of violence and hatred.”

In the past weeks, we’ve seen a great deal of evidence that policies adopted by President Obama and Democrats are working to keep Americans safer. In Pakistan, the government is cooperating for the first time in the arrest of top Taliban leaders, including second-in-command Abdul Ghani Baradar and Abdul Kabir, a member of the Taliban’s senior leadership. At home, Najibullah Zazi has now been found guilty in federal court for attempting to bomb New York City’s subway, and the Christmas Day bomber is giving us timely intelligence.

This bill continues the policies that are working and strengthens America’s intelligence collection. It significantly increases funding for human intelligence, a resource that is irreplaceable in disrupting terrorist networks. To ensure the broad reach of our intelligence community, it makes investments in language training and scholarships, so that our personnel will have the resources to infiltrate networks and intercept communications around the world. It also strengthens our defenses against the emerging threats of cyberattacks and cyberwarfare, which, if unchecked, could have a crippling effect on our military and economy. And this legislation makes an important contribution to America’s nuclear non-proliferation efforts by requiring reports on the nuclear intentions and capabilities of Iran, Syria, and North Korea, as well as on the worldwide black market in materials that could contribute to nuclear weapons.

At the same time as it strengthens our intelligence capabilities, this authorization bill also ensures that they receive reasonable and responsible oversight to protect Americans’ rights. It creates an independent inspector general with responsibility for the entire intelligence community; protects the Intelligence Committees’ access, through the Government Accountability Office, to conduct an independent assessment of what is operational.

This measure continues congress’s commitment to delivering to the men and women who serve in the country’s intelligence community the resources they need to conduct the vital work of protecting American lives. This bill ensures that these resources are delivered in a manner that strengthens accountability.

In addition to authorizing funding for 16 U.S. intelligence agencies and intelligence-related programs, the bill contains important provisions to expand independent government oversight of the intelligence community so that the American public can be confident that the essential work of intelligence gathering is done in a manner that complies with the highest moral standards.
I rise today in strong support of this legislation. It has been five years since the last intelligence authorization bill was signed into law, and each new revelation about the conduct of the previous administration testifies to the need for effective congressional oversight of the intelligence community.

This bill provides an opportunity to move beyond questions of misconduct and abuse to address the longer-term challenges of improving our intelligence capabilities, making them responsive to cyber-security and other new threats, and ensuring that they are accountable to Congress and the American public.

I'd like to highlight two aspects of the bill on which I have worked in recent years (along with colleagues such as Ms. SCHAKOWSKY and Mr. HOLT), and which I believe are important steps toward improving the effectiveness of our intelligence operations.

First, the bill contains several provisions dealing with the use of private contractors by the intelligence community, which by some reports have consumed nearly half of the annual intelligence budget.

It would require a comprehensive report on the number and cost of contractors employed by the intelligence community and the extent of their use for intelligence collection, analysis, and other covert activities including detention and interrogation.

It also explicitly prohibits the use of contractors for the interrogation of detainees, codifying a prohibition that the CIA itself has already adopted.

Both of these measures are based on my Transparency and Accountability in Intelligence Contracting Act (H.R. 963), and both were approved by the House in the last intelligence authorization bill but were not signed into law.

Secondly, the bill lays a foundation for making the practice of interrogation more effective, professional, and ethical.

I have worked closely with Subcommittee Chairman Mike THOMPSON in crafting a section of this bill based on H.R. 591, my comprehensive interrogation and detention reform bill.

Our provision would require the DNI to report to Congress on:

- The quality and value of existing scientific research on interrogation;
- The state of interrogation training within the intelligence community, including its ethical component;
- Efforts to enhance career paths for interrogation specialists; and
- The effectiveness of existing processes for studying and implementing best practices.

These and other key provisions of this bill are only a start, but they represent an important first step toward improving the effectiveness and accountability of our intelligence community, and ensuring that the necessary measures we take to protect our country do not come at the cost of our fundamental values.

Finally, I feel compelled to assert that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who are claiming that this bill—and this Administration—somehow do not appreciate the threat our nation is facing have clearly neither read the text of this legislation nor given the issue much serious thought. Rather than holding up military commissions at Guantanamo Bay as a panacea for all of our ills, we should be confronting the threats we face squarely, soberly, and with vigilant attention to questions of effectiveness and ethicality—which is exactly what this bill does.

I thank Chairwoman REYES, Ranking Member HOEKSTRA, and the members of my committee for their leadership and their continued attention to these vital issues, and I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Madam Chair, I rise today in support of H.R. 2701 the Fiscal Year 2010 Intelligence Authorization Act. This bill will make our nation safer by improving federal intelligence operations and supporting a national defense strategy that is both strong and smart.

I am proud to represent Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base. For many years I was the only member from North Carolina on the Homeland Security Committee. I am also a veteran of the United States Army. All these experiences make me particularly mindful of the importance of intelligence. Successful intelligence makes our men and women in the military safer. This is the least we can do for those who voluntarily put themselves in harm's way.

I am also aware of the cost of intelligence failures, where either oversight or intelligence falls short. H.R. 2701 is an important bill that both provides necessary investments in intelligence, and implements the democratic controls needed to be certain that those investments are well managed.

This bill will ensure that Congress fully understands its own responses to terror. Complete review of the intelligence failures of recent attacks, whether or not surveillance at the time was successful, whether or not the U.S. government has been mistaken when accusing someone of involvement in terrorism. U.S. citizens accused of involvement in terrorism are not even afforded the same rights that Guantánamo detainees are—something which this bill seeks to change.

In response to these reports, I submitted a common-sense amendment that would have required the President to report to the congressional intelligence committees the identities of all U.S. citizens on such lists currently or in the future. My amendment was narrowly defeated.

This legislation contains provisions that implement vital measures of accountability, such as a provision to prohibit the use of funds for payment to any contractor to conduct interrogations of detainees currently in custody. I also support the provision in this legislation to establish an independent intelligence community-wide Inspector General. These provisions are an important step to ensure that mechanisms of accountability and oversight are in place. However, I remain concerned that some of the methods being employed by our intelligence community may amount to serious violations of international law and our Constitution.

Last month, The Washington Post and New York Times reported that the Joint Special Operations Command (JSOC) maintained lists of “high value individuals” targeted for assassination abroad, and that those lists contain U.S. citizens. What's more, the President may have authorized military operations with the express understanding that a U.S. citizen might be killed, or may be killed in the future.

Under such a policy, U.S. citizens are added to the list simply suspected of involvement in terrorism, in subversion of their basic constitutional rights to due process of law. Their right to a trial and to present a defense is summarily and anonymously stripped from them. History has demonstrated that the U.S. government has been wrong in accusing someone of involvement in terrorism.

Most recently, following the 2008 Supreme Court decision to afford detainees held indefinitely at Guantánamo Bay habeas corpus rights, the government was forced by federal judges to release thirty-three prisoners who were kept on a targeted assassination list, their punishment is murder.

This legislation contains provisions that implement vital measures of accountability, such as a provision to prohibit the use of funds for payment to any contractor to conduct interrogations of detainees currently in custody. I also support the provision in this legislation to establish an independent intelligence community-wide Inspector General. These provisions are an important step to ensure that mechanisms of accountability and oversight are in place. However, I remain concerned that some of the methods being employed by our intelligence community may amount to serious violations of international law and our Constitution.

Since the beginning of the War in Iraq more than eight years ago, I have expressed grave concerns that intelligence collected or abused by the Executive Branch to justify the war in Iraq. More recently, The Nation reported that Blackwater was intimately involved in a targeted assassination program run by the JSOC and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Pakistan—a country with which we are not at war. I am greatly concerned about the use of private security contractors in intelligence work, particularly in programs that have virtually no transparency, accountability, or oversight. I remain concerned that we are continuing to conduct intelligence work in contravention of international law and in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

I will continue to work to ensure that all have equal protection under the law; and that Congress conducts its constitutionally mandated oversight of the Executive Branch effectively. Mr. REYES. I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. All time for general debate has expired.

SEC. 596. CRUEL, INHUMAN, AND DEGRADING TREATMENT IN INTERROGATIONS PROHIBITED.

(a) SHOWN BY COURT.—This section may be cited as the "Cruel, Inhuman, and Degrading Interrogations Prohibition Act of 2010".

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The United States is a world power and an exemplar of the merits of due process and the rule of law.

(2) The use of torture and cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment harms our service men and women because it removes their assurance that they are being treated in a legally acceptable standard, brings discredit upon the US and its forces, and may place US and allied personnel in enemy hands at a greater risk of abuse by their captors.

(3) The use of torture and cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment gives propaganda and recruitment tools to those who wish to do harm to the people of the United States.

(4) Torture and cruel, inhuman, and degrading treatment do not produce consistently reliable information or intelligence, and are not acceptable practices because their use runs counter to our identity and values as a nation.

(5) The moral standards that reflect the values of the United States governing appropriate tactics for interrogations do not change according to the dangers that we face as a nation.

(6) Every effort must be made to ensure that the United States is a nation governed by the rule of law in every circumstance.

(7) Executive Order 13491 requires those interrogating persons detained as a result of armed conflicts to follow the standards set out in Army Field Manual FM 2-22.3.

(8) The Congress should act in affirmation of these principles and the Executive Order 13491 by enacting standards for interrogations and providing criminal liability for those who do not adhere to the enacted standards.

(9) The courageous men and women who serve honorably as intelligence personnel and as members of our nation's Armed Forces deserve the full support of the United States Congress. The Congress shows true support, in part, by providing clear legislation related to standards for interrogation techniques.

(c) CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT PROHIBITED.—Part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 26 the following:

"CHAPTER 26A—CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT"

This reform is a substantial improvement over the language we included in previous authorization bills and which some of my colleagues still support. This earlier language would have actually expanded the President’s authority concerning restricted briefings, going so far as to include all intelligence activities, not just covert actions. It would also result in more restricted briefings and not fewer.

I am interested in passing laws that reform the notification process, not, as some would say, in sending political messages.

The manager’s amendment also includes a number of provisions proposed by my colleagues. These include an amendment by Mr. Bischak, which would require the DNI and the Attorney General to provide Congress with a strategy on balancing intelligence collection needs with the interests of the United States in prosecuting terrorist suspects.

The questioning and prosecution of terrorist suspects has been the subject of some controversy in recent weeks, and I believe that Congress could benefit from understanding how the administration plans to handle such cases in the future.

A second provision included in the manager’s amendment was proposed by Mr. Marshall of Georgia. It requires the DNI to study the best practices of other foreign governments to combat violent extremist organizations.

A number of our allies, including the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, have established programs to stop individuals from turning to terrorism. This is a growing problem here in the United States, and we could benefit from learning how our friends and allies have dealt with this problem.

Madam Chair, I urge the passage of the manager’s amendment.

At this point, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I claim time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Since the other side doesn’t want to talk about this amendment, I find myself having to come back and, once again, bring up the McDerma’s amendment, which I won’t mention because there have been no hearings on this and it has slipped into this in the dead of night, just some answers to questions that maybe someone on the majority side can answer.

Remember, we are in a community now where the people at the front lines realize, when they have been asked by Congress and the President to do something, that, 3 or 4 years later, they may be prosecuted for those very activities by following the requests of this Congress.

We are talking about enhanced interrogation techniques. The record indicates that even people as high as the Speaker of this House knew about it. Yet this House is supporting those efforts to perhaps go back and prosecute this. Now we open up a whole new set of legal risk for our people in the intelligence community. I wish this thing could just say, “but it doesn’t.” It’s 11 pages of legalese, creating all types of new and ambiguous rules for our people in the intelligence community.

Would someone please answer the question: Why did we never have any hearings on this? Why no discussion? Why no debate? Why does this amendment define a criminal offense that only intelligence community personnel would be guilty of? This only applies to intelligence community personnel. Answer the question.

The amendment would make it a crime for depriving the individual of necessary food, water, sleep, or medical care. How does the bill define necessary? How will we explain that to the people in the intelligence community?

The amendment would make it a crime to require someone to participate in acts included in the individual’s religious beliefs. Is there any objective standard to define that term or is it a subjective standard? Is there any requirement of reasonableness?

The amendment would make it a crime to exploit phobias of the individual. Phobias? Could you explain why this would be a criminal offense for a member of the intelligence community but not a criminal offense for a prosecutor who threatens a detainee with increased jail time if he does not cooperate?

These are just some simple questions—questions that I would think people in the intelligence community would ask the next time someone from this body asks them to do this and tells them how much we support them and how great of a job we think they’re doing. I would think they would hold this amendment up and say, Sir, Madam, did you vote for this? Did you understand what it meant when you voted for it? Could you explain it to me? Somebody please answer these questions.

We sure didn’t have the opportunity to ask this in committee, to get any briefings on this, to have any hearings, for someone to explain this to us. But, no, if the other side has its way, soon this will be law.

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I now yield 2 minutes to my colleague from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS).

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Madam Chair, just to further again tell you how dangerous the President is on making it a criminal act for CIA officers to try to conduct interrogations, again I just want to read—this goes after specifically any intelligence officer or employee of the intelligence community. So anything but re-stating law simply isn’t true. And then it goes on to say “interrogation knowingly commits, attempts to commit, or conspires to commit an act of cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment.” “Degrading,” of course, is undefined.

But think of this: It goes on to explain at a further portion in their language “if you seek to blaspheme his or
Ms. RICHARDSON. I thank the chairman for that response.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to my colleague from Texas (Mr. THORNBERRY).

Mr. THORNBERRY. Madam Chair, a few words on the amendment. I appreciate that the McDermott language only restates what’s in current law. I would be very interested for any Member who can come to the floor and tell me where in current law it says any officer or employee of the intelligence community who forces an individual to be naked goes to jail for 15 years. Sometimes there’s a good reason to ask someone to take their clothes off—to make sure they don’t have bombs strapped around their waist. And yet an intelligence officer who does that under the McDermott language is liable for 15 years in jail.

The McDermott language says an officer or employee in the intelligence community who deprives an individual of necessary sleep goes to jail for 15 years.

Now, I cannot believe the many good Members on both sides of the aisle who are concerned about prosecuting terrorists, about keeping the country safe, have thought through the implications of this language. And to have it included in a manager’s amendment along with 20 other amendments is just amazing to me.

I strongly encourage every Member of the House to read this language and be careful before you vote on it.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The manager’s amendment includes language originally proposed by Mr. McDERMOTT that reiterates existing law on torture and provides statutory criminal penalties for individuals who knowingly commit an act of cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment. Torture is a reprehensible and counterproductive act. As we all know, has no business engaging in that. The language in the manager’s amendment simply reasserts existing law.

Executive Order 13491 prohibits interrogators from engaging in any of the activities highlighted in the manager’s amendment language. This Executive Order limits interrogations to the interrogation techniques that are authorized by the Army Field Manual. It also spells out the terms of Common Article 3 and relevant provisions of the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment as the minimum standard for the United States to follow.

The language in the manager’s amendment restates existing criminal law prohibitions like those in the Detainee Treatment Act and clearly establishes that the United States will adhere to the rule of law. It provides a specific criminal penalty for those who knowingly cause the death of a detainee. It is already a crime for an interrogator to knowingly murder a detainee. This provision merely adds a concrete statutory penalty to that conduct.

This language does not, does not, give terrorists greater rights than ordinary criminals.

We cannot afford another Abu Ghraib, and the language in the manager’s amendment simply reasserts these important provisions already codified in law, plain and simple.

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield myself 1 minute.

I wish it were plain and simple. It’s 11 pages, 11 pages dropped in the middle of the night. No debate, no discussion, just inserted. If it’s already a crime, why are you putting it in here?

We haven’t answered all the questions that we asked before. I notice that the sponsor of the amendment, who was here for an extended period of time, I’m not sure if he wanted to speak on the amendment or not but obviously wasn’t given the opportunity to do so. Does the amendment if he wanted to, it’s too bad because I think there’s legitimate need for discussion and debate because I don’t think it’s at all clear that this is just a restatement of current law.

Answer the questions. The amendment would make it a crime to exploit phobias of the individual. Why is this a criminal offense for a member of the intelligence community but for no one else, not a criminal offense for a prosecutor? Why didn’t we ever talk about this in committee? Why didn’t we ever debate it?

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I now yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARROW).

Mr. BARROW. I thank the Chair for yielding.

I rise to commend Chairman REYES for including in the manager’s amendment my amendment to develop a competitive grant program that will encourage the U.S. intelligence community to partner with Historically Black Colleges and Universities to recruit, train, and retain an ethnically and culturally diverse intelligence workforce.

We face a diverse and growing array of threats around the globe. As the means used by our enemies become more advanced, so must our defenses. Cultural, language, and educational barriers affect the quality of intelligence we can gather, and it’s critical that our intelligence community have the human assets to overcome these barriers.

The area of Georgia that I represent is home to several HBCUs with specific expertise in languages and computer sciences. Engaging these centers of academic excellence, as this amendment does, will produce more sophisticated intelligence officers, who will in turn make our country more secure.

I want to thank Chairman REYES for his work on this important legislation,
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

February 25, 2010

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield 1½ minutes to my colleague from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS).

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Madam Chair, it’s not that you’re giving terro-rists better rights than Americans. It’s the fact that you’re extending to foreign terrorists, foreign nationals, foreign-trained individuals coming here to commit acts of violence and kill civilians the same rights as Ameri-cans. That’s wrong. They are enemy combatants.

You say, well, we can’t have Abu Ghraib. You’re right; we can’t. Torture is illegal. It was illegal then, and guess what? It was investigated and they have been prosecuted, rightly so. They abused people. Wrong. They go to jail. That’s what happens in this system.

What you’re doing now is inter-lecting mass confusion into the people who are going to try to conduct debrifings all over the world, and they’re going to go to dangerous places, and guess what? You’ve engaged one of the worst parts of the al Qaeda playbook that says, remember, when Americans are shooting at themselves and chasing their tail, they are not shooting at us. Allegue abuse. You’ve just put 11 confusing pages right into the hands of our enemy to say, make it really hard on the folks who are risk-ing their lives to save Americans so that we can continue to do what we do, and then retrain, recruit, and we will send people to America to kill American civilians.

This is a dangerous, dangerous, dan-gerous step that you take. No debate. No discussion. Lots of confusion. Don’t do this to the men and women who risk their lives every day to protect the United States of America.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. REYES. Thank you, Madam Chair.

I rise to inform my colleagues on the other side that the men and women protecting this country are clear about their duties. They are focused on keeping us safe. They are not concerned about the political spin here. They are not concerned about the rhetoric that they hear. But they do appreciate ac- tions more than rhetoric. I know because I have been around the world visiting them. I have been to talk to various groups in the intel-ligence community. They know that we appreciate the work that they do each and every day to keep us safe. And they are not going to be fooled, like the American people are not going to be fooled, by the rhetoric that comes up, the spin that they try to put on the management, and in par-ticular the reiteration of something that is fundamentally American, and that is we have a Constitution. We have rules that we all have to live by. We understand the law. And we have to have respect for that law. It does not undermine any of that.

It is a good manager’s amendment. I urge the adoption of the manager’s amendment.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Thank you.

Madam Chair, my colleague on the other side of the aisle is exactly right. The people in the intelligence commu-nity are watching exactly what we are doing. And actions do speak louder than words. The actions that they have seen, their colleagues were asked by this Congress, including the record shows, the leadership of this House and the former administration, to do things on their behalf to keep America safe, and they see their colleagues now po-tentially being prosecuted because the rules have changed under this administra-tion.

As they see the rules changed for them and perhaps their colleagues being prosecuted, they see a global jus-tice initiative coming out of the FBI when we were leading the world to take our enemies on the battlefield in Afghanistan. They see the actions and they see the actions are very, very dif-ferent.

They see that we are moving KSM from Gitmo to trial in New York City. Thankfully, the people in New York City are saying no way, we are not doing it. And at the same time that KSM is being promised a trial in civil-ian courts in the United States, they are seeing 11 pages of new vulnerabili-ties being placed on them after no hearings and no debate.

Yes, our men and women in the field are seeing a real difference. They are seeing a real difference in actions by this Congress as opposed to the administra-tion. They see that they have become kind of a target of this administration, that this is now not about keeping America safe, it is about putting them into a legal framework, an ugly legal net-

Madam Chair, I rise in strong opposition to this bloated Manager’s Amendment. Its flaws powerfully demonstrate how the Intelligence Committee is failing to do its work and has in fact become counterproductive to the work of the intelligence community. Instead of providing a mechanism that affirmation. Instead of providing a mechanism that respects the separation of powers and the var-i-ous equities of the President and the Con-gress, this amendment has ceded the decision of which Members of Congress will be briefed regularly and re-peatedly on the efforts that are ongoing in this area.

Instead of trying to fix the intelligence shar-ing problems that were laid bare at the Fort Hood shooting and shown to be critical during the Christmas attacks, the Majority has instead chosen to put its head in the sand and order up a report on events in Argentina between the mid-1970s and the mid-1980s.

In addition to the above mentioned, I need to note for the record some specific serious problems with this amend-ment.

First, the amendment does even further damage to the bipartisan agreement that had been reached on reform of congressional notifica-tion. Instead of providing a mechanism that respects the separation of powers and the var-i-ous equities of the President and the Con-gress, this amendment has ceded the decision of which Members of Congress will be briefed and which will not to the President, apparently to avoid the White House’s veto threat on the bill.

It has instead chosen to put its head in the sand and order up a report on events in Argentina between the mid-1970s and the mid-1980s.

In addition of resolving the serious problems in coordinating the interrogation of the high-value de-tainees that became apparent when Mi-ra-nda rights were read to a foreign radical jihadist, the Majority has chosen to require the intelligence community to write up not one, but two new reports and a “Task Force” on cyber-security even though the Committee is in the middle of a series of comprehensive briefings and hearings on the subject and has con-ducted repeated oversight.

Madam Chair, I can’t think of a single ter-ro-rist plot that has ever been disrupted by a report to Congress.

In addition to these more fundamental issues, I need to note for the record some specific serious problems with this amend-ment.

First, the amendment does even further damage to the bipartisan agreement that had been reached on reform of congressional notifica-tion. Instead of providing a mechanism that respects the separation of powers and the var-i-ous equities of the President and the Con-gress, this amendment has erased the decision of which Members of Congress will be briefed and which will not to the President, apparently to avoid the White House’s veto threat on the bill.

That is ironic for a majority who has claimed so long and so loud—despite clear records and the recollec-tion of others to the contrary—that it was never briefed on intelligence policies that they explicitly helped to ratify on a bipartisan basis.

Second, the amendment does even further damage to years of carefully developed prac-tice and procedure for how the congressional intelligence committees conduct oversight by attempting to cede its responsibility to the GAO. The original bill was flawed because it would have provided the GAO with virtually unfettered authority to insert itself into intel-ligence community matters without applying the same rules that govern the congressional intelligence committees or limiting the dissemination of any work product to protect sources and methods.

It was so bad that even the Obama administration objected that the bill "would fundamentally and irreparably undermine the relationship and information flow between the IC and intelligence committee members and staff." This Managers Amendment makes these problems even worse by allowing the Comptroller General to unilaterally develop procedures for handling highly sensitive material with no requirement that it follow House or Committee rules, and in fact would allow committees other than the intelligence committees to request GAO review of the intelligence community.

This is contrary to the Rules of the House and the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. How many times do we have to learn the simple lesson that intelligence oversight is most effective when it is conducted by the intelligence committees, not by the rest of those committees or by just require new reports.

Third, buried deep within the 22 amendments contained in this Managers Amendment is an extraordinary provision that would create a new exception to the one that would apply only to the agents and women of the intelligence community. Title 18 of the U.S. Code, section 2340A, already gives effect to the Convention Against Torture and makes torture a criminal offense in the United States. Torture is already against the law. Apparently, that's not enough for the Majority—it has to have a special offense that would apply only to the men and women of the Intelligence Community—just as Attorney General Holder has appointed a special prosecutor to investigate them. There is no legal reason to do this—it apparently exists only to make a political statement. The intelligence operatives on the front lines deserve our thanks and our support for doing hard things in hard places, like the men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice this year in Khost, Afghanistan. They do not deserve to be singled out for special criminal offenses. I believe that this is wrong.

Madam Chair, I strongly oppose this amendment.

Mr. PATRICK J. MURPHY of Pennsylvania. Madam Chair, I'd like to extend my sincere thanks to Chairman REYES for accepting this amendment and taking an important step toward strengthening our Nation's cyber infrastructure against attack. Madam Chair, the protection of our country's cyber infrastructure is one of today's most pressing—and challenging—national security issues. Computers and Internet devices are increasingly being used as the means of cyber-intrusions into our most secure and sensitive government computer networks. This growing threat is extraordinarily difficult to address. The technology used to perpetrate these crimes is constantly evolving and it can be exceedingly difficult to track down the perpetrators. It is our duty to ensure that our Intelligence Community and our Nation's law enforcement agencies have every tool necessary in their arsenal to combat cyber criminals and cyber terrorists who seek to access or steal protected information.

To be successful in preventing security breaches, Madam Chair, the agencies tasked with protecting the country from cyber attacks must constantly revise and improve their primary functions of data collection, analysis, and dissemination to keep pace with expanding threats. Experts in the field have pointed to several areas of the law which may need to be reviewed and updated to ensure their effectiveness and American individuals, businesses, and our national security. Our proposal would establish the Cybercrime Task Force to analyze the current tools available to the Intelligence Community and law enforcement and provide legislative recommendations to strengthen those resources, reduce our national exposure, and prevent and deter cyber attacks, cyber terrorism, cyber espionage, and cybercrimes.

The goals of the task force include improving attribution to specific criminals, understanding the nontraditional targets of attackers, and strengthening federal computer crime statutes to deter would-be perpetrators. First, crucial to better deterrence—and the possibility of implementing sanctions—is improving the IC's ability to identify and attribute for cyber attacks. Attacks committed with the aid of computer or Internet device technology are often cleared with negative clearance. In order words, the IC is not able to detect and identify hostile foreign actors because of missing data at Internet service providers. The task force is based recommendations on mandatory data retention requirements that balance the privacy of an individual's data, the technical and financial limitations of companies and Internet service providers, and the need to enhance cybercrime investigation. The task force shall incorporate in their recommendations suggestions to minimize barriers to entry into the service provider industry and to lessen any negative impact on innovation or new start-ups in the industry.

Second, Madam Chair, in light of the rapidly evolving nature of the crimes, we must better understand the likely, but nontraditional, targets to which perpetrators may seek unauthorized access. Cyber attacks are increasingly the preferred method of foreign intelligence services to collect data against the U.S., raising a host of novel training, counterintelligence and investigative issues. To improve these operations in the IC's understanding of the extent to which computer and Internet device technology pervades traditional crimes, the task force shall compile a list of nontraditional targets (i.e., economic or industrial bases) in the U.S. that the IC has not traditionally dealt with as a target for foreign intelligence services.

Finally, Madam Chair, an increasing number of "terrorist" (i.e., physical) crimes are being committed with the aid of a computer or Internet networks. The task force shall survey the current federal crime statute for computer fraud and abuse to determine whether it is sufficient in light of the advanced nature of the crimes being committed. It shall determine that the adequacy of the laws for which cybercrime and cyber espionage constitute a predicate offense and provide recommendations for updating those statutes when warranted. The task force shall establish and disseminate guidelines for State law enforcement to revise their State-level statutes equivalent to Title 18 U.S.C. 1030 to help ensure they keep pace with Federal changes.

An increase in the prevalence of crimes facilitated through computer fraud and abuse raises novel investigative, prosecutorial and training issues because of the complex and distributed nature of computer and Internet technology. To improve law enforcement's understanding of the extent to which computer technology pervades traditional crimes, the task force shall compile a list of which crimes are most often committed with the aid of computers, and whether the relevant prosecutorial tools are up to date, and provide specific legislative recommendations on how to update the statute to improve prosecution efforts while simultaneously providing for individual privacy and data security.

The task force shall advise whether a need exists to outlaw, or more clearly prohibit, certain behavior (i.e., unauthorized access) regardless of intent or resulting damage, whether monetary or to a computer system. The task force shall also take into account the increasing prevalence of individuals using pre-programmed hacking tools to commit a crime without necessarily understanding the full implications or potential consequences of the technology.

The task force shall analyze existing Federal and State data breach notification requirements and advise whether and how current law should be amended to strengthen requirements and improve compliance, including notification of relevant law enforcement authorities as well as any individuals whose personally identifiable information may be at risk from the breach. Currently, forty-three States have enacted breach notification requirements, and they vary widely, resulting in low compliance levels. The task force shall analyze discrepancies among existing State-level statutes, determine barriers to compliance, and provide recommendations for overcoming such barriers (i.e., through Federal legislation, tying a company's obligations to specific jurisdiction and their requirements, or through some other means).

Finally, the task force shall determine whether and how current victim restitution statutes should be amended in order for victims of cyber attacks to be made whole. Currently States have varying forms of recourses for victims of cyber attacks, particularly when a person is hurt because a company's data was breached. The task force shall recommend whether a Federal law is needed to address this and how, if so, it should be structured.

Madam Chair, I urge my colleagues to ensure that we stay a step ahead of hackers and cyber terrorists seeking to cause us harm and to pass this important amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question was taken; and the Act.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. HOEKSTRA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. I have an amendment to offer.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. Hoekstra:

Insert after section 354 the following new section:

SEC. 355. PUBLIC RELEASE OF INFORMATION ON PROCEDURES USED IN NARCOTICS AIRBRIDGE DENIAL PROGRAM IN PERU.

Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency shall make publicly available an unclassified version of the report of the Inspector General of the Central Intelligence Agency entitled “Proce-

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I would like to yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, this is a very straightforward amendment. I thank the Rules Committee for making it in order. It basically says that for not later than 30 days after the enactment of this act, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency shall make publicly available an unclassified version of the report of the Inspector General entitled “Procedures Used in Narcotics Airbridge Denial Program in Peru.”

Many of you may remember that this was a very tragic incident where, with the assistance of our intelligence community, two of my constituents were tragically killed in Peru, shot down by the Peruvian Air Force. We need an unclassified version of this report being made available to the public, and more importantly, to the families, the families of those who were killed.

You know, it wasn’t that long ago, it was within the last month that there was a hearing about an accountability review. Almost 9 years after that tragic shoot-down, there was an Accountability Board that had been convened. And its results have been made or were reported to our committee. Roughly 4 weeks ago I asked the Director of the CIA whether the families of those killed would be briefed on what was found in the Accountability Board and the accountabilities that were put in order. To date I am yet waiting for an answer.

This has been unfair to the American public that when we have had such a tragic falling in the intelligence community, which included, from my perspective, an attempted coverup by the previous administration or by the intelligence community as to exactly what happened, how it happened, and how these Americans were killed, that we have been closed in sharing that information with the American public and the families. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYES. I would like to claim the time in opposition, even though I am not opposed to it.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was an objection.

Mr. REYES. I yield such time as she may consume to my friend from California (Ms. HARMAN).

Ms. HARMAN. I thank the chairman for yielding, and surely hope that we can come to a program amendment that I recall during my years as ranking member on the committee when we were, in quotes, “briefed” on this incident. I am very disappointed about the way it was handled. I personally think the gentleman from Michigan is correct, and I applaud what he is doing.

As we debate this bill, we must thank again the thousands of patriotic and courageous women and men who are serving in our intelligence community around the world. As I so often say, a grateful Nation salutes them for their efforts to keep us safe. Our Nation also remembers and honors those who lost their lives, most recently at Forward Operating Base Chapman in Afghanistan.

Madam Chair, in addition to this excellent amendment, I applaud the underlying bill’s provisions to reform the way Congress is notified of sensitive covert programs, amending that for too long were limited to the so-called “Gang of Eight.” During my years as ranking member, it was clear that effective oversight required providing the entire committee with information previously limited to its leadership. And so this bill rightly provides for full committee notice of Gang of Eight briefings, a contemporaneous record of those briefings, something we sorely lacked, and it entitles the full committee to receive the same briefings as the Gang of Eight within 180 days.

These changes go a long way toward correcting the frustration felt on both sides of the aisle during my tenure on the committee. We should not have been put in the position of one hand upholding our oath of secrecy, while on the other hand being starved for information to conduct necessary oversight.

Just last week, pursuant to a FOIA request, memoranda describing some of our briefings were declassified. The documents, which are available to the public, show repeated pushback from Intelligence Committee members, surely including me, about the failure to brief us or provide documents or other timely information.

Madam Chair, last time I checked, Congress was an independent branch of government. We must assert our prerogative to monitor and rectify problems that surface in the programs we oversee. In the intelligence world, some of these problems affect our core values as well as our Constitution. Security and liberty are not a zero sum game. It is our sworn duty to protect both.

The language in the underlying bill and this amendment offered by Mr. HOEKSTRA go a long way to rectify long-existing problems.

I urge support for the bill and support for this amendment.

Mr. REYES. I reserve the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Michigan has the right to close.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairwoman, I am prepared to accept the amendment, and want the record to reflect that Ms. SCHAKOWSKY from Illinois is very much in agreement with Mr. HOEKSTRA.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Thank you, Madam Chair.

I would like to thank my colleagues on the other side of the aisle and the chairman for accepting the amendment, my colleague from California for the kind words that she had to say. We worked on this program for a number of years together. And it has taken us such a long period of time to get the answers that help understand but do not explain what happened.

This amendment was intended to get more information to the American people, more information to the families. I do hope that over the coming days that the Director of the CIA, that the people in the intelligence community decide to give the families full access to the Accountability Board.

I appreciate the support of the chairwoman of the subcommittee, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY from Illinois. This is a case where we have worked uniquely in a bipartisan way to address failings within the intelligence community, to try to right those wrongs, and to try to move us forward in a constructive and positive way. I thank my colleagues who have enabled that process to work and to work effectively.

Madam Chair, I yield back the bal-cane of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. HASTINGS OF FLORIDA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as fol-
ows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. Hastings of Florida:
Insert after section 352 the following new section:

SEC. 353. REPORT ON PLANS TO INCREASE DIVERSITY WITHIN THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) To most effectively carry out the mission of the intelligence community to collect and analyze intelligence, the intelligence community needs personnel that look and sound like the citizens of the many nations in which the United States needs to collect such intelligence.

(2) One of the great strengths of the United States is the diversity of the people of the United States, diversity that can positively contribute to the operational capabilities and effectiveness of the intelligence community.

(3) In the past, the intelligence community has not properly focused on hiring a diverse workforce and the capabilities of the intelligence community have suffered due to that lack of focus.

(4) The intelligence community must be deliberate and work hard to hire a diverse workforce to improve the operational capabilities and effectiveness of the intelligence community.

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of National Intelligence, in coordination with the heads of the elements of the intelligence community, shall submit to the congressional intelligence committees a report on the plans of each element to increase diversity within the intelligence community.

(c) REPORT.—The report required by subsection (b) shall include specific implementation plans to increase diversity within each element of the intelligence community, including:

(1) specific implementation plans for each such element designed to achieve the goals articulated in the strategic plan of the Director of National Intelligence on equal employment opportunity and diversity;

(2) specific plans and initiatives for each such element to increase recruiting and hiring of diverse candidates;

(3) specific plans and initiatives for each such element to improve retention of diverse Federal employees at the junior, midgrade, senior, and management levels;

(4) a description of specific diversity awareness training and education programs for senior officials and managers of each such element; and

(5) a description of performance metrics to measure the success of carrying out the plans, initiatives, and programs described in paragraphs (1) through (4).

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Madam Chair, I would like to correct some things, because I have been here all day listening to our colleagues complain about the diversity of the intelligence community. This is the beginning of the process. And it is an important one, one that has not been undertaken in 4 years, such that we have not had an authorization bill for all that time.

Now, I am sure that my colleagues know that when this measure is completed, and on the other side in the other body, that we will have a conference. And many of the discussions that are being heard here today are likely to be addressed in that conference report.

Now, I have stated time and again that the intelligence community is not diverse enough to do its job of obtaining and analyzing countries secrets. Diversity is a mission imperative. We need people who blend in, speak the language, and understand the cultures and the countries that we are targeting.

The intelligence community is our Nation’s first line of defense against the increasing dangers and threats we face around the world. From the scourge of terrorism, to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, to hostile governments, intelligence work is often unseen, and mostly thankless.

Now, I keep hearing all this talk about Mirandizing people on the battlefield. I have a lot of difficulty understanding when that happened. I have been on the committee for 10 years, and I don’t know that that is a methodology that is being employed with any regularity.

I have had the honor and privilege of meeting many of our intelligence professionals while I was travel overseas. As a member of the Intelligence Community to more than 50 countries. I cannot overstate how much all of us, Democrats and Republicans, every Member of this House and every President that I have known, are appreciative of the sacrifices of their service.

And yes, I will stand and say that when this authorization measure passes that I do support the men and women in the 16 elements of the intelligence services and appreciate them very much.

I am proud to support this measure for several reasons. It substantially increases funding for human intelligence collection and counterintelligence activities, tools that have been underresourced in the past years.

The bill continues the essential funding to support the critical efforts of U.S. warfighters in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan, and provides additional funding to address significantly emerging issues in Africa, Latin America and elsewhere. And I would urge my colleagues to footnote that.

There is no place that I think that we should focus as much attention as we have with Iran as Yemen. It is going to be critical for us to pay attention to that area of the world.

This bill also adds funds and authorities for language programs. Chairman Revenge and I and countless other members on this committee have fought this issue repeatedly for us to make progress in languages; and, I might add, we have been successful. If you see the new people entering the service, if you visit our operational activities, you will see an increasing number of people that are in the service.

I do have something to quarrel about, and that is, the gays in the military provision that allows, among other things, that we’re putting people out of the service who are Farsi and Arabic speakers because they’re gay, and I think that’s ridiculous in the environment that we’re operating in.

We still have enough women. We still don’t have enough Arabs. We still don’t have enough North Koreans, and I could go on and on.

While the intelligence community has faced some problems of hiring people with diverse backgrounds, education and experience, including, indeed, more women and minorities, this progress has been at a glacial speed. The intelligence community has been historically slow to recognize the wealth and abundance of talent and skills that reside in first-, second-, and even third-generation Americans. We still don’t have an intelligence workforce that looks like our country. We aren’t even close.

The premise is that we, until we have every segment of society participating in the intelligence community, our capabilities will not rise to the level needed to defeat terrorism.

I’d like to yield the balance of my time to the distinguished person of the Intelligence Committee, and to thank the Members of the Democrat and Republican staff on the House Intelligence Select Committee.

Mr. REYES. I just want to thank the very Chair of our Intelligence Committee for his hard work. I know he’s worked ever since he’s been on the committee on this very important issue that keeps, I think, the face of the intelligence community reflecting the face of this Nation.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chairman, I’d like to claim the time in opposition, although I will not be opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) has been recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. REYES. I just want to thank the very Chair of our Intelligence Committee for his hard work. I know he’s worked ever since he’s been on the committee on this very important issue that keeps, I think, the face of the intelligence community reflecting the face of this Nation.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chairman, I would like to recognize my colleague from Texas (Mr. THORNBERRY) for 1 minute.

Mr. THORNBERRY. The gentlemen from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) has been a forceful and eloquent advocate for greater diversity in the intelligence community. And he’s exactly right: we will be more effective when we have greater diversity in our intelligence community. We’re more effective human collectors when we look like those from whom we are collecting. We will be more effective when we have a greater range of language talents including dialects. All of that is absolutely true.

My point, in addition, however, is that it’s not just getting them into the intelligence community. It’s how we treat them once they’re hired. And some of the recent actions over the last year, whether it’s a special prosecutor to go after, again, interrogators after they have already been investigated, or whether it’s releasing classified memos, even though five CIA directors recommend not having it done, that cuts against the ability to keep these qualified people in government service after we have them hired. And I can think of nothing worse than to threaten these people with 15 years of prison if they refuse to go along with the torture as far as encouraging our intelligence professionals to stay with the government.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Madam Chair, I will not oppose the amendment. I support the amendment. I think the report on highlighting the progress that we have made or that we may not have made toward our objectives of increasing the diversity within the intelligence community is something that is needed and something that my colleague has been championing for all the years that we have served on the committee together. I support the amendment and urge my colleagues to support it as well.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Madam Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. ROGERS OF MICHIGAN

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 4 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 4 offered by Mr. Rogers of Michigan:

Strike section 349 (page 64, lines 8 through 24) and insert the following new section:

SEC. 349. FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION FIELD OFFICE SUPERVISORY TERM LIMIT POLICY.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act may be used to implement the field office supervisory term limit policy of the Federal Bureau of Investigation requiring the mandatory reassignment of a supervisor of the Bureau after a specific term of years.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Madam Chairman, it’s with a heavy heart I rise with this amendment. This has been a bipartisan issue for, I hate to say it, going on 5 years where the Director of the FBI implemented a new policy, and the policy was designed to try to get a different talent pool of individuals to come to Washington, D.C. to be supervisors in their new bureaucracy of the intelligence community, if you will. They were having a difficult time doing it.

So what they ended up doing is they forced supervisors in the field. These are FBI experts in a whole variety of fields—it could be white-collar crime, it could be organized crime, it could be foreign intelligence, counterterrorism efforts—and arbitrarily said, after 5 years you’re done. You either have to step down, you have to come to Washington, D.C. and apply to be an ASC or other job, or you have to move on. You can either leave the Bureau, you can step down and go back to the ranks of what we used to call a brick agent in the FBI.

Five years ago we said, you know this is really unfair to a lot of agents. You’ve done 5 years, you’ve served on the committee together. I support the amendment and urge my colleagues to support it as well.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MS. ESCHOO

The Acting CHAIR. The Acting Chair will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 5 offered by Ms. ESHOO:

At the end of subtitle A of title III, add the following new section:

SEC. 305. CONFLICT OF INTEREST REGULATIONS AND PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT FOR INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY EMPLOYEES.

(a) CONFLICT OF INTEREST REGULATIONS.—

Section 102A of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(b) CONFLICT OF INTEREST REGULATIONS.—

(1) The Director of National Intelligence, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Government Ethics, shall issue regulations prohibiting an officer or employee of an element of the intelligence community from engaging in outside employment if such employment creates a conflict of interest or appearance thereof.

(2) The Director of National Intelligence shall annually submit to the congressional intelligence committees a report describing all outside employment for officers and employees of elements of the intelligence community that was authorized by the head of an element of the intelligence community during the preceding calendar year. Such report shall be submitted each year on the date provided in section (b).

(b) OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT.—

(1) PROHIBITION.—Title I of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN OUTSIDE EMPLOYMENT OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY.

“Save as provided for an employee of an element of the intelligence community may not personally own or effectively control an entity that markets or sells for profit the use of knowledge or skills that such officer or employee acquires or makes use of while carrying out the official duties of such officer or employee as an officer or employee of an element of the intelligence community.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in the first section of such Act (50 people have to have confidence that government employees are working in the best interest of the Nation and not in just a personal self-interest.

I want to thank my colleagues from the HPSCI, Representatives Tierney, Boren, Schakowsky, Thompson, Holt, Rogers, and Members that have supported this amendment. And I urge the adoption of it.

Madam Chairman, how much time do I have left?

The Acting CHAIR. 2½ minutes is remaining.

Ms. ESHOO. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. ROGERS) 1½ minutes.

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Madam Chairman, I won't thank my good friend, Ms. Eshoo from California. You know, sometimes you can get ahead of a problem. We don't often do that in Congress. I think this is a great way to get ahead of a problem.

Given the fact that these individuals who have done great things for our country, we're thankful for it, takes sometimes a piece of intellectual property that really belongs to the people of the United States, and some of it is very sensitive, very compartmentalized. It's information that is shared with very few. It's an incredible responsibility. And for us not to have a policy on how we make sure that those people don't take that information for personal gain on the outside of that community, especially the intelligence community, I think is wrong. And I think this is a good measure that puts some really basic protections, not only for them, but for the intelligence community and the people of America.

And I want to commend the gentlelady for her work and effort on this. And I wholeheartedly support this effort.

Ms. ESHOO. I want to thank the gentleman for his support. This is a bipartisan amendment.

I just want to add, Madam Chair, this is in no way a ban across the entire Federal Government and Federal workforces. There are some that teach at universities at night; there are others that make really very low salaries—GS–1s in the $17,000 range—that do have some outside employment.

This goes directly to the skill set that the American people train these CIA officers and others in the intelligence community to do their work relative to national security. That shouldn't be sold off in bits and parts by moonlighting.

So I think that we've done that respectfully, and I think that we've done it thoughtfully. And I'd like to thank the chairman again for this, Mr. Rogers, and Members that have supported it, I think it's a good amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. Who seeks time in opposition?

With no one seeking time in opposition, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Ms. Eshoo).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MR. CONAWAY

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 6 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. CONAWAY. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 6 offered by Mr. CONAWAY: Page 87, strike line 21 and all that follows through page 88, line 9, and insert the following:

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) it is imperative that intelligence community-wide auditability be achieved as soon as possible;

(2) the Business Transformation Office of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence has made substantial progress and must be of sufficient standing within the Office for the Director of National Intelligence to move the plan for core financial system requirements to reach intelligence community-wide auditability forward;

(3) as of the date of the enactment of this Act, the National Reconnaissance Office is the only element of the intelligence community to have received a clean audit; and

(4) the National Reconnaissance Office should be commended for the long hours and hard work invested by the Office to achieve a clean audit.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CONAWAY) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CONAWAY. Thank you, Madam Chair.

This amendment is a pretty simple, straightforward one. It's about good governance. It's about protecting the assets of the American taxpayer as utilized by the intelligence community.

This bill came out of committee 8 months ago. We've now learned some things in the last 8 months that we didn't know then, and this amendment would simply substitute a new paragraph A for the old paragraph A. This paragraph would simply say it's an important initiative for the intelligence community to work to get audited financial statements across all of the entities. This takes a lot of work, a lot of effort to make that happen.

I'd like to call the Chair's attention to the National Reconnaissance organization, who is the only entity within the intelligence community that has, in fact, achieved an unqualified audit opinion on their financial statements. Under Dr. Scott Large's leadership, that hard work was done. And then more directly, Karen Landry, the Chief Financial Officer for the NRO, and Sandy Van Boven, the Vice President of Financial Management, led an incredible team to do an awful lot of hard work to make that happen. I don't discount how hard that is. From my professional experience, I know it’s hard. But they’re to be commended as the agency that has achieved clean audited financial statements.

As important as that is, it’s an ongoing challenge, and I hope that General Bruce Carlson, who is now the leader at NRO, will continue to lead the efforts needed to make that happen.

This is a top-down function. It has to have the initiative of the leadership. The Office of Director of Intelligence has to make this a priority. And this amendment would seek to recognize that priority and continue to draw attention to it from our body so that the executive branch body, in fact, knows that we believe that it’s important to get this done. So it’s a pretty straightforward amendment, Madam Chair.

I recognize the hard work of some of the folks over at NRO is kind of a pat on the back for having done it correctly. Shown us how it can be done, an increased number of hard work done by the team led by Ms. Landry and Ms. Van Booven.

So, with that, I encourage my colleagues on the floor today to support this good governance amendment that would recognize the hard efforts being done across the community to achieve unqualified audit opinions on their financial statements and all of the internal controls and systems that go behind that.

Final comment. There are some tough decisions ahead for Director Blair and others to make this happen, and I encourage them to make those decisions sooner rather than later. And I encourage my colleagues to support the amendment. I yield back.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CONAWAY). The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. ARCURI

Mr. ARCURI. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to section 3106 of the USA PATRIOT Act (42 U.S.C. 1996), thegentleman from New York (Mr. ARCURI) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.
The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ARCURI. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The threat of cyberattack on our computer infrastructure as well as the threat of cyberwarfare cannot be overstated. The need for congressional action to assure adequate funding is in place to guarantee that our country is prepared for any contingency that we may derive in this relatively new area of warfare is critical. I believe, as a nation, our investment in cybersecurity will be the Manhattan Project of our generation.

H.R. 2701 authorizes the funding to make this investment a reality. Cyberthreats and attacks are real, and they threaten our financial and defense networks every day. Nearly every aspect of everyday life in our global society is dependent on the security of our computer networks. The federal government and the intelligence community have developed systems to carry virtually all of our business transactions, control our electric grid, emergency communication systems, and even traffic lights. The most troubling cyberthreat may be the very real prospect of state-sponsored cyberattacks against sensitive national security information. We must take steps to protect our cyberinfrastructure, but to do that in such a way that we do not infringe on individuals' rights to privacy.

We have a number of organizations in government that work on cybersecurity, and we in Congress need to ensure that these organizations are sharing this information with each other in an effective, reliable, and safe manner. This must be one of our top priorities.

Over the next few years, the administration and the intelligence community will begin new and unprecedented cybersecurity programs to combat these threats with cutting-edge technologies. These new programs will present new legal and privacy challenges. To ensure that Congress can properly oversee these programs, my amendment requires the President to submit detailed notifications to Congress on current and newly created cybersecurity programs so that Congress may perform the oversight that the Constitution requires.

My amendment sets a preliminary framework for the administration and congressional oversight to ensure that the government's national security programs are consistent with legal authorities and preserve individuals' reasonable expectations of privacy. It requires the President to notify Congress of new and existing cybersecurity programs and provide Congress with the program's justification, a current description of its operation, and describe how it impacts privacy and sensitive data and to detail any plan for any independent audit or review of the program. This amendment is a reasonable and responsible continuation of this effort.

Earlier this month, the House approved a Cybersecurity Enhancement Act to expand programs to strengthen our Nation's cybersecurity and to require a cybersecurity workforce assessment to give us a clearer picture of our cyber capabilities in both the Federal Government and private sector to combat future attacks.

Given the increasing number and sophistication of cyberattacks that are being aimed at our networks and the degree to which we must expand our cyber capabilities, we must also ensure that we maintain our oversight abilities. My amendment to the oversight provisions included in the Senate legislation, and I ask that all Members support these important safeguards.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. THORNBERY. I seek to claim the time in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THORNBERY. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, I don't think anyone in this House can deny the importance of cybersecurity. Certainly the Intelligence Community is devoting a great deal of time and effort to understanding the threats to our potential responses and how we go about it. I am perhaps, however, a lonely voice expressing caution about the number of reports that accumulate on top of one another year after year and weigh down our intelligence community.

I mentioned earlier that there are 41 new reports of one kind or another that are in the underlying bill. The manager's amendment, which we've debated, has at least 17 more reports on top of that. And I believe, if you look at all of the 20, 21 provisions of the manager's amendment, there are at least two reports on cybersecurity plus a task force.

Now, the issue is important, but surely the goodness—we have some responsibility in Congress to pay attention to the cost in terms of dollars, the cost in terms of manpower to do all of these reports that get added on top of the intelligence community but often never go away, that just stack on top of each other year after year.

So I appreciate the gentleman's interest in cybersecurity. I share that, by the way. I think the gentleman's right to be interested in our security. I would just encourage him and all Members, before you come demanding another report of one sort or another, maybe it would be good to inquire as to what it would take to actually complete that report, how much money that costs the taxpayers. If we do, I think we are going to be a little more hesitant to stack report upon report upon report.

With that, I would yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ARCURI. Madam Chair, I thank the gentleman for his comments, and I think he's right. I think, clearly, the fact that a report is requested simply for the sake of requesting a report is redundant and is taxing on our intelligence community. But I think when we look at what happened during 9/11 and the fact that some of the intelligence branches of government were not sharing information, I think we need to learn something from that.

In my district, I have an Air Force research lab that really focuses a great deal on cybersecurity, and I want to make sure the information that they're developing and the technologies that they're developing are being shared with other branches of the military and the intelligence community. And I think it's very important that we allow congressional oversight and that we ensure that in our role as Congressmen, that we are making sure that they are doing that, that they are sharing the information the way they should.

So I certainly appreciate your point, but I think this is one of the places where it's critically important that we ensure that the information sharing is being done.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. ARCURI).

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last page of the amendment, and I ask that the text of the amendment be printed in the Record.

The Acting CHAIR. The amendment was agreed to.
Rules Committee for making this amendment in order. It is a very straightforward amendment, and it’s one that I think is very, very important because the CIA has been under such intense criticism over the last several months—maybe the last few years—that it’s time to let them know and the people of this country know that we really appreciate what they’re doing to secure the safety of this country.

What the bill does is: It honors the Central Intelligence Agency for its contributions to the security of the United States and our allies; It recognizes the Central Intelligence Agency’s unique role in combating terrorism; It praises the Central Intelligence Agency for its success in foiling recent terrorist plots and capturing senior members of al Qaeda; It thanks the Central Intelligence Agency for its crucial support of U.S. military operations in Afghanistan and Iraq; It commends the men and women who gave their lives defending the U.S.—named and unnamed; and, finally, It urges the Central Intelligence Agency to continue its dedicated work in the field of intelligence gathering in order to protect the people of the United States.

I believe that all of us would agree with everything that is in this amendment. But I’d like to add just a couple of things that I’ve been watching during this debate that really concerns me.

There is language in here that is going to, I think, have an adverse impact on the Central Intelligence Agency’s agents who are out in the field and doing their job and are trying to protect us against the terrorists. You know, some of the things that they say may be abrasive or objectionable to some of the people they are interrogating. The way this language reads, it could be interpreted to mean that they are guilty of not following the intent of the law in dealing with the terrorists.

Also, there are prison sentences for people who are involved in terrorist or torturous activities such as “waterboarding.” I would like to point out to my colleagues, many of whom don’t know this, waterboarding has been a technique that has been used in the training of U.S. Navy SEALs and our Special Forces people over the years.

Now, let me say that one more time. Waterboarding and other techniques have been used in the training of our Navy SEALs so they would know how to deal with an enemy if they were captured, and it’s been used by Special Forces military personnel in their training. So it has never been considered torture by our own military personnel.

Now, we have three Navy SEALs right now that are being court-martialed, and they are being court-martialed because they captured an al Qaeda terrorist in Fallujah in Iraq. And this al Qaeda terrorist took four American contractors, tortured them, dragged them through the streets, burned their bodies and hung them from a bridge.

He also cut off the head of a leading person that was over there gathering news and information for the news media. And, it’s an out-and-out horrible terrorist. Now, when he was captured, he was turned over to the Iraqi military for 2 days, and he came back and he said that he had been hit in the stomach and they spit his lip, and because of that, these three Navy SEALs are being prosecuted. They are being prosecuted in a court martial.

What kind of a message does that send to our Navy SEALs, to the people in the field who are capturing and fighting these al Qaeda and Taliban terrorists? What kind of a message does that send? We are trying to send the same kind of message to the CIA operatives who are out there trying to get information that will protect this country and protect the American people around the world against these people who want to destroy us and want to destroy our way of life.

It really bothers me, and I do appreciate the House approving this amendment that I have introduced. Obviously it’s something that is very important. But, in addition to that, I don’t believe we ought to be sending a message to the CIA or the Navy SEALs or our Special Forces men and women in the field that we are not going to back them up when they go out and get a terrorist or extract information from them that is vital in securing the safety of the people of this country.

One of the al Qaeda terrorists they are going to bring to New York. The main al Qaeda terrorist that was involved was Sheikh Mohammed, who he was waterboarded about 80 times, and he wouldn’t give up information, he finally did. He said that there was an attempt going to be made to fly a plane into a building in Los Angeles. Had he not choked up and given that information, we might have lost another 2,000 or 3,000 people like we did on 9/11.

It just seems silly to me and crazy to me that we are not going to allow our intelligence-gathering operatives to do their job. We ought to be supporting them completely day and night in anything they do to protect this Nation.

(From the National Review Online, Feb. 25, 2010)

WHILE YOU ARE DISTRACTED BY THE SUMMIT, OBAMA DEMOCRATS ARE TARGETING THE CIA

(Andy McCarthy)

The Obama Democrats have outdone themselves.

While the country and the Congress have their eyes on today’s dog-and-pony show on capitol-hill, the Democrats last night stashed a new provision in the intelligence bill which is to be voted on today. It is an attack on the CIA: the enactment of a criminal statute that would ban “cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment.”

The provision is impossibly vague—who knows what “degrading” means? Proponents will say that they have itemized conduct that would trigger the statute (I’ll get to that second), but the proposal says the conduct reached by the statute “includes but is not limited to” the itemized conduct. (My italics.) That means interrogation tactics the prosecutor subjectively believes is “degrading” (e.g., subjecting a Muslim detainee to interrogation by a female CIA officer) could be the basis for indicting a CIA interrogator.

The act goes on to make it a crime to use tactics that have been shown to be effective in obtaining life-saving information and that are removed from the list. “Waterboarding” is specified. In one sense, I’m glad they’ve done this because it proves a point I’ve been making all along. Waterboarding, as it was practiced by the CIA, is not torture and was never illegal under U.S. law. The reason the Democrats are reduced to doing this is: what they’ve been saying is not true. Waterboarding was not a crime and it was fully supported by congressional leaders of both parties, who were aware it was done. On that score, it is interesting to note that while Democrats secretly tucked this provision into an important bill, hoping no one would notice until it was too late, they failed to include in the bill a proposed Republican amendment that would have required full and complete disclosure of records describing the briefings of CIA interrogators to the House or the Senate. The Democrats knew that the amendment would have killed the bill.

More to the point, this shows how politicized the law-enforcement has become under the Obama Administration. They could have criminalized waterboarding at any time since Jan. 20, 2009. But they waited until now. Why? Because if they had tried to do it before now, it would have been a tacit admission that waterboarding was not illegal when done by the CIA. The Democrats have harm ed the politicized witch-hunt against John Yoo and Jay Bybee, a key component of which was the assumption that waterboarding and the other tactics they authorized were illegal. Only now, when that witch-hunt has collapsed, have the Democrats moved to criminalize these tactics. It is transparently partisan.

In any event, waterboarding is not defined in the bill. As Marc Thiessen has repeatedly demonstrated, there is a world of difference between the tactic as administered by the CIA and the types of water-torture methods that have been used throughout history. The “waterboarding” method the CIA involved neither severe pain nor prolonged mental harm. But it was highly unpleasant and led especially hard cases like Khalid Sheikh Mohammed (i.e., well-trained, combat-committed, America-hating terrorists) to give us information that saved American lives. The method was used sparingly—on only three individuals, and not in the last seven years. The American people broadly support the availability of this non-torture tactic in a dire emergency. Yet Democrats not only want to make it unlawful, but want to subject to 15 years’ imprisonment any interrogator who uses it.

What’s more, the provision is directed at the prosecutor who receives a “torture intelligence community” conducting a “covered interrogation” is sweeping—including any interrogation done outside the U.S., in the course of a person’s official duties on behalf of the government. Thus, if the CIA used waterboarding in training its officers or military officers outside the U.S., this would theoretically be indictable conduct under the statute.

Waterboarding is not all. The Democrats’ bill would prohibit—with a penalty of 15 years’ imprisonment—the following tactics, among others:

— “Exploiting the phobias of the individual.”
— Stress positions and the threatened use of force to maintain stress positions
— “Depriving the individual of necessary food, water, sleep, or medical care”
— Food mutilations
— Using military working dogs (i.e., any use of them—not having them attack or menace the individual; just the mere presence of the dog if it might unnerve the detainee and, of course, “exploit his phobias”)
— Coercing the individual to blaspheme or violate his religious beliefs (I wonder if Democrats understand the breadth of seemingly innocuous matters that jihadists take as violations of their religious beliefs)
— “Excessive pressure” (or “cramped confinement” (excessive and cramped are not defined)
— “Plunging” or “squeezing”
— “Placing hoods or sacks over the head of the individual.”

Naturally, all of these tactics are interpersed with such acts as forcing the performance of sexual acts, beatings, electric shock, burns, inducing hypothermia or heat injury—as if all these acts were functionally equivalent.

In true Alinskyite fashion, Democrats begin this attack on the CIA by saluting “the men and women who serve honorably as intelligence personnel and as members of our nation’s Armed Forces” who “deserve the full support of the United States Congress.” Then, Democrats self-servingly tell us that Congress “shows true support” by providing “clear legislation relating to standards for interrogation techniques.” I’m sure the intelligence community will be duly grateful.

Democrats also offer “findings” that the tactics they seek to prohibit cause terrorism by fueling recruitment (we are never supposed to discuss the Islamist ideology that actually causes terrorist recruitment, only the tactics the CIA doesn’t use containing the people spURRED by that ideology). These “findings” repeat the canards that these tactics don’t work; that they place our captors in a more dangerous situation (the truth is our forces captured by terrorists will be abused and probably killed no matter what we do, while our enemies captured in a conventional war will be bound to adhere to their Geneva Convention commitments—and will have the incentive to do so because they will want us to do the same); and that “their use required to our identity and values as a nation.”

Unmentioned by the Obama Democrats is that officers of the executive branch have a solemn moral duty to honor their commitments to protect the American people from attack by America’s enemies. If there are non-torture tactics that can get a terrorist and Sheikh Mohammed to give us information that saves American lives, how is the use of them inconsistent with our values?

Here the Democrats are saying they would prefer to see tens of thousands of Americans die than to see a KSM subjected to sleep-deprivation or to have his “phobias exploited.” Nothing in this reflects the values of most Americans.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I rise to claim time in opposition to the Burton amendment, even though I am not opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, I want to tell the gentleman I appreciate him wanting to honor the personnel of the Central Intelligence Agency. As I have said many times on the floor, I have had the privilege of visiting with members of the CIA and members of their families, members of the CIA throughout the world under probably the most difficult of circumstances. I understand the hardships that they face.

Most recently, I was with family members and survivors of the Khost bombing, which illustrates the danger they put themselves in willingly to protect our country. I would also remind the gentleman that the government should not mix and compare apples to oranges. There is a big difference between a training exercise that simulates waterboarding and waterboarding an individual for 183 times. That’s a huge difference.

The other thing I would point out is that when the last administration decided to take us down that road, that enhanced interrogation techniques would be authorized and approved. There has been a great amount of discussion about the legal authorization of these techniques, considered torture by most anybody’s standards. I would also remind us that the CIA did not have any expertise in waterboarding. They had to actually go out and contract DOD personnel to be able to acquire that technique. It puts them in a tough situation.

I will tell you what I hear from the men and women of the Central Intelligence Agency. They understand the difference between politics and bad policy. They understand the difference between a foreign entity and the at-multimillion dollar settlement and apology for mistaken accusations. Subsequently, the investigators focused on another individual, who then killed himself. Although the FBI never produced any physical evidence tying that individual specifically to the attacks or the case.

Indeed, this investigation was botched at multiple points, which is why reexamining it is so important. Given that the samples of the strain of anthrax used in the attacks may have been supplied to foreign laboratories, we think it prudent to have the Inspector General of the intelligence community examine whether or not evidence of a potential foreign connection to the attacks was overlooked, ignored, or simply not passed along to the FBI.

Mr. BARTLETT and I are offering an amendment that would require the Inspector General to examine whether or not evidence of a potential foreign connection to the attacks was overlooked, ignored or simply not passed along. The report would be unclassified and would go to intelligence, Foreign Affairs, Judiciary and Homeland Security Committees.

To date, there has been no independent comprehensive review of this investigation, a number of important questions remain unanswered. This amendment would address one of those questions.

I reserve the balance of my time. May I ask how much time is remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Chair, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT).

Mr. BARTLETT. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I want to thank him very much for his initiative in this effort. As my constituents, the laboratory at which he worked is in my district, indeed, just a few miles from my home, so I was very much involved in this case. His colleagues say that he would not have done it, and the FBI said early on that he could not have done it because the spores were weaponized, and he had no ability to do that. More recently, they have been saying something a bit different than that.

I have here some quotes that I think will be relevant here. Jeffrey Adamovicz, the former chief of bacteriology—"former" is important here, because they would not let the current scientist at Fort Detrick talk to me. He just left. He was the former chief of bacteriology for the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute for Infectious Diseases in Frederick, Maryland, where Ivins worked, wrote to The Frederick News-Post expressing serious misgivings about the FBI findings that Ivins had a predisposition to Andersh, the letters that killed 5 and sickened 17 in 2001.

"The evidence is still very circumstantial and unconvincing as a whole," he wrote. "I'm curious as to why they closed the case while the National Academy of Science review is still ongoing. Is it because the review is going unfavorable for the FBI?"

Ivins' death came about a month after the Act, the Department agreed to pay an out-of-court settlement valued at $5.85 million to scientist Steven Hatfill, who had long been the key suspect in the case. Hatfill had sued the Justice Department, which had labeled him 'a person of interest.' He alleged that the Federal Government went on a smear campaign and leaked information that was damaging to his reputation.

Apparently they agreed they had. They paid him $5.85 million. They subsequently agreed, conceded that he was not involved in the case.

Gary Andrews, another former chief of the bacteriology lab in Frederick, said it wouldn't have been unusual for Ivins to work odd hours because he was working with animals, and it was more convenient to do it. He says that "Bruce didn't have the skill to make spore preps of that concentration. He never ever could make a spore prep like the ones found in the letters.'

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HOLT. I yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. BARTLETT. Thank you very much for your lead in this. This has been devastating to my constituents and the scientists at Fort Detrick. This needs to be brought to a proper close. They did not believe he would have done it; the FBI said earlier on he couldn't have done it. Thank you very much for leading in this.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Chair, it is beyond question that the FBI jumped to conclusions at Fort Detrick, perhaps more than once, and many questions remain. This amendment would address one of those questions.

Beyond this amendment, we still need a more complete examination of our government's response to these attacks, the most serious bioterrorist attack against the United States. This will look at whether there is a foreign connection to those attacks that has been overlooked, ignored, or not pursued.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time, asking support for this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 10 OFFERED BY MR. CASTLE

The Acting CHAIR. The amendment is now in order to consider amendment No. 10 printed in House Report 111-419.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairwoman, I have an amendment in the Clerk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 10 offered by Mr. CASTLE; insert after section 354 (page 69, after line 15) the following new section:

SEC. 355. REITERATION OF REQUIREMENT TO SUBMIT REPORT ON TERRORISM FINANCING.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President, acting through the Secretary of the Treasury, shall submit to Congress the report required to be submitted under section 6303(a) of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458; 118 Stat. 3756).

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

This amendment, offered with Mr. LYNCH, requires the President, through the Secretary of the Treasury, to submit to Congress a comprehensive report on terrorism financing that was first mandated by the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, but has yet to be submitted.

Following the 9/11 terrorist attacks, our government acted quickly to combat terrorist financing. However, post-9/11 terrorist financing has become more decentralized, and those involved are using less sophisticated means to move money and avoid official banking systems. Terrorist financiers are exploiting new technology to transfer money electronically and using money laundering schemes to cover up their activities.

In response to the 9/11 Commission recommendations, Congress passed the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004. Section 6303 of this 2004 law required the President to submit to Congress a comprehensive report evaluating and making recommendations on the current state of U.S. efforts to fight terror financing. This important report was due in September of 2005, but it has never been completed.

Multiple U.S. Government departments and agencies are involved in the effort to combat terrorist financing, including Treasury, Justice Department, Homeland Security, State Department, Defense Department, FBI and the CIA. These various entities are to be commended for their efforts to track and disrupt complex terrorist financing schemes since 2001. Still, with so many government entities involved in combating terrorist financing, it is critical that we heed the lessons of the past and undertake a thorough assessment of our progress.

The amendment I am offering today with Congressman LYNCH reiterates Congress' requirement that the President undertake a thorough evaluation of our efforts to disrupt terrorist financing, including the ability to coordinate our intelligence and keep pace with evolving trends.

The bottom line is that terrorists need money to operate, and we need to be fully prepared and adaptable to combating their ability to access these funds. There is no room for delay in this endeavor, especially since top U.S. intelligence officials indicate a possible likelihood of another attempted terrorist attack on the United States at some time in the relatively near future.

Thank you for the opportunity to discuss my amendment. I look forward to working with the members of the committee on these important matters.

Madam Chairwoman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LYNCH. Madam Chair, I rise to claim time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. LYNCH. Madam Chair, I actually rise to support my colleague’s amendment.

As the co-chairman of the Task Force on Terrorist Financing and Proliferation, I, too, am well aware that having an effective strategy on targeting the sources of terrorists in financing their operations is a very important part of our strategy.

The amendment offered by my friend, Mr. CASTLE of Delaware, simply restates the basic requirement that the President, through the Treasury Department, report to Congress on the current status of U.S. efforts to stop terrorist financing. This reporting requirement is not new; in fact, it was mandated in the Intelligence Reform and Terrorist Prevention Act of 2004. A report was due out in 2005, but here today it has yet to be submitted.

I’ve had an opportunity, as co-chair of the task force, to spend a lot of time with our Treasury employees, very brave and courageous Treasury and State Department employees, in Afghanistan and Pakistan and Jordan and the Maghreb, North Africa; and they’re doing wonderful and courageous work. However, that much being said, Congress still retains its oversight responsibility; and without this report we are not able to be certain. I think, that we have an accurate picture of the entire antiterrorist financing protocol and we are not fully informed as to whether or not we are operating as effectively as we could be. Only by knowing where we currently stand—what our strengths are and, indeed, what our weaknesses are—can we ensure that the best possible strategy for cutting out terrorist financing is ultimately accomplished.

Again, I want to thank Congressman CASTLE of Delaware, for his support of this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairwoman, we hope this report can be done relatively soon. The amendment actually allows for 180 days more from this time in order to submit it. We have been in touch with the administration. We know that they’re aware of this, and hopefully it can be completed. I think it may help with the safety of our country and perhaps dealing with the financing of terrorists in this world, so we look forward to it.

I appreciate the support. I also appreciate all the words and support of Mr. LYNCH in getting to this point.

With that, I encourage everyone to support it and yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 11 OFFERED BY MR. WALZ

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 11 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. WALZ. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 11 offered by Mr. WALZ:

Page 85, after line 20 insert the following:

(d) EDUCATION ON COMBAT-RELATED INJURIES.—Section 3061 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (50 U.S.C. 435b) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (i) as subsection (j); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (h) the following new subsection:

(1) EDUCATION ON COMBAT-RELATED INJURIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The head of the entity selected pursuant to subsection (b) shall take such actions as such head considers necessary to educate each authorized adjudicative agency that is an element of the intelligence community on the nature of combat-related injuries as they relate to determinations of eligibility for access to classified information for veterans who were deployed in support of a contingency operation.

(2) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

(A) CONTINGENCY OPERATIONS.—The term ‘contingency operation’ has the meaning given the term in section 10(8)(3) of title 10, United States Code.

(B) INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY.—The term ‘intelligence community’ has the meaning given the term in section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403(4)).

(C) VETERAN.—The term ‘veteran’ has the meaning given the term in section 102(2) of title 38, United States Code.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 1105, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. WALZ) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. WALZ. Thank you, Madam Chairwoman. And I thank the chairman of the committee and the ranking member for your work in securing our Nation and bringing this piece of legislation to the floor.

The amendment that I am offering, Madam Chair, serves two purposes. First, it allows us to fulfill our obligation to our returning combat veterans coming back and integrating back into civilian life. And it also recognizes the unique skill set that these veterans have that are absolutely perfectly suited for intelligence and national security work.

What I am asking for in this amendment is to make sure there is a level playing field for these warriors. A level playing field where our wounded warriors and how we ought to be giving them all the support that we possibly can, but the reason I took this time in opposition is because the chairman and I couldn’t reach an agreement to discuss one of the provisions in the bill.

I sincerely feel, Madam Chairman, that we are endangering our capability of getting information from terrorists because we are limiting our CIA and our intelligence officials with this legislation and these procedures that they cannot use to elicit that information. I know there are some differences of opinion, and I know we have in our hearts the best security that we can think of for the American people, but the one thing that really, really bothers me is we’re telling CIA officials—and some of our military people in the field, not with this bill—but we are telling a lot of our intelligence officials and people in the field that they have to be very, very careful and walk on eggs when they are trying to get information from a terrorist, like the Taliban, terrorist, to make sure that we aren’t violating or torturing them in any way.
The American people certainly don’t want torture, and there is a big difference of opinion on whether or not water boarding, for instance, is torture. But the fact of the matter is if we have another major attack like the one we had on 9/11, the American people are going to want to know how many of the people in this House that put restrictions on our intelligence-gathering capability. They’re going to say, why didn’t you do whatever it took to secure the safety of the people of this country? And because we are putting this language in this bill, we are saying to the CIA and the other intelligence agencies, you’ve got to be real careful; you’ve got to make absolutely sure you don’t do something that might get you in trouble and might even put you in jail.

And when you say things like that to the people that are out there in the field risking their lives, what you do is you intimidate them, maybe not intentionally, but you create an atmosphere and you stop the possibility of getting all the information that we need to protect this country.

Now, I know there is a disagreement; I just talked to some people on the other side of the aisle. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed was water boarded 80-something times, I think, or something like that; and when he first started out, he said, well, you’ll find out what’s going to happen. And later, after he was water boarded, he said yes, they were going to fly a plane that was going to fly into a building in Los Angeles. Well, that plane, had it flown into a building, would have killed 2,000 or 3,000 people.

And so the only reason I came here is to just say, let’s don’t break the legs of our intelligence officers who are trying to protect this country. It’s just too important. We ought to be doing everything we can to back them up to make sure this country is safe. Our intelligence people are telling us right now we’re likely to have another attack within the next 6 months or 1 year. So we ought to be giving every intelligence agency and every officer we possibly can all the support they need to stop that.

With that, I thank you very much for yielding and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WALZ. I hope I have the gentleman’s support on this bill, providing the trained and courageous veterans who are returning home. We are not asking for preferential treatment. What we are asking is that our adjudicators be clearly informed what these combat veterans have gone through, making sure we are able to bring them back, place them in their positions if they choose to continue to serve this Nation. I would ask for the support of this body on this amendment.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. WALZ).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 12 OFFERED BY MR. SCHAUER
The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 12 printed in House Report 111–419.

Mr. SCHAUER. Madam Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 12 offered by Mr. SCHAUER:

Insert after section 354 the following new section:

SEC. 355. REPORT ON ATTEMPT TO DETONATE EXPLOSIVE DEVICE ON NORTHWEST AIRLINES FLIGHT 253.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to Congress a report on the attempt to detonate an explosive device aboard Northwest Airlines flight number 253 on December 25, 2009. Such report shall describe any failures to share or analyze intelligence or other information within or between elements of the United States Government and the measures that the intelligence community has taken or will take to prevent such failures, including—

(1) a description of the roles and responsibilities of the counterterrorism analytic components of the intelligence community in synchronizing, correlating, and analyzing all sources of intelligence related to terrorism;

(2) an assessment of the technological capabilities of the intelligence community to assess terrorist threats, including—

(A) a list of all databases used by counterterrorism analysts involved in intelligence activities that integrate information from intelligence sources relating to terrorist attacks; and

(B) a description of the steps taken by the intelligence community to integrate all relevant terrorist databases and allow for cross-database searches; and

(3) a description of the steps taken by the intelligence community to train analysts on watchlisting processes and procedures;

(4) a description of steps taken to improve terrorist screening databases and to improve airline watch listing procedures.

These tools are critical in preventing terrorists from getting an opportunity to kill innocent civilians. It is imperative that Congress be fully informed so that it may conduct rigorous oversight on this important national security concern.

I appreciate President Obama’s candor and openness when speaking to the American people about the improvements needed to our intelligence community, and I applaud the President for taking swift action in ordering a thorough review of the incident. President Obama has stated his willingness to work with Congress to solve this problem. This amendment will help ensure that Congress will be fully briefed on the results of that review. I urge the full support of this amendment.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I want to say I appreciate the amendment and the gentleman’s interest.

This amendment would require the Director of National Intelligence to report to Congress information about any failures to share or to analyze intelligence within or between elements of the Federal Government related to this failed terrorist attack.

I note that the Director of National Intelligence also must submit a description of the measures that the intelligence community has taken or will take to prevent such failures from occurring again. This would include information on how the government intends to improve the interoperability of terrorist screening databases and to improve airline watch listing procedures. These tools are critical in preventing terrorists from getting an opportunity to kill innocent civilians.

It is imperative that Congress be fully informed so that it may conduct rigorous oversight on this important national security concern.

People in Michigan want answers. My amendment says, not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the act, the Director of National Intelligence shall submit to Congress a report on the attempt to detonate an explosive device aboard Northwest Airlines Flight No. 253 on December 25, 2009.

This amendment will require the Director of National Intelligence to report to Congress information about any failures to share or to analyze intelligence within or between elements of the Federal Government related to this failed terrorist attack.

I support the action of the Director of National Intelligence to integrate all relevant terrorist databases and allow for cross-database searches; and

(3) a description of the steps taken by the intelligence community to correlate biographic information with terrorism-related intelligence;

(4) a description of steps taken to improve terrorist screening databases and to improve airline watch listing procedures.

These tools are critical in preventing terrorists from getting an opportunity to kill innocent civilians. It is imperative that Congress be fully informed so that it may conduct rigorous oversight on this important national security concern.

I appreciate President Obama’s candor and openness when speaking to the American people about the improvements needed to our intelligence community, and I applaud the President for taking swift action in ordering a thorough review of the incident. President Obama has stated his willingness to work with Congress to solve this problem. This amendment will help ensure that Congress will be fully briefed on the results of that review. I urge the full support of this amendment.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chair, I want to say I appreciate the amendment and the gentleman’s interest.

This amendment would require the Director of the DNI to submit to the Intelligence Committees a report on the attempted bombing of Northwest Airlines Flight No. 253.
This report would provide an assessment on any failures to share information within or between elements of the Federal Government and the measures that the intelligence community has taken or will take to prevent such failures that occurred.

This report also covers issues such as analytic tradecraft, watching procedures, technical deficiencies, training database management. Many of the elements of this report mirror portions of the review of the DNI, which they are calling the time division.

Requiring the DNI to provide this report will allow the Intelligence Committees to conduct rigorous oversight on this important national security concern.

Additionally, this amendment requires the DNI to submit responses to any findings or recommendations made by the Intelligence Committees.

With that, Madam Chair, I fully support the amendment.

Mr. HOEKSTRA, Madam Chair, I rise to claim the time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I will not oppose the amendment. Although, I do believe, and I would hope that my colleague from Michigan would agree that, perhaps, when we are talking about the scope of this amendment, it is broader than what is just written here.

One of the things that we are very, very concerned about which, I believe, should be included in this—because, like you, I believe, if the intelligence community had worked properly, perhaps we could have stopped this attack; but this is not just a matter of connecting databases and those types of things. It is also about missing clues that we had that were highlighted before Christmas Day.

What am I talking about? We have known for quite some time that Awlaki was a concern. We saw kind of a mirror image of what happened on Christmas Day a couple of months earlier at Fort Hood, where 14 Americans were killed and where 14 Americans died in a tragic terrorist attack, linked to Awlaki, linked to al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula.

I had an amendment that went along those lines, but it was not accepted by the majority, and I think it may well have fallen within the scope of the amendment of yours, Mr. SCHAUER, which you are offering, which says:

If we had had these insights into al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula, if we had had these insights into Awlaki’s involvement with Major Hasan, if we had had these insights into the communications, the emails, between Hasan and Awlaki, what did we do between November 5 and Christmas Day to target Awlaki, to target al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula? How did we use and share information that these individuals and this group might be targeting the U.S. and whether we missed opportunities in those 2 months to identify the threat and respond to it?

Are those the kind of questions that you might see which could also be addressed in this or are these outside of the scope of what you are looking for?

I yield to my colleague from Michigan.

Mr. SCHAUER. Thank you, Mr. HOEKSTRA, and thank you for your leadership on the Intelligence Committee.

Absolutely, my amendment deals directly with having the Director of National Intelligence describe failures and to share or to analyze intelligence or other information within or between elements of the United States Government. So I think it is clearly my intent that the dots be connected.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Reclaiming my time, I thank my colleague for that clarification because I think that is probably the bigger untold story here of how much and how many insights we might have had into al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula and how we failed to act on that intelligence and how we failed, as we’ve now been saying for a long period of time, to connect those dots, to be able to put in preventative measures and to actually have stopped Awlaki and al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula from carrying out this attack on Detroit and on the State of Michigan.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCHAUER. Madam Chair, how much time remains?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SCHAUER) has 1 minute 20 seconds remaining, and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA) has 1 minute 50 seconds remaining.

Mr. SCHAUER. I yield 1 minute 20 seconds to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. PETERS).

Mr. PETERS. Madam Chair, I rise today in support of the Schauer amendment to the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010.

Like many Americans, my Christmas Day spent with family was interrupted by the news of the attempted terrorist attack on Northwest Flight No. 253 to Detroit.

As a lifelong Michigan resident whose friends, family, and constituents regularly fly in and out of Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport, the Christmas Day attack was especially chilling. While it was certainly fortunate that we lost in the Christmas Day attack, the attack exposed serious and unacceptable shortcomings in our ability to gather intelligence and to connect the dots.

I believe that protecting the American people, including Congress’ number one priority and responsibility. The Christmas Day incident showed us that security officials need to work more closely with their counterparts overseas and within the United States intelligence community to ensure tougher and more coordinated screening.

I appreciate my friend Congressman SCHAUER’s leadership on this important issue, and I am proud to support the Schauer amendment because it will help ensure that we learn as much as possible about the failures that allowed the events of Christmas Day 2009 to transpire.

I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Madam Chair, I will not oppose the amendment. As a matter of fact, I will support the amendment in its larger context, recognizing that this report by the DNI has to include information to Fort Hood, the Fort Hood attack, and then the time from Fort Hood until Christmas Day. That is the area that we have been trying to get information on from the intelligence community over the last 3 or 4 months, and it has been the area that they have been most reluctant to provide us information on.

As a matter of fact, when I was in Yemen on New Year’s Day, less than 2 months ago, I was specifically prohibited from getting exactly those kinds of questions as to what did the intelligence community know about Awlaki, about al Qaeda on the Arabian Peninsula. The individuals both in the intel community and with the ambassador were specifically instructed not to share that information, which tells me that there is some information there, and for some reason, they have not wanted to share that information with us.

Additionally, with the understanding that that type of information will be shared with Congress in this report, also then recognizing that this may end up being a classified report which you may not have access to unless the committee agrees to provide you access to it, I support the amendment. I look forward to the DNI’s completing this report and to his submitting it to the committee.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCHAUER. I thank Mr. HOEKSTRA for his support, and I urge Members to support this amendment.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SCHAUER).

The question was taken; and the Acting CHAIR announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SCHAUER. Madam Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan will be postponed.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CAPUANO) having assumed the chair, pursuant to the Act of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. [Page numbers and references have been removed for brevity.]

MEDICARE PHYSICIAN PAYMENT REFORM ACT OF 2009

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 1109, I call up from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3961) to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to reform the Medicare SGR payment system for physicians, with the Senate amendments thereto, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the previous agreement, I recognize the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection. Mr. CONYERS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, with 10 days to go, this measure before us will extend three provisions of our foreign intelligence surveillance laws for 1 year. The provisions are section 206 of the PATRIOT Act, governing roving wiretaps; section 215, which addresses the collection of business records; and the so-called "lone wolf surveillance law."

Without extension, these provisions will expire on Sunday coming. As we consider this short-term extension, I make these observations:

As one who has found that the USA PATRIOT Act needs a great deal of improvement and that there have been many excesses and sometimes abuses of these broad powers over the years, I have found that too little consideration of the impact of this type of surveillance on our civil liberties has been looked into. And that's why the Judiciary Committee and the House International Committee have undertaken an extensive process over the past year and reported out a bill that attempts to reform these provisions and enhance congressional oversight. In the other body, the Judiciary Committee has also passed a bill that improves, in my view, the PATRIOT Act. So we're very close to real reform.

The House bill has new protections for library and bookseller records. It clarifies the reach of roving authority to prevent "John Doe" blanket wiretaps. It tightens the standards for national security letters that have been abused in the past. It has extensive new reporting oversight and sunset provisions to greatly strengthen congressional oversight and makes other changes to the related provisions of law.

Please understand, Members, that this extension is not the final word on the PATRIOT Act, and what we will do is use the time between now and the year that will elapse to improve and pass real reform.

Now, while I would prefer to do this now, it is not to me strategically wise nor logistically possible to accomplish this at this time. And with the provisions expiring in a matter of 3 days, the other body has sent us this extension bill, so there is no reasonable possibility that they could pass a broader measure such as a Judiciary-passed bill at this time.

In other words, we have no other choice but to go along with this extension because there isn't sufficient time. Well, tomorrow is the last day of the week. It's physically impossible. So while I'd rather pass the Judiciary Committee bill out and truly make the reforms that I think are necessary, because of the time constraints that we find, I recommend that we take the next year and continue the process.

I urge your careful consideration of this very important measure.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the war on terror is real, and it's all around us. Despite multiple attempted terror attacks and a warning of an imminent attack from national security experts, apparently the best this Congress can do is a 1-year extension of our most critical national security laws.

On Christmas Day Omar Farouk Abdulmutallab attempted to murder 289 innocent civilians by trying to set off an explosion aboard a Northwest flight bound for Detroit. Thankfully, he failed in his attempt at mass murder, not because of our national security procedures but because of his own ineptness and the quick response from passengers and crew. But we may not be so fortunate the next time.

Last November in my home State of Texas, Major Nidal Hasan killed 13 and wounded 30 others when he opened fire at the Fort Hood Army Base. In September three terrorist plots were successfully thwarted in New York City, Springfield, Illinois, and Dallas, Texas. And now intelligence experts warn us that another terrorist attack may be imminent. Yet after all those near misses, the House majority refuses to pass a long-term extension of three essential PATRIOT Act provisions.

The PATRIOT Act works. It has proven effective time and time again in preventing terrorist attacks and keeping Americans safe. The expiring provisions give national security investigators the authority to conduct roving wiretaps, to seek certain business records, and to gather intelligence on additional terrorists who are not necessarily affiliated with a specific terrorist group.

We cannot afford to play dice with the security of the American people. We must continue these intelligence-gathering measures to win our fight against terrorism. The Obama Administration recognized this last year when it called for Congress to authorize the expiring provisions without any
